On 5 October [S/2004/789], the Secretary-General transmitted to the Security Council the report of the Board of Auditors on the financial statements of UNCC for the biennium ended 31 December 2003. The Board reported that the claim-processing performance of UNCC had been acceptable in regard to international practices. UNCC still had no proper assurance that past payments reached the claimants, but expected the newly requested audit certificates to do so. The Board regretted that more internal audits could not be accomplished due to insufficient staff by the Governing Council. The Board recommended that UNCC conduct a joint risk-assessment with OIOS, request all paying Governments and agents to provide updated information on their compensation payment system, provide OIOS with appropriate internal audit post, and establish an audit committee.

Timor-Leste

UN Mission of Support in East Timor

The United Nations Mission of Support in East Timor (UNMISSET), established under Security Council resolution 1410(2002) [YUN 2002, p. 321], continued to carry out its mandate in Timor-Leste, which included providing assistance to the administrative, law enforcement and public security structures critical to the viability and political stability of Timor-Leste, in addition to contributing to the maintenance of its external and internal security. In order to help Timor-Leste achieve full self-sufficiency, the Security Council in May extended UNMISSET's mandate for six months beyond 20 May 2004, and, in November, for a final period until 20 May 2005.

On 19 May [S/2004/418], the Secretary-General informed the Council that he intended to appoint Sukehiro Hasegawa (Japan) as his Special Representative for Timor-Leste and Head of UNMISSET, replacing Kamallesh Sharma (India). On 21 May [S/2004/419], the Council took note of that intention.

Communications (February). On 11 February [S/2004/108], Portugal informed the Council President that, in spite of impressive progress achieved in Timor-Leste, the international community's substantial engagement and support would still be needed to ensure stability and security in the new State. As threats to that stability could be expected to continue beyond the conclusion of UNMISSET's mandate on 20 May, and given Timor-Leste's assessment of its own limitations in coping with internal and external security problems, Portugal strongly favoured that the post-UNMISSET presence in Timor-Leste include a military force to maintain a sufficient deterrent. Portugal would be available to participate in that common effort.

On 12 February [S/2004/114], Timor-Leste informed the Secretary-General that its forces were still not ready to deal independently with internal tensions, nor with the general volatility of a nascent country and with that in the region. Timor-Leste was therefore convinced that it was necessary to extend the presence of a UN battalion of peacekeeping forces, backed by helicopters, in the country beyond May.

Report of Secretary-General (February). Pursuant to Council resolution 1410(2002), the Secretary-General submitted a 13 February special report [S/2004/117] on UNMISSET's activities and proposals on how the international community could assist in promoting the security and stability of Timor-Leste after the end of UNMISSET's mandate on 20 May.

The Secretary-General said that Timor-Leste's political institutions continued to strengthen and evolve, though the relationships between them were at an early stage of development and in some respects remained fragile. The security situation had largely remained calm, despite occasional demonstrations. While no new violence was carried out by former militia or armed groups, reports of sightings of armed gangs and criminal elements in districts bordering West Timor continued. The border remained porous, and illegal hunting, trade and crossings continued, as did other criminal activity. The Government responded with a number of police investigations and arrests to deter such activity. On 25 January, there was a confrontation between members of the Timorese armed forces (F-FDTL) and the police (Policia Nacional de Timor-Leste (PNTL)) in the town of Los Palos, in which a number of police were briefly detained by F-FDTL officers. In response to that incident, President Xanana Gusmão called for the creation of an independent commission to assess the problems faced by F-FDTL and to recommend solutions.

In general, relations between Timor-Leste and Indonesia continued to develop, supported by commitment at the highest political levels on both sides. However, the two countries needed to make further progress in addressing the problems posed by the continued presence of 28,000 former refugees from Timor-Leste in West Timor, only 452 of whom returned to Timor-Leste in 2003, notwithstanding ongoing efforts to promote long-term reconciliation. While the introduction by the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees (UNHCR) of a resettlement and return plan contributed to a reduction of tension in the remaining camps, the situation remained volatile.

The Secretary-General said that planning for UNMISSET was predicated upon the assumption that Timor-Leste would be able to achieve self-sufficiency within two years after independence. However, it was clear that further assistance would be crucial in a number of areas after UNMISSET's mandate expired on 20 May. The UN Secretariat had further analysed Timor-Leste's likely requirements after that date. It sent a technical assessment mission, including civilian, military and police expertise, to Timor-Leste early in January to review the situation on the ground.

The report provided an analysis of the status of progress, together with detailed proposals for assistance after 20 May, in each of UNMISSET's three programme areas: stability, democracy and justice; internal security and law enforcement; and external security and border-control. The Secretary-General recommended that the Security Council extend UNMISSET for a further 12-month "consolidation phase" to provide assistance to the justice system and to core administrative structures critical to the viability and political stability of Timor-Leste, and to contribute to the development of the national police and to the maintenance of security and stability in Timor-Leste. The Mission could continue to support efforts by the Governments of Timor-Leste and Indonesia to resolve pending bilateral issues and their increasing cooperation, in particular border demarcation and the development of appropriate mechanisms for managing the border regions, as well as to ensure that those responsible for serious crimes in 1999 were brought to justice. UNMISSET, under the continued leadership of the Secretary-General's Special Representative, would include multidimensional peacekeeping units, advisers on gender and HIV/AIDS, a human rights capacity, and civilian, police and military components, in a reduced and modified form, so as to complete key tasks and enable Timor-Leste to attain self-sufficiency.

The Secretary-General recommended the retention of a component of 58 civilian advisers to provide advice and support to the public administration and justice system; the continuing support to prosecutions and trials related to the serious crimes committed in 1999; the retention of 157 civilian police advisers to assist in the continued development of the police; and the deployment of 42 military liaison officers to monitor security-related developments and support demarcation efforts. The Secretary-General also recommended that a security force, comprising some 310 military personnel, be deployed to provide protection for the military liaison officers, maintain a reassuring presence in the border regions and provide a quick-reaction capability if required. Those recommendations focused on areas that had an impact on the security and stability of Timor-Leste, and where bilateral assistance was unavailable or not well suited to meet requirements. They also included a transition strategy that would allow the peacekeeping assistance to be phased out within a year, mostly on the basis of developing sufficient Timorese capabilities, although it relied in some cases on transition to bilateral assistance. The validity of and the benefits from those proposals depended on a number of key political decisions, including the adoption by Timor-Leste of a Civil Service Act, of the law creating the Office of the Provedor (Prosecutor), and of strong transparency and accountability legislation against corruption; the adoption of legislation defining the respective relationships between PNTL and F-FDTL and between various PNTL units; the establishment of oversight mechanisms for PNTL; and promulgation and strict implementation of a code of conduct.

Security Council consideration (20 February). On 20 February [meeting 4913], the Security Council discussed the situation in Timor-Leste, with particular reference to the Secretary-General's February report. The UN Under-Secretary-General for Peacekeeping Operations, Jean-Marie Guéhenno, brought to the Council's attention two recent developments. First, President Gusmão approved the law on village elections, an important advance in terms of reinforcing the role of electoral processes in Timor-Leste and in fostering local engagement in governance. It was expected that further steps would be taken to clarify the role and responsibility of village chiefs and village councils. Secondly, the 29 January incident during which villagers from West Timor entered Tomor-Leste, burning structures and stealing livestock, suggested the continuing fragility of the situation on the ground. Mr. Guéhenno said that the continued presence of a small peacekeeping operation for an additional one-year consolidation period would make a meaningful difference in enabling the country to reach the threshold of self-sufficiency. However, there were limits to what could be achieved and some further long-term assistance might be required even after that period. For that reason, the responsibilities of civilian advisers would include identification of alternative solutions by which to continue support after that period had ended. The Government had launched intensive discussion on ensuring a smooth transition after that assistance ended. Support of serious crime investigations and proceedings would allow progress in an area where much had already been done, considering that 81 indictments had been issued, with 369 inditees, resulting in 48 convictions. However, a number of trials would remain pending by 20 May and further indictments were in the process of preparation, including those related to the killing of two local UN staff. The great majority of those who had been indicted remained outside the country. Close cooperation among Member States would be essential to ensure that all those responsible were brought to justice.

Notable progress had been achieved in the establishment of an effective and professional police force. In February, the Timorese police force, numbering 3,024, assumed responsibility for all daily patrolling throughout the country, including along the border area, where they were playing a key role under difficult circumstances. The United Nations had retained daily operational responsibilities for crowd control only, so that the Timorese riot unit could undergo additional intensive training before 20 May. The international police contingent included only that 125-officer formed police unit and some 200 officers who were advising and discharging residual headquarters functions. International assistance would remain crucial for a further 12 months after 20 May to ensure the police service's effective functioning and to reinforce professional values and skills. That would be based on the continued deployment of 157 civilian police advisers after May, with staffing requirements to be reviewed by the end of 2004.

Finally, progress in external security and border control had benefited from the statesmanlike commitment shown by the Indonesian and Timorese leadership. However, agreement on the border and practical arrangements for its management had yet to be reached, and the potential for tensions or destabilizing actions remained within communities in the western districts. At the same time, the creation of structures and relationships on the ground required further time. While the Border Patrol Unit had assumed its responsibilities, and while F-FDTL continued to develop, both institutions remained thinly stretched, and further clarification of their responsibilities was essential. In addition, the establishment of the Rapid Deployment Service was considerably behind schedule. In that context, an essential role continued to be played by military observers, who were monitoring developments within a potentially volatile area and they were supporting close relationships between Timorese and Indonesian border personnel. The retention of a small group of 42 military liaison officers along the border to discharge similar functions, as proposed by the Secretary-General (see p. 368) for a further year after 20 May, could be reviewed in December, against progress in border arrangements and the development of necessary Timorese capacity.

Timor-Leste said that, while peace was a reality, it was still very fragile; so were the institutions of law and order and the State public administration. For those reasons, the Government of Timor-Leste, in a 12 February letter to the Secretary-General (see p. 368), had appealed for the continuation of a peacekeeping component in a new UN mission in Timor-Leste, as the best deterrence against any potential violent conflict.

Report of Secretary-General (April). The Secretary-General, in a 29 April report [S/2004/333] describing UNMISSET's activities since his February special report (see above), said that several important steps were taken towards preparation for Timor-Leste's first elections since the country's independence in 2002 [YUN 2002, p. 323]. President Gusmão, on 10 February 2004, promulgated a village elections bill providing for the establishment of the National Electoral Commission, which was sworn in on 19 March. He signed on 26 March a bill regulating political parties and, on 1 April, a decree-law defining the roles and functions of the village heads and councils. The elections, scheduled for the last quarter of 2004, posed a significant logistical challenge for the Government, particularly voter registration, due to begin on 31 May, with final voter lists to be published on 20 September. Further progress was also made towards the adoption of legislation for key public institutions. The National Parliament adopted the Civil Service Act on 19 April, as well as the Organic Law on the Office of the Presidency on 20 May, paving the way for the establishment of two other constitutional bodies, the Superior Council of Defence and Security and the Council of State. The Parliament was also considering a bill related to the creation of the Office of the Provedor for Human Rights and Justice, an independent institution to support good governance and civil rights. However, the law on PNTL had yet to be approved. A defence act and acts related to the establishment of other constitutional bodies with security responsibility, which were in various stages of preparation and consideration, were vital for the long-term viability and sustainability of Timor-Leste's security structure. The Secretary-General emphasized that, for the effective maintenance of law and order, the roles of Timorese police and armed forces should be clarified in advance of 20 May, when Timor-Leste would assume full responsibility for its internal and external security, and UNMISSET's role would be reduced to one of support. The need for clarity in the country's security policy and structure was also apparent from the preliminary findings emerging from reviews of the 25 January 2004 incident in Los Palos, where members of F-FDTL became involved in a confrontation with PNTL. Three separate inquiries, established by President Gusmão, pointed out that F-FDTL was confronted with serious institutional problems, including a poorly understood definition of its role, low morale, lack of respect for discipline and authority, insufficient training and unresolved relations with former combatants.

Concerning relations between Timor-Leste and Indonesia, the finalization of an agreement between them on a border line remained elusive. Significant technical work was completed, as reflected in preparation of an interim report of the Joint Border Committee, for which further input was expected from Indonesia. However, political engagement was necessary for the swift conclusion of border management arrangements, including cooperation on security and regulation of economic activity, and the implementation of agreements on the issuance of border passes and the establishment of a transit facility linking Oecussi with the rest of Timor-Leste.

Efforts continued to address the problem of the former refugees remaining in camps in West Timor, on the basis of cooperation between Indonesia and Timor-Leste, supported by UNHCR and the International Organization for Migration. A five-point strategy proposed by UNHCR, and agreed to by both Governments, resulted in the relocation in the second half of 2003 of some 12,000 former refugees from camps to other areas of West Timor, where they could more easily integrate in a sustainable manner, leaving a caseload of 16,000 refugees in West Timor. However, less than 100 former refugees returned to Timor-Leste in the first three months of 2004.

The second round of negotiations on the maritime boundary between Timor-Leste and Australia began on 19 April. Further talks were scheduled for September. Progress in that area was crucial to permit full development of the petroleum and natural gas resources in the region and to ensure appropriate and mutually agreed sharing of the benefits.

The security situation had generally remained calm and peaceful, despite unconfirmed reports of the presence of armed groups in western districts. The Tactical Coordination Line—the informal boundary agreed to by the United Nations Transitional Administration in East Timor and the Indonesian authorities pending formal demarcation of the border—remained porous along a significant part of its length, and disputes between villages situated in its vicinity continued, as did illegal trade, hunting and crossings, and miscellaneous minor criminal activity. Security and stability were promoted by regular patrolling activities throughout Timor-Leste by UNMISSET's 1,750-member military component, which would remain at that strength until 20 May. Its military component continued to transfer skills and knowledge to F-FDTL members and to encourage and assist the Border Patrol Unit in the execution of its border security management and patrolling tasks.

The Secretary-General observed that the international community's peacekeeping activities in Timor-Leste had created a window of opportunity for progress. The extraordinary progress that had so far taken place had permitted a swift downsizing in the international presence on the ground, and left no doubt as to the momentum of transfer of responsibility to Timor-Leste. Nonetheless, there was a limit to what could be achieved in so short a time. Since 2002, the leadership of Timor-Leste had demonstrated an ability to work closely together to meet national challenges, and had maintained close cooperation with the Special Representative. Similar coordination and cooperation would be essential to enable the Timorese people to derive full benefit from the additional year of peacekeeping assistance. However, certain immediate steps were crucial, including agreement on arrangements to permit civilian advisers to assume their functions, selection of Timorese counterparts, and clarification of the precise responsibilities of Timorese security agencies on an interim basis. The Timorese leadership could lay the foundations for future progress by fostering a culture of political dialogue and debate, anchored in the values of human rights, tolerance and respect for the law, and by providing a firm legislative basis for the development of the public administration's machinery.

Security Council consideration (May). On 10 May [meeting 4965], the Council discussed the situation in Timor-Leste, including the Secretary-General's April report. The Special Representative of the Secretary-General, Kamallesh Sharma, told the Council that the Timorese national police had assumed responsibility for policing in all 13 districts and for a vast majority of headquarters functions. The United Nations was therefore confident about transferring executive responsibility for policing to Timor-Leste on 19 May. However, the creation of a professional, apolitical, accountable and responsive police service, with well-established traditions of integrity and a mindset of service to the community, would require further efforts and time. UNMISSET's military component continued to be downsized according to the revised schedule approved in Council resolution 1473(2003) [YUN 2003, p. 374]. Unconfirmed reports of criminal elements, both inside and outside Timor-Leste, continued to be received. Indonesia's commitment to controlling such elements was encouraging, as were the continuing efforts of Timor-Leste to develop the capabilities of its security agencies to deal with them, including through the establishment of PNTL's Rapid Deployment Service. UNMISSET would continue to cooperate with the Government of Timor-Leste in building the capacities of PNTL's specialized units, including the training of the Rapid Deployment Service during the consolidation phase. Through its institution- and capacity-building activities, UNMISSET had contributed significantly to the viability and political stability of the State institutions, including through mentoring and coaching Timorese counterparts, assistance in the preparation of legal frameworks, formalizing related rules and regulations and institutionalization of operational procedures.

The innovative and pioneering experiment sanctioned by Council resolution 1410(2002) revealed that the requirements for human and institutional capacity development were far more demanding than originally envisaged, requiring the presence of important adviser positions beyond May. A robust exit strategy to ensure sustainability would be the major challenge during UNMISSET's consolidation phase. Likewise, the assistance provided through UNMISSET's serious crimes programme offered crucial reinforcement to the Council's commitment that perpetrators of such crimes should be brought to justice. The sustainability of the justice sector could be achieved only through the direct support of bilateral and multilateral development partners.

SECURITY COUNCIL ACTION (May)

On 14 May [meeting 4968], the Security Council unanimously adopted resolution 1543(2004). The draft [S/2004/383] was prepared in consultations among Council members.

The Security Council,

Reaffirming its previous resolutions on the situation in Timor-Leste, in particular resolutions 1410(2002) of 17 May 2002, 1473(2003) of 4 April 2003 and 1480(2003) of 19 May 2003,

Commending the progress achieved by the people and Government of Timor-Leste, with the assistance of the international community, towards developing, in so short a time, the nation's infrastructure, public administration, law enforcement and defence capacities,

Commending also the work of the United Nations Mission of Support in East Timor, under the leadership of the Special Representative of the Secretary-General, and welcoming the progress made towards the accomplishment of key tasks inscribed in its mandate, in accordance with resolutions 1410(2002), 1473(2003) and 1480(2003),

Expressing its appreciation to those Member States providing troops, civilian police personnel and support elements to the Mission,

Having considered the statement of 20 February 2004 by the Minister for Foreign Affairs of Timor-Leste to the Security Council, requesting a one-year extension of the Mission,

Taking note of the special report of the Secretary-General of 13 February 2004 on the United Nations Mission of Support in East Timor as well as his report of 29 April 2004,

Welcoming the recommendation of the Secretary-General to extend the Mission for a further one-year consolidation phase, in order to allow key tasks to be performed and to sustain, strengthen and build upon the gains made to date, thereby permitting Timor-Leste to attain self-sufficiency,

Noting that the emerging institutions in Timor-Leste are still in the process of consolidation and that further assistance is required to ensure the sustained development and strengthening of key sectors, mainly justice, public administration, including the National Police, and the maintenance of security and stability in Timor-Leste,

Encouraging the Government of Timor-Leste to adopt, as soon as possible, legislation and other appropriate measures referred to in paragraph 69 of the report of the Secretary-General of 29 April 2004, and further outlined as Timor-Leste action required in annexes I to III of the same report,

Welcoming the excellent communication and goodwill that have characterized relations between Timor-Leste and Indonesia, and encouraging continued cooperation between the two Governments and cooperation with the Mission towards further progress in resolving pending bilateral issues, including those relating to the demarcation and management of the border and to the provision of justice for those responsible for serious crimes committed in 1999,

Remaining fully committed to the promotion of security and long-lasting stability in Timor-Leste,

1. Decides to extend the mandate of the United Nations Mission of Support in East Timor for a period of six months, with a view to subsequently extending the mandate for a further and final period of six months, until 20 May 2005;

2. Decides also to reduce the size of the Mission and to revise its tasks, in accordance with the recommendations of the Secretary-General in section III of his report of 29 April 2004;

3. Decides, accordingly, that the mandate of the Mission shall consist of the following elements, as outlined in the report of the Secretary-General of 29 April 2004:

(a) Support for the public administration and justice system of Timor-Leste and for justice in the area of serious crimes;

(b) Support to the development of law enforcement in Timor-Leste;

(c) Support for the security and stability of Timor-Leste;

4. Decides that the Mission shall include up to 58 civilian advisers, 157 civilian police advisers, 42 military liaison officers, 310 formed troops and a 125-person International Response Unit;

5. Decides also that internationally accepted human rights principles shall continue to form an integral part of training and capacity-building carried out by the Mission under paragraph 3 above;

6. Requests the Secretary-General to keep the Security Council closely and regularly informed of developments on the ground and of the implementation of the present resolution, in particular with regard to progress towards the achievement of key tasks in the mandate of the Mission, and in that regard requests the Secretary-General to submit a report within three months of the date of adoption of the present resolution and every three months thereafter, with recommendations for any modifications such progress might allow to the size, composition and tasks of the Mission, with a view to completing its mandate by 20 May 2005;

7. Also requests the Secretary-General to include in the reports requested under paragraph 6 above recommendations on tasks and configuration of police and military components for Security Council review in November 2004;

8. Reaffirms the need to fight against impunity and the importance for the international community to lend its support in this regard, and emphasizes that the Serious Crime Unit should complete all investigations by November 2004 and should conclude trials and other activities as soon as possible and no later than 20 May 2005;

9. Underlines the fact that further United Nations assistance to Timor-Leste should be coordinated with the efforts of bilateral and multilateral donors, regional mechanisms, non-governmental organizations, private sector entities and other actors from within the international community;

10. Urges the donor community as well as United Nations agencies, funds and programmes and multilateral financial institutions to continue providing essential resources and assistance for the implementation of projects towards sustainable and long-term development in Timor-Leste;

11. Decides to remain actively seized of the matter.

Report of Secretary-General (August). Pursuant to Security Council resolution 1543(2004) (see above), the Secretary-General submitted a 13

August progress report [S/2004/669] covering UNMISSET activities since his April report (see p. 370).

The Government of Timor-Leste had taken several important steps towards self-sufficiency, such as formally assuming responsibility for internal and external security on 20 May. In addition, several key pieces of legislation establishing legal and institutional frameworks were adopted, and efforts continued for the promotion of a culture of free political dialogue and resolution of bilateral issues. Voter registration for Timor-Leste's first elections since independence commenced in May. One of the opposition political groupings did not recognize the validity of the voter registration cards; it nonetheless decided to allow its members to participate in the elections. The respective roles of the national security institutions were established prior to the transfer of internal and external security responsibilities from UNMISSET to Timor-Leste, with the promulgation in May of the organic laws for PNTL and F-FDTL. To supplement the legislation on the national police, a government decree establishing a police oversight committee that included members of civil society was adopted and a PNTL disciplinary regulation was promulgated.

As regards the justice sector, the law establishing the Office of the Procurator for Human Rights and Justice was promulgated in May. Progress was also made in formulating a policy on veterans. On 8 June, President Gusmão formally presented to the National Parliament the report of the Veterans Commission, which contained a number of recommendations to the Government, including forms of recognition and material benefits to the veterans. The Parliament formed an ad hoc committee to study the report and was considering possible legislation on the issue. However, the impatience of veterans for swifter progress was underlined by the decision in June by several veterans groups to form, together with other political groups, an organization to press demands for their quick identification and recognition and for material benefits. The groups also made political demands related to the composition of the national police and the resignation of certain government ministers. Those demands were the subject of a public demonstration on 19 July, which was dispersed the following day by police officers using tear gas. The incident underlined the potential for friction posed by veterans' concerns and the need for swift action by the Government.

While progress was made in laying the legislative framework of the institutions of State, the Government was aware of the need to enhance the effectiveness of those institutions, in order to sustain stability and improve socio-economic conditions. For that purpose, the Government was negotiating with Australia on the maritime boundary between the two countries and on the sharing of regional petroleum and natural gas resources. Representatives of the Governments of Timor-Leste and Indonesia continued to meet on the delineation of the land border between the two countries. During a meeting of the Joint Border Commission in Jakarta on 24 and 25 June, the two sides approved the interim report on the Joint Border Survey conducted earlier, which provided a basis for agreement on approximately 90 per cent of the border.

Since the beginning of its consolidation phase on 20 May, UNMISSET had made further progress towards the main objectives of its mandate, while adapting its tasks and reducing its civilian, police and military personnel. Progress in the prosecution of serious crimes continued. The Special Panels for serious crimes completed the trials in five additional cases since May. Since their inception, the Panels had rendered a total of 58 verdicts, with 55 defendants being convicted of at least one charge and three defendants acquitted.

The Secretary-General observed that UNMISSET civilian advisers and civilian police advisers were working to enhance the professional skills and performance of their Timorese counterparts, while UNMISSET's military component continued to support Timor-Leste's management of its security. Progress in those areas would be kept under close assessment, with a view to determining the feasibility of modifying UNMISSET's size, composition and tasks, including the configuration of its police and military components.

Security Council consideration (August). On 24 August [meeting 5024], the Council considered the Secretary-General's August report. The UN Assistant Secretary-General for Peacekeeping Operations, Hédi Annabi, said that progress was being made towards formulating a policy on veterans. The National Parliament was considering the report of the President's commissions on veterans and ex-combatants. Bilateral and multilateral assistance would be required to implement concrete projects to address the most deserving and the most needy cases, including those who participated in the independence struggle from the outset as well as their widows and orphans. Progress had also been made on the finalization of the land border between Timor-Leste and Indonesia. Agreement on 90 per cent of the border had largely been achieved and it was expected that agreement would be reached at the political level on the remaining 10 per cent in the near future.

With regard to the 58 civilian advisers to be provided for the most critical positions in public administration, UNMISET had recruited and deployed 51 of them in the field; an additional four advisers would be deployed in September, and a decision by the Government on the three remaining positions was awaited. It was incumbent on the Government to recruit the counterparts to the advisers as expeditiously as possible so as to be able to benefit from UNMISET's expertise and skills during the remaining months of its mandate. The civilian advisers were informed of the importance of preparing and implementing exit strategies for UNMISET. They would focus on institutional capacity development through well-targeted, formalized training programmes, including fostering a culture of transparency, accountability and respect for human rights.

The justice sector continued to be affected by a shortage of qualified personnel and limited infrastructure, which contributed in turn to a continued backlog of cases, detentions on expired warrants and violations of human rights. The number of detainees held on expired warrants was considerably reduced after a judicial review by the President of the Court of Appeal following a formal request from the Special Representative. The UNMISET police component continued to assist PNTL to develop into a professional and impartial police service through mentoring and monitoring. It developed a skills development plan based on a needs assessment of areas requiring continued assistance. Meanwhile, the response of the anti-riot rapid intervention unit to the 19 and 20 July demonstrations in Dili suggested the importance of further training for that particular unit. The security situation in the border districts, and indeed in all of Timor-Leste, had generally been calm and peaceful. The majority of the personnel of UNMISET's reduced military component were deployed in the western border districts, while one platoon of the international response unit was deployed in Dili. Development of the defence forces, which continued to suffer from a lack of experience and skilled personnel, proper training and equipment and a very limited logistical capability for deployment, would continue to depend on external support through the provision of equipment and training.

Report of Secretary-General (November). The Secretary-General submitted a 9 November progress report on UNMISET, covering the period since his August report (see p. 372). The report also included recommendations based on the findings of an integrated technical assessment mission that visited Timor-Leste in October.

During the reporting period, Timor-Leste remained peaceful and stable after the demonstration dispersed by the police with the use of tear gas on 20 July (see above). The Government addressed pressing issues confronting the country, including the veterans issue and violence between martial arts groups. Following successful voter registration, which ended on 31 July, preparations for local elections were under way. On 16 and 17 August, the National Parliament made determined efforts to select the Provedor for Human Rights and Justice, but so far without success. Timor-Leste's relations with neighbouring countries continued to grow, but that had yet to result in any concrete agreements on border delineation and other pending issues. The National Electoral Commission and the Technical Secretariat for Electoral Administration continued to make preparations for local elections, which were to be conducted in a phased manner throughout the country before July 2005.

Realizing the urgent need for solutions of the veterans issue, the Government held a meeting with the diplomatic corps in Dili on 26 October, soliciting their support for a programme that would recognize and honour the contributions made by veterans and ex-combatants, help their reintegration into civilian life and provide financial assistance to the neediest among them and their families. President Gusmão constituted the Commission for Resistance Cadres Affairs to identify civilian members of the resistance. On 18 August, he provided members of the diplomatic corps and UNMISET with the final report of the Independent Commission of Inquiry into the incident of 24 January at Los Palos, where members of the armed forces were involved in a confrontation with police. The report presented a general overview of the poor conditions of F-FDTL, proposing some solutions to the problems confronting them, but did not address the issue of individual accountability for misconduct in the incident.

Relations between Timor-Leste and Indonesia were strengthened by the visit of the Timorese Prime Minister to Jakarta from 19 to 22 October, on the occasion of the swearing-in of the new President of Indonesia, Susilo Bambang Yudhoyono. However, border demarcation talks did not result in a final agreement. The second round of maritime boundary negotiations with Australia was held in Canberra and Darwin in September and again in Dili in October. It was hoped that a mutually beneficial arrangement that permitted the successful exploitation of petroleum and natural gas resources in the area would be concluded as early as possible.

Following discussions on the Secretary-General's August report in the Security Council on 24 August 2004, the Special Representative constituted eight working groups to assist in the timely identification of activities required for a smooth transition from the peacekeeping and peace-building operation to more traditional institution-building and sustainable developmental assistance. A coordinated and systematic campaign of public information within the country would be critical as UNMISSET drew to a close to reassure the local population of the continuation of international assistance from the wider UN system and other bilateral and multilateral development partners. That process was already under way by means of a new programme broadcast weekly on national radio in Tetum, the local language.

In accordance with Security Council resolution 1543(2004), an integrated technical assessment mission from UN Headquarters visited Timor-Leste early in October to review the situation on the ground. During its visit, the mission held extensive discussions with Timorese leaders, NGOs and members of civil society, political parties, representatives of the diplomatic community, UN programmes and agencies, the Bretton Woods institutions and UNMISSET. The mission also travelled to the border districts. It found that, since the inception of UNMISSET's consolidation phase in May, Timor-Leste had made further progress in developing key State institutions and security agencies, and adopted a number of important pieces of legislation. Nevertheless, major challenges remained and continuing international assistance was essential. There was a consensus that UNMISSET should maintain its current tasks, composition and size, including those of the military and police components, until May 2005.

The overall security situation in Timor-Leste remained calm and peaceful during the reporting period. However, smuggling and illegal trading in the border areas continued. The capacity of F-FDTL continued to grow, but it remained hampered by a lack of experienced personnel, appropriate training regimes and equipment, and by limited logistic capacity. Work on the defence plan "Defence 2020" continued with the assistance of a bilaterally supported adviser. The defence force conducted a new recruitment drive; once that process was completed, the training for the 260 new recruits would start in mid-November. UNMISSET's military component continued to support the efforts of the Timorese security agencies in maintaining the security and stability of the country. Five training modules, covering military policing, engineering, operational staff work, military information collection and logistic staff work, were initiated in August and September. The programme was scheduled to continue until the end of UNMISSET's mandate in May 2005 and would include further specialized training. At the same time, the military component made efforts to foster close collaboration between the Timorese and Indonesian security agencies. As part of UNMISSET's exit strategy, the military component established arrangements for regular meetings between the Timorese and Indonesian sides that would continue after May 2005. UNMISSET military liaison officers played a pivotal role in monitoring security-related developments along the border and in facilitating contacts between the Timorese and Indonesian border security agencies.

Progress in border security had been slower than expected and therefore many of the factors that warranted the presence of UNMISSET's military component had not changed. Timor-Leste and Indonesia had still not reached final agreement on the demarcation of their land border. The Timorese border security agencies had not gained sufficient capacity to manage the border affairs alone, neither had they reached the point where they could interact with the Indonesian border security agencies on their own without facilitation of UNMISSET's military component. As the national police force was gaining skills and experience, its ability to meet security challenges had improved, but not to the level of providing protection and evacuation to UNMISSET's military liaison officers. The Secretary-General said that, in view of the above and the fact that the strength of the military component was already at its bare minimum, it would be necessary to retain the 477 authorized military personnel for the next six months. The 125-person International Response Unit would continue to undertake preventive and response operations in exceptional circumstances. While that assistance would be available until May 2005, it was imperative that Timor-Leste and Indonesia intensify their efforts to conclude an agreement on land border demarcation as early as possible. Pending such an agreement, the adoption of an interim arrangement would be necessary to facilitate border management.

The Secretary-General observed that the situation on the ground did not warrant any modification of UNMISSET's tasks as mandated by Council resolution 1543(2004), or any change in its size or composition. He therefore recommended retaining UNMISSET with its existing configuration, size and tasks until 20 May 2005. That final period would allow UNMISSET to complete its key tasks and to consolidate the gains that had been made up to that point. At the same time, UNMISSET would need to prepare its exit strategy, making sure that the country could continue to function without suffering from the impact of its withdrawal. That called for UNMISET to redouble its efforts to encourage the involvement and ownership of the Timorese in UNMISET's programme areas and to identify bilateral or multilateral partners. The UN system funds, programmes and specialized agencies and other development partners had complemented UNMISET's role in Timor-Leste's institution-building process. During the next six months, their support would be even more critical in facilitating a smooth transition from a peacekeeping operation to a sustainable, traditional, development assistance framework.

Security Council consideration (November).

On 15 November [meeting 5076], the Security Council discussed the Secretary-General's November report (see above) and was briefed by the Secretary-General's Special Representative, Mr. Hasegawa.

Mr. Hasegawa said, among other things, that the civilian advisers were not only actively training and mentoring their East Timorese counterparts, they were also formulating exit strategies with their counterparts so as to ensure a smooth transition at the end of UNMISET's mandate. The prosecutors, defence lawyers and trial judges of the serious crimes process were making strenuous efforts to complete investigations by November 2004, as well as trials by May 2005, as stipulated in Council resolution 1543(2004). The serious crimes process would not be able to respond fully to the desire for justice for all of the victims of the violence in 1999 with the limited time and resources available. There were several ideas and proposals in that regard to address the issue. The Secretary-General would examine those ideas and proposals, with a view to identifying the most appropriate arrangement to resolve the issue. Meanwhile, the Special Representative proposed to deploy additional data experts and specialists who could assist in the processing and archiving of all the evidentiary and testimonial materials obtained during investigations and trials. The eight working groups that the Special Representative had constituted in August (see p. 375) started identifying specific measures required for a smooth transition from peacekeeping operations to development assistance. The final reports from each of the eight groups would be ready by mid-January 2005 and their recommendations would be reflected in the Secretary-General's next report to the Council.

SECURITY COUNCIL ACTION (November)

On 16 November [meeting 5079], the Security Council unanimously adopted resolution 1573

(2004). The draft [S/2004/901] was prepared in consultations among Council members.

The Security Council,

Reaffirming its previous resolutions on the situation in Timor-Leste, in particular resolutions 1410(2002) of 17 May 2002, 1473(2003) of 4 April 2003, 1480(2003) of 19 May 2003 and 1543(2004) of 14 May 2004,

Commending the people and the Government of Timor-Leste for the peace and stability they have achieved in the country, as well as for their continuing efforts towards consolidating democracy and building State institutions,

Also commending the United Nations Mission of Support in East Timor, under the leadership of the Special Representative of the Secretary-General, and welcoming the continuing progress made towards the accomplishment of key tasks inscribed in its mandate, particularly during its consolidation phase, in accordance with resolution 1543(2004),

Paying tribute to Timor-Leste's bilateral and multilateral partners for their invaluable assistance, particularly with regard to institutional capacity-building and social and economic development,

Noting that, despite notable advances achieved in the last months, Timor-Leste has not yet reached the critical threshold of self-sufficiency, mainly in key areas such as public administration, law enforcement and security,

Welcoming the strengthening of cooperation and good relations between Timor-Leste and its neighbours, and encouraging further progress towards concrete agreements on border delineation and other pending issues,

Commending the Serious Crimes Unit for the efforts it has undertaken in order to complete its investigations by November 2004, and any further trials and other activities no later than 20 May 2005,

Noting with concern that it may not be possible for the Serious Crimes Unit to fully respond to the desire for justice of those affected by the violence in 1999 bearing in mind the limited time and resources that remain available,

Taking note of the report of the Secretary-General of 29 April 2004 on the Mission as well as his report of 19 November 2004, and welcoming his recommendations contained therein,

Remaining fully committed to the promotion of security and long-lasting stability in Timor-Leste,

1. Decides to extend the mandate of the United Nations Mission of Support in East Timor for a final period of six months until 20 May 2005;

2. Decides also to maintain the current tasks, configuration and size of the Mission in order to allow it to complete key tasks of its mandate and consolidate gains made thus far;

3. Requests the Mission to focus increasingly on implementing its exit strategy, particularly with a view to ensuring increasing involvement and ownership of the Timorese in the three programme areas of the Mission, so that, when it departs Timor-Leste, its responsibilities can be taken over by the Timorese, with the continued assistance of the United Nations system and bilateral and multilateral partners;

4. Urges the donor community to continue providing its indispensable assistance to Timor-Leste, including through active participation in the donors, conference scheduled to be held in March 2005;

5. Urges, in particular, United Nations development and humanitarian agencies and multilateral financial institutions to start immediately planning for a smooth transition, in Timor-Leste, from a peace-keeping operation to a sustainable development assistance framework;

6. Reaffirms the need to fight against impunity, and in this regard takes note of the Secretary-General's intention to continue to explore possible ways to address this issue with a view to making proposals as appropriate;

7. Requests the Secretary-General to keep the Security Council closely and regularly informed of developments on the ground and of the implementation of the present resolution, in particular of paragraphs 3 and 5 above, and in that regard requests the Secretary-General to submit a report within three months of the date of adoption of the present resolution, followed by a final report in May 2005;

8. Decides to remain actively seized of the matter.

Later developments. In a later report [S/2005/99], the Secretary-General said that local elections, the first ever conducted by Timorese national authorities, were successfully held in two districts in two phases, on 18 and 22 December. Voter turnout was very high, exceeding 90 per cent in some areas; people voted in an orderly manner, in an atmosphere free of intimidation or interference. However, the Technical Secretariat for Electoral Administration encountered numerous logistical difficulties, including many errors in the voter roll in the first phase of the elections, which prevented some voters from casting their ballots. Problems arose between the Timorese armed forces and the national police despite efforts to improve their relationship. On 16 December, a group of armed soldiers attacked a police station in Dili, injuring two officers and causing damage to the premises. Relations between Timor-Leste and Indonesia continued to improve. In December, the two countries agreed to form a Truth and Friendship Commission to deal with human rights abuses perpetrated in 1999 and other bilateral issues. However, no further progress was made on the delineation of the land border between the two countries.

Financing of UN operations

During 2004, the General Assembly considered the financing of two UN missions in Timor-Leste—UNMISSET and the United Nations Mission in East Timor (UNAMET). UNMISSET was established by Council resolution 1410(2002) [YUN 2002, p. 321] to provide assistance to the administrative, law enforcement and public security structures critical to the viability and political stability of Timor-Leste, in addition to contributing to the maintenance of its external and internal security.

UNAMET was established by Council resolution 1246(1999) [YUN 1999, p. 283] to conduct the 1999 popular consultations on East Timor's autonomy [ibid., p. 288]; its mandate ended on 30 November 1999, in accordance with resolution 1262(1999) [ibid., p. 287].

UNMISSET

In May [A/58/795], the Secretary-General submitted to the General Assembly an interim budget for UNMISSET for the period from 1 July to 31 December 2004, which reflected preliminary financial requirements in the amount of $45,728,400 exclusive of budgeted voluntary contributions in kind. Owing to UNMISSET's extension for a period of six months by Security Council resolution 1543(2004) (see p. 372), the report superseded the budgetary proposals of December 2003 on UNMISSET's financing [A/58/645], which contained UNMISSET's liquidation budget.

In May [A/58/809], ACABQ, in reviewing UNMISSET's interim budget for the period from 1 July to 31 December 2004, noted that the requirements presented constituted more of a projection than fully justifiable estimates. It would therefore be unrealistic for either it or the Fifth Committee to attempt a detailed examination of UNMISSET's requirements at that stage. ACABQ intended to conduct such an examination on the basis of the fully justified estimates later in 2004. Accordingly, it requested information from the UN Secretariat on the financial requirements for the period between July and October 2004. ACABQ recommended that the Assembly approve commitment authority with assessment for UNMISSET in the amount of $30,485,600.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION (June)

On 18 June [meeting 91], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee [A/58/584/Add.1], adopted resolution 58/260 B without vote [agenda item 140].

Financing of the United Nations Mission of Support in East Timor

The General Assembly,

Having considered the report of the Secretary-General on the financing of the United Nations Mission of Support in East Timor and the related report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions,

Recalling Security Council resolution 1272(1999) of 25 October 1999 regarding the establishment of the United Nations Transitional Administration in East Timor and the subsequent resolutions by which the Council extended the mandate of the Transitional Administration, the last of which was resolution 1392(2002) of 31 January 2002, by which the mandate was extended until 20 May 2002,

Recalling also Security Council resolution 1410(2002) of 17 May 2002, by which the Council established the United Nations Mission of Support in East Timor as from 20 May 2002 for an initial period of twelve months, and the subsequent resolutions by which the Council extended the mandate of the Mission, the latest of which was resolution 1543(2004) of 14 May 2004, by which the Council extended the Mission for a period of six months, with a view to subsequently extending the mandate for a further and final period of six months, until 20 May 2005,

Recalling further its resolution 54/246 A of 23 December 1999 on the financing of the United Nations Transitional Administration in East Timor and its subsequent resolutions on the financing of the United Nations Mission of Support in East Timor, the latest of which was resolution 58/260 A of 23 December 2003,

Mindful of the fact that it is essential to provide the Mission with the financial resources necessary to enable it to fulfil its responsibilities under the relevant resolutions of the Security Council,

1. Endorses the conclusions and recommendations contained in the report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions, and requests the Secretary-General to ensure their full implementation;

2. Emphasizes that it will consider the number and level of posts, the administrative structure, lines of accountability and reporting in support of the substantive mandate in the context of the full budget proposal to be submitted to the General Assembly at its fifty-ninth session;

Budget estimates for the period
from 1 July to 31 October 2004

3. Authorizes the Secretary-General to enter into commitments in the amount of 30,485,600 United States dollars for the maintenance of the Mission for the period from 1 July to 31 October 2004;

Financing of the commitment authority

4. Decides to apportion among Member States the amount of 30,485,600 dollars for the Mission for the period from 1 July to 31 October 2004 in accordance with the levels set out in General Assembly resolution 55/235 of 23 December 2000, as adjusted by the Assembly in its resolution 55/236 of 23 December 2000 and updated in its resolution 58/256 of 23 December 2003, taking into account the scale of assessments for 2004 as set out in its resolution 58/1 B of 23 December 2003;

5. Decides also that, in accordance with the provisions of its resolution 973(X) of 15 December 1955, there shall be set off against the apportionment among Member States, as provided for in paragraph 4 above, their respective share in the Tax Equalization Fund of 2,086,400 dollars, representing the estimated staff assessment income approved for the Mission for the period from 1 July to 31 October 2004;

6. Decides further to include in the provisional agenda of its fifty-ninth session the item entitled "Financing of the United Nations Mission of Support in East Timor".

In December 2003 [A/58/636], the Secretary-General submitted to the Assembly a performance report on the UNMISSET budget for the period from 1 July 2002 to 30 June 2003. Expenditure for the period totalled $288,001,100, resulting in an unencumbered balance of $4,058,900. The Assembly was requested to decide on the treatment of that unencumbered balance and on the treatment of other income for the period ended 30 June 2003, amounting to $10,525,000.

In August 2004 [A/59/290], the Secretary-General submitted UNMISSET's budget for the period from 1 July 2004 to 30 June 2005, in the amount of $85,393,400, comprising $77,304,800 for UNMISSET's maintenance for the period from 1 July 2004 to 20 May 2005 and $8,088,600 for the commencement of the liquidation activities for the period from 21 May to 30 June 2005. It was inclusive of budgeted voluntary contributions in kind in the amount of $60,000, consisting of $53,300 and $6,700 for the maintenance and the commencement of liquidation periods, respectively. The report incorporated and superseded the May 2004 budgetary proposals for UNMISSET for the period from 1 July to 31 December 2004 (see p. 377).

In September [A/59/384], ACABQ presented its comments and recommendations on the Secretary-General's reports on UNMISSET's financial performance for the period from 1 July 2002 to 30 June 2003 and on UNMISSET's proposed budget for the period from 1 July 2004 to 30 June 2005 (see above).

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION (October)

On 29 October [meeting 46], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee [A/59/531], adopted resolution 59/13 without vote [agenda item 129].

Financing of the United Nations Mission of Support in East Timor

The General Assembly,

Having considered the reports of the Secretary-General on the financing of the United Nations Mission of Support in East Timor, and the related report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions,

Recalling Security Council resolution 1272(1999) of 25 October 1999 regarding the establishment of the United Nations Transitional Administration in East Timor and the subsequent resolutions by which the Council extended the mandate of the Transitional Administration, the last of which was resolution 1392 (2002) of 31 January 2002, by which the mandate was extended until 20 May 2002,

Recalling also Security Council resolution 1410(2002) of 17 May 2002, by which the Council established the United Nations Mission of Support in East Timor as of 20 May 2002 for an initial period of twelve months, and the subsequent resolutions by which the Council extended the mandate of the Mission, the latest of which was resolution 1543(2004) of 14 May 2004, by which the Council extended the mandate of the Mission for a period of six months, with a view to subsequently extending the mandate for a further and final period of six months, until 20 May 2005,

Recalling further its resolution 54/246 A of 23 December 1999 on the financing of the United Nations Transitional Administration in East Timor and its subsequent resolutions on the financing of the United Nations Mission of Support in East Timor, the latest of which was resolution 58/260 B of 18 June 2004,

Reaffirming the general principles underlying the financing of United Nations peacekeeping operations, as stated in General Assembly resolutions 1874(S-IV) of 27 June 1963, 3101(XXVIII) of 11 December 1973 and 55/235 of 23 December 2000,

Noting with appreciation that voluntary contributions have been made to the Mission and to the Trust Fund for the United Nations Transitional Administration in East Timor,

Mindful of the fact that it is essential to provide the Mission with the necessary financial resources to enable it to fulfil its responsibilities under the relevant resolutions of the Security Council,

Taking note of the views expressed by Member States,

1. Takes note of the status of contributions to the United Nations Transitional Administration in East Timor and the United Nations Mission of Support in East Timor as at 30 September 2004, including the contributions outstanding in the amount of 74.8 million United States dollars, representing some 4 per cent of the total assessed contributions, notes with concern that only thirty-three Member States have paid their assessed contributions in full, and urges all other Member States, in particular those in arrears, to ensure payment of their outstanding assessed contributions;

2. Expresses its appreciation to those Member States which have paid their assessed contributions in full, and urges all other Member States to make every possible effort to ensure payment of their assessed contributions to the Transitional Administration and the Mission in full;

3. Expresses concern at the financial situation with regard to peacekeeping activities, in particular as regards the reimbursements to troop contributors that bear additional burdens owing to overdue payments by Member States of their assessments;

4. Also expresses concern at the delay experienced by the Secretary-General in deploying and providing adequate resources to some recent peacekeeping missions, in particular those in Africa;

5. Emphasizes that all future and existing peacekeeping missions shall be given equal and non-discriminatory treatment in respect of financial and administrative arrangements;

6. Also emphasizes that all peacekeeping missions shall be provided with adequate resources for the effective and efficient discharge of their respective mandates;

7. Reiterates its request to the Secretary-General to make the fullest possible use of facilities and equipment at the United Nations Logistics Base at Brindisi, Italy, in order to minimize the costs of procurement for the Mission;

8. Endorses the conclusions and recommendations contained in the report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions, subject to the provisions of the present resolution, and requests the Secretary-General to ensure their full implementation, in particular:

(a) That the staffing of the Serious Crimes Unit will be further adjusted after the completion of the investigations to be commensurate with such residual tasks as it may have once the investigations have been completed;

(b) That the Mission, to the extent possible, recruit National Officers and national General Service staff locally to fill international Professional and General Service posts;

9. Requests the Secretary-General to report on the implementation of the above-mentioned paragraphs of the present resolution in the context of his performance report;

10. Endorses the view of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions in paragraph 31 of its report that the position of Force Commander should be classified at the D-1 level, but authorizes the Secretary-General, as an exceptional measure and without prejudice to other peacekeeping missions, to maintain the incumbent at the D-2 level given the difficulties in recruiting a replacement owing to the short time remaining until the completion of the Mission;

11. Emphasizes that the Serious Crimes Unit should complete all investigations by November 2004 and should conclude trials and other activities as soon as possible and no later than 20 May 2005;

12. Requests the Secretary-General to measure the accomplishments of the Mission fully in accordance with Security Council resolution 1543(2004);

Financial performance report for the period from 1 July 2002 to 30 June 2003

13. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General on the financial performance of the Mission for the period from 1 July 2002 to 30 June 2003;

Budget estimates for the period from 1 July 2004 to 30 June 2005

14. Decides to appropriate to the Special Account for the United Nations Mission of Support in East Timor the amount of 85,153,700 dollars for the period from 1 July 2004 to 30 June 2005, inclusive of the amount of 30,485,600 dollars previously authorized by the General Assembly for the Mission for the period from 1 July to 31 October 2004 under the terms of its resolution 58/260 B, and comprising the amount of 77,071,800 dollars for the period from 1 July 2004 to 20 May 2005 for the maintenance of the Mission and the amount of 8,081,900 dollars for the commencement of the liquidation activities of the Mission for the period from 21 May to 30 June 2005;

Financing of the appropriation

15. Decides also, taking into account the amount of 30,485,600 dollars already apportioned under the terms of its resolution 58/260 B, to apportion among Member States the additional amount of 3,530,657 dollars for the Mission for the period from 1 July to 20 November 2004, in accordance with the levels set out in General Assembly resolution 55/235, as adjusted by the Assembly in its resolutions 55/236 of 23 December 2000, and updated in its resolution 58/256 of 23 December 2003, taking into account the scale of assessments for 2004, as set out in its resolution 58/1 B of 23 December 2003;

16. Decides further that, in accordance with the provisions of its resolution 973(X) of 15 December 1955, there shall be set off against the apportionment among Member States, as provided for in paragraph 15 above, their respective share in the Tax Equalization Fund of the amount of 287,709 dollars, representing the estimated additional staff assessment income approved for the Mission for the period from 1 July to 20 November 2004;

17. Decides to apportion among Member States the amount of 43,055,543 dollars for the period from 21 November 2004 to 20 May 2005, in accordance with the scheme set out in paragraph 15 above and taking into account the scale of assessments for 2004 and 2005, as set out in its resolution 58/1 B, subject to a decision of the Security Council to extend the mandate of the Mission;

18. Decides also that, in accordance with the provisions of its resolution 973(X), there shall be set off against the apportionment among Member States, as provided for in paragraph 17 above, their respective share in the Tax Equalization Fund of the amount of 3,004,991 dollars, representing the estimated staff assessment income approved for the Mission for the period from 21 November 2004 to 20 May 2005;

19. Decides further to apportion among Member States the amount of 8,081,900 dollars for the Mission for the period from 21 May to 30 June 2005, in accordance with the scheme set out in paragraph 15 above and taking into account the scale of assessments for 2005, as set out in its resolution 58/1 B;

20. Decides that, in accordance with the provisions of its resolution 973(X), there shall be set off against the apportionment among Member States, as provided for in paragraph 19 above, their respective share in the Tax Equalization Fund of the amount of 382,900 dollars, representing the estimated staff assessment income approved for the Mission for the period from 21 May to 30 June 2005;

21. Decides also that for Member States that have fulfilled their financial obligations to the Mission, there shall be set off against their apportionment, as provided for in paragraph 15 above, their respective share of the unencumbered balance and other income in the total amount of 14,583,900 dollars in respect of the financial period ended 30 June 2003, in accordance with the levels set out in General Assembly resolution 55/235, as adjusted by the Assembly in its resolution 55/236 and its resolution 57/290 A of 20 December 2002, taking into account the scale of assessments for 2003 as set out in its resolutions 55/5 B of 23 December 2000 and 57/4 B of 20 December 2002;

22. Decides further that for Member States that have not fulfilled their financial obligations to the Mission, there shall be set off against their outstanding obligations their respective share of the unencumbered balance and other income in the total amount of 14,583,900 dollars in respect of the financial period ended 30 June 2003, in accordance with the scheme set out in paragraph 21 above;

23. Decides that the decrease of 181,300 dollars in the estimated staff assessment income in respect of the financial period ended 30 June 2003 shall be set off against the credits from the amount referred to in paragraphs 21 and 22 above;

24. Emphasizes that no peacekeeping mission shall be financed by borrowing funds from other active peacekeeping missions;

25. Encourages the Secretary-General to continue to take additional measures to ensure the safety and security of all personnel under the auspices of the United Nations participating in the Mission;

26. Invites voluntary contributions to the Mission in cash and in the form of services and supplies acceptable to the Secretary-General, to be administered, as appropriate, in accordance with the procedure and practices established by the General Assembly;

27. Decides to keep under review during its fifty-ninth session the item entitled "Financing of the United Nations Mission of Support in East Timor".

On 23 December, the Assembly decided that the agenda item on financing of UNMISSET would remain for consideration at its resumed fifty-ninth (2005) session (decision 59/552).

UNAMET

On 13 September, the General Assembly decided to defer consideration of the item on the financing of UNAMET and to include it in the draft agenda of its fifty-ninth (2004) session (decision 58/578).

On 23 December, the Assembly decided that the agenda item on UNAMET's financing would remain for consideration at its resumed fifty-ninth (2005) session (decision 59/552).

Cambodia

Following the approval by the General Assembly in resolution 57/228 B [YUN 2003, p. 385] of the Agreement between the United Nations and the Royal Government of Cambodia concerning the Prosecution under Cambodian Law of Crimes Committed during the Period of Democratic Kampuchea (1975-1979), the Secretary-General, pursuant to that resolution, in his October report on Khmer Rouge trials [A/59/432], described progress achieved and measures to be taken in preparing for the entry into force and implementation of the Agreement, as well as resource requirements and mobilization. According to the Secretary-General, the formation of a new Government on 15 July allowed Cambodia to address the many issues facing the country, particularly the advancement of the rule of law and the process of judiciary reform and national reconciliation. In that context, the National Assembly and the Senate, in October, approved the Agreement, together with amendments to the Cambodian Law on the Establishment of Extraordinary Chambers in the Courts of Cambodia for the Prosecution of Crimes Committed during the Period of Democratic Kampuchea ("the Law") aimed at bringing that Law into conformity with the Agreement. It was expected that the relevant authorities would proceed with ratification of the Agreement in the near future.

The Secretary-General said that, in the planning and preparation for the Extraordinary Chambers, he had worked closely with the acting governmental authorities, pending the constitution of a new Royal Government of Cambodia and ratification of the Agreement by the legislative organs. That planning had included: designing a concept of operations for the Extraordinary Chambers and their related institutions based on the Agreement; identifying premises, together with related utilities, equipment, facilities and services; developing parameters for budget estimates; apportioning between Cambodia and the United Nations responsibilities for the costs of utilities and services and for safety and security arrangements in accordance with the Agreement; and identifying such other limited assistance as the United Nations might need to provide to ensure the smooth functioning of the investigation, the prosecution and trials. UN support for the establishment and the operation of the Extraordinary Chambers was being organized as a UN technical assistance project. A UN technical team, which visited Phnom Penh from 8 to 20 March, prepared preliminary cost estimates and clarified the division of operational responsibilities between Cambodia and the United Nations pursuant to the Agreement. The choice of premises for the court offices and for the trial venue was finalized.

In describing the concept of operations for the Extraordinary Chambers, the Secretary-General said that the Agreement would not enter into force until both parties had notified each other that all the legal requirements for entry into force had been complied with. Setting up the Extraordinary Chambers could be initiated only when sufficient funds were in place for staffing and sustaining the operations of the Chambers. The Secretary-General would consider that condition to be met when pledges for the full three years of operation of the Chambers and actual contributions for its first year had been received. The three-year overall time frame for the Chambers' operations would begin from the commencement of operations by the Prosecutor's Office to the completion of all trials and appeals. Trial judges, co-investigating judges and co-prosecutors would be appointed two months after the entry into force of the Agreement. It was anticipated that the investigation phase would last a year and a half to two years. It would be the prerogative of the co-prosecutors and co-investigating judges, within the parameters laid down in the Agreement, to decide who was to be investigated and prosecuted. Trials were expected to start 18 months after the entry into force of the Agreement and last from nine months to a year and a half in each case. Two or more trials could be held simultaneously. Proceedings, which would be conducted in three languages (Khmer, English and French), would require simultaneous interpretation. There would be full audio/video recording, as well as written summary records, of trial proceedings. Considerable public outreach needs and media interest were expected, justifying audio/video broadcast of the trial proceedings, live or time-delayed, as might be decided by the Chambers on a case-by-case basis. Some 200,000 pages of documentary evidence were expected to be examined, the bulk of which was held by the Documentation Centre of Cambodia, an NGO dedicated to research and preservation of documentation on crimes perpetrated during the period of Democratic Kampuchea. Several other sources of documentary evidence, both inside and outside Cambodia, might need to be accessed. The bulk of the documentation was in Khmer and only a small part of it had been translated to date. An intense translation effort was therefore required before actual investigative work could start. Up to 150 witnesses and/or plaintiffs (some 100 from within Cambodia and some 50 from abroad) were expected to be called on by the co-investigating judges, with about one fifth of those also having to appear at the trials proper. Up to 10 international experts, scholars and researchers were to be appointed by the Chambers for brief periods. The international judges, the international co-prosecutor and the international co-investigating judge would be accorded the status of UN officials for the purposes of their terms and conditions of service, which would allow them to maintain the credibility of the Extraordinary Chambers and ensure their impartiality and independence, both actual and perceived.

In a November addendum [A/59/432/Add.1], the Secretary-General said that, on 2 November, Cambodia had provided the Organization with an original copy of the Instrument of Ratification of the Agreement between the United Nations and Cambodia, done on 19 October. In accordance with article 32 of the Agreement, by which it would enter into force once both parties had notified each other in writing that the legal requirements for entry into force had been complied with, Cambodia, on 16 November, provided the United Nations with its notification. The Secretary-General said that the United Nations would provide Cambodia with its notification when pledges for the full three years of the Extraordinary Chambers' operations and actual contributions for its first year of operations had been received.

In December, the Secretary-General sent a third planning mission to Cambodia to complete work on identifying the probable requirements of the Chambers.

On 20 December, the Assembly took note of the Secretary-General's report on Khmer Rouge trials (decision 59/528).

India-Pakistan

India and Pakistan made important strides in 2004 to improve their relations and resolve outstanding issues. Following an agreement in January in Islamabad, Pakistan, to resume bilateral dialogue on an agreed range of issues, including Jammu and Kashmir, the two sides continued to conduct talks in a purposeful and serious manner. The Secretary-General expressed to the leaders of the countries, both in public and in private, his admiration for their concerted efforts to bring peace to the region and encouraged them to continue that endeavour.

On 6 January [S/2004/41], the EU welcomed the successful conclusion of the Twelfth Summit meeting of the South Asian Association for Regional Cooperation (Islamabad, 4-6 January), which provided an opportunity for President Pervez Musharraf of Pakistan and Prime Minister Atal Bihari Vajpayee of India to build on positive developments in their bilateral relations. The statement by both countries that they had agreed to commence a process of composite dialogue was particularly welcomed. The EU lauded the commitment of both leaders to the peaceful settlement of all bilateral issues and shared their view that constructive dialogue would promote progress towards their common objective of peace, security and economic development for their people.

The United Nations Military Observer Group in India and Pakistan (UNMOGIP) continued in 2004 to monitor the situation in Jammu and Kashmir. On 24 August [S/2004/695], the Secretary-General informed the Security Council President of his intention to appoint Major General Guido Palmieri (Italy) as Chief Military Observer of UNMOGIP, replacing Major General Pertti Puonti (Finland), who relinquished his post on 28 July. The Council took note of the Secretary-General's intention on 27 August [S/2004/696].

Korea question

On the Korean peninsula, the United Nations focused efforts on supporting the six-party talks (China, the Democratic People's Republic of Korea (DPRK), Japan, the Republic of Korea, the Russian Federation and the United States) aimed at achieving a nuclear-weapon-free peninsula and a comprehensive settlement of related issues. In consultations with the Government of the DPRK, the Secretary-General's Personal Envoy had established expert groups to explore steps and measures by which the international community could best assist that country in meeting its energy needs and modernizing its economy.

By a 26 July letter [S/2004/592] to the Secretary-General, the DPRK said that there was an impending danger of war hanging over the Korean peninsula due to the United States forceful attempts to increase its armed forces in the Republic of Korea. The DPRK said that it could not remain indifferent to those moves behind the six-way talks over an alleged settlement of the nuclear issue.

On 25 October [A/59/533-S/2004/860], the DPRK addressed identical letters to the Secretary-General and the Security Council President, drawing attention to the joint naval exercise to be staged by the United States and Japan in the Tokyo Wan from 26 October. The exercise constituted a breach of the UN Charter and international law and order, was a dangerous act that could entail global instability, and would create an obstacle to the peaceful solution of the nuclear issue of the Korean peninsula.

Myanmar

In 2004, the Secretary-General continued to provide his good offices in order to facilitate national reconciliation and democratization in Myanmar. On 17 May, the Government reconvened the National Convention to draft a new constitution, though without the participation of the National League for Democracy and some ethnic nationality parties. The Government's political road map could be considered a credible and all-inclusive vehicle for a democratic transition only if the remaining restrictions on Daw Aung San Suu Kyi and her deputy, U Tin Oo, were lifted and the National League for Democracy's offices permitted to reopen.

On 10 December [S/2004/978], the EU condemned the continued detention of Daw Aung San Suu Kyi and regretted that, although a small number of political prisoners had been released, a large number remained in detention.

Responding on 28 December [S/2004/1018], Myanmar said that the EU's attempt to place the issue of Myanmar on the Security Council's agenda was unacceptable, as the situation in Myanmar was not an issue of international peace and security and was considered annually under an agenda item of the General Assembly's Third (Social, Humanitarian and Cultural) Committee.

On 30 January, the Executive Board of the United Nations Development Programme (UNDP)/United Nations Population Fund took note of the UNDP Administrator's note on assistance to Myanmar [DP/2004/8] and the report by the independent assessment mission to Myanmar [E/2004/35 (dec. 2004/2)] (see p. 878).

Papua New Guinea

In 2004, the peace process in the Papua New Guinea province of Bougainville moved forward slowly but steadily. The United Nations, through its new mission, the United Nations Observer Mission in Bougainville (UNOMB), continued to assist in the implementation of the 2001 Bougainville Peace Agreement, concluded between the Papua New Guinea Government and the Bougainville parties. The Agreement, which had established the framework for a peace process, including a permanent ceasefire, as provided for in the 1998 Lincoln Agreement [YUN 1998, p. 319] and its annex, the Arawa Agreement [ibid.], covered issues of autonomy, the holding of a referendum and agreements on weapons disposal.

Security Council consideration (May). On 6 May [meeting 4962], the Security Council was briefed by the Assistant Secretary-General for Political Affairs on the situation in Bougainville since his last report on 15 December 2003 [YUN 2003, p. 394].

The agreement on the destruction of all contained weapons between the Bougainville Revolutionary Army (BRA) and the Bougainville Resistance Force (BRF) was transformed into a binding resolution on 17 December 2003 at a meeting of the Peace Process Consultative Committee.

UNOMB, established in December 2003 [YUN 2003, p. 395] and headed since 1 March 2004 by Tor Stenbock (Norway) who replaced Noel Sinclair (Guyana), was working in close cooperation and consultation with the Government of Papua New Guinea and the Bougainville leaders. UNOMB had been given a mandate to monitor, among other things, weapons destruction and the Bougainville constitutional process, and was also expected to verify and to certify that the level of security was conducive to holding elections.

Phase III, the final phase, of the weapons disposal programme had commenced. As at 6 May, 1,588 pieces of contained weapons—81 per cent of the arsenals of BRA and BRF—had been destroyed. UNOMB had certified that 5 of 10 Bougainville districts had completed the weapons disposal programme. The destruction of the weapons had been accompanied by ceremonies, which were used as opportunities to promote awareness of the peace process across the island.

At the Peace Process Consultative Committee meeting held on 25 February, the Papua New Guinea Government provided the Bougainvillean leaders with its comments on the second draft of the Bougainville constitution. The Bougainville Constitutional Commission would incorporate those comments into the third and final draft, which was expected to be produced by the end of May, after which it would be submitted for approval by the Bougainville Constituent Assembly in June, and for endorsement by the national Government by the end of July. Elections would then be planned for the end of November or the beginning of December. The Bougainville Interim Provincial Government had begun preparations for the electoral process and had established a Ministry for Peace and Autonomy to act as a counterpart to the national Government's Bougainville Peace and Restoration Office.

In a move designed to create greater autonomy, the former leader of BRF was appointed as Bougainville's first Minister of Police. In addition to the delegation of police powers, Bougainville's policing and judicial institutions were further strengthened through the law and justice programmes of Australia and New Zealand. It was hoped that those programmes would, over time, help to build capacity for Bougainville's police, justice and correctional institutions.

Progress was made in efforts to involve Francis Ona and his supporters in the peace process. The so-called "A" company, the dominant force in Mr. Ona's Me'ekamui Defence Force, joined the peace process, and in April completed the destruction of its weapons. It was also active in conducting peace awareness meetings in the so-called "no-go zone". However, other elements of the Me'ekamui Defence Force had not contained their weapons. UNOMB was informed that the zone's inhabitants were dissatisfied with restrictions on the freedom of their movement caused by the roadblocks, which inhibited access and the free flow of services and goods to the "no-go zone". Regrettably, Mr. Ona continued to avoid discussing the matter with the Bougainvillean leaders and the national Government. On the whole, UNOMB believed that Mr. Ona's influence continued to be reduced.

UNOMB continued to work with UNDP, the United Nations Children's Fund and other UN organizations on the practical aspects of peace-building in Bougainville. UNDP had nearly completed preparations for the implementation of its second-phase rehabilitation programme for Bougainville, which would include assistance in agriculture, capacity-building and other areas.

The Papua New Guinea representative told the Council that the Bougainville peace process had passed a number of significant milestones on the way to self-sustaining peace. They included the withdrawal of the last in a series of neutral regional supports for the peace process: the Bougainville Transition Team, made up of unarmed civilians from Australia, Fiji, New Zealand and Vanuatu. Also, the Peace Process Consultative Committee met in December 2003 and resolved that the guns contained under the agreed weapons disposal plan would be destroyed. The meeting was held within the time frame set in the plan, which formed part of the Bougainville Peace Agreement. With UNOMB's support, implementation had been truly impressive. Former combatants had displayed real determination in putting away and destroying their guns. That did not mean that Bougainville would be completely free of the presence and the threat of guns. However, the main former combatant groups would have contained and destroyed their guns, and the way would be clear for holding free and democratic elections for the autonomous Bougainville government.

Australia and New Zealand had given valued financial and technical support for strengthening policing in Bougainville, including the training of both additional general duties police and community auxiliary police. The establishment of the Governance and Implementation Fund would allow those two countries and other aid donors to contribute to practical peace-building in Bougainville, providing resources for implementation of a jointly developed work plan which was supported by the national Government and the Bougainville transitional administration. Priorities included promoting awareness and building capacity, both nationally and in Bougainville, to make sure that the arrangements for Bougainville autonomy developed and operated as agreed.

Letter of Secretary-General (June). On 25 June [S/2004/526], the Secretary-General informed the Security Council President that Papua New Guinea, on 14 June, had requested the extension of UNOMB's mandate. Since the Council's meeting on 6 May, UNOMB had reported further progress by the parties in the implementation of the Bougainville Peace Agreement, including, as of 21 June, the destruction of 1,651 or 85 per cent of the contained weapons, and the completion of the weapons disposal programme in six of Bougainville's ten districts. UNOMB continued to receive requests to supervise weapons containment in the "no-go zone". Given UNOMB's crucial role in building confidence among the parties and the need for it to complete the remaining mandated tasks, the Secretary-General recommended the extension of UNOMB's mandate for a further six-month period, from 1 July to 31 December 2004.

On 30 June [S/2004/527], the Council took note of the Secretary-General's recommendation and expressed its intention to extend UNOMB for a final period of six months. The Council requested the Secretary-General to report within three months on an assessment of the ground situation and on a mission-closure plan.

Report of Secretary-General. On 29 September [S/2004/771], the Secretary-General submitted a report on UNOMB, with particular attention to weapons disposal, the development of a constitution for an autonomous Bougainville government, preparations for elections and the plan for UNOMB's closing. A copy of an aide-memoire, dated 17 September, from the Government of Papua New Guinea on UNOMB's role and its remaining responsibilities was attached to the Secretary-General's report.

As at 29 September, Bougainville ex-combatants had destroyed a total of 1,841 weapons, or 92.6 per cent of the total amount. The weapons disposal plan had been completed in seven of the ten districts of the province. UNOMB was working very closely with the parties on the expeditious completion of the weapons disposal plan in the remaining districts. At the same time, UNOMB was expanding its weapons awareness campaign to the adjacent "no-go zone" not covered by the weapons disposal plan, encouraging former combatants and other individuals in the area to turn in their weapons.

Steady progress in weapons disposal contributed to an improved level of law and order throughout the province. Policing was strengthened with the deployment of 50 Bougainville police who had completed their training, and the recruitment of a further 50 police who were undergoing training. The Australian Federal Police, who had deployed to Bougainville in early September, had started to work side by side with the Bougainville police. In addition, more than 400 community auxiliary police were at work or undergoing retraining in Bougainville. Community policing was being facilitated by New Zealand. Progress was also being made in improving access to courts and upgrading the correctional services.

The Bougainville Constitutional Commission submitted the third draft of the constitution to the Bougainville Constituent Assembly on 1 September. The Constituent Assembly introduced amendments, which resulted in a fourth draft of the constitution. The report of the Constitutional Commission and the third and fourth drafts of the proposed constitution were submitted to the national Government in mid-September. The Government expected that consultations between the bipartisan National Committee and the Constituent Assembly would be undertaken in the near future. To ensure that the Bougainville constitution complied with that of Papua New Guinea, the amendments to the fourth draft would have to be reviewed by the Office of the Attorney-General. The Government had expressed its concern over a number of public policy issues, including the affordability of the proposed system of government. It had nevertheless acknowledged that, while the Bougainville constitution had to be consistent with the constitution of Papua New Guinea, public policy issues were a matter for consultation. If such issues did not violate the constitution of Papua New Guinea, they would be left to the Bougainville leaders to decide. The Papua New Guinea Chief Electoral Commissioner visited Bougainville to assess technical and other electoral needs, and drew up a programme of work in close consultation with officials on the ground.

Together with UN agencies and programmes, the donor community was working closely with the Bougainville provincial administration to lay a solid economic foundation for the future government. A work plan had been prepared jointly by the national Government and the Bougainville Interim Provincial Administration, to be financed through the Governance and Implementation Fund. The medium-term priorities for the Fund would be to transfer essential powers from the national Government to the Bougainville administration, prepare and hold elections for an autonomous government and reform the Bougainville public sector.

In accordance with the Security Council's request, UNOMB drew up a Mission liquidation plan and had made a complete inventory of its assets, including recommendations on how they should be liquidated, which would take an estimated six to eight weeks after the expiration of UNOMB's mandate.

The Secretary-General observed that, in view of the situation in the province, it would not be possible to hold elections by the end of 2004, in spite of continuing solid progress in weapons disposal, constitution drafting and preparations for elections. In the coming months, and until an autonomous government was established in Bougainville, UNOMB would continue to chair the Peace Process Consultative Committee so that the parties could consult on the peace process and on preparations for elections in particular. UNOMB would also continue to monitor and report to that Committee on the verification and certification of compliance by the parties in the handing over of weapons, especially on the surrendered or contained weapons in the "no-go zone" in the period leading up to elections. UNOMB had gained the full trust and confidence of all the parties and of a significant segment of the population in the "no-go zone". There was concern that UNOMB's premature closure could have a negative impact on the peace process during the critical months ahead. The national Government and the Bougainville leaders were aware of the Council's concerns regarding the open-ended nature of UNOMB's mandate. The Mission would continue to support their efforts to move the peace process forward in the remaining period of its current mandate.

Letter of Secretary-General (December). On 21 December [S/2004/1015], the Secretary-General informed the Council President that, by a 14 December letter, Papua New Guinea had requested a further extension of UNOMB's mandate. The Secretary-General commended the Government of Papua New Guinea and the Bougainville parties for overcoming their differences and adopting the Bougainville constitution, thereby opening the way for the holding of elections for an autonomous Bougainville government. Preparations for those elections had already begun, the details of which were contained in Papua New Guinea's 14 December letter, annexed to that of the Secretary-General. A schedule for elections had also been drawn up by the Papua New Guinea Electoral Commission in consultation with the Bougainville Administration.

Efforts continued to encourage former combatants to destroy the remaining 6 per cent of the contained weapons. Meanwhile, the renewed activities of Francis Ona across Bougainville made it imperative that UNOMB continue to facilitate a dialogue between his supporters and the Bougainville leaders until the voting was completed. When established, the autonomous Bougainville government would assume the functions of the Peace Process Consultative Committee, currently chaired by UNOMB, whose responsibilities would have been fully implemented.

The transparent and thorough electoral preparations undertaken by the Government of Papua New Guinea were positive developments and every effort should be made to enable the parties to reach a successful conclusion of the peace process in June 2005. Accordingly, the Secretary-General recommended that the Mission's mandate be extended for a period of six months, until 30 June 2005, so that it could complete the tasks which the Council had endorsed.

On 23 December [S/2004/1016], the Council took note of the Secretary-General's recommendation and requested him to submit a report within three months on an assessment of the ground situation and on a mission-closure plan.

Tajikistan

The Secretary-General, on 23 April [S/2004/331], informed the Security Council of his intention to continue the activities of the United Nations Tajikistan Office of Peace-building (UNTOP) for another year, until 1 June 2005, in view of its role and the country's need for continuing support in its post-conflict peace-building efforts. The Council took note of his intention on 28 April [S/2004/332].

UNTOP, established in 2000 [YUN 2000, p. 315] following the withdrawal of the United Nations Mission of Observers in Tajikistan, focused its activities during 2004 on the consolidation of peace and national reconciliation, the promotion of the rule of law, the strengthening of democratic institutions and support for national capacity-building in human rights. The Secretary-General reported that UNTOP continued to conduct Political Discussion Club meetings on political pluralism, democratization and consolidation of peace in Tajikistan, attended by national and local government officials, leaders of political parties and representatives of civil society. As a result of the Club's catalytic effect, new forms of partnership between the State and civil society had emerged and conditions had improved for the freer functioning of political parties. UNTOP also supported the development of national law enforcement capacities. The viability of the peace process in Tajikistan and the strength of its democratic institutions would be tested by parliamentary elections in early 2005. In April 2004, UNTOP facilitated a needs assessment mission led by the Electoral Assistance Division of the UN Department of Political Affairs. The assistance to be provided to Tajikistan would aim at contributing to the improvement of the transparency and credibility of the 2005 parliamentary elections and at promoting democratization.

On 1 April [A/58/754], Tajikistan informed the Secretary-General that the last of its stocks of anti-personnel mines, numbering 200 items, were destroyed on 31 March at a military testing ground, in accordance with the 1997 Ottawa Convention on the Prohibition of the Use, Stockpiling, Production and Transfer of Anti-personnel Mines and on Their Destruction [YUN 1997, p. 503].

On 19 April [A/58/773], Tajikistan reported that, with the support of UNDP and the Geneva International Centre for Humanitarian Demining, it had convened a conference on the topic "Progress towards the Ottawa Convention's Aims in Central Asia" (Dushanbe, Tajikistan, 15-16 April).

On 8 June [A/58/838-S/2004/432], Kazakhstan, Kyrgyzstan, Tajikistan and Uzbekistan submitted to the Secretary-General the text of a joint statement signed by the Presidents of the four countries at a meeting of the heads of State of the Organization of Central Asian Cooperation (Astana, Kazakhstan, 28 May), in which they confirmed their desire to pursue the steady expansion of the integration process in every area of regional cooperation.

United Arab Emirates-Iran

Greater Tunb, Lesser Tunb and Abu Musa

The United Arab Emirates, in a 1 March letter to the Secretary-General [S/2004/169], requested the Security Council to retain on its agenda for 2004 the item entitled "Letter dated 3 December 1971 from the Permanent Representatives of Algeria, Iraq, the Libyan Arab Jamahiriya and the People's Democratic Republic of Yemen to the United Nations addressed to the President of the Security Council (S/10409)", concerning Iran's occupation of three islands belonging to the United Arab Emirates, namely Greater Tunb, Lesser Tunb and Abu Musa, until a settlement of the dispute was achieved by peaceful means through direct negotiations or through recourse to the International Court of Justice.

On 9 June [S/2004/486], the League of Arab States (LAS) informed the Council President that the LAS Council had adopted a resolution at its sixteenth regular session (Tunis, Tunisia, 22-23 May) on the occupation by Iran of the three Arab islands belonging to the United Arab Emirates. The resolution called on the Secretary-General and the Council President to maintain that issue among the matters of which the Council was seized until Iran ended its occupation of the three islands.

On 29 June [S/2004/530], the United Arab Emirates transmitted to the Secretary-General the text of a press release issued by the Ministerial Council of the Gulf Cooperation Council at its ninety-first session (Jeddah, Saudi Arabia, 30 June), reiterating its support of the sovereignty of the United Arab Emirates over the three islands.

On 30 July [S/2004/617], Iran stated that the islands were integral parts of the Iranian territory and rejected any claim to the contrary. Iran had always offered to negotiate with the United Arab Emirates to remove any misunderstanding between the two countries.

United Nations–Pacific Islands Forum cooperation

On 4 June [A/59/95], New Zealand transmitted to the Secretary-General the decisions and the Auckland Declaration adopted at the Special Leaders' Retreat of the Pacific Islands Forum (Auckland, New Zealand, 6 April). The leaders, among other things, agreed to a Pacific Vision statement that set the region on a new path of enhanced regional cooperation. The Vision statement would be elaborated through the development of a Pacific Plan. That undertaking would identify how better sharing of resources and alignment of policies would improve the well-being of the region.

Cooperation between the United Nations and the Pacific Islands Forum was highlighted by the Secretary-General in a September report [A/59/303] on cooperation between the United Nations and regional and other organizations.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 8 November [meeting 50], the General Assembly adopted resolution 59/20 [draft: A/59/L.11 & Add.1] without vote [agenda item 56 (q)].

Cooperation between the United Nations and the Pacific Islands Forum

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 56/41 of 7 December 2001 and 57/37 of 21 November 2002,

Welcoming the ongoing efforts towards closer cooperation between the United Nations and the Pacific Islands Forum and its associated institutions,

Reaffirming that one of the guiding principles for cooperation in peace-building adopted by the fourth high-level meeting between the United Nations and heads of regional organizations is that, as the promotion of self-reliance should be a fundamental goal of all cooperative and peace-building activities, peace-building must be a home-grown process in which the role of the United Nations and regional organizations is to support national endeavours,

Noting the outcomes of the Special Leaders' Retreat of the Pacific Islands Forum, held in New Zealand in April 2004,

Taking note of the communiqué of the thirty-fifth meeting of the Pacific Islands Forum, held in Apia from 5 to 7 August 2004,

Having considered the report of the Secretary-General on cooperation between the United Nations and regional and other organizations,

1. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General, in particular the section on cooperation between the United Nations and the Pacific Islands Forum, and encourages further such cooperation;

2. Welcomes the ongoing work of various international organizations, United Nations agencies, funds and programmes in advancing knowledge in the key strategic areas related to governance, security, economic growth, trade and sustainable development, as well as in the implementation of the internationally agreed development goals, including those in the United Nations Millennium Declaration, in the Pacific island countries;

3. Also welcomes the decision of the Pacific Islands Forum to develop a "Pacific Plan", which is aimed at enhancing regional integration and cooperation among its members and cooperation with the international community, including the United Nations system;

4. Further welcomes the steps taken by the Secretary-General for the sixth high-level meeting between the United Nations and heads of regional organizations, to be convened in mid-2005, and recognizes the tasks before the United Nations departments and organizations in leading the process of implementing the recommendations of the last meeting and in formulating practical follow-up plans for discussion during the next meeting;

5. Notes with satisfaction that regular consultations continue at all levels between the United Nations and the Secretariat of the Pacific Islands Forum and that the United Nations also participated in the 2004 session of the Pacific Islands Forum Regional Security Committee and at the Leaders' Forum, held in Apia in August 2004;

6. Welcomes the ongoing efforts of the Pacific Islands Forum to promote, primarily through the Regional Security Committee, law enforcement cooperation, the rule of law and regional peace and security, including combating all types of terrorism, in implementing the core United Nations treaties on anti-terrorism, anti-money-laundering, transnational crime and the financing of terrorism;

7. Requests, in this regard, that the United Nations continue to assist the Pacific Islands Forum to enable the timely implementation of relevant United Nations mandates, and invites States to contribute to the Biketawa Trust Fund, which is administered by the Pacific Islands Forum for confidence-building measures and conflict prevention;

8. Welcomes the significant efforts of the Pacific Islands Forum in enhancing peace and security in the region, including through the Regional Assistance Mission to Solomon Islands;

9. Also welcomes the readiness of the United Nations, in cooperation with the Pacific Islands Forum, to field an inter-agency mission to Nauru to identify ways of assisting that country to cope with its current situation;

10. Notes with appreciation the role of the United Nations in the Bougainville peace process in Papua New Guinea and the steady progress being made by the parties;

11. Welcomes plans for the joint hosting of a regional seminar with the Pacific Islands Forum on "Conflict prevention and peace-building", to be held in early 2005;

12. Requests that the Department of Political Affairs of the Secretariat and the United Nations Development Programme, in cooperation with the Pacific Islands Forum, promote joint cooperative needs assessment missions in the region to determine additional support to enhance peace-building and reconciliation processes and to complement the activities of regional missions and mechanisms;

13. Takes note of steps taken by the Pacific Islands Forum to solidify its partnership with non-State actors in the region in promoting governance and sustainable development issues;

14. Invites the United Nations Institute for Training and Research to develop, in close consultation with the Pacific Islands Forum and other interested agencies, a Pacific-specific regional training programme on "Preventive diplomacy and post-conflict resolution", and to convene this programme in the Pacific in 2005;

15. Urges all States to participate, at the highest level possible, in the International Meeting to Review the Implementation of the Programme of Action for the Sustainable Development of Small Island Developing States, to be held in Mauritius;

16. Recognizes the burden placed on small States by growing international reporting requirements, and encourages the investigation of innovative reporting modalities, including regional reporting, where appropriate;

17. Calls upon the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights to provide technical support to Pacific Islands Forum members to contribute to the regional efforts in promoting awareness and knowledge of all international human rights treaties;

18. Requests the Secretary-General to submit to the General Assembly at its sixty-first session a report on the implementation of the present resolution;

19. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its sixty-first session the sub-item entitled "Cooperation between the United Nations and the Pacific Islands Forum".

UN-ASEAN cooperation

The United Nations and the Association of Southeast Asian Nations (ASEAN) increased contacts and cooperation on matters relating to regional peace and security during 2004, as detailed in a September report [A/59/303] by the Secretary-General on cooperation between the United Nations and regional and other organizations. A joint communiqué issued by the 37th Ministerial Meeting of ASEAN (Jakarta, Indonesia, 30 June) stated that ASEAN was considering requesting observer status with the United Nations and that an institutional relationship with the United Nations would support the realization of the goals of the ASEAN community and efforts to strengthen cooperation between the two organizations.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 22 October [meeting 40], the General Assembly adopted resolution 59/5 [draft: A/59/L.6 & Add.1] without vote [agenda item 56 (c)].

Cooperation between the United Nations and the Association of Southeast Asian Nations

The General Assembly,

Bearing in mind the aims and purposes of the Association of Southeast Asian Nations, as enshrined in the Bangkok Declaration of 8 August 1967, in particular the maintenance of close and beneficial cooperation with existing international and regional organizations with similar aims and purposes,

Recalling its resolution 57/35 of 21 November 2002 on cooperation between the United Nations and the Association,

Noting with appreciation the report of the Secretary-General on cooperation between the United Nations and the Association,

Noting with satisfaction that the activities of the Association are consistent with the purposes and principles of the United Nations,

Welcoming the ongoing efforts that strengthen the cooperation between the United Nations system and the Association,

Welcoming also the participation of the Association in the high-level meetings between the United Nations and regional organizations, as well as the collaboration between the Association and the Economic and Social Commission for Asia and the Pacific to promote dialogue and cooperation among regional organizations in Asia and the Pacific,

1. Commends the President of the General Assembly, the Secretary-General of the United Nations and the Ministers for Foreign Affairs of the States members of the Association of Southeast Asian Nations for their efforts to hold regular meetings, on an annual basis, with the presence of the Secretary-General of the Association, during the regular session of the Assembly, with a view to further strengthening the cooperation between the United Nations and the Association;

2. Continues to encourage both the United Nations and the Association to further increase contacts and strengthen areas of cooperation, as appropriate;

3. Requests the Secretary-General to submit to the General Assembly at its sixty-first session a report on the implementation of the present resolution;

4. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its sixty-first session the sub-item entitled "Cooperation between the United Nations and the Association of Southeast Asian Nations".

Chapter V

Europe and the Mediterranean

In 2004, progress towards the restoration of peace and stability and the settlement of several long-standing disputes in Europe and the Mediterranean suffered serious setbacks, as renewed violence risked derailing the stabilization and normalization process in the Serbia and Montenegro province of Kosovo, and almost brought the Georgian/Abkhaz peace process to a standstill, while efforts to reunite Cyprus in a bizonal, bicomunal federation ended in a stalemate with no immediate prospects of a way forward. Only in Bosnia and Herzegovina was there any significant progress to report regarding United Nations efforts to restore stability.

Bosnia and Herzegovina made steps towards restoring normality to its institutions and promoting further Euro-Atlantic integration by adopting requisite legislation and establishing new State-level institutions, although the continued lack of cooperation, especially by its constituent Republic, Republika Srpska, with the International Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia resulted in the country being denied membership in the North Atlantic Treaty Organization (NATO) Partnership for Peace programme. Because of the positive security situation in the country, NATO announced in June that it was ending its multinational Stabilization Force there in December. The European Union (EU) indicated its intention to fill the resulting gap by installing an EU force as the successor to the NATO Force, which the Security Council authorized in December.

In the Serbia and Montenegro province of Kosovo, an eruption of violence in March caused a serious setback to the stabilization and normalization processes aimed at assisting the authorities and people of Kosovo to build a modern, multi-ethnic society. Despite the outbreak, the United Nations Interim Administration Mission in Kosovo and the Special Representative of the Secretary-General launched the Kosovo Standards Implementation Plan, which included priority actions in response to the March violence. Also arising out of the March events, the Secretary-General appointed a team to conduct a comprehensive review of the policies and practices of all actors. The team, among its recommendations, suggested that a comprehensive and integrated strategy be elaborated and that the “standards before status” policy, which established in 2002 benchmarks for Kosovo to attain before talks on its status could begin, be replaced by a priority-based policy to facilitate future status discussions. General elections, organized for the first time by Kosovo authorities, were held on 23 October leading to the formation of a coalition Government.

The Georgian/Abkhaz peace process came perilously close to a standstill. While the parties came together during the course of the year on some substantive issues, efforts to advance a dialogue on the 2001 Basic Principles for the Distribution of Competences between Tbilisi (Georgia’s Government) and Sukhumi (the Abkhaz leadership) encountered serious challenges. The Principles, which were intended to serve as a basis for negotiations on the status of Abkhazia as a sovereign entity within the State of Georgia, encountered serious challenges. Renewed violence in March led to a chain of events that brought all contacts between the sides to a halt. The Georgian side announced a proposal for settling the conflict, which included substantial autonomy for a reintegrated Abkhazia into the State of Georgia and power sharing at the national level, but there was no movement in the position of the Abkhaz side.

No progress was made towards a settlement of the conflict between Armenia and Azerbaijan over the Nagorny Karabakh region in Azerbaijan.

In the Mediterranean, after a 40-year effort by the United Nations, the Cyprus problem remained unresolved at the end of 2004 with no obvious avenue to achieve successful negotiations. The Secretary-General reconvened talks in February in Cyprus, which were resumed in Bürgenstock, Switzerland, on 24 March. As no agreement was achievable during those negotiations between the two sides—the Greek Cypriots and the Turkish Cypriots—the Secretary-General, in accordance with prior agreements, finalized a text on the basis of his proposed settlement plan. The “Comprehensive Settlement of the Cyprus Problem”, which comprised, among other documents, a Foundation Agreement and constituent State constitutions, was submitted for approval by each side in simultaneous referenda on 24 April. The Greek Cypriot electorate, by a margin of three to one, rejected the settlement proposal; the Turkish Cypriot side approved it by a margin of two to one. The Foundation Agreement could not therefore enter into force and all the agreements of the Comprehensive Settlement became null and void. The Republic of Cyprus acceded to EU membership on 1 May, putting into question the future status of the northern part of the island. In those circumstances, the Secretary-General reviewed the mandate and concept of operations of the United Nations Peacekeeping Force in Cyprus and recommended a reduction in the mission's military component. He undertook to maintain continuous contact at the highest level with the parties and promised to designate on an ad hoc basis senior Secretariat officials to deal with any particular aspect of his mission of good offices that might require attention.

The former Yugoslavia

UN operations

In 2004, the United Nations maintained only one peacekeeping mission in the territories of the former Yugoslavia. Through the United Nations Interim Administration Mission in Kosovo (UNMIK), it continued efforts to restore peace and stability to the province of Kosovo in Serbia and Montenegro. Peace activities in Bosnia and Herzegovina were conducted by the European Union Police Mission.

Financing and liquidation of closed peacekeeping operations

The Secretary-General's April report on the updated financial position of closed peacekeeping missions as at 30 June 2003 [A/58/778] (see p. 95), included information on the financing of the United Nations Preventive Deployment Force (UNPREDEP), which ended in 1999; the United Nations Protection Force (UNPROFOR), which ended in 1999; the United Nations Confidence Restoration Operation in Croatia (UNCRO), which ended in 1996; and UNPREDEP—known collectively as the United Nations Peace Forces (UNPF)—and the UNPF Headquarters (UNPF-HQ); and the United Nations Transitional Administration for Eastern Slavonia, Baranja and Western Sirmium (UNTAES).

UNMIBH

In January [A/58/632], the Secretary-General submitted the performance report on the budget of the United Nations Mission in Bosnia and Herzegovina (UNMIBH), which ended on 31 December 2002, for the period from 1 July 2002 to 30 June 2003, in which he recommended that the General Assembly decide on the treatment of the unencumbered balance of $8,236,800 and other income/adjustments amounting to $8,603,000. In February [A/58/720], he reported on the final disposition of UNMIBH assets, which had an inventory value of $59,564,700 as at 31 December 2002.

In its April financial performance report on UNMIBH [A/58/759/Add.11], the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions (ACABQ) recommended that the unencumbered balance and the amount resulting from other income and adjustments for that period be credited to Member States in a manner to be determined by the Assembly.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 18 June [meeting 91], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth (Administrative and Budgetary) Committee [A/58/822], adopted resolution 58/300 without vote [agenda item 136].

Financing of the United Nations Mission in Bosnia and Herzegovina

The General Assembly,

Having considered the reports of the Secretary-General on the financing of the United Nations Mission in Bosnia and Herzegovina and the related reports of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions,

Recalling Security Council resolution 1035(1995) of 21 December 1995 regarding the establishment of the United Nations Mission in Bosnia and Herzegovina and the subsequent resolutions by which the Council extended the mandate of the Mission, the latest of which was resolution 1423(2002) of 12 July 2002, by which the Council extended the mandate of the Mission until 31 December 2002,

Recalling also Security Council resolution 1437(2002) of 11 October 2002, in which the Council authorized the United Nations military observers to continue to monitor the demilitarization of the Prevlaka peninsula until 15 December 2002,

Recalling further its decision 50/481 of 11 April 1996 on the financing of the Mission and its subsequent resolutions and decisions thereon, the latest of which was resolution 57/334 of 18 June 2003,

Reaffirming the general principles underlying the financing of United Nations peacekeeping operations, as stated in General Assembly resolutions 1874(S-IV) of 27 June 1963, 3101(XXVIII) of 11 December 1973 and 55/235 of 23 December 2000,

Noting with appreciation that voluntary contributions have been made to the Mission,

Mindful of the fact that it is essential to provide the Mission with the necessary financial resources to enable it to meet its outstanding liabilities,

1. Takes note of the status of contributions to the United Nations Mission in Bosnia and Herzegovina as

at 15 April 2004, including the contributions outstanding in the amount of 38 million United States dollars, representing some 4 per cent of the total assessed contributions, notes with concern that only ninety-seven Member States have paid their assessed contributions in full, and urges all other Member States, in particular those in arrears, to ensure payment of their outstanding assessed contributions;

2. Expresses its appreciation to those Member States which have paid their assessed contributions in full, and urges all other Member States to make every possible effort to ensure payment of their assessed contributions to the Mission in full;

3. Expresses concern at the delay experienced by the Secretary-General in deploying and providing adequate resources to some recent peacekeeping missions, in particular those in Africa;

4. Emphasizes that all future and existing peacekeeping missions shall be given equal and non-discriminatory treatment in respect of financial and administrative arrangements;

5. Also emphasizes that all peacekeeping missions shall be provided with adequate resources for the effective and efficient discharge of their respective mandates;

6. Endorses the conclusions and recommendations contained in the report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions, and requests the Secretary-General to ensure their full implementation;

Final disposition of assets

7. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General on the final disposition of the assets of the Mission;

Financial performance report for the period from 1 July 2002 to 30 June 2003

8. Also takes note of the report of the Secretary-General on the financial performance of the Mission for the period from 1 July 2002 to 30 June 2003;

9. Decides that Member States that have fulfilled their financial obligations to the Mission shall be credited their respective share of the unencumbered balance and other income in the total amount of 16,839,800 dollars in respect of the financial period ended 30 June 2003, in accordance with the levels set out in General Assembly resolution 55/235, as adjusted by the Assembly in its resolutions 55/236 of 23 December 2000 and 57/290 A of 20 December 2002, and taking into account the scale of assessments for 2003, as set out in its resolutions 55/5 B of 23 December 2000 and 57/4 B of 20 December 2002;

10. Decides also that, for Member States that have not fulfilled their financial obligations to the Mission, their respective share of the unencumbered balance and other income in the total amount of 16,839,800 dollars in respect of the financial period ended 30 June 2003 shall be set off against their outstanding obligations, in accordance with the scheme set out in paragraph 9 above;

11. Decides further that the increase of 342,600 dollars in the estimated staff assessment income in respect of the financial period ended 30 June 2003 shall be added to the credits from the amount referred to in paragraphs 9 and 10 above, and that the respective shares of Member States therein shall be applied in accordance with the provisions of those paragraphs, as appropriate;

12. Emphasizes that no peacekeeping mission shall be financed by borrowing funds from other active peacekeeping missions;

13. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its fifty-ninth session the item entitled "Financing of the United Nations Mission in Bosnia and Herzegovina."

On 23 December, the Assembly decided that the item on the financing of UNMIBH would remain for consideration during its resumed fifty-ninth (2005) session (decision 59/552).

Bosnia and Herzegovina

In 2004, efforts to assist the two entities comprising the Republic of Bosnia and Herzegovina—the Federation of Bosnia and Herzegovina (where mainly Bosnian Muslims (Bosniacs) and Bosnian Croats resided) and Republika Srpska (where mostly Bosnian Serbs resided)—in implementing the 1995 General Framework Agreement for Peace in Bosnia and Herzegovina and the annexes thereto (the Peace Agreement) [YUN 1995, p. 544] were directed by the European Union (EU). Those efforts were accomplished through the activities of the Office of the High Representative for the Implementation of the Peace Agreement on Bosnia and Herzegovina, responsible for the Agreement's civilian aspects [YUN 1996, p. 293], and the European Union Police Mission in Bosnia and Herzegovina (EUPM). The North Atlantic Treaty Organization (NATO) continued to execute its responsibilities for the Agreement's military aspects, which were transferred to the EU Force (EUFOR) mission in December. NATO maintained a headquarters in Sarajevo, following the transfer of responsibilities. The Peace Implementation Council (PIC) and its Steering Board continued to oversee and facilitate the Agreement's implementation.

The High Representative reported on the progress made in the implementation process and related political developments in the country during the year in the context of his mission implementation plan, which set out a number of core tasks to be accomplished [YUN 2003, p. 401]. Bosnia and Herzegovina undertook a number of reforms, particularly in the areas of the rule of law, refugee return and economic development, in accordance with European standards, as it continued work towards full integration into Europe through the EU Stabilization and Association Process and NATO's Partnership for Peace requirements.

Implementation of Peace Agreement

Civilian aspects

The civilian aspects of the 1995 Peace Agreement entailed a wide range of activities, including humanitarian aid, infrastructure rehabilitation, establishment of political and constitutional institutions, promoting respect for human rights and the holding of free and fair elections. The High Representative for the Implementation of the Peace Agreement, who chaired the PIC Steering Board and other key implementation bodies, was the final authority with regard to implementing the civilian aspects of the Peace Agreement [YUN 1995, p. 547]. The reports on the activities of EUPM were submitted by the EU Secretary-General and High Representative for the Common Foreign and Security Policy, Javier Solana, to the Security Council President through the UN Secretary-General.

Office of High Representative

Reports of High Representative. The High Representative, Lord Paddy Ashdown (United Kingdom), reported to the Council through the Secretary-General on the peace implementation process for the periods from 1 January to 30 June [S/2004/807] and from 1 July to 31 December [S/2005/156], describing progress in the implementation of the Peace Agreement's civilian aspects, which the High Representative had been mandated to monitor, mobilize and coordinate. (For details on the reports' specific topics, see below.)

The Security Council, on 3 March, considered the High Representative's report covering late 2003 [YUN 2003, p. 402]. On 11 November, it considered the report covering the first half of 2004.

SECURITY COUNCIL ACTION

On 3 March [meeting 4920], the Security Council considered the High Representative's report for the period from 1 September to 31 December 2003 [YUN 2003, p. 402]. On 9 July [meeting 5001], it unanimously adopted resolution 1551(2004). The draft [S/2004/545] was submitted by France, Germany, Italy, Romania, the Russian Federation, Spain, the United Kingdom and the United States.

The Security Council,

Recalling all its relevant resolutions concerning the conflicts in the former Yugoslavia and the relevant statements by its President, including resolutions 1031(1995) of 15 December 1995, 1088(1996) of 12 December 1996, 1423(2002) of 12 July 2002 and 1491(2003) of 11 July 2003,

Reaffirming its commitment to the political settlement of the conflicts in the former Yugoslavia, preserving the sovereignty and territorial integrity of all States there within their internationally recognized borders,

Emphasizing its full support for the continued role in Bosnia and Herzegovina of the High Representative for the Implementation of the Peace Agreement on Bosnia and Herzegovina,

Underlining its commitment to support the implementation of the General Framework Agreement for Peace in Bosnia and Herzegovina and the annexes thereto (collectively the "Peace Agreement"), as well as the relevant decisions of the Peace Implementation Council,

Emphasizing its appreciation to the High Representative, the Commander and personnel of the multinational Stabilization Force, the Organization for Security and Cooperation in Europe, the European Union, and the personnel of other international organizations and agencies in Bosnia and Herzegovina for their contributions to the implementation of the Peace Agreement,

Emphasizing that a comprehensive and coordinated return of refugees and displaced persons throughout the region continues to be crucial to lasting peace,

Recalling the declarations of the ministerial meetings of the Peace Implementation Council,

Taking note of the reports of the High Representative, including his latest report, of 18 February 2004,

Determining that the situation in the region continues to constitute a threat to international peace and security,

Determined to promote the peaceful resolution of the conflicts in accordance with the purposes and principles of the Charter of the United Nations,

Recalling the relevant principles contained in the Convention on the Safety of United Nations and Associated Personnel of 9 December 1994 and the statement by its President of 9 February 2000,

Welcoming and encouraging efforts by the United Nations to sensitize peacekeeping personnel in the prevention and control of HIV/AIDS and other communicable diseases in all its peacekeeping operations,

Taking note of the decisions set out in paragraph 8 of the communiqué of the summit of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization held in Istanbul, Turkey, on 28 June 2004, which refers to the intention of that organization to conclude its Stabilization Force operation in Bosnia and Herzegovina by the end of 2004,

Taking note also of the intention of the European Union to launch a European Union mission to Bosnia and Herzegovina, including a military component, from December 2004, under the terms set out in the letter dated 29 June 2004 from the Minister for Foreign Affairs of Ireland and President of the Council of the European Union addressed to the President of the Security Council,

Acting under Chapter VII of the Charter,

I

1. Reaffirms once again its support for the General Framework Agreement for Peace in Bosnia and Herzegovina and the annexes thereto (collectively the "Peace Agreement"), as well as for the Dayton Agreement on Implementing the Federation of Bosnia and Herzegovina of 10 November 1995, calls upon the parties to comply strictly with their obligations under those Agreements, and expresses its intention to keep the implementation of the Peace Agreement, and the situation in Bosnia and Herzegovina, under review;

2. Reiterates that the primary responsibility for the further successful implementation of the Peace Agreement lies with the authorities in Bosnia and Herzegovina themselves and that the continued willingness of the international community and major donors to assume the political, military and economic burden of implementation and reconstruction efforts will be determined by the compliance and active participation by all the authorities in Bosnia and Herzegovina in implementing the Peace Agreement and rebuilding a civil society, in particular in full cooperation with the International Tribunal for the Prosecution of Persons Responsible for Serious Violations of International Humanitarian Law Committed in the Territory of the Former Yugoslavia since 1991, in strengthening joint institutions, which foster the building of a fully functioning self-sustaining State able to integrate itself into the European structures, and in facilitating returns of refugees and displaced persons;

3. Reminds the parties once again that, in accordance with the Peace Agreement, they have committed themselves to cooperate fully with all entities involved in the implementation of this peace settlement, as described in the Peace Agreement, or which are otherwise authorized by the Security Council, including the International Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia, as it carries out its responsibilities for dispensing justice impartially, and underlines that full cooperation by States and entities with the Tribunal includes, inter alia, the surrender for trial of all persons indicted by the Tribunal and the provision of information to assist in Tribunal investigations;

4. Emphasizes its full support for the continued role of the High Representative for the Implementation of the Peace Agreement on Bosnia and Herzegovina in monitoring the implementation of the Peace Agreement and giving guidance to and coordinating the activities of the civilian organizations and agencies involved in assisting the parties to implement the Peace Agreement, and reaffirms that, under annex 10 of the Peace Agreement, the High Representative is the final authority in theatre regarding the interpretation of civilian implementation of the Peace Agreement and that, in case of dispute, he may give his interpretation and make recommendations, and make binding decisions as he judges necessary on issues as elaborated by the Peace Implementation Council in Bonn, Germany, on 9 and 10 December 1997;

5. Expresses its support for the declarations of the ministerial meetings of the Peace Implementation Council;

6. Recognizes that the parties have authorized the multinational force referred to in paragraph 11 below to take such actions as required, including the use of necessary force, to ensure compliance with annex 1-A of the Peace Agreement;

7. Reaffirms its intention to keep the situation in Bosnia and Herzegovina under close review, taking into account the reports submitted pursuant to paragraphs 19 and 23 below, and any recommendations those reports might include, and its readiness to consider the imposition of measures if any party fails significantly to meet its obligations under the Peace Agreement;

II

8. Pays tribute to those Member States which participated in the multinational Stabilization Force established in accordance with its resolution 1088(1996), and welcomes their willingness to assist the parties to the Peace Agreement by continuing to deploy a multinational stabilization force;

9. Notes the support of the parties to the Peace Agreement for the continuation of the multinational Stabilization Force, set out in the declaration of the ministerial meeting of the Peace Implementation Council in Madrid on 16 December 1998;

10. Welcomes the decision of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization to conclude its current Stabilization Force operation in Bosnia and Herzegovina by the end of 2004, and further welcomes the intention of the European Union to launch a European Union mission to Bosnia and Herzegovina, including a military component, from December 2004;

11. Authorizes the Member States acting through or in cooperation with the organization referred to in annex 1-A of the Peace Agreement to continue for a further planned period of six months the multinational Stabilization Force as established in accordance with its resolution 1088(1996) under unified command and control in order to fulfil the role specified in annexes 1-A and 2 of the Peace Agreement;

12. Expresses its intention to consider the terms of further authorization as necessary, in the light of developments in the implementation of the Peace Agreement and the situation in Bosnia and Herzegovina;

13. Authorizes the Member States acting under paragraph 11 above to take all necessary measures to effect the implementation of and to ensure compliance with annex 1-A of the Peace Agreement, stresses that the parties shall continue to be held equally responsible for compliance with that annex and shall be equally subject to such enforcement action by the Force as may be necessary to ensure implementation of that annex and the protection of the Force, and takes note that the parties have consented to the Force taking such measures;

14. Authorizes Member States to take all necessary measures, at the request of the Force, either in defence of the Force or to assist the Force in carrying out its mission, and recognizes the right of the Force to take all necessary measures to defend itself from attack or threat of attack;

15. Authorizes the Member States acting under paragraph 11 above, in accordance with annex 1-A of the Peace Agreement, to take all necessary measures to ensure compliance with the rules and procedures established by the Commander of the Force, governing command and control of airspace over Bosnia and Herzegovina with respect to all civilian and military air traffic;

16. Requests the authorities in Bosnia and Herzegovina to cooperate with the Commander of the Force to ensure the effective management of the airports of Bosnia and Herzegovina, in the light of the responsibilities conferred on the Force by annex 1-A of the Peace Agreement with regard to the airspace of Bosnia and Herzegovina;

17. Demands that the parties respect the security and freedom of movement of the Force and other international personnel;

18. Recalls all the agreements concerning the status of forces as referred to in appendix B to annex 1-A of the Peace Agreement, and reminds the parties of their obligation to continue to comply therewith;

19. Requests the Member States acting through or in cooperation with the organization referred to in annex 1-A of the Peace Agreement to continue to report to the Security Council, through the appropriate channels and at least at monthly intervals;

20. Decides that the status-of-forces agreements currently contained in appendix B to annex 1-A of the Peace Agreement shall apply provisionally in respect of the proposed European Union mission and its forces, including from the point of their build-up in Bosnia and Herzegovina, in anticipation of the concurrence of the parties to those agreements to that effect;

21. Invites all States, in particular those in the region, to continue to provide appropriate support and facilities, including transit facilities, for the Member States acting under paragraphs 11 and 20 above;

22. Welcomes the deployment by the European Union of its Police Mission to Bosnia and Herzegovina since 1 January 2003;

23. Requests the Secretary-General to continue to submit to the Council reports from the High Representative, in accordance with annex 10 of the Peace Agreement and the conclusions of the Peace Implementation Conference held in London on 4 and 5 December 1996, and later Peace Implementation Conferences, on the implementation of the Peace Agreement and in particular on compliance by the parties with their commitments under that Agreement;

24. Decides to remain seized of the matter.

Mission implementation plan

The High Representative presented to the PIC Steering Board, in June, an update of the mission implementation plan of his Office, drawn up in 2002 [YUN 2002, p. 359] and introduced in 2003 [YUN 2003, p. 401]. Reporting in October [S/2004/807], he said that there had been notable advances in executing all four core tasks: rule of law; reforming the economy; strengthening the capacity of Bosnia and Herzegovina institutions; and defence reform. Notably, the Independent Judicial Commission completed its operations with the establishment of a single Bosnia and Herzegovina High Judicial and Prosecutorial Council in June. The package of laws for the State Investigation and Protection Agency was enacted, representing a critical step in re-shaping criminal enforcement, and progress was made towards the adoption of several key economic-related laws. In March, the intelligence law was adopted, leading to the establishment of the State Intelligence and Security Agency. The appointment in March of a Minister of Defence was followed by other appointments to key State-level military posts and the establishment of the defence institutions. The identity-card management programme gave the State the means to manage and vouch for the integrity of identity documents, despite politically motivated attempts to undermine it.

In a later report [S/2005/156], the High Representative stated that progress in the 2004 mission implementation plan, made up of 26 programmes, included the establishment of the Indirect Tax Authority Governing Board, the State Ministry of Defence and the State Intelligence and Security Agency, the unification of the city of Mostar (see p. 395) and progress in regulating the entities' internal debts. Four of the 26 programmes were completed by the end of the year, including the State Management of Identity Documents, the Parliamentary Oversight over the Armed Forces and the Security Policy. Of the 230 programme items, 116 had been completed by the end of the year.

Civil affairs

The High Representative, in his reports covering 1 January to 30 June [S/2004/807] and 1 July to 31 December [S/2005/156], stated that Bosnia and Herzegovina was concentrating on meeting the conditions contained in the EU Commission's feasibility study for negotiating a stabilization and association agreement and the requirements for meeting NATO's benchmarks for the country's entry into the Partnership for Peace programme [YUN 2003, p. 403]. The Bosnia and Herzegovina authorities succeeded in fulfilling some of the key conditions set by the EU and NATO, notably by adopting most of the requisite legislation and establishing new State-level institutions. A total of 18 laws were enacted, many of them introducing significant structural changes in crime prevention, the judiciary, the development of a single economic space and the functioning of the energy market. An additional 21 laws adopted by the Council of Ministers were awaiting enactment by the Bosnia and Herzegovina Parliamentary Assembly.

However, the continued failure of the Republika Srpska authorities to cooperate fully with the International Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia (ICTY) caused NATO to deny Bosnia and Herzegovina entry into the Partnership for Peace programme at its June summit (Istanbul, Turkey, 28-29 June), and forced the High Representative to introduce punitive measures against those individuals and organizations identified as supporting suspected war criminals. Fifty-nine individuals were removed from party and other public positions, including the Republika Srpska

Interior Minister and the President of the Serbian Democratic Party (SDS). Despite the adoption by the Republika Srpska government of the final report of the Srebrenica Commission (see below), which it established in 2003 [YUN 2003, p. 404] to investigate missing persons, among other duties, and the arrest by Republika Srpska Special Police of eight Bosnian Serbs on suspicion of war crimes on warrants issued by the Sarajevo Cantonal Court, the North Atlantic Council, at its ministerial meeting (Brussels, Belgium, 9 December), considered that Bosnia and Herzegovina was still not cooperating with ICTY, making it ineligible for the second time in a year for membership in NATO's Partnership for Peace programme. Subsequently, the Office of the High Representative, with EUFOR and the United States, announced further punitive sanctions, including removal of nine officials, the blocking of the bank accounts of others suspected of abetting Tribunal fugitives, requiring the Republika Srpska government to verify if those persons mentioned in the Commission's report were still in government service, and requesting acceleration of defence reforms through the early closure of the entities' ministries of defence. In the wake of those measures, ministers of the Party of Democratic Progress at both the Republika Srpska and State level resigned, prompting President Dragan Cavic to convene talks with the Serb-dominated parties on the way forward. In late December, the six Serb-based parties signed an agreement confirming, among other things, Republika Srpska's commitment to dealing with the ICTY issue.

In the area of defence reform, the State-level Ministry of Defence became functional, with the filling of all top military posts and the approval by the Council of Ministers, on 20 May, of the Book of Rules on Internal Organization for the Ministry of Defence, the Joint Staff and the Operational Command. Both entity armies downsized by at least 25 per cent. The Presidency's decision in March on the size and structure of the Armed Forces of Bosnia and Herzegovina envisaged a much-reduced force of 12,000 full-time military professionals and 60,000 reserves, and the restructuring and downsizing of the Republika Srpska Army General Staff and the Federation Army Joint Command. The intake of conscripts and the duration of military service were also being cut. The Intelligence and Security Agency became operational on 1 June. The High Representative established the post of supervisor for intelligence reform to ensure the Agency's development.

The first municipal elections administrated wholly by local institutions were held in October, but the turnout was very low, particularly among the Bosniak community. The elections were conducted peaceably in Republika Srpska, with further gains for the Independent Social Democratic Party (SNSD) and erosion of SDS's pre-eminence.

Concerning the city of Mostar, the United Nations sought to produce a permanent statute for the city, based on compromises that would eliminate the ethnic and political divisions sustained by the existence of the six so-called "city-municipalities" and "central zone". As agreed in 2003 [YUN 2003, p. 403], the High Representative, in view of the need to provide solutions to the still-contentious issues of the system of elections and the status of the existing municipalities [ibid.], imposed on 28 January a statute for Mostar. Under the statute, the "city-municipalities" were abolished and transformed into "city areas", making them, in effect, branch offices of the unified administration as well as electoral districts. The statute also guaranteed power-sharing through national quotas and safeguards for vital national interests in the composition and rules of the city council, thereby preventing domination by a single nationality, while ensuring broad national balance in the future city government. Along with the statute, a decision was issued on the steps and timetable for the city's unification. A Mostar Implementation Unit to assist in carrying out the reform measures and a Committee on Confidence-Building Measures to win popular support for the unification process were established.

Implementation of the statute proceeded relatively well. A compromise city budget was adopted by the City Council in mid-year and some success was achieved in joining divided institutions. The opening of the rebuilt Old Bridge on 23 July helped to normalize the atmosphere in the city, and post-war internal ethnic boundaries were gradually losing their significance. Since the October elections (see p. 416) produced no clear majority in the Council, a Croat mayor was elected with cross-party and cross-ethnic support after extensive power-sharing negotiations. However, the political situation remained fragile and potentially volatile and much of the technical process of unification was still to be completed.

Srebrenica

The Srebrenica Commission, appointed by Republika Srpska in December 2003 [YUN 2003, p. 404] to investigate and report on persons missing as a result of the 1995 Srebrenica massacre [YUN 1995, p. 529], was established in January 2004. The High Representative, although not having any formal role in the Commission, monitored the Commission's activity.

The Commission's report, issued in June, indicated that Republika Srpska had recognized, for the first time, the origins, nature and extent of the atrocities committed in and around Srebrenica and disclosed the location of previously unknown primary and secondary mass graves, documents and other evidence that might serve as bases for further prosecution of war crimes. The report established that, between 10 and 19 July 1995, some 8,000 Bosniaks were liquidated and that the perpetrators took elaborate measures to conceal those crimes by relocating the bodies. It identified, in particular, 32 locations of mass graves, 11 of them previously unknown, and elaborated on the participation of particular Republika Srpska military and police units in the 1995 events and aftermath. The report cited documents making clear that those events had three planned phases: the attack on Srebrenica, the separation of women and children, and the execution of males. The Commission promised to produce a consolidated list of all the persons still unaccounted for, but wanted better access to relevant documentation of competent Republika Srpska institutions and Federation records. On 11 June, the High Representative forwarded to the EU and NATO copies of the report and his assessment of it.

Judicial reform

The High Representative, reporting in October [S/2004/807] on steps taken to establish the rule of law in Bosnia and Herzegovina, said that the financial help pledged during the 2003 donors' conference [YUN 2003, p. 408] to defray the costs of trying war crime cases transferred by ICTY to local Bosnia and Herzegovina courts enabled the project to proceed. The plan called for the creation of a special chamber within the State Court to try such cases, and for a registrar's office within the court to provide logistical and administrative support (see p. 1293).

The development of an anti-money-laundering programme progressed. As part of the package of laws expanding the role of the State Investigation and Protection Agency, a new law was enacted in June, making the Agency primarily responsible for compiling and analysing information from financial transactions in order to initiate appropriate criminal investigations. A draft law for seizing assets acquired through or used in criminal activities was submitted to the Council of Ministers for consideration and adoption.

Regarding the process of reappointing judges and prosecutors at all levels in Bosnia and Herzegovina, out of some 1,000 vacancies advertised, 877 judges and prosecutors were appointed or reappointed. Establishing adequate budgets for courts was hindered by the need to pay compensation paid to judges who were not reappointed, and judicial salaries and fees for attorneys representing criminal defendants. The Disciplinary Prosecutor received cases against 142 judges and prosecutors. Sanctions were imposed in 14 cases of established judicial misconduct.

The Office of the High Representative worked on building the capacities of the State Court. The new, single High Judicial and Prosecutorial Council was established as a State-level institution on 1 May, thus terminating the mandate of the Independent Judicial Commission. The Rule of Law Pillar was dissolved in October and replaced by a substantially reduced Rule of Law Department. The Office of the High Representative would continue to work closely with the Rule of Law and Legal Departments on issues of common interest, and supported the Council in dealing with the unresolved issues of judicial, prosecutorial and defence counsel compensation, court budgets and minor offence courts.

Economic reform and reconstruction

The High Representative reported that, although notable progress was made in economic reform, the economy of Bosnia and Herzegovina had yet to register concrete benefits from the legal, fiscal and structural changes. However, domestic authorities had asserted greater ownership over some important economic issues, particularly in regard to fiscal and customs reforms. The Indirect Taxation Authority, which commenced operation in January, would operate an integrated and indirect tax-collection service and a State-level customs service, implementing a single set of rules, applicable throughout the country, which should make it possible to launch the collection of value added tax by the end of 2005. In December, State-level laws on sales and excise taxation were passed and the double taxation within the territory of Bosnia and Herzegovina was abolished.

The Office of the High Representative was instrumental in efforts to resolve the long-standing problem of the entities' internal indebtedness, a major obstacle to investment and job creation. An enabling law was passed in Republika Srpska, but enactment of similar legislation in the Federation was proving contentious on both political and fiscal grounds.

Advances were made to restructure the public utilities sector. The Law on Civil Aviation was successfully implemented during the year, and the drafting of the railway law was under way. The laws establishing the Electricity Transmission Company and the Independent System Operator were passed, enabling the proper functioning of the electricity transmission system and preparing it for reconnection to the European electricity grid on 10 October.

Given the ongoing need to improve the business environment and standards of corporate governance in Bosnia and Herzegovina, the Office of the High Representative supported the drafting of laws on public enterprises, investment of public funds and public procurement. The Bulldozer Initiative, coordinated by the Office, had some success in cutting bureaucracy and removing regulations inimical to investment. The Framework Law on Business Registration was adopted, and the authorities were creating a single business registration system to reduce registration time and cost. The State-level Law on Public Procurement was enacted, and the new Law on Accounting and Auditing was aimed at putting in place a uniform set of international accounting and auditing standards. The Office of the High Representative continued to centralize the process of privatizing enterprises across Bosnia and Herzegovina. A single information point for privatization opportunities was established in March, with a website offering information for potential investors. The Office was also successful in assisting the State Veterinary Institute in becoming operational.

In the light of mismanagement, incompetence and political manipulation within publicly owned companies in Republika Srpska, the Office amended, in December, relevant legislation, thus requiring special audits of such companies by the Republika Srpska Auditor General. In response, the entity governments committed themselves to implementing reforms to improve management practices and eliminate endemic corruption in the public sector.

Public administration reform

The Office of the High Representative developed a State Government Strengthening Plan, focusing on staffing and premises, to help the Chairman of the Council of Ministers make State ministries and the Council fully operational. It commissioned a review of the application of the State Civil Service Law by the State Civil Service Agency. The Agency's March report recommended a number of managerial and legal changes, which were incorporated in an action plan. The Agency initiated changes in its personnel structure and was drafting by-laws and amendments to the Civil Service Law. The High Representative established the Police Restructuring Commission on 2 July, with a mandate to restructure Bosnia and Herzegovina's police forces and to propose a single police structure.

Reviews of the public sector, funded by the European Commission, were in progress. When completed, a comprehensive strategy for improving Bosnia and Herzegovina's public administration would follow.

Refugees

In 2004, the number of refugees returning to Bosnia and Herzegovina since the signing of the Peace Agreement reached 1 million. The Bosnia and Herzegovina authorities assumed responsibility for implementation of annex VII of the Peace Agreement at the beginning of 2004 and, in November, the Office of the High Representative closed its unit that monitored returns. Implementation of property law, a precondition for returns, increased and the process was expected to end by April 2005. The transfer of responsibilities from the Commission for Real Property Claims to the Bosnia and Herzegovina authorities was completed. A body charged with reviewing Commission decisions was established and commissioners appointed.

The Bosnia and Herzegovina State Commission for Refugees and Displaced Persons continued to act as the coordinating body between the State, the entities and Brcko District. A return fund was established, to which the State, Brcko and Republika Srpska had transferred their financial commitments, but the Federation was tardy in doing so. However, with loans secured for 2005, the State ministry and the State Commission for Refugees and Displaced Persons would have sufficient means to implement their returns policy.

Media development

Reform of the public broadcasting system encountered serious obstacles during 2004. In April, the Council of Ministers endorsed public broadcasting draft legislation, aimed at bringing Bosnia and Herzegovina into compliance with the EU feasibility study requirements—to create a single, self-sustainable public broadcasting system within a common infrastructure. However, the Bosnia and Herzegovina Parliament failed to adopt the legislation, due to the opposition by Republika Srpska delegates to amendments that would have allowed for the creation of a sound common resource corporation. In addition, Croatian Democratic Union members pushed for the establishment of three separate "national" channels, in addition to the two existing entity broadcasters. With the help of the Office of the High Representative and the European Commission, the outstanding issues were renegotiated and resolved, and the draft legislation was awaiting adoption by the Council of Ministers.

The State-wide television service, launched in August, was well accepted in both entities and was addressing the challenges of the broadcasting market.

Relations with other countries

Bosnia and Herzegovina, during its presidency of the South-East European Cooperation Process, including the first meeting of defence ministers from the region, demonstrated its capacity to play a valuable political role at the regional level. The first International Investment Conference organized by the Government of Bosnia and Herzegovina was held in Mostar on 26 and 27 February. Although overshadowed by the tragic deaths of President Boris Trajkovski of The Former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia and his delegation when their aircraft crashed while approaching Mostar, the Conference facilitated business contacts and investment opportunities. In addition to the 12 concrete investment projects that were presented to potential investors, the Conference sent out positive political and economic signals to the international business community.

The wave of intercommunal violence that roiled the Serbia and Montenegro province of Kosovo in mid-March (see p. 405) did not spill over into Bosnia and Herzegovina. Bosnia and Herzegovina's relations with Serbia and Montenegro improved, assisted by the election of Boris Tadic as President of Serbia. Mr. Tadic paid a visit to Bosnia and Herzegovina, during which he apologized for "those who committed crimes in the name of the Serb people" during the war. Bilateral forums functioned on a regular basis, including efforts to delimit the exact border on the lower Drina River near Zvornik.

Bosnia and Herzegovina and Croatia made progress towards normalizing their relations. Meetings at the presidential level between the two countries were held twice annually. Croatian Prime Minister Ivo Sanader had taken a constructive approach to Bosnia and Herzegovina and the position of Croats in the country. Border issues were almost entirely resolved, with the notable exception of Croatia's failure to ratify the treaty granting Bosnia and Herzegovina free-port rights at Ploče.

European Union Police Mission in Bosnia and Herzegovina

Reports of EU Secretary-General. As invited by the Security Council in presidential statement S/PRST/2002/33 [YUN 2002, p. 363], the EU Secretary-General and High Representative for the Common Foreign and Security Policy reported on the activities of the EU Police Mission (EUPM) covering the periods 1 January to 30 June [S/2004/709] and 1 July to 31 December [S/2005/66].

As at 31 December, the Mission numbered 862 personnel, of whom 472 were seconded civilian police officers, 61 international civilians and 329 national staff from Bosnia and Herzegovina. All but 1 of the 25 EU member States participated in the Mission (420 police officers) and 9 non-EU contributing States (52 police officers). The Mission was headed by Kevin Carty (Ireland) from 1 March, following the death of Sven Frederiksen (Denmark) on 26 January.

In the first report, the EU Secretary-General highlighted the achievements made in the programmes administered by EUPM [YUN 2003, p. 409]. Under the crime police programme, EUPM introduced an intelligence-led approach to policing that was helping Bosnia and Herzegovina fight major and organized crime more effectively. Crucial to that, a national intelligence model was introduced countrywide. The criminal justice programme was aimed at establishing the State judicial police and the two court police forces at entity level. A new programme focusing on a police education and training system was launched. Under the internal affairs programme, seven professional standards units and nine public complaints bureaux were established. Guidelines for preventing serious crowd disturbances during major public events were being implemented. The State Border Service (SBS) strengthened its cooperation with the multinational Stabilization Force (SFOR) and other entity-based police forces, including through regular joint border operations. The Council of Ministers, in March, expanded the powers of the State Investigation and Protection Agency (SIPA), enhancing its responsibility in the fight against organized crime. The related laws were before the Parliamentary Assembly of Bosnia and Herzegovina for approval. Technical amendments to the Bosnia and Herzegovina Criminal Procedure Code and Law on Civil Service were also necessary to harmonize those laws with other SIPA laws.

Implementation of EUPM's programmes was hampered by legal challenges to the UNMIBH/International Police Task Force (IPTF) police certification process, by which law enforcement officers were vetted before receiving final certification [YUN 2001, p. 332] (see p. 399).

A review commissioned by the European Commission on police structures concluded that Bosnia and Herzegovina had too many levels of policing and identified options for restructuring. A Police Restructuring Commission was launched in July to make recommendations for a single police structure for the whole country.

In the report covering the second half of 2004 [S/2005/66], the EU Secretary-General said that, in terms of the strategic priorities, the Mission had made solid progress. The Ministry of Security had recruited more staff and established internal departments covering all areas of responsibility, and the Minister of Security had assumed the chairmanship of the Ministerial Consultative Meeting on Police Matters, which coordinated and oversaw the political aspects of all State-level police agencies. New laws were adopted, including a law creating a new Immigration Service, an updated law governing the working of SBS and a law on police officials.

SIPA was established in temporary accommodation in Sarajevo and planning was ongoing to secure permanent facilities. The Agency's legal framework and operating rules were established, and a headquarters and two regional offices were set up; a total of 279 police officers had been recruited by the end of the year. The Criminal Investigation Department had begun conducting investigations, and a cell for criminal intelligence was set up as the focal point for intelligence from international stakeholders.

Interpol established a national office in Sarajevo. Technical agreements between Interpol Sarajevo and the entity and State-level law enforcement agencies were drawn up, giving those police forces direct access to the Interpol database. All aspects of police education were brought together in May, and an agreement was reached on the creation of a national training system. A project was launched to harmonize the curriculum for all three training schools in Bosnia and Herzegovina.

In the fight against organized crime and corruption, a nationwide national intelligence system was introduced. An agreement was reached on expanding the country's forensic capabilities. To help achieve financial viability and sustainability of the local police, EUPM helped to develop local capacity regarding salary scales and budget planning.

In the view of the High Representative, EUPM, as it entered the last year of its mandate, was well placed, in partnership with the local authorities, to complete its prime directive of leaving in place sustainable and effective policing arrangements in Bosnia and Herzegovina, in line with the best European practices and through implementation of the Police Restructuring Commission's recommendations. Consideration would need to be given as to how best to support that work.

Police certification

In a briefing to the Security Council on 3 March [meeting 4920], which was considering a report on EUPM activities during late 2003 [YUN 2003, p. 402], the High Representative, Lord Paddy Ashdown, drew the Council's attention to the problem of the growing number of challenges within the courts of Bosnia and Herzegovina to the UN-led police certification process, instituted in 2001 [YUN 2001, p. 332] by IPTF in Bosnia and Herzegovina, whose mission terminated at the end of 2002. That de-certification process weeded out police officers whose past, particularly during the war, disqualified them from remaining in the police. More than 150 non-certified police officers had asked the courts to assess the legality of their dismissal. In January 2004, the first non-certified police officer dismissed under IPTF was reinstated, following an order from a domestic court. The situation was deteriorating, as the Human Rights Chamber of Bosnia and Herzegovina had decided that it was competent to examine whether such dismissals were carried out in accordance with the provisions of the European Convention on Human Rights.

The High Representative, with the UN Department of Peacekeeping Operations, had been trying to identify a solution to those challenges.

On 25 June [meeting 4997], following consultations among Security Council members, the President made statement S/PRST/2004/22 on behalf of the Council:

The Security Council notes the report of the High Representative for the Implementation of the Peace Agreement on Bosnia and Herzegovina to the Secretary-General of 18 February 2004 which refers to the increasing number of challenges to the police certification process conducted by the United Nations Mission in Bosnia and Herzegovina International Police Task Force.

The Council recalls its relevant resolutions and its support for the General Framework Agreement for Peace in Bosnia and Herzegovina and the annexes thereto (collectively the "Peace Agreement"). The parties to the Peace Agreement had the responsibility to cooperate fully with, and to instruct their respective responsible officials and authorities to provide their full support to, the International Police Task Force during its mandate on all relevant matters. The Council affirms that such responsibility included giving full and immediate effect to the decisions issued by the Task Force, including decisions to deny certification. The Council also affirms that Bosnia and Herzegovina has the obligation to respect fully and to promote the fulfilment of its responsibilities under the Peace Agreement.

The Council reaffirms the legal basis in the Charter of the United Nations on which the International Police Task Force was given its mandate. The Council recalls that during its mandate the Task Force was entrusted with the tasks set out in annex 11 of the Peace Agreement, including the tasks referred to in the conclusions of the London, Bonn, Luxembourg, Madrid and Brussels Conferences and agreed by the authorities in Bosnia and Herzegovina.

The Council affirms that the certification process was carried out pursuant to the mandate of the International Police Task Force and fully endorses this process. The comprehensive and rigorous vetting procedure was designed to create a police force comprised entirely of personnel meeting internationally recognized standards of personal integrity and professional performance.

The Council expresses concern at the failure of the competent authorities in Bosnia and Herzegovina to take due steps to implement decisions to deny certification. The Council notes that this failure has already led to several challenges before the courts in Bosnia and Herzegovina brought by persons whose employment in Bosnia and Herzegovina's law enforcement agencies was terminated pursuant to a denial of certification by the International Police Task Force.

The Council further notes that in some cases such persons have been reinstated following decisions of some local courts. The Council calls upon the authorities in Bosnia and Herzegovina to ensure, including through the adoption or amendment of domestic legislation, that all certification decisions of the International Police Task Force are fully and effectively implemented and that the employment of persons who were denied certification by the Task Force is terminated, and that such persons will be precluded from employment, either now or in the future, in any position within any law enforcement agency in Bosnia and Herzegovina.

Military aspects

Stabilization Force

Under the command of NATO, the multinational Stabilization Force (SFOR), also known as Operation Joint Guard, continued in 2004 to oversee implementation of the military aspects of the 1995 Peace Agreement. Its 2004 activities were recorded in 10 reports [S/2004/174, S/2004/263, S/2004/488, S/2004/588, S/2004/654, S/2004/731, S/2004/784, S/2004/889, S/2004/936, S/2005/67], submitted by the NATO Secretary-General to the Security Council, in accordance with Council resolution 1088(1996) [YUN 1996, p. 310]. Another report [S/2005/226] covered December activities of EUFOR (see p. 404).

SFOR's strength decreased from just over 11,400 in December 2003 to 7,526 on 30 November 2004. The Council, by resolution 1551(2004) of 9 July (see p. 392), welcoming NATO's intention to conclude the SFOR operation by the end of 2004, authorized its continuation for a further period of six months.

During the year, SFOR continued to contribute to the maintenance of a safe and secure environment in Bosnia and Herzegovina, monitor terrorist-related threats throughout the country and engage in weapons collection and destruction. Its operations also focused on the detention of persons indicted for war crimes. In January it launched, with the Republika Srpska Ministry of the Interior, a cordon-and-search operation to detain Radovan Karadzic, indicted by ICTY for war crimes. Although he was not detained, substantial evidence was collected. In February, the High Representative and the SFOR Commander announced actions against several individuals for supporting persons indicted for war crimes, including freezing their bank accounts, dismissal from political office and prohibition from standing for office again. On 15 April, the Bosnian-Croat Federation State and the entity authorities signed a declaration on cooperation with ICTY and called on all indicted persons to surrender. On 19 May, the Republika Srpska Parliament issued a declaration calling on all persons indicted for war crimes to surrender and all related authorities to cooperate with ICTY. Fifteen arrest warrants were posted on the Republika Srpska website, as well as a list of persons indicted for war crimes, including for the first time, Radovan Karadzic and Ratko Mladic.

The results of the weapons collection effort, known as Operation Harvest, showed success and the need for further efforts. On 13 May, the Multinational Specialized Unit found a large weapons cache in Ugljevik and, on 20 May, SFOR confirmed that a secret arms depot was found in a wire factory in Cazin. As part of SFOR's strategy to facilitate the transfer of responsibilities to nascent authorities, the local police would be increasingly encouraged to lead Operation Harvest activities.

On 18 May, the Bosnia and Herzegovina Parliament adopted the new Defence Law and the Army Service Law, while the Council of Ministers approved the book of rules on the internal organization of the Ministry of Defence. Work on the implementation of the structure of the armed forces continued with discussion of the internal organization and responsibilities of the State-level Ministry of Defence, Joint Staff and Operational Command. SFOR established a new initiative, the Advice and Assistance Implementation Initiative, to assist in implementing the new structure.

SFOR, on 1 June, forwarded the results of the vetting process for generals' posts in the new combined armed forces of Bosnia and Herzegovina to the President's Office and to the Bosnia and Herzegovina and Federation defence ministries. On 9 June, the candidates for the generals' posts in the joint institutions were announced. Republika Srpska also adopted, in accordance with the defence reforms, a new organizational structure for the military, controlled by a civilian-led Ministry of Defence.

Transition from SFOR to EUFOR

NATO, in a communiqué issued by the heads of State and Government after a 28-29 June meeting in Istanbul, Turkey, announced that, as the security situation in Bosnia and Herzegovina had evolved positively, it had decided to conclude the SFOR operation by the end of the year. As its long-term commitment to Bosnia and Herzegovina remained unchanged, it would maintain a residual military presence in the country. NATO-HQ Sarajevo would advise on defence reform, undertake certain operational supporting tasks, support ICTY with regard to the detention of persons indicted for war crimes and share intelligence with the EU.

Ireland, in its capacity as President of the EU Council, requested on 29 June [S/2004/522] that the Security Council President inform the Security Council of the EU's intention to launch an EU mission, including a military component, following NATO's announced termination of SFOR in December to fulfil the role specified in annexes 1-A and 2 of the Peace Agreement and contribute to the safe and secure environment in Bosnia and Herzegovina. The EU would welcome the Council's determination that the status-of-forces agreements currently contained in appendix B to annex 1-A would apply provisionally in respect of the EU-led military operation (EUFOR), in anticipation of the concurrence of the parties to those agreements to that effect.

On 22 October [S/2004/883], Bosnia and Herzegovina welcomed NATO's continued commitment through its headquarters in Sarajevo. Given all the reforms in defence and security systems that had been carried out, the uniform chain of command established and democratic control secured, conditions had been created in Bosnia and Herzegovina for the transfer from NATO's SFOR to EUFOR. It supported the announced EU mission and the transfer of responsibilities and announced its intention to cooperate on a partnership basis.

Roles of EU and NATO. By an exchange of letters dated 19 November [S/2004/916, S/2004/915], forwarded by the Netherlands and Germany, respectively, to the Council President, the EU High Representative and the NATO Secretary-General outlined the respective roles of their organizations in Bosnia and Herzegovina after the transition from SFOR to EUFOR's Operation Althea.

The two organizations would have access to the full authorities under annexes 1-A and 2 of the Peace Agreement. EUFOR would have the main peace stabilization role under the Peace Agreement through a robust military presence in order to: deter the former Entity Armed Forces and other armed groups; monitor and ensure compliance with the military aspects of the Peace Agreement; and prevent a resumption of violence. It would have full authority to fulfil the role specified in annexes 1-A and 2 of the Peace Agreement, monitor implementation of its military aspects, and assess and address non-compliance by the parties.

EUFOR would also support, with the EU and international community actors, the core tasks of the mission implementation plan of the Office of the High Representative and other civil implementation organizations regarding counter-terrorism, the fight against organized crime, returns of displaced persons and refugees, the rule of law and implementation of other civilian aspects of the Peace Agreement. It would also provide support to ICTY and relevant authorities, including the detention of persons indicted for war crimes.

NATO's presence would be based on the June 2004 Istanbul summit communiqué (see above) and on other NATO decisions, and would exercise its authority only when necessary to fulfil its tasks, including for Force protection. Both NATO headquarters in Sarajevo and EUFOR would be the legal successors to SFOR for the fulfilment of their missions.

Also on 19 November [S/2004/917], Bosnia and Herzegovina informed the Council President that its Presidency fully accepted EUFOR and NATO as the legal successors to the NATO-SFOR mission and mandate, under the same terms. It offered its unreserved support and cooperation and expected to be consulted and regularly informed on the duration of the EUFOR and NATO missions.

The Council, in resolution 1575(2004) (below) of 22 November, authorized the establishment of EUFOR for an initial period of 12 months.

SECURITY COUNCIL ACTION

On 22 November [meeting 5085], the Security Council unanimously adopted resolution 1575 (2004). The draft [S/2004/920] was prepared in consultations among Council members.

The Security Council,

Recalling all its previous relevant resolutions concerning the conflicts in the former Yugoslavia and relevant statements by its President, including resolutions 1031(1995) of 15 December 1995, 1088(1996) of 12 December 1996, 1423(2002) of 12 July 2002, 1491(2003) of 11 July 2003 and 1551(2004) of 9 July 2004,

Reaffirming its commitment to the political settlement of the conflicts in the former Yugoslavia, preserving the sovereignty and territorial integrity of all States there within their internationally recognized borders,

Emphasizing its full support for the continued role in Bosnia and Herzegovina of the High Representative for the Implementation of the Peace Agreement on Bosnia and Herzegovina,

Underlining its commitment to support the implementation of the General Framework Agreement for Peace in Bosnia and Herzegovina and the annexes thereto (collectively the "Peace Agreement"), as well as the relevant decisions of the Peace Implementation Council,

Recalling all the agreements concerning the status of forces referred to in appendix B to annex 1-A of the Peace Agreement, and reminding the parties of their obligation to continue to comply therewith,

Recalling also the provisions of its resolution 1551 (2004) concerning the provisional application of the status-of-forces agreements contained in appendix B to annex 1-A of the Peace Agreement,

Emphasizing its appreciation to the High Representative, the Commander and personnel of the multinational Stabilization Force, the Organization for Security and Cooperation in Europe, the European Union and the personnel of other international organizations and agencies in Bosnia and Herzegovina for their contributions to the implementation of the Peace Agreement,

Emphasizing that a comprehensive and coordinated return of refugees and displaced persons throughout the region continues to be crucial to lasting peace,

Recalling the declarations of the ministerial meetings of the Peace Implementation Council,

Taking note of the reports of the High Representative, including his latest report, of 6 October 2004,

Determined to promote the peaceful resolution of the conflicts in accordance with the purposes and principles of the Charter of the United Nations,

Recalling the relevant principles contained in the Convention on the Safety of United Nations and Associated Personnel of 9 December 1994 and the statement by its President of 9 February 2000,

Welcoming and encouraging efforts by the United Nations to sensitize peacekeeping personnel in the prevention and control of HIV/AIDS and other communicable diseases in all its peacekeeping operations,

Recalling the decisions set out in paragraph 8 of the communiqué of the summit of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization held in Istanbul, Turkey, on 28 June 2004, which refers to the intention of the Organization to conclude the Stabilization Force operation in Bosnia and Herzegovina by the end of 2004 and to establish a headquarters of the Organization in Sarajevo that will constitute its residual military presence,

Recalling also that in resolution 1551 (2004) the Security Council took note of the intention of the European Union to launch a European Union mission to Bosnia and Herzegovina, including a military component, from December 2004, under the terms set out in the letter dated 29 June 2004 from the Minister for Foreign Affairs of Ireland and President of the Council of the European Union to the President of the Security Council,

Taking note of the letters between the European Union and the North Atlantic Treaty Organization, sent to the Security Council on 19 November 2004, on how those organizations will cooperate together in Bosnia and Herzegovina, in which both organizations recognize that the European Union Force will have the main peace stabilization role under the military aspects of the Peace Agreement,

Taking note also of the confirmation by the Presidency of Bosnia and Herzegovina, on behalf of Bosnia and Herzegovina, including its constituent entities, of the arrangements for the European Union Force and the North Atlantic Treaty Organization headquarters presence,

Welcoming, in the light of the forthcoming European Union mission, the increasing engagement in Bosnia and Herzegovina of the European Union,

Welcoming also tangible signs of Bosnia and Herzegovina's progress towards European integration,

Determining that the situation in the region continues to constitute a threat to international peace and security,

Acting under Chapter VII of the Charter,

I

1. Reaffirms once again its support for the General Framework Agreement for Peace in Bosnia and Herzegovina and the annexes thereto (collectively the "Peace Agreement"), as well as for the Dayton Agreement on Implementing the Federation of Bosnia and Herzegovina of 10 November 1995, and calls upon the parties to comply strictly with their obligations under those Agreements;

2. Reiterates that the primary responsibility for the further successful implementation of the Peace Agreement lies with the authorities in Bosnia and Herzegovina themselves and that the continued willingness of the international community and major donors to assume the political, military and economic burden of implementation and reconstruction efforts will be determined by the compliance and active participation by all the authorities in Bosnia and Herzegovina in implementing the Peace Agreement and rebuilding a civil society, in particular in full cooperation with the International Tribunal for the Prosecution of Persons Responsible for Serious Violations of International Humanitarian Law Committed in the Territory of the Former Yugoslavia since 1991, in strengthening joint institutions, which foster the building of a fully functioning self-sustaining State able to integrate itself into the European structures, and in facilitating returns of refugees and displaced persons;

3. Reminds the parties once again that, in accordance with the Peace Agreement, they have committed themselves to cooperate fully with all entities involved in the implementation of this peace settlement, as described in the Peace Agreement, or which are otherwise authorized by the Security Council, including the International Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia, as it carries out its responsibilities for dispensing justice impartially, and underlines that full cooperation by States and entities with the Tribunal includes, inter alia, the surrender for trial of all persons indicted by the Tribunal and the provision of information to assist in Tribunal investigations;

4. Emphasizes its full support for the continued role of the High Representative for the Implementation of the Peace Agreement on Bosnia and Herzegovina in monitoring the implementation of the Peace Agreement and giving guidance to and coordinating the activities of the civilian organizations and agencies involved in assisting the parties to implement the Peace Agreement, and reaffirms that, under annex 10 of the Peace

Agreement, the High Representative is the final authority in theatre regarding the interpretation of civilian implementation of the Peace Agreement and that, in case of dispute, he may give his interpretation and make recommendations, and make binding decisions as he judges necessary on issues as elaborated by the Peace Implementation Council in Bonn, Germany, on 9 and 10 December 1997;

5. Expresses its support for the declarations of the ministerial meetings of the Peace Implementation Council;

6. Reaffirms its intention to keep implementation of the Peace Agreement and the situation in Bosnia and Herzegovina under close review, taking into account the reports submitted pursuant to paragraphs 18 and 21 below, and any recommendations that those reports might include, and its readiness to consider the imposition of measures if any party fails significantly to meet its obligations under the Peace Agreement;

II

7. Acknowledges the support of the authorities of Bosnia and Herzegovina for the European Union Force and the continued North Atlantic Treaty Organization presence and their confirmation that both are the legal successors to the Stabilization Force for the fulfilment of their missions for the purposes of the Peace Agreement, its annexes and appendices and relevant Security Council resolutions and can take such actions as are required, including the use of force, to ensure compliance with annexes 1-A and 2 of the Peace Agreement and relevant Council resolutions;

8. Pays tribute to those Member States which participated in the multinational Stabilization Force established in accordance with its resolution 1088(1996), and expresses its appreciation of their efforts and achievements in Bosnia and Herzegovina;

9. Welcomes the intention of the European Union to launch a European Union military operation to Bosnia and Herzegovina from December 2004;

10. Authorizes the Member States acting through or in cooperation with the European Union to establish for an initial planned period of twelve months a multinational stabilization force, the European Union Force, as a legal successor to the Stabilization Force under unified command and control, which will fulfil its missions in relation to the implementation of annexes 1-A and 2 of the Peace Agreement in cooperation with the North Atlantic Treaty Organization headquarters presence in accordance with the arrangements agreed between the Organization and the European Union as communicated to the Security Council in their letters of 19 November 2004, which recognize that the European Union Force will have the main peace stabilization role under the military aspects of the Peace Agreement;

11. Welcomes the decision of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization to conclude the Stabilization Force operation in Bosnia and Herzegovina by the end of 2004 and to maintain a presence in Bosnia and Herzegovina through the establishment of a headquarters of the Organization in order to continue to assist in implementing the Peace Agreement in conjunction with the European Union Force, and authorizes the Member States acting through or in cooperation with the Organization to establish a headquarters of the Organization as a legal successor to the Stabilization Force under unified command and control, which will fulfil its missions in relation to the implementation of annexes 1-A and 2 of the Peace Agreement in cooperation with the European Union Force in accordance with the arrangements agreed between the Organization and the European Union as communicated to the Security Council in their letters of 19 November 2004, which recognize that the European Union Force will have the main peace stabilization role under the military aspects of the Peace Agreement;

12. Recognizes that the Peace Agreement and the provisions of its previous relevant resolutions shall apply to and in respect of both the European Union Force and the North Atlantic Treaty Organization presence as they have applied to and in respect of the Stabilization Force and that, therefore, references in the Peace Agreement, in particular in annex 1-A and the appendices thereto, and in relevant resolutions to the Implementation Force and/or the Stabilization Force, the North Atlantic Treaty Organization and the North Atlantic Council shall henceforth be read as applying, as appropriate, to the North Atlantic Treaty Organization presence, the European Union Force, the European Union and the Political and Security Committee and Council of the European Union respectively;

13. Expresses its intention to consider the terms of further authorization as necessary in the light of developments in the implementation of the Peace Agreement and the situation in Bosnia and Herzegovina;

14. Authorizes the Member States acting under paragraphs 10 and 11 above to take all necessary measures to effect the implementation of and to ensure compliance with annexes 1-A and 2 of the Peace Agreement, stresses that the parties shall continue to be held equally responsible for compliance with those annexes and shall be equally subject to such enforcement action by the European Union Force and the North Atlantic Treaty Organization presence as may be necessary to ensure implementation of those annexes and the protection of the Force and the Organization presence;

15. Authorizes Member States to take all necessary measures, at the request of either the European Union Force or the North Atlantic Treaty Organization headquarters, in defence of the Force or the Organization presence respectively, and to assist both organizations in carrying out their missions, and recognizes the right of both the Force and the Organization presence to take all necessary measures to defend themselves from attack or threat of attack;

16. Authorizes the Member States acting under paragraphs 10 and 11 above, in accordance with annex 1-A of the Peace Agreement, to take all necessary measures to ensure compliance with the rules and procedures governing command and control of airspace over Bosnia and Herzegovina with respect to all civilian and military air traffic;

17. Demands that the parties respect the security and freedom of movement of the European Union Force, the North Atlantic Treaty Organization presence, and other international personnel;

18. Requests the Member States acting through or in cooperation with the European Union and the Member States acting through or in cooperation with the North Atlantic Treaty Organization to report to the Security Council on the activity of the European Union Force and the North Atlantic Treaty Organization headquarters presence respectively, through the appropriate channels and at least at three-monthly intervals;

19. Invites all States, in particular those in the region, to continue to provide appropriate support and facilities, including transit facilities, for the Member States acting under paragraphs 10 and 11 above;

20. Reiterates its appreciation for the deployment by the European Union of its Police Mission to Bosnia and Herzegovina since 1 January 2003;

21. Requests the Secretary-General to continue to submit to the Security Council reports from the High Representative, in accordance with annex 10 of the Peace Agreement and the conclusions of the Peace Implementation Conference held in London on 4 and 5 December 1996, and later Peace Implementation Conferences, on the implementation of the Peace Agreement and in particular on compliance by the parties with their commitments under that Agreement;

22. Decides to remain seized of the matter.

EUFOR report. In his first report [S/2005/226] on EUFOR's activities, the EU Secretary-General and High Representative for the Common Foreign and Security Policy said that the EU launched Operation Althea in December in line with its mandate. The new operation reinforced the EU's comprehensive approach towards Bosnia and Herzegovina and supported the country's progress towards EU integration by its own efforts, with the objective of signing a stabilization and association agreement as a medium-term objective. The political scene was dominated by the eight measures announced by the High Representative on 16 December to address the continued failure of Republika Srpska to cooperate fully with ICTY (see p. 1283) and the subsequent resignation of its Prime Minister, Dragan Mikerevic, and the Bosnia and Herzegovina Foreign Minister, Mladen Ivanic. In mid-December, EUFOR inspected the Han Pijesak military installation, 40 kilometres north-east of Sarajevo, an area suspected of having been used by persons indicted for war crimes to escape apprehension. In the view of the EU, that assertive and high-profile operation established EUFOR's visibility and authority and made a positive impact both nationally and internationally.

Serbia and Montenegro

In 2004, the United Nations continued to assist the authorities and people of the Kosovo province of Serbia and Montenegro in their efforts to build a modern, European, multi-ethnic society. The United Nations Interim Administration Mission in Kosovo (UNMIK) cooperated with the Kosovo authorities in strengthening the Provisional Institutions of Self-Government, mainly the Kosovo Assembly and the Kosovo Government, and in transferring authority to those institutions, in accordance with the 2001 Constitutional Framework for Provisional Self-Government [YUN 2001, p. 352]. It also monitored progress towards the fulfilment of the eight standards set out in the 2003 "standards for Kosovo" document [YUN 2003, p. 420], as endorsed by the Security Council in presidential statement S/PRST/2003/26 [ibid.], that Kosovo had to meet in preparation for talks on its future status. However, a resurgence of violence in March stalled progress on the implementation of the standards and was a serious setback to building a democratic, multi-ethnic and stable Kosovo, seriously damaging the process of normalization and reconciliation.

Despite the setback, UNMIK and the Special Representative of the Secretary-General, Harri Holkeri, launched the Kosovo Standards Implementation Plan, which included six priority actions in response to the March violence. Also resulting from the March events, the Secretary-General appointed a team to conduct a comprehensive review of the policies and practices of all actors. The team, among its recommendations, suggested that a comprehensive and integrated strategy be elaborated and that the "standards before status" policy be replaced by a priority-based policy within that strategy to facilitate future status discussions. General elections, organized for the first time by Kosovo authorities, were held on 23 October. Taking place without incident, they were certified as free and fair by the Council of Europe, leading to the formation of a coalition Government.

The United Nations continued to work towards the full implementation of Security Council resolution 1244(1999) [YUN 1999, p. 353], which set out the modalities for a political solution to the crisis in the Serbia and Montenegro province of Kosovo, and of resolutions 1160(1998) [YUN 1998, p. 369], 1199(1998) [ibid., p. 377], 1203(1998) [ibid., p. 382] and 1239(1999) [YUN 1999, p. 349]. The civilian aspects of resolution 1244(1999) were being implemented by UNMIK and the military aspects by the international security presence (KFOR), led by NATO.

Appointment of Special Representative. UNMIK was headed by the Special Representative of the Secretary-General. In June, the Secretary-General informed the Security Council of his intention to appoint Søren Jessen-Petersen (Denmark) to replace Harri Holkeri (Finland) in that position [S/2004/500]. The Council took note of that intention on 18 June [S/2004/501].

Resurgence of violence

Communication. On 24 February [S/2004/141], Serbia and Montenegro brought to the attention of the Security Council the ambush and killing of two Serb civilians in the Lipjan area, which, it said, brought into question KFOR's decision a few days earlier to withdraw the multinational brigade "Centre" in charge of security in that area. Recalling previous crimes committed against Kosovo Serbs and the failure of condemnations by the Council and others to improve security or apprehend the perpetrators, Serbia and Montenegro said such incidents raised concerns about the authority of KFOR, UNMIK and the Council in implementing resolution 1244(1999), and the impunity enjoyed by the extremists in Kosovo and Metohija. Serbia and Montenegro expected the Council to take action to identify and bring to justice the perpetrators of the current and other crimes.

Report of Secretary-General. The Secretary-General, in his report on UNMIK activities in Kosovo from 1 January to 31 March [S/2004/348], said that the defining event during that period was the widespread violence that occurred in March. The onslaught, led by Kosovo Albanian extremists against the Kosovo Serb, Roma and Ashkali communities, was an organized, widespread and targeted campaign, resulting in the deaths of 19 persons, of whom 11 were Kosovo Albanians and 8 were Kosovo Serbs, and there were 954 persons injured. In addition, 65 international police officers, 58 Kosovo Police Service (KPS) officers and 61 KFOR personnel were injured. Approximately 730 houses belonging to minorities, mostly Kosovo Serbs, were damaged or destroyed, and 36 Orthodox churches, monasteries and other religious and cultural sites were also damaged or destroyed. Sporadic attacks, including attacks against the international security and police presence, continued, the worst occurring on 23 March, when a Ghanaian UNMIK police officer and a Kosovo Albanian KPS officer were killed.

The violence, which began in earnest on 17 March, appeared to have been sparked by the shooting of a Kosovo Serb youth in the village of Caglavica (Pristina region) on 15 March, followed the next day by a blockade by Kosovo Serbs of the main Pristina-Skopje road outside Pristina, demonstrations by some 18,000 Kosovo Albanians to protest the arrest of four members of the Kosovo Liberation Army, and the drowning of three Kosovo Albanian children in the River Ibar near Zubin Potok (Mitrovica region). Those and other incidents, made worse by inflammatory and biased media reporting, resulted in demonstrations, which were quickly taken over by organized elements.

The Special Representative took political and operational measures to stem the spread of the violence. UNMIK and KFOR established a senior crisis team to coordinate policy and security actions and launched efforts to apprehend those involved in violent actions. KFOR temporarily deployed some 2,000 additional troops and re-established some checkpoints, primarily in Kosovo Serb areas. UNMIK police made 260 arrests in connection with the violence and a further 400 for curfew violations.

Kosovo Albanian leaders were mostly reluctant to condemn the violence in general and against the Kosovo Serb community in particular. During the most violent days, most central-level government officials of the main political parties and in the municipalities renewed demands for the independence of Kosovo and the transfer of competencies from UNMIK. On 17 March, the Kosovo Prime Minister, Bajram Rexhepi, acting with the Special Representative, issued statements calling for an end to the violence. At the same time, other members of the Provisional Institutions appeared to justify or even condone the violence, blaming it on the continuing existence of parallel structures, roadblocks set up by Kosovo Serbs, the death of the Kosovo Albanian children, the division of the city of Mitrovica and UNMIK. While both Kosovo President Ibrahim Rugova and the head of the Kosovo Protection Corps made television addresses calling for calm, those and other initial statements avoided specifically referring to the Kosovo Serb community as the target of most of the violence. The Kosovo Assembly issued a statement which focused on parallel structures rather than on the evolving violence.

International condemnation of the violence caused Kosovo Albanian leaders to change the focus of their statements, although they still largely failed to expressly condemn the attacks on the Kosovo Serb community. The Special Representative, at an 18 March meeting with local political and institutional leaders, emphasized that statements blaming the United Nations, KFOR or parallel structures for the violence had to stop. Following that meeting, the Prime Minister convinced Kosovo Albanian protestors to lift their siege of the Kosovo Serb majority village of Caglavica.

On 2 April, Kosovo Albanian officials within the Provisional Institutions, political leaders and representatives of the Turkish, Bosniac, Egyptian, Ashkali and Roma communities signed an open letter addressed to the population, condemning the violence and promising that politicians and the people of all ethnicities would work together to build a better Kosovo. They also called for a memorandum of understanding on a partnership between Kosovo Albanians and Kosovo Serbs based on mutual respect and the marginalization of extremists on both sides, and a memorandum of understanding between the population and religious leaders, who would preach tolerance and respect. The Government committed itself to establishing a fund to repair damaged buildings and religious sites and identified 11.6 million euros in the 2004 budget for reconstruction. UNMIK provided technical assistance and support for the reconstruction effort and was negotiating with the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization on the establishment of assessment teams to evaluate the damage.

The authorities in Belgrade played a role in collective efforts to stem the violence and prevent extremist reaction. On 26 March, the Serbian Parliament issued a declaration calling for the Serb community in Kosovo to be granted political and territorial autonomy and for a reconsideration and change of policy in Kosovo, and urged the international community to punish the perpetrators and to effect rapid reconstruction of homes and religious sites. A similar declaration was adopted by the State Union of Serbia and Montenegro Assembly on 1 April.

Security Council consideration. At the request of Serbia and Montenegro [S/2004/220], the Security Council met on 18 March [meeting 4928] to consider the latest outbreak of violence in Kosovo and Metohija.

The Secretary-General told the Council that the overall security situation throughout Kosovo was still highly unstable, and that the United Nations could not close its eyes to the fact that it was ethnically motivated. The deliberate targeting of houses and religious sites was inexcusable, as were the subsequent attacks against mosques in other parts of Serbia and Montenegro. The attacks on UNMIK and KFOR staff should also be condemned in the strongest possible terms. The situation in Mitrovica had become sufficiently serious to warrant the relocation of international staff. The events highlighted the fragility of the structures and relationships in Kosovo, and showed that, despite the progress made since 1999, the United Nations had not gone far enough. He reminded the leaders of the Kosovo Albanian community that, as the largest ethnic group, they had the responsibility to protect and promote the rights of all people within Kosovo, particularly its minorities.

SECURITY COUNCIL ACTION (March)

On 18 March [meeting 4928], following consultations among Security Council members, the President made statement S/PRST/2004/5 on behalf of the Council:

The Security Council strongly condemns the large-scale inter-ethnic violence in Kosovo, Serbia and Montenegro, that began yesterday and in which many people have been killed and hundreds injured. It also strongly condemns the attacks on the troops of the Kosovo Force and the personnel and sites of the United Nations Interim Administration Mission in Kosovo. Such violence is unacceptable and must stop immediately. Those responsible must be brought to justice. The perpetrators must understand that an attack on the international presence is an attack on the international community as a whole and that extremism has no role in Kosovo's future.

The Council calls upon all communities in Kosovo, taking into account their respective responsibilities, to stop all acts of violence, to avoid further escalation and to restore calm. The Council urges the parties to refrain from irresponsible and inflammatory statements and accusations. The Council reiterates that the population in Kosovo must employ peaceful, democratic means and work through the recognized and legitimate channels, including the United Nations and the structures of the Provisional Institutions of Self-Government, to address their grievances. It stresses that legal investigations by the authorities in Kosovo, in particular into the incidents involving the shooting of a Kosovo Serb teenager in Pristina and the deaths of three Kosovo Albanian children in Mitrovica, are under way, and calls for thorough investigations of all other incidents.

The Council deplores the reported deaths and injuries among the population of Kosovo as well as casualties among the Kosovo Police Service, the international civilian police of the United Nations Interim Administration Mission in Kosovo and the troops of the Kosovo Force. The Council extends its condolences to the families of all the victims.

The Council reiterates the urgent need for the authorities in Kosovo to take effective steps to enforce the rule of law, ensure proper security for all ethnic communities and bring to justice all the perpetrators of criminal acts. The establishment of a multi-ethnic, tolerant, democratic society in a stable Kosovo remains the fundamental objective of the international community in implementing Security Council resolution 1244(1999) of 10 June 1999. The Council will closely monitor the implementation by the parties of their obligations according to the "Standards for Kosovo" document.

The Council expresses its full support for the efforts of the Special Representative of the Secretary-General, the United Nations Interim Administration Mission in Kosovo and the Kosovo Force, and welcomes the fact that the international security presence is continuing to undertake additional measures, as deemed necessary, to stabilize the situation throughout Kosovo. It calls on the Provisional Institutions of Self-Government, the authorities in Belgrade and all concerned to cooperate fully. The Council takes note of the joint statement of the Special Representative, the Provisional Institutions of Self-Government, political leaders and others of 17 March 2004.

Communication (March). The Russian Federation Ministry of Foreign Affairs, in a 20 March statement [S/2004/237], expressed concern over developments in Kosovo. Russia said that it had repeatedly drawn attention to the danger of such a development and to the inadequate response from the international presences in the province. A simple numerical increase in NATO troops was not enough. They were duty-bound to take action to suppress violence and protect the civilian population and, with UNMIK, make the Kosovo Albanian leaders fulfil the Council's demands. The Council had to insist on the implementation of its resolutions.

Security Council consideration. The Security Council, on 13 April [meeting 4942], continued consideration of the March events. The Under-Secretary-General for Peacekeeping Operations, briefing the Council, said that UNMIK was investigating and assessing the violence, which had so far resulted in 183 arrests. International prosecutors were currently working on 42 cases and an additional 90 cases were being handled by the local judiciary. However, given the scale of the violence, additional investigative capacity would be needed. To that end, UNMIK had asked for 100 additional police investigators. The Under-Secretary-General stated that the events indicated that Kosovo still had a long way to go on the path to multi-ethnicity. The standards implementation process needed to be put back on track and the Kosovo Standards Implementation Plan (see p. 408) should be launched to move the process forward so as not to lose momentum. Further review and revision of the Plan, with additional emphasis on security and the rule of law, minority rights and protection and returns, and on decentralization, might be necessary in the wake of the violence.

UNMIK had set up a crisis management review body to evaluate its response and was engaged in establishing a basis of confidence for Kosovo Serbs and fostering reconciliation among Kosovo's communities. The events had shown that the international community's determination to ensure coexistence and reconciliation among the communities was, by itself, not sufficient, but needed to be complemented by concrete action by Kosovo's leaders and its people to address the root causes of the ethnically motivated violence.

Follow-up to March events

The Secretary-General, in his July report on UNMIK [S/2004/613], said that considerable progress had been made to bring to justice those responsible for the violence in March. International prosecutors were currently handling 52 cases involving serious crimes, including judicial investigations into the 20 deaths connected with the violence. The local judiciary was handling more than 260 cases. Some 80 individuals had already been convicted of minor offences in municipal courts. Allegations of misconduct made against some 100 KPS officers during the March violence were being examined. Kosovo Serb KPS officers had returned to work, and mixed Kosovo Albanian/Kosovo Serb patrols had resumed. The prompt arrest by Kosovo Albanian KPS officers of two Kosovo Albanians within hours of the murder of a 17-year-old Kosovo Serb on 5 June in Gracanica (Pristina region) was a further encouraging sign.

The Secretary-General indicated that, in the wake of the March violence, he had requested Kai Eide (Norway) to conduct a comprehensive review of the policies and practices of all actors in Kosovo and to provide recommendations for further thinking on the way forward. That review had been completed and recommendations submitted for the Secretary-General's consideration (see p. 431).

The Secretary-General also reported that the reconstruction programme of the Provisional Institutions had moved forward significantly. According to governmental figures, 263 properties had been repaired, reconstruction was ongoing on 161 properties, contracts were about to be awarded for 70 more, and tenders for 180 others were soon to be issued.

While the Provisional Institutions had not yet developed a systematic programme to reach out to minority communities, Kosovo Albanian leaders, especially the Prime Minister, had visited those communities and reconstruction sites as part of his "internal dialogue with communities" initiative. Some municipal authorities also tried to improve community relations.

Meanwhile, Kosovo Serb involvement in the political process remained a cause for concern, particularly in the context of the October elections (see p. 416). Kosovo Serbs had remained outside the Kosovo Assembly since March and did not participate in the work of the Provisional Institutions at both the central and local levels. Nonetheless, there were signs of renewed interest in participation, and political relations at the central level among community leaders improved. A meeting held in Pristina on 23 June between Kosovo Albanian and Serb leaders was well attended and produced statements on the need for renewed inter-ethnic dialogue. The leaders also met outside Kosovo on a number of occasions.

The enhanced international scrutiny of inter-community relations, following the March violence, fostered dialogue between Kosovo Albanians and Kosovo Serbs. The newly constituted "Contact Group Plus", which included representatives of the Contact Group countries (France, Germany, Italy, Russian Federation, United Kingdom, United States), the EU and NATO, supported the work of political and community leaders on the implementation of standards. A "troika" composed of the EU, the United States and NATO focused on standards and security issues. In a significant development, President Rugova, Prime Minister Rexhepi and Kosovo Albanian and Kosovo Serb leaders, at a meeting facilitated by the United States and the EU (Pristina, 14 July), signed a declaration announcing that all houses damaged during the violence would be rebuilt before winter, expressing a commitment to ensure that internally displaced persons could return, and calling for the establishment of a ministry for community matters, human rights and returns. A Kosovo Security Advisory Group, consisting of KFOR, UNMIK and Kosovo Albanian and Kosovo Serb representatives of the Provisional Institutions, was established to enhance the flow of security information and prevent a recurrence of violence. The Group held its first meeting on 14 July.

Security Council consideration. During its consideration of the Secretary-General's reports on UNMIK [S/2004/348, S/2004/613] on 11 May [meeting 4967] and 5 August [meeting 5017], the Security Council was further updated on the implications of the March violence. At the May meeting, the Special Representative noted that the speed with which the violence spread over Kosovo overwhelmed the capacity of KFOR and UNMIK to respond. UNMIK had no means of augmenting its forces and KFOR forces were not reinforced until after the violence ended. He said he would act on the recommendations of the board he had appointed to review operational procedures and coordination in response to crises, and asked the Council to consider the effectiveness of UNMIK's structures and organization in the current circumstances. The security environment in Kosovo was not conducive to the forcible return of minority communities. The Special Representative urged countries granting temporary protection to persons from Kosovo's minority communities to continue to do so until conditions of safety and dignity could be guaranteed.

At the Council's August meeting, the Assistant Secretary-General for Peacekeeping Operations, Hédi Annabi, reported that the overall security situation in Kosovo remained calm and stable, with few significant security incidents that could not be attributable to extremist groups. The programme for reconstruction of damaged or destroyed properties, for which the Provisional Institutions were responsible, was entrusted to an inter-ministerial Reconstruction Commission. As at 30 July, 331 of the 935 damaged or destroyed properties had been rebuilt, 277 were under reconstruction, and contracts for a further 36 properties were soon to be awarded. While those results were noteworthy, much more needed to be done to ensure that all homes were rebuilt before the winter and that schools were reconstructed before the start of the school year. The encouraging steps taken by Kosovo Albanian leaders to mend the damage to inter-ethnic reconciliation should be followed by public commitment and concrete action to rebuild trust between Kosovo's communities.

Kosovo Standards Implementation Plan

The "standards for Kosovo" document [YUN 2003, p. 420], supported by the Security Council in presidential statement S/PRST/2003/26 [ibid.], set out eight standards (in the areas of functioning democratic institutions, rule of law, freedom of movement, returns and reintegration, economy, property rights, dialogue with Belgrade, and the Kosovo Protection Corps) that Kosovo had to meet to comply with resolution 1244(1999) [YUN 1999, p. 353], the Constitutional Framework for Provisional Self-Government [YUN 2001, p. 352], and the original standards/benchmark statement endorsed by the Council in presidential statement S/PRST/2002/11 [YUN 2002, p. 369]. In his April report on UNMIK [S/2004/348], the Secretary-General stated that the Kosovo Standards Implementation Plan, prepared by the five joint UNMIK-Provisional Institutions working groups, was launched on 31 March. Kosovo Serb political leaders had not participated in development of the Plan, and the Government of Serbia joined them in claiming that the Plan was a road map to independence for Kosovo. The Plan set out actions and policies for reaching the standards and identified actions to be undertaken by the Provisional Institutions of Self-Government, UNMIK and other institutions to achieve them and a timeline for doing so.

The Plan set specific goals in such areas as the building of democratic institutions, the enforcement of rights for minorities and the creation of a functioning economy. Its provisions also included the holding of free and fair elections and the establishment of an impartial judicial system. The Plan was revised to take into account the March events and their aftermath (see p. 405), by including, among other things, priority actions to be carried out by the Provisional Institutions: implementation of a reconstruction programme with funding for reconstruction and loss of property; implementation of initiatives to rebuild trust between communities; the sanctioning of civil servants and party leaders who did not respond appropriately during the violence; and public condemnation of hate speech. The sections of the Plan dealing with freedom of movement and sustainable returns and the rights of communities and their members were to be further revised in the light of the March violence.

SECURITY COUNCIL ACTION (April)

On 30 April [meeting 4960], following consultations among Security Council members, the President made statement S/PRST/2004/13 on behalf of the Council:

The Security Council notes that the presentation of the Kosovo Standards Implementation Plan on 31 March 2004 at Pristina in Kosovo, Serbia and Montenegro, is a step forward in the standards process. The Council reiterates that the Implementation Plan should serve as a basis for the assessment of the progress of the Provisional Institutions of Self-Government in meeting the standards. The Council in this respect urges strongly the Provisional Institutions of Self-Government to demonstrate their full and unconditional commitment to a multi-ethnic Kosovo, in particular with respect to the promotion and protection of the rights of members of the minority communities as well as of human rights, equal security, freedom of movement and sustainable returns for all inhabitants of Kosovo. The Council reiterates further that the progress by the Provisional Institutions of Self-Government in meeting the standards, which should be reflected throughout Kosovo, will be assessed periodically and that the advancement towards a process to determine the future status of Kosovo in accordance with resolution 1244(1999) of 10 June 1999 will depend on the positive outcome of a comprehensive review.

The Council reaffirms its full support for the “standards before status” policy that was devised for Kosovo and endorsed by the Council in application of its resolution 1244(1999). It recalls in this context the “standards for Kosovo” document presented on 10 December 2003 and subsequently supported by the Council in the statement by its President of 12 December 2003, which outlined the standards that are to be achieved in order to reach the goal of establishing in Kosovo a multi-ethnic, stable and democratic society.

The Council stresses that it is essential, as indicated in the Implementation Plan, to review and revise in a timely manner two key sections of the document, namely “sustainable returns and the rights of communities and their members” and “freedom of movement”. The Council calls upon the Provisional Institutions of Self-Government to take urgent steps on these two standards in order to rebuild and reach out to the Serb and other communities who suffered most in the large-scale inter-ethnic violence of 17 to 20 March 2004 that resulted in many dead and wounded and the destruction of personal property and Serbian Orthodox churches and monasteries in Kosovo.

The Council, strongly condemning those events, emphasizes that no party can be allowed to profit or to advance a political agenda through violent measures. It calls upon the Provisional Institutions of Self-Government and all political leaders to take responsibility in the current situation and to ensure that such acts and threats of violence are not repeated. The Council underscores that immediate actions should be taken aimed at the establishment of and public respect for the rule of law, including prosecution of perpetrators, effective collection of illegal weapons and combating organized crime. The Council urges the Provisional Institutions of Self-Government to take concrete steps to fulfil their commitment to rebuild multi-ethnicity and reconciliation throughout Kosovo, as promised in the open letter of institutional and political leaders of 2 April 2004. The Council asserts further that, in addition, there must be rapid steps taken by the Provisional Institutions of Self-Government to fulfil their commitment to rebuild or provide appropriate compensation for damaged or destroyed property and to rebuild holy sites and to facilitate the return of those displaced from their homes.

When assessing the progress made by the Provisional Institutions of Self-Government, the Council would pay particular attention to the adoption and the implementation of laws and regulations, policies and attitudes of the Provisional Institutions of Self-Government, among others, in the following areas: the fight against discrimination, corruption and economic crime, the propagation of hate by the media, as well as the support for multi-ethnicity and reconciliation, genuine devolution, orderly and sustainable returns, effective functioning of the Assembly and of the political parties, disciplinary procedures for the civil service, building-up of a professional, politically neutral and multi-ethnic administration, at the central and local levels, with a view to providing public services to every community on an equal footing, an efficient strategy for the return of refugees and internally displaced persons in safe conditions, a constructive engagement with the United Nations Interim Administration Mission in Kosovo, and full participation in the direct dialogue with Belgrade.

The Council underlines the importance that the Special Representative of the Secretary-General, within his authority as set out in resolution 1244 (1999), inter alia, in the context of the review mechanism, continue to consult closely with interested parties, in particular the Contact Group. The Council reaffirms its intention to continue to consider the regular reports of the Secretary-General, including an assessment by the Special Representative, as to the progress of the Provisional Institutions of Self-Government towards meeting the standards. The Council takes note of the fact that the Contact Group intends to make a substantive contribution to the regular reviews and to submit its assessments to the Special Representative.

The Council requests the Secretary-General, in his next report to the Council, to include a comprehensive assessment of the violence of 17 to 20 March 2004.

The Council also requests the Secretary-General to present recommendations on possible new institutional arrangements respectful of the objective of building a democratic and multi-ethnic Kosovo to allow more effective local government through the devolution of central non-reserved responsibilities to local authorities and communities in Kosovo, taking into account relevant studies and recommendations of interested parties and international organizations. How that local government is organized is a matter for further discussion between interested parties in Kosovo.

The Council welcomes the strong measures by the international presence in Kosovo aimed at enhancing the security and protection of all communities, as well as their religious, historical and cultural sites, with the goal of ensuring lasting stability in Kosovo. It calls in this respect for the full cooperation of the Provisional Institutions of Self-Government and all concerned.

The Council will continue to follow the matter closely.

Communication. Serbia and Montenegro transmitted to the Council President the Plan for the Political Solution to the Situation in Kosovo and Metohija [S/2004/352], adopted on 29 April by the National Assembly of the Republic of Serbia, which, it said, represented the framework for possible discussions on territorial autonomy in the province of Kosovo and Metohija with representatives of the international community within and outside the province. The Plan offered an outline of institutional guarantees for the Serb community through territorial autonomy.

Progress on standards implementation

In his July report on UNMIK [S/2004/613], the Secretary-General reported that the Provisional Institutions of Self-Government had moved forward with the implementation of the Kosovo Standards Implementation Plan at both the central and municipal levels, albeit slowly and with difficulty. Transforming the Plan into real change on the ground was challenging, due mainly to the lack of capacity and experience within the Provisional Institutions. The 30 April deadline for the creation of revised plans for the standards relating to freedom of movement and sustainable returns and rights of communities was not met, but Prime Minister Rexhepi committed his office to working directly with UNMIK to ensure their completion. While progress was made on four of the six priority actions to be carried out by the Provisional Institutions (see p. 408), no action was taken with respect to two—the requirement that they investigate and sanction authorities and political leaders who contributed to the violence through public statements or actions or who failed to exercise their authority properly, and that they publicly condemn print and broadcast media reports that contributed to ethnic violence and support the recommendations of the temporary Media Commissioner in relation to his investigation into those reports. The Prime Minister stated that the Government would be unable to fulfil those actions.

The Office of the Prime Minister took steps to move the standards implementation process forward. A matrix detailing the work required by the ministries of the Provisional Institutions to fulfil the actions listed in the Plan, including detailed assignments and timelines for completion, was prepared, and focal points on standards were appointed in every ministry and municipality. The joint UNMIK-Provisional Institutions working groups, which had prepared the Plan, were relaunched to monitor progress and implementation difficulties, and UNMIK established assessment committees to report on implementation. UNMIK, in cooperation with the Provisional Institutions, organized a public information campaign, which benefited from the support of key political leaders.

In a November report on UNMIK [S/2004/907], the Secretary-General said that a technical assessment by his Special Representative of progress on the standards showed that tangible and encouraging progress had been made in specific areas, but concrete progress was limited and the standards had not yet been met. Encouraging progress had been made in the reconstruction of destroyed houses and schools, investigating and prosecuting those responsible for the violence, reform of local government, and elections on 23 October for Kosovo's Assembly. The lack of progress in key areas, such as return and reconciliation efforts, security conditions and freedom of movement for the Kosovo minorities, in particular Kosovo Serbs, remained cause for concern. Even though Provisional Institutions' authorities, notably Prime Minister Rexhepi, had engaged in outreach activities to ethnic communities, a systematic, properly resourced outreach programme, including reconciliation and inter-ethnic dialogue, was not yet in place. Neither Provisional Institutions nor party leaders had investigated the involvement of public authorities in the March violence or publicly condemned media reports that incited ethnic violence.

The security of the Kosovo minority groups, in particular Kosovo Serbs, remained precarious, with substantial limitations on their freedom of movement. Meanwhile, the rate of returns following the March events was significantly reduced, and the safety and sustainability of those returns remained fragile. Furthermore, participation of minority communities, in particular Kosovo Serbs, in the Provisional Institutions had not improved.

Progress on specific standards

Functioning democratic institutions. The Provisional Institutions suffered from a lack of capacity in implementing key aspects of the Kosovo Standards Implementation Plan. The enhancement of the professional competence of the civil service posed a challenge, as did the need to insulate the civil service from political interference. The task was complicated by the continued existence of Serbian parallel structures which took orders from Belgrade and contributed to the alienation of Kosovo Serbs from mainstream politics and public administration.

Minority employment in the Provisional Institutions continued to be low and confined to areas below the decision-making level, and mostly in the offices catering to minorities themselves. In the central ministries, minorities occupied 9.6 per cent of total posts, against the minimum stipulated level of 16.6 per cent. In the municipalities, the employment of Kosovo Serbs and other minorities was also very limited. Most institutions had not taken the initiatives required to bring minorities into decision-making levels for all communities.

The Kosovo Assembly continued to hold plenary sessions on a monthly rather than a weekly basis, leading to longer sessions, the postponement or delay of agenda items, and rushed debates and voting because of the packed agenda. On 8 July, the Kosovo Assembly proposed 38 amendments to the Constitutional Framework, despite clear warnings by UNMIK that such changes were outside its powers. The amendments were forwarded to UNMIK in September for consideration; UNMIK continued to object to them but agreed to study specific areas. The Assembly held its final session on 27 September. During its three-year mandate, it adopted 83 laws, of which 74 were formally submitted to UNMIK and 51 promulgated. Following the elections on 23 October, the new Assembly held its first session on 3 December.

The Office of the Prime Minister tried to consolidate the professional policy-making capacity and executive bodies of the Provisional Institutions but with few concrete results. The absence of rules of procedure for the working of the Government and the central ministries affected their effectiveness and coordination.

Operational responsibility for running the 2004 Assembly elections (see p. 416) was entrusted to the multi-ethnic Central Election Commission created for that purpose. Little progress was achieved in the implementation of standards in the media, which, with few exceptions, had not begun to approach the standards of tolerance, civility and fairness set out in the Standards Implementation Plan. The temporary Media Commissioner issued a report criticizing media performance, in particular by Radio Television Kosovo and two private television stations.

A Law on Gender Equality in Kosovo, promulgated by the Special Representative on 7 June, provided for the establishment of an Office for Gender Equality. Municipal gender officer positions were included in the Kosovo consolidated budget, but those officers were unable to introduce gender concerns in the municipal agendas. Gender affairs officers were appointed in 4 of the 10 ministries.

The working group on local government finalized a framework document for local government reform in Kosovo, which addressed calls for greater democracy, increased participation, the provision of services and sustainable security at the local level, and provided for much devolution of power from the central to the local level.

Rule of law. Progress was made in the investigation and prosecution of those responsible for the March violence. At the same time, UNMIK's efforts to create a multi-ethnic justice system accessible to all communities suffered a setback as a result of the March riots. The three UNMIK court liaison offices in the Pristina, Gnjilane and Pec regions were working at limited capacity as a result of staff security issues and most municipal courts in Kosovo remained inaccessible to minority communities. Kosovo Serb prosecutors and judges declined to take up their work following the March violence. Of a total of 310 judges and 85 prosecutors, there were 16 Kosovo Serb judges and 3 prosecutors. Parallel court structures, which had ceased to function before March, resumed in Leposavic (Mitrovica region), Mitrovica and Lipjan (Pristina region). The development of KPS was re-evaluated after the March violence, focusing on the schedule for transition of station command from UNMIK police to KPS, among other things. UNMIK police revised its transition plan to ensure that command of stations that performed well would be changed earlier than problematic ones. By November, 15 stations were under KPS control.

An anti-corruption strategy, which included public awareness-raising measures, strengthening and reform of legislation and the establishment of an independent anti-corruption unit, was launched in March. However, implementation remained weak as abuse of internal controls and procurement mechanisms continued to be widespread in some ministries. Progress was made in both ministries and municipalities in establishing systems of internal audit and financial control, and on 8 September, the Assembly adopted an anti-corruption law. At the central level, the Kosovo Security Advisory Group was established as a forum for the Provisional Institutions and all communities to discuss security concerns with UNMIK and KFOR.

Freedom of movement. The freedom of movement of minority communities in Kosovo, particularly Kosovo Serbs, continued to be limited. In some regions, Kosovo Serbs travelled through Kosovo Albanian majority areas only with escorts, using special transport services, or in vehicles with special license plates. Members of other minority communities, including Kosovo Albanians in predominantly Serb municipalities, enjoyed more freedom of movement, but still faced problems. More than 300 police escorts were required each month in connection with the transport of Kosovo Serb political authorities, visits by internally displaced persons, the holding of cultural or religious events, and travel to work or school. The absence of escorts prevented Kosovo Serb children in the rural areas north of Pristina and in Obilic from attending school for several weeks in September. The Government funded a civil service bus line and a train line for minority members. Special arrangements were generally required for minority public service employees to work in majority areas.

Returns and reintegration. Prior to the events in March, there were limited but encouraging prospects for returns in 2004, with returns projects involving every ethnicity ongoing in each area of Kosovo. That situation was completely reversed after March. In less than 48 hours, 4,100 minority community members had become newly displaced, the majority from the Pristina and southern Mitrovica regions. Of the displaced, 82 per cent were Kosovo Serbs and the remaining 18 per cent were mostly Roma and Ashkali. As at 24 September, 2,288 people who had been displaced in March had not returned to their homes.

By the end of August, the number of minority returns to Kosovo in 2004 stood at 1,300, only 40 per cent of the previous year's total. While the level of municipal engagement in the returns process had increased, most municipalities lacked the capacity and political will to assume responsibility for it. Many municipalities were developing return strategies; however, direct engagement by municipalities in the development or implementation of returns projects was still limited. The Provisional Institutions increased funding for returns from 7 million euros in 2003 to 10.5 million in 2004. In July, Kosovo political leaders endorsed the creation of a ministry for community matters, human rights and returns.

Economy. The March violence damaged the economy in terms of weakened investor interest and confidence. That, combined with the high level of unemployment, made the short- and medium-term economic outlook a cause for concern in spite of a projected 4 per cent growth in 2004. Focus was directed to the priorities outlined in the "standards for Kosovo" document, including the establishment of a legal framework for a sustainable, competitive market economy, the development of a non-discriminatory economic policy, and the strengthening of local institutions. A regulation on public procurement was promulgated in February and an EU-compliant Customs Code entered into force in March. The Kosovo Assembly adopted a number of relevant laws, including those on obligations, consumer protection, concessions, copyright, patents, profit tax, personal income tax and tax administration.

The privatization process advanced towards meeting the objective of completion by late 2006. The Kosovo Trust Agency (KTA) privatized an average of 25 socially owned enterprises each month. Remaining concerns included the determination of the status of socially owned enterprises, immunity for the KTA Board and management, and the liquidation of the assets and/or land of such enterprises. To improve transparency, KTA planned to introduce to those enterprises new corporate governance that would include boards of directors and supervisory boards.

The collection of revenue for public utility providers continued to be problematic. Within the Post and Telecommunications Company, collections were approaching 100 per cent of billed revenues, except for fixed-line telephony. In contrast, the Kosovo Electricity Company (KEK) was only able to collect on 32 per cent of electricity delivered. The Energy Office was consulting with KEK management on measures to improve billing and collections. Seven regional water and seven regional waste companies were created from the previous 42 municipal operations to improve revenue collection through consolidation. The average revenue collection rate in that sector was 52 per cent.

No formal tax compliance indicators had been developed, but the Tax Administration developed performance indicators that measured the efficiency of the Administration itself. Compliance with taxes was low, with only 20 per cent of total tax revenues derived from internal collection. International cooperation, along with anti-smuggling efforts and cooperation with police and KFOR, improved compliance.

The budget process functioned unsatisfactorily. Medium-term expenditure frameworks, a public investment plan and sector-spending budgets did not exist, and there was ongoing disagreement between the Provisional Institutions and UNMIK regarding the allocation of the budget surplus.

