11. Looks forward, in this context, to further consideration of the impact of globalization on social development at the forty-third session of the Commission for Social Development, taking note of the report of the World Commission on the Social Dimension of Globalization;

12. Reaffirms the need to place people at the centre of all our development policies in order to eradicate poverty, promote full and productive employment and foster social integration so as to promote stable, safe and just societies for all;

13. Underlines the importance of adopting effective measures, including new financial mechanisms, as appropriate, to support the efforts of developing countries to achieve sustained economic growth, sustainable development, poverty reduction and the strengthening of their democratic systems, while reaffirming that each country has primary responsibility for its own economic and social development and that national policies have the leading role in the development process;

14. Emphasizes the importance of integrating economic and social policies in promoting human resources development and enhancing the process of development, invites the Economic and Social Council and the Commission for Social Development to continue to give particular attention to this issue at their forthcoming sessions, and invites the various entities of the United Nations system, within their respective mandates, to take into account the integration of economic and social policies in their respective domains;

15. Recognizes that, while action taken to implement the outcomes of the major United Nations summits, conferences and special sessions in the economic, social and related fields held during the past ten years will further promote social development, strengthened and effective international and regional cooperation and assistance for development and progress towards increased participation, greater social justice and improved equity in societies will also be required;

16. Recognizes also that achieving the internationally agreed development goals, including those contained in the Millennium Declaration, demands a new partnership between developed and developing countries, and in this context stresses the importance of achieving sound policies, good governance at all levels and the rule of law, as well as mobilizing domestic resources, attracting international flows, promoting international trade as an engine for development, increasing international and financial and technical cooperation for development, sustainable debt financing and external debt relief and enhancing the coherence and consistency of the international monetary, financial and trading systems;

17. Stresses the necessity of ensuring the effective involvement of developing countries in the international economic decision-making process through, inter alia, greater participation in international economic forums, thereby ensuring the transparency and accountability of international financial institutions with respect to according a central position to social development in their policies and programmes;

18. Reaffirms the call of the Economic and Social Council for enhanced coordination within the United Nations system and the ongoing efforts to harmonize the current initiatives on Africa, and requests the Commission for Social Development to continue to give due prominence in its work to the social dimension of the New Partnership for Africa's Development;

19. Reaffirms also that education, employment creation and improvement in working conditions, which are some of the indispensable elements of poverty eradication, social integration, gender equality and overall development, should be at the centre of development strategies and international cooperation in support of national policies, and recognizes the need to promote employment that meets labour standards as defined in relevant instruments of the International Labour Organization and other international instruments;

20. Encourages, in this context, current initiatives of the United Nations system on the elaboration of comprehensive employment strategies and measures to foster youth employment, bearing in mind relevant international instruments pertaining to youth;

21. Reaffirms that social development requires the active involvement of all actors in the development process, including civil society organizations, corporations and small businesses, and that partnerships among all relevant actors are increasingly becoming part of national and international cooperation for social development, reaffirms also that, within countries, partnerships among the Government, civil society and the private sector can contribute effectively to the achievement of social development goals, and underlines the fact that, at the international level, the recent initiatives towards building voluntary partnerships for social development should be encouraged and discussed further at, inter alia, the intergovernmental level;

22. Underlines the responsibility of the private sector, at both the national and the international levels, including small and large companies and transnational corporations, regarding not only the economic and financial, but also the development, social, gender and environmental implications of their activities, their obligations towards their workers and their contributions to achieving sustainable development, including social development, and emphasizes the need to take concrete actions within the United Nations system and through the participation of all relevant stakeholders on corporate responsibility and accountability;

23. Invites the Secretary-General, the Economic and Social Council, the Commission for Social Development, the regional commissions, the relevant specialized agencies, funds and programmes of the United Nations system and other intergovernmental forums, within their respective mandates, to continue to integrate into their work programmes and give priority attention to the commitments and undertakings set out in the Copenhagen Declaration and the Programme of Action and in the further initiatives for social development, to continue to be actively involved in their follow-up and to monitor the achievement of those commitments and undertakings;

24. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its sixtieth session the item entitled "Implementation of the outcome of the World Summit for Social Development and of the twenty-fourth special session of the General Assembly", and requests the Secretary-General to submit a report on this question to the Assembly at that session.

World Commission on the Social Dimensions of Globalization

In June [A/59/98-E/2004/79], Finland and the United Republic of Tanzania transmitted to the General Assembly and the Economic and Social Council the report of the World Commission on the Social Dimension of Globalization entitled A Fair Globalization: Creating Opportunities for All, which focused on governance and accountability and recommended coordinated measures at the national and international levels in the areas of trade, investment, finance, migration and labour.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 2 December [meeting 65], the General Assembly adopted resolution 59/57 [draft: A/59/L.38 & Add.1] without vote [agenda item 55].

A Fair Globalization: Creating Opportunities for All—report of the World Commission on the Social Dimension of Globalization

The General Assembly,

Reaffirming the resolve expressed in the United Nations Millennium Declaration to ensure that globalization becomes a positive force for the people of the entire world,

Recalling the commitment in the Millennium Declaration to ensure greater policy coherence and better cooperation between the United Nations, its agencies, the Bretton Woods institutions and other multilateral bodies, with a view to achieving a fully coordinated approach to the problems of peace and development,

Recalling also its resolution 58/225 of 23 December 2003, in which it stressed the need for the United Nations to continue to address the social dimension of globalization and took note of the work of the World Commission on the Social Dimension of Globalization,

Recognizing the support expressed at the International Conference on Financing for Development and the World Summit on Sustainable Development for the work of the International Labour Organization on the social dimension of globalization,

Acknowledging the work of the World Commission on the Social Dimension of Globalization, co-chaired by the President of Finland and the President of the United Republic of Tanzania and facilitated by the International Labour Organization,

Recognizing the contribution of the implementation of the commitments agreed in the outcomes of the major United Nations conferences and summits, including the important contributions of the Monterrey Consensus, adopted by the International Conference on Financing for Development, and the World Summit on Sustainable Development to eradicating poverty, achieving sustained economic growth and promoting sustainable development, as well as advancing towards a fully inclusive and equitable globalization,

Recalling its resolutions 58/291 of 6 May 2004 and 57/270 B of 23 June 2003 on the follow-up to the outcome of the Millennium Summit of the United Nations and the integrated and coordinated follow-up to the outcomes of the major United Nations conferences and summits in economic and social fields,

1. Takes note of the report of the World Commission on the Social Dimension of Globalization entitled A Fair Globalization: Creating Opportunities for All, as a contribution to the international dialogue towards a fully inclusive and equitable globalization;

2. Decides to consider the wider challenges and opportunities linked to the issue of globalization, including those in the report of the World Commission, within the framework of the comprehensive review of the implementation of the United Nations Millennium Declaration, under resolution 58/291, and the ten-year review of the further implementation of the outcome of the World Summit for Social Development by the Commission for Social Development in 2005;

3. Calls upon the organs and bodies of the United Nations, and invites the organizations of the United Nations system, to consider within their mandates the report of the World Commission, and also calls upon Member States to consider the report;

4. Invites relevant organizations of the United Nations system and other relevant multilateral bodies to provide information to the Secretary-General on their activities to promote an inclusive and equitable globalization;

5. Requests the Secretary-General to take into account, inter alia, the report of the World Commission in his comprehensive report for the high-level review of 2005 at the sixtieth session of the General Assembly, within the follow-up to the outcome of the Millennium Summit of the United Nations.

Commission for Social Development

The Commission for Social Development, at its forty-second session (New York, 4-13 and 20 February) [E/2004/26], adopted agreed conclusions on its priority theme, "Improving public sector effectiveness" (see p. 1093). The Commission made recommendations for action by the Economic and Social Council on: the drafting of a comprehensive and integral international convention on protection and promotion of the rights and dignity of persons with disabilities (see p. 1098); further promotion of equalization of opportunities by, for and with persons with disabilities, and protection of the human rights of persons with disabilities (see p. 1097); and implementation of the social objectives of the New Partnership for Africa's Development (see p. 920). A text on the celebration of the tenth anniversary of the International Year of the Family was recommended to the Council for adoption by the General Assembly (see p. 1095). The Commission also adopted a resolution [E/2004/26 (res. 42/1)] on modalities for reviewing the 2002 Madrid International Plan of Action on Ageing [YUN 2002, p. 1194] (see p. 1192).

In consideration of emerging trends in social development, the Commission heard a presentation on the findings of the Third International Forum for Social Development (New York, October 2003) held under the theme "International migration and migrants from a social perspective" and held a panel discussion on the subject.

The Commission considered the Secretary-General's report [E/CN.5/2004/2] on the review of the methods of its work, submitted in accordance with Assembly resolution 57/270 B [YUN 2003, p. 1468], and decided to continue consideration of the item at its forty-third session. The Commission also agreed to provide comments on the Secretary-General's proposed strategic framework for the 2006-2007 biennium in social policy and development [E/CN.5/2004/7].

On 21 July, the Council took note of the Commission's report on its forty-second session and approved the provisional agenda and documentation for its forty-third (2005) session (decision 2004/241).

In resolution 2004/16 of 21 July on the implementation of the social objectives of the New Partnership for Africa's Development (see p. 921), the Economic and Social Council reaffirmed the need to strengthen, in the spirit of partnership, international, regional and sub-regional cooperation for social development and for the implementation of the outcome of the 1995 World Summit for Social Development and the twenty-fourth special session of the General Assembly. It invited the Secretary-General to continue to reflect social dimensions in future reports submitted to the Commission for Social Development on its priority theme of national and international cooperation for social development.

Preparations for the forty-third session of the Commission for Social Development

ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL ACTION

On 23 July [meeting 51], the Economic and Social Council adopted resolution 2004/58 [draft: E/2004/L.27] without vote [agenda item 14 (b)].

Preparations for the forty-third session of the Commission for Social Development

The Economic and Social Council,

Underlining the significance of the forty-third session of the Commission for Social Development, which will mark the tenth anniversary of the adoption of the Copenhagen Declaration on Social Development and the Programme of Action of the World Summit for Social Development,

Noting that the Commission will undertake, at its forty-third session, a review of the implementation of the Copenhagen Programme of Action and the outcome of the twenty-fourth special session of the General Assembly, entitled “World Summit for Social Development and beyond: achieving social development for all in a globalizing world”, held in Geneva from 26 June to 1 July 2000, which constitute the basic framework for the promotion of social development for all at the national and international levels,

Building upon Economic and Social Council resolution 1996/7 of 22 July 1996 and also taking into account General Assembly resolutions 50/161 of 22 December 1995, 57/270 B of 23 June 2003 and 58/291 of 6 May 2004,

Considering the special nature of the task before the Commission for Social Development at its forty-third session,

1. Decides to focus on the implementation of the Copenhagen Declaration on Social Development and the Programme of Action of the World Summit for Social Development and the outcome of the twenty-fourth special session of the General Assembly through the expanded use of interactive dialogue, and with broad-based participation of governmental delegations at the highest level of responsibility and expertise, and of civil society and organizations within the United Nations system, bearing in mind the need to integrate the social development perspective in the comprehensive review of the progress made in the fulfilment of all the commitments contained in the United Nations Millennium Declaration;

2. Also decides the Commission for Social Development at its forty-third session, should emphasize the sharing of experiences and good practices on overcoming challenges to the implementation of the Copenhagen Declaration and Programme of Action and the outcome of the twenty-fourth special session of the General Assembly;

3. Further decides that the Commission for Social Development should convene, during its forty-third session, high-level plenary meetings, open to all States Members of the United Nations and observers, on the implementation of the Copenhagen Declaration and Programme of Action and the outcome of the twenty-fourth special session of the General Assembly, and requests the Chairman of the forty-third session of the Commission to transmit the outcome, through the Economic and Social Council, to the General Assembly at its sixtieth session, including to the high-level event of the Assembly on the review of the Millennium Declaration in 2005;

4. Requests the Bureau of the Commission for Social Development, in its preparations for the forty-third session of the Commission, to take into account the views expressed by representatives at the forty-second session of the Commission and to convene informal consultative meetings with the participation of all interested member States and observers, with a view to facilitating the work of the Commission at its forthcoming forty-third session.

Improving public sector effectiveness

The Secretary-General, in response to Economic and Social Council decision 2003/230

[YUN 2003, p. 1099], submitted a report on its priority theme: improving public sector effectiveness [E/CN.5/2004/5]. The report explored the notion of “public sector” in the context of UN activities, and particularly the mandate of the Commission; described the context of the call for improving public sector effectiveness; analysed what constituted an effective public sector; and discussed means for improving its effectiveness, including through adequate financing, improved delivery, privatization, increased social dialogue and participation, and maintaining high standards among public servants.

The report proposed policy recommendations for the Commission’s consideration.

ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL ACTION

On 21 July [meeting 47], the Economic and Social Council, on the recommendation of the Commission on Social Development [E/2004/26], adopted resolution 2004/240 without vote [agenda item 14 (b)].

Agreed conclusions of the Commission for Social Development on improving public sector effectiveness

At its 47th plenary meeting, on 21 July 2004, the Economic and Social Council, endorsed the following agreed conclusions adopted by the Commission for Social Development with respect to its priority theme at its forty-second session:

1. Governments have the primary responsibility for the provision of social services in order to enhance social development and contribute to the achievement of the internationally agreed development goals, including those contained in the Copenhagen Declaration on Social Development and the Programme of Action of the World Summit for Social Development, the outcome document adopted at the twenty-fourth special session of the General Assembly, entitled World Summit for Social Development and Beyond: Achieving Social Development for All in a Globalizing World, and the Millennium Declaration. In this regard, national priorities and policies have the leading role in the development process. At the same time, national efforts need to be supported by an enabling international environment. The Commission emphasizes the crucial role of the public sector in, inter alia, the provision of equitable, adequate and accessible social services for all to meet the essential needs of the entire population, in particular those excluded from social services and those most in need. Governments should constantly strive to improve the public sector, taking into account the level of economic and social development of each country.

2. The Commission reiterates that sound social and economic development policies at the national and international levels should be part of the framework for the improvement of the effectiveness of the public sector. This requires long-term planning, well-defined priorities and coherent policies, effective implementation and capacity-building. Those policies should be formulated and implemented by Governments, with the participation of all relevant stakeholders, as appropriate, and should be supported by the international community.

3. The Commission acknowledges that improvement of public sector effectiveness can be achieved through, inter alia, dialogue, partnership and cooperation at all levels. The Commission encourages Governments to strengthen the exchanges of experience and methods of effective delivery of public services. The United Nations system and international financial, trade and economic institutions and bilateral donors are invited to play an important role, through an integrated and coherent approach, in assisting Governments, in particular those of developing countries, least developed countries and countries with economies in transition, in this endeavour, specifically in exchanging and disseminating good practices and capacity-building activities aimed at improving public sector effectiveness.

4. The Commission acknowledges that developing countries, in particular the least developed countries, need to have a sufficient level of financial resources in order to provide social services commensurate with the needs of their citizens.

5. The Commission recognizes that a substantial increase in official development assistance and other resources will be required if developing countries are to achieve the internationally agreed development goals and objectives, including those contained in the Millennium Declaration. In order to build support for official development assistance, heads of State and Government have pledged to further improve policies and development strategies, both nationally and internationally, to enhance aid effectiveness.

6. Achieving the internationally agreed development goals, including those contained in the Millennium Declaration, demands a new partnership between developed and developing countries. In this context, the Commission stresses the importance of the commitment recently made by heads of State and Government to achieving sound policies, good governance at all levels and the rule of law, as well as to mobilizing domestic resources, attracting international flows, promoting international trade as an engine for development, increasing international financial and technical cooperation for development, sustainable debt financing and external debt relief and enhancing the coherence and consistency of the international monetary, financial and trading systems.

7. Each country has the primary responsibility for its own economic and social development, within which the role of national policies and development strategies cannot be overemphasized. In this context, the Commission reaffirms that international cooperation has an essential role in assisting developing countries, including the least developed countries, in the strengthening of their human, institutional and technological capacity and that the improvement of the effectiveness of the public sector is one of the conditions for social development requiring strengthened international cooperation.

8. The Commission stresses that in making recommendations on macroeconomic policies and implementing various programmes related to development and poverty eradication, the international financial institutions are invited to take full account of the role and specificity of the public sector, notably public social services.

9. At the international level, the Commission has the primary responsibility in the follow-up to and review of the implementation of the commitments made at the World Summit for Social Development and the further initiatives agreed upon at the twenty-fourth special session of the General Assembly. In this regard, the Commission is a forum where countries can participate in an exchange of views and assessment of efforts, including through best practices aimed, inter alia, at promoting public sector effectiveness and seeking optimal ways of ensuring equitable delivery of social services in order to enhance social cohesion and accelerate social development.

10. The Commission recommends that, when making decisions about the allocation of public resources, Governments, with the contribution of relevant stakeholders, should consider the social development goals when developing or strengthening, inter alia, their national poverty eradication policies and strategies, taking into account that the financing of effective social services is an investment in economic growth and should be evaluated in the context of their impact on social development goals as well as on public expenditures and finances.

11. The Commission, while noting that economic hardship has in some cases led to reduced public social expenditures, recognizes that social and economic development policies and programmes should be complementary and that effective spending on strengthening public social services, including human capital development, social equity enhancement and social protection, contributes to long-term economic development and the development of society as a whole.

12. The Commission invites Governments to consider complementary and alternative approaches to the delivery of social services, including decentralization, privatization and public-private partnerships or, where appropriate, the introduction of competitive market-based structures. In general, social services can be delivered most effectively and efficiently by entities that are most appropriate and closest to local communities and are therefore more aware of their needs. While services can be provided by private entities, the fundamental objectives of those services and the ultimate responsibility of the State remain unchanged. The Commission reaffirms that any reform of public service delivery should aim at promoting and attaining the goals of universal and equitable access to those services by all, without discrimination, and at eradicating poverty and at the promotion and protection of all human rights, promoting full and productive employment and fostering social integration. In this regard, factors such as the rule of law, good governance, sound financial management at all levels, gender equality and strengthened international cooperation are important elements for success in meeting these objectives.

13. The Commission underlines that improvement of public sector effectiveness requires, inter alia, that all countries strive to eliminate corruption at all levels and welcomes the adoption by the General Assembly of the United Nations Convention against Corruption.

14. The Commission emphasizes the importance of dialogue and inclusive stakeholder participation, as appropriate, in the formulation, implementation and evaluation of social development policies, including policies on social services, to increase the efficiency, effectiveness, accessibility, affordability and flexibility of such services, and the importance of the sense of ownership among all relevant stakeholders, including civil society, as well as entities that provide social services.

15. The Commission underscores the importance of the principles of transparency, accountability, integrity, efficiency and equality for improving the effectiveness of the public sector. In addition, the Commission considers that when Governments address the monitoring and evaluation of the delivery and impact of social services, equitable access to and quality of such services as well as the attainment of their initial objectives should be taken into account.

UN Research Institute for Social Development

During 2004, the United Nations Research Institute for Social Development (UNRISD) continued to conduct research on the social dimensions of the development process, within a holistic and multidisciplinary framework, focusing on decision-making processes and the social impact of development policies.

A November report of the UNRISD Board [E/CN.5/2005/3] described activities in 2003-2004, among which were the release of UNRISD's Research for Social Change at a conference on social knowledge and international policy-making: exploring the linkages (Geneva, 20-21 April), which marked the Institute's fortieth anniversary. UNRISD also held conferences on corporate social responsibility and development: towards a new agenda (17-18 November), and on the ethnic structure, inequality and governance of the public sector (Riga, Latvia, 25-27 March, 2004). It launched new projects on the development impacts of HIV/AIDS: politics and political economy of HIV/AIDS and community responses to HIV/AIDS, and on civil society engagement and global civil society movements: dynamics in international campaigns and national implementation. The Institute also launched a new series of research and policy briefs aimed at improving dialogue on development. In 2003-2004, eighteen scholars from thirteen countries worked at the Institute.

Observance of tenth anniversary of International Year of the Family (1994)

In accordance with General Assembly resolution 58/15 [YUN 2003, p. 1103], the Secretary-General submitted in February an interim report [E/CN.5/2004/3] to the Commission for Social Development on preparations for and observance of the tenth anniversary of the International Year of the Family, to be celebrated on 6 December 2004. The report provided an overview of preparations for the anniversary at the national, regional and international levels. According to the report, national coordination mechanisms for the tenth anniversary were established and long-standing national priorities for family policies were given new impetus, with initiatives to address those priorities launched in many countries. The tenth anniversary was seen as an opportunity to update, refine or develop legislation concerning families and to address the broad spectrum of family-related issues. Numerous Governments mainstreamed a family dimension in decision-making and administrative processes, and established infrastructure and policy instruments to strengthen and support families and promote an enabling environment for them. At the regional level, the UN regional commissions interacted with various national authorities and civil society organizations on family issues. At the international level, coordination between the Department of Economic and Social Affairs (DESA) and the UN information centres was strengthened to enhance dissemination and exchange of information on issues relating to the family. In January, DESA, as part of the observance, organized a policy workshop on HIV/AIDS and family well-being to explore the effects of HIV/AIDS on the family unit and family network, identify coping mechanisms, review existing policies and programmes, develop a policy framework and recommendations for addressing family issues and identify further capacity-building needs.

The report recommended the strengthening of cooperation and mechanisms for consultation and advocacy to promote greater consensus on policy content, concepts and an integrated perspective on the family, enhance international cooperation in research, promote training and advisory services, and continue support to the United Nations Trust Fund on Family Activities to assist in national capacity-building.

ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL ACTION

On 21 July [meeting 47], the Economic and Social Council, on the recommendation of the Commission for Social Development [E/2004/26], adopted resolution 2004/13 without vote [agenda item 14 (b)].

Celebration of the tenth anniversary of the International Year of the Family and beyond

The Economic and Social Council,

Recommends to the General Assembly the adoption of the following draft resolution:

[For text, see General Assembly resolution 59/147 on p. 1096.]

Report of Secretary-General. Also in response to Assembly resolution 58/15, the Secretary-General submitted a July report [A/59/176] to the Assembly, which provided additional information and analysis of the situation of families worldwide, and approaches undertaken, primarily at the national level, on policy in support of families, derived from experience gained in the preparation of the tenth anniversary. It suggested the need for regular national surveys of the situation of families, and proposed actions for national coordination of family policies and programmes and other national actions, such as legal reforms, legislation and related measures, public awareness, research, service provision and support to non-governmental organizations (NGOs). It proposed several recommendations to the Assembly, including that DESA provide technical assistance to national coordination mechanisms; support diagnostic studies, research and data collection; exchange expertise and experiences on family issues; disseminate information; support networking at all levels; and encourage policy and programme coordination within the UN system. The United Nations Programme on the Family should highlight advocacy, capacity-building and technical support to Governments on the issue of the family.

By decision 59/522 of 20 December, the Assembly took note of the Secretary-General's report.

Doha International Conference for the Family. Qatar transmitted to the Assembly in December the final report of the Doha International Conference for the Family to commemorate the tenth anniversary of the Year (29-30 November) [A/59/599], and the Doha Declaration adopted at that Conference [A/59/592]. The Declaration reaffirmed international commitments to the family and called upon Governments, international organizations and members of civil society at all levels to take action to protect the family. The Conference welcomed the announcement by Qatar of the creation of an International Institute for Study of the Family.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 6 December [meeting 67], the General Assembly adopted resolution 59/111 [draft: A/59/L.29 & Add. 1] without vote [agenda item 94].

Celebrating the tenth anniversary of the International Year of the Family

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 44/82 of 8 December 1989 concerning the proclamation of, preparations for and observance of the International Year of the Family in 1994, and resolutions 50/142 of 21 December 1995, 52/81 of 12 December 1997 and 54/124 of 17 December 1999 concerning the follow-up to the International Year of the Family,

Recalling also its resolutions 56/113 of 19 December 2001, 57/164 of 18 December 2002 and 58/15 of 3 December 2003 concerning the preparations for and observance of the tenth anniversary of the International Year of the Family in 2004,

Taking note with appreciation of the report of the Secretary-General on the preparations for and observance of the tenth anniversary of the International Year of the Family in 2004,

1. Reaffirms its resolution 58/15;
2. Welcomes the celebration of the tenth anniversary of the International Year of the Family on 6 December 2004 at Headquarters;
3. Commends the important contributions made by Governments at the international, national, regional and local levels to observe the tenth anniversary of the International Year of the Family;
4. Welcomes the hosting of the Regional Conference on the Family in Africa on 27 and 28 July 2004 by the Government of Benin, and also welcomes the hosting of the Doha International Conference for the Family on 29 and 30 November 2004 by the State of Qatar, and takes note of their outcomes;
5. Encourages Governments to make every possible effort to realize the objectives of the tenth anniversary of the International Year of the Family and to integrate a family perspective in the planning process;
6. Notes with appreciation the contribution of the non-governmental organizations through local and regional meetings, as well as the programmes and activities throughout civil society undertaken in support of the celebration of the tenth anniversary of the International Year of the Family;
7. Recommends that all relevant agencies of the United Nations system, civil society organizations, the media, religious and community-based organizations as well as the private sector contribute to developing strategies and programmes aimed at strengthening the livelihood of families;
8. Encourages United Nations agencies and bodies, including the regional commissions, as well as inter-governmental and non-governmental organizations and research and academic institutions, to work closely with the Department of Economic and Social Affairs of the Secretariat in a coordinated manner on family-related issues, inter alia, by sharing experience and findings, in recognition of their valuable role in family policy development at all levels;
9. Decides to celebrate the anniversary of the International Year of the Family on a ten-year basis.

On 20 December [meeting 74], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Third Committee [A/59/492], adopted resolution 59/147 without vote [agenda item 94 (a)].