On 1 April, the Pristina Airport was transferred from military (KFOR) to civilian (UNMIK) control. An agreement was finalized between UNMIK and Iceland for the provision by Iceland of certain civil aviation services. Those measures ensured that the airport was operated in conformity with applicable international standards and practices.

Property rights. Little progress was made regarding the illegal occupation of residential, agricultural and commercial land, as implementation and enforcement of legal instruments protecting property rights remained inadequate. Municipalities had not made a concerted effort to prevent illegal occupation through the enforcement of regulations, and there was no coordinated public awareness campaign. However, the Expert Group on Property, in August, finalized its terms of reference and formed a subgroup to compile an inventory of central and municipal property legislation, and to prepare a needs assessment and legislative action plan.

Concerning residential property, the Housing and Property Directorate and the Housing and Property Claims Commission continued to work through their caseload. As at 30 September, Directorate and Commission decisions had been issued for 19,875 of 29,028 claims (68 per cent), although only 8,996 (46 per cent) had been enforced or fully implemented. To continue its work at planned levels, the Directorate asked for an additional 200,000 euros to meet its original requirement of 1.2 million euros. Its projected deficit for 2005 stood at $2.3 million. The establishment of the immovable property rights and cadastral registries was moving forward, although neither was fully functional.

As to informal settlements, a stakeholders group was established and met frequently. No action was taken by the Provisional Institutions to launch an awareness-raising campaign about informal settlements and the property rights of their inhabitants, despite ongoing urban planning activity. Limited progress was noted in the provision of alternative housing for the socially vulnerable. Two pilot social housing projects, initiated centrally and developed and co-financed at the municipal level, were completed in September, and three more were under development.

Dialogue with Belgrade. Despite the promising start in early 2004 of the working groups on direct dialogue between Pristina and Belgrade on energy and on missing persons, the mid-March violence and a variety of other issues impeded resumption, owing to Belgrade's reluctance. Kosovo Prime Minister Rexhepi expressed to the International Committee of the Red Cross his willingness to resume the dialogue on missing persons. A meeting of advisers on the reform of local government (Vienna, 28 September) did, however, indicate that a dialogue was still possible.

Kosovo Protection Corps. The Kosovo Protection Corps (KPC) continued to comply with the rule of law and to exercise its mandate but did not hide its frustration at not being given greater tasks. At the tactical and operational levels, KPC performed well, especially in mine clearance and search and rescue operations; however, more training and equipment were needed for it to achieve European professional standards. The withdrawal of the training provided by the International Organization for Migration would have a significant impact on both general and specialist training. Command, control and coordination measures needed to be developed between KPC and other emergency services. KPC was also constrained by lack of funding, essential equipment, training and supervision. Discipline within KPC was improving. The revision of the disciplinary code had been delayed by political issues but steps were being taken to resolve them. A plan for recruiting minorities, in order to raise their numbers to 10 per cent from the current 4.75 per cent, was drawn up.

Comprehensive review of policies and practices

Following the March events, the Secretary-General appointed a team headed by Kai Eide (Norway) to conduct a comprehensive review of the policies and practices of all actors in Kosovo and to make recommendations on a way forward. The team's report was submitted to the Security Council in August. On 17 November [S/2004/932], the Secretary-General transmitted the report, together with his own recommendations.

The team observed that Kosovo was characterized by growing dissatisfaction and frustration. For the Kosovo Albanian majority, the main issues were a serious lack of economic opportunities and the absence of a clear political perspective, while the Kosovo Serbs saw themselves as victims of a campaign to reduce their presence in Kosovo to a scattered rural population. The March violence had taken the international community by surprise because it had failed to read the mood in the population and to understand the depth of the dissatisfaction of the majority and the vulnerability of the minorities. UNMIK itself had become the main target of criticism from all sides, although it had also been a victim of the lack of a clear political perspective.

However, a new tone had emerged as a result of clearer messages coming from the international community. The Kosovo Albanians seemed to accept that their efforts to stem the violence in March were inadequate, damaging their reputation and support in the international community. The Serbs, for their part, understood that they could not and should not remain outside the political process when their Kosovo Albanian counterparts were seen to accommodate their demands; consequently, the Serbs appeared more willing to participate in common efforts, although a decision to take part in elections (see p. 416) and return to the Provisional Institutions of Self-Government had not been made. The joint declaration on reconstruction of houses, signed on 14 July, reflected those positive trends (see below).

The international community faced several tests, the first of which was to maintain strong pressure to return to the political process. The second was managing the interim period, including the transfer of more authority to Kosovo institutions and having a more dynamic standards policy. The current "standards before status" policy lacked credibility, as implementing those standards was seen as unachievable. Standards implementation should be an integral part of a wider policy to bring Kosovo closer to European standards. The third test related to preparations for future status discussions. In the light of the growing frustration, the faltering economy and the eventual reduction of international forces, raising the future status question soon seemed the better option. The international community needed to intensify its dialogue with Belgrade, which would be one of the parties to the future status negotiations.

UNMIK needed to be restructured to allow it to concentrate on priorities. The United Nations should prepare to gradually reduce its presence in Kosovo, with a parallel increase in that of the EU and a continuation of the presence of the Organization for Security and Cooperation in Europe (OSCE).

Recommendations of review team. The team recommended a comprehensive and integrated strategy, covering the period from the time of the report through 2005, to be elaborated in consultation with relevant partners. The strategy should: meet immediate requirements relating to security and prosecution, reconstruction, return and decentralization; formulate a more dynamic standards policy with achievable priorities; outline further transfer of responsibilities and competencies to Kosovo authorities; demonstrate resolve to sanction Kosovo authorities for misuse of powers; develop a comprehensive capacity-building policy for self-government; reform the structures of the international presence in Kosovo; and prepare for discussions on future status. Discussions should be held with the Security Council, other organizations and key Member States to secure commitment for the resources and support required to implement that strategy. Pressure should be maintained to strengthen positive trends, including progress in security, reconstruction, prosecution of those responsible for the March events and local government reform. The "standards before status" policy should be replaced by a dynamic priority-based standards policy within the framework of the integrated strategy to facilitate orderly future status discussions and regional and European integration efforts. Three intermediary standards reviews should be scheduled before the mid-2005 review. Transferring further competencies should be launched without delay, giving the Provisional Institutions a greater sense of ownership, responsibility and accountability. That should include establishing new ministries of energy, of justice and of community matters, human rights and returns.

A process of gradually handing over operational control of KPS to the Provisional Institutions, with UNMIK maintaining overall executive authority, should be elaborated and implemented. KPS units should be given proper training and equipment and the handover of remaining UN police responsibilities to the EU or OSCE should be explored. The Special Representative of the Secretary-General should make greater use of sanctions and interventions and draw up an inventory of possible measures.

A more coherent and ambitious capacity-building policy should be elaborated and implemented under OSCE leadership. UNMIK should be streamlined to provide new energy and a more concentrated effort on key challenges. A comprehensive restructuring of the international presence as a whole should be undertaken in 2005 with a gradual reduction of UNMIK as it completed its mandate and handed over responsibilities to other authorities and organizations.

The EU should prepare an economic development strategy and consolidate its various presences in Kosovo. NATO should maintain KFOR's presence to ensure a safe and secure environment, with a view to ensuring an adequate force level during the future status process. The broader international community should provide a more concerted and coordinated engagement.

The dialogue with Belgrade should be improved and a high-level international consultative mechanism for Kosovo, involving key capitals and headquarters, should be established. Discussion of the future status question should be undertaken by the United Nations, beginning later in the year.

Recommendations of Secretary-General. The Secretary-General, in his recommendations on the way forward, said that consultations on the review team's recommendations with the Contact Group, other European members of the Security Council, the EU, OSCE and NATO, held on 20 September, resulted in a general understanding of and support for an integrated strategy for the way forward in Kosovo up to mid-2005 and in preparation for the future status process. There was broad agreement on the need to focus on the economy and on security, the need to engage with Belgrade and to bring the Kosovo Serbs into the process, the importance of the standards process, and on support for a subregional approach that would not focus exclusively on Kosovo.

The Secretary-General emphasized that all processes in Kosovo had to remain within the parameters of Security Council resolution 1244 (1999). A comprehensive and integrated strategy, based on a decision by the Council, would be put in place leading to the future status process, the main components of which would be: strengthening current efforts to deal with the causes and consequences of the March violence; improving dialogue at all levels; initiating a more comprehensive dialogue with Belgrade; recalibrating the standards policy; transferring further competencies to the Provisional Institutions and increasing their accountability; increasing oversight and intervention by UNMIK; enhancing capacity-building for the Provisional Institutions; implementing a stronger economic development policy with short- and long-term measures; and realigning and streamlining UNMIK.

Achieving progress on the eight standards remained the basis of UN policy within the overall framework of the integrated strategy. UNMIK would review progress towards implementing the standards by providing quarterly technical assessments, which would provide the basis for the political assessments by the Secretary-General in reports to the Council. On the basis of a comprehensive review, to be conducted in mid-2005, the Council would decide whether to initiate the process leading to a determination of the future status of Kosovo.

UNMIK reviewed the competencies it currently managed and identified those that might be transferred to the Provisional Institutions, as well as areas for enhanced operational involvement of the Provisional Institutions. The transfer policy was linked to greater accountability and responsibility of the Provisional Institutions and a greater degree of oversight. UNMIK was putting in place more effective mechanisms for oversight and remedial interventions to ensure the full implementation of resolution 1244(1999) and compliance with the Constitutional Framework [YUN 2001, p. 352] and applicable legislation.

Recommendations on new institutional arrangements for more effective local government through the devolution of central non-reserved responsibilities to local authorities would be submitted by the Secretary-General. Institutions would have to be created to deal with the consequences and causes of the March events and to ensure the active engagement of the leaders and people of Kosovo for a multi-ethnic society. Current efforts for ensuring the prosecution of those responsible, the improvement of security and the reconstruction of destroyed homes and religious sites should be reinforced, and the conditions necessary for the safe and sustainable return of all displaced persons put in place.

Revitalization of the economy remained an overriding concern. A midterm and long-term economic strategy should be complemented by effective short-term measures. The Secretary-General called on the EU to design and implement an economic development strategy for Kosovo. Dialogue among the communities in Kosovo and between Belgrade and Pristina should be intensified. A more intense and comprehensive dialogue with Belgrade was being initiated, taking into account its legitimate concerns. UNMIK was being streamlined and realigned to focus on the key challenges and priorities, which could involve the EU and OSCE taking on additional competencies, including financial commitments, within UNMIK. NATO was urged to maintain KFOR to implement its responsibilities under resolution 1244(1999), particularly to ensure a safe and secure environment, including the provision of an adequate force level during the future status process and the implementation of an eventual political settlement.

The Secretary-General concluded that the coordinated support of the international community, particularly that of key Member States, was essential for success. The people of Kosovo from all communities, their representatives in the Provisional Institutions and political leaders had to work towards the strategy goals and ensure that there was sufficient progress to move gradually into talks on the future status of Kosovo.

UNMIK priorities

The Secretary-General reported in November [S/2004/907] that, in the light of the situation in Kosovo, his Special Representative outlined UNMIK's priorities for the near future. They included achieving progress on the eight standards as the basic policy framework; prioritizing actions within each standard to ensure the sustained action needed to deal with the consequences of the March events, establish the necessary institutions for that purpose and secure the engagement of the Kosovo leaders and people for creating a multi-ethnic society; and engagement by both the Provisional Institutions and the Kosovo Serb and other minority communities in the Kosovo Security Advisory Group and local crime prevention councils to address the security concerns of minorities. The local crime prevention councils, which brought together police, KFOR, municipal authorities and community representatives, would also help to address local security requirements. The Special Representative also proposed to the Serbian Government that high-level talks be held on Kosovo security issues.

UNMIK undertook initiatives to improve coordination in building additional capacities within the Provisional Institutions to permit the further transfer of competencies. Together with the Provisional Institutions, it would proceed as quickly as possible with decentralization of pilot projects and the drafting of laws on local government and finances. It would cooperate with KFOR to improve security and freedom of movement. An action plan was being prepared to support positive measures by local authorities in the area of returns, particularly at the municipal level, and to deal directly with those obstructing returns. Those efforts needed to be accompanied by a programme of outreach by the Provisional Institutions to Kosovo Serb and other minority communities.

Concerning economic development, quick-impact projects at the municipal level would be implemented with donors and UN agencies in order to lay the groundwork for economic recovery. Kosovo communities should engage in internal dialogue, and dialogue between Pristina and Belgrade should be enhanced. The constructive engagement of Belgrade was needed in a variety of fields beyond decentralization, such as missing persons, returns and the economy. Consideration would be given to resuming meetings of the working groups in the direct dialogue between Pristina and Belgrade, and the involvement of Kosovo in regional dialogue and initiatives would be enhanced.

Parliamentary elections

The Secretary-General reported in November [S/2004/907] that elections for the Kosovo Assembly were held on 23 October, organized for the first time to a large extent by the people of Kosovo themselves. The multi-ethnic Central Elections Commission and its secretariat certified 33 political entities which contested the elections. The election campaign began on 22 September and was largely conducted in a calm and dignified manner. Although many Kosovo Serb political leaders wished to participate in the elections, parties in Serbia proper largely opposed participation. Serbia and Montenegro Prime Minister Vojislav Kostunica maintained that conditions were not in place for Kosovo Serbs to vote and urged them not to go to the polls. However, on 5 October, Serbian President Boris Tadic publicly supported Kosovo Serb participation, and the Special Representative allowed the late registration of a new Kosovo Serb political entity, the Serbian List for Kosovo and Metohija, which submitted a list of 33 candidates; another Kosovo Serb civic list claiming to represent Kosovo Serb internally displaced persons was also certified. On 8 October, a technical memorandum of understanding was signed with the Serbian Commissariat for Refugees on the opening of polling centres in Serbia proper, leading to 15 polling and registration centres being set up and run by OSCE there. The vote was held in an orderly manner, with no significant security incidents.

Official results showed a turnout of around 54 per cent (in Kosovo), down from 64 per cent in the first Assembly elections in 2001 [YUN 2001, p. 360]. Around 2,000 Kosovo Serbs, or under 1 per cent of the potential Kosovo Serb electorate, voted. The low turnout meant that there would not be any directly elected Kosovo Serb representatives in the Assembly and it remained uncertain if the 10 seats set aside would be filled. Support for the main Kosovo Albanian parties did not vary considerably from that in the 2001 elections: the Democratic League of Kosovo (LDK) obtained 45.4 per cent of the votes, the Democratic Party of Kosovo (PDK) 28.9 per cent, and the Alliance for the Future of Kosovo (AAK) 8.4 per cent. A new Kosovo Albanian political formation, ORA ("Time"), obtained 6.2 per cent. Negotiations among the main Kosovo Albanian parties on the formation of a coalition Government began immediately after the vote.

Security Council consideration. The Special Representative, in his briefing to the Security Council on 29 November [meeting 5089], said that the 23 October elections, monitored by a broad cross-section of some 13,000 local observers, were determined to be free and fair by the Council of Europe. No significant incidents of a political or security nature interrupted polling, which generally took place in a secure environment. While the overall turnout was good, he regretted the low turnout of the Kosovo Serbs. He noted that LDK and AAK had decided to form a coalition and prepare for government. However, the agreement and the possible appointment of Ramush Haradinaj as Prime Minister raised some concerns in view of reports that ICTY was pursuing a case related to him. The Special Representative noted that Kosovo would, for the first time, have a strong parliamentary opposition, which he trusted would play a democratic role and show mature political judgement in the interest of Kosovo's move towards a review of standards and status talks.

Other developments. In late 2004, Mr. Rugova was re-elected President of Kosovo, Nexhat Daci was elected President of the Assembly and Mr. Haradinaj was appointed Prime Minister. New portfolios of Deputy Prime Minister and 15 deputy ministers were agreed upon. The Government allocated 3 of the 13 ministerial positions to representatives of minority communities. Three new ministries were established in the areas of energy, local-government administration, and returns and communities.

Communication. On 4 December [S/2004/960], the Government of the Republic of Serbia adopted a conclusion concerning the appointment of Mr. Haradinaj as Prime Minister of Kosovo and Metohija, in which it noted his "criminal past" during the war, the arrest warrant issued by the War Crimes Panel of the Belgrade District Court for his alleged involvement in war crimes, and the investigation being conducted by ICTY. Serbia denounced his election as Prime Minister and demanded that the Special Representative revoke it.

UN Interim Administration Mission in Kosovo (UNMIK)

The United Nations Interim Administration Mission in Kosovo, established in 1999 [YUN 1999, p. 357] to facilitate a political process to determine Kosovo's political future, comprised five components referred to as pillars: interim administration (led by the United Nations); institution-building (led by OSCE); economic reconstruction (led by the EU); humanitarian affairs (led by the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees (UNHCR)); and police and justice (led by the United Nations). UNMIK was headed by the Special Representative of the Secretary-General. Søren Jessen-Petersen replaced Harri Holkeri as Special Representative on 18 June.

The Secretary-General reported to the Security Council on the activities of UNMIK and developments in Kosovo for the periods 1 January to 31 March [S/2004/348], 1 April to 15 July [S/2004/613] and 16 July to 31 October [S/2004/907]. Activities for the remainder of the year were covered in a later report [S/2005/88].

Financing

On 18 June [meeting 91], the General Assembly, having considered the financial performance report for UNMIK for the period 1 July 2002 to 30 June 2003 [A/58/634], the proposed budget for 1 July 2004 to 30 June 2005 [A/58/638 & Corr.1] and the related comments and recommendations of ACABQ [A/58/759/Add.5], adopted, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee [A/58/826], resolution 58/305 without vote [agenda item 144].

Financing of the United Nations Interim Administration Mission in Kosovo

The General Assembly,

Having considered the reports of the Secretary-General on the financing of the United Nations Interim Administration Mission in Kosovo and the related reports of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions,

Recalling Security Council resolution 1244(1999) of 10 June 1999 regarding the establishment of the United Nations Interim Administration Mission in Kosovo,

Recalling also its resolution 53/241 of 28 July 1999 on the financing of the Mission and its subsequent resolutions thereon, the latest of which was resolution 57/326 of 18 June 2003,

Acknowledging the complexity of the Mission,

Reaffirming the general principles underlying the financing of United Nations peacekeeping operations, as stated in General Assembly resolutions 1874(S-IV) of 27 June 1963, 3101(XXVIII) of 11 December 1973 and 55/235 of 23 December 2000,

Mindful of the fact that it is essential to provide the Mission with the necessary financial resources to enable it to fulfil its responsibilities under the relevant resolution of the Security Council,

1. Takes note of the status of contributions to the United Nations Interim Administration Mission in Kosovo as at 15 April 2004, including the contributions outstanding in the amount of 108.2 million United States dollars, representing some 6 per cent of the total assessed contributions, notes with concern that only thirty-two Member States have paid their assessed contributions in full, and urges all other Member States, in particular those in arrears, to ensure payment of their outstanding assessed contributions;

2. Expresses its appreciation to those Member States which have paid their assessed contributions in full, and urges all other Member States to make every possible effort to ensure payment of their assessed contributions to the Mission in full;

3. Expresses concern at the financial situation with regard to peacekeeping activities, in particular as regards the reimbursements to troop contributors that bear additional burdens owing to overdue payments by Member States of their assessments;

4. Also expresses concern at the delay experienced by the Secretary-General in deploying and providing adequate resources to some recent peacekeeping missions, in particular those in Africa;

5. Emphasizes that all future and existing peacekeeping missions shall be given equal and non-discriminatory treatment in respect of financial and administrative arrangements;

6. Also emphasizes that all peacekeeping missions shall be provided with adequate resources for the effective and efficient discharge of their respective mandates;

7. Reiterates its request to the Secretary-General to make the fullest possible use of facilities and equipment at the United Nations Logistics Base at Brindisi, Italy, in order to minimize the costs of procurement for the Mission;

8. Endorses the conclusions and recommendations contained in the report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions, and requests the Secretary-General to ensure their full implementation, bearing in mind the fact that the Special Representative of the Secretary-General has requested additional police and judicial resources in response to recent events in Kosovo (Serbia and Montenegro);

9. Requests the Secretary-General to take all necessary action to ensure that the Mission is administered with a maximum of efficiency and economy;

10. Also requests the Secretary-General, in order to reduce the cost of employing General Service staff, to continue efforts to recruit local staff for the Mission against General Service posts, commensurate with the requirements of the Mission;

Financial performance report for the period from 1 July 2002 to 30 June 2003

11. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General on the financial performance of the Mission for the period from 1 July 2002 to 30 June 2003;

Budget estimates for the period from 1 July 2004 to 30 June 2005

12. Decides to appropriate to the Special Account for the United Nations Interim Administration Mission in Kosovo the amount of 278,413,700 dollars for the period from 1 July 2004 to 30 June 2005, inclusive of 264,625,200 dollars for the maintenance of the Mission, 11,272,700 dollars for the support account for peacekeeping operations and 2,515,800 dollars for the United Nations Logistics Base;

Financing of the appropriation

13. Decides also to apportion among Member States the amount of 278,413,700 dollars at a monthly rate of 23,201,142 dollars, in accordance with the levels set out in General Assembly resolution 55/235, as adjusted by the Assembly in its resolution 55/236 of 23 December 2000 and updated in its resolution 58/256 of 23 December 2003, taking into account the scale of assessments for 2004 and 2005, as set out in its resolution 58/1 B of 23 December 2003;

14. Decides further that, in accordance with the provisions of its resolution 973(X) of 15 December 1955,

there shall be set off against the apportionment among Member States, as provided for in paragraph 13 above, their respective share in the Tax Equalization Fund of 20,572,400 dollars, comprising the estimated staff assessment income of 18,785,600 dollars approved for the Mission, the prorated share of 1,645,100 dollars of the estimated staff assessment income approved for the support account and the prorated share of 141,700 dollars of the estimated staff assessment income approved for the United Nations Logistics Base;

15. Decides that, for Member States that have fulfilled their financial obligations to the Mission, there shall be set off against their apportionment, as provided for in paragraph 13 above, their respective share of the unencumbered balance and other income in the total amount of 10,804,200 dollars in respect of the financial period ended 30 June 2003, in accordance with the levels set out in General Assembly resolution 55/235, as adjusted by the Assembly in its resolution 55/236 and its resolution 57/290 A of 20 December 2002, taking into account the scale of assessments for 2003, as set out in its resolutions 55/5 B of 23 December 2000 and 57/4 B of 20 December 2002;

16. Decides also that, for Member States that have not fulfilled their financial obligations to the Mission, there shall be set off against their outstanding obligations their respective share of the unencumbered balance and other income in the total amount of 10,804,200 dollars in respect of the financial period ended 30 June 2003, in accordance with the scheme set out in paragraph 15 above;

17. Decides further that the increase of 2,113,600 dollars in the estimated staff assessment income in respect of the financial period ended 30 June 2003 shall be added to the credits from the amount referred to in paragraphs 15 and 16 above;

18. Emphasizes that no peacekeeping mission shall be financed by borrowing funds from other active peacekeeping missions;

19. Encourages the Secretary-General to continue to take additional measures to ensure the safety and security of all personnel under the auspices of the United Nations participating in the Mission;

20. Invites voluntary contributions to the Mission in cash and in the form of services and supplies acceptable to the Secretary-General, to be administered, as appropriate, in accordance with the procedure and practices established by the General Assembly;

21. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its fifty-ninth session the item entitled "Financing of the United Nations Interim Administration Mission in Kosovo".

In December, the Secretary-General submitted the performance report for UNMIK for the period 1 July 2003 to 30 June 2004 [A/59/623] and the proposed budget for 1 July 2005 to 30 June 2006 [A/59/633].

By decision 59/552 of 23 December, the Assembly decided that the item on UNMIK financing would remain for consideration at its resumed fifty-ninth (2005) session.

International security presence (KFOR)

The Secretary-General transmitted to the Security Council, in accordance with resolution 1244(1999) [YUN 1999, p. 353], reports on the activities of the international security presence in Kosovo (KFOR), also known as Operation Joint Guard, covering the periods 1 January to 29 February [S/2004/175, S/2004/262], and 1 April to 31 December [S/2004/487, S/2004/649, S/2004/655, S/2004/732, S/2004/799, S/2004/859, S/2004/937, S/2005/20, S/2005/332]. As at 31 December, the force, which operated under NATO leadership, comprised 17,170 troops, including 2,788 from non-NATO countries.

KFOR continued operations to secure the theatre, prevent ethnic violence and protect patrimonial sites. KFOR remained vigilant to deter possible threats directed against international organizations and military bases. It continued to improve its crowd and riot control capabilities so as to be better prepared to counter a resurgence of violence.

Regional cooperation

Regional cooperation, in particular between Kosovo and The former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia (FYROM) and Albania, continued to develop. On 11 June, UNMIK, acting for the Provisional Institutions, signed the Memorandum of Understanding on the Development of the South-East Europe Core Regional Transport Network, aimed at enhancing cooperation on transport issues among the signatories and providing the precondition for the development of road and railway links, waterways, ports and airport networks in the region. On 28 September, UNMIK and Albania signed an agreement to eliminate double taxation for businesses and persons from Albania operating in Kosovo, and vice versa. Slovenia and Romania opened liaison offices in Pristina and FYROM was due to open an office of its Chamber of Commerce. The Provisional Institutions, working in coordination with UNMIK, participated in regular multilateral forums, such as meetings of the Stability Pact and the EU Western Balkans Forum.

The European Commission Stabilization and Association Process Tracking Mechanism continued to guide Kosovo towards EU-compatible reforms. The fifth meeting of the Mechanism (Brussels, 17 September) between the European Commission, the Provisional Institutions and UNMIK discussed the economy and environment issues, and the recently adopted European Partnership with Serbia and Montenegro, including Kosovo, which identified priorities for moving closer to the EU. The recently established Office for European Integration Processes in the Prime Minister's Office would increase the Provisional Institutions' capacities to respond effectively to the European Partnership.

Cooperation with ICTY

On 4 May [S/2004/353] (see p. 1283), the President of the International Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia brought to the attention of the Security Council the report of the ICTY Prosecutor, indicating that Serbia and Montenegro had failed to comply with its obligations under the Statute of the Tribunal and its Rules of Procedure and Evidence, in particular to execute arrest warrants issued by the Tribunal and to respond to requests by the Registrar to explain those failures. Its cooperation with the Tribunal, which had declined since December 2003, was currently non-existent.

Former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia

Relations with Greece

On 4 November, the United States announced its official recognition of the "Republic of Macedonia" as the name of the country recognized by the United Nations as "The former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia" (FYROM). Its decision, according to United States State Department spokesman Richard Boucher, was without prejudice to the ongoing negotiations between the two countries under the auspices of the United Nations over the name of the country. On the same date, the EU reiterated its support for the name as recognized by the United Nations.

In accordance with the 1995 Interim Accord on the normalization of relations between FYROM and Greece [YUN 1995, p. 599], representatives of both countries met on 6 December under the auspices of the Secretary-General. The countries exchanged views in the context of article 5 of the Accord, which provided for the continuation of negotiations with a view to reaching agreement on their differences, as described in Security Council resolutions 817(1993) [YUN 1993, p. 208] and 845(1993) [ibid., p. 209], concerning the name of the State of FYROM. They decided to meet again on 12 January 2005.

Statement by Secretary-General. The Secretary-General, in a 26 February press statement [SG/SM/9172], said that he had learned with sadness of the death of the FYROM President, Boris Trajkovski, and members of his delegation in a plane crash that day.

Georgia

In 2004, the Georgian/Abkhaz peace process came perilously close to a standstill. While the parties came together during the course of the year on some issues, efforts to advance a dialogue based on the 2001 paper known as Basic Principles for the Distribution of Competences between Tbilisi (Georgia's Government) and Sukhumi (the Abkhaz leadership) [YUN 2001, p. 386], which was intended to serve as a framework for substantive negotiations over the status of Abkhazia as a sovereign entity within the State of Georgia, encountered serious challenges.

Renewed violence in the zone of conflict in March led to a chain of events that brought all contacts between the sides to a halt, as the Abkhaz side refused to participate in the weekly quadripartite meetings and the joint fact-finding groups were suspended. The Abkhaz side also maintained its refusal to discuss the Basic Principles and the transmittal letter, despite a more positive attitude expressed by the new Georgian administration. The political uncertainty in Sukhumi due to the unclear results of the de facto presidential elections in October seriously limited the possibility of continued dialogue. However, the high-level meeting of the Group of Friends of the Secretary-General (France, Germany, Russian Federation, United Kingdom, United States), which met on 13 and 14 December in Geneva, presented a timely opportunity to consider the state of the peace process and how to rekindle the search for a lasting and comprehensive solution. The Georgian side put forward a proposal for settling the conflict that included substantial autonomy for a reintegrated Abkhazia into the State of Georgia and power sharing at the national level.

UN Observer Mission in Georgia

The United Nations Observer Mission in Georgia (UNOMIG), established by Security Council resolution 858(1993) [YUN 1993, p. 509], continued to monitor compliance with the 1994 Agreement on a Ceasefire and Separation of Forces (Moscow Agreement) [YUN 1994, p. 583] and to fulfil other tasks as mandated by Council resolution 937(1994) [ibid., p. 584]. The Mission operated in close collaboration with the collective peacekeeping force of the Commonwealth of Independent States (CIS) that had been in the zone of conflict, at the request of the parties, since 1994 [ibid., p. 583]. The Council extended the Mission's mandate twice during the year, the first time until 31 July 2004 and the second until 31 January 2005.

UNOMIG's main headquarters was located in Sukhumi (Abkhazia, Georgia), with some administrative headquarters in Pitsunda, a liaison office in the Georgian capital of Tbilisi and team bases and a sector headquarters in each of the Gali and Zugdidi sectors. A team base in the Kodori Valley was manned by observers operating from Sukhumi. As at 31 December 2004, UNOMIG had a strength of 117 military observers and 11 civilian police officers.

Heidi Tagliavini (Switzerland) continued as the Secretary-General's Special Representative for Georgia and Head of UNOMIG. She was assisted by Major General Kazi Ashfaq Ahmed (Bangladesh), UNOMIG's Chief Military Observer, who was succeeded on 24 May by Major General Hussein Ghobashi (Egypt).

Political aspects of the conflict

Report of Secretary-General (January). The Secretary-General, in his 14 January report [S/2004/26] on the situation in Abkhazia, Georgia, and UNOMIG operations [YUN 2003, p. 438], welcomed the momentum gained by the peace process in 2003, the increased involvement of the Group of Friends and the renewed willingness of the sides to engage constructively in the key areas of economic cooperation, return of refugees and internally displaced persons, and political and security matters. Progress, however, remained slow. Moreover, the increasingly complex political situation on both sides of the ceasefire line and the events that led to the resignation of President Eduard Shevardnadze [YUN 2003, p. 438] had put the peace process temporarily on hold. The Secretary-General noted that two years after the finalization of the Basic Principles on the Distribution of Competences and the transmittal letter, the negotiations on the future political status of Abkhazia within the State of Georgia had not begun. He appealed to the Abkhaz side to abandon its uncompromising position on the paper and take advantage of the change of leadership in Tbilisi to negotiate a mutually acceptable and lasting settlement.

As UNOMIG's presence remained critical for the maintenance of stability in the conflict zone and for advancing the peace process towards a comprehensive political settlement, the Secretary-General recommended that its mandate be extended until 31 July 2004.

Other developments. Presidential elections were held in Georgia on 4 January, resulting in the election of Mikhail Saakashvili as President. The EU, in a 6 January statement [S/2004/43], welcomed the preliminary findings of the OSCE Office for Democratic Institutions and Human Rights International Election Observation Mission that the recent elections demonstrated notable progress over previous elections and brought Georgia closer to meeting international standards for democratic elections. The high rate of participation of the population and the clear mandate given to Mr. Saakashvili represented a positive signal for Georgia's future and opened new opportunities for the country.

SECURITY COUNCIL ACTION

The Security Council held private meetings on 23 January [meeting 4900] and 27 January [meeting 4904] to discuss UNOMIG and the situation in Georgia. On 30 January [meeting 4906], the Council unanimously adopted resolution 1524(2004). The draft [S/2004/77] was prepared in consultations among Council members.

The Security Council,

Recalling all its relevant resolutions, in particular resolution 1494(2003) of 30 July 2003,

Having considered the report of the Secretary-General of 14 January 2004,

Recalling the conclusions of the summits of the Organization for Security and Cooperation in Europe held in Lisbon in December 1996 and in Istanbul on 18 and 19 November 1999, regarding the situation in Abkhazia, Georgia,

Recalling also the relevant principles contained in the Convention on the Safety of United Nations and Associated Personnel of 9 December 1994,

Deploring the fact that the perpetrators of the shooting down of a helicopter of the United Nations Observer Mission in Georgia on 8 October 2001, which resulted in the death of nine people on board, have still not been identified,

Stressing that the continued lack of progress on key issues of a comprehensive settlement of the conflict in Abkhazia, Georgia, is unacceptable,

Welcoming, however, the positive momentum given to the United Nations-led peace process by regular high-level meetings of the Group of Friends of the Secretary-General in Geneva and the Georgian-Russian summit meeting held in Sochi, Russian Federation, on 6 and 7 March 2003,

Noting the holding of presidential elections in Georgia in January 2004, and encouraging the new Georgian leadership as well as the Abkhaz side to pursue a comprehensive, peaceful political settlement of the conflict in Abkhazia, Georgia,

Welcoming the important contributions made by the Mission and the collective peacekeeping force of the Commonwealth of Independent States in stabilizing the situation in the zone of conflict, and stressing its attachment to the close cooperation existing between them in the performance of their respective mandates,

1. Welcomes the report of the Secretary-General of 14 January 2004;

2. Reaffirms the commitment of all Member States to the sovereignty, independence and territorial integrity of Georgia within its internationally recognized borders, and the necessity to define the status of

Abkhazia within the State of Georgia in strict accordance with these principles;

3. Commends and strongly supports the sustained efforts of the Secretary-General and his Special Representative, with the assistance of the Russian Federation in its capacity as facilitator, as well as of the Group of Friends of the Secretary-General, and of the Organization for Security and Cooperation in Europe, to promote the stabilization of the situation and the achievement of a comprehensive political settlement, which must include a settlement of the political status of Abkhazia within the State of Georgia;

4. Stresses, in particular, its strong support for the document entitled "Basic Principles for the Distribution of Competences between Tbilisi and Sukhumi" and for its letter of transmittal, finalized by, and with the full support of, all members of the Group of Friends of the Secretary-General;

5. Deeply regrets the continued refusal of the Abkhaz side to agree to a discussion on the substance of that document, again strongly urges the Abkhaz side to receive the document and its letter of transmittal, urges both parties thereafter to give them full and open consideration and to engage in constructive negotiations on their substance, and urges those having influence with the parties to promote this outcome;

6. Regrets the lack of progress on the initiation of political status negotiations, and recalls once again that the purpose of those documents is to facilitate meaningful negotiations between the parties, under the leadership of the United Nations, on the status of Abkhazia within the State of Georgia, and is not an attempt to impose or dictate any specific solution to the parties;

7. Underlines further the fact that the process of negotiation leading to a lasting political settlement acceptable to both sides will require concessions from both sides;

8. Welcomes the convening of regular meetings of senior representatives of the Group of Friends of the Secretary-General in Geneva and the intention expressed by the parties to accept the invitation to participate in the forthcoming meeting, and calls upon them to participate again in a positive spirit;

9. Urges the parties to participate in a more active, regular and structured manner in the task forces established in the first Geneva meeting (to address issues in the priority areas of economic cooperation, the return of internally displaced persons and refugees, and political and security matters) and complemented by the working groups established in Sochi, Russian Federation, and stresses that results-oriented activities in these three priority areas remain key to building common ground between the Georgian and Abkhaz sides and ultimately for concluding meaningful negotiations on a comprehensive political settlement based on the document entitled "Basic Principles for the Distribution of Competences between Tbilisi and Sukhumi" and its letter of transmittal;

10. Welcomes the joint Georgian-Abkhaz high-level visit to Bosnia and Herzegovina and to Kosovo, Serbia and Montenegro, led by the Special Representative of the Secretary-General, as agreed in the second Geneva meeting;

11. Calls upon the parties to spare no effort to overcome their ongoing mutual mistrust;

12. Calls again upon the parties to ensure the necessary revitalization of the peace process in all its major aspects, including their work in the Coordinating Council and its relevant mechanisms, to build on the results of the third meeting on confidence-building measures between the Georgian and Abkhaz sides, held in Yalta, Ukraine, on 15 and 16 March 2001, to implement the proposals agreed on that occasion in a purposeful and cooperative manner, and to consider holding a fourth meeting on confidence-building measures;

13. Reminds all concerned to refrain from any action that might impede the peace process;

14. Stresses the urgent need for progress on the question of the refugees and internally displaced persons, calls upon both sides to display a genuine commitment to make returns the focus of special attention and to undertake this task in close coordination with the United Nations Observer Mission in Georgia and in consultation with the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees and the Group of Friends of the Secretary-General, and recalls the understanding reached at the Sochi summit that the re-opening of the Sochi-Tbilisi railway would be undertaken in parallel with the return of refugees and displaced persons, starting in the Gali district;

15. Reaffirms the unacceptability of the demographic changes resulting from the conflict, and reaffirms also the inalienable right of all refugees and internally displaced persons affected by the conflict to return to their homes in secure and dignified conditions, in accordance with international law and as set out in the Quadripartite Agreement on the Voluntary Return of Refugees and Displaced Persons of 4 April 1994 and the Yalta Declaration;

16. Recalls that the Abkhaz side bears a particular responsibility to protect the returnees and to facilitate the return of the remaining displaced population;

17. Welcomes the mission led by the United Nations Development Programme to the Gali region from 30 November to 17 December 2003 to assess the feasibility of a sustainable recovery process for the local population and potential returnees and to identify further actions to improve the overall security conditions and ensure sustainable return, and looks forward to the publication of the resulting report;

18. Welcomes also the positive consideration given by the parties to the recommendations of the joint assessment mission to the Gali district, urges them once again to implement those recommendations, and in particular calls upon the Abkhaz side to agree to the opening as soon as possible of the Gali branch of the human rights office in Sukhumi and to provide security conditions for its unhindered functioning;

19. Welcomes further the start of the deployment of a civilian police component as part of the Mission, as endorsed in resolution 1494(2003) and agreed by the parties, looks forward to an early confirmation by the Abkhaz side that the deployment in the Gali district of the remaining police officers can proceed, and calls upon the parties to cooperate and actively support the police component;

20. Calls in particular upon the Abkhaz side to improve law enforcement involving the local population and to address the lack of instruction in their mother tongue for the ethnic Georgian population;

21. Calls upon both parties further to publicly dissociate themselves from any militant rhetoric and demonstrations of support for military options or for the activities of illegal armed groups, notes the efforts undertaken by the Georgian side to put an end to the activities of illegal armed groups, and encourages the parties, in particular the Georgian side, to maintain their efforts;

22. Condemns any violations of the provisions of the Agreement on a Ceasefire and Separation of Forces signed in Moscow on 14 May 1994;

23. Welcomes the continuing relative calm in the Kodori Valley and the intention reaffirmed by the parties to resolve the situation peacefully, recalls its strong support for the protocol signed by the two sides on 2 April 2002 regarding the situation in the valley, and calls upon the sides to continue to fully implement the protocol;

24. Deplores the deterioration in the security environment in the Gali sector, including repeated killings and abductions;

25. Welcomes the holding of a quadripartite meeting with high-level representation by the parties on 19 January 2004 and their signing of a protocol on security issues, and urges the parties to abide by the provisions of that protocol and the protocol signed by them on 8 October 2003 and to cooperate more closely with each other to improve security in the Gali sector;

26. Calls upon the Georgian side to continue to improve security for joint patrols of the Mission and the collective peacekeeping force of the Commonwealth of Independent States in the Kodori Valley to enable them to resume independent and regular monitoring of the situation when road conditions permit;

27. Underlines the fact that it is the primary responsibility of both sides to provide appropriate security and to ensure the freedom of movement of the Mission, the collective peacekeeping force and other international personnel, strongly condemns the repeated abductions of personnel of those missions, deeply deplores the fact that none of the perpetrators have ever been identified or brought to justice, and reiterates that it is the responsibility of the parties to end this impunity;

28. Urges the parties, once again, to take all necessary steps to identify those responsible for the shooting down of a Mission helicopter on 8 October 2001, to bring them to justice, and to inform the Special Representative of the steps taken;

29. Decides to extend the mandate of the Mission for a new period terminating on 31 July 2004, subject to a review, as appropriate, of its mandate by the Council in the event of changes in the mandate of the collective peacekeeping force;

30. Requests the Secretary-General to continue to keep the Council regularly informed and to report three months from the date of the adoption of the present resolution on the situation in Abkhazia, Georgia;

31. Decides to remain actively seized of the matter.

Statement by President of Georgia. The Security Council, at a meeting on 26 February [meeting 4916] on the situation in Georgia, heard a statement by Georgian President Mikhail Saakashvili. He affirmed, on behalf of the new Government, commitment to the peaceful resolution of the conflict in Abkhazia, Georgia, and added that the Government was encouraged by certain positive developments in the peace process. Referring to the meetings in Geneva of the Group of Friends, the President said that his Government attached great importance to the outcome of the Geneva process. The task forces established in that framework might form a powerful mechanism for the entire peace process. He expected the Geneva process to be results-oriented in all three designated directions (economic cooperation, return of refugees and internally displaced persons, and security matters). Specifically, the deployment of a civilian police unit in the Gali region would be helpful for the return of the internally displaced persons and refugees.

President Saakashvili said that, at his meeting two weeks earlier with Russian President Vladimir Putin, he felt there was a move towards positive relations, as they were able to define a common set of interests. In concrete terms, that would mean Russia ending the policy of granting citizenship to the population of the conflict regions of Abkhazia and the former South Ossetia, and ending the illegal acquisition of property on Abkhazian soil. He appealed to all Council members to work to reverse those policies.

In presenting his vision for the peace process, Mr. Saakashvili maintained that the definition of Abkhazia's political status, as outlined in the Basic Principles for the Distribution of Competences between Tbilisi and Sukhumi [YUN 2001, p. 386], provided the key to resolving the conflict. He called on the Abkhaz people to seize the opportunity presented as a result of the recent changes in Georgia to jointly build a common future. A solution should be based on guarantees of security, human rights and the promise of living in a free and open society. Mr. Saakashvili declared his readiness to guarantee the highest possible degree of autonomy to Abkhazia within the Georgian State and resources for the development of Abkhazia's economy. He was prepared to consider different kinds of relationships, such as broad autonomy in a united Georgian State, and elements of a federal relationship that provided for the territorial integrity of Georgia and human rights guarantees.

The new leadership in Tbilisi was offering a new set of principles. It had demonstrated its political will by cracking down on those forces that believed that solutions to conflict were based on violence or on using illegitimate means against people, and he called on the de facto leadership in Abkhazia to take similar steps and to recognize that their current path was counter-productive.

He suggested that the process initiated in Sochi by President Putin (when the two sides discussed railroad links, returns and energy projects) [YUN 2003, p. 433], a part of the Geneva process, be advanced. He also called on the Council to establish a firm policy in support of peace and reconciliation, making it clear that those who were not on the side of peace would be held accountable, that there would be sanctions, and that the International Criminal Court (see p. 1295) awaited those who perpetrated criminal acts.

Meeting of Group of Friends (February). The third meeting of senior representatives of the Group of Friends (Geneva, 17-18 February) considered political and security matters, return of refugees and internally displaced persons, and economic cooperation. The Special Representative, the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees and representatives of the United Nations Development Programme (UNDP) participated in the meeting. Representatives of both sides were also invited to participate. While the Georgian side accepted the invitation, the Abkhaz side declined, reiterating in a letter from the de facto President, Vladislav Ardzinba, its refusal to accept the Basic Principles on the Distribution of Competences between Tbilisi and Sukhumi and the transmittal letter and requesting a resumption of the Coordinating Council meetings, suspended since 2001 [YUN 2001, p. 378].

The Group of Friends welcomed the efforts of the Special Representative to bring the sides together on the issue of security guarantees and supported her proposal to submit to the two sides a letter of intent in support of returns. The Group also reaffirmed the central role of the Geneva process in achieving a political settlement.

Report of Secretary-General (April). In a 20 April report [S/2004/315] on the situation in Abkhazia, Georgia, the Secretary-General stated that his Special Representative maintained an active dialogue with the two sides in the Georgian/Abkhaz conflict and with the Group of Friends, both in Tbilisi and in their respective capitals. In follow-up to the 2003 meeting on security guarantees [YUN 2003, p. 434], the Special Representative convened a second meeting of the sides (Tbilisi, 10 February), with the participation of the Group of Friends. In the light of proposals presented by both Georgian and Abkhaz representatives, she offered to organize informal consultations between them and international experts in April in Geneva in preparation for the third meeting scheduled for Sukhumi in May. She had also organized a meeting on 19 January on implementation of the 2003 Gali protocol [ibid., p. 440].

Concerning the return of refugees, the Special Representative submitted to both sides a draft letter of intent, which would be a political signal of commitment to returns and provide the basis for increased involvement by UN bodies in the process, in particular UNHCR. UNOMIG finalized a draft paper on the return process and forwarded it to the participants in the Sochi working group on the return of internally displaced persons and refugees, created in 2003 [YUN 2003, p. 433].

UNOMIG's efforts to advance the peace process were affected by the complex political situation on both sides of the ceasefire line. In Tbilisi, State structures had begun to stabilize since the election of President Saakashvili on 4 January, the formation of a Government the following month and the election of a new parliament on 28 March. The Secretary-General, in meetings with Mr. Saakashvili (Davos, France, January; New York, 26 February), assured him of the UN commitment to a lasting settlement with respect for Georgia's sovereignty and territorial integrity, and encouraged him to maintain the dialogue with the Abkhaz side. Presidents Putin and Saakashvili, at their first meeting (Moscow, 10-11 February), agreed to revitalize the implementation of the 2003 Sochi agreement. In Sukhumi, political leaders were preparing for elections for the de facto presidency, scheduled for the latter part of the year, creating an atmosphere which made it difficult to advance the peace process. Relations between Tbilisi and Sukhumi were also strained by the seizure by the Georgian side of six foreign fishing vessels operating in waters off the Abkhaz coast. The Abkhaz side threatened to use force to prevent further incursions into its "sovereign territory", while the Georgian side maintained that the foreign vessels were operating illegally in Georgian territorial waters.

Security Council consideration. During the Security Council's 29 April meeting [meeting 4958] to consider the Secretary-General's April report (see above), Zurab Zhvania, Prime Minister of Georgia, reiterated Georgia's commitment to a negotiated, peaceful resolution of the conflict. Georgia regretted that the investigation into the 2001 shooting down of a UNOMIG helicopter [YUN 2001, p. 383] was hampered by the refusal of the Abkhaz leadership to allow the investigation to be carried out in territory under its control. While Georgia supported the introduction of the civilian police component to the Gali region, the Abkhaz authorities obstructed its deployment. Georgia was participating in the Geneva process, while the Abkhaz side refused to participate in the third meeting on refugees and displaced persons. Georgia believed that it was time for the Council to pay more attention to the position of the separatists and to draw the appropriate conclusions.

Report of Secretary-General (July). In his 14 July report on Abkhazia, Georgia [S/2004/570], the Secretary-General reported that the Special Representative maintained dialogue with both sides at the highest level, and with representatives of the Group of Friends. The Secretary-General discussed the situation in Georgia with Prime Minister Zhvania (New York, 29 April), who briefed him on developments in Georgia and the Government's efforts to combat crime, including in the zone of conflict.

At the third meeting on security guarantees between the Georgian and Abkhaz sides (Sukhumi, 20 May), with the participation of representatives of the Group of Friends, OSCE and the CIS collective peacekeeping force, discussions continued on the issue of guarantees, including their international dimension, and on mechanisms for their implementation in the context of the 2001 Yalta Declaration on confidence-building measures [YUN 2001, p. 377], as well as on the proposals submitted at the second meeting in February (see p. 423). Also discussed was the implementation of existing agreements in relation to the Kodori Valley [YUN 2002, pp. 385 & 390], in particular the importance of resuming regular patrolling. The sides welcomed the Special Representative's proposal for a special UN mission to the Kodori Valley to ascertain the facts and undertake an assessment of the situation in the event of a crisis. They agreed to appoint contact persons for consultations and preparatory work before the next meeting, scheduled for 15 September.

The Russian Federation convened a further meeting of the Sochi working group on the return of refugees and internally displaced persons (Moscow, 26-27 April), with the participation of the Abkhaz side for the first time, the Special Representative, UNHCR officials and the CIS peacekeeping force, to discuss the draft UNOMIG/UNHCR letter of intent, endorsed by the Group of Friends in February (see p. 423). The Abkhaz side questioned the references in the letter to relevant Council resolutions and the role of the Group of Friends and presented its own draft. No agreement was reached, but the sides agreed to work on the text at the next meeting in July. Both sides confirmed their support for UNHCR's direct involvement in the return process, with the Abkhaz side emphasizing the UNHCR role in the registration of returnees. UNHCR, while expressing readiness to support the return process, stressed that prerequisites for its engagement were a formal confirmation of the intent of the two sides and an agreement on conditions to allow voluntary returns in safety and dignity.

Meanwhile, the crisis in the adjacent Georgian Republic of Ajaria came to an end with the resignation of the Ajarian leader, facilitated by the engagement of the Russian Federation and new elections. In the separatist region of South Ossetia, high-level tensions continued, following Georgia's establishment, in late May, of anti-smuggling checkpoints and the deployment of special forces to protect them. South Ossetian forces were put on high alert and the movement of troops and arms was reported in the area. The Abkhaz side followed developments in Ajaria and in South Ossetia with concern and focused on statements by some Georgian politicians that Sukhumi would be next in their reintegration effort, which led to an enhanced Abkhaz security presence in the Gali district in the lead-up to Georgia's National Day, 26 May. In the light of the escalating tensions, the Special Representative and UNOMIG took measures to defuse the situation, including additional patrols and encouragement for both sides to refrain from actions and rhetoric that could cause the situation to deteriorate. The Special Representative maintained regular contact with both sides and facilitated direct contacts between them, which were instrumental in assuring the Abkhaz side that it was not Tbilisi's intention to destabilize the situation and in persuading the Georgian side from taking reciprocal additional security measures.

In his address to the nation on 26 May, President Saakashvili reiterated that one of the core aims of his Government was reunification with Abkhazia and South Ossetia. Appealing to Abkhaz and Ossetians to start talks, he stressed that Tbilisi was prepared to consider any State model that took into account the interests of the population in the regions and ensured their future development. He confirmed Georgia's policy of reintegration exclusively through dialogue and peaceful means and offered to the Abkhaz side the highest possible federal status, with international guarantees. The Abkhaz side, however, rejected Mr. Saakashvili's overture, stating that, while it was ready to discuss the non-resumption of hostilities and the restoration of trust and normal relations, its status was not open for discussion. The Secretary-General expressed his hope that with time, the leadership in Sukhumi would reconsider its stance and respond constructively to the offer of the new Georgian leadership for direct dialogue.

Communications. The EU, in a 17 March statement [S/2004/245] concerning the Georgian Autonomous Republic of Ajaria, reaffirmed its attachment to the sovereignty and territorial integrity of Georgia and called on all sides to refrain from any further escalation which could result in violence. It urged the central Government in Tbilisi and the authorities in the Ajaria capital of Batumi to re-establish dialogue at the highest level with a view to finding a peaceful solution acceptable to all and in the interest of Georgia.

Georgia, in a 26 July letter [S/2004/595] to the Security Council, affirmed its commitment to a peaceful solution and its hope that the new leader of the secessionists would take more constructive positions. It recalled the idea considered previously of a Council visit to Abkhazia, stating that the time might be right for such a visit. Georgia mentioned the issues that it found contrary to a peaceful solution: the enforcement of the visa-free regime on the Abkhaz and former South Ossetian segments of the Georgia-Russian border; the granting of Russian citizenship to the population of the separatist regions; the illegal acquisition of land and property in Abkhazia, Georgia; the training of Abkhaz separatists in Russian Federation military schools; the unresolved issue of the military base in Gudauta; and the entering into Georgian territory of hundreds of armed mercenaries from Russia to conduct so-called "joint manoeuvres". The only way out of the situation was through decisive actions of a unified and resolute Security Council.

SECURITY COUNCIL ACTION (July)

On 29 July [meeting 5013], the Security Council unanimously adopted resolution 1554(2004). The draft [S/2004/600] was prepared in consultations among Council members.

The Security Council,

Recalling all its relevant resolutions, in particular resolution 1524(2004) of 30 January 2004,

Welcoming the report of the Secretary-General of 14 July 2004,

Recalling the conclusions of the summits of the Organization for Security and Cooperation in Europe held in Lisbon in December 1996 and in Istanbul on 18 and 19 November 1999, regarding the situation in Abkhazia, Georgia,

Recalling also the relevant principles contained in the Convention on the Safety of United Nations and Associated Personnel of 9 December 1994,

Deploing the fact that the perpetrators of the shooting down of a helicopter of the United Nations Observer Mission in Georgia on 8 October 2001, which resulted in the death of nine people on board, have still not been identified,

Stressing that the continued lack of progress on key issues of a comprehensive settlement of the conflict in Abkhazia, Georgia, is unacceptable,

Welcoming, however, the positive momentum given to the United Nations-led peace process by regular high-level meetings of the Group of Friends of the Secretary-General in Geneva and the Georgian-Russian summit meetings,

Welcoming the important contributions made by the Mission and the collective peacekeeping force of the Commonwealth of Independent States in stabilizing the situation in the zone of conflict, and stressing its attachment to the close cooperation existing between them in the performance of their respective mandates,

1. Reaffirms the commitment of all Member States to the sovereignty, independence and territorial integrity of Georgia within its internationally recognized borders, and the necessity to define the status of Abkhazia within the State of Georgia in strict accordance with these principles;

2. Commends and strongly supports the sustained efforts of the Secretary-General and his Special Representative, with the assistance of the Russian Federation in its capacity as facilitator, as well as of the Group of Friends of the Secretary-General, and of the Organization for Security and Cooperation in Europe to promote the stabilization of the situation and the achievement of a comprehensive political settlement, which must include a settlement of the political status of Abkhazia within the State of Georgia;

3. Reiterates its strong support for the document entitled "Basic Principles for the Distribution of Competences between Tbilisi and Sukhumi" and for its letter of transmittal, finalized by, and with the full support of, all members of the Group of Friends of the Secretary-General;

4. Deeply regrets the continued refusal of the Abkhaz side to agree to a discussion on the substance of that document, again strongly urges the Abkhaz side to receive the document and its letter of transmittal, urges both parties thereafter to give them full and open consideration and to engage in constructive negotiations on their substance, and urges those having influence with the parties to promote this outcome;

5. Regrets the lack of progress on the initiation of political status negotiations, and recalls once again that the purpose of those documents is to facilitate meaningful negotiations between the parties, under the leadership of the United Nations, on the status of Abkhazia within the State of Georgia, and is not an attempt to impose or dictate any specific solution to the parties;

6. Calls upon the parties to spare no effort to overcome their ongoing mutual mistrust, and underlines the fact that the process of negotiation leading to a lasting political settlement acceptable to both sides will require concessions from both sides;

7. Welcomes the commitment by the Georgian side to a peaceful resolution of the conflict, and calls upon both parties further to publicly dissociate themselves from all militant rhetoric and demonstrations of support for military options;

8. Reminds all concerned to refrain from any action that might impede the peace process;

9. Welcomes the convening of regular meetings of senior representatives of the Group of Friends of the Secretary-General and the United Nations in Geneva, and, while regretting that the Abkhaz side did not participate in the last meeting, looks forward to the constructive participation of the parties in the forthcoming meetings;

10. Urges the parties to participate in a more active, regular and structured manner in the task forces established in the first Geneva meeting (to address issues in the priority areas of economic cooperation, the return of internally displaced persons and refugees, and political and security matters) and complemented by the working groups established in Sochi, Russian Federation, in March 2003, and reiterates that results-oriented activities in these three priority areas remain key to building common ground between the Georgian and Abkhaz sides and ultimately for concluding meaningful negotiations on a comprehensive political settlement based on the document entitled "Basic Principles for the Distribution of Competences between Tbilisi and Sukhumi" and its letter of transmittal;

11. Encourages the sides in that respect to continue their discussion on security guarantees, and welcomes the meeting held in Sukhumi on 20 May 2004 on this issue;

12. Calls again upon the parties to take concrete steps to revitalize the peace process in all its major aspects, including their work in the Coordinating Council and its relevant mechanisms, to build on the results of the third meeting on confidence-building measures between the Georgian and Abkhaz sides, held in Yalta, Ukraine, on 15 and 16 March 2001 and to implement the proposals agreed on that occasion in a purposeful and cooperative manner, with a view to holding a fourth meeting on confidence-building measures;

13. Stresses the urgent need for progress on the question of the refugees and internally displaced persons, calls upon both sides to display a genuine commitment to make returns the focus of special attention and to undertake this task in close coordination with the Observer Mission in Georgia and in consultation with the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees and the Group of Friends of the Secretary-General;

14. Calls for the rapid finalization and signature of the letter of intent on returns proposed by the Special Representative of the Secretary-General, and welcomes the recent meetings, with the participation of the Special Representative and the Office of the High Commissioner, of the Sochi working group on refugees and internally displaced persons;

15. Reaffirms the unacceptability of the demographic changes resulting from the conflict, and reaffirms also the inalienable right of all refugees and internally displaced persons affected by the conflict to return to their homes in secure and dignified conditions, in accordance with international law and as set out in the Quadripartite Agreement on the Voluntary Return of Refugees and Displaced Persons of 4 April 1994 and the Yalta Declaration;

16. Recalls that the Abkhaz side bears a particular responsibility to protect the returnees and to facilitate the return of the remaining displaced population;

17. Welcomes the report of the mission led by the United Nations Development Programme to the Gali region from 30 November to 17 December 2003 to assess the feasibility of a sustainable recovery process for the local population and potential returnees and to identify further actions to improve the overall security conditions and ensure sustainable return, and looks forward to further consultations by the United Nations Development Programme and the Mission with the parties, aimed at implementing its recommendations;

18. Urges the parties once again to implement the recommendations of the joint assessment mission of November 2000 to the Gali sector, regrets that there has been no progress to that effect despite the positive consideration by the parties given to those recommendations in the first Geneva meeting, and calls again upon the Abkhaz side to agree to the opening as soon as possible of the Gali branch of the human rights office in Sukhumi and to provide security conditions for its unhindered functioning;

19. Expresses concern that despite the start of the deployment of a civilian police component as part of the Mission, as endorsed in resolution 1494(2003) of 30 July 2003 and agreed upon by the parties, the deployment of the remaining officers in the Gali sector is still outstanding, and calls upon the Abkhaz side to allow for a swift deployment of the police component in that region;

20. Calls in particular upon the Abkhaz side to improve law enforcement involving the local population and to address the lack of instruction in their mother tongue for the ethnic Georgian population;

21. Welcomes the measures taken by the Georgian side to put an end to the activities of illegal armed groups, and encourages the maintenance of those efforts;

22. Condemns any violations of the provisions of the Agreement on a Ceasefire and Separation of Forces signed in Moscow on 14 May 1994;

23. Welcomes the continuing relative calm in the Kodori Valley, and condemns the killings and abductions of civilians as well as the attack on a checkpoint of the collective peacekeeping force of the Commonwealth of Independent States in the Gali sector;

24. Urges the parties to abide by the provisions of the protocols on security issues in the Gali sector, signed on 8 October 2003 and 19 January 2004, to continue their regular meetings and to cooperate more closely with each other to improve security in the sector;

25. Calls upon the Georgian side to provide comprehensive security guarantees to allow for independent and regular monitoring of the situation in the upper Kodori Valley by joint patrols of the Mission and the collective peacekeeping force;

26. Underlines the fact that it is the primary responsibility of both sides to provide appropriate security and to ensure the freedom of movement of the Mission, the collective peacekeeping force and other international personnel, strongly condemns in that respect the repeated abductions of personnel of those missions in the past, deeply deplores the fact that none of the perpetrators have ever been identified or brought to justice, and reiterates again that it is the responsibility of the parties to end this impunity;

27. Urges the parties, once again, to take all necessary steps to identify those responsible for the shooting down of a Mission helicopter on 8 October 2001, to bring them to justice, and to inform the Special Representative of the steps taken;

28. Decides to extend the mandate of the Mission for a new period terminating on 31 January 2005, subject to a review as appropriate of its mandate by the Council in the event of changes in the mandate of the collective peacekeeping force;

29. Requests the Secretary-General to continue to keep the Council regularly informed and to report three months from the date of the adoption of the present resolution on the situation in Abkhazia, Georgia;

30. Decides to remain actively seized of the matter.

Report of Secretary-General (October). In his 18 October report [S/2004/822] on the situation in Abkhazia, Georgia, the Secretary-General said that, at a meeting of the Georgian-Russian Sochi working group on the return of refugees and internally displaced persons convened by the Russian Federation on 20 July, with the participation of the Special Representative, UNHCR and the Commander of the CIS peacekeeping force, the Georgian and Abkhaz sides again discussed the draft letter of intent prepared by UNOMIG and UNHCR but were still unable to agree on the text and again undertook to work on agreeable formulations before the next meeting in November. The sides also discussed the UNHCR draft concept paper on the registration of returnees in the Gali district and agreed to exchange more substantial comments prior to the next meeting.

The political situation deteriorated on 30 July when a Georgian coast guard vessel fired on a foreign cargo ship in coastal waters near Sukhumi, in what Georgia regarded as a law enforcement action to assert control over its internationally recognized territorial waters in the Black Sea, including international shipping to and from ports in Abkhazia. The following day, the Abkhaz authorities suspended their participation in the negotiation process and called for an investigation into and a legal assessment of the incident by the United Nations, the CIS peacekeeping force and the international community as a precondition for returning to the negotiating table. The Abkhaz side also suspended its participation in the ceasefire monitoring and security-related mechanisms, including the weekly quadripartite meetings and the joint fact-finding group.

To defuse the situation, the Special Representative met with both sides and issued a statement, urging them to resolve such incidents through negotiations and to refrain from action that could negatively affect the peace process. She reiterated her offer to convene a meeting on maritime issues. Her efforts were supported by the Group of Friends, which held high-level meetings with the sides in Tbilisi and Sukhumi, and she urged them to adhere to the 1994 Moscow Agreement [YUN 1994, p. 583], resume unconditionally the negotiations and address maritime issues at the planned meeting on security guarantees. While the Georgian side responded positively, the Abkhaz side maintained its position. Under those circumstances, the meeting on security guarantees planned for 15 September had to be postponed. In a parallel effort, the Russian Federation offered to convene a meeting on maritime issues on 25 September in Sochi, with the participation of the sides and UNOMIG. That meeting was postponed also at the request of the Abkhaz side.

Tensions also emerged in the relations between Georgia and the Russian Federation. Georgia officially protested against tourist visits to Abkhazia, Georgia, and the resumption on 10 September, after a 12-year interruption, of the Sukhumi-Sochi-Moscow passenger rail line as violations of Georgia's sovereignty, international law and bilateral agreements. Georgia also protested against the continued visits to Abkhazia by high-profile Russian politicians. President Putin and President Saakashvili, during the summit of CIS heads of State (Astana, Kazakhstan, 16 September), discussed bilateral relations between their two countries, including conflict resolution issues. In a meeting with President Saakashvili in New York on 21 September to discuss the situation in Georgia, the Secretary-General noted the challenges that Georgia and the region had faced during the preceding months and stressed his commitment to work with the parties to the Georgian-Abkhaz conflict. Mr. Saakashvili, for his part, underlined the importance of the continuing involvement of the United Nations and suggested elements for a solution to Georgia's internal conflicts, such as confidence-building measures, demilitarization of the conflict zone and the widest possible autonomy for Abkhazia with international guarantees. The Secretary-General also reported that Mr. Saakashvili had written to him on 16 August, expressing his concern over the situation in South Ossetia and reiterating Georgia's rejection of the use of force for conflict resolution.

In Sukhumi, de facto presidential elections were held on 3 October. The United Nations maintained the position set out in Security Council resolution 1255(1999) [YUN 1999, p. 380], affirming that the holding of self-styled elections in Abkhazia, Georgia, were unacceptable and illegitimate in the absence of the majority of the population and the determination of the political status of the territory. The Georgian side warned against legitimization of the elections and regretted outside support for one of the candidates.

In other developments, following the acceptance by both sides of the recommendations of the UNDP-led feasibility study for the Gali, Ochamchira and Tqvarcheli districts, as a result of a 2003 mission to the region [YUN 2003, p. 440], UNDP, in collaboration with UNOMIG, initiated a rehabilitation programme focusing on agriculture, health, water and sanitation, and capacity-building for non-governmental organizations (NGOs). UNOMIG and UNDP were finalizing an agreement with the EU, which would contribute to the UNDP programme and to the UNOMIG trust fund for quick-impact rehabilitation projects in the zone of conflict.

Statement by President of Georgia. Speaking during the general debate of the General Assembly on 21 September [A/59/PV.4], Georgian President Saakashvili proposed a stage-by-stage settlement plan to resolve conflicts in Georgia. The first step was the initiation of confidence-building measures through joint economic projects, restoring the right of internally displaced persons to return home and ensuring human rights. Step two would focus on demilitarization and transforming the current peacekeeping operation into an international operation to protect the people of those regions from militias, irregulars and violent gangs. The third stage envisioned guarantees that would lead to the establishment of the broadest form of autonomy—one that protected culture and language and guaranteed self-governance, fiscal control and meaningful representation and power-sharing at the national government level.

Communication. Georgia, in a 26 October letter to the Security Council [S/2004/861], said that the UN-led peace process in the region had reached a critical juncture. The holding of the illegitimate and self-styled presidential elections by the Abkhaz separatists on 3 October was another attempt to imbue legality to the demographic changes resulting from the conflict, in disregard of the international community's position. The Russian Federation, which praised the elections on 4 October as "calm and democratic", appeared to be the only dissenter to that position. Georgia was committed to resuming negotiations for settling the conflict with any leader who succeeded the de facto Abkhazia president Ardzinba. However, progress would require political will on the Abkhaz side for constructive engagement in the negotiations, in particular on the Basic Principles for the Distribution of Competences between Tbilisi and Sukhumi, allowing the establishment of a branch of the UN Human Rights Office in Gali, addressing the problem of teaching Georgian children in Abkhazia in their native language, and agreeing to the deployment of UNOMIG civilian police in the Gali district. The Security Council needed to take the lead in reinvigorating the peace process, and should consider a field visit to Georgia, particularly to Sukhumi, to learn first-hand the reality on the ground and to try to resolve the stalemate in the conflict resolution process.

Press statement. The Security Council President issued a press statement on 27 October [SC/8228] confirming that the members, having heard a briefing by the Special Representative, shared the concern of the Secretary-General on the absence of tangible progress in the Georgian/Abkhaz peace process. They underlined the need for renewed efforts to achieve a lasting political solution to the conflict with the support of the United Nations and the assistance of the Russian Federation in its capacity as facilitator, as well as the Group of Friends of the Secretary-General.

Further report of Secretary-General. In a report covering developments in Georgia during late 2004 [S/2005/32], the Secretary-General stated that the Abkhaz side remained preoccupied with internal political developments related to the self-styled presidential elections of 3 October and their outcome. Following contradictory decisions by local authorities, tensions between followers of the two main contenders, Sergey Bagapsh and Raul Khadjimba, led to demonstrations and takeovers of public buildings. The situation was defused on 6 December when the two candidates reached an agreement to run on a single ticket in a new "election" scheduled for 12 January 2005. The agreement was signed by the two candidates, the highest Abkhaz leadership and two visiting Russian officials. The Georgian side protested visits by Russian officials to Sukhumi without prior notification to Tbilisi and Russian involvement in political developments there. The Russian Federation said its involvement was aimed at preventing possible armed conflict and creating conditions for solving the Georgian-Abkhaz dispute.

The Special Representative stayed in close contact with the leadership of both sides, in particular in Sukhumi, emphasizing the need to avoid increasing instability within the conflict zone and to create conditions for resumption of negotiations. She encouraged the Abkhaz side to resume, as a first step, its participation in both the weekly quadripartite meetings and in the joint fact-finding group. While it initially maintained its position not to resume the peace process dialogue or to participate in related meetings until the internal situation in Sukhumi was resolved and the international community had assessed the 30 July maritime incident (see p. 427), the Abkhaz side, on 16 December, in a first encouraging sign, resumed participation in those bodies.

The Special Representative maintained high-level contacts with the Group of Friends in her efforts to re-establish the dialogue. In October she met with the Group of Friends in New York and in Washington, D.C., and later held discussions with representatives of the individual Group members. She also met with the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees during his visit to the region and the EU Special Representative for the South Caucasus, Heikki Talvitie.

Meeting of Group of Friends (December). High-level representatives of the Group of Friends convened in Geneva on 13 and 14 December under the chairmanship of the Under-Secretary-General for Peacekeeping Operations to review the status of the peace process. The Special Representative and the High Commissioner for Refugees participated in the discussion. The Friends agreed that negotiating efforts should intensify as soon as the new leadership was formed in Sukhumi. They tentatively planned a meeting for early 2005, for which the United Nations would prepare proposals on security guarantees and related confidence-building measures. In that context, they agreed to address maritime security as a priority. The Friends emphasized the importance of the return of refugees and internally displaced persons and acknowledged the key roles of UNOMIG and UNHCR in that regard. They agreed that work in the relevant Sochi working groups on the rehabilitation of the Sochi-Tbilisi railroad and the Inguri power plant should continue. Participants appreciated the humanitarian and rehabilitation work carried out by UNOMIG and UNDP in the Gali district and adjacent areas and welcomed the EU commitment to finance economic projects.

Situation on the ground

Kodori Valley

In the Kodori Valley, the upper part of which was controlled by Georgia and the lower part by the de facto Abkhaz authorities, a number of UNOMIG/CIS patrols were conducted between 12 May and 2 September. Reporting the situation to be calm, they confirmed that the road through the valley damaged by floods in 2003 was again passable up to the broken bridge between the Abkhaz-controlled lower part and the Georgian-controlled upper part. Although the Abkhaz side alleged that the Georgian side had introduced additional forces in the upper Kodori Valley in violation of the 1994 Moscow Agreement [YUN 1994, p. 583], a joint CIS/Georgian patrol on 15 June did not confirm those allegations.

UNOMIG/CIS patrols in the upper valley were suspended later in the year for security reasons and poor road conditions. Discussions were held with the parties on resuming patrolling, including security guarantees. Helicopter patrols remained suspended, while administrative flights continued on authorized flight routes over the Black Sea. The Georgian side reported several overflights by unauthorized aircraft. No patrolling was conducted in the lower valley, owing to the inability of the Abkhaz side to guarantee security.

Gali and Zugdidi sectors

The overall situation in the Gali sector was generally calm. However, tensions developed in the weeks leading up to Georgia's National Day, 26 May. Additional Abkhaz law enforcement personnel were deployed and temporary security posts were established in advance of the holiday. To defuse the situation, UNOMIG increased its patrolling and encouraged both sides to refrain from militant actions and rhetoric. After 26 May, the tension subsided and most of the additional law enforcement personnel were removed. Similar Abkhaz reinforcement took place on 21 and 22 June, when the Georgian authorities distributed fertilizers to residents of some villages in the Gali district.

The number of criminal incidents in the Gali sector decreased in the earlier part of the year, but as the year progressed, criminality and lawlessness increased significantly, particularly in the lower Gali area. The Abkhaz militia carried out several operations in the lower Gali district, detaining a number of people, most of whom were later released. Following one of those operations, the commander of an Abkhaz observation post was abducted on 6 April and released after three weeks. On 3 July, a CIS peacekeeping force checkpoint near the ceasefire line came under fire. In addition to their annual military exercises, the Abkhaz authorities reinforced security, especially along the ceasefire line, in the lead-up to the de facto presidential elections on 3 October.

Throughout the year, the overall situation in the Zugdidi sector was generally calm, with a relatively low level of criminal incidents reported. The Georgian side conducted a large-scale military exercise from 30 April to 3 May in the Kulevi training area, adjacent to the restricted-weapons zone. UNOMIG observed the exercise and reported no violations of the ceasefire agreement. The Georgian authorities continued to conduct anti-crime operations throughout the area. On 14 June, the Georgian police detained two trucks along the Abkhaz side of the ceasefire line during an anti-smuggling operation. On 7 May, CIS reported a Georgian police convoy crossing the ceasefire line on its way back from Svanetia, carrying some 500 small arms confiscated there. CIS reported an attack on 4 July on one of its checkpoints near the ceasefire line; no casualties occurred.

Humanitarian situation and human rights

United Nations agencies, international organizations and NGOs continued to provide food, medical aid and infrastructural assistance to the conflict zone in Abkhazia, Georgia; in addition to strictly humanitarian work, some development-related activity also took place. UNHCR completed the last portion of its school rehabilitation project, from which more than 14,000 children in 80 schools in Abkhazia benefited. The United Nations Children's Fund delivered health and education assistance, including the second consignment of immunization supplies, and worked with local partners in improving vaccine storage, delivery and monitoring. It began a training programme for health-care providers and primary caregivers in the Gali, Ochamchira, Sukhumi and Tqvarcheli districts. The United Nations Development Fund for Women supported women in leadership, people-to-people dialogue and youth and education activities, with a focus on conflict prevention and resolution, gender equality and peace-building. The United Nations Volunteers focused on developing the capacity of local NGOs and the promotion of small-scale income-generation projects. Various NGOs provided health care and medicine, laboratory equipment, food assistance, improvements to housing and education and demining services and mine-awareness training.

UNOMIG continued to implement quick-impact projects, designed to improve living conditions and to repair basic infrastructure in the zone of conflict. Since its inception in 2002, 66 projects had been approved, of which 43 were completed. UNOMIG and the EU were finalizing negotiations to secure some 4 million euros to fund a two-year programme of major rehabilitation in the health, education and electricity sectors.

The precarious human rights situation in Abkhazia showed no signs of improvement. The rule of law, the administration of justice and law enforcement mechanisms remained weak and did not provide adequate protection of the right to life and physical security, nor public order, particularly in the Gali district. Murders, abductions and robberies mostly went unpunished. Cases of prolonged detention, violation of the right to legal protection, extortion and use of violence by uniformed Abkhaz personnel were reported. The United Nations Human Rights Office in Sukhumi provided legal advisory services to the local population, monitored court trials and places of pre-trial detention, and promoted human rights awareness. The Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights (OHCHR) developed a human rights training programme for local law enforcement agencies. In partnership with organizations, OHCHR implemented projects for strengthening the non-governmental sector and building local capacity to promote human rights.

The human rights situation was influenced by preparations for the de facto presidential elections in October (see p. 429), as the Abkhaz authorities deferred action on human rights issues until after the "elections". In addition, they remained unable to create an environment conducive to the safe and dignified return of internally displaced persons.

Adoption by the de facto Abkhaz Parliament of the long-overdue "criminal code" and "criminal procedure code" was further delayed. Restrictions were placed on independent media, including the tightening of de facto governmental control of electronic and print media.

Financing

The General Assembly considered the UNOMIG financial performance report for 1 July 2002 to 30 June 2003 [A/58/639], the budget for the maintenance of UNOMIG for 1 July 2004 to 30 June 2005 [A/58/640], and ACABQ's related comments and recommendations [A/58/759/Add.1].

On 18 June [meeting 91], the Assembly adopted, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee [A/58/825], resolution 58/303 without vote [agenda item 142].

Financing of the United Nations Observer Mission in Georgia

The General Assembly,

Having considered the reports of the Secretary-General on the financing of the United Nations Observer Mission in Georgia and the related reports of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions,

Recalling Security Council resolution 854(1993) of 6 August 1993, by which the Council approved the deployment of an advance team of up to ten United Nations military observers for a period of three months and the incorporation of the advance team into a United Nations observer mission if such a mission was formally established by the Council,

Recalling also Security Council resolution 858(1993) of 24 August 1993, by which the Council established the United Nations Observer Mission in Georgia, and the subsequent resolutions by which the Council extended the mandate of the Observer Mission, the latest of which was resolution 1524(2004) of 30 January 2004,

Recalling further its decision 48/475 A of 23 December 1993 on the financing of the Observer Mission and its subsequent resolutions and decisions thereon, the latest of which was resolution 57/333 of 18 June 2003,

Reaffirming the general principles underlying the financing of United Nations peacekeeping operations, as stated in General Assembly resolutions 1874(S-IV) of 27 June 1963, 3101(XXVIII) of 11 December 1973 and 55/235 of 23 December 2000,

Mindful of the fact that it is essential to provide the Observer Mission with the financial resources necessary to enable it to fulfil its responsibilities under the relevant resolutions of the Security Council,

1. Takes note of the status of contributions to the United Nations Observer Mission in Georgia as at 15 April 2004, including the contributions outstanding in the amount of 12.4 million United States dollars, representing some 6 per cent of the total assessed contributions, notes with concern that only thirty Member States have paid their assessed contributions in full, and urges all other Member States, in particular those in arrears, to ensure payment of their outstanding assessed contributions;

2. Expresses its appreciation to those Member States which have paid their assessed contributions in full, and urges all other Member States to make every possible effort to ensure payment of their assessed contributions to the Observer Mission in full;

3. Expresses concern at the delay experienced by the Secretary-General in deploying and providing adequate resources to some recent peacekeeping missions, in particular those in Africa;

4. Emphasizes that all future and existing peacekeeping missions shall be given equal and non-discriminatory treatment in respect of financial and administrative arrangements;

5. Also emphasizes that all peacekeeping missions shall be provided with adequate resources for the effective and efficient discharge of their respective mandates;

6. Reiterates its request to the Secretary-General to make the fullest possible use of facilities and equipment at the United Nations Logistics Base at Brindisi, Italy, in order to minimize the costs of procurement for the Observer Mission;

7. Endorses the conclusions and recommendations contained in the report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions, and requests the Secretary-General to ensure their full implementation;

8. Requests the Secretary-General to take all action necessary to ensure that the Observer Mission is administered with a maximum of efficiency and economy;

9. Also requests the Secretary-General, in order to reduce the cost of employing General Service staff, to continue efforts to recruit local staff for the Observer Mission against General Service posts, commensurate with the requirements of the Mission;

Financial performance report for the period from 1 July 2002 to 30 June 2003

10. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General on the financial performance of the Observer Mission for the period from 1 July 2002 to 30 June 2003;

Budget estimates for the period
from 1 July 2004 to 30 June 2005

11. Decides to appropriate to the Special Account for the United Nations Observer Mission in Georgia the amount of 33,589,200 dollars for the period from 1 July 2004 to 30 June 2005, inclusive of 31,925,700 dollars for the maintenance of the Observer Mission, 1,360,000 dollars for the support account for peacekeeping operations and 303,500 dollars for the United Nations Logistics Base;

12. Decides also to apportion among Member States the amount of 33,589,200 dollars at a monthly rate of 2,799,100 dollars, in accordance with the levels set out in General Assembly resolution 55/235, as adjusted by the Assembly in its resolution 55/236 of 23 December 2000 and updated in its resolution 58/256 of 23 December 2003, taking into account the scale of assessments for 2004 and 2005 as set out in its resolution 58/1 B of 23 December 2003, subject to a decision of the Security Council to extend the mandate of the Mission;

13. Decides further that, in accordance with the provisions of its resolution 973(X) of 15 December 1955, there shall be set off against the apportionment among Member States, as provided for in paragraph 12 above, their respective share in the Tax Equalization Fund of 2,339,800 dollars, comprising the estimated staff assessment income of 2,124,200 dollars approved for the Observer Mission, the prorated share of 198,500 dollars of the estimated staff assessment income approved for the support account and the prorated share of 17,100 dollars of the estimated staff assessment income approved for the United Nations Logistics Base;

14. Decides that, for Member States that have fulfilled their financial obligations to the Observer Mission, there shall be set off against their apportionment, as provided for in paragraph 12 above, their respective share of the unencumbered balance and other income in the amount of 4,096,100 dollars in respect of the financial period ended 30 June 2003, in accordance with the levels set out in General Assembly resolution 55/235, as adjusted by the Assembly in its resolution 55/236 and its resolution 57/290 A of 20 December 2002, taking into account the scale of assessments for 2003 as set out in its resolutions 55/5 B of 23 December 2000 and 57/4 B of 20 December 2002;

15. Decides also that, for Member States that have not fulfilled their financial obligations to the Observer Mission, there shall be set off against their outstanding obligations their respective share of the unencumbered balance and other income in the amount of 4,096,100 dollars in respect of the financial period ended 30 June 2003, in accordance with the scheme set out in paragraph 14 above;

16. Decides further that the increase of 142,200 dollars in the estimated staff assessment income in respect of the financial period ended 30 June 2003 shall be added to the credits from the amount referred to in paragraphs 14 and 15 above and that the respective shares of Member States therein shall be applied in accordance with the provisions of those paragraphs, as appropriate;

17. Emphasizes that no peacekeeping mission shall be financed by borrowing funds from other active peacekeeping missions;

18. Encourages the Secretary-General to continue to take additional measures to ensure the safety and security of all personnel participating in the Observer Mission under the auspices of the United Nations;

19. Invites voluntary contributions to the Observer Mission in cash and in the form of services and supplies acceptable to the Secretary-General, to be administered, as appropriate, in accordance with the procedure and practices established by the General Assembly;

20. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its fifty-ninth session the item entitled "Financing of the United Nations Observer Mission in Georgia".

On 23 December, the Assembly decided that the item on the financing of UNOMIG would remain for consideration during its resumed fifty-ninth (2005) session (decision 59/552).

Armenia and Azerbaijan

In 2004, the Minsk Group of OSCE (France, Russian Federation, United States) continued efforts to mediate the dispute between Armenia and Azerbaijan, which had erupted in armed conflict in 1992 [YUN 1992, p. 388] after four years of sporadic ethnic fighting in the Nagorny Karabakh region in Azerbaijan. However, there was no change in the position of either country with regard to the conflict during the year. Both sides continued to address communications to the Secretary-General, clarifying their positions regarding the conflict or lodging complaints against the actions of the other.

The General Assembly, by decision 59/552 of 23 December, decided that the item on the situation in the occupied territories of Azerbaijan would remain for consideration during its resumed fifty-ninth (2005) session.

Communications. On 19 February [S/2004/123], Armenia brought to the Secretary-General's attention the murder that day of an Armenian Armed Forces officer, Lieutenant Guren Margarian, by an Azerbaijani military officer, while both were attending a language course in Budapest, Hungary, of the NATO Partnership for Peace Programme. According to Armenia, the crime was a consequence of the anti-Armenian hysteria by the Azeri authorities over the years and recent militarist propaganda. On 23 February [S/2004/138], Azerbaijan expressed its regret over the incident and explained the circumstances that might have affected the suspect's emotional condition. Azerbaijan urged Armenia not to allow the incident to damage the already tense relations between the two countries. Armenia, in a 1 March letter [S/2004/168], outlined its concerns arising from what it viewed as the encouragement by Azerbaijani officials of hate propaganda following the incident. The significant increase of propaganda from Azerbaijani officials to distort the roots and causes of the Nagorny Karabakh conflict and their efforts to nullify the international community's 12-year efforts to achieve a resolution to the conflict served to discredit the international mediation process, threatened the ceasefire regime and increased the instability and insecurity in the region. Armenia gave a historical overview of the Nagorny Karabakh problem.

Azerbaijan, responding on 15 March [S/2004/209], presented its own views and historical background to dispel the Armenian "myth" concerning the origins of the Nagorny Karabakh problem, the accusations of massacres of Armenians in Sumgayit, Ganja and Baku, and the argument that Armenian aggression against Azerbaijan was carried out to ensure the right to self-determination by Armenians in Nagorny Karabakh. As to the 19 February incident, Azerbaijan advised against making accusations while the investigation was still under way, and capitalizing on the incident to appease internal consumption and misguide the international community. In response to accusations that its leadership was "fuelling aggressiveness", Azerbaijan said that its society was determined to resolve the conflict by peaceful means and that Armenia was trying to camouflage its annexationist plans.

On 16 March [A/59/66-S/2004/219], Azerbaijan transmitted to the Secretary-General and the Security Council President a memorandum on the legal aspects of the conflict in and around the Nagorny Karabakh region of Azerbaijan. In a communication of 11 May [S/2004/380], its Foreign Minister, on the occasion of the tenth anniversary of the ceasefire, said that despite the numerous mediation efforts of the international community, in particular the OSCE Minsk Group, no real progress had been made to achieve a peaceful settlement of the conflict, and proposed, as an initial step towards such a settlement, the evacuation of Azerbaijan's territories currently under occupation and the restoration of transportation links in the region.

On 12 July [S/2004/562], Azerbaijan said that the Armenian separatist regime established in the occupied territories of Azerbaijan had declared its intention to hold "elections" to the "local self-governance bodies" on 8 August. Such "elections" had no legitimacy as they contravened international law and Azerbaijan's national legislation and would negatively affect the search for a peaceful settlement of the conflict. Azerbaijan reaffirmed that the formation of legitimate authorities of any kind in the Nagorny Karabakh region of Azerbaijan was possible only when a just settlement of the conflict was achieved on the basis of international law, Security Council resolutions and relevant OSCE decisions.

Armenia confirmed, on 20 July [S/2004/581], that local self-governance elections in Nagorny Karabakh were to be held on 8 August, as the most recent of a series of presidential, parliamentary and local elections held there over the past 10 years. Popularly elected authorities were an important factor in the negotiation and implementation process of any agreement that might be reached, and an expression of the people's right to self-determination. Elections did not adversely affect the negotiations, nor legitimize the current status. Armenia suggested that the international community consider monitoring the elections to ascertain their compliance with international standards.

On 4 August [A/59/212-S/2004/626], Azerbaijan expressed concern over military training exercises conducted in the occupied territories of Azerbaijan by Armenian armed forces, which, it said, were really illegal armed groups of the separatist regime established by Armenia. Together with the intention to hold illegal elections in the occupied territories of Azerbaijan on 8 August, the holding of such exercises was just another provocation by the Armenian side, which exacerbated the atmosphere surrounding the proposed participation of Armenia in the NATO Cooperative Best Effort 2004 exercises in September in Azerbaijan, and complicated preparations for the forthcoming negotiations between the two countries.

Armenia, on 17 August [A/59/273-S/2004/653], described the Azerbaijan complaint as another attempt to divert the international community's attention from its unconstructive stance in the negotiations within the framework of the Minsk Group on the Nagorny Karabakh conflict. Armenia called on the Azerbaijani authorities to engage constructively and pragmatically in the peace process.

Azerbaijan complained on 3 September [A/59/333-S/2004/717] that Armenia was establishing illegal settlements in the occupied Azerbaijani territories by settling the Armenian population in those territories, in an effort to annex that region through a forceful solution.

Armenia transmitted to the Secretary-General on 18 November [A/59/576-S/2004/913] excerpts of speeches by Azerbaijani leaders as examples of their unwillingness to engage in the search for a peaceful resolution of the Nagorny Karabakh conflict.

Azerbaijan, on 26 February [S/2004/165], transmitted a statement by Khojaly refugees addressed to the United Nations, the Council of Europe and OSCE, adopted at a meeting of Khojaly refugees on 12 February, in connection with the twelfth anniversary of the Khojaly genocide committed by Armenian forces in Nagorny Karabakh on 26 February 1992.

EU statement on Azerbaijan. The EU, in a 9 January statement [S/2004/47] on Azerbaijan, welcomed the decree issued by its President on 29 December 2003 pardoning 160 prisoners, more than a third of whom were political prisoners, as a positive step by Azerbaijan in respect of its obligations to the Council of Europe. However, the EU remained concerned about the situation of those arrested following the disturbances of 16 October 2003 and urged the Azeri authorities to ensure that they would soon be brought to a fair and open trial or released.

Cyprus

After more than 40 years of efforts by the United Nations, through the Secretary-General's mission of good offices, the Cyprus problem remained unresolved at the end of 2004, with little immediate prospects of reaching an understanding on how to proceed. Following a breakdown of negotiations in 2003 between the Greek Cypriot and Turkish Cypriot sides, the Secretary-General, after receiving assurances from both sides of their determination to resume those efforts, convened talks on 10 February 2004 in Cyprus, which resulted in the 13 February Agreement on the modalities for negotiating and finalizing the text of a settlement. Talks were reconvened in Cyprus on 19 February and continued in Bürgenstock, Switzerland, on 24 March. As no further agreement was achieved, the Secretary-General, in accordance with the 13 February Agreement, finalized the text on the basis of his own plan. The "Comprehensive Settlement of the Cyprus Problem", which comprised, among other things, a Foundation Agreement, constituent State constitutions, a treaty on matters related to the new state of affairs, and a draft act of adaptation of the terms of accession to the EU, was submitted for approval by each side in simultaneous referenda held on 24 April. The Greek Cypriot electorate, by a margin of three to one, rejected the settlement proposal; on the Turkish Cypriot side, it was approved by a margin of two to one.

Therefore, the Foundation Agreement could not enter into force and all the related agreements of the Comprehensive Settlement became null and void. The Republic of Cyprus acceded to EU membership on 1 May, putting into question the future status of the northern part of the island.

The Secretary-General said that he respected the outcome of the referenda but ended his mission of good offices. In the circumstances, he reviewed the mandate and concept of operations of the United Nations Peacekeeping Force in Cyprus (UNFICYP) and recommended a reduction in the mission's military component and a new concept of operations based on increased mobility. He undertook to maintain continuous contact at the highest level with the parties and promised to designate, on an ad hoc basis, senior Secretariat officials to deal with various aspects of his mission of good offices. The Security Council extended UNFICYP's mandate, as revised, until June 2005.

Incidents and position statements

Communications. Throughout 2004, the Secretary-General received letters from the Government of Cyprus and from the Turkish Cypriot authorities containing charges and countercharges, protests and accusations, and explanations of position regarding the question of Cyprus. The letters from the "Turkish Republic of Northern Cyprus" were transmitted by Turkey.

In communications dated between 16 March and 16 December, Cyprus reported violations of its national airspace and unauthorized intrusions into Nicosia's flight information region by Turkish military aircraft, while those from the "Turkish Republic of Northern Cyprus" claimed the existence of two independent States on the island of Cyprus and that the flights mentioned took place within the sovereign airspace of the "Turkish Republic of Northern Cyprus" [A/58/739-S/2004/218, A/58/797-S/2004/391, A/58/804-S/2004/399, A/58/844-S/2004/507, A/58/858-S/2004/597, A/58/880-S/2004/700, A/58/885-S/2004/720, A/59/564-S/2004/893, A/59/589-S/2004/940, A/59/627-S/2004/980].

In other communications, the "Turkish Republic of Northern Cyprus", on 8 January [A/58/678-S/2004/13], and 24 November [A/59/580-S/2004/926] refuted allegations against Turkey and the "Turkish Republic of Northern Cyprus" contained in statements made by the representatives of the Greek Cypriot administration during meetings of the various committees of the General Assembly at its fifty-eighth session and at a 27 October meeting of the Fourth (Special Political and Decolonization) Committee during the Assembly's fifty-ninth session under the agenda item "Comprehensive review of the whole ques-

In a 28 May letter [A/58/815-S/2004/438], Cyprus outlined the social benefits that its Government offered to Turkish Cypriots in the south and efforts to expand intra-island trade, and all measures aimed at promoting reunification of the island and allowing the Turkish Cypriots to enjoy the benefits of the accession of Cyprus to the EU, effective 1 May. On 23 July [A/58/857-S/2004/596], Cyprus described its recent confidence-building measures aimed at promoting cooperation and confidence between the two communities. It proposed the opening of eight additional crossing points along the ceasefire line, demining by both sides, disengagement of military forces from the walled part of the capital, Nicosia, and from the wider Dherinia-Famagusta and Strovilia areas, and restricting military manoeuvres. On 6 August [A/58/865-S/2004/628], Cyprus informed the Secretary-General of further confidence-building measures it had recently announced. They included measures on the circulation of public-service vehicles owned by Turkish Cypriots, and measures to facilitate the movement of goods and the development of contacts and economic relations between Greek Cypriots and Turkish Cypriots. The measures were in line with the EU policy to facilitate reunification of the island by encouraging the economic development of the Turkish Cypriot community, through proposals aimed at the economic integration of the island and contacts between the two communities and with the EU.

The “Turkish Republic of Northern Cyprus”, in an 18 August response [A/58/876-S/2004/675], said that the so-called confidence-building measures were beyond comprehension, as they were presented at the time when the Greek Cypriots had rejected, in the April referendum (see p. 440), the Secretary-General’s plan for a power-sharing arrangement, thereby ensuring that the proposed measures and their benefits, including unification, did not materialize. The proposals were aimed at preventing the European Council’s proposals on special conditions for trade with North Cyprus from materializing. By the same letter, the “Turkish Republic of Northern Cyprus” rejected the claim by Cyprus, conveyed in a 26 July letter to the Secretary-General [A/58/859-S/2004/598], that Turkey was trying to legitimize partition through force and wanted to consolidate the status quo.

In a 6 September letter [A/58/887-S/2004/727], the “Turkish Republic of Northern Cyprus” said that further confidence-building proposals of the Greek Cypriot administration showed its intention to extend its illegal authority to the Turkish Cypriot economic side and to hold Turkish Cypriot development hostage to its political considerations.

Good offices mission

Resumption of negotiations

The Secretary-General, following the failure in 2003 of his efforts to resolve the Cyprus problem on the basis of his 2002 settlement plan “Basis for Agreement on a Comprehensive Settlement of the Cyprus Problem” [YUN 2002, p. 400] as revised in 2003 [YUN 2003, p. 448], and in keeping with his decision [ibid., p. 449] not to take a new initiative unless there was reason to believe that the political will existed for a successful outcome, sought an unequivocally stated preparedness on the part of the leaders of both sides to resume negotiations. He described the UN efforts at mediation in reports to the Security Council of 16 April [S/2004/302], 28 May [S/2004/437] and 24 September [S/2004/756].

Turkey’s Prime Minister, Recep Tayyip Erdogan, at a meeting with the Secretary-General in Davos, Switzerland, on 24 January, conveyed Turkey’s new policy on Cyprus and expressed its support for a resumption of negotiations. He preferred that the main issues be dealt with by 1 May, the date of Cyprus’s entry into the EU, and that a political figure be appointed to handle the negotiations. Turkey had no objection to the Secretary-General finalizing the plan should the parties fail to agree on all issues. The Greek Cypriot leader reiterated to the Secretary-General in Brussels, at a meeting on 29 January, his call for the resumption of substantive negotiations on the basis of the Secretary-General’s revised settlement plan, stressing categorically that he sought a solution before 1 May. He reassured the Secretary-General that the changes he sought would not be overly numerous, set out his view that negotiations should resume before a decision was taken about holding a referendum, and promised to get back to the Secretary-General on his idea that there should be parameters to guide the Secretary-General should it fall to him to finalize the plan.

The Greek Government and the leader of the opposition supported a renewal of the Secretary-General’s efforts. The EU, preferring the accession of a reunited Cyprus on 1 May to EU membership, concurred.

The Secretary-General, in letters of 4 February, invited Tassos Papadopoulos, the President of Cyprus, and Rauf Denktash, the Turkish Cypriot leader, to begin negotiations on 10 February in New York. He also invited the Prime Ministers of the guarantor Powers (Greece, Turkey, United Kingdom), and suggested modalities to ensure that negotiations would be completed and the plan finalized by 31 March, and that referenda would be conducted on a fixed date before 1 May. The proposal was accepted by all parties. Among the procedures outlined by the Secretary-General were the following: the parties would meet to negotiate, on the basis of the plan, changes to the Foundation Agreement; Greece and Turkey would meet on issues of security; and the parties would appoint technical committees to complete the texts on constitutional laws, co-operation agreements and federal laws, as well as a list of treaties binding on the United Cyprus Republic. The parties would also agree on the nominees to the Supreme Court and the transitional Board of the Central Bank; appoint anthem committees to recommend a flag and anthem of the United Cyprus Republic; and provide the Secretary-General with a proposed Constituent State constitution consistent with the Foundation Agreement. If the parties failed to agree, the Secretary-General would, by 31 March, complete the text, on the basis of which the three guarantor Powers would confirm their agreement to put the Foundation Agreement to separate simultaneous referenda and their commitment to sign, together with the United Cyprus Republic, the treaty on matters related to the new state of affairs in Cyprus. The parties would ask the Security Council to take decisions as set out in the appendix to the plan entitled "Matters to Be Submitted to the United Nations Security Council for Decision". Should the Foundation Agreement be approved, it would enter into force the day after confirmation by the Secretary-General; if not, it would be null and void and the commitments undertaken by the parties would have no legal effect.

The 13 February agreement

On 10 February, each leader put forward, at the Secretary-General's request, an overview of the changes sought to the plan. However, neither Mr. Papadopoulos nor Mr. Denktash accepted the proposed procedures either for formalizing the finalization of the plan or the commitment to hold a referendum. In a change of position, Mr. Denktash proposed, on 11 February, a three-stage procedure, which, he said, had the support of Turkey and conformed broadly with the parameters proposed by the Secretary-General. That procedure would enlarge the Secretary-General's role from completing any unfinished parts of the plan to resolving any deadlocks in the negotiations. To facilitate agreement, the Secretary-General proposed a draft press statement, retaining the core elements of Mr. Denktash's proposal while incorporating the clarifications sought by Mr. Papadopoulos and other elements contained in the Secretary-General's 4 February letter (see p. 435).

The Secretary-General's Special Adviser, Alvaro de Soto, negotiated the final terms of that statement (see below) between the leaders, and the representatives of Greece and Turkey. The main issues dividing the parties were whether organizations other than the United Nations should participate in the negotiations, and the way in which the role of Greece and Turkey in the culminating phases of the process would be presented. On 13 February, all parties agreed to the Secretary-General's final proposal to resolve those issues. The 13 February agreement, as it came to be known, committed the parties to a three-phase process leading to referenda on a finalized plan before 1 May 2004.

Press statement by Secretary-General. The Secretary-General, in a 13 February press statement, announced that the parties had committed to negotiating in good faith on the basis of his plan to achieve a comprehensive settlement of the Cyprus problem through separate and simultaneous referenda before 1 May. To that end, they would seek to agree on changes sought and to complete the plan in all aspects by 22 March, within the framework of the Secretary-General's mission of good offices, so as to produce a finalized text. In the absence of such an agreement, the Secretary-General would convene a meeting of the two sides, with the participation of Greece and Turkey, in an effort to agree on a finalized text by 29 March. As a final resort, in the event of continuing deadlock, the parties would invite the Secretary-General to use his discretion to finalize the text to be submitted to referenda on the basis of the plan. The parties also agreed to other suggestions contained in the Secretary-General's 4 February letter. They decided to form a technical committee on economic and financial aspects of implementation, to be chaired by the United Nations. The guarantor Powers had signified their commitment to that process and to meeting their obligations under it.

The talks would reconvene in Cyprus on 19 February, with direct meetings between the two parties in the presence of the Special Adviser, with the technical committees on laws and treaties reconvening on the same day.

Negotiating process

Cyprus phase (phase 1)

The first phase of the resumed negotiations was held in Cyprus between 19 February and 22 March. The Special Adviser asked the parties to explain in specific terms, with proposed textual amendments, the changes they sought to the plan. On 24 February, the Turkish Cypriot side submitted a list of proposed changes, covering all issues, a number of which would have substantially altered key parameters of the plan. Those initial proposals were replaced in mid-March by less far-reaching proposed textual amendments, described as a priority list. Despite its expressed interest in demarcating the boundary between the constituent States, the Turkish Cypriot side failed to produce a territorial proposal, or to propose a way for the issue to be discussed.

The Greek Cypriot side, by contrast, took each issue in turn, producing dense and lengthy papers explaining the changes sought and annexing proposed textual amendments. Declining to provide a comprehensive text of proposed changes or to prioritize its demands, it stated that none of its proposed changes took away any rights from the Turkish Cypriots, and few, if any, required trade-offs on subjects of interest to the Turkish Cypriots. While the Turkish Cypriot side was generally prepared to engage on Greek Cypriot proposals and to discuss matters on a realistic basis and made counter-offers and compromise proposals, the Greek Cypriot side insisted on full satisfaction of its demands, while arguing that the Turkish Cypriot 24 February paper (see above) was outside the parameters of the plan and thus precluded engagement with Turkish Cypriot proposals. It did not alter its attitude to Turkish Cypriot concerns. The Turkish Cypriot side argued that the Greek Cypriot delay in exposing the extent of its demands was preventing the beginning of real negotiation, and amounted to filibustering. The Greek Cypriot side countered that the Turkish Cypriot failure to produce a territorial proposal left a hole at the centre of its demands and the Greek Cypriot side in the dark.

Since progress was proving difficult through either face-to-face meetings or working-level bilateral consultations, the two sides agreed to the Special Adviser's suggestion that the direct meetings be replaced, beginning on 15 March, by proximity talks in an effort to narrow differences and facilitate give and take in the run-up to phase 2 of the process. He also proposed a framework to allow for trade-offs, and encouraged the two sides to identify priorities, reaffirming that changes to the plan would have to be balanced across all issues.

The Greek Cypriot side was critical of the suggested framework, while the Turkish Cypriot side responded more positively. The asymmetry of the response, together with the mini-crisis provoked by Mr. Denktash's decision not to attend phase 2 of the process, prevented the United Nations from proposing trade-offs on the remaining major issues in phase 1. To resolve at least some of the secondary issues before the end of phase 1, a final meeting of the leaders on the island was held on 22 March. During the first phase, representatives of Greece and Turkey met in Athens, Greece, on 17 March, at the invitation of the United Nations, to discuss security.

In contrast to the slow progress at the political level, the seven technical committees produced 131 completed laws and cooperation agreements, a list of 1,134 treaties and instruments binding on the United Cyprus Republic, recommendations on a flag and an anthem, detailed recommendations on the economic and financial aspects of the plan and its implementation, the organizational charts of the federal Government, comprising 6,181 positions, and a list of buildings on each side to house the federal Government during a transitional period.

Bürgenstock phases (phases 2 and 3)

Phase 2 of the talks began in Bürgenstock, Switzerland, on 24 March. It was attended by Mr. Papadopoulos, the Foreign Ministers of Greece and Turkey, later joined on 28 and 29 March by their respective Prime Ministers, the Secretary-General and the European Commissioner for Enlargement. Rauf Denktash did not attend, but authorized Mehmet Ali Talat and Serdar Denktash to negotiate with full powers on behalf of the Turkish Cypriots. Due to differing views as to the appropriate format, it was not possible to have face-to-face meetings. The United Nations therefore consulted with all parties, exploring compromise suggestions and ascertaining their priorities and possible areas of flexibility. Despite those efforts, the opportunity was not taken for open and frank dialogue. The Secretary-General subsequently made bridging proposals in the form of a revised text. The Turkish Cypriot side and Turkey suggested further amendments, while the Greek Cypriot side made public its dissatisfaction with the Secretary-General's proposals. On 30 March, it communicated, for the first time, its views on the UN proposals regarding a framework for signature and expressed interest in additional territory. Greece expressed concern about certain aspects of the security provisions of the settlement.

As no agreement was achievable at that stage, the process moved to phase 3 as envisaged in the 13 February agreement (see p. 436), in which the Secretary-General would use his discretion and finalize the text on the basis of his plan. On 31 March, he presented a finalized plan, which included further changes beyond those already suggested in his bridging proposals and outlined the procedures to be followed during April in the run-up to the referenda. The text of the "Comprehensive Settlement of the Cyprus Problem" (www.annanplan.org) called for action by the Security Council.

Comprehensive Settlement of the Cyprus Problem

The "Comprehensive Settlement of the Cyprus Problem" comprised, as appendices, a Foundation Agreement, constituent State constitutions, the treaty on matters related to the new state of affairs in Cyprus, the draft act of adaptation of the terms of accession of the United Cyprus Republic to the EU, matters to be submitted to the Security Council for decision (see p. 436) and measures to be taken during April 2004.

The Foundation Agreement included the 14 main articles, which summarized the key elements of the plan, and to which were annexed the Constitution of the United Cyprus Republic, its constitutional laws, its Federal Laws, the co-operation agreements between the federal Government and the constituent States, the list of international treaties and instruments that the United Cyprus Republic would accede to, the territorial arrangements, the provisions relating to property affected by events since 1963, the provisions establishing the Reconciliation Commission, and the provisions on the coming into being of the new state of affairs in Cyprus. That was the part of the plan to be put to referenda on 24 April, together with the respective constituent State constitutions.

The treaty on matters related to the new state of affairs in Cyprus provided for a Monitoring Committee and for Additional Protocols to the Treaties of Establishment, Guarantee and Alliance, and transitional security arrangements related to the dissolution of local forces and withdrawal and redeployment of Greek and Turkish forces. Following the completion of all internal ratification procedures by the guarantors after the referenda, the treaty was to be signed into force on 29 April; the Foundation Agreement would only enter into force when the guarantors had signed the treaty, thereby bringing into being the new state of affairs in Cyprus, after which the Co-Presidents of the United Cyprus Republic would sign, bringing the treaty itself into force.

The Security Council would take decisions to enter into force simultaneously with the Foundation Agreement—it would endorse that Agreement, prohibit the supply of arms to Cyprus and authorize a UN operation there (see below).

Measures to be taken during April, contained in a work programme, were to ensure that the federal public service and federal property and buildings would be provided for, that a list of no more than 45,000 persons would be provided for the purposes of the federal citizenship law, and that the members of the transitional Government would be identified should the referenda be successful.

Security Council consideration. The Security Council met on 2 April [meeting 4940] to consider the situation in Cyprus. In his briefing to the Council, the Secretary-General's Special Adviser said that the most important change made to the plan during the March talks related to the reinstatement of property to people who were dispossessed. Under the revised scheme, the amount of land reinstated to dispossessed owners and the number of displaced and dispossessed persons to be reinstated to some of their property would increase. Certain restrictions on the acquisition of property in the Turkish Cypriot State would be permissible during a transitional period.

The revised plan also dealt with the issues of the residency by persons from one constituent State in the other constituent State and the establishment of residency by Greek and Turkish nationals in Cyprus. The transitional limitations were designed to prevent, on either side, unrestricted residence and immigration or unlimited property purchases, and to ensure that the identity of Cyprus and its constituent States was maintained. There were no permanent derogations from the EU acquis communautaire (the body of European treaties, regulations and judgements).

The workings of the federal Government were revised in three respects. First, the transitional periods were shortened, with elections to be held at the federal and constituent State levels, along with European Parliament elections, on 13 June. Secondly, membership of the Presidential Council was increased from six to nine members, with provision for two persons not from the same constituent State to rotate in the offices of President and Vice-President in three 20-month periods over the 60-month term of the Presidential Council. Thirdly, voting for the Senate would be on the basis of mother tongue, rather than internal citizenship status, to ensure that political equality was not undermined over time.

Improvements were made regarding the economic and financial aspects of the plan, largely based on the agreed recommendations of experts from each side in the technical committees.

The map in the plan was not changed, but the plan envisaged that, in the last months of each phased handover of territory, the United Nations would supervise the transfer of areas subject to territorial adjustment. New details of measures to assist in relocation of persons who had to move as a result of territorial adjustment were introduced.

Important refinements were made regarding security. The provisions relating to troop withdrawal were altered, so that the 6,000 Greek and Turkish troops permitted to remain in Cyprus under the previous plan, on the proviso that all would leave should Turkey accede to the EU, would drop to 3,000 in 2011 and to 950 Greek troops and 650 Turkish troops (the same number permitted under the 1960 Treaty of Alliance) in 2018 or upon Turkey's EU accession (whichever was earlier).

Press statement by Security Council President. The Security Council President, in a 16 April press statement [SC/8061], said that Council members welcomed the results of the preparatory International Donors Conference for Cyprus held on 15 April in Brussels to cover costs linked to a possible political settlement to the Cyprus question. They recognized the commitments of the donors as a demonstration of their willingness to provide the necessary financial resources to implement the Secretary-General's "Comprehensive Settlement of the Cyprus Problem" should the Cypriots vote to approve the plan. Council members affirmed that it was for the Cypriots to take a historic decision concerning their future in the 24 April referenda. Should the plan be approved, Council members stood ready to take further actions as provided for in the plan, including the establishment of a new UN operation in support of swift and full implementation by all parties. Council members would be committed to helping ensure that the parties fully met their commitments under the settlement.

Matters submitted to Security Council for decision

As provided for in the "Comprehensive Settlement of the Cyprus Problem", the Secretary-General, in his 16 April report on Cyprus [S/2004/302], mentioned those matters requiring Security Council action, including: endorsement of the Foundation Agreement, in particular taking note that any unilateral change in the state of affairs established by the Agreement was prohibited; prohibition of the supply of arms to Cyprus; and establishing a UN peacekeeping operation in Cyprus with the concurrence of the constituent States to monitor implementation of the Foundation Agreement, promote compliance with it and contribute to the maintenance of a secure environment.

The Secretary-General said that the decisions requested of the Council were a crucial part of the overall framework of the settlement, providing additional assurance that it would be implemented in the framework of UN principles. He was requesting the Council to consider his submission in advance of the 24 April referenda, in the hope that it would assure Cypriots that the United Nations was prepared to meet its responsibilities foreseen under the plan. In accordance with the plan, the Council decisions would enter into force simultaneously with the Foundation Agreement on 29 April.

Security Council consideration. The Security Council met on 21 April [meeting 4947] to consider the Secretary-General's 16 April report. It had before it a draft resolution [S/2004/313] submitted by the United Kingdom and the United States, by which the Council, following notification by the Secretary-General to the Council President that the Foundation Agreement had entered into force, would have terminated UNFICYP's mandate and established the United Nations Settlement Implementation Mission in Cyprus (UNSIMIC) to monitor implementation of the Foundation Agreement and the security and political situation, promote compliance with the Agreement and contribute to a secure environment. The Council would also have decided that all States should prevent the sale, supply or transfer of arms and related materiel to Cyprus, except for those circumstances specified in the draft resolution, and established a committee to monitor implementation of that decision.

Speaking before the vote, the Russian Federation said that it had consistently supported the Secretary-General's good offices mission and his efforts aimed at a just settlement of the Cyprus problem; however, it believed that the 24 April referenda should take place without external interference or pressure and that the Council should await the results before taking a decision. The draft resolution involved the formulation of a serious decision on the parameters of a new UN operation in Cyprus and the imposition of an arms embargo. Such a technically and legally complex decision called for the most thorough and careful analysis. Opposition to such precipitous action on the eve of the referenda was expressed by the parties directly interested in the settlement and by the majority of Council members. Under those circumstances, the Russian Federation had no other choice but to exercise a veto on technical grounds. It was prepared to take part in formulating a draft resolution on the issue after the referenda.

The draft resolution was not adopted owing to the negative vote of a permanent member (Russian Federation) of the Council (14-1).

Speaking after the vote, the United Kingdom said the fact that the overwhelming majority of the Council had voted in favour of the draft sent a strong message of support for the Secretary-

General's efforts and his plan. The draft resolution remained on the table and the United Kingdom would ask the Council to take speedy action after the referenda. The United States said the vote demonstrated that the opposition to the draft resolution was isolated. If the settlement was approved by Cypriots in the referenda, the Council would act rapidly to establish UNSIMIC and an arms embargo.

The 24 April referenda

After the Bürgenstock meetings, the leaders on each side took positions regarding the 24 April referenda. On the Turkish Cypriot side, one of their negotiators, Mr. Talat, came out strongly in favour of a "Yes" vote, while the Turkish Cypriot leader, Rauf Denktash, opposed it. The other negotiator, Serdar Denktash, took a neutral position. Turkey's Prime Minister Erdogan and Foreign Minister Abdullah Gül spoke out strongly in favour of a "Yes" vote. Messrs. Erdogan, Gül and Talat also sought to convey to the Greek Cypriot public, by statements, interviews and Mr. Talat's visit to the south, the determination of the Turkish Cypriots and Turkey to abide by their commitments under the plan and fully implement a settlement.

On the Greek Cypriot side, the situation was more complex. Mr. Papadopoulos, in a speech on 7 April, called on the people to reject the plan with a "resounding No" and challenged the wisdom of "doing away with our internationally recognized State exactly at the very moment it strengthens its political weight, with its accession to the European Union". The Secretary-General expressed surprise at the statement, in the light of what Mr. Papadopoulos had said to him in Brussels. In addition to the support of the Greek Government, the plan received the unequivocal support of Mr. Papadopoulos's two immediate predecessors, Glafcos Clerides and George Vassiliou, and of the leader of the second largest political party, Nicos Anastasiades. After calling for the postponement of the referenda, Mr. Papadopoulos's coalition partner in government, which was the largest political party in Cyprus, called for a "soft No" to the plan, unless additional guarantees were provided regarding security and implementation.

The United Nations had made the plan and information about it available on its website in Greek and Turkish since early 2003. It also provided information and gave briefings to civil society groups on request. However, its efforts were hampered by the media climate on the island.

The referenda were held on 24 April. The plan was rejected by 75.8 per cent of Greek Cypriot voters and approved by 24.2 per cent. On the Turkish Cypriot side, the plan was approved by 64.9 per cent of voters and rejected by 35.1 per cent.

Statement by Secretary-General. In a statement [S/2004/437, annex III] issued on 24 April, the Secretary-General, while affirming that a unique opportunity to resolve the Cyprus problem had been missed, said that he respected the outcome of the two referenda. He applauded the Turkish Cypriots, who approved the plan notwithstanding the significant sacrifices that it entailed for many of them. He regretted that they would not enjoy the benefits of EU membership as of 1 May, but hoped that ways would be found to ease their plight. The Secretary-General remained convinced that the settlement plan represented a fair, viable and carefully balanced compromise. Noting that a large majority of the Greek Cypriot electorate did not share that view, he hoped that they might arrive at a different view after a profound and sober assessment of the decision. He would report to the Council, which might wish to evaluate the outcome and its implications.

Security Council consideration. The Security Council met on 28 April [meeting 4954] to consider the situation in Cyprus, having before it the Secretary-General's April report [S/2004/302] (see p. 439). In briefing the Council, the Under-Secretary-General for Political Affairs said that the full implications of the outcome of the referenda would take a while to become apparent. While the results were disappointing and the Secretary-General's objective of reuniting Cyprus in time for accession to the EU by 1 May had not been met, the United Nations had nevertheless come closer than ever before to resolving one of the most delicate and complex conflicts on its agenda. That achievement should be preserved, pending a fundamental re-evaluation on the Greek Cypriot side.

Implications of the vote

The Secretary-General, in his 28 May report [S/2004/437] on his mission of good offices, described the entire 2004 negotiating process and assessed its outcome. He commented that the fate of his plan was a powerful illustration of the difficulties of finding a solution to that longstanding problem. While a comprehensive settlement had proved elusive, a great deal had been achieved in the course of the past four and a half years. The obstacles that had prevented Cyprus initiatives from getting beyond generalities were overcome, resulting in a comprehensive and carefully balanced settlement proposal, ready to be implemented. Although the plan was legally null and void in the aftermath of the referenda, its acceptance by the Turkish Cypriot electorate meant that the shape of any final settlement to reunify Cyprus would appear to be set. The plan remained the only foreseeable basis for Cypriots to achieve a settlement.

The rejection of the plan by the Greek Cypriot electorate was a major setback. What was rejected was the solution itself rather than a mere blueprint. Benefits that the Greek Cypriots had sought for decades (including the reunification of Cyprus, the return of a large swathe of territory, the return of most displaced persons to their homes, the withdrawal of all troops not permitted by international treaties, the halting of further Turkish immigration and the return to Turkey of a number of "settlers") had been foregone. The result was the maintenance of the status quo.

Greek Cypriots rightly expected the international community to respect their decision, but there was a possibility that, following a period of reflection, a way might emerge to refloat the plan and salvage a settlement. In that context, fears regarding security and implementation appeared to be prominent among Greek Cypriots. Without reopening the provisions of the plan, the Council should address such fears, provided they could be clearly articulated by the Greek Cypriot side. However, the sheer size of the "No" vote raised even more fundamental questions. That was the first time that the Greek Cypriot public had been asked to vote on a bicomunal, bizonal federal solution of the Cyprus problem. Such a solution meant not just two constituent States, but also political equality and the sharing of power. If the Greek Cypriots were ready to share power and prosperity with the Turkish Cypriots in a federal structure based on political equality, that needed to be demonstrated not just by word but by action.

For their part, the Turkish Cypriots had clearly come out in favour of reunification of Cyprus in a bicomunal, bizonal federation. In opting for a settlement, the Turkish Cypriots had broken with the decades-old policies of seeking recognition of the "State" they purported to have created in 1983 [YUN 1983, p. 253]. While the Turkish Cypriots might feel rebuffed after the 24 April vote, their best course was not to turn their back on reunification, but to redouble their determination to achieve it. They, and Turkey, should reach out to the Greek Cypriots and promote reconciliation. The situation of the Turkish Cypriots called for the attention of the international community, including the Security Council. The Turkish Cypriot leadership pointed to the disparity between the outcomes of the referenda as evidence that the Greek Cypriot leadership did not speak for the Turkish Cypriots. The vote had undone whatever rationale might have existed for pressuring and isolating them. The Secretary-General had taken note of the expressed Greek Cypriot intention for the Republic of Cyprus, as an EU member, to extend to the Turkish Cypriots as many of the benefits of EU membership as were "possible and permissible".

The Secretary-General stated that, as for the future of his mission of good offices, the outcome of the referenda had resulted in a stalemate. As neither of the parties had made a proposal for resolving that impasse, there was no basis for resuming his mission of good offices. In the aftermath of the vote, the Secretary-General believed that a fundamental reassessment of the full range of UN peace activities in Cyprus was timely. He intended to complete a review within three months, of UNFICYP's mandate, force levels and concept of operations, in the light of the developments on the ground, the positions of the parties and any views the Council might have. He urged Council members to encourage the Turkish Cypriots and Turkey to remain committed to reunification. For that purpose, he hoped States would cooperate to eliminate unnecessary restrictions and barriers that had isolated the Turkish Cypriots and impeded their development.

The Security Council met on 8 June [meeting 4986] to consider the Secretary-General's May report on his mission of good offices (above). The Special Adviser, in briefing the Council, said that while the outcome of the negotiating effort had not been a success, there were achievements that should be built on to keep alive the prospects of reconciliation and reunification in the future. He remarked that what was rejected on 24 April was a comprehensive plan for a settlement, ready for implementation, with nothing further to be negotiated, rather than a mere framework or set of principles for future negotiations. The approval by the Turkish Cypriots of the plan, signalling their commitment to reunification, indicated they had clearly backed away from a search for a separate, sovereign statehood, a fundamental turnabout in their direction for more than two decades. The Secretary-General recommended that the Council encourage the Turkish Cypriots to remain committed to that goal. His call on all States to cooperate to eliminate unnecessary restrictions and barriers that had the effect of isolating the Turkish Cypriots was not meant to give State rights, State functions or State institutions to the so-called "Turkish Republic of Northern Cyprus", nor to afford recognition or assist secession, but rather to promote reunification and reconciliation.

President Papadopoulos of Cyprus, in a letter of 7 June [A/58/835-S/2004/464] to the Secretary-General, presented the official Greek Cypriot position on the Secretary-General's May report on his mission of good offices in Cyprus (see p. 440). He said that the concerns of the Greek Cypriot community, which had not been adequately addressed in the final plan of 31 March, were mainly the question of Turkish mainland settlers, the permanent stationing of Turkish military forces in Cyprus, and the expansion of the guarantor Powers' rights emanating from the Treaty of Guarantee, through the inclusion of an additional protocol. He declared that the Cypriot proposal for resolving the disagreement over the interpretation of the rights of the Treaty of Guarantee, between Cyprus and Turkey, was never entertained by the Special Adviser. Under its proposal, a triggering-off mechanism would be set up for the exercise of the right of intervention under the Treaty. Another issue of significance was the lack of time and the tight deadlines, which did not allow for substantial negotiations to take place or for agreed conclusions to be reached.

Mr. Papadopoulos said that there were serious inaccuracies and wrong assumptions in the Secretary-General's report, the most serious being the interpretation of the Greek Cypriot community's choice at the 24 April referendum as a vote against reunification of their country, and that the Greek Cypriots were turning away from a solution based on a bizonal, bicomunal federation. He reiterated his commitment and that of the Greek Cypriot people to such a solution.

Mr. Papadopoulos considered inaccurate the allegation in the Secretary-General's report that the overall amount of property in the Turkish Cypriot State eligible to be reinstated to Greek Cypriots would be roughly doubled as compared with the previous version of the plan, since it included preconditions limiting substantially the right of Greek Cypriots to reinstatement and the percentage of properties to be reinstated. The report also omitted reference to Turkey's benefits under the plan, especially the indefinite stationing of Turkish troops on the island. The plan would have given immediately the Turkish Cypriots considerable benefits governmentally, politically, internationally, economically and security-wise, while the two benefits for Greek Cypriots, namely territorial adjustments and reductions in the size of the Turkish Army in Cyprus, would have taken years to be phased in. Implementation of the plan, especially those provisions of crucial interest to the Greek Cypriots, would have been contingent to Turkey's good will. The new provisions in the plan serving Turkish interests in Cyprus explained why it was overwhelmingly rejected by the Greek Cypriots, approved by the Turkish Cypriot side and so emphatically endorsed by the Turkish Government. The Greek Cypriots also objected to the proposal for the elimination of restrictions and barriers that had the effect of isolating the Turkish Cypriots.

The Secretary-General, in a 15 June response [A/58/843-S/2004/493], said that he stood fully by his report, including the narrative and the analysis, his appeals and recommendations, to which he hoped the Greek Cypriot side would respond positively. The Secretary-General stated that he did not share Mr. Papadopoulos's characterization of the conduct of UN efforts.

Mr. Papadopoulos, in his address during the general debate of the General Assembly on 23 September [A/59/PV.7], outlined the reasons for the failure of the Secretary-General's settlement plan. He stated it was not the product of negotiation, did not constitute an agreed solution between the parties, did not place the necessary emphasis on achieving a central Government able to guarantee the single, sovereign character of Cyprus, and failed to address the Greek Cypriot concerns regarding security and implementation of the plan. In rejecting the plan, the Greek Cypriots did not reject the solution or the reunification of their country; they rejected that particular plan as not achieving that objective. They insisted on certain parameters—the withdrawal of Turkish troops and settlers and respect for the human rights of all Cypriots, the underlying structures for a functioning economy, the functionality and workability of the new state of affairs, the just resolution of land and property issues in accordance with the decisions of the European Court of Human Rights, and respect for refugees' right of return. Cyprus should, in the future, proceed without any grey areas with regard to its sovereignty or its relations with third-party States.

In the EU framework, Cyprus was pursuing policies for the economic development of the Turkish Cypriots, which, while not a substitute for a solution, were the most effective way to foster economic integration of the two communities and increase contact between them so as to ensure the viability of a future solution. The new context defined by the accession of Cyprus to the EU and by the expressed will of Turkey to advance on the European path could have a catalytic effect in reaching a settlement in Cyprus. Cyprus called on Turkey to join it in seeking mutually beneficial solutions to the various aspects of the Cyprus problem.

In a 4 October letter [A/59/434-S/2004/815] transmitted to the Secretary-General by Turkey,

Mr. Talat, Prime Minister of the “Turkish Republic of Northern Cyprus”, responding to Mr. Papadopoulos’s statement, said that Mr. Papadopoulos himself and his administration were behind the collapse of the Secretary-General’s initiative. The Greek Cypriot people were misled by the Greek Cypriot leader in a 7 April address (see p. 440), when he called for his people to reject the plan in order to “achieve their joint strategic goal”, which he described as “politically upgrading and shielding their internationally recognized State, the Republic of Cyprus”. The Turkish Cypriot leader rejected Mr. Papadopoulos’s assertion that the Secretary-General’s plan did not adequately address the Greek Cypriot parameters for a solution, and his allegation that the UN plan failed to address Greek Cypriot concerns regarding security and implementation. In Mr. Talat’s view, the claim that the plan was not the product of negotiation was inconceivable.

The results of the referenda clearly demonstrated the strong desire of the Turkish Cypriot people for a settlement based on partnership and equality. The Greek Cypriot side, which opted for no settlement, continued to enjoy the benefits of the usurped title of “Republic of Cyprus” and had become an EU member, whereas the Turkish Cypriot side, which voted for a peaceful reunification, not only remained outside the EU but continued to be subjected to political and economic restrictions and isolation. The question was whether the world should continue to close its eyes to that unjust situation and allow the Greek Cypriots to continue pretending that they represented the whole island or honour the Turkish Cypriots with their vested rights to speak and act for themselves. The Turkish Cypriot people expected the international community to address the unjust circumstances and lift the restrictions on economic, social and political development. In that context, the Turkish Cypriot leader welcomed the international community’s efforts in response to the Secretary-General’s call to eliminate the unnecessary restrictions. However, those efforts aimed at supporting the Turkish Cypriot people’s development were being seriously hampered by the Greek Cypriot administration. The Turkish Cypriot side therefore called on the international community to end the isolation of the Turkish Cypriot people and lift the restrictions on their economic and social life in order to facilitate their overall development.

Cyprus, in a letter of 12 August [A/58/869-S/2004/646], drew the Secretary-General’s attention to the issue of property rights, specifically the intensification of the illegal exploitation of Greek Cypriot properties in the Turkish occupied areas of Cyprus, through construction on Greek Cypriot-owned land and/or the sale of Greek Cypriot properties to foreigners, and expressed its concern over the repercussions that such actions might have on efforts to find a solution to the Cyprus problem.

The “Turkish Republic of Northern Cyprus”, in its response transmitted by Turkey to the Secretary-General on 15 September [A/59/363-S/2004/738], underlined that transactions involving the sale of property in the “Turkish Republic of Northern Cyprus” were a matter concerning only the relevant authorities of the State. The Greek Cypriot claims that the property transactions were illegal and constituted liabilities to the people who purchased them were totally unfounded.

Positions on EU representation

Turkey’s Ministry of Foreign Affairs, in a 1 May statement [A/58/781-S/2004/351], affirmed that the Turkish Cypriot people had expressed through a referendum their wish for a political future within the EU as a constituent partner of a united Cyprus. It was incumbent on the EU to acknowledge and act on the free and genuine expression of the will of the Turkish Cypriot people in that regard. It noted that the separate referenda underlined the fact of the existence of two separate peoples on the island, neither of which represented the other. In those circumstances, it was only the Greek Cypriots who would join the EU on 1 May under the terms of the 2003 Treaty of Accession, which was based on a political and legal situation of a divided island and did not allow for accession of a united Cyprus to the EU. The Greek Cypriots, who would join the EU on 1 May, therefore had no legitimate authority to represent the whole of Cyprus or the Turkish Cypriots.

The Cyprus Ministry of Foreign Affairs, in a 17 May response [A/58/803-S/2004/398], stated that the Government of the Republic of Cyprus was the internationally recognized Government in Cyprus, with the competence and authority to represent the State, notwithstanding the de facto division of the island. As from 1 May, the Republic of Cyprus was a full member of the EU. The Treaty of Accession provided for the terms of accession in the event that a comprehensive settlement of the Cyprus problem had not been reached by the date of accession. In that event and even though the entire territory of the Republic of Cyprus became part of the EU, the application of the acquis was suspended in the areas in which the Government did not exercise effective control.

With the aim of facilitating the reunification of Cyprus, the Republic of Cyprus announced to the EU on 26 April its intention to expand the package of measures benefiting the Turkish Cypriots to include trade as well as intra-island trade of manufactured goods produced in the occupied area, and advocated that the 259 million euros earmarked by the EU for 2004-2006 for the Turkish Cypriots in the event of a settlement be made available immediately.

UNFICYP

The United Nations Peacekeeping Force in Cyprus, established in 1964 [YUN 1964, p. 165], continued in 2004 to monitor the ceasefire lines between the Turkish and Turkish Cypriot forces on the northern side and the Cypriot National Guard on the southern side of the island; to maintain the military status quo and prevent a recurrence of fighting; and to undertake humanitarian and economic activities. In the absence of a formal ceasefire agreement, UNFICYP's task was to judge whether changes in military positions constituted violations of the military status quo, as recorded by the Force in 1974. UNFICYP, under the overall authority of the Special Representative and Chief of Mission, Zbigniew Włosowicz (Poland), continued to keep the area between the ceasefire lines, known as the buffer zone, under constant surveillance through a system of observation posts and through air, vehicle and foot patrols.

During 2004, Alvaro de Soto continued as the Secretary-General's Special Adviser on Cyprus until 24 April. No successor was appointed in 2004.

As at 31 December, UNFICYP, under the command of Major General Herbert Joaquin Figoli Almandos (Uruguay), comprised 1,226 troops and 45 civilian police.

Activities

Report of Secretary-General (May). The Secretary-General, in his 26 May report covering UNFICYP activities and developments from 11 November 2003 to 20 May 2004 [S/2004/427], said that the military situation along the ceasefire line remained generally calm, but the number of air violations increased. The restrictions imposed on UNFICYP's movement in 2000 [YUN 2000, p. 404] by the Turkish Cypriot authorities continued to hinder its operations. The violation of the military status quo in Strovilia persisted. In the latter half of the reporting period, UNFICYP conducted training and planning for a possible transition to a new UN operation in Cyprus, in the event of a settlement. Among its humanitarian tasks, UNFICYP assisted the orderly movement of civilians and vehicles through the buffer zone at the authorized crossing points at Ledra, Ayios Dometios/Metehan, Pergamos and Strovilia. It monitored and followed up on more than 50 cases of unauthorized crossings, thefts, traffic violations, accidents and unauthorized photography, and also facilitated 32 cases of medical evacuation from the north to medical facilities in the south. UNFICYP also facilitated 138 bicomunal events at the Ledra Palace Hotel, bringing together Greek and Turkish Cypriots. It provided support for civilian activities in the buffer zone, facilitating a project funded by the United Nations Office for Project Services in February to restore the historic Venetian Castle.

The Secretary-General said that, in view of the watershed vote of 24 April (see p. 440), and as part of an overall reappraisal of UN peace activities in Cyprus, he intended to review within three months UNFICYP's mandate, force levels and concept of operations, in the light of developments on the ground, the positions of the parties and any views the Security Council might have. He would submit recommendations on the adjustments or restructuring that might be required. Meanwhile, he recommended that the Council extend UNFICYP's mandate until 15 December 2004.

SECURITY COUNCIL ACTION (June)

On 11 June [meeting 4989], the Security Council unanimously adopted resolution 1548(2004). The draft [S/2004/484] was submitted by the United Kingdom.

The Security Council,

Welcoming the report of the Secretary-General of 26 May 2004 on the United Nations operation in Cyprus, and in particular the call to the parties to assess and address the humanitarian issue of missing persons with due urgency and seriousness,

Noting that the Government of Cyprus has agreed that, in view of the prevailing conditions on the island, it is necessary to keep the United Nations Peacekeeping Force in Cyprus beyond 15 June 2004,

Welcoming the intention of the Secretary-General to conduct a review, to be completed within three months, on the mandate, force levels and concept of operation of the Force, in view of the referendum on 24 April 2004 and taking into account developments on the ground and the views of the parties,

Welcoming and encouraging efforts by the United Nations to sensitize peacekeeping personnel in the prevention and control of HIV/AIDS and other communicable diseases in all its peacekeeping operations,

1. Reaffirms all its relevant resolutions on Cyprus, in particular resolution 1251(1999) of 29 June 1999 and subsequent resolutions;

2. Decides to extend the mandate of the United Nations Peacekeeping Force in Cyprus for a further period, ending 15 December 2004, and to consider the recommendations of the Secretary-General in his review of the Force and to act upon them within one month of receiving them;

3. Urges the Turkish Cypriot side and the Turkish forces to rescind without delay all remaining restrictions on the Force, and calls upon them to restore in Strovolia the military status quo which existed there prior to 30 June 2000;

4. Requests the Secretary-General to submit a report on the implementation of the present resolution concurrent with the report provided for above;

5. Decides to remain seized of the matter.

Report of Secretary-General (September). In a 24 September report on UNFICYP [S/2004/756], the Secretary-General stated that official contacts between leaders of the two sides had ceased since the referenda, and signs of mutual distrust had reappeared. Their position on the Secretary-General's mission of good offices had not changed and, accordingly, he saw no basis for resuming his good offices as long as the impasse continued. On 1 May, Cyprus joined the EU, but key decisions on EU relations with Turkey and with the Turkish Cypriots had yet to be taken, which caused considerable uncertainty on both sides of the island. The Greek Cypriot side opposed the EU's recommendations on direct trade and had proposed its own set of economic and confidence-building measures, which were largely dismissed by the Turkish Cypriot side (see p. 442). Despite the absence of direct relations at the official level, contacts between ordinary Cypriots continued to grow. The movement of people was further facilitated by the Greek Cypriot side's willingness to accept entry to the south by EU nationals and Cyprus visa holders entering the island through ports in the north. For their part, the Turkish Cypriot authorities agreed to accept Greek Cypriot identity cards, rather than passports, when crossing the buffer zone to the north.

In terms of confidence-building measures, the Greek Cypriot side proposed in June, through UNFICYP, the withdrawal of military equipment and the unmanning of positions around the old town of Nicosia and in the Dherynia-Famagusta area, and a ban on military exercises and use of heavy equipment for 2 kilometres on both sides of the ceasefire line. Those proposals had yet to be taken up by the other side. The Greek Cypriot side also proposed the opening of eight additional crossing points, which the Turkish Cypriot side welcomed in principle and (see p. 443) UNFICYP supported. UNFICYP also facilitated land passage given to Turkish Cypriots for the annual August visit to Kokkina. The Turkish Cypriots allowed the opening of a secondary school in the Karpas for Greek Cypriot children. The Committee on Missing Persons in Cyprus resumed meetings on 30 August, after a hiatus of more than four years.

In response to resolution 1548(2004) (see p. 444), UNFICYP review teams conducted an in-depth assessment of the developments on the ground and the evolving role of UNFICYP's three components (political/civil affairs, civilian police and military) over the years. Also participating in the review, a Secretariat team visited UNFICYP from 29 August to 5 September and consulted with both sides. The Secretary-General concurred with the findings and recommended a reduction of the strength of the UNFICYP military component from an authorized strength of 1,230 to 860 all ranks, including 40 military observers/liaison officers. The civilian police deployment, currently at 44, should be increased, while remaining within the authorized strength of 69. The new concept of operations, to be known as "concentration with mobility", would shift from static to mobile surveillance, better use of technology, including closed circuit television and improved information technology, and additional helicopter hours. The mission's political and civil affairs component would be strengthened by a small increase in staff. Those measures would allow UNFICYP to carry out its mandated tasks, while taking into account the changed environment and achieving a more efficient use of resources. A further review was to take place before the end of the next mandate period, in mid-2005.

The Secretary-General indicated that he did not intend to appoint a full-time Special Adviser at that time, although political developments might require an appointment at some stage. Therefore, the Chief of Mission would act as the Special Representative to maintain continuous contact at the highest level with the two sides and other key players. In support of the expanded function, UNFICYP's capacity for political analysis and reporting needed to be strengthened. He would consider designating, on an ad hoc basis, senior Secretariat officials to deal with any particular aspects of the Secretary-General's mission of good offices that might require special attention. He recommended that the Council approve UNFICYP's amended concept of operations and force level and extend its mandate until 15 June 2005 to allow for implementation of the restructuring and for experience to be gained before a further review.

SECURITY COUNCIL ACTION (October)

On 22 October [meeting 5061], the Security Council unanimously adopted resolution 1568

(2004). The draft [S/2004/829] was submitted by the United Kingdom.

The Security Council,

Welcoming the report of the Secretary-General of 24 September 2004 on the United Nations operation in Cyprus,

Reiterating its call to the parties to assess and address the humanitarian issue of missing persons with due urgency and seriousness, and welcoming in this regard the resumption of the activities of the Committee on Missing Persons since August 2004,

Welcoming the Secretary-General's review of the United Nations Peacekeeping Force in Cyprus, pursuant to resolution 1548(2004) of 11 June 2004,

Noting that the Government of Cyprus has agreed that in view of the prevailing conditions on the island it is necessary to keep the Force beyond 15 December 2004,

Taking note of the assessment of the Secretary-General that the security situation on the island has become increasingly benign over the last few years and that a recurrence of fighting in Cyprus is increasingly unlikely,

Welcoming the Secretary-General's intention to conduct a further review on the mandate, force levels and concept of operation of the Force in advance of the next renewal of its mandate, continuing to take into account developments on the ground and the views of the parties,

Echoing the Secretary-General's gratitude to the Government of Cyprus and the Government of Greece for their voluntary contributions to the funding of the Force, and his request for further voluntary contributions from other countries and organizations,

Welcoming and encouraging efforts by the United Nations to sensitize peacekeeping personnel in the prevention and control of HIV/AIDS and other communicable diseases in all its peacekeeping operations,

1. Reaffirms all its relevant resolutions on Cyprus, in particular resolution 1251(1999) of 29 June 1999 and subsequent resolutions;

2. Endorses the recommendations of the Secretary-General for the amendment of the concept of operations and force level of the United Nations Peacekeeping Force in Cyprus, as outlined in his report of 24 September 2004;

3. Decides to extend the mandate of the Force for a further period ending 15 June 2005;

4. Urges the Turkish Cypriot side and Turkish forces to rescind without delay all remaining restrictions on the Force, and calls upon them to restore in Strovilia the military status quo which existed there prior to 30 June 2000;

5. Requests the Secretary-General to submit a report on the implementation of the present resolution concurrent with the review provided for above;

6. Decides to remain seized of the matter.

In a 24 November letter [A/59/580-S/2004/926] to the Secretary-General, the "Turkish Republic of Northern Cyprus" said that, notwithstanding the 30 per cent reduction in its force level and the amended concept of operations, the Secretary-General's review of UNFICYP fell short of updating the Force's mandate in line with the changed circumstances on the ground. However, that issue could be dealt with in the context of the further review to be conducted prior to June 2006.

Financing

On 18 June [meeting 91], the General Assembly, having considered the Secretary-General's report on UNFICYP's financial performance for 1 July 2002 to 30 June 2003 [A/58/631], the proposed budget for UNFICYP's maintenance for 1 July 2004 to 30 June 2005 [A/58/644 & Corr.1], and ACABQ's related comments and recommendations [A/58/759/Add.4], adopted, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee [A/58/823], resolution 58/301 without vote [agenda item 137].

Financing of the United Nations Peacekeeping Force in Cyprus

The General Assembly,

Having considered the reports of the Secretary-General on the financing of the United Nations Peacekeeping Force in Cyprus and the related reports of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions,

Recalling Security Council resolution 186(1964) of 4 March 1964, regarding the establishment of the United Nations Peacekeeping Force in Cyprus, and the subsequent resolutions by which the Council extended the mandate of the Force, the latest of which was resolution 1548(2004) of 11 June 2004,

Recalling also its resolution 47/236 of 14 September 1993 on the financing of the Force for the period beginning 16 June 1993 and its subsequent resolutions and decisions thereon, the latest of which was resolution 57/332 of 18 June 2003,

Reaffirming the general principles underlying the financing of United Nations peacekeeping operations as stated in General Assembly resolutions 1874(S-IV) of 27 June 1963, 3101(XXVIII) of 11 December 1973 and 55/235 of 23 December 2000,

Noting with appreciation that voluntary contributions have been made to the Force by certain Governments,

Noting that voluntary contributions were insufficient to cover all the costs of the Force, including those incurred by troop-contributing Governments prior to 16 June 1993, and regretting the absence of an adequate response to appeals for voluntary contributions, including that contained in the letter dated 17 May 1994 from the Secretary-General to all Member States,

Mindful of the fact that it is essential to provide the Force with the necessary financial resources to enable it to fulfil its responsibilities under the relevant resolutions of the Security Council,

1. Takes note of the status of contributions to the United Nations Peacekeeping Force in Cyprus as at 15 April 2004, including the contributions outstanding in the amount of 15.7 million United States dollars, representing some 7 per cent of the total assessed contributions, notes with concern that only thirty-eight Member States have paid their assessed contributions in full, and urges all other Member States, in particular those in arrears, to ensure payment of their outstanding assessed contributions;

2. Expresses its appreciation to those Member States which have paid their assessed contributions in full, and urges all other Member States to make every possible effort to ensure payment of their assessed contributions to the Force in full;

3. Expresses concern at the financial situation with regard to peacekeeping activities, in particular as regards the reimbursements to troop contributors that bear additional burdens owing to overdue payments by Member States of their assessments;

4. Also expresses concern at the delay experienced by the Secretary-General in deploying and providing adequate resources to some recent peacekeeping missions, in particular those in Africa;

5. Emphasizes that all future and existing peacekeeping missions shall be given equal and non-discriminatory treatment in respect of financial and administrative arrangements;

6. Also emphasizes that all peacekeeping missions shall be provided with adequate resources for the effective and efficient discharge of their respective mandates;

7. Reiterates its request to the Secretary-General to make the fullest possible use of facilities and equipment at the United Nations Logistics Base at Brindisi, Italy, in order to minimize the costs of procurement for the Force;

8. Endorses the conclusions and recommendations contained in the report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions, and requests the Secretary-General to ensure their full implementation;

9. Requests the Secretary-General to take all action necessary to ensure that the Force is administered with a maximum of efficiency and economy;

10. Also requests the Secretary-General, in order to reduce the cost of employing General Service staff, to continue efforts to recruit local staff for the Force against General Service posts, commensurate with the requirements of the Force;

Financial performance report for the period from 1 July 2002 to 30 June 2003

11. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General on the financial performance of the Force for the period 1 July 2002 to 30 June 2003;

Budget estimates for the period from 1 July 2004 to 30 June 2005

12. Decides to appropriate to the Special Account for the United Nations Peacekeeping Force in Cyprus the amount of 51,992,200 dollars for the period from 1 July 2004 to 30 June 2005, inclusive of 47,240,400 dollars for the maintenance of the Force, 2,176,900 dollars for strengthening the security and safety of the staff and premises of the Force, 2,105,100 dollars for the support account for peacekeeping operations and 469,800 dollars for the United Nations Logistics Base;

Financing of the appropriation

13. Notes with appreciation that a one-third share of the net appropriation, equivalent to 16,444,900 dollars, will be funded through voluntary contributions from the Government of Cyprus and the amount of 6.5 million dollars from the Government of Greece;

14. Decides to apportion among Member States the amount of 29,047,300 dollars at a monthly rate of 2,420,608 dollars, in accordance with the levels set out in General Assembly resolution 55/235, as adjusted by the Assembly in its resolution 55/236 of 23 December 2000 and updated in its resolution 58/256 of 23 December 2003, taking into account the scale of assessments for 2004 and 2005, as set out in its resolution 58/1 B of 23 December 2003, subject to a decision of the Security Council to extend the mandate of the Force;

15. Decides also that, in accordance with the provisions of its resolution 973(X) of 15 December 1955, there shall be set off against the apportionment among Member States, as provided for in paragraph 14 above, their respective share in the Tax Equalization Fund of 2,657,500 dollars, comprising the estimated staff assessment income of 2,323,800 dollars approved for the Force, the prorated share of 307,200 dollars of the estimated staff assessment income approved for the support account and the prorated share of 26,500 dollars of the estimated staff assessment income approved for the United Nations Logistics Base;

16. Decides further that, for Member States that have fulfilled their financial obligations to the Force, there shall be set off against their apportionment, as provided for in paragraph 14 above, their respective share of the unencumbered balance and other income in the amount of 1,005,879 dollars for the financial period ended 30 June 2003, in accordance with the levels set out in General Assembly resolution 55/235, as adjusted by the Assembly in its resolution 55/236 and its resolution 57/290 A of 20 December 2002, taking into account the scale of assessments for 2003, as set out in its resolutions 55/5 B of 23 December 2000 and 57/4 B of 20 December 2002;

17. Decides that, for Member States that have not fulfilled their financial obligations to the Force, there shall be set off against their outstanding obligations their respective share of the unencumbered balance and other income in the amount of 1,005,879 dollars in respect of the financial period ended 30 June 2003, in accordance with the scheme set out in paragraph 16 above;

18. Decides also that the increase in the estimated staff assessment income of 85,500 dollars in respect of the financial period ended 30 June 2003 shall be added to the credits from the amount referred to in paragraphs 16 and 17 above, and that the respective shares of Member States therein shall be applied in accordance with the provisions of those paragraphs, as appropriate;

19. Decides further, taking into account its voluntary contribution for the financial period ended 30 June 2003, that one third of other income in the amount of 641,666 dollars in respect of the financial period ended 30 June 2003 shall be returned to the Government of Cyprus;

20. Decides that, taking into account its voluntary contribution for the financial period ended 30 June 2003, the prorated share of other income in the amount of 286,055 dollars in respect of the financial period ended 30 June 2003 shall be returned to the Government of Greece;

21. Decides also to continue to maintain as separate the account established for the Force for the period prior to 16 June 1993, invites Member States to make voluntary contributions to that account, and requests the Secretary-General to continue his efforts in appealing for voluntary contributions to the account;

22. Emphasizes that no peacekeeping mission shall be financed by borrowing funds from other active peacekeeping missions;

23. Encourages the Secretary-General to continue to take additional measures to ensure the safety and security of all personnel under the auspices of the United Nations participating in the Force;

24. Invites voluntary contributions to the Force in cash and in the form of services and supplies acceptable to the Secretary-General, to be administered, as appropriate, in accordance with the procedure and practices established by the General Assembly;

25. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its fifty-ninth session the item entitled "Financing of the United Nations Peacekeeping Force in Cyprus".

On 23 December, the Assembly decided that the agenda on UNFICYP financing would remain for consideration at its resumed fifty-ninth (2005) session (decision 59/552).

Other issues

Strengthening of security and cooperation in the Mediterranean

In response to General Assembly resolution 58/70 [YUN 2003, p. 455], the Secretary-General submitted a July report with a later addendum [A/59/130 & Add.1], containing replies received from Algeria, Jordan, Lebanon, Mexico, Morocco, Panama and Venezuela to his 18 February note verbale requesting the views of States and intergovernmental organizations on ways to strengthen security and cooperation in the Mediterranean region.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 3 December [meeting 66], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the First (Disarmament and International Security) Committee [A/59/464], adopted resolution 59/108 without vote [agenda item 70].

Strengthening of security and cooperation in the Mediterranean region

The General Assembly,

Recalling its previous resolutions on the subject, including resolution 58/70 of 8 December 2003,

Reaffirming the primary role of the Mediterranean countries in strengthening and promoting peace, security and cooperation in the Mediterranean region,

Bearing in mind all the previous declarations and commitments, as well as all the initiatives taken by the riparian countries at the recent summits, ministerial meetings and various forums concerning the question of the Mediterranean region,

Recognizing the indivisible character of security in the Mediterranean and that the enhancement of cooperation among Mediterranean countries with a view to promoting the economic and social development of all peoples of the region will contribute significantly to stability, peace and security in the region,

Recognizing also the efforts made so far and the determination of the Mediterranean countries to intensify the process of dialogue and consultations with a view to resolving the problems existing in the Mediterranean region and to eliminating the causes of tension and the consequent threat to peace and security, and their growing awareness of the need for further joint efforts to strengthen economic, social, cultural and environmental cooperation in the region,

Recognizing further that prospects for closer Euro-Mediterranean cooperation in all spheres can be enhanced by positive developments worldwide, in particular in Europe, in the Maghreb and in the Middle East,

Reaffirming the responsibility of all States to contribute to the stability and prosperity of the Mediterranean region and their commitment to respecting the purposes and principles of the Charter of the United Nations as well as the provisions of the Declaration on Principles of International Law concerning Friendly Relations and Cooperation among States in accordance with the Charter of the United Nations,

Noting the peace negotiations in the Middle East, which should be of a comprehensive nature and represent an appropriate framework for the peaceful settlement of contentious issues in the region,

Expressing its concern at the persistent tension and continuing military activities in parts of the Mediterranean that hinder efforts to strengthen security and cooperation in the region,

Taking note of the report of the Secretary-General,

1. Reaffirms that security in the Mediterranean is closely linked to European security as well as to international peace and security;

2. Expresses its satisfaction at the continuing efforts by Mediterranean countries to contribute actively to the elimination of all causes of tension in the region and to the promotion of just and lasting solutions to the persistent problems of the region through peaceful means, thus ensuring the withdrawal of foreign forces of occupation and respecting the sovereignty, independence and territorial integrity of all countries of the Mediterranean and the right of peoples to self-determination, and therefore calls for full adherence to the principles of non-interference, non-intervention, non-use of force or threat of use of force and the inadmissibility of the acquisition of territory by force, in accordance with the Charter of the United Nations and the relevant resolutions of the United Nations;

3. Commends the Mediterranean countries for their efforts in meeting common challenges through coordinated overall responses, based on a spirit of multilateral partnership, towards the general objective of turning the Mediterranean basin into an area of dialogue, exchanges and cooperation, guaranteeing peace, stability and prosperity, encourages them to strengthen such efforts through, inter alia, a lasting multilateral and action-oriented cooperative dialogue among States of the region, and recognizes the role of the United Nations in promoting regional and international peace and security;

4. Recognizes that the elimination of the economic and social disparities in levels of development and other obstacles as well as respect and greater understanding among cultures in the Mediterranean area will contribute to enhancing peace, security and co-operation among Mediterranean countries through the existing forums;

5. Calls upon all States of the Mediterranean region that have not yet done so to adhere to all the multilaterally negotiated legal instruments related to the field of disarmament and non-proliferation, thus creating the necessary conditions for strengthening peace and co-operation in the region;

6. Encourages all States of the region to favour the necessary conditions for strengthening the confidence-building measures among them by promoting genuine openness and transparency on all military matters, by participating, inter alia, in the United Nations system for the standardized reporting of military expenditures and by providing accurate data and information to the United Nations Register of Conventional Arms;

7. Encourages the Mediterranean countries to strengthen further their cooperation in combating terrorism in all its forms and manifestations, taking into account the relevant resolutions of the United Nations, and in combating international crime and illicit arms transfers and illicit drug production, consumption and trafficking, which pose a serious threat to peace, security and stability in the region and therefore to the improvement of the current political, economic and social situation and which jeopardize friendly relations among States, hinder the development of international cooperation and result in the destruction of human rights, fundamental freedoms and the democratic basis of pluralistic society;

8. Requests the Secretary-General to submit a report on means to strengthen security and cooperation in the Mediterranean region;

9. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its sixtieth session the item entitled "Strengthening of security and cooperation in the Mediterranean region".

Stability and development in South-Eastern Europe

On 3 December [meeting 66], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the First Committee [A/59/452], adopted resolution 59/59 without vote [agenda item 58].

Maintenance of international security—good-neighbourliness, stability and development in South-Eastern Europe

The General Assembly,

Recalling the purposes and principles of the Charter of the United Nations and the Final Act of the Conference on Security and Cooperation in Europe, signed in Helsinki on 1 August 1975,

Recalling also the United Nations Millennium Declaration,

Recalling further its previous resolutions on the subject, including resolution 57/52 of 22 November 2002,

Welcoming with appreciation the increased cooperation among countries in the region of South-Eastern Europe on issues related to security, economy, trade, transport, cross-border cooperation, human rights and justice and home affairs,

Reiterating the importance of the South-East European Cooperation Process for further enhancing regional cooperation and stability, which constitutes one of the main elements of the Stabilization and Association Process, and welcoming the positive results of the South-East European Cooperation Process summit meeting, held in Sarajevo on 21 April 2004,

Welcoming the conclusions reached at the Summit of the European Council, held in Thessaloniki, Greece, on 19 and 20 June 2003, and the decisions of the European Council on the principles, priorities and conditions contained in the European Partnerships with all countries of the Stabilization and Association Process,

Noting the progress made by the countries of the Stabilization and Association Process in fulfilling the criteria for membership in the European Union and, in this context, the first entry into force of a Stabilization and Association Agreement, as well as Croatia's becoming a candidate country for membership in the European Union,

Emphasizing the crucial importance of the full implementation of Security Council resolution 1244 (1999) of 10 June 1999 on Kosovo, Serbia and Montenegro, and stressing, inter alia, the role and responsibility of the United Nations Interim Administration Mission in Kosovo, supported by the Organization for Security and Cooperation in Europe and the European Union, and of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization and its Kosovo Force in that regard,

Reaffirming the validity of the Agreement for the delineation of the borderline between the former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia and Serbia and Montenegro, signed in Skopje on 23 February 2001, and encouraging the parties to cooperate in its timely implementation,

Noting the importance of the Regional Conference on Border Security and Management, held in Ohrid, the former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia, on 22 and 23 May 2003,

Emphasizing the crucial importance of strengthening regional efforts in South-Eastern Europe on arms control, demining, disarmament and confidence-building measures and non-proliferation of weapons of mass destruction, and concerned that, in spite of ongoing efforts, the illicit trade in small arms and light weapons in all its aspects persists in some parts of the region,

Affirming its support for all regional initiatives on combating the illicit proliferation of small arms and light weapons, including the activities undertaken at the national level for their collection and destruction,

Mindful of the importance of national, regional and international activities of all relevant organizations aimed at the creation of peace, security, stability, democracy, cooperation and economic development and the observance of human rights and good-neighbourliness in South-Eastern Europe,

Reaffirming its determination that all nations should live together in peace with one another as good neighbours,

1. Reaffirms the need for full observance of the Charter of the United Nations;

2. Calls upon all States, the relevant international organizations and the appropriate organs of the United Nations to respect the principles of territorial integrity and sovereignty of all States and the inviolability of international borders, to continue to take measures in accordance with the Charter and the commitments of the Organization for Security and Cooperation in Europe and through further development of regional arrangements, as appropriate, to eliminate threats to international peace and security and to help to prevent conflicts in South-Eastern Europe, which can lead to the violent disintegration of States;

3. Acknowledges the positive results achieved so far by the countries of the region, urges them to invest further efforts in consolidating South-Eastern Europe as a region of peace, security, stability, democracy, the rule of law, cooperation and economic development and for the promotion of good-neighbourliness and the observance of human rights, thus contributing to the maintenance of international peace and security and enhancing the prospects for sustained development and prosperity for all peoples in the region as an integral part of Europe, and recognizes the role of the United Nations, the Organization for Security and Cooperation in Europe and the European Union in successfully promoting regional disarmament;

4. Calls upon all participants in the Stability Pact for South-Eastern Europe, as well as all concerned international organizations, to continue to support the efforts of the States of South-Eastern Europe towards regional stability and cooperation so as to enable them to pursue sustainable development and integration into European structures, taking also into account trans-Atlantic relations;

5. Calls upon all States and relevant international organizations to contribute to the full implementation of Security Council resolution 1244(1999), on Kosovo, Serbia and Montenegro, as well as of Council resolutions 1345(2001) of 21 March 2001 and 1371(2001) of 26 September 2001, and emphasizes the importance of the standards review process, of the implementation of the "Standards for Kosovo" document endorsed by the Security Council in its presidential statement of 12 December 2003 and of the Kosovo Standards Implementation Plan of 31 March 2004;

6. Recognizes the efforts made and activities undertaken in Kosovo by the United Nations and the Kosovo Force for the establishment of a multi-ethnic and stable Kosovo, thus contributing to a further improvement of the overall security situation in the region;

7. Rejects the use of violence in pursuit of political aims, and stresses that only peaceful political solutions can assure a stable and democratic future for South-Eastern Europe;

8. Stresses the importance of good-neighbourliness and the development of friendly relations among States, and calls upon all States to resolve their disputes with other States by peaceful means, in accordance with the Charter;

9. Urges the strengthening of relations among the States of South-Eastern Europe on the basis of respect for international law and agreements, in accordance with the principles of good-neighbourliness and mutual respect;

10. Recognizes the efforts of the international community, and welcomes in particular the assistance already provided by the European Union and the Stability Pact for South-Eastern Europe, as well as other contributors, in promoting the long-term process of democratic and economic development of the region;

11. Calls upon all States to intensify cooperation with and render all necessary assistance to the International Tribunal for the Prosecution of Persons Responsible for Serious Violations of International Humanitarian Law Committed in the Territory of the Former Yugoslavia since 1991 to bring all at-large indictees to surrender to the Tribunal in line with Security Council resolutions 1503(2003) of 28 August 2003 and 1534(2004) of 26 March 2004;

12. Stresses the importance of enhanced regional cooperation for the development of the South-Eastern European States in the priority areas of infrastructure, transport, trade, energy and environment, as well as in other areas of common interest;

13. Also stresses that the rapprochement of the South-Eastern European States with the European Union will favourably influence the security, political and economic situation in the region, as well as good-neighbourly relations among the States;

14. Emphasizes the importance of continuous regional efforts and intensified dialogue in South-Eastern Europe aimed at arms control, disarmament and confidence-building measures, as well as strengthening cooperation and undertaking appropriate measures at the national, subregional and regional levels against the proliferation of weapons of mass destruction and to prevent all acts of terrorism;

15. Recognizes the seriousness of the problem of anti-personnel mines and explosive remnants of war in some parts of South-Eastern Europe, welcomes in this context the efforts of the countries in the region and of the international community in support of mine action, and encourages States to join and support these efforts;

16. Urges all States to take effective measures against the illicit trade in small arms and light weapons in all its aspects and to help programmes and projects aimed at the collection and safe destruction of surplus stocks of small arms and light weapons, and stresses the importance of closer cooperation among States, inter alia, in crime prevention, combating terrorism, trafficking in human beings, organized crime and corruption, drug trafficking and money-laundering;

17. Calls upon all States and the relevant international organizations to communicate to the Secretary-General their views on the subject of the present resolution;

18. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its sixty-first session the item entitled "Maintenance of international security—good-neighbourliness, stability and development in South-Eastern Europe".

Cooperation with the Council of Europe

The Secretary-General, in response to General Assembly resolution 58/316 (see p. 1374), submitted, in his September consolidated report [A/58/303] on cooperation between the United Nations and regional organizations, a section on cooperation activities with the Council of Europe.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 10 December [meeting 71], the General Assembly adopted resolution 59/139 [draft: A/59/L.31 & Add.1] without vote [agenda item 56 (f)].

Cooperation between the United Nations and the Council of Europe

The General Assembly,

Recalling the Agreement between the Council of Europe and the Secretariat of the United Nations signed on 15 December 1951 and the Arrangement on Cooperation and Liaison between the secretariats of the United Nations and the Council of Europe of 19 November 1971,

Welcoming the report of the Secretary-General on cooperation between the United Nations and the Council of Europe,

1. Reiterates its appreciation for the ongoing fruitful cooperation between the United Nations and its agencies and the Council of Europe, including its Commissioner for Human Rights and its partial and enlarged agreements, both at the level of headquarters and in the field;

2. Notes the constructive interest of the Parliamentary Assembly of the Council of Europe in the reform process of the United Nations, including its willingness to contribute to the discussion on how to give a parliamentary dimension to the world Organization;

3. Requests the Secretary-General of the United Nations to continue exploring, with the Secretary-General of the Council of Europe, possibly by arranging a meeting of representatives of the two organizations in the light of the outcome of the Third Summit of the Council of Europe, possibilities for further enhancement of cooperation between the organizations;

4. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its sixty-first session the sub-item entitled "Cooperation between the United Nations and the Council of Europe", and requests the Secretary-General to submit to the General Assembly at its sixty-first session a report on cooperation between the United Nations and the Council of Europe in general and, in particular, the results of the efforts referred to in paragraph 3 above to explore possibilities for further cooperation between the two organizations.

Cooperation with the Organization for Security and Cooperation in Europe

The Secretary-General, in his September consolidated report on cooperation between the United Nations and regional organizations [A/59/303], outlined cooperation activities undertaken by the United Nations and the Organization for Security and Cooperation in Europe (OSCE). Consultations continued to be held at all levels between the secretariats of the two organizations. The annual working-level meetings, which were initiated in 2001 and later held in Vienna (May 2003) and New York (May 2004), enhanced contacts between the secretariats' substantive units. The UN Secretariat also participated in a number of conferences organized by OSCE. Specific cooperation activities continued within the context of the United Nations Interim Administration Mission in Kosovo (see p. 404) and the United Nations Observer Mission in Georgia (see p. 420). The Economic Commission for Europe enjoyed a close working relationship with OSCE in the economic and environmental areas, with the Commission providing OSCE economic analyses and information on various norms, standards and conventions and on its extensive network of experts. The United Nations Children's Fund collaborated with OSCE in the promotion of the rights of women and children, juvenile justice, the development of the Roma strategy, education and the problem of children affected by armed conflict.

In the context of the tripartite process of informal consultations among the United Nations, OSCE and the Council of Europe, the thirteenth high-level meeting (February 2004) examined how to respond to threats to security and stability and reached agreement on improved collaboration, at the field and headquarters levels, in responding to such threats and on the need for a common and effective framework to combat terrorist acts and a comprehensive approach to security.

By decision 59/552 of 23 December, the General Assembly decided that the item on cooperation between the United Nations and OSCE would remain for consideration during its resumed fifty-ninth (2005) session.

Chapter VI

Middle East

The political and security situation in the Middle East in 2004 was characterized by a stalled peace process and continuing high levels of violence. Throughout the year, both Palestinians and Israelis suffered from violence and ever-mounting death tolls. However, by the end of the year, there were some signs of dialogue and cooperation between Israeli and Palestinian authorities.

The Quartet, a coordinating mechanism for international peace efforts, comprising the Russian Federation, the United States, the European Union and the United Nations, continued its efforts to promote the road map initiative as the best solution to the conflict. The road map, which was endorsed by the Security Council in 2003, aimed to achieve progress through parallel and reciprocal steps by Israel and the Palestinian Authority (PA) in the political, security, economic, humanitarian and institution-building areas, under an international monitoring system. Despite those efforts, little progress was made in the road map's implementation.

In February 2004, Israel's Prime Minister, Ariel Sharon, announced a unilateral initiative to withdraw all Israeli civilian settlements, military forces and installations from the Gaza Strip and from an area in the northern part of the West Bank. The Quartet welcomed the plan, which was officially approved by the Israeli Knesset in October. Meanwhile, the situation on the ground continued to deteriorate, especially in the Gaza Strip. Israeli mounted several military operations, while the PA, for its part, failed to halt attacks against Israelis emanating from territories under its control. In May, the Rafah area in Gaza was subjected to a major Israeli military operation, "Operation Rainbow", aimed at preventing weapons smuggling between Gaza and Egypt. Israeli military bulldozers demolished hundreds of houses in order to widen the border area (known as the Philadelphi route) between Rafah and Egypt. In response to the deteriorating situation, the Security Council, in May, called on Israel to respect its obligations under international humanitarian law and not to undertake demolition of homes contrary to that law. A month-long siege in and around the Gaza town of Beit Hanoun in July left behind broken buildings and flattened crops. On 28 September, a massive military operation was launched in the northern Gaza Strip, particularly in the densely populated towns of Beit Lahiya and Beit Hanoun and the Jabaliya refugee camp, home to over 100,000 refugees. Over 80 Palestinians were killed and more than 300 were injured within a week. Other Palestinian cities, towns and refugee camps (Bethlehem, Jenin, Khan Yunis, Zeitoun, Balata refugee camp) also suffered incursions and blockades, as the crisis intensified, hindering the work of humanitarian aid workers. Israel carried out extra-judicial killings throughout the year, killing, among others, the spiritual leader of the Palestinian Islamist organization Hamas, Sheikh Ahmed Yassin, in March, and Abdel Aziz Al-Rantisi, a political leader of Hamas, in April.

On 11 November, the President of the PA, Yasser Arafat, died of natural causes in Paris. President Arafat had been confined throughout most of 2004 to his headquarters compound in Ramallah under de facto house arrest. Following Mr. Arafat's death, security cooperation between Israel and the PA resumed and Israel scaled back military activity in areas under the Authority's control. Palestinian presidential elections were scheduled to take place in January 2005.

Concerned about the continued deterioration of the situation in the region, the Security Council convened on a monthly basis during the year, and at times even more frequently, to discuss the situation in the Middle East, including the Palestinian question. On 25 March, a draft resolution, by which the Council would have condemned the killing of Sheikh Yassin, as well as all terrorist attacks against civilians, was not adopted due to the negative vote of a permanent Council member, nor was a 5 October draft resolution which would have demanded the immediate cessation of all military operations in northern Gaza and the withdrawal of Israeli forces from that area.

The International Court of Justice (ICJ), on 9 July, rendered an advisory opinion on the legal consequences arising from the construction of a separation wall by Israel in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, as requested by the General Assembly in December 2003. The Court, among other things, found that the route of the wall was contrary to international law and that Israel was under an obligation to terminate the construction, to dismantle parts already built and to make reparations for all damage caused to Palestinian property. On 30 June, Israel's Supreme Court ruled, among other things, that sections of the wall required re-routing, and the Israeli Government declared that it would abide by the Court's ruling. Meanwhile, construction of the wall continued throughout the year.

The General Assembly convened its resumed tenth emergency special session in July to discuss the item "Illegal Israeli actions in Occupied East Jerusalem and the rest of the Occupied Palestinian Territory". It adopted a resolution which acknowledged the ICJ advisory opinion and demanded that Israel comply with its legal obligations as defined in the opinion.

International attention focused on Lebanon in early September when the Lebanese Parliament amended the constitution to extend President Emile Lahoud's six-year term, which was about to expire, by another three years. The Syrian Arab Republic, which maintained a large military presence in Lebanon, supported the move. The amendment was adopted the day after the Security Council adopted a resolution calling for free and fair presidential elections in Lebanon and for the full withdrawal of foreign forces from the country and the disbanding and disarmament of all militias. Syria redeployed some of its troops, but by the end of the year had not withdrawn all of its troops from Lebanon. In October, Prime Minister Rafik Hariri resigned from his post and was replaced by Omar Karami.

In southern Lebanon, Israeli forces and their main Lebanese opponent, the paramilitary group Hizbullah, continued to face each other across the Blue Line, the provisional border drawn by the United Nations following the withdrawal of Israeli troops from southern Lebanon in 2000. Israeli violations of Lebanese airspace continued, while Hizbullah, on a number of occasions, directed anti-aircraft fire at Israeli villages across the Blue Line. The first municipal elections in southern Lebanon since the Israeli withdrawal of 2000 were held in May, with a high voter turnout.

The mandates of the United Nations Interim Force in Lebanon and of the United Nations Disengagement Observer Force in the Golan Heights were extended twice during the year, and the United Nations Truce Supervision Organization continued to assist both peacekeeping operations in their tasks.

The United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East continued to provide education and health and social services to over 4 million Palestinian refugees living both in and outside camps in the West Bank and the Gaza Strip, as well as in Jordan, Lebanon and Syria. With the Government of Switzerland, the Agency, in June co-hosted its first major international conference since its inception.

During the year, the Special Committee to Investigate Israeli Practices Affecting the Human Rights of the Palestinian People and Other Arabs of the Occupied Territories reported to the Assembly on the situation in the West Bank, including East Jerusalem, the Gaza Strip and the Golan Heights. The Committee on the Exercise of the Inalienable Rights of the Palestinian People continued to mobilize international support for the Palestinians.

Peace process

Overall situation

The Secretary-General, in a November report on the peaceful settlement of the question of Palestine [A/59/574-S/2004/909] (see also p. 486), said that, despite the efforts of the international community through the Quartet and the stated commitment of the parties to the road map initiative as expressed at the summit meeting in Aqaba, Jordan, on 4 June 2003 [YUN 2003, p. 465], the situation in the Middle East was characterized by a stalled peace process and continuing high levels of violence. Throughout 2004, both Palestinians and Israelis suffered from violence and ever-mounting death tolls. The humanitarian situation in the Occupied Palestinian Territory continued to deteriorate sharply, with even a minimum standard of living for many Palestinians being sustained only by assistance from the donor community, particularly by the United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East (UNRWA) and other UN programmes. The rising number of deaths and injuries was evidence of the lack of progress in advancing the peace process in 2004. As at 16 September, 825 Palestinians and 136 Israelis had lost their lives in the conflict in the preceding 12 months. Since the eruption of the violence in September 2000 [YUN 2000, p. 416], 3,633 Palestinians and 966 Israelis had been killed.

Neither side took adequate steps to protect civilians, and both were in breach of their international legal obligations. Israel, as the occupying Power, had clear obligations to protect Palestinian civilians and their property. Nevertheless, Palestinian civilians continued to be killed and injured in Israeli military operations, including incursions and pre-emptive strikes, as well as Israeli extrajudicial killings. The scale of destruction of Palestinian property by the Israeli military raised serious concerns about collective punishment. For its part, the PA had obligations under agreements reached with Israel, international humanitarian law and the road map to protect Israeli civilians from attacks emanating from territories under its control. It failed to live up to those obligations, and Israeli civilians continued to suffer terrorist attacks from Palestinian militant groups, including suicide bombings and Qassam rocket strikes. For each side to cite the actions of the other excused neither from fulfilling its own obligations. More broadly, the parties had not lived up to their road map obligations. The Israeli Government made no progress on its core obligation to dismantle settlement outposts erected since March 2001 and to freeze settlement activities, including natural growth. The PA made no progress on its core obligations to take immediate action to end violence and combat terror. The PA and the Israeli Government needed to take the necessary first steps to restore momentum towards peace, otherwise the stalemate would continue and there would be no lasting ceasefire. Those first steps, as outlined by the Secretary-General, were clear: on the Israeli side, the dismantling of settlement outposts and the implementation of a full freeze of all settlement activities, and on the Palestinian side, the implementation of meaningful security reforms and bringing to an end the use of violence in all its forms.

Israel's settlement expansion and lack of action on removing the outposts erected since 2001 severely undermined Palestinian trust in Israel's intentions and contributed to strengthening extremist opinion among Palestinians. Despite repeated promises by the Israeli Government, settlement construction continued at a considerable pace, in particular in large settlement blocs. In and around East Jerusalem, settlement activity, both governmental and privately sponsored, proceeded at a rate that observers described as unmatched since 1992. In addition, Israel persisted in confining the elected PA President, Yasser Arafat, to his headquarters in the West Bank.

The security measures taken by the PA remained limited and unclear. Reform of the Palestinian security services was needed to restore law and order as well as the PA's diminished credibility, specifically the consolidation of all security services into three main bodies, with a professional leadership, under the authority of an effective interior minister.

Throughout 2004, the situation in the Middle East, including the Palestinian question, remained the subject of extensive consultations and debates in the Security Council. On 19 May, the Council adopted resolution 1544(2004), calling on Israel to respect its obligations under international humanitarian law, including its obligation not to destroy Palestinian homes in an illegal manner.

Israel continued construction of the security barrier in parts of the West Bank. On 9 July, the International Court of Justice (ICJ) rendered an advisory opinion on the legal consequences of the wall (see p. 465), declaring that the construction was contrary to international law. The Assembly, in resolution ES-10/15 of 20 July (see p. 465), demanded that Israel comply with its legal obligations.

In February, Prime Minister Ariel Sharon of Israel announced an initiative to withdraw Israeli armed forces from Gaza and parts of the West Bank and to evacuate all settlements in the Gaza Strip, as well as four settlements in the northern West Bank. The Quartet welcomed that step and stated that for the withdrawal to be a real contribution to the peace process, it should lead to an end of the occupation of Gaza and be accompanied by similar steps in the West Bank.

Occupied Palestinian Territory

Communication (14 January). On 14 January [A/58/682-S/2004/33], Israel informed the Secretary-General and the Security Council President that on that day a female suicide bomber perpetrated an attack in the Gaza Strip, killing four Israeli citizens and wounding 12 others. Hamas and Al-Aqsa Martyrs Brigade jointly claimed responsibility for the bombing.

Security Council consideration (January). The Security Council met on 16 January [meeting 4895] to discuss the situation in the Middle East, including the Palestinian question.

The Under-Secretary-General (USG) for Political Affairs, Kieran Prendergast, said that there had been little progress towards peace since the last Council briefing in December 2003 [YUN 2003, p. 483], and the peace process remained stalemated. That process would resume only when both parties recognized that their mutual concerns could be addressed solely through parallel steps, and not in a sequential manner littered with preconditions. That approach, adopted by the road map, would require both the Palestinians and the Israelis to acknowledge and address each other's core concerns.

Israel's most basic concern remained the security of the State and the Israeli people. In response, as a necessary first step, the PA should take action to halt all acts of violence against Israelis. The Palestinians' most basic concerns were territory and viability—meaning the end of occupation and the establishment of an independent, sovereign and viable State in the West Bank and Gaza Strip. In response, and also as a necessary first step, Israel should halt settlement expansion, the construction of the separation wall and all action that worked against the contiguity of the State. Despite initial contacts between the new Palestinian Government and the Israeli Government, both parties continued to ignore each other's core concerns, thereby falling short of carrying out their preliminary commitments under the Quartet's road map.

The PA had taken no tangible measures to establish control over the various groups that used violence and terror. It also failed to reform its security apparatus or to consolidate it under the authority of an empowered interior minister, as called for in the road map. At the same time, Palestinian militant factions failed to agree on a comprehensive cessation of violence, although they continued their dialogue thanks to the efforts of the Egyptian Government. In addition, there was a deterioration in the PA's capability to maintain domestic law and order. If that trend continued, there could be more unrest on Palestinian streets, with negative repercussions for the PA's governing control.

The Israeli Government repeatedly committed itself to implementation of the road map; however, its statements were not matched by action. Israel did not fulfil its core commitment to remove all settlements erected since March 2001 and to implement a complete settlement freeze. In fact, settlement outposts had increased and the Government was proceeding with the construction of the West Bank barrier. Together with other settlement infrastructure and a tight closure policy, that construction was fragmenting the West Bank into non-contiguous patches of territory and was eroding Palestinians' trust in the peace process.

In the face of the discouraging situation, the international community had to maintain its involvement in the peace process, in the view of the USG. The Security Council, the General Assembly and the Quartet had made efforts to revive the peace process; nevertheless, it was all too apparent that a more vigorous involvement of the key players in the international community was needed.

During the preceding month, both sides continued to experience violence: 58 Palestinians and 11 Israelis were killed, and 440 Palestinians and 65 Israelis were wounded. Israel Defense Forces (IDF) resumed extrajudicial killings and launched at least 15 incursions into Palestinian villages and refugee camps, which often involved the use of disproportionate and deadly force in civilian areas.

The situation on the ground caused great harm to the Palestinian economy. Israel's internal and external closures of the Occupied Palestinian Territory remained the central impediment to economic stabilization and recovery. Slight economic improvement was reported in places, due in part to IDF troops moving out of some Palestinian cities, but closure remained the defining reality for those areas, with roadblocks and, in some places, construction of the barrier almost completely halting movement. The closure system continued to impede the international community's efforts to deliver humanitarian aid.

Communications (30 January, 11 February).

On 30 January [A/58/697-S/2004/80], Israel informed the Secretary-General and the Council President that on 29 January a PA policeman perpetrated a suicide attack in central Jerusalem, killing 10 people and wounding over 50.

On 11 February [A/ES-10/256-S/2004/107], the Permanent Observer of Palestine said that on that day Israeli forces, backed by tanks, raided a densely populated neighbourhood in Gaza City, killing at least 12 Palestinians and wounding 50 others.

Israeli withdrawal plan

In early February, Prime Minister Sharon announced that Israel would unilaterally undertake military disengagement leading to eventual total withdrawal of settlements from the Gaza Strip and from an area in the northern Samaria in the West Bank. Israel planned to maintain a military presence along the border between the Gaza Strip and Egypt (Philadelphi route) and to continue construction of the barrier for security purposes. The evacuation process was scheduled to be completed by the end of 2005. Upon completion, there would no longer be any permanent presence of Israeli security forces or Israeli civilians in Gaza and the Samaria area, according to the announcement.

Security Council consideration (18 February).

The Security Council, on 18 February [meeting 4912], discussed the situation in the Middle East, including the Palestinian question.

The Special Coordinator for the Middle East Peace Process and Personal Representative of the Secretary-General, Terje Roed-Larsen, noted that key Israeli and Palestinian officials had met recently. He welcomed Mr. Sharon's bold step—the announcement about the planned Israeli withdrawal from the Gaza Strip, where Israelis controlled about 40 per cent of the land. Palestinian Prime Minister Ahmed Qurei had also welcomed the initiative, saying he would accept it as a first step of a broader withdrawal. Similarly, the Secretary-General said that the withdrawal from Gaza had to be seen as a first step, and it had to be made in the context of the road map and as part of a cooperative engagement between Israel, the PA and the international community. The announcement set the stage for three possible scenarios in the coming months. One was the resumption of a vigorous peace process, with re-engagement between Israel and many of its Arab partners. The second was unilateral Israeli disengagement from parts of the Occupied Palestinian Territory, starting in Gaza, but not as part of a process or re-engagement. The third centred on the inability of the parties to enact that withdrawal, thereby maintaining the status quo, with all its attendant violence and misery. The Personal Representative urged the two leaders to work to fulfil their obligations under the road map and urged the Quartet to re-engage with the parties.

Meanwhile, the situation on the ground remained in a stalemate characterized by continued violence and lack of constructive progress on the road map, with Israeli occupation firmly entrenched and little concrete Palestinian movement on reform. The withdrawal announcement occurred in the context of an upsurge in violence that led to more bloodshed, loss of life and misery. Since the last briefing on 16 January (see above), 11 Israelis and 65 Palestinians were killed, and at least 305 Palestinians and 58 Israelis were injured. The humanitarian situation remained dire in the West Bank and Gaza Strip. Continued closures and Israeli military operations hindered Palestinian economic and social activity and caused the Palestinian people to endure daily humiliations. The economic situation was marked by high unemployment and widespread poverty. However, the West Bank economy stabilized in 2003, attributed in part to some easing of the closure measures, and, according to international financial institutions, its economy grew by 4.5 per cent in 2003, with a concurrent gain in employment.

Communications (24 February–17 March). In a series of letters to the Secretary-General and the Council President between 24 February and 17 March [A/58/721-S/2004/142, A/58/726-S/2004/172, A/58/735-S/2004/211, A/58/736-S/2004/212], Israel detailed Palestinian terrorist attacks against Israeli civilians. On 22 February, a Palestinian terrorist killed eight people and wounded 73 others on a commuter bus in Jerusalem. On 14 March, two Palestinians carried out a bombing attack at the port of Ashdod, killing 10 Israelis and wounding 18. Israel also said that a number of terrorist attempts were averted by IDF.

The Permanent Observer of Palestine, in letters during that period [A/ES-10/257-S/2004/167, A/ES-10/258-S/2004/173, A/ES-10/259-S/2004/178, A/ES-

10/260-S/2004/187, A/ES-10/261-S/2004/216], informed the Secretary-General and the Council President that Israel continued to kill and wound Palestinian civilians. On 7 March, IDF raided two refugees camps in the Gaza Strip, killing 14 Palestinians and injuring more than 80 other civilians. On 10 March, an Israeli raid in the city of Jenin resulted in the death of seven Palestinians. IDF fired two missiles into the Rafah refugee camp on 17 March, killing four Palestinians and wounding several others.

Security Council consideration (18 March).

The Security Council, on 18 March [meeting 4927], discussed the situation in the Middle East, including the Palestinian question.

The Assistant Secretary-General for Political Affairs, Danilo Türk, said that despite the rise in violence since the 18 February briefing (see p. 455), the possibility of peace remained open. Prime Minister Sharon's announcement of a plan for disengaging from the Gaza Strip had attracted substantial attention. To garner the support of the international community and strengthen its chances for success, the withdrawal should have four main features: it should be part of the Quartet's road map; it should occur in partnership with the PA; the withdrawal should be complete; and it should be considered by all as a first step towards the end of Israeli occupation, as set forth in relevant Council resolutions. Quartet envoys met on 10 March in Washington, D.C., to discuss the possible Gaza Strip withdrawal and other relevant issues. They agreed to work towards a Quartet principals' meeting in the next few months, and considered ways to revitalize the road map process. Those efforts were taking place while violence continued unabated. Since the last briefing to the Council, 101 people lost their lives to the conflict—80 Palestinians and 21 Israelis. The toll from Israeli military operations in the Gaza Strip grew, and Israel carried out extrajudicial killings during the reporting period. Israel had a duty to protect its citizens from terrorist attacks, and it had a concomitant responsibility under international law to protect the lives of the civilians in the territory it occupied. Thus, in the aftermath of an operation carried out on 7 March in a densely populated part of the Gaza Strip that resulted in the deaths of 14 Palestinians—including several children—the Secretary-General called on the Israeli Government to abide by its obligations under international humanitarian law to avoid civilian casualties and to desist from the use of disproportionate force in densely populated areas. The reporting period also witnessed terrorist attacks against Israeli civilians. The United Nations was of the view that no cause could justify such acts, and it called on the PA to take up its security responsibilities under the road map. It was imperative that those who planned, carried out and facilitated terrorist acts be brought to justice.

West Bank barrier construction continued at a rapid pace around Jerusalem and Ramallah. However, the Israeli High Court of Justice extended a freeze until 17 March on construction of a section north-west of Jerusalem to examine petitions brought by eight Palestinian villages. The Court ordered the Government to respond to claims that the barrier harmed Palestinian villagers. The Government agreed to modify certain plans and to negotiate with villagers on others.

Assassination of Sheikh Yassin

On 22 March [A/ES-10/262-S/2004/231], the Permanent Observer of Palestine said that Israeli forces carried out on that day an extrajudicial execution by killing Sheikh Ahmed Yassin in Gaza City. On the same day [S/2004/242], the European Union (EU) condemned the extrajudicial killing of Sheikh Yassin by IDF in a missile attack.

Security Council consideration (23 and 25 March). At the request of the Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, on behalf of the Arab Group [S/2004/233], the Security Council, on 23 [meeting 4929] and 25 March [meeting 4934], considered the situation in the Middle East, including the Palestinian question.

At the 23 March meeting, the Permanent Observer of Palestine described the murder of the spiritual leader of the Hamas movement, Sheikh Yassin, in an attack which Israeli Prime Minister Sharon indicated he personally supervised and said that he would continue that policy. The Permanent Observer said that the Palestinians valued the readiness of the vast majority of the Council members to take a clear position vis-à-vis what had happened. As far as Prime Minister Sharon's plan for withdrawal from Gaza was concerned, the Permanent Observer said that a unilateral step could not be part of the road map, for disengagement could not be part of a negotiated withdrawal. He also expressed concern about Israel's construction of a separation wall, even after the matter was submitted to ICJ for an advisory opinion. The wall represented an illegitimate annexation, as a fait accompli, of large areas of Palestinian land, and it rendered impossible any implementation of the two-State solution. The wall was the central issue for the Israeli Government; halting its construction and destroying it was a major issue for the international community.

Israel said that in the three and a half years of Palestinian terrorist attacks that had murdered hundreds of innocent Israeli civilians, the Council had not met even once to condemn an attack. The Council, instead, was meeting to come to the defence of one of its prime perpetrators. Although the Council never met to discuss the attacks for which Sheikh Yassin was responsible, the list was gruesome and shocking. Under Sheikh Yassin's direct leadership, Hamas had perpetrated over 425 attacks that killed 377 Israelis and wounded 2,076 in less than three and a half years. He stood at the head of a command and control structure dedicated to the destruction of Israel. Sheikh Yassin personally instigated and authorized homicide attacks, encouraged individuals to become suicide bombers, ordered missile attacks against Israeli communities, coordinated activities with other terrorist organizations and collected funds for terrorist activity, campaigning throughout the Arab world to raise millions of dollars to improve Hamas terrorist capabilities. Through his words he spawned an ideology of hatred, incitement and murder, glorified as martyrdom. By any reasonable standard of international law, Israel had a legitimate right, in fact a duty, to defend itself against illegal combatants and their commanders. The Palestinian leadership had proved beyond any doubt that it had no intention of fighting terrorism, as it was legally and morally obliged to do. Sheikh Yassin lived and operated for years in the safe haven of the PA, in violation of the most basic international norms. The operation against Sheikh Yassin constituted a stride forward in Israel's march against fundamentalist terrorism, as Sheikh Yassin was one of the greatest obstacles to the cessation of hostilities and the renewal of negotiations. The road map explicitly required the elimination of Hamas and all other terrorist organizations and called for an end to funding and support for their efforts.

On 25 March, the Council had before it a draft resolution sponsored by Algeria and the Libyan Arab Jamahiriya [S/2004/240], by which the Council would have condemned the killing of Sheikh Yassin, as well as all terrorist attacks against any civilians.

The United States said that it would vote against the draft resolution because it was silent about the terrorist atrocities committed by Hamas, did not reflect the realities of the Middle East conflict, and would not further the goals of peace and security. The United States was deeply troubled by the killing of Sheikh Yassin, which had led to escalated tensions in Gaza and the region and could set back efforts to resume progress towards peace. However, events needed to be considered in their context, and the Council did nothing to contribute to a settlement when it condemned one party's actions and turned a blind eye to other developments. The draft resolution condemned the killing of the leader of Hamas, a terrorist organization dedicated to the destruction of Israel, but failed to condemn the suicide bombing carried out by Hamas in the Israeli port of Ashdod that had killed 10 Israelis, despite the request of Member States that such references be included. The Council should focus on ways to advance the goal of the two States—Israel and Palestine—living side by side in peace and security. The draft resolution did not advance that goal.

The draft resolution was not adopted owing to the negative vote of a permanent member of the Council (11-1-3).

Speaking after the vote, the Russian Federation expressed regret that the Council was unable to respond to the development of events in the Palestinian territories resulting from the killing of Sheikh Yassin. Russia voted in favour of the draft because it condemned all terrorist attacks against civilians.

Other developments

Communications (7 and 19 April). On 7 April [A/ES-10/263-S/2004/279], the Permanent Observer of Palestine said that following the killing of Sheikh Yassin, Israeli government and military officials made repeated statements hinting that similar action would be taken against Yasser Arafat, the PA President. At the same time, IDF continued to kill and wound Palestinian civilians. In fact, at least 23 Palestinians had been killed since 22 March.

On 19 April [A/ES-10/264-S/2004/304], the Permanent Observer said that, two days earlier, Israeli forces carried out another extrajudicial execution by killing Abdel Aziz Al-Rantisi, a political leader of Hamas.

Security Council consideration (19 April). At the request of Egypt, on behalf of the Arab Group [S/2004/303], the Security Council, on 19 April [meeting 4945], considered the situation in the Middle East, including the Palestinian question.

The Permanent Observer of Palestine said that, on 17 April, less than four weeks after the death of Sheikh Yassin, IDF committed another extrajudicial execution by killing Mr. Al-Rantisi. That crime was carried out following repeated threats by Prime Minister Sharon and other Israeli officials to target Palestinian leaders, in flagrant violation of international law. Unable to uphold its duties for the maintenance of international peace and security when it came to the Occupied Palestinian Territory, the Council had allowed Israel to continue acting beyond the parameters of international law, and failed to take measures to ensure the protection of the Palestinian civilian population in the occupied territories. With regard to Israel's decision to unilaterally withdraw from Gaza, the proposal fell far short of any real withdrawal, as control of international borders, airspace and water remained in the hands of the occupier. Israel continued to use the pretext of fighting terrorists to justify all its actions against the Palestinian people. The Permanent Observer said that terrorism and violence constituted one of the dynamics of the conflict. It was a dynamic that had taken on more prominence in recent years, but it did not constitute the conflict itself. The conflict was about the belligerent military occupation of another people and their land by a foreign Power for nearly four decades. The Council had to take bold actions to ensure compliance with its own resolutions and adherence to international law and to bring an end to the cycle of violence that had prevented the realization of genuine peace.

Israel said that the Council was convened again not to condemn the murder of innocent civilians by organizations such as Hamas, but to denounce the demise of a key architect of those massacres. Just hours before the targeted counter-terrorist operation against Mr. Rantisi, the organization he headed claimed responsibility, together with the Al Aqsa Martyrs Brigade, for yet another suicide attack against Israelis. Mr. Rantisi sought to destroy any peace initiative and called for the destruction of Israel. He developed alliances with terrorist groups operating around the world, supported by regimes in Syria and Iran, and was committed to fostering terrorism in Iraq and throughout the Western world. A paediatrician by training, that doctor led the campaign to mobilize women and children for use in homicide bombings. Had it been possible to arrest Mr. Rantisi, while minimizing harm to civilian life, Israel would have done so, but in the absence of cooperation from the PA, Israel was left with no choice but to target those who planned and executed the murder of innocent Israeli civilians. The targeting of Mr. Rantisi was not merely a necessary defensive act to prevent ongoing and planned attacks against innocent civilians, but it was part of the global struggle against terrorism. As the struggle against terrorism continued, Prime Minister Sharon launched a bold and unprecedented initiative to bring new hope and opportunity to the peace process. The disengagement plan, when approved, would lead to the evacuation of settlements and military installations in the Gaza Strip and parts of the West Bank. Although not required by the road map, it was an opportunity to restart that process, to which Israel remained committed. In the absence of a peace partner, Israel was compelled to propose that unprecedented initiative itself, but it hoped to implement it in a coordinated fashion that would ensure stability and security for Israelis and Palestinians, provide a humanitarian infrastructure and rekindle the peace process.

The United States urged all parties to exercise maximum restraint and stressed that it was committed to ensuring that Mr. Sharon's plan was consistent with the road map and the realization of two States, Israel and Palestine, living side by side in peace and security. An Israeli withdrawal from Gaza would provide a rare opportunity for real progress. It was particularly noteworthy that that step was being proposed by Mr. Sharon, who was an architect of the Israeli settlements policy of the 1970s. The proposal was an important and positive development.

Egypt deplored the extrajudicial assassinations of Palestinians by the Israeli army. It said that any withdrawal from the Palestinian territories had to be coordinated with the Palestinians and followed up by other measures in order to implement the concept of two neighbouring States living side by side in peace and security and within guaranteed borders.

Communication (22 April). On 22 April [A/ES-10/265-S/2004/319], the Permanent Observer of Palestine said that, beginning on 20 April, IDF launched a raid on the town of Beit Lahiya in the northern Gaza Strip. The raid lasted three days and resulted in the death of 13 Palestinians.

Security Council consideration (23 April). The Security Council, on 23 April [meeting 4951], heard a briefing by the Special Coordinator for the Middle East Peace Process and Personal Representative of the Secretary-General, who used his monthly briefing to focus on what he saw as a crucial and potentially seminal juncture for peace efforts in the region.

Mr. Roed-Larsen said that the Gaza withdrawal, if carried out in the right way, could usher in a new era of peacemaking in the Middle East, but if implemented in the wrong way, would lead to more violence. Any Israeli withdrawal from the West Bank and Gaza that restored Palestinian rights was a welcome development. The withdrawal plans would deliver almost the whole remaining 40 per cent of the Gaza Strip to the Palestinians, in addition to the 60 per cent that was handed over to the PA 10 years earlier. They would also include withdrawals in the north of the West Bank. However, for the Gaza withdrawal to mark the beginning of an era of peace and security, it needed to contain two main elements. First, the withdrawal should be full and complete and should be recognized as such by the international community, and second, it should be accompanied by the implementation of other Palestinian and Israeli obligations under the road map. Occupation would end only when Palestinians gained control over their affairs in Gaza, and thus robust and reliable security and administrative arrangements were needed for post-withdrawal Gaza. The withdrawal from Gaza confronted Israel with a security dilemma: if it withdrew completely but in a context of hostility and mistrust, Gaza could become a launching pad for more attacks against its own territory. If, on the other hand, Israel retained control over territory in, or international access to, Gaza, the occupation would continue, and so, most probably, would violent acts against Israel. That, in turn, would defeat the very purpose of the withdrawal plan. One way to resolve that dilemma was through temporary and internationally supervised security arrangements. An international presence, with the consent of the parties, would enable Israel to withdraw completely from Gaza and free itself from the occupation. It would also enable the Palestinians to live normally, free from Israeli controls, while rebuilding their shattered security capabilities and fighting terrorism and violence in cooperation with regional and international players.

Meanwhile, the PA had to reorganize its ailing security system under the authority of an empowered interior minister and had to curb violence and terror, for there was no excuse for the PA to avoid fulfilling that obligation any longer. Fighting terrorism was not a payoff that depended on the reciprocity of Israeli measures. While preparing for the withdrawal, Israel should remove all settlement outposts erected since March 2001 and completely freeze settlement activities in the West Bank. In short, the withdrawal from Gaza had to be part of the implementation of the road map, not a substitute, for it represented the consensus of the international community on how to resolve the Arab-Israeli conflict in a realistic, gradual and comprehensive way, encompassing the Syrian and Lebanese tracks. It tackled both immediate concerns and final status issues. Regarding security and territory, the road map laid out concrete, reciprocal and parallel steps that both parties should take to reverse the situation.

Both parties failed to meet their obligations. Israel did not dismantle the settlement outposts, implement a settlement freeze or abstain from taking measures undermining trust. In fact, by the time the road map implementation collapsed in 2003, settlement outposts had actually increased. Large tracts of Palestinian land were confiscated for the construction of the barrier, directly impacting tens of thousands of people. Also during the attempted implementation of the road map, many Palestinians were killed and extrajudicial assassinations continued. Despite the efforts of Prime Minister Mahmoud Abbas, the PA failed to curb violence or reorganize its security services under the Interior Minister. Terrorist attacks continued, claiming more innocent Israeli lives and raising Israeli scepticism about Palestinian commitment. Unable to exercise his powers, Mr. Abbas resigned, bringing the road map process to a halt. Since then, and despite the goodwill of the new Prime Minister, Ahmed Qurei, the PA's credibility was diminishing. In fact, the PA had reached a state of near paralysis.

Palestinians needed to be reassured that a final status agreement would respect their basic rights regarding the refugees, the settlements, the status of Jerusalem and the borders. Israelis needed to be reassured that the final peace agreement would really be final, ending violence and leading to Israel's acceptance by all its neighbours, and that it would be a negotiated, fair and realistic deal. By articulating such a political horizon to the parties, the road map aimed to embolden them to perform the most difficult immediate tasks, notably on security and territory. However, it was unrealistic to expect that the parties, mired in a violent relationship devoid of trust, would take, on their own, all the decisions necessary to return to the path of peace. Therefore, it was incumbent on the international community, with the Council at the fore, to lead the parties towards a viable solution. By adopting resolution 1397 (2002) [YUN 2002, p. 418], the Council enshrined the end goal of the peace process: two States, Israel and Palestine, living side by side in peace and security. The Council also adopted the way to achieve that goal, the road map, in resolution 1515(2003) [YUN 2003, p. 483].

Communications (30 April and 3 May). On 30 April [A/58/783-S/2004/354], Malaysia, as Chairman of the tenth session of the Islamic Summit Conference, transmitted the Declaration on Palestine, adopted at a special meeting on the Middle East (Putrajaya, Malaysia, 22 April). The Declaration, among other things, rejected the unilateral Israeli plan as it breached resolutions on international legitimacy and contradicted the provisions of the road map. It called on Israel to stop and reverse the construction of the wall in the occupied territories and urged the Security Council to consider the deployment of a UN peacekeeping force or a mechanism to monitor the implementation of the road map.

On 3 May [A/58/780-S/2004/350], Israel said that on the previous day two Palestinian terrorists killed a pregnant Israeli mother and her four young daughters in the Gaza Strip.

Quartet meeting (4 May)

Representatives of the Quartet—the UN Secretary-General, the Russian Foreign Minister, the Irish Foreign Minister, the United States Secretary of State, the High Representative for European Common Foreign and Security Policy and the European Commissioner for External Affairs—met in New York on 4 May to review developments since their last meeting [YUN 2003, p. 473]. The Quartet, in a joint statement [S/2004/421], called on the two sides to implement the road map. It condemned the continuing terror attacks on Israel, and called on the PA to take immediate action against those who planned and executed them. The Quartet members recognized Israel's legitimate right to self-defence in the face of terrorist attacks, within the parameters of international humanitarian law. They called on Israel to ease the humanitarian and economic plight of the Palestinian people, including increasing freedom of movement for people and goods both within and from the West Bank and Gaza, removing checkpoints, and taking other steps to respect the dignity of the Palestinian people and improve their quality of life. As stipulated in the road map, Israel should take no actions undermining trust, including deportations, attacks on civilians, and confiscation and/or demolition of Palestinian homes and property. The Quartet noted the Israeli Government's pledge that the barrier under construction would be a security rather than a political barrier, and would be temporary rather than permanent. It expressed concern that the proposed route of the barrier restricted the movement of people and goods, and undermined Palestinians' trust in the road map process as it appeared to prejudice the final borders of a future Palestinian State.

The Quartet welcomed the announced intention of Israeli Prime Minister Sharon to withdraw from all Gaza settlements and parts of the West Bank, as potentially a rare opportunity in the search for peace in the Middle East. That initiative, which had to bring about a full Israeli withdrawal, could be a step towards achieving the two-State vision. According to the Quartet, any unilateral initiatives by Israel should be undertaken in a manner consistent with the road map and the two-State vision, and no party should take unilateral actions that sought to predetermine issues that could be resolved only through negotiation and agreement between the two parties.

The Quartet and the international community were prepared to intensify their engagement with the Palestinians to restore momentum on the road map, enhance Palestinian humanitarian and economic conditions, build transparent and accountable Palestinian institutions, ensure security and stability in Gaza and the West Bank, prevent all acts of terrorism, and ensure the dismantlement of armed terrorist groups. In furtherance of those goals, the Quartet would take the following steps, with mechanisms to monitor performance by all sides: it would act on an urgent basis, in conjunction with the World Bank, the Office of the United Nations Special Coordinator for the Middle East Peace Process and the Ad Hoc Liaison Committee, on the basis of a World Bank/Office of the Special Coordinator rapid-assessment study, to ensure that Palestinian humanitarian needs were met, Palestinian infrastructure was restored and developed, and economic activity was reinvigorated. The Quartet was prepared to engage with a responsible and accountable Palestinian leadership, committed to reform and security performance. Through an empowered Prime Minister and Cabinet, the Task Force on Palestinian Reform, and in connection with the major donors working through the Ad Hoc Liaison Committee and the Local Aid Coordination Committee, the Quartet would engage the Palestinians to reinvigorate the reform agenda of the road map, paying particular attention to areas from which Israel planned to withdraw. The Quartet would seek to ensure that arrangements were put in place to ensure security for Palestinians and Israelis as well as freedom of movement and greater mobility and access for Palestinians. It underscored the need for agreed, transparent arrangements with all sides on access, mobility and safety for international organizations and bilateral donors and their personnel. As Israel withdrew, custody of Israeli-built infrastructure and land evacuated by Israel should be transferred through an appropriate mechanism to a reorganized PA in coordination with representatives of Palestinian civil society, the Quartet and other representatives of the international community to determine equitable and transparent arrangements for the ultimate disposition of those areas as quickly as possible. In coordination with, and under the auspices of, an oversight committee led by the United States, and in coordination with the empowered PA Prime Minister and Cabinet, Palestinian security services should be restructured and retrained, consistent with the road map, to provide law and order and security to the Palestinians, to end terror attacks against Israel and Israelis and to dismantle terrorist capabilities and infrastructure. The Quartet reminded all parties of the obligation to make rapid progress towards resumption of the political dialogue, and added that a coordinating and oversight mechanism under its auspices would be established.

Israeli military operations in Gaza

Communications (12-19 May). In communications dated between 12 and 19 May [A/ES-10/266-S/2004/382, A/ES-10/267-S/2004/394, A/ES-10/268-S/2004/402, A/ES-10/269-S/2004/409], the Permanent Observer of Palestine said that Israel continued to launch military attacks against the Palestinian population in the occupied territories. During a raid on 11 and 12 May in Gaza City, IDF killed 15 Palestinians, including 7 children. Widespread destruction was caused by repeated raids in the Rafah refugee camp, which killed at least 21 Palestinians. On 19 May, IDF opened fire on a large crowd of demonstrators in the Rafah area, killing at least 10 people and wounding more than 60 others.

Press statement of Secretary-General (19 May). The Secretary-General, on 19 May, condemned the killing and injuring of Palestinian demonstrators in southern Gaza on that day. He called on Israel to halt the military operations immediately. The Secretary-General was distressed by the killing of peaceful demonstrators, many of them women and children. He again warned Israel that it had to abide by its obligations as an occupying Power, which included protecting the civilian population and eschewing the disproportionate or indiscriminate use of force.

SECURITY COUNCIL ACTION (19 May)

On 19 May [meeting 4972], the Security Council adopted resolution 1544(2004) by vote (14-0-1). The draft [S/2004/400] was submitted by Algeria and Yemen.

The Security Council,

Reaffirming its resolutions 242(1967) of 22 November 1967, 338(1973) of 22 October 1973, 446(1979) of 22 March 1979, 1322(2000) of 7 October 2000, 1397(2002) of 12 March 2002, 1402(2002) of 30 March 2002, 1403(2002) of 4 April 2002, 1405(2002) of 19 April 2002, 1435(2002) of 24 September 2002 and 1515(2003) of 19 November 2003,

Reiterating the obligation of Israel, the occupying Power, to abide scrupulously by its legal obligations and responsibilities under the Geneva Convention relative to the Protection of Civilian Persons in Time of War, of 12 August 1949,

Calling upon Israel to address its security needs within the boundaries of international law,

Expressing grave concern at the continued deterioration of the situation on the ground in the territory occupied by Israel since 1967,

Condemning the killing of Palestinian civilians that took place in the Rafah area,

Gravely concerned by the recent demolition of homes committed by Israel, the occupying Power, in the Rafah refugee camp,

Recalling the obligations of the Palestinian Authority and the Government of Israel under the road map,

Condemning all acts of violence, terror and destruction,

Reaffirming its support for the road map, endorsed in its resolution 1515(2003),

1. Calls upon Israel to respect its obligations under international humanitarian law, and insists, in particular, on its obligation not to undertake the demolition of homes contrary to that law;

2. Expresses grave concern regarding the humanitarian situation of Palestinians made homeless in the Rafah area, and calls for the provision of emergency assistance to them;

3. Calls for the cessation of violence and for respect of and adherence to legal obligations, including those under international humanitarian law;

4. Calls upon both parties to implement immediately their obligations under the road map;

5. Decides to remain seized of the matter.

VOTE ON RESOLUTION 1544(2004):

In favour: Algeria, Angola, Benin, Brazil, Chile, China, France, Germany, Pakistan, Philippines, Romania, Russian Federation, Spain, United Kingdom.

Against: None.

Abstaining: United States.

Speaking after the vote, the United States said that while it believed that Israel had the right to act to defend itself, its operations in Gaza did not serve the purposes of peace and security, but had actually worsened the humanitarian situation and resulted in confrontations between Israeli forces and Palestinians. Noting that the Israeli Government had expressed regret for what it called a tragic event, the United States said those events served as a reminder of the wisdom of Israel disengaging from Gaza and having its security presence replaced by reformed Palestinian security forces. While concerned about Israel's operations in Gaza, the United States could not vote in favour of the resolution because it did not sufficiently address the context of the events in Gaza. It was clear that Palestinian terrorists were smuggling weapons into Gaza through tunnels in Rafah and that the PA failed to address that threat or to end terrorist acts. Because those issues were not addressed, the United States abstained.

The Permanent Observer of Palestine said that the slaughter of innocent Palestinians in the Rafah camp was the most recent illustration of the barbaric action of the occupying Power and an act of State terrorism. During the preceding few days, that practice had escalated in the Rafah area, causing vast destruction. IDF, by using armoured bulldozers, tanks and helicopter gunships, raided the area, destroying more than 100 homes. More than 1,100 Palestinians were made homeless and hundreds of others fled the area. Since September 2000, more than 1,300 homes in Rafah alone had been demolished or made unliveable. Israel's aim was the effective levelling of the Rafah camp and areas in the city of Rafah to allow for the enlargement of its so-called security zone.

Israel said that the Council had convened again at the behest of the Palestinian Observer, under a barrage of misinformation. According to Israel, during a procession of several thousand demonstrators, which was organized by the PA and included many gunmen, seven Palestinians were killed, of whom four or five were armed terrorists. While Israel regretted any loss of civilian life, those numbers put the incident into proportion. The city of Rafah served as the PA's main pipeline for transporting weapons and ammunition in Gaza. Since September 2000, subterranean tunnels constructed underneath the "Philadelphi route" had been used by Iran and Hizbullah, as well as by Palestinian terrorist organizations like Hamas, for turning the Gaza Strip into a base for missile and rocket attacks against Israeli targets. The tunnels were typically dug from inside homes to evade discovery by Israeli security personnel. The purpose of the IDF action in Gaza was to terminate the transfer of all illegal weapons by underground tunnels to Gaza. Since April 2004, IDF had exposed eight such tunnels in the Rafah area, in addition to 101 tunnels found since the beginning of the intifada in September 2000. IDF demolished only those structures involved in terror and violence against Israeli civilians, and under international law those structures were considered legitimate military targets.

Communication (20 May). On 20 May [A/58/810-S/2004/413], the Permanent Observer of Palestine said that in the immediate wake of the adoption of resolution 1544(2004) (above), several Israeli officials publicly declared the intention to continue the military campaign; meanwhile, IDF continued killing Palestinian civilians (more than 100 in the preceding three weeks) and destroying Palestinian homes in the Rafah area. In the light of that situation, it was imperative that concerted efforts be taken by the United Nations to ensure compliance by Israel with that resolution.

Security Council consideration (21 May). The Security Council, on 21 May [meeting 4974], discussed the situation in the Middle East, including the Palestinian question.

The USG for Political Affairs, Mr. Prendergast, said that the situation since the last briefing of 23 April (see p. 459) had been characterized by growing violence, destruction and despair. Since then, 128 Palestinians and 19 Israelis had been killed, and hundreds more injured. IDF demolished hundreds of Palestinian homes and continued its policy of extrajudicial killings, in breach of its obligations under international law. Economic conditions continued to worsen, bringing yet more suffering. At the political level, deadlock prevailed. The Quartet, on 4 May, reiterated its commitment to assisting Israelis and Palestinians out of the morass through implementation of the road map. However, action by the international community or the Quartet was no substitute for steps taken by the parties. In early May, a majority of the Likud party voted against Prime Minister Sharon's initiative to withdraw unilaterally from the Gaza Strip; nevertheless, Mr. Sharon reiterated his intention to pursue the plan. Support for a withdrawal was expressed by the tens of thousands of Israelis who demonstrated in Tel Aviv and by opinion polls that showed strong popular support for a Gaza pull-out. Unfortunately, that debate cast a shadow over more fundamental issues, namely, the nature, scope and terms of a Gaza withdrawal, and its relationship to implementation of the road map. Consequently, a stalemate had developed while awaiting political decisions for transforming the initiative into a specific plan leading to the end of the occupation. Israeli settlement expansion continued unabated in Gaza and the West Bank, prompting Palestinians to wonder if all the talk about evacuation was a cover-up for more expansion. In addition, the construction of the barrier continued to erode Palestinian territory and Palestinian hope. According to estimates, the latest Israeli construction plans would put more than 12 per cent of the West Bank—plus occupied East Jerusalem—on the Israeli side of the barrier. Although Mr. Sharon stated that the barrier was temporary, the Palestinians saw it as the greatest single threat to the viability of a future State.

Communications (9-21 June). In communications dated between 9 and 21 June [A/58/839-S/2004/470, A/ES-10/270-S/2004/485, A/ES-10/271-S/2004/506], the Permanent Observer of Palestine said that Israel continued to carry out illegal policies and practices against the Palestinian people and their leadership in the Occupied Palestinian Territory. In violation of resolution 1544 (2004), Israel continued to kill Palestinian civilians and to destroy homes and property in the Rafah area. Israel also issued land confiscation orders in preparation for further expansion of the separation wall inside Palestinian territory.

Security Council consideration (23 June). The Security Council, on 23 June [meeting 4995], met to discuss the situation in the Middle East, including the Palestinian question.

The USG for Political Affairs said that the situation remained tense; the conflict continued to claim lives, economic conditions worsened, hope for a better future was low, and suffering continued—all of which contributed to a climate of despair and extremism. Since his May briefing, 39 Palestinians and two Israelis were killed and 309 Palestinians and 32 Israelis were wounded. Once the Israeli incursion into Rafah ended on 24 May, a full picture emerged of the impact that Israel's Operation Rainbow had had on the ground. According to UNRWA, 167 buildings, housing 379 families or 2,066 people, were destroyed or damaged beyond repair by Israeli forces in what was one of the most destructive operations in the Gaza Strip since September 2000. Since that date, a total of 3,437 Palestinians and 942 Israelis had been killed, and 1,476 structures were destroyed in Rafah town and refugee camp, affecting almost 15,000 people. In the course of Operation Rainbow, 53 Palestinians were killed. The operation uncovered three tunnels used to smuggle weapons. On 2 and 3 June, Israeli forces, with tanks and bulldozers, again entered Rafah town and camp, demolishing 11 more buildings, 4 of them partially. Closures continued throughout the West Bank. IDF conducted a number of search-and-arrest operations following security warnings, and extrajudicial killings continued. Curfews were imposed repeatedly in most West Bank Palestinian towns and villages. Bethlehem was declared a closed military zone for almost a week. Construction of the Israeli barrier continued at a rapid pace in and around Jerusalem, and more Palestinian land was confiscated for the construction. An increasing number of Palestinians and international peace activists demonstrated against the barrier. Attacks against and harassment of UN staff and property by IDF forces also increased. Palestinian violence continued as well, with mortars fired on Israeli settlements in Gaza and a suicide bomb attack.

The proposed Israeli withdrawal from the Gaza Strip and parts of the West Bank could help to break the political stalemate. On 7 June, the Israeli Government adopted a plan related to that initiative. Under that plan, disengagement would proceed in four stages and would involve the evacuation of all settlements and military installations in the Gaza Strip as well as the dismantling of four settlements in the northern West Bank, by the end of 2005. First, the isolated Gaza settlements of Morag, Netzarim and Kfar Darom would be evacuated, followed by the West Bank settlements of Kadim, Ganim, Sanur and Homesh. Then the remaining Gush Katif settlements would be evacuated, and finally, the northern Gaza settlements of Nissanit, Elei Sinai and Dugit would be dismantled. Another vote by the Israeli cabinet would be necessary before implementation could begin. Palestinian Prime Minister Qurei stated that the PA welcomed the disengagement plan so long as it was implemented as a part of the road map. However, if the withdrawal from Gaza and parts of the West Bank was to mark a new beginning in the peace process, both sides, Israeli and Palestinian, would have to play a part. Although the initiative was unilateral, its successful application required cooperation between all parties. The PA had a major role to play in the success of the withdrawal, and that role was contingent on the Palestinian leadership also fulfilling its obligations under the road map. The PA had to establish security control in the vacated areas. It also had to revitalize, reorganize and reform itself. Among the most urgent tasks were the strengthening of Palestinian institutions and promotion of the rule of law. That included the genuine empowerment of Prime Minister Qurei and his cabinet, and the unification of the Palestinian security forces into three components under the authority of an empowered interior minister.

Communications (25 June–15 July). On 25 June [A/58/849-S/2004/520], Turkey transmitted to the United Nations the text of the declaration adopted by the Islamic Conference of Foreign Ministers at its thirty-first session (Istanbul, Turkey, 14–16 June). The declaration, among other things, urged the Quartet to work to stop the Israeli aggression in all its forms and secure protection for the Palestinian people. In a resolution adopted at the meeting [A/58/856-S/2004/582 & Corr.1], transmitted on 15 July, the Foreign Ministers rejected the Israeli unilateral plan and condemned Israel for the assassination of Sheikh Yassin. It called for the cessation of all political contacts with the Israeli Government as long as the blockade against the Palestinian people continued.

On 28 June [A/58/850-S/2004/521], Israel said that on that day Palestinian terrorists fired four rockets on the southern town of Sderot, killing two Israeli civilians and injuring at least 11 others.

On 7 July [A/ES-10/272-S/2004/544], the Permanent Observer of Palestine said that Israel continued to invade Palestinian towns and used excessive and indiscriminate force against the Palestinian civilian population. Over the previous month, IDF killed at least 55 Palestinians. Israeli forces also continued to attack the Rafah area.

Security Council consideration (13 July). The Security Council, on 13 July [meeting 5002], discussed the situation in the Middle East and heard a briefing by the Special Coordinator for the Middle East Peace Process and Personal Representative of the Secretary-General, Mr. Roed-Larsen, who described the latest round of the conflict. Since the last monthly briefing of 23 June, violence continued, claiming the lives of 61

Palestinians and seven Israelis, and wounding more than 580 Palestinians and 71 Israelis. The PA, despite promises by its leadership, made no progress on its core obligation to end violence, combat terror and reform and reorganize itself. Israel made no progress either on its core obligation to dismantle settlement outposts erected since March 2001 and to move towards a complete freeze of settlement activities. The slow progress on the implementation of Palestinian reform could not be explained except by the lack of political will. The PA decided to begin holding local elections as early as the autumn of 2004. The commitment to holding elections was a step towards creating more democratic local institutions; however, the PA had not responded to calls by the international community to reform its electoral institutional framework to meet minimal international standards. In the areas of finance and public administration, reform had proceeded well.

Regarding security reform, President Arafat had lent only nominal support to an Egyptian plan to reform the Palestinian security services, consistent with the road map, with support of the international community. Those efforts were necessary to end the emerging chaos in Palestinian areas, to restore law and order and, most importantly, to re-establish the PA as a credible partner for the international community. The Quartet as well as the Arab peace partners had been active in trying to bring about the necessary reforms. The Palestinian Prime Minister needed to be empowered to enable him and the cabinet to make the necessary changes, but that had not happened. Mr. Arafat remained confined to his headquarters in Ramallah in difficult conditions, under de facto house arrest. However, that was not an excuse for passivity and inaction. There was currently no sign of constructive movement. Despite a well-intentioned Prime Minister, the paralysis of the PA was evident and the deterioration of law and order in Palestinian areas was worsening. Clashes and showdowns between branches of Palestinian security forces were common in the Gaza Strip, where the PA's legal authority was receding fast in the face of the mounting power of arms, money and intimidation. Lawlessness and gang rule were becoming common in Nablus, while the perceived PA abdication of responsibility had led many Rafah residents to take matters into their own hands, with some of them establishing a private checkpoint, preventing PA officials from crossing to Egypt or from entering Rafah. Jericho was becoming the only Palestinian city with a functioning police. That collapse of authority could not be attributed only to the Israeli incursions and operations inside

Palestinian towns; the PA was in deep distress and in real danger of collapse.

Israel's lack of compliance on the issue of settlements was equally frustrating. Territory lay at the heart of the conflict. The drafters of the road map were careful to require from Israel an immediate dismantling of all outposts erected since March 2001, in order to send a clear and positive message to the Palestinians that a paradigm shift was taking place. A full and comprehensive freeze on settlement activities was to have been achieved as the security situation improved, but that had not been the case.

Emergency special session

In accordance with General Assembly decision ES-10/22 [YUN 2003, p. 481] and at the request of Jordan [A/ES-10/274] in its capacity as Chairman of the Arab Group and on behalf of the League of Arab States (LAS), as well as at the request of Malaysia, on behalf of the Chairman of the Coordinating Bureau of the Non-Aligned Movement [A/ES-10/275], the tenth emergency special session of the Assembly resumed on 16 July to discuss "Illegal Israeli actions in Occupied East Jerusalem and the rest of the Occupied Palestinian Territory". In particular, the Assembly discussed the 9 July ICJ advisory opinion on the legal consequences of the construction of a wall in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including in and around East Jerusalem (see below). The session was first convened in April 1997 [YUN 1997, p. 394] and resumed in July and November of that year, as well as in March 1998 [YUN 1998, p. 425], February 1999 [YUN 1999, p. 402], October 2000 [YUN 2000, p. 421], December 2001 [YUN 2001, p. 414], May 2002 [YUN 2002, p. 428] and in August of that year [ibid., p. 435], September 2003 [YUN 2003, p. 472] and resumed in October [ibid., p. 476] and December of that year [ibid., p. 479].

ICJ advisory opinion

On 9 July, at the request of the General Assembly in resolution ES-10/14 [YUN 2003, p. 480], ICJ rendered its advisory opinion (see p. 1272) on the legal consequences arising from the construction by Israel of the separation wall in the Occupied Palestinian Territory [A/ES-10/273 & Corr.1]. The Court found that the route of the wall in the occupied territory, including in and around East Jerusalem, was contrary to international law and that Israel was under an obligation to terminate the building of the wall, to dismantle parts already built and to make reparations for all damage caused to Palestinian property. It also found that States were under an obligation not to recognize the illegal situation and to ensure Israel's compliance with international law under the Fourth Geneva Convention. The Court affirmed that the Assembly and the Security Council should consider further action.

The Assembly reconvened the emergency special session to consider the issue.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 20 July [meeting 27], the General Assembly adopted resolution ES-10/15 [draft: A/ES-10/L.18/Rev.1] by recorded vote (150-6-10) [agenda item 5].

Advisory opinion of the International Court of Justice on the Legal Consequences of the Construction of a Wall in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including in and around East Jerusalem

The General Assembly,

Guided by the principles enshrined in the Charter of the United Nations,

Considering that the promotion of respect for the obligations arising from the Charter and other instruments and rules of international law is among the basic purposes and principles of the United Nations,

Recalling its resolution 2625(XXV) of 24 October 1970, on the Declaration on Principles of International Law concerning Friendly Relations and Cooperation among States in accordance with the Charter of the United Nations,

Reaffirming the illegality of any territorial acquisition resulting from the threat or use of force,

Recalling the Regulations annexed to the Hague Convention Respecting the Laws and Customs of War on Land of 1907,

Recalling also the Geneva Convention relative to the Protection of Civilian Persons in Time of War of 12 August 1949, and relevant provisions of customary law, including those codified in Additional Protocol I to the Geneva Conventions,

Recalling further the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights, the International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights and the Convention on the Rights of the Child,

Reaffirming the permanent responsibility of the United Nations towards the question of Palestine until it is resolved in all aspects in a satisfactory manner on the basis of international legitimacy,

Recalling relevant Security Council resolutions, including resolutions 242(1967) of 22 November 1967, 338(1973) of 22 October 1973, 446(1979) of 22 March 1979, 452(1979) of 20 July 1979, 465(1980) of 1 March 1980, 476(1980) of 30 June 1980, 478(1980) of 20 August 1980, 904(1994) of 18 March 1994, 1073(1996) of 28 September 1996, 1397(2002) of 12 March 2002, 1515 (2003) of 19 November 2003 and 1544(2004) of 19 May 2004,

Recalling also the resolutions of its tenth emergency special session on illegal Israeli actions in Occupied East Jerusalem and the rest of the Occupied Palestinian Territory,

Reaffirming the most recent resolution of the fifty-eighth session of the General Assembly on the status of the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, resolution 58/292 of 6 May 2004,

Reaffirming also the right of the Palestinian people to self-determination, including their right to their independent State of Palestine,

Reaffirming further the commitment to the two-State solution of Israel and Palestine, living side by side in peace and security within recognized borders, based on the pre-1967 borders,

Condemning all acts of violence, terrorism and destruction,

Calling upon both parties to fulfil their obligations under relevant provisions of the road map, the Palestinian Authority to undertake visible efforts on the ground to arrest, disrupt and restrain individuals and groups conducting and planning violent attacks, and the Government of Israel to take no actions undermining trust, including deportations and attacks on civilians and extrajudicial killings,

Reaffirming that all States have the right and the duty to take actions in conformity with international law and international humanitarian law to counter deadly acts of violence against their civilian population in order to protect the lives of their citizens,

Recalling its resolution ES-10/13 of 21 October 2003, in which it demanded that Israel stop and reverse the construction of the wall in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including in and around East Jerusalem,

Recalling also its resolution ES-10/14 of 8 December 2003, in which it requested the International Court of Justice to urgently render an advisory opinion on the following question:

“What are the legal consequences arising from the construction of the wall being built by Israel, the occupying Power, in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including in and around East Jerusalem, as described in the report of the Secretary-General, considering the rules and principles of international law, including the Fourth Geneva Convention, of 1949, and relevant Security Council and General Assembly resolutions?”

Having received with respect the advisory opinion of the Court on the Legal Consequences of the Construction of a Wall in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, rendered on 9 July 2004,

Noting in particular that the Court replied to the question put forth by the General Assembly in resolution ES-10/14 as follows:

- “A. The construction of the wall being built by Israel, the occupying Power, in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including in and around East Jerusalem, and its associated regime, are contrary to international law;
- “B. Israel is under an obligation to terminate its breaches of international law; it is under an obligation to cease forthwith the works of construction of the wall being built in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including in and around East Jerusalem, to dismantle forthwith the structure therein situated, and to repeal or render ineffective forthwith all legislative and regulatory acts relating thereto, in accordance with paragraph 151 of this Opinion;
- “C. Israel is under an obligation to make reparation for all damage caused by the construction of the wall in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including in and around East Jerusalem;

“D. All States are under an obligation not to recognize the illegal situation resulting from the construction of the wall and not to render aid or assistance in maintaining the situation created by such construction; all States Parties to the Fourth Geneva Convention relative to the Protection of Civilian Persons in Time of War of 12 August 1949 have in addition the obligation, while respecting the United Nations Charter and international law, to ensure compliance by Israel with international humanitarian law as embodied in that Convention;

“E. The United Nations, and especially the General Assembly and the Security Council, should consider what further action is required to bring to an end the illegal situation resulting from the construction of the wall and the associated regime, taking due account of the present Advisory Opinion.”

Noting that the Court concluded that “the Israeli settlements in the Occupied Palestinian Territory (including East Jerusalem) have been established in breach of international law”,

Noting also the statement made by the Court that “Israel and Palestine are under an obligation scrupulously to observe the rules of international humanitarian law, one of the paramount purposes of which is to protect civilian life”, and that “in the Court’s view, this tragic situation can be brought to an end only through implementation in good faith of all relevant Security Council resolutions, in particular resolutions 242 (1967) and 338(1973)”,

Considering that respect for the Court and its functions is essential to the rule of law and reason in international affairs,

1. Acknowledges the advisory opinion of the International Court of Justice of 9 July 2004 on the Legal Consequences of the Construction of a Wall in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including in and around East Jerusalem;

2. Demands that Israel, the occupying Power, comply with its legal obligations as mentioned in the advisory opinion;

3. Calls upon all States Members of the United Nations to comply with their legal obligations as mentioned in the advisory opinion;

4. Requests the Secretary-General to establish a register of damage caused to all natural or legal persons concerned in connection with paragraphs 152 and 153 of the advisory opinion;

5. Decides to reconvene to assess the implementation of the present resolution, with the aim of ending the illegal situation resulting from the construction of the wall and its associated regime in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem;

6. Calls upon both the Government of Israel and the Palestinian Authority to immediately implement their obligations under the road map, in cooperation with the Quartet, as endorsed by Security Council resolution 1515(2003), to achieve the vision of two States living side by side in peace and security, and emphasizes that both Israel and the Palestinian Authority are under an obligation scrupulously to observe the rules of international humanitarian law;

7. Calls upon all States parties to the Fourth Geneva Convention to ensure respect by Israel for the Convention, and invites Switzerland, in its capacity as the depositary of the Geneva Conventions, to conduct consultations and to report to the General Assembly on the matter, including with regard to the possibility of resuming the Conference of High Contracting Parties to the Fourth Geneva Convention;

8. Decides to adjourn the tenth emergency special session temporarily and to authorize the President of the General Assembly at its most recent session to resume its meeting upon request from Member States.

RECORDED VOTE ON RESOLUTION ES-10/15:

In favour: Afghanistan, Albania, Algeria, Andorra, Antigua and Barbuda, Argentina, Armenia, Austria, Azerbaijan, Bahamas, Bahrain, Bangladesh, Barbados, Belarus, Belgium, Belize, Bhutan, Bolivia, Bosnia and Herzegovina, Botswana, Brazil, Brunei Darussalam, Bulgaria, Burkina Faso, Burundi, Cambodia, Cape Verde, Chile, China, Colombia, Congo, Costa Rica, Croatia, Cuba, Cyprus, Czech Republic, Democratic People's Republic of Korea, Denmark, Djibouti, Dominica, Dominican Republic, Ecuador, Egypt, Eritrea, Estonia, Fiji, Finland, France, Gabon, Gambia, Germany, Ghana, Greece, Grenada, Guatemala, Guinea, Guyana, Haiti, Honduras, Hungary, Iceland, India, Indonesia, Iran, Ireland, Italy, Jamaica, Japan, Jordan, Kazakhstan, Kenya, Kuwait, Kyrgyzstan, Lao People's Democratic Republic, Latvia, Lebanon, Lesotho, Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Liechtenstein, Lithuania, Luxembourg, Malaysia, Maldives, Mali, Malta, Mauritania, Mauritius, Mexico, Monaco, Mongolia, Morocco, Mozambique, Myanmar, Namibia, Nepal, Netherlands, New Zealand, Nicaragua, Nigeria, Norway, Oman, Pakistan, Panama, Paraguay, Peru, Philippines, Poland, Portugal, Qatar, Republic of Korea, Romania, Russian Federation, Saint Lucia, Saint Vincent and the Grenadines, San Marino, Saudi Arabia, Senegal, Serbia and Montenegro, Sierra Leone, Singapore, Slovakia, Slovenia, South Africa, Spain, Sri Lanka, Sudan, Suriname, Swaziland, Sweden, Switzerland, Syrian Arab Republic, Thailand, The former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia, Timor-Leste, Togo, Trinidad and Tobago, Tunisia, Turkey, Turkmenistan, Tuvalu, Ukraine, United Arab Emirates, United Kingdom, United Republic of Tanzania, Uzbekistan, Venezuela, Viet Nam, Yemen, Zambia, Zimbabwe.

The Permanent Observer of Palestine, speaking before the vote [meeting 24], said that the ICJ advisory opinion was a pivotal development that brought international law back to the forefront of the dialogue on the question of Palestine and the Israeli-Palestinian conflict. While the outcome might be considered a victory for the Palestinian people, it was also a victory for all the peoples of the region and for the region's future. The Court's position on the issue, on the basis of international law, was conclusive, and there could be no further question as to the illegal status of the wall or the settlements that Israel was building in the Occupied Palestinian Territory. ICJ's conclusions on the wall were definitive and non-negotiable. The aim of the draft resolution before the Assembly was twofold: acceptance of the advisory opinion and a call for compliance by Israel and by Member States with international legal obligations as set out in the advisory opinion. The PA expected States to undertake actions consistent with their legal obligations as determined by ICJ, including action against settlement activities and sanctions against companies involved in the wall construction. Israel had already declared its rejection of the Court's authority and the advisory opinion as well as its intention to continue constructing the wall.

Israel said that, together with a large number of Member States, it did not support the request for the advisory opinion, which it found inappropriate, a misuse of the advisory opinion procedure and damaging to the road map. Israel was dismayed that the opinion did not seriously address the terrorism facing Israeli civilians or the Palestinian leadership's refusal to bring that terrorism to an end. Those crimes were the very reason that the fence was being erected, and Israel found that omission legally inexplicable and morally inexcusable. Israel recognized that the security fence raised complex legal and humanitarian issues. Accordingly, the fence and its route were subject to a process of constant review and change, including the right of those affected, Palestinian or Israeli, to petition Israel's Supreme Court. On 30 June, in response to such a petition, that Court recognized Israel's authority to erect a fence as a defensive measure against terrorist attacks, though it stressed that the fence had to be balanced against the rights of those affected. The Israeli Court laid out a detailed proportionality test by which such a balance could be reached, and it found that sections of the fence required re-routing. The Court's ruling was petitioned by Palestinians and Israelis who wanted practical solutions on the ground; the Court sought to find a balance between competing rights; it had before it specific evidence on all aspects of routing, the security rationale and associated humanitarian effects; and its ruling was binding upon Israel. ICJ, on the other hand, was asked only about the rights of one side; it was supplied only with partial and often misleading information; it was asked a question as part of a political and manipulative campaign; and its opinion was advisory only. Following the judgement of the Israeli Court, the Government announced that it would not only re-route those parts of the fence that were the subject of the petition, but would re-examine the entire routing so as to ensure that it complied with international law. That re-examination had already led to a decision to re-route large portions of the fence. ICJ's opinion did not rule out the authority to erect a security fence; indeed, it recognized that military exigencies and security imperatives could justify such action, but it failed to properly examine those exigencies.

The United States [meeting 25] said that the draft resolution and ICJ's opinion that the text endorsed pointed away from a political solution to the Israeli-Palestinian crisis that would embody the vision of two States living side by side in peace and security. Moreover, the draft resolution was one-sided, and it adopted a confusing interpretation of Article 51 of the UN Charter on the right to self-defence.

The Assembly continued its discussion on the agenda item on 19 and 20 July [meetings 26 & 27]. Speaking after the vote, the Netherlands, on behalf of the EU and other Member States, said the ICJ advisory opinion largely coincided with the EU's position on the legality of the barrier built by Israel on the Palestinian side of the Green Line (the de facto border between Israel and Palestine). The EU expressed its opposition to the route of the barrier.

Further developments

Communication (6 August). On 6 August [A/ES-10/276-S/2004/630], the Permanent Observer of Palestine said that Israel continued to kill and injure Palestinian civilians and to destroy property in the occupied territories. For more than a month, Israeli forces had laid siege to the area of Beit Hanoun in Gaza, repeatedly carrying out attacks in the area and causing destruction to private and public property. Israel also continued to construct the wall and to build illegal settlements.

Security Council consideration (11 August). The Security Council, at a meeting on 11 August [meeting 5019], heard a statement by the USG for Political Affairs, Mr. Prendergast, who said that there had been no tangible progress towards resuming the peace process since the 13 July briefing (see p. 464), and violence continued to claim innocent lives. Neither side took adequate steps to protect civilians, and both were in breach of their international legal obligations. Palestinian civilians continued to fall victim in Israeli military operations. The scale of destruction of Palestinian property by the Israeli military raised concerns about collective punishment. For its part, the PA had obligations under agreements reached with Israel, under international humanitarian law and in accordance with its commitments under the road map to protect Israeli civilians from attacks emanating from territories in its control. It failed to live up to those obligations, and Israeli civilians continued to suffer attacks from Palestinians, most recently in the form of Qassam rockets. Over the past month, 54 Palestinians had been killed and 400 Palestinians and 23 Israelis injured.

A new pattern had emerged: Palestinian militants launched Qassam rockets into Israel, followed by Israeli helicopter missile strikes into the Gaza Strip and ever-deeper incursions into areas adjacent to Israel. The northern Gaza Strip was the focus of a large-scale Israeli operation—operation Forward Shield—around the city of Beit

Hanoun, begun on 29 June in the wake of a Qassam attack on Sderot and continued in many areas of Beit Hanoun and beyond, towards the Jabalya refugee camp. During the reporting period, more than 60 rockets were launched from Beit Hanoun at Israeli communities near the Gaza Strip, causing injury and property damage. Israel continued to carry out extrajudicial killings, as well as search and arrest campaigns throughout the West Bank and the Gaza Strip.

Progress on the implementation of Palestinian reform continued to be slow and mostly cosmetic. On 17 July, Prime Minister Qurei submitted his resignation, citing the state of unprecedented chaos. President Arafat announced a series of security measures to prevent further deterioration, including the appointment of the chief of military intelligence as head of national security forces and the appointment of a new police chief in Gaza. However, those measures led to further unrest as thousands took to the streets in Gaza City in protest. The next day, demonstrations involved clashes among various factions of Fatah. After that attack, manifestations of unrest, popular discontent and chaos increased. Finally, political mediation, notably by a group of Palestinian Legislative Council members, led to an agreement by which President Arafat agreed to grant Prime Minister Qurei full authority over the security agencies, and to abide by the Basic Law as far as the powers of the Prime Minister were concerned. On 27 July, Mr. Qurei retracted his resignation. However, despite those developments, ultimate authority and control over all PA security agencies remained with the National Security Council, headed by President Arafat.

Israel also failed to implement its core commitments under the road map. Settlement expansion and lack of action on removing the outposts erected since 2001 severely undermined Palestinian trust in Israel's intentions and contributed to strengthening hardliners among Palestinians. Despite repeated promises by the Israeli Government, settlement activities continued. Support for Prime Minister Sharon's initiative to withdraw the Israeli armed forces from Gaza and parts of the West Bank and to evacuate all settlements in the Gaza Strip and four settlements in the northern West Bank was gaining momentum within Israel. Despite vocal opposition from segments of the settler community, polls showed that 60 per cent of Israelis supported the disengagement initiative.

Communications (12 August–14 September). In communications dated 12 and 31 August [A/58/870-S/2004/647, A/58/881-S/2004/702], Israel detailed Palestinian attacks against Israelis. On 11 August, Palestinian terrorists detonated a bomb at a checkpoint in Jerusalem, wounding six Israeli soldiers and 12 Palestinians and killing two Palestinian bystanders. On 31 August, two Palestinian suicide bombers killed 16 Israelis and wounded over 100 more in the city of Be'er Sheva.

In communications dated between 19 August and 14 September [A/ES-10/277-S/2004/668, A/ES-10/278-S/2004/673, A/58/877-S/2004/678, A/ES-10/279-S/2004/719, A/ES-10/281-S/2004/729], the Permanent Observer of Palestine said that Israel continued to carry out illegal policies and practices against the Palestinian people. On 15 August, more than 2,000 Palestinian prisoners and detainees being held in Israeli jails started a series of hunger strikes to protest the violation of their rights and their living conditions. On 7 September, IDF carried out a missile attack in the neighbourhood of Shijaia in Gaza City, killing 15 Palestinians and wounding at least 40 others. Between 7 and 14 September, IDF killed at least 16 Palestinians and wounded dozens of others in the occupied territories.

Security Council consideration (17 September). The Security Council, on 17 September [meeting 5039], heard a briefing by the USG for Political Affairs. He said that it had been a bad month in the Middle East, with a marked increase in casualties on both sides and a resumption of suicide bombings. Nor was there good news to report in terms of implementation of the road map. Prime Minister Sharon had said that Israel was not following the road map and that it might stay in the West Bank long after any withdrawal from Gaza. Meanwhile, new decisions were announced on settlement activity and Palestinian reform remained stalled.

In terms of specific events, the previous month was marked by the first major suicide bombing since March and a number of Israeli military operations, incursions and acts of destruction. On 31 August, 16 Israelis were killed and more than 100 injured in a double suicide bombing on two buses in the Israeli city of Be'er Sheva. Responsibility for that terror attack was claimed by Hamas, which stated that it was an act of revenge for Israel's assassinations of its spiritual leader and his successor in the spring. In all, 80 Palestinians and 17 Israelis were killed in five weeks; 630 Palestinians and 133 Israelis were injured. Violence in and around Gaza continued. On several occasions, Palestinian militants launched Qassam rockets and mortar shells against Israeli settlements in Gaza and against the Israeli town of Sderot, causing damage and injury. On 6 September, Israeli helicopter gunships, tanks and warplanes attacked a Hamas training site in Gaza City, killing 14 Palestinians—mostly militants—and injuring 30 others, leading to further retaliatory action.

The Israeli policy of confiscating and/or leveling Palestinian land in the context of military operations and for the construction of the wall also continued. Israel was revising long sections of the barrier route in accordance with a ruling of the Israeli Supreme Court, which also instructed the Government to respond to the advisory opinion rendered by ICJ on 9 July. Meanwhile, however, Israel continued to construct the barrier east of Jerusalem, and there were reports that construction would be speeded up south of Jerusalem. The UN Secretariat was working on terms of reference for establishing a registry of damages, as requested by the General Assembly. On 31 August, Prime Minister Sharon underlined his commitment to implement the withdrawal of all armed forces from Gaza and parts of the West Bank and to evacuate all settlements in the Gaza Strip, as well as four settlements in the northern West Bank, and outlined a timetable for the legislative process arising from the plan, which had already begun. On 14 September, the Israeli security cabinet approved the legislative package for the implementation of the disengagement plan, including principles for the evacuation of settlements and compensation for settlement residents. The Government also approved advance compensation for those settlers relocating voluntarily.

For its part, the PA failed to make progress on its obligation to end the violence and combat terror and to institute meaningful reform measures, despite President Arafat's statements on commitment to reform. On the positive side, the voter registration process began on 4 September under the auspices of the Central Elections Commission.

Quartet meeting (22 September)

The Quartet, meeting informally in New York on 22 September, issued a statement [SG/2091] in which it reaffirmed its 4 May communiqué (see p. 460). It noted that the situation remained difficult and no significant progress was made on the road map. The Quartet said that genuine action was needed so that an empowered Palestinian Prime Minister and cabinet could fulfil the PA's obligations under the road map, including an end to violence and terrorism and the dismantlement of terrorist capabilities and infrastructure. It also noted the need for the PA to prepare for assumption of control over Gaza, in particular by reforming its security forces and re-establishing the rule of law. Welcoming steps towards Palestinian municipal elections, it urged Israel and the PA to cooperate towards that goal. It also urged Israel to dismantle settlement outposts erected since March 2001 and to impose a settlement freeze. In addition, Israel should ease the humanitarian and economic plight of the Palestinian people. Taking note of the 9 July ICJ advisory opinion on the Israeli separation barrier, the Quartet urged positive action by Israel with respect to the barrier's route. It encouraged Prime Minister Sharon's intention to withdraw from all Gaza settlements and parts of the West Bank and for the two parties to coordinate implementation of the withdrawal.

Escalation of violence

Communications (23 September–4 October).

On 23 September [A/59/380-S/2004/757], Israel said that on the previous day a Palestinian suicide bomber killed two Israeli security officers and wounded 30 civilians in northern Jerusalem. On 23 September, Palestinian gunmen killed three military personnel in Gaza.

In communications dated between 27 September and 4 October [A/ES-10/282-S/2004/761, A/ES-10/283-S/2004/776, A/ES-10/285-S/2004/790, A/ES-10/284-S/2004/782], the Permanent Observer of Palestine said that, on 26 September, Israel killed Izzedine Al-Sheikh Khalil, a leader of Hamas, when a car bomb was detonated in Damascus, Syrian Arab Republic. On 29 and 30 September, IDF killed at least 33 Palestinians and wounded more than 100 others in Gaza. On 1 October, 8 more Palestinian civilians were killed and 17 others wounded by Israeli forces in continued military attacks at the Jabaliya refugee camp.

On 1 October [A/59/425-S/2004/808], Turkey transmitted to the Secretary-General the final communiqué of the annual coordination meeting of Foreign Ministers of the States members of the Organization of the Islamic Conference (New York, 28 September). The meeting took note of Israel's defiant response to the ICJ advisory opinion and called for further measures to be taken by the United Nations, in accordance with paragraph 5 of resolution ES-10/15 (see p. 465). It also called on UN Member States to prevent any products of the Israeli settlements from entering their markets, to decline entry to Israeli settlers and to impose sanctions against companies and entities involved in the construction of the wall in the Occupied Palestinian Territory.

On 4 October [S/2004/795], the Permanent Observer of LAS transmitted to the Security Council President the text of a resolution on the deterioration of the situation in the Palestinian territories, adopted by the extraordinary session of the LAS Council (Cairo, Egypt, 3 October). The resolution, among other things, called on the Quartet to take a decisive stand to stop the Israeli aggression against the Palestinian people and requested the Secretary-General to report on the crimes and practices of Israel in the occupied territories.

Security Council consideration (4-5 October).

At the request of Tunisia on behalf of the Arab Group and LAS [S/2004/779], the Security Council, on 4 and 5 October [meetings 5049 & 5051], considered the situation in the Middle East, including the Palestinian question.

Speaking on 4 October, the Permanent Observer of Palestine said that since 29 September, IDF had killed 83 Palestinians, including 20 children, injured hundreds and caused widespread destruction, including the demolition of homes and the destruction of farmland, economic installations and infrastructure such as roads, water and electricity networks. The bulk of those losses occurred when IDF swept through the northern part of the Gaza Strip, including the Jabaliya refugee camp, rushing more than 2,000 soldiers, 100 tanks and 100 armoured vehicles and bulldozers to the area, in addition to helicopter gunships. Hundreds of Palestinians were without shelter as a result. Tens of thousands were without water or electricity and were suffering from severe shortages of food and medicine. Israel claimed that it swept through the northern part of the Gaza Strip and committed those acts in response to the launching of rockets from that area on an Israeli town that resulted in the killing of two Israeli children. There was absolutely no justification, under any circumstances, for the Israelis to carry out widespread killing and destruction. Perhaps what was taking place in Gaza was related in some way to the so-called unilateral disengagement plan, which was aimed at dismantling the settlements and military installations in the Gaza Strip, as well as four settlement outposts in the northern West Bank, while laying siege to the Gaza Strip and maintaining control over its land, airspace and water. The plan also aimed at continuing the construction of the separation wall and the building of settlements in the West Bank. In brief, it aimed at a long-term movement to surround the Gaza Strip while maintaining the colonization of the West Bank.

Israel said that on 29 September two Israeli children were murdered by Qassam rockets fired at the Israeli town of Sderot. The Palestinian terror organization Hamas claimed responsibility for that attack, which was only the latest of such incidents. Palestinian terror organizations had been producing Qassam rockets in workshops dispersed throughout the Gaza Strip. The ease with which those rockets were hidden, transported and launched made them a weapon of choice. Those rocket attacks from Gaza did not target only Israeli civilians; Palestinian lives were also put at risk by terrorists' use of human shields. Virtually all terrorist fire directed from Gaza against Israeli targets emanated from crowds or residential buildings, and explosive charges and mines were planted within the civilian infrastructure. Israel was compelled to act in accordance with its right and duty of self-defence in an effort to halt the firing of rockets and the murder of its citizens. While the latest operation was broader than its predecessors, it was relatively limited, with the aim of refraining from deeply penetrating densely populated areas.

On 5 October, a vote was taken on a draft resolution [S/2004/783] submitted by Algeria, Pakistan and Tunisia, by which the Security Council would have demanded the immediate cessation of all military operations in northern Gaza and the withdrawal of the Israeli occupying forces from that area. The vote was 11 to 1, with 3 abstentions. The draft resolution was not adopted owing to the negative vote of a permanent member of the Council (United States). Speaking after the vote, the United Kingdom said that the draft resolution wrongly gave the impression that fault lay only with the Israeli side. The responsibility for taking steps to end the violence lay with both sides; for that reason, the United Kingdom abstained. France said it voted in favour of the draft resolution for it called for an immediate cessation of Israeli military operations in the north of Gaza and included a condemnation of acts of terror and the need for the speedy implementation of the road map. Those two factors were essential and ensured that the text was balanced.

Communications (7-18 October). In communications dated between 7 and 18 October [A/ES-10/286-S/2004/801, A/59/427-S/2004/806, A/ES-10/287-S/2004/811, A/ES-10/288-S/2004/816, A/ES-10/289-S/2004/824], the Permanent Observer of Palestine said that in a one-week period IDF killed 26 Palestinian children in northern Gaza. At least 21 Palestinian civilians were killed by IDF between 7 and 11 October. On 14 October, Israeli forces killed five more Palestinians in two air missile strikes against refugee camps in Gaza. In the three-week period since 29 September, IDF killed at least 150 Palestinians and injured at least 500 others.

Security Council consideration (22 October). On 22 October [meeting 5060], the Council heard a briefing by the USG for Political Affairs, Mr. Prendergast, who said a major Israeli military operation in the Gaza Strip resulted in the deaths of large numbers of Palestinians. Since the last monthly briefing (see p. 469), 206 Palestinians and 13 Israelis were killed and 1,033 Palestinians and 62 Israelis were injured. Violence in and around the Gaza Strip sharply escalated during the reporting period and the Occupied Palestinian Territory drifted towards chaos. On 29 September, Qassam rockets fired from Gaza at the Israeli town of Sderot killed two children. The next day, Israel launched a major military operation in northern Gaza. A large contingent of Israeli troops entered Beit Lahiya, Beit Hanoun and the Jabaliya refugee camp. By 15 October, when Israeli troops started redeploying, 135 Palestinians had been killed in Gaza, 114 of them in the northern part of the Strip. UN agencies' operations were severely affected by Israeli restrictions on movement. During the reporting period, UNRWA was forced to suspend many of its normal operations, including the resumption of emergency food aid in the Gaza Strip. With few exceptions, since 21 September, Israeli forces had denied UN personnel unimpeded access into Gaza, hindering the delivery of humanitarian aid. Israel continued its policies of demolishing houses and of confiscating and/or levelling Palestinian land for the construction of the barrier, which continued, especially around Jerusalem. On 11 October, Prime Minister Sharon stated that Israel adhered to its support of the road map, which he said was the only plan to enable progress towards a viable political agreement. His withdrawal initiative was scheduled to enter the legislative process in the Knesset (parliament) on 25 October.

Communications (25 October and 2 November). On 25 October [A/ES-10/290-S/2004/856], the Permanent Observer of Palestine said that from 18 to 25 October, IDF killed 31 Palestinians and wounded dozens of other people. On 25 October, IDF launched a large-scale military attack on the Khan Younis refugee camp in Gaza.

On 2 November [A/59/548-S/2004/880], Israel said that the day before a Palestinian suicide bomber killed three Israeli civilians and wounded 30 others in Tel Aviv.

Further developments in the peace process

Security Council consideration (15 November and 16 December). The Security Council, on 15 November [meeting 5077], heard a briefing by the Special Coordinator for the Middle East Peace Process, Mr. Roed-Larsen. He said that on 11 November, President Arafat died in a hospital in Paris. A funeral ceremony was held for him in Cairo on 12 November, before he was buried in Ramallah. The Palestinian leadership had taken steps towards a smooth transition of power and, by and large, prevented unrest in the areas under PA control.

The Middle East had reached a critical juncture even before the death of President Arafat. In late October, the Israeli Knesset approved Prime Minister Sharon's initiative to withdraw from the Gaza Strip and parts of the West Bank. That historic decision paved the way for the evacuation of Israeli settlements in the Occupied Palestinian Territory for the first time since the occupation began in 1967. The recent violence followed a pattern that had emerged since September 2000 and especially in 2004, with Palestinian extremists and militants organizing and carrying out suicide bombings and other acts of terror against Israeli civilians, as they did once again on 1 November, killing three people in Tel Aviv and wounding many more. Palestinian militants also fired Qassam rockets and mortar shells against cities inside Israel and against Israeli targets in the Occupied Palestinian Territory. Israel maintained the illegal practice of targeted assassinations, including in densely populated areas where there was a high risk of so-called collateral damage. Israel's military operations and incursions in the occupied territories raised the spectre of disproportionate use of force and collective punishment through the destruction of civilian property and infrastructure.

Briefing the Council on 16 December [meeting 5102], the USG for Political Affairs, Mr. Prendergast, said that there had been a marked number of positive developments since the 15 November briefing, which afforded a window of opportunity to revitalize the peace process. Significant strides were made towards ensuring that the Palestinian presidential elections scheduled for 9 January 2005 would be conducted in a free and fair manner, in accordance with international standards, and monitored by more than 400 international electoral observers, with UN technical assistance provided to the Central Elections Commission. Registration for Palestinian voters reopened on 24 November and continued until 1 December. Campaigning would officially begin on 26 December and last through 7 January 2005.

Security reform and the establishment of full control by the PA over the Palestinian areas continued to be a major challenge facing the Palestinian leadership. The Israeli Government contributed to enabling a positive transition period following the death of President Arafat. Security cooperation between the parties resumed. Israel scaled back military activity in areas under PA control, and Prime Minister Sharon announced his willingness to cease all military incursions into Palestinian areas if calm prevailed. In recognition of a long-standing Quartet condition, Mr. Sharon said that Israel would want to coordinate security arrangements with the PA for the planned withdrawal of Israeli troops and settlers from the Gaza Strip and parts of the West Bank and for the transfer of the evacuated areas to the Palestinians. In addition, Mr. Sharon publicly acknowledged that incitement in the Palestinian media had dropped noticeably, in accordance with Palestinian obligations under the road map. The overall level of violence had dropped during the period under review, but casualty figures were still too high; 52 Palestinians and seven Israelis were killed, and 172 Palestinians and 29 Israelis were injured. While there was a reduction in the number of incidents, Palestinian militants continued to fire mortar shells and Qassam rockets against Israeli settlements and targets inside Israel. Israel continued to demolish houses and restricted movement for the Palestinians, although in an eased form. Israel's construction of the barrier in the West Bank also continued, with worrisome consequences for Palestinians, despite Israel's revision of the barrier's route, closer to the Green Line.

Meanwhile, the Quartet principals, at a meeting on 23 November in Sharm el-Sheikh, Egypt, discussed the transition in the PA and agreed that the immediate priorities were to provide technical support for the elections and to help ensure the fiscal stability of the Palestinian governing body.

In a later briefing to the Council [meeting 5111], Mr. Prendergast said that the first round of elections to Palestinian municipal councils was held in 26 communities on 23 December, with some 150,000 eligible voters choosing from among more than 800 candidates. Those elections—the first at the municipal level since 1967—witnessed a voter turnout of up to 81 per cent. Women won 51 out of the total of 297 seats. The next round of local elections was due to take place in 11 communities in Gaza on 27 January 2005.

Communications (29-30 December). In a 29 December letter [A/ES-10/291-S/2004/1028], the Permanent Observer of Palestine said that, as 2004 came to a close, the situation in the Occupied Palestinian Territory continued to be critical. IDF killed nearly 1,000 Palestinians during the year and injured thousands more, while causing massive destruction of homes, properties, land and infrastructure, particularly in and around the refugee camps of the Gaza Strip. Even after the death of President Arafat, Israel continued to wage its military campaign, inflicting almost daily casualties on the Palestinian civilian population. Since 25 October, at least 113 Palestinians were killed as a result of the ongoing violence and attacks. In addition, Israel continued to construct the wall and to expand its settlements. Despite the assurances given by Israel that it would not hinder the election process, it continued to restrict movement, preventing candidates from campaigning and creating obstacles for voter registration. On 30 December [A/ES-10/292-S/2004/1029], the Permanent Observer made similar claims.

Jerusalem

East Jerusalem, where most of the city's Arab inhabitants lived, remained one of the most sensitive issues in the Middle East peace process and a focal point of concern for the United Nations in 2004.

Committee on Palestinian Rights. In its annual report [A/59/35], the Committee on the Exercise of the Inalienable Rights of the Palestinian People (Committee on Palestinian Rights) said that in and around East Jerusalem settlement activity proceeded at a rate unmatched since 1992. Settlement activity connecting East Jerusalem and the "Ma'ale Adumim" settlement could result in splitting the West Bank into two separate Palestinian cantons, having serious implications for the territorial contiguity of the West Bank. In addition, the construction by Israel of the wall in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including in and around East Jerusalem, continued to cause great hardship to the Palestinians.

Transfer of diplomatic missions

Report of Secretary-General. On 12 October [A/59/431], the Secretary-General reported that five Member States, including Israel, had replied to his request for information on steps taken or envisaged to implement General Assembly resolution 58/22 [YUN 2003, p. 484], which addressed the transfer by some States of their diplomatic missions to Jerusalem in violation of Security Council resolution 478(1980) [YUN 1980, p. 426]. Israel viewed those resolutions as unbalanced and said that they threatened to prejudice the outcome of the Middle East peace process. The Syrian Arab Republic said Council resolution 478(1980) affirmed that Israel's decision to impose its laws, jurisdiction and administration on Jerusalem was illegal and consequently null and void and lacking in validity. The respondents made no mention of specific steps taken to implement resolution 58/22.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 1 December [meeting 64], the General Assembly adopted resolution 59/32 [draft: A/59/L.39] by recorded vote (155-7-15) [agenda item 36].

Jerusalem

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 181(II) of 29 November 1947, in particular its provisions regarding the City of Jerusalem,

Recalling also its resolution 36/120 E of 10 December 1981 and all subsequent resolutions, including resolution 56/31 of 3 December 2001, in which it, inter alia, determined that all legislative and administrative measures and actions taken by Israel, the occupying Power, which have altered or purported to alter the character and status of the Holy City of Jerusalem, in particular the so-called "Basic Law" on Jerusalem and the proclamation of Jerusalem as the capital of Israel, were null and void and must be rescinded forthwith,

Recalling further Security Council resolutions relevant to Jerusalem, including resolution 478(1980) of 20 August 1980, in which the Council, inter alia, decided not to recognize the "Basic Law" and called upon those States which had established diplomatic missions in Jerusalem to withdraw such missions from the Holy City,

Recalling the advisory opinion rendered on 9 July 2004 by the International Court of Justice on the Legal Consequences of the Construction of a Wall in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, and recalling resolution ES-10/15 of 20 July 2004,

Expressing its grave concern at any action taken by any body, governmental or non-governmental, in violation of the above-mentioned resolutions,

Reaffirming that the international community, through the United Nations, has a legitimate interest in the question of the City of Jerusalem and the protection of the unique spiritual, religious and cultural dimensions of the city, as foreseen in relevant United Nations resolutions on this matter,

Having considered the report of the Secretary-General,

1. Reiterates its determination that any actions taken by Israel to impose its laws, jurisdiction and administration on the Holy City of Jerusalem are illegal and therefore null and void and have no validity whatsoever;

2. Deplores the transfer by some States of their diplomatic missions to Jerusalem in violation of Security Council resolution 478(1980), and calls once more upon those States to abide by the provisions of the relevant United Nations resolutions, in conformity with the Charter of the United Nations;

3. Stresses that a comprehensive, just and lasting solution to the question of the City of Jerusalem should take into account the legitimate concerns of both the Palestinian and Israeli sides and should include internationally guaranteed provisions to ensure the freedom of religion and of conscience of its inhabitants, as well as permanent, free and unhindered access to the holy places by the people of all religions and nationalities;

4. Requests the Secretary-General to report to the General Assembly at its sixtieth session on the implementation of the present resolution.

RECORDED VOTE ON RESOLUTION 59/32:

Economic and social situation

A June report on the economic and social repercussions of the Israeli occupation on the living conditions of Palestinians in the occupied territory, including Jerusalem, and of the Arab population in the occupied Syrian Golan [A/59/89-E/2004/21] was prepared by the Economic and Social Commission for Western Asia (ESCWA), in accordance with Economic and Social Council resolution 2003/59 [YUN 2003, p. 486] and General Assembly resolution 58/229 [ibid., p. 487]; it covered developments since the last ESCWA report [ibid., p. 485].

The report noted that the occupation of Palestinian territory by Israel continued to deepen the economic and social hardship for Palestinians. The Israeli army continued to resort to extrajudicial killings, arbitrary detention, household demolition, severe mobility restrictions and closure policies. Economic indicators showed negative trends: unemployment reaching 70 per cent in some areas; greater dependence on food aid; and untold losses from physical destruction of Palestinian homes, public buildings, agricultural assets, infrastructure and private property. Israel's confiscation of Palestinian land and water resources for settlements and the erection of the West Bank wall accelerated, affecting one third of West Bank inhabitants, mostly refugees, women and children. Malnutrition and other health problems afflicted a growing number of Palestinians at a time of curtailed access to needed services. Israeli restrictions regularly impeded humanitarian services to the Occupied Palestinian Territory, while Israeli settlements and the construction of a barrier in the occupied territories continued to fuel the Israeli-Palestinian conflict. At the same time, expansion of Israeli settlements in the occupied Syrian Golan Heights continued unabated. Access to natural resources and social services, in particular schooling, higher education and medical facilities, remained inadequate for the Arab population in the Golan Heights.

ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL ACTION

On 23 July [meeting 50], the Economic and Social Council adopted resolution 2004/54 [draft: E/2004/L.25, orally amended] by recorded vote (51-1-1) [agenda item 11].

Economic and social repercussions of the Israeli occupation on the living conditions of the Palestinian people in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including Jerusalem, and the Arab population in the occupied Syrian Golan

Recalling General Assembly resolution 58/229 of 23 December 2003,

Also recalling its resolution 2003/59 of 24 July 2003,

Guided by the principles of the Charter of the United Nations affirming the inadmissibility of the acquisition of territory by force, and recalling relevant Security Council resolutions, including resolutions 242(1967) of 22 November 1967, 338(1973) of 22 October 1973, 446(1979) of 22 March 1979, 452(1979) of 20 July 1979, 465(1980) of 1 March 1980, 476(1980) of 30 June 1980, 478(1980) of 20 August 1980, 497(1981) of 17 December 1981, 904(1994) of 18 March 1994, 1073(1996) of 28 September 1996, 1397(2002) of 12 March 2002, 1515(2003) of 19 November 2003 and 1544(2004) of 19 May 2004,

Recalling the resolutions of the tenth emergency special session of the General Assembly, including resolutions ES-10/13 of 21 October 2003, ES-10/14 of 8 December 2003 and ES-10/15 of 20 July 2004,

Reaffirming the applicability of the Geneva Convention relative to the Protection of Civilian Persons in Time of War, of 12 August 1949, to the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, and other Arab territories occupied by Israel since 1967,

Stressing the importance of the revival of the Middle East peace process on the basis of Security Council resolutions 242(1967), 338(1973), 425(1978) of 19 March 1978, 1397(2002), 1515(2003) and 1544 (2004) and the principle of land for peace, as well as compliance with the agreements reached between the Government of Israel and the Palestine Liberation Organization, the representative of the Palestinian people,

Reaffirming the principle of the permanent sovereignty of peoples under foreign occupation over their natural resources,

Convinced that the Israeli occupation has gravely impeded the efforts to achieve sustainable development and a sound economic environment in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, and the occupied Syrian Golan,

Gravely concerned about the deterioration of the economic and living conditions of the Palestinian people in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, and of the Arab population of the occupied Syrian Golan and the exploitation by Israel, the occupying Power, of their natural resources,

Gravely concerned also by the grave impact on the economic and social conditions of the Palestinian people caused by the construction of the wall by Israel inside the Occupied Palestinian Territory and the resulting violation of their economic and social rights, including the rights to work, to health, to education and to an adequate standard of living,

Gravely concerned at the extensive destruction by Israel, the occupying Power, of agricultural land and orchards in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, during the recent period, including, and in particular, as a result of the construction of the wall,

Acknowledging the advisory opinion rendered on 9 July 2004 by the International Court of Justice on the Legal Consequences of the Construction of a Wall in the Occupied Palestinian Territory,

Expressing grave concern about the continuation of the recent tragic and violent events since September 2000 that have led to many deaths and injuries,

Aware of the important work being done by the United Nations and the specialized agencies in support of the economic and social development of the Palestinian people, as well as the assistance being provided in the humanitarian field,

Conscious of the urgent need for the reconstruction and development of the economic and social infrastructure of the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, as well as the urgent need to address the dire humanitarian crisis facing the Palestinian people,

Calling upon both parties to fulfil their obligations under the road map in cooperation with the Quartet,

1. Stresses the need to preserve the national unity and the territorial integrity of the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, and to guarantee the freedom of movement of persons and goods in the Territory, including the removal of restrictions on going into and from East Jerusalem, and the freedom of movement to and from the outside world;

2. Also stresses the vital importance of the construction and operation of the seaport in Gaza and safe passage for the economic and social development of the Palestinian people;

3. Demands the complete cessation of all acts of violence, including all acts of terror, provocation, incitement and destruction;

4. Calls upon Israel, the occupying Power, to end its occupation of Palestinian cities, towns and other populated centres, to end the imposition of all forms of closure and curfew and to cease its destruction of homes and properties, economic institutions and agricultural fields;

5. Reaffirms the inalienable right of the Palestinian people and the Arab population of the occupied Syrian Golan to all their natural and economic resources, and calls upon Israel, the occupying Power, not to exploit, endanger or cause loss or depletion of these resources;

6. Also reaffirms that Israeli settlements in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, and the occupied Syrian Golan are illegal and an obstacle to economic and social development;

7. Stresses the importance of the work of the organizations and agencies of the United Nations and of the United Nations Special Coordinator for the Middle East Peace Process and Personal Representative of the Secretary-General to the Palestine Liberation Organization and the Palestinian Authority;

8. Urges Member States to encourage private foreign investment in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, in infrastructure, job-creation projects and social development in order to alleviate the hardship of the Palestinian people and improve their living conditions;

9. Requests the Secretary-General to submit to the General Assembly at its fifty-ninth session, through the Economic and Social Council, a report on the implementation of the present resolution and to continue to include in the report of the United Nations Special Coordinator an update on the living conditions of the Palestinian people, in collaboration with relevant United Nations agencies;

10. Decides to include the item entitled "Economic and social repercussions of the Israeli occupation on the living conditions of the Palestinian people in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, and the Arab population in the occupied Syrian Golan" in the agenda of its substantive session of 2005.

RECORDED VOTE ON RESOLUTION 2004/54:

In favour: Armenia, Azerbaijan, Bangladesh, Belgium, Belize, Benin, Bhutan, Burundi, Canada, Chile, China, Colombia, Congo, Cuba, Ecuador, Finland, France, Germany, Ghana, Greece, Guatemala, Hungary, India, Indonesia, Ireland, Italy, Jamaica, Japan, Kenya, Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Malaysia, Mauritius, Mozambique, Namibia, Nicaragua, Nigeria, Panama, Poland, Qatar, Republic of Korea, Russian Federation, Saudi Arabia, Senegal, Sweden, Tunisia, Turkey, Ukraine, United Arab Emirates, United Kingdom, United Republic of Tanzania, Zimbabwe.

Against: United States.

Abstaining: Australia.

On the same date (decision 2004/298), the Council took note of the note by the Secretary-General transmitting the report prepared by ESCWA (see p. 474).

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 22 December [meeting 75], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Second (Economic and Financial) Committee [A/59/489], adopted resolution 59/251 by recorded vote (156-5-11) [agenda item 91].

Permanent sovereignty of the Palestinian people in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, and of the Arab population in the occupied Syrian Golan over their natural resources

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 58/229 of 23 December 2003, and taking note of Economic and Social Council resolution 2004/54 of 23 July 2004,

Recalling also its resolution 58/292 of 6 May 2004,

Reaffirming the principle of the permanent sovereignty of peoples under foreign occupation over their natural resources,

Guided by the principles of the Charter of the United Nations, affirming the inadmissibility of the acquisition of territory by force, and recalling relevant Security Council resolutions, including resolutions 242(1967) of 22 November 1967, 465(1980) of 1 March 1980 and 497(1981) of 17 December 1981,

Recalling its resolution 2625(XXV) of 24 October 1970,

Reaffirming the applicability of the Geneva Convention relative to the Protection of Civilian Persons in Time of War, of 12 August 1949, to the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, and other Arab territories occupied by Israel since 1967,

Recalling the advisory opinion rendered on 9 July 2004 by the International Court of Justice on the Legal Consequences of the Construction of a Wall in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, and recalling also its resolution ES-10/15 of 20 July 2004,

Expressing its concern at the exploitation by Israel, the occupying Power, of the natural resources of the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, and other Arab territories occupied by Israel since 1967,

Expressing its concern also at the extensive destruction by Israel, the occupying Power, of agricultural land and orchards in the Occupied Palestinian Territory during the recent period, including the uprooting of a vast number of olive trees,

Aware of the detrimental impact of the Israeli settlements on Palestinian and other Arab natural resources, especially as a result of the confiscation of land and the forced diversion of water resources, and of the dire economic and social consequences in this regard,

Aware also of the detrimental impact on Palestinian natural resources being caused by the unlawful construction of the wall by Israel, the occupying Power, in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including in and around East Jerusalem, and of its grave effect on the economic and social conditions of the Palestinian people,

Reaffirming the need for the immediate resumption of negotiations within the Middle East peace process, on the basis of Security Council resolutions 242(1967), 338(1973) of 22 October 1973, 425(1978) of 19 March 1978 and 1397(2002) of 12 March 2002, the principle of land for peace and the Quartet performance-based road map to a permanent two-State solution to the Israeli-Palestinian conflict, as endorsed by the Security Council in its resolution 1515(2003) of 19 November 2003, and for the achievement of a final settlement on all tracks,

Recalling the need to end all acts of violence, including acts of terror, provocation, incitement and destruction,

Taking note of the note by the Secretary-General transmitting the report prepared by the Economic and Social Commission for Western Asia on the economic and social repercussions of the Israeli occupation on the living conditions of the Palestinian people in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including Jerusalem, and of the Arab population in the occupied Syrian Golan,

1. Reaffirms the inalienable rights of the Palestinian people and the population of the occupied Syrian Golan over their natural resources, including land and water;

2. Calls upon Israel, the occupying Power, not to exploit, damage, cause loss or depletion of or endanger the natural resources in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, and in the occupied Syrian Golan;

3. Recognizes the right of the Palestinian people to claim restitution as a result of any exploitation, damage, loss or depletion, or endangerment of their natural resources, and expresses the hope that this issue will be dealt with in the framework of the final status negotiations between the Palestinian and Israeli sides;

4. Requests the Secretary-General to report to it at its sixtieth session on the implementation of the present resolution, and decides to include in the provisional agenda of its sixtieth session the item entitled "Permanent sovereignty of the Palestinian people in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, and of the Arab population in the occupied Syrian Golan over their natural resources".

RECORDED VOTE ON RESOLUTION 59/251:

In favour: Afghanistan, Algeria, Andorra, Angola, Antigua and Barbuda, Argentina, Armenia, Austria, Azerbaijan, Bahamas, Bahrain, Bangladesh, Barbados, Belarus, Belgium, Belize, Benin, Bolivia, Bosnia and Herzegovina, Botswana, Brazil, Brunei Darussalam, Bulgaria, Burkina Faso, Burundi, Cambodia, Canada, Cape Verde, Chile, China, Colombia, Comoros, Congo, Costa Rica, Croatia, Cuba, Cyprus, Czech Republic, Democratic People's Republic of Korea, Denmark, Djibouti, Dominica, Ecuador, Egypt, El Salvador, Eritrea, Estonia, Ethiopia, Fiji, Finland, France, Gabon, Georgia, Germany, Ghana, Greece, Grenada, Guatemala, Guyana, Hungary, Iceland, India, Indonesia, Iran, Iraq, Ireland, Italy, Jamaica, Japan, Jordan, Kazakhstan, Kenya, Kuwait, Lao People's Democratic Republic, Latvia, Lebanon, Lesotho, Liberia, Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Liechtenstein, Lithuania, Luxembourg, Madagascar, Malaysia, Maldives, Mali, Malta, Mauritius, Mexico, Monaco, Mongolia, Morocco, Mozambique, Myanmar, Namibia, Nepal, Netherlands, New Zealand, Nicaragua, Niger, Nigeria, Norway, Oman, Pakistan, Panama, Paraguay, Peru, Philippines, Poland, Portugal, Qatar, Republic of Korea, Republic of Moldova, Romania, Russian Federation, Saint Lucia, Saint Vincent and the Grenadines, San Marino, Sao Tome and Principe, Saudi Arabia, Senegal, Serbia and Montenegro, Seychelles, Sierra Leone, Singapore, Slovakia, Slovenia, Somalia, South Africa, Spain, Sri Lanka, Sudan, Suriname, Sweden, Switzerland, Syrian Arab Republic, Thailand, The former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia, Timor-Leste, Togo, Trinidad and Tobago, Tunisia, Turkey, Turkmenistan, Uganda, Ukraine, United Arab Emirates, United Kingdom, United Republic of Tanzania, Uruguay, Uzbekistan, Venezuela, Viet Nam, Yemen, Zambia, Zimbabwe.

Other aspects

Special Committee on Israeli Practices. In response to General Assembly resolution 58/96 [YUN 2003, p. 490], the Special Committee to Investigate Israeli Practices Affecting the Human Rights of the Palestinian People and Other Arabs of the Occupied Territories, in September, reported for the thirty-sixth time to the General Assembly on events and the human rights situation in the territories it considered occupied—the Golan Heights, the West Bank, including East Jerusalem, and the Gaza Strip [A/59/381]. The report reflected the substance of information gathered during the Committee's mission to Lebanon, Egypt and the Syrian Arab Republic from 25 May to 8 June. In those three countries, the Committee met with 84 witnesses representing associations of Palestinian refugees in Lebanon, Palestinian non-governmental organizations (NGOs) from the occupied territories and Israeli NGOs, as well as individuals from Syria. The report reviewed the human rights situation in the occupied territories and described developments in relation to the human rights situation in the occupied Syrian Golan.

The Committee urged international and national media to give the matter broader coverage in order to make the appalling human rights situation of Palestinians and other Arabs in the occupied territories better known to the world. National public opinion, concerned civil society groups and diplomatic, academic and other circles should take the lead in assembling and disseminating information about the violations of international law and international humanitarian law perpetrated daily in the Occupied Palestinian Territory that were generating destruction of human life, infrastructure, cultivated land and economic wealth. The construction of the wall was causing major changes to the social fabric of Palestinian communities. The Committee was also alarmed at the regional and international dimensions of the Palestinian issue and was convinced that the international community had to act, especially in view of the advisory opinion rendered by ICJ and the ensuing adoption by the General Assembly of resolution ES-10/15 (see p. 465).

Report of Secretary-General. On 9 September [A/59/345], the Secretary-General informed the General Assembly that Israel had not replied to his August request for information on steps taken or envisaged to implement Assembly resolution 58/99 [YUN 2003, p. 489], demanding that Israel, among other things, cease all practices and actions that violated the human rights of the Palestinian people, and condemning all acts of terror, provocation, incitement and destruction, especially the excessive use of force by Israeli forces against Palestinian civilians.

Commission on Human Rights. In a 27 February addendum [E/CN.4/2004/6/Add.1] to his September 2003 report on the human rights situation in the occupied territories [YUN 2003, p. 488], the Special Rapporteur of the Commission on Human Rights, John Dugard (South Africa), stated that the situation was characterized by serious violations of human rights law, and that terrorism was a constant feature of the conflict in the occupied territories and neighbouring Israel. Both Palestinians and Israelis were responsible for inflicting a reign of terror on civilians.

Focusing on the separation wall being constructed by Israel, the Special Rapporteur said that insofar as it was built on Palestinian territory, it could not be justified as a legitimate or proportionate response to terrorism. The wall, which penetrated deep into Palestinian territory, had resulted in the creation of a zone between the Green Line and the wall inside the Occupied Palestinian Territory. Israel designated that area as "closed" to all Palestinians. Palestinians who lived, farmed, worked or went to school within that closed zone required special permits from the Israeli authorities. Both the construction of the wall and the operation of the permit system for the closed zone had caused great hardships to Palestinians and violated norms of human rights law and international humanitarian law. In addition, the construction of the wall had resulted in large-scale destruction of Palestinian property.

Notice of seizure of land had been served in an arbitrary manner and there were no real means for landowners to contest the seizure. The wall had infrequent gates for the purpose of crossing, thus those farmers granted permits to farm their land had difficulty gaining access. The permit system also interfered with education, health care and family life. There was a real prospect that life would become so intolerable for villagers living in the closed zone that they would abandon their homes and migrate to the West Bank. The main beneficiaries of the wall were settlers: 54 settlements and 142,000 settlers (63 per cent of the West Bank settlement population) would find themselves on the Israeli side of the wall, with access to land separated from its Palestinian owners. The wall might have been justified as a security measure to prevent would-be suicide bombers from entering Israel had it followed the course of the Green Line; however, as it was built largely on Palestinian territory, it could not be justified on those grounds. The route of the wall suggested that its main purpose was the annexation, by de facto means, of additional land for Israel. In addition, the wall violated the prohibition on the acquisition of territory by forcible means, and undermined the right to self-determination of the Palestinian people by reducing the size of a future Palestinian State.

In a 12 August interim report [A/59/256], the Special Rapporteur said that since February, IDF had intensified its military incursions into the Gaza Strip, resulting in deaths and a massive and wanton destruction of property. Despite Israel's announced intention to withdraw from Gaza, in reality it planned to retain ultimate control by controlling its borders, territorial sea and airspace.

The wall that Israel was constructing within the Palestinian territory was held to be contrary to international law by ICJ on 9 July 2004. Israel announced that it would not comply with that advisory opinion, but indicated that it would abide by the ruling of its own High Court in respect of sections of the wall still to be built.

Israel claimed that the purpose of the wall was to secure Israel from terrorist attacks and claimed that such attacks inside Israel had dropped by over 80 per cent as a result of the wall. The Special Rapporteur noted that there was no compelling evidence that suicide bombers could not have been as effectively prevented from entering Israel if the wall had been built along the Green Line or within the Israeli side of that Line. In his view, there were more convincing explanations for the construction of the wall, such as the incorporation of settlers within Israel, the confiscation of Palestinian land and the inducement to Palestinians to leave their lands by making life intolerable for them. In deciding on the route of the wall, Israel had seized rich agricultural land and water resources along the Green Line. In the Jerusalem area, the wall was being built around an expanded East Jerusalem to incorporate some 247,000 settlers in 12 settlements and some 249,000 Palestinians within the wall. The seizure of land in East Jerusalem would have serious implications for Palestinians, for, among other things, it would prohibit over 100,000 Palestinians in West Bank neighbourhoods who were dependent upon the facilities of East Jerusalem, including hospitals, universities, schools, employment and markets for agricultural goods, from entering East Jerusalem.

Freedom of movement was severely curtailed in the West Bank and Gaza. The inhabitants of Gaza were effectively imprisoned by a combination of wall, fence and sea. Within Gaza freedom of movement was severely restricted by road-blocks which effectively divided the small territory. The inhabitants of the West Bank were subjected to a system of curfews and checkpoints that denied freedom of movement. Palestinians living in the West Bank needed permits to travel from one city to another and permits were arbitrarily withheld and seldom granted for private vehicles.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 10 December [meeting 71], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fourth (Special Political and Decolonization) Committee [A/59/471], adopted resolution 59/124 by recorded vote (149-7-22) [agenda item 76].

Israeli practices affecting the human rights of the Palestinian people in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem

The General Assembly,

Recalling its relevant resolutions, including resolution 58/292 of 6 May 2004, as well as those adopted at its tenth emergency special session,

Recalling also the relevant resolutions of the Commission on Human Rights,

Bearing in mind the relevant resolutions of the Security Council,

Having considered the report of the Special Committee to Investigate Israeli Practices Affecting the Human Rights of the Palestinian People and Other Arabs of the Occupied Territories and the report of the Secretary-General,

Taking note of the report of the Human Rights Inquiry Commission established by the Commission on Human Rights and the recent reports of the Special Rapporteur of the Commission on Human Rights on the situation of human rights in the Palestinian territories occupied by Israel since 1967,

Recalling the advisory opinion rendered on 9 July 2004 by the International Court of Justice, and recalling also General Assembly resolution ES-10/15 of 20 July 2004,

Noting in particular the Court's reply, including that the construction of the wall by Israel, the occupying Power, in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including in and around East Jerusalem, and its associated regime are contrary to international law,

Recalling the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights, the International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights and the Convention on the Rights of the Child, and affirming that these human rights instruments must be respected in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem,

Aware of the responsibility of the international community to promote human rights and ensure respect for international law, and recalling in this regard its resolution 2625(XXV) of 24 October 1970,

Reaffirming the principle of the inadmissibility of the acquisition of territory by force,

Reaffirming also the applicability of the Geneva Convention relative to the Protection of Civilian Persons in Time of War, of 12 August 1949, to the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, and other Arab territories occupied by Israel since 1967,

Reaffirming further the obligation of the States parties to the Fourth Geneva Convention under articles 146, 147 and 148 with regard to penal sanctions, grave breaches and responsibilities of the High Contracting Parties,

Reaffirming that all States have the right and the duty to take actions in conformity with international law and international humanitarian law to counter deadly acts of violence against their civilian population in order to protect the lives of their citizens,

Stressing the need for full compliance with the Israeli-Palestinian agreements reached within the context of the Middle East peace process and the implementation of the Quartet road map to a permanent two-State solution to the Israeli-Palestinian conflict,

Concerned about the continuing systematic violation of the human rights of the Palestinian people by Israel, the occupying Power, including that arising from the excessive use of force, the use of collective punishment, the reoccupation and closure of areas, the confiscation of land, the establishment and expansion of settlements, the construction of the wall inside the Occupied Palestinian Territory in departure from the Armistice Line of 1949, the destruction of property and all other actions by it designed to change the legal status, geographical nature and demographic composition of the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem,

Gravely concerned about the military actions that have been carried out since 28 September 2000 and that have led to thousands of deaths among Palestinian civilians, including hundreds of children, and tens of thousands of injuries,

Expressing deep concern about the extensive destruction caused by the Israeli occupying forces, including of religious, cultural and historical sites, of vital infrastructure and institutions of the Palestinian Authority, and of agricultural land throughout Palestinian cities, towns, villages and refugee camps,

Expressing deep concern also about the Israeli policy of closure and the severe restrictions, including curfews, that continue to be imposed on the movement of persons and goods, including medical and humanitarian personnel and goods, throughout the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, and the consequent negative impact on the socio-economic situation of the Palestinian people, which remains that of a dire humanitarian crisis,

Expressing concern that thousands of Palestinians continue to be held in Israeli prisons or detention centres under harsh conditions that impair their well-being, and also expressing concern about the ill-treatment and harassment of any Palestinian prisoners and all reports of torture,

Convinced of the need for an international presence to monitor the situation, to contribute to ending the violence and protecting the Palestinian civilians and to help the parties to implement agreements reached, and, in this regard, recalling the positive contribution of the Temporary International Presence in Hebron,

Stressing the necessity for the full implementation of all relevant Security Council resolutions,

1. Reiterates that all measures and actions taken by Israel, the occupying Power, in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, in violation of the relevant provisions of the Geneva Convention relative to the Protection of Civilian Persons in Time of War, of 12 August 1949, and contrary to the relevant resolutions of the Security Council, are illegal and have no validity;

2. Demands that Israel, the occupying Power, comply fully with the provisions of the Fourth Geneva Convention of 1949 and cease immediately all measures and actions taken in violation and in breach of the Convention, including the extrajudicial executions;

3. Condemns all acts of violence, including all acts of terror, provocation, incitement and destruction, especially the excessive use of force by the Israeli occupying forces against Palestinian civilians, resulting in extensive loss of life, vast numbers of injuries and massive destruction of homes, properties, agricultural lands and vital infrastructure;

4. Expresses grave concern at the use of suicide bombing attacks against Israeli civilians, resulting in extensive loss of life and injury;

5. Condemns the events that occurred in the Jenin refugee camp in April 2002, including the loss of life, injury, widespread destruction and displacement inflicted on many of its civilian inhabitants;

6. Condemns also the killing of Palestinian civilians and the widespread demolition of homes by Israel, the occupying Power, in the Rafah refugee camp in May 2004 and in the Jabaliya refugee camp in October 2004;

7. Demands that Israel, the occupying Power, cease all practices and actions which violate the human rights of the Palestinian people, respect human rights law and comply with its obligations;

8. Demands also that Israel, the occupying Power, comply with its legal obligations under international law, as mentioned in the advisory opinion rendered on 9 July 2004 by the International Court of Justice and as demanded in resolution ES-10/15 and resolution ES-10/13 of 21 October 2003, and that it cease the construction of the wall in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including in and around East Jerusalem, dismantle forthwith the structure situated therein, repeal or render ineffective all legislative and regulatory acts relating thereto, and make reparation for all damage caused by the construction of the wall;

9. Stresses the need to preserve the territorial integrity of all the Occupied Palestinian Territory and to guarantee the freedom of movement of persons and goods within the Palestinian territory, including the removal of restrictions on movement into and from East Jerusalem, and the freedom of movement to and from the outside world;

10. Requests the Secretary-General to report to the General Assembly at its sixtieth session on the implementation of the present resolution.

RECORDED VOTE ON RESOLUTION 59/124:

In favour: Afghanistan, Algeria, Andorra, Antigua and Barbuda, Argentina, Armenia, Austria, Azerbaijan, Bahamas, Bahrain, Bangladesh, Barbados, Belarus, Belgium, Belize, Benin, Bolivia, Bosnia and Herzegovina, Botswana, Brazil, Brunei Darussalam, Bulgaria, Burkina Faso, Burundi, Cambodia, Cape Verde, Chile, China, Colombia, Comoros, Croatia, Cuba, Cyprus, Czech Republic, Democratic People's Republic of Korea, Denmark, Djibouti, Dominica, Ecuador, Egypt, Eritrea, Estonia, Ethiopia, Fiji, Finland, France, Gabon, Georgia, Germany, Ghana, Greece, Guinea, Guinea-Bissau, Guyana, Hungary, India, Indonesia, Iran, Iraq, Ireland, Italy, Jamaica, Japan, Jordan, Kazakhstan, Kuwait, Kyrgyzstan, Lao People's Democratic Republic, Latvia, Lebanon, Lesotho, Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Liechtenstein, Lithuania, Luxembourg, Madagascar, Malaysia, Maldives, Mali, Malta, Mauritania, Mauritius, Mexico, Monaco, Mongolia, Morocco, Mozambique, Myanmar, Namibia, Nepal, Netherlands, New Zealand, Nigeria, Norway, Oman, Pakistan, Panama, Paraguay, Peru, Philippines, Poland, Portugal, Qatar, Republic of Korea, Republic of Moldova, Romania, Russian Federation, Saint Lucia, Saint Vincent and the Grenadines, Samoa, San Marino, Sao Tome and Principe, Saudi Arabia, Senegal, Serbia and Montenegro, Seychelles, Sierra Leone, Singapore, Slovakia, Slovenia, Somalia, South Africa, Spain, Sri Lanka, Sudan, Suriname, Swaziland, Sweden, Switzerland, Syrian Arab Republic, Tajikistan, Thailand, The former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia, Timor-Leste, Togo, Trinidad and Tobago, Tunisia, Turkey, Turkmenistan, Ukraine, United Arab Emirates, United Kingdom, United Republic of Tanzania, Uruguay, Venezuela, Viet Nam, Yemen, Zambia, Zimbabwe.

By resolution 59/179 of 20 December, the Assembly reaffirmed the right of the Palestinian people to self-determination, including the right to their State, and urged all States and UN specialized agencies and organizations to support the Palestinian people in their quest for self-determination (see p. 486).

Work of Special Committee

In a September report [A/59/344], the Secretary-General stated that all necessary facilities were provided to the Special Committee on Israeli Practices, as requested in General Assembly resolution 58/96 [YUN 2003, p. 490]. Arrangements were made for it to meet in March and May in Geneva, and a field mission was carried out to Lebanon, Egypt and the Syrian Arab Republic from 25 May to 8 June. Due to the restrictions imposed on the production of Assembly reports, the Special Committee did not submit periodic reports during the period under review. The UN Department of Public Information continued to provide press coverage of Special Committee meetings and to disseminate information on its activities.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 10 December [meeting 71], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fourth Committee [A/59/471], adopted resolution 59/121 by recorded vote (84-9-80) [agenda item 76].

Work of the Special Committee to Investigate Israeli Practices Affecting the Human Rights of the Palestinian People and Other Arabs of the Occupied Territories

The General Assembly,

Guided by the purposes and principles set forth in the Charter of the United Nations,

Guided also by international humanitarian law, in particular the Geneva Convention relative to the Protection of Civilian Persons in Time of War, of 12 August 1949, as well as international standards of human rights, in particular the Universal Declaration of Human Rights and the International Covenants on Human Rights,

Recalling its relevant resolutions, including resolutions 2443(XXIII) of 19 December 1968 and 58/96 of 9 December 2003, and the relevant resolutions of the Commission on Human Rights,

Recalling also the relevant resolutions of the Security Council,

Taking into account the advisory opinion rendered on 9 July 2004 by the International Court of Justice on the Legal Consequences of the Construction of a Wall in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, and recalling in this regard General Assembly resolution ES-10/15 of 20 July 2004,

Convinced that occupation itself represents a gross and grave violation of human rights,

Gravely concerned about the continuation of the tragic events that have taken place since 28 September 2000, including the excessive use of force by the Israeli occupying forces against Palestinian civilians, resulting in thousands of deaths and injuries,

Having considered the report of the Special Committee to Investigate Israeli Practices Affecting the Human Rights of the Palestinian People and Other Arabs of the Occupied Territories and the relevant reports of the Secretary-General,

Recalling the Declaration of Principles on Interim Self-Government Arrangements of 13 September 1993 and the subsequent implementation agreements between the Palestinian and Israeli sides,

Expressing the hope that the Israeli occupation will be brought to an early end and that therefore the violation of the human rights of the Palestinian people will cease, and recalling in this regard its resolution 58/292 of 6 May 2004,

1. Commends the Special Committee to Investigate Israeli Practices Affecting the Human Rights of the Palestinian People and Other Arabs of the Occupied Territories for its efforts in performing the tasks assigned to it by the General Assembly and for its impartiality;

2. Reiterates its demand that Israel, the occupying Power, cooperate with the Special Committee in implementing its mandate;

3. Deplores those policies and practices of Israel that violate the human rights of the Palestinian people and other Arabs of the occupied territories, as reflected in the report of the Special Committee covering the reporting period;

4. Expresses grave concern about the continuing crisis situation in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, since 28 September 2000, as a result of unlawful Israeli practices and measures, and especially condemns the excessive and indiscriminate use of force against the civilian population, including extrajudicial executions, which has resulted in more than 3,400 Palestinian deaths, including those of more than 750 children, and tens of thousands of injuries;

5. Requests the Special Committee, pending complete termination of the Israeli occupation, to continue to investigate Israeli policies and practices in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, and other Arab territories occupied by Israel since 1967, especially Israeli violations of the Geneva Convention relative to the Protection of Civilian Persons in Time of War, of 12 August 1949, and to consult, as appropriate, with the International Committee of the Red Cross according to its regulations in order to ensure that the welfare and human rights of the peoples of the occupied territories are safeguarded and to report to the Secretary-General as soon as possible and whenever the need arises thereafter;

6. Also requests the Special Committee to submit regularly to the Secretary-General periodic reports on the current situation in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem;

7. Further requests the Special Committee to continue to investigate the treatment of prisoners and detainees in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, and other Arab territories occupied by Israel since 1967;

8. Requests the Secretary-General:

(a) To provide the Special Committee with all necessary facilities, including those required for its visits to the occupied territories, so that it may investigate Israeli policies and practices referred to in the present resolution;

(b) To continue to make available such staff as may be necessary to assist the Special Committee in the performance of its tasks;

(c) To circulate regularly to Member States the periodic reports mentioned in paragraph 6 above;

(d) To ensure the widest circulation of the reports of the Special Committee and of information regarding its activities and findings, by all means available, through the Department of Public Information of the Secretariat and, where necessary, to reprint those reports of the Special Committee that are no longer available;

(e) To report to the General Assembly at its sixtieth session on the tasks entrusted to him in the present resolution;

9. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its sixtieth session the item entitled "Report of the Special Committee to Investigate Israeli Practices Affecting the Human Rights of the Palestinian People and Other Arabs of the Occupied Territories".

RECORDED VOTE ON RESOLUTION 59/121:

In favour: Afghanistan, Algeria, Armenia, Azerbaijan, Bahrain, Bangladesh, Barbados, Belarus, Belize, Benin, Bolivia, Botswana, Brazil, Brunei Darussalam, Burkina Faso, Cambodia, Cape Verde, Chile, China, Colombia, Comoros, Cuba, Democratic People's Republic of Korea, Djibouti, Dominica, Ecuador, Egypt, Gabon, Ghana, Guinea, Guinea-Bissau, Guy-ana, India, Indonesia, Iran, Iraq, Jamaica, Jordan, Kuwait, Lao People's Democratic Republic, Lebanon, Lesotho, Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Madagascar, Malaysia, Maldives, Mali, Mauritania, Mauritius, Morocco, Mozambique, Myanmar, Namibia, Nepal, Nigeria, Oman, Pakistan, Paraguay, Qatar, Saint Lucia, Sao Tome and Principe, Saudi Arabia, Senegal, Sierra Leone, Singapore, Somalia, South Africa, Sri Lanka, Sudan, Suriname, Syrian Arab Republic, Tajikistan, Togo, Trinidad and Tobago, Tunisia, Turkey, Turkmenistan, United Arab Emirates, United Republic of Tanzania, Venezuela, Viet Nam, Yemen, Zambia, Zimbabwe.

Fourth Geneva Convention

Report of Secretary-General. In September [A/59/339], the Secretary-General informed the General Assembly that Israel had not replied to his August request for information on steps taken or envisaged to implement Assembly resolution 58/97 [YUN 2003, p. 491] demanding that Israel accept the de jure applicability of the Fourth Geneva Convention in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, and that it comply scrupulously with its provisions. The Secretary-General noted that he had drawn the attention of all States parties to the Convention to paragraph 3 of resolution 58/97 calling on them to exert all efforts to ensure respect by Israel for the Convention's provisions, and to paragraph 6 of resolution 58/100 [ibid., p. 524] calling on States not to recognize any legislative or administrative measures and actions taken by Israel in the occupied Syrian Golan.

The High Contracting Parties to the Fourth Geneva Convention had reaffirmed the applicability of the Convention to the Occupied Palestinian Territory at meetings in 1999 [YUN 1999, p. 415] and in 2001 [YUN 2001, p. 425].

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 10 December [meeting 71], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fourth Committee [A/59/471], adopted resolution 59/122 by recorded vote (160-7-11) [agenda item 76].

Applicability of the Geneva Convention relative to the Protection of Civilian Persons in Time of War, of 12 August 1949, to the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, and the other occupied Arab territories

The General Assembly,

Recalling its relevant resolutions, including its resolution 58/292 of 6 May 2004,

Recalling also its resolution ES-10/15 of 20 July 2004,

Bearing in mind the relevant resolutions of the Security Council,

Recalling the Regulations annexed to the Hague Convention IV of 1907, the Geneva Convention relative to the Protection of Civilian Persons in Time of War, of 12 August 1949, and relevant provisions of customary law, including those codified in Additional Protocol I to the four Geneva Conventions,

Having considered the report of the Special Committee to Investigate Israeli Practices Affecting the Human Rights of the Palestinian People and Other Arabs of the Occupied Territories and the relevant reports of the Secretary-General,

Considering that the promotion of respect for the obligations arising from the Charter of the United Nations and other instruments and rules of international law is among the basic purposes and principles of the United Nations,

Recalling the advisory opinion rendered on 9 July 2004 by the International Court of Justice, and also recalling General Assembly resolution ES-10/15,

Noting in particular the Court's reply, including that the Fourth Geneva Convention is applicable in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, and that Israel is in breach of several of the provisions of the Convention,

Noting the convening for the first time, on 15 July 1999, of a Conference of High Contracting Parties to the Fourth Geneva Convention, as recommended by the General Assembly in its resolution ES-10/6 of 9 February 1999, on measures to enforce the Convention in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, and to ensure respect thereof in accordance with article 1 common to the four Geneva Conventions, and aware of the statement adopted by the Conference,

Welcoming the reconvening of the Conference of High Contracting Parties to the Fourth Geneva Convention on 5 December 2001 in Geneva and stressing the importance of the Declaration adopted by the Conference, and underlining the need for the parties to follow up the implementation of the Declaration,

Welcoming and encouraging the initiatives by States parties to the Convention, both individually and collectively, according to article 1 common to the four Geneva Conventions, aimed at ensuring respect for the Convention,

Stressing that Israel, the occupying Power, should comply strictly with its obligations under international law, including international humanitarian law,

1. Reaffirms that the Geneva Convention relative to the Protection of Civilian Persons in Time of War, of 12 August 1949, is applicable to the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, and other Arab territories occupied by Israel since 1967;

2. Demands that Israel accept the de jure applicability of the Convention in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, and other Arab territories occupied by Israel since 1967, and that it comply scrupulously with the provisions of the Convention;

3. Calls upon all High Contracting Parties to the Convention, in accordance with article 1 common to the four Geneva Conventions and as mentioned in the advisory opinion of the International Court of Justice of 9 July 2004, to continue to exert all efforts to ensure respect for its provisions by Israel, the occupying

Power, in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, and other Arab territories occupied by Israel since 1967;

4. Reiterates the need for speedy implementation of the relevant recommendations contained in the resolutions of its tenth emergency special session, including resolution ES-10/15, with regard to ensuring respect by Israel, the occupying Power, for the provisions of the Convention;

5. Requests the Secretary-General to report to the General Assembly at its sixtieth session on the implementation of the present resolution.

RECORDED VOTE ON RESOLUTION 59/122:

In favour: Afghanistan, Algeria, Andorra, Antigua and Barbuda, Argentina, Armenia, Austria, Azerbaijan, Bahamas, Bahrain, Bangladesh, Barbados, Belarus, Belgium, Belize, Benin, Bolivia, Bosnia and Herzegovina, Botswana, Brazil, Brunei Darussalam, Bulgaria, Burkina Faso, Burundi, Cambodia, Canada, Cape Verde, Chile, China, Colombia, Comoros, Congo, Costa Rica, Croatia, Cuba, Cyprus, Czech Republic, Democratic People's Republic of Korea, Denmark, Djibouti, Dominica, Ecuador, Egypt, El Salvador, Equatorial Guinea, Eritrea, Estonia, Ethiopia, Fiji, Finland, France, Gabon, Georgia, Germany, Ghana, Greece, Guatemala, Guinea, Guinea-Bissau, Guyana, Honduras, Hungary, Iceland, India, Indonesia, Iran, Ireland, Italy, Jamaica, Japan, Jordan, Kazakhstan, Kenya, Kuwait, Kyrgyzstan, Lao People's Democratic Republic, Latvia, Lebanon, Lesotho, Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Liechtenstein, Lithuania, Luxembourg, Madagascar, Malaysia, Maldives, Mali, Malta, Mauritius, Mexico, Monaco, Mongolia, Morocco, Mozambique, Myanmar, Namibia, Nepal, Netherlands, New Zealand, Nicaragua, Nigeria, Norway, Oman, Pakistan, Panama, Paraguay, Peru, Philippines, Poland, Portugal, Qatar, Republic of Korea, Republic of Moldova, Romania, Russian Federation, Saint Lucia, Saint Vincent and the Grenadines, Samoa, San Marino, Sao Tome and Principe, Saudi Arabia, Senegal, Serbia and Montenegro, Seychelles, Sierra Leone, Singapore, Slovakia, Slovenia, Solomon Islands, Somalia, South Africa, Spain, Sri Lanka, Sudan, Suriname, Swaziland, Sweden, Switzerland, Syrian Arab Republic, Tajikistan, Thailand, The former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia, Timor-Leste, Togo, Tonga, Trinidad and Tobago, Tunisia, Turkey, Turkmenistan, Ukraine, United Arab Emirates, United Kingdom, United Republic of Tanzania, Uruguay, Uzbekistan, Venezuela, Viet Nam, Yemen, Zambia, Zimbabwe.

Against: Grenada, Israel, Marshall Islands, Mauritania, Micronesia, Palau, United States.

Abstaining: Albania, Australia, Cameroon, Côte d'Ivoire, Dominican Republic, Haiti, Nauru, Papua New Guinea, Tuvalu, Uganda, Vanuatu.

Israeli settlements

Report of Secretary-General. On 9 September [A/59/343], the Secretary-General informed the General Assembly that Israel had not replied to his August request for information on steps taken or envisaged to implement the relevant provisions of resolution 58/98 [YUN 2003, p. 492], demanding that Israel, among other things, cease all construction of the wall and new settlements in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 10 December [meeting 71], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fourth Committee [A/59/471], adopted resolution 59/123 by recorded vote (155-8-15) [agenda item 76].

Israeli settlements in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, and the occupied Syrian Golan

The General Assembly,

Guided by the principles set forth in the Charter of the United Nations, and affirming the inadmissibility of the acquisition of territory by force,

Recalling its relevant resolutions, including resolution 58/292 of 6 May 2004, as well as those resolutions adopted at its tenth emergency special session,

Recalling also relevant Security Council resolutions, including resolutions 242(1967) of 22 November 1967, 446(1979) of 22 March 1979, 465(1980) of 1 March 1980, 476(1980) of 30 June 1980, 478(1980) of 20 August 1980, 497(1981) of 17 December 1981 and 904(1994) of 18 March 1994,

Reaffirming the applicability of the Geneva Convention relative to the Protection of Civilian Persons in Time of War, of 12 August 1949, to the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, and to the occupied Syrian Golan,

Considering that the transfer by the occupying Power of parts of its own civilian population into the territory it occupies is a breach of the Fourth Geneva Convention and relevant provisions of customary law, including those codified in Additional Protocol I to the Geneva Conventions,

Recalling the advisory opinion rendered on 9 July 2004 by the International Court of Justice on the Legal Consequences of the Construction of a Wall in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, and recalling also General Assembly resolution ES-10/15 of 20 July 2004,

Noting that the Court concluded that "the Israeli settlements in the Occupied Palestinian Territory (including East Jerusalem) have been established in breach of international law",

Taking note of the recent report of the Special Rapporteur of the Commission on Human Rights on the situation of human rights in the Palestinian territories occupied by Israel since 1967,

Recalling the Declaration of Principles on Interim Self-Government Arrangements of 13 September 1993 and the subsequent implementation agreements between the Palestinian and Israeli sides,

Recalling also the Quartet road map to a permanent two-State solution to the Israeli-Palestinian conflict, and noting specifically its call for a freeze on all settlement activity,

Aware that Israeli settlement activities have involved, inter alia, the transfer of nationals of the occupying Power into the occupied territories, the confiscation of land, the exploitation of natural resources and other illegal actions against the Palestinian civilian population,

Bearing in mind the detrimental impact of Israeli settlement policies, decisions and activities on efforts to achieve peace in the Middle East,

Expressing grave concern about the continuation by Israel, the occupying Power, of settlement activities, in violation of international humanitarian law, relevant United Nations resolutions and the agreements reached between the parties, including the construction and expansion of the settlements in Jabal Abu Ghneim and Ras Al-Amud in and around Occupied East Jerusalem,

Expressing grave concern also about the continuing unlawful construction by Israel of the wall inside the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including in and around East Jerusalem, and expressing its concern in particular about the route of the wall in departure from the Armistice Line of 1949, which could prejudice future negotiations and make the two-State solution physically impossible to implement and which is causing the Palestinian people further humanitarian hardship,

Deeply concerned that the wall's route has been traced in such a way as to include the great majority of the Israeli settlements in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem,

Reiterating its opposition to settlement activities in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, and to any activities involving the confiscation of land, the disruption of the livelihood of protected persons and the de facto annexation of land,

Recalling the need to end all acts of violence, including acts of terror, provocation, incitement and destruction,

Gravely concerned about the dangerous situation resulting from actions taken by the illegal armed Israeli settlers in the occupied territory,

Taking note of the relevant reports of the Secretary-General,

1. Reaffirms that Israeli settlements in the Palestinian territory, including East Jerusalem, and in the occupied Syrian Golan are illegal and an obstacle to peace and economic and social development;

2. Calls upon Israel to accept the de jure applicability of the Geneva Convention relative to the Protection of Civilian Persons in Time of War, of 12 August 1949, to the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, and to the occupied Syrian Golan and to abide scrupulously by the provisions of the Convention, in particular article 49;

3. Reiterates its demand for the complete cessation of all Israeli settlement activities in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, and in the occupied Syrian Golan, and calls for the full implementation of the relevant Security Council resolutions;

4. Demands that Israel, the occupying Power, comply with its legal obligations, as mentioned in the advisory opinion rendered on 9 July 2004 by the International Court of Justice;

5. Stresses the need for full implementation of Security Council resolution 904(1994), in which, among other things, the Council called upon Israel, the occupying Power, to continue to take and implement measures, including confiscation of arms, with the aim of preventing illegal acts of violence by Israeli settlers, and called for measures to be taken to guarantee the safety and protection of the Palestinian civilians in the occupied territory;

6. Reiterates its calls for the prevention of all acts of violence by Israeli settlers, especially against Palestinian civilians and property, particularly in the light of recent developments;

7. Requests the Secretary-General to report to the General Assembly at its sixtieth session on the implementation of the present resolution.

RECORDED VOTE ON RESOLUTION 59/123:

In favour: Afghanistan, Algeria, Andorra, Antigua and Barbuda, Argentina, Armenia, Austria, Azerbaijan, Bahamas, Bahrain, Bangladesh, Barbados, Belarus, Belgium, Belize, Benin, Bolivia, Bosnia and Herzegovina, Botswana, Brazil, Brunei Darussalam, Bulgaria, Burkina Faso, Burundi, Cambodia, Canada, Cape Verde, Chile, China, Colombia, Comoros, Congo, Costa Rica, Croatia, Cuba, Cyprus, Czech Republic, Democratic People's Republic of Korea, Denmark, Djibouti, Dominica, Ecuador, Egypt, El Salvador, Eritrea, Estonia, Ethiopia, Fiji, Finland, France, Gabon, Georgia, Germany, Ghana, Greece, Guatemala, Guinea, Guinea-Bissau, Guyana, Honduras, Hungary, Iceland, India, Indonesia, Iran, Iraq, Ireland, Italy, Jamaica, Japan, Jordan, Kazakhstan, Kuwait, Kyrgyzstan, Lao People's

Palestinian women

The Secretary-General, in a report [E/CN.6/2004/4] to the Commission on the Status of Women, as requested by the Economic and Social Council in resolution 2003/42 [YUN 2003, p. 494], reviewed the situation of Palestinian women and assistance provided by UN organizations from September 2002 to September 2003. He said that during that period, the occupation of Palestinian territory by Israel continued to have a detrimental effect on all aspects of the living conditions of the Palestinian people. Unemployment increased threefold and poverty rose among more than two thirds of the population. Women and children bore a special and enduring burden resulting from the occupation. Under the new Israeli rule, Palestinian women living in East Jerusalem were regarded as mere residents and were not allowed to give their nationality or residency to their husbands or children. Women's responsibilities within households were expanded due to the death, imprisonment or unemployment of male members. Many women were placed in the position of being a primary household provider, caregiver and the main strategist for coping financially, mentally and physically with the new situation. The closures of roads, local curfews and numerous checkpoints prevented thousands of ordinary Palestinians from going to work, cultivating their fields or sending their children to school. About 140 checkpoints operated in the West Bank, and 25 to 30 others in the Gaza Strip. Hundreds of farmers lost their income since they were unable to cultivate their fields, and women were severely affected by the decline in the agricultural sector, a vital source of income for the household.

Although the situation in the Occupied Palestinian Territory made it difficult for international organizations to provide direct assistance to Palestinian women, the UN system continued to respond to their needs. The United Nations Development Programme (UNDP) provided assistance to Palestinian women through project activities targeting female-headed rural households. UNDP also provided technical and financial support as well as training for community-based women's organizations. The United Nations Conference on Trade and Development collaborated with Palestinian ministries to support Palestinian farmers, including women, by assisting them in marketing their surplus olive oil. The International Labour Organization (ILO) provided assistance to Palestinian women, including through an interregional programme on capacity-building for gender equality, employment promotion and poverty eradication. The World Bank incorporated gender dimensions in its activities and participated in the Gender Task Force in the West Bank and Gaza. In response to emergency needs, the World Bank managed $25 million in bilateral donor funds for job-creation projects. One of the main selection criteria for emergency grants was a project's ability to benefit women. The Bank supported a counselling centre for women in difficult circumstances, aimed at providing support, therapy, advocacy and vocational training services to Palestinian women subjected to domestic violence. The Bank also completed a beneficiary assessment report of the second Community Development Project, which found that nearly 40 per cent of all schools rehabilitated under the project were girls' or co-educational schools. Among other Bank projects were construction of a girls' orphanage, vocational training to women under development grants and an integrated educational programme for women with children.

The Secretary-General observed that the humanitarian and socio-economic crisis in the Occupied Palestinian Territory had reached unprecedented levels. The capacity of Palestinian women to cope with that new situation had been declining, and the number of women dependent on emergency assistance, particularly food assistance, had risen. The status and living conditions of Palestinian women were linked to the achievement of a peaceful resolution of the conflict. There were important differences in how women and men were affected by the socio-economic and political situation, which were apparent in such areas as basic social services, including education and health, economic opportunities and means of livelihood. Those differences needed to be taken into account in research, data collection, policy and strategy development, and implementation and monitoring of projects on the ground. It was also important that efforts be made to increase women's full participation in decision-making processes at all levels. It was essential for UN entities to operate in the Occupied Palestinian Territory and the refugee camps, and to provide Palestinian women with food security, psychosocial/trauma counselling, health services, including reproductive health, education, and human rights and economic empowerment. Further opportunities should be sought to highlight the specific ways in which the crisis impacted on women as compared to men so that targeted actions could be taken to mitigate negative gender-specific impacts. The collection of data disaggregated by sex and studies on the impact of the crisis on women in particular areas should be encouraged, and the linkage between the ongoing crisis and the increase in domestic violence could be further explored. In the Secretary-General's view, efforts should be undertaken to address gender perspectives in international assistance programmes, in addition to implementing projects specifically targeting women.

ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL ACTION

On 23 July [meeting 51], the Economic and Social Council, on the recommendation of the Commission on the Status of Women [E/2004/27], adopted resolution 2004/56 by recorded vote (49-1-3) [agenda item 14 (a)].

Situation of and assistance to Palestinian women

The Economic and Social Council,

Having considered with appreciation the report of the Secretary-General,

Recalling the Nairobi Forward-looking Strategies for the Advancement of Women, in particular paragraph 260 concerning Palestinian women and children, the Beijing Platform for Action adopted at the Fourth World Conference on Women and the outcome of the twenty-third special session of the General Assembly, entitled "Women 2000: gender equality, development and peace for the twenty-first century",

Recalling also its resolution 2003/42 of 22 July 2003 and other relevant United Nations resolutions,

Recalling further the Declaration on the Elimination of Violence against Women as it concerns the protection of civilian populations,

Expressing the urgent need for the resumption of negotiations within the Middle East peace process on its agreed basis and towards the speedy achievement of a final settlement between the Palestinian and Israelisides,

Concerned about the grave deterioration of the situation of Palestinian women in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, and about the severe consequences of continuous illegal Israeli settlements activities as well as the harsh economic conditions and other severe consequences of the continuing Israeli attacks and sieges on Palestinian cities, towns, villages and refugee camps, which has resulted in the dire humanitarian crisis being faced by Palestinian women and their families,

Concerned also that the route marked out for the wall under construction by Israel, the occupying Power, in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including in and around East Jerusalem, could prejudice future negotiations and make the two-State solution physically impossible to implement and would cause further humanitarian hardship to the Palestinians, in particular women and children,

Expressing its condemnation of all acts of violence, including all acts of terror, provocation, incitement and destruction, especially the excessive use of force against Palestinian civilians, many of them women and children, resulting in injury and loss of human life,

1. Calls upon the concerned parties, as well as the international community, to exert all the efforts necessary to ensure the immediate resumption of the peace process on its agreed basis, taking into account the common ground already gained, and calls for measures for tangible improvement of the difficult situation on the ground and the living conditions faced by Palestinian women and their families;

2. Reaffirms that the Israeli occupation remains a major obstacle for Palestinian women with regard to their advancement, self-reliance and integration in the development planning of their society;

3. Demands that Israel, the occupying Power, comply fully with the provisions and principles of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights, the Regulations annexed to The Hague Convention IV, of 18 October 1907 and the Geneva Convention relative to the Protection of Civilian Persons in Time of War, of 12 August 1949, in order to protect the rights of Palestinian women and their families;

4. Calls upon Israel to facilitate the return of all refugees and displaced Palestinian women and children to their homes and properties, in compliance with the relevant United Nations resolutions;

5. Calls upon the international community to continue to provide urgently needed assistance and services in an effort to alleviate the dire humanitarian crisis being faced by Palestinian women and their families and to help in the reconstruction of relevant Palestinian institutions;

6. Requests the Commission on the Status of Women to continue to monitor and take action with regard to the implementation of the Nairobi Forward-looking Strategies for the Advancement of Women, in particular paragraph 260 concerning Palestinian women and children, the Beijing Platform for Action and the outcome of the twenty-third special session of the General Assembly, entitled "Women 2000: gender equality, development and peace for the twenty-first century";

7. Requests the Secretary-General to continue to review the situation and to assist Palestinian women by all available means, including those set out in his report, and to submit to the Commission on the Status of Women at its forty-ninth session a report, including information provided by the Economic and Social Commission for Western Asia, on the progress made in the implementation of the present resolution.

RECORDED VOTE ON RESOLUTION 2004/56:

In favour: Armenia, Azerbaijan, Bangladesh, Belgium, Belize, Benin, Bhutan, Burundi, Chile, China, Colombia, Congo, Cuba, Ecuador, Finland, France, Germany, Ghana, Greece, Guatemala, Hungary, India, Indonesia, Ireland, Italy, Jamaica, Japan, Kenya, Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Malaysia, Mauritius, Mozambique, Namibia, Nigeria, Panama, Poland, Qatar, Republic of Korea, Russian Federation, Saudi Arabia, Senegal, Sweden, Tunisia, Turkey, Ukraine, United Arab Emirates, United Kingdom, United Republic of Tanzania, Zimbabwe.

Against: United States.

Abstaining: Australia, Canada, Nicaragua.

Palestinian children

On 20 December [meeting 74], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Third (Social, Humanitarian and Cultural) Committee [A/59/499], adopted resolution 59/173 by recorded vote (117-5-62) [agenda item 101].

The situation of and assistance to Palestinian children

The General Assembly,

Recalling the Convention on the Rights of the Child,

Bearing in mind the conclusion by the International Court of Justice, in its advisory opinion of 9 July 2004, that the Convention on the Rights of the Child is applicable within the Occupied Palestinian Territory,

Recalling the World Declaration on the Survival, Protection and Development of Children and the Plan of Action for Implementing the World Declaration on the Survival, Protection and Development of Children in the 1990s adopted by the World Summit for Children, held in New York on 29 and 30 September 1990,

Recalling also the Declaration and Plan of Action adopted by the General Assembly at its twenty-seventh special session,

Recalling further the relevant provisions of the International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights,

Noting with grave concern that the Palestinian children under Israeli occupation remain deprived of many basic rights under the Convention on the Rights of the Child,

Concerned about the continued grave deterioration of the situation of Palestinian children in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, the severely detrimental impact of the continuing Israeli assaults and sieges on Palestinian cities, towns, villages and refugee camps, and the continuing dire humanitarian crisis on the safety and well-being of Palestinian children,

Concerned also about the severely detrimental impact being caused by the unlawful construction of the wall by Israel, the occupying Power, in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including in and around East Jerusalem, and its associated regime, on the socio-economic conditions of Palestinian children and their families and on the enjoyment by Palestinian children of their right to education, to an adequate standard of living, including adequate food, clothing and housing, to health and to be free from hunger, in accordance with the Convention on the Rights of the Child and the International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights,

Emphasizing the importance of the safety and well-being of all children in the whole Middle East region,

Expressing its condemnation of all acts of violence, resulting in extensive loss of human life and injuries, including among Palestinian children,

Deeply concerned about the negative consequences, including psychological consequences, of the Israeli military actions for the present and future well-being of Palestinian children,

1. Stresses the urgent need for Palestinian children to live a normal life free from foreign occupation, destruction and fear in their own State;

2. Demands, in the meanwhile, that Israel, the occupying Power, respect relevant provisions of the Convention on the Rights of the Child and comply fully with the provisions of the Geneva Convention relative to the Protection of Civilian Persons in Time of War, of 12 August 1949, in order to ensure the well-being and protection of Palestinian children and their families;

3. Calls upon the international community to provide urgently needed assistance and services in an effort to alleviate the dire humanitarian crisis being faced by Palestinian children and their families and to help in the reconstruction of relevant Palestinian institutions.

RECORDED VOTE ON RESOLUTION 59/173:

In favour: Afghanistan, Algeria, Angola, Antigua and Barbuda, Argentina, Armenia, Azerbaijan, Bahamas, Bahrain, Bangladesh, Barbados, Belarus, Belize, Bhutan, Bolivia, Botswana, Brazil, Brunei Darussalam, Burkina Faso, Burundi, Cambodia, Cape Verde, Chad, Chile, China, Comoros, Costa Rica, Côte d'Ivoire, Cuba, Democratic People's Republic of Korea, Democratic Republic of the Congo, Djibouti, Dominica, Dominican Republic, Ecuador, Egypt, Equatorial Guinea, Eritrea, Ethiopia, Fiji, Gabon, Gambia, Ghana, Grenada, Guinea, Guinea-Bissau, Guyana, Honduras, India, Indonesia, Iran, Iraq, Jamaica, Jordan, Kazakhstan, Kenya, Kuwait, Kyrgyzstan, Lao People's Democratic Republic, Lebanon, Lesotho, Liberia, Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Madagascar, Malawi, Malaysia, Maldives, Mali, Mauritania, Mauritius, Mongolia, Morocco, Mozambique, Myanmar, Namibia, Nauru, Nepal, Niger, Nigeria, Oman, Pakistan, Panama, Paraguay, Philippines, Qatar, Russian Federation, Saint Lucia, Saint Vincent and the Grenadines, Sao Tome and Principe, Saudi Arabia, Senegal, Seychelles, Sierra Leone, Singapore, Somalia, South Africa, Sri Lanka, Sudan, Suriname, Swaziland, Syrian Arab Republic, Tajikistan, Thailand, Togo, Trinidad and Tobago, Tunisia, Turkey, Turkmenistan, Uganda, United Arab Emirates, United Republic of Tanzania, Uzbekistan, Venezuela, Viet Nam, Yemen, Zambia, Zimbabwe.

Issues related to Palestine

General aspects

The General Assembly again considered the question of Palestine in 2004. Having discussed the annual report of the Committee on the Exercise of the Inalienable Rights of the Palestinian People (Committee on Palestinian Rights) [A/59/35], the Assembly adopted five resolutions, reaffirming, among other things, the necessity of achieving a peaceful settlement of the Palestine question—the core of the Arab-Israeli conflict—and stressing the need for the realization of the inalienable rights of the Palestinians, primarily the right to self-determination, for Israeli withdrawal from the Palestinian territory occupied since 1967 and for resolving the problem of the Palestine refugees. The Assembly also affirmed that the status of the Palestinian territory remained one of military occupation. It called on the Secretariat to continue its activities to promote and raise awareness of Palestinian rights.

In observance of the International Day of Solidarity with the Palestinian People, celebrated annually on 29 November in accordance with Assembly resolution 32/40 B [YUN 1977, p. 304], the Committee held a solemn meeting. The Permanent Observer Mission of Palestine, under the Committee's auspices, presented an exhibit entitled "Steadfast in Palestine".

Report of Secretary-General. In a November report on the peaceful settlement of the question of Palestine [A/59/574-S/2004/909], submitted in response to Assembly resolution 58/21 [YUN 2003, p. 497], the Secretary-General made observations on the Middle East peace process (see also p. 453). On 12 April, the Secretary-General sought the positions of Egypt, Israel, Jordan, Lebanon, the Syrian Arab Republic and the Permanent Observer of Palestine regarding steps taken to implement the resolution. As at 17 September, Israel, Syria and the Permanent Observer had responded.

Israel said that it viewed the resolution as unbalanced and as an undue interference in matters which the parties had agreed to resolve within the context of direct bilateral negotiations. The violence in the region was a result of a Palestinian decision to abandon peace negotiations and pursue their goals through violence and terrorism. The one-sided approach of the resolution, which sought to dictate the outcome of the negotiating process, effectively rewarded violence at a time when the Palestinian side should discontinue such acts and boldly pursue peaceful dialogue.

Syria affirmed that Israel's determination to continue its expansionist policy inside Palestinian territory, especially while it was building the separation wall, and its non-compliance with Assembly resolutions, were blatant examples of its illegitimate actions and a denial of the principle of equal and inalienable rights and self-determination of peoples.

The Permanent Observer said that Israel's withdrawal from Palestinian territory was a fundamental requisite for solving the question of Palestine and achieving a peaceful settlement of the Israeli-Palestinian conflict, based on the two-State solution. Israel's settler policy and its construction of the wall in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, were the antithesis of withdrawal and actually constituted the main obstacle to the realization of the national rights of the Palestinian people and the achievement of the two-State solution. Without the complete cessation and reversal of all settlement activities and of the construction of the wall, there could be no hope for the road map and for a peaceful settlement. The international community had to face that reality and take the necessary measures to reach that result.

The Secretary-General, summarizing developments during the year, observed that the rising number of deaths and violence in the Middle East were evidence of the lack of progress in advancing the peace process. In general, both parties had not lived up to their road map obligations. On the economic front, the picture remained grim. The Palestinian economy was in tatters and stood little chance of recovery unless immediate action was taken. Forty-seven per cent of the Palestinian population lived in poverty. Unemployment among Palestinians stood at 34.3 per cent, or 28.6 per cent at the ILO-adjusted rate, which excluded discouraged workers. UNRWA and the World Food Programme were providing food to 39 per cent of the Palestinian population in the occupied territory. The economic crisis, according to the World Bank, was contributing to the impoverishment of an entire generation of young Palestinians, as well as to the undermining of the credibility of the PA, and, inevitably, it was increasing the popular appeal of militant factions. The primary cause of that crisis was the closure regime imposed by Israel and, without a significant change in that regime, the Palestinian economy would not be revived. According to the World Bank, Israel's disengagement plan would have limited impact on the Palestinian economy if it were not accompanied by a radical easing of closure that encompassed three elements: the removal of internal obstacles to movement in the West Bank; the opening of Palestinian external borders to commodity trade; and a return to a reasonable flow of Palestinian labour into Israel. If those conditions were met, additional donor money could be raised, but donors needed some assurance that their contributions would have an impact. Aid would be provided in the context of a successful comprehensive Israeli withdrawal from the Gaza Strip and the northern West Bank, as a first step in the implementation of the road map.

The Secretary-General said that it was particularly disquieting that Israel had announced its intention to phase out completely Palestinian employment inside Israel by 2008. The number of Palestinians employed in Israel had decreased significantly since September 2000, and the Palestinian economy was dependent on the Israeli economy, not only for employment but also for raw materials and trade. A revival of the Palestinian economy in the short term depended on a return to reasonable levels of Palestinian employment in Israel. Should Israel insist on ending Palestinian employment and implement the disengagement plan without accompanying measures to ease closure, unemployment and poverty would continue to soar among Palestinians. The Secretary-General called on the international community to provide the resources necessary to support UN programmes in addressing the deteriorating economic and humanitarian situation of the Palestinian people.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 1 December [meeting 64], the General Assembly adopted resolution 59/31 [draft: A/59/L.37 & Add.1] by recorded vote (161-7-10) [agenda item 37].

Peaceful settlement of the question of Palestine

The General Assembly,

Recalling its relevant resolutions, including those adopted at the tenth emergency special session,

Recalling also its resolution 58/292 of 6 May 2004,

Recalling further the relevant Security Council resolutions, including resolutions 242(1967) of 22 November 1967, 338(1973) of 22 October 1973, 1397(2002) of 12 March 2002, 1515(2003) of 19 November 2003 and 1544(2004) of 19 May 2004,

Welcoming the affirmation by the Security Council of the vision of a region where two States, Israel and Palestine, live side by side within secure and recognized borders,

Noting with concern that it has been fifty-seven years since the adoption of resolution 181(II) of 29 November 1947 and thirty-seven years since the occupation of Palestinian territory, including East Jerusalem, in 1967,

Having considered the report of the Secretary-General submitted pursuant to the request made in its resolution 58/21 of 3 December 2003,

Reaffirming the permanent responsibility of the United Nations with regard to the question of Palestine until the question is resolved in all its aspects in accordance with international law,

Recalling the advisory opinion rendered on 9 July 2004 by the International Court of Justice on the Legal Consequences of the Construction of a Wall in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, and recalling also its resolution ES-10/15 of 20 July 2004,

Convinced that achieving a final and peaceful settlement of the question of Palestine, the core of the Arab-Israeli conflict, is imperative for the attainment of comprehensive and lasting peace and stability in the Middle East,

Aware that the principle of equal rights and self-determination of peoples is among the purposes and principles enshrined in the Charter of the United Nations,

Affirming the principle of the inadmissibility of the acquisition of territory by war,

Recalling its resolution 2625(XXV) of 24 October 1970,

Reaffirming the illegality of the Israeli settlements in the territory occupied since 1967 and of Israeli actions aimed at changing the status of Jerusalem,

Reaffirming also that the construction by Israel, the occupying Power, of a wall in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including in and around East Jerusalem, and its associated regime, are contrary to international law,

Affirming once again the right of all States in the region to live in peace within secure and internationally recognized borders,

Recalling the mutual recognition between the Government of the State of Israel and the Palestine Liberation Organization, the representative of the Palestinian people, and the agreements concluded between the two sides, and the need for full compliance with those agreements,

Recalling also the endorsement by the Security Council, in resolution 1515(2003), of the Quartet road map to a permanent two-State solution to the Israeli-Palestinian conflict, and stressing the urgent need for its implementation and compliance with its provisions,

Noting the establishment of the Palestinian Authority, and recognizing the urgent need to rebuild, reform and strengthen its damaged institutions,

Welcoming the contribution to the peace process of the United Nations Special Coordinator for the Middle East Peace Process and Personal Representative of the Secretary-General to the Palestine Liberation Organization and the Palestinian Authority, including in the framework of the activities of the Quartet,

Welcoming also the convening of international donor meetings, as well as the establishment of international mechanisms to provide assistance to the Palestinian people,

Expressing its grave concern over the tragic events in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, since 28 September 2000 and the continuing deterioration of the situation, including the rising number of deaths and injuries, mostly among Palestinian civilians, the deepening humanitarian crisis facing the Palestinian people and the widespread destruction of Palestinian property and infrastructure, both private and public, including institutions of the Palestinian Authority,

Expressing its grave concern also over the repeated military actions in the Occupied Palestinian Territory and the reoccupation of Palestinian population centres by the Israeli occupying forces,

Emphasizing the importance of the safety and well-being of all civilians in the whole Middle East region, and condemning all acts of violence and terror against civilians on both sides, including the suicide bombings, the extrajudicial executions and the excessive use of force,

Gravely concerned over the increased suffering and casualties on both the Palestinian and Israeli sides, the loss of confidence on both sides and the dire situation facing the Middle East peace process,

Aware of the urgent need for revitalized and active international involvement to support both parties in overcoming the current dangerous impasse in the peace process,

Affirming the urgent need for the parties to cooperate with all international efforts, including the efforts of the Quartet, to end the current tragic situation and to resume and accelerate negotiations towards a final peace settlement,

Welcoming the initiatives and efforts undertaken by civil society in pursuit of a peaceful settlement of the question of Palestine,

Taking note of the findings by the International Court of Justice, in its advisory opinion, including on the urgent necessity for the United Nations as a whole to redouble its efforts to bring the Israeli-Palestinian conflict, which continues to pose a threat to international peace and security, to a speedy conclusion, thereby establishing a just and lasting peace in the region,

1. Reaffirms the necessity of achieving a peaceful settlement of the question of Palestine, the core of the Arab-Israeli conflict, in all its aspects, and of intensifying all efforts towards that end;

2. Reaffirms its full support for the Middle East peace process, which began in Madrid, and the existing agreements between the Israeli and Palestinian sides, stresses the necessity for the establishment of a comprehensive, just and lasting peace in the Middle East, and welcomes in this regard the ongoing efforts of the Quartet;

3. Welcomes the Arab Peace Initiative adopted by the Council of the League of Arab States at its fourteenth session, held in Beirut on 27 and 28 March 2002;

4. Calls upon both parties to fulfil their obligations in implementation of the road map by taking parallel and reciprocal steps in this regard, and stresses the importance and urgency of establishing a credible and effective third-party monitoring mechanism including all members of the Quartet;

5. Stresses the need for a speedy end to the reoccupation of Palestinian population centres and for the complete cessation of all acts of violence, including military attacks, destruction and acts of terror;

6. Calls upon the parties, with the support of the Quartet and other interested parties, to exert all efforts necessary to halt the deterioration of the situation, to reverse all measures taken on the ground since 28 September 2000 and to facilitate a speedy resumption of the peace process and the conclusion of a final peaceful settlement;

7. Demands that Israel, the occupying Power, comply with its legal obligations, as mentioned in the advisory opinion, and calls upon all States Members of the United Nations to comply with their legal obligations as mentioned in the advisory opinion;

8. Reaffirms its commitment, in accordance with international law, to the two-State solution of Israel and Palestine, living side by side in peace and security within recognized borders, based on the pre-1967 borders;

9. Reiterates its demand for the complete cessation of all Israeli settlement activities in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, and in the occupied Syrian Golan, and calls for the implementation of the relevant Security Council resolutions;

10. Stresses the need for:

(a) The withdrawal of Israel from the Palestinian territory occupied since 1967;

(b) The realization of the inalienable rights of the Palestinian people, primarily the right to self-determination and the right to their independent State;

11. Also stresses the need for resolving the problem of the Palestine refugees in conformity with its resolution 194(III) of 11 December 1948;

12. Urges Member States to expedite the provision of economic, humanitarian and technical assistance to the Palestinian people and the Palestinian Authority during this critical period to help to alleviate the suffering of the Palestinian people, rebuild the Palestinian economy and infrastructure and support the restructuring and reform of Palestinian institutions;

13. Requests the Secretary-General to continue his efforts with the parties concerned, and in consultation with the Security Council, towards the attainment of a peaceful settlement of the question of Palestine and the promotion of peace in the region and to submit to the General Assembly at its sixtieth session a report on these efforts and on developments on this matter.

RECORDED VOTE ON RESOLUTION 59/31:

In favour: Afghanistan, Albania, Algeria, Andorra, Angola, Argentina, Armenia, Austria, Azerbaijan, Bahamas, Bahrain, Bangladesh, Barbados, Belarus, Belgium, Belize, Benin, Bhutan, Bolivia, Bosnia and Herzegovina, Botswana, Brazil, Brunei Darussalam, Bulgaria, Burkina Faso, Burundi, Cambodia, Canada, Cape Verde, Central African Republic, Chile, China, Colombia, Congo, Costa Rica, Côte d'Ivoire, Croatia, Cuba, Cyprus, Czech Republic, Democratic People's Republic of Korea, Denmark, Djibouti, Dominica, Dominican Republic, Ecuador, Egypt, El Salvador, Eritrea, Estonia, Fiji, Finland, France, Gabon, Gambia, Georgia, Germany, Ghana, Greece, Guatemala, Guinea, Guinea-Bissau, Guyana, Hungary, Iceland, India, Indonesia, Iran, Iraq, Ireland, Italy, Jamaica, Japan, Jordan, Kazakhstan, Kenya, Kuwait, Kyrgyzstan, Lao People's Democratic Republic, Latvia, Lebanon, Lesotho, Liberia, Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Liechtenstein, Lithuania, Luxembourg, Madagascar, Malaysia, Maldives, Mali, Malta, Mauritania, Mauritius, Mexico, Monaco, Mongolia, Morocco, Mozambique, Myanmar, Namibia, Nepal, Netherlands, New Zealand, Nicaragua, Niger, Nigeria, Norway, Oman, Pakistan, Panama, Paraguay, Peru, Philippines, Poland, Portugal, Qatar, Republic of Korea, Republic of Moldova, Romania, Russian Federation, Saint Lucia, Saint Vincent and the Grenadines, San Marino, Saudi Arabia, Senegal, Serbia and Montenegro, Seychelles, Sierra Leone, Singapore, Slovakia, Slovenia, Somalia, South Africa, Spain, Sri Lanka, Sudan, Suriname, Sweden, Switzerland, Syrian Arab Republic, Tajikistan, Thailand, The former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia, Timor-Leste, Togo, Trinidad and Tobago, Tunisia, Turkey, Turkmenistan, Ukraine, United Arab Emirates, United Kingdom, United Republic of Tanzania, Uruguay, Uzbekistan, Venezuela, Viet Nam, Yemen, Zambia, Zimbabwe.

Against: Australia, Grenada, Israel, Marshall Islands, Micronesia, Palau, United States.

Abstaining: Cameroon, Haiti, Honduras, Nauru, Papua New Guinea, Samoa, Solomon Islands, Tonga, Uganda, Vanuatu.

By decision 59/552 of 23 December, the Assembly decided that the agenda items entitled "The situation in the Middle East" and "Question of Palestine" would remain for consideration during its resumed fifty-ninth (2005) session.

Status of the Occupied Palestinian Territory

On 6 May [meeting 87], the General Assembly adopted resolution 58/292 [draft: A/58/L.61/Rev.1] by recorded vote (140-6-11) [agenda item 38].

Status of the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 3237(XXIX) of 22 November 1974, 43/177 of 15 December 1988 and 52/250 of 7 July 1998,

Recalling also Security Council resolutions 242(1967) of 22 November 1967, 338(1973) of 22 October 1973, 1397(2002) of 12 March 2002 and 1515(2003) of 19 November 2003,

Recalling further the relevant provisions of international law, as well as relevant United Nations resolutions, with regard to Israeli settlements and to Occupied East Jerusalem,

Reaffirming the principle of the inadmissibility of the acquisition of territory by force,

Noting that Palestine, in its capacity as observer and pending its attainment of full membership in the United Nations, does not present credentials to the General Assembly,

Affirming the need to enable the Palestinian people to exercise sovereignty and to achieve independence in their State, Palestine,

1. Affirms that the status of the Palestinian territory occupied since 1967, including East Jerusalem, remains one of military occupation, and affirms, in accordance with the rules and principles of international law and relevant resolutions of the United Nations, including Security Council resolutions, that the Palestinian people have the right to self-determination and to sovereignty over their territory and that Israel, the occupying Power, has only the duties and obligations of an occupying Power under the Geneva Convention relative to the Protection of Civilian Persons in Time of War, of 12 August 1949 and the Regulations annexed to the Hague Convention respecting the Laws and Customs of War on Land of 1907;

2. Expresses its determination to contribute to the achievement of the inalienable rights of the Palestinian people and the attainment of a just and comprehensive negotiated peace settlement in the Middle East resulting in two viable, sovereign and independent States, Israel and Palestine, based on the pre-1967 borders and living side by side in peace and security.

RECORDED VOTE ON RESOLUTION 58/292:

In favour: Algeria, Andorra, Antigua and Barbuda, Argentina, Armenia, Austria, Azerbaijan, Bahrain, Bangladesh, Barbados, Belarus, Belgium, Belize, Bolivia, Bosnia and Herzegovina, Botswana, Brazil, Brunei Darussalam, Bulgaria, Burkina Faso, Burundi, Cambodia, Canada, Central African Republic, Chile, China, Colombia, Comoros, Congo, Croatia, Cuba, Cyprus, Czech Republic, Democratic People's Republic of Korea, Denmark, Djibouti, Dominica, Ecuador, Egypt, Eritrea, Estonia, Ethiopia, Finland, France, Gabon, Gambia, Georgia, Germany, Ghana, Greece, Grenada, Guinea, Guinea-Bissau, Guyana, Haiti, Hungary, Iceland, India, Indonesia, Iran, Ireland, Italy, Jamaica, Japan, Jordan, Kazakhstan, Kenya, Kuwait, Lao People's Democratic Republic, Latvia, Lebanon, Lesotho, Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Liechtenstein, Lithuania, Luxembourg, Malaysia, Maldives, Mali, Malta, Mauritius, Mexico, Monaco, Mongolia, Morocco, Mozambique, Myanmar, Namibia, Nepal, Netherlands, New Zealand, Niger, Nigeria, Norway, Oman, Pakistan, Paraguay, Philippines, Poland, Portugal, Qatar, Republic of Korea, Republic of Moldova, Romania, Russian Federation, Saint Lucia, Saint Vincent and the Grenadines, San Marino, Saudi Arabia, Senegal, Sierra Leone, Singapore, Slovakia, Slovenia, Somalia, South Africa, Spain, Sri Lanka, Sudan, Sweden, Switzerland, Syrian Arab Republic, Tajikistan, Thailand, The former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia, Timor-Leste, Togo, Trinidad and Tobago, Tunisia, Turkey, Uganda, Ukraine, United Arab Emirates, United Kingdom, United Republic of Tanzania, Uruguay, Venezuela, Viet Nam, Yemen, Zambia.

Against: Israel, Marshall Islands, Micronesia, Nauru, Palau, United States.

Abstaining: Australia, Costa Rica, Dominican Republic, Guatemala, Honduras, Nicaragua, Peru, Serbia and Montenegro, Solomon Islands, Tonga, Tuvalu.

Speaking after the vote, Israel said it objected to the resolution because of what it ignored and what it misrepresented, and because the motive of its primary sponsor in submitting the text was to undermine and prejudice the negotiating process, not to further it. The resolution ignored the Quartet statement made on 4 May (see p. 460) and violated the central tenet of the peace process, reiterated in the Quartet statement, which was to avoid prejudging the outcome of negotiations. The resolution also misrepresented reality, for it was a matter of fact and of law that the 1949 Armistice Lines (the wording in the draft text was changed in operative paragraph 2 to read “pre-1967 borders”, replacing “1949 Armistice Lines”) had never represented borders, as the resolution could be taken to imply.

The Permanent Observer of Palestine said that the resolution reaffirmed basic issues, including the status of the Palestinian territory occupied since 1967, including East Jerusalem, as territory under military occupation. It also reaffirmed that the Palestinian people had the right to self-determination and to exercise sovereignty over their territory. Moreover, the resolution affirmed that Israel, the occupying Power, needed to comply with its duties and obligations under the Fourth Geneva Convention and the Fourth Hague Convention. Those were all important matters that pertained to the core of the conflict and to the foundation of rights of the Palestinian people.

Committee on Palestinian Rights

As mandated by General Assembly resolution 58/18 [YUN 2003, p. 500], the Committee on the Exercise of the Inalienable Rights of the Palestinian People reviewed the situation relating to the Palestine question, reported on it and made suggestions to the Assembly and the Security Council.

The Committee followed the Palestine-related activities of intergovernmental bodies, such as the African Union, the Non-Aligned Movement and the Organization of the Islamic Conference, and, through its Chairman, participated in meetings of those bodies. In June, the Committee's Bureau held consultations with EU representatives to build a constructive relationship on issues of common concern. Throughout the year, the Committee held a number of international events, including the United Nations International Meeting on the Impact of the Construction of the Wall in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including in and around East Jerusalem (Geneva, 15-16 April); the United Nations African Meeting in Support of the Inalienable Rights of the Palestinian People (Cape Town, South Africa, 29-30 June); the United Nations Forum of Civil Society in Support of Middle East Peace (Cape Town, 1 July); and the United Nations International Conference of Civil Society in Support of the Palestinian People (New York, 13-14 September).

In its annual report to the Assembly [A/59/35] covering the period from 10 October 2003 to 6 October 2004, the Committee said that the unremitting Israeli military incursions in areas under Palestinian control continued, increasing the numbers of those killed and wounded and resulting in the devastation of Palestinian cities and communities. The Committee was deeply troubled by the disproportionate and indiscriminate use of force by the Israeli army and the practice of collective punishment. The expansion of settlements and outposts and the construction of the wall in the West Bank continued at a brisk pace, along with the demolition of houses, confiscation of Palestinian property and unprecedented restrictions of movement. The number of Palestinians killed, in the four years of the intifada (uprising), reached a total of over 3,700, with some 35,700 injured. The Committee remained concerned over Israeli military operations in densely populated residential areas in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, especially the Gaza Strip. Since the start of the intifada, more than 65,998 Palestinian buildings, including homes, were destroyed or damaged. The Israeli army intensified extrajudicial killings, a policy the Committee had repeatedly condemned as inadmissible under international humanitarian law. At the same time, it strongly condemned all terrorist attacks against civilians in Israel, which also could not be justified. In addition, the Committee condemned Israel's continued siege on PA President Arafat in Ramallah, preventing him for almost three years from properly carrying out his duties. A worsening fiscal crisis likewise affected the PA's effectiveness in delivering core services to the population. Despite a financial gap of $890 million for 2004, it managed to provide for basic needs, including education, health, water, electricity and sewerage, although the standards of those services had declined. Efforts were made by the PA to introduce reforms in the finance and public administration areas. Security services members began receiving their salaries through bank accounts, replacing payment in person. The PA announced in August that simultaneous presidential, parliamentary and municipal elections would be held by spring 2005, though the Palestinian Central Elections Committee expressed concern about the registration of voters, given the curfews and Israeli military incursions.

The Committee noted with growing concern that Israel continued the expansion of settlements, in violation of its obligation under the road map. Based on a June survey, settlement expansion was under way at 73 of 211 settlement locations, including 12 of the 21 settlements in the Gaza Strip. In and around East Jerusalem, settlement activity proceeded at a rate unmatched since 1992. The total area of expansion was close to 500,000 square metres and included land development for settlement, new infrastructure, construction within the settlements, internal road works and the placement of new caravans.

The construction by Israel of the wall in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including in and around East Jerusalem, caused great hardship to the Palestinians. Some 875,000 Palestinians in the West Bank, 38 per cent of the population, had been affected by the wall. Some 263,200 living in 81 localities had become isolated. The wall created a fait accompli that could become permanent and lead to the de facto annexation of Palestinian land. The Committee welcomed the advisory opinion of ICJ, in which the Court determined, among other things, that Israel was under an obligation to cease the construction and to dismantle portions built on Palestinian land (see p. 465). On 30 June, the Israeli High Court of Justice ordered changes in the trajectory of the wall along a 30-kilometre segment north of Jerusalem, stating that the separation from their agricultural land injured local inhabitants in a severe and acute way. In response to the ruling, the Israeli Defence Ministry presented changes in the route of the wall south of Hebron, which would be closer to the Armistice Line of 1949 (known as the Green Line). However, 15 square kilometres of Palestinian land remained on the Israeli side of the wall. The system of curfews and closures imposed by Israel, which severely restricted the movement of Palestinian people, goods and services, remained the central impediment to economic stabilization and recovery.

The Committee maintained that the continuing Israeli occupation remained at the core of the Israeli-Palestinian conflict and that a negotiated solution that would end the occupation and enable the Palestinian people to exercise its inalienable rights was urgently needed. In its view, the road map remained the best way to achieve a comprehensive, just and lasting solution through the establishment of two States, Israel and Palestine, based on the 1967 borders. Any unilateral moves by either party would not contribute to a durable settlement unless they were based on negotiations between the two sides and were part of the implementation of the road map. The existence of the wall rendered the vision of a two-State solution almost impossible.

On 1 December [meeting 64], the General Assembly adopted resolution 59/28 [draft: A/59/L.34 & Add.1] by recorded vote (104-7-63) [agenda item 37].

Committee on the Exercise of the Inalienable Rights of the Palestinian People

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 181(II) of 29 November 1947, 194(III) of 11 December 1948, 3236(XXIX) of 22

November 1974, 3375(XXX) and 3376(XXX) of 10 November 1975, 31/20 of 24 November 1976 and all subsequent relevant resolutions, including those adopted by the General Assembly at its emergency special sessions and resolution 58/18 of 3 December 2003,

Recalling also its resolution 58/292 of 6 May 2004,

Having considered the report of the Committee on the Exercise of the Inalienable Rights of the Palestinian People,

Recalling the mutual recognition between the Government of the State of Israel and the Palestine Liberation Organization, the representative of the Palestinian people, as well as the existing agreements between the two sides and the need for full compliance with those agreements,

Recalling also the Quartet road map to a permanent two-State solution to the Israeli-Palestinian conflict,

Recalling further the advisory opinion rendered on 9 July 2004 by the International Court of Justice on the Legal Consequences of the Construction of a Wall in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, and recalling also its resolution ES-10/15 of 20 July 2004,

Reaffirming that the United Nations has a permanent responsibility towards the question of Palestine until the question is resolved in all its aspects in a satisfactory manner in accordance with international legitimacy,

1. Expresses its appreciation to the Committee on the Exercise of the Inalienable Rights of the Palestinian People for its efforts in performing the tasks assigned to it by the General Assembly, and takes note of its annual report, including the conclusions and recommendations contained in chapter VII thereof;

2. Requests the Committee to continue to exert all efforts to promote the realization of the inalienable rights of the Palestinian people, to support the Middle East peace process and to mobilize international support for and assistance to the Palestinian people, and authorizes the Committee to make such adjustments in its approved programme of work as it may consider appropriate and necessary in the light of developments and to report thereon to the General Assembly at its sixtieth session and thereafter;

3. Also requests the Committee to continue to keep under review the situation relating to the question of Palestine and to report and make suggestions to the General Assembly, the Security Council or the Secretary-General, as appropriate;

4. Further requests the Committee to continue to extend its cooperation and support to Palestinian and other civil society organizations in order to mobilize international solidarity and support for the achievement by the Palestinian people of its inalienable rights and for a peaceful settlement of the question of Palestine, and to involve additional civil society organizations in its work;

5. Requests the United Nations Conciliation Commission for Palestine, established under General Assembly resolution 194(III), and other United Nations bodies associated with the question of Palestine to continue to cooperate fully with the Committee and to make available to it, at its request, the relevant information and documentation which they have at their disposal;

6. Invites all Governments and organizations to extend their cooperation to the Committee in the performance of its tasks;

7. Requests the Secretary-General to circulate the report of the Committee to all the competent bodies of the United Nations, and urges them to take the necessary action, as appropriate;

8. Also requests the Secretary-General to continue to provide the Committee with all the necessary facilities for the performance of its tasks.

RECORDED VOTE ON RESOLUTION 59/28:

In favour: Afghanistan, Algeria, Argentina, Armenia, Azerbaijan, Bahamas, Bahrain, Bangladesh, Belarus, Belize, Benin, Bhutan, Bolivia, Botswana, Brazil, Brunei Darussalam, Burkina Faso, Cambodia, Cape Verde, Central African Republic, Chile, China, Colombia, Congo, Côte d'Ivoire, Cuba, Cyprus, Democratic People's Republic of Korea, Djibouti, Dominica, Ecuador, Egypt, El Salvador, Eritrea, Ethiopia, Fiji, Gabon, Gambia, Ghana, Guinea, Guinea-Bissau, Guyana, India, Indonesia, Iran, Iraq, Jamaica, Jordan, Kazakhstan, Kuwait, Kyrgyzstan, Lao People's Democratic Republic, Lebanon, Lesotho, Liberia, Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Madagascar, Malaysia, Maldives, Mali, Malta, Mauritania, Mauritius, Mexico, Morocco, Mozambique, Myanmar, Namibia, Nepal, Niger, Nigeria, Oman, Pakistan, Panama, Paraguay, Philippines, Qatar, Saint Lucia, Saint Vincent and the Grenadines, Saudi Arabia, Senegal, Seychelles, Sierra Leone, Singapore, Somalia, South Africa, Sri Lanka, Sudan, Suriname, Syrian Arab Republic, Tajikistan, Togo, Trinidad and Tobago, Tunisia, Turkey, Turkmenistan, United Arab Emirates, United Republic of Tanzania, Uzbekistan, Venezuela, Viet Nam, Yemen, Zambia, Zimbabwe.

Division for Palestinian Rights

Under the guidance of the Committee on Palestinian Rights, the Division for Palestinian Rights of the UN Secretariat continued to research, monitor, prepare studies, and collect and disseminate information on all issues related to the Palestine question. The Division responded to requests for information and issued the following publications: a monthly bulletin covering action by the United Nations and intergovernmental organizations on the issue of Palestine; a monthly chronology of events relating to the question of Palestine, based on media reports and other sources; reports of meetings organized under the auspices of the Committee; a special bulletin on the observance of the International Day of Solidarity with the Palestinian People (29 November); periodic reviews of developments relating to Middle East peace efforts; and an annual compilation of relevant General Assembly and Security Council action.

The Committee, in its annual report [A/59/35], requested the Division to continue its programme of publications and other informational activities, including further expansion of the electronic United Nations Information System on the Question of Palestine and the graphic enhancement of the "Question of Palestine" website. It requested that the annual training programme for PA staff be continued.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 1 December [meeting 64], the General Assembly adopted resolution 59/29 [draft: A/59/L.35 & Add.1] by recorded vote (103-8-64) [agenda item 37].

Division for Palestinian Rights of the Secretariat

The General Assembly,

Having considered the report of the Committee on the Exercise of the Inalienable Rights of the Palestinian People,

Taking note in particular of the relevant information contained in chapter V.B of that report,

Recalling its resolution 32/40 B of 2 December 1977 and all subsequent relevant resolutions, including resolution 58/19 of 3 December 2003,

1. Notes with appreciation the action taken by the Secretary-General in compliance with its resolution 58/19;

2. Considers that the Division for Palestinian Rights of the Secretariat continues to make a useful and constructive contribution;

3. Requests the Secretary-General to continue to provide the Division with the necessary resources and to ensure that it continues to carry out its programme of work as detailed in the relevant earlier resolutions, in consultation with the Committee on the Exercise of the Inalienable Rights of the Palestinian People and under its guidance, including, in particular, the organization of meetings in various regions with the participation of all sectors of the international community, the further development and expansion of the documents collection of the United Nations Information System on the Question of Palestine, the preparation and widest possible dissemination of publications and information materials on various aspects of the question of Palestine and the provision of the annual training programme for staff of the Palestinian Authority;

4. Also requests the Secretary-General to ensure the continued cooperation of the Department of Public Information and other units of the Secretariat in enabling the Division to perform its tasks and in covering adequately the various aspects of the question of Palestine;

5. Invites all Governments and organizations to extend their cooperation to the Division in the performance of its tasks;

6. Requests the Committee and the Division, as part of the observance of the International Day of Solidarity with the Palestinian People on 29 November, to continue to organize an annual exhibit on Palestinian rights or a cultural event in cooperation with the Permanent Observer Mission of Palestine to the United Nations, and encourages Member States to continue to give the widest support and publicity to the observance of the Day of Solidarity.

Special information programme

As requested in General Assembly resolution 58/20 [YUN 2003, p. 502], the UN Department of Public Information (DPI) in 2004 continued its special information programme on the question of Palestine, which included the maintenance of the web page on the question of Palestine under "Global Issues" and other pages of the UN website, the issuing of press releases and the organization of its annual training programme for Palestinian broadcasters and journalists. The Radio Section provided coverage of various aspects of the question of Palestine in its broadcasts in all six UN official languages. The quarterly UN Chronicle and UN Chronicle Online reported on relevant issues and action taken by the Assembly and the Security Council. DPI, in cooperation with the Foreign Ministry of China, organized an international media seminar on peace in the Middle East (Beijing, 16-17 June).

As in previous years, the network of United Nations information centres (UNICs) and other UN offices carried out activities in connection with the International Day of Solidarity with the Palestinian People. Throughout the year, many UNICs dealt with the Palestine question and organized related outreach activities.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 1 December [meeting 64], the General Assembly adopted resolution 59/30 [draft: A/59/L.36 & Add.1] by recorded vote (162-7-9) [agenda item 37].

Special information programme on the question of Palestine of the Department of Public Information of the Secretariat

The General Assembly,

Having considered the report of the Committee on the Exercise of the Inalienable Rights of the Palestinian People,

Taking note in particular of the information contained in chapter VI of that report,

Recalling its resolution 58/20 of 3 December 2003,

Convinced that the worldwide dissemination of accurate and comprehensive information and the role of civil society organizations and institutions remain of vital importance in heightening awareness of and support for the inalienable rights of the Palestinian people,

Recalling the mutual recognition between the Government of the State of Israel and the Palestine Liberation Organization, the representative of the Palestinian people, as well as the existing agreements between the two sides and the need for full compliance with those agreements,

Recalling also the Quartet road map to a permanent two-State solution to the Israeli-Palestinian conflict,

Taking note of the advisory opinion rendered on 9 July 2004 by the International Court of Justice on the Legal Consequences of the Construction of a Wall in the Occupied Palestinian Territory,

1. Notes with appreciation the action taken by the Department of Public Information of the Secretariat in compliance with resolution 58/20;

2. Considers that the special information programme on the question of Palestine of the Department is very useful in raising the awareness of the international community concerning the question of Palestine and the situation in the Middle East and that the programme is contributing effectively to an atmosphere conducive to dialogue and supportive of the peace process;

3. Requests the Department, in full cooperation and coordination with the Committee on the Exercise of the Inalienable Rights of the Palestinian People, to continue, with the necessary flexibility as may be required by developments affecting the question of Palestine, its special information programme for the biennium 2004-2005, in particular:

(a) To disseminate information on all the activities of the United Nations system relating to the question of Palestine, including reports on the work carried out by the relevant United Nations organizations;

(b) To continue to issue and update publications on the various aspects of the question of Palestine in all fields, including materials concerning the recent developments in that regard, in particular the prospects for peace;

(c) To expand its collection of audio-visual material on the question of Palestine and to continue the production and preservation of such material and the updating of the exhibit in the Secretariat;

(d) To organize and promote fact-finding news missions for journalists to the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem;

(e) To organize international, regional and national seminars or encounters for journalists, aiming in particular at sensitizing public opinion to the question of Palestine;

(f) To continue to provide assistance to the Palestinian people in the field of media development, in particular to strengthen the training programme for Palestinian broadcasters and journalists initiated in 1995.

Assistance to Palestinians

UN activities

In response to General Assembly resolution 58/113 [YUN 2003, p. 504], the Secretary-General submitted a June report [A/59/121-E/2004/88] describing UN and other assistance to the Palestinian people from May 2003 to April 2004.

During the reporting period, new hope for a peaceful solution to the Palestinian-Israeli conflict was brought about by the road map proposed by the Quartet [YUN 2003, p. 464], spelling out concrete steps towards the fulfilment of the vision of two States, Israel and Palestine, living side by side in peace and security. However, neither side honoured its commitments, for Israel did not stop settlement activities and continued its military operations in Palestinian areas and the construction of the security wall, while the PA did not bring an end to violence and terrorism. Throughout the reporting period, UN agencies in the Occupied Palestinian Territory had to seek additional resources to meet increasing emergency needs while trying to maintain their development activities, and the focus of those activities shifted even more to humanitarian aid as compared to the previous year. The UN system provided assistance in a number of areas, including institutional capacity-building, human resources and social development, human rights and women, infrastructure and natural resources management, and productive sectors.

The Quartet's Task Force on Palestinian Reform, established in 2002 [YUN 2002, p. 432], continued to monitor and support the implementation of Palestinian civil reforms and guide the international donor community in assisting the Palestinian reform agenda. Significant technical and programmatic donor support in all reform areas continued to be forthcoming. The Task Force worked with Palestinians to update the Palestinian reform action plan, which, on a continuing basis, highlighted Palestinian commitments, reviewed benchmarks, identified obstacles to reform and proposed areas for donor assistance. The Task Force conducted its activities through seven reform support groups in the areas of elections, financial accountability, judicial and rule of law reform, legislative reform, market economics, local government, and public administration and civil service reform. At its meeting in Rome on 11 December 2003, the Task Force noted that Palestinian political instability, continued Israeli restrictions on freedom of movement and the significant deterioration of security contributed to paralysis and delay in the reform process. While expressing concern that that process had been largely stalled over the previous four months, it nonetheless welcomed the progress made in several areas of Palestinian civil reform, in particular the implementation of higher standards of fiscal transparency and accountability, and work towards developing public institutions and laws to promote a market economy. The Palestinian efforts to establish a centrally coordinated and proactive approach to reform through the PA Reform Coordination Support Unit, under the auspices of the Prime Minister, and the establishment of the Palestinian National Reform Committee, composed of representatives from the Government, the legislature, the business community and civil society, were positive steps towards developing a more comprehensive reform agenda. In its progress report of February 2004, the Task Force expressed disappointment at the overall pace of reform. It noted that significant measures had been adopted, such as the passing by the Palestinian Legislative Council of the 2004 budget, the start of voter registration and the decision to pay all security personnel through bank transfers. However, it observed that a real political commitment by both parties was still lacking and was hampering progress in many areas, especially in the judicial and legislative fields.

The Secretary-General observed that a two-track strategy—balancing emergency needs against development goals that supported a viable PA—had been the basis of the UN approach since 2001. Although less than preferable, it had become the modus operandi for relief efforts in the Occupied Palestinian Territory. As a result of their considerable efforts, the UN system and donors had achieved measured success in both emergency and development assistance. The successes had been overshadowed by the escalation of the crisis, which had led not only to loss of life, but also to a reversal in the progress made in the socio-economic sectors. Humanitarian and financial assistance alone would not serve as a solution to the political crisis. A solution regarding the status of the Palestinian people, as well as the economic situation and humanitarian crisis, were linked directly to respect for international law and the achievement of a peaceful resolution of the conflict. Israel had to ease restrictions and work closely with those providing aid and development projects, and the PA needed to take steps to lessen Israel's security concerns.

The Economic and Social Council, on 23 July, took note of the Secretary-General's report (decision 2004/297).

UNCTAD assistance to Palestinians

At its fifty-first session (Geneva, 4-15 October) [A/59/15], the Trade and Development Board of the United Nations Conference on Trade and Development (UNCTAD) considered the report on UNCTAD assistance to the Palestinian people [TD/B/51/2]. The report underlined the urgency of bringing relief, rehabilitation and development efforts into a cohesive framework determined by a Palestinian development vision and agenda. The Palestinian economy continued to feature structural imbalances and distortions, owing to occupation, geographic isolation and fragmentation, war and institutional attrition, and the uncertainty of implementation of the proposed two-State solution and the international community's road map. UNCTAD supported Palestinian development efforts and the establishment of new partnerships with the private sector and international development organizations. Increasingly, donors considered UNCTAD to be a transparent development agency capable of delivering cost-effective technical assistance to the Palestinian people. However, funding constraints were becoming increasingly critical, and that had impaired the efficiency and impact of technical assistance. The secretariat's ability to forge ahead with the design and initiation of planned technical assistance activities was undermined by recurrent limitations and the unpredictability and reduction of resources. Regular budgetary resources were sufficient to maintain the secretariat's specialized knowledge and policy analysis capacity in specific areas, and to provide occasional advisory services, but they were not adequate for managing a multisectoral technical assistance programme, or to enable Palestinian representatives to participate fully in UNCTAD expert meetings. In order to remedy that situation, the secretariat was prepared to follow up on the Board deliberations with proactive resource mobilization efforts.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 2 December [meeting 65], the General Assembly adopted resolution 59/56 [draft: A/59/L.24 & Add.1, orally revised] without vote [agenda item 39 (c)].

Assistance to the Palestinian people

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 58/113 of 17 December 2003, as well as previous resolutions on the question,

Recalling also the signing of the Declaration of Principles on Interim Self-Government Arrangements in Washington, D.C., on 13 September 1993, by the Government of the State of Israel and the Palestine Liberation Organization, the representative of the Palestinian people, and the subsequent implementation agreements concluded by the two sides,

Gravely concerned at the deterioration in the living conditions of the Palestinian people throughout the occupied territory, which constitutes a mounting humanitarian crisis,

Conscious of the urgent need for improvement in the economic and social infrastructure of the occupied territory,

Aware that development is difficult under occupation and is best promoted in circumstances of peace and stability,

Noting the great economic and social challenges facing the Palestinian people and their leadership,

Conscious of the urgent necessity for international assistance to the Palestinian people, taking into account the Palestinian priorities,

Welcoming the results of the Conference to Support Middle East Peace, convened in Washington, D.C., on 1 October 1993, the establishment of the Ad Hoc Liaison Committee and the work being done by the World Bank as its secretariat and the establishment of the Consultative Group, as well as all follow-up meetings and international mechanisms established to provide assistance to the Palestinian people,

Welcoming also the work of the Joint Liaison Committee, which provides a forum in which economic policy and practical matters related to donor assistance are discussed with the Palestinian Authority,

Stressing the continued importance of the work of the Ad Hoc Liaison Committee in the coordination of assistance to the Palestinian people,

Noting the upcoming meeting of the Ad Hoc Liaison Committee to review the state of the Palestinian economy,

Stressing the need for the full engagement of the United Nations in the process of building Palestinian institutions and in providing broad assistance to the Palestinian people, and welcoming in this regard the support provided to the Palestinian Authority by the Task Force on Palestinian Reform, established by the Quartet in 2002,

Noting, in this regard, the active participation of the United Nations Special Coordinator for the Middle East Peace Process and Personal Representative of the Secretary-General to the Palestine Liberation Organization and the Palestinian Authority in the activities of the Special Envoys of the Quartet,

Welcoming the endorsement by the Security Council, in its resolution 1515(2003) of 19 November 2003, of the performance-based road map to a permanent two-State solution to the Israeli-Palestinian conflict, and stressing the need for its implementation and compliance with its provisions,

Having considered the report of the Secretary-General,

Expressing grave concern at the continuation of the recent tragic and violent events that have led to many deaths and injuries,

1. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General;
2. Also takes note of the report of the Personal Humanitarian Envoy of the Secretary-General on the humanitarian conditions and needs of the Palestinian people;

3. Expresses its appreciation to the Secretary-General for his rapid response and efforts regarding assistance to the Palestinian people;

4. Also expresses its appreciation to the Member States, United Nations bodies and intergovernmental, regional and non-governmental organizations that have provided and continue to provide assistance to the Palestinian people;

5. Stresses the importance of the work of the United Nations Special Coordinator for the Middle East Peace Process and Personal Representative of the Secretary-General to the Palestine Liberation Organization and the Palestinian Authority and of the steps taken under the auspices of the Secretary-General to ensure the achievement of a coordinated mechanism for United Nations activities throughout the occupied territories;

6. Urges Member States, international financial institutions of the United Nations system, intergovernmental and non-governmental organizations and regional and interregional organizations to extend, as rapidly and as generously as possible, economic and social assistance to the Palestinian people, in close cooperation with the Palestine Liberation Organization and through official Palestinian institutions;

7. Calls upon relevant organizations and agencies of the United Nations system to intensify their assistance in response to the urgent needs of the Palestinian people in accordance with Palestinian priorities set forth by the Palestinian Authority;

8. Urges Member States to open their markets to exports of Palestinian products on the most favourable terms, consistent with appropriate trading rules, and to implement fully existing trade and cooperation agreements;

9. Calls upon the international donor community to expedite the delivery of pledged assistance to the Palestinian people to meet their urgent needs;

10. Stresses, in this context, the importance of ensuring the free passage of aid to the Palestinian people and the free movement of persons and goods;

11. Urges the international donor community, United Nations agencies and organizations and non-governmental organizations to extend as rapidly as possible emergency economic and humanitarian assistance to the Palestinian people to counter the impact of the current crisis;

12. Stresses the need to implement the Paris Protocol on Economic Relations of 29 April 1994, fifth annex to the Israeli-Palestinian Interim Agreement on the West Bank and the Gaza Strip, signed in Washington, D.C., on 28 September 1995, in particular with regard to the full and prompt clearance of Palestinian indirect tax revenues, and welcomes the progress made in this regard;

13. Suggests the convening in 2005 of a United Nations-sponsored seminar on assistance to the Palestinian people;

14. Requests the Secretary-General to submit a report to the General Assembly at its sixtieth session, through the Economic and Social Council, on the implementation of the present resolution, containing:

(a) An assessment of the assistance actually received by the Palestinian people;

(b) An assessment of the needs still unmet and specific proposals for responding effectively to them;

15. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its sixtieth session the sub-item entitled "Assistance to the Palestinian people".

UNRWA

In 2004, the United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East continued to provide vital education, health and relief and social services to an ever-growing refugee population, despite a severe budget deficit and a cash flow crisis.

As at 30 June, almost 4 million refugees were registered with UNRWA, an increase of 2.56 per cent over the 2003 figure of 4.08 million. Approximately 68 per cent of the registered refugee population was living outside the 59 officially recognized refugee camps. The largest refugee population was registered in Jordan (42 per cent of the Agency-wide total), followed by the Gaza Strip (22.41 per cent), the West Bank (16.13 per cent), the Syrian Arab Republic (9.98 per cent) and Lebanon (9.48 per cent). Of those registered, 43.54 per cent were 19 years of age or under.

In his annual report on the work of the Agency from 1 July 2003 to 30 June 2004 [A/59/13], the UNRWA Commissioner-General said that the reporting period was characterized by the continuation of conditions of strife in the Occupied Palestinian Territory. UNRWA recognized the right and duty of Israel to protect its citizens, but that did not affect Israel's obligations under international humanitarian law, which prohibited, among other things, disproportionate military responses, the killing of innocent civilians and collective punishment. The large-scale military operations undertaken by Israel Defence Forces (IDF) caused heavy loss of life and widespread damage to and destruction of Palestinian property and infrastructure. The number of suicide bombings inside Israel decreased significantly, while rocket and mortar attacks from the Gaza Strip on targets within Israel and against settlements and IDF positions within the Gaza Strip continued. Military incursions into refugee camps were particularly extensive during the reporting period, which was characterized by a dramatic increase in shelter and home demolition.

The severe economic depression that the Palestinian economy had been experiencing since September 2000 continued unabated. According to the World Bank, unemployment remained at over 25 per cent, and real wages declined by 2.6 per cent. The resumption of tax revenue transfers from Israel to the PA provided a one-time boost to the Palestinian economy; nevertheless, Palestinian per capita income remained 35 per cent lower than its pre-intifada level. As a result, over half the Palestinian population continued to live below the poverty line.

During the reporting period, 34 UNRWA staff members were detained by Israeli authorities, and the Agency was refused access to detained staff members. Despite assurances to the contrary, the Israeli Foreign Ministry had yet to follow up on any of UNRWA's requests for official information and documents concerning the charges against those staff members, or the status of legal proceedings, convictions or appeals.

The environment in which UNRWA carried out its operations in the Occupied Palestinian Territory continued to affect negatively its ability to deliver services. Among UNRWA buildings damaged and equipment destroyed by the conflict were schools, training centres and health-care facilities. Closures and checkpoint delays prevented schools from operating normally as large numbers of teachers and students could not reach their schools or return to their homes. Office workers, doctors and nurses could not reach their places of work, trucks carrying humanitarian supplies could not reach their destinations, ambulances were delayed or prevented from moving patients needing urgent treatment, and UNRWA school buildings were taken over by Israeli forces and used as bases and detention centres. There were also a few instances where Palestinian militants entered UNRWA premises. In the West Bank, IDF military operations, including curfews and closed military zones, adversely impacted UNRWA's ability to carry out its humanitarian functions in support of Palestine refugees. In Gaza, the external closures imposed on the area and the internal closures that effectively bisected or trisected the Strip for significant periods of time led to disruption in the delivery of UNRWA humanitarian supplies.

The largest activity of UNRWA's extensive emergency assistance programme for refugees affected by the conflict was the provision of food aid to over 1.3 million refugees. Owing to insufficient funding, UNRWA was forced to curtail provision of remedial education to its pupils and psychological counselling to children and adults. The Agency provided temporary accommodation and emergency assistance to refugees whose shelters were destroyed. In the West Bank, the implementation of the Jenin camp reconstruction project neared completion. Meanwhile, the destruction of shelter in Gaza increased significantly, necessitating the expansion of reconstruction and rehousing programmes there.

During the reporting period, two appeals for assistance from the international community to fund the Agency's emergency programmes were launched for the second half of 2003 ($102.8 million) and for 2004 ($193.6 million). The international community's response to those appeals gradually decreased as the crisis entered its fourth year and other world crises diverted donors' attention. In 2003, contributions covered 47 per cent of the needs documented in UNRWA appeals, while the proportion for 2004 stood at 32 per cent as at 30 June 2004.

Advisory Commission. By a 30 September letter to the Commissioner-General, which was included in his annual report [A/59/13], the Chairperson of the Advisory Commission of UNRWA noted with concern the continuing deterioration in the political, economic and social situation in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including the escalation of armed attacks during the reporting period. The humanitarian crisis was evidenced primarily by high levels of poverty, deteriorating health conditions, the displacement of an increasing number of Palestinians following the destruction of their homes, and the increasing exhaustion of the capacity of the Palestinian population to sustain itself in the face of the decline in economic and social conditions since September 2000. He noted that the Agency had launched appeals totalling $209.4 million for 2004, though the international community's level of response stagnated, in that as at mid-September only $89.5 million had been pledged and $82.9 million actually received. The Commission underscored the need for a growing level of contributions to the Agency's regular budget.

Report of Conciliation Commission. The United Nations Conciliation Commission for Palestine, in its fifty-eighth report covering the period from 1 September 2003 to 31 August 2004 [A/59/260], submitted in response to General Assembly resolution 58/91 [YUN 2003, p. 509], noted its August 2003 report [ibid., p. 507] and observed that it had nothing new to report since its submission.

Projects

During 2003/04, project funding enabled UNRWA to complete the construction of four schools and one health centre, among other construction projects, and the rehabilitation/construction of 239 shelters. Several environmental health projects were also completed, in particular the construction of facilities to improve the water supply and sewerage systems. Project funding helped to sustain regular Agency programmes through the upgrading of facilities and the introduction of courses at several of UNRWA's vocational training centres, the operations support programme in the West Bank and Gaza and the provision of medical supplies. During the reporting period, UNRWA received new pledges for projects in the amount of $24.6 million. Of the new funding, $9.5 million (39 per cent) was allocated to the relief and social services sector, $3.4 million to the health sector, $3.4 million to the education sector and $3.8 million to other projects, while $4.5 million had not been allocated. Projects in the Occupied Palestinian Territory received $7.2 million, those in Syria $6.3 million, Lebanon $3.2 million and Jordan $0.4 million. Agency-wide activities received $7.5 million. The Peace Implementation Programme, established in 1993 [YUN 1993, p. 569] to fund extrabudgetary activities within the Agency's major service areas and later merged under the projects' budget [YUN 2000, p. 450], enabled UNRWA, among other things, to complete the construction of 20 additional classrooms.

Emergency appeals

UNRWA continued its programme of emergency assistance, focusing on food aid, emergency employment creation, shelter repair and rebuilding, cash assistance, health and education. During the reporting period, UNRWA launched three appeals. A six-month appeal was launched in June 2003 for $102.9 million, covering July-December 2003 ($53.3 million received as at 30 June 2004), followed by a year-long appeal for 2004 for $193.6 million ($55.9 million received). In May 2004, the destruction wrought by the Israeli military operation in the city of Rafah in Gaza led to a supplementary appeal for that area for $15.8 million ($4.4 million received). Owing to a lack of funds, the Agency was forced to set new priorities for its emergency appeal to focus primarily on food aid, emergency employment creation and cash assistance, and to reduce the number of beneficiaries receiving food parcels in the West Bank, as well as the caloric value of rations in the West Bank and Gaza. Furthermore, UNRWA was unable to rebuild approximately 1,500 shelters that had been destroyed by IDF since the intifada began in September 2000. With the available emergency appeal funds, UNRWA rebuilt or repaired a total of 735 shelters in Gaza and 366 in the West Bank, and it provided 19,550 short-term jobs for Palestine refugees and created 1,595,604 job/days either through direct hire or community-based construction projects. Food distribution continued, targeting 128,000 families in the Gaza Strip and 94,294 in the West Bank.

Geneva conference

UNRWA, together with the Swiss Government, co-hosted its first major international conference (Geneva, 7-8 June) since its inception, entitled "Meeting the Humanitarian Needs of the Palestine Refugees in the Near East: Building Partnerships in Support of UNRWA". The Agency stressed the need for increased mutual engagement between itself and the international community, including greater support for UNRWA to keep up with the increasing needs of a growing refugee population, and to upgrade UNRWA services and rehabilitate infrastructure. The conference identified numerous areas where a stronger and more substantive tripartite partnership among donors, host countries and UNRWA could lead to improvements in the responsiveness, effectiveness and efficiency of the Agency's operations in providing services to the refugees. A structural linkage was set between the conference and UNRWA's future planning process to ensure that the recommendations from the conference would be reflected in the Agency's medium-term plan for 2005-2009 and in its budget preparation processes.