Celebration of the tenth anniversary of the International Year of the Family and beyond

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 44/82 of 8 December 1989, 45/133 of 14 December 1990, 46/92 of 16 December 1991, 47/237 of 20 September 1993, 50/142 of 21 December 1995, 52/81 of 12 December 1997, 54/124 of 17 December 1999, 56/113 of 19 December 2001, 57/164 of 18 December 2002 and 58/15 of 3 December 2003 concerning the proclamation of, preparations for and observance of the International Year of the Family in 1994 and its tenth anniversary in 2004,

Recalling also that relevant United Nations instruments on human rights as well as relevant global plans and programmes of action call for the widest possible protection and assistance to be accorded to the family, bearing in mind that in different cultural, political and social systems various forms of the family exist,

Recalling further that the family is the basic unit of society and, as such, should be strengthened, and that it is entitled to receive comprehensive protection and support,

Noting that the family-related provisions of the outcomes of the major United Nations conferences and summits of the 1990s and their follow-up processes continue to provide policy guidance on ways to strengthen family-centred components of policies and programmes as part of an integrated comprehensive approach to development,

Recognizing that the preparations for and observance of the tenth anniversary of the International Year of the Family provided a useful opportunity for drawing further attention to the objectives of the Year for increasing cooperation at all levels on family issues,

Recognizing also the commendable efforts made by Governments at the local and national levels in carrying out specific programmes concerning families,

Emphasizing that equality between women and men and respect for all the human rights and fundamental freedoms of all family members are essential to family well-being and to society at large, noting the importance of reconciliation of work and family life, and recognizing the principle that both parents have common responsibilities for the upbringing and development of the child,

Aware that families are affected by social and economic changes, manifested as observable worldwide trends, and that the causes and consequences of those trends concerning families have to be identified and analysed,

Noting with concern the devastating effects of the HIV/AIDS pandemic on family life, as well as the devastating effects on family life of other infectious diseases, such as malaria and tuberculosis,

Noting with concern also the devastating effects of difficult social and economic conditions, armed conflicts and natural disasters on family life,

Recognizing the important role of non-governmental organizations, at both the local and the national levels, working in the interest of families,

Aware that there is a need for continued inter-agency cooperation on the family in order to generate greater awareness of family issues among the governing bodies of the United Nations system,

Recalling that the tenth anniversary of the International Year of the Family will be observed and celebrated during the fifty-ninth session of the General Assembly,

Having considered the report of the Secretary-General,

1. Notes that the follow-up to the tenth anniversary of the International Year of the Family is an integral part of the agenda and the multi-year programme of work of the Commission for Social Development until 2006;

2. Urges Governments to continue to take sustained action at all levels concerning family issues, including applied studies and research, in order to promote the role of families in development and develop concrete measures and approaches to address national priorities in dealing with family issues;

3. Urges the international community to address family-related concerns within the framework of the commitments undertaken at relevant major United Nations conferences and their follow-up processes, including those agreed to in the Declaration of Commitment on HIV/AIDS adopted by the General Assembly at its twenty-sixth special session on 27 June 2001;

4. Encourages more inter-agency cooperation within the United Nations system on issues relating to the family;

5. Encourages the regional commissions of the United Nations, within existing resources, to promote further the exchange of experiences at the regional level through the provision of technical assistance, including advisory services, to Governments upon request;

6. Emphasizes that the Secretariat should continue its important role in the programme of work on family issues within the United Nations system, and, in this regard, encourages the Department of Economic and Social Affairs, within existing resources, to continue to cooperate with Governments, the United Nations system and civil society in strengthening national capacities through the implementation of the mandated objectives of the International Year of the Family, including through:

(a) The provision of policy guidance on emerging issues and trends affecting the family through the preparation of studies and research papers aimed, in particular, at enhancing the role of the family in society;

(b) The provision of technical assistance to countries, upon request, to enhance, where appropriate, their national capacities in the area of family-related work;

7. Invites the Secretary-General, within existing resources, to disseminate a compilation of existing development cooperation activities of the United Nations system in the field of the family for the benefit of the Department of Economic and Social Affairs, other relevant United Nations bodies, Member States and observers by the time of the holding of the forty-fourth session of the Commission for Social Development;

8. Requests the Secretary-General:

(a) To give appropriate consideration to the tenth anniversary of the International Year of the Family by preparing for the observance of the International Day of Families on 15 May 2004 and by taking appropriate steps for the celebration of the tenth anniversary of the International Year of the Family;

(b) To continue to utilize the United Nations Trust Fund on Family Activities to provide financial assistance for activities specific to the family and for projects of direct benefit to it, with special focus on least developed and developing countries;

9. Also requests the Secretary-General to report on the implementation of the present resolution to the General Assembly at its sixtieth session.

Persons with disabilities

Standard Rules on the Equalization of Opportunities for Persons with Disabilities

The Secretary-General, in accordance with Economic and Social Council resolution 2002/26 [YUN 20002, p.1091], transmitted to the Commission for Social Development the views of 15 Governments and the European Union, on behalf of its 15 members and 10 accessing countries, on the proposals of the Special Rapporteur on Disability [ibid.], especially on the suggested supplement to the Standard Rules on the Equalization of Opportunities for Persons with Disabilities [E/CN.5/2004/4].

ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL ACTION

On 21 July [meeting 47], the Economic and Social Council, on the recommendation of the Commission for Social Development [E/2004/26], adopted resolution 2004/15 without vote [agenda item 14 (b)].

Further promotion of equalization of opportunities by, for and with persons with disabilities, and protection of the human rights of persons with disabilities

The Economic and Social Council,

Recalling the purposes and principles of the Charter of the United Nations, and reaffirming the obligations contained in relevant human rights instruments,

Recalling also General Assembly resolution 37/52 of 3 December 1982, by which the Assembly adopted the World Programme of Action concerning Disabled Persons, resolution 48/96 of 20 December 1993, by which it adopted the Standard Rules on the Equalization of Opportunities for Persons with Disabilities, and resolution 58/132 of 22 December 2003,

Recalling further General Assembly resolution 56/168 of 19 December 2001, by which the Assembly established the Ad Hoc Committee on a Comprehensive and Integral International Convention on the Protection and Promotion of the Rights and Dignity of Persons with Disabilities, resolution 57/229 of 18 December 2002, in which it sought views on proposals for a convention, and resolution 58/246 of 23 December 2003, in which it decided that the Ad Hoc Committee should start negotiations on a draft convention at its third session,

Recalling Economic and Social Council resolution 2002/26 of 24 July 2002 on further promotion of equalization of opportunities by, for and with persons with disabilities and protection of their human rights, Commission on Human Rights resolution 2003/49 of 23 April 2003 on the human rights of persons with disabilities and other relevant resolutions of the General Assembly, the Economic and Social Council and its functional commissions,

Noting with satisfaction that the Standard Rules play an increasingly important role in the equalization of opportunities for persons with disabilities,

1. Takes note of the views of Governments on the proposals contained in the report of the former Special Rapporteur on disability of the Commission for Social Development, especially on the proposed supplement to the Standard Rules on the Equalization of Opportunities for Persons with Disabilities contained in the annex to the report, as well as the views expressed during the forty-second session of the Commission;

2. Welcomes the work of the Special Rapporteur undertaken in accordance with section IV of the Standard Rules;

3. Recommends that the General Assembly consider the proposed supplement to the Standard Rules contained in the annex to the report of the former Special Rapporteur, with a view to completing its consideration at its fifty-ninth session;

4. Also recommends that the General Assembly, in considering the proposed supplement to the Standard Rules, take into account the work of the Ad Hoc Committee on a Comprehensive and Integral International Convention on the Protection and Promotion of the Rights and Dignity of Persons with Disabilities;

5. Invites the Special Rapporteur to contribute to the consideration by the General Assembly of the proposed supplement to the Standard Rules, and requests the Secretary-General to make the contributions of the Special Rapporteur available to all Member States and observers;

6. Encourages Governments, as well as non-governmental organizations and the private sector, to continue to contribute to the United Nations Voluntary Fund on Disability in order to support the activities of the Special Rapporteur, as well as new and expanded initiatives to strengthen national capacities for the equalization of opportunities by, for and with persons with disabilities;

7. Requests the Special Rapporteur to submit a report on the monitoring of the implementation of the Standard Rules to the Commission for Social Development at its forty-third session.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

By decision 59/521 of 20 December, the General Assembly took note of Council resolution 2004/15 (see above), postponed until its sixty-first (2006) session consideration of the proposed supplement to the Standard Rules on the Equalization of Opportunities for Persons with Disabilities, and requested the Special Rapporteur on disability of the Commission for Social Development to take into account the ideas contained in the proposed supplement to the Standard Rules in accomplishing her mandate.

International convention on the rights of persons with disabilities

In accordance with General Assembly resolution 58/246 [YUN 2003, p. 1108], the Ad Hoc Committee on a Comprehensive and Integral International Convention on the Protection and Promotion of the Rights and Dignity of Persons with Disabilities, established by General Assembly resolution 56/168 [YUN 2001, p. 1012], held its third (24 May-4 June) and fourth (23 August-3 September) sessions in 2004, both in New York.

At its third session [A/AC.265/2004/5], the Ad Hoc Committee conducted a first reading of the draft text of the convention as contained in the report of its Working Group [A/AC.265/2004/WORKING GROUP.I, annex I]. It considered articles 1 to 24 on issues of international cooperation and the preamble. It deferred to its fourth session consideration of the title, structure, part of the preamble, definitions (article 3) and monitoring (article 25), and the compilation of proposed revisions and amendments to the draft text made by Committee members, which was annexed to the report. It also recommended that the Secretary-General implement measures to facilitate access to UN premises, technology and documents and invited, among others, persons with disabilities and experts to present proposals in that regard.

At its fourth session [A/59/360], the Committee concluded the first reading of the draft text, adopted the organization of work and conducted reviews of articles 1 to 15 and 24 bis. The Ad Hoc Committee recommended that it meet in January 2005 to continue its work. It invited the General Assembly, at its fifty-ninth (2004) session, to examine in greater detail the provision of reasonable accommodation for persons with disabilities to facilitate accessibility to UN premises, technology and documents.

On 21 July [meeting 47], the Economic and Social Council, on the recommendation of the Commission for Social Development [E/2004/26], adopted resolution 2004/14 without vote [agenda item 14(b)].

Comprehensive and integral international convention on the protection and promotion of the rights and dignity of persons with disabilities

The Economic and Social Council,

Recalling General Assembly resolution 56/168 of 19 December 2001, by which the Assembly established an Ad Hoc Committee, open to the participation of all Member States and observers of the United Nations, to consider proposals for a comprehensive and integral international convention to promote and protect the rights and dignity of persons with disabilities, based on the holistic approach in the work carried out in the fields of social development, human rights and non-discrimination and taking into account the recommendations of the Commission on Human Rights and the Commission for Social Development,

Recalling also Economic and Social Council resolution 2003/12 of 21 July 2003 on a comprehensive and integral international convention to promote and protect the rights and dignity of persons with disabilities,

Recalling further General Assembly resolution 58/246 of 23 December 2003, in which the Assembly decided that the Ad Hoc Committee on a Comprehensive and Integral International Convention on the Promotion and Protection of the Rights and Dignity of Persons with Disabilities should start the negotiations on a draft convention at its third session,

Welcoming the important contributions made so far to the work of the Ad Hoc Committee by all stakeholders,

Welcoming the progress made in the working group established by the Ad Hoc Committee in preparing a draft text that will form the basis for negotiations on a draft convention in the Ad Hoc Committee, taking into account all contributions,

Encouraging Member States and observers to participate actively in the Ad Hoc Committee in order to present to the General Assembly, as a matter of priority, a draft text of a convention,

Reaffirming the universality, indivisibility and interdependence of all human rights and fundamental freedoms and the need for their full enjoyment to be guaranteed to persons with disabilities, without discrimination,

Recognizing the positive steps taken by Governments, including continued collaboration at the regional and international levels, to promote and protect the rights and dignity of persons with disabilities,

Encouraged by the increased support of the international community for the promotion and protection of the rights and dignity of persons with disabilities under a comprehensive and integral approach,

1. Requests the Commission for Social Development to continue to contribute to the process of negotiation of a draft international convention by, inter alia, providing its views regarding the social development perspective, bearing in mind the experience in the implementation of the Standard Rules on the Equalization of Opportunities for Persons with Disabilities and the World Programme of Action concerning Disabled Persons;

2. Welcomes the contributions of the Special Rapporteur on disability of the Commission to the process of elaboration of a draft convention, and requests the Special Rapporteur to contribute further to the work of the Ad Hoc Committee, drawing from her experience in the monitoring of the Standard Rules on the Equalization of Opportunities for Persons with Disabilities and in collaboration with the Secretariat, by, inter alia, providing her views on the elements to be considered in drawing up a draft international convention;

3. Requests the Department of Economic and Social Affairs of the Secretariat, through its Division for Social Policy and Development, to continue to support the work of the Ad Hoc Committee, in collaboration with the Special Rapporteur and other relevant United Nations bodies and agencies, through, inter alia, the provision of information on issues related to a draft international convention and the promotion of awareness of the work of the Ad Hoc Committee, from within existing resources;

4. Underlines the importance of strengthening co-operation and coordination between the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights and the Department of Economic and Social Affairs in order for them to jointly support the work of the Ad Hoc Committee;

5. Invites bodies, organs and entities of the United Nations system, including the funds and programmes, in particular those working in the fields of social and economic development and human rights, within their respective mandates, as well as non-governmental organizations, national disability and human rights institutions and independent experts with an interest in the matter, to continue to make available to the Ad Hoc Committee suggestions about elements to be considered in a draft international convention;

6. Encourages the relevant bodies of the United Nations to continue to promote and support the active participation of civil society, including non-governmental organizations, in the work of the Ad Hoc Committee, in accordance with General Assembly resolutions

56/510 of 23 July 2002 and 57/229 of 18 December 2002, and requests the Secretary-General to disseminate widely to non-governmental organizations all available information on accreditation procedures, modalities and supportive measures for their participation in the work of the Ad Hoc Committee;

7. Invites Governments, civil society and the private sector to contribute to the voluntary fund established by the General Assembly to support the participation of non-governmental organizations and experts from developing countries, in particular from least developed countries, in the work of the Ad Hoc Committee;

8. Stresses the need for additional efforts to ensure reasonable accessibility to facilities and documentation at the United Nations for all persons with disabilities, in accordance with General Assembly decision 56/474 of 23 July 2002;

9. Requests the Secretary-General and the Special Rapporteur to report, as part of their presentations to the Commission for Social Development at its forty-third session, on the implementation of the present resolution.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 20 December [meeting 74], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Third Committee [A/59/503/Add. 2], adopted resolution 59/198 without vote [agenda item 105 (b)].

Ad Hoc Committee on a Comprehensive and Integral International Convention on the Protection and Promotion of the Rights and Dignity of Persons with Disabilities

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 56/168 of 19 December 2001, by which it decided to establish an Ad Hoc Committee, open to the participation of all Member States and observers to the United Nations, to consider proposals for a comprehensive and integral international convention to promote and protect the rights and dignity of persons with disabilities, based on a holistic approach in the work done in the fields of social development, human rights and non-discrimination and taking into account the recommendations of the Commission on Human Rights and the Commission for Social Development,

Recalling also its resolution 58/246 of 23 December 2003, as well as relevant resolutions of the Commission for Social Development and the Commission on Human Rights,

Reaffirming the universality, indivisibility and interdependence of all human rights and fundamental freedoms and the need for persons with disabilities to be guaranteed their full enjoyment without discrimination,

Convinced of the contribution that a convention can make in this regard, and encouraged by the increased support of the international community for such a convention,

Stressing the importance of the active participation of intergovernmental and non-governmental organizations and national human rights institutions in the work of the Ad Hoc Committee, and their valuable contribution to the promotion of the full enjoyment of all human rights and fundamental freedoms by persons with disabilities,

Underlining the importance of the participation of the Special Rapporteur on disability of the Commission for Social Development in the work of the Ad Hoc Committee,

Recognizing the important contributions made thus far to the Ad Hoc Committee by all stakeholders,

1. Welcomes the report of the Ad Hoc Committee on a Comprehensive and Integral International Convention on the Protection and Promotion of the Rights and Dignity of Persons with Disabilities;

2. Requests the Secretary-General to transmit the report of the Ad Hoc Committee to the Commission for Social Development at its forty-third session and to the Commission on Human Rights at its sixty-first session, and further requests both Commissions to continue to contribute to the work of the Ad Hoc Committee;

3. Welcomes with satisfaction the beginning of the negotiations on a draft convention by the Ad Hoc Committee at its third session, as requested by the General Assembly in resolution 58/246, and the progress achieved so far in the negotiation of a draft convention;

4. Invites Member States and observers to continue to participate actively and constructively in the Ad Hoc Committee with a view to the early conclusion of a draft text of a convention, in order to present it to the General Assembly, as a matter of priority, for its adoption;

5. Decides that the Ad Hoc Committee shall hold, within existing resources, prior to the sixtieth session of the General Assembly, two sessions in 2005, of ten working days each, to be held, respectively, from 24 January to 4 February and in July/August;

6. Underlines the importance of further strengthening the cooperation and coordination between the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights and the Department of Economic and Social Affairs of the Secretariat in order to provide technical support to the work of the Ad Hoc Committee, and in this regard invites them to provide, in advance of the meetings of the Ad Hoc Committee, background documentation to assist Member States and observers in the negotiation of a draft convention, and to organize, in close connection and timing with the meetings and venue of the Ad Hoc Committee, meetings of experts and seminars in relation to the draft convention, within existing resources;

7. Requests the Secretary-General to continue to provide the Ad Hoc Committee with the facilities necessary for the performance of its work, and in this context invites the Secretary-General to reallocate resources to the United Nations Programme on Disability so as to provide support to the negotiations on a draft convention;

8. Stresses the need for additional efforts to ensure accessibility at the United Nations, with reasonable accommodation regarding facilities and documentation, for all persons with disabilities, in accordance with General Assembly decision 56/474 of 23 July 2002;

9. Encourages Member States to continue to include in their delegations to the Ad Hoc Committee persons with disabilities and/or other experts in the field;

10. Urges Member States, observers, civil society and the private sector to contribute to the voluntary fund established pursuant to its resolution 57/229 of 18 December 2002 to support the participation of non-governmental organizations and experts from developing countries, in particular least developed countries, in the work of the Ad Hoc Committee;

11. Requests the Secretary-General to disseminate widely to non-governmental organizations all available information on accreditation procedures, modalities and supportive measures for their participation in the work of the Ad Hoc Committee, as well as the criteria for the financial assistance that is available through the voluntary fund;

12. Also requests the Secretary-General to transmit a comprehensive report of the Ad Hoc Committee and to report on the implementation of paragraphs 6, 7, 8 and 11 of the present resolution to the General Assembly at its sixtieth session.

Cultural development

Culture and development

In response to General Assembly resolution 57/249 [YUN 2002, p. 1097], the Secretary-General transmitted in August the report of the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization (UNESCO) Director-General on culture and development [A/59/202], which reviewed progress in the implementation of that resolution. The report discussed UNESCO's programmes for culture and development, aimed at furthering dialogue and action-oriented ideas from all sectors of society to, among other things, clarify the current understanding of cultural diversity and its links to dialogue and development, and deliver better policies for creative partnerships to build upon the relationship between cultural diversity and development. Activities in 2004 included initiation of the elaboration of a convention on the protection of the diversity of cultural content and artistic expression, the draft of which was to be submitted to the UNESCO General Conference in October 2005, and the celebration of the second World Day for Cultural Diversity for Dialogue and Development on 21 May. The report proposed the establishment of functional linkages, with a view to reviewing the role of culture in the development process and providing a more adequate response to the challenges of globalization. The review should cover the various fields of the cultural sector as they related to the components of development policies, such as education, science and technology, communication, health, tourism, environment, land use, fresh water and the sea.

By decision 59/536 of 22 December, the Assembly took note of the Secretary-General's note transmitting the UNESCO Director-General's report.

Culture of peace

Religious and cultural understanding

In August, the Secretary-General, in accordance with resolution 58/128 [YUN 2003, p.1110], transmitted the UNESCO Director-General's report [A/59/201] on the promotion of religious and cultural understanding, harmony and cooperation. The report discussed UNESCO's role in that regard, including the use of education as a means of promoting sustainable tolerance and peace; activities for promoting interreligious dialogue; and implementation of activities in support of the dialogue among civilizations. UNESCO activities to promote religious and cultural understanding and harmony through education were aimed at helping countries to mainstream mutual and intercultural understanding, and integrating a culture of peace values into their national education systems, through teacher training and the production of educational materials. In that regard, it helped to revise textbooks in Israel, Palestine and Iraq to reflect religious and cultural tolerance in schools. UNESCO was also developing guidelines on intercultural education to guide Member States when considering educational policies in multicultural contexts.

As the concept of a dialogue among civilizations assumed greater salience in the face of new and multidimensional threats to global peace and security, the UNESCO General Conference (16 October 2003), in its resolution 47, set out new perspectives on and concrete action for the organization's work in that regard. To translate agreed principles and agreements that inspired a dialogue among civilizations and cultures into concrete activities and action, UNESCO activities were to focus on: education; science and technology, including the role of traditional and local knowledge systems; cultural diversity; and media, information and communication technologies.

The UNESCO programme on interreligious dialogue, launched in 1995, had gained fresh impetus since the events of 11 September 2001 [YUN 2001, p. 60], with many activities undertaken to promote reciprocal knowledge and understanding among cultures and religions, stressing mutual respect and recognition. As part of the geo-strategic coverage of the interreligious dialogue, UNESCO organized a series of regional meetings on conflict resolution, the HIV/AIDS pandemic and the role that religious community leaders might play in easing tensions. Its 2004 meeting (Sydney, Australia, November) focused on religions in peace and conflict. To strengthen religious and cultural understanding, UNESCO established a university twinning network (UNITWIN) of 13 Chairs on comparative studies of religions in centres of academic excellence in almost all continents to build a common programme of research and learning and to facilitate teacher and student exchange. A meeting on intercultural education (Oslo, Norway, 2-5 September) under the UNITWIN umbrella, would identify best practices and the focal points for each region, with the aim of examining the role of education in overcoming stereotyped images and other obstacles to dialogue, and interdisciplinary approaches to overcoming those barriers.

In related developments, the Assembly also had before it the text of the declaration of the participants at the First Congress of Leaders of World and Traditional Religions (Astana, Kazakhstan, 23-24 September 2003) [A/58/390-S/2003/916]. The Fifth Asia-Europe Meeting (ASEM) (Hanoi, Viet Nam, 7-9 October 2004) adopted the ASEM Declaration on Dialogue among Cultures and Civilizations.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 11 November [meeting 52], the General Assembly adopted resolution 59/23 [draft: A/59/L.15/Rev. 1 & Add.1] without vote [agenda item 35].

Promotion of interreligious dialogue

The General Assembly,

Reaffirming the purposes and principles enshrined in the Charter of the United Nations,

Recalling its resolutions 56/6 of 9 November 2001, on dialogue among civilizations, 57/6 of 4 November 2002, concerning the promotion of a culture of peace and non-violence, 57/337 of 3 July 2003, on the prevention of armed conflict, and 58/128 of 19 December 2003, on the promotion of religious and cultural understanding, harmony and cooperation,

Recalling also the conclusions and recommendations contained in the report of the Director-General of the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization, transmitted by the Secretary-General to the General Assembly in accordance with resolution 58/128,

Taking note of the various initiatives and efforts to organize interreligious dialogues, including the First Congress of Leaders of World and Traditional Religions, held in Astana on 23 and 24 September 2003, and the interreligious dialogue initiative adopted by the Fifth Asia-Europe Meeting, held in Hanoi from 7 to 9 October 2004,

Recognizing the commitment of all religions to peace,

1. Affirms that mutual understanding and interreligious dialogue constitute important dimensions of the dialogue among civilizations and of the culture of peace;

2. Takes note with appreciation of the work of the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization on interreligious dialogue, and encourages relevant bodies of the United Nations to work closely with the Organization and coordinate their efforts in this regard;

3. Invites the Secretary-General to bring the promotion of interreligious dialogue to the attention of all Governments and relevant international organizations and to submit a report thereon, including all views received, to the General Assembly at its sixtieth session.

On 15 December [meeting 72], the General Assembly adopted resolution 59/142 [draft: A/59/L.17/Rev.1 & Add.1, as orally revised] without vote [agenda item 35].