Major service areas

UNRWA continued to implement its regular programme, providing education, health, social services and microcredit assistance to Palestine refugees throughout the occupied territories. It also pursued internal management reform, with a view to enhancing its overall efficiency and effectiveness.

UNRWA's education programme was its largest activity, consisting of 658 schools that provided basic and preparatory education to approximately 490,000 pupils, five secondary schools in Lebanon, eight vocational training centres and three teacher training colleges. The schools followed the national curricula of the host countries in each of UNRWA's five fields of operations. As a result, UNRWA was required to implement improvements to the curriculum introduced by the host country authorities. However, because of its precarious financial situation, UNRWA was struggling to keep pace with such developments, which included the introduction of a tenth year in basic education in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, English language in elementary schools in Jordan and computer science in Jordanian and Syrian preparatory schools. UNRWA's university scholarship programme was discontinued owing to financial constraints. Despite the financial challenges, UNRWA's Education Department continued to implement reform and improvement of internal processes, as well as specific projects, such as the computer information technology initiative. UNRWA continued to introduce secondary schooling in Lebanon as a result of restrictions in access for Palestine refugees to the Lebanese public education system. In the West Bank and Gaza Strip, operations were severely hampered by the ongoing crisis. Israeli military action left 29 pupils dead and 147 injured in the reporting period.

Technical supervision of UNRWA's health programme was provided by the World Health Organization, which also supplied the services of senior management staff and short-term consultants, as well as technical publications. UNRWA focused on sustaining adequate levels of investment in primary health care, with special emphasis on maternal and child health and disease prevention and control, enhancing the process of institutional capacity-building and developing its human resources. Management reforms led to the introduction of new systems relating to health information, hospital management and drug supply management. The situation in the Occupied Palestinian Territory caused a significant deterioration of the refugees' health. Studies documented the increasing prevalence of acute and chronic malnutrition as well as iron-deficiency anaemia and low birth weight. Studies also warned of breakdowns in preventive services to women and children owing to closures and curfews, resulting in fewer infants completing immunizations on schedule. In Lebanon, UNRWA strengthened its cooperation with the Palestinian Red Crescent Society facilities, providing cost-effective secondary health care to refugees unable to afford the cost of private hospitalization. The Agency also continued its environmental health services in refugee camps throughout its areas of operation, introducing and/or improving sewage disposal, storm water drainage, provision of safe drinking water and refuse collection.

UNRWA's relief and social services programme addressed the needs of the most vulnerable among the refugee population and sought to reduce poverty. It fostered community-based organizations with a special focus on women, children and youth, as well as physically/mentally challenged refugees. UNRWA's special hardship programme was in increasing demand owing to the difficult socio-economic situation in Jordan. Shelter rehabilitation continued insofar as extra-budgetary funding was forthcoming. Funding by Governments and the provision of land by the host authority enabled UNRWA to implement housing projects in Gaza, following large-scale destruction of refugee shelters.

UNRWA continued to promote income-generation activities on two levels—in the overall context of its relief and social services programme, and as a commercial, self-sustaining and market-oriented microfinance and microenterprise programme. The latter programme expanded its operations in Jordan and the Syrian Arab Republic. It provided 15,740 loans worth $12.34 million in the region. That programme came under great strain owing to the severe decline in economic conditions in the Occupied Palestinian Territory since October 2000; nevertheless, it was returned to financial self-sufficiency.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 10 December [meeting 71], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fourth Committee [A/59/470], adopted resolution 59/117 by recorded vote (167-1-11) [agenda item 75].

Assistance to Palestine refugees

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 194(III) of 11 December 1948 and all its subsequent resolutions on the question, including resolution 58/91 of 9 December 2003,

Recalling also its resolution 302(IV) of 8 December 1949, by which, inter alia, it established the United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East,

Recalling further relevant Security Council resolutions,

Aware of the fact that, for more than five decades, the Palestine refugees have suffered from the loss of their homes, lands and means of livelihood,

Affirming the imperative of resolving the problem of the Palestine refugees for the achievement of justice and for the achievement of lasting peace in the region,

Acknowledging the essential role that the United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East has played for more than fifty-four years since its establishment in ameliorating the plight of the Palestine refugees in the fields of education, health and relief and social services,

Taking note of the report of the Commissioner-General of the United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East covering the period from 1 July 2003 to 30 June 2004,

Aware of the continuing needs of the Palestine refugees throughout all the fields of operation, namely Jordan, Lebanon, the Syrian Arab Republic and the Occupied Palestinian Territory,

Expressing grave concern at the especially difficult situation of the Palestine refugees under occupation, including with regard to their safety, well-being and living conditions, and the continuous deterioration of those conditions during the recent period,

Noting the signing of the Declaration of Principles on Interim Self-Government Arrangements on 13 September 1993 by the Government of Israel and the Palestine Liberation Organization and the subsequent implementation agreements,

Aware of the important role to be played in the peace process by the Multilateral Working Group on Refugees of the Middle East peace process,

1. Notes with regret that repatriation or compensation of the refugees, as provided for in paragraph 11 of General Assembly resolution 194(III), has not yet been effected and that, therefore, the situation of the Palestine refugees continues to be a matter of grave concern;

2. Also notes with regret that the United Nations Conciliation Commission for Palestine has been unable to find a means of achieving progress in the implementation of paragraph 11 of General Assembly resolution 194(III), and requests the Conciliation Commission to exert continued efforts towards the implementation of that paragraph and to report to the Assembly as appropriate, but no later than 1 September 2005;

3. Affirms the necessity for the continuation of the work of the United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East and the importance of its operation and its services for the well-being of the Palestine refugees and for the stability of the region, pending the resolution of the question of the Palestine refugees;

4. Calls upon all donors to continue to make the most generous efforts possible to meet the anticipated needs of the Agency, including those mentioned in recent emergency appeals;

5. Decides to extend the mandate of the Agency until 30 June 2008, without prejudice to the provisions of paragraph 11 of General Assembly resolution 194(III).

RECORDED VOTE ON RESOLUTION 59/117:

In favour: Afghanistan, Algeria, Andorra, Angola, Antigua and Barbuda, Argentina, Armenia, Australia, Austria, Azerbaijan, Bahamas, Bahrain, Bangladesh, Barbados, Belarus, Belgium, Belize, Benin, Bolivia, Bosnia and Herzegovina, Botswana, Brazil, Brunei Darussalam, Bulgaria, Burkina Faso, Burundi, Cambodia, Canada, Cape Verde, Central African Republic, Chile, China, Colombia, Comoros, Congo, Costa Rica, Côte d'Ivoire, Croatia, Cuba, Cyprus, Czech Republic, Democratic People's Republic of Korea, Denmark, Djibouti, Dominica, Dominican Republic, Ecuador, Egypt, El Salvador, Equatorial Guinea, Eritrea, Estonia, Ethiopia, Fiji, Finland, France, Gabon, Georgia, Germany, Ghana, Greece, Guatemala, Guinea, Guinea-Bissau, Guyana, Hungary, Iceland, India, Indonesia, Iran, Iraq, Ireland, Italy, Jamaica, Japan, Jordan, Kazakhstan, Kenya, Kuwait, Kyrgyzstan, Lao People's Democratic Republic, Latvia, Lebanon, Lesotho, Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Liechtenstein, Lithuania, Luxembourg, Madagascar, Malaysia, Maldives, Mali, Malta, Mauritania, Mauritius, Mexico, Monaco, Mongolia, Morocco, Mozambique, Myanmar, Namibia, Nauru, Nepal, Netherlands, New Zealand, Nicaragua, Nigeria, Norway, Oman, Pakistan, Panama, Paraguay, Peru, Philippines, Poland, Portugal, Qatar, Republic of Korea, Republic of Moldova, Romania, Russian Federation, Saint Lucia, Saint Vincent and the Grenadines, Samoa, San Marino, Sao Tome and Principe, Saudi Arabia, Senegal, Serbia and Montenegro, Seychelles, Sierra Leone, Singapore, Slovakia, Slovenia, Solomon Islands, Somalia, South Africa, Spain, Sri Lanka, Sudan, Suriname, Sweden, Switzerland, Syrian Arab Republic, Tajikistan, Thailand, The former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia, Timor-Leste, Togo, Tonga, Trinidad and Tobago, Tunisia, Turkey, Turkmenistan, Uganda, Ukraine, United Arab Emirates, United Kingdom, United Republic of Tanzania, Uruguay, Uzbekistan, Venezuela, Viet Nam, Yemen, Zambia, Zimbabwe.

Against: Israel.

Abstaining: Cameroon, Grenada, Haiti, Honduras, Marshall Islands, Micronesia, Palau, Papua New Guinea, Tuvalu, United States, Vanuatu.

The Assembly, also on 10 December [meeting 71] and on the Fourth Committee's recommendation

[A/59/470], adopted resolution 59/119 by recorded vote (163-6-7) [agenda item 75].

Operations of the United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 194(III) of 11 December 1948, 212(III) of 19 November 1948, 302(IV) of 8 December 1949 and all subsequent related resolutions, including resolution 58/93 of 9 December 2003,

Recalling also the relevant Security Council resolutions,

Having considered the report of the Commissioner-General of the United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East covering the period from 1 July 2003 to 30 June 2004,

Taking note of the letter dated 30 September 2004 from the Chairperson of the Advisory Commission of the United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East addressed to the Commissioner-General,

Deeply concerned about the continuing critical financial situation of the Agency and its effect on the continuing provision of necessary Agency services to the Palestine refugees, including its emergency-related and development programmes,

Recalling Articles 100, 104 and 105 of the Charter of the United Nations and the Convention on the Privileges and Immunities of the United Nations,

Recalling also the Convention on the Safety of United Nations and Associated Personnel, Affirming the applicability of the Geneva Convention relative to the Protection of Civilian Persons in Time of War, of 12 August 1949, to the Palestinian territory occupied since 1967, including East Jerusalem,

Aware of the continuing needs of the Palestine refugees throughout the Occupied Palestinian Territory and in the other fields of operation, namely, in Jordan, Lebanon and the Syrian Arab Republic,

Gravely concerned about the increased suffering of the Palestine refugees, including that resulting from loss of life, injury and extensive destruction and damage to their shelters and properties, during the ongoing crisis in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem,

Expressing grave concern about the grave impact of the events that occurred in the Jenin refugee camp in April 2002, the Rafah refugee camp in May 2004 and the Jabaliya refugee camp in October 2004, including the loss of life, injury, destruction and displacement inflicted on many of the civilian inhabitants,

Aware of the extraordinary efforts being undertaken by the Agency for the repair or rebuilding of thousands of damaged or destroyed refugee shelters,

Aware also of the valuable work done by the refugee affairs officers of the Agency in providing protection to the Palestinian people, in particular Palestine refugees,

Gravely concerned about the endangerment of the safety of the Agency's staff and about the damage caused to facilities of the Agency as a result of Israeli military operations during the reporting period,

Deploing the killing of twelve Agency staff members by the Israeli occupying forces since September 2000,

Deploing also the killing and wounding of children in the Agency's schools by the Israeli occupying forces,

Expressing deep concern about the continuing policies of closure and severe restrictions, including the curfews, that have been imposed on the movement of persons and goods throughout the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, and which have had a grave impact on the socio-economic situation of the Palestine refugees and have greatly contributed to the dire humanitarian crisis facing the Palestinian people,

Deeply concerned about the continuing imposition of restrictions on the freedom of movement of the Agency's staff, vehicles and goods, the harassment and intimidation of the Agency's staff and the serious accusations made against the Agency, which proved to be unfounded, all of which undermine and obstruct the Agency's work, including its ability to provide its essential services, notably its education, health and relief and social services,

Recalling the signing, on 13 September 1993, of the Declaration of Principles on Interim Self-Government Arrangements by the Government of Israel and the Palestine Liberation Organization and the subsequent implementation agreements,

Aware of the agreement between the Agency and the Government of Israel,

Taking note of the agreement reached on 24 June 1994, embodied in an exchange of letters between the Agency and the Palestine Liberation Organization,

1. Expresses its appreciation to the Commissioner-General of the United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East, as well as to all of the staff of the Agency, for their tireless efforts and valuable work, particularly in the light of the increasingly difficult conditions during the past year;

2. Also expresses its appreciation to the Advisory Commission of the United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East, and requests it to continue its efforts and to keep the General Assembly informed of its activities, including the full implementation of Assembly decision 48/417 of 10 December 1993;

3. Takes note with appreciation of the report of the Working Group on the Financing of the United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East and the efforts of the Working Group to assist in ensuring the financial security of the Agency, and requests the Secretary-General to provide the necessary services and assistance to the Working Group for the conduct of its work;

4. Commends the continuing efforts of the Commissioner-General to increase the budgetary transparency and efficiency of the Agency, as reflected in the Agency's programme budget for the biennium 2004-2005;

5. Acknowledges the support provided by the host Governments to the Agency in the discharge of its duties;

6. Welcomes the convening, on 7 and 8 June 2004, of the Geneva conference by the United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East and the Swiss Agency for Development and Cooperation to increase support for the United Nations Relief and Works Agency;

7. Encourages the Agency's further consideration of the needs and rights of children in its operations in accordance with the Convention on the Rights of the Child;

8. Expresses concern about the temporary relocation of the headquarters international staff of the Agency from Gaza City and the disruption of operations at the headquarters;

9. Calls upon Israel, the occupying Power, to comply fully with the provisions of the Geneva Convention relative to the Protection of Civilian Persons in Time of War, of 12 August 1949;

10. Also calls upon Israel to abide by Articles 100, 104 and 105 of the Charter of the United Nations and the Convention on the Privileges and Immunities of the United Nations in order to ensure the safety of the personnel of the Agency, the protection of its institutions and the safeguarding of the security of its facilities in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem;

11. Urges the Government of Israel speedily to compensate the Agency for damage to its property and facilities resulting from actions by the Israeli side, particularly during the reporting period;

12. Calls upon Israel particularly to cease obstructing the movement of the staff, vehicles and supplies of the Agency and to cease the levying of extra fees and charges, which affect the Agency's operations detrimentally;

13. Requests the Commissioner-General to proceed with the issuance of identification cards for Palestine refugees and their descendants in the Occupied Palestinian Territory;

14. Affirms that the functioning of the Agency remains essential in all fields of operation;

15. Notes the success of the Agency's microfinance and microenterprise programme, and calls upon the Agency, in close cooperation with the relevant agencies, to continue to contribute to the development of the economic and social stability of the Palestine refugees in all fields of operation;

16. Reiterates its request to the Commissioner-General to proceed with the modernization of the archives of the Agency through the Palestine Refugee Records Project, and to indicate the progress made in this regard in his report to the General Assembly at its sixtieth session;

17. Reiterates its previous appeals to all States, specialized agencies and non-governmental organizations to continue and to augment the special allocations for grants and scholarships for higher education to Palestine refugees in addition to their contributions to the regular budget of the Agency and to contribute to the establishment of vocational training centres for Palestine refugees, and requests the Agency to act as the recipient and trustee for the special allocations for grants and scholarships;

18. Urges all States, specialized agencies and non-governmental organizations to continue and to increase their contributions to the Agency so as to ease the ongoing financial constraints, exacerbated by the current humanitarian situation on the ground, and to support the Agency's valuable work in assisting the Palestine refugees.

On 23 December, the Assembly decided that the agenda item on UNRWA would remain for consideration at its resumed fifty-ninth (2005) session (decision 59/552).

UNRWA financing

UNRWA ended 2003 with a positive working capital balance of $32.2 million. It was able to achieve a relatively favourable financial result owing, in part, to the positive impact of United States dollar depreciation against other currencies, with the result that UNRWA made $4 million in exchange rate gains in 2003. Working capital, defined as the difference between assets and liabilities in the regular budget for the calendar year, stood at $36.7 million as at 31 December 2003. However, $4.5 million represented funds earmarked to procure basic commodities, leaving a real positive working capital balance of $32.2 million for the cash budget. The end-of-year excess of income over expenditure of $23.5 million, minus the $10 million reserve for currency fluctuations, was added to the working capital of $18.7 million carried forward from December 2002.

UNRWA's cash position improved during the reporting period, in part because of the reimbursement by the PA of a large amount of value-added tax (VAT) due from prior years. However, there remained outstanding cash pledges under the regular budget amounting to $8.4 million and approximately $13 million in respect of VAT due from the PA.

Working Group. The Working Group on the Financing of UNRWA held two meetings in 2004, on 7 and 15 October. In its report to the General Assembly [A/59/442], the Working Group said that, by the end of September, UNRWA faced the prospect of a funding gap in its 2004 regular cash budget of $7.3 million. Income for 2004 was expected to be $309.1 million (of which $291.7 million was income from donors, $15.9 million was from UN agencies and $1.5 million was interest income and exchange rate gains), against a net cash expenditure of $316.4 million. Furthermore, of the $291.7 million in income expected from donors for the regular budget in 2004, $270.6 million had been received by the end of September and $21.1 million was outstanding. The Agency continued to try to attract a reliable, sustainable flow of funds so as not to have to depend upon stopgap measures to meet funding needs.

The Working Group remained concerned about the increasing shortfalls in funding for its 2004 appeals. Against a total request of $209.4 million for emergency appeals during 2004, the Agency had received only $89.4 million in pledges. In addition, against a total request for $529.8 million for prior years' emergency appeals, the Agency had received only $323.3 million in pledges. The shortfalls in emergency appeal contributions seriously curtailed the Agency's humanitarian activities, such as food distribution, emergency employment generation programmes, trauma counselling and other emergency health activities. UNRWA's budget requirements for the 2004-2005 biennium were estimated at $805 million, compared with $791.7 million for 2002-2003.

The Working Group said that the problem of the refugees was deeply rooted in a political issue that originated more than half a century earlier, and that it remained essential to settle that problem once and for all in accordance with all relevant UN resolutions. The problems faced by the refugees were, however, humanitarian ones that needed to be addressed as a shared international responsibility. The services provided by UNRWA should be viewed as the minimum required to enable the refugees to lead productive lives. Any further reduction in those services would not only unfairly deprive the refugees of the minimum level of support to which they were entitled, but could also have a destabilizing effect on the entire region.

Displaced persons

In a July report [A/59/151] on compliance with General Assembly resolution 58/92 [YUN 2003, p. 514], which called for accelerated return of all persons displaced as a result of the June 1967 and subsequent hostilities to their homes or former places of residence in the territories occupied by Israel since 1967, the Secretary-General said that, since UNRWA was not involved in arrangements for the return of either refugees or displaced persons not registered with it, the Agency's information was based on requests by returning registered refugees for the transfer of their entitlements to their areas of return. Displaced refugees known by UNRWA to have returned to the West Bank and Gaza Strip since 1967 totalled about 24,600. As far as UNRWA knew, between 1 July 2003 and 30 June 2004, 550 registered refugees had returned to the West Bank and 148 to Gaza from places outside the occupied territory. Some of those refugees might not have been displaced since 1967, but were possibly family members of a displaced registered refugee.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 10 December [meeting 71], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fourth Committee [A/59/470], adopted resolution 59/118 by recorded vote (162-6-9) [agenda item 75].

Persons displaced as a result of the June 1967 and subsequent hostilities

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 2252(ES-V) of 4 July 1967, 2341 B (XXII) of 19 December 1967 and all subsequent related resolutions,

Recalling also Security Council resolutions 237(1967) of 14 June 1967 and 259(1968) of 27 September 1968,

Taking note of the report of the Secretary-General submitted in pursuance of its resolution 58/92 of 9 December 2003,

Taking note also of the report of the Commissioner-General of the United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East covering the period from 1 July 2003 to 30 June 2004,

Concerned about the continuing human suffering resulting from the June 1967 and subsequent hostilities,

Taking note of the relevant provisions of the Declaration of Principles on Interim Self-Government Arrangements of 1993 with regard to the modalities for the admission of persons displaced in 1967, and concerned that the process agreed upon has not yet been effected,

1. Reaffirms the right of all persons displaced as a result of the June 1967 and subsequent hostilities to return to their homes or former places of residence in the territories occupied by Israel since 1967;

2. Expresses deep concern that the mechanism agreed upon by the parties in article XII of the Declaration of Principles on Interim Self-Government Arrangements of 1993 on the return of displaced persons has not been complied with, and stresses the necessity for an accelerated return of displaced persons;

3. Endorses, in the meanwhile, the efforts of the Commissioner-General of the United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East to continue to provide humanitarian assistance, as far as practicable, on an emergency basis, and as a temporary measure, to persons in the area who are currently displaced and in serious need of continued assistance as a result of the June 1967 and subsequent hostilities;

4. Strongly appeals to all Governments and to organizations and individuals to contribute generously to the Agency and to the other intergovernmental and non-governmental organizations concerned for the above-mentioned purposes;

5. Requests the Secretary-General, after consulting with the Commissioner-General, to report to the General Assembly before its sixtieth session on the progress made with regard to the implementation of the present resolution.

RECORDED VOTE ON RESOLUTION 59/118:

In favour: Afghanistan, Algeria, Andorra, Antigua and Barbuda, Argentina, Armenia, Australia, Austria, Azerbaijan, Bahamas, Bahrain, Bangladesh, Barbados, Belarus, Belgium, Belize, Benin, Bolivia, Bosnia and Herzegovina, Botswana, Brazil, Brunei Darussalam, Bulgaria, Burkina Faso, Burundi, Cambodia, Canada, Cape Verde, Chile, China, Colombia, Comoros, Congo, Costa Rica, Croatia, Cuba, Cyprus, Czech Republic, Democratic People's Republic of Korea, Denmark, Djibouti, Dominica, Dominican Republic, Ecuador, Egypt, El Salvador, Equatorial Guinea, Eritrea, Estonia, Ethiopia, Fiji, Finland, France, Gabon, Georgia, Germany, Ghana, Greece, Guatemala, Guinea, Guinea-Bissau, Guyana, Hungary, Iceland, India, Indonesia, Iran, Iraq, Ireland, Italy, Jamaica, Japan, Jordan, Kazakhstan, Kenya, Kuwait, Kyrgyzstan, Lao People's Democratic Republic, Latvia, Lebanon, Lesotho, Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Liechtenstein, Lithuania, Luxembourg, Madagascar, Malaysia, Maldives, Mali, Malta, Mauritania, Mauritius, Mexico, Monaco, Mongolia, Morocco, Mozambique, Myanmar, Namibia, Nepal, Netherlands, New Zealand, Nicaragua, Nigeria, Norway, Oman, Pakistan, Panama, Paraguay, Peru, Philippines, Poland, Portugal, Qatar, Republic of Korea, Republic of Moldova, Romania, Russian Federation, Saint Lucia, Saint Vincent and the Grenadines, Samoa, San Marino, Sao Tome and Principe, Saudi Arabia, Senegal, Serbia and Montenegro, Seychelles, Sierra Leone, Singapore, Slovakia, Slovenia, Solomon Islands, Somalia, South Africa, Spain, Sri Lanka, Sudan, Suriname, Sweden, Switzerland, Syrian Arab Republic, Tajikistan, Thailand, The former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia, Timor-Leste, Togo, Tonga, Trinidad and Tobago, Tunisia, Turkey, Turkmenistan, Uganda, Ukraine, United Arab Emirates, United Kingdom, United Republic of Tanzania, Uruguay, Venezuela, Viet Nam, Yemen, Zambia, Zimbabwe.

Against: Grenada, Israel, Marshall Islands, Micronesia, Palau, United States.

Abstaining: Cameroon, Côte d'Ivoire, Haiti, Honduras, Nauru, Papua New Guinea, Tuvalu, Uzbekistan, Vanuatu.

Property rights

In response to General Assembly resolution 58/94 [YUN 2003, p. 514], the Secretary-General submitted an August report [A/59/279] on steps taken to protect and administer Arab property, assets and property rights in Israel, and establish a fund for income derived therefrom, on behalf of the rightful owners. He indicated that he had transmitted the resolution to Israel and all other Member States, requesting information on any steps taken or envisaged to implement it. The report also detailed replies received from six Member States, including Israel, covering various aspects of Assembly resolutions 58/91 to 58/95 [YUN 2003, pp. 509-514] pertaining to assistance to Palestine refugees. In its reply, Israel said that it supported UNRWA's humanitarian mission and recognized its contribution to the welfare of Palestinian refugees. It was concerned, however, about what it regarded as the politicization of UNRWA operations and the need to take account of the campaign of terror being waged against Israel's citizens. Israel urged UNRWA to draw attention to the misuse of refugee camps by armed elements in violation of international law.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 10 December [meeting 71], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fourth Committee [A/59/470], adopted resolution 59/120 by recorded vote (161-6-9) [agenda item 75].

Palestine refugees' properties and their revenues

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 194(III) of 11 December 1948, 36/146 C of 16 December 1981 and all its subsequent resolutions on the question,

Taking note of the report of the Secretary-General submitted in pursuance of its resolution 58/94 of 9 December 2003,

Taking note also of the report of the United Nations Conciliation Commission for Palestine for the period from 1 September 2003 to 31 August 2004,

Recalling that the Universal Declaration of Human Rights and the principles of international law uphold the principle that no one shall be arbitrarily deprived of his or her property,

Recalling in particular its resolution 394(V) of 14 December 1950, in which it directed the Conciliation Commission, in consultation with the parties concerned, to prescribe measures for the protection of the rights, property and interests of the Palestine refugees,

Noting the completion of the programme of identification and evaluation of Arab property, as announced by the Conciliation Commission in its twenty-second progress report, and the fact that the Land Office had a schedule of Arab owners and file of documents defining the location, area and other particulars of Arab property,

Expressing its appreciation for the work done to preserve and modernize the existing records, including the land records, of the Conciliation Commission and the importance of such records for a just resolution of the plight of the Palestine refugees in conformity with resolution 194(III),

Recalling that, within the framework of the Middle East peace process, the Palestine Liberation Organization and the Government of Israel agreed, in the Declaration of Principles on Interim Self-Government Arrangements of 13 September 1993, to commence negotiations on permanent status issues, including the important issue of the refugees,

1. Reaffirms that the Palestine refugees are entitled to their property and to the income derived therefrom, in conformity with the principles of equity and justice;

2. Requests the Secretary-General to take all appropriate steps, in consultation with the United Nations Conciliation Commission for Palestine, for the protection of Arab property, assets and property rights in Israel;

3. Calls once again upon Israel to render all facilities and assistance to the Secretary-General in the implementation of the present resolution;

4. Calls upon all the parties concerned to provide the Secretary-General with any pertinent information in their possession concerning Arab property, assets and property rights in Israel that would assist him in the implementation of the present resolution;

5. Urges the Palestinian and Israeli sides, as agreed between them, to deal with the important issue of Palestine refugees' properties and their revenues within the framework of the final status negotiations of the Middle East peace process;

6. Requests the Secretary-General to report to the General Assembly at its sixtieth session on the implementation of the present resolution.

RECORDED VOTE ON RESOLUTION 59/120:

Peacekeeping operations

In 2004, the United Nations Truce Supervision Organization (UNTSO), originally set up to monitor the ceasefire called for by the Security Council in resolution S/801 of 29 May 1948 [YUN 1947-48, p. 427] in newly partitioned Palestine, continued its work. UNTSO's unarmed military observers fulfilled evolving mandates—from supervising the original four armistice agreements between Israel and its neighbours (Egypt, Jordan, Lebanon, Syrian Arab Republic) to observing and monitoring other ceasefires, as well as performing a number of additional tasks. During the year, UNTSO personnel worked with the two remaining UN peacekeeping forces in the Middle East—the United Nations Disengagement Observer Force (UNDOF) in the Golan Heights and the United Nations Interim Force in Lebanon (UNIFIL).

On 5 October [S/2004/809], the Secretary-General informed the Council of his intention to appoint Brigadier General Clive Lilley (New Zealand) as the Chief of Staff of UNTSO, replacing Major General Carl Dodd (Ireland). On 8 October [S/2004/810], the Council took note of his intention.

Lebanon

Lebanon became a focus of international attention on 3 September 2004, when Lebanese President Emile Lahoud's six-year term was extended for another three years by a constitutional amendment enacted by the parliament. It was widely contended in Lebanon that the extension of President Lahoud's term in office was the result of pressure by the Government of the Syrian Arab Republic. The day before, the Security Council, in resolution 1559(2004) (see p. 506), had called for free and fair presidential elections in Lebanon, the full withdrawal of foreign forces from the country and the disbanding and disarmament of militias. Lebanese Prime Minister Rafik Hariri resigned on 20 October, and was replaced by Omar Karami, who formed a new Government on 26 October. Mr. Karami's Government was widely perceived as favourably disposed towards a Syrian presence and influence in Lebanon.

The Secretary-General appointed a Special Envoy, Terje Roed-Larsen, to oversee the resolution's implementation. Mr. Roed-Larsen was already serving as the Special Coordinator for the Middle East Peace Process and Personal Representative of the Secretary-General. In monthly briefings to the Security Council on the Palestine question, including East Jerusalem, Mr. Roed-Larsen and the Under-Secretary-General for Political Affairs, Kieran Prendergast, covered developments in southern Lebanon.

The paramilitary group Hizbullah continued to carry out attacks against positions of the Israel Defence Forces (IDF) in farmlands and targets inside Israel, and IDF continued to carry out attacks within Lebanon. The Shab'a farmlands had been an area of contention since the withdrawal of Israeli forces from Lebanon in June 2000 [YUN 2000, p. 465]. According to the Lebanese Government, Israel's withdrawal from southern Lebanon was incomplete, as Israeli forces continued to occupy the Shab'a farms, while Israel held the view that the area was occupied Syrian territory and thus within the purview of Security Council resolution 242(1967) [YUN 1967, p. 257] on the Israeli-Syrian conflict, and not resolution 425 (1978) [YUN 1978, p. 312], which dealt with Israel's withdrawal from Lebanon. However, Lebanon and the Syrian Arab Republic maintained that the Shab'a farmlands were inside Lebanese territory.

The first municipal elections in southern Lebanon since the Israeli withdrawal in 2000 were held in May 2004.

Staffan de Mistura continued to act as the Secretary-General's Personal Representative for Southern Lebanon, responsible for coordinating UN activities in the area.

Communications. In communications received throughout the year [A/58/672-S/2004/6, A/58/679-S/2004/15, A/58/690-S/2004/55, A/58/689-S/2004/54, A/58/691-S/2004/64, A/58/699-S/2004/83, A/58/700-S/2004/85, A/58/738-S/2004/217, A/58/747-S/2004/250, A/58/749-S/2004/260, A/58/757-S/2004/278, A/58/770-S/2004/297, A/58/775-S/2004/320, A/58/784-S/2004/355, A/58/786-S/2004/357, A/58/790-S/2004/373, S/2004/379, A/58/791-S/2004/381, A/58/805-S/2004/401, A/58/813-S/2004/424, A/58/834-S/2004/457, A/58/836-S/2004/463, A/58/842-S/2004/494, A/58/845-S/2004/508, A/58/852-S/2004/574, A/58/853-S/2004/575, A/58/854-S/2004/577, A/58/867-S/2004/633, A/58/872-S/2004/651, A/58/875-S/2004/672, A/58/882-S/2004/705, A/59/362-S/2004/734, A/59/392-S/2004/775, A/59/435-S/2004/818, A/59/535-S/2004/866, A/59/575-S/2004/911, A/59/577-S/2004/922, A/59/594-S/2004/954, A/59/595-S/2004/956, A/59/596-S/2004/957, A/59/611-S/2004/971, A/59/658-S/2004/1021], Lebanon detailed Israel's violations of the Blue Line, the provisional border drawn by the United Nations following the withdrawal of Israeli troops from southern Lebanon in 2000, and consequently of Lebanese sovereignty and territorial integrity.

In letters sent throughout the year [A/58/687-S/2004/61, A/58/837-S/2004/465, A/59/559-S/2004/890, A/59/571-S/2004/906], Israel reported attacks carried out by Hizbullah and other militias against Israeli military and civilian targets across the Blue Line. Israel also alleged that Hizbullah was supported by the Governments of Iran, Lebanon and the Syrian Arab Republic.

On 29 December [A/59/659-S/2004/1027], Iran refuted Israel's allegations and considered them a deliberate attempt to distract the international community's attention from Israel's acts of aggression that aggravated the situation in the Middle East.

Relations with Syrian Arab Republic

On 30 August [A/58/879-S/2004/699], Lebanon informed the Secretary-General and the Security Council President of an initiative to submit to the Council a draft resolution, sponsored by France and the United States, urging the Syrian Arab Republic to withdraw its troops from Lebanon, to refrain from interfering in the Lebanese presidential elections and to cease supporting terrorist groups in Lebanon. That draft resolution, according to Lebanon, would set a dangerous precedent, for it would coincide with the forthcoming presidential elections and, thus, could adversely affect the electoral process. The presence of Syrian troops in Lebanon was linked to the 1989 Taif Agreement and other bilateral agreements between Lebanon and Syria. That presence was under the auspices and supervision of the competent institutions in each country. No external entity was entitled to intervene with regard to its modalities or to impose changes. According to Lebanon, that presence served the common interests of the two countries. In addition, the allegation that Syria was backing terrorist organizations in Lebanon defied the truth. Syria's role in Lebanon had always been to support and strengthen the official security institutions and thereby contribute to the maintenance of security.

On 1 September [A/58/883-S/2004/706], Syria said that it rejected any discussion of the proposed draft resolution because, among other things, Lebanon itself rejected raising the issue. In addition, the issue was a domestic concern and did not constitute a threat to international peace and security; consequently, the overall question did not fall under the Council's jurisdiction.

SECURITY COUNCIL ACTION

On 2 September [meeting 5028], the Security Council adopted resolution 1559(2004) by vote (9-0-6). The draft [S/2004/707] was submitted by France, Germany, the United Kingdom and the United States.

The Security Council,

Recalling all its previous resolutions on Lebanon, in particular resolutions 425(1978) and 426(1978) of 19 March 1978, resolution 520(1982) of 17 September 1982 and resolution 1553(2004) of 29 July 2004, as well as the statements by its President on the situation in Lebanon, in particular the statement of 18 June 2000 (S/PRST/2000/21),

Reiterating its strong support for the territorial integrity, sovereignty and political independence of Lebanon within its internationally recognized borders,

Noting the determination of Lebanon to ensure the withdrawal of all non-Lebanese forces from Lebanon,

Gravely concerned at the continued presence of armed militias in Lebanon, which prevents the Government of Lebanon from exercising its full sovereignty over all Lebanese territory,

Reaffirming the importance of the extension of the control of the Government of Lebanon over all Lebanese territory,

Mindful of the upcoming Lebanese presidential elections, and underlining the importance of free and fair elections according to Lebanese constitutional rules devised without foreign interference or influence,

1. Reaffirms its call for the strict respect of the sovereignty, territorial integrity, unity and political independence of Lebanon under the sole and exclusive authority of the Government of Lebanon throughout Lebanon;

2. Calls upon all remaining foreign forces to withdraw from Lebanon;

3. Calls for the disbanding and disarmament of all Lebanese and non-Lebanese militias;

4. Supports the extension of the control of the Government of Lebanon over all Lebanese territory;

5. Declares its support for a free and fair electoral process in Lebanon's upcoming presidential elections conducted according to Lebanese constitutional rules devised without foreign interference or influence;

6. Calls upon all parties concerned to cooperate fully and urgently with the Security Council for the full implementation of the present resolution and all relevant resolutions concerning the restoration of the territorial integrity, full sovereignty and political independence of Lebanon;

7. Requests that the Secretary-General report to the Council within thirty days on the implementation by the parties of the present resolution, and decides to remain actively seized of the matter.

VOTE ON RESOLUTION 1559(2004):

In favour: Angola, Benin, Chile, France, Germany, Romania, Spain, United Kingdom, United States.

Against: None.

Abstaining: Algeria, Brazil, China, Pakistan, Philippines, Russian Federation.

Speaking before the vote, Lebanon said that the draft resolution did not take into account the unique relations between Lebanon and Syria, for the Syrian Government had helped Lebanon to maintain security and stability within its borders. In addition, the draft dealt with a purely internal issue, the presidential electoral process under way in Lebanon as the mandate of the current President would end on 23 November. The draft text referred to support for free and fair presidential elections in Lebanon. Lebanon did not believe that an issue such as that, which was an internal matter for a Member State, had ever been discussed in the Council. Lebanon's parliamentarians had the right to take decisions pertaining to elections. Syrian troops came to Lebanon in response to the Government's legitimate request. Those troops had been redeployed many times, and their presence was invisible. They contributed to rebuffing Israel's radical and excessive actions, which continued to include totally unjustifiable and excessive acts of violence.

Speaking after the vote, the United States said that it believed that Lebanon should be allowed to determine its own future and assume control of its own territory, yet the Lebanese people were still unable to exercise their rights as a free people to make those choices as a nation. Syria had imposed its political will on Lebanon and had compelled the cabinet and the parliament to amend its Constitution and abort the electoral process by extending the term of the President by three years. It was clear that Lebanese parliamentarians had been pressured, and even threatened, by Syria and its agents to make them comply. The United States supported the extension of the Lebanese Government's control over all Lebanese territory, including southern Lebanon, as called for by the Council. The continued presence of armed Hizbullah militia elements, as well as the presence of the Syrian military and Iranian forces in Lebanon, hindered that goal. The United States believed that it was wrong for Syria to continue to maintain its forces in Lebanon and to continue to interfere in the Lebanese electoral process.

Report of Secretary-General (October). In response to Council resolution 1559(2004) (see above), the Secretary-General submitted an October report on the implementation by the parties of that resolution [S/2004/777].

The Secretary-General, noting that the resolution called for the withdrawal of all remaining foreign forces from Lebanon, said that apart from UNIFIL, the only significant foreign forces deployed in Lebanon as at 30 September were Syrian. Syria had maintained forces in Lebanon since 1976. The troops were initially deployed at the request of the Lebanese President; that deployment was transformed into an Arab Deterrent Force sanctioned by the League of Arab States, at the request of the Government of Lebanon, and was joined by troops from other Arab countries. The Governments of both Lebanon and Syria had told the Secretary-General that the Syrian forces present in Lebanon—which at one point numbered 40,000, according to Lebanon—were there at the invitation of Lebanon and by mutual agreement. Specifically, they were said to be deployed pursuant to the 1989 Taif Agreement and the 1991 Syria-Lebanon Treaty of Cooperation. As far as the Secretary-General was aware, the two Governments had not, to date, concluded an agreement to determine the strength and duration of the presence of Syrian forces, as provided for in both those instruments.

The Syrian Government had informed the United Nations that, in addition to uniformed armed forces, it also stationed in Lebanon a substantial presence of non-uniformed military intelligence officials that were usual components of military units. Those officials, together with the uniformed forces, constituted the full Syrian troop strength. The Syrian military and intelligence apparatus in Lebanon had not been withdrawn as of 30 September. However, according to the two Governments, Syria had redeployed approximately 3,000 of its forces formerly deployed south of Beirut. It had not been made clear to the United Nations whether those redeployments were confined to regular troops or included non-uniformed military intelligence officers, and whether they had all returned to Syria. The Syrian Government indicated to the Secretary-General that a total of about 14,000 Syrian troops remained in Lebanon, most of whom were based near the Syrian border and not deep inside Lebanon. The Lebanese and Syrian Governments told the Secretary-General that the timing of further withdrawals would be determined by the security situation in Lebanon and the region and through the joint military committee established pursuant to the Taif Agreement. Lebanon also informed him that the fragile security situation in the region and its risks to Lebanon's domestic stability made it difficult to set a timetable for the full withdrawal of Syrian forces. Similarly, Syria informed the Secretary-General that it could not provide him with numbers and timetables for any future withdrawal. The Lebanese Government stated that its ultimate goal was the complete withdrawal of all foreign forces from its territory, and the two Governments were discussing the nature and extent of the current deployment.

Resolution 1559(2004) also called for the disbanding and disarmament of all Lebanese and non-Lebanese militias. As at 30 September, several armed elements remained in the southern part of Lebanon. The most significant remaining armed group was Hizbullah, and UN staff on the ground had not discerned any change in the status of Hizbullah since the adoption of resolution 1559(2004). Regarding Palestinian armed groups, Lebanon assured the Secretary-General that Palestinian militants were not allowed to leave their refugee camps with weapons. UN personnel in the region indicated that Lebanon had positioned its armed forces outside the camps, apparently to enforce that policy.

As at 30 September, the Lebanese Government had not extended its control over all of its territory, as called for in resolution 1559(2004). Although Lebanon held peaceful municipal elections in the south in May (see p. 511), the area around the Blue Line remained tense. Hizbullah operations frequently violated the Blue Line. It was widely asserted that Hizbullah operations were carried out independently of Lebanese government control or sanction. More than four years after the Israeli withdrawal from southern Lebanon, movement in the region remained restricted. Hizbullah had established checkpoints throughout southern Lebanon and movements of Lebanese officials, UNIFIL personnel and diplomats were hindered at times by armed elements.

On 3 September, the day after resolution 1559(2004) was adopted, the Lebanese Chamber of Deputies approved a law that extended President Emile Lahoud's term by three years, ending on 23 November 2007. According to the Lebanese Government, that law was adopted in accordance with Lebanese constitutional rules. However, it was widely contended in Lebanon, and asserted by the sponsors of resolution 1559(2004), that the extension of the President's term was the result of direct intervention by the Syrian Government. It was widely alleged in Lebanon that the Syrian military presence, including a substantial component of non-uniformed intelligence officials, afforded Syria considerable leverage over Lebanese domestic affairs, though the Lebanese and Syrian Governments denied that Syria intervened in Lebanon's internal affairs.

Since October 2000, Israeli aircraft had regularly violated Lebanese sovereignty by flying into Lebanese airspace, at times crossing the Blue Line. They frequently penetrated deep into Lebanese territory and generated sonic booms over populated areas. Israel claimed that those overflights were carried out for security reasons. Hizbullah anti-aircraft rounds had fallen across the Blue Line into Israel, causing Israeli casualties.

The Secretary-General observed that the requirements imposed on the various parties as set out in resolution 1559(2004) had not been met. The Lebanese and Syrian Governments had assured him of their respect for the Council, and that consequently they would not contest it. The parties had provided the Secretary-General with information and had given him certain assurances. The Secretary-General had requested from the parties a timetable for their full implementation. As for the electoral process, it had long been the Secretary-General's belief that Governments and leaders should not hold office beyond prescribed term limits. Lebanese public opinion appeared to be divided over such issues as the Syrian military presence in Lebanon, the constitutional situation as it related to presidential elections, and the continued existence of armed groups not under the direct control of the Government. However, many were of the view that full implementation of resolution 1559(2004) would be in the interest not just of Lebanon, but of Syria too, and of the region and the wider international community. The Secretary-General said that it was time, 14 years after the end of hostilities and four years after the Israeli withdrawal from Lebanon, for all parties to set aside the remaining vestiges of the past. The withdrawal of foreign forces and the disbandment and disarmament of militias would, with finality, end that sad chapter of Lebanese history.

Communications (October). On 5 October [S/2004/794 & Corr.1], Lebanon said that the Secretary-General's October report (see above) did not take into account the historical responsibility borne by Israel for pursuing a policy of destruction in Palestine, Syria and Lebanon. Lebanon reiterated that the question of the departure of Syrian troops from the country was governed by bilateral relations and agreements between Lebanon and Syria and depended on peace and defence requirements and mutual security interests. Hizbullah was an occupation resistance party to which the Lebanese provided political protection. Its resistance would come to an end with the end of the residual occupation by Israel of Lebanese territory. The extension of the Lebanese President's term took place in accordance with the rules set out in the Lebanese Constitution and it was the rule of the majority that determined the results.

Syria, on 6 October [S/2004/796], said that the Lebanese and Syrian Governments could decide to redeploy Syrian forces within Lebanon in case of need, and, following the decision of the joint Lebanese-Syrian military committee, Syrian troops were redeployed for a fifth time. In Syria's view, the real cause of the troubled situation in the region was the absence of a just and comprehensive peace, owing to Israel's defiance of the UN Charter, refusal to implement relevant Council resolutions and continuing violations of the Geneva Conventions in the Occupied Palestinian Territory.

On 1 October [A/59/425-S/2004/808], Turkey transmitted to the Secretary-General the final communiqué of the annual coordination meeting of the Foreign Ministers of the States members of the Organization of the Islamic Conference (New York, 28 September). The Ministers supported Lebanon in its efforts to complete the liberation of all its remaining territories under Israeli occupation and urged the United Nations to compel Israel to pay reparations for all the losses it had inflicted as a result of its aggression against Lebanon. They reaffirmed the right of Palestine refugees to return to their homes and rejected settling them in Lebanon.

SECURITY COUNCIL ACTION

On 19 October [meeting 5058], following consultations among Security Council members, the President made statement S/PRST/2004/36 on behalf of the Council:

The Security Council welcomes the report of the Secretary-General of 1 October 2004 on the implementation of resolution 1559(2004) of 2 September 2004.

The Council takes note of the letter dated 5 October 2004 from the Permanent Representative of Lebanon to the United Nations addressed to the Secretary-General and of the note verbale dated 6 October 2004 from the Permanent Mission of the Syrian Arab Republic to the United Nations addressed to the President of the Security Council.

The Council reaffirms its strong support for the territorial integrity, sovereignty and political independence of Lebanon within its internationally recognized borders.

The Council notes with concern that the requirements set out in resolution 1559(2004) have not been met, as reported by the Secretary-General. The Council urges relevant parties to implement fully all provisions of that resolution, and welcomes the Secretary-General's readiness to assist the parties in this regard.

The Council appreciates the intention of the Secretary-General to keep the Council updated. It requests that he continue to report to the Council on the implementation of the resolution every six months.

Appointment. In a 14 December letter to the Council President [S/2004/974], the Secretary-General said he had decided to appoint Terje Roed-Larsen (Norway) as his Special Envoy for the implementation of Council resolution 1559 (2004) at the level of Under-Secretary-General. On 16 December [S/2004/975], the Council took note of the Secretary-General's intention.

UNIFIL

In 2004, the United Nations Interim Force in Lebanon continued to discharge its mandate by observing, monitoring and reporting on developments in its area of operation. The Security Council twice extended UNIFIL's mandate in 2004, in January and in July, each time for a six-month period.

UNIFIL, established by Council resolution 425(1978) following Israel's invasion of Lebanon [YUN 1978, p. 296], was originally entrusted with confirming the withdrawal of Israeli forces, restoring international peace and security, and assisting Lebanon in regaining authority in southern Lebanon. Following a second invasion in 1982 [YUN 1982, p. 428], the Council, in resolution 511(1982) [ibid., p. 450], authorized the Force to carry out the additional task of providing protection and humanitarian assistance to the local population. With the withdrawal of IDF from Lebanon in June 2000 [YUN 2000, p. 465], UNIFIL's operational role changed. A reinforcement was initiated to enable UNIFIL to monitor Israel's withdrawal, which included extending its operations into those territories previously occupied by IDF [ibid.]. In 2001, having fulfilled those responsibilities, UNIFIL began a reconfiguration and redeployment phase [YUN 2001, p. 453], which was completed in December 2002 [YUN 2002, p. 478].

The Force headquarters, based in Naqoura, provided command and control, and liaison with Lebanon and Israel, UNDOF, UNTSO and a number of NGOs.

Composition and deployment

As at 31 December 2004, UNIFIL comprised 2,001 troops from France (204), Ghana (652), India (650), Ireland (5), Italy (54), Poland (238) and Ukraine (198). The Force was assisted in its tasks by 51 UNTSO military observers. It employed 407 civilian staff, of whom 104 were recruited internationally and 303 locally. On 26 January [S/2004/69], the Security Council took note of the Secretary-General's intention [S/2004/68] to appoint Major General Alain Pellegrini (France) as Force Commander to replace Major General Lalit Mohan Tewari (India), who would complete his tour of duty on 17 February.

Since UNIFIL's establishment, 246 members had lost their lives: 79 as a result of firings or bomb explosions, 105 in accidents and 62 from other causes.

Activities

Report of Secretary-General (January). In a report on developments from 24 July 2003 to 19 January 2004 in the UNIFIL area of operations [S/2004/50], the Secretary-General said that the situation on the ground was marked by numerous incidents threatening the stability of southern Lebanon, including renewed exchanges of fire in the Shab'a farms area and attacks across the Blue Line. UNIFIL remained focused on maintaining the ceasefire through mobile and air patrols along the Blue Line, observation from fixed positions and contact with the parties.

The Secretary-General expressed concern at Israel's persistent air violations of sovereign Lebanese territory. Hizbullah's firing of anti-aircraft rounds across the Blue Line was also a violation. Israel's air strikes against Hizbullah positions added a serious new dimension to the cycle. He added that Lebanon had demonstrated its capacity to exercise its authority throughout southern Lebanon, particularly through the activities of the Joint Security Forces and the Lebanese Army during periods of heightened regional and local tension. He urged Lebanon to exert control over the use of force on its entire territory and to prevent all attacks across the Blue Line. The Secretary-General recommended that the Force's mandate be extended for another six months, until 31 July 2004.

By a 14 January letter [S/2004/35], Lebanon requested that UNIFIL's mandate, due to expire at the end of the month, be extended for six months.

SECURITY COUNCIL ACTION (January)

On 30 January [meeting 4907], the Security Council unanimously adopted resolution 1525 (2004). The draft [S/2004/78] was prepared in consultations among Council members.

The Security Council,

Recalling all its resolutions on Lebanon, in particular resolutions 425(1978) and 426(1978) of 19 March 1978 and 1496(2003) of 31 July 2003, as well as the statements by its President on the situation in Lebanon, in particular the statement of 18 June 2000 (S/PRST/2000/21),

Recalling also the letter dated 18 May 2001 from the President of the Security Council to the Secretary-General,

Recalling further the conclusion of the Secretary-General that, as of 16 June 2000, Israel had withdrawn its forces from Lebanon in accordance with resolution 425(1978) and met the requirements defined in the report of the Secretary-General of 22 May 2000, as well as the conclusion of the Secretary-General that the United Nations Interim Force in Lebanon had essentially completed two of the three parts of its mandate, focusing now on the remaining task of restoring international peace and security,

Emphasizing the interim nature of the Force,

Recalling its resolution 1308(2000) of 17 July 2000,

Recalling also its resolution 1325(2000) of 31 October 2000,

Recalling further the relevant principles contained in the Convention on the Safety of United Nations and Associated Personnel of 9 December 1994,

Responding to the request of the Government of Lebanon, as stated in the letter dated 14 January 2004 from the Permanent Representative of Lebanon to the United Nations addressed to the Secretary-General,

Expressing its concern over the tensions and potential for escalation as noted in the report of the Secretary-General of 20 January 2004,

1. Endorses the report of the Secretary-General of 20 January 2004 on the United Nations Interim Force in Lebanon, and in particular its recommendation to renew the mandate of the Force for a further period of six months;

2. Decides to extend the present mandate until 31 July 2004;

3. Reiterates its strong support for the territorial integrity, sovereignty and political independence of Lebanon within its internationally recognized boundaries;

4. Encourages the Government of Lebanon to continue efforts to ensure the return of its effective authority throughout the south, including the deployment of Lebanese armed forces, stresses the importance of the Government of Lebanon continuing to extend those measures, and calls upon the Government of Lebanon to do its utmost to ensure a calm environment throughout the south, including along the Blue Line;

5. Calls upon the parties to ensure that the Force is accorded full freedom of movement in the discharge of its mandate throughout its area of operation as outlined in the report of the Secretary-General;

6. Reiterates its call upon the parties to continue to fulfil the commitments they have given to respect fully the withdrawal line identified by the United Nations, as set out in the report of the Secretary-General of 16 June 2000, to exercise the utmost restraint and to cooperate fully with the United Nations and the Force;

7. Condemns all acts of violence, expresses great concern about the serious breaches and the sea, land and continuing air violations of the withdrawal line, and urges the parties to put an end to these violations, to refrain from any act or provocation that could further escalate the tension and to abide scrupulously by their obligation to respect the safety of personnel of the Force and other United Nations personnel;

8. Supports the continued efforts of the Force to maintain the ceasefire along the withdrawal line through mobile patrols and observation from fixed positions and through close contacts with the parties to correct violations, resolve incidents and prevent the escalation thereof;

9. Welcomes the continued contribution of the Force to operational demining, applauds the progress in demining efforts noted by the Secretary-General in his report, encourages further assistance in mine action by the United Nations to the Government of Lebanon in support of both the continued development of its national mine action capacity and emergency demining activities in the south, commends donor countries for supporting these efforts through financial and in-kind contributions and encourages further international contributions, takes note of the communication to the Government of Lebanon and the Force of maps and information on the location of mines, and stresses the necessity to provide the Government of Lebanon and the Force with any additional maps and records on the location of mines;

10. Requests the Secretary-General to continue consultations with the Government of Lebanon and other parties directly concerned on the implementation of the present resolution and to report thereon to the Council before the end of the present mandate as well as on the activities of the Force and the tasks presently carried out by the United Nations Truce Supervision Organization;

11. Looks forward to the early fulfilment of the mandate of the Force;

12. Stresses the importance of, and the need to achieve, a comprehensive, just and lasting peace in the Middle East, based on all its relevant resolutions, including its resolution 242(1967) of 22 November 1967 and 338(1973) of 22 October 1973.

By a 30 January letter [A/58/698-S/2004/81], Lebanon welcomed the renewal of UNIFIL's mandate.

Report of Secretary-General (July). In response to resolution 1525(2004) (above), the Secretary-General submitted a July report on UNIFIL covering 21 January to 21 July [S/2004/572 & Add.1]. He said that the situation on the ground was characterized by numerous armed encounters across the Blue Line, the majority of which were between Hizbullah and IDF and some of which involved unknown or Palestinian actors. He described incidents which tended to set off a chain of escalating exchanges, elevating tensions for periods of several days at a time. Air strikes and shooting incidents resulted in the deaths of one Israeli soldier, one Lebanese civilian and two Palestinians. Israeli violations of Lebanese airspace continued, and on at least two occasions Hizbullah directed anti-aircraft fire towards Israeli villages. While conditions of relative stability were maintained in southern Lebanon, friction between the parties posed a threatening counterpoint. Israeli air incursions into Lebanon were on the whole less frequent than in the previous six months, although they were notable for their intensity and the large number of aircraft involved, and the number of instances of Hizbullah anti-aircraft fire dropped significantly.

The first municipal elections in southern Lebanon since the Israeli withdrawal were held on 23 May. There was high voter turnout throughout the south, and polling was conducted in an orderly manner, with no reports of intimidation or major disturbances. The elections bolstered local governing structures and marked an advance in integration of the formerly occupied zone with the rest of the country. The vast majority of seats were won by Hizbullah and the other dominant political party in the south, Amal.

The Lebanese Joint Security Force and the Lebanese Army continued to operate in the areas vacated by Israel in 2000. The strength and activity of the Joint Security Force generally remained the same, apart from an increase in activities in late March and early June, when tensions heightened, and in May during the elections. The Force also intervened on several occasions to control demonstrations and took other measures to restrict access to the technical fence. Nevertheless, the Lebanese Government maintained the position that, so long as there was no comprehensive peace with Israel, Lebanese armed forces would not be deployed along the Blue Line. Under those circumstances, Hizbullah maintained its visible presence near the Line through its mobile and fixed positions and generally refrained from interfering with UNIFIL. Israel and Hizbullah concluded an agreement, brokered by German mediators, for a prisoner exchange, which took place on 29 and 30 January.

UNIFIL provided assistance to the Lebanese civilian population in the form of medical care, water projects and equipment and services for schools, and supplied social services to the needy. It cooperated on humanitarian matters with the Lebanese authorities, UN agencies and other organizations operating in Lebanon. The presence of a large number of minefields in UNIFIL's area of operation, largely concentrated along the Blue Line owing to comprehensive demining in other sectors, remained a serious concern. UNIFIL continued its demining activities, clearing over 800 mines and pieces of unexploded ordnance, and carried out mine-risk education for schoolchildren. In southern Lebanon, the United Nations collaborated with the Lebanese Government and various donors on landmine clearance.

The Secretary-General observed that the situation in southern Lebanon in early 2004 was replete with contradictions. While both Israel and Lebanon proclaimed their aspirations to avoid destabilization of the area, only one month passed without confrontation. Furthermore, single incidents often sparked a chain reaction of violence to which both sides contributed. Importantly, none of those events spiralled out of control, and for that the parties and UNIFIL, all deserved credit. Nevertheless, the risk remained that hostile acts would escalate and lead to conflict. Further efforts were required to maintain calm in the south and to halt violations of the Blue Line. The Secretary-General recommended that the Force's mandate be extended for another six months, until 31 January 2005.

Communication. On 9 July [S/2004/560], Lebanon requested that UNIFIL's mandate be extended for six months, as a reaffirmation of the international community's commitment to the restoration of Lebanon's sovereignty over its entire territory.

SECURITY COUNCIL ACTION (July)

On 29 July [meeting 5012], the Council unanimously adopted resolution 1553(2004). The draft [S/2004/599] was prepared in consultations among Council members.

The Security Council,

Recalling all its resolutions on Lebanon, in particular resolutions 425(1978) and 426(1978) of 19 March 1978 and 1525(2004) of 30 January 2004 as well as the statements by its President on the situation in Lebanon, in particular the statement of 18 June 2000 (S/PRST/2000/21),

Recalling also the letter dated 18 May 2001 from the President of the Security Council to the Secretary-General,

Recalling further the conclusion of the Secretary-General that, as of 16 June 2000, Israel had withdrawn its forces from Lebanon in accordance with resolution 425(1978) and met the requirements defined in the report of the Secretary-General of 22 May 2000, as well as the conclusion of the Secretary-General that the United Nations Interim Force in Lebanon had essentially completed two of the three parts of its mandate, focusing now on the remaining task of restoring international peace and security,

Emphasizing the interim nature of the Force,
Recalling its resolution 1308(2000) of 17 July 2000,
Recalling also its resolution 1325(2000) of 31 October 2000,

Recalling further the relevant principles contained in the Convention on the Safety of United Nations and Associated Personnel of 9 December 1994,

Responding to the request of the Government of Lebanon to extend the mandate of the Force for a new period of six months presented in the letter dated 9 July 2004 from the Permanent Representative of Lebanon to the United Nations addressed to the Secretary-General,

Expressing its concern over the tensions and potential for escalation as noted in the report of the Secretary-General of 21 July 2004,

1. Endorses the report of the Secretary-General of 21 July 2004 on the United Nations Interim Force in Lebanon and in particular its recommendation to renew the mandate of the Force for a further period of six months;

2. Decides to extend the present mandate until 31 January 2005;

3. Reiterates its strong support for the territorial integrity, sovereignty and political independence of Lebanon within its internationally recognized boundaries;

4. Encourages the Government of Lebanon to continue efforts to ensure the return of its effective authority throughout the south, including the deployment of Lebanese armed forces, stresses the importance of the Government of Lebanon to continue to extend these measures, and calls upon the Government of Lebanon to do its utmost to ensure a calm environment throughout the south, including along the Blue Line;

5. Calls upon the parties to ensure that the Force is accorded full freedom of movement in the discharge of its mandate throughout its area of operation as outlined in the report of the Secretary-General;

6. Reiterates its call upon the parties to continue to fulfil the commitments they have given to respect fully the withdrawal line identified by the United Nations, as set out in the report of the Secretary-General of 16 June 2000, to exercise utmost restraint and to co-operate fully with the United Nations and the Force;

7. Condemns all acts of violence, expresses great concern about the serious breaches and the sea, land and continuing air violations of the withdrawal line, and urges the parties to put an end to these violations, to refrain from any act or provocation that could further escalate the tension and to abide scrupulously by the obligation to respect the safety of the personnel of the Force and other United Nations personnel;

8. Supports the continued efforts of the Force to maintain the ceasefire along the withdrawal line through mobile patrols and observation from fixed positions and through close contacts with the parties to correct violations, resolve incidents and prevent the escalation thereof;

9. Welcomes the continued contribution of the Force to operational demining, applauds the successful completion of Operation Emirates Solidarity noted by the Secretary-General in his report, encourages further assistance in mine action by the United Nations to the Government of Lebanon in support of both the continued development of its national mine action capacity and emergency demining activities in the south, commends donor countries for supporting these efforts through financial and in-kind contributions and encourages further international contributions, takes note of the communication to the Government of Lebanon and the Force of maps and information on the location of mines, and stresses the necessity to provide the Government of Lebanon and the Force with any additional maps and records on the location of mines;

10. Requests the Secretary-General to continue consultations with the Government of Lebanon and other parties directly concerned on the implementation of the present resolution and to report thereon to the Council before the end of the present mandate as well as on the activities of the Force and the tasks presently carried out by the United Nations Truce Supervision Organization;

11. Looks forward to the early fulfilment of the mandate of the Force;

12. Stresses the importance of, and the need to achieve, a comprehensive, just and lasting peace in the Middle East, based on all its relevant resolutions, including resolutions 242(1967) of 22 November 1967 and 338(1973) of 22 October 1973.

Further developments. In a report on developments during the second half of 2004 [S/2005/36], the Secretary-General said that a relatively quiet but tense situation prevailed in UNIFIL's area of operation, with a notable absence of armed exchanges between Hizbullah and IDF. There were two serious violations of the Blue Line involving rocket fire by unidentified, presumably Palestinian, armed elements operating from southern Lebanon, but no casualties resulted. Israeli air incursions into Lebanese airspace continued with little change and, in a new development, on one occasion, Hizbullah launched a remotely piloted aerial vehicle, or drone, that penetrated Israeli airspace. There were, however, no instances of Hizbullah anti-aircraft fire across the Line. UNIFIL continued to provide assistance to the Lebanese civilian population.

In June 2004, the General Assembly considered the performance report on UNIFIL's budget for 1 July 2002 to 30 June 2003 [A/58/637], submitted by the Secretary-General. Total expenditure for the period amounted to $107,596,800, compared with a total apportionment of $112,376,000, resulting in an unencumbered balance of $4,779,200, or 4.3 per cent.

The Assembly also had before it the proposed UNIFIL budget for 1 July 2004 to 30 June 2005 [A/58/659] in the amount of $94,741,200 and the overview report of the financing of UN peacekeeping operations: budget performance for the period from 1 July 2002 to 30 June 2003 and budget for the period from 1 July 2004 to 30 June 2005 [A/58/705]. Also considered were the comments and recommendations of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions (ACABQ) on the budgets [A/58/759/Add.6].

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 18 June [meeting 91], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth (Administrative and Budgetary) Committee [A/58/828], adopted resolution 58/307 by recorded vote (131-2) [agenda item 145 (b)].

Financing of the United Nations Interim Force in Lebanon

The General Assembly,

Having considered the reports of the Secretary-General on the financing of the United Nations Interim Force in Lebanon, the related reports of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions and the report of the Board of Auditors,

Recalling Security Council resolution 425(1978) of 19 March 1978 regarding the establishment of the United Nations Interim Force in Lebanon and the subsequent resolutions by which the Council extended the mandate of the Force, the latest of which was resolution 1525(2004) of 30 January 2004,

Recalling also its resolution S-8/2 of 21 April 1978 on the financing of the Force and its subsequent resolutions thereon, the latest of which was resolution 57/325 of 18 June 2003,

Reaffirming its resolutions 51/233 of 13 June 1997, 52/237 of 26 June 1998, 53/227 of 8 June 1999, 54/267 of 15 June 2000, 55/180 A of 19 December 2000, 55/180 B of 14 June 2001, 56/214 A of 21 December 2001, 56/214 B of 27 June 2002 and 57/325 of 18 June 2003,

Reaffirming also the general principles underlying the financing of United Nations peacekeeping operations, as stated in General Assembly resolutions 1874 (S-IV) of 27 June 1963, 3101(XXVIII) of 11 December 1973 and 55/235 of 23 December 2000,

Noting with appreciation that voluntary contributions have been made to the Force,

Mindful of the fact that it is essential to provide the Force with the necessary financial resources to enable it to fulfil its responsibilities under the relevant resolutions of the Security Council,

1. Takes note of the status of contributions to the United Nations Interim Force in Lebanon as at 15 April 2004, including the contributions outstanding in the amount of 77 million United States dollars, representing some 2 per cent of the total assessed contributions, notes with concern that only twenty-eight Member States have paid their assessed contributions in full, and urges all other Member States, in particular those in arrears, to ensure payment of their outstanding assessed contributions;

2. Expresses its appreciation to those Member States that have paid their assessed contributions in full, and urges all other Member States to make every possible effort to ensure payment of their assessed contributions to the Force in full;

3. Expresses deep concern that Israel did not comply with General Assembly resolutions 51/233, 52/237, 53/227, 54/267, 55/180 A, 55/180 B, 56/214 A, 56/214 B and 57/325;

4. Stresses once again that Israel should strictly abide by General Assembly resolutions 51/233, 52/237, 53/227, 54/267, 55/180 A, 55/180 B, 56/214 A, 56/214 B and 57/325;

5. Expresses concern at the financial situation with regard to peacekeeping activities, in particular as regards the reimbursements to troop contributors that bear additional burdens owing to overdue payments by Member States of their assessments;

6. Also expresses concern at the delay experienced by the Secretary-General in deploying and providing adequate resources to some recent peacekeeping missions, in particular those in Africa;

7. Emphasizes that all future and existing peacekeeping missions shall be given equal and non-discriminatory treatment in respect of financial and administrative arrangements;

8. Also emphasizes that all peacekeeping missions shall be provided with adequate resources for the effective and efficient discharge of their respective mandates;

9. Reiterates its request to the Secretary-General to make the fullest possible use of facilities and equipment at the United Nations Logistics Base at Brindisi, Italy, in order to minimize the costs of procurement for the Force;

10. Endorses the conclusions and recommendations contained in the report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions, requests the Secretary-General to ensure their full implementation, and, with regard to the recommendation contained in paragraph 16 concerning the Secretary-General's proposal to convert 45 individual special service agreements into 45 national posts, requests the Secretary-General to provide further information in order to take a decision on this question at its fifty-ninth session;

11. Requests the Secretary-General to take all necessary action to ensure that the Force is administered with a maximum of efficiency and economy;

12. Also requests the Secretary-General, in order to reduce the cost of employing General Service staff, to continue efforts to recruit local staff for the Force against General Service posts, commensurate with the requirements of the Force;

13. Reiterates its request to the Secretary-General to take the measures necessary to ensure the full implementation of paragraph 8 of its resolution 51/233, paragraph 5 of its resolution 52/237, paragraph 11 of its resolution 53/227, paragraph 14 of its resolution 54/267, paragraph 14 of its resolution 55/180 A, paragraph 15 of its resolution 55/180 B, paragraph 13 of its resolution 56/214 A, paragraph 13 of its resolution 56/214 B and paragraph 14 of its resolution 57/325, stresses once again that Israel shall pay the amount of 1,117,005 dollars resulting from the incident at Qana on 18 April 1996, and requests the Secretary-General to report on this matter to the General Assembly at its resumed fifty-ninth session;

Financial performance report for the period from 1 July 2002 to 30 June 2003

14. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General on the financial performance of the Force for the period from 1 July 2002 to 30 June 2003;

Budget estimates for the period
from 1 July 2004 to 30 June 2005

15. Decides to appropriate to the Special Account for the United Nations Interim Force in Lebanon the amount of 97,804,100 dollars for the period from 1 July 2004 to 30 June 2005, inclusive of 92,960,300 dollars for the maintenance of the Force, 3,960,000 dollars for the support account for peacekeeping operations and 883,800 dollars for the United Nations Logistics Base;

16. Also decides to apportion among Member States the amount of 97,804,100 dollars at a monthly rate of 8,150,341 dollars, in accordance with the levels set out in General Assembly resolution 55/235, as adjusted by the Assembly in its resolution 55/236 of 23 December 2000 and updated in its resolution 58/256 of 23 December 2003, and taking into account the scale of assessments for 2004 and 2005, as set out in its resolution 58/1 B of 23 December 2003, subject to a decision of the Security Council to extend the mandate of the Force;

17. Further decides that, in accordance with the provisions of its resolution 973(X) of 15 December 1955, there shall be set off against the apportionment among Member States, as provided for in paragraph 16 above, their respective share in the Tax Equalization Fund of 5,313,100 dollars, comprising the estimated staff assessment income of 4,685,400 dollars approved for the Force, the prorated share of 577,900 dollars of the estimated staff assessment income approved for the support account and the prorated share of 49,800 dollars of the estimated staff assessment income approved for the United Nations Logistics Base;

18. Decides that, for Member States that have fulfilled their financial obligations to the Force, there shall be set off against their apportionment, as provided for in paragraph 16 above, their respective share of the unencumbered balance and other income in the total amount of 15,788,700 dollars in respect of the financial period ended 30 June 2003, in accordance with the levels set out in General Assembly resolution 55/235, as adjusted by the Assembly in its resolution 55/236 and its resolution 57/290 A of 20 December 2002, and taking into account the scale of assessments for 2003, as set out in its resolutions 55/5 B of 23 December 2000 and 57/4 B of 20 December 2002;

19. Also decides that, for Member States that have not fulfilled their financial obligations to the Force, there shall be set off against their outstanding obligations their respective share of the unencumbered balance and other income in the total amount of 15,788,700 dollars in respect of the financial period ended 30 June 2003, in accordance with the scheme set out in paragraph 18 above;

20. Further decides that the increase of 878,900 dollars in the estimated staff assessment income in respect of the financial period ended 30 June 2003 shall be added to the credits from the amount referred to in paragraphs 18 and 19 above, and that the respective shares of Member States therein shall be applied in accordance with the provisions of those paragraphs, as appropriate;

21. Decides that, for Member States that have fulfilled their financial obligations to the Force, there shall be set off against their apportionment, as provided for in paragraph 16 above, their respective share of the retained surplus in the total amount of 63,312,709 dollars, representing the net accumulated surplus in the account of the Force from 1978 to 1993, in accordance with the composition of groups set out in paragraphs 3 and 4 of General Assembly resolution 43/232 of 1 March 1989, as adjusted by the Assembly in its resolutions 44/192 B of 21 December 1989, 45/244 of 21 December 1990, 46/194 of 20 December 1991, 47/218 A of 23 December 1992 and 51/218 B and C of 18 December 1996, and taking into account the scale of assessments for 1993 as set out in its resolution 46/221 A of 20 December 1991, as adjusted by the Assembly in its decision 47/456 of 23 December 1992 and its resolution 48/223 A of 23 December 1993;

22. Also decides that, for Member States that have not fulfilled their financial obligations to the Force, there shall be set off against their outstanding obligations their respective share of the retained surplus in the total amount of 63,312,709 dollars, in accordance with the scheme set out in paragraph 21 above;

23. Emphasizes that no peacekeeping mission shall be financed by borrowing funds from other active peacekeeping missions;

24. Encourages the Secretary-General to continue to take additional measures to ensure the safety and security of all personnel under the auspices of the United Nations participating in the Force;

25. Invites voluntary contributions to the Force in cash and in the form of services and supplies acceptable to the Secretary-General, to be administered, as appropriate, in accordance with the procedure and practices established by the General Assembly;

26. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its fifty-ninth session, under the item entitled "Financing of the United Nations peacekeeping forces in the Middle East", the sub-item entitled "United Nations Interim Force in Lebanon".

RECORDED VOTE ON RESOLUTION 58/307:

In favour: Afghanistan, Algeria, Andorra, Argentina, Armenia, Australia, Austria, Azerbaijan, Bahamas, Bahrain, Bangladesh, Belarus, Belgium, Belize, Bosnia and Herzegovina, Brazil, Brunei Darussalam, Bulgaria, Burkina Faso, Burundi, Cambodia, Canada, Central African Republic, Chile, China, Colombia, Costa Rica, Côte d'Ivoire, Croatia, Cuba, Cyprus, Czech Republic, Denmark, Djibouti, Dominican Republic, Ecuador, Egypt, El Salvador, Estonia, Ethiopia, Finland, France, Gabon, Gambia, Germany, Ghana, Greece, Guatemala, Guinea, Guyana, Haiti, Honduras, Hungary, Iceland, India, Indonesia, Ireland, Italy, Jamaica, Japan, Jordan, Kazakhstan, Kenya, Kuwait, Latvia, Lebanon, Lesotho, Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Liechtenstein, Lithuania, Luxembourg, Malaysia, Maldives, Mali, Malta, Mauritius, Mexico, Monaco, Morocco, Mozambique, Myanmar, Namibia, Nepal, Netherlands, New Zealand, Nicaragua, Niger, Nigeria, Norway, Oman, Pakistan, Panama, Peru, Poland, Portugal, Qatar, Republic of Korea, Republic of Moldova, Russian Federation, San Marino, Saudi Arabia, Senegal, Serbia and Montenegro, Sierra Leone, Singapore, Slovakia, Slovenia, South Africa, Spain, Sri Lanka, Sudan, Sweden, Switzerland, Syrian Arab Republic, Thailand, Timor-Leste, Togo, Trinidad and Tobago, Tunisia, Turkey, Uganda, Ukraine, United Arab Emirates, United Kingdom, United Republic of Tanzania, Uruguay, Venezuela, Viet Nam, Yemen, Zambia, Zimbabwe.

Against: Israel, United States.

The Assembly adopted the fourth preambular paragraph and operative paragraphs 3, 4 and 13 by a single recorded vote of 75 to 2, with 48 abstentions. The Committee adopted those paragraphs in the same manner, by 80 to 2, with 51 abstentions.

On 23 December, the Assembly decided that the item on the financing of UN peacekeeping forces in the Middle East would remain for consideration at its resumed fifty-ninth (2005) session (decision 59/552).

Syrian Arab Republic

In 2004, the General Assembly again called for Israel's withdrawal from the Golan Heights in the Syrian Arab Republic, which it had occupied since 1967. The area was effectively annexed by Israel when it extended its laws, jurisdiction and administration to the territory towards the end of 1981 [YUN 1981, p. 309].

Alleged Syrian interference in the Lebanese presidential elections in early September led to the adoption of Security Council resolution 1559 (2004) (see p. 506).

Israeli policies and measures affecting the human rights of the population in the Golan Heights and other occupied territories were monitored by the Special Committee to Investigate Israeli Practices Affecting the Human Rights of the Palestinian People and Other Arabs of the Occupied Territories (Committee on Israeli Practices) and were the subject of resolutions adopted by the Commission on Human Rights (see PART TWO, Chapter III) and the Assembly.

Communications. In a 5 January letter [A/58/670-S/2004/1], the Syrian Arab Republic said that the Israeli Government gave its authorization for the construction of nine new settlements in the occupied Syrian Golan and for the expansion of existing Israeli settlements in that area.

Syria, in a letter of 15 March [A/58/734-S/2004/205], stated that on 4 March the Israeli occupation authorities proceeded to confiscate further territory in the occupied Syrian Golan. That confiscation came on the heels of the Israeli Government's approval of nine new settlement units, the construction of 900 new houses and the allocation of funds for implementing the Israeli Government's plan to increase the number of Israeli settlers in the Syrian Golan and expand existing Israeli settlements. The residents of the occupied Golan had declared a peaceful general strike for 14 March as a day for defending the land and defying the occupation authorities.

On 22 June [A/58/846-S/2004/510], Syria, in response to allegations made by Israel that the Syrian Government had trained, sponsored and financed terrorist groups, said that the Israeli claims constituted a distortion of the facts and an attempt to justify its terrorism against the Lebanese people and its occupation of Arab lands.

Bahrain transmitted to the Secretary-General the final communiqué and the Manama Declaration adopted by the Supreme Council of the Gulf Cooperation Council at its twenty-fifth session (Manama, Bahrain, 20-21 December) [A/59/663-S/2005/5]. The Supreme Council demanded that Israel withdraw from all the occupied Arab lands in Palestine and the occupied Golan Heights to the line of 4 June 1967 and from the Shab'a farms in southern Lebanon.

Committee on Israeli Practices. In its annual report [A/59/381], the Committee on Israeli Practices stated that it had visited Damascus, Syria, and Quneitra province, which bordered the occupied area, where it met with Syrian authorities and received information from witnesses with personal knowledge of the human rights situation in the occupied Syrian Golan. Syrian government officials emphasized that the situation continued to deteriorate and that Israel was still pursuing its policy of settlement expansion and land expropriation. The population of 44 Jewish settlements, which had 20,000 inhabitants, was expected to increase by 15,000 settlers over the next three years, following a decision by the Israeli authorities on 1 January. Authorization already had been granted for nine new settlements and for extending the existing ones, which implied further expropriation of Arab land. The laying of anti-personnel landmines continued. The Israeli authorities laid mines in 1,000 dunums of land in the Quneitra area along the Golan border strip and fenced them in with barbed wire, preventing farmers from cultivating their lands, and in the Harmon area, where trees had been uprooted. A matter of even greater concern was the burial of nuclear waste close to the Syrian border. It was feared that the nuclear waste, sealed in glass containers or reinforced cement chambers, would be affected by climatic conditions after 30 to 50 years and would start leaking depleted uranium, with a catastrophic environmental impact. Israel had refused to allow its nuclear reactors to be monitored by the International Atomic Energy Agency, and it refused to comply with relevant international conventions. Syrian Arabs in the occupied Golan had to pay taxes at higher rates than Israeli settlers for all kinds of purposes, including television licence fees, housing, income and property, and health insurance. Markets were closed to Syrian farmers as a result of the Israeli occupation, and there was a decline in agricultural production.

Reports of Secretary-General. On 9 September [A/59/338], the Secretary-General reported that no reply had been received from Israel to his August request for information on steps taken or envisaged to implement General Assembly resolution 58/100 [YUN 2003, p. 524], which called on Israel to desist from changing the physical character, demographic composition, institutional structure and legal status of the Golan, and from its repressive measures against the population.

By a 12 October report [A/59/431], the Secretary-General transmitted replies received from five Member States, including Israel, in response to his request for information on steps taken or envisaged to implement Assembly resolution 58/23 [YUN 2003, p. 524], which dealt with Israeli policies in the Syrian territory occupied since 1967, and resolution 58/22 [ibid., p. 484] on the transfer by some States of their diplomatic missions to Jerusalem (see p. 473).

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 1 December [meeting 64], the General Assembly adopted resolution 59/33 [draft: A/59/L.40 & Add.1] by recorded vote (111-6-60) [agenda item 36].

The Syrian Golan

The General Assembly,
Having considered the item entitled "The situation in the Middle East",

Taking note of the report of the Secretary-General,
Recalling Security Council resolution 497(1981) of 17 December 1981,

Reaffirming the fundamental principle of the inadmissibility of the acquisition of territory by force, in accordance with international law and the Charter of the United Nations,

Reaffirming once more the applicability of the Geneva Convention relative to the Protection of Civilian Persons in Time of War, of 12 August 1949, to the occupied Syrian Golan,

Deeply concerned that Israel has not withdrawn from the Syrian Golan, which has been under occupation since 1967, contrary to the relevant Security Council and General Assembly resolutions,

Stressing the illegality of the Israeli settlement construction and other activities in the occupied Syrian Golan since 1967,

Noting with satisfaction the convening in Madrid on 30 October 1991 of the Peace Conference on the Middle East, on the basis of Security Council resolutions 242(1967) of 22 November 1967, 338(1973) of 22 October 1973 and 425(1978) of 19 March 1978 and the formula of land for peace,

Expressing grave concern over the halt in the peace process on the Syrian track, and expressing the hope that peace talks will soon resume from the point they had reached,

1. Declares that Israel has failed so far to comply with Security Council resolution 497(1981);

2. Also declares that the Israeli decision of 14 December 1981 to impose its laws, jurisdiction and administration on the occupied Syrian Golan is null and void and has no validity whatsoever, as confirmed by the Security Council in its resolution 497(1981), and calls upon Israel to rescind it;

3. Reaffirms its determination that all relevant provisions of the Regulations annexed to the Hague Convention of 1907, and the Geneva Convention relative to the Protection of Civilian Persons in Time of War, continue to apply to the Syrian territory occupied by Israel since 1967, and calls upon the parties thereto to respect and ensure respect for their obligations under those instruments in all circumstances;

4. Determines once more that the continued occupation of the Syrian Golan and its de facto annexation constitute a stumbling block in the way of achieving a just, comprehensive and lasting peace in the region;

5. Calls upon Israel to resume the talks on the Syrian and Lebanese tracks and to respect the commitments and undertakings reached during the previous talks;

6. Demands once more that Israel withdraw from all the occupied Syrian Golan to the line of 4 June 1967 in implementation of the relevant Security Council resolutions;

7. Calls upon all the parties concerned, the co-sponsors of the peace process and the entire international community to exert all the necessary efforts to ensure the resumption of the peace process and its success by implementing Security Council resolutions 242(1967) and 338(1973);

8. Requests the Secretary-General to report to the General Assembly at its sixtieth session on the implementation of the present resolution.

RECORDED VOTE ON RESOLUTION 59/33:

In favour: Afghanistan, Algeria, Argentina, Armenia, Azerbaijan, Bahamas, Bahrain, Bangladesh, Barbados, Belarus, Belize, Benin, Bhutan, Bolivia, Botswana, Brazil, Brunei Darussalam, Burkina Faso, Cambodia, Cape Verde, Central African Republic, Chile, China, Colombia, Côte d'Ivoire, Cuba, Democratic People's Republic of Korea, Djibouti, Dominica, Ecuador, Egypt, El Salvador, Eritrea, Ethiopia, Fiji, Gabon, Gambia, Ghana, Guinea, Guinea-Bissau, Guyana, Honduras, India, Indonesia, Iran, Iraq, Jamaica, Jordan, Kazakhstan, Kuwait, Kyrgyzstan, Lao People's Democratic Republic, Lebanon, Lesotho, Liberia, Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Madagascar, Malaysia, Maldives, Mali, Mauritania, Mauritius, Mexico, Mongolia, Morocco, Mozambique, Myanmar, Namibia, Nepal, Nicaragua, Niger, Nigeria, Oman, Pakistan, Panama, Papua New Guinea, Paraguay, Philippines, Qatar, Russian Federation, Saint Lucia, Saint Vincent and the Grenadines, Saudi Arabia, Senegal, Seychelles, Sierra Leone, Singapore, Somalia, South Africa, Sri Lanka, Sudan, Suriname, Swaziland, Syrian Arab Republic, Tajikistan, Thailand, Timor-Leste, Togo, Trinidad and Tobago, Tunisia, Turkey, Turkmenistan, Uganda, United Arab Emirates, United Republic of Tanzania, Uzbekistan, Venezuela, Viet Nam, Yemen, Zambia, Zimbabwe.

Against: Grenada, Israel, Marshall Islands, Micronesia, Palau, United States.

Abstaining: Albania, Andorra, Australia, Austria, Belgium, Bosnia and Herzegovina, Bulgaria, Burundi, Cameroon, Canada, Costa Rica, Croatia, Cyprus, Czech Republic, Denmark, Dominican Republic, Estonia, Finland, France, Georgia, Germany, Greece, Guatemala, Haiti, Hungary, Iceland, Ireland, Italy, Japan, Kenya, Latvia, Liechtenstein, Lithuania, Luxembourg, Malta, Monaco, Nauru, Netherlands, New Zealand, Norway, Peru, Poland, Portugal, Republic of Korea, Republic of Moldova, Romania, Samoa, San Marino, Serbia and Montenegro, Slovakia, Slovenia, Spain, Sweden, Switzerland, The former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia, Tonga, Ukraine, United Kingdom, Uruguay, Vanuatu.

On 10 December [meeting 71], the Assembly, under the agenda item on the report of the Committee on Israeli Practices and on the Fourth Committee's recommendation [A/59/471], adopted resolution 59/125 by recorded vote (160-2-15) [agenda item 76].

The occupied Syrian Golan

The General Assembly,

Having considered the report of the Special Committee to Investigate Israeli Practices Affecting the Human Rights of the Palestinian People and Other Arabs of the Occupied Territories,

Deeply concerned that the Syrian Golan, occupied since 1967, has been under continued Israeli military occupation,

Recalling Security Council resolution 497(1981) of 17 December 1981,

Recalling also its previous relevant resolutions, the most recent of which was resolution 58/100 of 9 December 2003,

Having considered the report of the Secretary-General submitted in pursuance of resolution 58/100,

Recalling its previous relevant resolutions in which, inter alia, it called upon Israel to put an end to its occupation of the Arab territories,

Reaffirming once more the illegality of the decision of 14 December 1981 taken by Israel to impose its laws, jurisdiction and administration on the occupied Syrian Golan, which has resulted in the effective annexation of that territory,

Reaffirming that the acquisition of territory by force is inadmissible under international law, including the Charter of the United Nations,

Reaffirming also the applicability of the Geneva Convention relative to the Protection of Civilian Persons in Time of War, of 12 August 1949, to the occupied Syrian Golan,

Bearing in mind Security Council resolution 237 (1967) of 14 June 1967,

Welcoming the convening at Madrid of the Peace Conference on the Middle East on the basis of Security Council resolutions 242(1967) of 22 November 1967 and 338(1973) of 22 October 1973 aimed at the realization of a just, comprehensive and lasting peace, and expressing grave concern about the stalling of the peace process on all tracks,

1. Calls upon Israel, the occupying Power, to comply with the relevant resolutions on the occupied Syrian Golan, in particular Security Council resolution 497(1981), in which the Council, inter alia, decided that the Israeli decision to impose its laws, jurisdiction and administration on the occupied Syrian Golan was null and void and without international legal effect, and demanded that Israel, the occupying Power, rescind forthwith its decision;

2. Also calls upon Israel to desist from changing the physical character, demographic composition, institutional structure and legal status of the occupied Syrian Golan and in particular to desist from the establishment of settlements;

3. Determines that all legislative and administrative measures and actions taken or to be taken by Israel, the occupying Power, that purport to alter the character and legal status of the occupied Syrian Golan are null and void, constitute a flagrant violation of international law and of the Geneva Convention relative to the Protection of Civilian Persons in Time of War, of 12 August 1949, and have no legal effect;

4. Calls upon Israel to desist from imposing Israeli citizenship and Israeli identity cards on the Syrian citizens in the occupied Syrian Golan, and from its repressive measures against the population of the occupied Syrian Golan;

5. Deplores the violations by Israel of the Geneva Convention relative to the Protection of Civilian Persons in Time of War, of 12 August 1949;

6. Calls once again upon Member States not to recognize any of the legislative or administrative measures and actions referred to above;

7. Requests the Secretary-General to report to the General Assembly at its sixtieth session on the implementation of the present resolution.

RECORDED VOTE ON RESOLUTION 59/125:

In favour: Afghanistan, Algeria, Andorra, Antigua and Barbuda, Argentina, Armenia, Australia, Austria, Azerbaijan, Bahamas, Bahrain, Bangladesh, Barbados, Belarus, Belgium, Belize, Benin, Bolivia, Bosnia and Herzegovina, Botswana, Brazil, Brunei Darussalam, Bulgaria, Burkina Faso, Burundi, Cambodia, Canada, Cape Verde, Chile, China, Colombia, Comoros, Congo, Costa Rica, Croatia, Cuba, Cyprus, Czech Republic, Democratic People's Republic of Korea, Denmark, Djibouti, Dominica, Ecuador, Egypt, El Salvador, Eritrea, Estonia, Ethiopia, Fiji, Finland, France, Gabon, Georgia, Germany, Ghana, Greece, Guatemala, Guinea, Guinea-Bissau, Guyana, Honduras, Hungary, Iceland, India, Indonesia, Iran, Ireland, Italy, Jamaica, Japan, Jordan, Kazakhstan, Kuwait, Kyrgyzstan, Lao People's Democratic Republic, Latvia, Lebanon, Lesotho, Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Liechtenstein, Lithuania, Luxembourg, Madagascar, Malaysia, Maldives, Mali, Malta, Mauritania, Mauritius, Mexico, Monaco, Mongolia, Morocco, Mozambique, Myanmar, Namibia, Nepal, Netherlands, New Zealand, Nicaragua, Nigeria, Norway, Oman, Pakistan, Panama, Papua New Guinea, Paraguay, Peru, Philippines, Poland, Portugal, Qatar, Republic of Korea, Republic of Moldova, Romania, Russian Federation, Saint Lucia, Saint Vincent and the Grenadines, Samoa, San Marino, Sao Tome and Principe, Saudi Arabia, Senegal, Serbia and Montenegro, Seychelles, Sierra Leone, Singapore, Slovakia, Slovenia, Somalia, South Africa, Spain, Sri Lanka, Sudan, Suriname, Swaziland, Sweden, Switzerland, Syrian Arab Republic, Tajikistan, Thailand, The former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia, Timor-Leste, Togo, Trinidad and Tobago, Tunisia, Turkey, Turkmenistan, Uganda, Ukraine, United Arab Emirates, United Kingdom, United Republic of Tanzania, Uruguay, Uzbekistan, Venezuela, Viet Nam, Yemen, Zambia, Zimbabwe.

Against: Israel, Palau.

Abstaining: Albania, Cameroon, Côte d'Ivoire, Dominican Republic, Equatorial Guinea, Grenada, Haiti, Kenya, Marshall Islands, Micronesia, Nauru, Tonga, Tuvalu, United States, Vanuatu.

UNDOF

The mandate of the United Nations Disengagement Observer Force, established by Security Council resolution 350(1974) [YUN 1974, p. 205] to supervise the observance of the ceasefire between Israel and the Syrian Arab Republic in the Golan Heights and ensure the separation of their forces, was renewed twice in 2004, in June and December, each time for a six-month period.

UNDOF maintained an area of separation, which was some 80 kilometres long and varied in width between approximately 12.5 kilometres in the centre to less than 400 metres in the extreme south. The area of separation was inhabited and policed by the Syrian authorities, and no military forces other than UNDOF were permitted within it.

As at 26 November, UNDOF comprised 1,039 troops from Austria (375), Canada (192), Japan (30), Poland (349), Nepal (2) and Slovakia (91). It was assisted by 77 UNTSO military observers.

The Secretary-General appointed Major General Bala Nanda Sharma (Nepal) as Force Commander [S/2004/30] to succeed Major General Franciszek Gągor (Poland), who completed his tour of duty on 16 January. The Security Council took note of the Secretary-General's intention on 14 January [S/2004/31].

Reports of Secretary-General. The Secretary-General reported to the Security Council on UNDOF activities between 9 December 2003 and 21 June 2004 [S/2004/499] and between 22 June and 7 December 2004 [S/2004/948]. Both reports noted that the UNDOF area of operation remained calm, except in the Shab'a farms area (see p. 509). UNDOF continued in 2004 to supervise the area of separation between Israeli and Syrian troops in the Golan Heights, to ensure that no military forces of either party were deployed there, by means of fixed positions and patrols. The Force, accompanied by liaison officers from the party concerned, carried out fortnightly inspections of equipment and force levels in the area of limitation. As in the past, both sides denied inspection teams access to some of their positions and imposed restrictions on the Force's freedom of movement. Mines, especially in the area of separation, continued to pose a threat to UNDOF personnel and local inhabitants. The Force assisted the International Committee of the Red Cross with mail facilities and the passage of persons through the area of separation, and supported the United Nations Children's Fund in mine-awareness activities.

The Secretary-General observed that the situation in the Middle East continued to be very tense and was likely to remain so, unless and until a comprehensive settlement covering all aspects of the problem could be reached. He hoped that determined efforts would be made by all concerned to tackle the problem in all its aspects, with a view to arriving at a just and durable peace settlement, as called for by Council resolution 338(1973) [YUN 1973, p. 213]. Stating that he considered the Force's continued presence in the area to be essential, the Secretary-General, with the agreement of both Israel and Syria, recommended in the June report that UNDOF's mandate be extended until 31 December 2004 and in the December report, until 30 June 2005.

On 29 June [meeting 4998], the Council unanimously adopted resolution 1550(2004). The draft [S/2004/514] was prepared in consultations among Council members.

The Security Council,

Having considered the report of the Secretary-General of 21 June 2004 on the United Nations Disengagement Observer Force, and reaffirming its resolution 1308(2000) of 17 July 2000,

1. Calls upon the parties concerned to implement immediately Security Council resolution 338(1973) of 22 October 1973;

2. Decides to renew the mandate of the United Nations Disengagement Observer Force for a period of six months, that is, until 31 December 2004;

3. Requests the Secretary-General to submit, at the end of this period, a report on developments in the situation and the measures taken to implement resolution 338(1973).

On 15 December [meeting 5101], the Council unanimously adopted resolution 1578(2004). The draft [S/2004/963] was prepared during consultations among Council members.

The Security Council,

Having considered the report of the Secretary-General of 7 December 2004 on the United Nations Disengagement Observer Force, and reaffirming its resolution 1308(2000) of 17 July 2000,

1. Calls upon the parties concerned to implement immediately its resolution 338(1973) of 22 October 1973;

2. Decides to renew the mandate of the United Nations Disengagement Observer Force for a period of six months, that is, until 30 June 2005;

3. Requests the Secretary-General to submit, at the end of this period, a report on developments in the situation and the measures taken to implement resolution 338(1973).

After the adoption of each resolution, the President, following consultations among Council members, made identical statements S/PRST/2004/23 [meeting 4998] on 29 June and S/PRST/2004/47 [meeting 5101] on 15 December, on behalf of the Council:

In connection with the resolution just adopted on the renewal of the mandate of the United Nations Disengagement Observer Force, I have been authorized to make the following complementary statement on behalf of the Security Council:

As is known, the report of the Secretary-General on the United Nations Disengagement Observer Force states in paragraph 12: "... the situation in the Middle East is very tense and is likely to remain so, unless and until a comprehensive settlement covering all aspects of the Middle East problem can be reached". That statement of the Secretary-General reflects the view of the Security Council.

Financing

Reports of Secretary-General and ACABQ.

On 18 December 2003, the Secretary-General presented a performance report on UNDOF's budget for 1 July 2002 to 30 June 2003 [A/58/641]. Expenditures totalled $38,975,700, against an apportionment of $38,991,800, resulting in an unencumbered balance of $16,100. On 22 December, he submitted UNDOF's budget for 1 July 2004 to 30 June 2005 [A/58/662 & Corr.1], totalling $40,902,100. On 9 February 2004, he submitted an overview report on the financing of UN peacekeeping operations: budget performance for the period from 1 July 2002 to 30 June 2003 and the budget for 1 July 2004 to 30 June 2005 [A/58/705].

ACABQ's comments and recommendations on the two December reports were contained in an April 2004 report [A/58/759/Add.7].

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 18 June [meeting 91], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee [A/58/827], adopted resolution 58/306 without vote [agenda item 145 (a)].

Financing of the United Nations Disengagement Observer Force

The General Assembly,

Having considered the reports of the Secretary-General on the financing of the United Nations Disengagement Observer Force and the related reports of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions,

Recalling Security Council resolution 350(1974) of 31 May 1974 regarding the establishment of the United Nations Disengagement Observer Force and the subsequent resolutions by which the Council extended the mandate of the Force, the latest of which was resolution 1520(2003) of 22 December 2003,

Recalling also its resolution 3211 B (XXIX) of 29 November 1974 on the financing of the United Nations Emergency Force and of the United Nations Disengagement Observer Force, and its subsequent resolutions thereon, the latest of which was resolution 57/324 of 18 June 2003,

Reaffirming the general principles underlying the financing of United Nations peacekeeping operations, as stated in General Assembly resolutions 1874(S-IV) of 27 June 1963, 3101(XXVIII) of 11 December 1973 and 55/235 of 23 December 2000,

Mindful of the fact that it is essential to provide the Force with the necessary financial resources to enable it to fulfil its responsibilities under the relevant resolutions of the Security Council,

1. Takes note of the status of contributions to the United Nations Disengagement Observer Force as at 15 April 2004, including the contributions outstanding in the amount of 17.4 million United States dollars, representing some 1 per cent of the total assessed contributions, notes with concern that only thirty-eight Member States have paid their assessed contributions in full, and urges all other Member States, in particular those in arrears, to ensure the payment of their outstanding assessed contributions;

2. Expresses its appreciation to those Member States which have paid their assessed contributions in full;

3. Expresses concern at the financial situation with regard to peacekeeping activities, in particular as regards the reimbursements to troop contributors that bear additional burdens owing to overdue payments by Member States of their assessments;

4. Urges all Member States to make every possible effort to ensure payment of their assessed contributions to the Force in full;

5. Expresses concern at the delay experienced by the Secretary-General in deploying and providing adequate resources to some recent peacekeeping missions, in particular those in Africa;

6. Emphasizes that all future and existing peacekeeping missions shall be given equal and non-discriminatory treatment in respect of financial and administrative arrangements;

7. Also emphasizes that all peacekeeping missions shall be provided with adequate resources for the effective and efficient discharge of their respective mandates;

8. Reiterates its request to the Secretary-General to make the fullest possible use of facilities and equipment at the United Nations Logistics Base at Brindisi, Italy, in order to minimize the costs of procurement for the Force;

9. Endorses the conclusions and recommendations contained in the report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions, except those in paragraphs 16 and 20, and requests the Secretary-General to ensure their full implementation;

10. Authorizes the Secretary-General to fund the 14 contractual posts mentioned in paragraph 10 of his report on the budget for the Force for the period from 1 July 2004 to 30 June 2005 through general temporary assistance, without prejudice to a future discussion and decision on the proposal, and requests the Secretary-General to resubmit with full justification this request in the context of the budget proposal for the period from 1 July 2005 to 30 June 2006, taking into account the recommendation of the Advisory Committee contained in paragraph 19 of its report;

11. Requests the Secretary-General to take all necessary action to ensure that the Force is administered with a maximum of efficiency and economy;

12. Also requests the Secretary-General, in order to reduce the cost of employing General Service staff, to continue efforts to recruit local staff for the Force against General Service posts, commensurate with the requirements of the Force;

Financial performance report for the period from 1 July 2002 to 30 June 2003

13. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General on the financial performance of the Force for the period from 1 July 2002 to 30 June 2003;

Budget estimates for the period from 1 July 2004 to 30 June 2005

14. Decides to appropriate to the Special Account for the United Nations Disengagement Observer Force the amount of 43,033,400 dollars for the period from 1 July 2004 to 30 June 2005, inclusive of 40,902,100 dollars for the maintenance of the Force, 1,742,400 dollars for the support account for peacekeeping operations and 388,900 dollars for the United Nations Logistics Base;

Financing of the appropriation

15. Decides also to apportion among Member States the amount of 43,033,400 dollars at a monthly rate of 3,586,116 dollars, in accordance with the levels set out in General Assembly resolution 55/235, as adjusted by the Assembly in its resolution 55/236 of 23 December 2000 and updated in its resolution 58/256 of 23 December 2003, and taking into account the scale of assessments for 2004 and 2005, as set out in its resolution 58/1 B of 23 December 2003, subject to a decision of the Security Council to extend the mandate of the Force;

16. Decides further that, in accordance with the provisions of its resolution 973(X) of 15 December 1955, there shall be set off against the apportionment among

Member States, as provided for in paragraph 15 above, their respective share in the Tax Equalization Fund of 1,451,700 dollars, comprising the estimated staff assessment income of 1,175,400 dollars approved for the Force, the prorated share of 254,300 dollars of the estimated staff assessment income approved for the support account and the prorated share of 22,000 dollars of the estimated staff assessment income approved for the United Nations Logistics Base;

17. Decides that, for Member States that have fulfilled their financial obligations to the Force, there shall be set off against their apportionment, as provided for in paragraph 15 above, their respective share of the unencumbered balance and other income in the total amount of 1,891,100 dollars in respect of the financial period ended 30 June 2003, in accordance with the levels set out in General Assembly resolution 55/235, as adjusted by the Assembly in its resolution 55/236 and its resolution 57/290 A of 20 December 2002, and taking into account the scale of assessments for 2003, as set out in its resolutions 55/5 B of 23 December 2000 and 57/4 B of 20 December 2002;

18. Decides also that, for Member States that have not fulfilled their financial obligations to the Force, their respective share of the unencumbered balance and other income in the total amount of 1,891,100 dollars in respect of the financial period ended 30 June 2003 shall be set off against their outstanding obligations in accordance with the scheme set out in paragraph 17 above;

19. Decides further that the increase of 86,600 dollars in the estimated staff assessment income in respect of the financial period ended 30 June 2003 shall be added to the credits from the amount referred to in paragraphs 17 and 18 above and that the respective shares of Member States therein shall be applied in accordance with the provisions of those paragraphs, as appropriate;

20. Emphasizes that no peacekeeping mission shall be financed by borrowing funds from other active peacekeeping missions;

21. Encourages the Secretary-General to continue to take additional measures to ensure the safety and security of all personnel under the auspices of the United Nations participating in the Force;

22. Invites voluntary contributions to the Force in cash and in the form of services and supplies acceptable to the Secretary-General, to be administered, as appropriate, in accordance with the procedure and practices established by the General Assembly;

23. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its fifty-ninth session, under the item entitled "Financing of the United Nations peacekeeping forces in the Middle East", the sub-item entitled "United Nations Disengagement Observer Force".

Chapter VII

Disarmament

Although Member States continued to differ in 2004 on many disarmament issues, relative progress was made in addressing challenges relating to weapons of mass destruction and conventional weapons, particularly small arms and light weapons, and in promoting transparency in armaments.

The Conference on Disarmament remained unable to reach consensus on a comprehensive programme of work, and consequently did not take action on its agenda items for the sixth consecutive year. However, the Conference was able to adopt a decision on enhancing the engagement of civil society in its work. Similarly, continuing discord among Member States prevented the Disarmament Commission from reaching agreement on its substantive agenda for the 2004 session.

In April, owing to increasing concern over threats to international peace and security associated with the potential proliferation of weapons of mass destruction, the Security Council called on States to ensure compliance with their commitments under multilateral non-proliferation treaties, and established a Committee to monitor their efforts in that regard. The General Assembly reaffirmed the importance of effective verification measures in non-proliferation and other disarmament agreements and asked the Secretary-General to establish a panel of governmental experts to explore the question of verification in all its aspects.

Regarding conventional weapons, Member States maintained progress in efforts to combat the proliferation of small arms and light weapons, particularly regarding the implementation of the Programme of Action adopted by the 2001 UN Conference on the Illicit Trade in Small Arms and Light Weapons in All Its Aspects. National, regional and subregional initiatives undertaken within that framework increased significantly during the year, including the adoption and strengthening of national laws, weapons collection and destruction activities, and the establishment of arrangements for cooperation. Member States of the Economic Community of West African States began efforts to transform into a legally-binding instrument their 1998 Moratorium on the Importation, Exportation and Manufacture of Small Arms and Light Weapons in West Africa. The Protocol on the Control of Firearms, Ammunition and Other Related Materials, adopted in 2001 by member States of the Southern African Development Community, entered into force in November. The open-ended working group established in 2003 to negotiate an international instrument to help identify and trace illicit small arms and light weapons began its work and resolved to produce and circulate the first draft of the proposed instrument in early 2005. The Security Council encouraged international cooperation to prevent the diversion of small arms and light weapons to terrorist groups, particularly Al-Qaida, while the General Assembly asked the Secretary-General to continue consultations with Member States with a view to establishing no later than 2007, a group of governmental experts to consider further steps to enhance such cooperation in combating illicit brokering of those weapons.

Concerning the United Nations Register of Conventional Arms, the Secretary-General reported in July an adjustment to its scope in conformity with the recommendations of the Group of Governmental Experts that reviewed the Register's operation in 2003 and proposed measures to enhance its effectiveness and relevance.

In November, the First Review Conference of the States Parties to the Convention on the Prohibition of the Use, Stockpiling, Production and Transfer of Anti-personnel Mines and on Their Destruction (Mine-Ban Convention) reviewed the Convention's operation and status and adopted an action plan for ending the suffering caused by anti-personnel mines.

The Group of Governmental Experts established to undertake the second review since 1981 of the relationship between disarmament and development reaffirmed the findings of the 1987 Conference on the issue that, although disarmament and development had their logics and existed independently of each other, progress in one could create a conducive environment for the other.

On the bilateral level, the United States and the Russian Federation held meetings during the year to discuss the implementation of their Strategic Offensive Reductions Treaty (Moscow Treaty), which entered into force in 2003.

UN role in disarmament

UN machinery

Disarmament issues before the United Nations were considered mainly through the General Assembly and its First (Disarmament and International Security) Committee, the Disarmament Commission (a deliberative body) and the Conference on Disarmament (a multilateral negotiating forum, which met in Geneva). By decision 59/544 of 23 December, the General Assembly took note of the First Committee's report [A/59/618].

The Department for Disarmament Affairs of the UN Secretariat continued to support the work of Member States and treaty bodies, to service the Advisory Board on Disarmament Matters and to administer the UN disarmament fellowship programme.

Fourth special session devoted to disarmament

The General Assembly had decided, by resolution 51/45 C [YUN 1996, p. 447], to convene its fourth special session devoted to disarmament in 1999, subject to the emergence of consensus on its agenda and objectives, which had not been achieved.

In 2004, the Assembly established an open-ended working group (see below) to consider, on the basis of consensus, the objectives and agenda of the special session and asked it to report on its work before the end of the Assembly's sixtieth session. A similar working group established previously, which completed its work in 2003 [YUN 2003, p. 530], had not been able to reach consensus on the issue.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 3 December [meeting 66], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the First Committee [A/59/459 & Corr.1], adopted resolution 59/71 without vote [agenda item 65 (dd)].

Convening of the fourth special session of the General Assembly devoted to disarmament

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 49/75 I of 15 December 1994, 50/70 F of 12 December 1995, 51/45 C of 10 December 1996, 52/38 F of 9 December 1997, 53/77 AA of 4 December 1998, 54/54 U of 1 December 1999, 55/33 M of 20 November 2000, 56/24 D of 29 November 2001 and 57/61 of 22 November 2002 and its decision 58/521 of 8 December 2003,

Recalling also that, there being a consensus to do so in each case, three special sessions of the General Assembly devoted to disarmament were held in 1978, 1982 and 1988,

Bearing in mind the Final Document of the Tenth Special Session of the General Assembly, adopted by consensus at the first special session devoted to disarmament,

Bearing in mind also the ultimate objective of general and complete disarmament under effective international control,

Taking note of paragraph 98 of the Final Document of the Thirteenth Conference of Heads of State or Government of Non-Aligned Countries, held at Kuala Lumpur from 20 to 25 February 2003, and paragraph 91 of the Final Document of the Fourteenth Ministerial Conference of the Movement of Non-Aligned Countries, held at Durban, South Africa, from 17 to 19 August 2004, which supported the convening of the fourth special session of the General Assembly devoted to disarmament, which would offer an opportunity to review, from a perspective more in tune with the current international situation, the most critical aspects of the process of disarmament and to mobilize the international community and public opinion in favour of the elimination of nuclear and other weapons of mass destruction and of the control and reduction of conventional weapons,

Recalling the United Nations Millennium Declaration, adopted by the Heads of State and Government during the Millennium Summit of the United Nations, held in New York from 6 to 8 September 2000, in which they resolved "to strive for the elimination of weapons of mass destruction, particularly nuclear weapons, and to keep all options open for achieving this aim, including the possibility of convening an international conference to identify ways of eliminating nuclear dangers",

Reiterating its conviction that a special session of the General Assembly devoted to disarmament can set the future course of action in the fields of disarmament, arms control, non-proliferation and related international security matters,

Emphasizing the importance of multilateralism in the process of disarmament, arms control, non-proliferation and related international security matters,

Taking note of the report of the Open-ended Working Group to consider the objectives and agenda, including the possible establishment of the preparatory committee, for the fourth special session of the General Assembly devoted to disarmament,

1. Decides to establish an open-ended working group, working on the basis of consensus, to consider the objectives and agenda, including the possible establishment of the preparatory committee, for the fourth special session of the General Assembly devoted to disarmament, taking note of the paper presented by the Chairman of Working Group II during the 1999 substantive session of the Disarmament Commission and the written proposals and views submitted by Member States as contained in the working papers presented during the three substantive sessions of the Open-ended Working Group in 2003, as well as the reports of the Secretary-General regarding the views of Member States on the objectives, agenda and timing of the fourth special session of the General Assembly devoted to disarmament;

2. Requests the Open-ended Working Group to hold an organizational session in order to set the dates for its substantive sessions in 2006, and to submit a report on its work, including possible substantive recommendations, before the end of the sixtieth session of the General Assembly;

3. Requests the Secretary-General, within existing resources, to provide the Open-ended Working Group with the necessary assistance and services as may be required to discharge its tasks;

4. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its sixtieth session the item entitled "Convening of the fourth special session of the General Assembly devoted to disarmament".

Disarmament Commission

In 2004, the Disarmament Commission, composed of all UN Member States, held nine formal and five informal meetings (New York, 5-23 April) [A/59/42] and an organizational meeting on 22 December [A/60/42], at which the Commission discussed possible agenda items, including issues relating to nuclear disarmament (see p. 528) and conventional disarmament (see p. 564). Proposals in that regard were submitted by Indonesia, on behalf of the Non-Aligned Movement; Ireland, on behalf of the European Union (EU); and the United States, which also proposed measures for improving the effectiveness of the UN disarmament machinery. Deliberations revealed a wide gap among delegations on agenda items, and, in efforts to narrow the gap, the Chairman presented a new proposal that drew from others, to serve as a basis for discussion; however, the Commission was unable to reach agreement on its substantive agenda. On 23 April, the Commission decided to continue deliberations on agenda items for its 2005 session, and requested its Chairman to continue informal consultations and to present the outcome to the Commission's organizational meeting in December 2004.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 3 December [meeting 66], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the First Committee [A/59/461], adopted resolution 59/105 without vote [agenda item 67 (d)].

Report of the Disarmament Commission

The General Assembly,

Having considered the report of the Disarmament Commission,

Recalling its resolutions 47/54 A of 9 December 1992, 47/54 G of 8 April 1993, 48/77 A of 16 December 1993, 49/77 A of 15 December 1994, 50/72 D of 12 December 1995, 51/47 B of 10 December 1996, 52/40 B of 9 December 1997, 53/79 A of 4 December 1998, 54/56 A of 1 December 1999, 55/35 C of 20 November 2000, 56/26 A of 29 November 2001, 57/95 of 22 November 2002 and 58/67 of 8 December 2003,

Considering the role that the Disarmament Commission has been called upon to play and the contribution that it should make in examining and submitting recommendations on various problems in the field of disarmament and in the promotion of the implementation of the relevant decisions adopted by the General Assembly at its tenth special session,

Bearing in mind its decision 52/492 of 8 September 1998,

1. Takes note of the report of the Disarmament Commission;

2. Reaffirms the importance of further enhancing the dialogue and cooperation among the First Committee of the General Assembly, the Disarmament Commission and the Conference on Disarmament;

3. Also reaffirms the role of the Disarmament Commission as the specialized, deliberative body within the United Nations multilateral disarmament machinery that allows for in-depth deliberations on specific disarmament issues, leading to the submission of concrete recommendations on those issues;

4. Requests the Disarmament Commission to continue its work in accordance with its mandate, as set forth in paragraph 118 of the Final Document of the Tenth Special Session of the General Assembly, and with paragraph 3 of Assembly resolution 37/78 H of 9 December 1982, and to that end to make every effort to achieve specific recommendations on the items on its agenda, taking into account the adopted "Ways and means to enhance the functioning of the Disarmament Commission";

5. Recommends that the Disarmament Commission consider the following items at its 2005 substantive session:

(a) [To be determined];

(b) [To be determined];

6. Requests the Disarmament Commission to meet for a period not exceeding three weeks during 2005, namely, from 18 July to 5 August, and to submit a substantive report to the General Assembly at its sixtieth session;

7. Requests the Secretary-General to transmit to the Disarmament Commission the annual report of the Conference on Disarmament, together with all the official records of the fifty-ninth session of the General Assembly relating to disarmament matters, and to render all assistance that the Commission may require for implementing the present resolution;

8. Also requests the Secretary-General to ensure full provision to the Disarmament Commission and its subsidiary bodies of interpretation and translation facilities in the official languages and to assign, as a matter of priority, all the necessary resources and services, including verbatim records, to that end;

9. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its sixtieth session the item entitled "Report of the Disarmament Commission".

Conference on Disarmament

The Conference on Disarmament, a multilateral negotiating body, held a three-part session in Geneva in 2004 (19 January–26 March, 10 May–25 June and 26 July–8 September) [A/59/27].

The Conference continued to consider the cessation of the nuclear arms race and nuclear disarmament; prevention of nuclear war; prevention of an arms race in outer space; effective international arrangements to assure non-nuclear-weapon States against the use or threat of use of nuclear weapons; new types of weapons of mass destruction (WMDs) and new systems of such weapons; radiological weapons; a comprehensive programme of disarmament; and transparency in armaments.

Besides the continuing lack of consensus on a programme of work, which had undermined progress in the Conference for many years, another area of disagreement in 2004 was how to approach new issues that could be relevant to the current international environment, particularly terrorism and WMDs and compliance with arms control and disarmament agreements. A number of Member States expressed interest in addressing those issues without including them in the agenda. Subsequently, the Conference considered them in informal plenary meetings as “additional issues”. In efforts to resolve the impasse on a programme of work, successive Presidents of the Conference held consultations, at which a number of informal proposals on the work programme were considered. Deliberations were based mainly on the 2003 cross-group proposal put forward by five former Presidents (“A-5 proposal”) [YUN 2003, p. 531], which many members regarded as the most promising solution. While a number of delegations advocated a comprehensive approach to the work programme as a guarantee for addressing the security concerns of all States, others criticized such linking of issues. The Conference concluded its 2004 session without resolving the deadlock and, once again, did not set up any mechanism to deal with its agenda items. Nonetheless, members were able to take a decision on enhancing the engagement of civil society in the Conference’s work. The Conference decided to hold its 2005 session between January and September and requested its current President and incoming President to hold consultations during the intersessional period and make recommendations, taking into account all proposals.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 3 December [meeting 66], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the First Committee [A/59/461], adopted resolution 59/104 without vote [agenda item 67].

Report of the Conference on Disarmament

The General Assembly,

Having considered the report of the Conference on Disarmament,

Convinced that the Conference on Disarmament, as the single multilateral disarmament negotiating forum of the international community, has the primary role in substantive negotiations on priority questions of disarmament,

Recognizing the need to conduct multilateral negotiations with the aim of reaching agreement on concrete issues,

Recalling, in this respect, that the Conference has a number of urgent and important issues for negotiation,

Taking note of active discussions held on the programme of work during the 2004 session of the Conference, as duly reflected in the report and the records of the plenary meetings,

Taking note also of significant contributions made during the 2004 session to promote substantive discussions on issues on the agenda, as well as of discussions held on other issues that could also be relevant to the current international security environment,

Stressing the urgent need for the Conference to commence its substantive work at the beginning of its 2005 session,

Taking note of the decision reached on 12 February 2004 with regard to enhancement of the engagement of civil society in the work of the Conference and the statement by the President made thereafter,

1. Reaffirms the role of the Conference on Disarmament as the single multilateral disarmament negotiating forum of the international community;

2. Calls upon the Conference to intensify consultations and explore possibilities with a view to reaching an agreement on a programme of work;

3. Takes note of the strong collective interest of the Conference in commencing substantive work as soon as possible during its 2005 session;

4. Welcomes the decision of the Conference to request its current President and the incoming President to conduct consultations during the intersessional period and, if possible, to make recommendations, taking into account all relevant proposals, including those submitted as the documents of the Conference, views presented and discussions held, and to endeavour to keep the membership of the Conference informed, as appropriate, of their consultations, as expressed in paragraph 46 of its report;

5. Requests all States members of the Conference to cooperate with the current President and successive Presidents in their efforts to guide the Conference to the early commencement of substantive work in its 2005 session;

6. Requests the Secretary-General to continue to ensure the provision to the Conference of adequate administrative, substantive and conference support services;

7. Requests the Conference to submit a report on its work to the General Assembly at its sixtieth session;

8. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its sixtieth session the item entitled “Report of the Conference on Disarmament”.

Multilateral disarmament agreements

As at 31 December 2004, the following numbers of States had become parties to the multilateral agreements listed below (in chronological order, with the years in which they were initially signed or opened for signature).

(Geneva) Protocol for the Prohibition of the Use in War of Asphyxiating, Poisonous or Other Gases, and of Bacteriological Methods of Warfare (1925): 133 parties

Nuclear disarmament

Conference on Disarmament

In 2004, the Conference on Disarmament was not able to establish any subsidiary body to deal with nuclear disarmament owing to the continuing lack of agreement on a programme of work (see p. 524). Consequently, the question of nuclear disarmament was addressed only at plenary meetings, where delegations reaffirmed or further elaborated their respective positions on the item. Concerns were expressed about the proliferation of WMDs, especially nuclear weapons and related technologies; underscored was the importance of Security Council resolutions 1373 (2001) on measures to eliminate international terrorism [YUN 2001, p. 61] and 1540(2004) on the non-proliferation of WMDs (see p. 544).

Fissile material

In 2004, as in previous years, difficulties in reaching agreement on a comprehensive programme of work (see p. 524) that would take into account Member States' negotiating priorities, prevented the Conference on Disarmament from establishing an ad hoc committee to consider the issue of the prohibition of the production of fissile material for nuclear weapons and other nuclear explosive devices. Nonetheless, the issue was addressed during plenary meetings and an informal meeting, at which delegations reaffirmed their views on the subject. While countries of the Non-Aligned Movement emphasized that any treaty on that subject should include existing stockpiles of such material, others, mostly Western States and China, supported the United States new position, which, while reaffirming commitment to negotiations on a legally binding treaty banning the production of fissile material for nuclear weapons and other nuclear explosive devices, raised concerns about effective verification. The President of the Conference drew attention to a proposal for establishing an expert group to address related technical issues [CD/1734].

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 3 December [meeting 66], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the First Committee [A/59/459 & Corr.1], adopted resolution 59/81 by recorded vote (179-2-2) [agenda item 65].

The Conference on Disarmament decision (CD/1547) of 11 August 1998 to establish, under item 1 of its agenda entitled “Cessation of the nuclear arms race and nuclear disarmament”, an ad hoc committee to negotiate, on the basis of the report of the Special Coordinator (CD/1299) and the mandate contained therein, a non-discriminatory, multilateral and internationally and effectively verifiable treaty banning the production of fissile material for nuclear weapons or other nuclear explosive devices

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 48/75 L of 16 December 1993, 53/77 I of 4 December 1998, 55/33 Y of 20 November 2000, 56/24 J of 29 November 2001, 57/80 of 22 November 2002 and 58/57 of 8 December 2003,

Convinced that a non-discriminatory, multilateral and internationally and effectively verifiable treaty banning the production of fissile material for nuclear weapons or other nuclear explosive devices would be a significant contribution to nuclear disarmament and nuclear non-proliferation,

Recalling the 1998 report of the Conference on Disarmament, in which, inter alia, the Conference recorded that, in proceeding to take a decision on this matter, that decision was without prejudice to any further decisions on the establishment of further subsidiary bodies under agenda item 1 and that intensive consultations would be pursued to seek the views of the members of the Conference on Disarmament on appropriate methods and approaches for dealing with agenda item 1, taking into consideration all proposals and views in that respect,

1. Recalls the decision of the Conference on Disarmament to establish, under item 1 of its agenda entitled “Cessation of the nuclear arms race and nuclear disarmament”, an ad hoc committee which shall negotiate, on the basis of the report of the Special Coordinator and the mandate contained therein, a non-discriminatory, multilateral and internationally and effectively verifiable treaty banning the production of fissile material for nuclear weapons or other nuclear explosive devices;

2. Urges the Conference on Disarmament to agree on a programme of work that includes the immediate commencement of negotiations on such a treaty.

RECORDED VOTE ON RESOLUTION 59/81:

In favour: Afghanistan, Albania, Algeria, Andorra, Angola, Antigua and Barbuda, Argentina, Armenia, Australia, Austria, Azerbaijan, Bahamas, Bahrain, Bangladesh, Barbados, Belarus, Belgium, Belize, Benin, Bhutan, Bolivia, Bosnia and Herzegovina, Botswana, Brazil, Brunei Darussalam, Bulgaria, Burkina Faso, Burundi, Cambodia, Cameroon, Canada, Cape Verde, Central African Republic, Chile, China, Colombia, Comoros, Congo, Costa Rica, Côte d'Ivoire, Croatia, Cuba, Cyprus, Czech Republic, Denmark, Djibouti, Dominica, Dominican Republic, Ecuador, Egypt, El Salvador, Equatorial Guinea, Eritrea, Estonia, Ethiopia, Fiji, Finland, France, Gabon, Gambia, Georgia, Germany, Ghana, Greece, Grenada, Guatemala, Guinea-Bissau, Guyana, Haiti, Honduras, Hungary,

Security assurances

The Conference on Disarmament addressed the issue of security assurances for non-nuclear-weapon States against the use or threat of use of nuclear weapons. During plenary meetings, delegations reaffirmed or further elaborated their respective positions on the item. Many non-nuclear-weapon States emphasized their interest in a binding instrument to provide them with security assurances, which they noted would strengthen the nuclear non-proliferation regime.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 3 December [meeting 66], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the First Committee [A/59/457], adopted resolution 59/64 by recorded vote (118-0-63) [agenda item 63].

Conclusion of effective international arrangements to assure non-nuclear-weapon States against the use or threat of use of nuclear weapons

The General Assembly,

Bearing in mind the need to allay the legitimate concern of the States of the world with regard to ensuring lasting security for their peoples,

Convinced that nuclear weapons pose the greatest threat to mankind and to the survival of civilization,

Welcoming the progress achieved in recent years in both nuclear and conventional disarmament,

Noting that, despite recent progress in the field of nuclear disarmament, further efforts are necessary towards the achievement of general and complete disarmament under effective international control,

Convinced that nuclear disarmament and the complete elimination of nuclear weapons are essential to remove the danger of nuclear war,

Determined to abide strictly by the relevant provisions of the Charter of the United Nations on the non-use of force or threat of force,

Recognizing that the independence, territorial integrity and sovereignty of non-nuclear-weapon States need to be safeguarded against the use or threat of use of force, including the use or threat of use of nuclear weapons,

Considering that, until nuclear disarmament is achieved on a universal basis, it is imperative for the international community to develop effective measures and arrangements to ensure the security of non-nuclear-weapon States against the use or threat of use of nuclear weapons from any quarter,

Recognizing that effective measures and arrangements to assure non-nuclear-weapon States against the use or threat of use of nuclear weapons can contribute positively to the prevention of the spread of nuclear weapons,

Bearing in mind paragraph 59 of the Final Document of the Tenth Special Session of the General Assembly, the first special session devoted to disarmament, in which it urged the nuclear-weapon States to pursue efforts to conclude, as appropriate, effective arrangements to assure non-nuclear-weapon States against the use or threat of use of nuclear weapons, and desirous of promoting the implementation of the relevant provisions of the Final Document,

Recalling the relevant parts of the special report of the Committee on Disarmament submitted to the General Assembly at its twelfth special session, the second special session devoted to disarmament, and of the special report of the Conference on Disarmament submitted to the Assembly at its fifteenth special session, the third special session devoted to disarmament, as well as the report of the Conference on its 1992 session,

Recalling also paragraph 12 of the Declaration of the 1980s as the Second Disarmament Decade, contained in the annex to its resolution 35/46 of 3 December 1980, which states, inter alia, that all efforts should be exerted by the Committee on Disarmament urgently to negotiate with a view to reaching agreement on effective international arrangements to assure non-nuclear-weapon States against the use or threat of use of nuclear weapons,

Noting the in-depth negotiations undertaken in the Conference on Disarmament and its Ad Hoc Committee on Effective International Arrangements to Assure Non-Nuclear-Weapon States against the Use or Threat of Use of Nuclear Weapons, with a view to reaching agreement on this question,

Taking note of the proposals submitted under the item in the Conference on Disarmament, including the drafts of an international convention,

Taking note also of the relevant decision of the Thirteenth Conference of Heads of State or Government of Non-Aligned Countries, held in Kuala Lumpur from 20 to 25 February 2003, as well as the relevant recommendations of the Organization of the Islamic Conference,

Taking note further of the unilateral declarations made by all the nuclear-weapon States on their policies of non-use or non-threat of use of nuclear weapons against the non-nuclear-weapon States,

Noting the support expressed in the Conference on Disarmament and in the General Assembly for the elaboration of an international convention to assure non-nuclear-weapon States against the use or threat of use of nuclear weapons, as well as the difficulties pointed out in evolving a common approach acceptable to all,

Taking note of Security Council resolution 984(1995) of 11 April 1995 and the views expressed on it,

Recalling its relevant resolutions adopted in previous years, in particular resolutions 45/54 of 4 December 1990, 46/32 of 6 December 1991, 47/50 of 9 December

1992, 48/73 of 16 December 1993, 49/73 of 15 December 1994, 50/68 of 12 December 1995, 51/43 of 10 December 1996, 52/36 of 9 December 1997, 53/75 of 4 December 1998, 54/52 of 1 December 1999, 55/31 of 20 November 2000, 56/22 of 29 November 2001, 57/56 of 22 November 2002 and 58/35 of 8 December 2003,

1. Reaffirms the urgent need to reach an early agreement on effective international arrangements to assure non-nuclear-weapon States against the use or threat of use of nuclear weapons;

2. Notes with satisfaction that in the Conference on Disarmament there is no objection, in principle, to the idea of an international convention to assure non-nuclear-weapon States against the use or threat of use of nuclear weapons, although the difficulties with regard to evolving a common approach acceptable to all have also been pointed out;

3. Appeals to all States, especially the nuclear-weapon States, to work actively towards an early agreement on a common approach and, in particular, on a common formula that could be included in an international instrument of a legally binding character;

4. Recommends that further intensive efforts be devoted to the search for such a common approach or common formula and that the various alternative approaches, including, in particular, those considered in the Conference on Disarmament, be explored further in order to overcome the difficulties;

5. Also recommends that the Conference on Disarmament actively continue intensive negotiations with a view to reaching early agreement and concluding effective international arrangements to assure the non-nuclear-weapon States against the use or threat of use of nuclear weapons, taking into account the widespread support for the conclusion of an international convention and giving consideration to any other proposals designed to secure the same objective;

6. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its sixtieth session the item entitled "Conclusion of effective international arrangements to assure non-nuclear-weapon States against the use or threat of use of nuclear weapons".

Disarmament Commission

In April [A/59/42], the Disarmament Commission, while deliberating on possible agenda items on nuclear disarmament, considered conference room papers on related topics and the Chairman's proposal on guidelines for nuclear disarmament and non-proliferation of nuclear weapons in all its aspects, including, in particular, strategies for dealing with illicit activities that undermined nuclear disarmament and non-proliferation objectives. However, the Commission was not able to reach agreement on its substantive agenda for 2004 and decided to continue deliberations in 2005 on its agenda (see p. 523).

START and other bilateral agreements and unilateral measures

In an 11 February statement [CD/1728] to the National Defense University (Washington, D.C.), transmitted to the Conference on Disarmament, United States President George W. Bush announced seven proposals for strengthening global efforts to combat the spread of WMDs, including direct action against proliferation networks and measures to strengthen the regime set up by the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons (NPT) (see p. 542) and related activities of the International Atomic Energy Agency (IAEA) (see p. 1481). On 13 February [CD/1732], the Foreign Minister of Malaysia expressed disappointment that Mr. Bush, in that statement, appeared to question the commitment of his Government on nuclear non-proliferation.

The Bilateral Implementation Commission, established by the 2002 Strategic Offensive Reductions Treaty (SORT), or the Moscow Treaty [YUN 2002, p. 493] between the United States and the Russian Federation, which entered into force in 2003 [YUN 2003, p. 535], held its first meeting (Geneva, 8-9 April) to discuss both sides' efforts to implement the Treaty. Senior officials from the two countries held additional meetings during the year for that purpose. Both sides announced that they would continue to consider, within the context of their implementation of the 1991 Treaty on the Reduction and Limitation of Strategic Offensive Arms (START I) [YUN 1991, p. 34] and 1993 START II process [YUN 1993, p. 117], the possible extension of SORT beyond its current expiration date of 31 December 2012.

The United States Secretary of Energy, at a meeting with IAEA officials (Vienna, 26 May), launched the Global Threat Reduction Initiative (GTRI), designed to secure and remove high-risk nuclear and radiological materials that posed a threat to the United States and the international community. Later in the year, the United States and the Russian Federation, with IAEA support, convened a GTRI Partners Conference in Vienna to discuss the collection and security of proliferation-attractive materials and to review GTRI. The Conference recommended that IAEA member States work with the Agency to coordinate a mechanism to address opportunities for implementing related projects.

The heads of State and Government of member countries of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization (NATO), at their summit meeting (Istanbul, Turkey, 28-29 June), welcomed seven new members (Bulgaria, Estonia, Latvia, Lithuania, Romania, Slovakia and Slovenia) and issued the Istanbul Declaration on "our security in a new era", by which they renewed commitment to addressing threats facing NATO, including terrorism (see p. 576) and the proliferation of WMDs (see p. 543). In the Istanbul Summit Communiqué, they reaffirmed that NATO policy of support for arms control, disarmament and non-proliferation would continue to play a major role in the achievement of security objectives.

Report of Secretary-General. In response to General Assembly resolutions 58/46 [YUN 2003, p. 552], 58/47 [ibid., p. 536], 58/51 [ibid., p. 538] and 58/56 [ibid., p. 541], the Secretary-General, in a September report [A/59/136], assessed progress made in addressing nuclear disarmament issues. He observed that nuclear disarmament and non-proliferation remained priority issues for international peace and security and that the international community faced continuing dangers from the acquisition, possession and possible use of WMDs, including nuclear weapons. Reducing such threats required efforts at the unilateral, bilateral and multilateral levels. Unilateral measures to reduce existing nuclear arsenals by nuclear-weapon States were essential, and some progress had been made in that regard. Steady implementation of the Moscow Treaty by the Russian Federation and the United States would help strengthen international peace and security. At the same time, it was important for the international community to strengthen arms control and disarmament agreements by achieving universal adherence to them and implementing them. Reflecting on the status of NPT, which remained the cornerstone of the non-proliferation regime, (see p. 542) and on related challenges, particularly regarding preparations for the upcoming Review Conference of States parties in 2005, the Secretary-General noted that a successful outcome at the Conference would be critical in maintaining the validity of the regime. He advocated measures to achieve the entry into force of the Comprehensive Nuclear-Test-Ban Treaty (see p. 538), revitalize the Conference on Disarmament (see p. 523) and explore ways to implement the recommendations contained in the 2001 report of the Advisory Board on Disarmament Matters [YUN 2001, p. 474] on measures that might reduce the risk of nuclear war. Remarking that the threat of proliferation of WMDs, their means of delivery and related materials had increased the challenges to multilateral disarmament efforts, the Secretary-General declared the Organization's commitment to assist Member States in tackling the problems.

Communications. The Ministers attending the Fourteenth Ministerial Conference of the Non-Aligned Movement (Durban, South Africa, 17-19 August) expressed concern at strategic defence doctrines that set out rationales for the use of nuclear weapons, and at the slow pace of progress with nuclear disarmament, which they described as their highest priority. They underscored the need for nuclear-weapon States to implement the commitments made at the 2000 NPT Review Conference [YUN 2000, p. 487], so as to accomplish the total elimination of nuclear weapons.

The Foreign Ministers of States members of the Organization of the Islamic Conference (New York, 28 September) [A/59/425-S/2004/808] reaffirmed the need to promote multilateral diplomacy in resolving disarmament and non-proliferation concerns and underlined that multilateral institutions established under UN auspices were the sole legitimate bodies to ensure compliance with relevant international agreements.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 3 December [meeting 66], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the First Committee [A/59/459 & Corr.1], adopted five resolutions and one decision related to nuclear disarmament. The Assembly adopted resolution 59/75 by recorded vote (151-6-24) [agenda item 65 (i)].

Accelerating the implementation of nuclear disarmament commitments

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 58/51 of 8 December 2003, and mindful of the upcoming 2005 Review Conference of the Parties to the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons,

Expressing its grave concern at the danger to humanity posed by the possibility that nuclear weapons could be used and at the lack of implementation of binding obligations and agreed steps towards nuclear disarmament, and reaffirming that nuclear disarmament and nuclear non-proliferation are mutually reinforcing processes requiring urgent irreversible progress on both fronts,

Recalling the unequivocal undertaking by the nuclear-weapon States to accomplish the total elimination of their nuclear arsenals, leading to nuclear disarmament, in accordance with commitments made under article VI of the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons, and noting that the ultimate objective of the disarmament process is general and complete disarmament under strict and effective international control,

1. Calls upon all States to comply fully with commitments made regarding nuclear disarmament and nuclear non-proliferation and not to act in any way that may be detrimental to nuclear disarmament and non-proliferation or that may lead to a new nuclear arms race;

2. Also calls upon all States to spare no efforts to achieve universal adherence to the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons and the early entry into force of the Comprehensive Nuclear-Test-Ban Treaty;

3. Calls upon all States parties to the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons to accelerate the implementation of the practical steps for systematic and progressive efforts to achieve nuclear disarmament that were agreed upon at the 2000 Review Conference of the Parties to the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons;

4. Calls upon the nuclear-weapon States to take further steps to reduce their non-strategic nuclear arsenals and not to develop new types of nuclear weapons, in accordance with their commitment to diminish the role of nuclear weapons in their security policies;

5. Agrees urgently to strengthen efforts towards both nuclear disarmament and nuclear non-proliferation through the resumption in the Conference on Disarmament of negotiations on a non-discriminatory, multilateral and internationally and effectively verifiable treaty banning the production of fissile material for nuclear weapons or other nuclear explosive devices, in accordance with the statement of the Special Coordinator in 1995 and the mandate contained therein, taking into account both nuclear disarmament and nuclear non-proliferation objectives, as well as the completion and implementation of arrangements by all nuclear-weapon States to place fissile material no longer required for military purposes under international verification;

6. Calls for the establishment of an appropriate subsidiary body in the Conference on Disarmament to deal with nuclear disarmament;

7. Underlines the imperative of the principles of irreversibility and transparency for all nuclear disarmament measures and the need to develop further adequate and efficient verification capabilities;

8. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its sixtieth session an item entitled "Towards a nuclear-weapon-free world: accelerating the implementation of nuclear disarmament commitments", and to review the implementation of the present resolution at that session.

RECORDED VOTE ON RESOLUTION 59/75:

In favour: Afghanistan, Algeria, Andorra, Angola, Antigua and Barbuda, Argentina, Armenia, Austria, Azerbaijan, Bahamas, Bahrain, Bangladesh, Barbados, Belgium, Belize, Benin, Bhutan, Bolivia, Botswana, Brazil, Brunei Darussalam, Burkina Faso, Burundi, Cambodia, Cameroon, Canada, Cape Verde, Central African Republic, Chile, China, Abstaining: Albania, Australia, Belarus, Bosnia and Herzegovina, Bulgaria, Czech Republic, Denmark, Estonia, Georgia, Greece, Hungary, Iceland, India, Italy, Poland, Portugal, Romania, Russian Federation, Serbia and Montenegro, Slovakia, Slovenia, Spain, The former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia, Uzbekistan.

The First Committee adopted paragraph 2 by a separate recorded vote of 153 to 4, with 5 abstentions. The Assembly retained the paragraph by a recorded vote of 169 to 4, with 4 abstentions.

The Assembly adopted resolution 59/76 by recorded vote (165-3-16) [agenda item 65].

A path to the total elimination of nuclear weapons

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 49/75 H of 15 December 1994, 50/70 C of 12 December 1995, 51/45 G of 10 December 1996, 52/38 K of 9 December 1997, 53/77 U of 4 December 1998, 54/54 D of 1 December 1999, 55/33 R of 20 November 2000, 56/24 N of 29 November 2001, 57/78 of 22 November 2002 and 58/59 of 8 December 2003,

Recognizing that the enhancement of international peace and security and the promotion of nuclear disarmament mutually complement and strengthen each other,

Expressing deep concern regarding the growing dangers posed by the proliferation of weapons of mass destruction, including that caused by proliferation networks,

Welcoming the decision of the Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, announced on 19 December 2003, to renounce all its weapons of mass destruction programmes,

Welcoming also the adoption of Security Council resolution 1540(2004) of 28 April 2004 as an important step for global efforts to prevent the proliferation of weapons of mass destruction,

Convinced that every effort should be made to avoid nuclear war and nuclear terrorism,

Reaffirming the crucial importance of the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons as the cornerstone of the international regime for nuclear non-proliferation and as an essential foundation for the pursuit of nuclear disarmament,

Bearing in mind that challenges to the Treaty and to the nuclear non-proliferation regime have further increased the necessity of full compliance and that the Treaty can fulfil its role only if there is confidence in compliance by all States parties,

Recognizing the progress made by the nuclear-weapon States in the reduction of their nuclear weapons unilaterally or through their negotiations, including the entry into force of the Treaty between the United States of America and the Russian Federation on Strategic Offensive Reductions, which should serve as a step for further nuclear disarmament, and the efforts for nuclear disarmament and non-proliferation by the international community,

Welcoming the ongoing efforts aimed at the reduction of nuclear-weapons-related materials deployed within the framework of international cooperation, such as the Cooperative Threat Reduction programme,

Reaffirming the conviction that further advancement in nuclear disarmament will contribute to consolidating the international regime for nuclear non-proliferation, ensuring international peace and security,

Welcoming the continuation of a moratorium on nuclear-weapon-test explosions or any other nuclear explosions since the last nuclear tests, in 1998,

Welcoming also the successful adoption of the Final Document of the 2000 Review Conference of the Parties to the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons, and stressing the importance of implementing its conclusions,

Recognizing the active discussions at the third session, held from 26 April to 7 May 2004, of the Preparatory Committee for the 2005 Review Conference of the Parties to the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons, and emphasizing the importance of a successful Review Conference in 2005, the year of the sixtieth anniversary of the atomic bombings,

Welcoming the steady increase in the number of States that have signed and/or concluded additional protocols to their International Atomic Energy Agency safeguards agreements in recent years, and sharing the hope that the Agency's safeguards system will be further strengthened through the universalization of safeguards agreements and the additional protocols,

Encouraging the Russian Federation and the United States of America to implement fully the Treaty on Strategic Offensive Reductions and to continue their intensive consultations in accordance with the Joint Declaration on the New Strategic Relationship between the two States,

Welcoming the Final Declaration of the third Conference on Facilitating the Entry into Force of the Comprehensive Nuclear-Test-Ban Treaty, convened in Vienna from 3 to 5 September 2003 in accordance with article XIV of the Treaty, and the Joint Ministerial Statement of the second meeting of Friends of the Comprehensive Nuclear-Test-Ban Treaty in September 2004,

Encouraging all States to make maximum efforts to bring about the early entry into force of the Comprehensive Nuclear-Test-Ban Treaty, progress on which would contribute to a positive outcome of the 2005 Review Conference of the Parties to the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons,

Recognizing the importance of preventing terrorists from acquiring or developing nuclear weapons or related materials, radioactive materials, equipment and technology, and underlining the role of the International Atomic Energy Agency in this regard,

Stressing the importance of education on disarmament and non-proliferation for future generations and of efforts to tackle the current non-proliferation and disarmament problems,

1. Reaffirms the importance of achieving the universality of the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons, and calls upon States not parties to the Treaty to accede to it as non-nuclear-weapon States without delay and without conditions;

2. Also reaffirms the importance for all States parties to the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons to fulfil their obligations under the Treaty;

3. Stresses the central importance of the following practical steps for the systematic and progressive efforts to implement article VI of the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons, and paragraphs 3 and 4 (c) of the decision on principles and objectives for nuclear non-proliferation and disarmament of the 1995 Review and Extension Conference of the Parties to the Treaty:

(a) The importance and urgency of signatures and ratifications, without delay and without conditions and in accordance with constitutional processes, to achieve the early entry into force of the Comprehensive Nuclear-Test-Ban Treaty as well as a moratorium on nuclear-weapon-test explosions or any other nuclear explosions pending the entry into force of that Treaty;

(b) The establishment of an ad hoc committee in the Conference on Disarmament as early as possible during its 2005 session to negotiate a non-discriminatory, multilateral and internationally and effectively verifiable treaty banning the production of fissile material for nuclear weapons or other nuclear explosive devices, in accordance with the report of the Special Coordinator of 1995 and the mandate contained therein, taking into consideration both nuclear disarmament and non-proliferation objectives, with a view to its conclusion within five years and, pending its entry into force, a moratorium on the production of fissile material for nuclear weapons;

(c) The establishment of an appropriate subsidiary body with a mandate to deal with nuclear disarmament in the Conference on Disarmament as early as possible during its 2005 session in the context of establishing a programme of work;

(d) The inclusion of the principle of irreversibility to apply to nuclear disarmament, nuclear and other related arms control and reduction measures;

(e) An unequivocal undertaking by the nuclear-weapon States, as agreed at the 2000 Review Conference of the Parties to the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons, to accomplish the total elimination of their nuclear arsenals, leading to nuclear disarmament, to which all States parties to the Treaty are committed under article VI of the Treaty;

(f) Deep reductions by the Russian Federation and the United States of America in their strategic offensive arsenals, while placing great importance on the existing multilateral treaties, with a view to maintaining and strengthening strategic stability and international security;

(g) Steps by all the nuclear-weapon States leading to nuclear disarmament in a way that promotes international stability, and based on the principle of undiminished security for all:

- (i) Further efforts by all the nuclear-weapon States to continue to reduce their nuclear arsenals unilaterally;
- (ii) Increased transparency by the nuclear-weapon States with regard to their nuclear weapons capabilities and the implementation of agreements pursuant to article VI of the Treaty and as voluntary confidence-building measures to support further progress on nuclear disarmament;
- (iii) The further reduction of non-strategic nuclear weapons, based on unilateral initiatives and as an integral part of the nuclear arms reduction and disarmament process;
- (iv) Concrete agreed measures to reduce further the operational status of nuclear weapons systems;
- (v) A diminishing role for nuclear weapons in security policies to minimize the risk that these weapons will ever be used and to facilitate the process of their total elimination;
- (vi) The engagement, as soon as appropriate, of all the nuclear-weapon States in the process leading to the total elimination of their nuclear weapons;
- (h) Reaffirmation that the ultimate objective of the efforts of States in the disarmament process is general and complete disarmament under effective international control;

4. Recognizes that the realization of a world free of nuclear weapons will require further steps, including deeper reductions in all types of nuclear weapons by all the nuclear-weapon States in the process of working towards achieving their elimination;

5. Invites the nuclear-weapon States to keep the Members of the United Nations duly informed of the progress or efforts made towards nuclear disarmament;

6. Encourages all States parties to the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons to make maximum efforts for a successful Review Conference in 2005;

7. Welcomes the ongoing efforts in the dismantlement of nuclear weapons, notes the importance of the safe and effective management of the resultant fissile materials, and calls for arrangements by all the nuclear-weapon States to place, as soon as practicable, fissile material designated by each of them as no longer required for military purposes under International Atomic Energy Agency or other relevant international verification and arrangements for the disposition of such material for peaceful purposes to ensure that such material remains permanently outside of military programmes;

8. Stresses the importance of further development of the verification capabilities, including International Atomic Energy Agency safeguards and Comprehensive Nuclear-Test-Ban Treaty verification regimes, that will be required to provide assurance of compliance with nuclear disarmament agreements for the achievement and maintenance of a nuclear-weapon-free world;

9. Calls upon all States to redouble their efforts to prevent and curb the proliferation of nuclear and other weapons of mass destruction, confirming and strengthening, if necessary, their policies not to transfer equipment, materials or technology that could contribute to the proliferation of those weapons, while ensuring that such policies are consistent with the obligations of States under the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons;

10. Also calls upon all States to maintain the highest possible standards of security, safe custody, effective control and physical protection of all materials that could contribute to the proliferation of nuclear and other weapons of mass destruction in order, inter alia, to prevent those materials from falling into the hands of terrorists;

11. Welcomes the adoption of resolution GC(48)/RES/14 on 24 September 2004 by the General Conference of the International Atomic Energy Agency, in which it is recommended that States members of the Agency continue to consider implementing the elements of the plan of action outlined in resolution GC(44)/RES/19, adopted on 22 September 2000 by the General Conference of the Agency, and in the Agency's updated plan of action of February 2004, with the aim of facilitating the entry into force of comprehensive safeguards agreements and additional protocols, and calls for the early and full implementation of that resolution;

12. Encourages all States to implement, as appropriate, the recommendations in the report of the Secretary-General on the United Nations study on disarmament and non-proliferation education, submitted to the General Assembly at its fifty-seventh session, and voluntarily to share information on efforts they have been undertaking to that end;

13. Encourages the constructive role played by civil society in promoting nuclear non-proliferation and nuclear disarmament.

RECORDED VOTE ON RESOLUTION 59/76:

The Assembly adopted resolution 59/77 by recorded vote (117-43-21) [agenda item 65].

Nuclear disarmament

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 49/75 E of 15 December 1994 on a step-by-step reduction of the nuclear threat, and its resolutions 50/70 P of 12 December 1995, 51/45 O of 10 December 1996, 52/38 L of 9 December 1997, 53/77 X of 4 December 1998, 54/54 P of 1 December 1999, 55/33 T of 20 November 2000, 56/24 R of 29 November 2001, 57/79 of 22 November 2002 and 58/56 of 8 December 2003 on nuclear disarmament,

Reaffirming the commitment of the international community to the goal of the total elimination of nuclear weapons and the establishment of a nuclear-weapon-free world,

Bearing in mind that the Convention on the Prohibition of the Development, Production and Stockpiling of Bacteriological (Biological) and Toxin Weapons and on Their Destruction of 1972 and the Convention on the Prohibition of the Development, Production, Stockpiling and Use of Chemical Weapons and on Their Destruction of 1993 have already established legal regimes on the complete prohibition of biological and chemical weapons, respectively, and determined to achieve a nuclear weapons convention on the prohibition of the development, testing, production, stockpiling, loan, transfer, use and threat of use of nuclear weapons and on their destruction, and to conclude such an international convention at an early date,

Recognizing that there now exist conditions for the establishment of a world free of nuclear weapons, and stressing the need to take concrete practical steps towards achieving this goal,

Bearing in mind paragraph 50 of the Final Document of the Tenth Special Session of the General Assembly, the first special session devoted to disarmament, calling for the urgent negotiation of agreements for the cessation of the qualitative improvement and development of nuclear-weapon systems, and for a comprehensive and phased programme with agreed time frames, wherever feasible, for the progressive and balanced reduction of nuclear weapons and their means of delivery, leading to their ultimate and complete elimination at the earliest possible time,

Reaffirming the conviction of the States parties to the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons that the Treaty is a cornerstone of nuclear non-proliferation and nuclear disarmament and the importance of the decision on strengthening the review process for the Treaty, the decision on principles and objectives for nuclear non-proliferation and disarmament, the decision on the extension of the Treaty and the resolution on the Middle East, adopted by the 1995 Review and Extension Conference of the Parties to the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons,

Stressing the importance of the thirteen steps for the systematic and progressive efforts to achieve the objective of nuclear disarmament leading to the total elimination of nuclear weapons, as agreed to by the States parties in the Final Document of the 2000 Review Conference of the Parties to the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons,

Reiterating the highest priority accorded to nuclear disarmament in the Final Document of the Tenth Special Session of the General Assembly and by the international community,

Reiterating its call for an early entry into force of the Comprehensive Nuclear-Test-Ban Treaty,

Stressing the importance of the forthcoming 2005 Review Conference of the Parties to the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons and the need for a positive and substantive outcome of the Conference in a manner that will preserve the integrity of the three pillars of the Treaty regime, that is, nuclear disarmament, nuclear non-proliferation and peaceful uses of nuclear energy,

Noting with appreciation the entry into force of the Treaty on the Reduction and Limitation of Strategic Offensive Arms (START I), to which Belarus, Kazakhstan, the Russian Federation, Ukraine and the United States of America are States parties,

Noting with appreciation also the entry into force of the Treaty between the United States of America and the Russian Federation on Strategic Offensive Reductions ("the Moscow Treaty") as a significant step towards reducing their deployed strategic nuclear weapons, while calling for further irreversible deep cuts in their nuclear arsenals,

Noting with appreciation further the unilateral measures taken by the nuclear-weapon States for nuclear arms limitation, and encouraging them to take further such measures,

Recognizing the complementarity of bilateral, plurilateral and multilateral negotiations on nuclear disarmament, and that bilateral negotiations can never replace multilateral negotiations in this respect,

Noting the support expressed in the Conference on Disarmament and in the General Assembly for the elaboration of an international convention to assure non-nuclear-weapon States against the use or threat of use of nuclear weapons, and the multilateral efforts in the Conference on Disarmament to reach agreement on such an international convention at an early date,

Recalling the advisory opinion of the International Court of Justice on the Legality of the Threat or Use of Nuclear Weapons, issued on 8 July 1996, and welcoming the unanimous reaffirmation by all Judges of the Court that there exists an obligation for all States to pursue in good faith and bring to a conclusion negotiations leading to nuclear disarmament in all its aspects under strict and effective international control,

Mindful of paragraph 74 and other relevant recommendations in the Final Document of the Thirteenth Conference of Heads of State or Government of Non-Aligned Countries, held at Kuala Lumpur from 20 to 25 February 2003, calling upon the Conference on Disarmament to establish, as soon as possible and as the highest priority, an ad hoc committee on nuclear disarmament and to commence negotiations on a phased programme for the complete elimination of nuclear weapons with a specified framework of time,

Recalling paragraph 61 of the Final Document of the Fourteenth Ministerial Conference of the Movement of Non-Aligned Countries, held in Durban, South Africa, from 17 to 19 August 2004,

Reaffirming the specific mandate conferred by the General Assembly in its decision 52/492 of 8 September 1998 upon the Disarmament Commission to discuss the subject of nuclear disarmament as one of its main substantive agenda items,

Recalling the United Nations Millennium Declaration, in which Heads of State and Government resolve to strive for the elimination of weapons of mass destruction, in particular nuclear weapons, and to keep all options open for achieving this aim, including the possibility of convening an international conference to identify ways of eliminating nuclear dangers,

Reaffirming that, in accordance with the Charter of the United Nations, States should refrain from the use or the threat of use of nuclear weapons in settling their disputes in international relations,

Seized of the danger of the use of weapons of mass destruction, particularly nuclear weapons, in terrorist acts and the urgent need for concerted international efforts to control and overcome it,

1. Recognizes that, in view of recent political developments, the time is now opportune for all the nuclear-weapon States to take effective disarmament measures with a view to achieving the elimination of these weapons;

2. Reaffirms that nuclear disarmament and nuclear non-proliferation are substantively interrelated and mutually reinforcing, that the two processes must go hand in hand and that there is a genuine need for a systematic and progressive process of nuclear disarmament;

3. Welcomes and encourages the efforts to establish new nuclear-weapon-free zones in different parts of the world on the basis of agreements or arrangements freely arrived at among the States of the regions concerned, which is an effective measure for limiting the further spread of nuclear weapons geographically and contributes to the cause of nuclear disarmament;

4. Recognizes that there is a genuine need to diminish the role of nuclear weapons in strategic doctrines and security policies to minimize the risk that these weapons will ever be used and to facilitate the process of their total elimination;

5. Urges the nuclear-weapon States to stop immediately the qualitative improvement, development, production and stockpiling of nuclear warheads and their delivery systems;

6. Also urges the nuclear-weapon States, as an interim measure, to de-alert and deactivate immediately their nuclear weapons and to take other concrete measures to reduce further the operational status of their nuclear-weapon systems;

7. Reiterates its call upon the nuclear-weapon States to undertake the step-by-step reduction of the nuclear threat and to carry out effective nuclear disarmament measures with a view to achieving the total elimination of these weapons;

8. Calls upon the nuclear-weapon States, pending the achievement of the total elimination of nuclear weapons, to agree on an internationally and legally binding instrument on a joint undertaking not to be the first to use nuclear weapons, and calls upon all States to conclude an internationally and legally binding instrument on security assurances of non-use and non-threat of use of nuclear weapons against non-nuclear-weapon States;

9. Urges the nuclear-weapon States to commence plurilateral negotiations among themselves at an appropriate stage on further deep reductions of nuclear weapons as an effective measure of nuclear disarmament;

10. Underlines the importance of applying the principle of irreversibility to the process of nuclear disarmament, nuclear and other related arms control and reduction measures;

11. Underscores the importance of the unequivocal undertaking by the nuclear-weapon States, in the Final Document of the Review Conference of the Parties to the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons, held in New York from 24 April to 19 May 2000, to accomplish the total elimination of their nuclear arsenals leading to nuclear disarmament, to which all States parties are committed under article VI of the Treaty, and the reaffirmation by the States parties that the total elimination of nuclear weapons is the only absolute guarantee against the use or threat of use of nuclear weapons;

12. Calls for the full and effective implementation of the thirteen steps for nuclear disarmament contained in the Final Document of the 2000 Review Conference of the Parties to the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons;

13. Urges the nuclear-weapon States to carry out further reductions of non-strategic nuclear weapons, based on unilateral initiatives and as an integral part of the nuclear arms reduction and disarmament process;

14. Calls for the immediate commencement of negotiations in the Conference on Disarmament on a non-discriminatory, multilateral and internationally and effectively verifiable treaty banning the production of fissile material for nuclear weapons or other nuclear explosive devices on the basis of the report of the Special Coordinator and the mandate contained therein;

15. Urges the Conference on Disarmament to agree on a programme of work which includes the immediate commencement of negotiations on such a treaty with a view to their conclusion within five years;

16. Calls for the conclusion of an international legal instrument or instruments on adequate security assurances to non-nuclear-weapon States;

17. Also calls for the early entry into force and strict observance of the Comprehensive Nuclear-Test-Ban Treaty;

18. Expresses its regret that the Conference on Disarmament was unable to establish an ad hoc committee on nuclear disarmament at its 2004 session, as called for in General Assembly resolution 58/56;

19. Reiterates its call upon the Conference on Disarmament to establish, on a priority basis, an ad hoc committee to deal with nuclear disarmament early in 2005 and to commence negotiations on a phased programme of nuclear disarmament leading to the eventual total elimination of nuclear weapons;

20. Calls for the convening of an international conference on nuclear disarmament in all its aspects at an early date to identify and deal with concrete measures of nuclear disarmament;

21. Requests the Secretary-General to submit to the General Assembly at its sixtieth session a report on the implementation of the present resolution;

22. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its sixtieth session the item entitled "Nuclear disarmament".

RECORDED VOTE ON RESOLUTION 59/77:

In favour: Afghanistan, Algeria, Angola, Antigua and Barbuda, Bahamas, Bahrain, Bangladesh, Barbados, Belize, Benin, Bhutan, Bolivia, Botswana, Brazil, Brunei Darussalam, Burkina Faso, Burundi, Cambodia, Cameroon, Cape Verde, Central African Republic, Chile, China, Colombia, Comoros, Congo, Costa Rica, Côte d'Ivoire, Cuba, Democratic People's Republic of Korea, Djibouti, Dominica, Dominican Republic, Ecuador, Egypt, El Salvador, Equatorial Guinea, Eritrea, Ethiopia, Fiji, Gabon, Gambia, Ghana, Grenada, Guatemala, Guinea-Bissau, Guyana, Honduras, Indonesia, Iran, Iraq, Jamaica, Jordan, Kenya, Kuwait, Lao People's Democratic Republic, Lebanon, Lesotho, Liberia, Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Madagascar, Malawi, Malaysia, Maldives, Mali, Marshall Islands, Mexico, Mongolia, Morocco, Mozambique, Myanmar, Namibia,

The Assembly adopted resolution 59/79 by recorded vote (116-46-18) [agenda item 65].

Reducing nuclear danger

The General Assembly,

Bearing in mind that the use of nuclear weapons poses the most serious threat to mankind and to the survival of civilization,

Reaffirming that any use or threat of use of nuclear weapons would constitute a violation of the Charter of the United Nations,

Convinced that the proliferation of nuclear weapons in all its aspects would seriously enhance the danger of nuclear war,

Convinced also that nuclear disarmament and the complete elimination of nuclear weapons are essential to remove the danger of nuclear war,

Considering that, until nuclear weapons cease to exist, it is imperative on the part of the nuclear-weapon States to adopt measures that assure non-nuclear-weapon States against the use or threat of use of nuclear weapons,

Considering also that the hair-trigger alert of nuclear weapons carries unacceptable risks of unintentional or accidental use of nuclear weapons, which would have catastrophic consequences for all mankind,

Emphasizing the imperative need to adopt measures to avoid accidental, unauthorized or unexplained incidents arising from computer anomaly or other technical malfunctions,

Conscious that limited steps relating to detargeting have been taken by the nuclear-weapon States and that further practical, realistic and mutually reinforcing steps are necessary to contribute to the improvement in the international climate for negotiations leading to the elimination of nuclear weapons,

Mindful that reduction of tensions brought about by a change in nuclear doctrines would positively impact on international peace and security and improve the conditions for the further reduction and the elimination of nuclear weapons,

Reiterating the highest priority accorded to nuclear disarmament in the Final Document of the Tenth Special Session of the General Assembly and by the international community,

Recalling that in the advisory opinion of the International Court of Justice on the Legality of the Threat or Use of Nuclear Weapons it is stated that there exists an obligation for all States to pursue in good faith and bring to a conclusion negotiations leading to nuclear disarmament in all its aspects under strict and effective international control,

Recalling also the call in the United Nations Millennium Declaration to seek to eliminate the dangers posed by weapons of mass destruction and the resolve to strive for the elimination of weapons of mass destruction, particularly nuclear weapons, including the possibility of convening an international conference to identify ways of eliminating nuclear dangers,

1. Calls for a review of nuclear doctrines and, in this context, immediate and urgent steps to reduce the risks of unintentional and accidental use of nuclear weapons;

2. Requests the five nuclear-weapon States to take measures towards the implementation of paragraph 1 above;

3. Calls upon Member States to take the necessary measures to prevent the proliferation of nuclear weapons in all its aspects and to promote nuclear disarmament, with the objective of eliminating nuclear weapons;

4. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General submitted pursuant to paragraph 5 of General Assembly resolution 58/47 of 8 December 2003;

5. Requests the Secretary-General to intensify efforts and support initiatives that would contribute towards the full implementation of the seven recommendations identified in the report of the Advisory Board on Disarmament Matters that would significantly reduce the risk of nuclear war, and also to continue to encourage Member States to endeavour to create conditions that would allow the emergence of an international consensus to hold an international conference as proposed in the United Nations Millennium Declaration, to identify ways of eliminating nuclear dangers, and to report thereon to the General Assembly at its sixtieth session;

6. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its sixtieth session the item entitled "Reducing nuclear danger".

RECORDED VOTE ON RESOLUTION 59/94:

In favour: Afghanistan, Algeria, Angola, Antigua and Barbuda, Bahamas, Bahrain, Bangladesh, Barbados, Belize, Benin, Bhutan, Bolivia, Botswana, Brazil, Brunei Darussalam, Burkina Faso, Burundi, Cambodia, Cameroon, Cape Verde, Central African Republic, Chile, Colombia, Comoros, Congo, Costa Rica, Côte d'Ivoire, Cuba, Democratic People's Republic of Korea, Djibouti, Dominica, Dominican Republic, Egypt, El Salvador, Equatorial Guinea, Eritrea, Ethiopia, Fiji, Gabon, Gambia, Ghana, Grenada, Guatemala, Guinea-Bissau, Guyana, Honduras, India, Indonesia, Iran, Iraq, Jamaica, Jordan, Kenya, Kuwait, Lao People's Democratic Republic, Lebanon, Lesotho, Liberia, Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Madagascar, Malawi, Malaysia, Maldives, Mali, Marshall Islands, Mauritius, Mexico, Mongolia, Morocco, Mozambique, Myanmar, Namibia, Nauru, Nepal, Nicaragua, Niger, Nigeria, Oman, Pakistan, Panama, Peru, Philippines, Qatar, Rwanda, Saint Lucia, Saint Vincent and the Grenadines, Samoa, Sao Tome and Principe, Saudi Arabia, Senegal, Sierra Leone, Singapore, Somalia, South Africa, Sri Lanka, Sudan, Suriname, Swaziland, Syrian Arab Republic, Thailand, Timor-Leste, Togo, Tonga, Trinidad and Tobago, Tunisia, Tuvalu, Uganda, United Arab Emirates, United Republic of Tanzania, Uruguay, Vanuatu, Venezuela, Viet Nam, Yemen, Zambia, Zimbabwe.

The Assembly adopted resolution 59/94 without vote [agenda item 65].

Bilateral strategic nuclear arms reductions and the new strategic framework

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 57/68 of 22 November 2002,

Noting with satisfaction the new strategic relationship between the United States of America and the Russian Federation, built on the principles of mutual security, trust, openness, cooperation and predictability, as affirmed in their Joint Declaration of 24 May 2002,

Noting the increasing cooperation between the United States of America and the Russian Federation in addressing significant challenges to international security, as illustrated by their joint efforts regarding Security Council resolution 1540(2004) of 28 April 2004,

Welcoming the determination of the two countries to work together, and with other nations and international organizations, to meet their respective obligations under article VI of the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons which was opened for signature on 1 July 1968,

Mindful of the obligation of all parties to the Treaty to abide by all of their commitments under the Treaty,

1. Welcomes the entry into force of the Treaty on Strategic Offensive Reductions ("the Moscow Treaty") on 1 June 2003, under which the United States of America and the Russian Federation are committed to reducing and limiting their strategic nuclear warheads so that by 31 December 2012, the aggregate number of such warheads does not exceed 1,700 to 2,200 for each party;

2. Supports the continued commitment of the United States of America and the Russian Federation to cooperative efforts in strategic offensive reductions, inter alia, through meetings of the Bilateral Implementation Commission for the Moscow Treaty, as well as increased strategic stability through discussions in the working groups established under the Consultative Group for Strategic Security;

3. Recognizes that the Moscow Treaty is an important result of the new bilateral strategic relationship, which will help in establishing more favourable conditions for actively promoting security and cooperation, and enhancing international stability;

4. Acknowledges the contribution that the United States of America and the Russian Federation have made to nuclear disarmament by reducing their deployed strategic warheads by about half since the end of the cold war;

5. Recognizes the importance of the Treaty on the Reduction and Limitation of Strategic Offensive Arms (START), which is still in force, and of its provisions, which will lay the foundation for ensuring confidence, transparency and predictability in further strategic offensive reductions;

6. Also recognizes that, since the end of the cold war, the United States of America has reduced the number of its START-accountable deployed strategic warheads from over 10,000 to less than 6,000, and has also eliminated 1,032 launchers for intercontinental ballistic missiles and submarine-launched ballistic missiles, 350 heavy bombers and 28 ballistic missile submarines, and removed 4 additional ballistic missile submarines from strategic service;

7. Further recognizes that, in the same time period, the Russian Federation has reduced the number of its START-accountable deployed strategic warheads to less than 5,000, and has also eliminated 1,250 launchers for intercontinental ballistic missiles and submarine-launched ballistic missiles, 43 ballistic missile submarines and 65 heavy bombers;

8. Recognizes the importance of the 1991 and 1992 initiatives put forward by the Presidents of the United States of America and the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics/Russian Federation, which represent a major step forward in the meeting by the Russian Federation and the United States of America of their obligations under article VI of the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons;

9. Notes with approval that, since the end of the cold war, the United States of America and the Russian Federation have halted the production of fissile material for nuclear weapons and have committed themselves to eliminating excess fissile material resulting from the dismantlement of weapons no longer needed for national security;

10. Welcomes, in this context, the implementation of the 1993 Agreement concerning the Disposition of Highly Enriched Uranium Extracted from Nuclear Weapons, signed by the Governments of the Russian Federation and the United States of America, under which more than 216 metric tons of excess Russian highly enriched uranium have been down-blended for use as power reactor fuel, and the fact that, under the Agreement, 30 metric tons of highly enriched uranium from dismantled nuclear weapons will be down-blended per year until a total of 500 metric tons has been processed;

11. Also welcomes the independent action taken by the United States of America to dispose of 174 metric tons of excess highly enriched uranium from its nuclear weapons programme, of which 50 metric tons have already been down-blended for use as reactor fuel;

12. Supports continued efforts by the United States of America and the Russian Federation to implement the 1997 Agreement concerning Cooperation regarding Plutonium Production Reactors and the 2000 Agreement concerning the Management and Disposition of Plutonium Designated as No Longer Required for Defence Purposes and Related Cooperation;

13. Invites the United States of America and the Russian Federation to keep other States Members of the United Nations duly informed of their nuclear reduction activities;

14. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its sixtieth session the item entitled "Bilateral strategic nuclear arms reductions and the new strategic framework".

The Assembly adopted decision 59/514 by recorded vote (138-5-38) [agenda item 65 (aa)].

United Nations conference to identify ways of eliminating nuclear dangers in the context of nuclear disarmament

At its 66th plenary meeting, on 3 December 2004, the General Assembly, by a recorded vote of 138 to 5, with 38 abstentions, and on the recommendation of the First Committee, decided to include in the provisional agenda of its sixtieth session the item entitled

"United Nations conference to identify ways of eliminating nuclear dangers in the context of nuclear disarmament".

RECORDED VOTE ON DECISION 59/514:

In favour: Afghanistan, Algeria, Angola, Antigua and Barbuda, Argentina, Armenia, Bahamas, Bahrain, Bangladesh, Barbados, Belarus, Belize, Benin, Bhutan, Bolivia, Botswana, Brazil, Brunei Darussalam, Burkina Faso, Burundi, Cambodia, Cameroon, Cape Verde, Central African Republic, Chile, China, Colombia, Comoros, Congo, Costa Rica, Côte d'Ivoire, Cuba, Cyprus, Democratic People's Republic of Korea, Djibouti, Dominica, Dominican Republic, Ecuador, Egypt, El Salvador, Equatorial Guinea, Eritrea, Ethiopia, Fiji, Gabon, Gambia, Ghana, Grenada, Guatemala, Guinea-Bissau, Guyana, Haiti, Honduras, India, Indonesia, Iran, Iraq, Ireland, Jamaica, Japan, Jordan, Kazakhstan, Kenya, Kuwait, Kyrgyzstan, Lao People's Democratic Republic, Lebanon, Lesotho, Liberia, Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Madagascar, Malawi, Malaysia, Maldives, Mali, Malta, Marshall Islands, Mauritius, Mexico, Mongolia, Morocco, Mozambique, Myanmar, Namibia, Nauru, Nepal, Netherlands, New Zealand, Nicaragua, Niger, Nigeria, Oman, Pakistan, Panama, Papua New Guinea, Paraguay, Peru, Philippines, Qatar, Rwanda, Saint Lucia, Saint Vincent and the Grenadines, Samoa, Sao Tome and Principe, Saudi Arabia, Senegal, Seychelles, Sierra Leone, Singapore, Solomon Islands, Somalia, South Africa, Sri Lanka, Sudan, Suriname, Swaziland, Sweden, Syrian Arab Republic, Tajikistan, Thailand, Timor-Leste, Togo, Tonga, Trinidad and Tobago, Tunisia, Tuvalu, Uganda, Ukraine, United Arab Emirates, United Republic of Tanzania, Uruguay, Uzbekistan, Vanuatu, Venezuela, Viet Nam, Yemen, Zambia, Zimbabwe.

Against: France, Palau, Poland, United Kingdom, United States.

Abstaining: Albania, Andorra, Australia, Austria, Azerbaijan, Belgium, Bosnia and Herzegovina, Bulgaria, Canada, Croatia, Denmark, Estonia, Finland, Georgia, Germany, Greece, Hungary, Iceland, Israel, Italy, Latvia, Liechtenstein, Lithuania, Luxembourg, Norway, Portugal, Republic of Korea, Republic of Moldova, Romania, Russian Federation, San Marino, Serbia and Montenegro, Slovakia, Slovenia, Spain, Switzerland, The former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia, Turkey.

ABM Treaty and other missile issues

In 2004, missile defence issues, particularly the proliferation of long-range ballistic missiles and United States efforts to build a missile defence system [YUN 1999, p. 469], remained an area of international concern. During the year, the United States installed six interceptor missiles at its missile defence complex at Fort Greely, Alaska, designed to destroy an incoming warhead before it reached its target anywhere in the country, thus completing the first phase of its planned missile defence system. Despite the system's failure during a test on 15 December, United States officials reaffirmed the Government's intention to pursue development of the system. By year's end, 18 countries were either actively involved in the project or were exploring missile defence cooperation with the United States. The North Atlantic Treaty Organization (NATO) was also involved in the project.

On 2 December, the Russian Federation decided to expand its role in a joint project with India to build a sophisticated cruise missile, and it assured India of steady supplies of military spare parts.

On 28 December, India and Pakistan issued a joint statement indicating that they were working towards an early finalization of an agreement for mutual pre-launch notification before testing ballistic missiles.

The subscribing States to the non-legally binding international code of conduct against ballistic missile proliferation, also known as the Hague Code of Conduct, adopted in 2002 [YUN 2002, p. 504], held their third regular meeting (New York, 17-18 November), at which they discussed, among other things, further implementation of confidence-building measures, future outreach activities and methods of communication. The meeting agreed that annual declarations were to cover the period from 1 January to 31 December, with 31 March of the following year as the deadline for submission. The fourth regular meeting was scheduled to take place in Vienna in June 2005, when confidence-building measures and universalization of the Code would be discussed. At year's end, subscribing States numbered 117.

Report of Secretary-General. In response to General Assembly resolution 58/37 [YUN 2003, p. 546], the Secretary-General, in a July report with a later addendum [A/59/137 & Add.1], presented the replies of seven Member States to his request for their views on the issue of missiles in all its aspects.

Expert panel. In August [A/59/278 & Corr.1], the Secretary-General reported on the activities of the Panel of Governmental Experts he had established to explore the issue of missiles in all its aspects pursuant to Assembly resolution 58/37. The Panel met (New York, 23-27 February, 17-21 May and 19-23 July) and held an in-depth discussion, taking into account Member States' views (see above) and papers put forward by its members. However, given the complexity of the issues at hand, the Panel was not able to reach consensus on the preparation of a final report. The first panel of governmental experts completed its work in 2002 [YUN 2002, p. 504].

Communications. In April, the Libyan Arab Jamahiriya announced plans to reduce the range of its Scud B missiles below their current range of 185 miles, and to reduce the missiles' maximum payload from 2,200 pounds to less than 1,100 pounds. It agreed to allow monitors from the United States and the United Kingdom to observe the conversions and ensure that they were irreversible.

On 9 August [CD/1742], the Russian Federation pointed out a potential threat to its deterrent forces, following a 6 August agreement between Denmark and the United States on the modernization of the United States radar station in Thule, Greenland. Despite United States assurances that its anti-missile defence would not be directed against Russia, the location of the radar station suggested otherwise and Russia reserved the right to maintain its security at the appropriate level.

Ministers of the Non-Aligned Movement, at their Fourteenth Ministerial Conference (Durban, South Africa, 17-19 August), reaffirmed the need for a multilaterally negotiated, universal, comprehensive, transparent and non-discriminatory approach towards the issue of missiles in all its aspects.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 3 December [meeting 66], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the First Committee [A/59/459 & Corr.1], adopted resolution 59/67 by recorded vote (119-4-60) [agenda item 65 (g)].

Missiles

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 54/54 F of 1 December 1999, 55/33 A of 20 November 2000, 56/24 B of 29 November 2001, 57/71 of 22 November 2002 and 58/37 of 8 December 2003,

Reaffirming the role of the United Nations in the field of arms regulation and disarmament and the commitment of Member States to take concrete steps to strengthen that role,

Realizing the need to promote regional and international peace and security in a world free from the scourge of war and the burden of armaments,

Convinced of the need for a comprehensive approach towards missiles, in a balanced and non-discriminatory manner, as a contribution to international peace and security,

Bearing in mind that the security concerns of Member States at the international and regional levels should be taken into consideration in addressing the issue of missiles,

Underlining the complexities involved in considering the issue of missiles in the conventional context,

Expressing its support for the international efforts against the development and proliferation of all weapons of mass destruction,

Considering that the Secretary-General, in response to resolution 58/37, established in 2004 a Panel of Governmental Experts, which had a comprehensive, in-depth exchange of views on the issue of missiles in all its aspects,

Taking note of the report of the Secretary-General on the issue of missiles in all its aspects, in which he stated that given the complexity of the issues at hand, no consensus had been reached on the preparation of a final report by the Panel,

1. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General containing the replies from Member States on the report on the issue of missiles in all its aspects, submitted pursuant to resolution 58/37;

2. Requests the Secretary-General to prepare a report, with the support of qualified consultants and the United Nations Institute for Disarmament Research, as appropriate, taking into account the views expressed by Member States, to contribute to the United Nations endeavour to address the issue of missiles in all its aspects, by identifying areas where consensus can be reached, and to submit it to the General Assembly at its sixty-first session;

3. Also requests the Secretary-General, with the assistance of a Panel of Governmental Experts, to be es-established in 2007 on the basis of equitable geographical distribution, to further explore further ways and means to address within the United Nations the issue of missiles in all its aspects, including identifying areas where consensus can be reached, and to submit a report for consideration by the General Assembly at its sixty-third session;

4. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its sixtieth session the item entitled "Missiles".

RECORDED VOTE ON RESOLUTION 59/67:

In favour: Afghanistan, Algeria, Angola, Antigua and Barbuda, Bahamas, Bahrain, Bangladesh, Barbados, Belarus, Belize, Benin, Bhutan, Botswana, Brazil, Brunei Darussalam, Burkina Faso, Burundi, Cambodia, Cameroon, Cape Verde, Central African Republic, Chile, China, Colombia, Comoros, Congo, Costa Rica, Côte d'Ivoire, Cuba, Democratic People's Republic of Korea, Djibouti, Dominica, Dominican Republic, Ecuador, Egypt, El Salvador, Equatorial Guinea, Eritrea, Ethiopia, Gabon, Gambia, Ghana, Grenada, Guatemala, Guinea-Bissau, Guyana, India, Indonesia, Iran, Jamaica, Jordan, Kazakhstan, Kenya, Kuwait, Kyrgyzstan, Lao People's Democratic Republic, Lebanon, Lesotho, Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Madagascar, Malawi, Malaysia, Maldives, Mali, Marshall Islands, Mauritius, Mexico, Mongolia, Morocco, Mozambique, Myanmar, Namibia, Nauru, Nepal, New Zealand, Nicaragua, Niger, Nigeria, Oman, Pakistan, Panama, Papua New Guinea, Paraguay, Peru, Philippines, Qatar, Russian Federation, Rwanda, Saint Lucia, Sao Tome and Principe, Saudi Arabia, Senegal, Seychelles, Sierra Leone, Solomon Islands, Somalia, South Africa, Sri Lanka, Sudan, Suriname, Swaziland, Syrian Arab Republic, Tajikistan, Thailand, Timor-Leste, Togo, Tonga, Trinidad and Tobago, Tunisia, Turkmenistan, Uganda, Ukraine, United Arab Emirates, United Republic of Tanzania, Venezuela, Viet Nam, Yemen, Zambia, Zimbabwe.

Also on 3 December [meeting 66], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the First Committee [A/59/459 & Corr.1], adopted resolution 59/91 by recorded vote (161-2-15) [agenda item 65].

The Hague Code of Conduct against Ballistic Missile Proliferation

The General Assembly,

Concerned about the increasing regional and global security challenges caused, inter alia, by the ongoing proliferation of ballistic missiles capable of delivering weapons of mass destruction,

Bearing in mind the purposes and principles of the United Nations and its role and responsibility in the field of international peace and security in accordance with the Charter of the United Nations,

Emphasizing the significance of regional and international efforts to prevent and curb comprehensively the proliferation of ballistic missile systems capable of delivering weapons of mass destruction, as a contribution to international peace and security,

Convinced that the Hague Code of Conduct against Ballistic Missile Proliferation will contribute to enhancing transparency and confidence among States,

Confirming its commitment to the Declaration on International Cooperation in the Exploration and Use of Outer Space for the Benefit and in the Interest of All States, Taking into Particular Account the Needs of Developing Countries, as contained in the annex to its resolution 51/122 of 13 December 1996,

Recognizing that States should not be excluded from utilizing the benefits of space for peaceful purposes, but that in reaping such benefits and in conducting related cooperation they must not contribute to the proliferation of ballistic missiles capable of carrying weapons of mass destruction,

Mindful of the need to combat the proliferation of weapons of mass destruction and their means of delivery,

1. Welcomes the adoption of the Hague Code of Conduct against Ballistic Missile Proliferation on 25 November 2002 at The Hague as a practical step against the proliferation of weapons of mass destruction and their means of delivery;

2. Notes with satisfaction that one hundred and seventeen States already have subscribed to the Code of Conduct;

3. Invites all States that have not yet subscribed to the Code of Conduct to do so;

4. Encourages the exploration of further ways and means to deal effectively with the problem of the proliferation of ballistic missiles capable of delivering weapons of mass destruction;

5. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its sixtieth session an item entitled "The Hague Code of Conduct against Ballistic Missile Proliferation".

Comprehensive Nuclear-Test-Ban Treaty

Status

As at 31 December, 174 States had signed the 1996 Comprehensive Nuclear-Test-Ban Treaty (CTBT) adopted by General Assembly resolution 50/245 [YUN 1996, p. 454], and 120 had ratified it. During the year, instruments of ratification were deposited by Bahrain, Belize, the Democratic Republic of the Congo, the Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Liechtenstein, Rwanda, Serbia and Montenegro, Seychelles, the Sudan, Togo, Tunisia and the United Republic of Tanzania. In accordance with article XIV, CTBT would enter into force 180 days after the 44 States possessing nuclear reactors, listed in annex 2 of the Treaty, had deposited their instruments of ratification. By year's end, 33 of those States had ratified the Treaty.

On 1 November [A/59/550], Australia, Finland, Japan and the Netherlands transmitted a Joint Ministerial Statement (New York, 23 September), signed by a total of 66 Foreign Ministers, reaffirming their support for CTBT, which was intended to rid the world of nuclear-weapons test explosions and to contribute to the progressive reduction of nuclear weapons and the prevention of nuclear proliferation. They called on States that had not done so to ratify CTBT, in particular those whose ratification was needed for its entry into force. States were urged to maintain a moratorium on nuclear-weapon test explosions or any other nuclear explosions.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 3 December [meeting 66], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the First Committee [A/59/465], adopted resolution 59/109 by recorded vote (177-2-4) [agenda item 71].

Comprehensive Nuclear-Test-Ban Treaty

The General Assembly,

Reiterating that the cessation of nuclear-weapon test explosions or any other nuclear explosions constitutes an effective nuclear disarmament and non-proliferation measure,

Recalling that the Comprehensive Nuclear-Test-Ban Treaty, adopted by its resolution 50/245 of 10 September 1996, was opened for signature on 24 September 1996,

Stressing that a universal and effectively verifiable Comprehensive Nuclear-Test-Ban Treaty constitutes a fundamental instrument in the field of nuclear disarmament and non-proliferation,

Encouraged by the signing of the Treaty by one hundred and seventy-three States, including forty-one of the forty-four needed for its entry into force, and welcoming the ratification of one hundred and nineteen States, including thirty-three of the forty-four needed for its entry into force, among which there are three nuclear-weapon States,

Recalling its resolution 58/71 of 8 December 2003,

Welcoming the Joint Ministerial Statement reaffirming support for the Comprehensive Nuclear-Test-Ban Treaty, signed in New York on 23 September 2004,

1. Stresses the importance and urgency of signature and ratification, without delay and without conditions, to achieve the earliest entry into force of the Comprehensive Nuclear-Test-Ban Treaty;

2. Welcomes the contributions by the States signatories to the work of the Preparatory Commission for the Comprehensive Nuclear-Test-Ban Treaty Organization, in particular its efforts to ensure that the Treaty's verification regime will be capable of meeting the verification requirements of the Treaty upon its entry into force, in accordance with article IV of the Treaty;

3. Underlines the need to maintain momentum towards completion of the verification regime;

4. Calls upon all States to maintain their moratoriums on nuclear-weapons test explosions or any other nuclear explosions and to refrain from acts that would defeat the object and purpose of the Treaty;

5. Calls upon all States that have not yet signed the Treaty to sign and ratify it as soon as possible;

6. Calls upon all States that have signed but not yet ratified the Treaty, in particular those whose ratification is needed for its entry into force, to accelerate their ratification processes with a view to their earliest successful conclusion;

7. Urges all States to remain seized of the issue at the highest political level;

8. Requests the Secretary-General, in consultation with the Preparatory Commission for the Comprehensive Nuclear-Test-Ban Treaty Organization, to prepare a report on the efforts of States that have ratified the Treaty towards its universalization and possibilities for providing assistance on ratification procedures to States that so request it, and to submit such a report to the General Assembly at its sixtieth session;

9. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its sixtieth session the item entitled "Comprehensive Nuclear-Test-Ban Treaty".

RECORDED VOTE ON RESOLUTION 59/109:

In favour: Afghanistan, Albania, Algeria, Andorra, Angola, Antigua and Barbuda, Argentina, Armenia, Australia, Austria, Azerbaijan, Bahamas, Bahrain, Bangladesh, Barbados, Belarus, Belgium, Belize, Benin, Bhutan, Bolivia, Bosnia and Herzegovina, Botswana, Brazil, Brunei Darussalam, Bulgaria, Burkina Faso, Burundi, Cambodia, Cameroon, Canada, Cape Verde, Central African Republic, Chile, China, Comoros, Congo, Costa Rica, Côte d'Ivoire, Croatia, Cuba, Cyprus, Czech Republic, Denmark, Djibouti, Dominica, Dominican Republic, Ecuador, Egypt, El Salvador, Equatorial Guinea, Eritrea, Estonia, Ethiopia, Fiji, Finland, France, Gabon, Gambia, Georgia, Germany, Ghana, Greece, Grenada, Guatemala, Guinea-Bissau, Guyana, Haiti, Honduras, Hungary, Iceland, Indonesia, Iran, Iraq, Ireland, Israel, Italy, Jamaica, Japan, Jordan, Kazakhstan, Kenya, Kuwait, Kyrgyzstan, Lao People's Democratic Republic, Latvia, Lesotho, Liberia, Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Liechtenstein, Lithuania, Luxembourg, Madagascar, Malawi, Malaysia, Maldives, Mali, Malta, Marshall Islands, Mexico, Micronesia, Monaco, Mongolia, Morocco, Mozambique, Myanmar, Namibia, Nauru, Nepal, Netherlands, New Zealand, Nicaragua, Niger, Nigeria, Norway, Oman, Pakistan, Panama, Papua New Guinea, Paraguay, Peru, Philippines, Poland, Portugal, Qatar, Republic of Korea, Republic of Moldova, Romania, Russian Federation, Rwanda, Saint Lucia, Saint Vincent and the Grenadines, Samoa, San Marino, Sao Tome and Principe, Saudi Arabia, Senegal, Serbia and Montenegro, Seychelles, Sierra Leone, Singapore, Slovakia, Slovenia, Solomon Islands, Somalia, South Africa, Spain, Sri Lanka, Sudan, Suriname, Swaziland, Sweden, Switzerland, Tajikistan, Thailand, The former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia, Timor-Leste, Togo, Tonga, Trinidad and Tobago, Tunisia, Turkey, Turkmenistan, Tuvalu, Uganda, Ukraine, United Arab Emirates, United Kingdom, United Republic of Tanzania, Uruguay, Uzbekistan, Vanuatu, Venezuela, Viet Nam, Yemen, Zambia, Zimbabwe.

Against: Palau, United States.

Abstaining: Colombia, India, Mauritius, Syrian Arab Republic.

Preparatory Commission for the CTBT Organization

The Preparatory Commission for the Comprehensive Nuclear-Test-Ban Treaty Organization (CTBTO), established in 1996 [YUN 1996, p. 452], continued to develop the Treaty's verification regime. Significant progress was made in establishing the International Monitoring System (IMS) [YUN 1999, p. 472], the global network of 337 facilities in 90 countries designed to track and detect nuclear explosions prohibited by CTBT via a global satellite communication system, and to transmit relevant information to the International Data Centre (IDC) in Vienna. At year's end, 204 stations (64 per cent) were either certified as meeting the technical requirements of the Preparatory Commission or were installed and substantially met specifications. Over 55 per cent of all the stations were operational and the entire IMS network was scheduled to be completed within three to four years. The current phase of testing and evaluation of the system had good results and it was providing global coverage by transmitting raw data to IDC, which was connected to 82 national data centres through a satellite-based global communications infrastructure. Other activities of the Commission included training courses for IMS station operators and international workshops to enhance participation in the Commission's work.

The Preparatory Commission held its twenty-second (22-24 June) [CTBT/PC-22/1] and twenty-third (15-19 November) [CTBT/PC-23/1] sessions, both in Vienna, to consider the reports of its working groups and to discuss organizational, budgetary and other matters. The Commission adopted its 2005 programme budget in the combined amounts of $51,047,250 and 42,540,900 euros, of which approximately $30 million and 12 million euros were earmarked for the IMS network.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 22 October [meeting 40], the General Assembly adopted resolution 59/6 [draft A/59/L.7 & Add.1] by recorded vote (104-1) [agenda item 56 (r)].

Cooperation between the United Nations and the Preparatory Commission for the Comprehensive Nuclear-Test-Ban Treaty Organization

The General Assembly,

Taking note of the note by the Secretary-General on cooperation between the United Nations and the Preparatory Commission for the Comprehensive Nuclear-Test-Ban Treaty Organization,

Taking note also of the report of the Executive Secretary of the Preparatory Commission for the Comprehensive Nuclear-Test-Ban Treaty Organization,

Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its sixty-first session the sub-item entitled "Cooperation between the United Nations and the Preparatory Commission for the Comprehensive Nuclear-Test-Ban Treaty Organization".

RECORDED VOTE ON RESOLUTION 59/6:

In favour: Afghanistan, Argentina, Armenia, Austria, Azerbaijan, Bahrain, Bangladesh, Bolivia, Bosnia and Herzegovina, Botswana, Brazil, Brunei Darussalam, Bulgaria, Central African Republic, Chile, China, Colombia, Congo, Croatia, Cuba, Cyprus, Czech Republic, Denmark, El Salvador, Equatorial Guinea, Estonia, Ethiopia, Finland, Georgia, Greece, Guatemala, Guinea, Guinea-Bissau, Guyana, Hungary, Iceland, India, Indonesia, Iran, Ireland, Israel, Italy, Japan, Kazakhstan, Kenya, Kuwait, Lao People's Democratic Republic, Latvia, Lebanon, Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Liechtenstein, Lithuania, Madagascar, Malaysia, Marshall Islands, Mauritius, Mexico, Monaco, Mongolia, Morocco, Mozambique, Myanmar, Namibia, Netherlands, New Zealand, Nicaragua, Nigeria, Norway, Oman, Peru, Philippines, Poland, Portugal, Republic of Korea, Republic of Moldova, Romania, Russian Federation, San Marino, Saudi Arabia, Senegal, Serbia and Montenegro, Slovakia, Slovenia, Spain, Sri Lanka, Sudan, Suriname, Swaziland, Sweden, Syrian Arab Republic, Thailand, Timor-Leste, Trinidad and Tobago, Tunisia, Turkey, Ukraine, United Arab Emirates, United Kingdom, United Republic of Tanzania, Uruguay, Venezuela, Viet Nam, Yemen, Zambia.

Against: United States.

Prohibition of the use of nuclear weapons

In 2004, as in previous years, the Conference on Disarmament was not able to undertake negotiations on a convention on the prohibition of the use of nuclear weapons, as called for in General Assembly resolution 58/64 [YUN 2003, p. 551].

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 3 December [meeting 66], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the First Committee [A/59/460], adopted resolution 59/102 by recorded vote (125-48-12) [agenda item 66].

Convention on the Prohibition of the Use of Nuclear Weapons

The General Assembly,

Convinced that the use of nuclear weapons poses the most serious threat to the survival of mankind,

*Bearing in mind the advisory opinion of the International Court of Justice of 8 July 1996 on the Legality of the Threat or Use of Nuclear Weapons,*

Convinced that a multilateral, universal and binding agreement prohibiting the use or threat of use of nuclear weapons would contribute to the elimination of the nuclear threat and to the climate for negotiations leading to the ultimate elimination of nuclear weapons, thereby strengthening international peace and security,

Conscious that some steps taken by the Russian Federation and the United States of America towards a reduction of their nuclear weapons and the improvement in the international climate can contribute towards the goal of the complete elimination of nuclear weapons,

Recalling that, in paragraph 58 of the Final Document of the Tenth Special Session of the General Assembly, it is stated that all States should actively participate in efforts to bring about conditions in international relations among States in which a code of peaceful conduct of nations in international affairs could be agreed upon and that would preclude the use or threat of use of nuclear weapons,

Reaffirming that any use of nuclear weapons would be a violation of the Charter of the United Nations and a crime against humanity, as declared in its resolutions 1653(XVI) of 24 November 1961, 33/71 B of 14 December 1978, 34/83 G of 11 December 1979, 35/152 D of 12 December 1980 and 36/92 I of 9 December 1981,

Determined to achieve an international convention prohibiting the development, production, stockpiling and use of nuclear weapons, leading to their ultimate destruction,

Stressing that an international convention on the prohibition of the use of nuclear weapons would be an important step in a phased programme towards the complete elimination of nuclear weapons, with a specified framework of time,

Noting with regret that the Conference on Disarmament, during its 2004 session, was unable to undertake negotiations on this subject as called for in General Assembly resolution 58/64 of 8 December 2003,

1. Reiterates its request to the Conference on Disarmament to commence negotiations in order to reach agreement on an international convention prohibiting the use or threat of use of nuclear weapons under any circumstances;

2. Requests the Conference on Disarmament to report to the General Assembly on the results of those negotiations.

RECORDED VOTE ON RESOLUTION 59/102:

In favour: Afghanistan, Algeria, Angola, Antigua and Barbuda, Bahamas, Bahrain, Bangladesh, Barbados, Belarus, Belize, Benin, Bhutan, Bolivia, Botswana, Brazil, Brunei Darussalam, Burkina Faso, Burundi, Cambodia, Cameroon, Cape Verde, Central African Republic, Chile, China, Colombia, Comoros, Congo, Costa Rica, Côte d'Ivoire, Cuba, Democratic People's Republic of Korea, Djibouti, Dominica, Dominican Republic, Ecuador, Egypt, El Salvador, Equatorial Guinea, Eritrea, Ethiopia, Fiji, Gabon, Gambia, Ghana, Grenada, Guatemala, Guinea-Bissau, Guyana, Haiti, Honduras, India, Indonesia, Iran, Iraq, Jamaica, Jordan, Kenya, Kuwait, Lao People's Democratic Republic, Lebanon, Lesotho, Liberia, Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Madagascar, Malawi, Malaysia, Maldives, Mali, Marshall Islands, Mauritius, Mexico, Mongolia, Morocco, Mozambique, Myanmar, Namibia, Nauru, Nepal, Nicaragua, Niger, Nigeria, Oman, Pakistan, Panama, Papua New Guinea, Paraguay, Peru, Philippines, Qatar, Rwanda, Saint Lucia, Saint Vincent and the Grenadines, Samoa, Sao Tome and Principe, Saudi Arabia, Senegal, Seychelles, Sierra Leone, Singapore, Solomon Islands, Somalia, South Africa, Sri Lanka, Sudan, Suriname, Swaziland, Syrian Arab Republic, Thailand, Timor-Leste, Togo, Tonga, Trinidad and Tobago, Tunisia, Turkmenistan, Tuvalu, Uganda, United Arab Emirates, United Republic of Tanzania, Uruguay, Vanuatu, Venezuela, Viet Nam, Yemen, Zambia, Zimbabwe.

Against: Albania, Andorra, Australia, Austria, Belgium, Bosnia and Herzegovina, Bulgaria, Canada, Croatia, Cyprus, Czech Republic, Denmark, Estonia, Finland, France, Georgia, Germany, Greece, Hungary, Iceland, Ireland, Israel, Italy, Latvia, Liechtenstein, Lithuania, Luxembourg, Malta, Micronesia, Monaco, Netherlands, New Zealand, Norway, Palau, Poland, Portugal, Romania, San Marino, Serbia and Montenegro, Slovakia, Slovenia, Spain, Sweden, Switzerland, The former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia, Turkey, United Kingdom, United States.

Abstaining: Argentina, Armenia, Azerbaijan, Japan, Kazakhstan, Kyrgyzstan, Republic of Korea, Republic of Moldova, Russian Federation, Tajikistan, Ukraine, Uzbekistan.

Advisory opinion of the International Court of Justice

Pursuant to General Assembly resolution 58/46 [YUN 2003, p. 552] on the advisory opinion of the International Court of Justice that the threat or use of nuclear weapons was contrary to the UN Charter [YUN 1996, p. 461], the Secretary-General presented information received from six States (China, Cuba, Guatemala, Mexico, Syrian Arab Republic, Venezuela) on measures they had taken to implement the resolution and towards nuclear disarmament [A/59/136].

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 3 December [meeting 66], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the First Committee [A/59/459 & Corr.1], adopted resolution 59/83 by recorded vote (132-29-24) [agenda item 65].

Follow-up to the advisory opinion of the International Court of Justice on the Legality of the Threat or Use of Nuclear Weapons

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 49/75 K of 15 December 1994, 51/45 M of 10 December 1996, 52/38 O of 9 December 1997, 53/77 W of 4 December 1998, 54/54 Q of 1 December 1999, 55/33 X of 20 November 2000, 56/24 S of 29 November 2001, 57/85 of 22 November 2002 and 58/46 of 8 December 2003,

Convinced that the continuing existence of nuclear weapons poses a threat to all humanity and that their use would have catastrophic consequences for all life on Earth, and recognizing that the only defence against a nuclear catastrophe is the total elimination of nuclear weapons and the certainty that they will never be produced again,

Reaffirming the commitment of the international community to the goal of the total elimination of nuclear weapons and the creation of a nuclear-weapon-free world,

Mindful of the solemn obligations of States parties, undertaken in article VI of the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons, particularly to pursue negotiations in good faith on effective measures relating to cessation of the nuclear-arms race at an early date and to nuclear disarmament,

Recalling the principles and objectives for nuclear non-proliferation and disarmament adopted at the 1995 Review and Extension Conference of the Parties to the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons,

Emphasizing the unequivocal undertaking by the nuclear-weapon States to accomplish the total elimination of their nuclear arsenals leading to nuclear disarmament, adopted at the 2000 Review Conference of the Parties to the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons,

Recalling the adoption of the Comprehensive Nuclear-Test-Ban Treaty in its resolution 50/245 of 10 September 1996, and expressing its satisfaction at the increasing number of States that have signed and ratified the Treaty,

Recognizing with satisfaction that the Antarctic Treaty and the treaties of Tlatelolco, Rarotonga, Bangkok and Pelindaba are gradually freeing the entire southern hemisphere and adjacent areas covered by those treaties from nuclear weapons,

Stressing the importance of strengthening all existing nuclear-related disarmament and arms control and reduction measures,

Recognizing the need for a multilaterally negotiated and legally binding instrument to assure non-nuclear-weapon States against the threat or use of nuclear weapons,

Reaffirming the central role of the Conference on Disarmament as the single multilateral disarmament negotiating forum, and regretting the lack of progress in disarmament negotiations, particularly nuclear disarmament, in the Conference during its 2004 session,

Emphasizing the need for the Conference on Disarmament to commence negotiations on a phased programme for the complete elimination of nuclear weapons with a specified framework of time,

Expressing its deep concern at the lack of progress in the implementation of the thirteen steps to implement article VI of the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons agreed to at the 2000 Review Conference of the Parties to the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons,

Desiring to achieve the objective of a legally binding prohibition of the development, production, testing, deployment, stockpiling, threat or use of nuclear weapons and their destruction under effective international control,

Recalling the advisory opinion of the International Court of Justice on the Legality of the Threat or Use of Nuclear Weapons, issued on 8 July 1996,

Taking note of the relevant portions of the report of the Secretary-General relating to the implementation of resolution 58/46,

1. Underlines once again the unanimous conclusion of the International Court of Justice that there exists an obligation to pursue in good faith and bring to a conclusion negotiations leading to nuclear disarmament in all its aspects under strict and effective international control;

2. Calls once again upon all States immediately to fulfil that obligation by commencing multilateral negotiations leading to an early conclusion of a nuclear weapons convention prohibiting the development, production, testing, deployment, stockpiling, transfer, threat or use of nuclear weapons and providing for their elimination;

3. Requests all States to inform the Secretary-General of the efforts and measures they have taken on the implementation of the present resolution and nuclear disarmament, and requests the Secretary-General to apprise the General Assembly of that information at its sixtieth session;

4. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its sixtieth session the item entitled "Follow-up to the advisory opinion of the International Court of Justice on the Legality of the Threat or Use of Nuclear Weapons".

RECORDED VOTE ON RESOLUTION 59/83:

In favour: Afghanistan, Algeria, Angola, Antigua and Barbuda, Argentina, Bahamas, Bahrain, Bangladesh, Barbados, Belize, Benin, Bhutan, Bolivia, Botswana, Brazil, Brunei Darussalam, Burkina Faso, Burundi, Cambodia, Cameroon, Cape Verde, Central African Republic, Chile, China, Colombia, Comoros, Congo, Costa Rica, Côte d'Ivoire, Cuba, Democratic People's Republic of Korea, Djibouti, Dominica, Dominican Republic, Ecuador, Egypt, El Salvador, Equatorial Guinea, Eritrea, Ethiopia, Fiji, Gabon, Gambia, Ghana, Grenada, Guatemala, Guinea-Bissau, Guyana, Haiti, Honduras, India, Indonesia, Iran, Iraq, Ireland, Jamaica, Jordan, Kenya, Kuwait, Kyrgyzstan, Lao People's Democratic Republic, Lebanon, Lesotho, Liberia, Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Madagascar, Malawi, Malaysia, Maldives, Mali, Malta, Marshall Islands, Mauritius, Mexico, Mongolia, Morocco, Mozambique, Myanmar, Namibia, Nauru, Nepal, New Zealand, Nicaragua, Niger, Nigeria, Oman, Pakistan, Panama, Papua New Guinea, Paraguay, Peru, Philippines, Qatar, Rwanda, Saint Lucia, Saint Vincent and the Grenadines, Samoa, San Marino, Sao Tome and Principe, Saudi Arabia, Senegal, Seychelles, Sierra Leone, Singapore, Solomon Islands, Somalia, South Africa, Sri Lanka, Sudan, Suriname, Swaziland, Sweden, Syrian Arab Republic, Thailand, Timor-Leste, Togo, Tonga, Trinidad and Tobago, Tunisia, Turkmenistan, Tuvalu, Uganda, Ukraine, United Arab Emirates, United Republic of Tanzania, Uruguay, Vanuatu, Venezuela, Viet Nam, Yemen, Zambia, Zimbabwe.

Abstaining: Andorra, Armenia, Australia, Austria, Azerbaijan, Belarus, Bosnia and Herzegovina, Canada, Croatia, Cyprus, Estonia, Finland, Georgia, Japan, Kazakhstan, Liechtenstein, Micronesia, Republic of Korea, Republic of Moldova, Serbia and Montenegro, Switzerland, Tajikistan, The former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia, Uzbekistan.

Radioactive waste

In response to a 2003 request of the IAEA General Conference [YUN 2003, p. 553], the Agency's Board of Governors approved in March the Action Plan for the Safety of Transport of Radioactive Material, which provided direction for the Agency's transport safety activities over the next five years. The Action Plan was based on the outcome of the 2003 International Conference on the Safety of Transport of Radioactive Material [ibid.]. In September [GC(48)/RES/10], the General Conference, welcoming the Board's approval of the Action Plan, encouraged member States to cooperate in implementing it. Recognizing the potential for damage in the event of an accident while transporting radioactive materials by sea, the General Conference urged member States that did not have national regulatory documents governing the transport of those materials to adopt them.

Non-proliferation issues

Non-Proliferation Treaty

Status

In 2004, the number of States party to the 1968 Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons (NPT), adopted by the General Assembly in resolution 2373(XXII) [YUN 1968, p. 17], remained at 189. NPT entered into force on 5 March 1970.

2005 review conference

Quinquennial review conferences, as called for under article VIII, paragraph 3, of the Treaty, were held in 1975 [YUN 1975, p. 27], 1980 [YUN 1980, p. 51], 1985 [YUN 1985, p. 56], 1990 [YUN 1990, p. 50], 1995 [YUN 1995, p. 189] and 2000 [YUN 2000, p. 487].

In accordance with the decision of the NPT parties in 2002 [YUN 2002, p. 507], the Preparatory Committee for the 2005 Review Conference held its third session (New York, 26 April–7 May) [NPT/CONF.2005/1], at which it considered the implementation of the Treaty's provisions relating to the non-proliferation of nuclear weapons, disarmament and international peace and security; safeguards and nuclear-weapon-free zones; and the right of States parties to research, produce and use nuclear energy for peaceful purposes. The Committee also considered its decision on principles and objectives for nuclear non-proliferation and disarmament, and its resolution on the Middle East, both adopted at the 1995

Review Conference, as well as related aspects of the Final Document of the 2000 Review Conference, and the safety and security of peaceful nuclear programmes. On 7 May, the Committee adopted its final report, reaffirming that the 2005 Review Conference of the NPT parties would be held in New York from 2 to 27 May 2005. The Committee considered questions relating to the organization and work of the Conference, but was not able to reach agreement on its provisional agenda and decided to defer consideration of the final outcome document to the Conference.

Documents considered by the Committee included reports by 27 States on implementation of NPT and of the 1995 decision [NPT/CONF.2005/PC.III/1, 5, 7, 9, 10, 12, 13, 14, 16, 18, 20, 22, 23, 24, 25, 28, 29, 31, 33, 34, 36, 37, 38, 39, 41, 44, 45]; reports by 12 States on steps or measures taken to promote the establishment of the Middle East as a zone free of nuclear weapons, particularly within the context of the 1995 resolution [NPT/CONF.2005/PC.III/2, 3, 6, 8, 15, 19, 21, 26, 32, 35, 40, 47, 48]; a report by CTBTO updating the report of its Preparatory Commission [NPT/CONF.2005/PC.III/4]; recommendations submitted by the New Agenda Coalition [NPT/CONF.2005/PC.III/11] and by Iran [NPT/CONF.2005/PC.III/42]; the Havana Declaration relating to the Treaty for the Prohibition of Nuclear Weapons in Latin America and the Caribbean (Treaty of Tlatelolco) (see p. 552), submitted by Cuba [NPT/CONF.2005/PC.III/17]; a report on NPT by New Zealand [NPT/CONF.2005/PC.III/27]; a position paper on the final outcome of the session by the Non-Aligned States and other States parties of NPT [NPT/CONF.2005/PC.III/43]; a document on the contemporary crisis of compliance submitted by the United States [NPT/CONF.2005/PC.III/46]; and numerous working papers.

Communication. The Ministers of the Non-Aligned Movement, at their Fourteenth Ministerial Conference (Durban, 17-19 August), called for firm commitment by all States parties to the implementation of NPT. Reaffirming the right of developing countries to use nuclear energy for peaceful purposes, the Ministers expressed concern that undue restrictions on exports to developing countries of material, equipment and technology for peaceful purposes persisted.

Non-proliferation of weapons of mass destruction

The High-level Panel on Threats, Challenges and Change, a group of eminent persons established by the Secretary-General to assess threats to international peace and security and to recommend ways of strengthening the collective security capacity of the United Nations (see p. 54), in its December report [A/59/565 & Corr.1], described the threat posed by the proliferation of nuclear, radiological, chemical and biological weapons and made recommendations for stopping it. The Panel determined that the threat posed by nuclear proliferation arose from countries, even NPT signatories, covertly and illegally developing full-scale weapons programmes or acquiring the materials and expertise needed for weapons programmes. The Panel remarked on the erosion and possible collapse of the NPT regime. Chemical and biological materials also posed a growing threat, as they were capable of inflicting mass casualties and were relatively easy to acquire and weaponize.

Among its proposals to restart disarmament, the Panel suggested that the nuclear-weapon States honour their NPT commitments and reaffirm commitments not to use nuclear weapons against non-nuclear-weapon States. The United States and the Russian Federation, other nuclear-weapon States and States not party to NPT should adopt practical measures to reduce the risk of accidental nuclear war, including a schedule for de-alerting their strategic nuclear weapons. The Security Council should pledge to take collective action in response to a nuclear attack or the threat of such attack on a non-nuclear-weapon State, and should act in cases of serious non-compliance with IAEA non-proliferation and safeguards standards. States not party to NPT should pledge commitment to non-proliferation and disarmament, ratify the Comprehensive Nuclear-Test-Ban Treaty and support negotiations for a fissile material cut-off treaty. Negotiations should begin on enabling IAEA to act as guarantor for the supply of fissile material to civilian nuclear users. All States were encouraged to join the voluntary Proliferation Security Initiative to interdict the illicit trade in components for nuclear programmes. The Panel called for efforts in the Middle East and South Asia to launch nuclear disarmament talks that could lead to the establishment of nuclear-weapon-free zones similar to those established in other parts of the world. It proposed a scheduled destruction of all chemical weapons stockpiles by 2012. Urging the resumption of negotiations by the States parties to the Convention on the Prohibition of the Development, Production and Stockpiling of Bacteriological (Biological) and Toxin Weapons and on Their Destruction on a verification protocol, the Panel also called on those States to negotiate a new bio-security protocol to classify dangerous biological agents and establish binding international standards for their export.

Establishment of Security Council Committee

The Security Council, in resolution 1540 (2004) (see below), affirming that the proliferation of nuclear, chemical and biological weapons and their means of delivery constituted a threat to international peace and security, established a Committee consisting of all Council members to monitor Member States' efforts to combat the problem.

SECURITY COUNCIL ACTION

On 28 April [meeting 4956], the Security Council unanimously adopted resolution 1540(2004). The draft [S/2004/326] was prepared in consultations among Council members.

The Security Council,

Affirming that proliferation of nuclear, chemical and biological weapons, as well as their means of delivery¹, constitutes a threat to international peace and security,

Reaffirming, in this context, the statement by its President adopted at the Council's meeting at the level of heads of State and Government on 31 January 1992, including the need for all Member States to fulfil their obligations in relation to arms control and disarmament and to prevent proliferation in all its aspects of all weapons of mass destruction,

Recalling that the statement underlined the need for all Member States to resolve peacefully, in accordance with the Charter of the United Nations, any problems in that context threatening or disrupting the maintenance of regional and global stability,

Affirming its resolve to take appropriate and effective action against any threat to international peace and security caused by the proliferation of nuclear, chemical and biological weapons and their means of delivery, in conformity with its primary responsibilities, as provided for in the Charter,

Affirming also its support for the multilateral treaties whose aim is to eliminate or prevent the proliferation of nuclear, chemical or biological weapons and the importance for all States parties to those treaties to implement them fully in order to promote international stability,

Welcoming efforts in this context by multilateral arrangements which contribute to non-proliferation,

Affirming that prevention of the proliferation of nuclear, chemical and biological weapons should not hamper international cooperation in materials, equipment and technology for peaceful purposes, while goals of peaceful utilization should not be used as a cover for proliferation,

Gravely concerned by the threat of terrorism and the risk that non-State actors¹ such as those identified in the United Nations list established and maintained by the Committee established under Security Council resolution 1267(1999) of 15 October 1999 and those to whom resolution 1373(2001) of 28 September 2001 applies, may acquire, develop, traffic in or use nuclear, chemical and biological weapons and their means of delivery,

Gravely concerned also by the threat of illicit trafficking in nuclear, chemical, or biological weapons and their means of delivery, and related materials,¹ which adds a new dimension to the issue of proliferation of such weapons and also poses a threat to international peace and security,

Recognizing the need to enhance coordination of efforts on national, subregional, regional and international levels in order to strengthen a global response to this serious challenge and threat to international security,

Recognizing also that most States have undertaken binding legal obligations under treaties to which they are parties, or have made other commitments aimed at preventing the proliferation of nuclear, chemical or biological weapons, and have taken effective measures to account for, secure and physically protect sensitive materials, such as those required by the Convention on the Physical Protection of Nuclear Materials and those recommended by the Code of Conduct on the Safety and Security of Radioactive Sources of the International Atomic Energy Agency,

Recognizing further the urgent need for all States to take additional effective measures to prevent the proliferation of nuclear, chemical or biological weapons and their means of delivery,

Encouraging all Member States to implement fully the disarmament treaties and agreements to which they are party,

Reaffirming the need to combat by all means, in accordance with the Charter, threats to international peace and security caused by terrorist acts,

Determined to facilitate henceforth an effective response to global threats in the area of non-proliferation,

Acting under Chapter VII of the Charter,

1. Decides that all States shall refrain from providing any form of support to non-State actors that attempt to develop, acquire, manufacture, possess, transport, transfer or use nuclear, chemical or biological weapons and their means of delivery;

2. Decides also that all States, in accordance with their national procedures, shall adopt and enforce appropriate effective laws which prohibit any non-State actor to manufacture, acquire, possess, develop, transport, transfer or use nuclear, chemical or biological weapons and their means of delivery, in particular for terrorist purposes, as well as attempts to engage in any of the foregoing activities, participate in them as an accomplice, assist or finance them;

3. Decides further that all States shall take and enforce effective measures to establish domestic controls to prevent the proliferation of nuclear, chemical, or biological weapons and their means of delivery, including by establishing appropriate controls over related materials, and to this end shall:

(a) Develop and maintain appropriate effective measures to account for and secure such items in production, use, storage or transport;

(b) Develop and maintain appropriate effective physical protection measures;

(c) Develop and maintain appropriate effective border controls and law enforcement efforts to detect, deter, prevent and combat, including through international cooperation when necessary, the illicit trafficking and brokering in such items in accordance with their national legal authorities and legislation and consistent with international law;

(d) Establish, develop, review and maintain appropriate effective national export and trans-shipment controls over such items, including appropriate laws and regulations to control export, transit, trans-shipment and re-export, and controls on providing funds and services related to such export and trans-shipment, such as financing, and transporting, that would contribute to proliferation, as well as establishing end-user controls; and establishing and enforcing appropriate criminal or civil penalties for violations of such export control laws and regulations;

4. Decides to establish, in accordance with rule 28 of its provisional rules of procedure, for a period of no longer than two years, a Committee of the Security Council, consisting of all members of the Council, which will, calling as appropriate on other expertise, report to the Council for its examination, on the implementation of the present resolution, and to this end calls upon States to present a first report to the Committee, no later than six months from the adoption of the present resolution, on steps they have taken or intend to take to implement the present resolution;

5. Decides also that none of the obligations set forth in the present resolution shall be interpreted so as to conflict with or alter the rights and obligations of State parties to the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons, the Convention on the Prohibition of the Development, Production, Stockpiling and Use of Chemical Weapons and on Their Destruction, and the Convention on the Prohibition of the Development, Production and Stockpiling of Bacteriological (Biological) and Toxin Weapons and on Their Destruction or alter the responsibilities of the International Atomic Energy Agency or the Organization for the Prohibition of Chemical Weapons;

6. Recognizes the utility, in implementing the present resolution, of effective national control lists, and calls upon all Member States, when necessary, to pursue at the earliest opportunity the development of such lists;

7. Recognizes also that some States may require assistance in implementing the provisions of the present resolution within their territories, and invites States in a position to do so to offer assistance as appropriate, in response to specific requests, to the States lacking the legal and regulatory infrastructure, implementation experience and/or resources for fulfilling the above provisions;

8. Calls upon all States:

(a) To promote the universal adoption and full implementation and, where necessary, strengthening of multilateral treaties to which they are parties, whose aim is to prevent the proliferation of nuclear, biological or chemical weapons;

(b) To adopt national rules and regulations, where it has not yet been done, to ensure compliance with their commitments under the key multilateral non-proliferation treaties;

(c) To renew and fulfil their commitment to multilateral cooperation, in particular within the framework of the International Atomic Energy Agency, the Organization for the Prohibition of Chemical Weapons and the Convention on the Prohibition of the Development, Production and Stockpiling of Bacteriological (Biological) and Toxin Weapons and on Their Destruction, as important means of pursuing and achieving their common objectives in the area of non-proliferation and of promoting international cooperation for peaceful purposes;

(d) To develop appropriate ways to work with and inform industry and the public regarding their obligations under such laws;

9. Also calls upon all States to promote dialogue and cooperation on non-proliferation so as to address the threat posed by the proliferation of nuclear, chemical, or biological weapons and their means of delivery;

10. Further calls upon all States, as a means to further counter that threat, to take cooperative action, in accordance with their national legal authorities and legislation and consistent with international law, to prevent illicit trafficking in nuclear, chemical or biological weapons, their means of delivery, and related materials;

11. Expresses its intention to monitor closely the implementation of the present resolution and, at the appropriate level, to take further decisions which may be required to this end;

12. Decides to remain seized of the matter.

¹Definitions for the purpose of the present resolution only:

Means of delivery: missiles, rockets and other unmanned systems capable of delivering nuclear, chemical, or biological weapons, that are specially designed for such use.

Non-State actor: individual or entity, not acting under the lawful authority of any State in conducting activities which come within the scope of the present resolution.

Related materials: materials, equipment and technology covered by relevant multilateral treaties and arrangements, or included on national control lists, which could be used for the design, development, production or use of nuclear, chemical and biological weapons and their means of delivery.

Committee activities. On 8 December [S/2004/958 & Corr.1], the Chairman of the Security Council Committee established pursuant to resolution 1540(2004) (above) reported on the Committee's activities since its establishment. Efforts had focused on making the Committee fully operational in preparation for its consideration of reports from Member States, as requested by the Council. The Committee adopted guidelines for the conduct of its work, for the preparation of national reports and for hiring experts who would facilitate consideration of those reports, and established three subcommittees to review national reports. On 1 December, the Committee approved the recruitment of four experts, which enabled it to enter the substantive stage of its work and invited further nominations of experts in the necessary areas of expertise, particularly from Asia and Africa. As at 7 December, 87 States and one organization (the EU) had submitted reports. Annexed to the Committee's report were a list of those States and another of the 104 countries which had not submitted reports.

On 20 December [S/2004/985], the Secretary-General informed the Council of the four experts he intended to appoint to assist the Committee in its work.

Multilateralism in disarmament and non-proliferation

Pursuant to General Assembly resolution 58/44 [YUN 2003, p. 581], the Secretary-General, in a July report with a later addendum [A/59/128 & Add.1], presented replies received from eight Governments regarding the promotion of multilateralism in the area of disarmament and non-proliferation.

In a press release of 14 May [A/58/807-S/2004/407], Cuba expressed objections to the United States Proliferation Security Initiative (see below), a May 2003 proposal by President George W. Bush, which built on existing treaties, agreements and export controls to prevent proliferation of weapons of mass destruction (WMDs) [YUN 2003, p. 536]. Cuba stated that the Initiative weakened the disarmament and arms control efforts of the United Nations and of related international treaties, and it was not in line with principles of the UN Charter and of international law. Cuba said that Security Council resolution 1540(2004) (see p. 544) was ambiguous, as it made it possible for States to claim that actions promoted by the Initiative were legitimized by the Council. Furthermore, the establishment of the Council Committee seemed to imply the foundation of a separate non-proliferation regime that would erode or replace the current regimes established by existing international treaties, including IAEA and the Organization (OPCW) for the Prohibition of Chemical Weapons (see p. 558).

A meeting marking the first anniversary of the launching of the Initiative (Krakow, Poland, 31 May–1 June) [CD/1737], which was designed as a network for intercepting shipments of WMDs and related materials worldwide, considered ways to promote cooperation and identify the tools and assets needed to combat proliferation.

The G-8 (major industrialized countries) (Sea Island, Georgia, United States, 8–10 June), adopted an action plan on non-proliferation to reinforce the global regime and reaffirmed commitment to fulfilling their arms control, disarmament and non-proliferation obligations. They expressed support for Council resolution 1540 (2004) and recommitted themselves to the Proliferation Security Initiative and their 2002 Global Partnership Against the Spread of Weapons and Materials of Mass Destruction [YUN 2002, p. 494]. A number of other related challenges were also addressed by the G-8 leaders.

The United States and the EU, following a summit meeting (Shannon, Ireland, 26 June), issued a declaration on the non-proliferation of WMDs in which they emphasized the threat to international peace and security posed by the spread of those weapons and listed joint actions aimed at preventing, containing and reversing proliferation. They agreed on the need to tackle the problem individually and collectively, working with other partners, especially UN institutions. While expressing concern about the nuclear programmes of Iran and the Democratic People's Republic of Korea (DPRK), they applauded the resolve of the Libyan Arab Jamahiriya to abandon its pursuit of WMDs and promised to assist it to implement its non-proliferation commitments.

In a communiqué issued after a meeting in New York on 28 September [A/59/425-S/2004/808], the Foreign Ministers of member States of the Organization of the Islamic Conference noted that the scope of resolution 1540(2004) was limited to preventing the acquisition of WMDs by non-State actors. The meeting underscored that the resolution was a temporary arrangement to fill a gap in international rules. The Council could not assume responsibility for non-proliferation since the States seeking to perpetuate the monopoly of nuclear weapons also wielded veto power in the Council. The meeting called for a non-discriminatory and universally negotiated treaty on the threat of WMD proliferation by non-State actors to replace the temporary arrangements assumed by the Council under resolution 1540(2004).

During the year, an independent commission on WMDs, launched in 2003 by Sweden and tasked with developing proposals for reducing dangers posed by those weapons, received a variety of expert studies and held three international meetings. Its final report was expected to be presented to the Secretary-General in 2006.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 3 December [meeting 66], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the First Committee [A/59/459 & Corr.1], adopted resolution 59/69 by recorded vote (125-9-49) [agenda item 65 (n)].

Promotion of multilateralism in the area of disarmament and non-proliferation

The General Assembly,

Determined to foster strict respect for the purposes and principles enshrined in the Charter of the United Nations,

Recalling its resolution 56/24 T of 29 November 2001 on multilateral cooperation in the area of disarmament and non-proliferation and global efforts against terrorism and other relevant resolutions, as well as its resolutions 57/63 of 22 November 2002 and 58/44 of 8 December 2003 on promotion of multilateralism in the area of disarmament and non-proliferation,

Recalling also the purpose of the United Nations to maintain international peace and security and, to that end, to take effective collective measures for the prevention and removal of threats to the peace and for the suppression of acts of aggression or other breaches of the peace, and to bring about by peaceful means, and in conformity with the principles of justice and international law, adjustment or settlement of international disputes or situations which might lead to a breach of the peace, as enshrined in the Charter,

Recalling further the United Nations Millennium Declaration, which states, inter alia, that the responsibility for managing worldwide economic and social development, as well as threats to international peace and security, must be shared among the nations of the world and should be exercised multilaterally and that, as the most universal and most representative organization in the world, the United Nations must play the central role,

Convinced that, in the globalization era and with the information revolution, arms regulation, non-proliferation and disarmament problems are more than ever the concern of all countries in the world, which are affected in one way or another by these problems and, therefore, should have the possibility to participate in the negotiations that arise to tackle them,

Bearing in mind the existence of a broad structure of disarmament and arms regulation agreements resulting from non-discriminatory and transparent multilateral negotiations with the participation of a large number of countries, regardless of their size and power,

Aware of the need to advance further in the field of arms regulation, non-proliferation and disarmament on the basis of universal, multilateral, non-discriminatory and transparent negotiations with the goal of reaching general and complete disarmament under strict international control,

Recognizing the complementarity of bilateral, plurilateral and multilateral negotiations on disarmament,

Recognizing also that the proliferation and development of weapons of mass destruction, including nuclear weapons, are among the most immediate threats to international peace and security which need to be dealt with, with the highest priority,

Considering that the multilateral disarmament agreements provide the mechanism for States parties to consult one another and to cooperate in solving any problems which may arise in relation to the objective of, or in the application of, the provisions of the agreements and that such consultations and cooperation may also be undertaken through appropriate international procedures within the framework of the United Nations and in accordance with the Charter,

Stressing that international cooperation, the peaceful settlement of disputes, dialogue and confidence-building measures would contribute essentially to the creation of multilateral and bilateral friendly relations among peoples and nations,

Being concerned at the continuous erosion of multilateralism in the field of arms regulation, non-proliferation and disarmament, and recognizing that a resort to unilateral actions by Member States in resolving their security concerns would jeopardize international peace and security and undermine confidence in the international security system as well as the foundations of the United Nations itself,

Reaffirming the absolute validity of multilateral diplomacy in the field of disarmament and non-proliferation, and determined to promote multilateralism as an essential way to develop arms regulation and disarmament negotiations,

1. Reaffirms multilateralism as the core principle in negotiations in the area of disarmament and non-proliferation with a view to maintaining and strengthening universal norms and enlarging their scope;

2. Also reaffirms multilateralism as the core principle in resolving disarmament and non-proliferation concerns;

3. Urges the participation of all interested States in multilateral negotiations on arms regulation, non-proliferation and disarmament in a non-discriminatory and transparent manner;

4. Underlines the importance of preserving the existing agreements on arms regulation and disarmament, which constitute an expression of the results of international cooperation and multilateral negotiations in response to the challenges facing mankind;

5. Calls once again upon all Member States to renew and fulfil their individual and collective commitments to multilateral cooperation as an important means of pursuing and achieving their common objectives in the area of disarmament and non-proliferation;

6. Requests the States parties to the relevant instruments on weapons of mass destruction to consult and cooperate among themselves in resolving their concerns with regard to cases of non-compliance as well as on implementation, in accordance with the procedures defined in those instruments, and to refrain from resorting or threatening to resort to unilateral actions or directing unverified non-compliance accusations against one another to resolve their concerns;

7. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General containing the replies of Member States on the promotion of multilateralism in the area of disarmament and non-proliferation, submitted pursuant to resolution 58/44;

8. Requests the Secretary-General to seek the views of Member States on the issue of the promotion of multilateralism in the area of disarmament and non-proliferation and to submit a report thereon to the General Assembly at its sixtieth session;

9. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its sixtieth session the item entitled "Promotion of multilateralism in the area of disarmament and non-proliferation".

RECORDED VOTE ON RESOLUTION 59/69:

In favour: Afghanistan, Algeria, Angola, Antigua and Barbuda, Azerbaijan, Bahamas, Bahrain, Bangladesh, Barbados, Belarus, Belize, Benin, Bhutan, Bolivia, Botswana, Brazil, Brunei Darussalam, Burkina Faso, Burundi, Cambodia, Cameroon, Cape Verde, Central African Republic, Chile, China, Colombia, Comoros, Congo, Costa Rica, Côte d'Ivoire, Cuba, Democratic People's Republic of Korea, Djibouti, Dominica, Dominican Republic, Ecuador, Egypt, El Salvador, Equatorial Guinea, Eritrea, Ethiopia, Fiji, Gabon, Gambia, Ghana, Greece, Grenada, Guatemala, Guinea-Bissau, Guyana, Haiti, Honduras, India, Indonesia, Iran, Iraq, Jamaica, Jordan, Kazakhstan, Kenya, Kuwait, Kyrgyzstan, Lao People's Democratic Republic, Lebanon, Lesotho, Liberia, Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Madagascar, Malawi, Malaysia, Maldives, Mali, Mauritius, Mexico, Mongolia, Morocco, Mozambique, Myanmar, Namibia, Nepal, Nicaragua, Niger, Nigeria, Oman, Pakistan, Panama, Papua New Guinea, Paraguay, Peru, Philippines, Qatar, Russian Federation, Rwanda, Saint Lucia, Saint Vincent and the Grenadines, Sao Tome and Principe, Saudi Arabia, Senegal, Seychelles, Sierra Leone, Singapore, Solomon Islands, Somalia, South Africa, Sri Lanka, Sudan, Suriname, Swaziland, Syrian Arab Republic, Tajikistan, Thailand, Togo, Trinidad and Tobago, Tunisia, Turkmenistan, Uganda, United Arab Emirates, United Republic of Tanzania, Uruguay, Vanuatu, Venezuela, Viet Nam, Yemen, Zambia, Zimbabwe.

Against: Albania, Israel, Latvia, Marshall Islands, Micronesia, Palau, Poland, United Kingdom, United States.

Abstaining: Andorra, Argentina, Armenia, Australia, Austria, Belgium, Bosnia and Herzegovina, Bulgaria, Canada, Croatia, Cyprus, Czech Republic, Denmark, Estonia, Finland, France, Georgia, Germany, Hungary, Iceland, Ireland, Italy, Japan, Liechtenstein, Lithuania, Luxembourg, Malta, Monaco, Nauru, Netherlands, New Zealand, Norway, Portugal, Republic of Korea, Republic of Moldova, Romania, Samoa, San Marino, Serbia and Montenegro, Slovakia, Slovenia, Spain, Sweden, Switzerland, The former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia, Turkey, Tuvalu, Ukraine, Uzbekistan.

SECURITY COUNCIL ACTION

On 22 April [meeting 4949], the Security Council considered the decision of the Libyan Arab Jamahiriya to abandon its WMD programmes. At the meeting, following consultations among Council members, the President made statement S/PRST/2004/10 on behalf of the Council:

The Security Council takes note of resolution 2004/18 of 10 March 2004 of the Board of Governors of the International Atomic Energy Agency regarding the implementation of the safeguards agreement of the Socialist People's Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, a State party to the Treaty on the Non-proliferation of Nuclear Weapons, by which the Board requested the Director General of the International Atomic Energy Agency to report a case of non-compliance to the Security Council for information purposes only, while commending the Socialist People's Libyan Arab Jamahiriya for the actions it has taken to date and those it has proposed to take to remedy it.

The Council welcomes the decision by the Socialist People's Libyan Arab Jamahiriya to abandon its programmes for developing weapons of mass destruction and their means of delivery and the positive steps taken to fulfil its commitments and obligations, including its active cooperation with the International Atomic Energy Agency and the Organization for the Prohibition of Chemical Weapons.

The Council takes note that in its resolution 2004/18 the Board of Governors of the International Atomic Energy Agency recognized the decision of the Socialist People's Libyan Arab Jamahiriya as a step towards the realization of the goal of an Africa and a Middle East free of weapons of mass destruction and at peace.

The Council reaffirms the need to seek to resolve proliferation problems by peaceful means through political and diplomatic channels.

The Council welcomes existing and future efforts to assist the Socialist People's Libyan Arab Jamahiriya in this task, and expresses the hope that the steps taken by the Socialist People's Libyan Arab Jamahiriya would facilitate and improve international cooperation with and enhance the security of that country.

The Council encourages the Socialist People's Libyan Arab Jamahiriya to ensure the verified elimination of all of its weapons of mass destruction programmes. It welcomes the roles played in that regard by the International Atomic Energy Agency and the Organization for the Prohibition of Chemical Weapons in facilitating the fulfilment of the commitments of the Socialist People's Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, demonstrating the importance and usefulness of existing international treaty regimes.

The Council expresses the hope that resolution 2004/18 will be implemented in the spirit of continued cooperation.

IAEA safeguards

As at 31 December, the Model Protocol Additional to Safeguards Agreements strengthening the safeguards regime of the International Atomic Energy Agency (IAEA), approved by the Agency's Board of Governors in 1997 [YUN 1997, p. 486], had been signed by 100 States, including the five nuclear-weapon States, and was in force or being provisionally applied in 62 States.

The IAEA General Conference [GC(48)/RES/14], as in previous years, requested concerned States and other parties to safeguards agreements, including nuclear-weapon States, that had not done so to sign the additional protocols promptly and to bring them into force as soon as possible, in conformity with their national legislation. The Conference called for cooperation among member States to facilitate the exchange of equipment, material and scientific and technological information for implementing those protocols. It commended member States, notably Japan, that had implemented elements of the plan of action outlined in a 2000 resolution of the Conference [YUN 2000, p. 504] and recommended that other member States consider such action to facilitate the entry into force of comprehensive safeguards agreements and additional protocols.

In 2004, IAEA continued to be unable to verify that the DPRK was following Agency safeguards; therefore it could not provide assurance that nuclear material was not being diverted, owing to the DPRK's refusal to permit IAEA inspectors to carry out verification activities in the country. On 24 September [GC(48)/RES/15], the General Conference, deploring the DPRK's non-compliance with its NPT safeguards agreement and its unwillingness to discuss the issue with IAEA, urged it to reconsider its actions, to dismantle completely any nuclear weapons programme and to accept comprehensive IAEA safeguards.

IAEA made progress in gaining a comprehensive understanding of Iran's nuclear programme, but a number of issues remained outstanding [GOV/2004/34]. Iran provided access to locations requested by the Agency, which was able to verify that Iran had suspended enrichment and reprocessing activities. However, some discrepancies subsequently emerged in information concerning centrifuge components provided by Iran. The IAEA Board of Governors urged Iran to cooperate fully in the verification process.

The IAEA mandate under various Security Council resolutions on inspections of Iraq's nuclear programme remained in effect, although the Agency was not able to carry out that mandate during the year. At the time IAEA was asked to cease its activities in Iraq in March 2003 [YUN 2003, p. 549], it had found no evidence of nuclear activities prohibited by the Council, a finding that had since been validated. The Council, in resolution 1546(2004) (see p. 348), reaffirmed its intention to revisit the mandate, which the Agency expected to guide its future work. IAEA remained concerned about the dismantlement of sites previously used in Iraq's nuclear programme that had been subject to IAEA safeguards. In June, the United States informed IAEA that it had removed most of the nuclear material in Iraq under those safeguards and, in August, the Agency verified the removal of the material and carried out an annual physical inventory verification of the remaining nuclear material under the NPT safeguards agreement between Iraq and IAEA.

On 10 March, Libya signed the IAEA Additional Protocol to the NPT safeguards agreement, which gave IAEA inspectors greater authority in verifying Libya's nuclear programme. On the same date [GOV/2004/18], the IAEA Board of Governors, welcoming Libya's decision to sign the Protocol and to dismantle weapons-related programmes, called for its continuing cooperation and full disclosure in order to facilitate the Agency's completion of its mandated tasks. In September [GOV/2004/59], the IAEA Director General, acknowledging Libya's cooperation, reported that the Agency's assessment of Libya's declarations on its uranium conversion and enrichment programmes and other nuclear-related activities appeared consistent with information available to the Agency. However, further investigation was needed to fully verify the completeness and correctness of Libya's declarations.

During the year, IAEA considered undeclared activities and/or material in the Republic of Korea and in Egypt. At year's end, the Agency was still in the process of determining whether declarations made by both countries were correct and complete.

Note by Secretary-General. In August [A/59/295], the Secretary-General informed the General Assembly of the availability of the forty-eighth report of IAEA [GC(48)/3] covering 2003.

Communication. In May [A/58/816], Cuba announced that it had ratified the comprehensive safeguards agreement with IAEA and the Additional Protocol thereto, in demonstration of its commitment to fulfil its obligations as a State party to NPT and the Treaty for the Prohibition of Nuclear Weapons in Latin America and the Caribbean (Treaty of Tlatelolco) (see p. 552).

Middle East

In 2004, the General Assembly (see below) and the IAEA General Conference [GC(48)/RES/16] took action regarding the risk of nuclear proliferation in the Middle East. While the Assembly continued to call on the non-party in the region to place all its nuclear facilities under IAEA safeguards, IAEA reaffirmed the need for States in the region to accept the full application of Agency safeguards to all their nuclear activities.

Pursuant to Assembly resolution 58/68 [YUN 2003, p. 550], the Secretary-General reported in October [A/59/165 (Part II)] that, apart from the IAEA resolution on the application of IAEA safeguards in the Middle East, which was annexed to his report, he had not received any additional information since his 2003 report.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 3 December [meeting 66], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the First Committee [A/59/462], adopted resolution 59/106 by recorded vote (170-5-9) [agenda item 68].

The risk of nuclear proliferation in the Middle East

The General Assembly,

Bearing in mind its relevant resolutions,

Taking note of the relevant resolutions adopted by the General Conference of the International Atomic Energy Agency, the latest of which is resolution GC(48)/RES/16, adopted on 24 September 2004,

Cognizant that the proliferation of nuclear weapons in the region of the Middle East would pose a serious threat to international peace and security,

Mindful of the immediate need for placing all nuclear facilities in the region of the Middle East under full-scope safeguards of the International Atomic Energy Agency,

Recalling the decision on principles and objectives for nuclear non-proliferation and disarmament adopted by the 1995 Review and Extension Conference of the Parties to the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons on 11 May 1995, in which the Conference urged universal adherence to the Treaty as an urgent priority and called upon all States not yet parties to the Treaty to accede to it at the earliest date, particularly those States that operate unsafeguarded nuclear facilities,

Recognizing with satisfaction that, in the Final Document of the 2000 Review Conference of the Parties to the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons, the Conference undertook to make determined efforts towards the achievement of the goal of universality of the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons, called upon those remaining States not parties to the Treaty to accede to it, thereby accepting an international legally binding commitment not to acquire nuclear weapons or nuclear explosive devices and to accept International Atomic Energy Agency safeguards on all their nuclear activities, and underlined the necessity of universal adherence to the Treaty and of strict compliance by all parties with their obligations under the Treaty,

Recalling the resolution on the Middle East adopted by the 1995 Review and Extension Conference of the Parties to the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons on 11 May 1995, in which the Conference noted with concern the continued existence in the Middle East of unsafeguarded nuclear facilities, reaffirmed the importance of the early realization of universal adherence to the Treaty and called upon all

States in the Middle East that had not yet done so, without exception, to accede to the Treaty as soon as possible and to place all their nuclear facilities under full-scope International Atomic Energy Agency safeguards,

Noting that Israel remains the only State in the Middle East that has not yet become party to the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons,

Concerned about the threats posed by the proliferation of nuclear weapons to the security and stability of the Middle East region,

Stressing the importance of taking confidence-building measures, in particular the establishment of a nuclear-weapon-free zone in the Middle East, in order to enhance peace and security in the region and to consolidate the global non-proliferation regime,

Emphasizing the need for all parties directly concerned to consider seriously taking the practical and urgent steps required for the implementation of the proposal to establish a nuclear-weapon-free zone in the region of the Middle East in accordance with the relevant resolutions of the General Assembly and, as a means of promoting this objective, inviting the countries concerned to adhere to the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons and, pending the establishment of the zone, to agree to place all their nuclear activities under International Atomic Energy Agency safeguards,

Noting that one hundred and seventy-three States have signed the Comprehensive Nuclear-Test-Ban Treaty, including a number of States in the region,

1. Welcomes the conclusions on the Middle East of the 2000 Review Conference of the Parties to the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons;

2. Reaffirms the importance of Israel's accession to the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons and placement of all its nuclear facilities under comprehensive International Atomic Energy Agency safeguards, in realizing the goal of universal adherence to the Treaty in the Middle East;

3. Calls upon that State to accede to the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons without further delay and not to develop, produce, test or otherwise acquire nuclear weapons, and to renounce possession of nuclear weapons, and to place all its unsafeguarded nuclear facilities under full-scope International Atomic Energy Agency safeguards as an important confidence-building measure among all States of the region and as a step towards enhancing peace and security;

4. Requests the Secretary-General to report to the General Assembly at its sixtieth session on the implementation of the present resolution;

5. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its sixtieth session the item entitled "The risk of nuclear proliferation in the Middle East".

RECORDED VOTE ON RESOLUTION 59/106:

In favour: Afghanistan, Albania, Algeria, Andorra, Angola, Antigua and Barbuda, Argentina, Armenia, Austria, Azerbaijan, Bahamas, Bahrain, Bangladesh, Barbados, Belarus, Belgium, Belize, Benin, Bhutan, Bolivia, Bosnia and Herzegovina, Botswana, Brazil, Brunei Darussalam, Bulgaria, Burkina Faso, Burundi, Cambodia, Canada, Cape Verde, Central African Republic, Chile, China, Colombia, Comoros, Congo, Costa Rica, Côte d'Ivoire, Croatia, Cuba, Cyprus, Czech Republic, Democratic People's Republic of Korea, Denmark, Djibouti, Dominica, Dominican Republic, Ecuador, Egypt, El Salvador, Equatorial Guinea, Eritrea, Estonia, Fiji, Finland, France, Gabon, Gambia, Georgia, Germany, Ghana, Greece, Grenada, Guatemala, Guinea-Bissau, Guyana, Haiti, Honduras, Hungary, Iceland, Indonesia, Iran, Iraq, Ireland, Italy, Jamaica, Japan, Jordan, Kazakhstan, Kenya, Kuwait, Kyrgyzstan, Lao People's Democratic Republic, Latvia, Lebanon, Lesotho, Liberia, Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Liechtenstein, Lithuania, Luxembourg, Madagascar, Malawi, Malaysia, Maldives, Mali, Malta, Mauritius, Mexico, Monaco, Mongolia, Morocco, Mozambique, Myanmar, Namibia, Nepal, Netherlands, New Zealand, Nicaragua, Niger, Nigeria, Norway, Oman, Pakistan, Panama, Paraguay, Peru, Philippines, Poland, Portugal, Qatar, Republic of Korea, Republic of Moldova, Romania, Russian Federation, Saint Lucia, Saint Vincent and the Grenadines, Samoa, San Marino, Sao Tome and Principe, Saudi Arabia, Senegal, Serbia and Montenegro, Seychelles, Sierra Leone, Singapore, Slovakia, Slovenia, Solomon Islands, Somalia, South Africa, Spain, Sri Lanka, Sudan, Suriname, Swaziland, Sweden, Switzerland, Syrian Arab Republic, Tajikistan, Thailand, The former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia, Timor-Leste, Togo, Tunisia, Turkey, Turkmenistan, Tuvalu, Uganda, Ukraine, United Arab Emirates, United Kingdom, United Republic of Tanzania, Uruguay, Uzbekistan, Venezuela, Viet Nam, Yemen, Zambia, Zimbabwe.

Against: Israel, Marshall Islands, Micronesia, Palau, United States.

Abstaining: Australia, Cameroon, Ethiopia, India, Nauru, Papua New Guinea, Tonga, Trinidad and Tobago, Vanuatu.

The First Committee adopted the sixth preambular paragraph by a separate recorded vote (154-3-4). The Assembly retained the paragraph by recorded vote (169-6-4).

Nuclear-weapon-free zones

Africa

As at 31 December, 22 States had ratified the African Nuclear-Weapon-Free Zone Treaty (Treaty of Pelindaba) [YUN 1995, p. 203], which was opened for signature in 1996 [YUN 1996, p. 486]. China, France and the United Kingdom had ratified Protocols I and II thereto, and France had also ratified Protocol III. The Russian Federation and the United States had signed Protocols I and II. The Treaty had 55 signatories. By the terms of the Treaty, ratification by 28 States was required for its entry into force.

The General Assembly, in resolution 59/85 (see p. 553), welcomed efforts towards completion of the ratification process and called on States that had not done so to ratify the Treaty so as to facilitate its entry into force.

Asia

Central Asia

With assistance from the Department for Disarmament Affairs, in particular its Regional Centre for Peace and Disarmament in Asia and the Pacific (see p. 587), the five Central Asian States (Kazakhstan, Kyrgyzstan, Tajikistan, Turkmenistan, Uzbekistan) continued efforts to conclude a Central Asian nuclear-weapon-free zone treaty. During the year, the Regional Centre organized several consultation sessions in New York for regional States to help them reach agreement on a text.

On 3 December, the General Assembly decided to include in the provisional agenda of its sixtieth (2005) session the item entitled "Establishment of a nuclear-weapon-free zone in Central Asia" (decision 59/513).

Mongolia

Report of Secretary-General. The Secretary-General, in response to General Assembly resolution 57/67 [YUN 2002, p. 513], reviewed in a September report [A/59/364] new developments and UN assistance to Mongolia to strengthen its nuclear-weapon-free status. The report also covered non-nuclear aspects of Mongolia's international security. The Secretary-General remarked that the UN system would continue to assist that country in coping with economic and ecological vulnerabilities, in particular those identified in recent UN studies. He hoped that UN assistance would contribute to sustainable development and balanced growth in Mongolia, reinforcing its efforts at achieving the Millennium Development Goals [YUN 2000, p. 51]. He welcomed the international community's support in strengthening the non-nuclear aspects of international security in Mongolia.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 3 December [meeting 66], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the First Committee [A/59/459 & Corr.1], adopted resolution 59/73 without vote [agenda item 65 (f)].

Mongolia's international security and nuclear-weapon-free status

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 53/77 D of 4 December 1998, 55/33 S of 20 November 2000 and 57/67 of 22 November 2002,

Recalling also the purposes and principles of the Charter of the United Nations, as well as the Declaration on Principles of International Law concerning Friendly Relations and Cooperation among States in accordance with the Charter of the United Nations,

Bearing in mind its resolution 49/31 of 9 December 1994 on the protection and security of small States,

Proceeding from the fact that nuclear-weapon-free status is one of the means of ensuring the national security of States,

Convinced that the internationally recognized status of Mongolia will contribute to enhancing stability and confidence-building in the region as well as promote Mongolia's security by strengthening its independence, sovereignty and territorial integrity, the inviolability of its borders and the preservation of its ecological balance,

Taking note of the adoption by the Mongolian parliament of legislation defining and regulating its nuclear-weapon-free status as a concrete step towards promoting the aims of nuclear non-proliferation,

Bearing in mind the joint statement of the five nuclear-weapon States on security assurances to Mongolia in connection with its nuclear-weapon-free status as a contribution to implementing resolution 53/77 D as well as their commitment to Mongolia to cooperate in the implementation of the resolution, in accordance with the principles of the Charter,

Noting that the joint statement has been transmitted to the Security Council by the five nuclear-weapon States,

Mindful that at the Thirteenth Conference of Heads of State or Government of Non-Aligned Countries, held in Kuala Lumpur, from 20 to 25 February 2003, the Heads of State or Government reiterated their support for Mongolia's nuclear-weapon-free status and considered that the institutionalization of that status would be an important measure towards strengthening the non-proliferation regime in the region,

Noting other measures taken to implement resolution 57/67 at the national and international levels,

Welcoming Mongolia's active and positive role in developing peaceful, friendly and mutually beneficial relations with the States of the region and other States,

Having considered the report of the Secretary-General on Mongolia's international security and nuclear-weapon-free status,

1. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General on the implementation of resolution 57/67;

2. Expresses its appreciation to the Secretary-General for the efforts to implement resolution 57/67, in particular the completion of the two studies on the non-nuclear aspects of Mongolia's international security;

3. Endorses and supports Mongolia's good-neighbourly and balanced relationship with its neighbours as an important element of strengthening regional peace, security and stability;

4. Welcomes the efforts made by Member States to cooperate with Mongolia in implementing resolution 57/67, as well as the progress made in consolidating Mongolia's international security;

5. Invites Member States to continue to cooperate with Mongolia in taking the necessary measures to consolidate and strengthen Mongolia's independence, sovereignty and territorial integrity, the inviolability of its borders, its independent foreign policy, its economic security, and its ecological balance, as well as its nuclear-weapon-free status;

6. Appeals to the Member States of the Asia and Pacific region to support Mongolia's efforts to join the relevant regional security and economic arrangements;

7. Requests the Secretary-General and relevant United Nations bodies to continue to provide assistance to Mongolia in taking the necessary measures mentioned in paragraph 5 above;

8. Requests the Secretary-General to report to the General Assembly at its sixty-first session on the implementation of the present resolution;

9. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its sixty-first session the item entitled "Mongolia's international security and nuclear-weapon-free status".

South-East Asia

In 2004, the States parties to the Treaty on the South-East Asia Nuclear-Weapon-Free Zone (Bangkok Treaty), which opened for signature in 1995 [YUN 1995, p. 207] and entered into force in 1997 [YUN 1997, p. 495], continued to focus on establishing an institutional framework to implement the Treaty. At the tenth summit of the Association of Southeast Asian Nations (Vientiane, Lao People's Democratic Republic, 29-30 November), leaders adopted the Vientiane Action Programme, in which they expressed determination to resolve outstanding issues, thereby ensuring that the nuclear-weapon States would sign the protocols to the Treaty.

Latin America and the Caribbean

During the year, States parties to the Treaty for the Prohibition of Nuclear Weapons in Latin America and the Caribbean (Treaty of Tlatelolco) [YUN 1967, p. 13] continued efforts to consolidate the treaty regime. The General Assembly of the Organization of American States (OAS), at its thirty-fourth regular session (Quito, Ecuador, 6-8 June) [AG/RES.2009(XXXIV-O/04)], urged regional States that had not done so to sign or ratify the amendments to the Treaty. It called on the OAS Permanent Council to hold, within the framework of the Committee on Hemispheric Security, a meeting on the consolidation of the treaty regime, with the support of the Agency for the Prohibition of Nuclear Weapons in Latin America and the Caribbean and the participation of the United Nations and other relevant international organizations.

Middle East

In response to General Assembly resolution 58/34 on the establishment of a nuclear-weapon-free zone in the Middle East [YUN 2003, p. 556], the Secretary-General, in a July report with a later addendum [A/59/165 (Part I) & Corr.1, Add.1], provided information on the resolution's implementation. He stated that he continued to consult with concerned parties within and outside the region on ways to establish such a zone, and he urged them to resume dialogue, with a view to creating stable security conditions and an eventual settlement that would facilitate the establishment of a nuclear-weapon-free zone in the Middle East. The report included the replies of China, Egypt, Guatemala, Ireland (on behalf of the EU), Israel, Lebanon, Mexico, Oman, the Syrian Arab Republic and Venezuela to his request for the views of concerned States.

In September, the IAEA General Conference, in a resolution on the Middle East [GC(48)/RES/16], called on all parties directly concerned to take the steps required for implementing the proposal to establish a mutually and effectively verifiable nuclear-weapon-free zone in the region.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 3 December [meeting 66], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the First Committee [A/59/456], adopted resolution 59/63 without vote [agenda item 62].

Establishment of a nuclear-weapon-free zone in the region of the Middle East

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 3263(XXIX) of 9 December 1974, 3474(XXX) of 11 December 1975, 31/71 of 10 December 1976, 32/82 of 12 December 1977, 33/64 of 14 December 1978, 34/77 of 11 December 1979, 35/147 of 12 December 1980, 36/87 A and B of 9 December 1981, 37/75 of 9 December 1982, 38/64 of 15 December 1983, 39/54 of 12 December 1984, 40/82 of 12 December 1985, 41/48 of 3 December 1986, 42/28 of 30 November 1987, 43/65 of 7 December 1988, 44/108 of 15 December 1989, 45/52 of 4 December 1990, 46/30 of 6 December 1991, 47/48 of 9 December 1992, 48/71 of 16 December 1993, 49/71 of 15 December 1994, 50/66 of 12 December 1995, 51/41 of 10 December 1996, 52/34 of 9 December 1997, 53/74 of 4 December 1998, 54/51 of 1 December 1999, 55/30 of 20 November 2000, 56/21 of 29 November 2001, 57/55 of 22 November 2002 and 58/34 of 8 December 2003 on the establishment of a nuclear-weapon-free zone in the region of the Middle East,

Recalling also the recommendations for the establishment of such a zone in the Middle East consistent with paragraphs 60 to 63, and in particular paragraph 63 (d), of the Final Document of the Tenth Special Session of the General Assembly,

Emphasizing the basic provisions of the above-mentioned resolutions, which call upon all parties directly concerned to consider taking the practical and urgent steps required for the implementation of the proposal to establish a nuclear-weapon-free zone in the region of the Middle East and, pending and during the establishment of such a zone, to declare solemnly that they will refrain, on a reciprocal basis, from producing, acquiring or in any other way possessing nuclear weapons and nuclear explosive devices and from permitting the stationing of nuclear weapons on their territory by any third party, to agree to place their nuclear facilities under International Atomic Energy Agency safeguards and to declare their support for the establishment of the zone and to deposit such declarations with the Security Council for consideration, as appropriate,

Reaffirming the inalienable right of all States to acquire and develop nuclear energy for peaceful purposes,

Emphasizing the need for appropriate measures on the question of the prohibition of military attacks on nuclear facilities,

Bearing in mind the consensus reached by the General Assembly since its thirty-fifth session that the establishment of a nuclear-weapon-free zone in the Middle East would greatly enhance international peace and security,

Desirous of building on that consensus so that substantial progress can be made towards establishing a nuclear-weapon-free zone in the Middle East,

Welcoming all initiatives leading to general and complete disarmament, including in the region of the Middle East, and in particular on the establishment therein of a zone free of weapons of mass destruction, including nuclear weapons,

Noting the peace negotiations in the Middle East, which should be of a comprehensive nature and represent an appropriate framework for the peaceful settlement of contentious issues in the region,

Recognizing the importance of credible regional security, including the establishment of a mutually verifiable nuclear-weapon-free zone,

Emphasizing the essential role of the United Nations in the establishment of a mutually verifiable nuclear-weapon-free zone,

Having examined the report of the Secretary-General on the implementation of resolution 58/34,

1. Urges all parties directly concerned to consider seriously taking the practical and urgent steps required for the implementation of the proposal to establish a nuclear-weapon-free zone in the region of the Middle East in accordance with the relevant resolutions of the General Assembly, and, as a means of promoting this objective, invites the countries concerned to adhere to the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons;

2. Calls upon all countries of the region that have not done so, pending the establishment of the zone, to agree to place all their nuclear activities under International Atomic Energy Agency safeguards;

3. Takes note of resolution GC(48)/RES/16, adopted on 24 September 2004 by the General Conference of the International Atomic Energy Agency at its forty-eighth regular session, concerning the application of Agency safeguards in the Middle East;

4. Notes the importance of the ongoing bilateral Middle East peace negotiations and the activities of the multilateral Working Group on Arms Control and Regional Security in promoting mutual confidence and security in the Middle East, including the establishment of a nuclear-weapon-free zone;

5. Invites all countries of the region, pending the establishment of a nuclear-weapon-free zone in the region of the Middle East, to declare their support for establishing such a zone, consistent with paragraph 63 (d) of the Final Document of the Tenth Special Session of the General Assembly, and to deposit those declarations with the Security Council;

6. Also invites those countries, pending the establishment of the zone, not to develop, produce, test or otherwise acquire nuclear weapons or permit the stationing on their territories, or territories under their control, of nuclear weapons or nuclear explosive devices;

7. Invites the nuclear-weapon States and all other States to render their assistance in the establishment of the zone and at the same time to refrain from any action that runs counter to both the letter and the spirit of the present resolution;

8. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General;

9. Invites all parties to consider the appropriate means that may contribute towards the goal of general and complete disarmament and the establishment of a zone free of weapons of mass destruction in the region of the Middle East;

10. Requests the Secretary-General to continue to pursue consultations with the States of the region and other concerned States, in accordance with paragraph 7 of resolution 46/30 and taking into account the evolving situation in the region, and to seek from those States their views on the measures outlined in chapters III and IV of the study annexed to his report of 10 October 1990 or other relevant measures, in order to move towards the establishment of a nuclear-weapon-free zone in the Middle East;

11. Also requests the Secretary-General to submit to the General Assembly at its sixtieth session a report on the implementation of the present resolution;

12. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its sixtieth session the item entitled "Establishment of a nuclear-weapon-free zone in the region of the Middle East".

South Pacific

In 2004, the number of States that had ratified the 1985 South Pacific Nuclear-Free Zone Treaty (Treaty of Rarotonga) [YUN 1985, p. 58] remained at 17. China and the Russian Federation had ratified Protocols 2 and 3, and France and the United Kingdom had ratified all three Protocols. The heads of State and Government of countries of the Pacific Islands Forum, in a communiqué issued after their thirty-fifth session (Apia, Samoa, 5-7 August), called on the United States, as the remaining nuclear-weapon State to ratify the Treaty's protocols, to do so as a means of enhancing global and regional peace and security, including global nuclear non-proliferation.

Under Protocol 1, the States internationally responsible for territories situated within the zone would undertake to apply the relevant prohibitions of the Treaty to those territories; under Protocol 2, the five nuclear-weapon States would provide security assurances to parties or territories within the same zone; and under Protocol 3, the five would not carry out nuclear tests in the zone.

Southern hemisphere and adjacent areas

On 3 December [meeting 66], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the First Committee [A/59/459 & Corr.1], adopted resolution 59/85 by recorded vote (171-4-8) [agenda item 65 (s)].

Nuclear-weapon-free southern hemisphere and adjacent areas

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 51/45 B of 10 December 1996, 52/38 N of 9 December 1997, 53/77 Q of 4 December 1998, 54/54 L of 1 December 1999, 55/33 I of 20 November 2000, 56/24 G of 29 November 2001, 57/73 of 22 November 2002 and 58/49 of 8 December 2003,

Recalling also the adoption by the Disarmament Commission at its 1999 substantive session of a text entitled "Establishment of nuclear-weapon-free zones on the basis of arrangements freely arrived at among the States of the region concerned",

Determined to pursue the total elimination of nuclear weapons,

Determined also to continue to contribute to the prevention of the proliferation of nuclear weapons in all its aspects and to the process of general and complete disarmament under strict and effective international control, in particular in the field of nuclear weapons and other weapons of mass destruction, with a view to strengthening international peace and security, in accordance with the purposes and principles of the Charter of the United Nations,

Recalling the provisions on nuclear-weapon-free zones of the Final Document of the Tenth Special Session of the General Assembly, the first special session devoted to disarmament,

Stressing the importance of the treaties of Tlatelolco, Rarotonga, Bangkok and Pelindaba establishing nuclear-weapon-free zones, as well as the Antarctic Treaty, to, inter alia, achieve a world entirely free of nuclear weapons,

Underlining the value of enhancing cooperation among the nuclear-weapon-free-zone treaty members by means of mechanisms such as joint meetings of States parties, signatories and observers to those treaties,

Welcoming the announcement of the organization of an international conference of States parties signatories to the nuclear-weapon-free-zone treaties in Mexico, in 2005, to support the common goals envisaged in those treaties,

Recalling the applicable principles and rules of international law relating to the freedom of the high seas and the rights of passage through maritime space, including those of the United Nations Convention on the Law of the Sea,

1. Welcomes the continued contribution that the Antarctic Treaty and the treaties of Tlatelolco, Rarotonga, Bangkok and Pelindaba are making towards freeing the southern hemisphere and adjacent areas covered by those treaties from nuclear weapons;

2. Also welcomes the ratification by all original parties of the Treaty of Rarotonga, and calls upon eligible States to adhere to the treaty and the protocols thereto;

3. Further welcomes the efforts towards the completion of the ratification process of the Treaty of Pelindaba, and calls upon the States of the region that have not yet done so to sign and ratify the treaty, with the aim of its early entry into force;

4. Calls upon all concerned States to continue to work together in order to facilitate adherence to the protocols to nuclear-weapon-free-zone treaties by all relevant States that have not yet done so;

5. Welcomes the steps taken to conclude further nuclear-weapon-free-zone treaties on the basis of arrangements freely arrived at among the States of the region concerned, and calls upon all States to consider all relevant proposals, including those reflected in its resolutions on the establishment of nuclear-weapon-free zones in the Middle East and South Asia;

6. Affirms its conviction of the important role of nuclear-weapon-free zones in strengthening the nuclear non-proliferation regime and in extending the areas of the world that are nuclear-weapon-free, and, with particular reference to the responsibilities of the nuclear-weapon States, calls upon all States to support the process of nuclear disarmament and to work for the total elimination of all nuclear weapons;

7. Calls upon the States parties and signatories to the treaties of Tlatelolco, Rarotonga, Bangkok and Pelindaba, in order to pursue the common goals envisaged in those treaties and to promote the nuclear-weapon-free status of the southern hemisphere and adjacent areas, to explore and implement further ways and means of cooperation among themselves and their treaty agencies;

8. Welcomes the vigorous efforts being made among States parties and signatories to those treaties to promote their common objectives, and encourages the competent authorities of the nuclear-weapon-free-zone treaties to provide assistance to the States parties and signatories to those treaties so as to facilitate the accomplishment of these goals;

9. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its sixtieth session the item entitled "Nuclear-weapon-free southern hemisphere and adjacent areas".

RECORDED VOTE ON RESOLUTION 59/85:

In favour: Afghanistan, Albania, Algeria, Andorra, Angola, Antigua and Barbuda, Argentina, Armenia, Australia, Austria, Azerbaijan, Bahamas, Bahrain, Bangladesh, Barbados, Belarus, Belgium, Belize, Benin, Bolivia, Bosnia and Herzegovina, Botswana, Brazil, Brunei Darussalam, Bulgaria, Burkina Faso, Burundi, Cambodia, Cameroon, Canada, Cape Verde, Central African Republic, Chile, China, Colombia, Comoros, Congo, Costa Rica, Côte d'Ivoire, Croatia, Cuba, Cyprus, Czech Republic, Democratic People's Republic of Korea, Denmark, Djibouti, Dominica, Dominican Republic, Ecuador, Egypt, El Salvador, Equatorial Guinea, Eritrea, Estonia, Ethiopia, Fiji, Finland, Gabon, Gambia, Georgia, Germany, Ghana, Greece, Grenada, Guatemala, Guinea-Bissau, Guyana, Haiti, Honduras, Hungary, Iceland, Indonesia, Iran, Iraq, Ireland, Italy, Jamaica, Japan, Jordan, Kazakhstan, Kenya, Kuwait, Kyrgyzstan, Lao People's Democratic Republic, Latvia, Lebanon, Lesotho, Liberia, Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Liechtenstein, Lithuania, Luxembourg, Madagascar, Malawi, Malaysia, Maldives, Mali, Malta, Mauritius, Mexico, Mongolia, Morocco, Mozambique, Myanmar, Namibia, Nauru, Nepal, Netherlands, New Zealand, Nicaragua, Niger, Nigeria, Norway, Oman, Panama, Papua New Guinea, Paraguay, Peru, Philippines, Poland, Portugal, Qatar, Republic of Korea, Republic of Moldova, Romania, Rwanda, Saint Lucia, Saint Vincent and the Grenadines, Samoa, San Marino, Sao Tome and Principe, Saudi Arabia, Senegal, Serbia and Montenegro, Seychelles, Sierra Leone, Singapore, Slovakia, Slovenia, Solomon Islands, Somalia, South Africa, Sri Lanka, Sudan, Suriname, Swaziland, Sweden, Switzerland, Syrian Arab Republic, Tajikistan, Thailand, The former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia, Timor-Leste, Togo, Tonga, Tunisia, Turkey, Turkmenistan, Tuvalu, Uganda, Ukraine, United Arab Emirates, United Republic of Tanzania, Uruguay, Uzbekistan, Vanuatu, Venezuela, Viet Nam, Yemen, Zambia, Zimbabwe.

Against: France, Palau, United Kingdom, United States.

Abstaining: Bhutan, India, Israel, Marshall Islands, Micronesia, Pakistan, Russian Federation, Spain.

The First Committee adopted the last three words of operative paragraph 5 "and South Asia", then paragraph 5 as a whole, by two separate recorded votes (139-2-9 and 144-1-8, respectively). The Assembly followed the same procedure, adopting them by recorded votes (158-4-7 and 166-3-7, respectively).

Bacteriological (biological) and chemical weapons

Bacteriological (biological) weapons

In 2004, increasing concern about the potential acquisition by terrorists of chemical and biological weapons and related materials and technology continued to motivate calls for further strengthening of the Convention on the Prohibition of the Development, Production and Stockpiling of Bacteriological (Biological) and Toxin Weapons and on Their Destruction (BWC) and the Convention on the Prohibition of the Development, Production, Stockpiling and Use of Chemical Weapons and on Their Destruction, and for States parties to implement measures that would respond to those calls. The need for action in that regard was underscored by the Security Council in resolution 1540(2004) (see p. 544).

Meeting of States parties

As decided by the BWC States parties in 2003 [YUN 2003, p. 559], the second annual meeting of those States was convened (Geneva, 6-10 December) [BWC/MSP/2004/3]. Participants considered strengthening and broadening national and international institutional efforts and existing mechanisms for the surveillance, detection, diagnosis and combating of infectious diseases affecting humans, animals and plants, as well as enhancing international capabilities for responding to alleged use of biological or toxin weapons or suspicious outbreaks of disease. The States parties agreed on the value of: supporting existing networks of international organizations dealing with aspects of infectious diseases; enhancing national and regional disease surveillance capabilities and communication on the issue among international organizations and States; and developing national capacities for response, investigation and mitigation, in cooperation with international and regional organizations. They also agreed that the Sixth Review Conference, scheduled for 2006, should consider, among other things, the further development of procedures for assisting States parties in cases of alleged use of biological weapons or suspicious outbreaks of disease. Participants were encouraged to inform the Sixth Review Conference of any steps they had taken on the basis of discussions at the 2004 meetings of States parties or experts (see below). The States parties considered a number of working papers, presentations and statements, a list of which was annexed to the meeting's report, as was a synthesis of the issues considered, perspectives, recommendations, conclusions and proposals drawn from statements and working papers presented to the meeting, and prepared by the Chairman. The States parties decided that their next meeting would be held in Geneva from 5 to 9 December 2005.

Expert meeting. In accordance with a decision of the Fifth Review Conference of the BWC States parties [YUN 2002, p. 516], the 2004 meeting of States parties (see above) was preceded by a preparatory meeting of experts (Geneva, 19-30 July) [BWC/MSP/2004/MX/3], which discussed issues relevant to the topics taken up by the States parties' meeting. The expert meeting reviewed a number of working papers and heard statements and thematic presentations from delegates. On 30 July, the meeting adopted its report, which listed background papers prepared by the secretariat and other working papers, presentations and contributions considered.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 3 December [meeting 66], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the First Committee [A/59/466], adopted resolution 59/110 without vote [agenda item 72].

Convention on the Prohibition of the Development, Production and Stockpiling of Bacteriological (Biological) and Toxin Weapons and on Their Destruction

The General Assembly,

Recalling its previous resolutions relating to the complete and effective prohibition of bacteriological (biological) and toxin weapons and to their destruction,

Noting with satisfaction that there are one hundred and fifty-two States parties to the Convention on the Prohibition of the Development, Production and Stockpiling of Bacteriological (Biological) and Toxin Weapons and on Their Destruction, including all of the permanent members of the Security Council,

Bearing in mind its call upon all States parties to the Convention to participate in the implementation of the recommendations of the Review Conferences, including the exchange of information and data agreed to in the Final Declaration of the Third Review Conference of the Parties to the Convention on the Prohibition of the Development, Production and Stockpiling of Bacteriological (Biological) and Toxin Weapons and on Their Destruction, and to provide such information and data in conformity with standardized procedure to the Secretary-General on an annual basis and no later than 15 April,

Welcoming the reaffirmation made in the Final Declaration of the Fourth Review Conference that under all circumstances the use of bacteriological (biological) and toxin weapons and their development, production and stockpiling are effectively prohibited under article I of the Convention,

Recalling the decision reached at the Fifth Review Conference to hold three annual meetings of the States parties of one week's duration each year commencing in 2003 until the Sixth Review Conference and to hold a two-week meeting of experts to prepare for each meeting of the States parties,

1. Notes with satisfaction the increase in the number of States parties to the Convention on the Prohibition of the Development, Production and Stockpiling of Bacteriological (Biological) and Toxin Weapons and on Their Destruction, reaffirms the call upon all signatory States that have not yet ratified the Convention to do so without delay, and calls upon those States that have not signed the Convention to become parties thereto at an early date, thus contributing to the achievement of universal adherence to the Convention;

2. Welcomes the information and data provided to date, and reiterates its call upon all States parties to the Convention to participate in the exchange of information and data agreed to in the Final Declaration of the Third Review Conference of the Parties to the Convention;

3. Recalls the decision reached at the Fifth Review Conference to discuss and promote common understanding and effective action in 2003 on the two topics of the adoption of necessary national measures to implement the prohibitions set forth in the Convention, including the enactment of penal legislation, and national mechanisms to establish and maintain the security and oversight of pathogenic micro-organisms and toxins; in 2004 on the two topics of enhancing international capabilities for responding to, investigating and mitigating the effects of cases of alleged use of biological or toxin weapons or suspicious outbreaks of disease, and strengthening and broadening national and international institutional efforts and existing mechanisms for the surveillance, detection, diagnosis and combating of infectious diseases affecting humans, animals and plants; and in 2005 on the topic of the content, promulgation and adoption of codes of conduct for scientists; and calls upon the States parties to the Convention to participate in its implementation;

4. Requests the Secretary-General to continue to render the necessary assistance to the depositary Governments of the Convention and to provide such services as may be required for the implementation of the decisions and recommendations of the Review Conferences, including all necessary assistance to the annual meetings of the States parties and the meetings of experts;

5. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its sixtieth session the item entitled "Convention on the Prohibition of the Development, Production and Stockpiling of Bacteriological (Biological) and Toxin Weapons and on Their Destruction".

1925 Geneva Protocol

In response to General Assembly resolution 57/62 [YUN 2002, p. 517], the Secretary-General reported in July [A/59/179] that France, as the depositary of the Protocol for the Prohibition of the Use in War of Asphyxiating, Poisonous or Other Gases, and of Bacteriological Methods of Warfare (the 1925 Geneva Protocol), had received notice of three withdrawals of reservations (Portugal, Republic of Korea, United Kingdom) since the Assembly's adoption of the resolution.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 3 December [meeting 66], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the First Committee [A/59/459 & Corr.1], adopted resolution 59/70 by recorded vote (179-0-5) [agenda item 65 (d)].

Measures to uphold the authority of the 1925 Geneva Protocol

The General Assembly,

Recalling its previous resolutions on the subject, in particular resolution 57/62 of 22 November 2002,

Determined to act with a view to achieving effective progress towards general and complete disarmament under strict and effective international control,

Recalling the long-standing determination of the international community to achieve the effective prohibition of the development, production, stockpiling and use of chemical and biological weapons as well as the continuing support for measures to uphold the authority of the Protocol for the Prohibition of the Use in War of Asphyxiating, Poisonous or Other Gases, and of Bacteriological Methods of Warfare, signed at Geneva on 17 June 1925, as expressed by consensus in many previous resolutions,

Emphasizing the necessity of easing international tension and strengthening trust and confidence between States,

Welcoming the recent initiatives by three more States Parties to withdraw their reservations to the 1925 Geneva Protocol,

1. Takes note of the note by the Secretary-General;

2. Renews its previous call to all States to observe strictly the principles and objectives of the Protocol for the Prohibition of the Use in War of Asphyxiating, Poisonous or Other Gases, and of Bacteriological Methods of Warfare, and reaffirms the vital necessity of upholding its provisions;

3. Calls upon those States that continue to maintain reservations to the 1925 Geneva Protocol to withdraw them;

4. Requests the Secretary-General to submit to the General Assembly at its sixty-first session a report on the implementation of the present resolution.

RECORDED VOTE ON RESOLUTION 59/70:

Chemical weapons

Chemical weapons convention

In 2004, Chad, Madagascar, the Marshall Islands, Rwanda, Saint Kitts and Nevis and Sierra Leone ratified the Convention on the Prohibition of the Development, Production, Stockpiling and Use of Chemical Weapons and on Their Destruction (CWC), and the Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Solomon Islands and Tuvalu acceded to it, bringing the total number of States parties to 167. The number of signatories stood at 165. The Convention was adopted by the Conference on Disarmament in 1992 [YUN 1992, p. 65] and entered into force in 1997 [YUN 1997, p. 499].

The ninth session of the Conference of the States Parties (The Hague, Netherlands, 29 November–2 December) [C-9/6] considered the status of CWC implementation, fostering international cooperation for peaceful purposes in the field of chemical activities, ensuring the Convention's universality, and administrative and budgetary matters. The Conference adopted decisions on action needed for further implementation of the obligations in article VII of the Convention on national implementation measures; the inclusion of an additional item on the list of approved equipment; an understanding of the concept of "captive use" in connection with declarations of production and/or consumption under the Convention's verification annex; extension of deadlines for the destruction of Category 1 chemical weapons stockpiles; a request for conversion of chemical weapons production facilities for purposes not prohibited under the Convention; submission of information regarding national programmes related to protective purposes; and administrative, financial and oversight matters, including the programme and budget of the Organization for the Prohibition of Chemical Weapons (OPCW) for 2005. The Conference approved requests by Albania and Libya for extensions of the intermediate deadlines for the destruction of their Category 1 chemical weapons and a further request by Libya to convert its chemical weapons production facilities into a pharmaceuticals plant for producing low-cost vaccines to be distributed in Africa for treating HIV/AIDS, malaria and tuberculosis. The Conference decided to hold its tenth session in November 2005.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 3 December [meeting 66], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the First Committee [A/59/459 & Corr.1], adopted resolution 59/72 without vote [agenda item 65 (u)].

Implementation of the Convention on the Prohibition of the Development, Production, Stockpiling and Use of Chemical Weapons and on Their Destruction

The General Assembly,

Recalling its previous resolutions on the subject of chemical weapons, in particular resolution 58/52 of 8 December 2003, adopted without a vote, in which it noted with appreciation the ongoing work to achieve the objective and purpose of the Convention on the Prohibition of the Development, Production, Stockpiling and Use of Chemical Weapons and on Their Destruction,

Determined to achieve the effective prohibition of the development, production, acquisition, transfer, stockpiling and use of chemical weapons and their destruction,

Noting with satisfaction that, since the adoption of resolution 58/52, nine additional States have ratified the Convention or acceded to it, bringing the total number of States parties to the Convention to one hundred and sixty-seven,

Reaffirming the importance of the outcome of the First Special Session of the Conference of the States Parties to Review the Operation of the Chemical Weapons Convention, including the Political Declaration, in which the States parties reaffirmed their commitment to achieving the objective and purpose of the Convention, and the final report, which addressed all aspects of the Convention and made important recommendations on its continued implementation,

1. Emphasizes that the universality of the Convention on the Prohibition of the Development, Production, Stockpiling and Use of Chemical Weapons and on Their Destruction is fundamental to the achievement of its objective and purpose, and acknowledges progress made in the implementation of the action plan for the universality of the Convention, and calls upon all States that have not yet done so to become parties to the Convention without delay;

2. Underlines that the Convention and its implementation contribute to enhancing international peace and security, and emphasizes that its full, universal and effective implementation will contribute further to that purpose by excluding completely, for the sake of all humankind, the possibility of the use of chemical weapons;

3. Stresses that the full and effective implementation of all provisions of the Convention is in itself an important contribution to the efforts of the United Nations in the global fight against terrorism in all its forms and manifestations;

4. Also stresses the importance to the Convention that all possessors of chemical weapons, chemical weapons production facilities or chemical weapons development facilities, including previously declared possessor States, should be among the States parties to the Convention, and welcomes progress to that end;

5. Notes that the effective application of the verification system builds confidence in compliance with the Convention by States parties;

6. Stresses the importance of the Organization for the Prohibition of Chemical Weapons in verifying compliance with the provisions of the Convention as well as in promoting the timely and efficient accomplishment of all its objectives;

7. Urges all States parties to the Convention to meet in full and on time their obligations under the Convention and to support the Organization for the Prohibition of Chemical Weapons in its implementation activities;

8. Reaffirms the undertaking of the States parties to foster international cooperation for peaceful purposes in the field of chemical activities of the States parties and the importance of that cooperation and its contribution to the promotion of the Convention as a whole;

9. Notes with appreciation the ongoing work of the Organization for the Prohibition of Chemical Weapons to achieve the objective and purpose of the Convention, to ensure the full implementation of its provisions, including those for international verification of compliance with it, and to provide a forum for consultation and cooperation among States parties, and also notes with appreciation progress made in the implementation of the plan of action regarding the implementation of article VII obligations;

10. Welcomes the cooperation between the United Nations and the Organization for the Prohibition of Chemical Weapons within the framework of the Relationship Agreement between the United Nations and the Organization, in accordance with the provisions of the Convention;

11. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its sixtieth session the item entitled "Implementation of the Convention on the Prohibition of the Development, Production, Stockpiling and Use of Chemical Weapons and on Their Destruction".

Organization for the Prohibition of Chemical Weapons

In 2004, OPCW continued efforts to achieve the objective and purpose of CWC, particularly regarding the complete elimination of chemical weapons. In the seven years since the Convention's entry into force in 1997, OPCW as at year's end had inspected over 750 facilities in 66 States parties. By October, over 71,000 tonnes of chemical agents and approximately 8.7 million munitions and containers were identified by the six declared chemical weapons possessor States, and approximately 10,048 tonnes of chemical warfare agents, accounting for more than 14 per cent of the total stockpiles declared, were destroyed by four of those States under OPCW verification. With the accession of Libya to CWC (see above) and its declaration that it possessed chemical weapons, the total number of declared possessor States rose to six. Out of 64 chemical weapons production facilities (CWPFs) worldwide, 35 were certified as destroyed, and 13 were converted to other uses or were scheduled to be destroyed by April 2007.

Progress was made towards realizing the plan of action on national implementation of the Convention, adopted at the eighth session of the Conference of the States Parties in 2003 [YUN 2003, p. 560]. The States parties set November 2005 as the deadline for evaluating progress made in developing and enacting national legislation mandated by the Convention and in establishing the required internal mechanisms.

The OPCW Executive Council addressed a variety of issues at its thirty-sixth (23-26 March), thirty-seventh (29 June-2 July), thirty-eighth (12-15 October) and thirty-ninth (14-17 December) sessions. During the year, the Council considered Secretariat reports on the status of the Convention's implementation, including verification activities and the Convention's articles X and XI on protection against chemical weapons and on economic and technological development, respectively. It adopted recommendations on implementation-related action and on changing the Convention regarding conditions for converting CWPFs for purposes not prohibited under the Convention. The Council also adopted decisions on the destruction of chemical weapons and/or conversion of CWPFs, and on issues relating to the chemical industry and financial matters.

By an August note [A/59/297], the Secretary-General submitted to the General Assembly the 2002 report of OPCW, in accordance with the Agreement concerning the Relationship between the United Nations and OPCW, which was signed in 2000 [YUN 2000, p. 516] and entered into force in 2001 [YUN 2001, p. 495].

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 22 October [meeting 40], the General Assembly adopted resolution 59/7 [draft: A/59/L.8 & Add.1] without vote [agenda item 56 (m)].

Cooperation between the United Nations and the Organization for the Prohibition of Chemical Weapons

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 57/45 of 21 November 2002 on cooperation between the United Nations and the Organization for the Prohibition of Chemical Weapons,

Having received the annual report for 2002 of the Organization for the Prohibition of Chemical Weapons on the implementation of the Convention on the Prohibition of the Development, Production, Stockpiling and Use of Chemical Weapons and on Their Destruction,

1. Takes note of the annual report for 2002 of the Organization for the Prohibition of Chemical Weapons submitted on its behalf by its Director-General;

2. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its sixty-first session the sub-item entitled "Cooperation between the United Nations and the Organization for the Prohibition of Chemical Weapons".

Conventional weapons

Programme of Action on illicit trade in small arms

In 2004, the international community continued to make progress in efforts to address problems relating to the spread of small arms and light weapons, particularly regarding the implementation of the Programme of Action to Prevent, Combat and Eradicate the Illicit Trade in Small Arms and Light Weapons in All Its Aspects [YUN 2001, p. 499]. The open-ended working group established by the General Assembly in resolution 58/241 [YUN 2003, p. 564] to negotiate an international instrument to help identify and trace illicit small arms and light weapons began its work. Other broad-based consultations were undertaken to enhance international cooperation in combating the small arms problem. In January, the Security Council called for international cooperation to prevent the diversion of small arms and light weapons to terrorist groups, particularly Al-Qaida (see below). The General Assembly, in resolutions 59/74 (see p. 560) and 59/86 (see p. 561), called for strengthening the capacity of civil society to combat the illicit trade in small arms and for regional measures to tackle the problem. In further action, the Assembly, in resolution 59/90 (see p. 566), urged Member States to support efforts to prevent the illicit transfer and use of man-portable air defence systems. National, regional and subregional initiatives undertaken in regard to small arms and light weapons increased significantly during the year, including the establishment of coordinating bodies in many countries, the adoption and strengthening of national laws, regulations and controls, weapons collection and destruction activities, and the establishment of arrangements for cooperation, networking and exchange of information at the regional and subregional levels.

SECURITY COUNCIL ACTION

On 19 January [meeting 4896], following consultations among Security Council members, the President made statement S/PRST/2004/1 on behalf of the Council:

The Security Council welcomes the report of the Secretary-General of 31 December 2003 on the implementation of his recommendations to the Council on small arms, and reaffirms the statements by its President of 24 September 1999 (S/PRST/1999/28), 31 August 2001 (S/PRST/2001/21) and 31 October 2002 (S/PRST/2002/30).

The Council recalls its primary responsibility under the Charter of the United Nations for the maintenance of international peace and security, in view of which its attention is drawn inevitably to the illicit trade of small arms and light weapons, as such weapons are the most frequently used in armed conflicts. The Council reaffirms the inherent right of individual or collective self-defence in accordance with Article 51 of the Charter and, subject to the Charter, the right of each State to import, produce and retain small arms and light weapons for its self-defence and security needs.

The Council welcomes all efforts already undertaken by Member States, and calls upon them to fully implement at the national, regional and international levels the recommendations contained in the Programme of Action to Prevent, Combat and Eradicate the Illicit Trade in Small Arms and Light Weapons in All Its Aspects, adopted on 20 July 2001 by the United Nations Conference on the Illicit Trade in Small Arms and Light Weapons in All Its Aspects.

The Council welcomes General Assembly resolution 58/241 of 23 December 2003 by which, among other things, it decided to establish an open-ended working group to negotiate an international instrument to enable States to identify and trace, in a timely and reliable manner, illicit small arms and light weapons, and calls upon all Member States to support all efforts aimed at this purpose.

The Council encourages the arms-exporting countries to exercise the highest degree of responsibility in small arms and light weapons transactions. It also encourages international and regional cooperation in the consideration of the origin and transfers of small arms and light weapons in order to prevent their diversion to terrorist groups, in particular, Al-Qaida. The Council welcomes the significant steps that have been taken by Member States in this regard. The obligation of Member States to enforce the arms embargo should be coupled with enhanced international and regional cooperation concerning arms exports.

The Council reiterates its call upon all Member States to effectively implement arms embargoes and other sanction measures imposed by the Council in its relevant resolutions, and urges Member States in a position to do so to provide assistance to interested States in strengthening their capacity to fulfil their obligations in this regard. The Council encourages Member States to undertake vigorous actions aimed at restricting the supply of small arms, light weapons and ammunitions to areas of instability. The Council further encourages Member States to provide the Sanctions Committees with available information on alleged violations of arms embargoes, and also calls upon Member States to give due consideration to the recommendations of the related reports.

The Council continues to recognize the need to engage the relevant international organizations, non-governmental organizations, business and financial institutions and other actors at the international, regional and local levels to contribute to the implementation of arms embargoes.

The Council reiterates the importance of carrying out disarmament, demobilization and reintegration programmes, an increasingly essential component of peacekeeping mandates, as comprehensively and effectively as possible in post-conflict situations under its consideration.

The Council takes note of the inclusion of man-portable air defence systems, on an exceptional basis, in the United Nations Register on Conventional Arms.

The Council requests the Secretary-General to update the Council for its next meeting on the subject on the further implementation of the recommendations contained in his report on small arms of 20 September 2002.

Working Group activities. The Open-ended Working Group to Negotiate an International Instrument to Enable States to Identify and Trace, in a Timely and Reliable Manner, Illicit Small Arms and Light Weapons, established by General Assembly resolution 58/241 [YUN 2003, p. 564], held an organizational session (3 February) and its first substantive session (14-25 June), both in New York. In June, the Working Group, in addition to holding a general debate, organized thematic discussions of the three main elements of tracing—marking, record-keeping and international cooperation. The Working group used as a basis for its discussions the report of the Group of Governmental Experts that had examined the feasibility of developing the proposed instrument [YUN 2003, p. 562] and the Protocol against the Illicit Manufacturing of and Trafficking in Firearms, Their Parts and Components and Ammunition, supplementing the United Nations Convention against Transnational Organized Crime [YUN 2001, p. 1036]. Divergent views were expressed on several issues, including the scope and nature of the instrument, marking small arms and light weapons at the time of import, the right to initiate a request for tracing, and the role of the United Nations and other international organizations in supporting the operation of the proposed instrument. The Working Group agreed that its Chairman would produce the first draft of an instrument before the convening of the second session in January 2005. The Chairman, on 20 October, held informal consultations with States on elements of a draft instrument.

Other consultations. In response to General Assembly resolution 58/241 [YUN 2003, p. 564], which called for further steps to enhance international cooperation in preventing, combating and eradicating illicit brokering in small arms and light weapons, the Department for Disarmament Affairs (DDA) organized a number of informal consultations for Member States, international organizations and civil society groups. DDA ensured that the issue of illicit brokering was included in the agenda of the regional meetings it organized during the year. The key issues of concern raised during the consultations were the definition of “brokering” and whether related activities, such as financing, transport and export controls, should be included in the definition. Other matters of concern were the need to strengthen an international regime on brokering and the need for a set of minimum standards and controls to be adopted by Member States. The participants agreed that the consultations had been useful and should be continued, particularly at the regional level.

Report of Secretary-General. Pursuant to General Assembly resolutions 58/58 [YUN 2003, p. 563] and 58/241 [ibid., p. 564], the Secretary-General, in a report covering July 2003 to July 2004 [A/59/181], summarized national, sub-regional and regional activities undertaken in Africa in response to States’ requests for UN assistance in curbing the illicit trade in small arms and to collect and dispose of them. He also reviewed action by the UN system and by States to implement the Programme of Action to combat illicit trade. The Secretary-General concluded that the implementation of the Programme of Action gained momentum as States, the United Nations and other organizations had consolidated previous activities and developed new ones, often involving civil society and non-governmental organizations (NGOs). The establishment of the Open-ended Working Group (see above) was a significant step in the development of international norms to fight the scourge of illicit small arms and light weapons. However, the consultations on illicit brokering highlighted the complex nature of the small arms challenge and the need to develop States’ capacity to address its many facets. The initiatives undertaken by UN departments, specialized agencies and funds under the auspices of the Coordinating Action on Small Arms mechanism [YUN 1998, p. 525] illustrated that assistance to States and development of capacity to implement the Programme of Action remained a priority of the United Nations in its efforts to prevent, combat and eradicate the illicit trade in small arms and light weapons.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 3 December [meeting 66], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the First Committee [A/59/459 & Corr.1], adopted resolution 59/74 without vote [agenda item 65 (y)].

Assistance to States for curbing the illicit traffic in small arms and collecting them

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 58/58 of 8 December 2003 on assistance to States for curbing the illicit traffic in small arms and collecting them,

Considering that the illicit proliferation and circulation of and traffic in small arms impede development, constitute a threat to populations and to national and regional security and are a factor contributing to the destabilization of States,

Deeply disturbed by the magnitude of the illicit proliferation and circulation of and traffic in small arms in the States of the Sahelo-Saharan subregion,

Noting with satisfaction the conclusions of the United Nations advisory missions dispatched by the Secretary-General to the affected countries of the subregion to study the most appropriate way of halting the illicit circulation of small arms and collecting them,

Welcoming the designation of the Department for Disarmament Affairs of the Secretariat as a centre for the coordination of all activities of United Nations bodies concerned with small arms,

Congratulating the Secretary-General for his report on the causes of conflict and the promotion of durable peace and sustainable development in Africa, and bearing in mind the statement on small arms made by the President of the Security Council on 24 September 1999,

Welcoming the recommendations resulting from the meetings of the States of the subregion held at Banjul, Algiers, Bamako, Yamoussoukro and Niamey to establish close regional cooperation with a view to strengthening security,

Welcoming also the decision taken by the Economic Community of West African States to renew the Declaration of a Moratorium on the Importation, Exportation and Manufacture of Small Arms and Light Weapons in West Africa, adopted by the Heads of State and Government of the Economic Community at Abuja on 31 October 1998,

Recalling the Algiers Declaration adopted by the Assembly of Heads of State and Government of the Organization of African Unity at its thirty-fifth ordinary session, held at Algiers from 12 to 14 July 1999,

Emphasizing the need to advance efforts towards wider cooperation and better coordination in the struggle against the illicit proliferation of small arms through the common understanding reached at the meeting on small arms held at Oslo on 13 and 14 July 1998 and the Brussels Call for Action adopted by the International Conference on Sustainable Disarmament for Sustainable Development, held at Brussels on 12 and 13 October 1998,

Bearing in mind the Bamako Declaration on an African Common Position on the Illicit Proliferation, Circulation and Trafficking of Small Arms and Light Weapons, adopted at Bamako on 1 December 2000,

Recalling the millennium report of the Secretary-General,

Welcoming the Programme of Action to Prevent, Combat and Eradicate the Illicit Trade in Small Arms and Light Weapons in All Its Aspects, adopted by the United Nations Conference on the Illicit Trade in Small Arms and Light Weapons in All Its Aspects, and calling for its expeditious implementation,

Recognizing the important role that the organizations of civil society play in detection, prevention and raising public awareness, in efforts to curb the illicit traffic in small arms,

Welcoming the convening of the Open-ended Working Group to Negotiate an International Instrument to Enable States to Identify and Trace, in a Timely and Reliable Manner, Illicit Small Arms and Light Weapons, which held its first session in New York from 14 to 25 June 2004,

1. Notes with satisfaction the Declaration of the Ministerial Conference on Security, Stability, Development and Cooperation in Africa, held at Abuja on 8 and 9 May 2000, and encourages the Secretary-General to pursue his efforts in the context of the implementation of General Assembly resolution 49/75 G of 15 December 1994 and the recommendations of the United Nations advisory missions, aimed at curbing the illicit circulation of small arms and collecting such arms in the affected States that so request, with the support of the United Nations Regional Centre for Peace and Disarmament in Africa and in close cooperation with the African Union;

2. Encourages the international community to support the implementation of the moratorium on the importation, exportation and manufacture of small arms and light weapons in West Africa;

3. Encourages the establishment in the countries of the Sahelo-Saharan subregion of national commissions to combat the illicit proliferation of small arms, and invites the international community to lend its support wherever possible to ensure the smooth functioning of the commissions;

4. Also encourages the involvement of organizations and associations of civil society in the efforts of the national commissions to combat the illicit traffic in small arms and their participation in the implementation of the moratorium on the importation, exportation and manufacture of small arms and light weapons in West Africa as well as in the implementation of the Programme of Action to Prevent, Combat and Eradicate the Illicit Trade in Small Arms and Light Weapons in All Its Aspects;

5. Further encourages cooperation among State organs, international organizations and civil society in combating the illicit traffic in small arms and supporting operations to collect the said arms in the subregions;

6. Calls upon the international community to provide technical and financial support to strengthen the capacity of civil organizations to take action to combat the illicit trade in small arms;

7. Takes note of the conclusions of the meeting of Ministers for Foreign Affairs of the Economic Community of West African States, held at Bamako on 24 and 25 March 1999, on the modalities for the implementation of the Programme for Coordination and Assistance for Security and Development, and welcomes the adoption by the meeting of a plan of action;

8. Takes note also of the conclusions of the African Conference on the Implementation of the United Nations Programme of Action on Small Arms: Needs and Partnerships, held at Pretoria from 18 to 21 March 2002;

9. Invites the Secretary-General and those States and organizations that are in a position to do so to provide assistance to States for curbing the illicit traffic in small arms and collecting them;

10. Requests the Secretary-General to continue to consider the matter and to report to the General Assembly at its sixtieth session on the implementation of the present resolution;

11. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its sixtieth session the item entitled "Assistance to States for curbing the illicit traffic in small arms and collecting them".

Also on 3 December [meeting 66], the Assembly, on the recommendation of the First Committee [A/59/459 & Corr.1], adopted resolution 59/86 without vote [agenda item 65 (z)].

The illicit trade in small arms and light weapons in all its aspects

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 56/24 V of 24 December 2001, 57/72 of 22 November 2002 and 58/241 of 23 December 2003,

Emphasizing the importance of early and full implementation of the Programme of Action to Prevent, Combat and Eradicate the Illicit Trade in Small Arms and Light Weapons in All Its Aspects, adopted by the United Nations Conference on the Illicit Trade in Small Arms and Light Weapons in All Its Aspects,

Welcoming the efforts by Member States to submit, on a voluntary basis, national reports on their implementation of the Programme of Action,

Noting with satisfaction regional and subregional efforts being undertaken in support of the implementation of the Programme of Action, and commending the progress that has already been made in this regard,

Taking note of the report of the Secretary-General on the implementation of resolution 58/241,

Welcoming the convening of the Open-ended Working Group to Negotiate an International Instrument to Enable States to Identify and Trace, in a Timely and Reliable Manner, Illicit Small Arms and Light Weapons, which held its first two-week substantive session in New York from 14 to 25 June 2004,

Welcoming also the broad-based consultations held by the Secretary-General with all Member States, interested regional and subregional organizations, international agencies and experts in the field on further steps to enhance international cooperation in preventing, combating and eradicating illicit brokering in small arms and light weapons, and noting the report of the Secretary-General in this regard,

1. Decides that the United Nations conference to review progress made in the implementation of the Programme of Action to Prevent, Combat and Eradicate the Illicit Trade in Small Arms and Light Weapons in All Its Aspects shall be held in New York for a period of two weeks, from 26 June to 7 July 2006;

2. Also decides that the preparatory committee for the conference shall hold a two-week session in New York from 9 to 20 January 2006, and reiterates that, if necessary, a subsequent session of up to two weeks in duration may be held;

3. Further decides that the second biennial meeting of States, as stipulated in the Programme of Action, to consider the national, regional and global implementation of the Programme of Action shall be held in New York from 11 to 15 July 2005;

4. Expresses its appreciation for the efforts undertaken by the Chair of the Open-ended Working Group to Negotiate an International Instrument to Enable States to Identify and Trace, in a Timely and Reliable Manner, Illicit Small Arms and Light Weapons, encourages the continued active participation of delegations in the remaining sessions of the Open-ended Working Group, and stresses the importance of making every effort to ensure that a positive outcome is achieved by the Open-ended Working Group;

5. Requests the Secretary-General, while seeking the views of States, to continue to hold broad-based consultations, within available financial resources, with all Member States and interested regional and subregional organizations on further steps to enhance international cooperation in preventing, combating and eradicating illicit brokering in small arms and light weapons, with a view to establishing, after the 2006 review conference and no later than 2007, and after the conclusion of the work of the Open-ended Working Group, a group of governmental experts, appointed by him on the basis of equitable geographical representation, to consider further steps to enhance international cooperation in preventing, combating and eradicating illicit brokering in small arms and light weapons, and requests the Secretary-General to report to the General Assembly at its sixtieth session on the outcome of his consultations;

6. Reaffirms the importance of ongoing efforts at the regional and subregional levels in support of the implementation of the Programme of Action, and invites all Member States that have not yet done so to examine the possibility of developing and adopting regional and subregional measures, as appropriate, to combat the illicit trade in small arms and light weapons in all its aspects;

7. Continues to encourage all initiatives to mobilize resources and expertise to promote the implementation of the Programme of Action and to provide assistance to States in its implementation;

8. Requests the Secretary-General to continue to collate and circulate data and information provided by States on a voluntary basis, including national reports, on the implementation by those States of the Programme of Action, and encourages Member States to submit such reports;

9. Also requests the Secretary-General to report to the General Assembly at its sixtieth session on the implementation of the present resolution, including any outcome of the work of the Open-ended Working Group;

10. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its sixtieth session the item entitled "The illicit trade in small arms and light weapons in all its aspects".

(For regional initiatives regarding implementation of the Programme of Action, see pp. 570-576).

Convention on excessively injurious conventional weapons and Protocols

As at 31 December, the accessions of Paraguay, Sri Lanka and Turkmenistan and the ratification by Sierra Leone brought to 97 the number of States parties to the 1980 Convention on Prohibitions or Restrictions on the Use of Certain Conventional Weapons Which May Be Deemed to Be Excessively Injurious or to Have Indiscriminate Effects [YUN 1980, p. 76] and its annexed Protocols on Non-Detectable Fragments (Protocol I); on Prohibitions or Restrictions on the Use of Mines, Booby Traps and Other Devices, as amended on 3 May 1996 (Protocol II) [YUN 1996, p. 484]; and on Prohibitions or Restrictions on the Use of Incendiary Weapons (Protocol III). The 1995 Additional Protocol on Blinding Laser Weapons (Protocol IV) [YUN 1995, p. 221], which took effect on 30 July 1998 [YUN 1998, p. 530], had 79 parties, after Malta, Poland, Sierra Leone and Sri Lanka gave consent in 2004 to be bound by the Protocol.

The Group of Governmental Experts established by the Second Review Conference of the States Parties to the Convention [YUN 2001, p. 504] to consider the issues of explosive remnants of war, mines other than anti-personnel mines, small-calibre weapons and ammunition, and promotion of compliance with the Convention and its annexed Protocols, held its seventh (8-12 March) [CCW/GGE/VII/3 & Add.1], eighth (5-16 July) [CCW/GGE/VIII/3] and ninth (8-16 November) [CCW/GGE/IX/2 & Corr.1, 2] sessions in Geneva. The Group discussed issues relating to the weapons under consideration and promoting compliance with the Convention, and in that context, considered working papers and presentations from delegations, international organizations and other participants, including military experts. On 16 November, the Group endorsed the recommendations of its working groups on explosive remnants of war and on mines other than anti-personnel mines, which were annexed to the report on its ninth session. The Group agreed that the intersessional work of up to five weeks would be undertaken in three sessions during 2005, and it recommended that follow-up work arising from the 2004 Meeting of the States Parties (see below) should be overseen by the Chairman-designate of the 2005 Meeting, scheduled to be held in conjunction with the Seventh (2005) Annual Conference of the States Parties to Amended Protocol II.

The Sixth Annual Conference of the States Parties to Amended Protocol II (Geneva, 17 November) [CCW/AP.II/CONF.6/3] reviewed the operation and status of the Protocol, considered related issues and examined national reports received from 50 States parties. The Conference adopted conclusions, recommendations and an appeal to States to accede to Amended Protocol II. It recommended that the Secretary-General, as depositary, and the President of the Conference exercise their authority to achieve the goal of universality of the Protocol and called on the States parties to promote wider adherence in their respective regions.

The Meeting of the States Parties (Geneva, 18-19 November) [CCW/MSP/2004/2 & Corr.1] considered the work of the Group of Governmental Experts and decided that the Group should continue its work in 2005 in three sessions. The working group on explosive remnants of war was mandated to continue its consideration of the implementation of existing principles of international humanitarian law and possible preventive measures, aimed at improving the design of certain types of munitions, with a view to minimizing the risk of their becoming explosive remnants of war. The working group on mines other than anti-personnel mines was asked to consider all proposals put forward. The Meeting decided that the Seventh Annual Conference of the States Parties to Amended Protocol II would be held in November 2005 in Geneva, and that its Chairperson-designate should undertake consultations on options to promote compliance with the Convention and its annexed Protocols.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 3 December [meeting 66], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the First Committee [A/59/463], adopted resolution 59/107 without vote [agenda item 69].

Convention on Prohibitions or Restrictions on the Use of Certain Conventional Weapons Which May Be Deemed to Be Excessively Injurious or to Have Indiscriminate Effects

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 58/69 of 8 December 2003,

Recalling with satisfaction the adoption and the entry into force of the Convention on Prohibitions or Restrictions on the Use of Certain Conventional Weapons Which May Be Deemed to Be Excessively Injurious or to Have Indiscriminate Effects, and the Protocol on Non-Detectable Fragments (Protocol I), the Protocol on Prohibitions or Restrictions on the Use of Mines, Booby Traps and Other Devices (Protocol II) and its amended version, the Protocol on Prohibitions or Restrictions on the Use of Incendiary Weapons (Protocol III) and the Protocol on Blinding Laser Weapons (Protocol IV),

Recalling the decision by the Second Review Conference of the States Parties to the Convention on Prohibitions or Restrictions on the Use of Certain Conventional Weapons Which May Be Deemed to Be Excessively Injurious or to Have Indiscriminate Effects to establish an open-ended group of governmental experts with two separate coordinators on explosive remnants of war and on mines other than anti-personnel mines,

Recalling also the role played by the International Committee of the Red Cross in the elaboration of the Convention and the Protocols thereto, and welcoming the particular efforts of various international, non-governmental and other organizations in raising awareness of the humanitarian consequences of explosive remnants of war,

1. Calls upon all States that have not yet done so to take all measures to become parties, as soon as possible, to the Convention on Prohibitions or Restrictions on the Use of Certain Conventional Weapons Which May Be Deemed to Be Excessively Injurious or to Have Indiscriminate Effects and the Protocols thereto, as amended, with a view to achieving the widest possible adherence to these instruments at an early date, and so as to ultimately achieve their universality;

2. Calls upon all States parties to the Convention that have not yet done so to express their consent to be bound by the Protocols to the Convention and the amendment extending the scope of the Convention and the Protocols thereto to include armed conflicts of a non-international character;

3. Welcomes with satisfaction the adoption of the Protocol on Explosive Remnants of War (Protocol V) at the Meeting of the States Parties held at Geneva on 27 and

28 November 2003, and calls upon the States parties to express their consent to be bound by the Protocol and to notify the depositary at an early date of their consent;

4. Notes the decision of the Meeting of the States Parties that the Working Group on Explosive Remnants of War would continue its work in 2004 with the mandate to continue to consider the implementation of existing principles of international humanitarian law and to further study, on an open-ended basis, and initially with particular emphasis on meetings of military and technical experts, possible preventive measures aimed at improving the design of certain specific types of munitions, including sub-munitions, with a view to minimizing the humanitarian risk of these munitions becoming explosive remnants of war;

5. Also notes the decision of the Meeting of the States Parties that the Working Group on Mines Other Than Anti-Personnel Mines would continue its work in 2004 with the mandate to consider all proposals on mines other than anti-personnel mines put forward since the establishment of the Group of Governmental Experts;

6. Further notes the decision of the Meeting of the States Parties that the Chairman-designate should continue to undertake consultations during the inter-sessional period on possible options to promote compliance with the Convention and the Protocols thereto, taking into account proposals put forward;

7. Expresses support for the work conducted by the Group of Governmental Experts, and encourages the Chairman-designate and the Group to conduct work, in accordance with the mandate for 2004, with the aim of elaborating appropriate recommendations on mines other than anti-personnel mines, for submission to the Meeting of the States Parties on 18 and 19 November 2004, and to report on the work done on compliance, as well as on the implementation of existing principles of international humanitarian law and on possible preventive technical measures in relation to explosive remnants of war;

8. Recalls the decision of the Second Review Conference of the States Parties to the Convention on Prohibitions or Restrictions on the Use of Certain Conventional Weapons Which May Be Deemed to Be Excessively Injurious or to Have Indiscriminate Effects to convene a further conference not later than 2006, with preparatory meetings starting as early as 2005, if necessary, and requests the Meeting of the States Parties on 18 and 19 November 2004 to consider this issue;

9. Requests the Secretary-General to render the necessary assistance and to provide such services, including summary records, as may be required for the Meeting of the States Parties on 18 and 19 November 2004, as well as for any possible continuation of work after the Meeting, should the States parties deem it appropriate;

10. Also requests the Secretary-General, in his capacity as depositary of the Convention and the Protocols thereto, to continue to inform the General Assembly periodically, by electronic means, of ratifications and accessions of and accessions to the Convention and the Protocols thereto;

11. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its sixtieth session the item entitled "Convention on Prohibitions or Restrictions on the Use of Certain Conventional Weapons Which May Be Deemed to Be Excessively Injurious or to Have Indiscriminate Effects".

Practical disarmament

The Group of Interested States, established in 1998 [YUN 1998, p. 531] to examine and support concrete projects of practical disarmament, met three times during 2004 to assess current and new project proposals and recent requests for assistance by Governments. It provided support for practical disarmament efforts of countries of the League of Arab States and of the Economic Community of West African States, particularly within the context of their fight against the proliferation of small arms and light weapons. The Group also considered other projects to assist Member States in tackling the small arms problem and reviewed related requests from Burundi, Nigeria and Tajikistan.

The General Assembly invited the Group to continue to analyse lessons learned from previous disarmament and peace-building projects, and to promote new practical disarmament measures to consolidate peace, especially as undertaken or designed by affected States themselves, regional and subregional organizations and UN agencies (see below).

Disarmament Commission action. In 2004 [A/59/42], the Disarmament Commission, while deliberating on possible agenda items, considered a number of proposals relating to practical disarmament measures. However, owing to disagreements among delegations, the Commission was not able to reach consensus on its substantive agenda and decided to continue deliberations on the issue in 2005.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 3 December [meeting 66], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the First Committee [A/59/459 & Corr.1], adopted resolution 59/82 without vote [agenda item 65].

Consolidation of peace through practical disarmament measures

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 51/45 N of 10 December 1996, 52/38 G of 9 December 1997, 53/77 M of 4 December 1998, 54/54 H of 1 December 1999, 55/33 G of 20 November 2000, 56/24 P of 29 November 2001 and 57/81 of 22 November 2002 and its decision 58/519 of 8 December 2003, entitled "Consolidation of peace through practical disarmament measures",

Convinced that a comprehensive and integrated approach towards certain practical disarmament measures often is a prerequisite to maintaining and consolidating peace and security and thus provides a basis for effective post-conflict peace-building; such measures include: collection and responsible disposal, preferably through destruction, of weapons obtained through illicit trafficking or illicit manufacture as well as of weapons and ammunition declared by competent national authorities to be surplus to requirements, particularly with regard to small arms and light weapons, unless another form of disposition or use has been officially authorized and provided that such weapons have been duly marked and registered; confidence-building measures; disarmament, demobilization and reintegration of former combatants; demining; and conversion,

Noting with satisfaction that the international community is more than ever aware of the importance of such practical disarmament measures, especially with regard to the growing problems arising from the excessive accumulation and uncontrolled spread of small arms and light weapons, which pose a threat to peace and security and reduce the prospects for economic development in many regions, particularly in post-conflict situations,

Stressing that further efforts are needed in order to develop and effectively implement programmes of practical disarmament in affected areas as part of disarmament, demobilization and reintegration measures so as to complement, on a case-by-case basis, peacekeeping and peace-building efforts,

Taking note with appreciation of the report of the Secretary-General on prevention of armed conflict, which, inter alia, refers to the role which the proliferation and the illicit transfer of small arms and light weapons play in the context of the build-up and sustaining of conflicts,

Taking note of the statement by the President of the Security Council of 31 August 2001 underlining the importance of practical disarmament measures in the context of armed conflicts, and, with regard to disarmament, demobilization and reintegration programmes, emphasizing the importance of measures to contain the security risks stemming from the use of illicit small arms and light weapons,

Also taking note of the report of the Secretary-General prepared with the assistance of the Group of Governmental Experts on Small Arms and, in particular, the recommendations contained therein, as an important contribution to the consolidation of the peace process through practical disarmament measures,

Welcoming the work of the Coordinating Action on Small Arms, which was established by the Secretary-General to bring about a holistic and multidisciplinary approach to this complex and multifaceted global problem and to cooperate with non-governmental organizations in the implementation of practical disarmament measures,

Welcoming also the report of the First Biennial Meeting of States to Consider the Implementation of the Programme of Action to Prevent, Combat and Eradicate the Illicit Trade in Small Arms and Light Weapons in All Its Aspects, held in New York from 7 to 11 July 2003, as well as the convening of the open-ended working group to negotiate an international instrument to enable States to identify and trace, in a timely and reliable manner, illicit small arms and light weapons,

1. Stresses the particular relevance of the "Guidelines on conventional arms control/limitation and disarmament, with particular emphasis on consolidation of peace in the context of General Assembly resolution

51/45 N", adopted by the Disarmament Commission by consensus at its 1999 substantive session;

2. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General on the consolidation of peace through practical disarmament measures, submitted pursuant to resolution 51/45 N, and once again encourages Member States as well as regional arrangements and agencies to lend their support to the implementation of recommendations contained therein;

3. Emphasizes the importance of including in United Nations-mandated peacekeeping missions, as appropriate and with the consent of the host State, practical disarmament measures aimed at addressing the problem of the illicit trade in small arms and light weapons in conjunction with disarmament, demobilization and reintegration programmes aimed at former combatants, with a view to promoting an integrated comprehensive and effective weapons management strategy that would contribute to a sustainable peace-building process;

4. Welcomes the activities undertaken by the Group of Interested States, and invites the Group to continue to analyse lessons learned from previous disarmament and peace-building projects, as well as to promote new practical disarmament measures to consolidate peace, especially as undertaken or designed by affected States themselves, regional and subregional organizations as well as United Nations agencies;

5. Encourages Member States, including the Group of Interested States, to lend their support to the Secretary-General, relevant international, regional and subregional organizations, in accordance with Chapter VIII of the Charter of the United Nations, and non-governmental organizations in responding to requests by Member States to collect and destroy small arms and light weapons in post-conflict situations;

6. Welcomes the synergies within the multi-stakeholder process, including Governments, the United Nations system, regional and subregional organizations and institutions as well as non-governmental organizations in support of practical disarmament measures and the Programme of Action to Prevent, Combat and Eradicate the Illicit Trade in Small Arms and Light Weapons in All Its Aspects, in particular, inter alia through the Coordinating Action on Small Arms;

7. Thanks the Secretary-General for his report on the implementation of resolution 57/81, taking into consideration the activities of the Group of Interested States in this regard;

8. Welcomes the report of the Secretary-General on disarmament and non-proliferation education, as well as his report on the United Nations Disarmament Information Programme;

9. Requests the Secretary-General to submit to the General Assembly at its sixty-first session a report on the implementation of practical disarmament measures, taking into consideration the activities of the Group of Interested States in this regard;

10. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its sixty-first session the item entitled "Consolidation of peace through practical disarmament measures".

Transparency

Conference on Disarmament. In 2004, the Conference on Disarmament [A/59/27] was not able to establish or re-establish any mechanism to deal with seven issues on its agenda, including transparency in armaments, owing to the deadlock over a substantive programme of work. Consequently, the item was considered at plenary meetings, during which delegates reaffirmed or further elaborated their respective positions on the issue.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 3 December [meeting 66], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the First Committee [A/59/459 & Corr.1], adopted three resolutions and a decision relating to transparency in conventional arms transfers. The Assembly adopted resolution 59/66 without vote [agenda item 65 (I)].

National legislation on transfer of arms, military equipment and dual-use goods and technology

The General Assembly,

Recognizing that disarmament, arms control and non-proliferation are essential for the maintenance of international peace and security,

Recalling that effective national control of the transfer of arms, military equipment and dual-use goods and technology, including those transfers that could contribute to proliferation activities, is an important tool for achieving those objectives,

Recalling also that the States parties to the international disarmament and non-proliferation treaties have undertaken to facilitate the fullest possible exchange of materials, equipment and technological information for peaceful purposes, in accordance with the provisions of those treaties,

Considering that the exchange of national legislation, regulations and procedures on the transfer of arms, military equipment and dual-use goods and technology contributes to mutual understanding and confidence among Member States,

Convinced that such an exchange would be beneficial to Member States that are in the process of developing such legislation,

Reaffirming the inherent right of individual or collective self-defence in accordance with Article 51 of the Charter of the United Nations,

1. Invites Member States that are in a position to do so, without prejudice to the provisions contained in Security Council resolution 1540(2004) of 28 April 2004, to enact or improve national legislation, regulations and procedures to exercise effective control over the transfer of arms, military equipment and dual-use goods and technology, while ensuring that such legislation, regulations and procedures are consistent with the obligations of States parties under international treaties;

2. Encourages Member States to provide, on a voluntary basis, information to the Secretary-General on their national legislation, regulations and procedures on the transfer of arms, military equipment and dual-use goods and technology, as well as the changes therein, and requests the Secretary-General to make this information accessible to Member States;

3. Decides to remain attentive to the matter.

The Assembly adopted resolution 59/90 without vote [agenda item 65].

Prevention of the illicit transfer and unauthorized access to and use of man-portable air defence systems

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 58/42 and 58/54 of 8 December 2003 and 58/241 of 23 December 2003,

Recognizing that disarmament, arms control and non-proliferation are essential for the maintenance of international peace and security,

Acknowledging the authorized trade in man-portable air defence systems between Governments and the legitimate right of Governments to possess such weapons in the interests of their national security,

Recognizing the threat posed to civil aviation, peace-keeping, crisis management and security by the illicit transfer and unauthorized access to and use of man-portable air defence systems,

Taking into account that man-portable air defence systems are easily carried, concealed, fired and, in certain circumstances, obtained,

Recognizing that effective control over man-portable air defence systems acquires special importance in the context of the intensified international fight against global terrorism,

Convinced of the importance of effective national control of transfers of man-portable air defence systems and the safe and effective management of stockpiles of such weapons,

Welcoming the ongoing efforts of various international and regional forums to enhance transport security and to strengthen management of man-portable air defence systems stockpiles in order to prevent the illicit transfer and unauthorized access to and use of such weapons,

Noting the importance of information exchange and transparency in the trade in man-portable air defence systems to build confidence and security among States and to prevent the illicit trade in and unauthorized access to such weapons,

1. Emphasizes the importance of the full implementation of the Programme of Action to Prevent, Combat and Eradicate the Illicit Trade in Small Arms and Light Weapons in All Its Aspects, adopted by the United Nations Conference on the Illicit Trade in Small Arms and Light Weapons in All Its Aspects;

2. Urges Member States to support current international, regional and national efforts to combat and prevent the illicit transfer of man-portable air defence systems and unauthorized access to and use of such weapons;

3. Stresses the importance of effective and comprehensive national controls on the production, stockpiling, transfer and brokering of man-portable air defence systems to prevent the illicit trade in and unauthorized access to and use of such weapons;

4. Encourages Member States to enact or improve legislation, regulations, procedures and stockpile management practices to exercise effective control over access to and transfer of man-portable air defence systems so as to prevent the illicit transfer and unauthorized access to and use of such weapons;

5. Also encourages Member States to enact or improve legislation, regulations and procedures to ban the transfer of man-portable air defence systems to non-State end-users and to ensure that such weapons are exported only to Governments or agents authorized by a Government;

6. Encourages initiatives to exchange information and to mobilize resources and technical expertise to assist States, at their request, in enhancing national controls and stockpile management practices to prevent unauthorized access to and use and transfer of man-portable air defence systems and to destroy excess or obsolete stockpiles of such weapons, as appropriate;

7. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its sixtieth session an item entitled "Prevention of the illicit transfer and unauthorized access to and use of man-portable air defence systems".

The Assembly adopted resolution 59/92 without vote [agenda item 65].

Information on confidence-building measures in the field of conventional arms

The General Assembly,

Guided by the purposes and principles enshrined in the Charter of the United Nations,

Bearing in mind the contribution of confidence-building measures in the field of conventional arms, adopted on the initiative and with the agreement of the States concerned, to the improvement of the overall international peace and security situation,

Convinced that the relationship between the development of confidence-building measures in the field of conventional arms and the international security environment can also be mutually reinforcing,

Considering the important role that confidence-building measures in the field of conventional arms can also play in creating favourable conditions for progress in the field of disarmament,

Recognizing that the exchange of information on confidence-building measures in the field of conventional arms contributes to mutual understanding and confidence among Member States,

1. Welcomes all confidence-building measures in the field of conventional arms already undertaken by Member States as well as the information on such measures voluntarily provided;

2. Encourages Member States to continue to adopt confidence-building measures in the field of conventional arms and to provide information in that regard;

3. Also encourages Member States to engage in a dialogue on confidence-building measures in the field of conventional arms;

4. Requests the Secretary-General to establish, with the financial support of States in a position to do so, an electronic database containing information provided by Member States and to assist them, at their request, in the organization of seminars, courses and workshops aimed at enhancing the knowledge of new developments in this field;

5. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its sixtieth session an item entitled "Information on confidence-building measures in the field of conventional arms".

Also on 3 December, the Assembly decided to include in the provisional agenda of its sixtieth (2005) session an item entitled "Problems arising from the accumulation of conventional ammunition stockpiles in surplus" (decision 59/515).

UN Register of Conventional Arms

In response to General Assembly resolution 58/54 [YUN 2003, p. 568], the Secretary-General submitted the twelfth annual report on the United Nations Register of Conventional Arms [A/59/193 & Corr.1, Add.1], established in 1992 [YUN 1992, p. 75] to promote enhanced transparency on arms transfers.

The report presented information provided by 114 Governments on imports and exports in 2003 in the seven categories of conventional arms (battle tanks, armoured combat vehicles, large-calibre artillery systems, attack helicopters, combat aircraft, warships and missiles and missile launchers). Governments also provided information on procurement from national production and military holdings, on the continuing operation of the Register and its further development and on transparency measures related to WMDs. The report indicated a reduction in the number of submissions from 119 in 2002.

Regarding the recommendations contained in the 2003 report of the Group of Governmental Experts on the operation and development of the Register [YUN 2003, p. 568], the Secretary-General's report stated that the scope of the Register had been adapted in conformity with those recommendations and described the adjustments made to reporting requirements. His report also highlighted the variety of activities undertaken by the Secretariat during the year, through DDA, in collaboration with Governments and regional organizations, to enhance awareness of the Register and to encourage greater participation in it.

Transparency of military expenditures

In response to General Assembly resolution 58/28 [YUN 2003, p. 570], the Secretary-General, in a July report and later addendum, presented reports from 79 Member States on military expenditures for the latest fiscal year for which data were available [A/59/192 & Add.1]. The reporting instrument was that recommended by the Assembly in resolution 35/142 B [YUN 1980, p. 88].

The report also described activities undertaken by the Secretariat, through DDA, to promote the standardized instrument for reporting military expenditures, which included DDA's participation in a meeting of the OAS Committee on Hemispheric Security (Washington, D.C., 23 March); progress of reporting through that instrument and the UN Register of Conventional Arms was addressed. DDA, with the financial assistance of Sweden and the United Kingdom, organized a subregional workshop (Nairobi, Kenya, 18-20 May) covering the Horn of Africa and the Great Lakes region, which discussed the technical operation and procedures of both instruments.

The Assembly, in decision 59/512 of 3 December, took note of the First Committee's report [A/59/451] on the reduction of military budgets.

Verification

On 3 December [meeting 66], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the First Committee [A/59/453], adopted resolution 59/60 without vote [agenda item 59].

Verification in all its aspects, including the role of the United Nations in the field of verification

The General Assembly,

Noting the critical importance of and the vital contribution that has been made by effective verification measures in non-proliferation, arms limitation and disarmament agreements and other similar obligations,

Reaffirming its support for the sixteen principles of verification drawn up by the Disarmament Commission,

Recalling its resolutions 40/152 O of 16 December 1985, 41/86 Q of 4 December 1986, 42/42 F of 30 November 1987, 43/81 B of 7 December 1988, 45/65 of 4 December 1990, 47/45 of 9 December 1992, 48/68 of 16 December 1993, 50/61 of 12 December 1995, 52/31 of 9 December 1997, 54/46 of 1 December 1999 and 56/15 of 29 November 2001, as well as its decision 58/515 of 8 December 2003,

Recalling also the reports of the Secretary-General of 11 July 1986, 28 August 1990, 16 September 1992, 26 July 1993, 22 September 1995, 6 August 1997, 9 July 1999, 10 September 2001 and 10 July 2003, and the addenda thereto,

1. Reaffirms the critical importance of and the vital contribution that has been made by effective verification measures in non-proliferation, arms limitation and disarmament agreements and other similar obligations;

2. Requests the Secretary-General to report to the General Assembly at its sixtieth session on further views received from Member States;

3. Also requests the Secretary-General, with the assistance of a panel of government experts to be established in 2006 on the basis of equitable geographic distribution, to explore the question of verification in all its aspects, including the role of the United Nations in the field of verification, and to transmit the report of the panel of experts to the General Assembly for consideration at its sixty-first session;

4. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its sixty-first session the item entitled "Verification in all its aspects, including the role of the United Nations in the field of verification".

Anti-personnel mines

1997 Convention

The number of States parties to the Convention on the Prohibition of the Use, Stockpiling, Production and Transfer of Anti-personnel Mines and on Their Destruction (Mine-Ban Convention or Ottawa Convention), which was adopted in 1997 [YUN 1997, p. 503] and entered into force in 1999 [YUN 1999, p. 498], totalled 144 as at 31 December. During the year, three States adhered to the Convention.

Review Conference

In accordance with article 12 of the Mine-Ban Convention, which provided for a Review Conference five years after the Convention's entry into force, and as decided by the Fifth Meeting of the States Parties [YUN 2003, p. 571], the Convention's First Review Conference was convened (Nairobi, 29 November–3 December) [APLC/CONF/2004/5]. Participants reviewed the operation and status of the Convention and a plan of action to overcome challenges that remained in ending suffering caused by anti-personnel mines, among other issues.

The Conference's final report comprised five main parts, the first of which addressed organizational matters. The other parts contained the following outcome documents: "Review of the operation and status of the Convention on the Prohibition of the Use, Stockpiling, Production and Transfer of Anti-personnel Mines and on Their Destruction: 1999-2004", which emphasized that although great progress had been made in ending the suffering caused by anti-personnel mines, much more needed to be done; "Ending the suffering caused by anti-personnel mines: Nairobi Action Plan 2005-2009", which urged States parties and all others who shared the States parties' aims to take steps to implement the action plan; "Towards a mine-free world: the 2004 Nairobi Declaration", which renewed the States parties' commitment to achieving a world free of anti-personnel mines, in which there were no more new victims; and a "Programme of meetings and related matters to facilitate implementation 2005-2009", which contained the Conference's decision to hold annually, until the Second Review Conference, a Meeting of the States parties. The Conference also decided to convene annually, until 2009, informal intersessional meetings of the Standing Committees in the first half of the year in Geneva; to convene the Second Review Conference in 2009; and to review, as warranted, decisions regarding their 2005-2009 programme of meetings. The Conference decided to hold the next Meeting of the States Parties in Croatia from 28 November to 2 December 2005, and meetings of the Standing Committees in June 2005. Documents before the Conference included information from Governments on the implementation of the Convention [APLC/CONF/

2004/MISC.3, 4, 8, 9] and national and regional perspectives on how to address the problems posed by anti-personnel mines [APLC/CONF/2004/MISC.5/Rev.1, 6, 7].

The Review Conference was preceded by two preparatory meetings, on 13 February [APLC/CONF/2004/PM.1/2] and on 28-29 June [APLC/CONF/2004/PM.2/2], which made and revised recommendations on the provisional agenda, programme of work, cost estimates and draft rules of procedure of the Conference, among other organizational matters.

Communications. The United States, on 17 March [CD/1730], announced a new policy of commitment to eliminate persistent landmines of all types from its arsenal. It would continue to develop non-persistent anti-personnel and anti-tank mines with self-destruct or self-deactivate capabilities. Reaffirming its position that it would not join the Mine-Ban Convention because it would require that needed military capability be given up, the United States said that the new policy markedly reduced the danger posed to civilians from unexploded landmines left behind after military conflicts.

On 6 February [CD/1727], Romania transmitted the report of a workshop it hosted (Bucharest, 2-3 February), which assessed progress and challenges in South-Eastern Europe to clear mined areas, assist victims, destroy stockpiled mines, establish national implementation measures, exchange information and generate resources in complying with the Mine-Ban Convention.

Other relevant conferences or workshops during the year took place in Dushanbe, Tajikistan (15-16 April) [A/58/773], on progress towards the Convention's aims in Central Asia, and in Kunming City, China (26-28 April) [A/58/812], on humanitarian mine/unexploded ordnance clearance technology and cooperation. In Vilnius, Lithuania (8-9 June) [A/58/861], a seminar was held on advancing the Convention in Northern and Eastern Europe, which took stock of the progress made and the challenges that remained in the pursuit of the Convention's aims.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 3 December [meeting 66], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the First Committee [A/59/459 & Corr.1], adopted resolution 59/84 by recorded vote (157-0-22) [agenda item 65 (v)].

Implementation of the Convention on the Prohibition of the Use, Stockpiling, Production and Transfer of Anti-personnel Mines and on Their Destruction

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 54/54 B of 1 December 1999, 55/33 V of 20 November 2000, 56/24 M of 29 November 2001, 57/74 of 22 November 2002 and 58/53 of 8 December 2003,

Reaffirming its determination to put an end to the suffering and casualties caused by anti-personnel mines, which kill or maim hundreds of people every week, mostly innocent and defenceless civilians and especially children, obstruct economic development and reconstruction, inhibit the repatriation of refugees and internally displaced persons and have other severe consequences for years after emplacement,

Believing it necessary to do the utmost to contribute in an efficient and coordinated manner to facing the challenge of removing anti-personnel mines placed throughout the world and to assure their destruction,

Wishing to do the utmost in ensuring assistance for the care and rehabilitation, including the social and economic reintegration, of mine victims,

Welcoming the entry into force, on 1 March 1999, of the Convention on the Prohibition of the Use, Stockpiling, Production and Transfer of Anti-personnel Mines and on Their Destruction, and noting with satisfaction the work undertaken to implement the Convention and the substantial progress made towards addressing the global landmine problem,

Recalling the first to fifth meetings of the States parties to the Convention held in Maputo (1999), Geneva (2000), Managua (2001), Geneva (2002) and Bangkok (2003), and the reaffirmation of a commitment to the total elimination of anti-personnel mines and to pursue, with renewed vigour, efforts to clear mined areas, assist victims, destroy stockpiled anti-personnel mines and promote universal adherence to the Convention,

Recalling also the preparatory process for the First Review Conference of the Convention, to be held in Nairobi from 29 November to 3 December 2004, and the two preparatory meetings held in Geneva on 13 February and on 28 and 29 June 2004 pursuant to the decisions of the Fifth Meeting of the States Parties,

Welcoming the regional seminars that have been held in different parts of the world during 2003 and 2004, which contributed to the exchange of information, experiences and best practices in mine action as well as to preparations for the First Review Conference, and recalling the efforts to enhance cooperation in the regional context and promote synergies between different regions,

Noting with interest the increased recognition of the need to integrate mine action into international and national development programmes and strategies, and, in this respect, welcoming the developments since the Fifth Meeting of the States Parties, including the meeting between the President of the Fifth Meeting of the States Parties and the President of the World Bank on 20 September 2004, which contributed to possible partnership between the mine action community and the World Bank,

Noting with satisfaction that additional States have ratified or acceded to the Convention, bringing the total number of States that have formally accepted the obligations of the Convention to one hundred and forty-three,

Emphasizing the desirability of attracting the adherence of all States to the Convention, and determined to work strenuously towards the promotion of its universalization,

Noting with regret that anti-personnel mines continue to be used in conflicts around the world, causing human suffering and impeding post-conflict development,

1. Invites all States that have not signed the Convention on the Prohibition of the Use, Stockpiling, Production and Transfer of Anti-personnel Mines and on Their Destruction to accede to it without delay;

2. Urges all States that have signed but not ratified the Convention to ratify it without delay;

3. Stresses the importance of the full and effective implementation of and compliance with the Convention;

4. Urges all States parties to provide the Secretary-General with complete and timely information as required under article 7 of the Convention in order to promote transparency and compliance with the Convention;

5. Invites all States that have not ratified the Convention or acceded to it to provide, on a voluntary basis, information to make global mine action efforts more effective;

6. Renews its call upon all States and other relevant parties to work together to promote, support and advance the care, rehabilitation and social and economic reintegration of mine victims, mine risk education programmes and the removal of anti-personnel mines and stockpiles throughout the world and the assurance of their destruction;

7. Invites and encourages all interested States, the United Nations, other relevant international organizations or institutions, regional organizations, the International Committee of the Red Cross and relevant non-governmental organizations to attend the First Review Conference at the highest possible level and, pending a decision to be taken at the First Review Conference, to maintain the high level of participation in the subsequent meetings of the States parties, including their intersessional work programme;

8. Requests the Secretary-General to undertake the preparations necessary to convene the next meeting of the States parties, pending a decision to be taken at the First Review Conference, and to invite States not parties to the Convention, as well as the United Nations, other relevant international organizations or institutions, regional organizations, the International Committee of the Red Cross and relevant non-governmental organizations to attend the meeting as observers;

9. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its sixtieth session the item entitled "Implementation of the Convention on the Prohibition of the Use, Stockpiling, Production and Transfer of Anti-personnel Mines and on Their Destruction".

RECORDED VOTE ON RESOLUTION 59/84:

In favour: Afghanistan, Albania, Algeria, Andorra, Angola, Antigua and Barbuda, Argentina, Armenia, Australia, Austria, Bahamas, Bahrain, Bangladesh, Barbados, Belarus, Belgium, Belize, Benin, Bhutan, Bolivia, Bosnia and Herzegovina, Botswana, Brazil, Brunei Darussalam, Bulgaria, Burkina Faso, Burundi, Cambodia, Cameroon, Canada, Cape Verde, Central African Republic, Chile, Colombia, Comoros, Congo, Costa Rica, Côte d'Ivoire, Croatia, Cyprus, Czech Republic, Denmark, Djibouti, Dominica, Dominican Republic, Ecuador, El Salvador, Equatorial Guinea, Eritrea, Estonia, Ethiopia, Fiji, Finland, France, Gabon, Gambia, Georgia, Germany, Ghana, Greece, Grenada, Guatemala, Guinea-Bissau, Guyana, Haiti, Honduras, Hungary, Iceland, Indonesia, Iraq, Ireland, Italy, Jamaica, Japan, Jordan, Kenya, Latvia, Lesotho, Liberia, Liechtenstein, Lithuania, Luxembourg, Madagascar, Malawi, Malaysia, Maldives, Mali, Malta, Mauritius, Mexico, Monaco, Mongolia, Morocco, Mozambique, Namibia, Netherlands, New Zealand, Nicaragua, Niger, Nigeria, Norway, Oman, Panama, Papua New Guinea, Paraguay, Peru, Philippines, Poland, Portugal, Qatar, Republic of Moldova, Romania, Rwanda, Saint Lucia, Saint Vincent and the Grenadines, Samoa, San Marino, Sao Tome

Regional and other approaches to disarmament

Reports of Secretary-General. Pursuant to General Assembly resolution 58/39 [YUN 2003, p. 578], the Secretary-General, in June [A/59/118], presented the views of 11 Member States (Argentina, El Salvador, Honduras, Lebanon, Mexico, New Zealand, Panama, Philippines, Qatar, Russian Federation, Venezuela) and the Holy See regarding conventional arms control at the regional and subregional levels.

The Secretary-General, in response to Assembly resolution 58/43 [YUN 2003, p. 578], submitted a July report with a later addendum [A/59/127 & Corr.1, & Add.1] containing the views of 11 Member States (China, India, Israel, Lebanon, Mexico, Nicaragua, Panama, Philippines, Poland, Qatar, Venezuela) and the Holy See on the possibilities of furthering efforts towards confidence-building measures in the regional and subregional context, particularly in regions of tension.

Africa

In 2004, African States, through the African Union (AU) and subregional organizations, continued efforts to combat small arms proliferation on the continent, particularly within the framework of implementing the 2001 Programme of Action to Prevent, Combat and Eradicate the Illicit Trade in Small Arms and Light Weapons in All Its Aspects [YUN 2001, p. 499]. The Second Extraordinary Session of the AU Assembly (Sirte, Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, 28 February) adopted the Common African Defence and Security Policy, which identified the illicit proliferation, circulation and trafficking in small arms and light weapons as one of the factors threatening continental security and called for coordinated action in addressing it. Efforts were made during the year to operationalize the AU Peace and Security Council, designed to foster coordinated continental cooperation in responding to threats to security, including the small arms scourge.

On the subregional level, member States of the Economic Community of West African States (ECOWAS) maintained efforts to implement their 1998 Moratorium on the Importation, Exportation and Manufacture of Small Arms and Light Weapons in West Africa [YUN 1998, p. 537], which was renewed in 2001 [YUN 2001, p. 511]. They began the process of transforming the Moratorium into a convention and circulated a draft text entitled "Protocol Regarding the Fight against the Proliferation of Small Arms and Light Weapons, Their Munitions and Other Related Material". An ECOWAS conference on combating illicit small arms brokering and trafficking (Abuja, Nigeria, 22-24 March) reinforced the call for a convention to stem the flow of those weapons in West Africa and to address loopholes in the ECOWAS Moratorium, particularly regarding brokering controls. At the Second Ministerial Review Conference (Nairobi, 20-21 April) of the Nairobi Declaration on the Problem of the Proliferation of Illicit Small Arms and Light Weapons in the Great Lakes Region and the Horn of Africa [YUN 2000, p. 518], Ministers signed the Nairobi Protocol for the Prevention, Control and Reduction of Small Arms and Light Weapons in the Great Lakes Region and the Horn of Africa. The Protocol was designed to prevent, combat and eradicate the illicit manufacture, possession and use of those weapons in the subregion, among other objectives, and participating States pledged to ratify it by year's end. A seminar on developing West African and international arms control (Dakar, Senegal, 19-23 July), organized by Oxfam and supported by the UN Regional Centre for Peace and Disarmament in Africa (see p. 585), considered ways of raising awareness of initiatives to advance recommendations contained in the 2001 Programme of Action. ECOWAS member States adopted a successor project document to the Programme for Coordination and Assistance on Security and Development in Africa, a mechanism charged with assisting in the Moratorium's implementation. In Southern Africa, a joint ministerial meeting of the Southern African Development Community (SADC) and the EU (Netherlands, 20 October) agreed to strengthen bilateral collaboration in subregional security, including peace support, peacekeeping training, post-conflict reconstruction, demining and small arms and light weapons. On 8 November, the Protocol on the Control of Firearms, Ammunition and Other Related Materials, which SADC adopted in 2001, entered into force, enhancing subregional efforts to address the influx of small arms and light weapons into the region.

Standing Advisory Committee

In response to General Assembly resolution 58/65 [YUN 2003, p. 574], the Secretary-General, in July [A/59/182], described the activities of the Standing Advisory Committee on Security Questions in Central Africa, which remained the only forum for States members of the Economic Community of Central African States (ECCAS) to meet regularly to examine political and security developments in the subregion. However, despite the establishment of the Council for Peace and Security in Central Africa (COPAX) [YUN 1999, p. 500], the Council, designed to prevent, manage and settle subregional conflicts, had yet to meet on relevant developments. As the Central African region was facing new security challenges requiring a collective and robust involvement of the regional States, the Secretary-General said it was imperative for COPAX to become operational, particularly its early warning mechanism. That demanded the commitment of ECCAS member States and international cooperation and support. The United Nations remained determined to assist the subregion's efforts in promoting confidence- and security-building measures.

At its twenty-first ministerial meeting (Malabo, Equatorial Guinea, 21-25 June) [A/59/154-S/2004/576], the Standing Advisory Committee reviewed the geopolitical and security situation in some of its member States and cooperation between the United Nations and ECCAS. It assessed its own work, with a view to becoming more responsive to the needs of the Central African region. The Committee condemned attempts to forcibly overthrow the democratically elected Governments of Chad and Equatorial Guinea, and, reflecting on the magnitude of mercenary activities in that context, decided to consider the issue of mercenaries at its twenty-second (2005) ministerial meeting.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 3 December [meeting 66], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the First Committee [A/59/460], adopted resolution 59/96 without vote [agenda item 66 (h)].

Regional confidence-building measures: activities of the United Nations Standing Advisory Committee on Security Questions in Central Africa

The General Assembly,

Bearing in mind the purposes and principles of the United Nations and its primary responsibility for the maintenance of international peace and security in accordance with the Charter of the United Nations,

Recalling its resolutions 43/78 H and 43/85 of 7 December 1988, 44/21 of 15 November 1989, 45/58 M of 4 December 1990, 46/37 B of 6 December 1991, 47/53 F of 15 December 1992, 48/76 A of 16 December 1993, 49/76 C of 15 December 1994, 50/71 B of 12 Deember 1995, 51/46 C of 10 December 1996, 52/39 B of 9 December 1997, 53/78 A of 4 December 1998, 54/55 A of 1 December 1999, 55/34 B of 20 November 2000, 56/25 A of 29 November 2001, 57/88 of 22 November 2002 and 58/65 of 8 December 2003,

Considering the importance and effectiveness of confidence-building measures taken at the initiative and with the participation of all States concerned and taking into account the specific characteristics of each region, since such measures can contribute to regional stability and to international peace and security,

Convinced that the resources released by disarmament, including regional disarmament, can be devoted to economic and social development and to the protection of the environment for the benefit of all peoples, in particular those of the developing countries,

Recalling the guidelines for general and complete disarmament adopted at its tenth special session, the first special session devoted to disarmament,

Convinced that development can be achieved only in a climate of peace, security and mutual confidence both within and among States,

Bearing in mind the establishment by the Secretary-General on 28 May 1992 of the United Nations Standing Advisory Committee on Security Questions in Central Africa, the purpose of which is to encourage arms limitation, disarmament, non-proliferation and development in the subregion,

Recalling the Brazzaville Declaration on Cooperation for Peace and Security in Central Africa, the Bata Declaration for the Promotion of Lasting Democracy, Peace and Development in Central Africa and the Yaoundé Declaration on Peace, Security and Stability in Central Africa,

Bearing in mind resolutions 1196(1998) and 1197(1998), adopted by the Security Council on 16 and 18 September 1998 respectively, following its consideration of the report of the Secretary-General on the causes of conflict and the promotion of durable peace and sustainable development in Africa,

Emphasizing the need to strengthen the capacity for conflict prevention and peacekeeping in Africa,

Recalling the decision of the fourth ministerial meeting of the Standing Advisory Committee in favour of establishing, under the auspices of the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights, a subregional centre for human rights and democracy in Central Africa at Yaoundé,

1. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General on regional confidence-building measures, which deals with the activities of the United Nations Standing Advisory Committee on Security Questions in Central Africa in the period since the adoption by the General Assembly of resolution 58/65;

2. Reaffirms its support for efforts aimed at promoting confidence-building measures at the regional and subregional levels in order to ease tensions and conflicts in Central Africa and to further peace, stability and sustainable development in the subregion;

3. Also reaffirms its support for the programme of work of the Standing Advisory Committee adopted at the organizational meeting of the Committee, held at Yaoundé from 27 to 31 July 1992;

4. Notes with satisfaction the progress made by the States members of the Standing Advisory Committee in implementing the programme of activities for the period 2003-2004, in particular by holding the twenty-first ministerial meeting of the Standing Advisory Committee in Malabo from 21 to 25 June 2004;

5. Emphasizes the importance of providing the States members of the Standing Advisory Committee with the essential support they need to carry out the full programme of activities which they adopted at their ministerial meetings;

6. Welcomes the creation of a mechanism for the promotion, maintenance and consolidation of peace and security in Central Africa, known as the Council for Peace and Security in Central Africa, by the Conference of Heads of State and Government of the member countries of the Economic Community of Central African States, held at Yaoundé on 25 February 1999, and requests the Secretary-General to give his full support to the effective realization of that important mechanism;

7. Emphasizes the need to make the early warning mechanism in Central Africa operational so that it will serve, on the one hand, as an instrument for analysing and monitoring political situations in the States members of the Standing Advisory Committee with a view to preventing the outbreak of future armed conflicts and, on the other hand, as a technical body through which the member States will carry out the programme of work of the Committee, adopted at its organizational meeting held at Yaoundé in 1992, and requests the Secretary-General to provide it with the assistance necessary for it to function properly;

8. Requests the Secretary-General and the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights to continue to provide their full assistance for the proper functioning of the Subregional Centre for Human Rights and Democracy in Central Africa;

9. Requests the Secretary-General, pursuant to Security Council resolution 1197(1998), to provide the States members of the Standing Advisory Committee with the necessary support for the implementation and smooth functioning of the Council for Peace and Security in Central Africa and the early warning mechanism;

10. Also requests the Secretary-General to support the establishment of a network of parliamentarians with a view to the creation of a subregional parliament in Central Africa;

11. Requests the Secretary-General and the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees to continue to provide increased assistance to the countries of Central Africa for coping with the problems of refugees and displaced persons in their territories;

12. Thanks the Secretary-General for having established the Trust Fund for the United Nations Standing Advisory Committee on Security Questions in Central Africa;

13. Appeals to Member States and to governmental and non-governmental organizations to make additional voluntary contributions to the Trust Fund for the implementation of the programme of work of the Standing Advisory Committee;

14. Thanks the Secretary-General for sending a multidisciplinary mission from 8 to 22 June 2003 for the purpose of undertaking an assessment of the priority needs of the region and challenges confronting it in the areas of peace, security, economic development, human rights, HIV/AIDS and humanitarian questions;

15. Requests the Secretary-General to continue to provide the States members of the Standing Advisory Committee with assistance to ensure that they are able to carry on their efforts;

16. Also requests the Secretary-General to submit to the General Assembly at its sixtieth session a report on the implementation of the present resolution;

17. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its sixtieth session the item entitled "Regional confidence-building measures: activities of the United Nations Standing Advisory Committee on Security Questions in Central Africa".

Asia and the Pacific

In 2004, disarmament and non-proliferation issues in Asia and the Pacific were addressed by the regional States through national initiatives and the frameworks of subregional organizations, notably the Association of Southeast Asian Nations, its Regional Forum (ARF) and the Shanghai Cooperation Organization (SCO) (China, Kazakhstan, Kyrgyzstan, Russian Federation, Tajikistan, Uzbekistan). SCO, founded in 2001 to address mutual concerns, including regional security, at its fourth summit (Tashkent, Uzbekistan, 17 June), adopted the Tashkent Declaration, in which the member States, expressing concern over rising terrorism and extremism, affirmed their readiness to construct a new security architecture to counter global and regional security threats through cooperation with other States and international mechanisms, primarily the United Nations. The eleventh ARF Ministerial Meeting (Jakarta, Indonesia, 2 July) underlined the importance of close collaboration among member States in efforts to prevent the proliferation of WMDs and the need to eliminate small arms trafficking, particularly to non-State actors.

Europe

During the year, security and disarmament issues were addressed within several European institutional frameworks. The Organization for Security and Cooperation in Europe adopted decisions to enhance the control of small arms, light weapons and other conventional arms exports. It helped members combat trafficking of small arms and light weapons through border management assistance and began projects to assist countries in destroying excess weapons and improving stockpile security. The EU pursued conventional disarmament and arms control through the implementation of its 1998 Code of Conduct on Arms Exports [YUN 1998, p. 540], which was expanded by the admission of 10 additional States to EU membership. The South-Eastern Europe

Clearinghouse for the Control of Small Arms and Light Weapons (SEESAC), established in 2002 [YUN 2002, p. 534], provided regional States with operational and technical assistance for control and reduction of those weapons. A conference on countering trafficking in those weapons in the Black Sea subregion (Chisinau, Moldova, 4-5 March), organized jointly by SEESAC, Moldova, the Netherlands and Switzerland, discussed measures for small arms control in the region and explored cross-border cooperation to curb related threats. In April, SEESAC, in collaboration with the Regional Arms Control Verification and Implementation Assistance Centre, held a training course for civil society on the monitoring, collection and destruction of small arms and light weapons. A similar SEESAC initiative during the year trained journalists in the subregion on small arms and light weapons reporting, and at the second Regional Arms Law Roundtable (Belgrade, Serbia and Montenegro, 25-26 May), Ministers from eight States discussed legislative developments on small arms and light weapons. The heads of State and Government of member States of the NATO (Istanbul, Turkey, 28-29 June) adopted the "Istanbul Declaration: Our security in a new era" and a summit communiqué, by which they renewed commitment to collective defence in addressing security challenges, particularly terrorism (see p. 576) and the proliferation of WMDs. They launched a Partnership Action Plan on Defence Institution Building to support partners in building democratically responsible defence institutions. The NATO Verification Coordinating Committee, at its annual seminar on the implementation of conventional arms control agreements (Brussels, Belgium, 6-8 October), discussed the practical aspects of the ongoing implementation of the 1990 Treaty on Conventional Armed Forces in Europe [YUN 1990, p. 79], considered the cornerstone of European security.

Latin America

The Organization of American States (OAS) maintained its involvement in regional disarmament and non-proliferation initiatives. At the Special Summit of the Americas (Monterrey, Mexico, 12-13 January), 34 heads of State and Government adopted the Declaration of Nuevo León, by which they resolved to work together to address common needs and challenges, including new security threats, such as terrorism, organized crime and trafficking in arms. The thirty-fourth regular session of the OAS General Assembly (Quito, Ecuador, 6-8 June) adopted resolutions relating to disarmament and non-proliferation. The First Conference of the States Parties (Bogotá, Colombia, 8-9 March) to the Inter-American Convention against the Illicit Manufacturing of and Trafficking in Firearms, Ammunition, Explosives, and Other Related Materials [YUN 1997, p. 519] adopted the Declaration of Bogotá on the Convention's functioning and application, in which they agreed to exchange relevant information and experiences. A seminar organized by the OAS General Secretariat, the Inter-American Defense College and Nicaragua (Managua, Nicaragua, 12-13 May) considered the identification, collection, stockpile management and destruction of small arms and light weapons. Also during the year, the Sixth Conference of Ministers of Defense of the Americas (Quito, 16-21 November) issued a declaration reaffirming commitment to disarmament agreements and expressing support for the establishment of national controls for exporting and importing materials that could contribute to the production of WMDs.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 3 December [meeting 66], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the First Committee [A/59/459 & Corr.1], adopted resolution 59/89 without vote [agenda item 65 (i)].

Regional disarmament

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 45/58 P of 4 December 1990, 46/36 I of 6 December 1991, 47/52 J of 9 December 1992, 48/75 I of 16 December 1993, 49/75 N of 15 December 1994, 50/70 K of 12 December 1995, 51/45 K of 10 December 1996, 52/38 P of 9 December 1997, 53/77 O of 4 December 1998, 54/54 N of 1 December 1999, 55/33 O of 20 November 2000, 56/24 H of 29 November 2001, 57/76 of 22 November 2002 and 58/38 of 8 December 2003 on regional disarmament,

Believing that the efforts of the international community to move towards the ideal of general and complete disarmament are guided by the inherent human desire for genuine peace and security, the elimination of the danger of war and the release of economic, intellectual and other resources for peaceful pursuits,

Affirming the abiding commitment of all States to the purposes and principles enshrined in the Charter of the United Nations in the conduct of their international relations,

Noting that essential guidelines for progress towards general and complete disarmament were adopted at the tenth special session of the General Assembly,

Taking note of the guidelines and recommendations for regional approaches to disarmament within the context of global security adopted by the Disarmament Commission at its 1993 substantive session,

Welcoming the prospects of genuine progress in the field of disarmament engendered in recent years as a result of negotiations between the two superpowers,

Taking note of the recent proposals for disarmament at the regional and subregional levels,

Recognizing the importance of confidence-building measures for regional and international peace and security,

Convinced that endeavours by countries to promote regional disarmament, taking into account the specific characteristics of each region and in accordance with the principle of undiminished security at the lowest level of armaments, would enhance the security of all States and would thus contribute to international peace and security by reducing the risk of regional conflicts,

1. Stresses that sustained efforts are needed, within the framework of the Conference on Disarmament and under the umbrella of the United Nations, to make progress on the entire range of disarmament issues;

2. Affirms that global and regional approaches to disarmament complement each other and should therefore be pursued simultaneously to promote regional and international peace and security;

3. Calls upon States to conclude agreements, wherever possible, for nuclear non-proliferation, disarmament and confidence-building measures at the regional and subregional levels;

4. Welcomes the initiatives towards disarmament, nuclear non-proliferation and security undertaken by some countries at the regional and subregional levels;

5. Supports and encourages efforts aimed at promoting confidence-building measures at the regional and subregional levels to ease regional tensions and to further disarmament and nuclear non-proliferation measures at the regional and subregional levels;

6. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its sixtieth session the item entitled "Regional disarmament".

Also on 3 December [meeting 66], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the First Committee [A/59/459 & Corr.1], adopted resolution 59/88 by recorded vote (178-1-1) [agenda item 65 (j)].

Conventional arms control at the regional and subregional levels

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 48/75 J of 16 December 1993, 49/75 O of 15 December 1994, 50/70 L of 12 December 1995, 51/45 Q of 10 December 1996, 52/38 Q of 9 December 1997, 53/77 P of 4 December 1998, 54/54 M of 1 December 1999, 55/33 P of 20 November 2000, 56/24 I of 29 November 2001, 57/77 of 22 November 2002 and 58/39 of 8 December 2003,

Recognizing the crucial role of conventional arms control in promoting regional and international peace and security,

Convinced that conventional arms control needs to be pursued primarily in the regional and subregional contexts, since most threats to peace and security in the post-cold-war era arise mainly among States located in the same region or subregion,

Aware that the preservation of a balance in the defence capabilities of States at the lowest level of armaments would contribute to peace and stability and should be a prime objective of conventional arms control,

Desirous of promoting agreements to strengthen regional peace and security at the lowest possible level of armaments and military forces,

Noting with particular interest the initiatives taken in this regard in different regions of the world, in particular the commencement of consultations among a number of Latin American countries and the proposals for conventional arms control made in the context of South Asia, and recognizing, in the context of this subject, the relevance and value of the Treaty on Conventional Armed Forces in Europe, which is a cornerstone of European security,

Believing that militarily significant States and States with larger military capabilities have a special responsibility in promoting such agreements for regional security,

Believing also that an important objective of conventional arms control in regions of tension should be to prevent the possibility of military attack launched by surprise and to avoid aggression,

1. Decides to give urgent consideration to the issues involved in conventional arms control at the regional and subregional levels;

2. Requests the Conference on Disarmament to consider the formulation of principles that can serve as a framework for regional agreements on conventional arms control, and looks forward to a report of the Conference on this subject;

3. Requests the Secretary-General, in the meantime, to seek the views of Member States on the subject and to submit a report to the General Assembly at its sixtieth session;

4. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its sixtieth session the item entitled "Conventional arms control at the regional and subregional levels".

RECORDED VOTE ON RESOLUTION 59/88:

In favour: Afghanistan, Albania, Algeria, Andorra, Angola, Antigua and Barbuda, Argentina, Armenia, Australia, Austria, Azerbaijan, Bahamas, Bahrain, Bangladesh, Barbados, Belarus, Belgium, Belize, Benin, Bolivia, Bosnia and Herzegovina, Botswana, Brazil, Brunei Darussalam, Bulgaria, Burkina Faso, Burundi, Cambodia, Cameroon, Canada, Cape Verde, Central African Republic, Chile, China, Colombia, Comoros, Congo, Costa Rica, Côte d'Ivoire, Croatia, Cyprus, Czech Republic, Denmark, Djibouti, Dominica, Dominican Republic, Ecuador, Egypt, El Salvador, Equatorial Guinea, Eritrea, Estonia, Ethiopia, Fiji, Finland, France, Gabon, Gambia, Georgia, Germany, Ghana, Greece, Grenada, Guatemala, Guinea-Bissau, Guyana, Haiti, Honduras, Hungary, Iceland, Indonesia, Iran, Ireland, Israel, Italy, Jamaica, Japan, Jordan, Kazakhstan, Kenya, Kuwait, Kyrgyzstan, Latvia, Lebanon, Lesotho, Liberia, Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Liechtenstein, Lithuania, Luxembourg, Madagascar, Malawi, Malaysia, Maldives, Mali, Malta, Marshall Islands, Mauritius, Mexico, Micronesia, Monaco, Mongolia, Morocco, Mozambique, Myanmar, Namibia, Nauru, Nepal, Netherlands, New Zealand, Nicaragua, Niger, Nigeria, Norway, Oman, Pakistan, Palau, Panama, Papua New Guinea, Paraguay, Peru, Philippines, Poland, Portugal, Qatar, Republic of Korea, Republic of Moldova, Romania, Russian Federation, Rwanda, Saint Lucia, Saint Vincent and the Grenadines, Samoa, San Marino, Sao Tome and Principe, Saudi Arabia, Senegal, Serbia and Montenegro, Seychelles, Sierra Leone, Singapore, Slovakia, Slovenia, Solomon Islands, Somalia, South Africa, Spain, Sri Lanka, Sudan, Suriname, Swaziland, Sweden, Switzerland, Syrian Arab Republic, Tajikistan, Thailand, The former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia, Timor-Leste, Togo, Tonga, Trinidad and Tobago, Tunisia, Turkey, Turkmenistan, Tuvalu, Uganda, Ukraine, United Arab Emirates, United Kingdom, United Republic of Tanzania, United States, Uruguay, Uzbekistan, Vanuatu, Venezuela, Yemen, Zambia, Zimbabwe.

Abstaining: Bhutan.

On 3 December [meeting 66], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the First Committee [A/59/459 & Corr.1], adopted resolution 59/87 without vote [agenda item 65 (m)].

Confidence-building measures in the regional and subregional context

The General Assembly,

Guided by the purposes and principles enshrined in the Charter of the United Nations,

Recalling its resolution 58/43 of 8 December 2003,

Recalling also its resolution 57/337 of 3 July 2003, entitled "Prevention of armed conflict", in which it called upon Member States to settle their disputes by peaceful means, as set out in Chapter VI of the Charter, inter alia, by any procedures adopted by the parties,

Recalling further the resolutions and guidelines adopted by consensus by the General Assembly and the Disarmament Commission relating to confidence-building measures and their implementation at the global, regional and subregional levels,

Considering the importance and effectiveness of confidence-building measures taken at the initiative and with the agreement of all States concerned and taking into account the specific characteristics of each region, since such measures can contribute to regional stability,

Convinced that resources released by disarmament, including regional disarmament, can be devoted to economic and social development and to the protection of the environment for the benefit of all peoples, in particular those of the developing countries,

Recognizing the need for meaningful dialogue among States concerned to avert conflict,

Welcoming the peace processes already initiated by States concerned to resolve their disputes through peaceful means bilaterally or through mediation, inter alia, by third parties, regional organizations or the United Nations,

Recognizing that States in some regions have already taken steps towards confidence-building measures at the bilateral, subregional and regional levels in the political and military fields, including arms control and disarmament, and noting that such confidence-building measures have improved peace and security in those regions and contributed to progress in the socioeconomic conditions of their people,

Concerned that the continuation of disputes among States, particularly in the absence of an effective mechanism to resolve them through peaceful means, may contribute to the arms race and endanger the maintenance of international peace and security and the efforts of the international community to promote arms control and disarmament,

1. Calls upon Member States to refrain from the use or threat of use of force, in accordance with the purposes and principles of the Charter of the United Nations;

2. Reaffirms its commitment to the peaceful settlement of disputes under Chapter VI of the Charter, in particular Article 33, which provides for a solution by negotiation, enquiry, mediation, conciliation, arbitration, judicial settlement, resort to regional agencies or arrangements or other peaceful means chosen by the parties;

3. Reaffirms the ways and means regarding confidence- and security-building measures set out in the report of the Disarmament Commission on its 1993 session;

4. Calls upon Member States to pursue those ways and means through sustained consultations and dialogue, while at the same time avoiding actions which may hinder or impair such a dialogue;

5. Urges States to comply strictly with all bilateral, regional and international agreements, including arms control and disarmament agreements, to which they are party;

6. Emphasizes that the objective of confidence-building measures should be to help to strengthen international peace and security and be consistent with the principle of undiminished security at the lowest level of armament;

7. Encourages the promotion of bilateral and regional confidence-building measures, with the consent and participation of the parties concerned, to avoid conflict and prevent the unintended and accidental outbreak of hostilities;

8. Requests the Secretary-General to submit a report to the General Assembly at its sixtieth session containing the views of Member States on confidence-building measures in the regional and subregional context;

9. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its sixtieth session the item entitled "Confidence-building measures in the regional and subregional context".

Other disarmament issues

Terrorism

In 2004, the United Nations continued to develop and promote global action to combat international terrorism in collaboration with Member States and international, regional and subregional organizations. In a January report [S/2004/70], the Counter-Terrorism Committee, established by Security Council resolution 1373 (2001) [YUN 2001, p. 61], described States' difficulties in implementing that resolution, which dealt with threats to international peace and security through terrorist acts. In particular, the report covered the financing of terrorism, the competence of courts to deal with those threats, ratification of related international conventions without enforcement measures, links between terrorism and organized crime, and links between terrorism and the illegal movement of nuclear, chemical, biological and other potentially deadly materials. In general, the Committee found that implementation of resolution 1373(2001) was facing serious difficulties. In April, the Council, in resolution 1540(2004) on the non-proliferation of WMDs (see p. 544), expressed grave concern about the risk that non-State actors might acquire, develop, traffic in or use WMDs. In October, by resolution 1566(2004) (see p. 74), the Council called for strengthened international cooperation in the fight against terrorism and established a working group to recommend practical measures against those involved with terrorist activities. The General Assembly, in resolution 59/80 (see p. 577), urged Member States to strengthen national measures to prevent terrorists from acquiring WMDs. Progress was maintained during the year in the work of the Ad Hoc Committee established by Assembly resolution 51/210 [YUN 1996, p. 1208] to elaborate international conventions for the suppression of terrorist bombings and nuclear terrorism (see p. 1310). The Advisory Board on Disarmament Matters (see p. 583) recommended that State action to combat terrorism by WMDs, including preventive action, be embedded in a multilateral legal framework within the ambit of the United Nations [A/59/361].

IAEA continued work on its action plan for nuclear security to enhance its capacity and that of Member States to respond to terrorist acts involving nuclear and other radiological materials. In September [GC(48)/RES/11], the IAEA General Conference, in a resolution on protection measures against such acts, appealed to States that had not done so to accede to the Convention on the Physical Protection of Nuclear Material [YUN 1980, p. 161], and to apply the related protection objectives endorsed by the IAEA Board of Governors. The Conference had before it a report of the Director General on nuclear security: measures to protect against nuclear terrorism [GOV/2004/50-GC(48)/6], which described IAEA action on protection against nuclear and radiological terrorism.

Report of Secretary-General. Pursuant to General Assembly resolution 58/48 [YUN 2003, p. 580], the Secretary-General, in a July report with a later addendum [A/59/156 & Add.1], presented the views of eight Member States and 10 international organizations, including UN agencies, on measures they had taken to prevent terrorists from acquiring WMDs.

Report of High-level Panel. In a December report [A/59/565 & Corr.1], the High-level Panel on Threats, Challenges and Change, a group of eminent persons established to assess threats to international peace and security and to recommend ways of strengthening the UN collective security capacity, described the threats that terrorism posed (see p. 71). In the Panel's view, meeting the prevention challenge called for a comprehensive strategy that incorporated more than coercive measures, better counter-terrorism instruments, assistance to States in confronting the terrorist threat and a consensus definition of terrorism within the General Assembly so that it could complete a comprehensive convention on terrorism.

Communications. The Ministers of States members of the Non-Aligned Movement, at its Fourteenth Ministerial Conference (Durban, 17-19 August), emphasized that terrorism could not be attributed to religion, race, nationality or civilization, and condemned international terrorism in all its forms as a criminal act. At the same time, they rejected attempts to equate terrorism with the legitimate struggle of peoples under colonial or alien domination and foreign occupation for self-determination and national liberation.

Similar beliefs were expressed by the Foreign Ministers of States members of the Organization of the Islamic Conference (New York, 28 September) [A/59/425-S/2004/808].

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 3 December [meeting 66], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the First Committee [A/59/459 & Corr.1], adopted resolution 59/80 without vote [agenda item 65].

Measures to prevent terrorists from acquiring weapons of mass destruction

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 58/48 of 8 December 2003,

Recognizing the determination of the international community to combat terrorism, as evident in relevant General Assembly and Security Council resolutions,

Deeply concerned by the growing risk of linkages between terrorism and weapons of mass destruction, and in particular by the fact that terrorists may seek to acquire weapons of mass destruction,

Taking note of Security Council resolution 1540 (2004) on the non-proliferation of weapons of mass destruction, adopted on 28 April 2004,

Noting the support expressed in the Final Document of the Thirteenth Conference of Heads of State or Government of Non-Aligned Countries, which was held in Kuala Lumpur from 20 to 25 February 2003, and in the Final Document of the Fourteenth Ministerial Conference of the Movement of Non-Aligned Countries, which was held in Durban, South Africa, from 17 to 19 August 2004, for measures to prevent terrorists from acquiring weapons of mass destruction,

Noting also that the Group of Eight, the European Union, the Regional Forum of the Association of Southeast Asian Nations and others have taken into account in their deliberations the dangers posed by the acquisition by terrorists of weapons of mass destruction, and the need for international cooperation in combating it,

Acknowledging the consideration of issues relating to terrorism and weapons of mass destruction by the Advisory Board on Disarmament Matters,

Taking note of resolution GC(48)/RES/11, adopted on 24 September 2004 by the General Conference of the International Atomic Energy Agency at its forty-eighth regular session, and the setting up of an Advisory Group on Security in the Agency to advise the Director General on the Agency's activities relating to nuclear security,

Taking note also of the report of the Policy Working Group on the United Nations and Terrorism,

Taking note further of the report of the Secretary-General, submitted pursuant to paragraphs 2 and 4 of resolution 58/48,

Mindful of the urgent need for addressing, within the United Nations framework and through international cooperation, this threat to humanity,

Emphasizing that progress is urgently needed in the area of disarmament and non-proliferation in order to help to maintain international peace and security and to contribute to global efforts against terrorism,

1. Calls upon all Member States to support international efforts to prevent terrorists from acquiring weapons of mass destruction and their means of delivery;

2. Urges all Member States to take and strengthen national measures, as appropriate, to prevent terrorists from acquiring weapons of mass destruction, their means of delivery and materials and technologies related to their manufacture, and invites them to inform the Secretary-General, on a voluntary basis, of the measures taken in this regard;

3. Encourages cooperation among and between Member States and relevant regional and international organizations for strengthening national capacities in this regard;

4. Requests the Secretary-General to compile a report on measures already taken by international organizations on issues relating to the linkage between the fight against terrorism and the proliferation of weapons of mass destruction, to seek the views of Member States on additional relevant measures for tackling the global threat posed by the acquisition by terrorists of weapons of mass destruction, and to report to the General Assembly at its sixtieth session;

5. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its sixtieth session the item entitled "Measures to prevent terrorists from acquiring weapons of mass destruction".

New types of weapons of mass destruction

In 2004, the persisting lack of consensus over an overall programme of work again prevented the Conference on Disarmament [A/59/27] from establishing an ad hoc committee to address the agenda item "New types of weapons of mass destruction and new systems of such weapons; radiological weapons".

Prevention of an arms race in outer space

During the year, the Conference on Disarmament was unable to establish a subsidiary body to deal with the issue of the prevention of an arms race in outer space, owing to the continuing deadlock on a programme of work. Delegates, nonetheless, devoted a plenary meeting to discussion of the item. China and the Russian Federation, as they had done in 2002 [YUN 2002, p. 540] and 2003 [YUN 2003, p. 582], collaborated on working papers on the issue, and, in 2004, circulated two informal papers, one on the verification aspects of the prevention of an arms race in outer space, and the other on existing international legal instruments and prevention of the weaponization of outer space. While the majority of delegations supported the re-establishment of an ad hoc committee to address the item, others countered that there was first a need to avoid an arms race on the ground. Delegates remained deadlocked on how to deal with the issue.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 3 December [meeting 66], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the First Committee [A/59/458], adopted resolution 59/65 by recorded vote (178-0-4) [agenda item 64].

Prevention of an arms race in outer space

The General Assembly,

Recognizing the common interest of all mankind in the exploration and use of outer space for peaceful purposes,

Reaffirming the will of all States that the exploration and use of outer space, including the Moon and other celestial bodies, shall be for peaceful purposes and shall be carried out for the benefit and in the interest of all countries, irrespective of their degree of economic or scientific development,

Reaffirming also the provisions of articles III and IV of the Treaty on Principles Governing the Activities of States in the Exploration and Use of Outer Space, including the Moon and Other Celestial Bodies,

Recalling the obligation of all States to observe the provisions of the Charter of the United Nations regarding the use or threat of use of force in their international relations, including in their space activities,

Reaffirming paragraph 80 of the Final Document of the Tenth Special Session of the General Assembly, in which it is stated that in order to prevent an arms race in outer space, further measures should be taken and appropriate international negotiations held in accordance with the spirit of the Treaty,

Recalling its previous resolutions on this issue, and taking note of the proposals submitted to the General Assembly at its tenth special session and at its regular sessions, and of the recommendations made to the competent organs of the United Nations and to the Conference on Disarmament,

Recognizing that prevention of an arms race in outer space would avert a grave danger for international peace and security,

Emphasizing the paramount importance of strict compliance with existing arms limitation and disarmament agreements relevant to outer space, including bilateral agreements, and with the existing legal regime concerning the use of outer space,

Considering that wide participation in the legal regime applicable to outer space could contribute to enhancing its effectiveness,

Noting that the Ad Hoc Committee on the Prevention of an Arms Race in Outer Space, taking into account its previous efforts since its establishment in 1985 and seeking to enhance its functioning in qualitative terms, continued the examination and identification of various issues, existing agreements and existing proposals, as well as future initiatives relevant to the prevention of an arms race in outer space, and that this contributed to a better understanding of a number of problems and to a clearer perception of the various positions,

Noting also that there were no objections in principle in the Conference on Disarmament to the re-establishment of the Ad Hoc Committee, subject to re-examination of the mandate contained in the decision of the Conference on Disarmament of 13 February 1992,

Emphasizing the mutually complementary nature of bilateral and multilateral efforts in the field of preventing an arms race in outer space, and hoping that concrete results will emerge from those efforts as soon as possible,

Convinced that further measures should be examined in the search for effective and verifiable bilateral and multilateral agreements in order to prevent an arms race in outer space, including the weaponization of outer space,

Stressing that the growing use of outer space increases the need for greater transparency and better information on the part of the international community,

Recalling, in this context, its previous resolutions, in particular resolutions 45/55 B of 4 December 1990, 47/51 of 9 December 1992 and 48/74 A of 16 December 1993, in which, inter alia, it reaffirmed the importance of confidence-building measures as a means conducive to ensuring the attainment of the objective of the prevention of an arms race in outer space,

Conscious of the benefits of confidence- and security-building measures in the military field,

Recognizing that negotiations for the conclusion of an international agreement or agreements to prevent an arms race in outer space remain a priority task of the Ad Hoc Committee and that the concrete proposals on confidence-building measures could form an integral part of such agreements,

1. Reaffirms the importance and urgency of preventing an arms race in outer space and the readiness of all States to contribute to that common objective, in conformity with the provisions of the Treaty on Principles Governing the Activities of States in the Exploration and Use of Outer Space, including the Moon and Other Celestial Bodies;

2. Reaffirms its recognition, as stated in the report of the Ad Hoc Committee on the Prevention of an Arms Race in Outer Space, that the legal regime applicable to outer space does not in and of itself guarantee the prevention of an arms race in outer space, that the regime plays a significant role in the prevention of an arms race in that environment, that there is a need to consolidate and reinforce that regime and enhance its effectiveness and that it is important to comply strictly with existing agreements, both bilateral and multilateral;

3. Emphasizes the necessity of further measures with appropriate and effective provisions for verification to prevent an arms race in outer space;

4. Calls upon all States, in particular those with major space capabilities, to contribute actively to the objective of the peaceful use of outer space and of the prevention of an arms race in outer space and to refrain from actions contrary to that objective and to the relevant existing treaties in the interest of maintaining international peace and security and promoting international cooperation;

5. Reiterates that the Conference on Disarmament, as the single multilateral disarmament negotiating forum, has the primary role in the negotiation of a multilateral agreement or agreements, as appropriate, on the prevention of an arms race in outer space in all its aspects;

6. Invites the Conference on Disarmament to complete the examination and updating of the mandate contained in its decision of 13 February 1992 and to establish an ad hoc committee as early as possible during its 2005 session;

7. Recognizes, in this respect, the growing convergence of views on the elaboration of measures designed to strengthen transparency, confidence and security in the peaceful uses of outer space;

8. Urges States conducting activities in outer space, as well as States interested in conducting such activities, to keep the Conference on Disarmament informed of the progress of bilateral and multilateral negotiations on the matter, if any, so as to facilitate its work;

9. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its sixtieth session the item entitled "Prevention of an arms race in outer space".

RECORDED VOTE ON RESOLUTION 59/65:

Seabed Treaty

Pursuant to General Assembly resolution 44/116 O [YUN 1989, p. 81], the Secretary-General, in a June report with a later addendum [A/59/117 & Add.1], presented the replies of four Governments in response to his request for information on technological developments relevant to the Treaty on the Prohibition of the Emplacement of Nuclear Weapons and Other Weapons of Mass Destruction on the Seabed and the Ocean Floor and in the Subsoil Thereof, adopted by the Assembly in resolution 2660(XXV) [YUN 1970, p. 18], and to the verification of compliance with the Treaty.

Disarmament and development

In 2004, disagreement persisted over the question of the relationship between disarmament and development. While the majority of Member States, mostly non-aligned countries, continued to call for the implementation of the action programme adopted by the 1987 International Conference that examined the relationship in all its aspects [YUN 1987, p. 82], a number of other States, including the United States and EU members, maintained the argument that there was no automatic link between the two concepts.

Expert group. By a June note [A/59/119], the Secretary-General transmitted the report of the Group of Governmental Experts he had established as requested by the General Assembly in resolution 57/65 [YUN 2002, p. 542], charged to review the relationship between disarmament and development in the current international context. Taking into account major international changes since the 1987 Conference, the report addressed the pivotal role of security, the costs and consequences of military expenditure, the release of resources for development, the importance of multilateralism and the role of the United Nations and other international organizations. The experts determined that disarmament and development were two distinct, yet mutually reinforcing processes that were linked by security in all its aspects. They reaffirmed the finding of the 1987 Conference that progress in one area could create a conducive environment for the other. The Group recommended that the Secretary-General strengthen the high-level Steering Group on Disarmament and Development [YUN 1999, p. 506] in order that relevant departments and agencies could share best practices and increase cooperation. Other recommendations advocated meeting disarmament and development commitments; assessing Member States' security needs; mainstreaming the disarmament and development relationship and increasing awareness of it; facilitating research and dialogue on issues relating to the relationship between disarmament, development and security; promoting security through openness, transparency and confidence; converting and destroying surplus weapons; and preventing conflict and promoting peace.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 3 December [meeting 66], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the First Committee [A/59/459 & Corr.1], adopted resolution 59/78 by recorded vote (180-2-2) [agenda item 65 (e)].