Promotion of religious and cultural understanding, harmony and cooperation

The General Assembly,

Reaffirming the purposes and principles enshrined in the Charter of the United Nations and the Universal Declaration of Human Rights, in particular the rights to freedom of thought, conscience and religion,

Underlining the importance of promoting understanding, tolerance and friendship among human beings in all their diversity of religion, belief, culture and language, and recalling that all States have pledged themselves under the Charter to promote and encourage universal respect for and observance of human rights and fundamental freedoms for all, without distinction as to race, sex, language or religion,

Affirming that interreligious dialogue is an integral part of the efforts to translate shared values, as reflected in the United Nations Millennium Declaration, into actions, in particular the efforts to promote a culture of peace and dialogue among civilizations,

Recalling its resolution 58/128 of 19 December 2003 as well as its resolution 57/6 of 4 November 2002, in which it invited Member States to expand their activities promoting a culture of peace and non-violence at the national, regional and international levels, and other relevant resolutions,

Taking note of different initiatives aimed at promoting religious and cultural understanding, harmony and cooperation, and noting that at its tenth session, held at Putrajaya, Malaysia, from 16 to 18 October 2003, the Islamic Summit Conference endorsed the concept of "enlightened moderation", which contained the principles of enhancing human welfare, freedom and progress everywhere, of forging harmony and understanding among all peoples and of seeking the peaceful resolution of conflicts and disputes,

Recalling with satisfaction the proclamation of the Global Agenda for Dialogue among Civilizations, bearing in mind the valuable contribution that dialogue among civilizations can make to an improved awareness and understanding of the common values shared by all humankind,

Recalling the Universal Declaration on Cultural Diversity of the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization and the principles contained therein,

Emphasizing the need, at all levels of society and among nations, for strengthening freedom, justice, democracy, tolerance, solidarity, cooperation, pluralism, respect for diversity of culture and religion or belief, dialogue and understanding, which are important elements for peace, and convinced that the guiding principles of democratic society need to be actively promoted by the international community,

Reaffirming that freedom of expression, media pluralism, multilingualism, equal access to art and to scientific and technological knowledge, including in digital form, and the possibility for all cultures to have access to the means of expression and dissemination are the guarantees of cultural diversity, and that in ensuring the free flow of ideas by word and image, care should be exercised that all cultures can express themselves and make themselves known,

Recognizing all efforts made by the United Nations system and other international and regional organizations to promote understanding, tolerance and friendship among human beings in all their diversity of culture, religion, belief and language, including the initiative of the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization to proclaim 2006 the International Year of Global Consciousness and the Ethics of Dialogue among Peoples,

Alarmed that serious instances of intolerance and discrimination on the grounds of religion or belief, including acts of violence, intimidation and coercion motivated by religious intolerance, are on the increase in many parts of the world and threaten the enjoyment of human rights and fundamental freedoms,

Considering that tolerance for cultural, ethnic, and religious and linguistic diversities, as well as dialogue among and within civilizations, is essential for peace, understanding and friendship among individuals and people of different cultures and nations of the world, while manifestations of cultural prejudice, intolerance and xenophobia towards different cultures and religions generate hatred and violence among peoples and nations throughout the world,

Emphasizing that combating hatred, prejudice, intolerance and stereotyping on the basis of religion or culture represents a significant global challenge that requires further action,

1. Takes note of the report transmitted by the Secretary-General in accordance with resolution 58/128;

2. Acknowledges that respect for the diversity of religions and cultures, tolerance, dialogue and cooperation in a climate of mutual trust and understanding can contribute to the combating of ideologies and practices based on discrimination, intolerance and hatred and help to reinforce world peace, social justice and friendship among peoples;

3. Reaffirms the solemn commitment of all States to fulfil their obligations to promote universal respect for, and observance and protection of, all human rights and fundamental freedoms for all in accordance with the Charter of the United Nations, other instruments relating to human rights, and international law; the universal nature of these rights and freedoms is beyond question;

4. Also reaffirms the importance for all peoples and nations to hold, develop and preserve their cultural heritage and traditions in a national and international atmosphere of peace, tolerance and mutual respect;

5. Recognizes that respect for religious and cultural diversity in an increasingly globalizing world contributes to international cooperation, promotes enhanced dialogue among religions, cultures and civilizations, and helps to create an environment conducive to the exchange of human experience;

6. Also recognizes that all cultures and civilizations share a common set of universal values;

7. Further recognizes that, while the significance of national and regional particularities and various historical, cultural and religious backgrounds must be borne in mind, it is the duty of States, regardless of their political, economic and cultural systems, to promote and protect all human rights and fundamental freedoms;

8. Reaffirms that the promotion and protection of the rights of persons belonging to national or ethnic, religious and linguistic minorities contribute to political and social stability and peace and enrich the cultural diversity and heritage of society as a whole in the States in which such persons live, and urges States to ensure that their political and legal systems reflect the multicultural diversity within their societies and, where necessary, to improve democratic and political institutions, organizations and practices so that they are more fully participatory and avoid the marginalization and exclusion of, and discrimination against, specific sectors of society;

9. Encourages Governments to promote, including through education, as well as the development of progressive curricula and text books, understanding, tolerance and friendship among human beings in all their diversity of religion, belief, culture and language, which will address the cultural, social, economic, political and religious sources of intolerance, and to apply a gender perspective while doing so, in order to promote understanding, tolerance, peace and friendly relations among nations and all racial and religious groups, recognizing that education at all levels is one of the principal means to build a culture of peace;

10. Calls upon all States to exert their utmost efforts to ensure that religious and cultural sites are fully respected and protected in compliance with their international obligations and in accordance with their national legislation, and to adopt adequate measures aimed at preventing acts or threats of damage to and destruction of these sites;

11. Urges States, in compliance with their international obligations, to take all necessary action to combat incitement to or acts of violence, intimidation and coercion motivated by hatred and intolerance based on culture, religion or belief, which may cause discord and disharmony within and among societies;

12. Also urges States to take effective measures to prevent and eliminate discrimination on the grounds of religion or belief in the recognition, exercise and enjoyment of human rights and fundamental freedoms in all fields of civil, economic, political, social and cultural life and to make all efforts to enact or rescind legislation, where necessary, to prohibit any such discrimination, and to take all appropriate measures to combat intolerance on the grounds of religion or beliefs;

13. Further urges States to ensure that, in the course of their official duties, members of law enforcement bodies and the military, civil servants, educators and other public officials respect different religions and beliefs and do not discriminate against persons professing other religions or beliefs, and that any necessary and appropriate education or training is provided;

14. Welcomes the efforts of States, relevant entities of the United Nations system and other intergovernmental organizations, civil society, including religion-based and other non-governmental organizations, and the media in developing a culture of peace, and encourages them to continue such efforts, including the promotion of interreligious and intercultural interaction within and among societies through, inter alia, congresses, conferences, seminars, workshops, research work and related processes;

15. Requests the Secretary-General to ensure the widest dissemination of the relevant United Nations material related to the present resolution in as many different languages as possible through the United Nations system, including the United Nations information centres, within available resources;

16. Also requests the Secretary-General, in the context of his report to the General Assembly at its sixtieth session under the item entitled "Culture of peace", to include information on the implementation of the present resolution.

Sport for development and peace

International Year of Sport and Physical Education (2005)

In response to its resolution 58/5 [YUN 2003, p. 1111], in which the General Assembly proclaimed 2005 as the International Year of Sport and Physical Education, the Secretary-General reported in August 2004 [A/59/268] on activities planned for the observance of the Year and on the status of the drafting of an international convention against doping in sport.

The objectives of the International Year were: to broaden the perception of sport from "elite sport" to "sport for all"; to underline the need for physical education as part of a balanced education; to create interest, and to facilitate partnerships in human development within the sports industry, sport federations, sports media and among athletes; to encourage initiatives where sport could assist in creating a platform for intercultural, post-conflict, peace-building dialogue; and to integrate sport into development activities by disseminating information about the value of sport and physical education.

To assist in the preparations for the International Year, the small office establishment in Geneva, led by the Special Adviser to the Secretary-General on Sport for Development and Peace, worked in cooperation with the United Nations Fund for International Partnerships (UNFIP) and UNESCO, the lead agency for the Year. Other activities included the convening of an inter-agency meeting on sport (Geneva, July) to discuss coordination, cooperation and consistency to maximize the impact of the celebrations for the International Year. The meeting drew up a list of complementary activities and projects to be implemented on a voluntary basis by the UN system. UNESCO organized the Fourth International Conference of Ministers and Senior Officials Responsible for Physical Education and Sport (Athens, Greece, 6-8 December) to discuss development-related themes of sport. During the High-level segment of the Economic and Social Council, UNFIP and the United Nations Children's Fund co-hosted a ministerial round table entitled "Common ground: sport as an innovative tool for development and peace". The international sports NGO Right to Play organized a round table (Athens, Greece, August) entitled "Harnessing the power of sport for development and peace".

A public information strategy was being formulated by UN system public information units and the Department of Public Information of the Secretariat, a logo for the Year had been approved by the Publications Board, and a UN stamp designed, in conjunction with the International Olympic Committee and the Swiss Postal services. Several UN journals and other development-related publications on international cooperation and peace-building issues would be used for promoting the Year.

Concerning the elaboration of an international anti-doping convention in all sporting activities, a preliminary draft prepared as a result of three ad hoc meetings of experts and two sessions of the intergovernmental meeting was sent to Member States for comment in mid-July. The Fourth International Conference of Ministers and Senior Officials responsible for Physical Education and Sport would consider inputs to the draft and agree on pending issues.

A later addendum [A/59/268/Add.1] contained information provided by UN agencies, funds and programmes on their plans to integrate elements of sport and physical education into their core activities.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 27 October [meeting 42], the General Assembly adopted resolution 59/10 [draft: A/59/L.9 & Add 1] without vote [agenda item 47].

Sport as a means to promote education, health, development and peace

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 58/5 of 3 November 2003 and its decision to proclaim 2005 the International Year for Sport and Physical Education, as a means to promote education, health, development and peace,

Considering the role of sport and physical education as a means to promote education, health, development and peace,

Acknowledging the major role of the United Nations, its funds and programmes and the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization and other specialized agencies, in promoting human development through sport and physical education, through its country programmes,

Noting that sport and physical education in many countries face increasing marginalization within education systems even though they are a major tool not only for health and physical development but also for acquiring values necessary for social cohesion and intercultural dialogue,

Recalling the Convention on the Rights of the Child and the outcome document of the special session of the General Assembly on children, entitled "A world fit for children", stressing that education shall be directed to the development of children's personality, talents and mental and physical abilities to their fullest potential,

Acknowledging with concern the dangers faced by sportsmen and sportswomen, in particular young athletes, including child labour, violence, doping, early specialization, over-training and exploitative forms of commercialization, as well as less visible threats and deprivations, such as the premature severance of family bonds and the loss of sporting, social and cultural ties,

Recognizing the need for greater coordination of efforts at the international level to facilitate a more effective fight against doping, and noting in this regard the Anti-Doping Convention established by the Council of Europe, the Copenhagen Declaration on Anti-doping in Sport, adopted during the World Conference on Doping in Sport, held from 3 to 5 March 2003, and any other relevant international instrument,

1. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General entitled "Sport for peace and development: International Year of Sport and Physical Education";

2. Decides to launch, on 5 November 2004, the International Year for Sport and Physical Education, as a means to promote education, health, development and peace;

3. Invites Governments, the United Nations, its funds and programmes, the specialized agencies, where appropriate, and sport-related institutions to organize events to underline their commitment and to seek the assistance of sports personalities in this regard;

4. Also invites Governments, the United Nations, its funds and programmes, the specialized agencies, where appropriate, and sport-related institutions:

(a) To promote the role of sport and physical education for all when furthering their development programmes and policies, to advance health awareness, the spirit of achievement and cultural bridging and to entrench collective values;

(b) To include sport and physical education as a tool to contribute towards achieving the internationally agreed development goals, including those contained in the United Nations Millennium Declaration and the broader aims of development and peace;

(c) To work collectively so that sport and physical education can present opportunities for solidarity and cooperation in order to promote a culture of peace and social and gender equality and to advocate dialogue and harmony;

(d) To recognize the contribution of sport and physical education towards economic and social development and to encourage the building and restoration of sports infrastructures;

(e) To further promote sport and physical education, on the basis of locally assessed needs, as a tool for health, education, social and cultural development and environmental sustainability;

(f) To strengthen cooperation and partnership between all actors, including family, school, clubs/leagues, local communities, youth sports associations and decision makers as well as the public and private sectors, in order to ensure complementarities and to make sport and physical education available to everyone;

(g) To ensure that young talents can develop their athletic potential without any threat to their safety and physical and moral integrity;

5. Encourages Governments, international sports bodies and sport-related organizations to elaborate and implement partnership initiatives and development projects compatible with the education provided at all levels of schooling to help to achieve the Millennium Development Goals;

6. Invites Governments and international sports bodies to assist developing countries, in particular the least developed countries and small island developing States, in their capacity-building efforts in sport and physical education;

7. Encourages the United Nations to develop strategic partnerships with the range of stakeholders involved in sport, including sports organizations, sports associations and the private sector, to assist in the implementation of sport for development programmes;

8. Encourages Governments and the United Nations system to seek new and innovative ways to use sport for communication and social mobilization, particularly at the national, regional and local levels, engaging civil society through active participation and ensuring that target audiences are reached;

9. Acknowledges that the Olympic Games contribute to understanding between peoples and civilizations, and welcomes in this regard the contribution of the 2004 Olympic Games organized in Athens;

10. Stresses the need for all parties to cooperate closely with international sports bodies to elaborate a "code of good practice";

11. Invites Governments to accelerate the elaboration of an international anti-doping convention in all sports activities, and requests the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization, in cooperation with other relevant international and regional organizations, to coordinate the elaboration of such a convention;

12. Requests the Secretary-General to report to the General Assembly at its sixtieth session on the implementation of the present resolution and on the events organized at the national, regional and international levels to celebrate the year 2005, under the item entitled "International Year of Sport and Physical Education".

Olympic Truce and ideal

On 4 August, just prior to the Games of the XXVIII Olympiad held in Athens, Greece (13-29 August), the President of the General Assembly made a solemn appeal [A/58/863] to Member States to demonstrate their commitment to peace in the world by observing the Olympic Truce during the Games, as the Assembly had earlier urged in the unanimously co-sponsored text of resolution 58/6 [YUN 2003, p. 1112].

By decision 58/570 of 5 August, the Assembly took note of the solemn appeal of its President in connection with the observance of the Olympic Truce.

Cultural property

Prevention of crimes against cultural heritage

The Secretary-General, in his March report [E/CN.15/2004/10 & Add. 1] on prevention of crimes that infringed on the cultural heritage of peoples in the form of movable property, submitted in response to Economic and Social Council resolution 2003/29 [YUN 2003, p. 1115], provided an analysis of the comments received from 14 Governments and the European Commission on the implementation of resolution 2003/39. The report also gave an overview of multilateral legal and institutional frameworks for the protection of cultural property at the international and regional levels, and described the role of organized criminal groups in trafficking in stolen cultural property.

The report stated that international trade in looted, stolen or smuggled art was estimated at $4.5 billion per year. Trafficking in cultural property was not only a lucrative business for traders but a source of additional income for populations living in poverty. The illicit market was populated by a mixture of sophisticated criminal organizations, individual thieves, small-time dealers and unscrupulous collectors. Only 5 per cent of stolen art was ever recovered. The law enforcement community had recognized that illicit trade in cultural objects was a major category of international crime, and Interpol was working as a clearing house for information and circulated information about cultural objects reported to member police forces as stolen or as found in suspicious circumstances. A number of other organizations, including the International Council of Museums, also collected and disseminated information about stolen cultural objects. The entry into force of the United Nations Convention against Transnational Organized Crime in 2003 [YUN 2003, p. 1125] was expected to assist in dealing with various manifestations of transnational crimes, including trafficking in movable cultural property. The International Conference celebrating the fiftieth anniversary of the 1954 Hague Convention for the Protection of Cultural Property in the Event of Conflict (Cairo, Egypt, 14-16 February) adopted the Cairo Declaration on the Protection of Cultural Property, which urged the Commission on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice to accord special attention to the protection of cultural property.

ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL ACTION

On 21 July [meeting 47], the Economic and Social Council, on the recommendation of the Commission for Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice [E/2004/30], adopted resolution 2004/34 without vote [agenda item 14 (c)].

Protection against trafficking in cultural property

The Economic and Social Council,

Emphasizing the importance for States of protecting and preserving their cultural heritage in accordance with the Convention on the Means of Prohibiting and Preventing the Illicit Import, Export and Transfer of Ownership of Cultural Property, adopted by the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization on 14 November 1970, and other relevant instruments such as the 1995 Unidroit Convention on Stolen or Illegally Exported Cultural Objects and the 1954 Convention for the Protection of Cultural Property in the Event of Armed Conflict and its two Protocols,

Reaffirming its resolution 2003/29 of 22 July 2003, entitled "Prevention of crimes that infringe on the cultural heritage of peoples in the form of movable property",

Recalling General Assembly resolution 58/17 of 3 December 2003, entitled "Return or restitution of cultural property to the countries of origin",

Recalling also the model treaty for the prevention of crimes that infringe on the cultural heritage of peoples in the form of movable property, adopted by the Eighth United Nations Congress on the Prevention of Crime and the Treatment of Offenders, which was welcomed by the General Assembly in its resolution 45/121 of 14 December 1990,

Noting with appreciation the Cairo Declaration on the Protection of Cultural Property, made at the international conference celebrating the fiftieth anniversary of the 1954 Convention for the Protection of Cultural Property in the Event of Armed Conflict, held in Cairo from 14 to 16 February 2004, as well as its relevant recommendations,

Alarmed that organized criminal groups are involved in trafficking in stolen cultural property and that the international trade in looted, stolen or smuggled cultural property is estimated at several billion United States dollars per year,

Stressing that the entry into force of the United Nations Convention against Transnational Organized Crime is expected to create a new impetus in international cooperation to counter and curb transnational organized crime, which will in turn lead to innovative and broader approaches to dealing with the various manifestations of such crime, including trafficking in movable cultural property,

Expressing the need to enhance or to establish, as appropriate, standards for the restitution and return of movable property forming part of the cultural heritage of peoples after it has been stolen or trafficked and for its protection and preservation,

1. Takes note with appreciation of the report of the Secretary-General on the prevention of crimes that infringe on the cultural heritage of peoples in the form of movable property;

2. Welcomes international, regional and national initiatives for the protection of cultural property, in particular the work of the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization and its Intergovernmental Committee for Promoting the Return of Cultural Property to its Countries of Origin or its Restitution in Case of Illicit Appropriation;

3. Requests the Secretary-General to direct the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime, in close cooperation with the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization and subject to the availability of extrabudgetary resources, to convene an expert group meeting to submit relevant recommendations to the Commission on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice at its fifteenth session on protection against trafficking in cultural property, including ways of making more effective the model treaty for the prevention of crimes that infringe on the cultural heritage of peoples in the form of movable property;

4. Encourages Member States asserting state ownership of cultural property to consider means of issuing statements of such ownership with a view to facilitating the enforcement of property claims in other States;

5. Urges Member States to continue to strengthen international cooperation and mutual assistance in the prevention and prosecution of crime against movable property that forms part of the cultural heritage of peoples, as well as to ratify and implement the Convention on the Means of Prohibiting and Preventing the Illicit Import, Export and Transfer of Ownership of Cultural Property and the other relevant conventions;

6. Requests the Secretary-General to report to the Commission on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice at its fifteenth session on the implementation of the present resolution.

Crime prevention and criminal justice

Commission on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice

The Commission on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice, at its thirteenth session (Vienna, 11-20 May) [E/2004/30], recommended to the Economic and Social Council 7 draft resolutions for adoption by the General Assembly and 12 draft resolutions and 2 draft decisions for adoption by the Council. The draft resolutions related to preparations for the Eleventh United Nations Congress on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice, participation of least developed countries in the work of the Commission and its conferences of States parties, technical assistance, kidnapping, corruption, trafficking in human organs, transnational organized crime, a draft agreement on disposal of confiscated proceeds of crime, strengthening the rule of law, punishment of fraud and misuse and falsification of identity, child victims and witnesses of crime, UN standards and norms, money-laundering, the Second World Summit of Attorneys General and General Prosecutors, Chief Prosecutors and Ministers of Justice, urban crime, technical assistance and technical cooperation, and trafficking in cultural property (see headings below).

A discussion was held on the rule of law and development: the contribution of operational activities in crime prevention and criminal justice, on the basis of a note submitted by the Secretary-General. The Commission also considered strategic management and programme questions and the provisional agenda for its 2005 session.

On 21 July, the Council took note of the Commission's report on its thirteenth session, approved the provisional agenda and documentation for the fourteenth (2005) session, and decided that the prominent themes for the 2005 session should be conclusions and recommendations of the Eleventh United Nations Congress on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice (decision 2004/242). The Council also endorsed the Commission's appointment of two new members to the Board of Trustees of the United Nations Interregional Crime and Justice Research Institute (decision 2004/243).

Participation in Commission sessions and those of conferences of States parties

On 21 July [meeting 47], the Economic and Social Council, on the recommendation of the Commission on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice [E/2004/30], adopted resolution 2004/18 without vote [agenda item 14 (c)].

Assistance to least developed countries to ensure their participation in the sessions of the Commission on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice and the sessions of conferences of States parties

The Economic and Social Council

Recommends to the General Assembly the adoption of the following draft resolution:
[For text, see General Assembly resolution 59/152, below.]

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 20 December [meeting 74], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Third Committee [A/59/494], adopted resolution 59/152 [draft: A/C.3/59/L.4] without vote [agenda item 96].

Assistance to least developed countries to ensure their participation in the sessions of the Commission on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice and the sessions of conferences of States parties

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 55/2 of 8 September 2000, by which it adopted the United Nations Millennium Declaration, and in particular paragraph 15 of the Millennium Declaration, in which the Heads of State and Government undertook to address the special needs of the least developed countries,

Recalling also its resolution 58/228 of 23 December 2003, in particular paragraph 9 thereof, in which it requested the Secretary-General to take appropriate measures, within existing resources and with the full participation of the regional commissions and relevant United Nations bodies, to support the participation of the least developed countries in international meetings, as well as in their preparation and consultation processes,

Stressing the need for the effective and timely ratification of the United Nations conventions and protocols relating to transnational organized crime, corruption and terrorism and their subsequent implementation,

Recognizing the critical significance of those instruments, which provide a legal framework for strengthening international cooperation, based on mutual commitments by the least developed countries and their development partners to undertake specific action to ensure the full implementation of the provisions of the instruments,

Welcoming the contributions already made by multi-lateral and bilateral donors to ensure the participation of representatives of least developed countries in the negotiation of the United Nations Convention against Transnational Organized Crime and the Protocols thereto, as well as the United Nations Convention against Corruption,

Emphasizing the importance of the effective participation of all relevant stakeholders from the least developed countries, developing countries and countries with economies in transition in the sessions of the Commission on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice and in the sessions of the Conference of the Parties to the United Nations Convention against Transnational Organized Crime and the Conference of the States Parties to the United Nations Convention against Corruption,

1. Calls upon Member States, international organizations and funding institutions to redouble their efforts to increase their voluntary contributions to assist the Secretary-General in covering the cost of travel and daily subsistence allowance for the participation of representatives of least developed countries in the sessions of the Commission on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice and in the sessions of the Conference of the Parties to the United Nations Convention against Transnational Organized Crime and the Conference of the States Parties to the United Nations Convention against Corruption, and requests the Executive Director of the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime to intensify efforts to ensure the increased participation of representatives of least developed countries in those meetings;

2. Requests the Secretary-General to report to the Commission on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice at its fourteenth session on the implementation of the present resolution.

Preparations for Eleventh Crime Congress

The Commission on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice considered a March report [E/CN.15/2004/11] by the Secretary-General on preparations for the Eleventh United Nations Congress on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice, scheduled for 2005 in Thailand. The report presented the views of States, specialized agencies, UN programmes, intergovernmental organizations and NGOs on agenda items and workshop topics planned for the Congress and on documentation and public information activities.

The Commission also had before it a discussion guide [A/CONF.203/PM.1 & CORR.1], prepared in response to Assembly resolution 58/138 [YUN 2003, p. 1117], for stimulating discussions on the substantive items of the Congress with a view to identifying the main policy options for consideration and action by the Congress, as well as discussion of the topics covered by the workshops to be conducted within the framework of the Congress.

In July [A/59/123-E/2004/90], the Secretary-General updated the information contained in his March report and included the recommendations from regional preparatory meetings held in Africa (Addis Ababa, Ethiopia, 1-3 March); Asia and the Pacific (Bangkok, Thailand, 29-31 March); Latin America and the Caribbean (San Jose, Costa Rica, 19-21 April); and Western Asia (Beirut, Lebanon, 28-30 April).

On 20 December, the General Assembly took note of the Secretary-General's report (decision 59/523).

ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL ACTION

On 21 July, [meeting 47], the Economic and Social Council, on the recommendation of the Commission for Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice [E/2004/30], adopted resolution 2004/17 without vote [item 14(c)].

Preparations for the Eleventh United Nations Congress on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice

Recommends to the General Assembly the adoption of the following draft resolution:

[For text, see General Assembly resolution 59/151 below.]

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 20 December [meeting 74], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Third (Social, Humanitarian and Cultural) Committee [A/59/494], adopted resolution 59/151 without vote [agenda item 96].

Preparations for the Eleventh United Nations Congress on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 56/119 of 19 December 2001 on the role, function, periodicity and duration of the United Nations congresses on the prevention of crime and the treatment of offenders, in which it stipulated the guidelines in accordance with which, beginning in 2005, the congresses, pursuant to paragraphs 29 and 30 of the statement of principles and programme of action of the United Nations Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice Programme, should be held,

Recalling also its resolution 57/170 of 18 December 2002 on the follow-up to the plans of action for the implementation of the Vienna Declaration on Crime and Justice: Meeting the Challenges of the Twenty-first Century,

Recalling further its resolution 57/171 of 18 December 2002, in which it decided that the main theme of the Eleventh United Nations Congress on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice should be "Synergies and responses: strategic alliances in crime prevention and criminal justice",

Recalling its resolution 58/138 of 22 December 2003, in which it requested the Commission on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice to accord sufficient time at its thirteenth session to reviewing the progress made in the preparations for the Eleventh Congress, to finalize in good time all the necessary organizational and substantive arrangements and to make its final recommendations, through the Economic and Social Council, to the General Assembly,

Recognizing the significant contributions of the congresses in promoting the exchange of experience in research, law and policy development and the identification of emerging trends and issues in crime prevention and criminal justice among States, intergovernmental and non-governmental organizations and individual experts representing various professions and disciplines,

Recognizing also the efforts already made by the Government of Thailand to prepare for the hosting of the Eleventh Congress in Bangkok from 18 to 25 April 2005,

Stressing the importance of undertaking all the preparatory activities for the Eleventh Congress in a timely and concerted manner,

1. Takes note with appreciation of the report of the Secretary-General;

2. Also takes note with appreciation of the discussion guide prepared by the Secretary-General, in cooperation with the institutes of the United Nations Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice Programme network, for the regional preparatory meetings for the Eleventh United Nations Congress on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice;

3. Acknowledges the relevance of the regional preparatory meetings, which have examined the substantive items of the agenda and the workshop topics of the Eleventh Congress and made action-oriented recommendations to serve as a basis for the draft declaration to be adopted by the Eleventh Congress;

4. Requests the Commission on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice to begin preparation of a draft declaration at intersessional meetings to be held following its thirteenth session, for submission to the Eleventh Congress at least one month prior to its commencement, taking into account the recommendations of the regional preparatory meetings;

5. Approves the draft programme of work for the Eleventh Congress and the documentation relating thereto;

6. Reiterates its decision, contained in its resolution 58/138, that the high-level segment of the Eleventh Congress shall be held during the last three days of the Congress in order to allow Heads of State or Government or government ministers to focus on the main substantive agenda items of the Congress;

7. Emphasizes the importance of the workshops to be held during the Eleventh Congress, and invites Member States, intergovernmental and non-governmental organizations and other relevant entities to provide financial, organizational and technical support to the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime and to the institutes of the United Nations Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice Programme network for the preparations for the workshops, including the preparation and circulation of relevant background material;

8. Invites donor countries to cooperate with developing countries to ensure their full participation in the workshops, and encourages States, other entities concerned and the Secretary-General to work together in order to ensure that the workshops focus on the respective issues and achieve practical results, leading to technical cooperation ideas, projects and documents related to enhancing bilateral and multilateral efforts in technical assistance activities in crime prevention and criminal justice;

9. Reiterates its invitation to Governments and relevant intergovernmental and non-governmental organizations to inform the Eleventh Congress about their activities aimed at putting into practice the plans of action for the implementation of the Vienna Declaration on Crime and Justice: Meeting the Challenges of the Twenty-first Century, with a view to providing guidance in the formulation of legislation, policies and programmes in the field of crime prevention and criminal justice at the national and international levels, and, to that end, requests the Secretary-General to compile that information and to prepare a report on the subject to be submitted to the Eleventh Congress for consideration;

10. Reiterates its request to the Secretary-General to make available the resources necessary to ensure the participation of the least developed countries in the Eleventh Congress, in accordance with past practice;

11. Encourages Governments to make preparations for the Eleventh Congress at an early stage by all appropriate means, including, where appropriate, the establishment of national preparatory committees, with a view to contributing to a focused and productive discussion on the topics and to participating actively in the organization and conduct of the workshops, the submission of national position papers on the various substantive items of the agenda and the encouragement of contributions from the academic community and relevant scientific institutions;

12. Reiterates its invitation to Member States to be represented at the Eleventh Congress at the highest possible level, for example by Heads of State or Government or government ministers and attorneys general, and to participate actively in the high-level segment;

13. Requests the Secretary-General to facilitate the organization of ancillary meetings of non-governmental and professional organizations participating in the Eleventh Congress, in accordance with past practice, as well as meetings of professional and geographical interest groups, and to take appropriate measures to encourage the participation of the academic and research community in the Congress;

14. Encourages the relevant specialized agencies and programmes of the United Nations system and inter-governmental and non-governmental organizations, as well as other professional organizations, to co-operate with the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime in the preparations for the Eleventh Congress;

15. Requests the Secretary-General to ensure, in collaboration with Member States, a wide and effective programme of public information relating to the preparations for the Eleventh Congress, to the Congress itself and to the follow-up to and implementation of its recommendations;

16. Welcomes the appointment, by the Secretary-General, of a Secretary-General and an Executive Secretary of the Eleventh Congress, to perform their functions under the rules of procedure for United Nations congresses on crime prevention and criminal justice;

17. Requests the Secretary-General to prepare an overview of the state of crime and criminal justice worldwide for presentation at the Eleventh Congress, in accordance with past practice;

18. Calls upon the Eleventh Congress to formulate concrete proposals for further follow-up and action, paying particular attention to practical arrangements relating to the effective implementation of the international legal instruments pertaining to transnational organized crime, terrorism and corruption and technical assistance activities relating thereto;

19. Requests the Commission on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice at its fourteenth session to give high priority to considering the conclusions and recommendations of the Eleventh Congress, with a view to recommending, through the Economic and Social Council, appropriate follow-up by the General Assembly at its sixtieth session;

20. Requests the Secretary-General to ensure proper follow-up to the present resolution and to report thereon, through the Commission on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice, to the General Assembly at its sixtieth session.

Crime prevention programme

In February, the Commission on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice [E/CN.15/2004/2] considered the report of the Executive Director of the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime (UNODC) entitled "Development, security and justice for all", examining UNODC's strategy in 2003 to counter the problems of terrorism, crime, corruption, drug abuse and trafficking, which constituted threats to peace and stability. It highlighted UNODC's work in the areas of peace and security, poverty eradication, and the rule of law and good governance. UNODC assisted States to comply with international conventions on international drug control, transnational organized crime and corruption through the provision of legal assistance and law enforcement support in the context of its Global Programme against Organized Crime and Global Programme against Money Laundering (see p. 1117). Emphasis was placed on the special needs of Africa in combating organized crime, corruption, terrorism and the spread of HIV/AIDS, which were impediments to the region's sustainable development. UNODC helped African Governments to strengthen judicial integrity and develop multisectoral programmes to tackle those issues. It also helped to improve seaport and airport law enforcement capabilities in Eastern and Southern Africa and in the adoption and implementation of an action plan to counter trafficking in human beings.

UNODC advised Governments in enhancing their capacities to administer criminal law and reduce crime by promoting the treatment of offenders, juvenile justice reform, prison improvement, victim support and urban security.

Contributions and pledges to the United Nations Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice Fund from January 2003 to June 2004 totalled $13,626,894, a 43 per cent increase over the previous year. Some 95 per cent of contributions were earmarked for specific projects.

The Commission also considered an April note by the Secretary-General entitled "Thematic discussion on the rule of law and development: the contribution of operational activities in crime prevention and criminal justice" [E/CN.15/2004/3]. The report stated that development agencies had increasingly recognized the importance of fair and effective criminal justice systems, but noted that significant achievements in development had often been undermined by lawlessness and criminal behaviour. There was a close relationship between institutional failure in the justice sector and the extent of organized crime in many countries. Recognition of that relationship was not always matched by sufficient funding for justice sector projects. The report discussed international cooperation in criminal justice to strengthen the rule of law, including combating corruption and new types of crime, and strengthening the rule of law in post-conflict reconstruction, including reform of criminal justice institutions, with emphasis on technical assistance.

ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL ACTION

On 21 July [meeting 47], the Economic and Social Council, on the recommendation of the Commission on Crime and Criminal Justice [E/2004/30], adopted resolution 2004/32 without vote [agenda item 14 (c)].

Implementation of technical assistance projects in Africa by the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime

The Economic and Social Council,

Recalling the United Nations Millennium Declaration, in which Heads of State and Government pledged to support the consolidation of democracy in Africa and to assist Africans in their struggle for lasting peace, poverty eradication and sustainable development, thereby bringing Africa into the mainstream of the world economy,

Concerned at the fact that Africa has in recent years become a significant zone of transit, trafficking and abuse of drugs and trafficking in firearms and human beings, and bearing in mind that a number of African countries are facing post-conflict instability,

Welcoming the report of the Executive Director of the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime entitled "Development, security and justice for all", in which it was underlined that drug abuse and trafficking, organized crime, corruption, terrorism and the spread of HIV/AIDS had all impeded sustainable development in Africa,

Mindful of the difficulties encountered by the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime in the implementation of its projects in Africa,

1. Reaffirms that recent developments in Africa call for particular attention, especially in the fight against drugs and crime;

2. Expresses its appreciation to donor countries that have supported projects related to drug and crime issues on the African continent through their voluntary contributions to the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime and invites them to continue their efforts, and invites other potential donor countries to provide similar support;

3. Welcomes the efforts of the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime to improve the implementation of its projects in Africa, both at headquarters and in the field, and encourages the Office to continue those efforts;

4. Requests the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime to produce a concept paper to analyse the current situation with respect to major drug and crime issues affecting the African continent and to propose policy directives, strategies and priority focus to gain support for assistance to Africa;

5. Also requests the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime, in coordination with the African Union and interested Member States and subject to the availability of extrabudgetary resources, to promote an exchange of views, based on the results of the concept paper, by organizing an appropriate special event among interested Member States, relevant agencies and institutes providing technical assistance to Africa, as well as those promoting South-South cooperation, in order:

(a) To discuss ways of reducing impediments to economic growth and sustainable development caused by widespread criminality, such as drug trafficking, organized crime and corruption;

(b) To ensure that appropriate responses to drug and crime issues are incorporated as core elements within bilateral and multilateral development assistance policies in the context of the New Partnership for Africa's Development and other relevant initiatives;

(c) To explore ways of maximizing existing resources, including official development assistance, that could lead to improvements in the tackling of drug and crime issues and to the strengthening of criminal justice institutions;

6. Requests Member States in the African region where projects are being implemented to mobilize national stakeholders and to make every effort to facilitate the implementation of such projects;

7. Invites Member States to promote synergies between technical assistance provided by the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime and bilateral and regional cooperation activities in the African region, in particular in the context of the New Partnership for Africa's Development;

8. Requests the Secretary-General to report to the Commission on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice at its fourteenth session on the implementation of the present resolution.

Also on 21 July [meeting 47], the Economic and Social Council, on the recommendation of the Commission on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice [E/2004/30], adopted resolution 2004/25 without vote [agenda item 14 (c)].

The rule of law and development: strengthening the rule of law and the reform of criminal justice institutions, with emphasis on technical assistance, including in post-conflict reconstruction

The Economic and Social Council,

Bearing in mind that one of the fundamental purposes of the United Nations, as enshrined in the Preamble to the Charter of the United Nations, is to establish conditions under which justice and respect for the obligations arising from treaties and other sources of international law can be maintained,

Recalling the ministerial-level discussion of the Security Council held in September 2003, during which the Council invited all Member States to contribute to enhancing the role of the United Nations in establishing justice and the rule of law in post-conflict societies,

Fully aware that the international community is confronted with the problem of conflict and war in certain parts of the world, especially in Africa, Asia and Latin America and the Caribbean,

Concerned about the activities of organized criminal groups engaged in trafficking in human beings, drug trafficking and money-laundering at the national and international levels, and in particular about the destabilizing impact of those activities on national security and peacekeeping and reconstruction efforts,

Recalling the United Nations Millennium Declaration, in which heads of State and Government expressed their resolve to strengthen respect for the rule of law in international as in national affairs, and stated that they would spare no effort to strengthen respect for all internationally recognized human rights and fundamental freedoms, including the right to development, and would support the consolidation of democracy in Africa and assist Africans in their struggle for lasting peace, poverty eradication and sustainable development, thereby bringing Africa into the mainstream of the world economy,

Bearing in mind that, in the Vienna Declaration on Crime and Justice: Meeting the Challenges of the Twenty-first Century, Member States emphasized that it was the responsibility of each State to establish and maintain a fair, responsible, ethical and efficient criminal justice system and that effective action for crime prevention and criminal justice required the involvement, as partners and actors, of Governments, national, regional, interregional and international institutions, intergovernmental and non-governmental organizations and various segments of civil society,

Recalling the plans of action for the implementation of the Vienna Declaration on Crime and Justice, in particular the actions against transnational organized crime, corruption, money-laundering, terrorism and high-technology and computer-related crime and the actions on crime prevention, witnesses and victims of crime, prison overcrowding and alternatives to incarceration, juvenile justice, special needs of women in the criminal justice system, standards and norms and restorative justice,

Recalling also the Basic Principles on the Independence of the Judiciary,

Stressing that the participants in the Symposium on the Role of Judges in the Promotion and Protection of Human Rights, held in Vienna on 24 November 2003, called upon States to ensure that the rule of law and the independence of the judicial system and its functioning were to be preserved, to the extent possible, in conflict situations and that judges and their staff were to be protected from unlawful pressure, which might hinder them from exercising their functions,

Noting the thematic discussions on the "Rule of law and development: the contribution of operational activities in crime prevention and criminal justice" held at the thirteenth session of the Commission on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice,

Recalling Commission on Human Rights resolution 2004/43, entitled "Human rights in the administration of justice, in particular juvenile justice", in which the Commission encouraged all relevant parts of the United Nations system, as well as relevant regional and international intergovernmental and non-governmental organizations, including professional associations, to continue to develop and coordinate their activities in promoting human rights in the administration of justice, in particular juvenile justice, addressing as a matter of priority the needs of judges,

Bearing in mind that, in its resolution 2004/39 entitled "Drug control and related crime prevention assistance for countries emerging from conflict", recommended by the Commission on Narcotic Drugs for adoption by the Economic and Social Council, in which the Council would urge Member States emerging from conflict to give adequate priority to addressing the drug problem and related crime in their post-conflict reconstruction efforts,

Noting with satisfaction the steady progress being made towards restoring peace in a number of conflict zones throughout the world, especially in Africa, Asia and Latin America and the Caribbean,

Noting with appreciation the progress made by the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime in the implementation of the criminal justice reform programme in Afghanistan, aimed at restoring the rule of law in that post-conflict society,

Recognizing the importance of the rule of law in post-conflict reconstruction and the consolidation of peace,

Noting the leading role of the Department of Peacekeeping Operations of the Secretariat, among other entities, in providing assistance to countries in post-conflict situations,

1. Requests the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime, in coordination with the Department of Peacekeeping Operations of the Secretariat and other relevant entities charged with providing assistance to countries in post-conflict situations, to consider specific practical strategies to assist in promoting the rule of law, especially in countries emerging from conflict, paying particular attention to the most affected countries in Africa and taking an integrated approach to crime prevention and criminal justice reform, with particular emphasis on protecting vulnerable groups, subject to the availability of extrabudgetary resources;

2. Encourages the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime to continue to provide technical assistance and advisory services to Member States upon request in support of criminal justice reform and to incorporate elements concerning the rule of law into such assistance, wherever possible, including in the framework of peacekeeping and post-conflict reconstruction, in coordination with the Department of Peacekeeping Operations and other relevant entities charged with providing assistance to countries in post-conflict situations, drawing on United Nations standards and norms in crime prevention and criminal justice, the United Nations Convention against Transnational Organized Crime and the Protocols thereto and the United Nations Convention against Corruption;

3. Invites the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime to develop assessment tools for criminal justice reform, including in the framework of peacekeeping and post-conflict reconstruction;

4. Urges Member States providing development assistance to countries emerging from conflict to increase, where relevant, their bilateral assistance in crime prevention and criminal justice to those countries;

5. Invites the global and regional intergovernmental financial and development institutions, including the World Bank and the International Monetary Fund, to strengthen collaboration with the Department of Peacekeeping Operations, the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime and other providers of technical assistance in the area of the rule of law and to provide adequate funding for projects in the justice sector;

6. Invites the institutes of the United Nations Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice Programme network to include in their work programmes the question of the rule of law, with a view to contributing to a better understanding of the links between the rule of law and development, and to develop appropriate training materials;

7. Urges the Eleventh United Nations Congress on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice, to be held in Bangkok from 18 to 25 April 2005, to incorporate matters related to the rule of law in its programme of work, where relevant;

8. Requests the Secretary-General to report to the Commission on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice at its fifteenth session on the implementation of the present resolution.

In response to General Assembly resolution 58/140 [YUN 2003, p. 1120], the Secretary-General published an August report [A/59/205] on strengthening the United Nations Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice Programme, in particular its technical cooperation capacity. The report discussed the role of the Commission, the entry into force of the United Nations Convention on Transnational Organized Crime and its Supplementary Protocols, which entered into force in 2003 [YUN 2003, p. 1126], the convening of the High-level Political Conference for the Purpose of Signing the United Nations Convention against Corruption (see p. 1119), and preparations for the Eleventh Congress on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice (see p. 1108). The report also covered technical cooperation and operational activities, as well as implementation of UN standards and norms, research and dissemination of information and coordination activities.

The Programme's technical cooperation activities supported 150 States during the 2003-2004 biennium and trained 2,600 officials, including 800 women, through its technical cooperation activities on combating terrorism, organized crime, trafficking in human beings and corruption. Those activities were implemented within the framework of the four global programmes (against terrorism, organized crime, trafficking in human beings and corruption), and in the areas of reconstruction of criminal justice systems, justice reform and crime prevention.

ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL ACTION

On 21 July [meeting 47], the Economic and Social Council, on the recommendation of the Commission on Crime and Criminal Justice [E/2004/30], adopted resolution 2004/33 without vote [agenda item 14 (c)].

Strengthening the technical cooperation capacity of the crime prevention and criminal justice programme of the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime

The Economic and Social Council,

Recalling the United Nations Millennium Declaration, in which heads of State and Government resolved to take concerted action against international terrorism and to accede as soon as possible to all the relevant international conventions, as well as to intensify efforts to fight transnational crime in all its dimensions, including trafficking as well as smuggling of migrants and money-laundering,

Reaffirming the values and principles enshrined in the United Nations Millennium Declaration, thereby emphasizing the importance of international cooperation and coordination among Member States in the fight against crime, in order to achieve sustainable development, improved quality of life, democracy and human rights,

Recalling the Vienna Declaration on Crime and Justice: Meeting the Challenges of the Twenty-first Century, adopted by the Tenth United Nations Congress on the Prevention of Crime and the Treatment of Offenders and endorsed by the General Assembly in its resolution 55/59 of 4 December 2000, as well as the plans of action for its implementation,

Recalling also General Assembly resolution 58/140 of 22 December 2003, on strengthening the United Nations Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice Programme, in particular its technical cooperation capacity,

Recalling further its resolution 2003/25 of 23 July 2003, on international cooperation, technical assistance and advisory services in crime prevention and criminal justice,

Welcoming the entry into force of the United Nations Convention against Transnational Organized Crime, as well as the Protocol to Prevent, Suppress and Punish Trafficking in Persons, Especially Women and Children, supplementing the United Nations Convention against Transnational Organized Crime and the Protocol against the Smuggling of Migrants by Land, Sea and Air, supplementing the United Nations Convention against Transnational Organized Crime, Recognizing the importance of the entry into force of the Protocol against the Illicit Manufacturing of and Trafficking in Firearms, Their Parts and Components and Ammunition, supplementing the United Nations Convention against Transnational Organized Crime,

Welcoming the adoption and opening for signature of the United Nations Convention against Corruption,

Recognizing that these important new instruments of international cooperation require the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime to respond to an increasing number of requests for technical assistance in the area of crime prevention and criminal justice reform,

Expressing its appreciation to those Member States which have provided extrabudgetary funds in 2003, thus allowing the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime to carry out a large number of advisory services and technical assistance activities in least developed countries, developing countries, countries with economies in transition and countries in post-conflict situations,

1. Commends the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime for assisting Member States by responding to an increasing number of requests for advisory services and technical assistance in the implementation of projects, including with respect to the strengthening of institutional capacity, training in drafting of legislation and of law enforcement and criminal justice personnel and awareness-raising activities, in particular for parliamentarians, as well as in the development of national policies and promotion of legislative reform;

2. Recognizes the expansion of the technical assistance activities of the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime, including additional interregional advisory services, and encourages international, regional and national funding agencies, as well as international financial institutions, to support the technical cooperation activities and interregional advisory services of the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime;

3. Encourages relevant entities of the United Nations system, including the United Nations Development Programme, the World Bank and the International Monetary Fund, as well as other international and regional organizations, to strengthen their cooperation with the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime, in order to ensure that, as appropriate, technical assistance activities in the field of crime prevention and criminal justice, in particular to combat organized crime, corruption, trafficking in persons and terrorism and its financing, are properly brought into the mainstream of their respective programmes, so as to ensure that expertise available at the Office relating to crime prevention and criminal justice is fully utilized and that duplication of efforts is avoided;

4. Reiterates the need to have adequate resources available to further operationalize the activities of the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime, taking into account the recently adopted integrated approach to drugs and crime;

5. Invites Member States to cooperate at the bilateral level with the least developed and developing countries and at the multilateral level with the United Nations and other international organizations within the framework of the United Nations Convention against Transnational Organized Crime;

6. Also invites Member States to make or increase voluntary contributions, as appropriate, to the United Nations Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice Fund, as well as contributions in direct support of activities and projects of the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime, in order to strengthen further the capacity of the Office to provide advisory services and technical assistance;

7. Encourages recipient Member States that are in a position to do so to contribute to the activities of the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime by providing the necessary infrastructure, as well as human and financial resources, for projects to be implemented in partnership with the Office;

8. Requests the Secretary-General to enhance further the resources available within the existing overall budgetary framework of the United Nations for operational activities and, in particular, the interregional advisory services of the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime under section 23, Regular programme of technical cooperation, of the regular budget of the United Nations;

9. Also requests the Secretary-General to make all possible efforts, including appeals to donors in the private sector, mobilization of resources and fund-raising, to increase extrabudgetary resources, including general-purpose funds, bearing in mind the need to safeguard the independence and international character of the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 20 December [meeting 74], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Third Committee [A/59/494], adopted resolution 59/159 without vote [agenda item 96].

Strengthening the United Nations Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice Programme, in particular its technical cooperation capacity

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 46/152 of 18 December 1991 on the creation of an effective United Nations crime prevention and criminal justice programme, in which it approved the statement of principles and programme of action annexed to that resolution,

Recalling also its resolution 58/140 of 22 December 2003 on strengthening the United Nations Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice Programme, in particular its technical cooperation capacity,

Bearing in mind the United Nations Millennium Declaration, as well as the Vienna Declaration on Crime and Justice: Meeting the Challenges of the Twenty-first Century and the plans of action for its implementation,

Emphasizing the role of the United Nations in the field of crime prevention and criminal justice, specifically the reduction of criminality, more efficient and effective law enforcement and administration of justice, respect for human rights and the rule of law and promotion of the highest standards of fairness, humanity and professional conduct,

Recognizing that action against global crime is a common and shared responsibility,

Convinced of the need for closer coordination and cooperation among States in combating crime in all its forms and manifestations, including criminal activities carried out for the purpose of furthering terrorism, and bearing in mind the role that is played by both the United Nations and regional organizations in this respect,

Recognizing existing efforts at the regional level that complement the work of the United Nations Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice Programme in combating corruption, the smuggling of migrants and trafficking in persons, especially women and children, and noting in this context the ongoing work of the Bali and Puebla Processes,

Looking forward to the Eleventh United Nations Congress on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice, to be held in Bangkok in 2005, which will provide an important opportunity to exchange views and experiences and to identify emerging trends and issues in the field of crime prevention and criminal justice,

Welcoming the entry into force in 2003 of the Protocol to Prevent, Suppress and Punish Trafficking in Persons, Especially Women and Children, supplementing the United Nations Convention against Transnational Organized Crime, and in 2004 of the Protocol against the Smuggling of Migrants by Land, Sea and Air, supplementing the United Nations Convention against Transnational Organized Crime,

Welcoming also the opening for signature, at the High-level Political Conference, held in Merida, Mexico, from 9 to 11 December 2003, of the United Nations Convention against Corruption,

Bearing in mind all its relevant resolutions, in particular those related to the urgent need to strengthen international cooperation and technical assistance in promoting and facilitating the ratification and implementation of the United Nations Convention against Transnational Organized Crime and the Protocols thereto and the United Nations Convention against Corruption, as well as the universal instruments against terrorism,

Bearing in mind also all Economic and Social Council resolutions on strengthening international cooperation, technical assistance and advisory services in crime prevention and criminal justice, as well as on strengthening the rule of law and the reform of criminal justice institutions, including in post-conflict reconstruction, the technical cooperation capacity of the United Nations Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice Programme of the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime and on the implementation of technical assistance in Africa by the Office,

Acknowledging the role of United Nations standards and norms in crime prevention and criminal justice and their development, as reflected in Economic and Social Council resolution 2004/28 of 21 July 2004,

Recalling its relevant resolutions in which it requested the Secretary-General, as a matter of urgency, to provide the United Nations Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice Programme with sufficient resources for the full implementation of its mandate, in conformity with the high priority attached to the Programme,

Aware of the continued increase in requests for technical assistance forwarded to the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime by least developed countries, developing countries, countries with economies in transition and countries emerging from conflict, and recognizing the need to maintain a balance in the technical cooperation capacity of the Office between all priorities identified by the General Assembly and the Economic and Social Council,

Expressing its appreciation for the funding provided by certain Member States, which in recent years has permitted the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime and the United Nations Interregional Crime and Justice Research Institute and institutes of the United Nations Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice Programme network and other relevant bodies to enhance their capacity to execute an increased number of projects in the field of crime prevention and criminal justice,

1. Takes note with appreciation of the report of the Secretary-General on the progress made in the implementation of General Assembly resolution 58/140;

2. Reaffirms the importance of the United Nations Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice Programme in promoting effective action to strengthen international cooperation in crime prevention and criminal justice, in responding to the needs of the international community in the face of both national and transnational criminality and in assisting Member States in achieving the goals of preventing crime within and among States and improving the response to crime;

3. Reiterates its appreciation of the work of the Commission on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice to coordinate international cooperation efforts, and requests that a gender perspective continue to be integrated into all activities of the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime;

4. Reaffirms the importance of the work of the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime in the fulfilment of its mandate in crime prevention and criminal justice, including to prevent and combat terrorism in coordination with and complementing the work of the Security Council Committee established pursuant to resolution 1373(2001) concerning counter-terrorism, in particular in strengthening international cooperation and providing technical assistance, upon request;

5. Reaffirms also the role of the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime in providing to Member States, upon request and as a matter of high priority, technical cooperation, advisory services and other forms of assistance in the field of crime prevention and criminal justice, including in the areas of prevention and control of transnational organized crime, corruption and terrorism as well as in the area of reconstruction of national criminal justice systems, and stresses the need to enhance its operational activities to assist, in particular, least developed countries, developing countries, countries with economies in transition and countries emerging from conflict;

6. Recognizes the progress made in the implementation of the global programmes addressing trafficking in human beings, corruption, organized crime and terrorism, and calls upon the Secretary-General to enhance further the visibility of those programmes and to strengthen the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime by providing it with the resources necessary for the full implementation of its mandate in crime prevention and criminal justice, including the preparation of an updated publication on world crime trends;

7. Invites all States to support the operational activities of the United Nations Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice Programme, through voluntary contributions to the United Nations Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice Fund or through voluntary contributions in direct support of such activities, including for the provision of technical assistance for the implementation of the commitments entered into at the Tenth United Nations Congress on the Prevention of Crime and the Treatment of Offenders, including the measures outlined in the plans of action for the implementation of the Vienna Declaration on Crime and Justice: Meeting the Challenges of the Twenty-first Century;

8. Also invites all States to support, through voluntary contributions, the activities carried out by the United Nations Interregional Crime and Justice Research Institute and institutes of the United Nations Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice Programme network and other relevant bodies;

9. Encourages relevant programmes, funds and organizations of the United Nations system, in particular the United Nations Development Programme, and invites the international financial institutions, in particular the World Bank and regional and national funding agencies, to support the operational activities of the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime in the field of crime prevention and criminal justice;

10. Urges States and relevant international organizations to develop national, regional and international strategies and other necessary measures to complement the work of the United Nations Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice Programme in addressing effectively the significant problems posed by the smuggling of migrants and trafficking in persons and related criminal activities, such as kidnapping;

11. Urges States and funding agencies to review, as appropriate, their funding policies for development assistance and to include a crime prevention and criminal justice component in such assistance;

12. Welcomes the efforts undertaken by the Commission on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice to exercise more vigorously its mandated function of resource mobilization, and calls upon the Commission to strengthen further its activities in this direction;

13. Notes with appreciation the outcome of the senior-level discussion held during the thirteenth session of the Commission on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice on progress made with regard to the criminal justice aspects of terrorism and international cooperation and to the universal conventions and protocols related to terrorism;

14. Expresses its appreciation to non-governmental organizations and other relevant sectors of civil society for their support for the United Nations Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice Programme;

15. Invites relevant entities of the United Nations system, including the United Nations Development Programme as well as the World Bank and other international funding agencies, to increase further their interaction with the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime in order to benefit from synergies and avoid duplication of effort and to ensure that, as appropriate, activities on crime prevention and criminal justice, including activities related to the prevention of corruption and the promotion of the rule of law, are considered in their sustainable development agenda and that the expertise of the Office is fully utilized;

16. Requests the Secretary-General to take all necessary measures to provide adequate support to the Commission on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice, as the principal policy-making body in this field, in performing its activities, including cooperation and coordination with the institutes of the United Nations Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice Programme network and other relevant bodies;

17. Urges all States and regional economic organizations that have not yet done so to ratify or accede to the United Nations Convention against Transnational Organized Crime (Palermo Convention) and the Protocols thereto;

18. Emphasizes the importance of the expeditious entry into force of the Protocol against the Illicit Manufacturing of and Trafficking in Firearms, Their Parts and Components and Ammunition, supplementing the United Nations Convention against Transnational Organized Crime, adopted by its resolution 55/255 of 31 May 2001;

19. Welcomes the voluntary contributions already made, and encourages States to make adequate and regular voluntary contributions for the implementation of the Convention and the Protocols thereto, through the United Nations funding mechanism specifically designed for that purpose in the Convention or in direct support of implementation activities and initiatives;

20. Urges all States and competent regional economic integration organizations that have not yet done so to sign, ratify or accede to the United Nations Convention against Corruption;

21. Requests the Secretary-General to take all necessary measures and provide adequate support to the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime so as to enable it to promote the speedy entry into force of the United Nations Convention against Corruption;

22. Encourages States to make adequate and regular voluntary contributions for the entry into force of the United Nations Convention against Corruption, through the United Nations funding mechanism specifically designed for that purpose in the Convention or in direct support of implementation activities and initiatives;

23. Requests the Secretary-General to submit a report on the implementation of the present resolution to the General Assembly at its sixtieth session.

Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice Programme

A March report [E/CN.15/2004/4] of the Secretary-General summarized the activities of the institutions comprising the United Nations Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice Programme network: the United Nations Inter-regional Crime and Justice Research Institute (UNRCRI); 11 regional and affiliated institutes; and the International Scientific and Professional Advisory Council.

UN African crime prevention institute

In a July report [A/59/175], submitted in response to General Assembly resolution 58/139 [YUN 2003, p. 1124], the Secretary-General highlighted activities of the African Institute for the Prevention of Crime and the Treatment of Offenders (UNAFRI) and discussed funding and support for the Institute, its future and strategies for sustaining it, including its main focus of studying and developing remedial action to address crime problems by conducting advisory missions in Africa and holding follow-up workshops. The main focus of the activities of the Institute was on the individual needs of member States and the growing awareness of the necessity of making crime prevention strategies a component of sustainable socio-economic development. It worked to complete the extradition and mutual legal conventions assistance projects, and implemented, with assistance from the United States, a project on trafficking in firearms and ammunition in Africa.

UNAFRI operated against a backdrop of financial difficulty arising from poor financial support from member States. As at 31 December 2003, only $1,011,565 in contributions had been received out of total assessed contributions of $3,594,766 for the 1998-2003 period, leaving an outstanding balance of $2,583,201. For the period January to June 2004, only $25,375 had been received. The Institute's Governing Board, at its ninth session (Kampala, Uganda, 21-22 June), directed the secretariat to ascertain from members their continuing interest in membership in the Institute and requested an external review to evaluate the Institute's performance in relation to mandated objectives. The review would examine the structure, objectives and operations, with a view to upgrading its relevance, performance and acceptability.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 20 December [meeting 74], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Third Committee [A/59/494], adopted resolution 59/158 without vote [agenda item 96].

United Nations African Institute for the Prevention of Crime and the Treatment of Offenders

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 58/139 of 22 December 2003 and all other relevant resolutions,

Taking note of the report of the Secretary-General,

Bearing in mind the urgent need to establish effective crime prevention strategies for Africa, as well as the importance of law enforcement agencies and the judiciary at the regional and subregional levels,

Noting that the financial situation of the United Nations African Institute for the Prevention of Crime and the Treatment of Offenders has greatly affected its capacity to deliver its services to African Member States in an effective and comprehensive manner,

1. Commends the United Nations African Institute for the Prevention of Crime and the Treatment of Offenders for its efforts to promote and coordinate regional technical cooperation activities related to crime prevention and criminal justice systems in Africa;

2. Commends the Secretary-General for his efforts to mobilize the financial resources necessary to provide the Institute with the core professional staff required to enable it to function effectively in the fulfilment of its mandated obligations;

3. Reiterates the need to strengthen further the capacity of the Institute to support national mechanisms for crime prevention and criminal justice in African countries;

4. Urges the States members of the Institute to make every possible effort to meet their obligations to the Institute;

5. Calls upon all Member States and non-governmental organizations to adopt concrete practical measures to support the Institute in the development of the requisite capacity and to implement its programmes and activities aimed at strengthening crime prevention and criminal justice systems in Africa;

6. Requests the Secretary-General to intensify efforts to mobilize all relevant entities of the United Nations system to provide the necessary financial and technical support to the Institute to enable it to fulfil its mandate;

7. Also requests the Secretary-General to continue his efforts to mobilize the financial resources necessary to maintain the Institute with the core professional staff required to enable it to function effectively in the fulfilment of its mandated obligations;

8. Calls upon the United Nations Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice Programme and the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime to work closely with the Institute;

9. Requests the Secretary-General to enhance the promotion of regional cooperation, coordination and collaboration in the fight against crime, especially in its transnational dimension, which cannot be dealt with adequately by national action alone;

10. Also requests the Secretary-General to make concrete proposals, including the provision of additional core professional staff, to strengthen the programmes and activities of the Institute and to report to the General Assembly at its sixtieth session on the implementation of the present resolution.

Transnational organized crime

International convention

Following the entry into force on 29 September 2003 [YUN 2003, 1125] of the United Nations Convention against Transnational Organized Crime and the Protocols thereto, the Protocol against the Smuggling of Migrants by Land, Sea and Air entered into force on 28 January 2004. As at 31 December, there were 97 parties and 147 signatories to the Convention, 77 parties and 117 signatories to the Protocol to Prevent, Suppress and Punish Trafficking in Persons, Especially Women and Children, 65 parties and 112 signatories to the Protocol on Smuggling of Migrants by Land, Sea and Air, and 31 Parties and 52 signatories to the Protocol against the Illicit Manufacturing of and Trafficking in Firearms.

Reports of Secretary-General. In response to General Assembly resolution 58/135 [YUN 2003, p. 1126], the Secretary-General submitted a March report [E/CN.15/2004/5], updated in July [A/59/204], on the Convention and its Protocols. The Ad Hoc Committee on the Elaboration of a Convention against Transnational Organized Crime, at its thirteenth and final session (Vienna, 2-6 February), approved the draft rules of procedure of the Conference of the Parties to the Convention. The Conference, at its first session (28 June-8 July), endorsed a work plan for its second session on the themes of adaptation of national legislation in accordance with the Convention and its Protocols; criminalization legislation and difficulties encountered in the implementation of the instruments; and international cooperation and technical assistance. The Conference also endorsed the draft questionnaires prepared by the Secretariat to help identify needs and concerns of States in ratifying and implementing the Convention and its Protocols, responses to which would be submitted by the Secretariat at the second session of the Conference. It requested the Secretariat to submit the full text of notifications, declarations and reservations by States parties to the Convention and its Protocols and to prepare a working paper on technical assistance provided by the Secretariat and by other relevant international and regional organizations.

CEB consideration. At its April [CEB/2004/1] session (Vienna, 2-3 April), the United Nations System Chief Executive Board (CEB) for Coordination addressed the issue of curbing transnational organized crime. The Board endorsed measures outlined in a note prepared by UNODC entitled "Organized crime and corruption are threats to security and development: the role of the United Nations system", aimed at building a response to curbing transnational crime in the short and medium term.

On 20 December, the General Assembly took note of the Secretary-General's report on international cooperation in the fight against transnational organized crime (decision 59/523).

ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL ACTION

On 21 July [meeting 47], the Economic and Social Council, on the recommendation of the Commission on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice [E/2004/30], adopted resolution 2004/23 without vote [agenda item 14 (c)].

International cooperation in the fight against transnational organized crime: assistance to States in capacity-building with a view to facilitating the implementation of the United Nations Convention against Transnational Organized Crime and the Protocols thereto

Recommends to the General Assembly the adoption of the following draft resolution:
[For text, see General Assembly resolution 59/157 below.]

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 20 December [meeting 74], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Third Committee [A/49/494], adopted resolution 59/157 without vote [agenda item 96].

International cooperation in the fight against transnational organized crime: assistance to States in capacity-building with a view to facilitating the implementation of the United Nations Convention against Transnational Organized Crime and the Protocols thereto

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 55/25 of 15 November 2000, by which it adopted the United Nations Convention against Transnational Organized Crime, the Protocol to Prevent, Suppress and Punish Trafficking in Persons, Especially Women and Children, supplementing the United Nations Convention against Transnational Organized Crime, and the Protocol against the Smuggling of Migrants by Land, Sea and Air, supplementing the United Nations Convention against Transnational Organized Crime,

Recalling also its resolution 55/255 of 31 May 2001, by which it adopted the Protocol against the Illicit Manufacturing of and Trafficking in Firearms, Their Parts and Components and Ammunition, supplementing the United Nations Convention against Transnational Organized Crime,

Recalling further its resolution 58/135 of 22 December 2003 on international cooperation in the fight against transnational organized crime: assistance to States in capacity-building with a view to facilitating the implementation of the United Nations Convention against Transnational Organized Crime and the Protocols thereto,

Reaffirming its deep concern at the impact of transnational organized crime on the political, social and economic stability and development of societies,

Reaffirming that the adoption of the Convention and the Protocols thereto is a significant development in international criminal law and that they constitute important instruments for effective international cooperation against transnational organized crime,

1. Takes note with appreciation of the report of the Secretary-General on the United Nations Convention against Transnational Organized Crime and the Protocols thereto;

2. Welcomes the entry into force of the United Nations Convention against Transnational Organized Crime, of the Protocol to Prevent, Suppress and Punish Trafficking in Persons, Especially Women and Children, supplementing the United Nations Convention against Transnational Organized Crime, and of the Protocol against the Smuggling of Migrants by Land, Sea and Air, supplementing the United Nations Convention against Transnational Organized Crime;

3. Commends the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime for its work in promoting the ratification of the Convention and the Protocols thereto, including, in particular, the preparation of legislative guides designed to facilitate the ratification and subsequent implementation of those instruments, and invites the Office to finalize the legislative guides and to disseminate them as widely as possible;

4. Urges all States and relevant regional economic integration organizations that have not done so to consider ratifying or acceding to the Protocol against the Illicit Manufacturing of and Trafficking in Firearms, Their Parts and Components and Ammunition, supplementing the United Nations Convention against Transnational Organized Crime, as soon as possible;

5. Also urges all States and relevant regional economic integration organizations to take all necessary measures to improve international cooperation in criminal matters, especially extradition and mutual legal assistance, in accordance with the Convention;

6. Welcomes the financial support provided by several donors to promote the entry into force and implementation of the Convention and the Protocols thereto, and encourages Member States to make sufficient voluntary contributions to the United Nations Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice Fund, as well as contributions in direct support of activities and projects of the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime, including through contributions to the institutes of the United Nations Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice Programme network, for the provision of technical assistance to developing countries and countries with economies in transition for the implementation of those international legal instruments;

7. Requests the Secretary-General to continue to provide the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime with the resources necessary to enable it to promote, in an effective manner, the implementation of the Convention and the Protocols thereto and to discharge its functions as the secretariat of the Conference of the Parties in accordance with its mandate;

8. Requests the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime to continue to assist States, upon request, with capacity-building in the area of international cooperation in criminal matters, in particular extradition and mutual legal assistance;

9. Requests the Secretary-General to report on the implementation of the present resolution in his report on the work of the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime to be submitted to the General Assembly at its sixtieth session.

Draft model agreement on disposal of confiscated proceeds of crime

ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL ACTION

On 21 July [meeting 47], the Economic and Social Council, on the recommendation of the Commission on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice [E/2004/30], adopted resolution 2004/24 without vote [agenda item 14(c)].

Establishment of an intergovernmental expert group to prepare a draft model bilateral agreement on disposal of confiscated proceeds of crime covered by the United Nations Convention against Transnational Organized Crime and the United Nations Convention against Illicit Traffic in Narcotic Drugs and Psychotropic Substances of 1988

The Economic and Social Council,

Recalling article 13, paragraph 2, of the United Nations Convention against Transnational Organized Crime, which obliges States parties to the Convention, when requested by other States parties, to take measures to identify, trace and freeze or seize proceeds of crime, property, equipment or other instrumentalities referred to in article 12, paragraph 1, of the Convention for the purpose of eventual confiscation, and recalling also article 14, paragraph 3, of the Convention, according to which States parties may give special consideration to concluding agreements on sharing with other States parties such confiscated proceeds of crime,

Recalling also article 5, paragraph 4 (b), of the United Nations Convention against Illicit Traffic in Narcotic Drugs and Psychotropic Substances of 1988, which provides for such measures as well, Aware that requesting States, in pursuing property subject to confiscation located beyond their borders, and States executing requests from other States relating to confiscation often incur substantial expenses in investigations, prosecutions or judicial proceedings,

Mindful that an increasing number of States have concluded agreements on sharing confiscated proceeds of crime in order to foster cooperation in matters involving confiscation, for example by defraying case-related expenses,

Determined to strengthen international cooperation in the confiscation and disposal of the proceeds of crime covered by the United Nations Convention against Transnational Organized Crime and the United Nations Convention against Illicit Traffic in Narcotic Drugs and Psychotropic Substances,

Recognizing that a model bilateral agreement on sharing confiscated proceeds of crime could facilitate greater international cooperation in this matter and could contribute to the achievement of the objectives of the United Nations Convention against Transnational Organized Crime and the United Nations Convention against Illicit Traffic in Narcotic Drugs and Psychotropic Substances, and that such a model agreement should not prejudice the principles set forth in the United Nations Convention against Corruption or the development, at a later stage, of any appropriate mechanism to facilitate the implementation of that Convention,

1. Requests the Secretary-General to convene, subject to the availability of extrabudgetary resources, an open-ended intergovernmental expert group, the composition of which should reflect an equitable geographical representation and a diversity of legal systems, to prepare a draft model bilateral agreement on sharing confiscated proceeds of crime covered by the United Nations Convention against Transnational Organized Crime and the United Nations Convention against Illicit Traffic in Narcotic Drugs and Psychotropic Substances of 1988;

2. Accepts with gratitude the offer of the Government of the United States of America to host the meeting of the open-ended intergovernmental expert group;

3. Requests the open-ended intergovernmental expert group, in carrying out its work, to take into account, where appropriate, existing agreements on sharing confiscated proceeds of crime and other relevant instruments developed in multilateral forums;

4. Requests the Secretary-General to submit the results of the meeting of the open-ended intergovernmental expert group to the Conference of the Parties to the United Nations Convention against Transnational Organized Crime and the Commission on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice at its fourteenth session for their consideration.

Strategies for crime prevention

Corruption

UN Convention against Corruption

The Secretary-General, by an April note [A/59/77], submitted to the General Assembly the report of the High-level Political Conference for the Purpose of Signing the United Nations Convention against Corruption [YUN 2003, p. 1147], which was adopted by Assembly resolution 58/4 [ibid., p. 1127].

As at 31 December, the Convention had been signed by 116 countries and ratified by 15 countries.

ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL ACTION

On 21 July [meeting 47], the Economic and Social Council, on the recommendation of the Commission on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice [E/2004/30], adopted resolution 2004/21 without vote [agenda item 14 (c)].

Action against corruption: assistance to States in capacity-building with a view to facilitating the entry into force and subsequent implementation of the United Nations Convention against Corruption

Recommends to the General Assembly the adoption of the following draft resolution:

[For text, see General Assembly resolution 59/155 below.]

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 20 December [meeting 74], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Third Committee [A/59/494], adopted resolution 59/155 without vote [agenda item 96].

Action against corruption: assistance to States in capacity-building with a view to facilitating the entry into force and subsequent implementation of the United Nations Convention against Corruption

The General Assembly,

Deeply concerned about the impact of corruption on the political, social and economic stability and development of societies,

Bearing in mind that the prevention and combating of corruption is a common and shared responsibility of the international community, necessitating cooperation at the bilateral and multilateral levels,

Bearing in mind also that the prevention and eradication of corruption is a responsibility of all States and that they must cooperate with one another, with the support and involvement of individuals and groups outside the public sector, such as civil society, non-governmental organizations and community-based organizations, if their efforts to prevent and combat corruption are to be effective,

Reaffirming its support and commitment to the goals of the United Nations in the field of crime prevention and criminal justice, in particular the objectives set forth in the Vienna Declaration on Crime and Justice: Meeting the Challenges of the Twenty-first Century,

Recalling its resolution 58/4 of 31 October 2003, in which it adopted the United Nations Convention against Corruption and urged all States and competent regional economic integration organizations to sign and ratify it,

Noting with appreciation the High-level Political Conference for the Purpose of Signing the United Nations Convention against Corruption, held in Merida, Mexico, from 9 to 11 December 2003,

Noting with appreciation also the initiative of those States which have pledged financial contributions to the United Nations Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice Fund in order to enable developing countries and countries with economies in transition to initiate measures to implement the Convention,

1. Welcomes the signing of the United Nations Convention against Corruption by a large number of Member States, which reflects the high level of commitment on the part of the international community to the purpose of the Convention;

2. Urges Member States to consider signing and ratifying the Convention as soon as possible, in order to allow its early entry into force and subsequent implementation;

3. Encourages Member States to make adequate voluntary contributions, where appropriate, to the United Nations Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice Fund to provide developing countries and countries with economies in transition with the technical assistance they may require to implement the Convention, including assistance for the preparatory measures required for implementation, taking into account article 62 of the Convention;

4. Requests the Secretary-General to provide the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime with the resources necessary to enable it to promote, in an effective manner, the entry into force and implementation of the Convention, inter alia, through the provision of assistance to developing countries and countries with economies in transition for building capacity in the areas covered by the Convention;

5. Also requests the Secretary-General to report to the Commission on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice at its fourteenth session on the implementation of the present resolution.

On the same date, the General Assembly took note of the Secretary-General's note transmitting the report of the High-level Political Conference for the Purpose of Signing the United Nations Convention against Corruption (see p. 1119) (decision 59/523).

Funds of illicit origin

In response to General Assembly resolution 58/205 [YUN 2003, p. 1148], the Secretary-General submitted in July [A/59/203 & Add.1] a report on preventing and combating corrupt practices and transfer of assets of illicit origin and returning such assets to the countries of origin, which contained a summary of the responses received from 19 States on corruption issues, and of a legal framework of asset recovery under the United Nations Convention against Corruption, and highlighted international initiatives in that area.

The G-8 (the eight most industrialized countries), at its 2004 Summit (Sea Island, Georgia, United States, 8-10 June), recommended that throughout Africa, targeted assistance should fund anti-corruption units, public expenditure transparency systems, democracy-building activities and civil society participation in key decisions.

On 20 December, the General Assembly took note of the Secretary-General's report (decision 59/523).

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 22 December [meeting 75], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Second (Economic and Financial) Committee [A/59/485/Add.3] adopted resolution 59/242 without vote [agenda item 87 (c)].

Preventing and combating corrupt practices and transfer of assets of illicit origin and returning such assets to the countries of origin

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 54/205 of 22 December 1999, 56/186 of 21 December 2001 and 57/244 of 20 December 2002, and recalling also its resolution 58/205 of 23 December 2003 on preventing and combating corrupt practices and transfer of assets of illicit origin and returning such assets to the countries of origin,

Recalling also the Monterrey Consensus of the International Conference on Financing for Development, which underlined that fighting corruption at all levels is a priority, and the Plan of Implementation of the World Summit on Sustainable Development ("Johannesburg Plan of Implementation"),

Emphasizing the need for solid democratic institutions responsive to the needs of the people and the need to improve the efficiency, transparency and accountability of domestic administration and public spending and the rule of law, to ensure full respect for human rights, including the right to development, and to eradicate corruption and build sound economic and social institutions,

Recognizing that fighting corruption at all levels is a priority and that corruption is a serious barrier to effective resource mobilization and allocation and diverts resources away from activities that are vital for poverty eradication, the fight against hunger, and economic and sustainable development,

Noting the particular concern of developing countries and countries with economies in transition regarding the return of assets of illicit origin derived from corruption to the countries from which they originated, consistent with the principles of the United Nations Convention against Corruption, in particular chapter V, in view of the importance that such assets can have to their sustainable development,

Recognizing the concern over the transfer and/or transaction of assets of illicit origin, and stressing the need to address this concern consistent with the principles of chapter V of the United Nations Convention against Corruption,

Recognizing also that the illicit acquisition of wealth can be particularly damaging to democratic institutions, national economies and the rule of law,

Convinced that a stable and transparent environment for national and international commercial transactions in all countries is essential for the mobilization of investment, finance, technology, skills and other important resources, and recognizing that effective efforts at all levels to combat and avoid corruption in all its forms in all countries are essential elements of an improved national and international business environment,

Concerned about the links between corruption in all its forms, including bribery, money-laundering and the transfer of assets of illicit origin, and other forms of crime, in particular organized crime and economic crime,

Reiterating its concern about the seriousness of problems and threats posed by corruption to the stability and security of societies, undermining the institutions and the values of democracy, ethical values and justice and jeopardizing sustainable development and the rule of law, in particular when an inadequate national and international response leads to impunity,

Welcoming the initiatives taken by the Commonwealth Secretariat and the Group of Eight with regard to fighting corruption and improving transparency, including the initiative of the Group of Eight to support with bilateral technical assistance those countries committed to a partnership to increase transparency, good governance and the rule of law, and welcoming also the efforts of those Member States that have entered into "Compacts to Promote Transparency and Combat Corruption" with the Group of Eight,

Noting with appreciation the holding of the High-level Political Conference for the Purpose of Signing the United Nations Convention against Corruption in Merida, Mexico, from 9 to 11 December 2003,

Recalling its resolution 58/4 of 31 October 2003, by which it adopted the United Nations Convention against Corruption and urged all States and competent regional economic organizations to sign and ratify it,

1. Condemns corruption in all its forms, including bribery, money-laundering and the transfer of assets of illicit origin;

2. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General;

3. Welcomes the adoption of the United Nations Convention against Corruption;

4. Reiterates its invitation to all Member States and competent regional economic integration organizations to sign, ratify and fully implement the United Nations Convention against Corruption as soon as possible in order to ensure its rapid entry into force;

5. Welcomes the efforts of Member States that have enacted laws and taken other positive measures in the fight against corruption in all its forms, including, inter alia, in accordance with the United Nations Convention against Corruption, and in this regard encourages Member States that have not yet done so to enact such laws;

6. Encourages all Governments to prevent, combat and penalize corruption in all its forms, including bribery, money-laundering and the transfer of illicitly acquired assets, and to work for the prompt return of such assets through asset recovery consistent with the principles of the United Nations Convention against Corruption, particularly chapter V;

7. Further encourages subregional and regional cooperation, where appropriate, in the efforts to prevent and combat corrupt practices and the transfer of assets of illicit origin as well as for asset recovery consistent with the principles of the United Nations Convention against Corruption, particularly chapter V;

8. Calls for further international cooperation, inter alia, through the United Nations system, in support of national, subregional and regional efforts to prevent and combat corrupt practices and the transfer of assets of illicit origin, as well as for asset recovery consistent with the principles of the United Nations Convention against Corruption, particularly chapter V;

9. Encourages Member States to provide adequate financial and human resources to the United Nations

Office on Drugs and Crime, and further encourages the Office to give high priority to technical cooperation, upon request, inter alia, to promote and facilitate the signing and ratification, acceptance, approval or accession and the implementation of the United Nations Convention against Corruption, including the early finalization, in cooperation with the United Nations Interregional Crime and Justice Research Institute, of the legislative guide for the ratification and implementation of the Convention;

10. Reiterates its request to the international community to provide, inter alia, technical assistance to support national efforts to strengthen human and institutional capacity aimed at preventing and combating corrupt practices and the transfer of assets of illicit origin as well as for asset recovery consistent with the principles of the United Nations Convention against Corruption, particularly chapter V, and formulating strategies for mainstreaming and promoting transparency and integrity in both the public and the private sectors;

11. Urges all Member States, consistent with the United Nations Convention against Corruption, to abide by the principles of proper management of public affairs and public property, fairness, responsibility and equality before the law and the need to safeguard integrity and to foster a culture of transparency, accountability and rejection of corruption;

12. Calls upon the private sector, at both the international and the national levels, including small and large companies and transnational corporations, to remain fully engaged in the fight against corruption, welcomes the agreement to add anti-corruption as the tenth principle of the Global Compact, and emphasizes the need for all relevant stakeholders, including within the United Nations system, as appropriate, to continue to promote corporate responsibility and accountability;

13. Encourages all Member States that have not yet done so to require financial institutions to properly implement comprehensive due diligence and vigilance programmes, consistent with the principles of the United Nations Convention against Corruption and other applicable instruments, that could facilitate transparency and prevent the placement of illicitly acquired funds;

14. Also encourages Member States, relevant international organizations and the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime to give prominence to 9 December as International Anti-Corruption Day, as established by the General Assembly in its resolution 58/4;

15. Requests the Secretary-General to submit to the General Assembly at its sixtieth session a report on the implementation of the present resolution and on the impact of corruption in all its forms, including on the scale of transfers of assets of illicit origin and the impact of corruption and such outflows on economic growth and sustainable development.