Relationship between disarmament and development

The General Assembly,

Recalling that the Charter of the United Nations envisages the establishment and maintenance of international peace and security with the least diversion for armaments of the world's human and economic resources,

Recalling also the provisions of the Final Document of the Tenth Special Session of the General Assembly concerning the relationship between disarmament and development, as well as the adoption on 11 September 1987 of the Final Document of the International Conference on the Relationship between Disarmament and Development,

Recalling further its resolutions 49/75 J of 15 December 1994, 50/70 G of 12 December 1995, 51/45 D of 10 December 1996, 52/38 D of 9 December 1997, 53/77 K of 4 December 1998, 54/54 T of 1 December 1999, 55/33 L of 20 November 2000, 56/24 E of 29 November 2001 and 57/65 of 22 November 2002, and its decision 58/520 of 8 December 2003,

Bearing in mind the Final Document of the Twelfth Conference of Heads of State or Government of Non-Aligned Countries, held in Durban, South Africa, from 29 August to 3 September 1998, and the Final Document of the Thirteenth Ministerial Conference of the Movement of Non-Aligned Countries, held in Cartagena, Colombia, on 8 and 9 April 2000,

Mindful of the changes in international relations that have taken place since the adoption on 11 September 1987 of the Final Document of the International Conference on the Relationship between Disarmament and Development, including the development agenda that has emerged over the past decade,

Bearing in mind the new challenges for the international community in the field of development, poverty eradication and the elimination of the diseases that afflict humanity,

Stressing the importance of the symbiotic relationship between disarmament and development and the important role of security in this connection, and concerned at increasing global military expenditure, which could otherwise be spent on development needs,

1. Welcomes the report of the Group of Governmental Experts on the relationship between disarmament and development and its reappraisal of this significant issue in the current international context;

2. Stresses the central role of the United Nations in the disarmament-development relationship, and requests the Secretary-General to strengthen further the role of the Organization in this field, in particular the high-level Steering Group on Disarmament and Development, in order to assure continued and effective coordination and close cooperation between the relevant United Nations departments, agencies and sub-agencies;

3. Requests the Secretary-General to continue to take action, through appropriate organs and within available resources, for the implementation of the action programme adopted at the 1987 International Conference on the Relationship between Disarmament and Development;

4. Urges the international community to devote part of the resources made available by the implementation of disarmament and arms limitation agreements to economic and social development, with a view to reducing the ever widening gap between developed and developing countries;

5. Encourages the international community to achieve the Millennium Development Goals and to make reference to the contribution that disarmament could provide in meeting them when it reviews its progress towards this purpose in 2005, as well as to make greater efforts to integrate disarmament, humanitarian and development activities;

6. Encourages the relevant regional and subregional organizations and institutions, non-governmental organizations and research institutes to incorporate issues related to the relationship between disarmament and development in their agendas and, in this regard, to take into account the report of the Group of Governmental Experts;

7. Requests the Secretary-General to report to the General Assembly at its sixtieth session on the implementation of the present resolution;

8. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its sixtieth session the item entitled "Relationship between disarmament and development".

RECORDED VOTE ON RESOLUTION 59/78:

Arms limitation and disarmament agreements

The Secretary-General, in response to General Assembly resolution 58/45 [YUN 2003, p. 584], submitted a July report with later addendum [A/59/129 & Add.1] containing information from five Member States on measures they had taken to ensure the application of scientific and technological progress in the context of international security, disarmament and related areas, without detriment to the environment or to its contribution to attaining sustainable development.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 3 December [meeting 66], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the First Committee [A/59/459 & Corr.1], adopted resolution 59/68 by recorded vote (175-2-3) [agenda item 65 (o)].

Observance of environmental norms in the drafting and implementation of agreements on disarmament and arms control

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 50/70 M of 12 December 1995, 51/45 E of 10 December 1996, 52/38 E of 9 December 1997, 53/77 J of 4 December 1998, 54/54 S of 1 December 1999, 55/33 K of 20 November 2000, 56/24 F of 29 November 2001, 57/64 of 22 November 2002 and 58/45 of 8 December 2003,

Emphasizing the importance of the observance of environmental norms in the preparation and implementation of disarmament and arms limitation agreements,

Recognizing that it is necessary to take duly into account the agreements adopted at the United Nations Conference on Environment and Development, as well as prior relevant agreements, in the drafting and implementation of agreements on disarmament and arms limitation,

Taking note of the report of the Secretary-General,

Mindful of the detrimental environmental effects of the use of nuclear weapons,

1. Reaffirms that international disarmament forums should take fully into account the relevant environmental norms in negotiating treaties and agreements on disarmament and arms limitation and that all States, through their actions, should contribute fully to ensuring compliance with the aforementioned norms in the implementation of treaties and conventions to which they are parties;

2. Calls upon States to adopt unilateral, bilateral, regional and multilateral measures so as to contribute to ensuring the application of scientific and technological progress within the framework of international security, disarmament and other related spheres, without detriment to the environment or to its effective contribution to attaining sustainable development;

3. Welcomes the information provided by Member States on the implementation of the measures they have adopted to promote the objectives envisaged in the present resolution;

4. Invites all Member States to communicate to the Secretary-General information on the measures they have adopted to promote the objectives envisaged in the present resolution, and requests the Secretary-General to submit a report containing this information to the General Assembly at its sixtieth session;

5. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its sixtieth session the item entitled "Observance of environmental norms in the drafting and implementation of agreements on disarmament and arms control".

Studies, information and training

Disarmament studies programme

As requested by the General Assembly in resolution 57/60 [YUN 2002, p. 545], the Secretary-General, in a July report with later addenda [A/59/178 & Add.1,2], provided information on the implementation of the recommendations contained in the 2002 report [YUN 2002, p. 544] of the Group of Governmental Experts established by the Assembly in resolution 55/33 E [YUN 2000, p. 535] to undertake a study on disarmament and non-proliferation education. The 2004 report included information provided by seven Member States, six UN bodies and other international organizations and seven NGOs on their activities to promote disarmament and non-proliferation education related to the 34 recommendations contained in the Group's report. The Secretary-General concluded that in the two years since the study's publication, international developments, relating especially to war and WMDs, had opened up opportunities for discussions and lessons that could enrich the knowledge of those dealing with the issue, and the need for teacher-training and curriculum development in the field was great. The study helped to advance disarmament education and training in non-proliferation among Member States and encouraged partnerships between Governments and NGOs, especially academic institutions. It also enhanced information exchange and project collaboration within the UN system and spurred on partnerships between the Organization and non-proliferation educators. Unfortunately, the funding environment for education in that area had not been positive.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 3 December [meeting 66], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the First Committee [A/59/459 & Corr.1], adopted resolution 59/93 without vote [agenda item 65 (c)].

United Nations study on disarmament and non-proliferation education

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 55/33 E of 20 November 2000 and 57/60 of 22 November 2002,

Welcoming the report of the Secretary-General on disarmament and non-proliferation education, in which the Secretary-General reported on the implementation of the recommendations contained in the United Nations study on disarmament and non-proliferation education,

Desirous of stressing the urgency of promoting concerted international efforts at disarmament and non-proliferation, in particular in the field of nuclear disarmament and non-proliferation, with a view to strengthening international security and enhancing sustainable economic and social development,

Conscious of the need to combat the negative effects of cultures of violence and complacency in the face of current dangers in this field through long-term programmes of education and training,

Remaining convinced that the need for disarmament and non-proliferation education has never been greater, especially on the subject of weapons of mass destruction, but also in the field of small arms and light weapons, terrorism and other challenges to international security and the process of disarmament, as well as on the relevance of implementing the recommendations contained in the United Nations study,

Recognizing the importance of the role of civil society, including non-governmental organizations, in the promotion of disarmament and non-proliferation education,

1. Expresses its appreciation to the Member States, the United Nations and other international and regional organizations, civil society and non-governmental organizations, which, within their purview, implemented the recommendations made in the United Nations study, as discussed in the report of the Secretary-General reviewing the implementation of the recommendations;

2. Conveys once again those recommendations to Member States, the United Nations and other international and regional organizations, civil society and non-governmental organizations, and encourages them to report to the Secretary-General on steps taken to implement them;

3. Requests the Secretary-General to prepare a report reviewing the results of the implementation of the recommendations and possible new opportunities for promoting disarmament and non-proliferation education, and to submit it to the General Assembly at its sixty-first session;

4. Also requests the Secretary-General to utilize electronic means to the fullest extent possible in the dissemination, in as many official languages as feasible, of information related to that report and any other information that the Department for Disarmament Affairs gathers on an ongoing basis in regard to the implementation of the recommendations of the United Nations study;

5. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its sixty-first session an item entitled "Disarmament and non-proliferation education".

Disarmament Information Programme

In response to General Assembly resolution 57/90 [YUN 2002, p. 545], the Secretary-General, in July [A/59/171], reported on the activities of the Disarmament Information Programme during the previous two years and those planned for the forthcoming two years. The report described efforts by the Department for Disarmament Affairs (DDA) and the Department of Public Information (DPI) to raise awareness and understanding of UN work regarding disarmament and related issues, focusing on WMDs and conventional weapons, particularly small arms and light weapons, and on international terrorism, the UN Register of Conventional Arms and other transparency and confidence-building measures. The programme was carried out through publications, website access (disarmament.un.org), exhibits, information activities, cooperation with civil society, and radio and television broadcasts. Surveys conducted by DPI and DDA indicated that the DDA flagship publication—The United Nations Disarmament Yearbook—should continue. DDA, in collaboration with DPI, would continue to facilitate the access of civil society organizations at important disarmament-related events.

Annexed to the report was a financial statement of the Voluntary Trust Fund for the United Nations Disarmament Information Programme, which supported DDA information and outreach activities. At the end of the 2002-2003 biennium, the Fund's available balance was $472,481.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 3 December [meeting 66], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the First Committee [A/59/460], adopted resolution 59/103 without vote [agenda item 66 (a)].

United Nations Disarmament Information Programme

The General Assembly,

Recalling its decision taken in 1982 at its twelfth special session, the second special session devoted to disarmament, by which the World Disarmament Campaign was launched,

Bearing in mind its resolution 47/53 D of 9 December 1992, in which it decided, inter alia, that the World Disarmament Campaign should be known thereafter as the "United Nations Disarmament Information Programme” and the World Disarmament Campaign Voluntary Trust Fund as the “Voluntary Trust Fund for the United Nations Disarmament Information Programme”.

Recalling its resolutions 51/46 A of 10 December 1996, 53/78 E of 4 December 1998, 55/34 A of 20 November 2000 and 57/90 of 22 November 2002,

Welcoming the report of the Secretary-General on the United Nations Disarmament Information Programme,

1. Takes note with appreciation of the report of the Secretary-General on the United Nations Disarmament Information Programme;

2. Commends the Secretary-General for his efforts to make effective use of the limited resources available to him in disseminating as widely as possible, including by electronic means, information on arms limitation and disarmament to Governments, the media, non-governmental organizations, educational communities and research institutes, and in carrying out a seminar and conference programme;

3. Stresses the importance of the Programme as a significant instrument in enabling all Member States to participate fully in the deliberations and negotiations on disarmament in the various United Nations bodies, in assisting them in complying with treaties, as required, and in contributing to agreed mechanisms for transparency;

4. Notes the results of the survey of users of The United Nations Disarmament Yearbook;

5. Notes with appreciation the cooperation of the Department of Public Information of the Secretariat and its information centres in pursuit of the objectives of the Programme;

6. Recommends that the Programme continue to inform, educate and generate public understanding of the importance of multilateral action and support for it, including action by the United Nations and the Conference on Disarmament, in the field of arms limitation and disarmament, in a factual, balanced and objective manner, and that it focus its efforts:

(a) To continue to publish in all official languages The United Nations Disarmament Yearbook and to increase its dissemination by posting the 2002 and 2003 English editions on the Internet;

(b) To continue to maintain the Disarmament web site as a part of the United Nations web site and to produce versions of the site in as many official languages as feasible;

(c) To continue to intensify United Nations interaction with the public, principally non-governmental organizations and research institutes, to help further an informed debate on topical issues of arms limitation, disarmament and security;

(d) To continue to organize discussions on topics of interest in the field of arms limitation and disarmament with a view to broadening understanding and facilitating an exchange of views and information among Member States and civil society;

7. Invites all Member States to make contributions to the Voluntary Trust Fund for the United Nations Disarmament Information Programme with a view to sustaining a strong outreach programme;

8. Takes note of the recommendations contained in the report of the Secretary-General, which reviews the implementation of the recommendations made in the

2002 study on disarmament and non-proliferation education;

9. Requests the Secretary-General to submit to the General Assembly at its sixty-first session a report covering both the implementation of the activities of the Programme by the United Nations system during the previous two years and the activities of the Programme contemplated by the system for the following two years;

10. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its sixty-first session the item entitled “United Nations Disarmament Information Programme”.

Advisory Board on Disarmament Matters

The Advisory Board on Disarmament Matters, which advised the Secretary-General on the disarmament studies programme and implementation of the Disarmament Information Programme and served as the Board of Trustees of the United Nations Institute for Disarmament Research (UNIDIR) (see below), held its forty-second and forty-third sessions (New York, 4-6 February; Geneva, 30 June-2 July) [A/59/361]. The Board deliberated on terrorism and WMDs and their delivery systems; disarmament and reconciliation in conflict prevention; export controls; and its contribution to the work of the High-level Panel on Threats, Challenges and Change (see p. 54). It recommended that the proliferation of WMDs be made punishable under international law and that perpetrators, whether in State service or private, be held personally accountable. State action to combat terrorism by WMDs, including preventive action, should be embedded in a multilateral legal framework and within the ambit of the United Nations. The Security Council should consider widening the mandate of future peacekeeping operations to include disarmament and reconciliation aspects of conflict resolution. Regarding export control, the Board recommended strengthening the UN role in fostering cooperation and coordination among Member States and establishing working groups on States’ export control obligations under disarmament and non-proliferation treaties. The Nuclear Suppliers Group and other export control regimes should provide input on possible items to be listed, experiences and models for export control structures, and licensing criteria. Concerning its contribution to the High-level Panel, the Board made recommendations to it on WMDs, missiles, small arms and light weapons, landmines and export controls, and the role of the United Nations in strengthening multilateral disarmament, arms control and non-proliferation regimes (see p. 522).

In its capacity as the Board of Trustees of UNIDIR (see below), the Board made recommendations concerning the Institute's 2005 work programme and budget.

UN Institute for Disarmament Research

The Secretary-General transmitted to the General Assembly the report of the UNIDIR Director covering the period from August 2003 to July 2004, as well as the report of the UNIDIR Board of Trustees on the proposed 2004-2005 programme of work and budget [A/59/168]. The Institute's research activities continued to focus on global security, regional security and human security, addressing the full range of substantive disarmament issues, from small arms to weapons in space. The report drew attention to the scope of UNIDIR's research activities worldwide, which included conferences, seminars and discussion meetings, and to its networking initiatives with specialized agencies and UN organizations and institutions. Contained in the report was a list of UNIDIR publications issued during the reporting period.

The Board of Trustees recommended a subvention of $227,600 from the UN regular budget for 2005, which the Assembly approved on 23 December (resolution 59/276, section V) (see p. 1383).

Disarmament fellowship, training and advisory services

In 2004, 30 fellows participated in the UN disarmament fellowship, training and advisory services programme, which began in Geneva on 30 August and terminated in New York on 3 November, as the Secretary-General reported in July [A/59/177]. The programme comprised study sessions in Geneva and New York and study visits to intergovernmental organizations in The Hague and Vienna working in the field of disarmament, and to Germany and Japan.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 3 December [meeting 66], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the First Committee [A/59/460], adopted resolution 59/97 without vote [agenda item 66 (b)].

United Nations disarmament fellowship, training and advisory services

The General Assembly,

Having considered the report of the Secretary-General,

Recalling its decision, contained in paragraph 108 of the Final Document of the Tenth Special Session of the General Assembly, the first special session devoted to disarmament, to establish a programme of fellowships on disarmament, as well as its decisions contained in annex IV to the Concluding Document of the Twelfth Special Session of the General Assembly, the second special session devoted to disarmament, in which it decided, inter alia, to continue the programme,

Noting that the programme continues to contribute significantly to developing greater awareness of the importance and benefits of disarmament and better understanding of the concerns of the international community in the field of disarmament and security, as well as to enhancing the knowledge and skills of fellows, allowing them to participate more effectively in efforts in the field of disarmament at all levels,

Noting with satisfaction that the programme has trained a large number of officials from Member States throughout its twenty-six years of existence, many of whom hold positions of responsibility in the field of disarmament within their own Governments,

Recognizing the need for Member States to take into account gender equality when nominating candidates to the programme,

Recalling all the annual resolutions on the matter since the thirty-seventh session of the General Assembly, in 1982, including resolution 50/71 A of 12 December 1995,

Believing that the forms of assistance available to Member States, in particular to developing countries, under the programme will enhance the capabilities of their officials to follow ongoing deliberations and negotiations on disarmament, both bilateral and multilateral,

1. Reaffirms its decisions contained in annex IV to the Concluding Document of the Twelfth Special Session of the General Assembly and the report of the Secretary-General approved by the Assembly in its resolution 33/71 E of 14 December 1978;

2. Expresses its appreciation to all Member States and organizations that have consistently supported the programme throughout the years, thereby contributing to its success, in particular to the Governments of Germany and Japan for the continuation of extensive and highly educative study visits for the participants in the programme, and to the Government of the United States of America for organizing a presentation to the fellows in the area of disarmament;

3. Expresses its appreciation to the International Atomic Energy Agency, the Organization for the Prohibition of Chemical Weapons, the Preparatory Commission for the Comprehensive Nuclear-Test-Ban Treaty Organization and the Monterey Institute of International Studies for having organized specific study programmes in the field of disarmament in their respective areas of competence, thereby contributing to the objectives of the programme;

4. Commends the Secretary-General for the diligence with which the programme has continued to be carried out;

5. Requests the Secretary-General to continue to implement annually the Geneva-based programme within existing resources and to report thereon to the General Assembly at its sixty-first session;

6. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its sixty-first session the item entitled "United Nations disarmament fellowship, training and advisory services".

Regional centres for peace and disarmament

On 3 December [meeting 66], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the First Committee [A/59/460], adopted resolution 59/98 without vote [agenda item 66 (j)].

United Nations regional centres for peace and disarmament

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 58/63 of 8 December 2003 regarding the maintenance and revitalization of the three United Nations regional centres for peace and disarmament,

Recalling also the reports of the Secretary-General on the United Nations Regional Centre for Peace and Disarmament in Africa, the United Nations Regional Centre for Peace and Disarmament in Asia and the Pacific and the United Nations Regional Centre for Peace, Disarmament and Development in Latin America and the Caribbean,

Reaffirming its decision, taken in 1982 at its twelfth special session, to establish the United Nations Disarmament Information Programme, the purpose of which is to inform, educate and generate public understanding and support for the objectives of the United Nations in the field of arms control and disarmament,

Bearing in mind its resolutions 40/151 G of 16 December 1985, 41/60 J of 3 December 1986, 42/39 D of 30 November 1987 and 44/117 F of 15 December 1989 on the regional centres for peace and disarmament in Nepal, Peru and Togo,

Recognizing that the changes that have taken place in the world have created new opportunities as well as posed new challenges for the pursuit of disarmament, and, in this regard, bearing in mind that the regional centres for peace and disarmament can contribute substantially to understanding and cooperation among States in each particular region in the areas of peace, disarmament and development,

Noting that in paragraph 146 of the Final Document of the Twelfth Conference of Heads of State or Government of the Non-Aligned Countries, held at Durban, South Africa, from 29 August to 3 September 1998, the Heads of State or Government welcomed the decision adopted by the General Assembly on maintaining and revitalizing the three regional centres for peace and disarmament in Nepal, Peru and Togo,

1. Reiterates the importance of the United Nations activities at the regional level to increase the stability and security of its Member States, which could be promoted in a substantive manner by the maintenance and revitalization of the three regional centres for peace and disarmament;

2. Reaffirms that, in order to achieve positive results, it is useful for the three regional centres to carry out dissemination and educational programmes that promote regional peace and security and that are aimed at changing basic attitudes with respect to peace and security and disarmament so as to support the achievement of the purposes and principles of the United Nations;

3. Appeals to Member States in each region and those that are able to do so, as well as to international governmental and non-governmental organizations and foundations, to make voluntary contributions to the regional centres in their respective regions to strengthen their activities and initiatives;

4. Emphasizes the importance of the activities of the regional branch of the Department for Disarmament Affairs of the Secretariat;

5. Requests the Secretary-General to provide all necessary support, within existing resources, to the regional centres in carrying out their programmes of activities;

6. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its sixtieth session the item entitled "United Nations regional centres for peace and disarmament".

Africa

Pursuant to General Assembly resolution 58/61 [YUN 2003, p. 587], the Secretary-General described the activities of the United Nations Regional Centre for Peace and Disarmament in Africa, covering July 2003 to June 2004 [A/59/209]. The Centre was established in Lomé, Togo, in 1986 [YUN 1986, p. 85].

During the reporting period, the Centre focused its activities on support for peace processes and related initiatives in Africa; practical disarmament and arms control; information, research and publications; and advocacy and resource mobilization. Maintaining consultations with ECOWAS on the situation in Côte d'Ivoire, the Centre hosted related briefings in Lomé with high-level officials. Working with the UN peace-building support offices in Africa, it facilitated the collection and destruction of surplus weapons and helped harmonize civil-military relations in the Central African Republic, Guinea-Bissau and Liberia. To facilitate programmes of disarmament, demobilization and reintegration of ex-combatants, the Centre launched a pilot consultative process on training for peace operations with ECOWAS and initiated a partnership in that field with the Norwegian Institute of International Affairs. In January and February, the Centre provided technical support to the AU in formulating an African common defence and security policy and an African standby force. The Centre supported Member States' efforts to establish and strengthen national mechanisms to combat the proliferation of small arms and light weapons, by organizing, with financial support from France, a capacity-building workshop (9-10 February) for 16 Togolese officials. To address that problem in other parts of the continent, the Centre cooperated with concerned regional and subregional organizations, including the Nairobi Secretariat overseeing the implementation of the Nairobi Declaration on the Problem of the Proliferation of Illicit Small Arms and Light Weapons in the Great Lakes Region and the Horn of Africa [YUN 2000, p. 518]; ECOWAS, within the context of its 1998 Moratorium on the Importation, Exportation and Manufacture of Small Arms and Light Weapons in West Africa [YUN 1998, p. 537]; the Southern African Development Community (SADC), whose Protocol on the Control of Firearms, Ammunition and Other Related Materials entered into force during the year; and the Economic Community of Central African States (ECCAS), with which the Centre explored ways of supporting civil society efforts regarding the implementation of the Programme of Action adopted by the 2001 UN Conference on small arms [YUN 2001, p. 499].

Concerning other disarmament issues, the Centre made efforts to promote nuclear non-proliferation in Africa, and collaborated with IAEA to organize subregional seminars on a strengthened safeguards system for member States of ECOWAS (Ouagadougou, Burkina Faso, 26-27 February) and of SADC (Windhoek, Namibia, 29-31 March). Both seminars aimed at promoting implementation of the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons (see p. 542) and the entry into force of the African Nuclear-Weapon-Free-Zone Treaty (Treaty of Pelindaba) (see p. 550). The Centre collaborated with the AU, ECOWAS and a number of NGOs to convene a regional workshop (Lomé, 21-24 April) to help build the capacity of ECOWAS member States in modern techniques for control of military institutions, among other things. The Centre provided support to the United Nations Standing Advisory Committee on Security Questions in Central Africa (see p. 571), and undertook activities to build civil-military relations, including training workshops and sensitization campaigns on crisis prevention and resolution. It made efforts to promote compliance with, and the signing and ratification of, international disarmament and arms control instruments and norms, and maintained its information, research and publications activities on security issues in the region.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 3 December [meeting 66], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the First Committee [A/59/460], adopted resolution 59/101 without vote [agenda item 66 (d)].

United Nations Regional Centre for Peace and Disarmament in Africa

The General Assembly,

Mindful of the provisions of Article 11, paragraph 1, of the Charter of the United Nations stipulating that a function of the General Assembly is to consider the general principles of cooperation in the maintenance of international peace and security, including the principles governing disarmament and arms limitation,

Recalling its resolutions 40/151 G of 16 December 1985, 41/60 D of 3 December 1986, 42/39 J of 30 November 1987 and 43/76 D of 7 December 1988 on the United Nations Regional Centre for Peace and Disarmament in Africa, and its resolutions 46/36 F of 6 December 1991 and 47/52 G of 9 December 1992 on regional disarmament, including confidence-building measures,

Recalling also its resolutions 48/76 E of 16 December 1993, 49/76 D of 15 December 1994, 50/71 C of 12 December 1995, 51/46 E of 10 December 1996, 52/220 of 22 December 1997, 53/78 C of 4 December 1998, 54/55 B of 1 December 1999, 55/34 D of 20 November 2000, 56/25 D of 29 November 2001, 57/91 of 22 November 2002 and 58/61 of 8 December 2003,

Aware of the widespread support for the activities of the Regional Centre and the important role that the Centre can play in the present context in promoting confidence-building and arms-limitation measures at the regional level, thereby promoting progress in the area of sustainable development,

Taking note of the report of the Secretary-General, in which it was stated that the Regional Centre received an increasing number of requests from Member States in the African region for substantive support for several peace initiatives and conflict resolution activities in the region,

Taking note also of the fact that, as noted in the report of the Secretary-General, very limited financial contributions were made to the Regional Centre despite continued fund-raising efforts,

Concerned that the continuing financial difficulties faced by the Regional Centre have impaired its ability to realize its full potential and to fulfil its mandate adequately,

Bearing in mind the efforts undertaken to mobilize the necessary resources for the operational costs of the Regional Centre,

Taking into account the need to establish close cooperation between the Regional Centre and the Mechanism for Conflict Prevention, Management and Resolution of the African Union, in conformity with the decision adopted by the Assembly of Heads of State and Government of the Organization of African Unity at its thirty-fifth ordinary session, held at Algiers from 12 to 14 July 1999,

1. Commends the activities that the United Nations Regional Centre for Peace and Disarmament in Africa is continuing to carry out, in particular in support of the efforts made by the African States in the areas of peace and security;

2. Reaffirms its strong support for the Regional Centre, and emphasizes the need to provide it with the necessary resources to enable it to strengthen its activities and carry out its programmes;

3. Appeals once again to all States, as well as to international governmental and non-governmental organizations and foundations, to make voluntary contributions in order to strengthen the programmes and activities of the Regional Centre and facilitate their implementation;

4. Requests the Secretary-General to continue to provide the necessary support to the Regional Centre for better achievements and results;

5. Also requests the Secretary-General to facilitate close cooperation between the Regional Centre and the African Union, in particular in the areas of peace, security and development, and to continue to assist the Director of the Regional Centre in his efforts to stabilize the financial situation of the Centre;

6. Appeals in particular to the Regional Centre, in cooperation with the African Union, regional and sub-regional organizations and the African States, to take steps to promote the consistent implementation of the Programme of Action to Prevent, Combat and Eradicate the Illicit Trade in Small Arms and Light Weapons in All Its Aspects;

7. Requests the Secretary-General to report to the General Assembly at its sixtieth session on the implementation of the present resolution;

8. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its sixtieth session the item entitled "United Nations Regional Centre for Peace and Disarmament in Africa".

Asia and the Pacific

As requested by the General Assembly in resolution 58/62 [YUN 2003, p. 589], the Secretary-General reported on the activities of the United Nations Regional Centre for Peace and Disarmament in Asia and the Pacific from August 2003 to July 2004 [A/59/169]. The Centre was inaugurated in Kathmandu, Nepal, in 1989 [YUN 1989, p. 88].

During the period under review, the Centre continued to promote disarmament and security through the organization of meetings and conferences (Osaka, Japan, 19-22 August 2003; Jeju Island, Republic of Korea, 3-5 December, 2003; Almaty, Kazakhstan, 16-18 March 2004). In a final communiqué adopted by the Almaty meeting, the regional States, particularly the five Central Asian States, expressed their resolve for joint action in stemming the spread of small arms and light weapons in the subregion. The Centre assisted the five Central Asian States in finalizing a draft treaty on the establishment of a nuclear-weapon-free zone in Central Asia. It made efforts to strengthen Mongolia's nuclear-weapon-free status, and to that end held consultations with the Central Asian States, the five nuclear-weapon States and Mongolia. As a means of promoting cooperation with relevant regional organizations, the Centre provided support to the United Nations Association of Japan in organizing the tenth Kanazawa Symposium on North-East Asia (Kanazawa, Japan 7-9 June), which addressed, among other things, conflict prevention, crisis management, nuclear disarmament and other security questions. The Centre helped organize a UN conference on disarmament (Sapporo, Japan, 26-29 July), which considered mounting challenges and international response to nuclear non-proliferation and related issues. It facilitated discussion of small arms and light weapons issues at a regional seminar (Nadi, Fiji, 18-20 August).

Consultations were maintained during the year with the host country on the relocation of the Centre, and in that context, DDA and the Nepalese authorities continued to pursue agreement on outstanding issues, with a view to finalizing the host country agreement and memorandum of understanding.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 3 December [meeting 66], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the First Committee [A/59/460], adopted resolution 59/100 without vote [agenda item 66 (e)].

United Nations Regional Centre for Peace and Disarmament in Asia and the Pacific

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 42/39 D of 30 November 1987 and 44/117 F of 15 December 1989, by which it established the United Nations Regional Centre for Peace and Disarmament in Asia and renamed it the United Nations Regional Centre for Peace and Disarmament in Asia and the Pacific, with headquarters in Kathmandu and with the mandate of providing, on request, substantive support for the initiatives and other activities mutually agreed upon by the Member States of the Asia-Pacific region for the implementation of measures for peace and disarmament, through appropriate utilization of available resources,

Welcoming the report of the Secretary-General, in which he expresses his belief that the mandate of the Regional Centre remains valid and that the Centre has been a useful instrument for fostering a climate of co-operation for peace and disarmament in the region,

Noting that trends in the post-cold-war era have emphasized the function of the Regional Centre in assisting Member States as they deal with new security concerns and disarmament issues emerging in the region,

Commending the useful activities carried out by the Regional Centre in encouraging regional and sub-regional dialogue for the enhancement of openness, transparency and confidence-building, as well as the promotion of disarmament and security through the organization of regional meetings, which has come to be widely known within the Asia-Pacific region as "the Kathmandu process",

Expressing its appreciation to the Regional Centre for its organization of meetings and conferences in the region, held in Osaka, Japan, from 19 to 22 August 2003, on Jeju Island, Republic of Korea, from 3 to 5 December 2003, in Almaty, Kazakhstan, from 16 to 18 March 2004, in Kanazawa, Japan, from 7 to 9 June 2004 and in Sapporo, Japan, from 26 to 29 July 2004,

Welcoming the idea of the possible creation of an educational and training programme for peace and disarmament in Asia and the Pacific for young people with different backgrounds, to be financed from voluntary contributions,

Noting the important role of the Regional Centre in assisting region-specific initiatives of Member States, including its continued assistance in finalizing a treaty related to the establishment of a nuclear-weapon-free zone in Central Asia, as well as to Mongolia's international security and nuclear-weapon-free status, including the organization of an informal consultation among relevant United Nations bodies in January and June 2004 to discuss the status of implementation of the non-nuclear aspects of Mongolia's status,

Appreciating highly the overall support that Nepal has extended as the host nation of the headquarters of the Regional Centre,

1. Reaffirms its strong support for the forthcoming operation and further strengthening of the United Nations Regional Centre for Peace and Disarmament in Asia and the Pacific;

2. Underlines the importance of the Kathmandu process as a powerful vehicle for the development of the practice of region-wide security and disarmament dialogue;

3. Expresses its appreciation for the continuing political support and voluntary financial contributions to the Regional Centre, which are essential for its continued operation;

4. Appeals to Member States, in particular those within the Asia-Pacific region, as well as to international governmental and non-governmental organizations and foundations, to make voluntary contributions, the only resources of the Regional Centre, to strengthen the programme of activities of the Centre and the implementation thereof;

5. Requests the Secretary-General, taking note of paragraph 6 of General Assembly resolution 49/76 D of 15 December 1994, to provide the Regional Centre with the necessary support, within existing resources, in carrying out its programme of activities;

6. Urges the Secretary-General to ensure the physical operation of the Regional Centre from Kathmandu within six months of the date of signature of the host country agreement and to enable the Centre to function effectively;

7. Requests the Secretary-General to report to the General Assembly at its sixtieth session on the implementation of the present resolution;

8. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its sixtieth session the item entitled "United Nations Regional Centre for Peace and Disarmament in Asia and the Pacific".

Latin America and the Caribbean

As requested by the General Assembly in resolution 58/60 [YUN 2003, p. 590], the Secretary-General reported on the activities of the United Nations Regional Centre for Peace, Disarmament and Development in Latin America and the Caribbean from July 2003 to June 2004 [A/59/157]. The Centre was inaugurated in Lima, Peru, in 1987 [YUN 1987, p. 88].

During the period under review, the Centre focused on consolidating its programme of activities and organizational structure, and on strengthening its human resources capacity. It continued to organize and participate in a growing number of activities such as seminars, training courses, weapons and ammunition destruction events, technical advisory missions and dissemination of information. Those activities related to confidence- and security-building, such as support for conventional weapons methodology studies; practical disarmament, including the destruction of firearms, ammunition and explosives and the improvement of stockpile management practices; and capacity-building, such as training courses for the law enforcement community and NGOs. The Centre also supported efforts to strengthen the Treaty for the Prohibition of Nuclear Weapons in Latin America and the Caribbean (Treaty of Tlatelolco) (see p. 552) and to promote the ratification and implementation of existing multilateral agreements relating to WMDs. Having completed the development of its Small Arms and Light Weapons Administration system, the Centre presented it to the States parties to the Inter-American Convention against the Illicit Manufacturing of and Trafficking in Firearms, Ammunition, Explosives, and Other Related Materials at their first Conference on the Convention (Bogotá, Colombia, 9 March). The system was intended to accelerate information flow among those countries regarding the Convention's implementation. Among training courses, the Centre held one (Brasília, Brazil, 3-21 May) which educated 85 law enforcement officials from 15 regional countries in a wide range of security-related issues, including drugs, terrorism and money-laundering. In continuing cooperation with NGOs in strengthening the regional network on the control of firearms trafficking, the Centre held a similar training course for NGO representatives (San Salvador, El Salvador, 1-2 April), at which gender issues constituted an important aspect. In May, the Centre began coordinating with country offices of the United Nations Development Programme (UNDP) in planning firearms-related activities, particularly in Central America, and discussions were held on extending such cooperation to members of the Coordinating Action on Small Arms mechanism, established in 1998 [YUN 1998, p. 525]. The Centre undertook a variety of activities aimed at consolidating its Regional Clearing-house Programme on Firearms, Ammunition and Explosives, which was developed to support States in implementing regional firearms instruments. On 25 May, DDA and UNDP's Small Arms and Demobilization Unit signed a memorandum of understanding to facilitate cooperation, through the Centre, in providing assistance to States in firearms collection, weapons destruction and stockpile management. The Centre and the Unit formalized cooperation in several areas, such as joint activities to assist States in reporting on implementation of the 2001 Programme of Action to counter small arms trafficking [YUN 2001, p. 499] and training courses on relevant issues, particularly disarmament and development. In other efforts to aid the implementation of the Programme of Action, the Centre created a software database containing information on the manufacture of firearms, ammunition and explosives and the legal trade of those weapons, which served as an information resource to manufacturers and brokers. The Centre collaborated with OAS and the Swedish Fellowship for Reconciliation, an NGO, to produce a book on legal norms and instruments on firearms, ammunition and explosives in Latin America and the Caribbean, for use by members of parliament and legal experts in harmonizing and improving firearms legislation and control mechanisms.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 3 December [meeting 66], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the First Committee [A/59/460], adopted resolution 59/99 without vote [agenda item 66 (c)].

United Nations Regional Centre for Peace, Disarmament and Development in Latin America and the Caribbean

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 41/60 J of 3 December 1986, 42/39 K of 30 November 1987 and 43/76 H of 7 December 1988 on the United Nations Regional Centre for Peace, Disarmament and Development in Latin America and the Caribbean, with headquarters in Lima,

Recalling also its resolutions 46/37 F of 9 December 1991, 48/76 E of 16 December 1993, 49/76 D of 15 December 1994, 50/71 C of 12 December 1995, 52/220 of 22 December 1997, 53/78 F of 4 December 1998, 54/55 F of 1 December 1999, 55/34 E of 20 November 2000, 56/25 E of 29 November 2001, 57/89 of 22 November 2002 and 58/60 of 8 December 2003,

Underlining the revitalization of the Regional Centre, the efforts made by the Government of Peru and other countries to that end, as well as the important work done by the Director of the Centre,

Recognizing that the Regional Centre has continued to act as an instrument for the implementation of regional initiatives and has intensified its contribution to the coordination of United Nations efforts towards peace and security,

Welcoming the report of the Secretary-General, which concludes that the Regional Centre has continued to act as a facilitator for the implementation of regional initiatives by identifying regional security needs and new areas of cooperation with States and organizations in the region, and to provide more in-depth information on weapons-related matters, weapons destruction and stockpile management, including the initiation of a series of training courses for the law enforcement community, members of parliament, representatives of ministries of foreign affairs and non-governmental organizations on such matters,

Welcoming also the fact that the report stresses that the Regional Centre has placed more emphasis on the inclusion of a gender perspective in its planned activities and the relationship between disarmament and development,

Welcoming further the report of the Group of Governmental Experts on the relationship between disarmament and development, established pursuant to General Assembly resolution 57/65 of 22 November

2002, which is of utmost interest with regard to the role that the Regional Centre plays in promoting the issue in the region in pursuit of its mandate to promote economic and social development related to peace and disarmament,

Noting that security and disarmament issues have always been recognized as significant topics in Latin America and the Caribbean, the first inhabited region in the world to be declared a nuclear-weapon-free zone,

Welcoming the support provided by the Regional Centre to strengthening the nuclear-weapon-free zone established by the Treaty for the Prohibition of Nuclear Weapons in Latin America and the Caribbean (Treaty of Tlatelolco), as well as to promoting and assisting the ratification and implementation of existing multilateral agreements related to weapons of mass destruction and to promoting peace and disarmament education projects during the period under review,

Bearing in mind the important role that the Regional Centre can play in promoting confidence-building measures, arms control and limitation, disarmament and development at the regional level,

Bearing in mind also the importance of information, research, education and training for peace, disarmament and development in order to achieve understanding and cooperation among States,

Recognizing the need to provide the three United Nations regional centres for peace and disarmament with sufficient financial resources and cooperation for the planning and implementation of their programmes of activities,

1. Reiterates its strong support for the role of the United Nations Regional Centre for Peace, Disarmament and Development in Latin America and the Caribbean in the promotion of United Nations activities at the regional level to strengthen peace, stability, security and development among its member States;

2. Expresses its satisfaction and congratulates the Regional Centre for the expansion of the vast range of activities carried out in the last year in the fields of peace, disarmament and development, and requests the Regional Centre to take into account the proposals to be submitted by the countries of the region in promoting confidence-building measures, arms control and limitation, transparency, disarmament and development at the regional level;

3. Expresses its appreciation for the political support and financial contributions to the Regional Centre, which are essential for its continued operation;

4. Invites all States of the region to continue to take part in the activities of the Regional Centre, proposing items for inclusion in its programme and making greater and better use of the potential of the Centre to meet the current challenges facing the international community with a view to fulfilling the aims of the Charter of the United Nations in the fields of peace, disarmament and development;

5. Recognizes that the Regional Centre has an important role in the promotion and development of regional initiatives agreed upon by the countries of Latin America and the Caribbean in the field of weapons of mass destruction, in particular nuclear weapons, conventional arms, including small arms and light weapons, as well as the relationship between disarmament and development;

6. Encourages the Regional Centre to further develop activities in the important area of disarmament and development;

7. Highlights the conclusion contained in the report of the Secretary-General that the vast regional co-operation undertaken by the Regional Centre during the reporting period was evidence of the important role of the Organization as a viable regional actor in assisting countries in the region to advance the cause of peace, disarmament and development in Latin America and the Caribbean;

8. Appeals to Member States, in particular those within the Latin American and Caribbean region, as well as to international governmental and non-governmental organizations and foundations, to make and to increase voluntary contributions to strengthen the Regional Centre, its programme of activities and the implementation thereof;

9. Requests the Secretary-General to provide the Regional Centre with all necessary support, within existing resources, so that it may carry out its programme of activities in accordance with its mandate;

10. Also requests the Secretary-General to report to the General Assembly at its sixtieth session on the implementation of the present resolution;

11. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its sixtieth session the item entitled "United Nations Regional Centre for Peace, Disarmament and Development in Latin America and the Caribbean".

Chapter VIII

Other political and security questions

The United Nations continued in 2004 to consider political and security questions relating to its efforts to support democratization worldwide, the promotion of decolonization, public information activities and the peaceful uses of outer space.

The General Assembly, in February, welcomed Qatar's proposal to host the Sixth International Conference of New or Restored Democracies in November 2006. In December, it welcomed the Declaration of San Francisco de Quito by the five member States of the Andean Community, establishing the Andean Zone of Peace.

The Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples continued to review progress in implementing the 1960 Declaration, particularly the exercise of self-determination by the remaining Non-Self-Governing Territories. The Assembly requested the Special Committee to continue to seek suitable means for the immediate and full implementation of the Declaration and to carry out actions approved by the Assembly regarding the International Decade for the Eradication of Colonialism (1990-2000) and the Second International Decade (2001-2010).

The Committee on Information continued to review the management and operation of the Department of Public Information (DPI), based on reports submitted by the Secretary-General. As part of its continuing departmental reorientation process, DPI introduced the concept of the Secretariat departments as clients, which identified their own priorities, and DPI as service provider. It redoubled its efforts to bring UN system members within a common communications framework, and continued to promote and refine a culture of evaluation, with a first annual programme impact review completed in January. The first regional United Nations information centre, in Brussels, Belgium, became operational on 1 January, and the Secretary-General set out the proposed strategy and modalities for implementing the regionalization of information centres around hubs in other regions.

In a December resolution on developments in information and telecommunications, the Assembly called on Member States to promote the consideration of existing and potential threats in the field of information security. Regarding the role of science and technology in the context of international security, the Assembly, in another December resolution, encouraged UN bodies to contribute, within existing mandates, to promoting the application of science and technology for peaceful purposes.

Of the 12 action teams established to implement the recommendations of the Third (1999) United Nations Conference on the Exploration and Peaceful Uses of Outer Space (UNISPACE III), 9 had submitted final reports to the Committee on the Peaceful Uses of Outer Space and its Scientific and Technical Subcommittee; two other teams reported on progress in their work. The Committee submitted a plan of action to the Assembly proposing further specific actions for implementing the UNISPACE III recommendations, which the Assembly endorsed in October. In a December resolution on the application of the concept of a "launching State", the Assembly requested the Committee to continue to provide States, at their request, with relevant information and assistance in developing national space laws based on the relevant treaties.

The United Nations Scientific Committee on the Effects of Atomic Radiation held its fifty-second session in April.

General aspects of international security

Support for democraciesSixth International Conference (2006)

In February, the General Assembly welcomed Qatar's offer, made during the Fifth International Conference of New or Restored Democracies [YUN 2003, p. 593], to host the Sixth Conference in Doha in 2006 (see below).

In addition to the 2003 Conference, four earlier conferences on the subject had been held, in 1988, 1994 [YUN 1994, p. 250], 1997 [YUN 1997, p. 530] and 2000 [YUN 2000, p. 544].

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 9 February [meeting 80], the General Assembly adopted resolution 58/281 [draft: A/58/L.57 & Add.1] without vote [agenda item 20].

Sixth International Conference of New or Restored Democracies, to be held in Doha in 2006

The General Assembly,

Bearing in mind the indissoluble links between the principles enshrined in the Universal Declaration of Human Rights and the foundations of any democratic society,

Recognizing that the United Nations has an important role to play in providing timely, appropriate and coherent support to the efforts of Governments to achieve democratization within the context of their development efforts,

Recalling the offer by the Government of Qatar to host the Sixth International Conference of New or Restored Democracies in 2006,

Expressing once again its deep appreciation for the support provided by Member States, the United Nations system, including the specialized agencies, and other intergovernmental organizations to the Government of Mongolia for the holding of the Fifth International Conference of New or Restored Democracies in Ulaanbaatar,

1. Welcomes the proposal of the Government of Qatar to hold the Sixth International Conference of New or Restored Democracies from 13 to 15 November 2006 in Doha;

2. Invites the Secretary-General, Member States, the relevant specialized agencies and bodies of the United Nations system, as well as other intergovernmental and non-governmental organizations, to support and collaborate in the holding of the Sixth International Conference of New or Restored Democracies;

3. Encourages the intergovernmental follow-up mechanism of the Ulaanbaatar Conference to co-operate actively in the preparatory process for the Sixth International Conference of New or Restored Democracies.

Regional aspects of international peace and security

Andean region

By a 12 October letter [A/59/235], Bolivia, Colombia, Ecuador, Peru and Venezuela—the member countries of the Andean Community—transmitted to the Secretary-General the Declaration of San Francisco de Quito on the Establishment and Development of the Andean Zone of Peace, adopted on 12 July by the Presidents of those countries at the fifteenth meeting of the Andean Presidential Council held in Quito, Ecuador. The Andean Zone of Peace was intended to promote friendship and cooperation for all-around development, the culture of peace, efforts to prevent and combat threats to security and a more fair and equitable international order for the Andean countries. Annexed to the letter was a draft resolution for consideration by the General Assembly (see below).

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 2 December [meeting 65], the General Assembly adopted resolution 59/54 [draft: A/59/L.20/Rev.1, orally revised] without vote [agenda item 161].

Andean Zone of Peace

The General Assembly,

Aware of the determination of the States members of the Andean Community to preserve their independence, sovereignty and territorial integrity, promote peaceful coexistence in the Andean region and develop their relations in conditions of peace, self-determination and freedom,

Bearing in mind the commitment of the States members of the Andean Community to promote political, economic, social and cultural integration and cooperation in order to contribute to the sustainable long-term peace, security and balanced and harmonious development of the Andean region,

Noting its resolution 58/317 of 5 August 2004, by which it reaffirmed the central role of the United Nations in the maintenance of international peace and security and the promotion of international cooperation,

Recognizing the Declaration of San Francisco de Quito on the Establishment and Development of the Andean Zone of Peace, adopted in Quito on 12 July 2004 by the Heads of State of the member countries of the Andean Community within the framework of the fifteenth Andean Presidential Council, which sets forth the purpose of establishing a zone of peace within the geographical area comprising the territories, airspace and waters under the sovereignty and jurisdiction of Bolivia, Colombia, Ecuador, Peru and Venezuela (Bolivarian Republic of), as a nuclear, chemical and biological weapons-free zone, as well as the objective of definitively eradicating anti-personnel mines in the Andean Community, by which the necessary conditions will be developed to permit the peaceful and agreed resolution of conflicts of any nature whatsoever, as well as the causes thereof,

Noting with satisfaction that the Andean Zone of Peace is based on the responsible exercise by citizens of democratic values, principles and practices, the rule of law, human rights, social justice, human development, eradicating poverty, social exclusion and inequity, national sovereignty and non-interference in internal affairs, as well as on Andean identity, the promotion of relations of friendship and cooperation for all-round development, the culture of peace, joint efforts to prevent and counteract both conventional and new threats to security, and the joint quest for a fairer and more equitable international order,

Stressing that the Andean Zone of Peace represents a continuous and participatory effort of the States members of the Andean Community aimed at promoting growing commonality among Governments, public opinion, political parties and civil society with regard to widely shared objectives and values,

Also stressing the progress achieved by the States that comprise the Andean Community in matters of security, peace and confidence-building on the basis of a democratic and non-offensive conception of external security through the adoption, on 10 July 2004, of decision 587, containing the Andean Common External Security Policy Guidelines, as well as Andean norms to promote cooperation and coordination in regard to initiatives for fostering efforts to combat the global problem of drugs and associated crimes, and to prevent, combat and eradicate the illicit trade in small arms and light weapons in all its aspects,

Noting that decision 552, entitled "Andean plan to prevent, combat and eradicate the illicit trade in small arms and light weapons in all its aspects", adopted on 25 June 2003, is the first binding subregional instrument derived from the Programme of Action to Prevent, Combat and Eradicate the Illicit Trade in Small Arms and Light Weapons in All Its Aspects, adopted in 2001,

Considering that peace, security and mutual trust are essential requirements for achieving sustainable and long-term political, economic, social and cultural development,

Persuaded of the need to contribute to the maintenance of the Andean Community as a region free of weapons of mass destruction—nuclear, chemical, biological and toxin—as well as to the definitive eradication of anti-personnel mines in the Andean Community,

Recognizing the importance of promoting peace, security and cooperation in the Andean Community for the benefit of the entire human race and, in particular, the peoples of the Andean Community,

Convinced that the establishment of the Andean Zone of Peace will contribute considerably to the strengthening of international peace, security and trust and to the promotion of the purposes and principles on which the Charter of the United Nations and international law are based,

1. Welcomes with satisfaction the Declaration of San Francisco de Quito on the Establishment and Development of the Andean Zone of Peace, which establishes the geographical area comprising the territories, airspace and waters under the sovereignty and jurisdiction of the States members of the Andean Community as the Andean Zone of Peace, to be pursued in accordance with the Treaty for the Prohibition of Nuclear Weapons in Latin America and the Caribbean (Treaty of Tlatelolco) and other international conventions on the matter;

2. Calls upon all States to support the States that comprise the Andean Community in promoting the principles and purposes provided for by the Declaration of San Francisco de Quito;

3. Encourages the States members of the Andean Community to make every effort to ensure the early fulfilment of the commitments arising from the Declaration of San Francisco de Quito.

Decolonization

The General Assembly's Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples (Special Committee on decolonization) held its annual session in New York in two parts—11 February and 6 April (first part); and 7-8, 14, 16-18 and 21-22 June (second part). It considered various aspects of the implementation of the 1960 Declaration, adopted by the Assembly in resolution 1514(XV) [YUN 1960, p. 49], including general decolonization issues and the situation of individual Non-Self-Governing Territories (NSGTs). In accordance with Assembly resolution 57/140 [YUN 2002, p. 557], the Special Committee transmitted to the Assembly the report on its 2004 activities [A/59/23].

By decision 59/520 of 10 December, the Assembly increased the Special Committee's membership from 25 to 27.

Decade for the Eradication of Colonialism

Pacific regional seminar

As part of its efforts to implement the plan of action for the Second International Decade for the Eradication of Colonialism (2001-2010) [YUN 2001, p. 530], declared by the General Assembly in resolution 55/146 [YUN 2000, p. 548], the Special Committee on decolonization [A/59/23] organized a Pacific regional seminar (Madang, Papua New Guinea, 18-20 May) on advancing the decolonization process in the Pacific region.

The seminar recommended that the Special Committee, the administering Powers and NSGTs discuss expediting the implementation of the goals of the Second Decade, and that the General Assembly conduct in 2005 a midterm review of the implementation of the Decade's plan of action. The Special Committee should continue to monitor actively the evolution of NSGTs towards self-determination, include them, on a case-by-case basis, in consultations on the discussions between the Special Committee and the administering Powers, and develop a mechanism to review annually the implementation of the recommendations on decolonization.

Affirming the need for the Special Committee to embark on a public awareness campaign aimed at fostering an understanding among the peoples of the Territories of their self-determination options, the seminar recommended that the Special Committee, with the UN Department of Public Information (DPI) and other UN bodies, develop a programme to disseminate information and raise public awareness in the Territories in order to heighten understanding of the legitimate political status options available. UN information centres should be directed to disseminate information on decolonization to the Territories and to the administering Powers, and the Electoral Unit of the UN Department of Political Affairs (DPA) should be asked to support and assist any consultation process regarding self-determination to be held in an NSGT.

Participants confirmed the need for periodic visiting missions to NSGTs to assess the situation in those Territories and ascertain the wishes and aspirations of the peoples thereof regarding their future status, and called on the administering Powers to cooperate in facilitating such missions.

Subject to Economic and Social Council approval, NSGTs should be given access to relevant UN economic and social programmes, including those emanating from the plans of action of UN world conferences, in furtherance of capacity-building and consistent with the preparation for the attainment of full internal self-government. The Special Committee should continue to explore ways to strengthen support for and formulate assistance programmes to the remaining NSGTs and seek proposals for the full implementation of the relevant resolutions by the specialized agencies. Participants recommended that the Special Committee establish closer ties with the Pacific Islands Forum, including through its observer status at the United Nations, and by encouraging Pacific region NSGTs to develop closer contacts with the Forum's secretariat.

Participants recommended that the Special Committee call on the United States, as the administering Power for Guam, to work with Guam's Commission on Decolonization for the Implementation and Exercise of Chamorro Self-Determination with a view to facilitating the decolonization of Guam, to keep the Secretary-General informed of progress towards that end, and to cooperate with Guam to develop and promote political education for the indigenous Chamorros on their right to self-determination. The Special Committee should engage the administering Power and the representatives of Guam in developing a specific work programme for that Territory. (For more information on Guam, see p. 613.)

Participants welcomed New Zealand's presence at Special Committee meetings, and that of France and the United Kingdom as observers at the seminar, and the United Kingdom's statement regarding its intention to continue to engage with the Special Committee with a view to enhancing cooperation. They reiterated their call on other administering Powers to engage the Special Committee in constructive dialogue in the future, and recommended that the Special Committee integrate the recommendations of the seminar into its relevant resolutions on decolonization.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 10 December [meeting 71], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fourth (Special Political and Decolonization) Committee [A/59/478], adopted resolution 59/136 by recorded vote (167-2-4) [agenda item 20].

Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples

The General Assembly,

Having examined the report of the Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples,

Recalling its resolution 1514(XV) of 14 December 1960, containing the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples, and all its subsequent resolutions concerning the implementation of the Declaration, the most recent of which was resolution 58/111 of 9 December 2003, as well as the relevant resolutions of the Security Council,

Bearing in mind its resolution 55/146 of 8 December 2000, by which it declared the period 2001-2010 the Second International Decade for the Eradication of Colonialism, and the need to examine ways to ascertain the wishes of the peoples of the Non-Self-Governing Territories on the basis of resolution 1514(XV) and other relevant resolutions on decolonization,

Recognizing that the eradication of colonialism has been one of the priorities of the United Nations and continues to be one of its priorities for the decade that began in 2001,

Reconfirming the need to take measures to eliminate colonialism before 2010, as called for in its resolution 55/146,

Reiterating its conviction of the need for the eradication of colonialism, as well as racial discrimination and violations of basic human rights,

Noting with satisfaction the achievements of the Special Committee in contributing to the effective and complete implementation of the Declaration and other relevant resolutions of the United Nations on decolonization,

Stressing the importance of the participation of the administering Powers in the work of the Special Committee,

Noting with satisfaction the cooperation and active participation of some administering Powers in the work of the Special Committee, and encouraging the others also to do so,

Taking note of the fact that the Special Committee held a Pacific regional seminar on advancing the decolonization process in the Pacific region at Madang, Papua New Guinea, from 18 to 20 May 2004,

1. Reaffirms its resolution 1514(XV) and all other resolutions and decisions on decolonization, including its resolution 55/146, by which it declared the period 2001-2010 the Second International Decade for the Eradication of Colonialism, and calls upon the administering Powers, in accordance with those resolutions, to take all necessary steps to enable the peoples of the Non-Self-Governing Territories concerned to exercise fully as soon as possible their right to self-determination, including independence;

2. Reaffirms once again that the existence of colonialism in any form or manifestation, including economic exploitation, is incompatible with the Charter of the United Nations, the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples and the Universal Declaration of Human Rights;

3. Reaffirms its determination to continue to take all steps necessary to bring about the complete and speedy eradication of colonialism and the faithful observance by all States of the relevant provisions of the Charter, the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples and the Universal Declaration of Human Rights;

4. Affirms once again its support for the aspirations of the peoples under colonial rule to exercise their right to self-determination, including independence, in accordance with relevant resolutions of the United Nations on decolonization;

5. Approves the report of the Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples covering its work during 2004, including the programme of work envisaged for 2005;

6. Calls upon the administering Powers to cooperate fully with the Special Committee to finalize before the end of 2005 a constructive programme of work on a case-by-case basis for the Non-Self-Governing Territories to facilitate the implementation of the mandate of the Special Committee and the relevant resolutions on decolonization, including resolutions on specific Territories;

7. Welcomes the progress made in the ongoing consultations between the Special Committee and New Zealand, as administering Power for Tokelau, with the participation of representatives of the people of Tokelau, as evidenced by the decision of the General Fono of Tokelau in November 2003 to actively explore with New Zealand the option of self-government in free association;

8. Requests the Special Committee to continue to seek suitable means for the immediate and full implementation of the Declaration and to carry out the actions approved by the General Assembly regarding the International Decade for the Eradication of Colonialism and the Second International Decade for the Eradication of Colonialism in all Territories that have not yet exercised their right to self-determination, including independence, and in particular:

(a) To formulate specific proposals to bring about an end to colonialism and to report thereon to the General Assembly at its sixtieth session;

(b) To continue to examine the implementation by Member States of resolution 1514(XV) and other relevant resolutions on decolonization;

(c) To continue to examine the political, economic and social situation in the Non-Self-Governing Territories, and to recommend, as appropriate, to the General Assembly the most suitable steps to be taken to enable the populations of those Territories to exercise their right to self-determination, including independence, in accordance with relevant resolutions on decolonization, including resolutions on specific Territories;

(d) To finalize before the end of 2005 a constructive programme of work on a case-by-case basis for the Non-Self-Governing Territories to facilitate the implementation of the mandate of the Special Committee and the relevant resolutions on decolonization, including resolutions on specific Territories;

(e) To continue to dispatch visiting missions to the Non-Self-Governing Territories in accordance with relevant resolutions on decolonization, including resolutions on specific Territories;

(f) To conduct seminars, as appropriate, for the purpose of receiving and disseminating information on the work of the Special Committee, and to facilitate participation by the peoples of the Non-Self-Governing Territories in those seminars;

(g) To take all necessary steps to enlist worldwide support among Governments, as well as national and international organizations, for the achievement of the objectives of the Declaration and the implementation of the relevant resolutions of the United Nations;

(h) To observe annually the Week of Solidarity with the Peoples of Non-Self-Governing Territories;

9. Calls upon all States, in particular the administering Powers, as well as the specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system, to give effect within their respective spheres of competence to the recommendations of the Special Committee for the implementation of the Declaration and other relevant resolutions of the United Nations;

10. Calls upon the administering Powers to ensure that the economic activities in the Non-Self-Governing Territories under their administration do not adversely affect the interests of the peoples but instead promote development, and to assist them in the exercise of their right to self-determination;

11. Urges the administering Powers concerned to take effective measures to safeguard and guarantee the inalienable rights of the peoples of the Non-Self-Governing Territories to their natural resources, including land, and to establish and maintain control over the future development of those resources, and requests the administering Powers to take all necessary steps to protect the property rights of the peoples of those Territories;

12. Urges all States, directly and through their action in the specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system, to provide moral and material assistance to the peoples of the Non-Self-Governing Territories, and requests the administering Powers to take steps to enlist and make effective use of all possible assistance, on both a bilateral and a multi-lateral basis, in the strengthening of the economies of those Territories;

13. Reaffirms that the United Nations visiting missions to the Territories are an effective means of ascertaining the situation in the Territories, as well as the wishes and aspirations of their inhabitants, and calls upon the administering Powers to continue to cooperate with the Special Committee in the discharge of its mandate and to facilitate visiting missions to the Territories;

14. Calls upon the administering Powers that have not participated formally in the work of the Special Committee to do so at its session in 2005;

15. Requests the Secretary-General, the specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system to provide economic, social and other assistance to the Non-Self-Governing Territories and to continue to do so, as appropriate, after they exercise their right to self-determination, including independence;

16. Requests the Secretary-General to provide the Special Committee with the facilities and services required for the implementation of the present resolution, as well as the other resolutions and decisions on decolonization adopted by the General Assembly and the Special Committee.

RECORDED VOTE ON RESOLUTION 59/136:

In favour: Afghanistan, Albania, Algeria, Andorra, Angola, Antigua and Barbuda, Argentina, Armenia, Australia, Austria, Azerbaijan, Bahamas, Bahrain, Bangladesh, Barbados, Belarus, Belize, Benin, Bolivia, Bosnia and Herzegovina, Botswana, Brazil, Brunei Darussalam, Bulgaria, Burkina Faso, Burundi, Cambodia, Cameroon, Canada, Cape Verde, Central African Republic, Chile, China, Colombia, Comoros, Congo, Costa Rica, Côte d'Ivoire, Croatia, Cuba, Cyprus, Czech Republic, Democratic People's Republic of Korea, Democratic Republic of the Congo, Denmark, Djibouti, Dominica, Dominican Republic, Ecuador, Egypt, El Salvador, Equatorial Guinea, Eritrea, Estonia, Ethiopia, Fiji, Finland, Gabon, Georgia, Ghana, Greece, Grenada, Guatemala, Guinea, Guinea-Bissau, Guyana, Honduras, Hungary, Iceland, India, Indonesia, Iran, Ireland, Italy, Jamaica, Japan, Jordan, Kazakhstan, Kenya, Kuwait, Kyrgyzstan, Lao People's Democratic Republic, Latvia, Lebanon, Lesotho, Liberia, Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Liechtenstein, Lithuania, Luxembourg, Madagascar, Malaysia, Maldives, Malta, Marshall Islands, Mauritius, Mexico, Monaco, Mongolia, Morocco, Mozambique, Myanmar, Namibia, Nauru, Nepal, Netherlands, New Zealand, Nicaragua, Nigeria, Norway, Oman, Pakistan, Panama, Papua New Guinea, Paraguay, Peru, Philippines, Poland, Portugal, Qatar, Republic of Korea, Republic of Moldova, Romania, Russian Federation, Rwanda, Saint Lucia, Saint Vincent and the Grenadines, Samoa, San Marino, Sao Tome and Principe, Saudi Arabia, Senegal, Serbia and Montenegro, Seychelles, Sierra Leone, Singapore, Slovakia, Slovenia, Solomon Islands, Somalia, South Africa, Spain, Sri Lanka, Sudan, Suriname, Swaziland, Sweden, Switzerland, Syrian Arab Republic, Tajikistan, Thailand, The former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia, Timor-Leste, Togo, Trinidad and Tobago, Tunisia, Turkey, Tuvalu, Uganda, Ukraine, United Arab Emirates, United Republic of Tanzania, Uruguay, Venezuela, Yemen, Zambia, Zimbabwe.

Against: United Kingdom, United States.

Abstaining: Belgium, France, Germany, Israel.

Speaking after the vote, the United Kingdom said that it continued to find some elements of the resolution unacceptable. However, it remained committed to modernizing its relationship with the overseas Territories, taking fully into account the views of the peoples of those Territories, and was continuing to further the process of informal dialogue with the Special Committee.

By decision 59/552 of 23 December, the Assembly decided that the agenda item on the implementation of the Declaration would remain for consideration during its resumed fifty-ninth (2005) session.

Implementation by international organizations

In a March report [A/59/64], the Secretary-General stated that he had brought General Assembly resolution 58/104 [YUN 2003, p. 602] to the attention of the specialized agencies and other international organizations associated with the United Nations and invited them to submit information regarding the implementation of activities in support of NSGTs. Replies received from 10 agencies or organizations were summarized in an April report of the Economic and Social Council President on consultations held with the Chairman of the Special Committee on decolonization [E/2004/47]. According to the information provided, a number of specialized agencies and organizations continued to extend programmes of assistance to NSGTs from within their own budgetary resources, in addition to their respective contributions as executing agencies of projects funded by the United Nations Development Programme.

ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL ACTION

On 23 July [meeting 50], the Economic and Social Council adopted resolution 2004/53 [draft: E/2004/L.23] by recorded vote (33-1-19) [agenda item 9].

Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples by the specialized agencies and the international institutions associated with the United Nations

The Economic and Social Council,

Having examined the report of the Secretary-General and the report of the President of the Economic and Social Council containing the information submitted by the specialized agencies and the international institutions associated with the United Nations on their activities with regard to the implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples,

Having heard the statement by the representative of the Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples,

Recalling General Assembly resolutions 1514(XV) of 14 December 1960 and 1541(XV) of 15 December 1960, the resolutions of the Special Committee and other relevant resolutions and decisions, including, in particular, Economic and Social Council resolution 2003/51 of 24 July 2003,

Bearing in mind the relevant provisions of the final documents of the successive Conferences of Heads of State or Government of Non-Aligned Countries and of the resolutions adopted by the Assembly of Heads of State and Government of the African Union, the Pacific Islands Forum and the Caribbean Community,

Conscious of the need to facilitate the implementation of the Declaration,

Welcoming the participation, in the capacity of observer, of those Non-Self-Governing Territories that are associate members of the regional commissions in world conferences in the economic and social sphere, subject to the rules of procedure of the General Assembly and in accordance with relevant United Nations resolutions and decisions, including resolutions and decisions of the General Assembly and the Special Committee on specific Territories,

Noting that only some specialized agencies and organizations of the United Nations system have been involved in providing assistance to Non-Self-Governing Territories,

Welcoming the assistance extended to Non-Self-Governing Territories by certain specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system, in particular the United Nations Development Programme,

Stressing that, because the development options of the small island Non-Self-Governing Territories are limited, there are special challenges to planning for and implementing sustainable development and that those Territories will be constrained in meeting the challenges without the continued cooperation and assistance of the specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system,

Stressing also the importance of securing the resources necessary to fund expanded programmes of assistance for the peoples concerned and the need to enlist the support of all the major funding institutions within the United Nations system in that regard,

Reaffirming the mandate of the specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system to take all appropriate measures, within their respective spheres of competence, to ensure the full implementation of resolution 1514(XV) and other relevant resolutions,

Expressing its appreciation to the African Union, the Pacific Islands Forum, the Caribbean Community and other regional organizations for the continued cooperation and assistance they have extended to the specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system in this regard,

Expressing its conviction that closer contacts and consultations between and among the specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system and regional organizations help to facilitate the effective formulation of programmes of assistance for the peoples concerned,

Mindful of the imperative need to keep under continuous review the activities of the specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system in the implementation of the various United Nations decisions related to decolonization,

Bearing in mind the extremely fragile economies of the small island Non-Self-Governing Territories and their vulnerability to natural disasters, such as hurricanes, cyclones and sea-level rise, and recalling the relevant resolutions of the General Assembly,

Recalling General Assembly resolution 58/104 of 9 December 2003, entitled "Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples by the specialized agencies and the international institutions associated with the United Nations",

1. Takes note of the report of the President of the Economic and Social Council, and endorses the observations and suggestions arising therefrom;

2. Also takes note of the report of the Secretary-General;

3. Recommends that all States intensify their efforts in the specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system to ensure the full and effective implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples contained in resolution 1514(XV), and other relevant resolutions of the United Nations;

4. Reaffirms that the specialized agencies and other organizations and institutions of the United Nations system should continue to be guided by the relevant resolutions of the United Nations in their efforts to contribute to the implementation of the Declaration and all other relevant General Assembly resolutions;

5. Also reaffirms that the recognition by the General Assembly, the Security Council and other United Nations organs of the legitimacy of the aspirations of the peoples of the Non-Self-Governing Territories to exercise their right to self-determination entails, as a corollary, the extension of all appropriate assistance to those peoples;

6. Expresses its appreciation to those specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system that have continued to cooperate with the United Nations and the regional and subregional organizations in the implementation of General Assembly resolution 1514(XV) and other relevant resolutions of the United Nations, and requests all the specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system to implement the relevant provisions of those resolutions;

7. Requests the specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system and international and regional organizations to examine and review conditions in each Territory so as to take appropriate measures to accelerate progress in the economic and social sectors of the Territories;

8. Requests the specialized agencies and other organizations and bodies of the United Nations system and regional organizations to strengthen existing measures of support and to formulate appropriate programmes of assistance to the remaining Non-Self-Governing Territories, within the framework of their respective mandates, in order to accelerate progress in the economic and social sectors of those Territories;

9. Recommends that the executive heads of the specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system formulate, with the active cooperation of the regional organizations concerned, concrete proposals for the full implementation of the relevant resolutions of the United Nations and submit the proposals to their governing and legislative organs;

10. Also recommends that the specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system continue to review, at the regular meetings of their governing bodies, the implementation of resolution 1514(XV) and other relevant resolutions of the United Nations;

11. Welcomes the continuing initiative exercised by the United Nations Development Programme in maintaining close liaison among the specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system, including the Economic Commission for Latin America and the Caribbean and the Economic and Social Commission for Asia and the Pacific, and in providing assistance to the peoples of the Non-Self-Governing Territories;

12. Encourages Non-Self-Governing Territories to take steps to establish and/or strengthen disaster preparedness and management institutions and policies;

13. Requests the administering Powers concerned to facilitate, when appropriate, the participation of appointed and elected representatives of Non-Self-Governing Territories in the meetings and conferences of the specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system, in accordance with relevant United Nations resolutions and decisions, including resolutions and decisions of the General Assembly and the Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples related to specific Territories, so that the Territories may benefit from the related activities of those agencies and organizations;

14. Recommends that all Governments intensify their efforts in the specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system of which they are members to accord priority to the question of providing assistance to the peoples of the Non-Self-Governing Territories;

15. Draws the attention of the Special Committee to the present resolution and to the discussion held on the subject at the substantive session of 2004 of the Economic and Social Council;

16. Welcomes the adoption by the Economic Commission for Latin America and the Caribbean of its resolution 574(XXVII) of 16 May 1998 calling for the mechanisms necessary for its associate members, including small island Non-Self-Governing Territories, to participate in the special sessions of the General Assembly, subject to the rules of procedure of the Assembly, to review and assess the implementation of the plans of action of those United Nations world conferences in which the Territories originally participated in the capacity of observer, and in the work of the Economic and Social Council and its subsidiary bodies;

17. Requests the President of the Council to continue to maintain close contact on these matters with the Chairman of the Special Committee and to report thereon to the Council;

18. Requests the Secretary-General to follow the implementation of the present resolution, paying particular attention to cooperation and integration arrangements for maximizing the efficiency of the assistance activities undertaken by various organizations of the United Nations system, and to report thereon to the Council at its substantive session of 2005;

19. Decides to keep these questions under continuous review.

RECORDED VOTE ON RESOLUTION 2004/53:

In favour: Azerbaijan, Bangladesh, Belize, Benin, Bhutan, Burundi, Chile, China, Colombia, Congo, Cuba, Ecuador, El Salvador, Ghana, Guatemala, India, Indonesia, Jamaica, Kenya, Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Malaysia, Mauritius, Mozambique, Namibia, Nicaragua, Nigeria, Panama, Qatar, Saudi Arabia, Tunisia, United Arab Emirates, United Republic of Tanzania, Zimbabwe.

Against: Belgium.

Abstaining: Armenia, Australia, Canada, Finland, France, Germany, Greece, Hungary, Italy, Japan, Poland, Republic of Korea, Russian Federation, Senegal, Sweden, Turkey, Ukraine, United Kingdom, United States.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 10 December [meeting 71], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fourth Committee [A/59/476], adopted resolution 59/129 by recorded vote (121-0-57) [agenda item 81].

Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples by the specialized agencies and the international institutions associated with the United Nations

The General Assembly,

Having considered the item entitled "Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples by the specialized agencies and the international institutions associated with the United Nations",

Having also considered the report of the Secretary-General and the report of the Economic and Social Council on the item,

Having examined the chapter of the report of the Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples relating to the item,

Recalling General Assembly resolutions 1514(XV) of 14 December 1960 and 1541(XV) of 15 December 1960 and the resolutions of the Special Committee, as well as other relevant resolutions and decisions, including in particular Economic and Social Council resolution 2003/51 of 24 July 2003,

Bearing in mind the relevant provisions of the final documents of the successive Conferences of Heads of State or Government of Non-Aligned Countries and of the resolutions adopted by the Assembly of Heads of State and Government of the African Union, the Pacific Islands Forum and the Caribbean Community,

Conscious of the need to facilitate the implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples, contained in resolution 1514(XV),

Noting that the large majority of the remaining Non-Self-Governing Territories are small island Territories,

Welcoming the assistance extended to Non-Self-Governing Territories by certain specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system, in particular the United Nations Development Programme,

Also welcoming the current participation in the capacity of observers of those Non-Self-Governing Territories that are associate members of regional commissions in the world conferences in the economic and social sphere, subject to the rules of procedure of the General Assembly and in accordance with relevant United Nations resolutions and decisions, including resolutions and decisions of the Assembly and the Special Committee on specific Territories,

Noting that only some specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system have been involved in providing assistance to Non-Self-Governing Territories,

Stressing that, because the development options of the small island Non-Self-Governing Territories are limited, there are special challenges to planning for and implementing sustainable development and that those Territories will be constrained in meeting the challenges without the continuing cooperation and assistance of the specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system,

Stressing also the importance of securing the necessary resources for funding expanded programmes of assistance for the peoples concerned and the need to enlist the support of all major funding institutions within the United Nations system in that regard,

Reaffirming the mandates of the specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system to take all appropriate measures, within their respective spheres of competence, to ensure the full implementation of General Assembly resolution 1514(XV) and other relevant resolutions,

Expressing its appreciation to the African Union, the Pacific Islands Forum, the Caribbean Community and other regional organizations for the continued co-operation and assistance they have extended to the specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system in this regard,

Expressing its conviction that closer contacts and consultations between and among the specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system and regional organizations help to facilitate the effective formulation of programmes of assistance to the peoples concerned,

Mindful of the imperative need to keep under continuous review the activities of the specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system in the implementation of the various United Nations decisions relating to decolonization,

Bearing in mind the extremely fragile economies of the small island Non-Self-Governing Territories and their vulnerability to natural disasters, such as hurricanes, cyclones and sea-level rise, and recalling the relevant resolutions of the General Assembly,

Recalling General Assembly resolution 58/104 of 9 December 2003 on the implementation of the Declaration by the specialized agencies and the international institutions associated with the United Nations,

1. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General;
2. Recommends that all States intensify their efforts in the specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system to ensure the full and effective implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples, contained in General Assembly resolution 1514(XV), and other relevant resolutions of the United Nations;
3. Reaffirms that the specialized agencies and other organizations and institutions of the United Nations system should continue to be guided by the relevant resolutions of the United Nations in their efforts to contribute to the implementation of the Declaration and all other relevant General Assembly resolutions;
4. Reaffirms also that the recognition by the General Assembly, the Security Council and other United Nations organs of the legitimacy of the aspirations of the peoples of the Non-Self-Governing Territories to exercise their right to self-determination entails, as a corollary, the extension of all appropriate assistance to those peoples;

6. Requests the specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system and international and regional organizations to examine and review conditions in each Territory so as to take appropriate measures to accelerate progress in the economic and social sectors of the Territories;

7. Urges those specialized agencies and organizations of the United Nations system that have not yet provided assistance to Non-Self-Governing Territories to do so as soon as possible;

8. Requests the specialized agencies and other organizations and institutions of the United Nations system and regional organizations to strengthen existing measures of support and formulate appropriate programmes of assistance to the remaining Non-Self-Governing Territories, within the framework of their respective mandates, in order to accelerate progress in the economic and social sectors of those Territories;

9. Requests the specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system concerned to provide information on:

- (a) Environmental problems facing the Non-Self-Governing Territories;
- (b) The impact of natural disasters, such as hurricanes and volcanic eruptions, and other environmental problems, such as beach and coastal erosion and droughts, on those Territories;
- (c) Ways and means to assist the Territories to fight drug trafficking, money-laundering and other illegal and criminal activities;
- (d) The illegal exploitation of the marine resources of the Territories and the need to utilize those resources for the benefit of the peoples of the Territories;

10. Recommends that the executive heads of the specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system formulate, with the active co-operation of the regional organizations concerned, concrete proposals for the full implementation of the relevant resolutions of the United Nations and submit the proposals to their governing and legislative organs;

11. Also recommends that the specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system continue to review at the regular meetings of their governing bodies the implementation of General Assembly resolution 1514(XV) and other relevant resolutions of the United Nations;

12. Welcomes the continuing initiative exercised by the United Nations Development Programme in maintaining close liaison among the specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system, including the Economic Commission for Latin America and the Caribbean and the Economic and Social Commission for Asia and the Pacific, and in providing assistance to the peoples of the Non-Self-Governing Territories;

13. Encourages Non-Self-Governing Territories to take steps to establish and/or strengthen disaster preparedness and management institutions and policies;

14. Requests the administering Powers concerned to facilitate, when appropriate, the participation of appointed and elected representatives of Non-Self-Governing Territories in the relevant meetings and conferences of the specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system, in accordance with relevant United Nations resolutions and decisions, including resolutions and decisions of the General Assembly and the Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples on specific Territories, so that the Territories may benefit from the related activities of those agencies and organizations;

15. Recommends that all Governments intensify their efforts in the specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system of which they are members to accord priority to the question of providing assistance to the peoples of the Non-Self-Governing Territories;

16. Requests the Secretary-General to continue to assist the specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system in working out appropriate measures for implementing the relevant resolutions of the United Nations and to prepare for submission to the relevant bodies, with the assistance of those agencies and organizations, a report on the action taken in implementation of the relevant resolutions, including the present resolution, since the circulation of his previous report;

17. Commends the Economic and Social Council for its debate and resolution on this question, and requests it to continue to consider, in consultation with the Special Committee, appropriate measures for the coordination of the policies and activities of the specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system in implementing the relevant resolutions of the General Assembly;

18. Requests the specialized agencies to report periodically to the Secretary-General on the implementation of the present resolution;

19. Requests the Secretary-General to transmit the present resolution to the governing bodies of the appropriate specialized agencies and international institutions associated with the United Nations so that those bodies may take the necessary measures to implement the resolution, and also requests the Secretary-General to report to the General Assembly at its sixtieth session on the implementation of the present resolution;

20. Requests the Special Committee to continue to examine the question and to report thereon to the General Assembly at its sixtieth session.

Military activities and arrangements in colonial countries

In working papers on Bermuda [A/AC.109/2004/14], Guam [A/AC.109/2004/5] and the United States Virgin Islands [A/AC.109/2004/17], the Secretariat presented information on, among other subjects, military activities and arrangements by the administering colonial Powers in those Territories.

Economic and other activities affecting the interests of NSGTs

The Special Committee on decolonization continued consideration of economic and other activities affecting the interests of the peoples of NSGTs. It had before it Secretariat working papers containing information on, among other things, economic conditions, with particular reference to foreign economic activities, in Anguilla [A/AC.109/2004/10], Bermuda [A/AC.109/2004/14], the British Virgin Islands [A/AC.109/2004/3], the Cayman Islands [A/AC.109/2004/15], Montserrat [A/AC.109/2004/13], New Caledonia [A/AC.109/2004/11], the Turks and Caicos Islands [A/AC.109/2004/16] and the United States Virgin Islands [A/AC.109/2004/17].

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 10 December [meeting 71], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fourth Committee [A/59/475], adopted resolution 59/128 by recorded vote (173-3-3) [agenda item 80].

Economic and other activities which affect the interests of the peoples of the Non-Self-Governing Territories

The General Assembly,

Having considered the item entitled "Economic and other activities which affect the interests of the peoples of the Non-Self-Governing Territories",

Having examined the chapter of the report of the Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples relating to the item,

Recalling its resolution 1514(XV) of 14 December 1960, as well as all other relevant resolutions of the General Assembly, including, in particular, resolutions 46/181 of 19 December 1991 and 55/146 of 8 December 2000,

Reaffirming the solemn obligation of the administering Powers under the Charter of the United Nations to promote the political, economic, social and educational advancement of the inhabitants of the Territories under their administration and to protect the human and natural resources of those Territories against abuses,

Reaffirming also that any economic or other activity that has a negative impact on the interests of the peoples of the Non-Self-Governing Territories and on the exercise of their right to self-determination in conformity with the Charter of the United Nations and General Assembly resolution 1514(XV) is contrary to the purposes and principles of the Charter,

Reaffirming further that the natural resources are the heritage of the peoples of the Non-Self-Governing Territories, including the indigenous populations,

Aware of the special circumstances of the geographical location, size and economic conditions of each Territory, and bearing in mind the need to promote the economic stability, diversification and strengthening of the economy of each Territory,

Conscious of the particular vulnerability of the small Territories to natural disasters and environmental degradation,

Conscious also that foreign economic investment, when undertaken in collaboration with the peoples of the Non-Self-Governing Territories and in accordance with their wishes, could make a valid contribution to the socio-economic development of the Territories and also to the exercise of their right to self-determination,

Concerned about any activities aimed at exploiting the natural and human resources of the Non-Self-Governing Territories to the detriment of the interests of the inhabitants of those Territories,

Bearing in mind the relevant provisions of the final documents of the successive Conferences of Heads of State or Government of Non-Aligned Countries and of the resolutions adopted by the Assembly of Heads of State and Government of the African Union, the Pacific Islands Forum and the Caribbean Community,

1. Reaffirms the right of peoples of Non-Self-Governing Territories to self-determination in conformity with the Charter of the United Nations and with General Assembly resolution 1514(XV), containing the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples, as well as their right to the enjoyment of their natural resources and their right to dispose of those resources in their best interest;

2. Affirms the value of foreign economic investment undertaken in collaboration with the peoples of the Non-Self-Governing Territories and in accordance with their wishes in order to make a valid contribution to the socio-economic development of the Territories;

3. Reaffirms the responsibility of the administering Powers under the Charter of the United Nations to promote the political, economic, social and educational advancement of the Non-Self-Governing Territories, and reaffirms the legitimate rights of the peoples of those Territories over their natural resources;

4. Reaffirms its concern about any activities aimed at the exploitation of the natural resources that are the heritage of the peoples of the Non-Self-Governing Territories, including the indigenous populations, in the Caribbean, the Pacific and other regions, and of their human resources, to the detriment of their interests, and in such a way as to deprive them of their right to dispose of those resources;

5. Affirms the need to avoid any economic and other activities that adversely affect the interests of the peoples of the Non-Self-Governing Territories;

6. Calls once again upon all Governments that have not yet done so to take, in accordance with the relevant provisions of General Assembly resolution 2621(XXV) of 12 October 1970, legislative, administrative or other measures in respect of their nationals and the bodies corporate under their jurisdiction that own and operate enterprises in the Non-Self-Governing Territories that are detrimental to the interests of the inhabitants of those Territories, in order to put an end to such enterprises;

7. Reiterates that the damaging exploitation and plundering of the marine and other natural resources of the Non-Self-Governing Territories, in violation of the relevant resolutions of the United Nations, are a threat to the integrity and prosperity of those Territories;

8. Invites all Governments and organizations of the United Nations system to take all possible measures to ensure that the permanent sovereignty of the peoples of the Non-Self-Governing Territories over their natural resources is fully respected and safeguarded in accordance with the relevant resolutions of the United Nations on decolonization;

9. Urges the administering Powers concerned to take effective measures to safeguard and guarantee the inalienable right of the peoples of the Non-Self-Governing Territories to their natural resources and to establish and maintain control over the future development of those resources, and requests the administering Powers to take all necessary steps to protect the property rights of the peoples of those Territories in accordance with the relevant resolutions of the United Nations on decolonization;

10. Calls upon the administering Powers concerned to ensure that no discriminatory working conditions prevail in the Territories under their administration and to promote in each Territory a fair system of wages applicable to all the inhabitants without any discrimination;

11. Requests the Secretary-General to continue, through all means at his disposal, to inform world public opinion of any activity that affects the exercise of the right of the peoples of the Non-Self-Governing Territories to self-determination in conformity with the Charter of the United Nations and General Assembly resolution 1514(XV);

12. Appeals to the mass media, trade unions and non-governmental organizations, as well as individuals, to continue their efforts to promote the economic well-being of the peoples of the Non-Self-Governing Territories;

13. Decides to follow the situation in the Non-Self-Governing Territories so as to ensure that all economic activities in those Territories are aimed at strengthening and diversifying their economies in the interest of their peoples, including the indigenous populations, and at promoting the economic and financial viability of those Territories;

14. Requests the Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples to continue to examine this question and to report thereon to the General Assembly at its sixtieth session.

Dissemination of information

The Special Committee on decolonization held consultations in June with representatives of DPA and DPI of the Secretariat on the dissemination of information on decolonization. It also considered a report of the Secretary-General on DPI activities on the topic from June 2003 to May 2004 [A/AC.109/2004/18].

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 10 December [meeting 71], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fourth Committee [A/59/478], adopted resolution 59/135 by recorded vote (170-3-1) [agenda item 20].

Dissemination of information on decolonization

The General Assembly,

Having examined the chapter of the report of the Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples relating to the dissemination of information on decolonization and publicity for the work of the United Nations in the field of decolonization,

Recalling General Assembly resolution 1514(XV) of 14 December 1960, containing the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples, and other resolutions and decisions of the United Nations concerning the dissemination of information on decolonization, in particular Assembly resolution 58/110 of 9 December 2003,

Recognizing the need for flexible, practical and innovative approaches to reviewing the options of self-determination for the peoples of Non-Self-Governing Territories with a view to achieving the goals of the Second International Decade for the Eradication of Colonialism,

Reiterating the importance of dissemination of information as an instrument for furthering the aims of the Declaration, and mindful of the role of world public opinion in effectively assisting the peoples of Non-Self-Governing Territories to achieve self-determination,

Recognizing the role played by the administering Powers in transmitting information to the Secretary-General in accordance with the terms of Article 73 e of the Charter of the United Nations,

Aware of the role of non-governmental organizations in the dissemination of information on decolonization,

1. Approves the activities in the field of dissemination of information on decolonization undertaken by the Department of Public Information and the Department of Political Affairs of the Secretariat, in accordance with the relevant resolutions of the United Nations on decolonization;

2. Considers it important to continue its efforts to ensure the widest possible dissemination of information on decolonization, with particular emphasis on the options for self-determination available to the peoples of Non-Self-Governing Territories;

3. Requests the Department of Political Affairs and the Department of Public Information to take into account the suggestions of the Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples to continue their efforts to take measures through all the media available, including publications, radio and television, as well as the Internet, to give publicity to the work of the United Nations in the field of decolonization and, inter alia:

(a) To continue to collect, prepare and disseminate, particularly to the Territories, basic material on the issue of self-determination of the peoples of Non-Self-Governing Territories;

(b) To seek the full cooperation of the administering Powers in the discharge of the tasks referred to above;

(c) To maintain a working relationship with the appropriate regional and intergovernmental organizations, particularly in the Pacific and Caribbean regions, by holding periodic consultations and exchanging information;

(d) To encourage the involvement of non-governmental organizations in the dissemination of information on decolonization;

(e) To report to the Special Committee on measures taken in the implementation of the present resolution;

4. Requests all States, including the administering Powers, to continue to extend their cooperation in the dissemination of information referred to in paragraph 2 above;

5. Requests the Special Committee to follow the implementation of the present resolution and to report thereon to the General Assembly at its sixtieth session.

RECORDED VOTE ON RESOLUTION 59/135:

In favour: Afghanistan, Albania, Algeria, Andorra, Angola, Antigua and Barbuda, Argentina, Armenia, Australia, Austria, Azerbaijan, Bahamas, Bahrain, Bangladesh, Barbados, Belarus, Belgium, Belize, Benin, Bolivia, Bosnia and Herzegovina, Botswana, Brazil, Brunei Darussalam, Bulgaria, Burkina Faso, Burundi, Cambodia, Cameroon, Canada, Cape Verde, Central African Republic, China, Colombia, Comoros, Congo, Costa Rica, Côte d'Ivoire, Croatia, Cuba, Cyprus, Czech Republic, Democratic People's Republic of Korea, Democratic Republic of the Congo, Denmark, Djibouti, Dominica, Dominican Republic, Ecuador, Egypt, El Salvador, Equatorial Guinea, Eritrea, Estonia, Ethiopia, Fiji, Finland, Gabon, Georgia, Germany, Ghana, Greece, Grenada, Guatemala, Guinea, Guinea-Bissau, Guyana, Haiti, Honduras, Hungary, Iceland, India, Indonesia, Iran, Ireland, Italy, Jamaica, Japan, Jordan, Kazakhstan, Kenya, Kuwait, Kyrgyzstan, Lao People's Democratic Republic, Latvia, Lebanon, Lesotho, Liberia, Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Liechtenstein, Lithuania, Luxembourg, Madagascar, Malaysia, Maldives, Malta, Marshall Islands, Mauritius, Mexico, Monaco, Mongolia, Morocco, Mozambique, Myanmar, Namibia, Nauru, Nepal, Netherlands, New Zealand, Nicaragua, Nigeria, Norway, Oman, Pakistan, Panama, Papua New Guinea, Paraguay, Peru, Philippines, Poland, Portugal, Qatar, Republic of Korea, Republic of Moldova, Romania, Russian Federation, Rwanda, Saint Lucia, Saint Vincent and the Grenadines, Samoa, San Marino, Sao Tome and Principe, Saudi Arabia, Senegal, Serbia and Montenegro, Sierra Leone, Singapore, Slovakia, Slovenia, Solomon Islands, Somalia, South Africa, Spain, Sri Lanka, Sudan, Suriname, Swaziland, Sweden, Switzerland, Syrian Arab Republic, Tajikistan, Thailand, The former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia, Timor-Leste, Togo, Trinidad and Tobago, Tunisia, Turkey, Tuvalu, Uganda, Ukraine, United Arab Emirates, United Republic of Tanzania, Uruguay, Vanuatu, Venezuela, Viet Nam, Yemen, Zambia, Zimbabwe.

Against: Israel, United Kingdom, United States.

Abstaining: France.

Speaking after the vote, the United Kingdom said that it continued to view the obligation the text placed on the Secretariat to publicize decolonization issues as an unwarranted drain on scarce UN resources.

Information on Territories

In response to General Assembly resolution 58/102 [YUN 2003, p. 607], the Secretary-General submitted an April report [A/59/71] showing the dates of transmittal of information on economic, social and educational conditions in NSGTs for the years 1999-2004, under Article 73 e of the Charter of the United Nations.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 10 December [meeting 71], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fourth Committee [A/59/474], adopted resolution 59/127 by recorded vote (172-0-6) [agenda item 79].

Information from Non-Self-Governing Territories transmitted under Article 73 e of the Charter of the United Nations

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 1970(XVIII) of 16 December 1963, in which it requested the Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples to study the information transmitted to the Secretary-General in accordance with Article 73 e of the Charter of the United Nations and to take such information fully into account in examining the situation with regard to the implementation of the Declaration, contained in General Assembly resolution 1514(XV) of 14 December 1960,

Recalling also its resolution 58/102 of 9 December 2003, in which it requested the Special Committee to continue to discharge the functions entrusted to it under resolution 1970(XVIII),

Stressing the importance of timely transmission by the administering Powers of adequate information under Article 73 e of the Charter, in particular in relation to the preparation by the Secretariat of the working papers on the Territories concerned,

Having examined the report of the Secretary-General,

1. Reaffirms that, in the absence of a decision by the General Assembly itself that a Non-Self-Governing

Territory has attained a full measure of self-government in terms of Chapter XI of the Charter of the United Nations, the administering Power concerned should continue to transmit information under Article 73 e of the Charter with respect to that Territory;

2. Requests the administering Powers concerned to transmit or continue to transmit to the Secretary-General the information prescribed in Article 73 e of the Charter, as well as the fullest possible information on political and constitutional developments in the Territories concerned, within a maximum period of six months following the expiration of the administrative year in those Territories;

3. Requests the Secretary-General to continue to ensure that adequate information is drawn from all available published sources in connection with the preparation of the working papers relating to the Territories concerned;

4. Requests the Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples to continue to discharge the functions entrusted to it under General Assembly resolution 1970(XVIII), in accordance with established procedures.

RECORDED VOTE ON RESOLUTION 59/127:

Study and training

In response to General Assembly resolution 58/105 [YUN 2003, p. 608], the Secretary-General reported on offers of study and training scholarships for inhabitants of NSGTs during the period 2 April 2003 to 15 April 2004 by the following Member States: Antigua and Barbuda, Argentina, Cuba, Japan, Mexico, New Zealand, Sweden, Switzerland, Trinidad and Tobago and the United States [A/59/74]. Fifty-six Member States and one non-member State had made such offers over the years.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 10 December [meeting 71], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fourth Committee [A/59/477], adopted resolution 59/130 without vote [agenda item 82].

Offers by Member States of study and training facilities for inhabitants of Non-Self-Governing Territories

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 58/105 of 9 December 2003,

Having examined the report of the Secretary-General on offers by Member States of study and training facilities for inhabitants of Non-Self-Governing Territories, prepared pursuant to its resolution 845(IX) of 22 November 1954,

Conscious of the importance of promoting the educational advancement of the inhabitants of Non-Self-Governing Territories,

Strongly convinced that the continuation and expansion of offers of scholarships is essential in order to meet the increasing need of students from Non-Self-Governing Territories for educational and training assistance, and considering that students in those Territories should be encouraged to avail themselves of such offers,

1. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General;
2. Expresses its appreciation to those Member States that have made scholarships available to the inhabitants of Non-Self-Governing Territories;
3. Invites all States to make or continue to make generous offers of study and training facilities to the inhabitants of those Territories that have not yet attained self-government or independence and, wherever possible, to provide travel funds to prospective students;
4. Urges the administering Powers to take effective measures to ensure the widespread and continuous dissemination in the Territories under their administration of information relating to offers of study and training facilities made by States and to provide all the necessary facilities to enable students to avail themselves of such offers;
5. Requests the Secretary-General to report to the General Assembly at its sixtieth session on the implementation of the present resolution;
6. Draws the attention of the Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples to the present resolution.

Visiting missions

In June, the Special Committee on decolonization considered the question of sending visiting missions to NSGTs [A/59/23]. It adopted a resolution in which it stressed the need to dispatch periodic visiting missions to facilitate the full implementation of the 1960 Declaration on decolonization and called on administering Powers to receive those missions in the Territories under their administration.

The Committee recommended to the General Assembly for adoption draft resolutions on 11 small NSGTs (see p. 610) and on Tokelau (see p. 609). In its draft resolutions, the Committee endorsed a number of conclusions and recommendations concerning the sending of visiting missions to the Territories.

Puerto Rico

In accordance with the Special Committee's 2003 resolution concerning the self-determination and independence of Puerto Rico [YUN 2003, p. 609], the Committee's Rapporteur, in an April report [A/AC.109/2004/L.3], provided information on Puerto Rico, including recent political, military and economic developments, and on UN action.

Following its usual practice, the Committee acceded to requests for hearings from representatives of a number of organizations, who presented their views on 14 June [A/59/23]. The Committee adopted a resolution without vote, by which it reaffirmed the inalienable right of the people of Puerto Rico to self-determination and independence; called on the United States to assume its responsibility of expediting a process to allow the Puerto Rican people to exercise that right; urged the United States to return the occupied land and installations on Vieques Island and at the Roosevelt Roads Naval Station to the people of Puerto Rico; and requested the Rapporteur to report in 2005 on the resolution's implementation.

Territories under review

Falklands Islands (Malvinas)

The Special Committee on decolonization considered the question of the Falkland Islands (Malvinas) on 18 June [A/59/23]. It examined a Secretariat working paper on constitutional and political developments, mine clearance, and economic and social conditions in the Territory [A/AC.109/2004/12], and adopted a resolution requesting Argentina and the United Kingdom to consolidate current dialogue and cooperation by resuming negotiations to find a peaceful solution to the sovereignty dispute.

Argentina, on 5 January [A/58/671], transmitted to the Secretary-General a 3 January press release recalling its objective to recover full sovereignty over the Malvinas, South Georgia and South Sandwich Islands and surrounding maritime areas through peaceful means. It reiterated the need to comply with UN resolutions and Organization of American States declarations calling for a resumption of bilateral negotiations in order to find a just and lasting solution to the sovereignty dispute; recalled its readiness to resume such negotiations immediately; and exhorted the United Kingdom to do likewise. The United Kingdom, in a 13 January response [A/58/681], stated that it had no doubt about its sovereignty over the Falkland Islands, South Georgia and South Sandwich Islands, and rejected as unfounded Argentina's claim to sovereignty.

On 8 June [A/58/840], Argentina formally protested the recent upgrading of the British military base in the Malvinas, as a violation of Assembly resolution 31/49 [YUN 1976, p. 747], which called on the two parties to refrain from introducing unilateral modifications in the situation while the islands were going through the process recommended in relevant Assembly resolutions. Argentina believed that the expansion of the military occupation in the disputed area was incompatible with the letter and spirit of the provisional understandings under the sovereignty formula regarding practical aspects of the South Atlantic, particularly in relation to measures aimed at building and strengthening mutual confidence. On 28 July [A/58/860], the United Kingdom rejected Argentina's claims that the change in titles to Headquarters British Forces South Atlantic Islands and Commander British Forces South Atlantic Islands reflected changes in administrative structures. There had been no change in the mission or role of the United Kingdom's armed forces providing security for the Falkland Islands, South Georgia and South Sandwich Islands.

Addressing the General Assembly during the general debate on 21 September [A/59/PV.4], Argentina's President, Néstor Kirchner, reaffirmed his country's willingness to reach a just, peaceful and lasting solution to the sovereignty dispute and urged the United Kingdom to resume negotiations. In exercise of its right of reply, the United Kingdom, in a 30 September letter to the Assembly President [A/59/406], stated that the elected representatives of the Falkland Islands again asked the Committee on decolonization to recognize that they, like any other people, were entitled to exercise the right of self-determination, and reiterated that the people of the Falkland Islands did not wish for any change in the status of the islands. There could be no negotiations on sovereignty unless and until the islanders so wished.

Gibraltar

The Special Committee on decolonization considered the question of Gibraltar on 8 June

[A/59/23]. Before it was a Secretariat working paper describing political developments and economic and social conditions in the Territory, and setting forth the positions of the United Kingdom (the administering Power), Gibraltar and Spain concerning Gibraltar's future status [A/AC.109/2004/7].

Gibraltar's Chief Minister, Peter Caruana, in his New Year message, said that it was important that Gibraltarians pursued the constitutional modernization proposals submitted to the British Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs in 2003 [YUN 2003, p. 611] and political routes based on development of and respect for their political rights. A later Secretariat working paper [A/AC.109/2005/11] reported that the Foreign Secretary, Jack Straw, had acknowledged the importance of the proposals to Gibraltar and said that they would receive careful consideration. Preliminary talks were held between the Foreign Secretary and Gibraltar's Chief Minister on 26 May on constitutional reform and how to move the process forward. The first meeting to discuss the reform proposals took place on 1 December.

The Chief Minister, speaking before the Special Committee on 8 June, reiterated Gibraltar's calls for the Special Committee to visit the Territory and to recommend to the Fourth Committee that the case be referred to the International Court of Justice (ICJ) for an advisory opinion. Gibraltar also proposed that the annual draft decision on the issue reflect a call for the Government of Gibraltar to be present at any talks affecting the Territory.

On 21 September, Spain's Prime Minister, José Luis Rodríguez Zapatero, speaking before the General Assembly, said that his country remained willing to negotiate a solution that benefited the region as a whole and to listen to Gibraltar's voice. On 6 October, Spain's representative, speaking before the Fourth Committee, referred to a statement by Spain's Minister for Foreign Affairs and Cooperation, Miguel Angel Moratinos, who said that Spain was willing to facilitate the establishment of close and fruitful cooperation between Gibraltar and the surrounding area. Spain's policy towards Gibraltar needed to include a significant person-to-person dimension, with contacts between civil societies. Spain, while preferring dialogue to confrontation, would continue to defend its positions based on reason and justice. Regarding the suggestion that the Assembly request an advisory opinion from ICJ, the representative said that the issue was political and had to be settled at that level.

Gibraltar's Chief Minister, speaking before the Fourth Committee on the same date, rejected Spain's argument that, because of Spain's sover-eighty claim, the principle of self-determination could not apply to the decolonization of Gibraltar, stating that nowhere in the UN Charter, in UN doctrine or in international law was it written that a neighbour's sovereignty claim overrode, let alone extinguished, the inalienable right to self-determination of a colonial people. He welcomed the statement by the Spanish Prime Minister (see p. 605) as a constructive step in the right direction; emphasized that Gibraltarians were entitled to be heard and their wishes respected; and that only they could decide Gibraltar's future. He welcomed statements by the Spanish Foreign Minister concerning Gibraltar (see p. 605) and Spain's offer of dialogue on issues of local cooperation with no sovereignty implications for either side. The Chief Minister said that Gibraltar would engage constructively and amicably in such a process and emphasized that sovereignty was a different matter for which concessions would not be made.

In a joint communiqué issued on 16 December, Gibraltar, Spain and the United Kingdom confirmed their earlier agreement reached in Madrid on 27 October to establish a new, three-sided forum for dialogue on Gibraltar, separate from the Brussels Process [YUN 1984, p. 1075], and the work modalities for the forum, including the creation of working groups on specific issues. The forum would adopt an open agenda, with each party having its own voice and participating on an equal basis. The parties would try to create a constructive atmosphere of mutual confidence and cooperation and refrain from making public statements which distorted or misrepresented the basis, purpose or modalities of the forum.

After hearing statements by the Chief Minister of Gibraltar, the Leader of the Opposition in Gibraltar and the representative of Spain, the Special Committee decided to continue consideration of the question in 2005.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

In December, the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fourth Committee [A/59/478], adopted decision 59/519 without vote [agenda item 20].

Question of Gibraltar

At its 71st plenary meeting, on 10 December 2004, the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Special Political and Decolonization Committee (Fourth Committee), recalling its decision 58/526 of 9 December 2003, and recalling at the same time that the statement agreed to by the Governments of Spain and the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland at Brussels on 27 November 1984 stipulated, inter alia, the following:

"The establishment of a negotiating process aimed at overcoming all the differences between them over Gibraltar and at promoting cooperation on a mutually beneficial basis on economic, cultural, touristic, aviation, military and environmental matters. Both sides accept that the issues of sovereignty will be discussed in that process. The British Government will fully maintain its commitment to honour the wishes of the people of Gibraltar as set out in the preamble of the 1969 Constitution", urged both Governments, while listening to the interests and aspirations of Gibraltar, to reach in the spirit of that statement a definitive solution to the question of Gibraltar, in the light of relevant resolutions of the General Assembly and in the spirit of the Charter of the United Nations.

New Caledonia

The Special Committee on decolonization considered the question of New Caledonia on 16 June [A/59/23]. Before it was a Secretariat working paper describing the political situation and economic data and developments in the Territory [A/AC.109/2004/11].

A later Secretariat working paper [A/AC.109/2005/13] reported that, according to France, the administering Power, uneasiness about one political party dominating the system culminated just months prior to the Caledonian general elections on 9 May, with the emergence of a new party, Avenir Ensemble (AE), which was opposed to complete independence from France and was viewed as more consensus-oriented with the indigenous Kanak movement and supportive of full implementation of the 1998 Nouméa Accord on New Caledonia's future status [YUN 1998, p. 574]. The elections ended the 25-year domination of the Caledonian Government led by the pro-integration Rassemblement pour la Calédonie dans la République (RPCR), with AE obtaining 16 of the 54 seats in Congress, on a par with RPCR. The pro-independence coalition party, the Front de Libération national kanak socialiste (FLNKS) won nine seats, the Union Calédonienne (UC) seven seats, the Front National four, and two smaller parties one seat each. The anti-independence alliance therefore increased its representation from 31 to 36 seats. At the provincial level, AE won 19 of the 40 seats in the South Province, while the North Province remained in the hands of FLNKS and UC, normally one of the FLNKS parties. The independence alliance was the strongest performer in the Loyalty Islands, holding 6 of 14 seats.

Following the May elections, the Government elected Marie-Noëlle Thémereau of AE, President, and re-elected FLNKS member, Déwé Gorodey, Vice-President. However, Mrs. Thémereau's Government had to resign when RPCR withdrew from the Cabinet, claiming that it was entitled to four seats instead of three. After RPCR was promised one more seat at the expense of AE, Mrs. Thémereau and Mrs. Gorodey, on 29 June, finally received the required votes to be elected President and Vice-President, respectively, marking the first time the Territorial Government was headed by two women.

In view of the election results and subsequent events, former President Pierre Frogier of RPCR predicted, in a 9 November speech to the French National Assembly, a new period of instability, stating that his party was systematically excluded from all responsibilities by a heterogeneous coalition. However, his successor, Mrs. Thémereau, stressed in her Déclaration de politique générale in August that the absence of an absolute majority both in Congress and in the Government reflected the nature of the Nouméa Accord, which stipulated that power should not be monolithic, but shared.

The Customary Senate, considered the guarantor of Kanak identity, selected a new chief, Paul Jewine. In her Déclaration, the President suggested that the Senate's renewal in 2005 could be an occasion to tackle certain reforms, specifying that it was up to the Kanak society to decide on its representation.

During the period under review, 10 country laws (lois du pays), which had the full force of law and could be contested only before the Constitutional Council, were adopted, the most recent relating to social, finance and customs issues and taxes. According to France, the competencies that could be transferred from the State to the Government of New Caledonia under the Nouméa Accord in the period 2004-2009, which corresponded to the length of office of the current New Caledonian Congress, were those related to the police and security in air and sea traffic, private primary education, civil and commercial law and civil security. Upon the approval of an additional organic law, transfer would also be possible for rules regarding the administration of the provinces and municipalities, higher education and audio-visual communication. France stressed that, since the New Caledonian Government did not ask for the transfer of those powers during the first six months following the May elections, as called for in the Nouméa Accord, no powers were likely to be transferred until 2009, when the next Congress was to be elected.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 10 December [meeting 71], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fourth Committee [A/59/478], adopted resolution 59/132 without vote [agenda item 20].

Question of New Caledonia

The General Assembly,

Having considered the question of New Caledonia,

Having examined the chapter of the report of the Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples relating to New Caledonia,

Reaffirming the right of peoples to self-determination as enshrined in the Charter of the United Nations,

Recalling General Assembly resolutions 1514(XV) of 14 December 1960 and 1541(XV) of 15 December 1960,

Noting the importance of the positive measures being pursued in New Caledonia by the French authorities, in cooperation with all sectors of the population, to promote political, economic and social development in the Territory, including measures in the area of environmental protection and action with respect to drug abuse and trafficking, in order to provide a framework for its peaceful progress to self-determination,

Noting also, in this context, the importance of equitable economic and social development, as well as continued dialogue among the parties involved in New Caledonia in the preparation of the act of self-determination of New Caledonia,

Noting with satisfaction the intensification of contacts between New Caledonia and neighbouring countries of the South Pacific region,

1. Welcomes the significant developments that have taken place in New Caledonia as exemplified by the signing of the Nouméa Accord of 5 May 1998 by the representatives of New Caledonia and the Government of France;

2. Urges all the parties involved, in the interest of all the people of New Caledonia, to maintain, in the framework of the Nouméa Accord, their dialogue in a spirit of harmony;

3. Notes the relevant provisions of the Nouméa Accord aimed at taking more broadly into account the Kanak identity in the political and social organization of New Caledonia, and also those provisions of the Accord relating to control of immigration and protection of local employment;

4. Also notes the relevant provisions of the Nouméa Accord to the effect that New Caledonia may become a member or associate member of certain international organizations, such as international organizations in the Pacific region, the United Nations, the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization and the International Labour Organization, according to their regulations;

5. Further notes the agreement between the signatories of the Nouméa Accord that the progress made in the emancipation process shall be brought to the attention of the United Nations;

6. Welcomes the fact that the administering Power invited to New Caledonia, at the time the new institutions were established, a mission of information which comprised representatives of countries of the Pacific region;

7. Calls upon the administering Power to transmit information regarding the political, economic and social situation of New Caledonia to the Secretary-General;

8. Invites all the parties involved to continue promoting a framework for the peaceful progress of the Territory towards an act of self-determination in which all options are open and which would safeguard the rights and identity of all the sectors of the population, according to the letter and the spirit of the Nouméa Accord, which is based on the principle that it is for the populations of New Caledonia to choose how to control their destiny;

9. Welcomes measures that have been taken to strengthen and diversify the New Caledonian economy in all fields, and encourages further such measures in accordance with the spirit of the Matignon and Nouméa Accords;

10. Also welcomes the importance attached by the parties to the Matignon and Nouméa Accords to greater progress in housing, employment, training, education and health care in New Caledonia;

11. Acknowledges the contribution of the Melanesian Cultural Centre to the protection of the indigenous Kanak culture of New Caledonia;

12. Notes the positive initiatives aimed at protecting the natural environment of New Caledonia, notably the "Zonéco" operation designed to map and evaluate marine resources within the economic zone of New Caledonia;

13. Acknowledges the close links between New Caledonia and the peoples of the South Pacific and the positive actions being taken by the French and territorial authorities to facilitate the further development of those links, including the development of closer relations with the countries members of the Pacific Islands Forum;

14. Welcomes, in this regard, the accession by New Caledonia to the status of observer in the Pacific Islands Forum, continuing high-level visits to New Caledonia by delegations from countries of the Pacific region and high-level visits by delegations from New Caledonia to countries members of the Pacific Islands Forum;

15. Decides to keep under continuous review the process unfolding in New Caledonia as a result of the signing of the Nouméa Accord;

16. Requests the Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples to continue to examine the question of the Non-Self-Governing Territory of New Caledonia and to report thereon to the General Assembly at its sixtieth session.

Tokelau

On 16 June, the Special Committee on decolonization considered the question of Tokelau (the three small atolls of Nukunonu, Fakaofu and Atafu in the South Pacific), administered by New Zealand [A/59/23]. Before it was a Secretariat working paper covering constitutional and political developments and economic and social conditions in the Territory, and setting out the positions of New Zealand and Tokelau on the Territory's future status [A/AC.109/2004/8].

A later Secretariat working paper [A/AC.109/2005/3] reported that, in January, Atafu's Faipule

(the representative of each village/atoll), Patuki Isaako, took over as Ulu o Tokelau (titular head of the Territory), a position that was rotated annually among the three Faipule.

In January, the General Fono (Tokelau's national representative body) adopted the recommendations of a Commission of Inquiry, established by the Territory's New Zealand-appointed Administrator, on the future shape and functioning of Tokelau's public services. At the June General Fono, the Administrator formally delegated his responsibilities to the taupulega (village councils) of the three villages, which in turn, sub-delegated to the General Fono responsibility for specified subjects to be handled at the national level, thus completing the devolution of public services in line with the new political structure based on the three villages. The arrangement, which represented the realization of the Modern House of Tokelau approach [YUN 1998, p. 575], put the villages squarely at the heart of Tokelau's system of government and reaffirmed the "pule" (traditional authority) of the three village councils.

Also in January, the General Fono agreed on the steps to be taken to give effect to its 2003 decision to endorse self-government in free association with New Zealand [YUN 2003, p. 614]. Those included discussions of senior officials in Wellington, New Zealand, in April, and of the Special Committee on decolonization during the Pacific regional seminar in May (see p. 593); consultations during the Special Committee's meetings in New York in June; and an official visit to Tokelau by Prime Minister Helen Clark of New Zealand in August, during which she welcomed Tokelau's recent decisions on its future political status and assured Tokelau of New Zealand's ongoing friendship and support as it moved towards an act of self-determination.

The issue of representation within the General Fono, previously reviewed in 2003 [YUN 2003, p. 613], was again reviewed at a meeting of the Special Constitutional Committee during the October General Fono, which decided on the method of appointment of the Chairperson of the General Fono and on the role and responsibilities of the six-person Council for Ongoing Government [ibid., p. 614]. The General Fono also took decisions on Tokelau's draft constitution and legislative framework; law-making procedures; the role of the Kau Hauatea (the constitutional advisory body); the judicial system; and Tokelau's International Trust Fund, which was formally established in November.

In November, at the invitation of New Zealand's Prime Minister, the Council for Ongoing Government visited New Zealand for high-level discussions on Tokelau's further political evolution. The Council met with the Governor-General, the Prime Minister, the Minister for Foreign Affairs and Trade, the Leader of the Opposition and the main Tokelauan communities in New Zealand. Agreement was reached on the principal elements to be included in a draft Treaty of Free Association. It was noted that, if Tokelau agreed to undertake an act of self-determination, the United Nations would be invited to provide electoral assistance.

Speaking before the Special Committee on decolonization on 16 June, the Administrator of Tokelau said that Tokelau had made good progress in its discussions with New Zealand about the decolonization option of self-government in free association and had pushed ahead with its draft constitution, anthem and flag. It had firm assurances of ongoing New Zealand support, including an enhanced multi-year economic support agreement and the joint statement of the principles of partnership, which were drafted in 2002 [YUN 2002, p. 574] and signed in 2003 [YUN 2003, p. 614].

At a 4 October meeting of the Fourth Committee, New Zealand outlined recent developments and noted that the previous 12 months had seen considerable movement, both in New Zealand and in Tokelau, towards an act of self-determination.

At a 16 June meeting of the Special Committee on decolonization, the Ulu o Tokelau said that positive engagement had taken place with New Zealand on Tokelau's future political status. Noting the establishment of Tokelau's International Trust Fund, the Ulu appealed for support from the international community as Tokelau moved to take on greater responsibility for its own affairs. He extended an invitation to the Special Committee to attend the workshop of the Special Constitutional Committee in October.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 10 December [meeting 71], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fourth Committee [A/59/478], adopted resolution 59/133 without vote [agenda item 20].

Question of Tokelau

The General Assembly,

Having considered the question of Tokelau,

Having examined the chapter of the report of the Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples relating to Tokelau,

Noting with appreciation the continuing exemplary cooperation of New Zealand as the administering Power with regard to the work of the Special Committee relating to Tokelau and its readiness to permit access by United Nations visiting missions to the Territory,

Noting also with appreciation the collaborative contribution to the development of Tokelau by New Zealand and the specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system, in particular the United Nations Development Programme,

Recalling the inauguration in 1999 of a national legislative body, the General Fono, based on village elections by universal adult suffrage and the assumption by that body in June 2003 of full responsibility for the Tokelau budget,

Recalling also the report of the United Nations mission dispatched in August 2002 to Tokelau at the invitation of the Government of New Zealand and the representatives of Tokelau,

Noting that, as a small island Territory, Tokelau exemplifies the situation of most remaining Non-Self-Governing Territories and that, as a case study pointing to successful cooperation for decolonization, Tokelau has wider significance for the United Nations as it seeks to complete its work in decolonization,

Recalling that New Zealand and Tokelau signed in November 2003 a document entitled "Joint statement of the principles of partnership", which sets out in writing, for the first time, the rights and obligations of the two partner countries,

Recalling also the decision of the General Fono at its meeting in November 2003, following extensive consultations undertaken in all three villages, to explore formally with New Zealand the option of self-government in free association,

1. Notes that Tokelau remains firmly committed to the development of self-government and to an act of self-determination that would result in Tokelau assuming a status in accordance with the options on future status for Non-Self-Governing Territories contained in principle VI of the annex to General Assembly resolution 1541(XV) of 15 December 1960;

2. Welcomes the substantial progress made in the past year towards the devolution of power to the three taupulega (village councils), in particular the delegation of the Administrator's powers to the three taupulega with effect from 1 July 2004 and the assumption by each taupulega from that date of full responsibility for the management of all its public services;

3. Notes in particular the decision of the General Fono in November 2003, following extensive consultations in all three villages and a meeting of the Special Committee on the Constitution of Tokelau, to explore formally with New Zealand the option of self-government in free association, and the discussions now under way between Tokelau and New Zealand pursuant to the General Fono decision;

4. Notes that the General Fono has endorsed a series of recommendations of the workshop of the Special Committee on the Constitution held in Tokelau in October 2003 with the support of the United Nations Development Programme relating to Tokelau's Constitution, the role and functioning of the General Fono, the judicial system and international human rights conventions;

5. Acknowledges Tokelau's initiative in devising a strategic economic development plan for the period 2002-2004 to advance its capacity for self-government;

6. Also acknowledges the continuing assistance that New Zealand has committed to promoting Tokelau's self-government as well as the cooperation of the United Nations Development Programme;

7. Further acknowledges Tokelau's need for continued reassurance, given the cultural adjustments that are taking place with the strengthening of its capacity for self-government and, since local resources cannot adequately cover the material side of self-determination, the ongoing responsibility of Tokelau's external partners to assist Tokelau in balancing its desire to be self-reliant to the greatest extent possible with its need for external assistance;

8. Welcomes the establishment of an international trust fund to support Tokelau's future development needs, and urges all Member States and international and regional agencies to contribute to the fund and thereby lend practical support to assist this emerging country in overcoming the problems of smallness, isolation and lack of resources;

9. Welcomes the assurance of the Government of New Zealand that it will meet its obligations to the United Nations with respect to Tokelau and abide by the freely expressed wishes of the people of Tokelau with regard to their future status;

10. Also welcomes the cooperative attitude of the other States and territories in the region towards Tokelau, its economic and political aspirations and its increasing participation in regional and international affairs;

11. Further welcomes Tokelau's associate membership in the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization and its recent accession to membership in the Forum Fisheries Agency;

12. Calls upon the administering Power and United Nations agencies to continue to provide assistance to Tokelau as it further develops its economy and governance structures in the context of its ongoing constitutional evolution;

13. Notes with satisfaction the invitation of the Ulu o Tokelau to the Chairman of the Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples to attend the workshop of the Special Committee on the Constitution to be held in October 2004 in the Tokelau Islands;

14. Requests the Special Committee to continue to examine the question of the Non-Self-Governing Territory of Tokelau and to report thereon to the General Assembly at its sixtieth session.

Western Sahara

The Special Committee on decolonization considered the question of Western Sahara on 7 June [A/59/23]. A Secretariat working paper [A/AC.109/2004/4] detailed the Secretary-General's good offices with the parties concerned and actions taken by the General Assembly and Security Council (see p. 274). The Special Committee transmitted the relevant documentation to the Assembly's fifty-ninth (2004) session to facilitate the Fourth Committee's consideration of the question. The Secretary-General's report was submitted to the Assembly in July [A/59/134].

By a 30 August letter to the Secretary-General [A/59/314-S/2004/704], Namibia transmitted a memorandum by the Frente Popular para la Liberación de Saguía el-Hamra y de Río de Oro on the question of Western Sahara.

Island Territories

In June, the Special Committee on decolonization [A/59/23] considered working papers on American Samoa [A/AC.109/2004/6], Anguilla [A/AC.109/2004/10], Bermuda [A/AC.109/2004/14], the British Virgin Islands [A/AC.109/2004/3], the Cayman Islands [A/AC.109/2004/15], Guam [A/AC.109/2004/5], Montserrat [A/AC.109/2004/13], Pitcairn [A/AC.109/2004/2], Saint Helena [A/AC.109/2004/9], the Turks and Caicos Islands [A/AC.109/2004/16] and the United States Virgin Islands [A/AC.109/2004/17], describing political developments and economic and social conditions in each of those 11 island Territories. On 17 June, the Committee approved a two-part consolidated draft resolution for adoption by the General Assembly (see below).

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 10 December [meeting 71], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fourth Committee, adopted resolutions 59/134 A and B without vote [agenda item 20].

Questions of American Samoa, Anguilla, Bermuda, the British Virgin Islands, the Cayman Islands, Guam, Montserrat, Pitcairn, Saint Helena, the Turks and Caicos Islands and the United States Virgin Islands

A

General

The General Assembly,

Having considered the questions of the Non-Self-Governing Territories of American Samoa, Anguilla, Bermuda, the British Virgin Islands, the Cayman Islands, Guam, Montserrat, Pitcairn, Saint Helena, the Turks and Caicos Islands and the United States Virgin Islands, hereinafter referred to as "the Territories",

Having examined the relevant chapter of the report of the Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples,

Recalling all resolutions and decisions of the United Nations relating to those Territories, including, in particular, the resolutions adopted by the General Assembly at its fifty-eighth session on the individual Territories covered by the present resolution,

Recognizing that all available options for self-determination of the Territories are valid as long as they are in accordance with the freely expressed wishes of the peoples concerned and in conformity with the clearly defined principles contained in General Assembly resolutions 1514(XV) of 14 December 1960, 1541(XV) of 15 December 1960 and other resolutions of the Assembly,

Recalling General Assembly resolution 1541(XV), containing the principles that should guide Member States in determining whether or not an obligation exists to transmit the information called for under Article 73 e of the Charter of the United Nations,

Expressing its concern that more than forty-three years after the adoption of the Declaration there still remain a number of Non-Self-Governing Territories,

Conscious of the importance of continuing effective implementation of the Declaration, taking into account the target set by the United Nations to eradicate colonialism by 2010 and the plan of action for the Second International Decade for the Eradication of Colonialism,

Recognizing that the specific characteristics and the sentiments of the peoples of the Territories require flexible, practical and innovative approaches to the options of self-determination, without any prejudice to territorial size, geographical location, size of population or natural resources,

Taking note of the stated position of the Government of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland on the Non-Self-Governing Territories under its administration,

Taking note also of the stated position of the Government of the United States of America on the Non-Self-Governing Territories under its administration,

Noting the constitutional developments in some Non-Self-Governing Territories about which the Special Committee has received information,

Aware of the usefulness both to the Territories and to the Special Committee of the participation of elected and appointed representatives of the Territories in the work of the Special Committee,

Convinced that the wishes and aspirations of the peoples of the Territories should continue to guide the development of their future political status and that referendums, free and fair elections and other forms of popular consultation play an important role in ascertaining the wishes and aspirations of the people,

Convinced also that any negotiations to determine the status of a Territory must take place with the active involvement and participation of the people of that Territory, under the supervision of the United Nations, on a case-by-case basis, and that the views of the peoples of the Non-Self-Governing Territories in respect of their right to self-determination should be ascertained,

Aware of the importance of international financial services for the economies of some of the Non-Self-Governing Territories,

Noting the continued cooperation of the Non-Self-Governing Territories at the local and regional levels, including their participation in the work of regional organizations,

Mindful that United Nations visiting missions provide an effective means of ascertaining the situation in the Territories, that some Territories have not received a United Nations visiting mission for a long time and that no visiting missions have been sent to some of the Territories, and considering the possibility of sending further visiting missions to the Territories at an appropriate time and in consultation with the administering Powers,

Mindful also that, in order for the Special Committee to enhance its understanding of the political status of the peoples of the Territories and to fulfil its mandate effectively, it is important for it to be apprised by the administering Powers and to receive information from other appropriate sources, including the representatives of the Territories, concerning the wishes and aspirations of the peoples of the Territories,

Recognizing the need for the Special Committee to embark actively on a public awareness campaign aimed at assisting the peoples of the Territories in gaining an understanding of the options of self-determination,

Mindful, in this connection, that the holding of regional seminars in the Caribbean and Pacific regions and at Headquarters and other venues, with the active participation of representatives of the Non-Self-Governing Territories, provides a helpful means for the Special Committee to fulfil its mandate, and that the regional nature of the seminars, which alternate between the Caribbean and the Pacific, is a crucial element in their success, while recognizing the need for reviewing the role of those seminars in the context of a United Nations programme for ascertaining the political status of the Territories,

Mindful also that, by holding a Pacific regional seminar in Madang, Papua New Guinea, from 18 to 20 May 2004, the Special Committee was able to hear the views of the representatives of the Territories and Member States as well as organizations and experts in the region, in order to review the political, economic and social conditions in the Territories,

Conscious of the particular vulnerability of the Territories to natural disasters and environmental degradation and, in this connection, bearing in mind the programmes of action of the United Nations Conference on Environment and Development, the World Conference on Natural Disaster Reduction, the Global Conference on the Sustainable Development of Small Island Developing States, the International Conference on Population and Development, the United Nations Conference on Human Settlements (Habitat II), the World Summit on Sustainable Development and other relevant world conferences,

Noting with appreciation the contribution to the development of some Territories by the specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system,

Recalling the ongoing efforts of the Special Committee in carrying out a critical review of its work with the aim of making appropriate and constructive recommendations and decisions to attain its objectives in accordance with its mandate,

1. Reaffirms the inalienable right of the peoples of the Territories to self-determination, in conformity with the Charter of the United Nations and with General Assembly resolution 1514(XV), containing the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples;

2. Reaffirms also that, in the process of decolonization, there is no alternative to the principle of self-determination, which is also a fundamental human right, as recognized under the relevant human rights conventions;

3. Reaffirms further that it is ultimately for the peoples of the Territories themselves to determine freely their future political status in accordance with the relevant provisions of the Charter, the Declaration and the relevant resolutions of the General Assembly, and in that connection reiterates its long-standing call for the administering Powers, in cooperation with the territorial Governments, to promote political education in the Territories in order to foster an awareness among the people of their right to self-determination in conformity with the legitimate political status options, based on the principles clearly defined in General Assembly resolution 1541(XV);

4. Requests the administering Powers to continue to transmit to the Secretary-General information called for under Article 73 e of the Charter;

5. Stresses the importance of the Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples being apprised of the views and wishes of the peoples of the Territories and enhancing its understanding of their conditions, including the nature and scope of the existing political and constitutional arrangements between the Non-Self-Governing Territories and their respective administering Powers;

6. Reaffirms the responsibility of the administering Powers under the Charter to promote the economic and social development and to preserve the cultural identity of the Territories, and recommends that priority continue to be given, in consultation with the territorial Governments concerned, to the strengthening and diversification of their respective economies;

7. Requests the Special Committee to continue to follow closely the developments in legislation in the area of international financial services and its impact on the economy in some of the Territories;

8. Requests the Territories and the administering Powers to take all necessary measures to protect and conserve the environment of the Territories under their administration against any environmental degradation, and once again requests the specialized agencies concerned to continue to monitor environmental conditions in those Territories;

9. Welcomes the participation of the Non-Self-Governing Territories in regional activities, including the work of regional organizations;

10. Stresses the importance of implementing the plan of action for the Second International Decade for the Eradication of Colonialism, in particular by expediting the application of the work programme for the decolonization of each Non-Self-Governing Territory, on a case-by-case basis;

11. Invites the administering Powers to participate fully in the work of the Special Committee in order to implement the provisions of Article 73 e of the Charter and the Declaration;

12. Urges Member States to contribute to the efforts of the United Nations to usher in a world free of colonialism within the Second International Decade for the Eradication of Colonialism, and calls upon them to continue to give their full support to the Special Committee in its endeavours towards that noble goal;

13. Notes that some Non-Self-Governing Territories have expressed concern at the procedure followed by one administering Power, contrary to the wishes of the Territories themselves, namely, of amending or enacting legislation for the Territories through Orders in Council, in order to apply to the Territories the international treaty obligations of the administering Power;

14. Takes note of the constitutional reviews in the Territories administered by the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland and led by the territorial Governments;

15. Reiterates its requests to the Secretary-General to report to the General Assembly on the implementation of decolonization resolutions since the proclamation of the Second International Decade for the Eradication of Colonialism for the purpose of a midterm review in 2005;

16. Requests the Special Committee to continue to examine the question of the Non-Self-Governing Territories and to report thereon to the General Assembly at its sixtieth session with recommendations on appropriate ways to assist the peoples of the Territories in exercising their right to self-determination.

B

Individual Territories

The General Assembly,

Referring to resolution A above,

I

American Samoa

Taking note of the report by the administering Power that most American Samoan leaders express satisfaction with the Territory's present relationship with the United States of America, as reflected in statements made by those leaders in the regional seminars held in Havana, Cuba, Nadi, Fiji, and Madang, Papua New Guinea, in 2001, 2002 and 2004, respectively,

Noting that the Government of the Territory continues to take steps to increase revenue and decrease government expenditure,

Noting also that the Territory, similar to isolated communities with limited funds, continues to experience a lack of adequate medical and other infrastructural facilities,

1. Notes that the Department of the Interior of the United States of America provides that the Secretary of the Interior has administrative jurisdiction over American Samoa;

2. Calls upon the administering Power to continue to assist the territorial Government in the economic and social development of the Territory, including measures to rebuild financial management capabilities and strengthen other governmental functions of the Government of the Territory, and welcomes the assistance from the administering Power to the Territory in its recovery efforts following the recent floods;

3. Welcomes the invitation extended to the Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples by the Governor of American Samoa at the Pacific regional seminar held in Madang, Papua New Guinea, from 18 to 20 May 2004, to send a visiting mission to the Territory, calls upon the administering Power to facilitate such a mission and requests the Chairman of the Special Committee to take all the necessary steps to that end;

II

Anguilla

Taking note of the constitutional review process led by the territorial Government,

Recalling the holding of the 2003 Caribbean regional seminar in Anguilla, the first time that the seminar has been held in a Non-Self-Governing Territory,

Noting the desire of the territorial Government and the people of Anguilla for a visiting mission by the Special Committee,

Aware of the efforts of the Government of Anguilla to continue to develop the Territory as a viable off-shore centre and well-regulated financial centre for investors by enacting modern company and trust laws, as well as partnership and insurance legislation, and computerizing the company registry system,

1. Welcomes the constitutional review process led by the Government of Anguilla in cooperation with the administering Power;

2. Recalls the cooperation of the territorial Government of Anguilla and the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland in holding the 2003 Caribbean regional seminar in Anguilla, and notes that the staging of the seminar in a Non-Self-Governing Territory for the first time, as well as a town hall meeting between the people of Anguilla and the Special Committee during the seminar, contributed to its success;

III

Bermuda

Noting the results of the independence referendum held on 16 August 1995, and conscious of the different viewpoints of the political parties of the Territory on the future status of the Territory,

1. Welcomes the agreement reached in June 2002 between the United States of America, the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland and the Territory formally transferring the former military base lands to the territorial Government, and the provision of financial resources to address some of the environmental problems;

2. Decides to closely follow the territorial consultations on the future status of Bermuda and to facilitate assistance to the Territory in a public educational programme, if requested, as well as to hold consultations and to make all necessary arrangements to have a visiting mission to the Territory;

IV

British Virgin Islands

Taking note of the constitutional review process led by the territorial Government,

Noting that the Territory continues to emerge as one of the world's leading offshore financial centres,

Welcomes the constitutional review process led by the Government of the British Virgin Islands in cooperation with the administering Power;

V

Cayman Islands

Taking note of the constitutional review process led by the territorial Government,

Noting the approval by the Cayman Islands Legislative Assembly of the Territory's Vision 2008 Development Plan, which aims to promote development that is consistent with the aims and values of Caymanian society,

Welcomes the continuing constitutional review process led by the Government of the Cayman Islands in cooperation with the administering Power;

VI

Guam

Recalling that, in a referendum held in 1987, the registered and eligible voters of Guam endorsed a draft Guam Commonwealth Act that would establish a new framework for relations between the Territory and the administering Power, providing for a greater measure of internal self-government for Guam and recognition of the right of the Chamorro people of Guam to self-determination for the Territory,

Recalling also the requests by the elected representatives and non-governmental organizations of the Territory that Guam not be removed from the list of the Non-Self-Governing Territories with which the Special Committee is concerned, pending the self-determination of the Chamorro people and taking into account their legitimate rights and interests,

Aware that negotiations between the administering Power and the territorial Government on the draft Guam Commonwealth Act are no longer continuing and that Guam has established the process for a self-determination vote by the eligible Chamorro voters,

Cognizant that the administering Power continues to implement its programme of transferring surplus federal land to the Government of Guam,

Noting that the people of the Territory have called for reform in the programme of the administering Power with respect to the thorough, unconditional and expeditious transfer of land property to the people of Guam,

Conscious that immigration into Guam has resulted in the indigenous Chamorros becoming a minority in their homeland,

Aware of the potential for diversifying and developing the economy of Guam through commercial fishing and agriculture and other viable activities,

Recalling the dispatch in 1979 of a United Nations visiting mission to the Territory, and noting the recommendation of the 1996 Pacific regional seminar for sending a visiting mission to Guam,

1. Calls upon the administering Power to take into consideration the expressed will of the Chamorro people as supported by Guam voters in the plebiscite of 1987 and as provided for in Guam law, encourages the administering Power and the territorial Government of Guam to enter into negotiations on the matter, and requests the administering Power to inform the Secretary-General of progress to that end;

2. Requests the administering Power to continue to assist the elected territorial Government in achieving its political, economic and social goals;

3. Also requests the administering Power, in cooperation with the territorial Government, to continue to transfer land to the original landowners of the Territory;

4. Further requests the administering Power to continue to recognize and respect the political rights and the cultural and ethnic identity of the Chamorro people of Guam, and to take all necessary measures to respond to the concerns of the territorial Government with regard to the question of immigration;

5. Requests the administering Power to cooperate in establishing programmes specifically intended to promote the sustainable development of economic activities and enterprises, noting the special role of the Chamorro people in the development of Guam;

6. Also requests the administering Power to continue to support appropriate measures by the territorial Government aimed at promoting growth in commercial fishing and agricultural and other viable activities;

VII

Montserrat

Taking note with interest of the statements made and the information on the political and economic situation in Montserrat provided by the Chief Minister of the Territory to the Caribbean regional seminar, held at The Valley, Anguilla, from 20 to 22 May 2003,

Noting with concern the dire consequences of the volcanic eruption, which led to the evacuation of three quarters of the Territory's population to safe areas of the island and to areas outside the Territory, in particular Antigua and Barbuda and the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland, and which continues to have enduring consequences for the economy of the island,

Welcoming the continued assistance provided to the Territory by States members of the Caribbean Community, in particular Antigua and Barbuda, which has offered safe refuge and access to educational and health facilities, as well as employment for thousands who have left the Territory,

Noting the continuing efforts of the administering Power to deal with the consequences of the volcanic eruption,

Noting with concern that a number of the inhabitants of the Territory continue to live in shelters because of volcanic activity,

Taking note of the constitutional review process led by the territorial Government,

1. Calls upon the administering Power, the specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system, as well as regional and other organizations, to continue to provide assistance to the Territory in alleviating the consequences of the volcanic eruption;

2. Welcomes the continuing constitutional review process led by the Government of Montserrat in cooperation with the administering Power;

VIII

Pitcairn

Taking into account the unique nature of Pitcairn in terms of population and area,

Welcoming the participation of a representative of the Mayor of Pitcairn in the Pacific regional seminar, held in Madang, Papua New Guinea, from 18 to 20 May 2004, and taking note of the positive developments in the Territory,

Requests the administering Power to continue its assistance for the improvement of the economic, social, educational and other conditions of the population of the Territory and to continue its discussions with the representatives of Pitcairn on how best to support their economic security;

IX

Saint Helena

Taking into account the unique character of Saint Helena, its population and its natural resources,

Taking note of the constitutional review process led by the territorial Government,

Aware of the efforts of the administering Power and the territorial authorities to improve the socio-economic conditions of the population of Saint Helena, in particular in the sphere of food production, continuing high unemployment and limited transport and communications,

Noting with concern the problem of unemployment on the island and the joint action of the administering Power and the territorial Government to deal with it,

1. Welcomes the continuing constitutional review process led by the Government of Saint Helena in cooperation with the administering Power;

2. Requests the administering Power and relevant international organizations to continue to support the efforts of the territorial Government to address the socio-economic development challenges, including the high unemployment and the limited transport and communications problems;

X

Turks and Caicos Islands

Noting the results of the general elections held in April 2003,

Noting with concern the vulnerability of the Territory to drug trafficking and related activities, as well as its problems caused by illegal immigration and the need for continued cooperation between the administering Power and the territorial Government in countering drug trafficking and money-laundering,

Taking note of the constitutional review process led by the territorial Government,

Welcomes the continuing constitutional review process led by the Government of the Turks and Caicos Islands in cooperation with the administering Power;

XI

United States Virgin Islands

Noting the continuing interest of the territorial Government in seeking associate membership in the Organization of Eastern Caribbean States and observer status in the Caribbean Community and the pending request by the Territory to the administering Power for the delegation of authority to proceed, as well as the 2003 resolution of the territorial legislature in support of that request,

Noting also the necessity of further diversifying the economy of the Territory,

Noting further the efforts of the Government of the Territory to promote the Territory as an offshore financial services centre,

Recalling that the Territory has not received a United Nations visiting mission since 1977, and bearing in mind the formal request of the Territory for such a mission in 1993 to assist the Territory in its political education process and to observe the Territory's only referendum on political status options in its history,

Noting the ongoing cooperation between the territorial Government and Denmark on the exchange of artefacts and archives,

1. Requests the administering Power to continue to assist the territorial Government in achieving its political, economic and social goals;

2. Once again requests the administering Power to facilitate the participation of the Territory, as appropriate, in various organizations, in particular the Organization of Eastern Caribbean States, the Caribbean Community and the Association of Caribbean States;

3. Calls for the inclusion of the Territory in regional programmes of the United Nations Development Programme, consistent with the participation of other Non-Self-Governing Territories;

4. Notes the economic difficulties being experienced by the territorial Government and the fiscal austerity measures being implemented, and others proposed, to relieve the Territory's cash flow shortage, and calls upon the administering Power to continue to provide every assistance required by the Territory to further alleviate the difficult economic situation, including, inter alia, the provision of debt relief and loans;

5. Notes also the position of the territorial Government, including its articulation in resolution 1609 of 9 April 2001 of the 24th Legislature of the United States Virgin Islands, opposing the assumption by the administering Power of submerged land in territorial waters, having regard to relevant resolutions of the General Assembly on the ownership and control of natural resources, including marine resources, by the people of the Non-Self-Governing Territories, and its calls for the return of those marine resources within its jurisdiction.

Information

UN public information

The General Assembly's Committee on Information, at its twenty-sixth session (New York, 26 April–7 May) [A/59/21], continued to consider UN information policies and activities and to evaluate and follow up efforts made and progress achieved in information and communications. The major report before the Committee dealt with the reorientation of UN activities in public information and communications. Other reports covered the rationalization of the network of UN information centres (UNICs), modernization and integrated management of UN libraries and in-depth review of library activities, the activities of the United Nations Communications Group (UNCG), activities of the UN Department of Public Information (DPI) to publicize the Assembly's work and decisions, and the proposed 2006-2007 strategic framework for DPI.

Those reports and the Secretary-General's report on questions relating to information [A/59/221 & Corr.1] are discussed in the relevant sections below.

By decision 59/518 of 10 December, the Assembly increased the Committee's membership from 102 to 107.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 10 December [meeting 71], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fourth Committee [A/59/473], adopted resolutions 59/126 A and B without vote [agenda item 78].

Questions relating to information

A

Information in the service of humanity

The General Assembly,

Taking note of the comprehensive and important report of the Committee on Information,

Also taking note of the report of the Secretary-General on questions relating to information,

Urges all countries, organizations of the United Nations system as a whole and all others concerned, reaffirming their commitment to the principles of the Charter of the United Nations and to the principles of freedom of the press and freedom of information, as well as to those of the independence, pluralism and diversity of the media, deeply concerned by the disparities existing between developed and developing countries and the consequences of every kind arising from those disparities that affect the capability of the public, private or other media and individuals in developing countries to disseminate information and communicate their views and their cultural and ethical values through endogenous cultural production, as well as to ensure the diversity of sources and their free access to information, and recognizing the call in this context for what in the United Nations and at various international forums has been termed "a new world information and communication order, seen as an evolving and continuous process":

(a) To cooperate and interact with a view to reducing existing disparities in information flows at all levels by increasing assistance for the development of communication infrastructures and capabilities in developing countries, with due regard for their needs and the priorities attached to such areas by those countries, and in order to enable them and the public, private or other media in developing countries to develop their own information and communication policies freely and independently and increase the participation of media and individuals in the communication process, and to ensure a free flow of information at all levels;

(b) To ensure for journalists the free and effective performance of their professional tasks and condemn resolutely all attacks against them;

(c) To provide support for the continuation and strengthening of practical training programmes for broadcasters and journalists from public, private and other media in developing countries;

(d) To enhance regional efforts and cooperation among developing countries, as well as cooperation between developed and developing countries, to strengthen communication capacities and to improve the media infrastructure and communication technology in the developing countries, especially in the areas of training and dissemination of information;

(e) To aim at, in addition to bilateral cooperation, providing all possible support and assistance to the developing countries and their media, public, private or other, with due regard to their interests and needs in the field of information and to action already adopted within the United Nations system, including:

- (i) The development of the human and technical resources that are indispensable for the improvement of information and communication systems in developing countries and support for the continuation and strengthening of practical training programmes, such as those already operating under both public and private auspices throughout the developing world;
- (ii) The creation of conditions that will enable developing countries and their media, public, private or other, to have, by using their national and regional resources, the communication technology suited to their national needs, as well as the necessary programme material, especially for radio and television broadcasting;
- (iii) Assistance in establishing and promoting telecommunication links at the subregional, regional and interregional levels, especially among developing countries;
- (iv) The facilitation, as appropriate, of access by the developing countries to advanced communication technology available on the open market;

(f) To provide full support for the International Programme for the Development of Communication of the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization, which should support both public and private media.

B

United Nations public information policies and activities

The General Assembly,

Reiterating its decision to consolidate the role of the Committee on Information as its main subsidiary body mandated to make recommendations to it relating to the work of the Department of Public Information of the Secretariat,

Concurring with the view of the Secretary-General that the fundamental premise underlying the reorientation efforts of the Department of Public Information remains General Assembly resolution 13(I) of 13 February 1946, establishing the Department, which states in paragraph 2 of annex I that “the activities of the Department should be so organized and directed as to promote to the greatest possible extent an informed understanding of the work and purposes of the United Nations among the peoples of the world”,

Concurring also with the view of the Secretary-General that the contents of public information and communications should be placed at the heart of the strategic management of the United Nations and that a culture of communications should permeate all levels of the Organization, as a means of fully informing the peoples of the world of the aims and activities of the United Nations, in accordance with the purposes and principles enshrined in the Charter of the United Nations, in order to create broad-based global support for the United Nations,

Stressing that the primary mission of the Department of Public Information is to provide, through its outreach activities, accurate, impartial, comprehensive and timely information to the public on the tasks and responsibilities of the United Nations in order to strengthen international support for the activities of the Organization with the greatest transparency,

Noting that the comprehensive review of the work of the Department of Public Information, requested by the General Assembly in its resolution 56/253 of 24 December 2001, and the implementation of its second phase, described in the report of the Secretary-General on reorientation of United Nations activities in the field of public information and communications to the Committee on Information at its twenty-fifth session, as well as the report of the Secretary-General entitled “Strengthening of the United Nations: an agenda for further change”, and Assembly resolutions 57/300 of 20 December 2002 and 58/101 B of 9 December 2003, as they apply to the Department of Public Information, provide an opportunity to take further steps to rationalize the work of the Department in order to enhance its efficiency and effectiveness, and to maximize the use of its resources,

Expressing its concern that the gap in the information and communication technologies between the developed and the developing countries has continued to widen and that vast segments of the population in developing countries are not benefiting from the present information and technology revolution, and, in this regard, underlining the necessity of rectifying the imbalances of the global information and technology revolution in order to make it more just, equitable and effective,

Recognizing that developments in the information and communication technology revolution open vast new opportunities for economic growth and social development and can play an important role in the eradication of poverty in developing countries, and, at the same time, emphasizing that the revolution also poses challenges and risks and could lead to the further widening of disparities between and within countries,

Recalling its resolution 56/262 of 15 February 2002 on multilingualism, and emphasizing the importance of making appropriate use of the official languages of the United Nations in the activities of the Department of Public Information, aiming to eliminate the disparity between the use of English and the five other official languages,

Welcoming Saint Vincent and the Grenadines, Suriname and Switzerland to membership in the Committee on Information,

I

Introduction

1. Reaffirms its resolution 13(I), in which it established the Department of Public Information, and all other relevant General Assembly resolutions related to the activities of the Department;

2. Calls upon the Secretary-General, in respect of the public information policies and activities of the United Nations, to continue to implement fully the recommendations contained in paragraph 2 of General Assembly resolution 48/44 B of 10 December 1993 and other mandates as established by the Assembly;

3. Notes that the medium-term plan for the period 2002-2005 continues to serve as a guideline that sets out the overall orientation of the public information programme for the Organization's goals through effective communication, and recalls its resolution 58/269 of 23 December 2003, entitled "Strengthening of the United Nations: an agenda for further change", in which it requested the Secretary-General to prepare, on a trial basis, for submission to the General Assembly at its fifty-ninth session, a strategic framework to replace the current four-year medium-term plan;

4. Reaffirms that the United Nations remains the indispensable foundation of a peaceful and just world and that its voice must be heard in a clear and effective manner, and emphasizes the essential role of the Department of Public Information in this context;

5. Stresses the importance of clear and timely provision of information by the Secretariat to Member States, upon their request, within the framework of existing mandates and procedures, and encourages the Department of Public Information to continue to do so;

6. Reaffirms the central role of the Committee on Information in United Nations public information policies and activities, including the restructuring process of the Department of Public Information, and the prioritization of its activities, and welcomes the continued constructive interaction between the Department and the members of the Committee;

7. Calls upon Member States to ensure, to the extent possible, that recommendations relating to the programme of the Department of Public Information originate and are considered in the Committee on Information;

8. Requests the Department of Public Information, following the priorities laid down by the General Assembly in the medium-term plan and using the United Nations Millennium Declaration as its guide, to pay particular attention to such major issues as the eradication of poverty, conflict prevention, sustainable development, human rights, the human immunodeficiency virus/acquired immunodeficiency syndrome (HIV/AIDS) epidemic, combating terrorism in all its forms and manifestations and the needs of the African continent;

9. Also requests the Department of Public Information to pay attention to all major issues addressed in the United Nations Millennium Declaration and the Millennium Development Goals in carrying out its activities;

10. Concurs with the Secretary-General on the need to enhance the technological infrastructure of the Department of Public Information in order to widen its outreach and improve the United Nations web site;

11. Recognizes the important work carried out by the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization and its collaboration with news agencies and broadcasting organizations in developing countries in disseminating information on priority issues, and encourages a continued collaboration between the Department of Public Information and the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization in the promotion of culture and in the fields of education and communication;

II

General activities of the Department of Public Information

12. Notes the proposals and actions of the Secretary-General to improve the effective and targeted delivery of public information activities, including the restructuring of the Department of Public Information, in accordance with the relevant resolutions and decisions of the General Assembly, and requests the Secretary-General to report to the Committee on Information in this regard at its twenty-seventh session;

13. Reaffirms that the Department of Public Information is the focal point for information policies of the United Nations and the primary news centre for information about the United Nations, its activities and those of the Secretary-General, and encourages a closer integration of functions between the Department and the office providing spokesman services for the Secretary-General;

14. Welcomes the recommendations of the Department of Public Information for developing a communications strategy to publicize the work and decisions of the General Assembly, encourages the Department to establish a closer working relationship with the Office of the President of the General Assembly, and requests the Secretary-General to report further on the progress achieved in, and the remaining challenges to, the implementation of those recommendations to the Committee on Information at its twenty-seventh session;

15. Emphasizes the central role of the Committee on Information in making recommendations to the General Assembly on the mandate of the Department of Public Information, takes note of the reorientation exercise in enhancing the performance and effectiveness of the Department, which should be in accordance with the mandates established by the Assembly, and requests the Secretary-General to report on progress achieved in this regard to the Committee at its twenty-seventh session;

16. Requests the Secretary-General, in the context of the reorientation process, to continue to exert all efforts to ensure that publications and other information services of the Secretariat, including the United Nations web site and the United Nations News Service, contain comprehensive, objective and equitable information about the issues before the Organization and that they maintain editorial independence, impartiality, accuracy and full consistency with resolutions and decisions of the General Assembly;

17. Reiterates that all printed materials of the Department of Public Information, in accordance with existing mandates, should not duplicate other publications of the United Nations system and should be produced in a cost-effective manner;

18. Welcomes the reconstitution of the Publications Board, in accordance with existing legislative mandates, by the Department of Public Information;

19. Urges the Department of Public Information to continue to exhibit transparency to the greatest extent possible, so as to increase awareness of the impact of its programmes and activities;

20. Emphasizes that, through its reorientation, the Department of Public Information should maintain and improve its activities in the areas of special interest to developing countries and, where appropriate, other countries with special needs, including countries in transition, and that such reorientation contributes to bridging the existing gap between the developing and the developed countries in the crucial field of public information and communications;

21. Encourages the Secretary-General to strengthen the coordination between the Department of Public Information and other departments of the Secretariat, including the designation of focal points to work with substantive departments, in the context of its client-oriented approach, to identify target audiences and develop information programmes and media strategies for priority issues, and emphasizes that public information capacities and activities in other departments should function under the guidance of the Department;

22. Welcomes the initiatives that have been taken by the Department of Public Information to strengthen the public information system of the United Nations, and, in this regard, stresses the importance of a coherent and results-oriented approach being taken by the United Nations, the specialized agencies and the programmes and funds of the United Nations system involved in public information activities, as well as the provision of resources for their implementation, and that feedback from Member States on the relevance and effectiveness of its programme delivery should be taken into account;

23. Appreciates the continued efforts of the Department of Public Information in issuing daily press releases, and requests the Department to continue providing this invaluable service to both Member States and representatives of the media, while considering possible means of improving their production process and streamlining their format, structure and length, keeping in mind the views of Member States;

24. Requests that during the deliberations on the item entitled "Questions relating to information" in the Special Political and Decolonization Committee (Fourth Committee) during the successive regular sessions of the General Assembly, an informal interaction between the Secretariat and members of the Fourth Committee take place after the presentation by the Under-Secretary-General for Communications and Public Information on the substance of that oral briefing, within existing resources;

Multilingualism and public information

25. Welcomes the ongoing efforts of the Department of Public Information to enhance multilingualism in its activities, and encourages the Department to continue its endeavours in this regard;

26. Emphasizes the importance of ensuring the full, equitable treatment of all the official languages of the United Nations in all activities of the Department of Public Information, and stresses the importance of fully implementing its resolution 52/214 of 22 December 1997, in section C of which it requested the Secretary-General to ensure that the texts of all new public documents, in all six official languages, and information materials of the United Nations are made available daily through the United Nations web site and are accessible to Member States without delay;

27. Recognizes the fact that the integration of the Official Document System with the United Nations web site, scheduled to take place during the fourth quarter of 2004, will significantly enhance the multilingual nature of the site by providing free, public access to all United Nations parliamentary documents in the six official languages;

28. Reaffirms its request to the Secretary-General to ensure that the Department of Public Information has appropriate staffing capacity in all official languages of the United Nations to undertake all its activities;

29. Reminds the Secretary-General of the need to include in future programme budget proposals for the Department of Public Information the importance of using all six official languages in its activities;

Bridging the digital divide

30. Welcomes the holding of the Geneva phase of the World Summit on the Information Society from 10 to 12 December 2003, and looks forward to the second phase, to be held in Tunis from 16 to 18 November 2005;

31. Calls upon the Department of Public Information to contribute to raising the awareness of the international community of the importance of the World Summit on the Information Society and the need to join efforts to make it a success;

32. Recalls paragraph 32 of its resolution 58/101 B, welcomes the contribution of the Department of Public Information in publicizing the efforts of the Secretary-General to close the digital divide as a means of spurring economic growth and as a response to the continuing gulf between developed and developing countries, and, in this context, requests the Department to further enhance its role;

III

New programmatic priorities for the Department of Public Information

33. Takes note of the note by the Secretary-General on the proposed strategic framework for the period 2006-2007 concerning the programmatic aspects for the Department of Public Information;

34. Notes that the proposed strategic framework does not include the first part;

35. Notes also that the executive direction and management elements of the programme, as well as the details of performance measures (baselines and targets), external factors and outputs, together with resource requirements, will be reflected in the proposed programme budget for the biennium 2006-2007;

36. Stresses the need to include in the proposed programme budget for the biennium 2006-2007, to the fullest extent possible, quantifiable and verifiable indicators for measuring expected accomplishments, so as to give a clear indication of the progress towards the accomplishment of objectives set;

37. Also stresses the importance of full compliance with all legislative mandates when preparing the proposed programme budget for the biennium 2006-2007;

38. Recommends that, in the last sentence of paragraph 1 in the Overall orientation section in the annex to the note by the Secretary-General on the proposed strategic framework for the period 2006-2007, the words "in particular, the legislative mandates included in the present biennial programme plan, as well as those of" be inserted after the words "General Assembly" and the word "and" be deleted;

39. Acknowledges that the Department of Public Information, with the assistance of the Office of Internal

Oversight Services of the Secretariat, has developed an annual programme impact review to systematically evaluate its products and activities and that, as an initial step in a three-year project between the Department and the Office, the first annual programme impact review was completed in January 2004, as requested by the General Assembly in its resolution 57/300 of 20 December 2002, and requests the Secretary-General to report further on the progress made to the Committee on Information at its twenty-seventh session;

40. Reaffirms that the Department of Public Information must prioritize its work programme while respecting existing mandates and in line with regulation 5.6 of the Regulations and Rules Governing Programme Planning, the Programme Aspects of the Budget, the Monitoring of Implementation and the Methods of Evaluation, to focus its message and concentrate its efforts better and, as a function of performance management, to match its programmes with the needs of its target audiences, on the basis of improved feedback and evaluation mechanisms;

United Nations information centres

41. Reaffirms paragraph 15 of its resolution 57/300, in which it took note of the proposal of the Secretary-General contained in action 8 of his report, to rationalize the network of United Nations information centres around regional hubs, where appropriate, in consultation with concerned Member States, starting with the creation of a Western European hub, followed by a similar approach in other high-cost developed countries, and requests the Secretary-General to submit a progress report on the implementation of the proposal with the objective of applying this initiative in other regions, in consultation with Member States, where this initiative will strengthen the flow and exchange of information in developing countries;

42. Welcomes the agreement between the Department of Public Information and the Western European countries to establish a regional United Nations information centre in Brussels;

43. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General on the rationalization of the network of United Nations information centres, stresses that the report could not, at the time it was written, fully address all aspects of the implementation of the rationalization of United Nations information centres in Western Europe and other high-cost developed countries, and, in this regard, requests the Secretary-General to report in detail to the Committee on Information at its twenty-seventh session;

44. Stresses that the United Nations information centres and services and information components or regional hubs, as applicable, should play a significant role in disseminating information about the work of the Organization to the peoples of the world, including in the areas outlined in the United Nations Millennium Declaration, and emphasizes that the information centres, or regional hubs, as applicable, as the "field voice" of the Department of Public Information, should promote public awareness of and mobilize support for the work of the United Nations at the local level, bearing in mind that information in the local languages has the strongest impact on the local populations;

45. Also stresses the importance of taking into account the special needs and requirements of developing countries in the field of information and communications technology for the effective flow of information in those countries;

46. Affirms that the measures highlighted and objectives expressed in paragraphs 41 to 45 above are central to future rationalization of United Nations information centres, which must be carried out in consultation, on a case-by-case basis, with all concerned Member States in which existing information centres are located, the countries served by those information centres and other interested countries in the region, taking into consideration the distinctive characteristics of each region;

47. Requests the Secretariat, within the framework of the rationalization process, to extend the services of the United Nations information centres and regional United Nations information centres, where applicable, to those Member States currently outside the scope of the field information capacity of the Department of Public Information;

48. Requests the Secretary-General, within the framework of the rationalization process, to take into account the needs of Portuguese-speaking African countries and the offer made by the Government of Angola;

49. Recalls paragraph 39 of its resolution 58/270 of 23 December 2003, and welcomes, in this context, the ongoing efforts of the Department of Public Information to review the allocation of both staff and financial resources to the United Nations information centres with a view to transferring resources from information centres in developed countries to United Nations information activities in developing countries, emphasizing the needs of the least developed countries, and to any other activities of high priority, such as multilingualism on the web site and evaluation of services, in consultation with Member States concerned;

50. Encourages United Nations information centres and regional United Nations information centres, as applicable, to develop web pages in local languages, also encourages the Department of Public Information to provide resources and technical facilities, in particular to those information centres whose web pages are not yet operational, and further encourages host countries to respond to the needs of the information centres;

51. Recalls the appeal made by the Secretary-General to host countries of United Nations information centres to facilitate the work of the centres in their countries by providing rent-free or rent-subsidized premises, while taking into account the economic condition of the host countries and bearing in mind that such support should not be a substitute for the full allocation of financial resources for the information centres in the context of the programme budget of the United Nations;

52. Notes the continuing support of the Department of Public Information in the consolidation of the United Nations field presences into United Nations houses, and requests the Secretary-General to report in detail on the progress made to the Committee on Information at its twenty-seventh session;

53. Requests the Secretary-General to continue to submit progress reports on the implementation of the rationalization process to the Committee on Information at its successive sessions and to include in these reports information on the functioning of the Department's field capacity, including newly established regional United Nations information centres, where applicable, and United Nations information centres that have undergone the rationalization process;

IV

Strategic communications services

54. Notes paragraph 6 of the report of the Secretary-General on the continuing reorientation of United Nations activities in the field of public information and communications, and, in this context, reaffirms that the Department of Public Information is the principal department responsible for the implementation of information strategies, as mandated;

55. Affirms the role of the strategic communications services in devising and disseminating United Nations messages by developing communications strategies, in close collaboration with the substantive departments, United Nations funds and programmes and the specialized agencies, in full compliance with the legislative mandates;

Promotional campaigns

56. Recognizes that promotional campaigns aimed at supporting special sessions and international conferences of the United Nations are part of the core responsibility of the Department of Public Information, and welcomes the efforts of the Department to examine creative ways in which it can organize and implement these campaigns in partnership with the substantive departments concerned, using the United Nations Millennium Declaration as its guide;

57. Supports the efforts of the Department of Public Information, while ensuring respect for the priorities established by the General Assembly, to also focus its promotional campaigns on the major issues identified by the Secretary-General;

58. Appreciates the work of the Department of Public Information in promoting, through its campaigns, issues of importance to the international community, such as sustainable development, children, HIV/AIDS, malaria and other diseases and decolonization, as well as the dialogue among civilizations, culture of peace and tolerance and the consequences of the Chernobyl disaster, and encourages the Department, in cooperation with the countries concerned and with the relevant organizations and bodies of the United Nations system, to continue to take appropriate measures to enhance world public awareness of these and other important global issues;

59. Encourages the Department of Public Information to continue to work within the United Nations Communications Group to coordinate the implementation of communication strategies with the heads of information of the agencies, funds and programmes of the United Nations system, and requests the Secretary-General to report to the Committee on Information at successive sessions on the activities of the Group;

60. Stresses the need for the renewed emphasis in support of Africa's development, in particular by the Department of Public Information, in order to promote awareness in the international community of the nature of the critical economic and social situation in Africa and of the priorities of the New Partnership for Africa's Development;

Role of the Department of Public

Information in United Nations peacekeeping

61. Commends the efforts of the Secretary-General to strengthen the public information capacity of the Department of Public Information for the establishment and functioning of the information components of peacekeeping operations and of political and peace-building missions of the United Nations, including its promotional efforts and other information support activities, and requests the Secretariat to continue to ensure the involvement of the Department from the planning stage of future operations through inter-departmental consultations and coordination with other departments of the Secretariat, in particular with the Department of Peacekeeping Operations;

62. Stresses the importance of enhancing the public information capacity of the Department of Public Information in the field of peacekeeping operations and its role in the selection process of spokespersons for United Nations peacekeeping operations or missions, and, in this regard, encourages the Department to second spokespersons who have the necessary skills to fulfil the tasks of the operations or missions, taking into account the principle of equitable geographical distribution in accordance with Chapter XV, Article 101, paragraph 3, of the Charter of the United Nations, and to consider views expressed, especially by host countries, when appropriate, in this regard;

63. Welcomes the actions taken by the Department of Public Information to increase its involvement in the planning stage of new or expanding peacekeeping operations, as well as the deployment of public information components in new missions, and also welcomes the improvements made to the peacekeeping portal on the United Nations web site;

64. Encourages the Department of Public Information to continue its efforts in supporting the peacekeeping missions to further develop their web sites;

65. Regrets the information gap between the new realities and successes of peacekeeping operations, especially multidimensional and complex ones, and the public perceptions, as stated by the Secretary-General in his report on the implementation of the recommendations of the Special Committee on Peacekeeping Operations, and stresses the need for a comprehensive public information strategy on peacekeeping operations, undertaken in close coordination with other relevant departments, in order to overcome this gap and ensure a positive public impact;

66. Emphasizes the need for interdepartmental cooperation between the Department of Peacekeeping Operations and the Department of Public Information in order to develop the strategy requested in paragraph 65 above;

67. Requests the Secretary-General to continue to report to the Committee on Information at its successive sessions on the role of the Department of Public Information in United Nations peacekeeping;

Role of the Department of Public Information in strengthening dialogue among civilizations and the culture of peace as means of enhancing understanding among nations

68. Recalls its resolutions 53/22 of 4 November 1998 and 55/23 of 13 November 2000 on the United Nations Year of Dialogue among Civilizations, 52/15 of 20 November 1997, by which it proclaimed 2000 the International Year for the Culture of Peace, 53/25 of 10 November 1998, by which it proclaimed the period 2001-2010 the International Decade for a Culture of Peace and Non-Violence for the Children of the World, and 56/6 of 9 November 2001 on the Global Agenda for Dialogue among Civilizations, encourages the Department of Public Information to provide the necessary support, within existing resources, for the dissemination of information pertaining to dialogue among civilizations and the culture of peace and to take due steps in fostering the culture of dialogue among civilizations via all mass media, such as the Internet, print, radio and television, and requests the Secretary-General to submit a report in this regard to the Committee on Information at its twenty-seventh session;

V

News services

69. Stresses that the central objective of the news services, implemented by the News and Media Division, is the timely delivery of accurate, objective and balanced news and information emanating from the United Nations system in all four mass media—print, radio, television and Internet—to the media and other audiences worldwide with the overall emphasis on multilingualism;

Traditional means of communication

70. Also stresses that radio remains one of the most cost-effective and far-reaching traditional media available to the Department of Public Information and an important instrument in United Nations activities, including development and peacekeeping, with a view to achieving a broad client base around the world;

71. Notes that the international radio broadcasting capacity for the United Nations has been made an integral part of the activities of the Department of Public Information, and requests the Secretary-General to make every effort to ensure its success and to report on its activities to the Committee on Information at its twenty-seventh session;

72. Requests the Secretary-General to pay full attention to the parity of the six official languages in expanding the international radio broadcasting capacity;

73. Notes the efforts being made by the Department of Public Information to disseminate programmes directly to broadcasting stations all over the world in the six official languages, with the addition of Portuguese, as well as in other languages, where possible, and, in this regard, stresses the need for impartiality and objectivity concerning information activities of the United Nations;

74. Encourages the Department of Public Information to continue building partnerships with local, national and regional broadcasters to extend the United Nations message to all the corners of the world in an accurate and impartial way;

75. Emphasizes that the United Nations Radio and Television Service should take full advantage of the technological infrastructure made available in recent years, including satellite platforms, information and communication technologies and the Internet, and requests the Secretary-General, as a part of the reorientation of the Department of Public Information, to consider a global strategy for broadcasting, taking into account existing technologies;

United Nations web site

76. Reiterates its appreciation for the efforts of the Department of Public Information in creating a high-quality, user-friendly and cost-effective web site, noting that this is especially noteworthy considering the scope of the undertaking, the budget constraints within the United Nations and the remarkably rapid expansion of the World Wide Web, and reaffirms that the web site remains a very useful tool for the media, non-governmental organizations, educational institutions, Member States and the general public;

77. Stresses the need for the Department of Public Information to take further necessary measures to ensure accessibility to the United Nations web site by persons with disabilities, including visual and hearing disabilities, calls upon the Department, as a first step, to make further efforts for all new and revised pages to adhere to the obligatory level of compliance with recognized industry standards regarding such accessibility and, within existing resources, to work towards compliance with all other levels of such standards, and requests the Secretary-General to report to the Committee on Information at its twenty-seventh session on progress made in this regard;

78. Notes that the multilingual development and enrichment of the United Nations web site has improved, although at a slower rate than expected owing to several constraints that need to be addressed, and, in this regard, encourages the Department of Public Information, in coordination with content-providing offices, to improve the actions undertaken to achieve parity among the six official languages on the United Nations web site;

79. Stresses the need to adopt a decision on the multilingual development, maintenance and enrichment of the United Nations web site, considering, inter alia, the possibility of organizational restructuring towards separate language units for each of the six official languages within the Department of Public Information, in order to achieve full parity among the official languages of the United Nations;

80. Reaffirms its request to the Secretary-General to ensure, until such a decision has been taken and implemented, to the extent possible and while maintaining an up-to-date and accurate web site, the equitable distribution of financial and human resources within the Department of Public Information allocated to the United Nations web site among all official languages on a continuous basis, and to make every possible effort to ensure also that all materials contained on the web site that do not change and do not need regular maintenance are made available in all six official languages;

81. Reaffirms the need to achieve full parity among the six official languages on the United Nations web sites, and, in this regard, takes note of the proposal of the Secretary-General to translate all English materials and databases posted on the United Nations web sites by the respective content-providing offices of the Secretariat into all official languages, and reiterates its request to the Secretary-General to report to the Committee on Information at its twenty-seventh session on the most practical, efficient and cost-effective means of implementing this proposal;

82. Requests the Secretary-General to include in his report to the Committee on Information at its twenty-seventh session proposals relating to the designation of a date by which all supporting arrangements would be in place for the implementation of this concept, after which date parity would continue, as well as proposals relating to the exemption from translation of specific items on the United Nations web site;

83. Stresses the importance of access for the public to the United Nations Treaty Collection and United Nations parliamentary documentation;

84. Encourages the Department of Public Information to implement an e-mail service to inform subscribers of recent additions to the United Nations web site;

85. Encourages the Secretary-General, through the Department of Public Information, to continue to take full advantage of recent developments in information technology in order to improve, in a cost-effective manner, the expeditious dissemination of information on the United Nations, in accordance with the priorities established by the General Assembly and taking into account the linguistic diversity of the Organization;

86. Notes the gap among different official languages on United Nations web sites, and recognizes that some official languages use non-Latin and bidirectional scripts;

87. Recognizes that technological infrastructures and supportive applications in the United Nations are based on Latin script, which leads to difficulties in processing non-Latin and bidirectional scripts, and encourages the Department of Public Information to continue its efforts, to the extent possible, to ensure that technological infrastructures and supportive applications in the United Nations fully support Latin, non-Latin and bidirectional scripts so as to enhance the equality of all official languages on the United Nations web site;

88. Notes with satisfaction that access to the Official Document System of the United Nations will be provided free to the public by the end of 2004, and requests the Secretary-General to report on progress to the Committee on Information at its twenty-seventh session;

89. Commends the Information Technology Services Division of the Office of Central Support Services of the Secretariat on its efforts to ensure that the required technological infrastructure is in place to accommodate the linkage of the Official Document System to the United Nations web site, and also commends the Department of Public Information for addressing issues of content management relating to that System;

90. Takes note of paragraph 56 of its resolution 58/270, in which it reaffirmed that the Official Document System of the United Nations, as an archival and retrieval system of official documents, should cover the entire Organization, and requests the Secretary-General to transmit the report requested in this regard to the Committee on Information at its twenty-seventh session;

91. Welcomes the electronic mail-based United Nations News Service, distributed worldwide through e-mail by the Department of Public Information, and requests the Department to provide this service in all official languages, ensuring that news-breaking stories and news alerts are accurate, impartial and free of bias;

92. Also welcomes the inclusion of news e-mail services in the English and French languages and the Secretary-General's intention to include the other official languages in these services by 2004;

93. Calls upon the Secretary-General to continue to work within the United Nations System Chief Executives Board for Coordination and other appropriate inter-agency bodies to establish a United Nations portal, an inter-agency search facility encompassing the public web sites of all United Nations system organizations, and requests the Secretary-General to report on this matter to the Committee on Information at its twenty-seventh session;

94. Reiterates its request to the Department of Public Information to encourage all United Nations system entities to participate in the United Nations system search pilot project, and requests the Secretary-General to report to the Committee on Information at its twenty-seventh session on the activities of the High-Level Committee on Management in this regard;

95. Reaffirms paragraph 42 of its resolution 58/270, in which it requested the Secretary-General to strengthen the web site through further redeployment to the required language posts;

VI

Library services

96. Welcomes the progress reported by the Secretary-General in his report on the modernization and integrated management of United Nations libraries and in-depth review of library activities, in particular the efforts to fill gaps in the Official Document System of the United Nations, establish common standards for indexing, cataloguing and collection development, produce a common list of serials, eliminate duplication in the acquisition of electronic information, create joint web pages and assess the needs of the smaller libraries of the Organization;

97. Also welcomes the creation of the Steering Committee for the Modernization and Integrated Management of United Nations Libraries, and commends the Steering Committee for its coordinating role and initial organizational efforts and for reaching agreement on an impressive programme of work;

98. Acknowledges that the Dag Hammarskjöld Library, as part of the Outreach Division of the Department of Public Information, endeavours to facilitate access to timely and up-to-date library products and services for use by delegates, permanent missions of Member States, the Secretariat, researchers and depository libraries worldwide, notes the continuing efforts of the Secretary-General to make the Library a virtual library with world outreach, reiterates the need to enable the provision of hard copies to Member States, subject to the relevant provisions of its resolution 57/283 B of 15 April 2003, and also notes the efforts of the Secretary-General to enrich, on a multilingual basis, the stock of books and journals in the Library, including publications on peace and security and development-related issues, in order to ensure that the Library continues to be a broadly accessible resource for information about the United Nations and its activities;

99. Calls upon the Department of Public Information to continue to lead the Steering Committee, encourages the member libraries of the Steering Committee to coordinate closely and to establish time frames for fulfilment of its programme of work, and requests the Secretary-General to report to the Committee on Information at its successive sessions on the activities of the Dag Hammarskjöld Library and the work of the Steering Committee;

100. Takes note of paragraph 50 of its resolution 58/270, in which it requested the Secretary-General to conduct, through the Office of Internal Oversight Services, a review of the operation and management of United Nations libraries, with a view to assessing staffing requirements for those libraries in the light of technological advances in the delivery of information services, and to report thereon to the General Assembly at its fifty-ninth session, and requests the Secretary-General to transmit that report to the Committee on Information at its twenty-seventh session;

101. Recognizes the importance of the depository libraries in disseminating information and knowledge about United Nations activities, and, in this connection, urges the Dag Hammarskjöld Library, in its capacity as the focal point, to take the initiatives necessary to strengthen such libraries by providing regional training and other assistance;

102. Notes the holding of training courses conducted by the Dag Hammarskjöld Library for the representatives of Member States and Secretariat staff on the use of Cyberseek, web search, the Intranet, United Nations documentation, United Nations Info Quest and the Official Document System of the United Nations;

103. Recalls paragraph 44 of its resolution 56/64 B of 24 December 2001, in which it welcomed the role of the Department of Public Information in fostering increased collaboration among libraries of the United Nations system, particularly in establishing one central system-wide online catalogue that would allow for the searching of the bibliographic records of all print holdings of all United Nations system libraries, commends the International Computing Centre for developing the United Nations System Shared Cataloguing and Public Access System, which provides a single point of access to library catalogues, indexes and abstract databases, library holdings, links to full-text resources and archives, also commends the Department for its role in the development of the United Nations System Shared Cataloguing and Public Access System, requests the Department to encourage all United Nations system organizations to participate in the System, and requests the Secretary-General to report to the Committee on Information at its twenty-seventh session in this regard;

104. Notes with appreciation the operation of a common library in Nairobi within existing resources, in line with the approach set out in paragraph 37 of the Secretary-General's report on the modernization and integrated management of United Nations libraries and in-depth review of library activities, and urges all United Nations offices in Nairobi to participate in and support this venture;

VII

Outreach services

105. Acknowledges that the outreach services, implemented by the Outreach Division of the Department of Public Information, continue to work towards promoting awareness of the role and work of the United Nations on priority issues;

106. Notes the importance of the continued implementation by the Department of Public Information of the ongoing programme for broadcasters and journalists from developing countries and countries in transition, as mandated by the General Assembly, and encourages the Department to consider how best to maximize the benefits derived from the programme by reviewing, inter alia, its duration and the number of its participants;

107. Recognizes the need for the Department of Public Information to increase its outreach services in all regions, and reiterates the need to include, in the reorientation of United Nations activities in the field of public information and communications, an analysis of the present reach and scope of the activities of the Department, identifying the widest possible spectrum of audiences and geographical areas that are not covered adequately and that may require special attention, including the appropriate means of communication and bearing in mind local language requirements;

108. Welcomes the movement towards educational outreach and the orientation of the UN Chronicle, both print and online editions, to this end;

109. Calls upon the Department of Public Information to strengthen its role as a focal point for two-way interaction with civil society relating to the priorities and concerns of the Organization;

110. Congratulates the United Nations Correspondents Association on its Dag Hammarskjöld Memorial Scholarship Fund, which sponsors journalists from developing countries to come to the United Nations Headquarters and report on the activities during the General Assembly, and urges donors to extend financial support to the Fund so that it may increase the number of such scholarships to journalists in this context;

111. Notes that the sixtieth anniversary of the founding of the United Nations will be observed in 2005, and requests the Department of Public Information to take necessary measures to publicize the occasion in every way possible, stressing the purposes and principles enshrined in the Charter of the United Nations and highlighting the accomplishments of the Organization in the past six decades;

VIII

Final remarks

112. Requests the Secretary-General to report to the Committee on Information at its twenty-seventh session and to the General Assembly at its sixtieth session on the activities of the Department of Public Information and on the implementation of the recommendations contained in the present resolution;

113. Requests the Committee on Information to report to the General Assembly at its sixtieth session;

114. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its sixtieth session the item entitled "Questions relating to information".

Reorientation of information and communications activities

In response to General Assembly resolution 58/101 B [YUN 2003, p. 623], the Secretary-General submitted a February report to the Committee on Information [A/AC.198/2004/2] detailing the steps taken since his previous report [YUN 2003, p. 630] towards the continuing reorientation of DPI.

DPI introduced the concept of the Secretariat departments as clients, identifying their own priorities, and DPI as service provider, working along clear guidelines provided by the departments. The client-consultation process was led by the Strategic Communications Division, created in 2003 [ibid.]. To facilitate that process, each client department was assigned to one of the four sections within the Division's Communications Campaign Service. Formal working arrangements had been established with 24 clients, and more than 30 strategies were prepared. Eighteen reports on the effectiveness of those strategies were sent to the client departments, seeking their feedback.

DPI strengthened its efforts to bring UN system members within a common communications framework, with UNCG being key to that objective. In terms of system-wide coordination, UNIC heads had become full-fledged members of UN country teams in developing countries and countries with economies in transition, and chaired or co-chaired nearly 80 per cent of the theme groups on public information and communications in the field. Cooperation with the country team had been further strengthened with the implementation of the recommendation of the Office of Internal Oversight Services (OIOS) that all field offices should produce annual work plans. Eighty-four per cent of UNICs submitted new work plans in 2003, containing client department information strategies aimed at giving field offices strategic guidance on UN priorities and helping them to focus their outreach activities. The rationalization of the UNIC network around regional hubs, an important element in the DPI reorientation process, started with the creation of a Western European hub, the Regional United Nations Information Centre in Brussels, Belgium, which began operations in 1 January. (For further information on UNIC regionalization, see p. 628.)

In response to Assembly resolutions 57/300 [YUN 2002, p. 1353] and 58/101 B [YUN 2003, p. 623], DPI, with OIOS support, developed an annual programme impact review of its products and services, the first of which was completed in January as an initial step in the three-year DPI/OIOS project. The review first sought to establish baseline data to track future performance. By the end of 2003, DPI had formulated 170 performance indicators. Over 30 performance indicators were designed to help link DPI's products and activities more precisely to the needs of target audiences through user feedback. Evaluation results would also be used by programme managers to direct the reallocation of resources based on programme performance. In recognition of DPI's efforts, the United Nations Foundation (see p. 892) established an award for the best research on the effectiveness and impact of UN public information and communications activities.

In continuing efforts to meet new communications challenges, including those resulting from the situation in Iraq (see p. 339) and UN strategic priorities, DPI undertook issue-specific communications campaigns and reached out to the public and the media in the Arab world, including through the designation of a focal point for Arab media.

DPI's support for peacekeeping focused on helping deploy public information components in new missions, including the development of their communications strategies and alignment of their work with strategic goals. It was building a strategy to publicize new peacekeeping activities, particularly in Africa, in order to garner support among key decision makers, in particular with regard to troop contributions and other assistance. DPI had also made a concerted effort to publicize UN counter-terrorism measures (see p. 76).

The Secretary-General described DPI's efforts to reach out to the media, build partnerships with the public and, led by the Dag Hammarskjöld Library, manage information and respond to the growing needs of delegations, Secretariat staff, scholars, depository libraries and the general public for library services. (For information on UN libraries, see p. 626.)

The report concluded that the reorientation and restructuring of DPI had helped the United Nations to move closer to achieving a key goal of the Secretary-General's reform proposals, namely, enhancing public information [YUN 2002, p. 1352]. A clearer conception of the Department's role and a more coherent elaboration of its functions had been established. With its activities aligned with its overall priorities, a more effective client consultation mechanism in place and system-wide coordination at all levels, DPI was better equipped to achieve its mandate. DPI sought to revitalize public confidence in the Organization by bringing the United Nations closer to the people.

DPI activities

In response to General Assembly resolution 58/101 B [YUN 2003, p. 623], the Secretary-General submitted an August report [A/59/221 & Corr.1] covering DPI's activities from July 2003 to June 2004 and the implementation of the resolution's recommendations. The report also included an overview of DPI's continuing efforts to promote and refine a culture of evaluation and performance management.

The Department's activities were organized within its four subprogrammes: strategic communications services, news services, library services and outreach services. A March note submitted by the Secretary-General to the Committee on Information [A/AC.198/2004/7] set out the proposed 2006-2007 strategic framework for DPI under programme 24, public information, covering the four subprogrammes.

Building international support for the most vulnerable countries remained a priority for DPI, and the Department worked to publicize the situation of least developed countries and other economic and social development issues. DPI, with the Millennium Campaign Office, strategized a system-wide effort to promote and boost implementation of the UN Millennium Development Goals [YUN 2000, p. 51], in preparation for the high-level Assembly event on the outcome of the 2000 Millennium Summit in September 2005. The situation in Africa and its needs continued to be a major focus of the Department's news-gathering and reporting activities.

During the year, DPI continued to initiate and coordinate multimedia activities on human rights, and assisted the UNIC network in promoting the commemoration of the tenth anniversary of the Rwanda genocide (see p. 159). It increased interdepartmental collaboration and production of targeted information materials on decolonization and maintained its focus on the question of Palestine.

Guided by the priorities of the UN Department of Peacekeeping Operations (DPKO), a major client department, DPI emphasized UN peacekeeping operations worldwide (see p. 81). It conducted assessment missions to plan for the public information aspects of UN operations in Côte d'Ivoire, Haiti and Liberia, and composed budgets, staffing tables and operational concepts for the information components of missions in those countries, as well as in Burundi, Iraq and the Sudan. A week-long training programme for 25 public information officers, organized with DPKO (Brindisi, Italy, June), focused on how to deploy full public information components during a mission's initial phase. DPI also placed special emphasis on promoting UN counter-terrorism work, convening an interdepartmental/inter-agency group to prepare a system-wide communications strategy to coordinate with and complement the revitalized Counter-Terrorism Committee (see p. 76). It continued to work closely with the Department for Disarmament Affairs to promote disarmament-related issues on the UN agenda. It also worked to explain and promote the UN political and humanitarian roles in Iraq.

DPI introduced a new electronic multimedia production system to streamline the work of its radio and photo services for more efficient delivery of radio programmes and photographs. United Nations Television continued to provide coverage of meetings, press conferences and special events at Headquarters. During the year, DPI expanded considerably its co-production efforts with major television broadcasters worldwide. As to United Nations Radio, the Assembly, in resolution 59/277 A (see p. 1381) of 23 December, approved the regular budget funding for the live radio project for the 2004-2005 biennium.

The UN web site had become a premier tool for reaching target audiences, including the media, non-governmental organizations (NGOs), academia and people worldwide. An ever-increasing number of visitors was using the official language sites, but the overall level of resources for the web site section would continue to constrain the pace of progress towards full parity across all languages. DPI was encouraging and assisting other Secretariat departments to make their information materials available on the web site in all official languages, and it expanded its partnership with the academic community worldwide to translate information materials. In an important step towards linguistic parity, DPI made the UN News Centre online portal and the associated UN News Service available in all official languages, and was working to further enhance the Centre's English and French e-mail service and to make it available in other official languages. Webcasts of General Assembly and Security Council meetings, daily press briefings, most press conferences and other public events were provided. The technical guidelines on web-site development issued by the Working Group on Internet Matters were being revised to incorporate requirements for access to the site by users with disabilities.

DPI continued to provide an intensive information programme for NGOs. During the year, it associated 62 new NGOs and disassociated 77 organizations that no longer met the criteria for association, bringing the total number of associated NGOs to 1,501 as at July 2004.

DPI offered information and activities for students of all ages, including through the Cyber-schoolbus web site of its Global Learning and Teaching Project, which was aimed at school-age children. The UN Chronicle strengthened its targeting of educators and institutions of higher education by featuring thematic clusters that could also be used as part of curricula. The UN Chronicle Feature Service continued to redisseminate, through UNICs, articles from eminent contributors to newspapers and magazines worldwide.

Library services

As at June 2004, there were 396 active UN depository libraries. During the period under review, 11 libraries converted from paper to electronic deposit, increasing the total number of electronic deposit recipients to 127. The Dag Hammarskjöld Library (DHL) conducted more than 100 training sessions for some 800 trainees, including Secretariat staff, mission personnel, government officials, interns, NGO representatives, depository librarians and visitors. It continued to expand its web-based services in the six official languages, the most significant change being the creation of automated daily updated linkages to all of the documentation of the Official Document System for all language versions. The Library set up focal points for the multilingual United Nations Bibliographic Information System (UNBIS) thesaurus in offices away from Headquarters to encourage their staff's participation in thesaurus development and to ensure that the terminology remained relevant to users. It brought high-quality commercial information resources to the desktops of official users. Acquisition of those services was coordinated by the United Nations System Electronic Information Acquisitions Consortium.

The Steering Committee for the Modernization and Integrated Management of United Nations Libraries, established in 2003 [YUN 2003, p. 635] and chaired by DPI, held five meetings from January 2003 to June 2004, covering a variety of technical and organizational issues. The Committee completed several initiatives, including the online UNBIS reference manuals and guides to cataloguing and indexing standards, which were made available on the UN Intranet. The Committee encouraged support for the creation of a common library in Nairobi, resulting in the redesignation of the United Nations Environment Programme Library—renamed the Sergio Vieira de Mello Library in June—as a common library for the United Nations Office at Nairobi.

Management of UN libraries

In response to General Assembly resolution 56/253 [YUN 2001, p. 1297], the Secretary-General submitted a February report to the Committee on Information on the modernization and integrated management of UN libraries and in-depth review of library activities [A/AC.198/

2004/4]. It provided background information on the mission of DHL and other UN libraries and on library services for permanent missions and Secretariat departments, the depository library system, reference services of UNICs and the relationship among the various UN libraries.

The survey indicated that services to departments, permanent missions and other clients could be improved or enhanced by launching regular electronic alerts of new information sources, services and acquisitions; increasing purchases of monographs and some serials on subjects related to substantive work; increasing specialized online services; disseminating information selectively from online databases; and increasing technical cooperation with departments in cataloguing, digitization and other areas.

Regarding the relationship among DHL, UNICs and depository libraries, the survey found that, despite the achievements of individual libraries, UN libraries had been operating independently, with limited coordination or common direction and costly modernization being undertaken by each library. While the Internet and other communication technologies provided opportunities for greater synergy and integration among UN libraries, closer coordination might allow them to share knowledge more effectively, promote knowledge sharing within the Secretariat, provide better library services to delegates and staff, enhance multilingualism, achieve greater outreach to the public and contribute to bridging the digital divide in Member States. Although better coordination would lead to some savings, a significant investment would be required to enhance online services and create a more electronic environment. The survey made clear that cooperation between Headquarters and the field and among the libraries at the various duty stations could be improved and identified areas of further collaboration.

The report provided information on recent achievements of the Steering Committee for the Modernization and Integrated Management of United Nations Libraries in all major areas of library activity, including an initial research gateway web page in the six official languages; a common list of serial holdings; a manual for bibliographic description posted on the Intranet; and the identification of additional online services to be acquired through the United Nations System Electronic Information Acquisition Consortium. To serve library users more effectively, however, the member libraries and the Steering Committee needed to, among other efforts, increase print acquisitions; substantially increase access to commercial online services; promote the acquisition of software to permit the generation of automatic electronic alerts from databases; and hold regional training courses for depository librarians, videoconferences and annual meetings of the Steering Committee. The objective was to move further in the direction of a virtual library network, with resources that could be shared across duty stations, while not neglecting the print resources required by local users.

At the inter-agency level, the Acquisition Consortium needed to be expanded to include a richer menu of products and services. The United Nations Libraries Shared Cataloguing and Public Access System should be expanded and re-engineered, and funding needed to be identified for that purpose.

The report recommended that UN libraries and those of the UN system agencies, working in concert, should bring their expertise in information management to bear in the development of knowledge-sharing initiatives.

OIOS report. Pursuant to resolution 58/270 [YUN 2003, p. 1399], the Secretary-General, in September, transmitted the OIOS report on the review of the operations and management of UN libraries [A/59/373]. The review assessed the staffing requirements for UN libraries in the light of technological advances in the delivery of information services, focusing on DHL and the Library of the United Nations Office at Geneva (UNOG Library), which together accounted for 75 per cent of UN library staff. OIOS also surveyed six other UN libraries. The report covered the organization and current levels of automation of UN libraries, additional automation needed for specific operations and staffing requirements in the light of advanced technologies. The draft report was discussed with DPI and UNOG Library officials, and their comments were included in the final report.

OIOS reported that an accurate assessment of the staffing requirements of UN libraries was not possible at the time of the review because the libraries had not fully adapted their operations to the use of advanced technologies and the Internet. DHL and the UNOG Library had implemented state-of-the-art automation systems and were providing electronic access to their bibliographic databases to users worldwide, but most of the other libraries generally lagged behind in introducing more advanced technology, owing to their small size and budgetary constraints. The review found that a comprehensive automation strategy that encouraged harmonization and resource-sharing would ensure quicker and more efficient implementation of advanced technology by the other UN system libraries.

The review also found that the weakness of the performance management systems impeded an assessment of the staffing requirements of UN libraries. Common workload and productivity standards and data for assessing staffing requirements were not properly developed, and there were large disparities in productivity levels between DHL and the UNOG Library, indicating the need for harmonization of working methods and performance management.

In the view of OIOS, the Steering Committee for the Modernization and Integrated Management of United Nations Libraries could be entrusted with the preparation of a new UN library policy. However, to achieve its goals, the Steering Committee needed to prepare a timetable of expected results in its action plan, supported by the necessary resources. The libraries of the UN specialized agencies should be invited to participate in the work of the Steering Committee in order to attain a more comprehensive modernization and integration of UN libraries.

The report concluded that the functioning of the Steering Committee could be made more effective, thereby strengthening cooperation among UN libraries. The use of advanced technology in the delivery of information services was limited by the number of documents available in electronic formats, and the transfer of the old catalogues and documents to those formats could be expedited through more robust project management. The full extent of those tasks should be accurately determined, a timetable and strategy for completing them formulated, and the amount of required resources determined and mobilized. A concrete and comprehensive automation strategy should be developed with specific goals in terms of improved services and the level of resources required. To support new DHL and UNOG Library strategies for delivering information services, the assessment of resource requirements should be based on realistic workload indicators for major library functions.

The Secretary-General, in his transmittal note, said that he concurred with the recommendations, which would contribute to more comprehensive cooperation among UN libraries and increased efficiency.

UN information centres

In line with the Secretary-General's reform plans [YUN 2002, p. 585], DPI took the first step to rationalize the network of information centres by closing nine offices in Western Europe and establishing the Regional United Nations Information Centre in Brussels on 1 January. The legacies of the closed centres were transferred to the new regional centre, enabling it to continue servicing its audiences in Western Europe.

During the year, the ability of UNICs to maintain outreach services and sustain regular activities was severely limited by the significant reduction in operational funds, resulting from the cut of $2 million from the 2004-2005 biennial budget by the General Assembly in resolution 58/270 [YUN 2003, p. 1399]. However, they continued to strengthen their partnerships with UN country teams. During the period under review, UNICs reported 170 instances of providing support to the country launches of major UN reports, and UNIC staff chaired or co-chaired more than 70 per cent of the theme groups on public information established by country teams. To further strengthen their partnership at the country level, DPI and the United Nations Development Programme (UNDP) consulted regularly at Headquarters, and resident coordinators were briefed by the Department when they visited Headquarters. DPI also resumed its participation in the inter-agency Working Group on Common Premises and Services, in order to play an active role in decisions taken in the field. UNICs continued to work intensively to brief media representatives and involve them in a dialogue on priority UN issues.

By decision 58/564 B of 8 April, the General Assembly decided to defer until its fifty-ninth (2004) session consideration of the 2003 OIOS report on the review of the structure and operations of UNICs [YUN 2003, p. 636].

Regionalization of UN information centres

Pursuant to General Assembly resolutions 57/300 [YUN 2002, p. 1353] and 58/101 B [YUN 2003, p. 623], the Secretary-General submitted to the Committee on Information a February report on the regionalization of the UNIC network [A/AC.198/2004/3]. The report detailed progress made in the implementation of the UNIC regionalization initiative in Western Europe [YUN 2003, p. 637] and in other high-cost developed countries, and set out the proposed strategy and modalities for implementation in other regions. It also followed up on the 2003 OIOS recommendations to streamline and revitalize UNIC operations [YUN 2003, p. 636]. An annex to the report contained information on UNICs and UN houses.

On 1 January, DPI established a regional UNIC in Brussels. The UN information services in Geneva and Vienna, which supported the UN Offices in those cities, were not affected. Under the terms of an agreement concluded with the Secretary-General, Belgium would provide rent-free premises to the centre and an annual cash contribution of $50,000 for the next four years for the translation of information materials into local languages. As the regional centre had only been in operation for two months at the time of the submission of the report, it was too early to evaluate the success of the regionalization initiative in Western Europe and its impact on DPI's work.

Reporting on the implementation of a similar approach in other high-cost developed countries, as requested in resolution 58/101 B, the Secretary-General said that DPI had successfully negotiated an agreement with Australia to relocate the UNIC in Sydney to rent-free premises in Canberra, thereby releasing funds for programme activities in the Pacific region, including seven developing countries, and enabling the centre to better fulfil its role as a regional information centre. As to the UNIC in Tokyo, DPI saw no advantage in changing the current arrangements in view of Japan's role in international affairs, including as a major donor, and its financial support to the centre. As the Secretariat considered the liaison work undertaken in the host country by the UNIC in Washington, D.C., to be vital, the Secretary-General intended to pursue other cost-saving measures, including a reduction in rented office space.

With regard to centres in countries with economies in transition, the Secretary-General said that the well-established UNIC in Moscow was a natural candidate to become a regional centre. In due course and after consultations with the Governments concerned, DPI expected to make proposals regarding the future of the UNICs in Bucharest, Romania; Prague, Czech Republic; Warsaw, Poland; and Ankara, Turkey.

An analysis of the situation of UNICs in other regions showed that the existing network of information centres could not, within available resources, meet the outreach challenges for which it was established and therefore needed to be reconfigured. Regionalization in developing countries would strengthen the flow and exchange of information and improve access to information on the United Nations for people not currently well served by the UNICs, without reducing service to countries that found the current arrangements satisfactory. To meet those objectives and to make the most effective use of scarce resources, the Secretary-General said that resources should be distributed on the basis of a new model that would include a number of strategically located regional hubs.

As a preliminary step towards implementation of the new model, DPI would use the three senior posts released with the establishment of the regional hub in Brussels to strengthen the capacity of UNICs in cities that were regional media hubs in the Middle East and Arab region (Cairo, Egypt), Latin America and the Caribbean (Mexico City) and Africa (Addis Ababa, Ethiopia), though further resources would be needed for the latter to function effectively. Pending consultations with Member States on further regionalization, those UNICs would not, for the time being, be formally designated as regional centres, but they would be asked to develop strategies for strengthening the UN regional information capacity and outreach programmes for their respective regions.

Under the new model, DPI proposed establishing regional information centres in key media hubs in developing countries, using the guidelines and criteria for the regionalization of UNICs, which were annexed to the Secretary-General's report. Unlike the Western European model, the developing country model would consist of a significant number of small hubs, located so as to ensure that distance and linguistic diversity did not inhibit their operation. UNICs in the regions covered by the hubs would, for the most part, be closed, but DPI's national information staff would remain in the country, working out of the offices of the resident coordinators, serving as an integral part of the country team. The proposed model would take full advantage of the resident coordinator infrastructure and allow collaboration with the United Nations Development Group. The regional hub would, among other duties, develop and implement region-wide communications campaigns and provide programme and administrative support to the national information staff. It was proposed that the model be applied to all the countries currently served by UNICs. Details concerning the division of responsibilities between the regional information centres and national information staff were provided in an annex to the report.

DPI intended to tailor the regionalization concept to the diverse geographic and cultural characteristics of each region. The Secretary-General's report provided preliminary proposals for the possible locations of regional centres in the League of Arab States region and in the Asian, Latin American and Caribbean, and African States regions.

Development of UN websites

The Secretary-General, responding to General Assembly resolution 58/270 [YUN 2003, p. 1399] and decision 57/579 [YUN 2002, p. 589], submitted a September report [A/59/336] on strengthening DPI, within existing capacity, to support and enhance the UN website in all official languages: status of implementation. The Secretary-General said that DPI was continuing to make all efforts to strengthen the UN website in all official languages, being mindful of the need to strike a balance between other mandated activities competing for resources. Progress had been made through staff redeployment and other innovative measures to expand the volume of material in languages other than English, such as expanding the UN News Service web page into all official languages, undertaking major technological improvements to enhance productivity and facilitate the availability of materials in all official languages and putting into place other arrangements, such as agreements with universities for translations of information materials free of cost. Those efforts had resulted in a significant increase in the number of pages processed for posting in each of the languages. DPI was also facing expanded responsibilities and an increase in the workload required to ensure continued maintenance of the website, severely challenging its current resources. However, it was not in a position to redeploy more resources to meet that increasing challenge without adversely affecting other mandated programmes and activities.

The Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions (ACABQ), in November [A/59/558], recommended that the Assembly take note of the Secretary-General's report.

The Assembly, in section IX of resolution 59/276 of 23 December (see p. 1383), took note of the Secretary-General's report and that of ACABQ, and requested the Secretary-General to submit proposals for strengthening the UN web site within the context of the 2006-2007 proposed programme budget.

UN Communications Group

The United Nations Communications Group (UNCG), established in 2002 [YUN 2002, p. 589], at its third annual meeting (Nairobi, Kenya, 24-25 June) [A/AC.198/2005/5], discussed information strategies to be adopted and tools to be used for their implementation in the evolving political and media environment. It agreed that one of the key communications challenges facing the UN system was drawing world attention to the many untold or underreported stories relating to the work of the United Nations, and that the Group should continue to be used as the common UN system platform for that purpose. An initiative launched by the Under-Secretary-General for Communications and Public Information on World Press Freedom Day 2004 (3 May)—“Top Ten Stories the World Should Hear More About”—was a useful tool that should be continued and strengthened.

With regard to Africa and the New Partnership for Africa's Development (NEPAD) (see p. 629), UNCG agreed that UN communicators should convey clear, simple and consistent messages that would help the African people to understand their responsibilities in shaping their future. It decided that a proposed advocacy and communications strategy being developed by the NEPAD secretariat and the UN Office of the Special Adviser on Africa would form the general framework for a common UN system communications strategy for NEPAD. The meeting considered a communications strategy for the Millennium Development Goals (MDGs) Campaign, which, it agreed, was to generate awareness and mobilization around the MDGs [YUN 2000, p. 51] globally and nationally, and build support for the 2005 follow-up to the outcome of the 2000 Millennium Summit [ibid., p. 47]. The Campaign should have a visual identity and common slogan, and a clearing house would be established within DPI to maintain a central list and calendar of UN system events and promotional initiatives. UNCG agreed to promote the Fifteenth International AIDS Conference in Bangkok (11-16 July) and other activities of the Global Media AIDS Initiative, which grew out of a meeting of high-level media executives and the Secretary-General (New York, 15 January). UNCG would introduce a new calendar of media events before the end of 2004. The UNCG Consultative Group for Expo 2005, to be held in Aichi, Japan, from 25 March to 25 September 2005, would remain the principal forum for consultation and coordination for the Expo. The Group agreed to examine ways to increase its contributions to the United Nations Non-Governmental Liaison Service and asked the Service to pursue alternative sources of funding.

The meeting agreed that global public opinion polls could serve to evaluate the impact of past UN communications efforts and that the work of the UNCG task force on public opinion surveys, led by UNDP, should be strengthened. It recommended that the task force contact internationally known pollsters, in addition to those that had already been approached, for pro bono surveys on UN-related questions. It also agreed to support the promotion of the United Nations Environment Programme International Photographic Competition on the Environment 2004-2005 and the Summit on a Mine-Free World (Nairobi, 29 November-3 December). Other decisions dealt with the development and adoption of common UN system guidelines on the use and distribution of UN photos, and media accreditation at UN meetings. UNCG agreed to hold its next annual meeting in Geneva in July 2005.

During its 2004 session, the Committee on Information [A/59/21] considered the Secretary-General's report on UNCG's 2003 activities [A/AC.198/2004/5].

Publicizing the work of the General Assembly

In response to General Assembly resolution 58/126 [YUN 2003, p. 1389], the Secretary-General, in a February report [A/AC.198/2004/6], described current DPI activities for publicizing the Assembly's work and decisions and presented recommendations for developing a communications strategy to further publicize the activities, addressing issues of staffing, the website of the Assembly President and media relations. The report called for a closer working relationship between the Office of the Assembly President and DPI.

Information and communications in the context of international security

In response to General Assembly resolution 58/32 [YUN 2003, p. 639], the Secretary-General, in a June report and later addendum [A/59/116 & Add.1], transmitted the views of 10 Member States on the general appreciation of the issues of information security; the definition of basic notions related to information security, including unauthorized interference with or misuse of information and telecommunication systems and information resources; and the context of relevant international concepts aimed at strengthening the security of global information and telecommunication systems. Pursuant to resolution 58/32, the Secretary-General appointed the Group of Governmental Experts on Developments in the Field of Information and Telecommunications in the Context of International Security to assist in a study of existing and potential threats in the sphere of information security and possible cooperative measures to address them. The Group held its first session in New York from 12 to 16 July; it would meet twice more in 2005 and submit a report to the sixtieth (2005) session of the Assembly.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 3 December [meeting 66], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the First (Disarmament and International Security) Committee [A/59/454], adopted resolution 59/61 without vote [agenda item 60].

Developments in the field of information and telecommunications in the context of international security

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 53/70 of 4 December 1998, 54/49 of 1 December 1999, 55/28 of 20 November 2000, 56/19 of 29 November 2001, 57/53 of 22 November 2002 and 58/32 of 8 December 2003,

Recalling also its resolutions on the role of science and technology in the context of international security, in which, inter alia, it recognized that scientific and technological developments could have both civilian and military applications and that progress in science and technology for civilian applications needed to be maintained and encouraged,

Noting that considerable progress has been achieved in developing and applying the latest information technologies and means of telecommunication,

Affirming that it sees in this process the broadest positive opportunities for the further development of civilization, the expansion of opportunities for co-operation for the common good of all States, the enhancement of the creative potential of humankind and additional improvements in the circulation of information in the global community,

Recalling, in this connection, the approaches and principles outlined at the Information Society and Development Conference, held in Midrand, South Africa, from 13 to 15 May 1996,

Bearing in mind the results of the Ministerial Conference on Terrorism, held in Paris on 30 July 1996, and the recommendations that it made,

Noting that the dissemination and use of information technologies and means affect the interests of the entire international community and that optimum effectiveness is enhanced by broad international co-operation,

Expressing its concern that these technologies and means can potentially be used for purposes that are inconsistent with the objectives of maintaining international stability and security and may adversely affect the integrity of the infrastructure of States to the detriment of their security in both civil and military fields,

Considering that it is necessary to prevent the use of information resources or technologies for criminal or terrorist purposes,

Noting the contribution of those Member States that have submitted their assessments on issues of information security to the Secretary-General pursuant to paragraphs 1 to 3 of resolutions 53/70, 54/49, 55/28, 56/19, 57/53 and 58/32,

Taking note of the reports of the Secretary-General containing those assessments,

Welcoming the initiative taken by the Secretariat and the United Nations Institute for Disarmament Research in convening an international meeting of experts in Geneva in August 1999 on developments in the field of information and telecommunications in the context of international security, as well as its results,

Considering that the assessments of the Member States contained in the reports of the Secretary-General and the international meeting of experts have contributed to a better understanding of the substance of issues of international information security and related notions,

1. Calls upon Member States to promote further at multilateral levels the consideration of existing and potential threats in the field of information security, as well as possible measures to limit the threats emerging in this field, consistent with the need to preserve the free flow of information;

2. Considers that the purpose of such measures could be served through the examination of relevant international concepts aimed at strengthening the security of global information and telecommunications systems;

3. Invites all Member States to continue to inform the Secretary-General of their views and assessments on the following questions:

(a) General appreciation of the issues of information security;

(b) Definition of basic notions related to information security, including unauthorized interference with or misuse of information and telecommunications systems and information resources;

(c) The content of the concepts mentioned in paragraph 2 above;

4. Notes with satisfaction that the Secretary-General is considering existing and potential threats in the sphere of information security and possible cooperative measures to address them, and is conducting a study on the concepts referred to in paragraph 2 above, with the assistance of the group of governmental experts, established in 2004 pursuant to resolution 58/32, and will submit a report on the outcome of the study to the General Assembly at its sixtieth session;

5. Also notes with satisfaction that the group of governmental experts established by the Secretary-General held its first session from 12 to 16 July 2004 in New York and that it intends to convene two more sessions in 2005 to fulfil its mandate specified in resolution 58/32;

6. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its sixtieth session the item entitled "Developments in the field of information and telecommunications in the context of international security".

Science and technology in international security and disarmament

On 3 December [meeting 66], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the First Committee [A/59/455], adopted resolution 59/62 by recorded vote (106-48-21) [agenda item 61].

Role of science and technology in the context of international security and disarmament

The General Assembly,

Recognizing that scientific and technological developments can have both civilian and military applications and that progress in science and technology for civilian applications needs to be maintained and encouraged,

Concerned that military applications of scientific and technological developments can contribute significantly to the improvement and upgrading of advanced weapons systems and, in particular, weapons of mass destruction,

Aware of the need to follow closely the scientific and technological developments that may have a negative impact on international security and disarmament, and to channel scientific and technological developments for beneficial purposes,

Cognizant that international transfers of dual-use as well as high-technology products, services and know-how for peaceful purposes are important for the economic and social development of States,

Also cognizant of the need to regulate such transfers of dual-use goods and technologies and high technology with military applications through multilaterally negotiated, universally applicable, non-discriminatory guidelines,

Expressing its concern about the growing proliferation of ad hoc and exclusive export control regimes and arrangements for dual-use goods and technologies, which tend to impede the economic and social development of developing countries,

Recalling that in the Final Document of the Thirteenth Conference of Heads of State or Government of Non-Aligned Countries, held in Kuala Lumpur from 20 to 25 February 2003, and in the Final Document of the Fourteenth Ministerial Conference of the Movement of Non-Aligned Countries, held in Durban, South Africa, from 17 to 19 August 2004, it was again noted with concern that undue restrictions on exports to developing countries of material, equipment and technology for peaceful purposes persisted,

Emphasizing that internationally negotiated guidelines for the transfer of high technology with military applications should take into account the legitimate defence requirements of all States and the requirements for the maintenance of international peace and security, while ensuring that access to high-technology products and services and know-how for peaceful purposes is not denied,

1. Affirms that scientific and technological progress should be used for the benefit of all mankind to promote the sustainable economic and social development of all States and to safeguard international security, and that international cooperation in the use of science and technology through the transfer and exchange of technological know-how for peaceful purposes should be promoted;

2. Invites Member States to undertake additional efforts to apply science and technology for disarmament-related purposes and to make disarmament-related technologies available to interested States;

3. Urges Member States to undertake multilateral negotiations with the participation of all interested States in order to establish universally acceptable, non-discriminatory guidelines for international transfers of dual-use goods and technologies and high technology with military applications;

4. Encourages United Nations bodies to contribute, within existing mandates, to promoting the application of science and technology for peaceful purposes;

5. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its sixtieth session the item entitled "Role of science and technology in the context of international security and disarmament".

RECORDED VOTE ON RESOLUTION 59/62:

In favour: Afghanistan, Algeria, Angola, Antigua and Barbuda, Bahamas, Bahrain, Bangladesh, Barbados, Belize, Benin, Bhutan, Bolivia, Brazil, Brunei Darussalam, Burkina Faso, Burundi, Cambodia, Cameroon, Cape Verde, Central African Republic, China, Colombia, Comoros, Congo, Costa Rica, Côte d'Ivoire, Cuba, Democratic People's Republic of Korea, Djibouti, Dominican Republic, Ecuador, Egypt, El Salvador, Equatorial Guinea, Eritrea, Ethiopia, Fiji, Gabon, Gambia, Ghana, Grenada, Guatemala, Guinea-Bissau, Guyana, Honduras, India, Indonesia, Iran, Iraq, Jamaica, Jordan, Kenya, Kuwait, Lao People's Democratic Republic, Lebanon, Lesotho, Liberia, Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Madagascar, Malaysia, Maldives, Mali, Mauritius, Mexico, Mongolia, Morocco, Mozambique, Myanmar, Namibia, Nepal, Nicaragua, Nigeria, Oman, Pakistan, Panama, Peru, Philippines, Qatar, Rwanda, Saint Kitts and Nevis, Saint Lucia, Saint Vincent and the Grenadines, Sao Tome and Principe, Saudi Arabia, Senegal, Sierra Leone, Singapore, Somalia, Sri Lanka, Sudan,

Peaceful uses of outer space

The Committee on the Peaceful Uses of Outer Space (Committee on Outer Space), at its forty-seventh session (Vienna, 2-11 June) [A/59/20], discussed ways to maintain outer space for peaceful purposes, the spin-off benefits of space technology, space and society, and space and water. It examined the implementation of the recommendations of the Third (1999) United Nations Conference on the Exploration and Peaceful Uses of Outer Space (UNISPACE III) [YUN 1999, p. 556], and reviewed the work of its two subcommittees, one dealing with scientific and technical issues (see p. 638) and the other with legal questions (see p. 641).

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 10 December [meeting 71], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fourth Committee [A/59/469], adopted resolution 59/116 without vote [agenda item 74].

International cooperation in the peaceful uses of outer space

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 51/122 of 13 December 1996, 54/68 of 6 December 1999 and 58/89 of 9 December 2003,

Deeply convinced of the common interest of mankind in promoting and expanding the exploration and use of outer space, as the province of all mankind, for peaceful purposes and in continuing efforts to extend to all States the benefits derived therefrom, and also of the importance of international cooperation in this field, for which the United Nations should continue to provide a focal point,

Reaffirming the importance of international cooperation in developing the rule of law, including the relevant norms of space law and their important role in international cooperation for the exploration and use of outer space for peaceful purposes, and of the widest possible adherence to international treaties that promote the peaceful uses of outer space in order to meet emerging new challenges, especially for developing countries,

Seriously concerned about the possibility of an arms race in outer space, and bearing in mind the importance of article IV of the Treaty on Principles Governing the Activities of States in the Exploration and Use of Outer Space, including the Moon and Other Celestial Bodies,

Recognizing that all States, in particular those with major space capabilities, should contribute actively to the goal of preventing an arms race in outer space as an essential condition for the promotion and strengthening of international cooperation in the exploration and use of outer space for peaceful purposes,

Considering that space debris is an issue of concern to all nations,

Noting the progress achieved in the further development of peaceful space exploration and applications as well as in various national and cooperative space projects, which contributes to international cooperation, and the importance of further developing the legal framework to strengthen international cooperation in this field,

Convinced of the importance of the recommendations in the resolution entitled "The Space Millennium: Vienna Declaration on Space and Human Development", adopted by the Third United Nations Conference on the Exploration and Peaceful Uses of Outer Space (UNISPACE III), held at Vienna from 19 to 30 July 1999, and the need to promote the use of space technology towards implementing the United Nations Millennium Declaration,

Convinced also that the use of space science and technology and their applications, in such areas as telemedicine, tele-education and disaster management, and environmental protection as well as other Earth observation applications, contribute to achieving the objectives of the global conferences of the United Nations that address various aspects of economic, social and cultural development, inter alia, poverty eradication,

Having considered the report of the Committee on the Peaceful Uses of Outer Space on the work of its forty-seventh session,

1. Endorses the report of the Committee on the Peaceful Uses of Outer Space on the work of its forty-seventh session;

2. Urges States that have not yet become parties to the international treaties governing the uses of outer space to give consideration to ratifying or acceding to those treaties as well as incorporating them in their national legislation;

3. Notes that, at its forty-third session, the Legal Subcommittee of the Committee on the Peaceful Uses of Outer Space continued its work, as mandated by the General Assembly in its resolution 58/89;

4. Requests the Secretary-General to send to the Ministers for Foreign Affairs of States that have not yet become parties to the above-mentioned international treaties, the letter and document, as endorsed by the Legal Subcommittee, encouraging their States to participate in those treaties, and to send a similar letter to intergovernmental organizations that have not yet declared their acceptance of the rights and obligations under those treaties;

5. Endorses the recommendation of the Committee that the Legal Subcommittee, at its forty-fourth session, taking into account the concerns of all countries, in particular those of developing countries:

- (a) Consider the following as regular agenda items:
 - (i) General exchange of views;
 - (ii) Status and application of the five United Nations treaties on outer space;
 - (iii) Information on the activities of international organizations relating to space law;
 - (iv) Matters relating to:
 - a. The definition and delimitation of outer space;
 - b. The character and utilization of the geostationary orbit, including consideration of ways and means to ensure the rational and equitable use of the geostationary orbit without prejudice to the role of the International Telecommunication Union;
- (b) Consider the following single issues/items for discussion:
 - (i) Review and possible revision of the Principles Relevant to the Use of Nuclear Power Sources in Outer Space;
 - (ii) Examination of the preliminary draft protocol on matters specific to space assets to the Convention on International Interests in Mobile Equipment, opened for signature at Cape Town, South Africa, on 16 November 2001:
 - a. Considerations relating to the possibility of the United Nations serving as supervisory authority under the future protocol;
 - b. Considerations relating to the relationship between the terms of the future protocol and the rights and obligations of States under the legal regime applicable to outer space;
 - (c) Consider the practice of States and international organizations in registering space objects in accordance with the work plan adopted by the Committee;
6. Notes that the Legal Subcommittee, at its forty-fourth session, will submit its proposals to the Committee for new items to be considered by the Subcommittee at its forty-fifth session in 2006;
7. Also notes that, in the context of paragraph 5 (a) (ii) above, the Legal Subcommittee at its forty-fourth session will reconvene its Working Group and review the need to extend the mandate of the Working Group beyond that session of the Subcommittee;
8. Further notes that, in the context of paragraph 5 (a) (iv) a. above, the Legal Subcommittee will reconvene its Working Group on the item only to consider matters relating to the definition and delimitation of outer space;
9. Notes that the Legal Subcommittee will reconvene its Working Group to consider the questions reflected in paragraphs 5 (b) (ii) a. and b. above separately;
10. Endorses the recommendation of the Legal Subcommittee, in the context of paragraph 5 (b) (ii) a. above, to establish an open-ended ad hoc working group to continue between the forty-third and forty-fourth sessions of the Subcommittee, the consideration of the question of the appropriateness of the United Nations acting as supervisory authority, and notes that the working group would prepare a report, including the text of a draft resolution, to be submitted to the Subcommittee for consideration at its forty-fourth session;
11. Agrees that, in the context of paragraph 5 (c) above, the Legal Subcommittee should establish a working group in accordance with the work plan adopted by the Committee;

12. Notes that the Scientific and Technical Subcommittee, at its forty-first session, continued its work as mandated by the General Assembly in its resolution 58/89;

13. Endorses the recommendation of the Committee that the Scientific and Technical Subcommittee, at its forty-second session, taking into account the concerns of all countries, in particular those of developing countries:

- (a) Consider the following items:
 - (i) General exchange of views and introduction to reports submitted on national activities;
 - (ii) United Nations Programme on Space Applications;
 - (iii) Implementation of the recommendations of the Third United Nations Conference on the Exploration and Peaceful Uses of Outer Space (UNISPACE III);
 - (iv) Matters relating to remote-sensing of the Earth by satellite, including applications for developing countries and monitoring of the Earth's environment;
- (b) Consider the following items in accordance with the work plans adopted by the Committee:
 - (i) Space debris;
 - (ii) Use of nuclear power sources in outer space;
 - (iii) Space-system-based telemedicine;
 - (iv) Near-Earth objects;
 - (v) Space-system-based disaster management support;
- (c) Consider the following single issues/items for discussion:
 - (i) Examination of the physical nature and technical attributes of the geostationary orbit and its utilization and applications, including, inter alia, in the field of space communications, as well as other questions relating to developments in space communications, taking particular account of the needs and interests of developing countries;
 - (ii) Support to proclaim the year 2007 the International Geophysical and Heliophysical Year;

14. Notes that the Scientific and Technical Subcommittee at its forty-second session will submit its proposal to the Committee for a draft provisional agenda for the forty-third session of the Subcommittee, in 2006;

15. Endorses the recommendation of the Committee that the Committee on Space Research and the International Astronautical Federation, in liaison with member States, be invited to arrange a symposium to address high-resolution and hyperspectral satellite data integration for precision farming, environmental monitoring and possible new applications, with as wide a participation as possible, to be held during the first week of the forty-second session of the Scientific and Technical Subcommittee;

16. Agrees that, in the context of paragraphs 13 (a) (ii) and (iii) and 14 above, the Scientific and Technical Subcommittee at its forty-second session should reconvene the Working Group of the Whole;

17. Also agrees that, in the context of paragraph 13 (b) (i) above, the Scientific and Technical Subcommittee, at its forty-second session, should reconvene the Working Group on Space Debris to consider, as necessary, the proposals of the Inter-Agency Space Debris Coordination Committee on space debris mitigation and any related comments that might be received;

18. Further agrees that, in the context of paragraph 13 (b) (ii) above, the Scientific and Technical Subcommittee at its forty-second session, should reconvene its Working Group on the Use of Nuclear Power Sources in Outer Space;

19. Endorses the United Nations Programme on Space Applications for 2005, as proposed to the Committee by the Expert on Space Applications and endorsed by the Committee;

20. Notes with satisfaction that, in accordance with paragraph 30 of General Assembly resolution 50/27 of 6 December 1995, the African regional centres for space science and technology education, in the French language and in the English language, located in Morocco and Nigeria, respectively, as well as the Centre for Space Science and Technology Education in Asia and the Pacific and the Regional Centre for Space Science and Technology Education for Latin America and the Caribbean, continued their education programmes in 2004, that all the above regional centres have entered into an affiliation agreement with the Office for Outer Space Affairs of the Secretariat, and that the Office is providing technical support to the Government of Jordan for the establishment of the regional centre for space science and technology education for Western Asia;

21. Welcomes the memorandum of understanding between the Office for Outer Space Affairs of the Secretariat and the Pro Tempore Secretariat of the Fourth Space Conference of the Americas, under which the parties demonstrated their intention to collaborate in promoting and implementing joint activities, and invites the Pro Tempore Secretariat to inform the Committee of the work accomplished;

22. Notes with satisfaction that the Government of Ecuador is considering positively hosting the Fifth Space Conference of the Americas, to be held in Quito in the second half of 2005 or in 2006, and that the convening of the Conference will be in accordance with the desire of Member States in the Latin American and Caribbean region to institutionalize the Space Conference of the Americas;

23. Also notes with satisfaction that concerning the report on the review of the implementation of the recommendations of UNISPACE III, the Committee, at its forty-seventh session, approved the draft report of the Committee as finalized by the Working Group which was reconvened at that session to prepare the report, and submitted the report to the General Assembly for use in its review and appraisal of the implementation of the recommendations of UNISPACE III at its fifty-ninth session;

24. Recommends that more attention be paid and political support be provided to all matters relating to the protection and the preservation of the outer space environment, especially those potentially affecting the Earth's environment;

25. Considers that it is essential that Member States pay more attention to the problem of collisions of space objects, including those with nuclear power sources, with space debris, and other aspects of space debris, calls for the continuation of national research on this question, for the development of improved technology for the monitoring of space debris and for the compilation and dissemination of data on space debris, also considers that, to the extent possible, information thereon should be provided to the Scientific and Technical Subcommittee, and agrees that international cooperation is needed to expand appropriate and affordable strategies to minimize the impact of space debris on future space missions;

26. Urges all States, in particular those with major space capabilities, to contribute actively to the goal of preventing an arms race in outer space as an essential condition for the promotion of international cooperation in the exploration and use of outer space for peaceful purposes;

27. Emphasizes the need to increase the benefits of space technology and its applications and to contribute to an orderly growth of space activities favourable to sustained economic growth and sustainable development in all countries, including mitigation of the consequences of disasters, in particular in the developing countries;

28. Notes that space science and technology and their applications could make important contributions to economic, social and cultural development and welfare as indicated in the resolution entitled "The Space Millennium: Vienna Declaration on Space and Human Development", notes with satisfaction the convening of a conference entitled "International Conference on Space and Water: Towards Sustainable Development and Human Security" in the context of the International Air and Space Fair, held at Santiago de Chile from 29 March to 4 April 2004, and also notes that the next Fair will be held in 2006;

29. Notes with satisfaction the convening of the International Seminar on Satellite Technology Applications in Communications and Remote Sensing in Tehran, Islamic Republic of Iran, in October 2004 in cooperation with the Inter-Islamic Network on Space Sciences and Technology;

30. Agrees that the benefits of space technology and its applications should be prominently brought to the attention of conferences organized within the United Nations system to address global issues relating to social, economic and cultural development and that the use of space technology should be promoted towards achieving the objectives of those conferences and implementing the United Nations Millennium Declaration;

31. Notes with satisfaction the increased efforts of the Committee and its Scientific and Technical Subcommittee as well as the Office for Outer Space Affairs and the Inter-Agency Meeting on Outer Space Activities to promote the use of space science and technology and their applications in carrying out actions recommended in the Plan of Implementation of the World Summit on Sustainable Development ("Johannesburg Plan of Implementation") and the joint initiative taken by the Committee and the Inter-Agency Meeting to compile a list of space-related initiatives and programmes that correspond to recommendations contained in the Johannesburg Plan of Implementation;

32. Notes that space technology could play a central role in disaster reduction and that both the Committee and its Scientific and Technical Subcommittee could contribute to the follow-up to the World Conference on Disaster Reduction to be held in Kobe, Japan, in January 2005;

33. Urges entities of the United Nations system, particularly those participating in the Inter-Agency Meeting on Outer Space Activities, to examine, in cooperation with the Committee, how space science and technology and their applications could contribute to implementing the United Nations Millennium Declaration, particularly in the areas relating to, inter alia, food security and increasing opportunities for education;

34. Invites the Inter-Agency Meeting on Outer Space Activities to continue to contribute to the work of the Committee and to report to the Committee and its Scientific and Technical Subcommittee on the work conducted at its annual session;

35. Requests the Committee to continue to consider, as a matter of priority, ways and means of maintaining outer space for peaceful purposes and to report thereon to the General Assembly at its sixtieth session, and agrees that during its consideration of the matter, the Committee could consider ways to promote regional and interregional cooperation based on experiences stemming from the Space Conference of the Americas and the role space technology could play in the implementation of recommendations of the World Summit on Sustainable Development;

36. Agrees that the Committee should continue to consider a report on the activities of the International Satellite System for Search and Rescue as a part of its consideration of the United Nations Programme on Space Applications under the agenda item entitled "Report of the Scientific and Technical Subcommittee", and invites Member States to report on their activities regarding the System;

37. Requests the Committee to continue to consider, at its forty-eighth session, its agenda item entitled "Spin-off benefits of space technology: review of current status";

38. Also requests the Committee to continue to consider, at its forty-eighth session, its agenda item entitled "Space and society" under the special theme for the focus of discussions for the period 2004-2006 entitled "Space and education", in accordance with the work plan adopted by the Committee;

39. Agrees that the Committee should continue to consider, at its forty-eighth session, its agenda item entitled "Space and water" and urges entities of the United Nations system and invites other intergovernmental entities dealing with issues relating to the use and management of water resources as well as space agencies to contribute to the work of the Committee by, inter alia, sharing their experience in the use of space-related technology for water resources management;

40. Also agrees that a symposium on space and archaeology should be held during the forty-eighth session of the Committee;

41. Notes that in accordance with the agreement reached by the Committee at its forty-sixth session on the measures relating to the future composition of the bureaux of the Committee and its subsidiary bodies, on the basis of the measures relating to the working methods of the Committee and its subsidiary bodies, the Group of African States, the Group of Latin American and Caribbean States and the Group of Western European and Other States nominated their candidates for the offices of Second Vice-Chairman/Rapporteur of the Committee, Chairman of the Legal Subcommittee and Chairman of the Committee, respectively, for the period 2006-2007, at the forty-seventh session of the Committee, for its consideration;

42. Urges the Group of Asian States and the Group of Eastern European States to reach a consensus agreement on their candidates for the offices of Chairman of the Scientific and Technical Subcommittee and the First Vice-Chairman of the Committee, respectively, before the forty-eighth session of the Committee;

43. Agrees that the Committee should reach agreement on all the officers of the bureaux of the Committee and its subsidiary bodies for the period 2006-2007 and that, for this purpose, the Committee should include in the agenda of its forty-eighth session an item on the composition of the bureaux of the Committee and its subsidiary bodies for that period;

44. Decides that the Libyan Arab Jamahiriya and Thailand shall become members of the Committee;

45. Requests the Committee to consider ways to improve participation in its work by member States and entities with observer status, with a view to agreeing on specific recommendations in that regard at its forty-eighth session;

46. Notes that each of the regional groups has responsibility to actively promote the participation in the work of the Committee and its subsidiary bodies of the member States of the Committee that are also members of the respective regional group, and agrees that the regional groups should consider this Committee-related matter among their members;

47. Invites the Inter-Agency Meeting on Outer Space Activities to consider at its twenty-fifth session, in 2005, the question of the enhancement of the participation of the entities of the United Nations system in the work of the Committee and its Subcommittees, and requests the Office for Outer Space Affairs, in its capacity as the secretariat of the Inter-Agency Meeting, to report to the Scientific and Technical Subcommittee and the Legal Subcommittee, at their sessions in 2005, on the outcome of the discussions of the Inter-Agency Meeting;

48. Agrees that the Legal Subcommittee should, at its forty-fourth session, address the level of participation of the entities having permanent observer status with the Committee and report to the Committee, at its forty-eighth session, on means of enhancing their participation in the work of the Legal Subcommittee;

49. Urges the Committee to expand the scope of international cooperation relating to the social, economic, ethical and human dimension in space science and technology applications;

50. Requests entities of the United Nations system and other international organizations to continue and, where appropriate, to enhance their cooperation with the Committee and to provide it with reports on the issues dealt with in the work of the Committee and its subsidiary bodies;

51. Requests the Committee to identify and consider new areas and mechanisms of international cooperation in the peaceful uses of outer space to strengthen multilateralism, in accordance with the preamble to the present resolution, and to submit a report to the General Assembly at its sixtieth session, including its views on which subjects should be studied in the future.

Implementation of UNISPACE III recommendations

In accordance with General Assembly resolution 58/89 [YUN 2003, p. 646], the Committee on Outer Space reconvened the working group established in 2002 [YUN 2002, p. 598] to prepare a report to enable the Assembly to review and appraise, at its fifty-ninth (2004) session, the implementation of the UNISPACE III recommendations and to consider further actions and initiatives. The Committee endorsed the working group's recommendations, which were annexed to the Committee's report [A/59/20], and approved the draft report on the implementation of the UNISPACE III recommendations as finalized by the working group.

The Committee noted that 9 of the 12 action teams established in 2001 [YUN 2001, p. 568] and 2003 [YUN 2003, p. 641] to initiate the process of implementing the UNISPACE III recommendations had submitted their final reports to the forty-first (2004) session of the Committee's Scientific and Technical Subcommittee (see p. 638), including the reports of the Action Teams for the Development of a Comprehensive Worldwide Environmental Monitoring Strategy [A/AC.105/C.1/L.275] and on Increasing Awareness [A/AC.105/L.252], and those of the Action Teams on the Management of Natural Resources and on Capacity-building, which were submitted to the Subcommittee as conference room papers. The Committee also noted that the Action Team on Near-Earth Objects and the Action Team on Knowledge-Sharing had reported on progress in their work. The Committee agreed that the action teams were a successful and innovative mechanism and the inputs received from them could guide the Committee's work. Some of the action teams could further define and implement action plans and inform the Scientific and Technical Subcommittee in 2005 accordingly.

Also in accordance with resolution 58/89, the Scientific and Technical Subcommittee reconvened the Working Group of the Whole to consider, among other issues, the implementation of the UNISPACE III recommendations.

Report of Committee on Outer Space. Pursuant to General Assembly resolutions 56/51 [YUN 2001, p. 571], 57/116 [YUN 2002, p. 602] and 58/90 [YUN 2003, p. 642], the Secretary-General, in July, transmitted to the Assembly the report of the Committee on Outer Space on the implementation of the UNISPACE III recommendations [A/59/174]. The report discussed the various mechanisms for implementing the recommendations, including revised agenda structures of the Scientific and Technical and Legal Subcommittees, the 2000 plan of action of the Office for Outer Space Affairs [YUN 2000, p. 584] and the establishment of action teams. It described progress made in implementing the recommendations in the Committee and its subsidiary bodies, through national and regional efforts, and by UN system entities, intergovernmental organizations and NGOs. The report also examined the synergies between implementation of the UNISPACE III recommendations and the results of the 2000 Millennium Summit [YUN 2000, p. 47], the 2002 World Summit on Sustainable Development [YUN 2002, p. 821], the first phase of the World Summit on the Information Society in 2003 [YUN 2003, p. 857] and other global initiatives, and assessed the implementation process.

The report presented a plan of action, which proposed further specific actions for implementing the UNISPACE III recommendations and identified entities to undertake some of those actions, as well as expected benefits. The proposed actions dealt with the use of space to support overarching global agendas for sustainable development, as well as specific agendas to meet human development needs at the global level; developing coordinated, global space capabilities; and capacity development.

Among the actions proposed was a study on the possibility of creating an international entity to coordinate and optimize the effectiveness of space-based services for use in disaster management. The study, to be prepared by an ad hoc expert group, should be completed for consideration by the Committee in 2005. The Committee agreed that the Office for Outer Space Affairs should coordinate the preparation of the study and called on Member States to provide support through voluntary contributions.

The Committee also proposed that Global Navigation Satellite System (GNSS) and augmentation providers should establish an international committee on GNSS for, among other things, optimizing compatibility and interoperability and providing training opportunities in GNSS, in particular in developing countries. Member States should provide support, including financial resources, to implement the World Meteorological Organization Space Programme and its Long-term Strategy, initiated by the fourteenth World Meteorological Conference in 2003 [YUN 2003, p. 1527]. The report also contained measures for strengthening the role of the Committee, its subcommittees and its secretariat in implementing the UNISPACE III recommendations. The Committee sought the endorsement and the participation of Member States in the activities recommended in its report.

Annexed to the report were summaries of the proposed actions, entities to carry out those actions and expected benefits.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 20 October [meeting 37], the General Assembly adopted resolution 59/2 [draft: A/59/L.4 & Add.1, orally revised] without vote [agenda item 23].

Review of the implementation of the recommendations of the Third United Nations Conference on the Exploration and Peaceful Uses of Outer Space

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 54/68 of 6 December 1999, 55/122 of 8 December 2000, 56/51 of 10 December 2001, 57/116 of 11 December 2002 and 58/90 of 9 December 2003, concerning the review and appraisal by the General Assembly at its fifty-ninth session of the implementation of the recommendations of the Third United Nations Conference on the Exploration and Peaceful Uses of Outer Space (UNISPACE III), held in Vienna from 19 to 30 July 1999,

Reaffirming the importance of international cooperation in increasing benefits of the exploration and use of outer space to enhance human development,

Stressing the importance of implementing the resolution adopted by UNISPACE III entitled "The Space Millennium: Vienna Declaration on Space and Human Development", which contains a strategy to address global challenges through the use of space science and technology and their applications,

Recalling the unique organizational aspects of UNISPACE III, which allowed for active contributions by non-governmental organizations, industry and youth to the outcome of UNISPACE III while organizing the Conference within existing resources,

Recognizing that responsibility for implementing the recommendations of UNISPACE III rests with Member States, the Office for Outer Space Affairs of the Secretariat, under the guidance of the Committee on the Peaceful Uses of Outer Space and its subsidiary bodies, intergovernmental organizations for multilateral cooperation and other entities with space-related activities, including non-governmental entities, and the young generation,

Having considered the report of the Committee on the Peaceful Uses of Outer Space on the review of the implementation of the recommendations of UNISPACE III,

Noting with interest that the structure of the agendas of the Scientific and Technical Subcommittee and Legal Subcommittee as revised by the Committee at its forty-second session, as well as the action teams established by the Committee at its forty-fifth and forty-seventh sessions, under voluntary leadership by Member States, served as unique mechanisms to revitalize the work of the Committee and its subsidiary bodies and to implement the recommendations of UNISPACE III,

Expressing its appreciation to the Member States and organizations that participated in the action teams, in particular to the chairpersons of the action teams,

Noting that the establishment of action teams to implement the recommendations of UNISPACE III could be considered by other bodies of the United Nations as a very useful mechanism for implementing results of other major conferences held within the United Nations system,

Noting with satisfaction that the implementation of the recommendations of UNISPACE III contributes to the implementation of the results of global conferences held within the United Nations system, in particular the Millennium Summit, the World Summit on Sustainable Development and the World Summit on the Information Society,

1. Takes note with satisfaction of the report of the Committee on the Peaceful Uses of Outer Space on the review of the implementation of the recommendations of the Third United Nations Conference on the Exploration and Peaceful Uses of Outer Space (UNISPACE III);

2. Expresses its appreciation for the work conducted by the Committee and its subsidiary bodies as well as the Office for Outer Space Affairs in the five years since the holding of UNISPACE III to implement the recommendations of the Conference;

3. Notes with appreciation the work of the working group established by the Committee in preparing and finalizing the above-mentioned report;

4. Endorses the Plan of Action as proposed by the Committee in its report;

5. Urges all Governments, entities of the United Nations system as well as intergovernmental and non-governmental entities conducting space-related activities to carry out the actions contained in the Plan of Action, mentioned in paragraph 4 above, on a priority basis for the further implementation of the recommendations of UNISPACE III, in particular its resolution entitled "The Space Millennium: Vienna Declaration on Space and Human Development";

6. Notes that the Committee will implement some of the actions contained in the Plan of Action through the consideration of items of the agendas of the Committee or its subsidiary bodies and through those action teams that will continue their work as endorsed by the Committee;

7. Requests the Committee to examine the contributions that could be made by space science and technology and their applications to one or more of the issues selected by the Commission on Sustainable Development as a thematic cluster and to provide substantive inputs for consideration by the Commission;

8. Also requests the Committee to include items in the agendas of its future sessions, starting from its forty-ninth session, in 2006, to consider its contributions to the work of those entities that are responsible for convening United Nations conferences and/or for implementing their outcomes;

9. Agrees that a study should be conducted on the possibility of creating an international entity to provide for coordination and the means of realistically optimizing the effectiveness of space-based services for use in disaster management and that the study should be prepared by an ad hoc expert group, with experts to be provided by interested Member States and relevant international organizations, and requests the Committee to review progress in the work of the ad hoc expert group, at its forty-eighth session, in 2005;

10. Calls upon Member States to make contributions to the Trust Fund for the United Nations Programme on Space Applications before the end of 2004 for the purpose of preparing the study by the ad hoc expert group mentioned in paragraph 9 above;

11. Invites Global Navigation Satellite System (GNSS) and augmentation providers to consider establishing an international committee on GNSS as proposed in the Plan of Action in order to maximize the benefits of the use and applications of GNSS to support sustainable development;

12. Encourages Member States to provide support to implement the Space Programme of the World Meteorological Organization and its Long-term Strategy, as proposed in the Plan of Action, in order to expand international cooperation in meteorological satellite applications to enhance weather and climate forecasting;

13. Requests the Secretary-General to undertake necessary measures to strengthen the role of the Office for Outer Space Affairs in implementing the recommendations of UNISPACE III, particularly with a view to achieving the following objectives:

(a) Strengthening the capacity-building activities of the Office in space law by, inter alia, continuing to organize the series of workshops on space law and developing a model education curriculum for a short-term course on space law;

(b) Strengthening the technical advisory services of the Office to support the operational use of space technologies, in particular in response to actions called for in the Plan of Action;

(c) Requesting the Committee to undertake further implementation of UNISPACE III recommendations with a view to enhancing the capacity of developing countries to initiate space application programmes;

14. Agrees that the activities of the United Nations Programme on Space Applications should be clustered, to the extent feasible, to address a few priority themes to be selected by the Committee for each year;

15. Also agrees that the Office for Outer Space Affairs should review the activities that are included in the Plan of Action for implementation by the Office and submit its proposal to the Committee at its forty-eighth session, in 2005, on how those activities could be included in its programme of work;

16. Requests the Secretary-General to implement activities of the Office for Outer Space Affairs as contained in the Plan of Action and to ensure that those activities are included in the programme of work for the biennium 2006-2007;

17. Encourages all Member States and space-related intergovernmental and non-governmental entities to contribute to the Trust Fund for the United Nations Programme on Space Applications while allowing full flexibility for the Office for Outer Space Affairs to carry out the activities of the Programme in accordance with the priorities set by the Committee;

18. Agrees that the Committee should continue to consider, in its future sessions, starting with its forty-eighth session, the implementation of the recommendations of UNISPACE III until the Committee considers that concrete results are achieved.

Scientific and Technical Subcommittee

The Scientific and Technical Subcommittee of the Committee on Outer Space, at its forty-first session (Vienna, 16-27 February) [A/AC.105/823], considered the United Nations Programme on Space Applications and the implementation of the UNISPACE III recommendations. It also dealt with matters relating to the remote sensing of the Earth by satellite, including applications for developing countries and monitoring of the Earth's environment; space debris; the use of nuclear power sources in outer space; space-system-based telemedicine; the examination of the physical nature and technical attributes of the geostationary orbit and its utilization and applications; implementation of an integrated, space-based global natural disaster management system; and solar-terrestrial physics.

UN Programme on Space Applications

The United Nations Programme on Space Applications, as mandated by General Assembly resolution 37/90 [YUN 1982, p. 163], continued to assist developing countries and countries with economies in transition to establish or strengthen their capacity in space science and technology through long-term training fellowships, technical advisory services, regional and international training courses and conferences, and to promote cooperation between developed and developing countries.

The United Nations Expert on Space Applications [A/AC.105/840] stated that the Programme continued to emphasize cooperation with Member States at the regional and international levels in support of UN-affiliated regional centres for space science and technology education. Under the Programme's priority area of space technology and disaster management, which aimed at supporting developing countries' use of space technology to deal with natural disasters, a fifth regional workshop was held in Saudi Arabia and a final international workshop, which built on the results of previous regional workshops, was held in Germany. The Programme also conducted the United Nations/United States Training Course on Satellite-Aided Search and Rescue (Miami, Florida, United States) for the benefit of countries in the Latin American and Caribbean region, and organized the fourteenth United Nations/International Astronautical Federation Workshop on Capacity-Building in Space Technology for the Benefit of Developing Countries, with Emphasis on Natural Disaster Management (Vancouver, Canada, October). A number of workshops were held in support of the priority thematic area of natural resource management and environmental monitoring, including a United Nations/European Space Agency (ESA)/Sudan regional workshop on the subject (Khartoum, April); the United Nations/Iran Regional Workshop on the Use of Space Technology for Environmental Security, Disaster Rehabilitation and Sustainable Development (Tehran, 8-12 May); and the United Nations/ESA/Switzerland/Austria Workshop on Remote Sensing in the Service of Sustainable Development in Mountain Areas (Kathmandu, Nepal, 15-19 November). The Programme also promoted the use of enabling technologies, including GNSS for social and economic benefits, and the use of space science and technology and their applications to support sustainable development. In October, the Programme organized a meeting of UN agencies and members of the Charter on Cooperation to Achieve the Coordinated Use of Space Facilities in the Event of Natural or Technological Disasters (the International Charter on Space and Major Disasters), of which the UN Office for Outer Space Affairs became an operating body in 2003 [YUN 2003, p. 643], to assess the first year of activities and to revise the "common vision" for the second year; participants agreed on a strategy for consolidating a network of partnerships in each country. The Programme held 14 workshops, training courses and conferences in 2004 and provided technical advisory services to activities promoting regional cooperation.

Following consideration of the report of the Expert on Space Applications [A/AC.105/815], describing 2003 Programme activities, those scheduled for 2004, and activities of UN-affiliated regional centres for space science and technology education for 2003, 2004 and 2005, the Subcommittee reiterated its concern over the Programme's limited financial resources and appealed to Member States for voluntary contributions.

The General Assembly, in resolution 59/116 (see p. 632), endorsed the Programme on Space Applications for 2005, as proposed by the Expert.

Cooperation

The Inter-Agency Meeting on Outer Space Activities, at its twenty-fourth session (Geneva, 21-23 January) [A/AC.105/818], discussed the coordination of plans and programmes in the practical application of space technology and related areas, involvement of UN entities in the International Charter on Space and Major Disasters and the space-related outcomes of the 2002 World Summit on Sustainable Development [YUN 2002, p. 821]. It also considered electronic information networking in the UN system, the implementation of the UNISPACE III recommendations, and a draft revised brochure on the use of space technology by the UN system for sustainable development.

The Meeting noted the primary areas of satellite technology applications that required inter-agency coordination, and that, although the use of such technology in support of aeronautical applications was growing steadily, it was not progressing as fast as anticipated. It also noted that the work of the International Civil Aviation Organization in that area would continue to be coordinated with relevant agencies.

The Meeting revised the draft of the Secretary-General's report on the coordination of space-related activities within the UN system: direction and anticipated results for the period 2004-2005 [A/AC.105/822], and agreed that a separate report should be prepared on new and emerging space-related technologies for inter-agency cooperation for submission to the Scientific and Technical Subcommittee in 2005.

The Meeting agreed to create, with the participation of the Committee on Outer Space, inventories of equipment, education and training materials, satellite data sets and other capacity-building resources provided by UN entities that carried out national or regional technical cooperation projects, so that future projects or other development activities might build on existing capacity. An inventory of all satellite data acquired by UN entities should be carried out on a yearly basis. The Meeting agreed to discuss further the establishment of inventories at its next session.

The Meeting agreed to promote the use of the International Charter on Space and Major Disasters by more UN system entities and to examine the possibility of establishing non-UN focal points, that it be kept informed of developments with the Charter and the involvement of UN entities, and that the item on the Charter be retained on the agenda for its next session.

The Meeting agreed to submit to the Scientific and Technical Subcommittee at its 2004 session a list, prepared by the Office for Outer Space Affairs, of space-related initiatives and programmes within the UN system that responded to recommendations contained in the Plan of Implementation of the 2002 World Summit on Sustainable Development and to review that list again in 2005.

The Meeting agreed that its focal points should provide the Office for Outer Space Affairs with updated information on their space-related programmes and activities and the relevant web-site addresses, and on upcoming activities to be posted on the Office's web site. Regarding the implementation of the UNISPACE III recommendations, the Meeting noted that the work of the action teams could help support the programmes and activities of UN system entities, and agreed that those entities should consider actively participating in the action teams that had relevance to their mandates and activities.

Scientific and technical issues

In 2004, the Scientific and Technical Subcommittee [A/AC.105/823] continued to emphasize the importance of the provision of non-discriminatory access to state-of-the-art remote sensing data and to derive information at reasonable cost and in a timely manner; capacity-building, in particular to meet the needs of developing countries; and Earth observation satellite data to support key development activities. It encouraged further international cooperation in the use of remote sensing satellites, in particular by sharing experience and technologies through bilateral, regional and international collaborative efforts.

The Subcommittee noted that the Inter-Agency Space Debris Coordination Committee (IADC) continued to achieve progress in the technical understanding of issues related to space debris. It agreed that Member States, in particular space-faring countries, should pay more attention to the problem of collision of space objects, including those with nuclear power sources on board, with space debris, and to other aspects of space debris, and that they should make available the results of national research on space debris, including information on minimizing its creation. Pursuant to General Assembly resolution 58/89 [YUN 2003, p. 646], the Subcommittee established a working group to consider comments from States members of the Committee on Outer Space on the proposals on debris mitigation presented by IADC in 2003 [ibid., p. 644] and endorsed the working group's report, which was annexed to the Subcommittee's report.

Also in accordance with that resolution, the Subcommittee reconvened its Working Group on the Use of Nuclear Power Sources in Outer Space. It noted progress made by the Working Group on the development of options for establishing an international, technically based framework of goals and recommendations for the safety of space nuclear power source applications. It also noted that the Working Group's proposed options for establishing cooperation between the Committee and the International Atomic Energy Agency, contained in the Group's working paper [A/AC.105/C.1/L.271/Rev.1]. The Subcommittee endorsed the Working Group's report, which was annexed to the Subcommittee's report, and the recommendation that it continue intersessional work on topics described in the 2003-2006 multi-year work plan on the use of nuclear power sources in outer space, adopted in 2003 [YUN 2003, p. 644].

The Subcommittee agreed that the recommendation to establish a disaster management international space coordination organization within the UN framework, made by the UNISPACE III Action Team on Disaster Management should be further studied. The Subcommittee was of the view that every national and international organization involved in disaster response should have free access to and possess readily deployable mobile communication terminals, compatible with different communication satellite systems, and that Member States should facilitate such access.

The Committee on Outer Space [A/59/20] hoped that IADC would further develop its space debris mitigation guidelines, taking into account comments submitted by Member States. In 2004, only one Member State [A/AC.105/820/Add.1] responded to the Committee's 2003 request [YUN 2003, p. 645] that its members study the IADC proposals on space debris mitigation and provide their comments to the Office for Outer Space Affairs.

The Committee agreed that the Action Team on Disaster Management should undertake further study to establish, within the UN framework, an international organization for the coordination of space activities for disaster management. It noted that both the Committee and its Scientific and Technical Subcommittee could contribute to the World Conference on Disaster Reduction, to be held in 2005 in Kobe, Japan, and its follow-up, ensuring that space technologies would be an integral part of the solutions put forward in the Conference's plan of implementation. The Committee reported that, in accordance with resolution 58/89, a workshop on satellites for disaster communications: saving lives from natural disasters was held on 7 June 2004.

In response to the Subcommittee's request that Member States and regional space agencies continue to report on national research concerning the safety of space objects with nuclear power sources, the Secretariat submitted replies received from three States [A/AC.105/838].

Also submitted to the Scientific and Technical Subcommittee were a Secretariat note [A/AC.105/832 & Add.1] and a series of addenda [A/AC.105/816/Add.1-4] to a 2003 note [YUN 2003, p. 645] containing information received from 15 Member States on their space activities.

Legal Subcommittee

The Legal Subcommittee, at its forty-third session (Vienna, 29 March–8 April) [A/AC.105/826], reconvened its working group on the examination of the preliminary draft protocol on matters specific to space assets to the Convention on International Interests in Mobile Equipment, which was opened for signature in 2001 [YUN 2001, p. 570]. The working group considered separately the possibility of the United Nations serving as supervisory body under the preliminary draft protocol and the relationship between the terms of the draft protocol and the rights and obligations of States, under the legal regime applicable to outer space. It agreed that, as a number of both practical and fundamental issues remained to be resolved before the Subcommittee could decide on the appropriateness of the United Nations acting as supervisory authority, to establish an open-ended ad hoc working group to continue consideration of the question. The ad hoc working group would prepare a report, including the text of a draft resolution, to be submitted to the Subcommittee in 2005.

The Subcommittee also reconvened its working group established on the status and application of the five UN treaties on outer space [YUN 2001, p. 570]. Having considered a working paper [A/AC.105/C.2/L.251] submitted by a group of ESA States and those that had concluded cooperation agreements with it, a draft resolution on the application of the legal concept of the "launching State", the working group agreed on the text of a draft resolution for consideration by the Assembly. It also approved the text of a model letter, together with the information material to be attached thereto, for the Secretary-General to send to the ministers for foreign affairs of States that had not become parties to UN treaties on outer space, and to intergovernmental organizations that had not declared their acceptance of the rights and obligations under those treaties. The Subcommittee endorsed the working group's report and the recommendation that its mandate be extended until 2005, when it would be reviewed. The text of the letter and its attachment were annexed to the Subcommittee's report.

The Subcommittee reconvened its working group on the definition and delimitation of outer space to consider an analytical summary of the replies to a questionnaire on possible legal issues with regard to aerospace objects [A/AC.105/C.2/L.249 & Corr.1]. It agreed that the Secretariat should compile all the replies to the questionnaire received from Member States in a single document, which should be made available to the members of the Committee on Outer Space and others, and used as a working document for establishing a technical or legal basis for the consideration of possible legal issues with regard to aerospace objects and matters relating to the definition and delimitation of outer space. The Subcommittee could continue its consideration of the analytical summary in 2005, and Member States that had not replied to the questionnaire should be invited to do so.

The Subcommittee, noting that various international organizations had been invited by the Secretariat to report on their activities relating to space law, considered a Secretariat note [A/AC.105/C.2/L.248] and a conference room paper containing reports from five international organizations on their activities in that regard. It agreed that international intergovernmental organizations conducting space activities could enhance the legal framework applicable to those activities by encouraging their member States, if they had not already done so, to become parties to the international treaties governing outer space.

The Subcommittee was informed of the practices of 12 Member States and ESA [A/AC.105/C.2/L.250 & Corr.1 & Add.1,2] in registering space objects and implementing the 1974 Convention on the Registration of Objects Launched into Outer Space, contained in General Assembly resolution 3235(XXIX) [YUN 1974, p. 63]. It requested the Secretariat to prepare a background document on the Register of Objects Launched into Outer Space maintained by the Secretary-General under the Convention to facilitate the work of the working group to be established by the Subcommittee in 2005.

The Committee on Outer Space [A/59/20] endorsed the recommendations of the Subcommittee and its working groups.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 10 December [meeting 71], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fourth Committee [A/59/469], adopted resolution 59/115 without vote [agenda item 74].

Application of the concept of the “launching State”

The General Assembly,

Recalling the Convention on International Liability for Damage Caused by Space Objects and the Convention on Registration of Objects Launched into Outer Space,

Bearing in mind that the term “launching State” as used in the Liability Convention and the Registration Convention is important in space law, that a launching State shall register a space object in accordance with the Registration Convention and that the Liability Convention identifies those States which may be liable for damage caused by a space object and which would have to pay compensation in such a case,

Taking note of the report of the Committee on the Peaceful Uses of Outer Space on its forty-second session and the report of the Legal Subcommittee on its forty-first session, in particular the conclusions of the Working Group on the agenda item entitled “Review of the concept of the ‘launching State’” annexed to the report of the Legal Subcommittee,

Noting that nothing in the conclusions of the Working Group or in the present resolution constitutes an authoritative interpretation of or a proposed amendment to the Registration Convention or the Liability Convention,

Noting also that changes in space activities since the Liability Convention and the Registration Convention entered into force include the continuous development of new technologies, an increase in the number of States carrying out space activities, an increase in international cooperation in the peaceful uses of outer space and an increase in space activities carried out by non-governmental entities, including activities carried out jointly by government agencies and non-governmental entities, as well as partnerships formed by non-governmental entities from one or more countries,

Desirous of facilitating adherence to and the application of the provisions of the United Nations treaties on outer space, in particular the Liability Convention and the Registration Convention,

1. Recommends that States conducting space activities, in fulfilling their international obligations under the United Nations treaties on outer space, in particular the Treaty on Principles Governing the Activities of States in the Exploration and Use of Outer Space, including the Moon and Other Celestial Bodies, the Convention on International Liability for Damage Caused by Space Objects and the Convention on Registration of Objects Launched into Outer Space, as well as other relevant international agreements, consider enacting and implementing national laws authorizing and providing for continuing supervision of the activities in outer space of non-governmental entities under their jurisdiction;

2. Also recommends that States consider the conclusion of agreements in accordance with the Liability Convention with respect to joint launches or cooperation programmes;

3. Further recommends that the Committee on the Peaceful Uses of Outer Space invite Member States to submit information on a voluntary basis on their current practices regarding on-orbit transfer of ownership of space objects;

4. Recommends that States consider, on the basis of that information, the possibility of harmonizing such practices as appropriate with a view to increasing the consistency of national space legislation with international law;

5. Requests the Committee on the Peaceful Uses of Outer Space, in making full use of the functions and resources of the Secretariat, to continue to provide States, at their request, with relevant information and assistance in developing national space laws based on the relevant treaties.

Effects of atomic radiation

At its fifty-second session (Vienna, 26-30 April) [A/59/46], the United Nations Scientific Committee on the Effects of Atomic Radiation continued the development of new documents on the sources and effects of ionizing radiation, last reviewed by the Committee in 2003 [YUN 2003, p. 650]. It held detailed technical discussions that resulted in clear instructions to the Secretariat as to the content and form of future scientific annexes and considered new information relevant to assessing sources of radiation, the exposures that those sources gave rise to and the resulting effects. The Committee reviewed Secretariat documents on important topics, including exposure of workers and the public to various sources of radiation; sources-to-effects assessment for radon in homes and workplaces; radioecology, methodologies for dose assessment and effects of radiation on non-human biota; non-targeted and delayed effects of exposure to ionizing radiation; health effects due to radiation from the 1986 Chernobyl accident [YUN 1986, p. 584]; evaluation of new epidemiological studies of radiation and cancer; epidemiological evaluation and dose response of diseases other than cancer that might be related to radiation exposure; medical radiation exposure; effects of radiation on the immune system; and summary documents on the health effects of radiation and the sources of ionizing radiation exposure. Internet access was provided to published Committee documents for the period 2003-2004 to allow the Committee's findings to reach a broader audience.

The provision of an adequate operating budget to allow the Committee to fulfil its General Assembly mandate, most recently expressed in resolutions 57/115 [YUN 2002, p. 606] and 58/88 [YUN 2003, p. 650], remained a concern. The Committee's anticipation that adequate funds to hold its annual meetings would be restored for the biennium 2004-2005 were only partially realized. In the circumstances, the Committee would only be able to continue the current, approved programme of work by holding its fifty-third session at a lower level of effectiveness. The Committee decided to hold that session in Vienna from 30 May to 3 June 2005.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 10 December [meeting 71], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fourth Committee [A/59/468], adopted resolution 59/114 without vote [agenda item 73].

Effects of atomic radiation

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 913(X) of 3 December 1955, by which it established the United Nations Scientific Committee on the Effects of Atomic Radiation, and its subsequent resolutions on the subject, including resolution 58/88 of 9 December 2003, in which, inter alia, it requested the Scientific Committee to continue its work,

Taking note with appreciation of the work of the Scientific Committee,

Reaffirming the desirability of the Scientific Committee continuing its work,

Concerned about the potentially harmful effects on present and future generations resulting from the levels of radiation to which mankind and the environment are exposed,

Noting the views expressed by Member States at its fifty-ninth session with regard to the work of the Scientific Committee,

Noting with satisfaction that some Member States have expressed particular interest in becoming members of the Scientific Committee, and expressing its intention to consider the issue further at its next session,

Conscious of the continuing need to examine and compile information about atomic and ionizing radiation and to analyse its effects on mankind and the environment,

1. Commends the United Nations Scientific Committee on the Effects of Atomic Radiation for the valuable contribution it has been making in the course of the past forty-nine years, since its inception, to wider knowledge and understanding of the levels, effects and risks of ionizing radiation, and for fulfilling its original mandate with scientific authority and independence of judgement;

2. Reaffirms the decision to maintain the present functions and independent role of the Scientific Committee;

3. Requests the Scientific Committee to continue its work, including its important activities to increase knowledge of the levels, effects and risks of ionizing radiation from all sources, and invites the Scientific Committee to submit its programme of work to the General Assembly;

4. Endorses the intentions and plans of the Scientific Committee for its future activities of scientific review and assessment on behalf of the General Assembly;

5. Requests the Scientific Committee to continue at its next session the review of the important problems in the field of ionizing radiation and to report thereon to the General Assembly at its sixtieth session;

6. Requests the United Nations Environment Programme to continue providing support for the effective conduct of the work of the Scientific Committee and for the dissemination of its findings to the General Assembly, the scientific community and the public;

7. Expresses its appreciation for the assistance rendered to the Scientific Committee by Member States, the specialized agencies, the International Atomic Energy Agency and non-governmental organizations, and invites them to increase their cooperation in this field;

8. Invites the Scientific Committee to continue its consultations with scientists and experts from interested Member States in the process of preparing its future scientific reports;

9. Welcomes, in this context, the readiness of Member States to provide the Scientific Committee with relevant information on the effects of ionizing radiation in affected areas, and invites the Scientific Committee to analyse and give due consideration to such information, particularly in the light of its own findings;

10. Invites Member States, the organizations of the United Nations system and non-governmental organizations concerned to provide further relevant data about doses, effects and risks from various sources of radiation, which would greatly help in the preparation of future reports of the Scientific Committee to the General Assembly;

11. Urges the United Nations Environment Programme to review and strengthen the present funding of the Scientific Committee, pursuant to paragraph 6 of resolution 58/88, so that the Committee can discharge the responsibilities and mandate entrusted to it by the General Assembly;

12. Emphasizes the need for the Scientific Committee to hold regular sessions on an annual basis so that its report can reflect the latest developments and findings in the field of ionizing radiation and thereby provide updated information for dissemination among all States.

PART TWO

Human rights

Chapter I

Promotion of human rights

In 2004, human rights were promoted through initiatives regarding legally binding instruments and the Commission on Human Rights and its subsidiary body, the Subcommission on the Promotion and Protection of Human Rights. The Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights continued its coordination and implementation activities, and provided advisory services and a technical cooperation programme.

The Committee on the Protection of the Rights of All Migrant Workers and Members of Their Families, the monitoring body of the International Convention on the Protection of the Rights of All Migrant Workers and Members of Their Families, which was adopted by the General Assembly in 1990 and entered into force in 2003, at its first session, elected its officers and adopted its rules of procedure. Other monitoring bodies of human rights instruments promoted civil, political, economic, social and cultural rights, and aimed to eliminate racial discrimination and discrimination against women, to protect children and to end the practice of torture and other cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment.

On 10 December, the annual observance of Human Rights Day, the General Assembly dedicated its plenary meeting to a review of the achievements of the United Nations Decade for Human Rights Education (1995-2004), which it proclaimed in 1994. On the same day, the Assembly proclaimed the World Programme for Human Rights Education, structured in consecutive phases and scheduled to begin on 1 January 2005, in order to advance the implementation of human rights education programmes in all sectors.

During the year, the Assembly appointed Louise Arbour (Canada) as United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights. Her term of office would be from 1 July 2004 to 30 June 2008.

UN machineryCommission on Human Rights

The Commission on Human Rights held its sixtieth session in Geneva from 15 March to 23

April [E/2004/23], during which it adopted 88 resolutions and 28 decisions. It recommended 47 draft decisions for adoption by the Economic and Social Council. The Council took note of the Commission's report on 23 July (decision 2004/317).

Pursuant to a 2000 Commission decision on enhancing the effectiveness of its mechanisms [YUN 2000, p. 595], the Commission Chairperson convened a one-day informal meeting on 28 September to facilitate the exchange of information in preparation for the General Assembly's fifty-ninth (2004) session [E/CN.4/IM/2004/1]. In a September note [E/CN.4/IM/2004/2], the Secretariat summarized the post-session meetings and activities of the Commission's Expanded Bureau.

Organization of work

Note by Secretariat. The Commission had before it a note by the Secretariat [E/CN.4/2004/11] containing statistical data on its 2003 session to assist with the organization of the Commission's work in 2004.

In response to a 2003 Commission decision [YUN 2003, p. 656] on ways to improve the organization of the Commission's work, a 12 January note of the Secretariat [E/CN.4/2004/109] summarized the views received from Member States, regional groups and non-governmental organizations (NGOs) and considered by the Expanded Bureau. A March note by the Secretariat [E/CN.4/2004/110/Rev.1] transmitted a report containing recommendations on improving the Commission's work, as proposed by the Expanded Bureau.

On 15 March [dec. 2004/101], the Commission invited special representatives, special rapporteurs, chairpersons and chairpersons/rapporteurs of various working groups and experts to participate in its meetings.

An April note of the Secretary-General [E/CN.4/2004/124] contained the proposed strategic framework for the 2006-2007 biennium of the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights (OHCHR), which would replace the current four-year medium-term plan.

On 21 April [dec. 2004/125], the Commission decided that the first meeting of its sixty-first (2005) session would take place in January to elect its officers and that the session would be held from 14

March to 22 April. The Council approved the Commission's decision on 22 July (decision 2004/282).

On 23 April [dec. 2004/127], the Commission recommended that the Council authorize six additional meetings for its sixty-first session and requested the Chairperson of that session to organize the session's work within the time normally allotted so that the additional meetings would be utilized only if necessary.

ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL ACTION

In July, the Economic and Social Council, on the recommendation of the Commission on Human Rights [E/2004/23], adopted decision 2004/283 by recorded vote (53-1) [agenda item 14 (g)].

Organization of work of the sixty-first session of the Commission on Human Rights

At its 49th plenary meeting, on 22 July 2004, the Economic and Social Council took note of Commission on Human Rights decision 2004/127 of 23 April 2004 and authorized six fully serviced additional meetings, including summary records, in accordance with rules 29 and 31 of the rules of procedure of the functional commissions of the Council, for the sixty-first session of the Commission.

The Council also requested the Chairperson of the sixty-first session of the Commission to make every effort to organize the work of the session within the time normally allotted so that the additional meetings that the Council might authorize would be utilized only if they proved to be absolutely necessary.

RECORDED VOTE ON DECISION 2004/283:

In favour: Armenia, Australia, Azerbaijan, Bangladesh, Belgium, Belize, Benin, Bhutan, Burundi, Canada, Chile, China, Colombia, Congo, Cuba, Ecuador, El Salvador, Finland, France, Germany, Ghana, Greece, Guatemala, Hungary, India, Indonesia, Ireland, Italy, Jamaica, Japan, Kenya, Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Malaysia, Mauritius, Mozambique, Namibia, Nicaragua, Nigeria, Panama, Poland, Qatar, Republic of Korea, Russian Federation, Saudi Arabia, Senegal, Sweden, Tunisia, Turkey, Ukraine, United Arab Emirates, United Kingdom, United Republic of Tanzania, Zimbabwe.

Against: United States.

Thematic procedures

In January, the Secretary-General provided a list of the thematic and country-specific procedures and other Commission mechanisms for 2004 [E/CN.4/2004/Add.1 & Corr.1], and in March [E/CN.4/2004/97] he submitted a report containing references to the conclusions and recommendations of thematic special rapporteurs and working groups, pursuant to a 2002 Commission resolution [YUN 2002, p. 613]. The eleventh meeting of special rapporteurs/representatives, independent experts and chairpersons of working groups of the special procedures of the Commission and of the advisory services programme was held in June [E/CN.4/2005/5] (see p. 669).

Commission action. On 21 April [res. 2004/76], by a recorded vote of 35 to none, with 18 abstentions, the Commission urged Governments to cooperate with it through its special procedures and requested those procedures to make recommendations to prevent human rights violations; follow progress made by Governments; continue close cooperation with relevant treaty bodies and with each other; focus resources on ways that best advanced their mandates; provide comprehensive reports; report on follow-up action by Governments; include in their reports gender-disaggregated data and address women's human rights and violations of the rights of children and other vulnerable groups; and maintain dialogue with Governments. The High Commissioner was requested to continue to organize periodic meetings; facilitate the implementation of special procedures' recommendations; update electronic compilation of special procedures' recommendations by country; support the work of all special procedures; intensify coordination and enhance further the quality, consistency and independence of the work of special procedures; and report on the implementation of recommendations contained in the Commission's current resolution. The Secretary-General was asked to issue annually the conclusions and recommendations of the special procedures; present annually a list of all persons mandated to carry out special procedures; convene periodic meetings among special procedures; and ensure the availability of resources to support the special procedures' mandates.

Subcommission on the Promotion and Protection of Human Rights

The Subcommission on the Promotion and Protection of Human Rights, at its fifty-sixth session (Geneva, 26 July–13 August) [E/CN.4/2005/2], adopted 30 resolutions and 23 decisions, and recommended one draft resolution and 11 draft decisions for adoption by the Commission.

On 12 August [dec. 2004/122], the Subcommission approved the composition of its working groups for 2005. On the same date [dec. 2004/120], it decided to entrust Françoise Hampson (United Kingdom) with the preparation, without financial implications, of a working paper on the organization, content and outcome of its work under agenda item 2 on the question of human rights and fundamental freedoms, which would enable it to focus attention on a situation not otherwise before a human rights body, taking into account Commission resolution 2004/60 (see p. 649). The working paper was to be submitted by the end of April 2005 and translated into the UN official languages, posted on the OHCHR website not later than May, and sent to Subcommission members. NGOs, national human rights institutions, the Commission's special procedures, OHCHR, States and other interested parties should be invited to submit comments no later than the end of June. The working paper was to be presented during the first meeting of the Subcommission's fifty-seventh (2005) session, with at least one meeting devoted to a general discussion of the report as a whole in a public forum.

Also on 12 August [dec. 2004/121], the Subcommission decided to entrust Emmanuel Decaux (France) with preparing, without financial implications, a working paper, for submission in 2005, on the Subcommission's methods of work relating to the choice of subject and preparation of reports and on how it should organize its work to ensure full consideration of reports by its members, NGOs, national delegations and other interested parties.

Report of Subcommission Chairperson. The Commission had before it a report [E/CN.4/2004/83] of the Subcommission's 2003 Chairperson, Halima Embarek Warzazi (Morocco), which summarized the Subcommission's work in 2003.

Commission action. On 20 April [res. 2004/60], the Commission decided that the Subcommission should continue to debate country situations not being dealt with in the Commission, but should not adopt country-specific resolutions, decisions or Chairperson's statements. It further decided that the Subcommission could best assist it by providing it with independent expert studies and working papers by its members or their alternates; recommendations based on the studies; and studies, research and expert advice at the Commission's request. It recommended that the Subcommission continue holding annual closed meetings with the Commission's Expanded Bureau; streamlining its agenda; holding closed meetings on its working rules, procedures and timetables; drafting as many of its resolutions as possible in closed session; and using a question-and-answer format and expert panel discussions. The Commission also recommended that the Subcommission further improve its work methods by focusing on its primary role as the Commission's advisory body; giving attention to studies recommended by the Commission or proposals suggested by treaty bodies or other UN human rights bodies; respecting the highest standards of impartiality and expertise, and avoiding acts that would affect confidence in its members' independence; facilitating the participation of NGOs; considering studies and working papers by special rapporteurs and its members before sending them to the Commission; taking further steps to accomplish its work within a three-week session; making proposals to the Commission on how to assist the Subcommission to improve its work and vice versa; focusing on human rights questions relating to its mandate; avoiding duplication of its work with that of other bodies and mechanisms; and giving appropriate regard to legal opinions addressed to it. The Commission requested States to consider a number of criteria when nominating and electing Subcommission members and alternates.

The Secretary-General was asked to support the Subcommission by making documentation available in good time before each session in UN official languages and by assisting it in requests for information from Governments, intergovernmental organizations and NGOs. The Commission recommended that the Subcommission Chairperson or his/her representative attend the meeting of special rapporteurs/representatives, experts and chairpersons of working groups of the Commission's special procedures and the meeting of chairpersons of treaty bodies (see p. 660) to facilitate coordination between the Subcommission and other relevant UN bodies and procedures. The Chairperson of the Subcommission's 2004 session was asked to report in 2005 on how recent enhancements of the Subcommission had worked in practice.

Notes by Secretary-General. A note of the Secretary-General [E/CN.4/2004/82 & Add.1 & Add.1/Corr.1] contained the nominations and biographical data of candidates for election to the 26-member Subcommission and the corresponding alternates, as the term of office of half the membership was due to expire.

A June note of the Secretary-General [E/CN.4/Sub.2/2004/33] reviewed developments between 1 June 2003 and 1 June 2004 in areas with which the Subcommission had been concerned.

A July note of the Secretary-General [E/CN.4/Sub.2/2004/3] contained a proposal by an NGO for inclusion in the Subcommission's provisional agenda of an item concerning the rule of law in Sri Lanka.

Working paper. In an August working paper [E/CN.4/Sub.2/2004/46], Subcommission member Gudmundur Alfredsson (Iceland) presented research and study topic proposals for consideration by the Subcommission.

Office of the High Commissioner for Human Rights

Reports of Acting High Commissioner and High Commissioner. The Acting High Commissioner for Human Rights, in a June report [E/2004/89] to the Economic and Social Council, described UN system initiatives to assist Member States in building their national systems of human rights promotion and protection. The report also detailed the efforts of UN bodies and programmes and specialized agencies to integrate human rights into their activities. The Acting High Commissioner recommended a number of measures to the Council, including a periodic review of progress achieved in integrating human rights as an essential part of the work of UN bodies and programmes. The Council took note of the report on 23 July (decision 2004/317).

The High Commissioner's report to the General Assembly [A/59/36] covered urgent reporting by the Acting High Commissioner to the Commission on the conflict situations in the Darfur region of the Sudan (see p. 803) and in Iraq (see pp. 339 and 809); the 2004 activities of the Commission, the Subcommission, treaty bodies and special procedures established to deal with alleged human rights violations; standard-setting activities; and human rights and development. The report also described OHCHR activities at the country level, its support to peace missions and role in the area of humanitarian action. The Office continued to devote efforts to the development and strengthening of national human rights protection systems, implement the Secretary-General's reform agenda (see p. 1360) and develop strategies for its field activities. Specific human rights issues reviewed concerned racism, racial discrimination, xenophobia and related intolerance; globalization; the right to adequate food; poverty reduction; human trafficking; women's rights; the rule of law and democracy; indigenous peoples; minorities; and human rights education.

On 20 December, the General Assembly took note of a report of the Third (Social, Humanitarian and Cultural) Committee [A/59/503/Add.5] regarding the High Commissioner's report (decision 59/530).

Appointment. Following a 20 February note of the Secretary-General [A/58/718] proposing Louise Arbour (Canada) as United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights, the General Assembly approved her appointment on 25 February (decision 58/417). In May [A/58/718/Add.1], the Secretary-General informed the Assembly that her term of office would be from 1 July 2004 to 30 June 2008.

Strengthening the functioning of OHCHR

Report of High Commissioner. A February report of the High Commissioner [E/CN.4/2004/12/Add.1] highlighted OHCHR activities designed to implement the Secretary-General's 2002 proposals for strengthening the UN system [YUN 2002, p. 1352], particularly regarding measures to enhance human rights-related UN actions at the country level and to improve the effectiveness of treaty bodies and special procedures.

Commission action. On 8 April [res. 2004/2], by a recorded vote of 51 to none, with 2 abstentions, the Commission asked the High Commissioner to continue to emphasize the promotion and protection of economic, social and cultural rights; to continue to strengthen OHCHR's management structure; to enhance international cooperation for human rights promotion and protection; and to engage in dialogue with Governments to secure respect for all human rights. The Commission recommended that the Economic and Social Council and the General Assembly provide OHCHR with means commensurate with its increasing tasks and more resources for special rapporteurs.

ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL ACTION

In July, the Economic and Social Council, on the recommendation of the Commission on Human Rights [E/2004/23], adopted decision 2004/247 by recorded vote (52-0-2) [agenda item 14 (g)].

Strengthening of the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights

At its 48th plenary meeting, on 22 July 2004, the Economic and Social Council took note of Commission on Human Rights resolution 2004/2 of 8 April 2004 and endorsed the Commission's recommendation that the Council and the General Assembly provide the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights with ways and means commensurate with its increasing tasks, as well as more resources for special rapporteurs.

RECORDED VOTE ON DECISION 2004/247:

In favour: Armenia, Azerbaijan, Bangladesh, Belgium, Belize, Benin, Bhutan, Burundi, Canada, Chile, China, Colombia, Congo, Cuba, Ecuador, El Salvador, Finland, France, Germany, Ghana, Greece, Guatemala, Hungary, India, Indonesia, Ireland, Italy, Jamaica, Japan, Kenya, Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Malaysia, Mauritius, Mozambique, Namibia, Nicaragua, Nigeria, Panama, Poland, Qatar, Republic of Korea, Russian Federation, Saudi Arabia, Senegal, Sweden, Tunisia, Turkey, Ukraine, United Arab Emirates, United Kingdom, United Republic of Tanzania, Zimbabwe.

Against: None.

Abstaining: Australia, United States.

Management review

Report of JIU. By a 10 March note [A/59/65-E/2004/48], the Secretary-General transmitted a report of the Joint Inspection Unit (JIU) on a management and administrative review of OHCHR, as requested by the Commission in 2002 [YUN 2002, p. 615]. JIU recommended that the High Commissioner create a post of Chief of Staff and review the grading of branch chiefs to ensure streamlined management, optimal leadership and consistency of structures. The organigram of the proposed Capacity-building and Field Operations Branch should be revised by integrating the National Institutions Team within various geographical teams. Field operations conducted exclusively by OHCHR should be minimal and limited to cases where no alternative existed, and OHCHR might consider drawing up an action plan detailing measures to develop cooperation with different partners. Further recommendations advocated the establishment of an accounting system for the assets of field representations, the development of a field administrative procedures manual and the formulation of a clear information technology strategy. Regarding human resources management, JIU proposed that the Office should review the mandate of the Advisory Panel on Personnel Issues, compile annually a list of countries which were either unrepresented or underrepresented within OHCHR, align its recruitment and contractual policies with those of the Secretariat and align its post-classification criteria with those of the Secretariat before advertising any post. The High Commissioner should prepare an action plan aimed at reducing the current imbalance in the geographical distribution of staff.

Note by Secretary-General. By a 12 March note [A/59/65/Add.1-E/2004/48/Add.1], the Secretary-General transmitted his comments on JIU's recommendations, indicating that some of the recommendations were under implementation, while others would be further studied.

On 23 July, the Economic and Social Council took note of the Secretary-General's notes transmitting the JIU report and his comments thereon (decision 2004/317).

Note by Secretariat. A 5 April note of the Secretariat [E/CN.4/2004/95] drew the Commission's attention to the JIU report and to the Secretary-General's comments thereon.

Composition of staff

Report of High Commissioner. In response to a 2003 Commission request [YUN 2003, p. 659], the High Commissioner submitted a report on the composition of OHCHR staff by nationality, grade and gender as at 1 December 2003 [E/CN.4/2004/100].

Commission action. On 21 April [res. 2004/73], by a recorded vote of 35 to 14, with 4 abstentions, the Commission considered it necessary to change the prevailing geographical distribution of OHCHR staff and requested the Secretary-General to ensure that particular attention was paid to recruiting personnel from unrepresented and underrepresented Member States, particularly from developing countries and countries with economies in transition. The High Commissioner was requested to prepare an action plan aimed at reducing the current staff imbalance, indicating specific targets and deadlines to be achieved, to avoid duplication of functions and to work towards the goal of increased effectiveness and improved management, and to report in 2005. JIU was asked to assist the Commission to monitor the implementation of its current resolution and to submit to the General Assembly in 2006 and to the Commission in 2007 a review of the implementation of the decisions of the Commission and other UN intergovernmental bodies regarding the management, programmes and administration of OHCHR. Annexed to the Commission's resolution was tabular information on the geographical distribution of OHCHR's staff between 2000 and 2004.

ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL ACTION

In July, the Economic and Social Council, on the recommendation of the Commission on Human Rights [E/2004/23], adopted decision 2004/269 by recorded vote (32-18-3) [agenda item 14 (g)].

Composition of the staff of the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights

At its 48th plenary meeting, on 22 July 2004, the Economic and Social Council took note of Commission on Human Rights resolution 2004/73 of 21 April 2004 and drew the attention of the General Assembly to the resolution in the context of the consideration of the agenda item on human resources management.

The Council further endorsed the Commission's:

(a) Invitation to the General Assembly and its appropriate subsidiary bodies, inter alia, the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions, the Committee for Programme and Coordination and the Fifth Committee, to give due consideration to Commission resolution 2004/73 and to the report of the Joint Inspection Unit entitled "Management review of the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights", transmitted to the Assembly in a note by the Secretary-General, in particular to any other organization, management, executive direction, structure, administrative, financial and more technical human resources management issues and recommendations contained therein and not addressed in Commission resolution 2004/73;

(b) Request to the Joint Inspection Unit to assist the Commission to monitor systematically the implementation of Commission resolution 2004/73 and to submit a follow-up comprehensive review of the implementation of the decisions of the Commission and other United Nations intergovernmental bodies regarding the management, programmes and administration of the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights, in particular with regard to their impact on the recruitment policies and the composition of the staff, to the Commission at its sixty-third session and to the General Assembly at its sixty-first session, containing any concrete proposals for corrective action, if required, for the implementation of the relevant intergovernmental bodies' resolutions, including Commission resolution 2004/73.

RECORDED VOTE ON DECISION 2004/269:

In favour: Armenia, Azerbaijan, Bangladesh, Belize, Benin, Bhutan, Burundi, Chile, China, Colombia, Cuba, Ecuador, El Salvador, Ghana, India, Indonesia, Jamaica, Kenya, Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Malaysia, Mauritius, Mozambique, Namibia, Nigeria, Panama, Qatar, Russian Federation, Saudi Arabia, Tunisia, United Arab Emirates, United Republic of Tanzania, Zimbabwe.

Against: Australia, Belgium, Canada, Finland, France, Germany, Greece, Hungary, Ireland, Italy, Japan, Poland, Republic of Korea, Sweden, Turkey, Ukraine, United Kingdom, United States.

Abstaining: Guatemala, Nicaragua, Senegal.

Annual Appeal 2004

During the year, OHCHR received $60 million in voluntary contributions from donors towards activities outlined in the 2004 Annual Appeal, representing an increase of $16 million over 2003. The UN regular budget provided $32.7 million in 2004.

Strengthening action to promote human rights

In response to General Assembly resolutions 56/153 [YUN 2001, p. 582], 57/203 [YUN 2002, p. 616] and 58/168 [YUN 2003, p. 660], the Secretary-General, in a September report [A/59/327], submitted the proposals of three Member States to strengthen UN action in human rights through the promotion of international cooperation based on the principles of non-selectivity, impartiality and objectivity.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 20 December [meeting 74], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Third Committee [A/59/503/Add.2], adopted resolution 59/190 without vote [agenda item 105 (b)].

Strengthening United Nations action in the field of human rights through the promotion of international cooperation and the importance of non-selectivity, impartiality and objectivity

The General Assembly,

Bearing in mind that among the purposes of the United Nations are those of developing friendly relations among nations based on respect for the principle of equal rights and self-determination of peoples and taking other appropriate measures to strengthen universal peace, as well as achieving international cooperation in solving international problems of an economic, social, cultural or humanitarian character and in promoting and encouraging respect for human rights and fundamental freedoms for all without distinction as to race, sex, language or religion,

Desirous of achieving further progress in international cooperation in promoting and encouraging respect for human rights and fundamental freedoms,

Considering that such international cooperation should be based on the principles embodied in international law, especially the Charter of the United Nations, as well as the Universal Declaration of Human Rights, the International Covenants on Human Rights and other relevant instruments,

Deeply convinced that United Nations action in the field of human rights should be based not only on a profound understanding of the broad range of problems existing in all societies but also on full respect for the political, economic and social realities of each of them, in strict compliance with the purposes and principles of the Charter and for the basic purpose of promoting and encouraging respect for human rights and fundamental freedoms through international cooperation,

Recalling its previous resolutions in this regard,

Reaffirming the importance of ensuring the universality, objectivity and non-selectivity of the consideration of human rights issues, as affirmed in the Vienna Declaration and Programme of Action adopted by the World Conference on Human Rights on 25 June 1993,

Affirming the importance of the objectivity, independence and discretion of the special rapporteurs and representatives on thematic issues and on countries, as well as of the members of the working groups, in carrying out their mandates,

Underlining the obligation that Governments have to promote and protect human rights and to carry out the responsibilities that they have undertaken under international law, especially the Charter, as well as various international instruments in the field of human rights,

1. Reiterates that, by virtue of the principle of equal rights and self-determination of peoples enshrined in the Charter of the United Nations, all peoples have the right freely to determine, without external interference, their political status and to pursue their economic, social and cultural development, and that every State has the duty to respect that right within the provisions of the Charter, including respect for territorial integrity;

2. Reaffirms that it is a purpose of the United Nations and the task of all Member States, in cooperation with the Organization, to promote and encourage respect for human rights and fundamental freedoms and to remain vigilant with regard to violations of human rights wherever they occur;

3. Calls upon all Member States to base their activities for the promotion and protection of human rights, including the development of further international cooperation in this field, on the Charter of the United Nations, the Universal Declaration of Human Rights, the International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights, the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights and other relevant international instruments, and to refrain from activities that are inconsistent with that international framework;

4. Considers that international cooperation in this field should make an effective and practical contribution to the urgent task of preventing mass and flagrant violations of human rights and fundamental freedoms for all and to the strengthening of international peace and security;

5. Reaffirms that the promotion, protection and full realization of all human rights and fundamental freedoms, as a legitimate concern of the world community, should be guided by the principles of non-selectivity, impartiality and objectivity and should not be used for political ends;

6. Requests all human rights bodies within the United Nations system, as well as the special rapporteurs, teurs and representatives, independent experts and working groups, to take duly into account the contents of the present resolution in carrying out their mandates;

7. Expresses its conviction that an unbiased and fair approach to human rights issues contributes to the promotion of international cooperation as well as to the effective promotion, protection and realization of human rights and fundamental freedoms;

8. Stresses, in this context, the continuing need for impartial and objective information on the political, economic and social situations and events of all countries;

9. Invites Member States to consider adopting, as appropriate, within the framework of their respective legal systems and in accordance with their obligations under international law, especially the Charter, and international human rights instruments, the measures that they may deem appropriate to achieve further progress in international cooperation in promoting and encouraging respect for human rights and fundamental freedoms;

10. Requests the Commission on Human Rights to take duly into account the present resolution and to consider further proposals for the strengthening of United Nations action in the field of human rights through the promotion of international cooperation and the importance of non-selectivity, impartiality and objectivity;

11. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General, and requests the Secretary-General to invite Member States and intergovernmental and non-governmental organizations to present further practical proposals and ideas that would contribute to the strengthening of United Nations action in the field of human rights through the promotion of international cooperation based on the principles of non-selectivity, impartiality and objectivity, and to submit a comprehensive report on the question to the General Assembly at its sixtieth session;

12. Decides to consider the matter at its sixty-first session under the item entitled "Human rights questions".

On 23 December, the Assembly decided that the item on human rights questions, including alternative approaches for improving the effective enjoyment of human rights and fundamental freedoms, would remain for consideration during its resumed fifty-ninth (2005) session (decision 59/552).

International cooperation in the field of human rights

On 21 April [res. 2004/63], the Commission called on Member States, specialized agencies and intergovernmental organizations to continue constructive dialogue and consultations to enhance the understanding and promotion and protection of all human rights and fundamental freedoms. States and relevant UN human rights mechanisms and procedures were asked to continue to pay attention to the importance of mutual cooperation in ensuring human rights promotion and protection.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 20 December [meeting 74], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Third Committee [A/59/503/Add.2], adopted resolution 59/187 without vote [agenda item 105 (b)].

Enhancement of international cooperation in the field of human rights

The General Assembly,

Reaffirming its commitment to promoting international cooperation, as set forth in the Charter of the United Nations, in particular Article 1, paragraph 3, as well as relevant provisions of the Vienna Declaration and Programme of Action, adopted by the World Conference on Human Rights on 25 June 1993, for enhancing genuine cooperation among Member States in the field of human rights,

Recalling its adoption of the United Nations Millennium Declaration on 8 September 2000 and its resolution 58/170 of 22 December 2003, and taking note of Commission on Human Rights resolution 2004/63 of 21 April 2004 on the enhancement of international cooperation in the field of human rights,

Recalling also the World Conference against Racism, Racial Discrimination, Xenophobia and Related Intolerance, held at Durban, South Africa, from 31 August to 8 September 2001, and its role in the enhancement of international cooperation in the field of human rights,

Recognizing that the enhancement of international cooperation in the field of human rights is essential for the full achievement of the purposes of the United Nations, including the effective promotion and protection of all human rights,

Reaffirming that dialogue among religions, cultures and civilizations in the field of human rights could contribute greatly to the enhancement of international cooperation in this field,

Emphasizing the need for further progress in the promotion and encouragement of respect for human rights and fundamental freedoms through, inter alia, international cooperation,

Underlining the fact that mutual understanding, dialogue, cooperation, transparency and confidence-building are important elements in all the activities for the promotion and protection of human rights,

Recalling the adoption of resolution 2000/22 of 18 August 2000, on the promotion of dialogue on human rights issues, by the Subcommission on the Promotion and Protection of Human Rights at its fifty-second session,

1. Reaffirms that it is one of the purposes of the United Nations and the responsibility of all Member States to promote, protect and encourage respect for human rights and fundamental freedoms through, inter alia, international cooperation;

2. Recognizes that, in addition to their separate responsibilities to their individual societies, States have a collective responsibility to uphold the principles of human dignity, equality and equity at the global level;

3. Reaffirms that dialogue among cultures and civilizations facilitates the promotion of a culture of tolerance and respect for diversity, and welcomes in this regard the holding of conferences and meetings at the national, regional and international levels on dialogue among civilizations;

4. Urges all actors on the international scene to build an international order based on inclusion, justice, equality and equity, human dignity, mutual understanding and promotion of and respect for cultural diversity and universal human rights, and to reject all doctrines of exclusion based on racism, racial discrimination, xenophobia and related intolerance;

5. Reaffirms the importance of the enhancement of international cooperation for the promotion and protection of human rights and for the achievement of the objectives of the fight against racism, racial discrimination, xenophobia and related intolerance;

6. Considers that international cooperation in the field of human rights, in conformity with the purposes and principles set out in the Charter of the United Nations and international law, should make an effective and practical contribution to the urgent task of preventing violations of human rights and fundamental freedoms;

7. Reaffirms that the promotion, protection and full realization of all human rights and fundamental freedoms should be guided by the principles of universality, non-selectivity, objectivity and transparency, in a manner consistent with the purposes and principles set out in the Charter;

8. Calls upon Member States, specialized agencies and intergovernmental organizations to continue to carry out a constructive dialogue and consultations for the enhancement of understanding and the promotion and protection of all human rights and fundamental freedoms, and encourages non-governmental organizations to contribute actively to this endeavour;

9. Invites States and relevant United Nations human rights mechanisms and procedures to continue to pay attention to the importance of mutual cooperation, understanding and dialogue in ensuring the promotion and protection of all human rights;

10. Decides to continue its consideration of the question at its sixtieth session.

At the same meeting, the Assembly, also on the recommendation of the Third Committee [A/59/503/Add.2], adopted resolution 59/204 by recorded vote (118-55-13) [agenda item 105 (b)].

Respect for the purposes and principles contained in the Charter of the United Nations to achieve international cooperation in promoting and encouraging respect for human rights and for fundamental freedoms and in solving international problems of a humanitarian character

The General Assembly,

Recalling that, in accordance with Article 56 of the Charter of the United Nations, all Member States have pledged themselves to take joint and separate action in cooperation with the Organization for the achievement of the purposes set forth in Article 55, including universal respect for and observance of human rights and fundamental freedoms for all without distinction as to race, sex, language or religion,

Recalling also the Preamble to the Charter, in particular the determination to reaffirm faith in fundamental human rights, in the dignity and worth of the human person and in the equal rights of men and women and of nations large and small,

Reaffirming that the promotion and protection of all human rights and fundamental freedoms must be considered a priority objective of the United Nations in accordance with its purposes and principles, in particular the purpose of international cooperation, and that, within the framework of these purposes and principles, the promotion and protection of all human rights is a legitimate concern of the international community,

Considering the major changes taking place on the international scene and the aspirations of all peoples to an international order based on the principles enshrined in the Charter, including promoting and encouraging respect for human rights and fundamental freedoms for all and respect for the principle of equal rights and self-determination of peoples, peace, democracy, justice, equality, the rule of law, pluralism, development, better standards of living and solidarity,

Recognizing that the international community should devise ways and means to remove current obstacles and meet the challenges to the full realization of all human rights and to prevent the continuation of human rights violations resulting therefrom throughout the world, and should continue to pay attention to the importance of mutual cooperation, understanding and dialogue in ensuring the promotion and protection of all human rights,

Reaffirming that the enhancement of international cooperation in the field of human rights is essential for the full achievement of the purposes of the United Nations and that human rights and fundamental freedoms are the birthright of all human beings, the promotion and protection of such rights and freedoms being the first responsibility of Governments,

Reaffirming also that all human rights are universal, indivisible, interdependent and interrelated and that the international community must treat human rights globally in a fair and equal manner, on the same footing and with the same emphasis,

Reaffirming further the various Articles of the Charter setting out the respective powers and functions of the General Assembly, the Security Council and the Economic and Social Council, as the paramount framework for the achievement of the purposes of the United Nations,

Reaffirming the commitment of all States to fulfil their obligations under other important instruments of international law, in particular those of international human rights law and international humanitarian law,

Bearing in mind that, in accordance with Article 103 of the Charter, in the event of a conflict between the obligations of the Members of the United Nations under the Charter and their obligations under any other international agreement, their obligations under the Charter shall prevail,

Recalling all its previous resolutions on the question, including resolution 58/188 of 22 December 2003,

1. Reiterates the solemn commitment of all States to enhance international cooperation in the field of human rights and in the solution to international problems of a humanitarian character in full compliance with the Charter of the United Nations, inter alia, by the strict observance of all the purposes and principles set forth in Articles 1 and 2 thereof;

2. Stresses the vital role of the work of the United Nations and regional arrangements, acting consistently with the purposes and principles enshrined in the Charter, in promoting and encouraging respect for human rights and fundamental freedoms, as well as in solving international problems of a humanitarian character, and affirms that all States, in these activities, must fully comply with the principles set forth in Article 2 of the Charter, in particular respecting the sovereign equality of all States and refraining from the threat or use of force against the territorial integrity or political independence of any State, or acting in any other manner inconsistent with the purposes of the United Nations;

3. Reaffirms that the United Nations shall promote universal respect for and observance of human rights and fundamental freedoms for all without distinction as to race, sex, language or religion;

4. Reaffirms also that the responsibility for managing worldwide economic and social development, the promotion and protection of human rights and threats to international peace and security must be shared among the nations of the world and should be exercised multilaterally and that, as the most universal and most representative organization in the world, the United Nations must play the central role;

5. Calls upon Member States to refrain from enacting or enforcing unilateral coercive measures as tools of political, military or economic pressure against any country, in particular against developing countries, which would prevent those countries from exercising their right to decide of their own free will their own political, economic and social systems;

6. Calls upon all States to cooperate fully, through constructive dialogue, to ensure the promotion and protection of all human rights for all and in promoting peaceful solutions to international problems of a humanitarian character and, in their actions towards that purpose, to comply strictly with the principles and norms of international law, inter alia, by fully respecting international human rights law and international humanitarian law;

7. Requests the Secretary-General to bring the present resolution to the attention of Member States, organs, bodies and other components of the United Nations system and intergovernmental and non-governmental organizations, and to disseminate it as widely as possible;

8. Decides to consider the question at its sixty-first session under the item entitled "Human rights questions".

Right to promote and protect human rights

Human rights defenders

Reports of Special Representative. In a January report [E/CN.4/2004/94], the Secretary-General's Special Representative on human rights defenders, Hina Jilani (Pakistan), described her activities and analysed alleged violations of the 1998 Declaration on the Right and Responsibility of Individuals, Groups and Organs of Society to Promote and Protect Universally Recognized Human Rights and Fundamental Freedoms (Declaration on human rights defenders), adopted by the General Assembly in resolution 53/144 [YUN 1998, p. 608]. She also analysed trends in Governments' responses to her communications and made a series of recommendations for strengthening support for the role of human rights defenders and for promoting the implementation of human rights standards.

The Special Representative noted that she had taken up 266 cases, representing a small proportion of what was occurring, which revealed allegations that defenders had been victims of killings, attacks, death threats, torture, arbitrary arrest and detention, and numerous other forms of mistreatment, including the targeting of their family members. She therefore urged States to adopt, publish and implement a policy on defenders, ensure domestic legislation conformed with the rights recognized in the 1998 Declaration and in other international human rights instruments and the Charter of the United Nations, and investigate promptly complaints and allegations brought to their attention. NGOs were encouraged to create and strengthen coalitions and networks to enhance defenders' protection and to accord priority to training defenders on the national, regional and international protection instruments and on ways to invoke them. A March addendum to the report [E/CN.4/2004/94/Add.3] summarized communications sent to and received from Governments.

The Special Representative visited Angola (16-24 August) to assess the situation and role of human rights defenders in the country [E/CN.4/2005/101/Add.2]. She described the legal and institutional environment in which human rights defenders worked in Angola, and examined the defenders' capacity to raise human rights issues, which, she observed, remained weak. State authorities continued to consider human rights defenders with hostility, and as a result, human rights defenders often practised self-censorship, leaving many important issues unaddressed. The absence of an independent media hindered the defenders' capacity to publicize their concerns and to conduct their activities. Defenders also continued to face serious obstacles to the creation and operation of NGOs, and their limited access to justice adversely affected their work. The Special Representative urged the Government to review existing legislation and ensure its compatibility with the 1998 Declaration; review the process for registering human rights defenders' associations; ensure full respect for the freedom of expression; improve access to information for human rights defenders and ensure that they had timely and regular access to State officials; establish an environment conducive to free and fair elections; and consider inviting OHCHR to increase the capacity of its presence in Angola. Human rights defenders were urged to seek training, strengthen their network and consider publishing an annual human rights report for Angola. The United Nations was asked to consider ways to contribute to the implementation of the Declaration, and OHCHR to consider seeking a broadening of its mandate and an increase in its personnel to monitor and raise concerns affecting human rights defenders.

In Turkey (11-20 October) [E/CN.4/2005/101/Add.3 & Corr.1], the Special Representative welcomed a significant improvement in the situation of human rights defenders over the past four years, but noted that they continued to face obstacles, particularly in the area of publicizing human rights concerns, forming NGOs and accessing information and funding. She expressed concern about the number of prosecutions and heavy fines inflicted on defenders and about the fact that some authorities perceived them as adversaries. The Government was called on to fully guarantee freedom of expression and of assembly; review laws regulating trade unions and collective bargaining to ensure that defenders could freely defend social and labour rights; simplify administrative procedures for establishing NGOs; and end practices that stigmatized human rights defenders. The Government was urged to ensure that harassment of human rights defenders was not perpetuated by new means.

In an October note [A/59/401], the Secretary-General transmitted a report of the Special Representative, in accordance with Assembly resolution 58/178 [YUN 2003, p. 665]. The Special Representative discussed the several levels of responsibility in applying the 1998 Declaration and presented examples of the most common violations against human rights defenders, including arbitrary arrest and detention, prosecution and pre-trial detention, violation of their physical integrity and harassment. The factors that encouraged those violations included, among other things, weaknesses in the legal system, limitations on the competence and independence of the judiciary, the lack of awareness or accountability among local authorities for the respect of international human rights standards and weaknesses in civil society. Actions needed to overcome the problem included a much wider dissemination and use of the Declaration, strengthened training on the Declaration for the judiciary, legislative reform, wider citizen participation, greater oversight by parliamentary bodies and better interministerial coordination. The report accorded special attention to the freedom of association, owing to various restrictions on the right and its centrality to the effective work of defenders. The obstacles facing the defenders in that regard included the criminalization of non-registered human rights groups; unnecessarily burdensome and lengthy registration procedures; limits on the creation of networks; inappropriate denial of registration; limited independence of registration authorities; requirements to re-register when new legislation was introduced; State scrutiny of and interference with an organization's management, objectives and activities; administrative and judicial harassment; and restrictions on cooperation with international human rights partners. The report concluded with examples of good practices and recommendations in conformity with the Declaration, relating in particular to registration, the objectives and activities of human rights NGOs, the suspension and closure of NGOs and access to funds.

On 20 December, the General Assembly took note of the Secretary-General's note (decision 59/528).

Commission action. On 21 April [res. 2004/68], the Commission, condemning all human rights violations committed against persons promoting and defending human rights and fundamental freedoms, called on States to protect human rights defenders and asked the Special Representative to report on her activities to the General Assembly and to the Commission. The Secretary-General and concerned UN agencies and organizations were requested to assist her.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 20 December [meeting 74], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Third Committee [A/59/503/Add.2], adopted resolution 59/192 without vote [agenda item 105 (b)].

Declaration on the Right and Responsibility of Individuals, Groups and Organs of Society to Promote and Protect Universally Recognized Human Rights and Fundamental Freedoms

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 53/144 of 9 December 1998, by which it adopted by consensus the Declaration on the Right and Responsibility of Individuals, Groups and Organs of Society to Promote and Protect Universally Recognized Human Rights and Fundamental Freedoms annexed to that resolution, and reiterating the importance of the Declaration and its wide dissemination,

Recalling also all previous resolutions on this subject, in particular its resolution 58/178 of 22 December 2003 and Commission on Human Rights resolution 2004/68 of 21 April 2004,

Noting with deep concern that, in many countries, persons and organizations engaged in promoting and defending human rights and fundamental freedoms are facing threats, harassment and insecurity as a result of those activities,

Gravely concerned by the continuing high level of human rights violations committed against persons engaged in promoting and defending human rights and fundamental freedoms around the world and by the fact that, in a number of countries in all regions of the world, impunity for threats, attacks and acts of intimidation against human rights defenders persists and that this has a negative impact on their work and safety,

Recalling that human rights defenders are entitled to equal protection of the law, and deeply concerned about any abuse of civil or criminal proceedings against them because of their activities for the promotion and protection of human rights and fundamental freedoms,

Concerned by the considerable number of communications received by the Special Representative of the Secretary-General on the situation of human rights defenders that, together with the reports submitted by some of the special procedure mechanisms, indicate the serious nature of the risks faced by human rights defenders,

Emphasizing the important role that individuals, groups and organs of society play in the promotion and protection of all human rights and fundamental freedoms for all,

Recalling that, in accordance with article 4 of the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights, certain rights are recognized as non-derogable in any circumstances and that any measures derogating from other provisions of the Covenant must be in accordance with that article in all cases, and underlining the exceptional and temporary nature of any such derogations, as stated in General Comment No. 29, on states of emergency, adopted by the Human Rights Committee on 24 July 2001,

Gravely concerned that, in some instances, national security and counter-terrorism legislation and other measures have been misused to target human rights defenders or have hindered their work and safety in a manner contrary to international law,

Acknowledging the significant work conducted by the Special Representative, and welcoming the cooperation between the Special Representative and other special procedures of the Commission on Human Rights,

Welcoming regional initiatives for the promotion and protection of human rights and the cooperation between international and regional mechanisms for the protection of human rights defenders, and encouraging further development in this regard,

Welcoming also the steps taken by some States towards adopting national policies and legislation for the protection of human rights defenders,

Recalling that the primary responsibility for promoting and protecting human rights rests with the State, and noting with deep concern that the activities of some non-State actors pose a major threat to the security of human rights defenders,

Emphasizing the need for strong and effective measures for the protection of human rights defenders,

1. Calls upon all States to promote and give full effect to the Declaration on the Right and Responsibility of Individuals, Groups and Organs of Society to Promote and Protect Universally Recognized Human Rights and Fundamental Freedoms, including by taking, as appropriate, practical steps to that end;

2. Welcomes the reports of the Special Representative of the Secretary-General on the situation of human rights defenders and her contribution to the effective promotion of the Declaration and the improvement of the protection of human rights defenders worldwide;

3. Encourages all States to ensure and maintain an environment conducive to the work of human rights defenders;

4. Condemns all human rights violations committed against persons engaged in promoting and defending human rights and fundamental freedoms around the world, and urges States to take all appropriate action, consistent with the Declaration and all other relevant human rights instruments, to eliminate such human rights violations;

5. Calls upon all States to take all necessary measures to ensure the protection of human rights defenders, at both the local and the national levels;

6. Also calls upon all States to ensure, protect and respect the freedom of expression and association of human rights defenders and, where registration is required, to facilitate registration, including through the establishment of effective and transparent criteria and non-discriminatory procedures under domestic law;

7. Urges States to ensure that any measures to combat terrorism and preserve national security comply with their obligations under international law, in particular under international human rights law, and do not hinder the work and safety of human rights defenders;

8. Emphasizes the importance of combating impunity, and in this regard urges States to take appropriate measures to address the question of impunity for threats, attacks and acts of intimidation against human rights defenders;

9. Urges States to ensure that complaints from human rights defenders are investigated and addressed in a transparent, independent and accountable manner;

10. Urges all Governments to cooperate with and assist the Special Representative in the performance of her tasks and to furnish all information in the fulfilment of her mandate upon request;

11. Calls upon Governments to give serious consideration to responding favourably to the requests of the Special Representative to visit their countries, and urges them to enter into a constructive dialogue with the Special Representative with respect to the follow-up and implementation of her recommendations, so as to enable her to fulfil her mandate even more effectively;

12. Urges those Governments that have not yet responded to the communications transmitted to them by the Special Representative to answer without further delay;

13. Invites Governments to translate the Declaration into national languages and to take measures to improve its dissemination;

14. Encourages States to promote awareness and training in regard to the Declaration in order to enable officials, agencies, authorities and the judiciary to observe the provisions of the Declaration and thus to promote better understanding and respect for human rights defenders;

15. Requests all concerned United Nations agencies and organizations, within their mandates, to provide all possible assistance and support to the Special Representative in the implementation of her programme of activities;

16. Invites relevant United Nations bodies, including at the country level, within their mandates and working in cooperation with States, to give due consideration to the Declaration and to the reports of the Special Representative, and requests the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights to draw the attention of all relevant United Nations bodies, including at the country level, to the reports of the Special Representative;

17. Encourages all Governments to investigate expeditiously urgent appeals and allegations brought to their attention by the Special Representative and to take timely action to prevent violations of the rights of human rights defenders;

18. Requests the Secretary-General to provide the Special Representative with all necessary human, material and financial resources in order to enable her to continue to carry out her mandate effectively, including through country visits;

19. Requests the Special Representative to continue to report on her activities to the General Assembly and to the Commission on Human Rights in accordance with her mandate;

20. Decides to consider the question at its sixtieth session under the item entitled "Human rights questions".

Human rights and human responsibilities

On 21 April [dec. 2004/117], by a recorded vote of 26 to 25, with 2 abstentions, the Commission asked OHCHR to circulate to Member States and to intergovernmental organizations and NGOs the pre-draft declaration on human social responsibilities [YUN 2003, p. 667], requesting their views on it, and to submit in 2005 a compilation of the replies received.

Other aspects

Good governance

Note by Secretariat. The Commission had before it a Secretariat note [E/CN.4/2004/92] informing members about the activities undertaken to prepare the seminar on good governance practices for the promotion of human rights (below), pursuant to a 2003 Commission resolution [YUN 2003, p. 667].

Commission action. On 21 April [res. 2004/70], the Commission called on States to provide responsible government, responsive to the needs of the people, to achieve human rights. The High Commissioner was requested to compile ideas and practices arising from the seminar (see below) and material provided by States, intergovernmental organizations and NGOs for consultation by interested States and to report in 2005 on the outcome of the seminar.

Seminar. In response to Commission resolution 2004/70 (see above), OHCHR, in collaboration with the United Nations Development Programme (UNDP) and the Government of the Republic of Korea, convened a seminar on good governance practices for the promotion of human rights (Seoul, 15-16 September) [E/CN.4/2005/97]. The purpose was to discuss illustrative governance practices that had had an impact on the promotion of human rights and to draw lessons from them. Eight case studies were discussed during four sessions on the rule of law, strengthening the delivery of services contributing to the realization of human rights, strengthening democratic institutions and participation, and combating corruption in the public and private sectors. The seminar concluded that, although there was a mutually reinforcing relationship between good governance and human rights, there was no exhaustive definition of the notion of good governance. However, common elements could be identified, such as participation, accountability, transparency, and State responsibility and accessibility, in particular to marginalized groups. Participants also concluded that there was a need for greater awareness of good governance and its relationship to human rights, particularly from the perspective of political will and public participation.

Protection systems

A February report of the High Commissioner [E/CN.4/2004/12/Add.3] summarized Governments' replies to a national human rights protection systems questionnaire. While all States indicated that they had constitutional human rights provisions, in the majority of responding States, judicial organs, including Constitutional Courts, were empowered to review the compatibility of domestic law with the human rights norms of international instruments to which the State concerned was party. A number of States noted that national courts referred to human rights instruments and took into account international human rights law when interpreting national law in cases before them. All responding States reported that they had taken or were taking measures relating to human rights/civic rights education or human rights awareness-raising, both in the primary and secondary school curricula and in the training of professional groups, such as the police, civil servants, the judiciary and religious groups. The majority indicated that they had some form of national human rights institution which monitored human rights compliance.

The report also described action taken pursuant to the Secretary-General's programme on strengthening of the United Nations, as contained in his 2002 report [YUN 2002, p. 1352], which required the High Commissioner to develop and implement a plan, in cooperation with the United Nations Development Group and the Executive Committee for Humanitarian Affairs, to strengthen human rights-related UN action at the country level. In that regard, various UN system entities were combining their efforts to provide support to Member States, at their request, in strengthening their national protection systems, with the key goal of enhancing the capacity of UN country teams to help strengthen national systems for human rights promotion and protection.

Human rights instruments

General aspects

In 2004, seven UN human rights instruments were in force that required their implementation to be monitored by expert bodies. The instruments and their treaty bodies were: the 1965 International Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Racial Discrimination [YUN 1965, p. 440, GA res. 2106 A (XX)] (Committee on the Elimination of Racial Discrimination); the 1966 International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights and the Optional Protocol thereto [YUN 1966, p. 423, GA res. 2200 A (XXI)] and the Second Optional Protocol, aiming at the abolition of the death penalty [YUN 1989, p. 484, GA res. 44/128] (Human Rights Committee); the 1966 International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights [YUN 1966, p. 419, GA res. 2200 A (XXI)] (Committee on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights); the 1979 Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women [YUN 1979, p. 895, GA res. 34/180] and Optional Protocol [YUN 1999, p. 1100, GA res. 54/4] (Committee on the Elimination of Discrimination against Women); the 1984 Convention against Torture and Other Cruel, Inhuman or Degrading Treatment or Punishment [YUN 1984, p. 813, GA res. 39/46] and 2002 Optional Protocol [YUN 2002, p. 631, GA res. 57/199] (Committee against Torture); the 1989 Convention on the Rights of the Child [YUN 1989, p. 560, GA res. 44/25] and Optional Protocols on the involvement of children in armed conflict and on the sale of children, child prostitution and child pornography [YUN 2000, pp. 616 & 618, GA res. 54/263] (Committee on the Rights of the Child); and the 1990 International Convention on the Protection of the Rights of All Migrant Workers and Members of Their Families [YUN 1990, p. 594, GA res. 45/158] (Committee on the Protection of the Rights of All Migrant Workers and Migrants and Their Families).

Commission action. On 21 April [dec. 2004/123], the Commission, taking note of a 2003 Subcommission resolution [YUN 2003, p. 668], approved the Subcommission's decision to appoint Emmanuel Decaux (France) as Special Rapporteur to conduct a detailed study of the universal implementation of international human rights treaties based on his working paper [ibid.]. It decided to ask him to submit a preliminary report to the Subcommission in 2004, an interim report in 2005 and a final report in 2006. The Secretary-General was asked to assist him.

On 22 July, the Economic and Social Council approved the Commission's decision to appoint the Special Rapporteur and its requests to him to report; it also endorsed the Commission's request to the Secretary-General to assist him (decision 2004/281).

Preliminary report. In a July preliminary report [E/CN.4/Sub.2/2004/8], the Special Rapporteur defined the scope of the study and spelled out the legal aspects of the universal implementation of human rights treaties in the context of international public law. Noting that he intended to devote the study to the universal ratification of treaties and the universal implementation of international human rights instruments, the Special Rapporteur indicated that the study should take into account parallel efforts to improve the human rights treaty system undertaken in close cooperation with all interested parties. In that regard, it might be useful to convene a seminar, with a view to creating a grid for use in organizing dialogue with States regarding the ratification of universal treaties. Annexed to the report were tables listing the principal universal instruments, including those deposited with the Secretary-General; a quantitative overview of ratifications of instruments that had a monitoring mechanism; and the status of ratification of the International Covenants (see pp. 662 and 663) and Optional Protocols to the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights (see p. 662).

Subcommission action. On 12 August [res. 2004/26], the Subcommission asked the Secretary-General to continue to assist the Special Rapporteur and the Special Rapporteur to submit an interim report in 2005.

Human rights treaty body system

Note by OHCHR. A February note by OHCHR [E/CN.4/2004/98] described developments in the human rights treaty body system, in response to a 2002 Commission request to the Secretary-General [YUN 2002, p. 623]. During the reporting period, further ratification of and accession to key human rights instruments were recorded among Member States, and the treaty bodies continued to develop their working methods and to streamline reporting procedures. Technical assistance was provided to facilitate reporting by States parties to those instruments, and delays in processing individual complaints were reduced significantly. Efforts also continued to develop and harmonize electronic databases concerning the treaty bodies, and to strengthen the web sites of OHCHR and the UN Division for the Advancement of Women.

Commission action. On 21 April [res. 2004/78], the Commission encouraged continuing efforts by human rights treaty bodies and the Secretary-General to improve the effectiveness of the treaty body system, with a view to a more coordinated approach to its activities and standardized reporting. It requested the Secretary-General to provide the resources necessary to give the treaty bodies adequate administrative support and better access to technical expertise and relevant information, and to report in 2006.

Meeting of chairpersons. A May note by the Secretary-General [HRI/MC/2004/1] contained the provisional agenda and annotations for the sixteenth meeting of chairpersons of human rights treaty bodies (see below), and by an August note [A/59/254], he submitted the report of the meeting (Geneva, 23-25 June). The meeting considered follow-up to the recommendations of the fifteenth meeting [YUN 2003, p. 669] and reviewed developments relating to the work of the treaty bodies. In that context, the chairpersons considered the issues of strengthening support to the treaty bodies, enhancing their effectiveness and streamlining their reporting procedures and requirements. Background information for discussions was provided by a Secretariat report [HRI/MC/2004/3] on guidelines on an expanded core document and treaty-specific targeted reports and harmonized guidelines on reporting under the international human rights treaties. Also held was the sixth joint meeting of treaty body chairpersons, special rapporteurs/representatives, independent experts and chairpersons of working groups of the Commission's special procedures, including a meeting with the Chairperson of the Board of the Voluntary Fund for Technical Cooperation. The meeting adopted recommendations relating to technical cooperation; cooperation with special procedures mandate-holders, field presences, UN agencies and other entities, the African Commission on Human and Peoples' Rights, and the Commission; NGO participation; ratification of the International Convention on the Protection of the Rights of All Migrant Workers and Members of Their Families (see below); participation in the inter-committee meeting; and the approach to be adopted by treaty bodies when addressing States parties' last-minute requests for postponement of the consideration of their reports, as well as when delegations did not attend to present reports as scheduled. The chairpersons requested the Secretariat to consider a means of presenting the corpus of treaty body jurisprudence in an accessible way, along with commentaries, to allow it to be used more effectively by all treaty bodies and others. Annexed to the report was the report of the third inter-committee meeting of human rights treaty bodies (Geneva, 21-22 June), which adopted recommendations on reporting guidelines and support for national human rights institutions, among other relevant issues.

On 20 December, the General Assembly took note of the report on the chairpersons' meeting (decision 59/528).

Report of Secretary-General. An August report of the Secretary-General [A/59/308] described efforts to implement General Assembly resolution 57/202 [YUN 2002, p. 623] on the effective implementation of international human rights instruments, including reporting obligations under those instruments. The report focused on the meetings of persons chairing human rights treaty bodies and the inter-committee meetings on the methods of work of treaty bodies relating to reporting.

On 20 December, the Assembly took note of the report (decision 59/528).

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 20 December [meeting 74], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Third Committee [A/59/503/Add.1], adopted resolution 59/181 by recorded vote (128-52-4) [agenda item 105 (a)].

Equitable geographical distribution in the membership of the human rights treaty bodies

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 56/146 of 19 December 2001,

Reaffirming the importance of the goal of universal ratification of the United Nations human rights instruments,

Welcoming the significant increase in the number of ratifications of United Nations human rights instruments, which has especially contributed to their universality,

Reiterating the importance of the effective functioning of treaty bodies established pursuant to United Nations human rights instruments for the full and effective implementation of those instruments,

Recalling that, with regard to the election of the members of the human rights treaty bodies, the Commission on Human Rights and the General Assembly have recognized the importance of giving consideration in their membership to equitable geographical distribution, gender balance and representation of the principal legal systems and of bearing in mind that the members shall be elected and shall serve in their personal capacity, and shall be of high moral character, acknowledged impartiality and recognized competence in the field of human rights,

Reaffirming the significance of national and regional particularities and various historical, cultural and religious backgrounds, as well as of different political, economic and legal systems,

Recognizing that the United Nations pursues multilingualism as a means of promoting, protecting and preserving diversity of languages and cultures globally and that genuine multilingualism promotes unity in diversity and international understanding,

Recalling that the Commission on Human Rights and the General Assembly have encouraged States parties to United Nations human rights treaties, individually and through meetings of States parties, to consider how to give better effect, inter alia, to the principle of equitable geographical distribution in the membership of treaty bodies,

Expressing concern at the regional imbalance in the current composition of the membership of some of the human rights treaty bodies,

Noting in particular that the status quo tends to be particularly detrimental to the election of experts from some regional groups,

Convinced that the goal of equitable geographical distribution in the membership of human rights treaty bodies is perfectly compatible and can be fully realized and achieved in harmony with the need to ensure gender balance and the representation of the principal legal systems in those bodies and the high moral character, acknowledged impartiality and recognized competence in the field of human rights of their members,

1. Encourages the States parties to the United Nations human rights instruments to adopt concrete actions, inter alia, the possible establishment of quota distribution systems by geographical region for the election of the members of the treaty bodies, thereby ensuring the paramount objective of equitable geographical distribution in the membership of those human rights bodies;

2. Calls upon the States parties to the United Nations human rights instruments to include, as an agenda item at their forthcoming meetings, a debate on ways and means to ensure equitable geographical distribution in the membership of the human rights treaty bodies, based on the recommendations of the Commission on Human Rights and the Economic and Social Council and the provisions of the present resolution;

3. Recommends, when considering the possible establishment of a quota by region for the election of the membership of each treaty body, the introduction of flexible procedures that encompass the following criteria:

(a) Each of the five regional groups established by the General Assembly must be assigned a quota of the membership of each treaty body in equivalent proportion to the number of States parties to the instrument that it represents;

(b) There must be provision for periodic revisions that reflect the relative changes in the geographical distribution of States parties;

(c) Automatic periodic revisions should be envisaged in order to avoid amending the text of the instrument when the quotas are revised;

4. Stresses that the process needed to achieve the goal of equitable geographical distribution in the membership of human rights treaty bodies can contribute to raising awareness of the importance of gender balance, the representation of the principal legal systems and the principle that the members of the treaty bodies shall be elected and shall serve in their personal capacity, and shall be of high moral character, acknowledged impartiality and recognized competence in the field of human rights;

5. Requests the chairpersons of the human rights treaty bodies to consider at their next meeting the content of the present resolution and to submit, through the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights, specific recommendations for the achievement of the goal of equitable geographical distribution in the membership of the human rights treaty bodies;

6. Requests the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights to submit concrete recommendations on the implementation of the present resolution to the General Assembly at its sixtieth session;

7. Decides to continue its consideration of the question at its sixtieth session under the sub-item entitled "Implementation of human rights instruments".

RECORDED VOTE ON RESOLUTION 59/181:

Reservations to human rights treaties

Working paper. In July [E/CN.4/Sub.2/2004/42], Françoise Hampson (United Kingdom) submitted a final working paper on reservations to human rights treaties. She had submitted previous working papers in 1999 [YUN 1999, p. 574] and 2002 [YUN 2002, p. 625] and an expanded report in 2003 [YUN 2003, p. 669]. She concluded that there was a need to consider the relationship between a reserving State and another State party and between a reserving State and the treaty monitoring mechanism. Generally, the validity or effectiveness of a reservation was not decisive. However, the issue of validity might become decisive when/if a treaty body was called on to reach an opinion in an inter-State case or an individual application. Ms. Hampson recommended that the Subcommission suspend further consideration of the question of reservations to human rights treaties, pending the publication of the next report of the Special Rapporteur of the International Law Commission (ILC) (see p. 1298) on reservations to treaties, particularly, his examination of how to determine whether a reservation was compatible with the objects and purposes of a human rights treaty and the consequences of such a finding.

Subcommission action. On 12 August [dec. 2004/110], the Subcommission decided to transmit Ms. Hampson's working paper to the Commission (see above), the Committee on the Elimination of Racial Discrimination (CERD), which originally requested the study, and other human rights treaty monitoring bodies and ILC.

Covenant on Civil and Political Rights and Optional Protocols

Accessions and ratifications

As at 31 December 2004, parties to the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights and the Optional Protocol thereto, adopted by the General Assembly in resolution 2200 A (XXI) [YUN 1966, p. 423], numbered 154 and 104, respectively. During the year, Liberia, Mauritania and Swaziland became parties to the Covenant.

The Second Optional Protocol, aiming at the abolition of the death penalty, adopted by the Assembly in resolution 44/128 [YUN 1989, p. 484], was acceded to by the Czech Republic and Estonia and ratified by San Marino, bringing the total number of States parties to 54 as at 31 December.

Implementation

Monitoring body. The Human Rights Committee, established under article 28 of the Covenant, held three sessions in 2004: its eightieth from 15 March to 2 April in New York, and its eighty-first from 5 to 30 July [A/59/40, vol. I] and eighty-second from 18 October to 5 November [A/60/40, vol. I] in Geneva. In 2004, the Committee considered reports from 15 States—Albania, Belgium, Benin, Colombia, Finland, Germany, Liechtenstein, Lithuania, Morocco, Namibia, Poland, Serbia and Montenegro, Suriname, Tajikistan and Uganda—under article 40. It adopted views on communications from individuals alleging violations of their rights under the Covenant, and decided that other such communications were inadmissible. Those views and decisions were annexed to the Committee's reports [A/59/40, vol. II; A/60/40, vol. II].

On 29 March, the Committee adopted General Comment No. 31 on the nature of the general legal obligation imposed on States parties to the Covenant. A June note [E/2004/87] by the Secretary-General contained the texts of the Committee's General Comments Nos. 29 [YUN 2001, p. 590], 30 [YUN 2002, p. 626] and 31 (above).

On 23 July, the Economic and Social Council took note of the Secretary-General's note (decision 2004/317).

By notifications of 27 January, 30 March, 12 April, 3, 4 and 13 May and 2 June, Peru stated that it had extended the state of emergency in different provinces and parts of the country. On 5 August, it notified other States parties, through the intermediary of the Secretary-General, of the further extension of the state of emergency for 60 days. By further notifications of 28 October and 16 and 23 November, Peru again extended the state of emergency in different parts of the country. On 28 September, Jamaica notified other States parties, through the intermediary of the Secretary-General, of the declaration of a state of emergency for an initial period of 30 days; on 27 October, it informed the Secretary-General that the possible derogation from the rights guaranteed by various articles of the Covenant ceased on 8 October.

The twenty-third meeting of States parties to the Covenant (New York, 9 September) [CCPR/SP/62 & Add.1] was held to elect nine Committee members to replace those whose terms were due to expire on 31 December.

Commission action. On 21 April [res. 2004/69], the Commission, welcoming the Secretary-General's initiative to give more publicity to the work of the Human Rights Committee, requested him to ensure that OHCHR assisted the Committee to implement its mandate and to submit in 2005 and 2006 a report on the status of the Covenant and its Optional Protocols.

Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights

Accessions and ratifications

As at 31 December 2004, there were 151 parties to the International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights, adopted by the General Assembly in resolution 2200 A (XXI) [YUN 1966, p. 419]. Liberia, Mauritania and Swaziland became parties during the year.

On 21 April [res. 2004/69] (see also above), the Commission asked the Secretary-General to report on the status of the Covenant in 2005 and 2006.

Draft optional protocol

In response to a 2003 Commission request [YUN 2003, p. 670], the open-ended Working Group to consider options regarding the elaboration of an optional protocol to the Covenant held its first session (Geneva, 23 February–5 March) [E/CN.4/2004/44]. The optional protocol would be designed to establish a formal complaints procedure for individuals or groups who felt that their rights under the Covenant had been violated.

After considering preliminary views on options by States, delegations and representatives of intergovernmental organizations and NGOs, the Working Group held an interactive dialogue with the Commission's special rapporteurs whose mandates addressed economic, social and cultural rights, and with experts of the Human Rights Committee, the Committee on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights and CERD. The Group also discussed issues related to the nature and scope of States parties' obligations under the Covenant, the justiciability of economic, social and cultural rights and the benefits of an optional protocol to the Covenant and its complementarity with other mechanisms. Thereafter, the Group's Chairperson-Rapporteur recommended renewing the Group's mandate for two years; authorizing the Group to meet for 10 working days prior to the Commission's 2005 and 2006 sessions; and inviting a representative of the Committee on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights to attend the Group's meetings. It was proposed that the Commission identify experts who could be invited to future Working Group sessions and request as background documentation for its next session a report of the Secretary-General providing the Group at its second session with a comparative summary of existing communications and enquiry procedures and practices under international human rights instruments and the UN system.

Commission action. On 19 April [res. 2004/29], by a recorded vote of 48 to none, with 5 abstentions, the Commission decided to renew the Group's mandate for a two-year period; authorized it to meet for 10 working days prior to the Commission's 2005 and 2006 sessions; invited a representative of the Committee on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights to attend the meetings; and requested the Chairperson-Rapporteur to identify experts who could be invited to the Group's future sessions. The Group was requested to report in 2005. The Secretary-General was asked to submit to the Group, at its second session, a report containing a comparative summary of existing communications and enquiry procedures and practices under international human rights instruments and under the UN system, and to report to the Commission in 2005.

ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL ACTION

In July, the Economic and Social Council, on the recommendation of the Commission on Human Rights [E/2004/23], adopted decision 2004/256 by recorded vote (49-1-4) [agenda 14 (g)].

Question of the realization in all countries of the economic, social and cultural rights contained in the Universal Declaration of Human Rights and in the International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights, and study of special problems which the developing countries face in their efforts to achieve these human rights

At its 48th plenary meeting, on 22 July 2004, the Economic and Social Council took note of Commission on Human Rights resolution 2004/29 of 19 April 2004 and approved the decision of the Commission to renew for a period of two years the mandate of the open-ended Working Group of the Commission with a view to considering options regarding the elaboration of an optional protocol to the International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights, pursuant to Commission resolution 2002/24 of 22 April 2002, and authorized the Working Group to meet for ten working days prior to the sixty-first and the sixty-second sessions of the Commission.

In favour: Armenia, Azerbaijan, Bangladesh, Belgium, Belize, Benin, Bhutan, Burundi, Canada, Chile, China, Colombia, Congo, Cuba, Ecuador, El Salvador, Finland, France, Germany, Ghana, Greece, Guatemala, Hungary, India, Indonesia, Ireland, Italy, Jamaica, Japan, Kenya, Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Malaysia, Mauritius, Mozambique, Namibia, Nicaragua, Nigeria, Panama, Poland, Republic of Korea, Russian Federation, Senegal, Sweden, Tunisia, Turkey, Ukraine, United Kingdom, United Republic of Tanzania, Zimbabwe.

Against: Australia.

Abstaining: Qatar, Saudi Arabia, United Arab Emirates, United States.

Implementation

Monitoring body. The Committee on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights held its thirty-second (26 April–14 May) and thirty-third (8–26 November) sessions, both in Geneva [E/2005/22]. Its pre-sessional working group met in Geneva from 29 November to 3 December to identify issues to be discussed with reporting States.

On 23 July, the Economic and Social Council took note of the Committee's report on its thirtieth and thirty-first sessions, held in 2003 [YUN 2003, p. 671] (decision 2004/317).

In 2004, the Committee examined reports under articles 16 and 17 of the Covenant submitted by Azerbaijan, Chile, Denmark, Ecuador, Greece, Italy, Kuwait, Lithuania, Malta and Spain.

The Committee, as a follow-up to its 2002 day of general discussion [YUN 2002, p. 627] on the equal right of men and women to the enjoyment of all economic, social and cultural rights (article 3 of the Covenant), continued to discuss the draft general comment on article 3, and, as follow-up to its 2003 day of general discussion [YUN 2003, p. 671] on the right to work (article 6), it continued its discussions on the draft general comment on article 6.

Convention against racial discrimination

Accessions and ratifications

As at 31 December, the number of parties to the International Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Racial Discrimination, adopted by the General Assembly in resolution 2106 A (XX) [YUN 1965, p. 440], rose to 170, with ratification by Comoros.

On 22 April [res. 2004/88], by a recorded vote of 38 to 1, with 14 abstentions, the Commission reiterated the call made in the Durban Plan of Action, adopted at the World Conference against Racism, Racial Discrimination, Xenophobia and Related Intolerance [YUN 2001, p. 615], to achieve universal ratification of the Convention by 2005 and for all States to consider making the declaration provided for in article 14 (see below).

The Secretary-General reported on the status of the Convention as at 1 July [A/59/275].

Implementation

Monitoring body. The Committee on the Elimination of Racial Discrimination (CERD), established under article 8 of the Convention, held its sixty-fourth (23 February–12 March) and sixty-fifth (2–20 August) sessions [A/59/18], both in Geneva.

The Committee considered reports submitted by Argentina, the Bahamas, Belarus, Brazil, Kazakhstan, Lebanon, the Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Madagascar, Mauritania, Nepal, the Netherlands, Portugal, Slovakia, Spain, Suriname, Sweden and Tajikistan. It adopted a decision on Guyana, regretting the State party's inability to submit its initial to fourteenth periodic reports, combined in one document, in time for consideration in 2004. On 20 August, CERD made public its concluding observations relating to the Convention's implementation by Saint Lucia, in the absence of any indication as to when the initial to seventh periodic reports would be submitted.

Under article 14 of the Convention, CERD considered communications from individuals or groups of individuals claiming violation of their rights enumerated in the Convention by a State party. Forty-five States parties had recognized CERD's competence to do so (Algeria, Australia, Austria, Azerbaijan, Belgium, Brazil, Bulgaria, Chile, Costa Rica, Cyprus, Czech Republic, Denmark, Ecuador, Finland, France, Germany, Hungary, Iceland, Ireland, Italy, Liechtenstein, Luxembourg, Malta, Mexico, Monaco, Netherlands, Norway, Peru, Poland, Portugal, Republic of Korea, Romania, Russian Federation, Senegal, Serbia and Montenegro, Slovakia, Slovenia, South Africa, Spain, Sweden, Switzerland, The former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia, Ukraine, Uruguay, Venezuela).

Pursuant to article 15, the Committee was empowered to consider petitions, reports and other information relating to Trust and Non-Self-Governing Territories. The Committee noted, as it had in the past, the difficulty in fulfilling its functions in that regard, owing to the lack of copies of relevant petitions and to the fact that reports received contained scant information relating directly to the Convention's principles and objectives.

CERD also considered follow-up to the World Conference against Racism, Racial Discrimination, Xenophobia and Related Intolerance [YUN 2001, p. 615] and the Third Decade to Combat Racism and Racial Discrimination (1993–2003), proclaimed by the General Assembly in resolution 48/91 [YUN 1993, p. 853] (see p. 686).

The Committee adopted decisions under the early warning and urgent procedures regarding the situation in Darfur, Sudan [dec. 1(65)], and on Israel [dec. 2(65)]. It also adopted general recommendation XXX on discrimination against non-citizens.

An August report [A/59/276] of the Secretary-General on CERD's financial situation indicated that States parties' arrears outstanding to the Committee as at 1 July totalled $151,052.52. As at 31 December, 39 States parties had accepted an amendment to article 8 of the Convention regarding the financing of CERD [YUN 1992, p. 714]. The amendment was to enter into force when accepted by a two-thirds majority of States parties, comprising approximately 113 of the 170 States parties to the Convention. A meeting of the States parties (New York, 14 January) [CERD/SP/66 & Add.1-3] considered the biographical data of candidates for election to replace Committee members whose terms of office were to expire on 19 January.

As the Committee Chairperson was unable to attend the Commission's session, he submitted the text of an oral report [E/CN.4/2004/126] on the Committee's work.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 20 December [meeting 74], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Third Committee [A/59/501], adopted resolution 59/176 without vote [agenda item 103 (a)].

International Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Racial Discrimination

The General Assembly,

Recalling its previous resolutions on the International Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Racial Discrimination, most recently resolution 57/194 of 18 December 2002,

Bearing in mind the Vienna Declaration and Programme of Action adopted by the World Conference on Human Rights on 25 June 1993, in particular section II.B of the Declaration, relating to equality, dignity and tolerance,

Reiterating the need to intensify the struggle to eliminate all forms of racism, racial discrimination, xenophobia and related intolerance throughout the world,

Reiterating also the importance of the Convention, which is one of the most widely accepted human rights instruments adopted under the auspices of the United Nations,

Reaffirming that universal adherence to and full implementation of the Convention are of paramount importance for promoting equality and non-discrimination in the world, as stated in the Durban Declaration and Programme of Action adopted by the World Conference against Racism, Racial Discrimination, Xenophobia and Related Intolerance on 8 September 2001,

Mindful of the importance of the contributions of the Committee on the Elimination of Racial Discrimination to the effective implementation of the Convention and to the efforts of the United Nations to combat racism, racial discrimination, xenophobia and related intolerance,

Emphasizing the obligation of all States parties to the Convention to take legislative, judicial and other measures in order to secure full implementation of the provisions of the Convention,

Recalling its resolution 47/111 of 16 December 1992, in which it welcomed the decision, taken on 15 January 1992 by the Fourteenth Meeting of States Parties to the International Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Racial Discrimination, to amend paragraph 6 of article 8 of the Convention and to add a new paragraph, as paragraph 7 of article 8, with a view to providing for the financing of the Committee from the regular budget of the United Nations, and reiterating its deep concern that the amendment to the Convention has not yet entered into force,

Stressing the importance of enabling the Committee to function smoothly and to have all necessary facilities for the effective performance of its functions under the Convention,

I

Reports of the Committee on the Elimination of Racial Discrimination

1. Takes note of the reports of the Committee on the Elimination of Racial Discrimination on its sixty-second and sixty-third and its sixty-fourth and sixty-fifth sessions;

2. Commends the Committee for its contributions to the effective implementation of the International Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Racial Discrimination, especially through the examination of reports under article 9 of the Convention, action on communications under article 14 of the Convention and thematic discussions, which contribute to the prevention and elimination of racism, racial discrimination, xenophobia and related intolerance;

3. Calls upon States parties to fulfil their obligation, under article 9, paragraph 1, of the Convention, to submit their periodic reports on measures taken to implement the Convention in due time;

4. Expresses its concern at the fact that a great number of reports are overdue and continue to be overdue, in particular initial reports, which constitutes an obstacle to the full implementation of the Convention;

5. Encourages States parties to the Convention whose reports are seriously overdue to avail themselves of the advisory services and technical assistance that the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights can provide, upon their request, for the preparation of the reports;

6. Encourages the Committee to continue to cooperate and exchange information with United Nations bodies and mechanisms, in particular with the Subcommission on the Promotion and Protection of Human Rights and the Special Rapporteur of the Commission on Human Rights on contemporary forms of racism, racial discrimination, xenophobia and related intolerance, and with intergovernmental organizations, as well as with non-governmental organizations;

7. Encourages States parties to continue to include a gender perspective in their reports to the Committee, and invites the Committee to take into account a gender perspective in the implementation of its mandate;

8. Notes with appreciation the engagement of the Committee in the follow-up to the Durban Declaration and Programme of Action;

9. Expresses its appreciation for the efforts made so far by the Committee to improve the efficiency of its working methods, and encourages the Committee to continue its activities in this regard;

10. Encourages the continued participation of members of the Committee in the annual inter-committee meetings and meetings of chairpersons of the human rights treaty bodies, especially with a view to a more co-ordinated approach to the activities of the treaty body system and standardized reporting;

II

Financial situation of the Committee on the Elimination of Racial Discrimination

11. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General on the financial situation of the Committee on the Elimination of Racial Discrimination;

12. Expresses its profound concern at the fact that a number of States parties to the International Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Racial Discrimination have still not fulfilled their financial obligations, as shown in the report of the Secretary-General, and strongly appeals to all States parties that are in arrears to fulfil their outstanding financial obligations under article 8, paragraph 6, of the Convention;

13. Strongly urges States parties to the Convention to accelerate their domestic ratification procedures with regard to the amendment to the Convention concerning the financing of the Committee and to notify the Secretary-General expeditiously in writing of their agreement to the amendment, as decided upon at the Fourteenth Meeting of States Parties to the International Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Racial Discrimination on 15 January 1992, endorsed by the General Assembly in its resolution 47/111 and further reiterated at the Sixteenth Meeting of States Parties on 16 January 1996;

14. Requests the Secretary-General to continue to ensure adequate financial arrangements and to provide the necessary support, including an adequate level of Secretariat assistance, in order to ensure the functioning of the Committee and to enable it to cope with its increasing amount of work;

15. Also requests the Secretary-General to invite those States parties to the Convention that are in arrears to pay the amounts in arrears, and to report thereon to the General Assembly at its sixty-first session;

III

Status of the International Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Racial Discrimination

16. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General on the status of the International Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Racial Discrimination;

17. Expresses its satisfaction at the number of States that have ratified or acceded to the Convention, which now stands at one hundred and seventy;

18. Urges States parties to comply fully with their obligations under the Convention and to take into consideration the concluding observations and general recommendations of the Committee;

19. Reaffirms its conviction that ratification of or accession to the Convention on a universal basis and the implementation of its provisions are necessary for the effectiveness of the fight against racism, racial discrimination, xenophobia and related intolerance and for the implementation of the commitments undertaken under the Durban Declaration and Programme of Action;

20. Urges all States that have not yet become parties to the Convention to ratify or accede to it as a matter of urgency, with a view to achieving universal ratification by 2005;

21. Urges States to limit the extent of any reservation they lodge to the Convention and to formulate any reservation as precisely and as narrowly as possible in order to ensure that no reservation is incompatible with the object and purpose of the Convention, to review their reservations on a regular basis with a view to withdrawing them, and to withdraw reservations that are contrary to the object and purpose of the Convention;

22. Notes that the number of States parties to the Convention that have made the declaration provided for in article 14 of the Convention now stands at forty-five, and requests the States parties that have not yet done so to consider making that declaration;

23. Decides to consider, at its sixty-first session, under the item entitled "Elimination of racism and racial discrimination", the reports of the Committee on the Elimination of Racial Discrimination on its sixty-sixth and sixty-seventh and its sixty-eighth and sixty-ninth sessions, the report of the Secretary-General on the financial situation of the Committee and the report of the Secretary-General on the status of the Convention.

Convention against torture

Accessions and ratifications

As at 31 December, 139 States were parties to the 1984 Convention against Torture and Other Cruel, Inhuman or Degrading Treatment or Punishment, adopted by the General Assembly in resolution 39/46 [YUN 1984, p. 813]. Liberia, Maldives, Mauritania, Swaziland and the Syrian Arab Republic acceded to the Convention during the year. The Optional Protocol to the Convention, which was adopted in resolution 57/199 [YUN 2002, p. 631] and opened for signature on 4 February 2003, had 31 signatories and six States parties (Albania, Argentina, Denmark, Liberia, Malta, United Kingdom). The Protocol would enter into force 30 days following the deposit of the twentieth instrument of ratification or accession. As at 15 July, 52 parties had made the required declarations under articles 21 and 22 (under which a party recognized the competence of the Committee against Torture to receive and consider communications to the effect that a party claimed that another was not fulfilling its obligations under the Convention, and to receive communications from or on behalf of individuals who claimed to be victims of a violation of the Convention by a State party) and four had made the declaration only under article 21, bringing the total of declarations under that article to 56; four parties had made the declaration only under article 22, also bringing the total of declarations under that article to 56. Amendments to articles 17 and 18, adopted in 1992 [YUN 1992, p. 735], had been accepted by 25 parties at year's end.

On 19 April [res. 2004/41], the Commission urged States to become parties to the Convention and to limit the extent of their reservations. Ratifying or acceding States were invited to make the declarations provided for in articles 21 and 22 and to comply with their obligations pursuant to article 19, including their reporting obligations.

The Secretary-General reported on the status of the Convention, its Optional Protocol and the declarations provided for in articles 21 and 22 as at 15 July [A/59/310]. On 20 December, the Assembly took note of the report (decision 59/528).

Implementation

Monitoring body. The Committee against Torture, established as a monitoring body under the Convention, held its thirty-second and thirty-third sessions in Geneva from 3 to 21 May [A/59/44] and from 6 to 26 November [A/60/44], respectively. Under article 19, it considered reports submitted by Argentina, Bulgaria, Chile, Croatia, the Czech Republic, Germany, Greece, Monaco, New Zealand and the United Kingdom.

In accordance with article 20, the Committee studied reliable information that appeared to contain well-founded indications that torture was systematically practised in a State party. Also under article 20, the Committee, after consultations with the State party concerned (Serbia and Montenegro), decided to include a summary account of the results of proceedings, begun in 1998, in its May report. Under article 22, the Committee considered communications submitted by individuals who claimed that their rights under the Convention had been violated by a State party and who had exhausted all available domestic remedies.

An April report [E/CN.4/2004/125] of the Committee's Acting Chairman summarized the Committee's activities since its 2003 sessions [YUN 2003, p. 675].

Convention on elimination of discrimination against women and Optional Protocol

(For details on the status of the Convention and on the Optional Protocol, see p. 1169.)

Convention on the Rights of the Child

Accessions and ratifications

As at 31 December, the number of States parties to the 1989 Convention on the Rights of the Child, adopted by the General Assembly in resolution 44/25 [YUN 1989, p. 560], remained at 192. States parties to the Optional Protocol to the Convention on the involvement of children in armed conflict, adopted by the Assembly in resolution 54/263 [YUN 2000, p. 615], rose to 91 with ratification during the year by Botswana, Brazil, Cambodia, Ecuador, Germany, Japan, Luxembourg, Madagascar, Maldives, Mongolia, the Republic of Korea, the Republic of Moldova, Senegal, Slovenia, The former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia and Turkey, and accession by Bahrain, Bolivia, Kuwait, the Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Mozambique, Oman, Timor-Leste and the United Republic of Tanzania. The Optional Protocol to the Convention on the sale of children, child prostitution and child pornography, also adopted by resolution 54/263, had 89 States parties, with ratification in 2004 by Austria, Brazil, Ecuador, El Salvador, Estonia, Lebanon, Madagascar, the Niger, the Republic of Korea, Slovakia, Slovenia and Togo, and accession by Bahrain, Kuwait, the Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Lithuania, Nicaragua, Oman, the Sudan and Yemen.

The Secretary-General reported on the status of the Convention and Optional Protocols as at 22 June [A/59/190] and 7 December [E/CN.4/2005/73].

On 20 April [res. 2004/48], by a recorded vote of 52 to 1, the Commission urged States that had not done so to sign and ratify or accede to the Convention and the Optional Protocols, and to strengthen cooperation with the Committee on the Rights of the Child (CRC). The Secretary-General was requested to assist the Committee, while OHCHR, UN mechanisms and relevant UN system organs were asked to incorporate a strong child rights perspective in all activities in the fulfilment of their mandates, and to ensure that their staff was trained in child protection matters.

On 23 December, the Assembly urged States that had not done so to sign and ratify or accede to the Convention and the Optional Protocols, and called on them to strengthen cooperation with CRC (resolution 59/261) (see p. 779).

Implementation

Monitoring body. In 2004, CRC held its thirty-fifth (12-30 January) [CRC/C/137], thirty-sixth (17 May-4 June) [CRC/C/140] and thirty-seventh (13 September-1 October [CRC/C/143] sessions, all in Geneva. Each session was preceded by a working group meeting to review State party reports and identify the main questions to be discussed with representatives of the reporting States.

Under article 44 of the Convention, CRC considered initial or periodic reports submitted by Angola, Antigua and Barbuda, Armenia, Botswana, Brazil, Croatia, the Democratic People's Republic of Korea, Dominica, El Salvador, Equatorial Guinea, France, Germany, Guyana, India, Indonesia, Japan, Kyrgyzstan, Liberia, Myanmar, the Netherlands (including Aruba), Panama, Papua New Guinea, Rwanda, Sao Tome and Principe and Slovenia.

In January, the Committee held a day of general discussion on implementing child rights in early childhood.

CRC reports covering its thirtieth to thirty-fifth sessions were issued in a consolidated report [A/59/41 & Corr.1 & Add.1]. On 20 December, the Assembly took note of the report (decision 59/525).

Convention on migrant workers

Accessions and ratifications

As at 31 December, the number of States parties to the International Convention on the Protection of the Rights of All Migrant Workers and Members of Their Families, adopted by the General Assembly in resolution 45/158 [YUN 1990, p. 594] and which entered into force in 2003 [YUN 2003, p. 676], totalled 27. During the year, Turkey ratified the Convention and the Libyan Arab Jamahiriya and Timor-Leste acceded to it.

The Secretary-General reported on the status of the Convention as at 20 August [A/59/306]; the Assembly took note of the report on 20 December (decision 59/528).

On 20 April [res. 2004/56], the Commission called on States that had not done so to sign and ratify or accede to the Convention. It asked the Secretary-General to assist the promotion of the Convention through the programme of advisory services and technical cooperation (see p. 670) and to report in 2006 on the Convention's status and on the Secretariat's efforts to promote the Convention and protect migrant workers' rights.

Implementation. The Committee on the Protection of the Rights of All Migrant Workers and Members of Their Families held its first session from 1 to 5 March in Geneva [A/59/48], at which it elected its officers, discussed ways to organize its future work, adopted its rules of procedure and decided to request the Secretary-General to arrange two Committee sessions in 2005. It noted that the reports of 22 States parties would become due on 1 July.

The Committee had held the first meeting of the States parties to the Convention in December 2003 [YUN 2003, p. 677] to elect 10 Committee members, of which five were elected for a two-year term and five for four years.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 23 December [meeting 76], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Third Committee [A/59/503/Add.1], adopted resolution 59/262 without vote [agenda item 105 (a)].

International Convention on the Protection of the Rights of All Migrant Workers and Members of Their Families

The General Assembly,

Guided by the basic instruments regarding the international protection of human rights, in particular the Universal Declaration of Human Rights and other relevant human rights instruments, and reaffirming the obligation of States to promote and protect human rights and fundamental freedoms,

Recalling its resolution 45/158 of 18 December 1990, by which it adopted and opened for signature, ratification and accession the International Convention on the Protection of the Rights of All Migrant Workers and Members of Their Families,

Recalling also the entry into force of the International Convention on the Protection of the Rights of All Migrant Workers and Members of Their Families on 1 July 2003,

Considering that, in the Vienna Declaration and Programme of Action adopted by the World Conference on Human Rights on 25 June 1993, all States are urged to guarantee the protection of the human rights of all migrant workers and their families and are invited to consider the possibility of signing and ratifying the Convention at the earliest possible time,

Bearing in mind the principles and norms established within the framework of the International Labour Organization and the importance of the work done in connection with migrant workers and members of their families in other specialized agencies and in various organs of the United Nations, as well as in the International Organization for Migration,

Conscious of the marked increase in migratory movements that has occurred, especially in certain parts of the world,

Deeply concerned at the manifestations of violence, racism, racial discrimination, xenophobia and other forms of intolerance and inhuman and degrading treatment directed against migrants in various parts of the world,

Recognizing the urgent need to make further efforts worldwide to improve the situation and to guarantee respect for the human rights and dignity of all migrant workers and members of their families, and aware of the important contribution of the Convention in this regard,

1. Welcomes the increasing number of signatures, ratifications or accessions to the International Convention on the Protection of the Rights of All Migrant Workers and Members of Their Families, calls upon States parties to undertake the necessary measures for the implementation of the Convention, and takes note of the report of the Secretary-General on the status of the Convention;

2. Calls upon all Member States that have not yet done so to consider urgently signing and ratifying or acceding to the Convention, with the aim of achieving a broader participation by Member States in the Convention;

3. Welcomes the establishment of the Committee on the Protection of the Rights of All Migrant Workers and Members of Their Families, as well as the report on its first session, held in Geneva from 1 to 5 March 2004, and takes note of the rules of procedure adopted by the Committee;

4. Requests the Secretary-General to continue to provide all the necessary facilities and assistance for the effective functioning of the Committee on the Protection of the Rights of All Migrant Workers and Members of Their Families, making efficient use of available resources;

5. Invites the Committee to take into account the work done by other human rights treaty bodies and special procedures of the Commission on Human Rights to promote and protect the human rights of migrant workers, as well as the work of other international forums and other parts of the United Nations system in addressing issues of international migration;

6. Also invites the Committee to take into account the efforts by the other human rights treaty bodies and the Secretary-General aimed at improving the effectiveness of the treaty body system;

7. Calls upon States parties to the Convention to submit in due time their first periodic report, as requested in article 73 of the Convention;

8. Invites States parties to the Convention to consider making the declarations foreseen in articles 76 and 77 of the Convention;

9. Requests the Secretary-General to provide all the facilities and assistance necessary for the active promotion of the Convention through the programme of advisory services and technical cooperation in the field of human rights;

10. Welcomes the increasing activities undertaken by the organizations and bodies of the United Nations system and intergovernmental and non-governmental organizations to disseminate information on and promote understanding of the importance of the Convention, and invites them to intensify further their efforts in this regard;

11. Also welcomes the work of the Special Rapporteur of the Commission on Human Rights on the human rights of migrants in relation to the Convention, and encourages her to persevere in her efforts;

12. Requests the Secretary-General to submit an updated report on the status of the Convention and on the implementation of the present resolution to the General Assembly at its sixty-first session.

Convention on genocide

As at 31 December, 136 States were parties to the 1948 Convention on the Prevention and Punishment of the Crime of Genocide, adopted by the General Assembly in resolution 260 A (III) [YUN 1948-49, p. 959]. During the year, the Comoros acceded to the Convention.

Note by Secretariat. A note by the Secretariat [E/CN.4/2005/46] presented the views of 10 States parties, the European Union and the Secretary-General's Special Adviser on the Prevention of Genocide (see p. 730) as at 26 November, in response to the Secretary-General's proposal to establish a committee on the prevention of genocide. While the majority of replies indicated support for the initiative, two States parties opposed it. The report concluded that the limited number of replies did not provide a sufficiently large basis upon which final conclusions might be reached. It was suggested that further views be sought and that the Secretariat report to the Commission in 2006.

Other activities

Follow-up to 1993 World Conference

Report of High Commissioner. In a March report [E/CN.4/2004/12] on follow-up to the World Conference on Human Rights [YUN 1993, p. 908], the High Commissioner described the current state of human rights in the world, the potential pillars of international cooperation for the universal realization of human rights, the state of protection at all levels and measures to strengthen it. The High Commissioner appealed to the Commission to take action regarding trafficking in young women, possibly by establishing a mechanism to study and analyse the problem and present findings and recommendations to the Commission. The High Commissioner also asked the Commission to take urgent action to protect those at risk and to lead an international campaign against trafficking in humans. Addenda to the report focused on the Secretary-General's UN system reform proposals [E/CN.4/2004/12/Add.1] (see p. 650), the promotion of tolerance and pluralism [E/CN.4/2004/12/Add.2] (see p. 709) and strengthening national human rights protection systems [E/CN.4/2004/12/Add.3] (see p. 658).

Annual meeting. In July, the High Commissioner transmitted the report of the eleventh meeting of special rapporteurs/representatives, independent experts and chairpersons of working groups of the Commission's special procedures and advisory services programme (Geneva, 21-25 June) [E/CN.4/2005/5]. Participants discussed, among other things, measures to enhance the effectiveness of the special procedures system and ways of integrating their work into OHCHR activities through its field presences, technical cooperation activities and the work of its National Institutions Team, and into the wider

UN system, in accordance with the Secretary-General's reform agenda (see p. 1360). They also held a thematic discussion on mainstreaming child rights. The meeting decided to enhance coordination in preparing fact-finding missions and in publishing statements relating to situations of grave human rights concerns, and requested the Secretariat to prepare country assessments, develop a LISTSERV to facilitate communication and information exchange between special procedures mandate-holders, compile electronically country-specific recommendations prior to each Commission session, and reflect on effective means for follow-up of special procedures recommendations. It also decided to include on the agenda for the special procedures annual meeting a new item on a thematic issue and on coordination and possible information exchange with the Security Council's Counter-Terrorism Committee (see p. 76) and the Secretary-General's Special Adviser on the Prevention of Genocide and to prepare a joint report on the world human rights situation, in the light of the respective experiences of the mandate-holders.

On 20 December, the Assembly took note of the Third Committee's report [A/59/503/Add.4] on the implementation of and follow-up to the Vienna Declaration and Programme of Action adopted at the 1993 World Conference (decision 59/529).

Advisory services and technical cooperation

Commission action. On 21 April [res. 2004/81], the Commission, recognizing the usefulness of advisory services and technical cooperation for all countries, called on OHCHR to continue to develop its potential for human rights promotion and protection. The Secretary-General was requested to ensure the efficient management of the Voluntary Fund for Technical Cooperation in the Field of Human Rights and to hold information meetings for Member States and organizations involved in the programme of advisory services and technical cooperation; to assist the Fund's Board of Trustees and to ensure that the conclusions of Board meetings were reflected in the annual report to the Commission regarding technical cooperation; and to report in 2006 on the progress and achievements made and on the obstacles encountered in implementing the programme of advisory services and technical cooperation.

Report of Secretary-General. In accordance with Commission resolution 2004/81 (see above), the Secretary-General, in a December report [E/CN.4/2005/110], described the OHCHR technical cooperation programme, which provided assistance for building national and regional human rights infrastructure, focusing on incorporating international human rights standards in national laws and policies and on the establishment or strengthening of national institutions capable of promoting and protecting human rights and democracy under the rule of law. In addition to projects implemented from Geneva, technical cooperation activities were carried out through field presences, including by technical cooperation project offices, regional representatives and senior human rights advisers to UN country teams. Technical cooperation activities were also undertaken in collaboration with UN peace-keeping and peace-building missions and UN country teams. OHCHR implemented related projects in cooperation with other UN agencies and programmes, particularly UNDP.

In 2004, the Voluntary Fund for Technical Cooperation in the Field of Human Rights funded 31 projects; 17 were completed during the year, while 29 new requests were received. As at 31 December, the Fund had received approximately $9.3 million against expenditure of some $12.8 million. The Fund's Board of Trustees, at its twenty-first (8-11 June) and twenty-second (23-26 November) sessions reviewed the programme's regional activities, discussed follow-up to the 2003 global review of the programme [YUN 2003, p. 679] and examined financial and administrative matters. In November, the Board held a joint meeting with the heads of OHCHR field presences on ensuring one UN human rights programme with three interlinked components—treaty bodies, special procedures and technical cooperation. As at 31 December, the Fund's income amounted to $17.4 million for 2004, including carry-over from previous years; commitments totalled $12.8 million, leaving a balance of $4.6 million.

During the year, OHCHR initiated an internal review of its regional presences and approaches, which demonstrated that such presence was a good strategic choice for the Office. The review process would continue in 2005, with evaluations of several regional presences planned.

Subcommission action. On 12 August [dec. 2004/115], the Subcommission requested Gudmundur Alfredsson (Iceland) and Ibrahim Salama (Egypt) to prepare, without financial implications, for 2005, a working paper on the evaluation of the content and delivery of human rights technical cooperation for the purpose of seeking possible improvements.

Afghanistan

Note by Secretariat. A January note by the Secretariat [E/CN.4/2004/102] informed the Commission that the independent expert, whose appointment it had requested in 2003 [YUN 2003, p. 679], had not yet been appointed.

In April, the Commission appointed M. Cherif Bassiouni (Egypt) as independent expert.

Commission action. The Commission Chairperson, in a 21 April statement on technical cooperation in the field of human rights in Afghanistan, which the Commission adopted by consensus, stated that the Commission welcomed the adoption of the new Afghan Constitution by the Constitutional Loya Jirga on 5 January and its provisions, which stated that all citizens were equal before the law and that at least two women were to be elected to the Wolesi Jirga from each province. It also welcomed the Constitution's recognition of the status of the Afghan Independent Human Rights Commission and encouraged the Transitional Authority (TA) and the international community to assist the Independent Commission. Noting improvements in the TA's institutional capacity to deal with human rights, the Commission encouraged it to maintain focus on the promotion and protection of human rights and fundamental freedoms, as described in the Universal Declaration of Human Rights, adopted by the General Assembly in resolution 217 A (III) [YUN 1948-49, p. 535]. The Commission, recalling that continued attention to the protection and promotion of women's and children's rights were of paramount importance, requested the independent expert on the situation of human rights in Afghanistan (see below) to report to the Assembly in 2004 and to the Commission in 2005. The Secretary-General was asked to extend the expert's mandate for a further year, to assist the expert and to report in 2005. OHCHR was requested to continue and expand, in collaboration with the TA, its human rights programme of advisory services and technical cooperation. The Economic and Social Council endorsed the Commission's requests to the Secretary-General and to the expert on 22 July (decision 2004/284).

Reports of independent expert. An April note by the Secretariat [E/CN.4/2004/102/Add.1] contained the expert's oral statement before the Commission, in which he presented his views regarding his future work.

A September note of the Secretary-General [A/59/370] transmitted the expert's report on the current human rights situation in Afghanistan, following his visit to the country (14-22 August), during which he was briefed on the work of the Afghan Independent Human Rights Commission and met with 32 Afghan human rights organizations and individual human rights activists. The expert also inspected a prison and a women's detention facility, and identified gross violations of fundamental human rights, such as extrajudicial execution, torture, rape, arbitrary arrest and detention, inhumane conditions of detention, illegal and forceful seizure of property, child abduction and trafficking, and various forms of abuse against women, minorities, returning refugees, poor people and handicapped persons. Most of the violations were committed by warlords, local commanders, drug traffickers and other actors who exercised varying degrees of authority in the provinces and districts. The Coalition forces, which could have marginalized the warlords, did not do so, and even worked with them to combat the Taliban regime and to pursue Al-Qaida. That situation helped to entrench the warlords. Thus, the paramount factor affecting human rights was security. The expert noted that, although the Government's accomplishments during the last two years were impressive, more was still needed, and made recommendations to the Government and the international community regarding security issues, the rule of law, improvements in detention facilities and due process, women and children, land disputes and housing, education, the development of a policy for transitional or post-conflict justice, strengthening civil society and the establishment of status-of-forces agreements with the Coalition forces and the International Security Assistance Force.

The General Assembly took note of the expert's report on 20 December (decision 59/528).

Burundi

Commission action. On 21 April [res. 2004/82], the Commission, condemning all acts of violence and violations of human rights and international humanitarian law in Burundi, decided to appoint an independent expert to back the Government's efforts to improve the country's human rights situation. The expert was requested to submit an interim report to the General Assembly in 2004 and to report to the Commission in 2005. The Economic and Social Council endorsed the Commission's decision and its request to the expert on 15 June (decision 2004/224).

In July, Akich Okola (Kenya) was appointed independent expert.

Report of independent expert. During his first mission to Burundi (4-13 October) [E/CN.4/2005/118], the independent expert met with officials from all political parties and several national institutions, NGOs, diplomatic missions, UN agencies and international organizations. He also visited an internally displaced people camp in the commune of Kabezi, Bujumbura Rural province, the site of Gatumba, where some 160 Congolese refugees were massacred, and a central prison in the same province. He noted that since the mission did not take place until October, he was unable to submit the interim report requested by the Commission.

The expert observed that, despite continuous efforts by national and international actors, human rights violations persisted, and because most of the violations remained unpunished, a climate conducive to further abuses arose, particularly regarding sexual violence. The principal violations related to the right to life, liberty, security and inviolability of the person, and to freedom of movement, of the right to choose a place of residence and of opinion, expression and peaceful assembly, as well as the rights of women and children. Frequent looting resulting from armed conflict and displacement dispossessed whole communities of the few resources they had, including housing, land and cattle, and access to basic health and education services was constrained by various factors. Despite some improvement, the prisons remained overcrowded, exerting a negative impact on health, nutrition and sanitary conditions. In his recommendations, the expert addressed an urgent appeal to all belligerents in the country to respect civilians' rights; encouraged the initiation of judicial proceedings to ensure that the perpetrators of the killings at Gatumba (see p. 149) and those that aided and abetted them were brought to justice; and urged the Government to combat increasing sexual violence against women. He also recommended that the international community support the Government's efforts to promote human rights and secure lasting peace, and that additional funding be made available to enable him to better discharge his mandate.

Cambodia

Commission action. On 21 April [res. 2004/79], the Commission welcomed Cambodia's improvement on its human rights situation, while still expressing concern about continuing violations, including torture, excessive pre-trial detention, land reform issues, violence against activists, and problems relating to the rule of law, impunity and corruption. The Commission invited the Secretary-General and the international community to continue to assist the Government in improving democracy and protecting human rights, and requested the Secretary-General to report in 2005.

Report of Special Representative. The Secretary-General's Special Representative for human rights in Cambodia, Peter Leuprecht (Austria), during his visit to Cambodia (7-14 November) [E/CN.4/2005/116] focused on land management and natural resources, impunity and corruption. He also addressed the general political climate following the establishment of a new coalition Government in July, and examined issues of justice sector reform, the freedoms of association and assembly, indigenous land rights and issues relating to the trials of senior Khmer Rouge leaders (see p. 380). The Special Representative found that Cambodian society was still suffering from poverty, violence, corruption and lawlessness. He pointed to corrupt and opaque power structures, inequality before the law, impunity, collusion and lack of transparency and accountability as the main obstacles to genuine democracy, rule of law and respect for human rights. Endemic corruption also remained a recurring obstacle to the rule of law and economic and social development. The Special Representative recommended a series of measures to the Government regarding democratic institutions; the need to investigate human rights violations and to bring those responsible to justice; steps to end executive interference in the judiciary; steps to ensure respect for the rights to the freedom of expression, of association, of assembly, of non-violent demonstration and of movement; and the need to address land and natural resources management issues and to end forced evictions, investigate and prosecute cases of corruption and ensure the Government met its obligations under international human rights treaties to which it was party.

OHCHR/Cambodia

Report of Secretary-General. A December report [E/CN.4/2005/111] of the Secretary-General described the role and achievements of OHCHR/Cambodia in 2004 in assisting the Cambodian Government and people to promote and protect human rights. During the year, the Office continued to monitor the overall human rights situation, to investigate reports of human rights violations and to document their pattern. It regularly brought its concerns to the authorities' attention and requested their intervention. OHCHR/Cambodia also continued to contribute to justice sector reform and the administration of justice, by facilitating discussion on legal policy issues, observing trials in the courts, analysing key developments and patterns of violations in the criminal justice system, acting as a legal resource, and providing comments on draft laws. The Office actively advocated for freedom of information legislation and monitored developments related to the forthcoming trials of senior Khmer Rouge leaders. Regarding the development of land management and natural resource policies, the Office continued its work to protect local communities affected by land and forest concessions. In December, the High Commissioner and the Government signed a new memorandum of understanding for the implementation of a technical cooperation programme on human rights for a two-year period.

Chad

Commission action. On 21 April [res. 2004/85], the Commission, expressing concern at violence in Chad, the dependence of the judiciary on the Government, the country's culture of impunity, the scarcity of resources in the judicial and prison sectors, and the weakness of national human rights structures and institutions, decided to appoint an independent expert for a one-year period to facilitate cooperation between the Government and OHCHR and to report in 2005. The Economic and Social Council endorsed the Commission's decision on 15 June (decision 2004/226).

In July, Mónica Pinto (Argentina) was appointed independent expert.

Report of independent expert. The expert visited Chad (7-17 October) [E/CN.4/2005/121], where she examined human rights concerns and observed that national identity was secondary to ethnic or clan identity. The current focus was on dichotomies, particularly between northerners and southerners, Muslims and Christians, nomads and sedentary people, Arabs and Africans, and such differences were manipulated to exacerbate tensions among different groups. The expert characterized the country as one in which no one had confidence in national institutions; national legislation took second place to local customs; people exerted pressure on one another, with the most powerful prevailing; refugees enjoyed a better quality of life than local people; and there was no deliberate policy for addressing persistent human rights violations. The expert recommended the establishment of a transparent, accountable and participatory government; the need for the State to embrace the rule of law; and the necessity for judicial reform and for the rehabilitation of prisoners. She also advocated, among other things, the protection of vulnerable groups and of civil society, an intensive literacy campaign, sustainable development efforts and the overall development of society.

Democratic Republic of the Congo

Commission action. On 21 April [res. 2004/84], the Commission, expressing concern at persistent reports of serious violations of human rights and international humanitarian law in the eastern part of the Democratic Republic of the Congo (DRC), particularly in North and South Kivu, northern Katanga and Ituri, decided to appoint an independent expert to assist the Government in the field of human rights and to study the evolving human rights situation and verify that the country's obligations were being fulfilled. The expert was asked to report to the General Assembly in 2004 and to the Commission in 2005, and the Secretary-General was requested to provide the DRC with human rights advisory services. The Economic and Social Council approved the Commission's decision on 15 June (decision 2004/225).

In July, Titinga Frédéric Pacéré (Burkina Faso) was appointed independent expert.

Note by Secretariat. A September note by the Secretariat [A/59/378] stated that the expert, owing to his late appointment, would not be able to submit a report to the General Assembly as requested by the Commission, but would report orally (see below).

Reports of independent expert. In an oral report to the General Assembly's Third Committee [A/C.3/59/SR.29] on 28 October, the independent expert said grave violations of human rights and other crimes continued, especially in the eastern regions, and that the justice system was underfunded, understaffed and unable to cope with the situation. He recommended setting up an international criminal tribunal for the DRC, with its modus operandi determined by the Congolese Government. The Assembly took note of the report on 20 December (decision 59/528).

The expert undertook two missions to the DRC [E/CN.4/2005/120], the first to Kinshasa and Kisangani (22 August-2 September), and the second to Kinshasa, Bukavu and Goma (9-19 November). The expert noted that, as in previous years, the current year was characterized by constructive efforts, but also by massive human rights violations, inter-ethnic intolerance, violence, massacres, the abuse of women and children, various kinds of atrocities perpetrated by armed groups against civilians and endless political crises. Congolese women and children were the main victims of the armed violence and of the most atrocious and destructive forms of sexual violence. The expert called on the transitional Government and all parties to the conflict to end the violence, arrest the perpetrators and hand them over to Congolese and international justice; to dismiss from the Government, institutions and armed forces those found guilty of crimes against humanity and serious human rights violations; to launch a national human rights campaign; to set up a compensation fund for victims of crimes against humanity; to enhance women's status and stop the abuse of women and children; and to practice good governance, manage the country's resources properly and combat corruption. Recommendations addressed to the international community highlighted the need to provide political, financial, military and diplomatic support and assistance for the country's process of transition, reconstruction and pacification, and requested that it cooperate with the country to end the illegal exploitation of natural resources and arms-trafficking; place the protection of the population and respect for human rights at the core of the Security Council's next resolution on the situation in the country; strengthen the mandates and resources of the Human Rights and Child Protection Sections of the United Nations Organization Mission in the Democratic Republic of the Congo; grant OHCHR the resources necessary to enable it to accord priority to the situation in the DRC; and establish, by decision of the Security Council, an international criminal tribunal to try crimes committed during the successive conflicts in the DRC.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 20 December [meeting 74], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Third Committee [A/59/503/Add.3], adopted resolution 59/207 by recorded vote (76-2-100) [agenda item 105 (c)].

Situation of human rights in the Democratic Republic of the Congo

The General Assembly,

Reaffirming that all States Members of the United Nations have an obligation to promote and protect human rights and fundamental freedoms, and the duty to fulfil the obligations they have undertaken under the various instruments in this field,

Noting that the Democratic Republic of the Congo is a party to several international and regional human rights instruments and to several instruments pertaining to international humanitarian law,

Recalling all its previous resolutions, as well as those of the Commission on Human Rights, on the situation of human rights in the Democratic Republic of the Congo,

Noting the special report of the Secretary-General on the events in Ituri between January 2002 and December 2003 that was drafted by the Human Rights and Child Protection Sections of the United Nations Organization Mission in the Democratic Republic of the Congo,

Recalling Security Council resolutions 1493(2003) of 28 July 2003, 1522(2004) of 15 January 2004, 1533(2004) of 12 March 2004 and 1565(2004) of 1 October 2004,

1. Welcomes:

(a) The nomination of the independent expert on the situation of human rights in the Democratic Republic of the Congo in July 2004, as well as his visit to the Democratic Republic of the Congo in August 2004;

(b) In particular the extended mandate of the United Nations Organization Mission in the Democratic Republic of the Congo regarding the promotion and protection of human rights in accordance with Security Council resolution 1565(2004), and expresses its support for the work of the Special Representative of the Secretary-General for the Democratic Republic of the Congo and for the Mission;

(c) The work accomplished by the human rights field office in the Democratic Republic of the Congo, and encourages the office to pursue and enhance its cooperation with the relevant agencies of the United Nations and the Mission in the fulfilment of its mandate;

(d) The measures taken by the transitional institutions in order to implement the Global and All-Inclusive Agreement on the Transition in the Democratic Republic of the Congo signed in Pretoria on 17 December 2002 and to restore the authority of the State, such as the appointment of provincial governors, the establishment of the Independent Electoral Commission, the appointment of the High Command of the Integrated National Police and the setting up of the Supreme Defence Council;

(e) The adoption of the Declaration of Principles by the Heads of State who participated in the International Conference on Peace, Security, Democracy and Development in the Great Lakes Region, which took place in Dar es Salaam, United Republic of Tanzania, on 19 and 20 November 2004;

2. Calls upon the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights to keep it informed of the consultations between her Office and the Secretary-General concerning the ways in which to assist the transitional Government of the Democratic Republic of the Congo in tackling the problem of impunity;

3. Takes note of the decision by the Office of the Prosecutor of the International Criminal Court, based upon the referral of the Democratic Republic of the Congo, to commence an investigation into crimes allegedly committed in the territory of the Democratic Republic of the Congo since the entry into force of the Rome Statute of the International Criminal Court on 1 July 2002;

4. Condemns the continuing violations of human rights and international humanitarian law in the Democratic Republic of the Congo, while remaining concerned about the prevalence of grave violations and the rise in ethnic tensions throughout the Democratic Republic of the Congo and, in particular, in Ituri, North and South Kivu and other areas in the eastern part of the country;

5. Urges all parties to the conflict in the Democratic Republic of the Congo:

(a) To respect and further implement the Global and All-Inclusive Agreement;

(b) To adhere fully to the Principles on Good-neighbourly Relations and Cooperation between the Democratic Republic of the Congo and Burundi, Rwanda and Uganda signed in New York on 25 September 2003, to engage firmly for the full success of the joint verification mechanism agreed upon by the Presidents of the Democratic Republic of the Congo and Rwanda in Abuja on 25 June 2004, and to take part constructively in the International Conference on Peace, Security, Democracy and Development in the Great Lakes Region of Africa;

(c) To cease immediately all military activity that impedes the consolidation of the sovereignty, unity and territorial integrity of the Democratic Republic of the Congo, including support for the armed groups allied to the parties to the conflict;

(d) To support the transitional Government and its institutions in order to allow for the re-establishment of political and economic stability and for the gradual reinforcement of state structures over the entire territory of the Democratic Republic of the Congo, in accordance with their obligations under the Transitional Constitution;

(e) To put an immediate end to the recruitment and use of child soldiers, which is contrary to international law and to the African Charter on the Rights and Welfare of the Child, with the understanding that, under the Convention on the Rights of the Child and the Optional Protocol thereto on the involvement of children in armed conflict, and in accordance with Security Council resolution 1539(2004) of 22 April 2004 on children and armed conflict, persons under the age of 18 are entitled to special protection, and to provide information without delay on measures taken to discontinue such practices;

(f) To take special measures to protect women and children from the appalling violence, including sexual violence, which has been and continues to be prevalent throughout the country, in particular in Ituri, North and South Kivu and other areas in the eastern part of the country, and condemns in particular the widespread use of sexual violence as a means of warfare;

(g) To promote the full enjoyment of all human rights by women and children and to meet the special needs of women and girls in post-conflict reconstruction, as well as to ensure the full participation of women in all aspects of conflict resolution and peace processes, including peacekeeping, conflict management and peace-building, as a matter of priority, in accordance with Security Council resolution 1325(2000) of 31 October 2000 on women and peace and security;

(h) To ensure the rights and well-being of internally displaced persons, returnees and refugee populations;

(i) To respect international humanitarian law, in particular on the protection of civilians by ensuring the safety, security and freedom of movement of all civilians and United Nations and associated personnel, and the unhindered access of humanitarian personnel to all of the affected population throughout the territory of the Democratic Republic of the Congo in accordance with Security Council resolutions 1265(1999) of 17 September 1999 and 1296(2000) of 19 April 2000;

(j) To promote the full enjoyment of all human rights and to protect the safety, security and freedom of movement of all human rights defenders;

6. Calls upon the Government of National Unity and Transition to take specific measures:

(a) To achieve the objectives of the transitional period as laid down in the Global and All-Inclusive Agreement, in particular the holding of free and transparent elections at all levels, enabling the establishment of a democratic constitutional regime, and the formation of a restructured and integrated national army; and also the formation of an integrated and adequately resourced national police force;

(b) To strengthen the transitional institutions, in particular to set up effectively the Independent Electoral Commission, the Truth and Reconciliation Commission and the Human Rights Monitoring Centre, and to re-establish stability and the rule of law over the entire territory of the Democratic Republic of the Congo, thereby returning peace and progress to its people;

(c) To comply fully with its obligations under international human rights instruments and, accordingly, to continue to cooperate with United Nations mechanisms for the protection of human rights and further strengthen its cooperation with the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights in the Democratic Republic of the Congo;

(d) To put an end to impunity and to ensure, as it is duty-bound to do, that those responsible for human rights violations and grave breaches of international humanitarian law are brought to justice in accordance with due process, and to carry out urgently a comprehensive reform of the judicial system;

(e) To put an end to the use of the death penalty in a manner contrary to its obligations assumed under the relevant provisions of the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights and other human rights instruments, while recalling its commitment to progressively abolish the death penalty and not to impose it on juvenile offenders;

(f) To continue to cooperate with the International Criminal Court and with the International Criminal Tribunal for Rwanda;

(g) To prevent the use of the media to incite hatred or tensions among communities, while respecting freedom of expression and of the press;

(h) To continue its programme to demobilize, disarm and reintegrate former combatants, taking into account the special needs of women and children, including girls, associated with those combatants;

(i) To put an end to the illegal exploitation of the natural resources of the Democratic Republic of the Congo, in view of the link between that exploitation and the continuation of the conflict;

7. Encourages the international community to continue to support the transition in the Democratic Republic of the Congo and its institutions and, in particular, to provide assistance in the reform of national judicial institutions;

8. Decides to continue to examine the situation of human rights in the Democratic Republic of the Congo, and requests the independent expert on the situation of human rights in the Democratic Republic of the Congo to report to the General Assembly at its sixtieth session.