Money laundering

ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL ACTION

On 21 July [meeting 47], the Economic and Social Council, on the recommendation of the Commission on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice

[E/2004/30], adopted resolution 2004/29 without vote [agenda item 14 (c)].

Strengthening international cooperation and technical assistance in combating money laundering

The Economic and Social Council,

Bearing in mind the United Nations Convention against Illicit Traffic in Narcotic Drugs and Psychotropic Substances of 1988, the International Convention for the Suppression of the Financing of Terrorism, the United Nations Convention against Transnational Organized Crime and the United Nations Convention against Corruption,

Taking into account the activities of the Financial Action Task Force on Money Laundering, in particular its Forty Recommendations and eight Special Recommendations on Terrorist Financing, and those of similar regional bodies, such as the Egmont Group of Financial Intelligence Units,

Considering that multilateral action against the contemporary global phenomenon of transnational organized crime and its unlawful activities, including in particular trafficking in drugs, arms and human beings, money-laundering, corruption and the financing of terrorism, is important and involves shared responsibility and coordinated action by States in order to obtain greater coherence in conformity with relevant multilateral instruments,

Recognizing that the laundering of the proceeds of crime has spread internationally and in that way has become a worldwide threat to the stability and security of financial and commercial systems, including governmental structures, and that finding a solution to the problems stemming from organized crime and the proceeds of crime requires joint measures on the part of the international community,

Stressing the need for sufficient harmonization of the legislation of States so as to allow for a satisfactory level of coordination of their efforts for the prevention, control, investigation and suppression of money-laundering, including money-laundering related to the financing of terrorism and other criminal activities,

Recognizing that effective action against money-laundering requires strengthened international cooperation and the use of systems that facilitate collaboration and the exchange of information among the competent authorities in the States concerned,

Recognizing also the strategic need for States to possess an infrastructure suited to the conduct of financial analyses and investigations for a coordinated fight against money-laundering and the financing of transnational organized crime and of terrorism, using national, regional and international strategies,

Recognizing further the work carried out by the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime, especially the Global Programme against Money-Laundering, as a centre for the coordination and provision of technical assistance in that regard,

Reiterating the importance of establishing national plans or strategies for combating the laundering of the proceeds of crime,

1. Urges Member States that have not yet done so to strengthen their capacity to prevent, control, investigate and suppress serious crimes related to money-laundering, including money-laundering related to the financing of terrorism and, in general, any criminal action connected with transnational organized crime;

2. Also urges Member States that have not yet done so to establish financial intelligence units or to strengthen those already in existence and to provide them with the administrative, legal and technical resources needed to make progress in their work, with a view to enhancing their capacity to prevent, detect and control money-laundering, including money-laundering related to the financing of terrorism;

3. Recommends to Member States that they hold consultations with the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime and other relevant bodies when drafting legislation against money-laundering in order to ensure that it is in conformity with applicable international instruments and relevant standards;

4. Requests the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime to continue its work against money-laundering, subject to the availability of extrabudgetary resources and in cooperation with relevant regional and international organizations participating in activities designed to give effect to applicable international instruments and relevant standards for combating money-laundering, through the provision to Member States, upon request, of training, advisory assistance and long-term technical assistance, bearing in mind, inter alia, the Forty Recommendations and eight Special Recommendations on Terrorist Financing of the Financial Action Task Force on Money Laundering and the work of similar regional bodies;

5. Encourages Member States and the relevant international organizations to contribute to the mobilization of resources in order to strengthen the capacity of the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime to provide technical assistance.

International commercial fraud

ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL ACTION

On 21 July [meeting 47], the Economic and Social Council, on the recommendation of the Commission on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice [E/2004/30], adopted resolution 2004/26 without vote [agenda item 14(c)].

International cooperation in the prevention, investigation, prosecution and punishment of fraud, the criminal misuse and falsification of identity and related crimes

Concerned at the proliferation of national and transnational cases of fraud and related economic crimes and the involvement of organized criminal groups, modern technologies and the criminal misuse and falsification of identity in such cases,

Convinced that forms of criminal misuse and falsification of identity such as the taking and criminal misuse of personal identifying information and the assumption of false identities constitute a significant and increasing problem related to fraud,

Convinced also that the criminal misuse and falsification of identity is commonly associated with other illicit activities, including money-laundering, of organized criminal groups, corruption and terrorism and that the proceeds of fraud are used to finance such activities,

Concerned that the spread of modern information and communication technologies creates a vast range of new opportunities for fraud and the criminal misuse and falsification of identity, which in turn jeopardizes the legitimate use of such technologies and represents a threat to States seeking to use such technologies for development,

Recalling chapter XI of the report of the United Nations Commission on International Trade Law on its thirty-sixth session, in which the Commission considered that it would be useful to conduct a study of forms of commercial fraud and that it might be possible for the Commission on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice to conduct such a study,

Recalling also the report on the Colloquium on International Commercial Fraud, convened by the United Nations Commission on International Trade Law and held in Vienna from 14 to 16 April 2004,

1. Condemns the perpetration of fraud, the criminal misuse and falsification of identity and other illicit activities supported thereby;

2. Encourages Member States that have not already done so:

(a) To prevent, detect, investigate, prosecute and punish fraud and the criminal misuse and falsification of identity through criminal law and other measures;

(b) To take into account the need to prevent and combat fraud and the criminal misuse and falsification of identity in the development and regulation of relevant domestic commercial, financial or other institutions and systems;

(c) To facilitate the identification, tracing, freezing, seizure and confiscation of the proceeds of fraud and the criminal misuse and falsification of identity;

3. Encourages Member States to cooperate with one another in efforts to prevent and combat fraud and the criminal misuse and falsification of identity, including through the United Nations Convention against Transnational Organized Crime and other appropriate international instruments, and to consider the review of domestic laws on fraud and the criminal misuse and falsification of identity, where necessary and appropriate, to facilitate such cooperation;

4. Requests the Secretary-General to convene, in consultation with regional groups and subject to the availability of extrabudgetary resources, an intergovernmental expert group, with representation based on the regional composition of the Commission on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice and reflecting the diversity of legal systems and open to any Member State wishing to participate as an observer, to prepare a study on fraud and the criminal misuse and falsification of identity, including:

(a) The nature and extent of fraud and the criminal misuse and falsification of identity;

(b) Domestic and transnational trends in fraud and the criminal misuse and falsification of identity;

(c) The relationship between fraud, other forms of economic crime, the criminal misuse and falsification of identity and other illicit activities, including organized crime, money-laundering and terrorism;

(d) The prevention and control of fraud and the criminal misuse and falsification of identity using commercial and criminal law, criminal justice and other means, and how these can be harmonized;

(e) The particular problems posed by fraud and the criminal misuse and falsification of identity for developing countries and countries with economies in transition;

5. Requests the intergovernmental expert group to use the information gained by the study for the purpose of developing useful practices, guidelines or other materials in the prevention, investigation and prosecution of fraud and the criminal misuse and falsification of identity;

6. Also requests the intergovernmental expert group, in carrying out its work, to take into consideration the relevant work of the United Nations Commission on International Trade Law and other bodies where relevant and appropriate, bearing in mind the need to avoid duplication;

7. Invites Member States to cooperate with and assist the intergovernmental expert group in its work, including by the provision of relevant and appropriate policy, legislative, research and other materials and by the provision of data about the nature and scope of fraud, the criminal misuse and falsification of identity and related problems in each country;

8. Also invites Member States to make voluntary contributions in order to support the work of the intergovernmental expert group and to facilitate the participation of experts from developing countries therein;

9. Invites the Eleventh United Nations Congress on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice, under the substantive item entitled "Economic and financial crimes: challenges to sustainable development" and at its Workshop on Measures to Combat Economic Crime, including Money-Laundering, to consider and discuss the issues of fraud and the criminal misuse and falsification of identity, and invites the intergovernmental expert group to take into account the results of those discussions in carrying out its work;

10. Recommends that the Secretary-General designate the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime to serve as the secretariat for the intergovernmental expert group, in consultation with the secretariat of the United Nations Commission on International Trade Law;

11. Requests the Secretary-General to submit a progress report on the work of the intergovernmental expert group and the plan of work for the study to the Commission on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice at its fourteenth session and to submit, in a timely manner, a substantive report containing the results of the study to the Commission at its fifteenth session or, if necessary, at its sixteenth session, for its consideration;

12. Also requests the Secretary-General to circulate, in advance, the report on the work of the intergovernmental expert group and the results of the study, including any useful practices, guidelines or other materials, to all Member States in all official languages, in order to seek their views on the results of the study and to reflect any views or concerns expressed in the final report to the Commission on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice.

Terrorism

In March [E/CN.15/2004/8 & Add.1], the Secretary-General submitted a report on strengthening international cooperation and technical assistance in preventing and combating terrorism, in response to General Assembly resolution 58/136 [YUN 2003, p. 1149]. The report reviewed the technical assistance activities of the Terrorism Prevention Branch of the Division for Treaty Affairs of UNODC, under its Global Programme against Terrorism, whose main focus was facilitating the ratification and implementation of 12 international conventions and protocols related to terrorism [YUN 2001, p. 69]. Assistance was provided to 73 countries through country-specific activities or regional workshops, benefiting more than 500 law makers and criminal justice officials. Two projects to strengthen the legal regime against terrorism were also implemented. UNODC, in cooperation with the International Centre for Criminal Law and Reform and Criminal Justice Policy, convened a meeting of experts (Cape Town, South Africa, 24-25 February) to consider the compilation of international legal instruments, declarations and models pertaining to terrorism, related forms of crime and international cooperation. The experts proposed guidelines for UNODC in the provision of technical assistance aimed at promoting implementation of the universal conventions and protocols related to terrorism. They suggested that the Secretariat should develop an implementation guide to update the legislative guide on the universal anti-terrorism conventions and protocols.

The Secretary-General also reported on the responses received as at 9 March from 38 countries and territories and 3 international organizations on the links between international terrorism and other forms of crime, including money-laundering, fraud, trafficking in illicit goods, corruption, falsification of official documents and the smuggling of migrants. UNODC also organized a meeting of experts (Cape Town, 26-27 February) on increasing synergy in the delivery of technical assistance to address terrorist involvement in other forms of crime.

On 11-12 March (Vienna), the Organization for Security and Cooperation in Europe, in cooperation with UNODC, hosted a follow-up meeting (see p. 76) to the Counter-Terrorism Committee meeting of 6 March 2003 [YUN 2003, p. 67]. In its declaration, annexed to the report, participants committed themselves to undertaking joint initiatives to strengthen cooperation.

In July [A/59/187], the Secretary-General, in response to General Assembly resolution 58/136 [YUN 2003, p. 1149], submitted a report on international cooperation and technical assistance in preventing and combating terrorism. The report reviewed the status of technical assistance activities of the Terrorism Prevention Branch of the UNODC Division for Treaty Affairs and included an update on efforts to initiate joint activities with other relevant role players, and on information-sharing and awareness-raising. It also provided an overview of the responses received from Member States and international organizations on the nature of the links between terrorism and other forms of crime.

The main focus of technical cooperation projects on strengthening the legal regime against terrorism was on the provision of direct legal advisory services to States on the incorporation of the relevant provisions contained in the 12 anti-terrorism conventions and protocols, carried out in close consultation with the Counter-Terrorism Committee. Specific national actions developed with Governments and legislative drafting committees were established to study the provisions of the instruments and to make recommendations regarding ratification and implementation of the legislation. As at July 2004, direct country-specific assistance had been delivered to 43 countries. A number of regional and subregional workshops were held to allow countries to compare progress, share experiences and harmonize legislative efforts.

ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL ACTION

On 21 July [meeting 47], the Economic and Social Council, on the recommendation of the Commission on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice [E/2004/30], adopted resolution 2004/19 without vote [agenda item 14 (c)].

Strengthening international cooperation and technical assistance in promoting the implementation of the universal conventions and protocols related to terrorism within the framework of the activities of the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime

Recommends to the General Assembly the adoption of the following draft resolution:

[For text, see General Assembly resolution 59/153 below.]

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 20 December [meeting 74], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Third Committee [A/59/494], adopted resolution 59/153 without vote [agenda item 96].

Strengthening international cooperation and technical assistance in promoting the implementation of the universal conventions and protocols related to terrorism within the framework of the activities of the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime

The General Assembly,

Recalling its relevant resolutions on the prevention and suppression of terrorism, as well as Security Council resolutions 1269(1999) of 19 October 1999, 1373(2001) of 28 September 2001, 1377(2001) of 12 November 2001 and 1456(2003) of 20 January 2003,

Recalling also its resolution 56/1 of 12 September 2001, in which it strongly condemned the heinous acts of terrorism of 11 September 2001 and urgently called for international cooperation to prevent and eradicate acts of terrorism, and its resolution 57/27 of 19 November 2002, in which it also condemned those in Bali and Moscow, as well as Security Council resolutions 1450(2002) of 13 December 2002, 1465(2003) of 13 February 2003, 1516(2003) of 20 November 2003 and 1530(2004) of 11 March 2004 condemning in the strongest terms the bomb attacks in Kikambala, Kenya, in Bogotá, in Istanbul, Turkey, and in Madrid, respectively, and expressing its deepest sympathy and condolences to the victims of terrorist attacks and their families,

Condemning the acts of violence perpetrated in many parts of the world against humanitarian personnel and United Nations and associated personnel, in particular deliberate attacks, which are in violation of international humanitarian law as well as other international law that may be applicable, such as the attack against the headquarters of the United Nations Assistance Mission for Iraq in Baghdad on 19 August 2003,

Recalling its resolutions 58/136 and 58/140 of 22 December 2003, in which it, inter alia, encouraged the activities of the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime within its mandates in the area of preventing terrorism by providing Member States, upon request, with technical assistance, specifically to implement the universal conventions and protocols related to terrorism, thereby strengthening international cooperation in preventing and combating terrorism, working in close coordination with the Security Council Committee established pursuant to resolution 1373(2001) concerning counter-terrorism (the Counter-Terrorism Committee) and the Office of Legal Affairs of the Secretariat, as well as with international, regional and subregional organizations and specialized agencies,

Mindful of its resolution 58/81 of 9 December 2003, in which it welcomed the efforts of the Terrorism Prevention Branch of the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime to enhance, through its mandate, the capabilities of the United Nations in the prevention of terrorism and recognized, in the context of Security Council resolution 1373(2001), the role of the Branch in assisting States to become parties to and implement the relevant international conventions and protocols related to terrorism,

Recalling Security Council resolution 1535(2004) of 26 March 2004 concerning enhancement of the ability of the Counter-Terrorism Committee to monitor the implementation of Council resolution 1373(2001),

Recalling also the Vienna Declaration on Crime and Justice: Meeting the Challenges of the Twenty-first Century, which emanated from the Tenth United Nations Congress on the Prevention of Crime and the Treatment of Offenders, held in Vienna from 10 to 17 April 2000,

*Noting with appreciation the issuance, in all the official languages of the United Nations, of the Legislative Guide to the Universal Anti-Terrorism Conventions and Protocols, which was reviewed by an expert group hosted by the International Institute of Higher Studies in Criminal Sciences in Siracusa, Italy, from 3 to 5 December 2002,*

Noting with appreciation also the guidelines for technical assistance within the framework of international cooperation against terrorism, which were formulated and reviewed during an expert group meeting held in Cape Town, South Africa, from 24 to 27 February 2004,

Deeply concerned that acts of international terrorism continue to be perpetrated, endangering the lives and well-being of individuals worldwide, as well as the peace and security of all States,

Reaffirming its unequivocal condemnation of terrorism in all its forms and manifestations, wherever and by whomsoever committed, in accordance with the principles of the Charter of the United Nations, international law and the relevant international conventions,

Recalling that Member States must ensure that any measures taken to combat terrorism comply with all their obligations under international law and that such measures are adopted in accordance with international law, in particular international human rights, refugee and humanitarian law,

Mindful of the essential need to strengthen international, regional and subregional cooperation aimed at enhancing the national capacity of States to prevent and suppress effectively international terrorism in all its forms and manifestations,

1. Commends the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime for its work in preventing and combating terrorism through the provision of technical assistance, in close consultation with the Counter-Terrorism Committee, for the implementation of Security Council resolution 1373(2001), in particular for the promotion of the ratification of, accession to and implementation of the universal conventions and protocols related to terrorism;

2. Also commends the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime for its efforts to reinforce close cooperation with international, regional and subregional organizations, such as the Council of Europe, the International Monetary Fund, the Organization of American States, the Organization for Security and Cooperation in Europe and the World Bank, and the Counter-Terrorism Committee in preventing and combating terrorism, an example of which was the meeting held in follow-up to the Counter-Terrorism Committee special meeting of 6 March 2003, with participants from international, regional and subregional organizations, organized by the Organization for Security and Cooperation in Europe, in close cooperation with the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime, in Vienna on 11 and 12 March 2004, which resulted in the Vienna Declaration of 12 March 2004;

3. Welcomes the regional and subregional workshops held in Antalya, Turkey, and in Bamako, Khar-toum, London, San José and Vilnius to familiarize national experts and criminal justice officials with the requirements of Security Council resolution 1373 (2001) and the requirements for becoming parties to and implementing the universal conventions and protocols related to terrorism and international cooperation agreements, and encourages the Terrorism Prevention Branch of the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime, in coordination with the Counter-Terrorism Committee and subject to the availability of extrabudgetary resources, to ensure proper follow-up to those workshops, in cases where such follow-up is indicated by the participating States;

4. Calls upon Member States that have not yet done so to become parties to and to implement the universal conventions and protocols related to terrorism as soon as possible and, where appropriate, to request assistance to that end from the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime, in coordination with the Counter-Terrorism Committee;

5. Invites Member States that are not yet parties to those instruments to make use of the Legislative Guide to the Universal Anti-Terrorism Conventions and Protocols in their efforts to incorporate the provisions of those instruments in their national legislation, and requests the Secretariat, subject to the availability of extra-budgetary resources, to develop the Legislative Guide further as a tool for the provision of technical assistance aimed at the implementation of the universal conventions and protocols related to terrorism;

6. Requests the Secretariat to submit the guidelines for technical assistance that were formulated and reviewed during the expert group meeting held in Cape Town, South Africa, from 24 to 27 February 2004 to the Eleventh United Nations Congress on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice for discussion, with a view to consideration of the guidelines by the Commission on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice at its subsequent session;

7. Requests the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime to continue to work with international organizations, in particular specialized agencies and other relevant United Nations entities that undertake work that is complementary to that of the Office, in order to enhance synergies;

8. Urges Member States to continue working together, including on a regional and bilateral basis and in close cooperation with the United Nations, to prevent and combat acts of terrorism by strengthening international cooperation and technical assistance within the framework of Security Council resolutions 1373 (2001), 1377(2001) and 1456(2003), as well as the universal conventions and protocols related to terrorism, Council resolutions 1267(1999) of 15 October 1999, 1333(2000) of 19 December 2000, 1390(2002) of 16 January 2002, 1455(2003) of 17 January 2003, 1526 (2004) of 30 January 2004 and 1535(2004) and other relevant United Nations resolutions, and in accordance with the Charter of the United Nations and international law;

9. Invites Member States to examine ways and means to reinforce international cooperation in criminal justice matters pertaining to terrorism prevention during the Eleventh United Nations Congress on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice with a view to enhancing global efforts in the fight against terrorism;

10. Requests the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime, subject to the availability of extra-budgetary resources, to intensify its efforts to provide technical assistance, upon request, in preventing and combating terrorism through the implementation of the universal conventions and protocols related to terrorism, with particular emphasis on the need to coordinate its work with the Counter-Terrorism Committee and its Executive Directorate, including training of judicial and prosecutorial personnel, where appropriate, in the proper implementation of the universal conventions and protocols related to terrorism;

11. Also requests the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime to pursue an integrated, synergistic approach in the delivery of technical assistance to requesting States, taking into account the links that exist between terrorism and other forms of crime;

12. Expresses its appreciation to donor countries that have supported the Global Programme against Terrorism, through voluntary contributions to the United Nations Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice Fund or the United Nations Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice Programme network, and invites all Member States to make voluntary contributions to the Fund in order to allow the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime to provide technical assistance to requesting Member States;

13. Calls upon Member States to strengthen, to the greatest extent possible, international cooperation in order to combat terrorism, including, when necessary, entering into bilateral treaties on extradition and mutual legal assistance;

14. Recognizes the need for the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime, subject to the availability of extrabudgetary resources, to provide Member States, upon request, and in coordination with the Counter-Terrorism Committee, with technical assistance to strengthen international cooperation, including in international, national, regional and subregional forums, in terrorism-related criminal justice matters within the framework of the universal conventions and protocols and the relevant Security Council resolutions related to terrorism;

15. Requests the Secretary-General to convene, subject to the availability of extrabudgetary resources, an expert workshop, taking into account the need for adequate and equitable geographical representation, and open to any Member State wishing to participate as an observer, to examine and analyse problems encountered by criminal justice practitioners in affording mutual legal assistance and granting extradition for terrorist offences, with a view to identifying proven and promising practices and possible ways of facilitating international cooperation, taking into account information that Member States may wish to provide;

16. Also requests the Secretary-General to report to the General Assembly at its sixtieth session on the implementation of the present resolution.

On the same date, the General Assembly took note of the Secretary-General's report on strengthening international cooperation and technical assistance in preventing and combating terrorism (see p. 1125) (decision 59/523).

Trafficking in human organs

ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL ACTION

On 21 July [meeting 47], the Economic and Social Council, on the recommendation of the Commission on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice [E/2004/30], adopted resolution 2004/22 without vote [agenda item 14 (c)].

Preventing, combating and punishing trafficking in human organs

The Economic and Social Council

Recommends to the General Assembly the adoption of the following draft resolution:

[For text, see General Assembly resolution 59/156 below.]

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 20 December [meeting 74], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Third Committee [A/59/494], adopted resolution 59/156 without vote [agenda item 96].

Preventing, combating and punishing trafficking in human organs

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 53/111 of 9 December 1998, by which it established an open-ended intergovernmental ad hoc committee for the purpose of elaborating a comprehensive international convention against transnational organized crime and of discussing the elaboration, as appropriate, of international instruments addressing trafficking in women and children, combating illicit manufacturing of and trafficking in firearms, their parts and components and ammunition, and illegal trafficking in and transporting of migrants, including by sea,

Recalling also its resolution 55/25 of 15 November 2000, by which it adopted the United Nations Convention against Transnational Organized Crime, the Protocol to Prevent, Suppress and Punish Trafficking in Persons, Especially Women and Children, supplementing the United Nations Convention against Transnational Organized Crime, and the Protocol against the Smuggling of Migrants by Land, Sea and Air, supplementing the United Nations Convention against Transnational Organized Crime,

Recalling further its resolution 55/255 of 31 May 2001, by which it adopted the Protocol against the Illicit Manufacturing of and Trafficking in Firearms, Their Parts and Components and Ammunition, supplementing the United Nations Convention against Transnational Organized Crime,

Concerned about the negative economic and social implications of the activities of organized crime and the possible expansion of such crime, such as trafficking in human organs,

Alarmed at the potential growth of exploitation by criminal groups of human needs, poverty and destitution for the purpose of trafficking in human organs, using violence, coercion and kidnapping, especially kidnapping of children, with a view to exploiting them by means of organ transplant operations,

Noting with concern that trafficking in human organs, wherever it occurs, constitutes a gross violation of the human rights, including the integrity, of its victims,

Convinced of the need to strengthen local, regional and international cooperation in effective prevention and combating of such activities wherever they occur,

Determined to prevent the provision of safe haven to those who participate in or profit from transnational organized crime and to prosecute such persons for the crimes they commit,

Deploring the commercialization of the human body,

1. Urges Member States, should they ascertain that such a phenomenon exists in their country, to adopt the necessary measures to prevent, combat and punish the illicit removal of and trafficking in human organs;

2. Encourages Member States to exchange experience in and information on preventing, combating and punishing the illicit removal of and trafficking in human organs;

3. Requests the Eleventh United Nations Congress on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice to pay attention to the issue of the illicit removal of and trafficking in human organs;

4. Requests the Secretary-General, in collaboration with the States and organizations concerned and subject to the availability of extrabudgetary resources, to prepare a study on the extent of the phenomenon of trafficking in human organs for submission to the Commission on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice at its fifteenth session.