Haiti

Commission action. On 21 April [E/2004/23], the Commission Chairperson, in a statement concerning technical cooperation and the situation of human rights in Haiti, stated that the Commission condemned the human rights violations in the country and called on all sectors and actors in national life to protect and promote human dignity. The Commission called for the swift restoration of security, particularly to improve the situation of the country's citizens, and emphasized the urgency of OHCHR's establishing an office there and contributing towards UN human rights activities. The independent expert on Haiti's human rights was asked to include in his 2005 report information on progress made to combat impunity and on the administration of justice.

Report of independent expert. Independent expert Louis Joinet (France) visited Haiti twice in 2004 (3-11 April, 6-17 November) [E/CN.4/2005/123], where he found persistent human rights violations, including armed assaults, reprisals, rapes, murders, summary executions, looting and arson. Mostly responsible were two groups of armed adversaries, one of which comprised supporters of the previous Government, and the other, former soldiers demobilized during the disbandment of the army in 1995, who felt that their social rights had not been recognized. Although all social classes were affected, the most vulnerable victims of the violations were the poor populations in shanty towns, women and children, and there were also reports of intimidation against the press. Overall, human rights violations in the country were exacerbated by the shortcomings of the judicial system, and, after examining the main obstacles to the reform of the system and the difficulties in combating impunity, the expert observed that most of his previous recommendations remained valid. In addition, however, he proposed that high priority be accorded to the reconstruction or rehabilitation of the judicial system, including in particular the courts and related infrastructure, the police and the prison administration. He also proposed numerous reform measures for adoption.

Liberia

Commission action. On 21 April [res. 2004/83], the Commission expressed concern at the continued existence of paramilitary groups in Liberia; serious human rights violations against civilians; sexual violence against women and girls; the country's persistent insecurity; and the culture of impunity. The international community was asked to support the Government in the process of disarmament, demobilization and reintegration of former combatants and to mobilize the resources needed to enable the National Transitional Government to implement relief and recovery programmes. The independent expert on the human rights situation in Liberia was requested to report in 2005, and the High Commissioner was asked to assist her.

Report of independent expert. The independent expert on the human rights situation in Liberia, Charlotte Abaka (Ghana), visited the country (23 May-13 June) [E/CN.4/2005/119], where she found that improved security conditions had led to increased access by humanitarian workers and provided the context for human rights activities. State-sponsored human rights violations had ceased, and, although institutions to address abuses and ensure the rule of law were lacking, national bodies provided for in the Comprehensive Peace Agreement, signed in 2003 [YUN 2003, p. 185], had been established and were in varying stages of operation. The expert recommended measures to facilitate the process of disarmament, demobilization, rehabilitation and reintegration, and to end impunity, establish a national law reform commission to ensure that domestic laws were brought in line with international instruments to which Liberia was a party, and ensure that adequate resources were provided for the Human Rights and Protection Component of the United Nations Mission in Liberia.

Nepal

On 21 April [E/2004/23], the Commission Chairperson, in a statement on behalf of the Commission, said the Commission was concerned at the human rights situation in Nepal and at the growing number of civilian victims as a result of ongoing violence. It condemned the indiscriminate violence perpetrated by the Communist Party of Nepal-Maoist, including the use of children in armed conflict. Welcoming Nepal's submission of periodic reports to the various human rights treaty bodies, the Commission encouraged the Government to follow up adequately their recommendations. The Commission asked OHCHR to report in 2005 on its activities in Nepal.

(For information on a visit to Nepal by the Working Group on Enforced and Involuntary Disappearances, see p. 731.)

Sierra Leone

Commission action. On 21 April [res. 2004/86], the Commission urged the Government of Sierra Leone to promote and protect human rights, give priority attention to the special needs of mutilated victims, facilitate the effective functioning of the National Commission for War-Affected Children and reconsider the issue of resettlement and reintegration of Sierra Leonean combatants who were being demobilized and repatriated from Côte d'Ivoire and Liberia. It requested the High Commissioner to report to the General Assembly in 2004 and to the Commission in 2005 on assistance to Sierra Leone in the field of human rights.

The Economic and Social Council endorsed the Commission's request on 22 July (decision 2004/271).

Report of High Commissioner. In a September report [A/59/340] to the General Assembly, submitted in response to Commission resolution 2004/86 (see above), the High Commissioner examined the human rights situation in Sierra Leone and UN activities and the status of transitional justice in the country. The High Commissioner observed that there had been significant improvements in the area of civil and political rights during the seven-year presence of the United Nations in Sierra Leone, despite a weak national human rights protection system. Important transitional justice mechanisms had been established with UN assistance. The Truth and Reconciliation Commission had concluded its public activities and the Special Court had commenced trials of some accused war criminals. However, there were serious concerns about the prolonged pre-trial detention of some 97 ex-combatants, and the situation of amputees and war wounded had not improved. Regarding children, the scars of war were seen in the traumatic conditions of some teenagers and young adults. School enrolment was low, especially among girls, and the country's endemic problem of child labour was exacerbated by extreme poverty. There were also concerns regarding child trafficking, early and forced marriages and children in conflict with the law, and although progress had been made regarding awareness of women's rights among the police, discrimination against women continued, resulting in various forms of violence such as deprivation, psychological abuse and physical assault. Also, progress in implementing civil and political rights had not been matched by advances in the realization of economic, social and cultural rights, with rising inflation pushing the price of basic commodities and foodstuffs beyond the reach of many citizens. The expert called for continuous capacity-building for local human rights NGOs, support for the Government's work in the review of women's status in the country and implementation of the recommendations of the Truth and Reconciliation Commission.

The General Assembly took note of the High Commissioner's report on 20 December (decision 59/528).

Somalia

Commission action. On 21 April [res. 2004/80], the Commission, welcoming steps towards lasting peace and reconciliation in Somalia, condemned those who obstructed the peace process and the widespread violations and abuses of human rights and humanitarian law in the country. The Commission decided to extend the independent expert's mandate for a further year, asked him to report in 2005 and requested the Secretary-General to continue to assist him.

On 22 July, the Economic and Social Council approved the Commission's request to the Secretary-General (decision 2004/270).

Timor-Leste

On 21 April [E/2004/23], the Commission Chairperson, in a statement on behalf of the Commission, said the Commission underlined the importance of a continuing UN human rights presence in Timor-Leste following the end of the mandate of the United Nations Mission of Support in East Timor, in order to ensure an effective transition to the post-Mission phase. It also emphasized the need for continuing international assistance to strengthen the country's justice system and asked the international community to continue to support its fight against impunity. The Commission requested the High Commissioner to report in 2005.

Human rights education

UN Decade for Human Rights Education (1995-2004)

Report of High Commissioner. A February report [E/CN.4/2004/93] of the High Commissioner highlighted the achievements, shortcomings and future activities of the United Nations Decade for Human Rights Education (1995-2004), proclaimed by the General Assembly in resolution 49/184 [YUN 1994, p. 1039]. The report was based on replies received from 29 Governments and two national commissions for the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization (UNESCO) to a questionnaire prepared jointly by OHCHR and UNESCO. Most respondents reported increased human rights education activities within or outside the Decade's framework, but noted that human rights education remained a priority because specific issues had not been dealt with and appropriate coordination mechanisms for human rights education were not in place. The majority also supported the proclamation of a second Decade (2005-2014) and the establishment of a voluntary fund for human rights education. The report suggested that the Commission reflect on the desirability of an international convention on human rights education.

General Assembly consideration. On 10 December [meeting 70], the General Assembly, in commemoration of the annual observance of Human Rights Day, dedicated its plenary meeting to a review of the achievements of the Decade.

Follow-up to Decade

Commission action. On 21 April [res. 2004/71], the Commission recommended that the Economic and Social Council recommend that the General Assembly proclaim at its fifty-ninth (2004) session a world programme for human rights education, to begin on 1 January 2005 and structured in consecutive phases, in order to maintain and develop the implementation of human rights education programmes in all sectors. OHCHR was requested to prepare, in cooperation with UNESCO and other relevant actors, a plan of action for the first phase (2005-2007) of the proposed world programme, focusing on the primary and secondary school systems, and to submit it to the Assembly. The Office was further requested to report in 2005. The Commission recommended that the Secretary-General ensure that human rights education was supported by adequate UN assistance, provided at Member States' request, to develop their national systems of human rights promotion and protection.

On the same date [dec. 2004/121], the Commission decided to recommend to the Council that it recommend to the Assembly the proclamation of a world programme for human rights education to begin on 1 January 2005.

On 22 July, the Council endorsed the Commission's recommendation regarding the Assembly's proclamation of a world programme for human rights education and the Commission's request regarding the submission of a plan of action for the programme's first phase (decision 2004/268).

Plan of action. In accordance with Commission resolution 2004/71 (see above), the Secretary-General, in an October note [A/59/525], transmitted a draft plan of action for the first phase (2005-2007) of the proposed world programme for human rights education, focusing on the primary and secondary school systems, prepared by OHCHR and UNESCO and other governmental and non-governmental actors. The plan aimed to promote the inclusion and practice of human rights in the primary and secondary school systems; support the development, adoption and implementation of comprehensive, effective and sustainable national human rights education strategies in school systems, and/or the review and improvement of existing initiatives; provide guidelines on key components of human rights education in the school system; facilitate the provision of support to Member States by international, regional, national and local organizations; and support networking and cooperation among local, national, regional and international institutions. The plan provided a definition of human rights education in the school system, based on internationally agreed principles, a user-friendly guide to developing and/or improving human rights education and a flexible guide, which could be adapted to different contexts and situations. The report also outlined a strategy for implementing the plan and for coordinating the implementation process, sources of international cooperation and support, as well as steps for evaluating actions implemented under the plan. Annexed to the report was information on components of human rights education in the primary and secondary school systems.

Subcommission action. On 12 August [res. 2004/18], the Subcommission, welcoming the recommendation of the Commission and the Economic and Social Council that the General Assembly proclaim a world programme for human rights education to begin on 1 January 2005, recommended that human rights treaty bodies, when examining reports of States parties, devote attention to human rights education and that it be included in the agenda of the annual meeting of the persons chairing the treaty bodies.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 10 December [meeting 70], the General Assembly adopted resolution 59/113 [draft: A/59/L.43 & Add.1] without vote [agenda item 105 (b)].

World Programme for Human Rights Education

The General Assembly,

Recalling the relevant resolutions adopted by the General Assembly and the Commission on Human Rights concerning the United Nations Decade for Human Rights Education, 1995-2004,

Recalling also its resolution 58/181 of 22 December 2003, in which it decided to dedicate a plenary meeting during the fifty-ninth session of the General Assembly, on the occasion of Human Rights Day, 10 December 2004, to review the achievements of the Decade and to discuss possible future activities for the enhancement of human rights education,

Taking note of Commission on Human Rights resolution 2004/71 of 21 April 2004, in which the Commission recommended that the General Assembly proclaim at its fifty-ninth session a world programme for human rights education, to begin on 1 January 2005,

Reaffirming the need for continued actions at the international level to support national efforts to achieve the internationally agreed development goals, including those contained in the United Nations Millennium Declaration, in particular, universal access to basic education for all, by 2015,

Convinced that human rights education is a long-term and lifelong process by which everyone learns tolerance and respect for the dignity of others and the means and methods of ensuring that respect in all societies,

Believing that human rights education is essential to the realization of human rights and fundamental freedoms and contributes significantly to promoting equality, preventing conflict and human rights violations and enhancing participation and democratic processes, with a view to developing societies in which all human beings are valued and respected, without discrimination or distinction of any kind, such as race, colour, sex, language, religion, political, or other opinion, national or social origin, property, birth or other status,

1. Takes note of the views expressed in the report of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights on the achievements and shortcomings of the United Nations Decade for Human Rights Education, 1995-2004, and on future United Nations activities in this area concerning the need to continue a global framework for human rights education beyond the Decade in order to ensure a priority focus on human rights education within the international agenda;

2. Proclaims the World Programme for Human Rights Education, structured in consecutive phases, scheduled to begin on 1 January 2005, in order to advance the implementation of human rights education programmes in all sectors;

3. Notes with appreciation the draft plan of action for the first phase (2005-2007) of the World Programme for Human Rights Education, prepared jointly by the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights and the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization, as contained in the note by the Secretary-General, and invites States to submit comments thereon to the Office of the High Commissioner, with a view to its early adoption.

Children and a culture of peace

In response to General Assembly resolution 58/11 [YUN 2003, p. 689] on the International Decade for a Culture of Peace and Non-Violence for the Children of the World (2001-2010) proclaimed in 1998 [YUN 1998, p. 639], an August note of the Secretary-General [A/59/223] transmitted a report of the UNESCO Director-General covering the implementation of the 1999 Programme of Action on a Culture of Peace [YUN 1999, p. 594]. The report was an interim contribution to the mid-term progress report of the Secretary-General, to be submitted in 2005, on the observance of the Decade.

The report described activities carried out by UNESCO, as the lead agency for the Decade, with the participation of other UN bodies and Governments, to foster a culture of peace through education, promote sustainable economic and social development, promote respect for human rights, ensure equality between women and men, foster democratic participation, advance understanding, tolerance and solidarity, support participatory communication and the free flow of information and knowledge, and promote international peace and security. The report also reviewed the role of civil society and UNESCO communication and networking arrangements. To further advance the "culture of peace" concept, the Director-General recommended closer inter-agency cooperation, resource mobilization to sustain the momentum and renewing commitment to the Decade, as well as enhancing the online network underpinning current efforts as an effective tool for information sharing and mobilization.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 15 December [meeting 72], the General Assembly adopted resolution 59/143 [draft: A/59/L.21 & Add.1] without vote [agenda item 35].

International Decade for a Culture of Peace and Non-Violence for the Children of the World, 2001-2010

The General Assembly,

Bearing in mind the Charter of the United Nations, including the purposes and principles contained therein, and especially the dedication to saving succeeding generations from the scourge of war,

Recalling the Constitution of the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization, which states that, "since wars begin in the minds of men, it is in the minds of men that the defences of peace must be constructed",

Recalling also its previous resolutions on a culture of peace, in particular resolution 52/15 of 20 November 1997 proclaiming 2000 the International Year for the Culture of Peace, resolution 53/25 of 10 November 1998 proclaiming the period 2001-2010 the International Decade for a Culture of Peace and Non-Violence for the Children of the World, and resolutions 56/5 of 5 November 2001, 57/6 of 4 November 2002 and 58/11 of 10 November 2003,

Reaffirming the Declaration and Programme of Action on a Culture of Peace, recognizing that they serve, inter alia, as the basis for the observance of the Decade, and convinced that the effective and successful observance of the Decade throughout the world will promote a culture of peace and non-violence that benefits humanity, in particular future generations,

Recalling the United Nations Millennium Declaration, which calls for the active promotion of a culture of peace,

Taking note of Commission on Human Rights resolution 2000/66 of 26 April 2000, entitled "Towards a culture of peace",

Taking note also of the report of the Secretary-General on the International Decade for a Culture of Peace and Non-Violence for the Children of the World, including paragraph 28 thereof, which indicates that each of the ten years of the Decade will be marked with a different priority theme related to the Programme of Action,

Noting the relevance of the World Summit on Sustainable Development, held in Johannesburg, South Africa, from 26 August to 4 September 2002, the International Conference on Financing for Development, held in Monterrey, Mexico, from 18 to 22 March 2002, the special session of the General Assembly on children, held in New York from 8 to 10 May 2002, the World Conference against Racism, Racial Discrimination, Xenophobia and Related Intolerance, held in Durban, South Africa, from 31 August to 7 September 2001, and the United Nations Decade for Human Rights Education, 1995-2004, for the International Decade for a Culture of Peace and Non-Violence for the Children of the World, 2001-2010, as well as the need to implement, as appropriate, the relevant decisions agreed upon therein,

Recognizing that all efforts made by the United Nations system in general and the international community at large for peacekeeping, peace-building, the prevention of conflicts, disarmament, sustainable development, the promotion of human dignity and human rights, democracy, the rule of law, good governance and gender equality at the national and international levels contribute greatly to the culture of peace,

Noting that its resolution 57/337 of 3 July 2003 on the prevention of armed conflict could contribute to the further promotion of a culture of peace,

Taking into account the “Manifesto 2000” initiative of the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization promoting a culture of peace, which has so far received over seventy-five million signatures of endorsement throughout the world,

Taking note with appreciation of the report of the Director-General of the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization on the implementation of General Assembly resolution 58/11,

1. Reiterates that the objective of the International Decade for a Culture of Peace and Non-Violence for the Children of the World, 2001-2010, is to strengthen further the global movement for a culture of peace following the observance of the International Year for the Culture of Peace in 2000;

2. Invites Member States to continue to place greater emphasis on and expand their activities promoting a culture of peace and non-violence, in particular during the Decade, at the national, regional and international levels and to ensure that peace and non-violence are fostered at all levels;

3. Commends the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization for recognizing the promotion of a culture of peace as the expression of its fundamental mandate, and encourages it, as the lead agency for the Decade, to strengthen further the activities it has undertaken for promoting a culture of peace, including the dissemination of the Declaration and Programme of Action on a Culture of Peace and related materials in various languages across the world;

4. Also commends the relevant United Nations bodies, in particular the United Nations Children’s Fund, the United Nations Development Fund for Women and the University for Peace, for their activities in further promoting a culture of peace and non-violence, including the promotion of peace education and activities related to specific areas identified in the Programme of Action on a Culture of Peace, and encourages them to continue and further strengthen and expand their efforts;

5. Encourages the appropriate authorities to provide education, in children’s schools, that includes lessons in mutual understanding, tolerance, active citizenship, human rights and the promotion of a culture of peace;

6. Encourages civil society, including non-governmental organizations, to strengthen its efforts in furtherance of the objectives of the Decade, inter alia, by adopting its own programme of activities to complement the initiatives of Member States, the organizations of the United Nations system and other international and regional organizations;

7. Encourages the involvement of the mass media in education for a culture of peace and non-violence, with particular regard to children and young people, including through the planned expansion of the Culture of Peace News Network as a global network of Internet sites in many languages;

8. Welcomes the efforts made by the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization to continue the communication and networking arrangements established during the International Year for providing an instant update of developments related to the observance of the Decade;

9. Invites Member States to observe 21 September each year as the International Day of Peace, as a day of global ceasefire and non-violence, in accordance with General Assembly resolution 55/282 of 7 September 2001;

10. Invites Member States as well as civil society, including non-governmental organizations, to provide information to the Secretary-General on the observance of the Decade and the activities undertaken to promote a culture of peace and non-violence;

11. Emphasizes the significance of the plenary meetings on the item planned for its sixtieth session, and in that regard encourages participation at a high level, and decides to consider, at an appropriate time, the possibility of organizing those meetings as close as possible to the general debate;

12. Requests the Secretary-General to submit to the General Assembly at its sixtieth session a report on the implementation of the present resolution;

13. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its sixtieth session the item entitled “Culture of peace”.

National institutions and regional arrangements

National institutions for human rights promotion and protection

Commission action. On 21 April [res. 2004/75], the Commission welcomed the role of the International Coordinating Committee of National Institutions for the Promotion and Protection of Human Rights (for which OHCHR served as secretariat) in assessing conformity with the principles relating to the status of national institutions for the promotion and protection of human rights (Paris Principles), adopted in General Assembly resolution 48/134 [YUN 1993, p. 899]. The Secretary-General was requested to assist the meetings of the Coordinating Committee and international and regional meetings of national institutions, and to report in 2005.

Report of Secretary-General. A report of the Secretary-General [E/CN.4/2005/106], covering January to December 2004, contained information on the activities undertaken by OHCHR to establish and strengthen national institutions, the measures taken by Governments and national institutions in that regard, and cooperation between those institutions and international mechanisms to promote and protect human rights.

During the year, at the request of Governments, OHCHR provided advice and information on activities and issues which might assist national institutions in Afghanistan, Albania, Angola, Burundi, China, Colombia, the Comoros, the Congo, Côte d'Ivoire, Cyprus, the Democratic Republic of the Congo, Djibouti, Egypt, Greece, Iraq, Japan, Jordan, Kenya, Lesotho, Maldives, Nepal, the Netherlands, the Niger, Norway, Pakistan, Qatar, Saudi Arabia, Serbia and Montenegro, Sierra Leone, Sri Lanka, the Sudan, The former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia, Turkey and Uzbekistan. The national institutions of Afghanistan, Mongolia, Nepal, the Occupied Palestinian Territory, Rwanda and Zambia benefited from the support programmes provided by the National Institutions Unit of OHCHR's Capacity-Building and Field Operations Branch. During its 2004 sessions (Geneva, 14-16 April; Seoul, Republic of Korea, 14 September), the International Coordinating Committee held thematic discussions on human rights and disabilities and human rights education, and also discussed best practices of cooperation between NGOs and national institutions and a paper on early warning mechanisms. Support was given to regional initiatives, including the eighth Annual Meeting of the Asia Pacific Forum (Kathmandu, Nepal, 16-18 February), the twelfth Workshop on Regional Cooperation for the Promotion and Protection of Human Rights in the Asia-Pacific Region (Doha, Qatar, 1-4 March) (see p. 684), the third General Assembly of the Network of National Institutions of the Americas (Buenos Aires, Argentina 9-11 June), the ninth Annual Meeting of the Asia Pacific Forum (Seoul, 13 September), the seventh International Conference of National Human Rights Institutions (Seoul, 14-17 September) and the first African Union Conference of National Human Rights Institutions (Addis Ababa, Ethiopia, 18-21 October). OHCHR also supported the international race relations round table (Auckland, New Zealand, 2-5 February) and various initiatives of national institutions on migration, the advancement of women, good governance, the rights of persons with disabilities, indigenous peoples, minorities, HIV/AIDS prevention and related discrimination, the prevention of conflict and of torture, and the Paris Principles. Annexed to the report were the Seoul Declaration, adopted at the Seventh International Conference for National Institutions for the Promotion and Protection of Human Rights in September; issues emerging from the international race relations round table in New Zealand and the Zacatecas Declaration, adopted at the International Workshop of National Institutions for the Promotion and Protection of Human Rights: Causes, Effects and Consequences of the Migratory Phenomenon and Human Rights Protection (Zacatecas, Mexico, 14-15 October); and a statement outlining challenges and recommendations regarding women's rights, adopted at the round table of national human rights institutions and national machineries for the advancement of women (Ouarzazate, Morocco, 15-19 November).

Regional arrangements

Report of Secretary-General. A September report [A/59/323] of the Secretary-General, submitted pursuant to General Assembly resolution 57/210 [YUN 2002, p. 655], focused on OHCHR regional strategies. In order to maximize the impact of UN activities at the national level, OHCHR had pursued a regional and subregional approach through various complementary methods, including supporting the establishment of regional frameworks for human rights promotion and protection; adopting a subregional focus wherever appropriate; outpostting regional and subregional representatives; and concluding cooperative agreements with UN agencies and regional institutions undertaking joint regional projects, and sponsoring or organizing consultations and dialogues.

In Africa, OHCHR's regional arrangement was to support the African Union to strengthen its human rights system and to ensure subregional representation to strengthen national and subregional human rights capacities. In the Arab region, the OHCHR Regional Office in Beirut undertook activities aimed at enabling OHCHR to respond better to the human rights needs of respective Arab countries. Within the framework of cooperation with the League of Arab States, considerable emphasis was placed on the progress of the Arab Charter on Human Rights, the final text of which was adopted by the Arab Summit in May. The work of the Regional Office had also enabled OHCHR to strengthen partnerships outside the UN system; relevant activities in that regard included workshops on the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women and on violence against women (Beirut, 26-27 January), as well as on the role of civil society in the reform process in the Arab world, which took place in Alexandria, Egypt, in June.

In Asia and the Pacific, OHCHR organized a Subregional Workshop on Human Rights Education in School Systems, held in Doha, Qatar, in February. Also held in Doha was the twelfth Workshop on Regional Cooperation for the Promotion and Protection of Human Rights in the Asia-Pacific Region. Intersessional activities included a Subregional Workshop for Judges and Lawyers on the Justiciability of Economic, Social and Cultural Rights (Ulaanbaatar, Mongolia, 26-28 January); a February study on popular and non-formal human rights education in the Asia-Pacific region; and the eighth Annual Meeting of the Asia-Pacific Forum (Kathmandu, Nepal, 16-18 February).

In Europe, Central Asia and the Caucasus, OHCHR further intensified cooperation with regional organizations, including the Council of Europe, the Organization for Security and Cooperation in Europe and the European Union. The Office particularly maintained close contact with regional organizations in Europe on the issue of respect of human rights in the context of counter-terrorism. In Central Asia, OHCHR began to implement a four-year regional project, covering Kazakhstan, Kyrgyzstan, Tajikistan and Uzbekistan; the project aimed at raising broad public understanding of human rights.

In Latin America and the Caribbean, the Office, in coordination with the Latin American Institute for the Prevention of Crime and the Treatment of Offenders, organized a workshop on prison conditions for women in Central America (Costa Rica, 24-26 February), which adopted a declaration and a follow-up action plan. OHCHR also continued to strengthen cooperation with the Organization of American States and the Inter-American Commission on Human Rights, and supported the establishment and strengthening of the Network of National Human Rights Institutions of the Americas.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 20 December [meeting 74], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Third Committee [A/59/203/Add.2], adopted resolution 59/196 without vote [agenda item 105 (b)].

Regional arrangements for the promotion and protection of human rights

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 32/127 of 16 December 1977 and its subsequent resolutions concerning regional arrangements for the promotion and protection of human rights,

Recalling also Commission on Human Rights resolution 1993/51 of 9 March 1993 and its subsequent resolutions in this regard,

Bearing in mind the relevant resolutions of the Commission on Human Rights concerning advisory services and technical cooperation in the field of human rights, including its most recent on that subject, resolution 2004/81 of 21 April 2004,

Bearing in mind also the Vienna Declaration and Programme of Action adopted by the World Conference on Human Rights on 25 June 1993, which reiterates, inter alia, the need to consider the possibility of establishing regional and subregional arrangements for the promotion and protection of human rights where they do not already exist,

Recalling that the World Conference recommended that more resources should be made available for the strengthening of regional arrangements for the promotion and protection of human rights under the programme of technical cooperation in the field of human rights of the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights,

Reaffirming that regional arrangements play an important role in promoting and protecting human rights and should reinforce universal human rights standards, as contained in international human rights instruments,

Noting the progress achieved thus far in the promotion and protection of human rights at the regional level under the auspices of the United Nations, the specialized agencies and the regional intergovernmental organizations,

Considering that cooperation between the United Nations and regional arrangements in the field of human rights continues to be both substantive and supportive and that possibilities exist for increased cooperation,

Welcoming the fact that the Office of the High Commissioner has been systematically pursuing a regional and subregional approach through a variety of complementary means and methods, in order to maximize the impact of the activities of the United Nations at the national level,

1. Takes note with satisfaction of the report of the Secretary-General;

2. Welcomes the continuing cooperation and assistance of the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights in the further strengthening of the existing regional arrangements and regional machinery for the promotion and protection of human rights, in particular through technical cooperation aimed at national capacity-building, public information and education, with a view to exchanging information and experience in the field of human rights;

3. Also welcomes, in that respect, the close cooperation of the Office of the High Commissioner in the organization of regional and subregional training courses and workshops in the field of human rights, high-level governmental expert meetings and regional conferences of national human rights institutions, aimed at creating greater understanding in the regions of issues concerning the promotion and protection of human rights, improving procedures and examining the various systems for the promotion and protection of universally accepted human rights standards and identifying obstacles to ratification of the principal international human rights treaties and strategies to overcome them;

4. Recognizes, therefore, that progress in promoting and protecting all human rights depends primarily on efforts made at the national and local levels, and that the regional approach should imply intensive cooperation and coordination with all partners involved, while bearing in mind the importance of international cooperation;

5. Stresses the importance of the programme of technical cooperation in the field of human rights, renews its appeal to all Governments to consider making use of the possibilities offered by the United Nations under this programme of organizing information or training courses at the national level for government personnel on the application of international human rights standards and the experience of relevant international bodies, and notes with satisfaction, in that respect, the establishment of technical cooperation projects with Governments of all regions;

6. Welcomes the growing exchanges between the United Nations and the United Nations human rights treaty bodies, on the one hand, and regional organizations and institutions, including the Council of Europe, the Organization for Security and Cooperation in Europe, the League of Arab States, the Inter-American Commission on Human Rights and the African Commission on Human and Peoples' Rights, on the other;

7. Also welcomes the placement by the Office of the High Commissioner of regional representatives in sub-regions and in regional commissions;

8. Further welcomes the progress achieved in the establishment of regional and subregional arrangements for the promotion and protection of human rights, and, in this regard, notes with interest:

(a) The positive experience of the regional and subregional presence of the Office of the High Commissioner in southern, central and eastern Africa aimed at strengthening national and subregional human rights capacities;

(b) The support provided by the Office of the High Commissioner to the African Union for the strengthening of its human rights system, and welcomes in this regard the entry into force of the Protocol to the African Charter on Human and Peoples' Rights and the establishment of an African Court on Human and Peoples' Rights;

(c) The increased, valuable sharing of concrete national experiences at the eleventh and twelfth Workshops on Regional Cooperation for the Promotion and Protection of Human Rights in the Asian and Pacific Region, held in Islamabad from 25 to 27 February 2003 and in Doha from 2 to 4 March 2004, respectively, regarding the implementation of the Framework of Regional Technical Cooperation for the Asia-Pacific Region, which contributes to the enhancement of the promotion and protection of human rights in the region;

(d) Activities undertaken within the framework of the regional project of the Office of the High Commissioner for the promotion and protection of human rights in the Latin American and Caribbean region and the strengthening of the cooperation between the Office of the High Commissioner, the Organization of American States and the Inter-American Commission on Human Rights;

(e) Activities undertaken within the framework of cooperation between the Office of the High Commissioner and the League of Arab States and the intention to develop a broader technical cooperation programme in cooperation with the League of Arab States following the recent adoption of the Arab Charter on Human Rights;

(f) The continued cooperation between the Office of the High Commissioner and regional organizations in Europe and Central Asia, namely the Organization for Security and Cooperation in Europe, the Council of Europe and the European Union, in particular for activities at the country level, as well as the agreements between the European Commission and the Office of the High Commissioner for financing technical cooperation projects;

9. Invites States in areas in which regional arrangements in the field of human rights do not yet exist to consider concluding agreements with a view to establishing, within their respective regions, suitable regional machinery for the promotion and protection of human rights;

10. Requests the Secretary-General, as foreseen in programme 19, Human rights, of the revised medium-term plan for the period 2002-2005, to continue to strengthen exchanges between the United Nations and regional intergovernmental organizations dealing with human rights and to make available adequate resources from within the regular budget of technical cooperation to the activities of the Office of the High Commissioner to promote regional arrangements;

11. Requests the Office of the High Commissioner to continue to pay special attention to the most appropriate ways of assisting countries of the various regions, at their request, under the programme of technical cooperation and to make, where necessary, relevant recommendations, and in this regard welcomes the decision of the Office to strengthen national protection systems in accordance with action 2 of the reform programme of the Secretary-General;

12. Invites the Secretary-General to provide, in the report that he will submit to the Commission on Human Rights at its sixty-first session, information on progress made since the adoption of the Vienna Declaration and Programme of Action on reinforcing the exchange of information and extending collaboration between the organs of the United Nations dealing with human rights and regional organizations in the field of the promotion and protection of human rights;

13. Requests the Secretary-General to submit to the General Assembly at its sixty-first session a report on the state of regional arrangements for the promotion and protection of human rights, formulating concrete proposals and recommendations on ways and means to strengthen cooperation between the United Nations and regional arrangements in the field of human rights, and to include therein the results of action taken in pursuance of the present resolution;

14. Decides to consider the question further at its sixty-first session.

Africa

An October report of the Secretary-General [A/59/403] described the activities of the Subregional Centre for Human Rights and Democracy in Central Africa, based in Yaoundé, Cameroon. The Centre held workshops on civil society, human rights and the rule of law (Kribi, Cameroon, 2-4 February) and on women's rights and national legislation in Central Africa (Kigali, Rwanda, 17-19 March), in partnership with the United Nations Development Fund for Women. It also organized a training seminar on women journalists, human rights and the rule of law (Brazzaville, Congo, 29-30 March) and, in collaboration with the OHCHR Anti-Discrimination Unit, the Centre organized a training seminar on the role of civil society in the implementation of the Durban Declaration and Programme of Action (Yaoundé, 12-14 July). Furthermore, a two-day working session was held at the Centre with the UN Resident Coordinator in Equatorial Guinea on the design of projects for a human rights training project for implementation during 2004-2006. During 2003 and 2004, 24 interns were trained. The Centre also carried out activities related to democracy, including training workshops on the rights-based approach to lobbying and advocacy on human rights and democracy issues (Bamenda, Cameroon, 19-20 April) and on the rights-based approach in general terms (Yaoundé, 10-11 June). During the year, the Centre continued to provide technical cooperation to Governments, NGOs and national institutions, upon request. The report concluded that, taking into account the increasing number of requests for technical assistance submitted to the Centre, strengthening its structure and the allocation of additional funds should be envisaged to enable it to respond effectively.

The General Assembly took note of the report on 20 December (decision 59/528).

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 20 December [meeting 74], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Third Committee [A/59/503/Add.2], adopted resolution 59/183 without vote [agenda item 105 (b)].

Subregional Centre for Human Rights and Democracy in Central Africa

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 55/105 of 4 December 2000, concerning regional arrangements for the promotion and protection of human rights,

Recalling also its resolution 58/176 of 22 December 2003 on the Subregional Centre for Human Rights and Democracy in Central Africa,

Recalling further its resolutions 55/34 B of 20 November 2000 and 55/233 of 23 December 2000 and section III of its resolution 55/234 of 23 December 2000,

Recalling that the World Conference on Human Rights recommended that more resources be made available for the strengthening of regional arrangements for the promotion and protection of human rights under the programme of technical cooperation in the field of human rights of the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights,

Recalling also the report of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights,

Taking note of the holding of the twenty-first ministerial meeting of the United Nations Standing Advisory Committee on Security Questions in Central Africa in Malabo from 21 to 25 June 2004,

1. Welcomes the activities of the Subregional Centre for Human Rights and Democracy in Central Africa at Yaoundé;

2. Notes with satisfaction the support provided for the establishment of the Centre by the host country;

3. Requests the Secretary-General and the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights to provide adequate assistance for the proper functioning of the Centre;

4. Requests the Secretary-General to submit to the General Assembly at its sixtieth session a report on the implementation of the present resolution.

Asia and the Pacific

Report of Secretary-General. A March report [E/CN.4/2004/89] of the Secretary-General highlighted the key points made at the twelfth Workshop on Regional Cooperation for the Promotion and Protection of Human Rights in the Asia-Pacific Region (Doha, 2-4 March), which adopted the 2004-2006 Programme of Action for the Asia-Pacific Framework on Regional Cooperation for the Promotion and Protection of Human Rights. It adopted conclusions regarding national human rights plans of action and national capacity-building; human rights education; national human rights institutions; and the realization of the right to development and economic, social and cultural rights. The Programme of Action and conclusions were annexed to the Secretary-General's report.

Commission action. On 21 April [res. 2004/74], the Commission, endorsing the conclusions of the Workshop, noted its discussions on obstacles to the effective realization of economic, social and cultural rights and the right to development, as well as the need for international cooperation to support the efforts of countries to overcome those obstacles. The Secretary-General was requested to report in 2005 on the conclusions of the thirteenth workshop.

Cooperation with human rights bodies

Report of Secretary-General. A January report of the Secretary-General [E/CN.4/2004/29] described situations in which persons or NGO members had allegedly suffered intimidation or reprisals for having cooperated with UN human rights bodies regarding human rights violations.

Commission action. On 15 April [res. 2004/15], the Commission urged Governments to refrain from intimidation against persons who sought to cooperate or had cooperated with representatives of UN human rights bodies; persons who availed themselves of UN procedures and who had provided legal assistance to them for that purpose; those who submitted communications under procedures established by human rights instruments; and relatives of victims of human rights violations. It requested representatives of UN human rights bodies and treaty bodies monitoring human rights to help prevent such intimidation and to include in their reports allegations of intimidation or reprisal and of hampering access to UN human rights procedures, as well as an account of the action they had taken. The Secretary-General was asked to draw the attention of UN human rights treaty bodies to the Commission's resolution and to report in 2005.

Chapter II

Protection of human rights

In 2004, the protection of human rights—civil and political, as well as economic, social and cultural—remained a major focus of UN activities. Follow-up activities advanced during the year to implement the Durban Declaration and Programme of Action (DDPA), adopted by the 2001 World Conference against Racism, Racial Discrimination, Xenophobia and Related Intolerance. The Intergovernmental Working Group mandated to make recommendations for effective implementation of DDPA proposed measures to promote tolerance and combat discrimination, and considered ways to strengthen the implementation of existing international human rights instruments and to prepare complementary standards. To further strengthen international cooperation for protecting indigenous peoples' rights, the General Assembly, while welcoming the achievements made during the International Decade of the World's Indigenous Peoples (1995-2004), proclaimed a second International Decade, with effect from 1 January 2005.

In April, the Security Council, in its continuing effort to protect children affected by armed conflict, called for an action plan for a systematic and comprehensive monitoring mechanism that would provide timely and reliable information on the recruitment of child soldiers. In related action, the Council, in December, continued to consider ways to enhance the protection of civilians in armed conflict and urged parties to armed conflict to end the use of the media to incite hatred and violence.

In 2004, the Commission on Human Rights and its subsidiary body, the Subcommission on the Promotion and Protection of Human Rights, established new mandates for special rapporteurs to undertake studies on discrimination based on work and descent, non-discrimination, the difficulties of establishing guilt and/or responsibilities with regard to crimes of sexual violence, and to address the human rights aspects of the rights of victims of trafficking in persons. Further mandates were created for an independent expert on impunity, a special adviser on the prevention of genocide, an independent expert on terrorism and a representative of the Secretary-General on the human rights of internally displaced persons.

Special rapporteurs, special representatives and independent experts of the Commission and the Subcommission examined, among other issues, contemporary forms of racism; the rights of migrants; freedom of religion or belief; mercenary activity; the independence of the judiciary; extra-legal executions; allegations of torture; freedom of expression; human rights and terrorism; the prevention of human rights violations committed with small arms and light weapons; the right to development; the effects of structural adjustment programmes and foreign debt on human rights; corruption and its impact on the enjoyment of human rights; the question of human rights and extreme poverty; the right to food; the right to adequate housing; the right to education; illicit practices related to toxic and dangerous products and wastes; the right to physical and mental health; human rights and the human genome; violence against women; violence against children; the sale of children, child prostitution and child pornography; children affected by armed conflict; internally displaced persons; and the human rights and fundamental freedoms of indigenous people.

Working groups considered problems of racial discrimination affecting people of African descent, recommendations for effective implementation of DDPA and complementary standards to strengthen related international instruments, discrimination against minorities, arbitrary detention, enforced or involuntary disappearances, the right to development, working methods and activities of transnational corporations, contemporary forms of slavery and the rights of indigenous peoples.

Racism and racial discrimination

Follow-up to 2001 World Conference

Intergovernmental Working Group. The Intergovernmental Working Group established in 2002 [YUN 2002, p. 661] to make recommendations for the effective implementation of the Durban Declaration and Programme of Action (DDPA), adopted by the World Conference against Racism, Racial Discrimination, Xenophobia and Related Intolerance [YUN 2001, p. 615], and to prepare complementary standards to strengthen related international instruments, held its second (26 January–6 February) [E/CN.4/2004/20] and third (11–22 October) [E/CN.4/2005/20] sessions, both in Geneva.

In January/February, the Group focused on education, poverty and complementary standards, within the context of efforts to combat racism and racial discrimination. It considered a number of background papers on those themes, as well as a Secretariat note on existing focal points for DDPA implementation within the UN system [E/CN.4/2004/WG.21/4], a report of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights on complementary standards [E/CN.4/2004/WG.21/3], submitted in response to a 2003 Commission request [YUN 2003, p. 697], and a related note by the Office of the High Commissioner (OHCHR) [E/CN.4/2004.WG.21/5] containing a compendium of international and regional standards for combating racism and racial discrimination. The Group recommended, among other measures, the establishment of educational plans or guidelines to promote tolerance, cultural interaction, respect for diversity and human rights; it urged States to implement the education-related provisions of DDPA. The Group encouraged States to strengthen their national programmes for eradicating poverty and reducing social exclusion. It decided to undertake a dialogue on substantive issues relating to its mandate to prepare complementary standards to update and strengthen existing instruments concerning the elimination of racism, and requested OHCHR to invite the Committee on the Elimination of Racial Discrimination (CERD) and other treaty bodies to submit their views on the effectiveness and implementation of the 1965 International Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Racial Discrimination (see p. 665). OHCHR was requested to facilitate the compilation of those views and their circulation to Group members before its next session, while UN entities and international financial, trade and development institutions were invited to exchange information and coordinate their activities with the Group, with a view to mainstreaming the effective implementation of DDPA in their policies, programmes and actions.

In October, the Group discussed racism and health, racism and the Internet, and issues relating to the preparation of complementary standards. It had before it the views of CERD [E/CN.4/2004/WG.21/10 & Add.1] and the contribution of other intergovernmental organizations [E/CN.4/2004/WG.21/11] regarding the implementation of the 1965 Convention. The Group recommended measures to combat discrimination in health policies and to counter the incitement of hatred or acts of violence through the media and new information and communication technologies, including the Internet, as well as the organization by OHCHR of a high-level seminar on the Internet and racism, racial discrimination, xenophobia and related intolerance. The Group also considered strengthening the implementation of existing instruments by identifying gaps in international human rights law, with a view to preparing complementary standards. The process would involve an in-depth assessment and evaluation of the implementation of existing instruments, including suggestions to enhance the effectiveness of the fight against racism. The Group requested OHCHR to organize a four- to five-day high-level seminar during its fourth session to address work relating to the Group's recommendations.

Report of High Commissioner. Pursuant to General Assembly resolution 56/266 [YUN 2002, p. 659], the High Commissioner, in a March report on the implementation of and follow-up to the 2001 World Conference [E/CN.4/2004/17 & Corr.1], described the activities taken by States, special procedures and other Commission mechanisms, UN agencies, international and regional organizations, national human rights institutions and non-governmental organizations (NGOs) to implement DDPA.

Commission action. On 22 April [E/2004/23 (res. 2004/88)], the Commission, by a recorded vote of 38 to 1, with 14 abstentions, underlining the importance of mainstreaming non-discrimination, equality, human dignity and human solidarity into the UN system, welcomed the recommendations of the Intergovernmental Working Group (see above) and called on OHCHR to implement them and to report in 2005. Taking note of the outcome of the 2003 inaugural meeting of the independent eminent experts appointed to follow up the implementation of DDPA provisions [YUN 2003, p. 698], the Commission asked the High Commissioner to examine the possibility of developing a racial equality index, as proposed by the experts, and to report in 2005.

CERD action. In 2004 [A/59/18], the Committee on the Elimination of Racial Discrimination (see p. 665) considered follow-up to the World Conference, focusing on the work of the Intergovernmental Working Group in relation to the development of complementary standards to the International Convention on the Elimination of Racial Discrimination (see p. 664).

Report of Secretary-General. Pursuant to General Assembly resolution 58/160 [YUN 2003, p. 699], the Secretary-General, in a September report [A/59/375], described activities undertaken by States, OHCHR, UN bodies, specialized agencies, international and regional organizations, national human rights institutions, NGOs and youth organizations to implement DDPA. He observed that, despite increasing involvement by different actors in the implementation process, further efforts were needed to combat racism and racial discrimination, given the frequent manifestations of the phenomena.

On 20 December, the Assembly took note of the Secretary-General's report (decision 59/527).

Working Group on people of African descent. The Working Group of Experts on People of African Descent, established in accordance with DDPA in 2002 [YUN 2002, p. 661] to consider problems of racial discrimination affecting people of African descent, held its fourth session (Geneva, 25 October–5 November) [E/CN.4/2005/21]. The Group examined the themes of racism and employment, racism and health and racism and housing, and discussed related challenges affecting people of African descent. Also discussed was the Group's mandate as it related to the definition of the term "people of African descent", which was central to the discharge of its mandate. The Group had before it a September note [E/CN.4/2004/WG.20/2] by the Secretariat containing an analysis of the themes under consideration. The Group made recommendations on the collection of reliably disaggregated data to measure inequalities among specific social groups, the implementation of anti-discrimination laws and measures aimed at overcoming underrepresentation and to ensure an equitable redistribution of resources and power. Further recommendations proposed measures to ensure equality of peoples of African descent in employment and the labour market, health care and housing. The Group said that country visits were necessary for the effective discharge of its mandate, as that would facilitate an in-depth understanding of the situation of people of African descent in various regions.

Regional seminars. OHCHR, in collaboration with the UN Subregional Centre for Human Rights and Democracy in Central Africa, organized a training seminar on the role of civil society in implementing DDPA (Yaoundé, Cameroon, 12–14 July), which aimed at highlighting threats to peace posed by racist practices and the need for the urgent implementation of DDPA; the seminar adopted a declaration and plans of action.

OHCHR, in collaboration with the Pan-American Health Organization, a UN system public health agency, organized a regional workshop for Latin America and the Caribbean on efforts to ensure that the Millennium Development Goals (MDGs) contained in the UN Millennium Declaration [YUN 2000, p. 49] contributed to overcoming discrimination based on race, colour, descent and national and ethnic origin (Brasília, Brazil, 1–3 December) [E/CN.4/2005/22].

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 20 December [meeting 74], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Third (Social, Humanitarian and Cultural) Committee [A/59/501], adopted resolution 59/177 by recorded vote (183–3–2) [agenda item 103].

Global efforts for the total elimination of racism, racial discrimination, xenophobia and related intolerance and the comprehensive implementation of and follow-up to the Durban Declaration and Programme of Action

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 58/160 of 22 December 2003, in which it decided to place emphasis on the concrete implementation of the Durban Declaration and Programme of Action, adopted by the World Conference against Racism, Racial Discrimination, Xenophobia and Related Intolerance, held in Durban, South Africa, from 31 August to 8 September 2001, as a solid foundation for a broad-based consensus for further actions and initiatives towards the total elimination of the scourge of racism,

Recalling also its resolution 57/195 of 18 December 2002, in which it outlined the important roles and responsibilities of the various organs of the United Nations and other stakeholders at the international, regional and national levels, including, in particular, the Commission on Human Rights,

Recalling further its resolution 56/266 of 27 March 2002, in which it endorsed the Durban Declaration and Programme of Action as constituting a solid foundation for further action and initiatives towards the total elimination of the scourge of racism,

Reiterating that all human beings are born free and equal in dignity and rights and have the potential to contribute constructively to the development and well-being of their societies, and that any doctrine of racial superiority is scientifically false, morally condemnable, socially unjust and dangerous and must be rejected, together with theories that attempt to determine the existence of separate human races,

Convinced that racism, racial discrimination, xenophobia and related intolerance manifest themselves in a differentiated manner for women and girls and may be among the factors leading to a deterioration in their living conditions, poverty, violence, multiple forms of discrimination and the limitation or denial of their human rights, and recognizing the need to integrate a gender perspective into relevant policies, strategies and programmes of action against racism, racial discrimination, xenophobia and related intolerance in order to address multiple forms of discrimination,

Taking note of Commission on Human Rights resolutions 2002/68 of 25 April 2002, 2003/30 of 23 April 2003 and 2004/88 of 22 April 2004, by which the international community put into effect mechanisms for the effective implementation of the Durban Declaration and Programme of Action,

Reaffirming its commitment to a global drive for the total elimination of racism, racial discrimination, xenophobia and related intolerance,

Reaffirming that universal adherence to and full implementation of the International Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Racial Discrimination are of paramount importance for the promotion of equality and non-discrimination in the world,

Underlining the primacy of political will, international cooperation and adequate funding at the national, regional and international levels for the successful implementation of the Durban Programme of Action,

Alarmed at the increase in racist violence and xenophobic ideas in many parts of the world, in political circles, in the sphere of public opinion and in society at large, inter alia, as a result of the resurgent activities of associations established on the basis of racist and xenophobic platforms and charters, and the persistent use of those platforms and charters to promote or incite racist ideologies,

Underlining the importance of urgently eliminating continuing and violent trends involving racism and racial discrimination, and conscious that any form of impunity for crimes motivated by racist and xenophobic attitudes plays a role in weakening the rule of law and democracy, tends to encourage the recurrence of such crimes and requires resolute action and cooperation for its eradication,

Welcoming all the regional initiatives being undertaken to implement the Durban commitments and, in this context, expressing its appreciation to the Governments of Mexico, Kenya, the Czech Republic and Belgium for hosting the regional expert seminars with a view to the implementation of the Durban Declaration and Programme of Action within their respective regions, and encouraging the remaining region to take the necessary action in this regard,

Welcoming also the determination of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights to profile and increase the visibility of the struggle against racism, racial discrimination, xenophobia and related intolerance and her intention to make this a cross-cutting issue in the activities and programmes of her Office,

I

Basic general principles

1. Acknowledges that no derogation from the prohibition of racial discrimination, genocide, the crime of apartheid or slavery is permitted, as defined in the obligations under the relevant human rights instruments;

2. Expresses its profound concern about and its unequivocal condemnation of all forms of racism and racial discrimination, including related acts of racially motivated violence, xenophobia and intolerance, as well as propaganda activities and organizations that attempt to justify or promote racism, racial discrimination, xenophobia and related intolerance in any form;

3. Stresses that States and international organizations have a responsibility to ensure that measures taken in the struggle against terrorism do not discriminate in purpose or effect on grounds of race, colour, descent or national or ethnic origin, and urges all

States to rescind or refrain from all forms of racial profiling;

4. Recognizes that States should implement and enforce appropriate and effective legislative, judicial, regulatory and administrative measures to prevent and protect against acts of racism, racial discrimination, xenophobia and related intolerance, thereby contributing to the prevention of human rights violations;

5. Emphasizes that it is the responsibility of States to adopt effective measures to combat criminal acts motivated by racism, racial discrimination, xenophobia and related intolerance, including measures to ensure that such motivations are considered an aggravating factor for the purposes of sentencing, to prevent those crimes from going unpunished and to ensure the rule of law;

6. Urges all States to review and, where necessary, revise their immigration laws, policies and practices so that they are free of racial discrimination and compatible with their obligations under international human rights instruments;

7. Condemns the misuse of print, audio-visual and electronic media and new communication technologies, including the Internet, to incite violence motivated by racial hatred, and calls upon States to take all necessary measures to combat this form of racism in accordance with the commitments that they have undertaken under the Durban Declaration and Programme of Action, in particular paragraph 147 of the Programme of Action, in accordance with existing international and regional standards of freedom of expression and taking all necessary measures to guarantee the right to freedom of opinion and expression;

8. Encourages all States to include in their educational curricula and social programmes at all levels, as appropriate, knowledge of and tolerance and respect for foreign cultures, peoples and countries;

9. Stresses the responsibility of States to mainstream a gender perspective in the design and development of prevention, education and protection measures aimed at the eradication of racism, racial discrimination, xenophobia and related intolerance at all levels, to ensure that they effectively target the distinct situations of women and men;

II

International Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Racial Discrimination

10. Reiterates the call made by the World Conference against Racism, Racial Discrimination, Xenophobia and Related Intolerance in paragraph 75 of the Durban Programme of Action to achieve universal ratification of the International Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Racial Discrimination by 2005 and for all States to consider making the declaration envisaged under article 14 of the Convention, and endorses the concern expressed by the Commission on Human Rights in its resolution 2004/88 to the effect that, at the current pace, with one hundred and seventy ratifications and only forty-five declarations, the deadline of 2005 for universal ratification decided by the World Conference will, regrettably, not be realized;

11. Urges, in that context, the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights to maintain and issue regular updates on its web site of a list of countries that have not yet ratified the Convention, and to encourage such countries to demonstrate their practical commitment to meet the deadline for universal ratification as decided upon by the World Conference;

12. Invites States parties to the Convention to ratify the amendment to article 8 of the Convention, on the financing of the Committee on the Elimination of Racial Discrimination, and calls for adequate additional resources from the regular budget of the United Nations to enable the Committee to discharge its mandate fully;

13. Urges all States parties to the Convention to intensify their efforts to implement the obligations that they have accepted under article 4 of the Convention, with due regard to the principles of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights and article 5 of the Convention;

14. Notes that the Committee holds that the prohibition of the dissemination of ideas based on racial superiority or racial hatred is compatible with the right to freedom of opinion and expression as outlined in article 19 of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights and in article 5 of the Convention;

15. Welcomes the emphasis placed by the Committee on the importance of follow-up to the World Conference and the measures recommended to strengthen the implementation of the Convention as well as the functioning of the Committee;

III

Comprehensive implementation of and follow-up to the Durban Declaration and Programme of Action

16. Emphasizes that the basic responsibility for effectively combating racism, racial discrimination, xenophobia and related intolerance lies with States, and to this end stresses that States have the primary responsibility to ensure full and effective implementation of all commitments and recommendations contained in the Durban Declaration and Programme of Action;

17. Also emphasizes, in that context, the fundamental and complementary role of national human rights institutions, regional bodies or centres and civil society, working jointly with States towards the achievement of the objectives of the Durban Declaration and Programme of Action;

18. Calls upon States to elaborate action plans, in consultation with national human rights institutions, other institutions created by law to combat racism, and civil society, and to provide the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights with such action plans and other relevant materials on measures taken to implement the provisions of the Durban Declaration and Programme of Action;

19. Calls upon all States to formulate and implement without delay, at the national, regional and international levels, policies and plans of action to combat racism, racial discrimination, xenophobia and related intolerance, including their gender-based manifestations;

20. Urges States to support the activities of existing regional bodies or centres that combat racism, racial discrimination, xenophobia and related intolerance in their respective regions, and recommends the establishment of such bodies or centres in all regions where they do not exist;

21. Recognizes the fundamental role of civil society in the fight against racism, racial discrimination, xenophobia and related intolerance, in particular in assisting States to develop regulations and strategies, in taking measures and action against such forms of discrimination and through follow-up implementation;

22. Emphasizes that, in accordance with the Durban Declaration and Programme of Action, States have a shared responsibility, at the international level and within the framework of the United Nations system, to determine modalities for the overall review of the implementation of the Declaration and Programme of Action;

23. Decides that the General Assembly, through its role in policy formulation, the Economic and Social Council, through its role in overall guidance and coordination, in accordance with their respective roles under the Charter of the United Nations and Assembly resolution 50/227 of 24 May 1996, and the Commission on Human Rights shall constitute a three-tiered intergovernmental process for the comprehensive implementation of and follow-up to the Durban Declaration and Programme of Action;

24. Stresses and reaffirms its role as the highest intergovernmental mechanism for the formulation and appraisal of policy on matters related to the economic, social and related fields, in accordance with Chapter IX of the Charter, including in the comprehensive implementation of and follow-up to the goals and targets set at all the major United Nations conferences, summits and special sessions;

25. Acknowledges that the outcome of the World Conference against Racism, Racial Discrimination, Xenophobia and Related Intolerance is on an equal footing with the outcomes of all the major United Nations conferences, summits and special sessions in the human rights and social fields;

26. Decides that the Economic and Social Council shall oversee system-wide coordination of the implementation of the Durban Declaration and Programme of Action;

27. Also decides that the Commission on Human Rights, as a functional commission of the Economic and Social Council, shall have a central role in the monitoring of the implementation of the Durban Declaration and Programme of Action within the United Nations system and in advising the Council thereon;

28. Expresses its appreciation for the continuing work of the Intergovernmental Working Group on the Effective Implementation of the Durban Declaration and Programme of Action and the Working Group of Experts on People of African Descent, and looks forward to the consideration of the outcomes of their third sessions by the Commission on Human Rights at its sixty-first session;

29. Acknowledges that the World Conference against Racism, Racial Discrimination, Xenophobia and Related Intolerance, held in Durban, South Africa, from 31 August to 8 September 2001, which was the third world conference against racism, was significantly different from the previous two conferences, as evidenced by the inclusion in its title of two important components relating to contemporary forms of racism, namely, xenophobia and related intolerance;

30. Welcomes the work of the Committee on the Elimination of Racial Discrimination in applying the International Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Racial Discrimination to the new and contemporary forms of racism and racial discrimination;

31. Underlines the importance of the elaboration of complementary standards with a view to strengthening and updating international instruments against racism, racial discrimination, xenophobia and related intolerance, taking into account issues discussed during the previous sessions of the Intergovernmental Working Group on the Effective Implementation of the Durban Declaration and Programme of Action, as well as issues identified by the high-level seminar to be convened during the next session of the Intergovernmental Working Group;

32. Underlines also the importance of considering progress made in the implementation of the provisions of the Durban Declaration and Programme of Action related to the media and racism, including the use of the Internet, with the participation of all stakeholders, inter alia, States, the World Summit on the Information Society, international and regional organizations, non-governmental organizations, the private sector and the media;

33. Takes note of the recommendation of the Intergovernmental Working Group on the Effective Implementation of the Durban Declaration and Programme of Action, in that context, to request the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights to convene a high-level seminar, the format of which should be agreed among Member States, assisted by the Office of the High Commissioner, and which could include, but would not necessarily be limited to, a core group of ministers responsible for human rights and/or equivalent participants from all regions as panellists;

34. Strongly recommends that no intersessional meetings of the working groups of the Commission on Human Rights in follow-up to the World Conference and the implementation of the Durban Declaration and Programme of Action be scheduled in a manner that clashes or overlaps with the sessions of the General Assembly, and in this regard calls upon the Commission to address this issue and to ensure that the future sessions of the Working Group of Experts on People of African Descent are scheduled to precede those of the Intergovernmental Working Group on the Effective Implementation of the Durban Declaration and Programme of Action;

35. Requests the Secretary-General to reflect the outcome of the high-level seminar in his report to the General Assembly at its sixty-first session on the follow-up to the World Conference;

36. Acknowledges the centrality of resource mobilization, effective global partnership and international cooperation in the context of paragraphs 157 and 158 of the Durban Programme of Action for the successful realization of commitments undertaken at the World Conference, and to this end emphasizes the central role to be played by the group of independent eminent experts on the implementation of the Durban Declaration and Programme of Action in mobilizing the necessary political will required for the successful implementation of the Declaration and Programme of Action;

37. Requests the Secretary-General to provide the necessary resources for the effective fulfilment of the mandates of the Intergovernmental Working Group on the Effective Implementation of the Durban Declaration and Programme of Action, the Working Group of Experts on People of African Descent and the group of independent eminent experts on the implementation of the Durban Declaration and Programme of Action;

38. Condemns the resurgence of xenophobia, and underlines the fact that, while anchoring human rights in legal instruments is a fundamental way of expressing their universality, it is no longer capable of eliminating the underlying causes of discriminatory culture and mentalities, and that action on human rights must henceforth include discussion of the deep cultural roots of racism;

39. Expresses its concern at the increasing incidence of racism in various sporting events, while noting with appreciation the efforts made by some sporting governing bodies to combat racism;

40. Invites Member States to adopt measures to counter the dissemination of discriminatory, racist and xenophobic messages on the Internet, in accordance with paragraphs 144 to 147 of the Durban Programme of Action, and to promote a positive use of the Internet to foster social harmony and to combat racism;

41. Requests the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights to convene the second meeting of the group of independent eminent experts on the implementation of the Durban Declaration and Programme of Action before the sixty-first session of the Commission on Human Rights to produce a concrete programme of action related to their mandate, based on the core values of racial equality and dignity as elaborated in the outcome document of their first meeting, held in Geneva from 16 to 18 September 2003;

IV

Special Rapporteur of the Commission on Human Rights on contemporary forms of racism, racial discrimination, xenophobia and related intolerance and follow-up to his visits

42. Expresses its full support and appreciation for the work of the Special Rapporteur of the Commission on Human Rights on contemporary forms of racism, racial discrimination, xenophobia and related intolerance, and encourages its continuation;

43. Reiterates its call to all Member States, intergovernmental organizations, relevant organizations of the United Nations system and non-governmental organizations to cooperate fully with the Special Rapporteur;

44. Requests the Special Rapporteur to continue his exchange of views with Member States and relevant mechanisms and treaty bodies within the United Nations system in order to enhance further their effectiveness and mutual cooperation;

45. Recognizes with deep concern the increase in anti-Semitism, Christianophobia and Islamophobia in various parts of the world, as well as the emergence of racial and violent movements based on racism and discriminatory ideas directed against Arab, Christian, Jewish and Muslim communities, communities of people of African descent, communities of people of Asian descent and other communities;

46. Requests the Special Rapporteur to collect information from all concerned, to respond effectively to reliable information that becomes available to him, to follow up on communications and country visits and to seek the views and comments of Governments and reflect them, as appropriate, in his reports;

47. Calls upon States to cooperate with the Special Rapporteur and to give serious consideration to his requests to visit their countries so as to enable him to fulfil his mandate fully and effectively;

48. Encourages closer collaboration between the Special Rapporteur and the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights, in particular the Anti-Discrimination Unit;

49. Urges the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights to provide States, at their request, with advisory services and technical assistance to enable them to implement fully the recommendations of the Special Rapporteur;

50. Requests the Secretary-General to provide the Special Rapporteur with all the necessary human and financial assistance to carry out his mandate efficiently, effectively and expeditiously and to enable him to submit an interim report to the General Assembly at its sixtieth session;

51. Takes note of the recommendations contained in the interim report of the Special Rapporteur, and encourages the continuation of his work;

52. Urges Member States to consider implementing the recommendations contained in the reports of the Special Rapporteur, and invites other relevant stakeholders to implement those recommendations;

V

General

53. Requests the Secretary-General to submit a report on the implementation of the present resolution to the General Assembly at its sixtieth session;

54. Decides to remain seized of this important matter at its sixtieth session under the item entitled "Elimination of racism and racial discrimination".

Contemporary forms of racism

Reports of Special Rapporteur. In January [E/CN.4/2004/18], the Special Rapporteur on contemporary forms of racism, racial discrimination, xenophobia and related intolerance, Doudou Diène (Senegal), described activities he had undertaken since his 2003 report [YUN 2003, p. 704]. His activities focused on fieldwork and dialogue with Governments, UN agencies, national human rights institutions and NGOs, with particular attention accorded to racism in sport and to countries mostly affected by increasing racism relating to immigration and other factors. He considered contemporary manifestations of the phenomenon related to isolationism and the rejection of ethnic and cultural diversity; racial profiling; discrimination against the Roma/Gypsies/Sinti/Travellers; and anti-Semitism and Islamophobia. The Special Rapporteur discussed measures taken by Governments to address those issues and summarized allegations of racial discrimination received from individuals in seven countries. Based on the information he had gathered, the Special Rapporteur pointed to a resurgence of contemporary forms of racism, discrimination and xenophobia. He recommended national programmes, based on international instruments and DDPA, to combat those scourges; the promotion of pluralism; measures to deal with the rise of racism in sport; and an appeal to Member States concerned for cooperation with him for the recognition and treatment of the question of castes.

In response to a 2003 Commission request [YUN 2003, p. 704], the Special Rapporteur submitted a February progress report [E/CN.4/2004/19] regarding his study [YUN 2003, p. 703] of the situation of Muslim and Arab peoples in various parts of the world in the aftermath of the terrorist attacks of 11 September 2001 in the United States [YUN 2001, p. 60]. The Special Rapporteur said there had been an increase in Islamophobia, manifested through intellectual legitimization of hostility towards Islam and its followers by influential figures in society and tolerance of such hostility in many countries. The trend was particularly prevalent in France and the United States, both of which had large Arab and Muslim communities, and in other countries such as Australia, Belgium and Canada. In that regard, aspects of the behaviour of Muslims viewed as fundamentalists were being questioned, and Islam itself was openly and publicly attacked. The trend was further complicated by the overlap between Islamophobia and other phenomena of rejection, such as anti-Semitism. The Special Rapporteur recommended that the Commission appeal urgently to Member States to recognize the reality and seriousness of Islamophobia and to develop the necessary strategy to combat it. The Commission should recommend the establishment by OHCHR of a centre, which should be mandated to monitor the contemporary phenomena of racism, anti-Semitism and Islamophobia; develop a scientific methodology for measuring the phenomena; and, in collaboration with the Special Rapporteur, report annually to the Commission and the General Assembly.

The Special Rapporteur visited Côte d'Ivoire (9-21 February) [E/CN.4/2004/18/Add.4, E/CN.4/2005/18/Add.3] to assess the role of ethnic factors in the crisis facing the country since the outbreak of armed conflict there in 2002. He had received reports of increasing xenophobia and the information he gathered during the visit highlighted many allegations of serious human rights violations and critical shortcomings in the judicial system, which fostered a climate of impunity and perpetuated a cycle of violence. Alleged xenophobia stemmed from the fact that certain communities were especially targeted, notably persons from the northern part of the country or from neighbouring countries, and the victims reportedly suffered violations of the rights to life and the freedom of expression and of movement, arbitrary detention and arrests, enforced disappearances, torture and inhuman or degrading treatment, and attacks on property. The Special Rapporteur concluded that Côte d'Ivoire had no tradition of xenophobia, given that the society had developed a deep-rooted multi-ethnicity and a peaceful coexistence based on intercultural values. However, the crisis currently facing the country exposed it to the dynamic of xenophobia, stemming from a variety of factors that should be analysed and addressed to avert the emergence of real xenophobia. The Special Rapporteur recommended measures to strengthen the values of tolerance and coexistence in the society, to ensure a lasting political solution to the crisis afflicting the country and to improve the rule of law and the enjoyment of human rights. On the regional level, he proposed that, under the aegis of the Economic Community of West African States, regional States promote jointly intercultural dialogue and cultural pluralism.

Commission action. By a recorded vote of 36 to 13, with 4 abstentions, the Commission, on 16 April [res. 2004/16], alarmed at the spread in many parts of the world of various extremist political parties, movements and groups, including neo-Nazis and skinheads, stressed that the practices of such organizations fuelled contemporary forms of racism and were incompatible with Member States' obligations under the UN Charter and detrimental to the Organization's goals and principles. Emphasizing the need for measures to put an end to those practices, the Commission asked the Special Rapporteur to reflect on the issue, make relevant recommendations and report in 2005, taking into account the views of Governments and NGOs.

On 22 April [res. 2004/88], the Commission, by a recorded vote of 38 to 1, with 14 abstentions, urged Member States to consider implementing the recommendations contained in the Special Rapporteur's reports and invited the High Commissioner to provide States, at their request, with advisory services and technical assistance in that regard. The Special Rapporteur was asked to submit an interim report to the General Assembly in 2004 and to the Commission in 2005. The Secretary-General was asked to assist him.

By decision 2004/272 of 22 July, the Economic and Social Council endorsed the Commission's request to the Secretary-General to assist the Special Rapporteur.

Further reports of Special Rapporteur. The Special Rapporteur visited Guatemala (26 June-2 July) [E/CN.4/2005/18/Add.2] as part of a regional mission to Central America, during which he also went to Honduras and Nicaragua (see below). The mission was prompted by the need to shed light on two significant factors relating to the problem of racism in the region: the historical legacy of racial discrimination underpinning the era of slavery and colonial systems and the impact of the political violence that had marked the region's recent history. The three countries visited were of particular interest with respect to the structuring and management of ethnic, racial and cultural pluralism because they shared similar ethnic and demographic features and common historical and political legacies. Other common trends in the three countries that revealed the existence of racial discrimination included a troubling correlation between poverty-stricken areas and places inhabited by communities of indigenous people and people of African descent; the marginal involvement of representatives of those communities in power structures—government, parliament, the judiciary and the media; and their treatment as objects of folklore. To varying degrees, the authorities in the three countries also lacked an awareness of how extensive and deeply rooted discrimination was, contrary to information obtained from the affected communities.

In Guatemala, which had a population of 11.2 million, comprising four main ethnic groups, the Special Rapporteur found that the process of strengthening democracy and peace-building had progressed considerably in the 10 years following peace agreements that ended 36 years of conflict between the Government and insurgents. That process had involved the amendment of the criminal code through the incorporation of provisions banning racial discrimination. Although Guatemala's constitution and leadership recognized its ethnic diversity, the country overwhelmingly accorded precedence to its Hispanic identity, marginalizing a large proportion of the population. The Special Rapporteur, believing that combating racial discrimination should be the cornerstone of the process of building peace and democracy in Guatemala, recommended that the Government demonstrate its determination to tackle the phenomenon by recognizing its existence and related consequences and by expressing the commitment to eliminate them, and take an integrated approach by establishing a national programme to combat racism, based on DDPA and involving NGO participation. He also recommended, among other measures, moral and material redress for victims of racial discrimination and their families, strengthening national and international human rights mechanisms and action at the regional level against the phenomenon.

In Nicaragua (26 June–13 July) [E/CN.4/2005/18/Add.6], the Special Rapporteur said that the Government considered that there was neither racism nor racial discrimination in the country, as the complex ethnic and racial make-up of the population resulting from intermarriage was said to make manifestations of those phenomena improbable. By contrast, representatives of indigenous peoples and people of African descent considered themselves victims of racism and racial discrimination. The grievances of the affected ethnic groups included the infringement of their cultural identities and land rights, low levels of State investment in regions where they lived and their insignificant representation in power structures. Nicaragua comprised two main regions: the Pacific and Atlantic (Atlántico Norte and Atlántico Sur) regions, with the latter inhabited mostly by indigenous peoples and people of African descent, who were isolated and lacked basic infrastructure. Under a 1987 constitution, the two Atlantic subregions were granted autonomy, thereby establishing the institutional framework for their inhabitants to plan and assume responsibility for their own development and for protecting their collective ethnic rights. Other constitutional provisions were also designed to protect Nicaraguans, especially the indigenous community, from discrimination based on language, culture or origin, while various institutions ensured the protection of human rights. Those measures, although constituting a major step towards multiculturalism and the management of ethnic and racial pluralism, had not yielded the desired results owing to the lack of the requisite resources for related operations. Moreover, there was no general law containing provisions for combating discriminatory acts committed by State officials or private individuals. The Special Rapporteur recommended measures to maintain the momentum of planned reforms and to open up new prospects for enhanced participation by Nicaragua's various ethnic groups in the process. The Government should make a firmer commitment to combating racial discrimination by developing a programme of action for that purpose and for building a multicultural, egalitarian, democratic and interactive society inspired by DDPA. Its efforts in that regard should be supported by the activities of UN entities operating in Nicaragua and by the Organization of American States.

In Honduras (2–8 July) [E/CN.4/2005/18/Add.5], the Special Rapporteur found that the situation regarding racial discrimination was largely consistent with what he saw in Guatemala and Nicaragua, particularly in terms of the victims. Of an estimated population of 6.5 million, mestizos or Ladinos (people of mixed race) accounted for 90 per cent. Indigenous communities and people of African descent accounted for just 9 per cent of the population and allegedly suffered marginalization and discriminatory policies and practices that undermined their ethnic identity, cultural traditions and land rights. The Special Rapporteur recommended measures for strengthening the entire judicial system and government programmes and policies to better combat racism and racial discrimination and to remedy the situation of the affected communities. He advocated actions at the regional level similar to those he had proposed in Guatemala and Nicaragua.

Pursuant to General Assembly resolution 58/160 [YUN 2003, p. 699], the Secretary-General, in September [A/59/329], transmitted an interim report of the Special Rapporteur on the fight against racism, racial discrimination, xenophobia and related intolerance. The report summarized the Special Rapporteur's activities during the year and drew the Assembly's attention to related developments, including an upsurge of xenophobia and the weakening of protection against certain forms of discrimination, the persistence of racist propaganda on the Internet, racism in sports and racism connected with anti-Semitism and Islamophobia, as well as action taken or planned by Governments, judicial authorities and other entities. The Special Rapporteur recommended that the Assembly alert Member States to the need for measures to counter those developments, for an intellectual strategy against racism and racial discrimination, and for legislative and judicial action to ensure that the legitimate struggle against terrorism did not breed new forms of discrimination. The Assembly, in contemplating future measures against racism, discrimination and xenophobia, should consider the complication resulting from the fact that contemporary forms of racism conflated religion and culture with ethnicity and race, and should advocate a set of ethics to fight racism.

Communication. In March [E/CN.4/2004/G/35], Trinidad and Tobago, referring to the Special Rapporteur's 2003 visit to the country [YUN 2003, p. 704], regretted that it was not provided with an English language version of the Special Rapporteur's report on that visit in good time, which prevented it from giving its comments or views.

(For General Assembly action regarding the Special Rapporteur, see resolution 59/177 (p. 688).)

Study of political platforms

Reports of Special Rapporteur. In response to a 2003 Commission request [YUN 2003, p. 705], the Special Rapporteur on contemporary forms of racism, racial discrimination, xenophobia and related intolerance submitted a January report [E/CN.4/2004/61] updating a 2001 study on political platforms which promoted or incited racial discrimination [YUN 2001, p. 616], which his predecessor had presented to the Preparatory Committee for the World Conference against Racism, Racial Discrimination, Xenophobia and Related Intolerance [ibid.]. The report defined such platforms as political ideologies, discourses, programmes or strategies advocating racial discrimination or hatred in order to gain political power and marginalize certain groups in a given country. It also reviewed political parties and other organizations that promoted racism, and highlighted the rising tide of the phenomenon in Europe, the United States, South America, Asia, the Middle East and Africa. Observing that the persistence or resurgence of racism, ethnocentrism and xenophobia demanded the adoption of multiple strategies at the national, regional and global levels, the Special Rapporteur recommended that the phenomenon be recognized and acknowledged as a major threat to peace, security and human development. He advocated the establishment of monitoring, reporting, documentation and information-processing institutions and procedures and emphasized the need for an intellectual and ethical strategy to complement political and legal strategies in combating racism, and for political vigilance against the racist agenda of the extreme right in individual States.

Pursuant to Assembly resolution 58/159 [YUN 2003, p. 705], the Secretary-General, in October [A/59/330], transmitted the Special Rapporteur's updated and expanded report on the study of political platforms that promoted or incited racism, racial discrimination, xenophobia and related intolerance worldwide, which replicated the findings and recommendations contained in his January report to the Commission (see above).

Communications. In March [E/CN.4/2004/G/39] and October [A/C.3/59/4], Italy, responding to the Special Rapporteur's reports (see above), objected that the two political parties comprising the country's coalition Government had been included in the list of openly racist and xenophobic political groups in Europe. Its Government, it noted, had made the fight against racism a priority and was engaged in the implementation of DDPA, and no reference to fascist or hate ideologies was in the political programme of either of the two parties.

Commission action. On 19 April [res. 2004/38], the Commission, condemning political platforms and organizations based on racism, xenophobia or doctrines of racial superiority and related discrimination, recommended the creation, where they did not exist, of monitoring, reporting, documentation and information-processing institutions and procedures in order to contribute to preventing and reducing racial, ethnic or religious tensions. OHCHR, in collaboration with the Special Rapporteur, was invited to continue efforts to further analyse the issue of incitement and promotion of racism, racial discrimination, xenophobia and related intolerance in the political debate.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 20 December [meeting 74], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Third Committee [A/59/501], adopted resolution 59/175 without vote [agenda item 103 (a)].

Measures to be taken against political platforms and activities based on doctrines of superiority and violent nationalist ideologies which are based on racial discrimination or ethnic exclusiveness and xenophobia, including neo-Nazism

The General Assembly,

Recalling that the United Nations emerged from the struggle against Nazism, fascism, aggression and foreign occupation, and that the people expressed their resolve in the Charter of the United Nations to save succeeding generations from the scourge of war,

Aware of the determination proclaimed by the peoples of the world in the Charter to reaffirm faith in fundamental human rights, in the dignity and worth of the human person, in the equal rights of men and women and of nations large and small and to promote social progress and better standards of life in larger freedom,

Convinced that any doctrine of superiority based on racial differentiation is scientifically false, morally condemnable, socially unjust and dangerous, and that there is no justification for racial discrimination, in theory or in practice, anywhere,

Recognizing the fact that the World Conference against Racism, Racial Discrimination, Xenophobia and Related Intolerance, held at Durban, South Africa, from 31 August to 8 September 2001, condemned political platforms and organizations based on racism, xenophobia or doctrines of racial superiority and related discrimination, as well as legislation and practices based on racism, racial discrimination, xenophobia and related intolerance, as incompatible with democracy and transparent and accountable governance,

Reaffirming in this regard that everyone has the right to freedom of opinion and expression as well as the right to freedom of peaceful assembly and association,

Underlining the key role that politicians and political parties can and ought to play in combating racism, racial discrimination, xenophobia and related intolerance,

Noting with regret that, in the contemporary world, there continue to exist various manifestations of neo-Nazi activities, as well as other political platforms and activities based on doctrines of superiority and violent nationalist ideologies which are based on racial discrimination or ethnic exclusiveness and xenophobia, which entail contempt for the individual or a denial of the intrinsic dignity and equality of all human beings and of equality of opportunity in the civil, political, economic and social and cultural spheres and in social justice,

Deeply alarmed at the persistence and resurgence of these phenomena, and stating that they can never be justified in any instance or under any circumstances,

Noting with concern the widening misuse by such groups and organizations of the opportunities provided by scientific and technological progress, including the Internet, to promote racist and xenophobic propaganda aimed at inciting racial hatred and to collect funds to sustain violent campaigns against multi-ethnic societies throughout the world,

Noting that the use of such technologies can also contribute to combating racism, racial discrimination, xenophobia and related intolerance,

Expressing serious concern at the persistence in many parts of the world of doctrines of superiority and violent nationalist ideologies which are based on racial discrimination or ethnic exclusiveness and xenophobia,

Particularly alarmed at the persistence of such ideas in political circles, in the sphere of public opinion and in society at large,

Recognizing the important role that relevant regional bodies, including regional associations of national human rights institutions, can play in combating racism, racial discrimination, xenophobia and related intolerance, and the key role that they can play in monitoring and raising awareness about intolerance and discrimination at the regional level, reaffirming support for such bodies where they exist, and encouraging their establishment,

Recalling its previous resolutions, in particular resolutions 55/82 of 4 December 2000 and 56/268 of 27 March 2002,

Taking into consideration the report of the Special Rapporteur of the Commission on Human Rights on contemporary forms of racism, racial discrimination, xenophobia and related intolerance to the Commission on Human Rights and, in particular, his study on the question of political platforms which promote or incite racial discrimination,

1. Remains convinced that political platforms and activities based on doctrines of superiority and violent nationalist ideologies which are based on racial discrimination or ethnic exclusiveness and xenophobia, including neo-Nazism, must be condemned as incompatible with democracy and accountable governance;

2. Expresses its determination to resist such political platforms and activities which can undermine the enjoyment of human rights and fundamental freedoms and of equality of opportunity;

3. Urges States to take all available measures in accordance with their obligations under international human rights instruments to combat political platforms and activities based on doctrines of superiority and violent nationalist ideologies which are based on racial discrimination or ethnic exclusiveness and xenophobia, inter alia, through the dissemination of human rights principles at all levels of society through education, as well as by other means;

4. Takes note of the recommendations of the Special Rapporteur of the Commission on Human Rights on contemporary forms of racism, racial discrimination, xenophobia and related intolerance, including on the need for States to exercise greater control over racist and xenophobic statements, especially when they are expressed by representatives of political parties or other ideological movements, and emphasizes in this regard that measures taken to combat racism must be in accordance with the commitments they have undertaken under the Durban Declaration and Programme of Action and with international standards of freedom of expression;

5. Calls upon States to undertake and facilitate activities aimed at educating young people in human rights and democratic citizenship and instilling values of solidarity, respect and appreciation of diversity, including respect for different groups, and affirms that a special effort to inform and sensitize young people with regard to democratic values and human rights should be undertaken or developed to fight against ideologies based on the fallacious theory of racial superiority;

6. Urges all States to consider the adoption, as a matter of high priority, of appropriate measures, consistent with their national legal systems and in accordance with the provisions of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights, the International Covenants on Human Rights and the International Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Racial Discrimination, to eradicate activities that lead to violence based on racial discrimination or ethnic exclusiveness and xenophobia, including neo-Nazism, and to condemn all propaganda and all organizations which are based on ideas and theories of superiority;

7. Expresses support for the activities of the Special Rapporteur, and calls upon all States to cooperate with him in all aspects with a view to enabling him to fulfil his mandate;

8. Requests the Secretary-General to bring the present resolution to the attention of the Member States and relevant human rights bodies and mechanisms of the United Nations system.

Protection of migrants

Report of Special Rapporteur. The Special Rapporteur on the human rights of migrants, Gabriela Rodríguez Pizarro (Costa Rica), in a report covering her 2003 activities [E/CN.4/2004/76], analysed the situation of migrant domestic workers in the context of State legislation and practices and in the light of international human rights standards, based on responses to a questionnaire she had circulated and on her personal observations. Specific violations perpetrated against them included cases of death or disappearance, sexual abuse, infringement of privacy rights, false accusation of theft or other crimes, inadequate representation when charged, religious intolerance, slavery-like working hours, and denial of medical attention, food and telephone access to their families. Factors rendering migrant domestic workers vulnerable in that regard included the fact that host country legislation and recruitment methods often made them heavily dependent on their employer, especially when legal residence depended on the work contract. The Special Rapporteur addressed a series of recommendations to both States of origin and destination of large-scale flows of migrant domestic workers on steps to ensure the protection of their rights and to eliminate factors which made them vulnerable to abuse at all phases of migration, from recruitment to their return home.

An addendum to the report [E/CN.4/2004/76/Add.1] summarized the communications the Special Rapporteur had sent to 26 Governments and responses thereto, regarding individual cases of alleged violations of migrants' human rights and general situations concerning their rights in specific countries.

Commission action. On 20 April [res. 2004/53], the Commission, strongly condemning racism, racial discrimination, xenophobia and related intolerance against migrants, asked States to promote and protect their rights. It encouraged the Special Rapporteur to examine ways of overcoming existing obstacles in that regard and requested her to report to the General Assembly in 2004 and to the Commission in 2005. The Secretary-General was asked to assist her.

On 22 July (decision 2004/262), the Economic and Social Council endorsed the Commission's request to the Special Rapporteur to submit reports.

Further reports of Special Rapporteur. At the invitation of the Government, the Special Rapporteur visited Iran (22-29 February) [E/CN.4/2004/76/Add.4, E/CN.4/2005/85/Add.2], where she found that the majority of migrants were refugees who were essentially being cared for by the Government, placing an economic and social burden on the country. Those registered in Iran comprised mostly Afghans, numbering about 1.5 million. Hundreds of thousands of other Afghans residing in the country were unregistered. Iraqi migrants numbered about 202,000, of whom some 70,000 had repatriated spontaneously. The Special Rapporteur said there was often a tendency to equate the situation of irregular migrants with that of refugees, and the confusion might jeopardize efforts to protect the rights of both migrants and asylum-seekers. Other issues of concern were the exploitation of irregular migrants, difficulties in curbing irregular migration, the delimitation of responsibilities among offices dealing with migration issues, obstacles to the integration of migrants, a lack of knowledge of the guarantees and rights that international human rights law accorded to migrants and the lack of national NGOs dealing with migrants' issues. She recommended the implementation of a national policy of assistance and protection for migrants, and pointed to the need to initiate and encourage more domestic research on and evaluation of the presence and working conditions of foreign migrant workers and their impact on the Iranian economy and society. Further recommendations emphasized Iran's need to adhere to international legal instruments for securing migrants' interests and action to protect irregular migrants.

In Italy (7-18 June) [E/CN.4/2005/85/Add.3], which faced considerable migratory pressure and was home to an estimated 2.5 million migrants, the Special Rapporteur addressed border security and the administration of undocumented immigrants, and assessed the impact of recent reforms of the country's immigration legislation relating to efforts to integrate its immigrant population. While acknowledging government efforts to improve relations with countries of origin and transit as a means of checking illegal migration, to regularize the situation of gainfully employed illegal immigrants and to combat trafficking in persons, the Special Rapporteur expressed concern that measures to combat illegal immigration were also restricting the entry of foreigners and the rights of immigrants in the country. Further issues of concern related to the lack of coordination between employment and migration policies, the status and management of reception and identification centres, the high percentage of foreigners in prisons and the fact that discrimination against migrants was not addressed directly either in political spheres or by civil society. The Special Rapporteur recommended that the Government bring its migration policy in line with the employment situation; promote legal migration; ensure health assistance for arriving immigrants; develop for foreign prisoners alternatives to the deprivation of liberty, arrangements for sentences to be served in countries of origin and opportunities for rehabilitation; and arrange voluntary return programmes.

In Peru (20-30 September) [E/CN.4/2005/85/Add.4], the Special Rapporteur addressed the migration of an estimated 1.8 million Peruvian citizens to other countries, particularly to neighbouring Ecuador, Chile, Brazil and Colombia. She assessed the country's reform of its policy of consular assistance to those affected and investigated the situation of foreigners deprived of their liberty in Peruvian jails. The Special Rapporteur found that broad sectors of the population, young people in particular, saw emigration as the only solution to unemployment and poverty, given that Peru's recent economic growth had not resulted in any significant improvement in the labour market. The Special Rapporteur encouraged the Government to be proactive in defending the rights of Peruvian emigrants abroad and of foreigners in Peru, and to request UN support in doing so. She considered inadequate the country's efforts to deal with the smuggling of migrants and trafficking in persons, noting that there was a need for an institutional structure capable of combating such crimes and ensuring that the perpetrators were brought to justice. Another cause for concern was the prison conditions of foreigners in Peru, which violated human rights principles and standards. It was important to ensure that those affected had access to essential medical and legal assistance, among other services.

In response to General Assembly resolution 58/190 [YUN 2003, p. 708] and to Commission resolution 2004/53 (see p. 697), the Secretary-General, in September [A/59/377], transmitted a report of the Special Rapporteur, which further described her activities and issues of concern. Noting a continuing deterioration of migrants' human rights, the Special Rapporteur observed that the most frequent abuses against them included discriminatory, xenophobic and racist practices, the administrative detention of undocumented immigrants and exploitation of migrant workers. The Special Rapporteur said that traditional ways of managing migratory flows had become obsolete given that immigration currently took place in the context of globalization. The Special Rapporteur proposed that migration management should be stronger from a human rights perspective and based on the shared responsibility of States to fulfil their obligations towards migrants. States needed to ensure that their migration policies and domestic immigration laws were in line with the principles of international human rights law and with related commitments they had made at the international level. The Special Rapporteur urged the Assembly to continue its work on the codification of draft articles on the responsibility of States for internationally wrongful acts submitted by the International Law Commission (see p. 1298). She urged the Commission to do likewise on the Basic Principles and Guidelines on the Right to a Remedy and Reparation for Victims of Violations of International Human Rights and Humanitarian Law.

On 20 December, the Assembly took note of the Special Rapporteur's report (decision 59/528).

Report of Secretary-General. Pursuant to General Assembly resolution 58/190 [YUN 2003, p. 708], the Secretary-General, in a September report [A/59/328], summarized communications received from 12 States providing information on legal provisions, programmes, campaigns and policies established to protect migrants. The Secretary-General was encouraged by the increasing number of bilateral, regional and international consultations on migration, including the question of the protection of migrants, and by States' efforts in that regard. He welcomed the establishment of the Committee on the Protection of the Rights of All Migrant Workers and Members of Their Families, which would monitor the compliance of States parties with the provisions of the 1990 International Convention on the Protection of the Rights of All Migrant Workers and Members of Their Families (see p. 668). The Secretary-General encouraged States to implement their national action plans, particularly regarding aspects relating to migrants, in follow-up action to the 2001 World Conference against Racism, Racial Discrimination, Xenophobia and Related Intolerance [YUN 2001, p. 615].

By decision 59/528 of 20 December, the Assembly took note of the Secretary-General's report.

Communication. In February [E/CN.4/2004/G/17], Spain, referring to the Special Rapporteur's report on her 2003 visit to the country [YUN 2003, p. 707], stated that it disagreed with a number of statements and interpretations contained in the report, which, among other things, implied the existence of gender and racial discrimination against nationals of some countries.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 20 December [meeting 74], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Third Committee [A/59/503/Add.2], adopted resolution 59/194 without vote [agenda item 105 (b)].

Protection of migrants

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 58/190 of 22 December 2003 and Commission on Human Rights resolution 2004/53 of 20 April 2004,

Recalling also its resolution 40/144 of 13 December 1985, by which it adopted the Declaration on the Human Rights of Individuals Who are not Nationals of the Country in which They Live,

Reaffirming that the Universal Declaration of Human Rights proclaims that all human beings are born free and equal in dignity and rights and that everyone is entitled to all the rights and freedoms set out therein, without distinction of any kind, in particular as to race, colour or national origin,

Considering that every State party to the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights must ensure to all individuals within its territory and subject to its jurisdiction the rights recognized in the Covenant,

Bearing in mind that every State party to the International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights has undertaken to guarantee the exercise of all rights enunciated in that Covenant without discrimination of any kind, including, in particular, on the basis of national origin,

Reaffirming the provisions concerning migrants adopted by the World Conference on Human Rights, the International Conference on Population and Development, the World Summit for Social Development and the Fourth World Conference on Women,

Reaffirming also the provisions on the human rights of migrants contained in the Durban Declaration and Programme of Action, adopted by the World Conference against Racism, Racial Discrimination, Xenophobia and Related Intolerance on 8 September 2001, and expressing its satisfaction at the important recommendations made for the development of international and national strategies for the protection of migrants and for the design of migration policies that fully respect the human rights of migrants,

Welcoming the renewed commitment made in the United Nations Millennium Declaration to take measures to ensure respect for and protection of the human rights of migrants, migrant workers and their families, to eliminate the increasing acts of racism and xenophobia in many societies and to promote greater harmony and tolerance in all societies,

Taking note with appreciation of the report of the Special Rapporteur of the Commission on Human Rights on the human rights of migrants, especially the work she has undertaken on the human rights of migrants, and taking note of the conclusions and recommendations contained therein,

Taking note of advisory opinion OC-16/99, issued by the Inter-American Court of Human Rights on 1 October 1999, on The Right to Information on Consular

Assistance in the Framework of the Guarantees of the Due Process of Law,

Taking note also of the Judgment of the International Court of Justice of 31 March 2004 in the case concerning Avena and Other Mexican Nationals, and recalling the obligations of States reaffirmed therein,

Taking note further of advisory opinion OC-18/03, issued by the Inter-American Court of Human Rights on 17 September 2003, on The Juridical Condition and Rights of Undocumented Migrants,

Aware of the increasing number of migrants worldwide, and bearing in mind the situation of vulnerability in which migrants and their families frequently find themselves, owing, inter alia, to their absence from their States of origin and to the difficulties they encounter because of differences of language, custom and culture, as well as the economic and social difficulties and obstacles to the return to their States of origin of migrants who are non-documented or in an irregular situation,

Recognizing the positive contributions that migrants frequently make, including through their eventual integration into their host society, and the efforts that some host countries undertake to integrate migrants and their families,

Underlining the importance of the creation of conditions that foster greater harmony, tolerance and respect between migrants and the rest of society in the States in which they reside in order to eliminate manifestations of racism and xenophobia against migrants,

Encouraged by the increasing interest of the international community in the effective and full protection of the human rights of all migrants, and underlining the need to make further efforts to ensure respect for the human rights and fundamental freedoms of all migrants,

Bearing in mind the need for a focused and consistent approach towards migrants as a specific vulnerable group, in particular migrant women and children,

Resolved to ensure respect for the human rights and fundamental freedoms of all migrants,

1. Strongly condemns the manifestations and acts of racism, racial discrimination, xenophobia and related intolerance against migrants and the stereotypes often applied to them, and urges States to apply the existing laws when xenophobic or intolerant acts, manifestations or expressions against migrants occur, in order to eradicate impunity for those who commit xenophobic and racist acts;

2. Also strongly condemns all forms of racial discrimination and xenophobia related to access to employment, vocational training, housing, schooling, health services and social services, as well as services intended for use by the public, and welcomes the active role played by governmental and non-governmental organizations in combating racism and xenophobia and in assisting individual victims of racist acts, including migrant victims;

3. Requests all Member States, in conformity with their respective constitutional systems, effectively to promote and protect the human rights of all migrants, in conformity with the Universal Declaration of Human Rights and the international instruments to which they are party, which may include the International Covenants on Human Rights, the Convention against Torture and Other Cruel, Inhuman or Degrading Treatment or Punishment, the International Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Racial Discrimination, the International Convention on the Protection of the Rights of All Migrant Workers and Members of Their Families, the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women, the Convention on the Rights of the Child and other relevant international human rights instruments;

4. Welcomes the increasing number of signatures and ratifications or accessions to the International Convention on the Protection of the Rights of All Migrant Workers and Members of Their Families, and calls upon States that have not done so to consider urgently signing and ratifying or acceding to the Convention;

5. Also welcomes the entry into force of the United Nations Convention against Transnational Organized Crime, the Protocol to Prevent, Suppress and Punish Trafficking in Persons, Especially Women and Children, supplementing the United Nations Convention against Transnational Organized Crime, and the Protocol against the Smuggling of Migrants by Land, Sea and Air, supplementing the United Nations Convention against Transnational Organized Crime, and calls upon States that have not done so to consider urgently signing and ratifying or acceding to them;

6. Reaffirms emphatically the duty of States parties to ensure full respect for and observance of the Vienna Convention on Consular Relations of 1963, in particular with regard to the right of all foreign nationals to communicate with a consular official of the sending State in the case of arrest, imprisonment, custody or detention, and the obligation of the receiving State to inform without delay the foreign national of his or her rights under the Convention;

7. Calls upon States to promote and protect fully the human rights of migrants, as set out in the Durban Declaration and Programme of Action, through, inter alia, the adoption of national plans of action as recommended by the World Conference against Racism, Racial Discrimination, Xenophobia and Related Intolerance;

8. Also calls upon all States to consider reviewing and, where necessary, revising immigration policies with a view to eliminating all discriminatory practices against migrants and their families, and to provide specialized training for government policy-making, law enforcement, migration and other concerned officials, including in cooperation with non-governmental organizations and civil society, thus underlining the importance of effective action to create conditions that foster greater harmony and tolerance within societies;

9. Welcomes immigration programmes, adopted by some countries, that allow migrants to integrate fully into the host countries, facilitate family reunification and promote a harmonious and tolerant environment, and encourages States to consider the possibility of adopting these types of programmes;

10. Requests all States, in conformity with national legislation and applicable international legal instruments to which they are party, firmly to prosecute violations of labour law with regard to the conditions of work of migrant workers, including those related to, inter alia, their remuneration and the conditions of health and safety at work;

11. Encourages all States to remove obstacles that may prevent the safe, unrestricted and expeditious transfer of earnings, assets and pensions of migrants to their country of origin or to any other countries, in conformity with applicable legislation, and to consider, as appropriate, measures to solve other problems that may impede such transfers;

12. Urges all States to adopt effective measures to put an end to the arbitrary arrest and detention of migrants and to take action to prevent and punish any form of illegal deprivation of liberty of migrants by individuals or groups;

13. Calls upon States to observe national legislation and applicable international legal instruments to which they are party when enacting national security measures in order to respect the human rights of migrants;

14. Requests States to adopt concrete measures to prevent the violation of the human rights of migrants while in transit, including in ports and airports and at borders and migration checkpoints, to train public officials who work in those facilities and in border areas to treat migrants and their families respectfully and in accordance with the law, and to prosecute, in conformity with applicable law, any act of violation of the human rights of migrants and their families, such as arbitrary detention, torture and violations of the right to life, including extrajudicial executions, during their transit from their country of origin to the country of destination and vice versa, including their transit through national borders;

15. Encourages Member States that have not yet done so to enact domestic legislation and to take further effective measures to combat international trafficking in and smuggling of migrants, recognizing that these crimes may endanger the lives of migrants or subject them to harm, servitude or exploitation, which may include debt bondage, slavery, sexual exploitation or forced labour, and also encourages Member States to strengthen international cooperation to combat such trafficking and smuggling;

16. Encourages States, in cooperation with non-governmental organizations, to undertake information campaigns aimed at clarifying opportunities, limitations and rights in the event of migration so as to enable everyone, in particular women, to make informed decisions and to prevent them from becoming victims of trafficking and utilizing dangerous means of access that put their lives and physical integrity at risk;

17. Calls upon States to facilitate family reunification in an expeditious and effective manner, with due regard to applicable laws, as such reunification has a positive effect on the integration of migrants;

18. Calls upon all States to protect and promote all human rights of migrant children, in particular unaccompanied migrant children, ensuring that the best interests of the children are a primary consideration, underlines the importance of reuniting them with their parents, when possible, and encourages the relevant United Nations bodies, within the framework of their respective mandates, to pay special attention to the conditions of migrant children in all States and, where necessary, to put forward recommendations for strengthening their protection;

19. Encourages States of origin to promote and protect the human rights of those families of migrant workers which remain in the countries of origin, paying particular attention to children and adolescents whose parents have emigrated, and encourages international organizations to consider supporting States in this regard;

20. Encourages States to consider participating in international and regional dialogues on migration that include countries of origin and destination, as well as countries of transit, and invites them to consider negotiating bilateral and regional agreements on migrant workers within the framework of applicable human rights law and designing and implementing programmes with States of other regions to protect the rights of migrants;

21. Requests all Governments to cooperate fully with the Special Rapporteur of the Commission on Human Rights on the human rights of migrants in the performance of the tasks and duties mandated, to furnish all information requested and to respond appropriately and expeditiously to her urgent appeals and to give serious consideration to her requests to visit their countries, and welcomes in this regard the standing invitations extended by some Member States to all special procedures, including the Special Rapporteur;

22. Encourages States to review and examine the conclusions and recommendations contained in the report of the Special Rapporteur and to consider their re-implementation;

23. Invites States and intergovernmental and non-governmental organizations to observe, on 18 December of each year, International Migrants Day, proclaimed by the General Assembly, through, inter alia, the dissemination of information on the human rights and fundamental freedoms of migrants and on their economic, social and cultural contributions to their host and home countries, the sharing of experience and the design of actions to ensure their protection, and to promote greater harmony between migrants and the societies in which they live;

24. Requests the Secretary-General to submit to the General Assembly at its sixtieth session a report on the implementation of the present resolution under the sub-item entitled "Human rights questions, including alternative approaches for improving the effective enjoyment of human rights and fundamental freedoms", and requests the Special Rapporteur to submit to the Assembly at its sixtieth session an interim report on the fulfilment of her mandate;

25. Decides to examine the question further at its sixtieth session under the sub-item.

Also on 20 December [meeting 74], the Assembly, on the recommendation of the Third Committee [A/59/503/Add.2], adopted resolution 59/203 by recorded vote (122-3-61) [agenda item 105 (b)].

Respect for the right to universal freedom of travel and the vital importance of family reunification

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 57/227 of 18 December 2002,

Reaffirming that all human rights and fundamental freedoms are universal, indivisible, interdependent and interrelated,

Recalling the provisions of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights, as well as article 12 of the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights,

Stressing that, as stated in the Programme of Action of the International Conference on Population and Development, family reunification of documented migrants is an important factor in international migration and that remittances by documented migrants to their countries of origin often constitute a very important source of foreign exchange and are instrumental in improving the well-being of relatives left behind,

Noting that while some positive developments occurred during the past two years in the accomplishment of the objectives highlighted in resolution 57/227, in particular the commitment made on 9 June 2004 at the summit meeting of the Group of Eight, held at Sea Island, United States of America, to facilitate the flow of remittances across international borders to help families, in certain cases it has been reported that measures have been adopted that have increased the restrictions imposed on documented migrants in relation to family reunification and the possibility of sending remittances to their relatives in the country of origin,

Recalling that the family is the basic unit of society and, as such, should be strengthened, and that it is entitled to receive comprehensive protection and support,

1. Once again calls upon all States to guarantee the universally recognized freedom of travel to all foreign nationals legally residing in their territory;

2. Reaffirms that all Governments, in particular those of receiving countries, must recognize the vital importance of family reunification and promote its incorporation into national legislation in order to ensure protection of the unity of families of documented migrants;

3. Calls upon all States to allow, in conformity with international legislation, the free flow of financial remittances by foreign nationals residing in their territory to relatives in the country of origin;

4. Also calls upon all States to refrain from enacting, and to repeal if it already exists, legislation intended as a coercive measure that discriminates against individuals or groups of legal migrants by adversely affecting family reunification and the right to send financial remittances to relatives in the country of origin;

5. Decides to continue its consideration of the question at its sixty-first session under the item entitled "Human rights questions".

RECORDED VOTE ON RESOLUTION 59/203:

In favour: Afghanistan, Algeria, Angola, Antigua and Barbuda, Argentina, Armenia, Azerbaijan, Bahamas, Bahrain, Bangladesh, Barbados, Belarus, Belize, Benin, Bhutan, Bolivia, Botswana, Brazil, Burkina Faso, Burundi, Cambodia, Cameroon, Cape Verde, Central African Republic, Chad, Chile, China, Colombia, Comoros, Costa Rica, Côte d'Ivoire, Cuba, Democratic People's Republic of Korea, Democratic Republic of the Congo, Djibouti, Dominica, Dominican Republic, Ecuador, Egypt, El Salvador, Equatorial Guinea, Eritrea, Ethiopia, Fiji, Gabon, Gambia, Ghana, Grenada, Guatemala, Guinea, Guinea-Bissau, Guyana, Haiti, Honduras, India, Indonesia, Iran, Iraq, Jamaica, Jordan, Kazakhstan, Kenya, Kuwait, Kyrgyzstan, Lao People's Democratic Republic, Lebanon, Lesotho, Liberia, Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Madagascar, Mali, Mauritania, Mauritius, Mexico, Mongolia, Morocco, Mozambique, Myanmar, Namibia, Nepal, Nicaragua, Niger, Nigeria, Oman, Pakistan, Panama, Papua New Guinea, Peru, Philippines, Qatar, Russian Federation, Rwanda, Saint Lucia, Saint Vincent and the Grenadines, Sao Tome and Principe, Saudi Arabia, Senegal, Seychelles, Sierra Leone, Somalia, South Africa, Sri Lanka, Sudan, Suriname, Swaziland, Syrian Arab Republic, Tajikistan, Timor-Leste, Togo, Trinidad and Tobago, Tunisia, Turkmenistan, Tuvalu, Uganda,

Other forms of intolerance

On 9 August [E/CN.4/2005/2 (dec. 2004/108)], the Subcommission asked Soli Sorabjee (India) to submit, without financial implications, a working paper on the impact of intolerance on the enjoyment and exercise of human rights and measures to counter it, for consideration in 2005.

Cultural prejudice

Report of High Commissioner. In response to the Commission's 2002 [YUN 2002, p. 677] and 2003 [YUN 2003, p. 710] requests to the High Commissioner to consult with States, intergovernmental organizations and NGOs on the possibility of appointing a special rapporteur to implement the Commission's resolutions on cultural rights, the High Commissioner submitted a report [E/CN.4/2004/41 & Corr.1 & Add.1] summarizing replies received from seven Governments and two UN system agencies on the appointment of a special rapporteur and on steps they had taken to promote the full enjoyment of cultural rights.

Commission action. By a recorded vote of 38 to 1, with 14 abstentions, the Commission, on 16 April [res. 2004/20], reaffirming that cultural rights were an integral part of human rights, recognized that States had the responsibility to promote the full enjoyment of cultural rights and to enhance respect for different cultural identities. The Commission called on States, intergovernmental organizations and NGOs to implement its resolution and asked the High Commissioner to consult with them on the possibility of establishing a thematic procedure, whose mandate would be the comprehensive implementation of the resolution, and to report in 2005.

Discrimination against minorities

Report of High Commissioner. In response to a 2003 Commission request [YUN 2003, p. 712], a February report of the High Commissioner

[E/CN.4/2004/75] reviewed existing human rights norms and mechanisms for protecting persons belonging to minorities, identified structural and functional gaps and considered how proposals made by legislative or advisory bodies might contribute to strengthening the promotion and protection of minorities' rights. Particular attention was accorded to the work of the Working Group on Minorities (see below), human rights treaty bodies and the Commission's special procedures. The High Commissioner concluded that, owing to structural or functional reasons, the challenges facing minorities had not been appropriately covered by existing mandates, and that the potential of those mandates had not been fully exploited. The High Commissioner said there were no procedures for dealing swiftly with violations of minorities' rights and with individual or group communications, and there was also no mandate to follow up minority issues in a systematic and specialized way through contacts with Governments and societies. Several proposals had been made, mostly by the Working Group (see below), regarding the better exploitation of the potential of existing mechanisms and other arrangements, including the appointment of a special rapporteur of the Commission and a special representative of the Secretary-General on minority-related problems, the creation of a voluntary fund for minorities and the proclamation of an international year for the world's minorities. It was important that the debate on such new arrangements be undertaken in the context of the reform of human rights mechanisms. Drawing on the existing mechanisms, enhancing their impact through greater involvement in minority issues and making any new ones fully complementary could strengthen the ability of the UN human rights machinery to effectively address problems faced by minorities.

Referring to the Commission's request to the Secretary-General to report on recent developments with regard to the promotion and protection of persons belonging to minorities [YUN 2003, p. 712], the High Commissioner drew the Commission's attention to the 2003 report of the Secretary-General [ibid., p. 713], which provided relevant information.

Commission action. On 20 April [res. 2004/51], the Commission urged States to promote and protect the rights of persons belonging to national or ethnic, religious and linguistic minorities, to accord special attention to protecting their children's rights and to take measures to protect their cultural and religious sites. The Working Group on Minorities (see p. 703) was invited to strengthen its role as a platform for interactive dialogue between representatives of Governments and minority groups, while the Secretary-General and the High Commissioner were asked to assist in strengthening OHCHR's capacity to deal with minority issues and to seek voluntary contributions to facilitate the participation of NGO and minority representatives in the Group's work. The High Commissioner was asked to study options for the timely identification of minority issues and related measures through the compilation of the views of Member States, relevant parts of the UN system, regional and international organizations and NGOs regarding their analysis of the activities of the Working Group and the results it achieved, and to report in 2005. The High Commissioner was further requested to report in 2005 on the implementation of the Commission's resolution.

Also on 20 April [dec. 2004/114], the Commission endorsed the 2003 recommendation of the Subcommission [YUN 2003, p. 713] that a voluntary fund on minority-related activities be established to facilitate participation in the Working Group and its related activities of representatives and experts from developing countries and for the organization of other activities relating to the implementation of the rights of persons belonging to minorities, with Working Group members acting as a virtual decision-making board.

On 22 July, the Economic and Social Council endorsed the establishment of the fund and recommended that the General Assembly consider it favourably (decision 2004/278).

Further on 20 April [dec. 2004/115], the Commission, taking note of the Subcommission's 2003 recommendation [YUN 2003, p. 713] to proclaim an international year for the world's minorities, followed by a decade, with a view to advancing the implementation of the 1992 Declaration on the Rights of Persons Belonging to National or Ethnic, Religious and Linguistic Minorities [YUN 1992, p. 723], called for greater cooperation among specialized agencies and other organizations of the UN system in order to contribute to the full realization of the rights and principles set forth in the Declaration.

Working Group activities. The five-member Working Group on Minorities, at its tenth session (Geneva, 1-5 March) [E/CN.4/Sub.2/2004/29], reviewed the promotion of the 1992 Declaration, examined possible solutions to problems involving minorities, including the promotion of mutual understanding between and among minorities and Governments, and recommended further measures to promote and protect minority rights. The Group also discussed its future role.

The Group had before it working papers on minorities and self-determination [E/CN.4/Sub.2/

AC.5/2004/WP.1], international and national action for the protection of the rights of minorities [E/CN.4/Sub.2/AC.5/2004/WP.3], an examination of approaches by international development agencies to minority issues in development [E/CN.4/Sub.2/AC.5/2004/WP.5] and integration of and autonomy for minorities in Côte d'Ivoire [E/CN.4/Sub.2/AC.5/2004/WP.8].

In its decisions and recommendations, the Group addressed issues relating to the promotion and realization of the 1992 Declaration and decided to continue consideration of the item in 2005, beginning with important developments concerning minority situations around the world and effective enforcement mechanisms and remedies. It decided to focus on minorities and development, including conflicts over development, and action taken by Governments and international agencies for incorporating minority issues into activities designed to realize the MDGs, and the elaboration of general comments, regarding which the Group decided to endorse the commentary on the Declaration prepared in 2001 [YUN 2001, p. 623] by Asbjørn Eide (Norway). The commentary was to be reissued as the commentary of the Group as a whole and distributed widely. The Group decided to develop more specific commentaries on particular issues, including the protection of minorities from forced assimilation, of their places of worship and sacred places, and of their rights in the areas of education, land deprivation and exclusion, and on autonomy vis-à-vis self-determination. The Group encouraged regional or subregional meetings/seminars/workshops, in cooperation with regional mechanisms, and recommended for discussion at the seminars the development of regional codes of conduct or guidelines based on universal norms and international minority rights standards. It also recommended the organization of a seminar on the Roma population. The Group considered issues relating to the promotion of constructive dialogue between and among minorities and Governments, emphasized the importance of establishing a voluntary fund to support the participation of minority representatives, particularly from developing countries, in its meetings, and recommended that a special representative of the Secretary-General on minority issues be appointed. It also recommended that the Subcommission entrust one of its members to prepare a working paper, without financial implications, on the advisability of drafting an additional protocol (containing minority rights and remedies for violations thereof) to the 1966 International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights, adopted by the General Assembly in resolution 2200 A (XXI) [YUN 1966, p. 423].

The Group further recommended that Governments ratify relevant international instruments and take measures to protect minorities' rights, that OHCHR continue to organize training on universal and regional standards and mechanisms in order to strengthen minority representatives' cooperation with human rights procedures, and that the technical cooperation programme of the Office assist with the sensitization and awareness-raising of all sectors of society, particularly law enforcement agencies, on minorities' needs and rights. The High Commissioner/OHCHR was invited to prepare, for inclusion in the United Nations Guide for Minorities, pamphlets on regional conflict-prevention initiatives and development matters, including with respect to the work of the United Nations Development Programme (UNDP) in integrating minority issues in its work. OHCHR was also asked to organize, in cooperation with development agencies, a meeting between the Working Group, representatives of international and bilateral development agencies, Minority Rights Group International (London) and minority representatives to examine further the integration of minority issues in development programming. The Group addressed a number of other recommendations aimed at promoting and protecting minorities' rights to regional mechanisms and to international, regional and national development agencies and UN system bodies.

At the invitation of the Government, four Working Group members visited Finland (17-20 January) [E/CN.4/Sub.2/2004/29/Add.1]. In the Åland autonomous Province, the Group focused on the legislation and implementation of autonomy, particularly as a mechanism for conflict resolution, and in the capital city, Helsinki, reviewed the participation and integration of all communities in political and social life and the issues of languages and cultures. The Group found that the autonomous Åland Islands and the State had developed a common ground for peaceful conflict resolution and for achieving balance between minority protection and the sovereignty and territorial integrity of the State. The Group welcomed the willingness of both sides to share their experiences in international forums as an inspiration for other parts of the world. In Helsinki, the Group found a comprehensive legislative framework and a monitoring mechanisms for minority protection, which was in conformity with international and European standards of human rights and minority rights. Noting that new minorities, composed mainly of some 30,000 Ingrians (a Russian-speaking community) and an estimated 4,000 Somalis, suffered stereotyping in the media and racism and discrimination in the labour market and social services, the Group recommended that the Government establish an advisory body to examine integration issues affecting the Russian-speaking community and invited the minority communities it did not meet to send it information. Regarding the indigenous Sami people in the country, the Group recommended that the Government ratify the International Labour Organization (ILO) Convention No. 169 concerning Indigenous and Tribal Peoples in Independent Countries [YUN 1989, p. 917].

Note by Secretariat. By a 29 July note [E/CN.4/Sub.2/2004/32], the Secretariat, referring to a 2003 Subcommission request [YUN 2003, p. 713] to Mr. Eide to submit the final report updating his 1993 study on peaceful and constructive approaches to situations involving minorities [YUN 1993, p. 869], informed the Subcommission that Mr. Eide instead intended to prepare a draft report for consideration in 2005, which would contain a synthesis of the experience of the first decade of the Working Group.

Subcommission action. On 9 August [E/CN.4/2005/2 (res. 2004/13)], the Subcommission, endorsing the Working Group's recommendations and decisions, invited OHCHR to consider organizing training workshops at the national level on the implementation of minorities' rights; to organize, in cooperation with development agencies, a meeting between the Working Group, representatives of international and bilateral development agencies, Minority Rights Group International and minority representatives to examine further the integration of minority issues in development programming; and to prepare additional pamphlets for inclusion in the United Nations Guide for Minorities, particularly on the work of conflict-prevention mechanisms for the promotion and protection of minorities' rights. The Subcommission recommended that the High Commissioner, when inviting Governments and others to submit their views on how best to protect the rights of persons belonging to minorities, to request them to provide the names of experts, with a view to facilitating their participation in regional and international meetings and in advisory services, and to consider providing information about recent cases relating to minority rights. The Subcommission also recommended the preparation of a working paper by one of its members on the advisability of drafting an additional protocol to the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights containing remedies for violations, for presentation in 2006, and the nomination of a special representative of the Secretary-General on minority issues, which it recommended that the Commission endorse.

Subregional seminars. Subregional seminars on minority rights were held, dealing with cultural diversity and development in Central Asia (Bishkek, Kyrgyzstan, 27-30 October) [E/CN.4/Sub.2/AC.5/2005/5] and in South Asia (Kandy, Sri Lanka, 21-24 November) [E/CN.4/Sub.2/AC.5/2005/4].

Leprosy victims

On 9 August [res. 2004/12], the Subcommission asked Yozo Yokota (Japan) to prepare, without financial implications, a preliminary working paper on discrimination against leprosy victims and their families, for consideration in 2005, under the agenda item "Prevention of discrimination and protection of minorities".

Discrimination based on work and descent

Working paper. In response to a 2003 Subcommission request [YUN 2003, p. 715], Messrs. Eide and Yokota submitted, in July, an expanded working paper on discrimination based on work and descent [E/CN.4/Sub.2/2004/31], which supplemented earlier papers considered in 2001 [YUN 2001, p. 625] and 2003 [YUN 2003, p. 715]. The current paper compiled information submitted by 12 Governments on legal, judicial, administrative and educational measures they had taken to address such discrimination. It also identified communities suffering such discrimination, noting that diaspora communities whose original cultures and traditions included aspects of inherited social exclusion had been mostly affected. The paper focused on the South Asian diaspora in the United States and the United Kingdom and highlighted the discrimination they suffered with regard to intermarriages, commensality (the practice of eating/drinking together), access to and organization of places of worship, employment opportunities, participation in politics, projection in the media and violent activities. The paper concluded that the elimination of discrimination based on work and descent was an important global human rights challenge, which had not always received the attention it deserved at the international level. It proposed a framework for draft principles and guidelines for the elimination of the phenomenon and recommended that the Subcommission appoint a special rapporteur to study it further.

Subcommission action. On 12 August [res. 2004/17], the Subcommission decided to appoint Mr. Yokota and Chin Sung Chung (Republic of Korea) as Special Rapporteurs with the task of preparing a comprehensive study on discrimination based on work and descent, and to submit a preliminary report in 2005, a progress report in 2006 and a final report in 2007. They were asked to focus on the finalization of a set of draft principles and guidelines for the effective elimination of the phenomenon and to obtain more comprehensive information on constitutional, legislative, judicial, administrative and educational measures taken to address the problem, for the purpose of identifying best practices. The Secretary-General and the High Commissioner were asked to assist them.

Rights of non-citizens

On 20 April [dec. 2004/113], the Commission, welcoming the 2003 final report of the Special Rapporteur on the rights of non-citizens [YUN 2003, p. 715], together with his 1999 working paper [YUN 1999, p. 611], 2001 preliminary report [YUN 2001, p. 625] and 2002 progress report [YUN 2002, p. 680], requested the Special Rapporteur to compile and update all his reports, addenda and questionnaire replies into a single report. The Economic and Social Council, by decision 2004/277 of 22 July, decided that the 2003 updated and consolidated report on the rights of non-citizens should be published in all UN official languages and distributed widely.

Also on 20 April [dec. 2004/112], the Commission, by a recorded vote of 33 to 10, with 10 abstentions, decided not to recommend that the Council authorize the Special Rapporteur to undertake the task of furthering the study of the rights of non-citizens.

Non-discrimination

In response to a 2003 Subcommission request [YUN 2003, p. 717], Emmanuel Decaux (France) submitted a June working paper on non-discrimination [E/CN.4/Sub.2/2004/24], as enshrined in article 2, paragraph 2, of the International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights, adopted by the General Assembly in resolution 2200 A (XXI) [YUN 1966, p. 419]. The paper concluded that issues deserving further attention included the scope of the principle of non-discrimination set forth in article 2, paragraph 2, of the Covenant; the relationship between general and specific clauses in relevant instruments, focusing on neglected categories of discrimination; the practical application of article 2, paragraph 2, in different areas of economic, social and cultural rights, as defined in the Covenant, in order to identify "blind spots" regarding discrimination; State responsibility for filling gaps, where necessary, in the international and domestic legal framework and for ensuring effective legal application of the principle; identification of good practices to promote respect for article 2, paragraph 2, in relations between private persons and between corporations and individuals; and development of the role of national institutions for the promotion and protection of human rights, particularly ombudsmen or independent administrative authorities.

Subcommission action. On 9 August [res. 2004/5], the Subcommission decided to appoint Marc Bossuyt (Belgium) as Special Rapporteur to undertake a study on non-discrimination as enshrined in article 2, paragraph 2, of the Covenant, based on the working paper prepared by Mr. Decaux (see above), on comments received thereto and on Subcommission discussions. He was requested to submit a preliminary report in 2005, a progress report in 2006 and a final report in 2007; the Secretary-General was asked to assist him.

Religious intolerance

Report of Special Rapporteur. In January [E/CN.4/2004/63], the Special Rapporteur on freedom of religion or belief, Abdelfattah Amor (Tunisia), summarized 69 communications he had sent to 42 States and the replies received from 15 States, regarding incidents and governmental action inconsistent with the provisions of the 1981 Declaration on the Elimination of All Forms of Intolerance and of Discrimination Based on Religion or Belief, adopted in General Assembly resolution 36/55 [YUN 1981, p. 881]. As his mandate neared conclusion, the Special Rapporteur took stock of his activities since 1993. Noting that he had accorded the greatest importance to the prevention of intolerance and discrimination in freedom of religion or belief, he described related activities in the fields of education and inter-religious dialogue and highlighted co-operation with the Commission, UN human rights mechanisms, specialized agencies and NGOs. The Special Rapporteur concluded that, although anti-religious policies or policies for the total control of religious matters by States had declined progressively, non-State entities had often failed to respect freedom of religion and extremism in that regard affected practically all religions. States had not met their human rights obligations regarding freedom of religion. The Special Rapporteur, drawing attention to the fact that women continued to be the main victims of violations, encouraged States to take decisive measures. He noted that extremists increasingly used religion for unrelated purposes, particularly the extremism claiming to be rooted in Islam, which had grown markedly since the 11 September 2001 terrorist attacks in the United States [YUN 2001, p. 60]. Addressing inter-religious dialogue and education as a means of combating intolerance and discrimination based on religion or belief, the Special Rapporteur highlighted the difficulties encountered and advocated related measures.

Report of High Commissioner. In response to a 2003 Commission request [YUN 2003, p. 717], the High Commissioner submitted a February report [E/CN.4/2004/16] summarizing information received from two Governments on steps they had taken to promote religious and cultural diversity, and describing relevant activities of Commission mechanisms and of OHCHR.

Commission action. On 13 April [res. 2004/6], the Commission, by a recorded vote of 29 to 16, with 7 abstentions, called on the High Commissioner to promote and include human rights aspects in the dialogue among civilizations, by integrating them into topical seminars and special debates on the positive contributions of cultures and religious and cultural diversity, to hold joint conferences with other international organizations to promote understanding of the universality of human rights and their implementation, and to report in 2005.

On 19 April [res. 2004/36], the Commission decided to extend the Special Rapporteur's mandate for three years and asked him to submit an interim report to the General Assembly in 2004 and to report to the Commission in 2005. The Secretary-General was asked to assist him.

On 22 July, the Economic and Social Council approved the Commission's decision to extend the Special Rapporteur's mandate, its requests regarding the submission of reports to the Assembly and the Commission and its request to the Secretary-General (decision 2004/258).

In July, the Commission appointed Asma Jahangir (Pakistan) as the new Special Rapporteur.

Further report of Special Rapporteur. Pursuant to General Assembly resolution 58/184 [YUN 2003, p. 718], the Secretary-General, by a September note [A/59/366], transmitted the interim report of the Special Rapporteur, which contained 39 additional communications transmitted to 29 States and replies received from 15 States. The Special Rapporteur observed growing tensions between and within religious communities in a number of countries, which could degenerate into violent confrontations. The challenge for Governments was to resist interference through legislation and actions that could restrict the right to freedom of religion or belief, further aggravating the situation. Governments should avoid administrative measures restricting the freedom to practise religious ceremonies or rites, as such measures would be counterproductive and a violation of relevant international norms. They should also remain neutral in the face of tension between different religious communities.

By decision 59/528 of 20 December, the Assembly took note of the interim report.

Communications. On 13 February [E/CN.4/2004/G/18], China responded to letters it had received from the Special Rapporteur relating to circumstances of alleged infringement of the freedom of religion or belief of a number of persons.

On 18 May [A/58/808], Turkmenistan transmitted the text of the country's law abolishing criminal responsibility for the violation of laws on religious organizations, and the text of the decree signed by its President repealing a previous decree on control and use of charitable aid in religious groups and organizations in the country.

The Foreign Ministers of member States of the Organization of the Islamic Conference (New York, 28 September) [A/59/425-S/2004/808] underscored the need for a viable strategy, which should aim at creating and promoting tolerance and harmony among different religions and civilizations.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 20 December [meeting 74], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Third Committee [A/59/503/Add.2], adopted resolution 59/199 by recorded vote (186-0) [agenda item 105 (b)].

Elimination of all forms of religious intolerance

The General Assembly,

Recalling that all States have pledged themselves, under the Charter of the United Nations, to promote and encourage universal respect for and observance of human rights and fundamental freedoms for all without distinction as to race, sex, language or religion,

Reaffirming that discrimination against human beings on the grounds of religion or belief constitutes an affront to human dignity and a disavowal of the principles of the Charter,

Recalling article 18 of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights, article 18 of the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights and paragraph 4 of the United Nations Millennium Declaration,

Reaffirming its resolution 36/55 of 25 November 1981, by which it proclaimed the Declaration on the Elimination of All Forms of Intolerance and of Discrimination Based on Religion or Belief,

Noting the provisions of the Durban Declaration and Programme of Action adopted by the World Conference against Racism, Racial Discrimination, Xenophobia and Related Intolerance, held in Durban, South Africa, from 31 August to 8 September 2001, aimed at combating religious intolerance,

Emphasizing that the right to freedom of thought, conscience, religion and belief is far-reaching and profound and that it encompasses freedom of thought on all matters, personal conviction and the commitment to religion or belief, whether manifested individually or in community with others, and in public or in private,

Reaffirming the call, made eleven years ago in Vienna at the World Conference on Human Rights, for all Governments to take all appropriate measures in compliance with their international obligations and with due regard to their respective legal systems to counter intolerance and related violence based on religion or belief, including practices of discrimination against women and the desecration of religious sites, recognizing that every individual has the right to freedom of thought, conscience, expression and religion,

Underlining the important role of education in the promotion of tolerance, which involves the acceptance of and respect for diversity, and underlining also that education, in particular at school, should contribute in a meaningful way to the promotion of tolerance and the elimination of discrimination based on religion or belief,

Alarmed that serious instances of intolerance and discrimination on the grounds of religion or belief, including acts of violence, intimidation and coercion motivated by religious intolerance, continue to occur in many parts of the world and threaten the full enjoyment of human rights and fundamental freedoms,

Profoundly concerned at acts and situations of violence and discrimination resulting from religious intolerance that affect many women,

Deeply concerned at the overall rise in intolerance and discrimination on the grounds of religion or belief, including restrictive legislation, administrative regulations and discriminatory registration and the arbitrary application of these and other measures,

Seriously concerned at all attacks upon religious places, sites and shrines, including any deliberate destruction of relics and monuments,

Believing that further intensified efforts are therefore required to promote and protect the right to freedom of thought, conscience, religion or belief and to eliminate all forms of hatred, intolerance and discrimination based on religion or belief, as emphasized also at the World Conference against Racism, Racial Discrimination, Xenophobia and Related Intolerance,

1. Reaffirms that freedom of thought, conscience, religion or belief is a human right derived from the inherent dignity of the human person and guaranteed to all without discrimination;

2. Urges States to ensure that their constitutional and legal systems provide effective guarantees of freedom of thought, conscience, religion or belief, including the provision of effective remedies in cases where the right to freedom of thought, conscience, religion or belief is violated;

3. Also urges States to ensure, in particular, that no one within their jurisdiction is, because of their religion or belief, deprived of the right to life, liberty and security of person, the right to freedom of expression, the right not to be subjected to torture or other cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment and the right not to be arbitrarily arrested or detained, and to protect their physical integrity and bring to justice all perpetrators of violations of these rights;

4. Further urges States, in conformity with international standards of human rights, to take all necessary action to combat hatred, intolerance and acts of violence, intimidation and coercion motivated by intolerance based on religion or belief, with particular regard to persons belonging to religious minorities;

5. Urges States to devote particular attention to combating all practices motivated by religion or belief which lead, directly or indirectly, to human rights violations and to discrimination against women;

6. Emphasizes that, as underlined by the Human Rights Committee, restrictions on the freedom to manifest religion or belief are permitted only if those limitations are prescribed by law, are necessary to protect public safety, order, health or morals or the fundamental rights and freedoms of others, and are applied in a manner that does not vitiate the right to freedom of thought, conscience and religion;

7. Urges States to ensure that all public officials and civil servants, including members of law enforcement bodies, the military and educators, in the course of their official duties, respect different religions and beliefs and do not discriminate on the grounds of religion or belief, and to ensure that all necessary and appropriate education or training is provided;

8. Calls upon all States to recognize, as provided for in the Declaration on the Elimination of All Forms of Intolerance and of Discrimination Based on Religion or Belief, the right of all persons to worship or assemble in connection with a religion or belief and to establish and maintain places for those purposes;

9. Recognizes with deep concern the overall rise in instances of intolerance and violence directed against members of many religious communities in various parts of the world, including cases motivated by Islamophobia, anti-Semitism and Christianophobia;

10. Further urges States to exert their utmost efforts, in accordance with their national legislation and in conformity with international human rights standards, to ensure that religious places, sites and shrines are fully respected and protected, and to take additional measures in cases where they are vulnerable to desecration or destruction;

11. Recognizes that legislation alone is not enough to prevent violations of human rights, including the right to freedom of religion or belief, and that the exercise of tolerance and non-discrimination by persons and groups is necessary for the full realization of the aims of the Declaration, and in this regard invites States, religious bodies and civil society to undertake dialogue at all levels to promote greater tolerance, respect and understanding of freedom of religion or belief and to encourage and promote, through the educational system and by other means, understanding, tolerance and respect in matters relating to freedom of religion or belief;

12. Emphasizes the importance of a continued and strengthened dialogue among religions or beliefs, including as encompassed in the dialogue among civilizations, to promote greater tolerance, respect and mutual understanding;

13. Takes note with appreciation of the interim report of the Special Rapporteur of the Commission on Human Rights on freedom of religion or belief, and encourages her continued efforts to examine incidents and governmental actions in all parts of the world that are incompatible with the provisions of the Declaration and to recommend remedial measures as appropriate;

14. Urges all States to cooperate fully with the Special Rapporteur, including by considering favourably her requests to visit their countries so as to enable her to fulfil her mandate even more effectively, welcomes the initiatives of States to collaborate with the Special Rapporteur, and encourages civil society to continue its active collaboration with her;

15. Urges States to make all appropriate efforts to encourage those engaged in education to cultivate respect for all religions or beliefs, thereby promoting mutual understanding and tolerance;

16. Encourages Governments, when seeking the assistance of the United Nations Programme of Advisory Services and Technical Assistance in the Field of Human Rights, to consider, where appropriate, including requests for assistance in the field of the promotion and protection of the right to freedom of thought, conscience, religion or belief;

17. Welcomes and encourages the continuing efforts of non-governmental organizations and religious bodies and groups to promote the implementation and dissemination of the Declaration, and further encourages their work in relation to promoting freedom of religion or belief and in highlighting cases of religious intolerance, discrimination and persecution;

18. Requests the Commission on Human Rights to continue its consideration of measures to implement the Declaration;

19. Requests the Secretary-General to ensure that the Special Rapporteur receives the necessary resources to enable her to discharge her mandate fully;

20. Decides to consider the question of the elimination of all forms of religious intolerance at its sixtieth session under the item entitled "Human rights questions", and requests the Special Rapporteur to submit an interim report to the General Assembly on the question.

RECORDED VOTE ON RESOLUTION 59/199:

by a recorded vote of 105 to 35, with 19 abstentions.

Tolerance and pluralism

Report of OHCHR. In response to its 2002 request [YUN 2002, p. 684], the Commission had before it a report [E/CN.4/2004/12/Add.2] on activities undertaken by OHCHR to promote tolerance and pluralism in the two-year period since the Commission's request. Activities were undertaken within the context of the United Nations Decade for Human Rights Education (1995-2004) (see p. 677), the International Decade of the World's Indigenous People (1995-2004) (see p. 796), the Third Decade to Combat Racism and Racial Discrimination (1993-2002) (see p. 664) and OHCHR's programme of advisory services and technical cooperation. The report provided information on the activities of special procedures, mechanisms and treaty monitoring bodies, whose work was also important for preventing human rights violations and for promoting tolerance and pluralism.

Commission action. On 20 April [res. 2004/54], the Commission, condemning all violent activities that undermined tolerance and pluralism, called on the High Commissioner to: include in OHCHR's work programme the promotion of tolerance and assist countries in their national programmes; undertake educational and public-awareness activities to promote tolerance and pluralism within the programmes and activities being implemented by the United Nations; and to advise or assist countries, upon request, through the programme of advisory services and technical cooperation, to put in place effective safeguards, including appropriate legislation, against intolerance and discrimination. The High Commissioner was called on to include in her 2006 report details of activities undertaken by OHCHR to implement the resolution. The Commission's relevant mechanisms were called on to accord priority to promoting democracy, pluralism and tolerance, to study conditions that promoted intolerance and to identify commonly accepted principles and best practices to promote tolerance and pluralism.

Civil and political rights

Right to self-determination

Report of Secretary-General. In response to General Assembly resolution 58/161 [YUN 2003, p. 720], the Secretary-General submitted a September report [A/59/376] summarizing Commission discussions of the right of peoples to self-determination and its application to peoples under colonial or alien domination or foreign occupation and the advisory opinion of the International Court of Justice regarding the construction of a wall in the Occupied Palestinian Territory (see p. 465).

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 20 December [meeting 74], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Third Committee [A/59/502], adopted resolution 59/180 without vote [agenda item 104].

Universal realization of the right of peoples to self-determination

The General Assembly,

Reaffirming the importance, for the effective guarantee and observance of human rights, of the universal realization of the right of peoples to self-determination enshrined in the Charter of the United Nations and embodied in the International Covenants on Human Rights, as well as in the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples contained in General Assembly resolution 1514(XV) of 14 December 1960,

Welcoming the progressive exercise of the right to self-determination by peoples under colonial, foreign or alien occupation and their emergence into sovereign statehood and independence,

Deeply concerned at the continuation of acts or threats of foreign military intervention and occupation that are threatening to suppress, or have already suppressed, the right to self-determination of peoples and nations,

Expressing grave concern that, as a consequence of the persistence of such actions, millions of people have been and are being uprooted from their homes as refugees and displaced persons, and emphasizing the urgent need for concerted international action to alleviate their condition,

Recalling the relevant resolutions regarding the violation of the right of peoples to self-determination and other human rights as a result of foreign military intervention, aggression and occupation, adopted by the Commission on Human Rights at its sixtieth and previous sessions,

Reaffirming its previous resolutions on the universal realization of the right of peoples to self-determination, including resolution 58/161 of 22 December 2003,

Reaffirming also its resolution 55/2 of 8 September 2000, containing the United Nations Millennium Declaration, which, inter alia, upholds the right to self-determination of peoples under colonial domination and foreign occupation,

Taking note of the report of the Secretary-General on the right of peoples to self-determination,

1. Reaffirms that the universal realization of the right of all peoples, including those under colonial, foreign and alien domination, to self-determination is a fundamental condition for the effective guarantee and observance of human rights and for the preservation and promotion of such rights;

2. Declares its firm opposition to acts of foreign military intervention, aggression and occupation, since these have resulted in the suppression of the right of peoples to self-determination and other human rights in certain parts of the world;

3. Calls upon those States responsible to cease immediately their military intervention in and occupation of foreign countries and territories and all acts of repression, discrimination, exploitation and maltreatment, in particular the brutal and inhuman methods reportedly employed for the execution of those acts against the peoples concerned;

4. Deplores the plight of millions of refugees and displaced persons who have been uprooted as a result of the aforementioned acts, and reaffirms their right to return to their homes voluntarily in safety and honour;

5. Requests the Commission on Human Rights to continue to give special attention to the violation of human rights, especially the right to self-determination, resulting from foreign military intervention, aggression or occupation;

6. Requests the Secretary-General to report on the question to the General Assembly at its sixtieth session under the item entitled "Right of peoples to self-determination".

Right of Palestinians

Commission action. By a recorded vote of 52 to 1, the Commission, on 8 April [res. 2004/3], reaffirming the right of the Palestinian people to self-determination, requested the Secretary-General to transmit its resolution to Israel and other Governments, to disseminate it widely and to make available to the Commission before its 2005 session information pertaining to its implementation by Israel.

Report of Secretary-General. The Commission had before it a report of the Secretary-General [E/CN.4/2004/14] stating that he had received no reply from Israel to his request for information regarding the implementation of the Commission's 2003 resolution on the situation in occupied Palestine [YUN 2003, p. 721]. However, the United Nations Department of Public Information (DPI) had undertaken relevant activities by disseminating information on the work of the Special Committee to Investigate Israeli Practices Affecting the Human Rights of the Palestinian People and Other Arabs of the Occupied Territories (see p. 476), through the Internet, the media, publications and direct outreach to the public and NGOs. DPI continued to distribute its publication The Question of Palestine and the United Nations in all official languages at Headquarters and through the UN information centres, services and offices.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 20 December [meeting 74], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Third Committee [A/59/502], adopted resolution 59/179 by recorded vote (179-5-3) [agenda item 104].

The right of the Palestinian people to self-determination

The General Assembly,

Aware that the development of friendly relations among nations, based on respect for the principle of equal rights and self-determination of peoples, is among the purposes and principles of the United Nations, as defined in the Charter,

Recalling, in this regard, its resolution 2625(XXV) of 24 October 1970 entitled "Declaration on Principles of International Law concerning Friendly Relations and Cooperation among States in accordance with the Charter of the United Nations",

Bearing in mind the International Covenants on Human Rights, the Universal Declaration of Human Rights, the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples and the Vienna Declaration and Programme of Action adopted at the World Conference on Human Rights on 25 June 1993,

Recalling the Declaration on the Occasion of the Fiftieth Anniversary of the United Nations,

Recalling also the United Nations Millennium Declaration,

Recalling further the advisory opinion rendered on 9 July 2004 by the International Court of Justice on the Legal Consequences of the Construction of a Wall in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, and noting in particular the reply of the Court, including on the right of peoples to self-determination, which is a right erga omnes,

Recalling the conclusion of the Court, in its advisory opinion of 9 July 2004, that the construction of the wall by Israel, the occupying Power, in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, along with measures previously taken, severely impedes the right of the Palestinian people to self-determination,

Expressing the urgent need for the resumption of negotiations within the Middle East peace process on its agreed basis and for the speedy achievement of a final settlement between the Palestinian and Israeli sides,

Recalling its resolution 58/292 of 6 May 2004,

Affirming the right of all States in the region to live in peace within secure and internationally recognized borders,

1. Reaffirms the right of the Palestinian people to self-determination, including the right to their independent State of Palestine;

2. Urges all States and the specialized agencies and organizations of the United Nations system to continue to support and assist the Palestinian people in the early realization of their right to self-determination.

RECORDED VOTE ON RESOLUTION 59/179:

In favour: Afghanistan, Albania, Algeria, Andorra, Angola, Antigua and Barbuda, Argentina, Armenia, Austria, Azerbaijan, Bahamas, Bahrain, Bangladesh, Barbados, Belarus, Belgium, Belize, Benin, Bhutan, Bolivia, Bosnia and Herzegovina, Botswana, Brazil, Brunei Darussalam, Bulgaria, Burkina Faso, Burundi, Cambodia, Cameroon, Canada, Cape Verde, Central African Republic, Chad, Chile, China, Colombia, Comoros, Costa Rica, Côte d'Ivoire, Croatia, Cuba, Cyprus, Czech Republic, Democratic People's Republic of Korea, Democratic Republic of the Congo, Denmark, Djibouti, Dominica, Dominican Republic, Ecuador, Egypt, El Salvador, Equatorial Guinea, Eritrea, Estonia, Ethiopia, Fiji, Finland, France, Gabon, Gambia, Georgia, Germany, Ghana, Greece, Grenada, Guatemala, Guinea, Guinea-Bissau, Guyana, Haiti, Honduras, Hungary, Iceland, India, Indonesia, Iran, Iraq, Ireland, Italy, Jamaica, Japan, Jordan, Kazakhstan, Kenya, Kuwait, Kyrgyzstan, Lao People's Democratic Republic, Lat-

via, Lebanon, Lesotho, Liberia, Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Liechtenstein, Lithuania, Luxembourg, Madagascar, Malawi, Malaysia, Maldives, Mali, Malta, Mauritania, Mauritius, Mexico, Monaco, Mongolia, Morocco, Mozambique, Myanmar, Namibia, Nauru, Nepal, Netherlands, New Zealand, Nicaragua, Niger, Nigeria, Norway, Oman, Pakistan, Panama, Paraguay, Peru, Philippines, Poland, Portugal, Qatar, Republic of Korea, Republic of Moldova, Romania, Russian Federation, Rwanda, Saint Lucia, Saint Vincent and the Grenadines, Samoa, San Marino, Sao Tome and Principe, Saudi Arabia, Senegal, Serbia and Montenegro, Seychelles, Sierra Leone, Singapore, Slovakia, Slovenia, Solomon Islands, Somalia, South Africa, Spain, Sri Lanka, Sudan, Suriname, Swaziland, Sweden, Switzerland, Syrian Arab Republic, Tajikistan, Thailand, The former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia, Timor-Leste, Togo, Trinidad and Tobago, Tunisia, Turkey, Turkmenistan, Tuvalu, Uganda, Ukraine, United Arab Emirates, United Kingdom, United Republic of Tanzania, Uruguay, Uzbekistan, Venezuela, Viet Nam, Yemen, Zambia, Zimbabwe.

Against: Israel, Marshall Islands, Micronesia, Palau, United States.
Abstaining: Australia, Papua New Guinea, Vanuatu.

Western Sahara

On 8 April [res. 2004/4], the Commission, reaffirming the responsibility of the United Nations towards the people of Western Sahara, supported the efforts of the Secretary-General and his Personal Envoy to achieve a mutually acceptable political solution to the dispute over Western Sahara and called on Morocco, the Frente Popular para la Liberación de Saguía el-Hamra y de Río de Oro and the regional States to cooperate with them. The parties were further called on to cooperate with the International Committee of the Red Cross (ICRC) in its efforts to solve the problem of the fate of people unaccounted for and to abide by their obligation under international humanitarian law to release without further delay all those being held.

Mercenaries

Report of Special Rapporteur. In response to a 2003 Commission request [YUN 2003, p. 722], the Special Rapporteur on the question of the use of mercenaries, Enrique Bernales Ballesteros (Peru), submitted his final report [E/CN.4/2004/15]. He summarized replies received from States in response to his request for information on mercenary activities, described developments in mercenary activities in Africa, reviewed the evolution of such activities and of his mandate, and discussed the link between terrorism and mercenary activities. The Special Rapporteur said that one of the greatest problems in combating mercenary activities was the absence of a clear and comprehensive legal definition of a mercenary and recommended that the Commission support the circulation among States of a new proposal for a legal definition as presented in the report. He proposed strengthening UN bodies and regional organizations to consider the link between mercenaries and terrorism, and the participation of mercenaries in organized crime and illicit trafficking in persons. Further recommendations were that the Commission reaffirm its condemnation of mercenary activities and emphasize its appeal to States to maintain vigilance against the threat posed by the phenomenon. There was an urgent need to regulate private military assistance, consultancy and security companies, and to establish criminal liability for members of such companies.

Commission action. On 8 April [res. 2004/5], the Commission, by a recorded vote of 36 to 14, with 3 abstentions, decided to extend the mandate of the Special Rapporteur for three years and asked the new Special Rapporteur (see below) to circulate to and consult with States on the new proposal for a legal definition of a mercenary drafted by the outgoing Special Rapporteur, and to report to the Commission. The new Special Rapporteur was further asked to take into account in the discharge of the mandate that mercenary activities were continuing in many parts of the world and were taking new forms; to pay particular attention to the impact on the exercise of the right of peoples to self-determination of the activities of private companies offering military assistance, consultancy and security services on the international market; to consult States, intergovernmental organizations and NGOs in the implementation of the Commission's resolution; and to report in 2005. OHCHR was asked to convene a third meeting of experts on traditional and new forms of mercenary activities as a means of violating human rights and impeding the exercise of the right of peoples to self-determination, whose main objectives would be to consider the proposed new legal definition of a mercenary, propose possible means of regulating and supervising the activities of private companies offering military assistance, consultancy and security services, and to study and evaluate mercenary activities in Africa. OHCHR was also asked to publicize the adverse effects of mercenary activities on the right to self-determination, provide advisory services to affected States when requested and assist the Special Rapporteur.

In July, Shaista Shameem (Fiji) was appointed Special Rapporteur.

ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL ACTION

In July, the Economic and Social Council, on the recommendation of the Commission on Human Rights [E/2004/23], adopted decision 2004/248 by recorded vote (34-17-3) [agenda item 14 (g)].

Use of mercenaries as a means of violating human rights and impeding the exercise of the right of peoples to self-determination

At its 48th plenary meeting, on 22 July 2004, the Economic and Social Council took note of Commission on Human Rights resolution 2004/5 of 8 April 2004 and approved the decision of the Commission to extend for a period of three years the mandate of the Special Rapporteur on the use of mercenaries as a means of impeding the exercise of the right of peoples to self-determination.

The Council also approved the request to the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights to convene a third meeting of experts on traditional and new forms of mercenary activities as a means of violating human rights and impeding the exercise of the right of peoples to self-determination, whose main objectives would be:

(a) To give further consideration to the proposed new legal definition of a mercenary as contained in paragraph 47 of the report of the Special Rapporteur;

(b) To make proposals on possible means of regulation and international supervision of the activities of private companies offering military assistance, consultancy and security services on the international market;

(c) To study and evaluate recent activities of mercenaries in Africa.

RECORDED VOTE ON DECISION 2004/248:

In favour: Armenia, Azerbaijan, Bangladesh, Belize, Benin, Bhutan, Burundi, Chile, China, Colombia, Congo, Cuba, Ecuador, El Salvador, Ghana, Guatemala, India, Indonesia, Jamaica, Kenya, Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Malaysia, Mauritius, Mozambique, Namibia, Nigeria, Panama, Qatar, Russian Federation, Senegal, Tunisia, United Arab Emirates, United Republic of Tanzania, Zimbabwe.

Against: Australia, Belgium, Canada, Finland, France, Germany, Greece, Hungary, Ireland, Italy, Japan, Poland, Sweden, Turkey, Ukraine, United Kingdom, United States.

Abstaining: Nicaragua, Republic of Korea, Saudi Arabia.

Report of OHCHR. Pursuant to a General Assembly resolution 58/162 [YUN 2003, p. 723], which had asked the Special Rapporteur to report to the Assembly in 2004, the Secretary-General, by a 30 July note [A/59/191], transmitted a report of OHCHR instead, in view of the expiry of the Special Rapporteur's term of office. The report drew on the Special Rapporteur's report to the Commission (see above) and updated information therein as warranted.

Expert meeting. In accordance with Economic and Social Council decision 2004/248 (above), OHCHR organized a third expert meeting (Geneva, 6-10 December) [E/CN.4/2005/23] on traditional and new forms of mercenary activities as a means of violating human rights and impeding the exercise of the right of peoples to self-determination, building on the work of the first [YUN 2001, p. 631] and second [YUN 2002, p. 687] expert meetings. The objectives were set out in Council decision 2004/248 (see above). The experts held thematic discussions on relevant issues. Among their conclusions and recommendations was that, from a legal perspective, there was difficulty with the notion of self-determination as contained in the preamble to the International Convention against the Recruitment, Use, Financing and Training of Mercenaries (see below), insofar as there might be a contradiction in defining a mercenary as a person recruited for the purpose of denying self-determination and also undermining the territorial integrity of a State. Instead of referring to self-determination, reference could be made to acts that violated fundamental rights, which would include the right to self-determination. The words "or legal personality" should be added in order to attach liability to private companies and persons engaging in those activities, and the illegal acts mentioned in the Special Rapporteur's proposal should be redrafted in order to cover all illegal acts performed by mercenaries. That could be done by adding the words "or other nefarious activities" to the clause. The experts determined that an important way to regulate private military companies was to set thresholds for permissible activity, systems of registration and oversight mechanisms. They further proposed that professional codes of conduct for such companies be encouraged and that any structures of international supervision of the companies should be instituted under the Economic and Social Council. To counter mercenary activities in Africa, the meeting recommended a combination of international, regional and national legislation that specifically targeted mercenarism, and that such legislation should be punitive and attempt to close the loopholes regarding how mercenaries acquired arms.

1989 International Convention

As at 31 December, 26 States had become parties to the 1989 International Convention against the Recruitment, Use, Financing and Training of Mercenaries, adopted by the General Assembly in resolution 44/34 [YUN 1989, p. 825], with New Zealand acceding in 2004. The Convention entered into force in 2001 [YUN 2001, p. 632].

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 20 December [meeting 74], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Third Committee [A/59/502], adopted resolution 59/178 by recorded vote (129-46-13) [agenda item 104].

Use of mercenaries as a means of violating human rights and impeding the exercise of the right of peoples to self-determination

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 58/162 of 22 December 2003, and taking note of Commission on Human Rights resolution 2004/5 of 8 April 2004,

Recalling also all of its relevant resolutions, in which, inter alia, it condemned any State that permitted or tolerated the recruitment, financing, training, assembly, transit and use of mercenaries with the objective of overthrowing the Governments of States Members of the United Nations, especially those of developing countries, or of fighting against national liberation movements, and recalling further the relevant resolutions and international instruments adopted by the General Assembly, the Security Council, the Economic and Social Council and the Organization of African Unity, inter alia, the Organization of African Unity Convention for the elimination of mercenarism in Africa, as well as the African Union,

Reaffirming the purposes and principles enshrined in the Charter of the United Nations concerning the strict observance of the principles of sovereign equality, political independence, the territorial integrity of States, the self-determination of peoples, the non-use of force or of the threat of use of force in international relations and non-interference in affairs within the domestic jurisdiction of States,

Reaffirming also that, by virtue of the principle of self-determination, all peoples have the right freely to determine their political status and to pursue their economic, social and cultural development, and that every State has the duty to respect this right in accordance with the provisions of the Charter,

Reaffirming further the Declaration on Principles of International Law concerning Friendly Relations and Cooperation among States in accordance with the Charter of the United Nations,

Alarmed and concerned at the danger that the activities of mercenaries constitute to peace and security in developing countries, in particular in Africa and in small States,

Deeply concerned at the loss of life, the substantial damage to property and the negative effects on the policy and economies of affected countries resulting from criminal mercenary activities,

Extremely alarmed and concerned about recent mercenary activities in Africa and the threat they pose to the integrity of and respect for the constitutional order of those countries,

Convinced that, notwithstanding the way in which they are used or the form that they take to acquire some semblance of legitimacy, mercenaries or mercenary-related activities are a threat to peace, security and the self-determination of peoples and an obstacle to the enjoyment of human rights by peoples,

1. Takes note of the brief report prepared by the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights on the question of the use of mercenaries as a means of violating human rights and impeding the exercise of the right of peoples to self-determination;

2. Welcomes the appointment of Shaista Shameem as Special Rapporteur of the Commission on Human Rights on the use of mercenaries as a means of impeding the exercise of the right of peoples to self-determination, and encourages her to continue and further advance the valuable work done and the important contributions made by Enrique Bernales Ballesteros in the sixteen years of his mandate;

3. Reaffirms that the use of mercenaries and their recruitment, financing and training are causes for grave concern to all States and violate the purposes and principles enshrined in the Charter of the United Nations;

4. Recognizes that armed conflict, terrorism, arms trafficking and covert operations by third Powers, inter alia, encourage the demand for mercenaries on the global market;

5. Urges all States to take the necessary steps and to exercise the utmost vigilance against the menace posed by the activities of mercenaries and to take legislative measures to ensure that their territories and other territories under their control, as well as their nationals, are not used for the recruitment, assembly, financing, training and transit of mercenaries for the planning of activities designed to impede the right of peoples to self-determination, to destabilize or overthrow the Government of any State or to dismember or impair, totally or in part, the territorial integrity or political unity of sovereign and independent States conducting themselves in compliance with the right of peoples to self-determination;

6. Requests all States to exercise the utmost vigilance against any kind of recruitment, training, hiring or financing of mercenaries by private companies offering international military consultancy and security services, as well as to impose a specific ban on such companies intervening in armed conflicts or actions to destabilize constitutional regimes;

7. Welcomes the entry into force of the International Convention against the Recruitment, Use, Financing and Training of Mercenaries, and calls upon all States that have not yet done so to consider taking the necessary action to accede to or ratify the Convention;

8. Welcomes also the cooperation extended by those countries that have received visits from the Special Rapporteur and the adoption by some States of national legislation that restricts the recruitment, assembly, financing, training and transit of mercenaries;

9. Condemns recent mercenary activities in Africa, and commends the African Governments on their collaboration in thwarting those illegal actions, which posed a threat to the integrity of and respect for the constitutional order of those countries and the exercise of the right of their peoples to self-determination;

10. Calls upon States to investigate the possibility of mercenary involvement whenever and wherever criminal acts of a terrorist nature occur and to bring to trial those found responsible or to consider their extradition, if so requested, in accordance with domestic law and applicable bilateral or international treaties;

11. Condemns any form of impunity granted to perpetrators of mercenary activities and to those responsible for the use, recruitment, financing and training of mercenaries, and urges all States, in accordance with their obligations under international law, to bring them, without distinction, to justice;

12. Requests the new Special Rapporteur to circulate to States and consult with them on the new proposal for a legal definition of a mercenary drafted by the former Special Rapporteur and to report her findings to the Commission on Human Rights and the General Assembly;

13. Requests the Office of the High Commissioner, as a matter of priority, to publicize the adverse effects of the activities of mercenaries on the right of peoples to self-determination and, when requested and where necessary, to render advisory services to States that are affected by those activities;

14. Also requests the Office of the High Commissioner to convene a third meeting of experts on traditional and new forms of mercenary activities as a means of violating human rights and impeding the exercise of the right of peoples to self-determination, respecting the main objectives defined in paragraph 16 of Commission on Human Rights resolution 2004/5;

15. Requests the Special Rapporteur to continue to take into account, in the discharge of her mandate, the fact that mercenary activities continue to occur in many parts of the world and are taking on new forms, manifestations and modalities, and, in this regard, requests her to pay particular attention to the impact of the activities of private companies offering military assistance, consultancy and security services on the international market on the exercise of the right of peoples to self-determination;

16. Urges all States to cooperate fully with the Special Rapporteur in the fulfilment of her mandate;

17. Requests the Secretary-General and the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights to provide the Special Rapporteur with all the necessary assistance and support for the fulfilment of her mandate, both professional and financial, including through the promotion of cooperation between the Special Rapporteur and other components of the United Nations system that deal with countering mercenary-related activities;

18. Requests the Special Rapporteur to consult States and intergovernmental and non-governmental organizations in the implementation of the present resolution and to report, with specific recommendations, to the General Assembly at its sixtieth session her findings on the use of mercenaries to undermine the right of peoples to self-determination;

19. Decides to consider at its sixtieth session the question of the use of mercenaries as a means of violating human rights and impeding the exercise of the right of peoples to self-determination under the item entitled "Right of peoples to self-determination".

Administration of justice

Report of Secretary-General. As requested by the Commission in 2002 [YUN 2002, p. 689], the Secretary-General, in a February report [E/CN.4/2004/51], described measures taken by UN human rights mechanisms to implement international human rights standards with respect to the administration of justice, particularly regarding the rebuilding and strengthening of structures and capacities for the administration of justice in post-conflict situations and in juvenile justice. The report also highlighted the role of the UN system technical assistance in that context.

Commission action. On 19 April [res. 2004/43], the Commission called on the High Commissioner to reinforce advisory services and technical assistance relating to national capacity-building in the field of the administration of justice, particularly juvenile justice, and to develop an action programme to facilitate the exchange of experience among judges as regards their role in protecting and promoting human rights. It recommended that the Eleventh (2005) United Nations Congress on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice (see p. 1108) pay attention to applying UN standards and norms on human rights in the administration of justice. The Commission's special procedures were called on to give special attention to questions relating to the effective protection of human rights in the administration of justice, while the Secretary-General was asked to report in 2007 on practical measures taken and activities planned to assist countries in strengthening their systems of administration of justice. Other aspects of the Commission's resolution dealt with juvenile justice.

Working group activities. Established by the Subcommission on 26 July [dec. 2004/101], the five-member sessional working group on the administration of justice met on 26 and 28 July and in August [E/CN.4/Sub.2/2004/6]. The group discussed criminalization, investigation and prosecution of acts of serious sexual violence and guidelines on criminalization, investigation and prosecution of acts of serious sexual violence occurring in the context of an armed conflict or committed as part of a widespread or systematic attack directed against civilians, as well as the provision of remedies. Under the item on witnesses and rules of evidence, it considered medical secrecy and problems in prosecuting rape and sexual assault, especially the problem of gender discrimination. Also discussed was the obligation to provide domestic remedies.

Pursuant to a 2003 Subcommission request [YUN 2003, p. 725], the group had before it a June report on the administration of justice through military tribunals [E/CN.4/Sub.2/2004/7], prepared by Emmanuel Decaux (France), updating his 2003 report [YUN 2003, p. 725]. The June report presented a set of principles governing the administration of justice through military tribunals and called for the broadest possible consultation on the principles. Noting that an expert seminar on human rights and the administration of justice through military tribunals (Geneva, 26-28 January), organized by the International Commission of Jurists, had considered the recommendations in the 2003 report, Mr. Decaux called for a further seminar to be organized by the International Commission.

As requested by the Subcommission [YUN 2003, p. 725], the group considered a July working paper on women in prison [E/CN.4/Sub.2/2004/9], prepared by Florizell O'Connor (Jamaica), which found that imprisoned women suffered gross violations of almost all human rights principles. It recommended that non-custodial options for women be given more consideration and that training in professional and childcare skills be incorporated in women's prison programmes.

In response to a further Subcommission request [YUN 2003, p. 725], the group had before it a July working paper on the difficulties of establishing guilt and/or responsibilities with regard to crimes of sexual violence [E/CN.4/Sub.2/2004/11], submitted by Lalaina Rakotoarisoa (Madagascar), which expanded the scope of her 2003 paper [YUN 2003, p. 724]. The July paper focused on the forms and causes of sexual violence and abuse, on the increasing number of investigations and statements by victims and witnesses of sexual abuse and on gathering evidence. The paper concluded that the process of gathering evidence regarding the crime needed to be reviewed and that there was a need to strengthen international judicial cooperation, particularly in the area of extraterritorial judicial competence and cyber-criminality. Better coordination among UN bodies was warranted, in order to increase efficiency in combating the problem.

The group also considered a July working paper on the criminalization, investigation and prosecution of acts of serious sexual violence [E/CN.4/Sub.2/2004/12], prepared by Françoise Hampson (United Kingdom), pursuant to a further Subcommission request [YUN 2003, p. 777], which explored the definitions of rape and other forms of sexual violence, described the circumstances under which those crimes might constitute torture, a crime against humanity, a war crime or genocide, and addressed related questions to the group. Ms. Hampson submitted additional papers on human rights issues in the enforcement of international criminal law by national courts and on respect for human rights norms by international and mixed criminal tribunals, produced by academics of the Human Rights Centre at the University of Essex (United Kingdom).

Secretariat note. A 15 June Secretariat note [E/CN.4/Sub.2/2004/5], referring to a 2002 Subcommission request [YUN 2002, p. 689], announced that Leïla Zerrougui (Algeria) would not be able to submit her progress report on discrimination in the criminal justice system. A preliminary report on the subject was considered by the group in 2003 [YUN 2003, p. 724].

Subcommission action. On 12 August [res. 2004/30], the Subcommission, taking note of the discussions of the sessional working group (see above), reaffirmed the importance of the full and effective implementation of all UN standards on human rights in the administration of justice and invited States, competent UN bodies, specialized agencies, intergovernmental organizations and NGOs to provide information to the group at its future sessions.

Also on 12 August [res. 2004/24], the Subcommission, regretting that Ms. Zerrougui was unable to submit her report on discrimination in the criminal justice system, asked her to submit the report in 2005. The Secretary-General was asked to assist her.

On the same date [res. 2004/27], the Subcommission asked Mr. Decaux to continue his work on the draft principles governing the administration of justice through military tribunals and to submit an updated report in 2005.

In further action on 12 August [res. 2004/28], the Subcommission, concerned that historically discriminatory practices might sometimes lead to disproportionate numbers of the poor and minorities in a criminal justice system, urged States to examine their treatment of convicted persons after they had served their punishment. It requested the sessional working group to examine the question and suggest types of information that could be collected to better understand the extent of discrimination against convicted persons who had served their sentences and the relevant international human rights standards applicable in such situations.

Also on 12 August [res. 2004/29], the Subcommission appointed Ms. Rakotoarisoa as Special Rapporteur entrusted with preparing a detailed study on the difficulties of establishing guilt and/or responsibilities with regard to crimes of sexual violence and asked her to submit a preliminary report in 2005, an interim report in 2006 and a final report in 2007. The Secretary-General was asked to assist her and to invite Governments, UN bodies, specialized agencies and NGOs to provide her with information.

On the same date [dec. 2004/118], the Subcommission asked Ms. Hampson and Ibrahim

Salama (Egypt) to prepare, without financial implications, a working paper on human rights law and international humanitarian law, their enforcement systems and the scope of the obligation of States and to submit it in 2005 to the working group.

On 12 August [dec. 2004/117], the Sub-commission entrusted Mohamed Habib Cherif (Tunisia) with the preparation, without financial implications, of a working paper on the right to an effective remedy in criminal proceedings and asked him to submit it in 2005 to the working group.

Also on 12 August [dec. 2004/119], the Sub-commission asked Ms. Hampson to prepare, without financial implications, a working paper on the implementation in domestic law of the right to an effective remedy in civil matters against violations of human rights by State agents and to submit it in 2005 to the working group.

Compensation for victims

Commission action. On 19 April [res. 2004/34], the Commission, taking note of the second consultative meeting on basic principles and guidelines on the right to a remedy and reparation for victims of violations of international human rights and humanitarian law [YUN 2003, p. 727], asked the Chairperson-Rapporteur to prepare, in consultation with independent experts Theo van Boven (Netherlands) and Cherif Bassiouni (Egypt/United States), a revised version of the text, taking into account opinions and commentaries of States, intergovernmental organizations and NGOs and the results of previous consultative meetings. The High Commissioner was asked to hold a third consultative meeting (see below), with a view to finalizing the principles and guidelines, and, if appropriate, to consider their adoption, and to report in 2005.

ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL ACTION

In July, the Economic and Social Council, on the recommendation of the Commission on Human Rights [E/2004/23], adopted decision 2004/257 by recorded vote (52-1) [agenda item 14 (g)].

The right to restitution, compensation and rehabilitation for victims of grave violations of human rights and fundamental freedoms

At its 48th plenary meeting, on 22 July 2004, the Economic and Social Council took note of Commission on Human Rights resolution 2004/34 of 19 April 2004 and approved the Commission's request to the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights to hold, with the cooperation of interested Governments, a third consultative meeting for all interested Member States, intergovernmental organizations and non-governmental organizations in consultative status with the Council, using available resources, with a view to finalizing the "Basic principles and guidelines on the right to a remedy and reparation for victims of violations of international human rights and humanitarian law", and, if appropriate, to consider all options for the adoption of those principles and guidelines.

RECORDED VOTE ON DECISION 2004/257:

In favour: Armenia, Australia, Azerbaijan, Bangladesh, Belgium, Belize, Benin, Bhutan, Burundi, Canada, Chile, China, Colombia, Congo, Cuba, Ecuador, Finland, France, Germany, Ghana, Greece, Guatemala, Hungary, India, Indonesia, Ireland, Italy, Jamaica, Japan, Kenya, Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Malaysia, Mauritius, Mozambique, Namibia, Nicaragua, Nigeria, Panama, Poland, Qatar, Republic of Korea, Russian Federation, Saudi Arabia, Senegal, Sweden, Tunisia, Turkey, Ukraine, United Arab Emirates, United Kingdom, United Republic of Tanzania, Zimbabwe.

Against: United States.

Consultative meeting. In accordance with Commission resolution 2004/34 (see above), OHCHR, in cooperation with Chile, convened a third international consultation (Geneva, 29 September-1 October) [E/CN.4/2005/59] to finalize the draft basic principles and guidelines. Participants considered the revised text, principle by principle, and provided comments on the text. Subsequently, the Chairperson-Rapporteur summarized the main issues addressed and declared the text finalized. Delegates were urged to examine the revised text and to consult with their capitals. The Chairperson-Rapporteur announced that he planned to convene an additional informal consultation prior to the Commission's 2005 session to discuss ideas on how to proceed on the issue.

Rule of law

Pursuant to General Assembly resolution 57/221 [YUN 2002, p. 690], the Secretary-General, in an October report [A/59/402], described efforts by OHCHR to coordinate UN system activities regarding human rights and the rule of law. As at 30 April, of 36 ongoing human rights technical cooperation projects, at least 20 supported activities relating to strengthening the rule of law. Support was provided for developing and implementing national action plans; establishing and strengthening national human rights institutions; assisting with constitutional and legislative reforms, the administration of justice, elections and national parliaments; and training for police, judges and other legal professionals, prison personnel and the armed forces. OHCHR was in the final phase of implementing a project to develop guidelines that would help ensure the centrality of human rights in the administration of justice in post-conflict and post-crisis countries. It was also reinforcing its capacity to address the relationship between international human rights law, international humanitarian law and international criminal law, and planned to focus on issuing additional digests of jurisprudence that might be useful to judges and other legal professionals. In 2005, OHCHR would issue a number of new rule of law policy tools and would convene technical meetings to collect and analyse relevant experiences. In the UN system, it would continue to focus on providing greater support and advice to its key partners on rule of law-related issues, particularly within the context of UN peace operations and the administration of transitional justice in post-conflict situations.

By decision 59/528 of 20 December, the General Assembly took note of the Secretary-General's report.

Non-State actors

On 12 August [dec. 2004/114], the Sub-commission asked Gáspár Bíró (Hungary) and Antoanella-Iulia Motoc (Romania) to prepare, without financial implications, a working paper on human rights and non-State actors, in order to approach in a systematic way the question of accountability under international human rights law, and to submit it in 2005.

Humanitarian standards

Report of Secretary-General. In response to a 2002 Commission request [YUN 2002, p. 691], the Secretary-General, in consultation with ICRC, submitted a February report [E/CN.4/2004/90] highlighting developments between 1998 and 2003 that had contributed to the clarification of problems relating to the interpretation and application of relevant standards of humanity. The report described recent developments in international humanitarian and international criminal law, as well as relevant rulings of regional human rights bodies that had helped clarify the law. It presented examples of recent developments contributing to the development of fundamental principles, particularly with regard to the challenges posed by the implementation of international human rights and humanitarian law during situations of internal conflict. The report, while emphasizing that there was no apparent need to develop new standards, concluded that there was a need to secure respect for existing rules of international law aimed at ensuring the protection of persons in all circumstances and by all actors. Despite the progress achieved, some issues remained to be further considered and clarified, including the question of how to secure better compliance with fundamental standards of international human rights and humanitarian law by non State actors. An ICRC study on customary rules of international humanitarian law, which was in the final stage of preparation, was expected to contribute to the process by clarifying international humanitarian law rules applicable in non-international armed conflict.

Commission action. On 21 April [dec. 2004/118], the Commission requested the Secretary-General, in consultation with ICRC, to submit in 2006 a further report consolidating and updating previous reports and studies.

Civilians in armed conflict

A May report [S/2004/431] of the Secretary-General on the protection of civilians in armed conflict reviewed progress made since his previous report [YUN 2002, p. 695], as well as continuing shortfalls, and discussed the way forward in ensuring protection. The Secretary-General said that in the five years since the initiation of the framework to strengthen the protection of civilians in armed conflict, the system of public international order had been under unprecedented strain, and the fundamentals of international humanitarian law and human rights had been under severe pressure. There were also concerns that counter-terrorism measures had not always complied with human rights obligations. Noting that the issues examined in his current report were key to developing a 10-point plan to strengthen the protection of civilians in armed conflict, the Secretary-General said it was urgent for the international community to deliver on the commitments it had made on the issue. Urging the Security Council to engage fully with relevant issues in order to address important new challenges to the environment for protecting civilians, the Secretary-General observed that, as the nature of warfare continued to change, the evolving environment and diversity of new actors created new circumstances where certain groups might evade responsibility entirely. That situation warranted better regulation and standards of accountability for armed forces, and for private sector groups actively engaged with or working in support of militaries. The international community needed to recommit itself to the principles of international law based on justice, the peaceful settlement of disputes and respect for human dignity.

SECURITY COUNCIL ACTION

On 14 December [meeting 5100], the Security Council discussed the protection of civilians in armed conflict. Its President made statement S/PRST/2004/46 on behalf of the Council:

The Security Council has considered the matter of protection of civilians in armed conflict. The Council recalls all its relevant resolutions, in particular resolutions 1265(1999) of 17 September 1999 and 1296(2000) of 19 April 2000 on the protection of civilians in armed conflict as well as statements by its Presidents, and reiterates its commitment to address the widespread impact of armed conflict on civilians.

The Council reaffirms its strong condemnation of all acts of violence targeting civilians or other protected persons under international law. The Council is gravely concerned that civilians are increasingly targeted by combatants and armed elements during armed conflict, in particular women, children and other vulnerable groups, including refugees and internally displaced persons, and recognizes the negative impact this will have on durable peace and national reconciliation. The Council also reaffirms its condemnation of all incitements to violence against civilians in situations of armed conflict, in particular the use of media to incite hatred and violence. The Council urges all parties to armed conflict, including non-State parties, to put an end to such practices.

The Council reiterates its call to all parties to armed conflict, including non-State parties, to comply fully with the provisions of the Charter of the United Nations and with rules and principles of international law, in particular international humanitarian law, and, as applicable, human rights and refugee law, and to implement fully the relevant decisions of the Council. The Council recalls the obligations of all States to ensure respect for international humanitarian law, including the four Geneva Conventions of 12 August 1949, and emphasizes the responsibility of States to end impunity and to prosecute those responsible for genocide, war crimes, crimes against humanity and serious violations of humanitarian law. It further calls upon all States which have not already done so to consider ratifying or acceding to major instruments of international humanitarian, human rights and refugee law, and to take appropriate measures to implement them.

The Council underlines the importance of safe and unhindered access of humanitarian personnel and assistance to civilians in armed conflict in accordance with international law. The Council reiterates its call to all parties to armed conflict, including non-State parties, to take all necessary measures to ensure security and freedom of movement of United Nations and associated personnel as well as personnel of humanitarian organizations. The Council condemns all attacks targeting United Nations personnel and other humanitarian workers, and underlines the fact that the perpetrators of such attacks must be held accountable as outlined in its resolution 1502(2003) of 26 August 2003. The Council underscores the importance for humanitarian organizations to uphold the principles of the neutrality, impartiality and humanity of their humanitarian activities and the independence of their objectives.

The Council recognizes the importance of a comprehensive, coherent and action-oriented approach, including early planning, to the protection of civilians in situations of armed conflict. It stresses, in this regard, the need to adopt a broad strategy of conflict prevention, which addresses the root causes of armed conflict in a comprehensive manner in order to enhance the protection of civilians on a long-term basis, including by promoting sustainable development, poverty eradication, national reconciliation, good governance, democracy, the rule of law and respect for and protection of human rights. It encourages further cooperation and coordination between Member States and the United Nations system. The Council, moreover, recognizes the needs of civilians under foreign occupation, and stresses further, in this regard, the responsibilities of the occupying Power.

The Council, recognizing the regional dimensions of certain armed conflict, stresses the need for regional cooperation in order to address cross-border issues such as disarmament, demobilization, reintegration and rehabilitation, cross-border movement of refugees and combatants, human trafficking, illicit flow of small arms and illegal exploitation of natural resources and post-conflict situations. It encourages regional and subregional organizations to develop, as appropriate, a regional protection strategy and provide for a coherent and strong framework for addressing protection issues. The Council welcomes the steps taken by regional organizations in this regard and requests the United Nations system and other international organizations to provide them with the necessary support, and to consider means for the reinforcement of national capacities. The Council takes into account, in this regard, the Secretary-General's recommendation regarding the establishment of a framework within which the United Nations could engage with regional organizations more systematically on humanitarian issues related to protection and access and better address those issues at the regional inter-governmental level.

The Council strongly condemns the increased use of sexual and gender-based violence as a weapon of war as well as the recruitment and use of child soldiers by parties to armed conflict in violation of international obligations applicable to them. The Council underlines the vulnerability of women and children in situations of armed conflict, bearing in mind in this regard its resolutions 1325(2000) on women and peace and security and 1539(2004) as well as all other resolutions on children and armed conflict, and recognizes their special needs, in particular those of the girl child. It stresses the importance of developing strategies aimed at preventing and responding to sexual and gender-based violence, through the improvement in the design of peacekeeping and assessment missions by, inter alia, the inclusion of gender and child protection advisers. It stresses also the importance for women and children subject to exploitation and sexual violence to receive adequate assistance and support.

Mindful of the particular vulnerability of refugees and internally displaced persons, the Council reaffirms the primary responsibility of States to ensure their protection, in particular, by preserving the civilian character of camps of refugees and internally displaced persons, and to take effective measures to protect them from infiltration by armed groups, abduction and forced military recruitment.

The Council reaffirms its readiness to ensure that peacekeeping missions are given suitable mandates and adequate resources so as to enable them to better protect civilians under imminent threat of physical danger, including by strengthening the ability of the United Nations to plan and rapidly deploy peacekeeping and humanitarian personnel, utilizing the United Nations stand-by arrangements system, as appropriate.

The Council considers that a coherent and integrated approach to the disarmament, demobilization, reintegration and rehabilitation of ex-combatants, which takes into account the special needs of child soldiers and women combatants, is of crucial importance for a sustained peace and stability. The Council reaffirms the need for the inclusion of these activities in the mandates of United Nations peacekeeping operations, and emphasizes the importance of resources being made available for such activities.

The Council is concerned by the growing problem of humanitarian emergency situations while funding and resources do not match requirements. It urges the international community to ensure adequate and timely funding in response to humanitarian need across crises, so as to provide sufficient humanitarian assistance in alleviating the suffering of civilian populations, in particular those in areas affected by armed conflict or emerging from a situation of conflict.

The Council expresses its appreciation for the efforts of the United Nations agencies, regional organizations, international humanitarian organizations and other relevant actors aimed at raising international awareness of the suffering of civilians in armed conflicts, including refugees and internally displaced persons, and considers such efforts as a key element for the promotion of a culture of protection and for the building of international solidarity with the victims of armed conflict.

The Council invites the Secretary-General to continue to refer to it relevant information and analysis, where he believes that such information or analysis could contribute to the improvement of its work on the protection of civilians in armed conflict, and to continue to include in his written reports to the Council on matters of which it is seized, as appropriate, observations relating to the protection of civilians in armed conflict. In this context, the Security Council reiterates the importance of the aide-memoire annexed to the statement by its President (S/PRST/2002/6) as well as the road map for the protection of civilians in armed conflict as a practical tool for dealing with protection issues.

The Council notes the submission of the report of the Secretary-General of 28 May 2004 on the protection of civilians in armed conflict, which examines the ten-point platform, and requests him to submit his next report by 28 November 2005, and to include in this report information on the implementation of Council resolutions previously adopted on this subject as well as any additional recommendations on ways the Council and other organs of the United Nations, acting within their respective spheres of responsibility, could further improve the protection of civilians in situations of armed conflict.

Missing persons

Note by Secretariat. A 17 March note [E/CN.4/2004/72] by the Secretariat, referring to a 2002 Commission resolution on missing persons in connection with armed conflict [YUN 2002, p. 696], informed the Commission that the Secretary-General's report on the resolution's implementation was under preparation and would be submitted in 2005. Meanwhile, information was being sought from Governments, competent UN bodies, specialized agencies, and regional intergovernmental and international humanitarian organizations.

Commission action. On 20 April [res. 2004/50], the Commission, by a recorded vote of 52 to none, with 1 abstention, called on States that were parties to an armed conflict to take measures to prevent persons from going missing in connection with the conflict, to determine the identity of those reported missing and to cooperate with ICRC in establishing their fate and to develop a comprehensive approach to the issue. The Secretary-General was asked to bring the Commission's resolution to the attention of Governments, competent UN bodies, specialized agencies, regional intergovernmental organizations and international humanitarian entities, and to report in 2006 on its implementation.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 20 December [meeting 74], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Third Committee [A/59/503/Add.2], adopted resolution 59/189 without vote [agenda item 105 (b)].

Missing persons

The General Assembly,

Guided by the purposes, principles and provisions of the Charter of the United Nations,

Guided also by the principles and norms of international humanitarian law, in particular the Geneva Conventions of 12 August 1949 and the Additional Protocols thereto, of 1977, as well as international standards of human rights, in particular the Universal Declaration of Human Rights, the International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights, the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights, the Convention on the Rights of the Child and the Vienna Declaration and Programme of Action adopted by the World Conference on Human Rights on 25 June 1993,

Recalling its resolution 57/207 of 18 December 2002 and Commission on Human Rights resolutions 2002/60 of 25 April 2002 and 2004/50 of 20 April 2004,

Noting with deep concern that armed conflicts are continuing in various parts of the world, often resulting in serious violations of international humanitarian law and human rights law,

Recognizing that great technological progress has been achieved in the field of DNA forensic sciences with regard to missing persons, such as the work done by the International Commission on Missing Persons, based in Sarajevo, which could significantly assist efforts to identify missing persons from other conflict areas in the world,

Noting, in this regard, that the issue of persons reported missing in connection with international armed conflicts, in particular those who are victims of serious violations of international humanitarian law and human rights law, continues to have a negative impact on efforts to put an end to those conflicts.

Welcoming the convening in Geneva, from 19 to 21 February 2003, by the International Committee of the Red Cross, of the International Conference of Governmental and Non-Governmental Experts on the theme “The missing: action to resolve the problem of people unaccounted for as a result of armed conflict or internal violence and to assist their families” and the observations and recommendations of the Conference for addressing the problem of missing persons and their families,

Welcoming also the undertakings by the participants at the Twenty-eighth International Conference of the Red Cross and Red Crescent, held in Geneva from 2 to 6 December 2003, through their adoption of the Agenda for Humanitarian Action, in particular general objective 1, to respect and restore the dignity of persons missing as a result of armed conflicts or other situations of armed violence and of their families,

1. Urges States strictly to observe and respect and ensure respect for the rules of international humanitarian law, as set out in the Geneva Conventions of 12 August 1949 and in the Additional Protocols thereto, of 1977;

2. Calls upon States that are parties to an armed conflict to take all appropriate measures to prevent persons from going missing in connection with armed conflict and to account for persons reported missing as a result of such a situation;

3. Reaffirms the right of families to know the fate of their relatives reported missing in connection with armed conflicts;

4. Also reaffirms that each party to an armed conflict, as soon as circumstances permit and, at the latest, from the end of active hostilities, shall search for the persons who have been reported missing by an adverse party;

5. Calls upon States which are parties to an armed conflict to take all necessary measures, in a timely manner, to determine the identity and fate of persons reported missing in connection with the armed conflict;

6. Requests States to pay the utmost attention to cases of children reported missing in connection with armed conflicts and to take appropriate measures to search for and identify those children;

7. Invites States which are parties to an armed conflict to cooperate fully with the International Committee of the Red Cross in establishing the fate of missing persons and to adopt a comprehensive approach to this issue, including all practical and coordination mechanisms that may be necessary, based on humanitarian considerations only;

10. Requests the Secretary-General to bring the present resolution to the attention of all Governments, the competent United Nations bodies, the specialized agencies, regional intergovernmental organizations and international humanitarian organizations;

11. Also requests the Secretary-General to submit a comprehensive report on the implementation of the present resolution to the Commission on Human Rights at its sixty-second session and to the General Assembly at its sixty-first session;

12. Decides to consider the question at its sixty-first session.

Security of UN staff

Note by Secretariat. A March note by the Secretariat [E/CN.4/2004/96], recalling the Commission’s 2002 request [YUN 2002, p. 697] to the Secretary-General to submit a report on the situation of UN and associated personnel carrying out activities in fulfilment of the mandate of a UN operation who were imprisoned, missing or held in a country against their will, referred the Commission to his 2003 reports on the scope of legal protection under the Convention on the Safety of United Nations and Associated Personnel [YUN 2003, p. 1341] and on the safety and security of humanitarian personnel and the protection of UN personnel [ibid., p. 922]. The Secretary-General had initiated a number of measures to meet the increasing risks that staff faced while carrying out UN programmes, the most notable of which included the reorganization of the Office of the UN Security Coordinator, changes to the method of financing security needs, the introduction of minimum operating security standards (MOSS) and the establishment of a framework for accountability for security management. The UN System Chief Executives Board for Coordination had deliberated on the need to improve staff security and the Deputy Secretary-General had been asked to lead the process, which would build on improvements already made in mandatory staff security awareness training, threat analysis and risk management, the development of enhanced and headquarters MOSS, security clearance procedures and staff tracking procedures. Nonetheless, the key to improving the protection of all UN staff, property and programmes was the support of Member States in recognizing issues of privileges and immunities and the provision of the necessary resources.

Commission action. On 21 April [res. 2004/77], the Commission called on States to consider becoming parties to the 1994 Convention on the Safety of United Nations and Associated Personnel, adopted by the General Assembly in resolution 49/59 [YUN 1994, p. 1289] and the Rome Statute of the International Criminal Court [YUN 1998, p. 1209]. States and others were called on, among other things, to ensure the safety and security of UN and associated personnel carrying out activities in fulfilment of a UN operation mandate and to adopt and/or enforce domestic legislation and judicial and administrative measures to ensure that perpetrators of unlawful acts against them were held accountable. The Secretary-General was asked to ensure respect for the human rights, privileges and immunities of the personnel, to improve safeguards for the security and safety of locally recruited personnel, to ensure the inclusion in headquarters and other mission agreements of the applicable principles and rules on protection contained in the 1994 Convention and related instruments, to ensure that security matters were an integral part of the planning for existing and newly mandated UN operations and to take further measures to ensure that personnel were properly aware of the conditions under which they were called to operate, and that adequate training in security, human rights and humanitarian law was provided to enhance their security.

Arbitrary detention

Commission action. On 19 April [res. 2004/39], the Commission encouraged Governments to consider the recommendations of the Working Group on Arbitrary Detention and to ensure that their legislation, regulations and practices conformed with international standards and instruments. The Secretary-General was asked to assist Governments, special rapporteurs and working groups to ensure the promotion and observance of guarantees relating to states of emergency embodied in international instruments and to assist the Group. The Group was asked to report in 2005.

Working Group activities. The Working Group on Arbitrary Detention held its thirtieth (24-28 May), fortieth (13-17 September) and forty-first (17-26 November) sessions, all in Geneva [E/CN.4/2005/6]. During the year, the Group adopted 25 opinions concerning 51 persons in 17 countries; the text of the opinions were contained in a separate report [E/CN.4/2005/6/Add.1]. The Group also transmitted 202 urgent appeals to 56 Governments concerning 770 individuals, of which 196 were issued jointly by the Group and thematic or geographical special rapporteurs. In 35 cases, the Governments concerned informed the Group that they had taken measures to remedy the situation of the detainees.

The Group examined issues related to psychiatric detention, developments concerning deprivation of liberty as a measure in countering terrorism, hostage-taking and arbitrary detention, and the negative impact on the right to defence of inadequate conditions of detention. In November, the Group adopted deliberation No. 7 concerning the rights and protection of persons held in detention in relation to their mental disability and encouraged Governments to consider the criteria it had set out when deciding on measures involving the deprivation of liberty of those affected and their placement in closed psychiatric establishments. The Group also recommended that measures restricting resort to judicial control of detainees suspected of terrorism-related activity should be proportionate to the legitimate need to combat terrorism, as unreasonably harsh restrictions easily became counterproductive and might compromise the rule of law. The Group was of the opinion that the right not to be detained incommunicado over prolonged periods of time could not be derogated from, and recommended that States review their legislation and practice in the light of that principle. In other recommendations, it advocated affording guarantees applicable to criminal proceedings to persons suspected of criminal activity and liable to the deprivation of liberty under domestic law, introducing an effective remedy for any form of unlawful or arbitrary deprivation of liberty and the right to defend oneself in the area of criminal law when coercive measures were imposed.

Three Working Group members visited Latvia, at the invitation of the Government (23-28 February) [E/CN.4/2005/6/Add.2], where they reviewed the criminal justice system, particularly the rules applying to the deprivation of liberty. The Group, while noting efforts being made to guarantee respect for human rights and to improve the treatment of persons deprived of their liberty in the country, expressed concern at the length and frequency of pre-trial detention, the harshness of the regime and its implications for the presumption of innocence; the lack of real access to assigned counsel; the failure to allow evidence to be challenged; the unbalanced powers of the prosecution and defence; and shortcomings in the imposition of punishments and alternatives to detention. The situation of minors in detention constituted a particular cause for concern, as did issues relating to the administrative detention of illegal aliens. The Group recommended that the Government bring its legislation and practice into line with standards of international law and take steps to ensure that those deprived of their liberty had appropriate defence; pay particular attention to the situation of children and to involuntary committals to psychiatric hospitals other than when ordered by a court; and address problems relating to the detention of non-nationals.