Kidnapping

In March [E/CN.15/2004/7 & Add.1], the Secretary-General, in response to Economic and Social Council resolution 2003/28 [YUN 2003, p. 1153], submitted a report on “international cooperation in the prevention, combating and elimination of kidnapping and in providing assistance to victims”. The report summarized the replies received from an additional eight Member States to a survey on the practice and extent of kidnapping, which related to legal provisions, types and extent of kidnapping and measures adopted to counter it. It also outlined the key findings of a consultative meeting on best practices (Mexico City, October 2003).

The Secretary-General recommended that attempts should be made to: harmonize the definition of kidnapping used in various jurisdictions; monitor global levels of kidnapping and its connection to organized crime; increase the debate between States as to measures that had proved successful in combating the problem; and develop a law enforcement manual on prevention and counter-kidnapping techniques and its promotion through the Internet. The Secretariat should be authorized to prepare the manual and submit proposals to the Eleventh United Nations Congress on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice in 2005 (see p. 1108).

ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL ACTION

On 21 July [meeting 47], the Economic and Social Council, on the recommendation of the Commission on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice [E/2004/30], adopted resolution 2004/20 without vote [agenda item 14 (c)].

International cooperation in the prevention, combating and elimination of kidnapping and in providing assistance to victims

Recommends to the General Assembly the adoption of the following draft resolution:

[For text, see General Assembly resolution 59/154 below.]

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 20 December [meeting 74], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Third Committee [A/59/494], adopted resolution 59/154 without vote [agenda item 96].

International cooperation in the prevention, combating and elimination of kidnapping and in providing assistance to victims

The General Assembly,

Concerned at the increase in the practice of kidnapping in various countries of the world and at the harmful effects of that crime on victims and their families, and determined to support measures to assist and protect them and to promote their recovery,

Reiterating that the kidnapping of persons under any circumstances and for any purpose constitutes a serious crime and a violation of individual freedom and undermines human rights,

Noting the transnational nature of organized crime and the tendency of organized criminal groups and terrorist groups to expand their illegal operations,

Concerned at the growing tendency of organized criminal groups and terrorist groups to resort to kidnapping, especially for the purpose of extortion, as a method of accumulating capital with a view to consolidating their criminal operations and undertaking other illegal activities, such as trafficking in firearms and drugs, money-laundering and crimes related to terrorism,

Convinced that the links between various illegal activities, including terrorism, and organized crime pose an additional threat to security and the quality of life, hindering economic and social development,

Convinced also that the United Nations Convention against Transnational Organized Crime provides the legal framework necessary for international cooperation in the fight against kidnapping,

Recalling Economic and Social Council resolution 2003/28 of 22 July 2003 entitled “International cooperation in the prevention, combating and elimination of kidnapping and in providing assistance to victims”, in which the Council requested the Secretary-General, drawing on extrabudgetary funds or voluntary contributions, to provide technical assistance to States, upon request, to enable them to strengthen their capacity to combat kidnapping, and to submit a progress report on that topic to the Commission on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice at its thirteenth session,

1. Vigorously condemns and rejects once again the practice of kidnapping, under any circumstances and for any purpose, especially when it is carried out by organized criminal groups and terrorist groups;

2. Reiterates that organized criminal groups and terrorist groups, as well as all perpetrators, are responsible for any harm or death that may result from a kidnapping for which they are responsible and should be punished accordingly;

3. Takes note with appreciation of the report of the Secretary-General and of the recommendations presented therein, submitted pursuant to Economic and Social Council resolutions 2002/16 of 24 July 2002 and 2003/28;

4. Encourages Member States to continue to foster international cooperation, especially extradition, mutual legal assistance, collaboration between law enforcement authorities and exchange of information, with a view to preventing, combating and eradicating kidnapping;

5. Calls upon Member States that have not yet done so, in furtherance of the fight against kidnapping, to strengthen their measures against money-laundering and to engage in international cooperation and mutual assistance in, inter alia, the tracing, detection, freezing and confiscation of proceeds of kidnapping in order to combat organized criminal groups and terrorist groups;

6. Urges Member States that have not yet done so to pay special attention to the considerable psychological, social and economic damage associated with kidnapping by adopting legislative, administrative or any other measures to provide appropriate support and assistance to victims and their families;

7. Requests the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime, subject to the availability of extrabudgetary resources, to prepare a handbook, for use by competent authorities, of proven and promising practices in the fight against kidnapping, including:

(a) Measures to prevent the crime of kidnapping that are directed at potential victims;

(b) Preventive measures aimed at disbanding organized criminal groups and terrorist groups;

(c) Cooperation or strategic alliances with the private sector;

(d) Response to and management of crises;

(e) Identification of the minimum elements that would help States to make adjustments to their domestic legislation with a view to having a common understanding of the crime of kidnapping, which would also help to ascertain reliable trends from a global perspective;

(f) Development of specialized measures for providing support and assistance to victims and their families;

(g) Information on national authorities responsible for preventing and combating kidnapping;

(h) Reporting procedures, rescue operations, information systems and prosecutions;

8. Also requests the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime, subject to the availability of extrabudgetary resources, to provide technical assistance to States, upon request, to enable them to strengthen their capacity to combat kidnapping, including:

(a) Training of judges, prosecutors and other law enforcement officials in mechanisms for disbanding criminal organizations and in the use of special investigative techniques for the rescue of kidnapped persons, bearing in mind the particular need to safeguard and protect the victims;

(b) Review of trends and greater understanding of the problem in order to create a basis for developing policies and strategies against kidnapping.

Urban crime

In response to Economic and Social Council resolution 2003/26 [YUN 2003, p. 1154], the Secretary-General submitted a March report [E/CN.15/2004/12 & Add.1] on good practices in crime prevention, which discussed the preparation of a UN manual on the use and application of the Guidelines for the Prevention of Crime, accepted by the Council in resolution 2002/13, annex [YUN 2002, p. 1126], the modalities of which were agreed at a meeting of experts (Durban, South Africa, 28 November 2003). The experts agreed that every effort should be made to finalize the draft for discussion at a workshop on crime prevention at the Eleventh Congress on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice in 2005.

Under the project approved by the General Assembly in resolution 58/271 A [YUN 2003, p. 1414], on South-South regional cooperation for promoting good practices for crime prevention in the developing world, the first meeting of crime prevention experts from South Africa and the Southern African Regional Police Chiefs Cooperation organization with their Caribbean counterparts was held (Kingston, Jamaica, 13-14 February) in conjunction with the Third Caribbean Conference on Crime and Criminal Justice (Kingston, 11-14 February). Participants discussed community policing, prevention of violence, conflict resolution and reintegration of offenders. They agreed to set up a website to be hosted and maintained by the Institute for Security Studies, in Pretoria, South Africa, for the exchange of information. UNODC also organized, with the Permanent Mission of Hungary to the United Nations (Vienna), a workshop (February) to discuss the Hungarian National Strategy for Social Crime Prevention.

The report also contained replies from eight Member States and two organizations on the implementation of resolution 2003/26.

ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL ACTION

On 21 July [meeting 47], the Economic and Social Council, on the recommendation of the Commission on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice [E/2004/30], adopted resolution 2004/31 without vote [item 14 (c)].

Prevention of urban crime

The Economic and Social Council,

Recalling its resolution 2003/26 of 22 July 2003 on the prevention of urban crime, in which it called upon all relevant United Nations organizations and bodies and international financial institutions to give appropriate consideration to the inclusion of urban crime prevention and law enforcement projects in their assistance programmes,

Recalling also the Declaration on Cities and Other Human Settlements in the New Millennium adopted by the General Assembly in its resolution S-25/2 of 9 June 2001, in which the Assembly reaffirmed that the Istanbul Declaration on Human Settlements and the Habitat Agenda would remain the basic framework for sustainable human settlement development in the years to come,

Concerned about the seriousness of violent crimes in cities all over the world, which generates a fear of crime and has an impact on sustainable economic development, the quality of life and human rights,

Recalling that it had requested the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime and the United Nations Human Settlements Programme (UN-Habitat) to prepare proposals for the provision of technical assistance in the area of crime prevention in accordance with the Guidelines for the Prevention of Crime, including through capacity-building and training,

Recalling also that the United Nations Human Settlements Programme and the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime have explored areas of mutual interest in order to collaborate in the betterment of good urban governance with a view to achieving the goals and targets of the United Nations Millennium Declaration, including linking urban safety and urban governance, developing a conceptual understanding and tools in relation to the role of local authorities in crime prevention, examining local manifestations of transnational organized crime and developing new forms of justice, policing and policies targeting groups at risk, in particular children, youth and women,

Taking note of the memorandum of understanding between the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime and the United Nations Human Settlements Programme aimed at establishing a framework for collaboration, and noting that bilateral consultations have taken place and a programme of work has been developed,

Noting the progress made by Member States in establishing effective policies and programmes in urban crime prevention, and encouraging increased sharing of experience,

1. Welcomes the initiative of the United Nations Human Settlements Programme (UN-Habitat) to collaborate with the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime on technical assistance in relation to crime prevention, including the links between local and transnational organized crime, through operational projects, joint workshops and the compilation of useful practices and guidelines;

2. Also welcomes the fact that due attention will be given to the issue of urban crime at the Eleventh United Nations Congress on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice in the Workshop on Strategies and Best Practices for Crime Prevention, in particular in relation to Urban Crime and Youth at Risk;

3. Takes note of the Safer Cities Programme of the United Nations Human Settlements Programme, and encourages municipalities to join the related network;

4. Welcomes the initiative of the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime to establish, for developing countries, a database of good and promising practices in the area of urban crime prevention, in coordination with the United Nations Human Settlements Programme and the relevant institutes of the United Nations Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice Programme network;

5. Encourages the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime to develop its knowledge and tools pertaining to the role of local authorities in the prevention of crime through the development of specific measures targeting groups at risk, in particular children and youth;

6. Invites Member States to make or increase voluntary contributions, as appropriate, to the United Nations Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice Fund, as well as to make or increase contributions in direct support of activities and projects, including through contributions to the institutes of the United Nations Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice Programme network, in order to strengthen further the capacity of the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime to provide technical assistance;

7. Requests the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime, subject to the availability of extrabudgetary resources, to provide technical assistance to States, upon request, in collaboration with other relevant entities, in the area of urban crime prevention;

8. Calls once again upon all relevant United Nations organizations and bodies and international financial institutions to give appropriate consideration to the inclusion of urban crime prevention and law enforcement projects in their programmes of assistance.

UN standards and norms

The Intergovernmental Expert Group Meeting on United Nations Standards and Norms in Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice (Vienna, 23-25 March) [E/CN.15/2004/9/Add.1], convened pursuant to Economic and Social Council resolution 2003/30 [YUN 2003, p. 1155], adopted a draft resolution on standards and norms in crime prevention and criminal justice, which it recommended to the Commission on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice. The meeting reviewed the four draft instruments for gathering information on standards and norms primarily related to persons in custody, non-custodial sanctions, and juvenile and restorative justice, and adopted the revised instruments for submission to the Commission at its 2004 session (see p. 1110). It also reviewed the standards and norms related to legal, institutional and practical arrangements for international cooperation and concluded that because they took the form of model treaties they could not be effectively assessed through information-gathering instruments. However, the meeting stressed the importance of keeping the development of those instruments under review.

The Secretary-General submitted to the Commission an April report [A/CN.15/2004/9] on UN standards and norms in crime prevention and criminal justice, in response to Council resolution 2003/30. The report summarized the replies from Member States and non-governmental organizations relating to the implementation of that resolution and the outcome of the intergovernmental expert group meeting (see above). It provided an overview of activities undertaken to disseminate UN standards and norms in crime prevention and criminal justice and described advisory services and technical cooperation delivered.

ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL ACTION

On 21 July [meeting 47], the Economic and Social Council, on the recommendation of the Commission on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice [E/2004/30], adopted resolution 2004/28 without vote [agenda 14 (c)].

United Nations standards and norms in crime prevention and criminal justice

The Economic and Social Council,

Recalling the United Nations Millennium Declaration, contained in General Assembly resolution 55/2 of 8 September 2000, in which the Assembly resolved to strengthen respect for the rule of law in international as in national affairs and to make the United Nations more effective in maintaining peace and security by giving it the resources and tools it needed for conflict prevention, peaceful resolution of disputes, peacekeeping, post-conflict peace-building and reconstruction,

Mindful of the report of 21 August 2000 of the Panel on United Nations Peace Operations and the discussions on justice and the rule of law held by the Security Council,

Noting the leading role of the Department of Peacekeeping Operations of the Secretariat, among other entities, in providing assistance to countries in post-conflict situations,

Recognizing the critical importance of incorporating crime prevention and criminal justice components in post-conflict reconstruction, poverty alleviation and socio-economic development programmes in order to ensure economic progress and good governance,

Mindful of the importance for Member States and intergovernmental and non-governmental organizations to use and apply United Nations standards and norms in crime prevention and criminal justice as important international principles in developing an efficient and fair criminal justice system, in particular in circumstances where the basic tenets of the rule of law are ineffective or absent or in post-conflict reconstruction,

Recalling its resolution 1993/34 of 27 July 1993, in particular section III, paragraph 7 (c) thereof, in which it requested the Secretary-General to commence without delay a process of information-gathering to be undertaken by means of surveys, such as reporting systems, and contributions from other sources,

Recalling also its resolution 2002/15 of 24 July 2002, in which it reaffirmed the importance of United Nations standards and norms in crime prevention and criminal justice, including in the framework of peacekeeping and post-conflict reconstruction,

Recalling further its resolution 2003/30 of 22 July 2003, in which it decided to group United Nations standards and norms in crime prevention and criminal justice into four categories for the purpose of targeted collection of information, in order to better identify the specific needs of Member States and to provide an analytical framework with a view to improving technical cooperation,

Reaffirming the important role of intergovernmental and non-governmental organizations in contributing to the effective use and application of United Nations standards and norms in crime prevention and criminal justice,

Desirous of reforming and streamlining the current process of information-gathering with regard to the application of United Nations standards and norms in crime prevention and criminal justice, in order to make it more efficient and cost-effective,

Wishing to streamline the provision of technical assistance in the use and application of United Nations standards and norms in crime prevention and criminal justice,

1. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General on United Nations standards and norms in crime prevention and criminal justice;

2. Also takes note of the report of the Intergovernmental Expert Group Meeting on United Nations Standards and Norms in Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice held in Vienna from 23 to 25 March 2004;

3. Notes the work undertaken by the Intergovernmental Expert Group Meeting on United Nations Standards and Norms in Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice;

4. Expresses its gratitude to the Government of Canada for its financial support in the organization of the Intergovernmental Expert Group Meeting and to the European Institute for Crime Prevention and Control, affiliated with the United Nations, for assisting in the preparation of the information-gathering instruments for the first category of United Nations standards and norms in crime prevention and criminal justice;

5. Takes note of the instruments for gathering information on United Nations standards and norms related primarily to persons in custody, non-custodial sanctions and juvenile and restorative justice, as revised by the Intergovernmental Expert Group Meeting;

6. Requests the Secretary-General to forward the information-gathering instruments referred to in paragraph 5 above to Member States, intergovernmental and non-governmental organizations and the institutes of the United Nations Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice Programme network and other United Nations entities for their comments;

7. Also requests the Secretary-General to review the information-gathering instruments referred to in paragraph 5 above on the basis of the comments received and, following that review, to submit the revised instruments to an intersessional meeting of the Commission on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice for approval;

8. Invites Member States to reply concerning the information-gathering instruments and to indicate their needs for technical assistance in the areas covered by the standards and norms referred to in paragraph 5 above;

9. Requests the Secretary-General to report to the Commission on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice at its fifteenth session on the use and application of the United Nations standards and norms referred to in paragraph 5 above, in particular as regards:

(a) The difficulties encountered in the application of the United Nations standards and norms in crime prevention and criminal justice;

(b) Ways in which technical assistance can be provided to overcome those difficulties;

(c) Useful practices in addressing persisting and emerging challenges in crime prevention and criminal justice;

10. Invites Member States to strengthen the human and financial resources available to the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime in order to enable the Office to better assist States in conducting seminars, workshops, training programmes and other activities aimed at promoting the use and application of the United Nations standards and norms in crime prevention and criminal justice;

11. Requests the Secretary-General to assist Member States, upon request, subject to the availability of extrabudgetary resources, in the use and application of United Nations standards and norms in crime prevention and criminal justice through the development and implementation of technical assistance projects aimed at criminal justice reform;

12. Requests the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime to continue to work with the Department of Peacekeeping Operations of the Secretariat and other relevant entities responsible for providing assistance to countries in post-conflict situations and, subject to the availability of extrabudgetary resources, to strengthen its capacity to provide technical assistance and advisory services to post-conflict reconstruction efforts by utilizing the instruments for gathering information on United Nations standards and norms in crime prevention and criminal justice to obtain data that will assist in integrating a crime prevention and criminal justice component into those activities;

13. Requests the Secretary-General to keep the development of legal, institutional and practical arrangements for international cooperation under review, through appropriate mechanisms such as, subject to the availability of extrabudgetary resources, the revision of the manuals on extradition and mutual legal assistance and preparation of model laws, in order to make international cooperation and technical assistance more effective;

14. Invites the Eleventh United Nations Congress on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice, to be held in Bangkok from 18 to 25 April 2005, under the agenda item "Making standards work: fifty years of standard-setting in crime prevention and criminal justice", to address the issues raised in the present resolution with a view to consolidating and making more effective the action of United Nations and other intergovernmental and non-governmental organizations in this field;

15. Requests the Secretary-General to convene a meeting of intergovernmental experts, with representation based on the regional composition of the Commission on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice and open to observers, subject to the availability of extrabudgetary resources, in cooperation with the institutes of the United Nations Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice Programme network, to design information-gathering instruments on the following categories of United Nations standards and norms:

(a) Standards and norms related to legal, institutional and practical arrangements for international cooperation, wherever feasible;

(b) Standards and norms related primarily to crime prevention and victim issues;

16. Also requests the Secretary-General to forward the information-gathering instruments referred to in paragraph 15 above to Member States, intergovernmental and non-governmental organizations and the institutes of the United Nations Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice Programme network and other United Nations entities for their comments;

17. Further requests the Secretary-General to review the information-gathering instruments referred to in paragraph 15 above, on the basis of the comments received, and to present those instruments, together with his report on progress made in their preparation, to the Commission on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice at its sixteenth session.

Guidelines on justice for child victims and witnesses

On 21 July [meeting 47], the Economic and Social Council, on the recommendation of the Commission on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice [E/2004/30], adopted resolution 2004/27 without vote [agenda item 14 (c)].

Guidelines on justice for child victims and witnesses of crime

The Economic and Social Council,

Recalling General Assembly resolution 40/34 of 29 November 1985, by which the Assembly adopted the Declaration of Basic Principles of Justice for Victims of Crime and Abuse of Power,

Recalling also the provisions of the Convention on the Rights of the Child, adopted by the General Assembly in its resolution 44/25 of 20 November 1989, in particular articles 3 and 39 thereof, as well as the provisions of the Optional Protocol to the Convention on the Rights of the Child on the sale of children, child prostitution and child pornography, adopted by the Assembly in its resolution 54/263 of 25 May 2000, in particular article 8 thereof,

Bearing in mind the relevant provisions of the Vienna Declaration on Crime and Justice: Meeting the Challenges of the Twenty-first Century, annexed to General Assembly resolution 55/59 of 4 December 2000, as well as the plans of action for the implementation of the Vienna Declaration, annexed to Assembly resolution 56/261 of 31 January 2002, in particular the plans of action on witnesses and victims of crime and juvenile justice,

Bearing in mind also the document entitled "A world fit for children", adopted by the General Assembly in its resolution S-27/2 of 10 May 2002,

Recalling its resolution 1996/16 of 23 July 1996, in which it requested the Secretary-General to continue to promote the use and application of United Nations standards and norms in crime prevention and criminal justice,

Mindful of the serious physical, psychological and emotional consequences of various forms of crime for the victims, especially child victims,

Recognizing that the participation of child victims and witnesses of crime in the criminal justice process is essential in order to prosecute effectively various forms of crime, including in cases of sexual exploitation of children, trafficking in children and other forms of transnational organized crime where children are often the only witnesses,

Mindful of the public interest in a fair trial based on reliable evidence and also of the susceptibility of child witnesses and victims to suggestion or coercion,

Mindful also of the fact that child victims and witnesses of crime require special protection, assistance and support appropriate to their age, level of maturity and individual special needs in order to prevent additional hardship caused to them as a result of their participation in the criminal justice process,

Emphasizing that United Nations standards and norms in crime prevention and criminal justice contribute to the body of declarations, treaties and other instruments spearheading criminal justice reform in Member States aimed at dealing effectively and humanely with any form of crime and its prevention worldwide,

Noting with appreciation the efforts of the International Bureau for Children's Rights in drawing up guidelines on justice for child victims and witnesses of crime, drafted together with a steering/drafting committee of renowned international experts in the area of child rights, criminal law and victimology,

1. Requests the Secretary-General to convene an intergovernmental expert group, with representation based on the regional composition of the Commission on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice and open to any Member State wishing to participate as an observer, subject to the availability of extrabudgetary resources, in order to develop guidelines on justice in matters involving child victims and witnesses of crime;

2. Requests the intergovernmental expert group, within the context of its meeting, to take into consideration any relevant material, including the guidelines on justice for child victims and witnesses of crime drawn up by the International Bureau for Children's Rights, annexed to the present resolution;

3. Invites the Eleventh United Nations Congress on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice, under the substantive item entitled "Making standards work: fifty years of standard-setting in crime prevention and criminal justice", during the Workshop on Enhancing Criminal Justice Reform, including Restorative Justice, and during the ancillary meetings of non-governmental and professional organizations, to consider and discuss the issue of guidelines on justice for child victims and witnesses of crime, and invites the intergovernmental expert group to take into account the results of those discussions in carrying out its work;

4. Requests the Secretary-General to submit to the Commission on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice at its fifteenth session for its consideration and action a report on the results of the meeting of the intergovernmental expert group.

Annex

Guidelines on justice for child victims and witnesses of crime drawn up by the International Bureau for Children's Rights

I. Objectives and preamble

A. Objectives

1. The present guidelines on justice for child victims and witnesses of crime set forth good practice based on the consensus of contemporary knowledge and relevant international and regional norms, standards and principles.

2. The guidelines provide a practical framework to achieve the following objectives:

(a) To guide professionals and, where appropriate, volunteers working with child victims and witnesses of crime in their day-to-day practice in the adult and juvenile justice process at the national, regional and international levels, consistent with the Declaration of Basic Principles of Justice for Victims of Crime and Abuse of Power;

(b) To assist in the review of national and domestic laws, procedures and practices so that these ensure full respect for the rights of child victims and witnesses of crime and fully implement the Convention on the Rights of the Child;

(c) To assist Governments, international organizations, public agencies, non-governmental and community based organizations and other interested parties in designing and implementing legislation, policy, programmes and practices that address key issues related to child victims and witnesses of crime;

(d) To assist and support those caring for children in dealing sensitively with child victims and witnesses of crime.

3. Each jurisdiction will need to implement the present guidelines consistent with its legal, social, economic, cultural and geographical conditions. However, the jurisdiction should constantly endeavour to overcome practical difficulties in their application, as the guidelines are, in their entirety, a set of minimum acceptable principles and standards.

4. In implementing the guidelines, each jurisdiction must ensure that adequate training, selection and procedures are put in place to meet the special needs of child victims and witnesses of crime, where the nature of the victimization affects categories of children differently, such as sexual assault of girl children.

5. The guidelines cover a field in which knowledge and practice are growing and improving. They are neither intended to be exhaustive nor to preclude further development, provided it is in harmony with their underlying objectives and principles.

6. The guidelines should also be applied to processes in informal and customary systems of justice such as restorative justice and in non-criminal fields of law including, but not limited to, custody, divorce, adoption, child protection, mental health, citizenship, immigration and refugee law.

B. Considerations

7. The guidelines were developed:

(a) Cognizant that millions of children throughout the world suffer harm as a result of crime and abuse of power and that the rights of those children have not been adequately recognized and that they may suffer additional hardship when assisting in the justice process;

(b) Reaffirming that every effort must be made to prevent victimization of children, particularly through implementation of the Guidelines for the Prevention of Crime;

(c) Recalling that the Convention on the Rights of the Child sets forth requirements and principles to secure effective recognition of the rights of children and that the Declaration of Basic Principles of Justice for Victims of Crime and Abuse of Power sets forth principles to provide victims with the right to information, participation, protection, reparation and assistance;

(d) Stressing that all States parties to international and regional instruments have a duty to fulfil their obligations, including the implementation of the Convention on the Rights of the Child and its Protocols;

(e) Recalling international and regional initiatives that implement the principles of the Declaration of Basic Principles of Justice for Victims of Crime and Abuse of Power, including the Handbook on Justice for Victims and the Guide for Policy Makers on the Declaration of Basic Principles, both issued by the United Nations Office for Drug Control and Crime Prevention in 1999;

(f) Recognizing that children are vulnerable and require special protection appropriate to their age, level of maturity and individual special needs;

(g) Considering that improved responses to child victims and witnesses of crime can make children and their families more willing to disclose instances of victimization and more supportive of the justice process;

(h) Recalling that justice for child victims and witnesses of crime must be assured while safeguarding the rights of accused and convicted offenders, including those that focus on children in conflict with the law, such as the United Nations Standard Minimum Rules for the Administration of Juvenile Justice (the Beijing Rules);

(i) Bearing in mind the variety of legal systems and traditions, and noting that crime is increasingly transnational in nature and that there is a need to ensure that child victims and witnesses of crime receive equivalent protection in all countries.

C. Principles

8. In order to ensure justice for child victims and witnesses of crime, professionals and others responsible for the well-being of those children must respect the following cross-cutting principles as stated in other international instruments and in particular the Convention on the Rights of the Child, as reflected in the work of the Committee on the Rights of the Child:

(a) Dignity. Every child is a unique and valuable human being and as such his or her individual dignity, special needs, interests and privacy should be respected and protected;

(b) Non-discrimination. Every child has the right to be treated fairly and equally, regardless of his or her or the parent or legal guardian's race, ethnicity, colour, gender, language, religion, political or other opinion, national, ethnic or social origin, property, disability and birth or other status;

(c) Best interests of the child. Every child has the right to have his or her best interests given primary consideration. This includes the right to protection and to a chance for harmonious development;

(i) Protection. Every child has the right to life and survival and to be shielded from any form of hardship, abuse or neglect, including physical, psychological, mental and emotional abuse and neglect;

(ii) Harmonious development. Every child has the right to a chance for harmonious development and to a standard of living adequate for physical, mental, spiritual, moral and social growth. In the case of a child who has been traumatized, every step should be taken to enable the child to enjoy healthy development;

(d) Right to participation. Every child has the right to express his or her views, opinions and beliefs freely in all matters, in his or her own words, and to contribute especially to the decisions affecting his or her life, including those taken in any judicial processes, and to have those views taken into consideration.

D. Definitions

9. Throughout the present guidelines, the following definitions apply:

(a) "Child victims and witnesses" denotes children and adolescents, under the age of 18, who are victims of crime or witnesses to crime regardless of their role in the offence or in the prosecution of the alleged offender or groups of offenders;

(b) "Professionals" refers to persons who, within the context of their work, are in contact with child victims and witnesses of crime and for whom the present guidelines are applicable. This includes, but is not limited to, the following: child and victim advocates and support persons; child protection service practitioners; child welfare agency staff; prosecutors and defence lawyers; diplomatic and consular staff; domestic violence programme staff; judges; law enforcement officials; medical and mental health professionals; and social workers;

(c) "Justice process" encompasses detection of the crime, making of the complaint, investigation, prosecution and trial and post-trial procedures, regardless of whether the case is handled in a national, international or regional criminal justice system for adults or juveniles, or in a customary or informal system of justice;

(d) "Child-sensitive" denotes an approach that takes into account the child's individual needs and wishes.

II. Guidelines on justice for child victims and witnesses of crime

A. The right to be treated with dignity and compassion

10. Child victims and witnesses should be treated in a caring and sensitive manner throughout the justice process, taking into account their personal situation and immediate needs, age, gender, disability and level of maturity and fully respecting their physical, mental and moral integrity.

11. Every child should be treated as an individual with his or her individual needs, wishes and feelings. Professionals should not treat any child as a typical child of a given age or as a typical victim or witness of a specific crime.

12. Interference in the child's private life should be limited to the minimum needed at the same time as high standards of evidence collection are maintained in order to ensure fair and equitable outcomes of the justice process.

13. In order to avoid further hardship to the child, interviews, examinations and other forms of investigation should be conducted by trained professionals who proceed in a sensitive, respectful and thorough manner.

14. All interactions described in the present guidelines should be conducted in a child-sensitive and empathetic manner in a suitable environment that accommodates the special needs of the child. They should also take place in a language that the child uses and understands.

B. The right to be protected from discrimination

15. Child victims and witnesses should have access to a justice process that protects them from discrimination based on the child, parent or legal guardian's race, colour, sex, language, religion, political or other opinion, national, ethnic or social origin, property, disability and birth or other status.

16. The justice process and support services available to child victims and witnesses and their families should be sensitive to the child's age, wishes, understanding, gender, sexual orientation, ethnic, cultural, religious, linguistic and social background, caste, socio-economic condition and immigration or refugee status, as well as to the special needs of the child, including health, abilities and capacities. Professionals should be trained and educated about such differences.

17. In many cases, special services and protection will need to be instituted to take account of the different nature of specific offences against children, such as sexual assault involving girl children.

18. Age should not be a barrier to a child's right to participate fully in the justice process. Every child has the right to be treated as a capable witness and his or her testimony should be presumed valid and credible at trial unless proven otherwise and as long as his or her age and maturity allow the giving of intelligible testimony, with or without communication aids and other assistance.

C. The right to be informed

19. Child victims and witnesses, their families and their legal representatives, from their first contact with the justice process and throughout that process, have the right to be promptly informed of:

(a) The availability of health, psychological, social and other relevant services as well as the means of accessing such services along with legal or other advice or representation, compensation and emergency financial support, where applicable;

(b) The procedures for the adult and juvenile criminal justice process, including the role of child victims and witnesses, the importance, timing and manner of testimony, and ways in which "questioning" will be conducted during the investigation and trial;

(c) The progress and disposition of the specific case, including the apprehension, arrest and custodial status of the accused and any pending changes to that status, the prosecutorial decision and relevant post-trial developments and the outcome of the case;

(d) The existing support mechanisms for the child when making a complaint and participating in the investigation and court proceedings;

(e) The specific places and times of hearings and other relevant events;

(f) The availability of protective measures;

(g) The existing opportunities to obtain reparation from the offender or from the State through the justice process, through alternative civil proceedings or through other processes;

(h) The existing mechanisms for review of decisions affecting child victims and witnesses;

(i) The relevant rights for child victims and witnesses pursuant to the Convention on the Rights of the Child and the Declaration of Basic Principles of Justice for Victims of Crime and Abuse of Power.

D. The right to express views and concerns and to be heard

20. Professionals should make every effort to enable child victims and witnesses to express their views and concerns related to their involvement in the justice process.

21. Professionals should:

(a) Ensure that child victims and witnesses are consulted on the matters set forth in paragraph 19 above;

(b) Ensure that child victims and witnesses are enabled to express freely and in their own manner their views and concerns regarding their involvement in the justice process, their concerns regarding safety in relation to the accused, the manner in which they prefer to provide testimony and their feelings about the conclusions of the process.

22. Professionals should give due regard to the child's views and concerns and, if they are unable to accommodate them, should explain the reasons to the child.

E. The right to effective assistance

23. Child victims and witnesses and, where appropriate, family members should have access to assistance provided by professionals who have received relevant training as set out in paragraphs 41-43 below. This includes assistance and support services such as financial, legal, counselling, health and social services, physical and psychological recovery services, and other services necessary for the child's reintegration. All such assistance should address the child's needs and enable them to participate effectively at all stages of the justice process.

24. In assisting child victims and witnesses, professionals should make every effort to coordinate support so that the child is not subjected to excessive interventions.

25. Child victims and witnesses should receive assistance from support persons, such as child victim/witness specialists, commencing at the initial report and continuing until such services are no longer required.

26. Professionals should develop and implement measures to make it easier for children to give evidence and to improve communication and understanding at the pre-trial and trial stages. These measures may include:

(a) Child victim and witness specialists to address the child's special needs;

(b) Support persons, including specialists and appropriate family members to accompany the child during testimony;

(c) Guardians ad litem to protect the child's legal interests.

F. The right to privacy

27. Child victims and witnesses should have their privacy protected as a matter of primary importance.

28. Any information relating to a child's involvement in the justice process should be protected. This can be achieved through maintaining confidentiality and restricting disclosure of information that may lead to identification of a child who is a victim or witness in the justice process.

29. Where appropriate, measures should be taken to exclude the public and the media from the courtroom during the child's testimony.

G. The right to be protected from hardship during the justice process

30. Professionals should take measures to prevent hardship during the detection, investigation and prosecution process in order to ensure that the best interests and dignity of child victims and witnesses are respected.

31. Professionals should approach child victims and witnesses with sensitivity, so that they:

(a) Provide support for child victims and witnesses, including accompanying the child throughout his or her involvement in the justice process, when it is in his or her best interests;

(b) Provide certainty about the process, including providing child victims and witnesses with clear expectations as to what to expect in the process, with as much certainty as possible. The child's participation in hearings and trials should be planned ahead of time and every effort should be made to ensure continuity in the relationships between children and the professionals in contact with them throughout the process;

(c) Ensure speedy trials, unless delays are in the child's best interest. Investigation of crimes involving child victims and witnesses should also be expedited and there should be procedures, laws or court rules that provide for cases involving child victims and witnesses to be expedited;

(d) Use child-sensitive procedures, including interview rooms designed for children, interdisciplinary services for child victims integrated under one roof, modified court environments that take child witnesses into consideration, recesses during a child's testimony, hearings scheduled at times of day appropriate to the age and maturity of the child, an on-call system to ensure the child goes to court only when necessary and other appropriate measures to facilitate the child's testimony.

32. Professionals should also implement measures:

(a) To limit the number of interviews. Special procedures for collection of evidence from child victims and witnesses should be implemented in order to reduce the number of interviews, statements, hearings and, specifically, unnecessary contact with the justice process, such as through use of pre-recorded videos;

(b) To avoid unnecessary contacts with the alleged perpetrator, his or her defence team and other persons not directly related to the justice process. Professionals should ensure that child victims and witnesses are protected, if compatible with the legal system and with due respect for the rights of the defence, from being cross-examined by the alleged perpetrator. Wherever possible, and as necessary, child victims and witnesses should be interviewed, and examined in court, out of sight of the alleged perpetrator, and separate courthouse waiting rooms and private interview areas should be provided;

(c) To use testimonial aids to facilitate the child's testimony. Judges should give serious consideration to permitting the use of testimonial aids to facilitate the child's testimony and to reduce potential for intimidation of the child, as well as exercise supervision and take appropriate measures to ensure that child victims and witnesses are questioned in a child-sensitive manner.

H. The right to safety

33. Where the safety of a child victim or witness may be at risk, appropriate measures should be taken to require the reporting of those safety risks to appropriate authorities and to protect the child from such risk before, during and after the justice process.

34. Child-focused facility staff, professionals and other individuals who come into contact with children should be required to notify appropriate authorities if they suspect that a child victim or witness has been harmed, is being harmed or is likely to be harmed.

35. Professionals should be trained in recognizing and preventing intimidation, threats and harm to child victims and witnesses. Where child victims and witnesses may be the subject of intimidation, threats or harm, appropriate conditions should be put in place to ensure the safety of the child. Such safeguards could include:

(a) Avoiding direct contact between child victims and witnesses and the alleged perpetrators at any point in the justice process;

(b) Using court-ordered restraining orders supported by a registry system;

(c) Ordering pre-trial detention of the accused and setting special "no contact" bail conditions;

(d) Placing the accused under house arrest;

(e) Wherever possible, giving child victims and witnesses protection by the police or other relevant agencies and safeguarding their whereabouts from disclosure.

I. The right to reparation

36. Child victims and witnesses should, wherever possible, receive reparation in order to achieve full redress, reintegration and recovery. Procedures for obtaining and enforcing reparation should be readily accessible and child-sensitive.

37. Provided the proceedings are child-sensitive and respect the present guidelines, combined criminal and reparations proceedings should be encouraged, together with informal and community justice procedures such as restorative justice.

38. Reparation may include restitution from the offender ordered in the criminal court, aid from victim compensation programmes administered by the State and damages ordered to be paid in civil proceedings. Where possible, costs of social and educational reintegration, medical treatment, mental health care and legal services should be addressed. Procedures should be instituted to ensure automatic enforcement of reparation orders and payment of reparation before fines.

J. The right to special preventive measures

39. In addition to preventive measures that should be in place for all children, special strategies are required for child victims and witnesses who are particularly vulnerable to repeat victimization or offending.

40. Professionals should develop and implement comprehensive and specially tailored strategies and interventions in cases where there are risks that child victims may be victimized further. These strategies and interventions should take into account the nature of the victimization, including victimization related to abuse in the home, sexual exploitation, abuse in institutional settings and trafficking. The strategies may include those based on government, neighbourhood and citizen initiatives.

III. Implementation

A. Professionals should be trained and educated in the present guidelines in order to deal effectively and sensitively with child victims and witnesses

41. Adequate training, education and information should be made available to front-line professionals, criminal and juvenile justice officials, justice system practitioners and other professionals working with child victims and witnesses with a view to improving and sustaining specialized methods, approaches and attitudes.

42. Professionals should be selected and trained to meet the needs of child victims and witnesses, including in specialized units and services.

43. This training should include:

- (a) Relevant human rights norms, standards and principles, including the rights of the child;
- (b) Principles and ethical duties of their office;
- (c) Signs and symptoms that point to evidence of crimes against children;
- (d) Crisis assessment skills and techniques, especially for making referrals, with an emphasis placed on the need for confidentiality;
- (e) Impact, consequences and trauma of crimes against children;
- (f) Special measures and techniques to assist child victims and witnesses in the justice process;
- (g) Cross-cultural and age-related linguistic, religious, social and gender issues;
- (h) Appropriate adult-child communication skills;
- (i) Interviewing and assessment techniques that minimize any trauma to the child while maximizing the quality of information received from the child;
- (j) Skills to deal with child victims and witnesses in a sympathetic, understanding, constructive and reassuring manner;
- (k) Methods to protect and present evidence and to question child witnesses;
- (l) Roles of, and methods used by, professionals working with child victims and witnesses.

B. Professionals should cooperate in the implementation of the present guidelines so that child victims and witnesses are dealt with efficiently and effectively

44. Professionals should make every effort to adopt an interdisciplinary approach in aiding children by familiarizing themselves with the wide array of available services, such as victim support, advocacy, economic assistance, counselling, health, legal and social services. This approach may include protocols for the different stages of the justice process to encourage cooperation among entities that provide services to child victims and witnesses, as well as other forms of multidisciplinary work that includes police, prosecutor, medical, social services and psychological personnel working in the same location.

45. International cooperation should be enhanced between States and all sectors of society, both at the national and international levels, including mutual assistance for the purpose of facilitating collection and exchange of information and the detection, investigation and prosecution of transnational crimes involving child victims and witnesses.

C. The implementation of the guidelines should be monitored

46. Professionals should utilize the present guidelines as a basis for developing laws and written policies, standards and protocols aimed at assisting child victims and witnesses involved in the justice process.

47. Professionals should periodically review and evaluate their role, together with other agencies in the justice process, in ensuring the protection of the rights of the child and the effective implementation of the present guidelines.

Other crime prevention and criminal justice issues

HIV/AIDS in criminal justice

ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL ACTION

On 21 July [meeting 47], the Economic and Social Council, on the recommendation of the Commission on Crime and Criminal Justice [E/2004/30], adopted resolution 2004/35 without vote [agenda item 14 (c)].

Combating the spread of HIV/AIDS in criminal justice pre-trial and correctional facilities

The Economic and Social Council,

Alarmed at the continuing spread of the HIV/AIDS epidemic in pre-trial and correctional facilities,

Recalling its resolution 1997/36 of 21 July 1997 on international cooperation for the improvement of prison conditions and its resolution 1999/27 of 28 July 1999 on penal reform,

Reaffirming its resolution 2002/15 of 24 July 2002 on United Nations standards and norms in crime prevention and criminal justice, in section II of which it invited Member States to undertake the necessary efforts to solve the problem of prison overcrowding,

Recalling General Assembly resolution 56/261 of 31 January 2001 on the plans of action for the implementation of the Vienna Declaration on Crime and Justice: Meeting the Challenges of the Twenty-first Century, in particular the plans of action on crime prevention, on prison overcrowding and alternatives to incarceration, on juvenile justice and on the special needs of women in the criminal justice system,

Recalling also the objectives related to HIV/AIDS contained in the United Nations Millennium Declaration,

Welcoming the Declaration of Commitment on HIV/AIDS adopted by the General Assembly at its twenty-sixth special session, on HIV/AIDS, in June 2001,

Acknowledging that HIV/AIDS is primarily, but not exclusively, a public health issue governed by the World Health Organization and coordinated by the Joint United Nations Programme on HIV/AIDS, combining the efforts of the nine co-sponsoring agencies and programmes within the United Nations system, which formulate and coordinate policy responses to this global problem,

Taking into account that, within that framework, specific vulnerable groups, such as prisoners, merit particular attention and, as such, the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime has an important role within the framework of its mandate in questions of standards and norms related to pre-trial and correctional facilities,

Recalling Commission on Narcotic Drugs resolutions 45/1 and 46/2 on strengthening strategies regarding the prevention of HIV/AIDS in the context of drug abuse, as well as its resolution 47/2 on prevention of HIV/AIDS among drug users,

Recalling also Commission on Human Rights resolution 2003/47 on the protection of human rights in the context of HIV/AIDS, in which the Commission urged Member States to ensure that their prison policies and practices respect human rights in the context of HIV/AIDS, prohibit HIV/AIDS-related discrimination and promote effective programmes for the prevention of HIV/AIDS in pre-trial and correctional facilities,

Recalling further the concerns of the Commission on Human Rights, reflected in its resolution 2004/26 on access to medication in the context of pandemics such as HIV/AIDS, tuberculosis and malaria,

Mindful that the physical and social conditions associated with imprisonment may facilitate the spread of HIV/AIDS in pre-trial and correctional facilities, and thus in society,

Deeply concerned at the potential role of pre-trial and correctional facilities as multipliers or “incubators” of the HIV/AIDS epidemic, as the findings of the report of the United Nations Development Programme entitled Reversing the Epidemic: Facts and Policy Options suggest,

Underlining the importance of the Standard Minimum Rules for the Treatment of Prisoners as guidelines for operating secure, safe and orderly pre-trial and correctional facilities, providing meaningful activities for prisoners, monitoring general prison conditions, ensuring an effective complaint system and providing for basic prisoner rights, including the right to adequate health care,

1. Recognizes that measures are needed to address overcrowding and to curb violence in pre-trial and correctional facilities;

2. Invites Member States to consider, where appropriate and in accordance with national legislation, the use of alternatives to imprisonment, as well as early release for prisoners with advanced AIDS;

3. Recognizes that effective HIV/AIDS prevention, care and treatment strategies require behavioural changes and increased availability of and non-discriminatory access to HIV/AIDS prevention, care and treatment, as well as increased research and development;

4. Also recognizes that prisoners have the right to adequate health care and that access to qualified medical personnel should be ensured;

5. Suggests that appropriate training should be given to managers and warders of pre-trial and correctional facilities to enable them to deal better with HIV/AIDS;

6. Requests the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime, subject to the availability of extra-budgetary resources, to work in coordination with the United Nations Joint Programme on HIV/AIDS, the World Health Organization and other relevant United Nations entities to collect information and analyse the situation of HIV/AIDS in pre-trial and correctional facilities, with a view to providing Governments with programmatic and policy guidance, within its mandate in relation to standards and norms concerning such facilities, building on lessons learned and taking into account existing guidelines and recommendations from previous and ongoing activities in various regions of the world;

7. Encourages the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime, within its mandate in relation to standards and norms concerning pre-trial and correctional facilities, to offer advice and expertise to the United Nations Joint Programme on HIV/AIDS, the World Health Organization and other relevant United Nations entities in order to ensure that the particular problems of HIV/AIDS in such facilities are adequately addressed;

8. Invites Member States to make voluntary contributions to the United Nations Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice Fund, in direct support of activities and projects of the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime related to prevention of HIV/AIDS in pre-trial and correctional facilities;

9. Requests the Secretary-General to report to the Commission on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice at its fifteenth session on the implementation of the present resolution.

Second World Summit of Attorneys General and General Prosecutors, Chief Prosecutors and Ministers of Justice

ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL ACTION

On 21 July [meeting 47], the Economic and Social Council, on the recommendation of the Commission on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice [E/2004/30], adopted resolution 2004/30 without vote [agenda item 14 (c)].

Second World Summit of Attorneys General and General Prosecutors, Chief Prosecutors and Ministers of Justice

The Economic and Social Council,

Recalling its resolutions on the use and application of United Nations standards and norms in crime prevention and criminal justice, especially in relation to the Guidelines on the Role of Prosecutors,

Stressing the important role that law enforcement and criminal justice professionals, in particular prosecutors, should play in the implementation of the United Nations Convention against Transnational Organized Crime and the Protocols thereto, the United Nations Convention against Corruption and the twelve international legal instruments against terrorism,

Emphasizing the significance of promoting international cooperation in criminal matters, to which prosecutors can make a major contribution,

Aware of the outcome of the first World Summit of Attorneys General and General Prosecutors, Chief Prosecutors and Ministers of Justice, held in Guatemala from 2 to 5 February 2004, and the adoption of its declaration, which contains important recommendations for future action,

1. Welcomes the initiative of Qatar to act as host to the second World Summit of Attorneys General and General Prosecutors, Chief Prosecutors and Ministers of Justice, to be held in Doha in November 2005;

2. Requests the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime, subject to the availability of extra-budgetary resources for that purpose, to assist the Government of Qatar in the preparation and substantive servicing of the Summit;

3. Invites the Summit to ensure that its programme is targeted to further strengthening international cooperation in criminal matters, taking into account the crucial role of prosecutors in enhancing law enforcement cooperation under the rule of law;

4. Calls upon the Summit to ensure that its conclusions and recommendations make a substantive contribution to the work of the Conference of the Parties to the United Nations Convention against Transnational Organized Crime, as well as to advance the ratification process of the United Nations Convention against Corruption and the universal instruments against terrorism;

5. Requests the Secretary-General to bring the conclusions and recommendations of the Summit to the attention of the Commission on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice.

UN Institute for Training and Research

In response to General Assembly resolution 58/223 [YUN 2003, p. 1161], the Secretary-General submitted an August report [A/59/230] on the United Nations Institute for Training and Research (UNITAR). The report reviewed UNITAR's ongoing programmes, highlighting the main features of each and placed special emphasis on the strengthening of partnerships between the Institute and other UN system organizations and bodies achieved in the framework of each of the programmes. Some 130 seminars, workshops and conferences were organized by UNITAR, benefiting 7,800 persons. In 2004, programmes offered included: multilateral diplomacy and international affairs management; peacemaking and preventive diplomacy; correspondence instruction in peacekeeping operations; women and children in and after conflict; environmental law; climate change; chemicals and waste management; decentralized cooperation; and the legal aspects of debt and financial management.

In an August note [A/59/271] on the financial viability of UNITAR, submitted in response to General Assembly resolution 58/272 [YUN 2003, p. 1417], the Secretary-General transmitted the decision of the UNITAR Board of Trustees, at its forty-second session (Geneva, 27-29 April), on the issue of rental and maintenance costs charged to the Institute. To rationalize the financial structure of the Institute, the Board directed the Executive Director to continue to insist that donors of special purpose grants obtain full recovery of the programme support costs (overhead), and bring such recovery in line with the standard UN rate of 13 per cent; make sure that any further expansion of training programmes, especially those offered free of charge, would be commensurate with the level of resources available for both direct and administrative and common-service costs involved; and consider the possible downsizing of staff remunerated by the General Fund.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 22 December [meeting 75], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Second Committee [A/59/490/Add. 1], adopted resolution 59/252 without vote [agenda item 92 (a)].

United Nations Institute for Training and Research

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 51/188 of 16 December 1996, 52/206 of 18 December 1997, 53/195 of 15 December 1998, 54/229 of 22 December 1999, 55/208 of 20 December 2000, 56/208 of 21 December 2001, 57/268 of 20 December 2002 and 58/223 of 23 December 2003,

Having considered the reports of the Secretary-General and the Executive Director of the United Nations Institute for Training and Research,

Acknowledging the work of the Board of Trustees of the United Nations Institute for Training and Research on the functioning of the Institute,

Noting the continued progress made by the Institute in its various programmes and activities, including the strengthened cooperation with other organizations of the United Nations system and with regional and national institutions,

Expressing its appreciation to the Governments and private institutions that have made or pledged financial and other contributions to the Institute,

Noting that the bulk of the resources contributed to the Institute are directed to the Special Purpose Grants Fund rather than to the General Fund, stressing the need to address that unbalanced situation, and also noting that the participation of the developed countries in training programmes in New York and Geneva is increasing,

Noting also that the Institute is self-funded, not receiving any kind of subsidies from the United Nations regular budget, and delivers, free of charge, training courses to diplomats and delegates accredited to United Nations Headquarters in New York and to the United Nations offices at Geneva, Vienna and Nairobi,

Noting further the various ongoing training programmes of the Institute, including those in the field of sustainable development,

Reiterating that training activities should be accorded a more visible and larger role in support of the management of international affairs and in the execution of the economic and social development programmes of the United Nations system,

1. Reaffirms the importance of a coordinated United Nations system-wide approach to research and training, based on an effective coherent strategy and an effective division of work among the relevant institutions and bodies;

2. Also reaffirms the relevance of the United Nations Institute for Training and Research, in view of the growing importance of training within the United Nations and the training requirements of States, and the relevance of the training-related research activities undertaken by the Institute within its mandate;

3. Welcomes the progress made in building partnerships between the Institute and other organizations and bodies of the United Nations system with respect to their training programmes, and in this context underlines the need to develop further and to expand the scope of those partnerships, in particular at the country level;

4. Notes with appreciation the activities of the Institute's Regional Office for Asia and the Pacific in Hiroshima, Japan, during its first year of existence;

5. Welcomes the establishment of the Institute's Project Field Office in Dushanbe;

6. Requests the Board of Trustees of the Institute to continue to ensure fair and equitable geographical distribution and transparency in the preparation of the programmes and in the employment of experts, and in this regard stresses that the courses of the Institute should focus primarily on development issues and the management of international affairs;

7. Renews its appeal to all Governments, in particular those of developed countries, and to private institutions that have not yet contributed financially or otherwise to the Institute, to give it their generous financial and other support, and urges the States that have interrupted their voluntary contributions to consider resuming them in view of the successful restructuring and revitalization of the Institute;

8. Encourages the Board of Trustees to consider diversifying further the venues of the events organized by the Institute and to include the cities hosting regional commissions, in order to promote greater participation and reduce costs;

9. Notes with appreciation the one-time provision to cancel the Institute's past debts decided upon in section XIV of General Assembly resolution 58/272 of 23 December 2003;

10. Stresses the need for continued consideration of the issues related to the Institute's rent, rental rates and maintenance costs, taking into account its financial situation, with a view to its expeditious resolution;

11. Encourages the Board of Trustees of the Institute to continue its efforts to resolve the critical financial situation of the Institute, in particular with a view to broadening its donor base and to further increasing the contributions to the General Fund;

12. Requests the Secretary-General to submit to the General Assembly at its sixtieth session a report on the implementation of the present resolution, including details on the status of contributions to and the financial situation of the Institute, and decides to consider the issue of the periodicity of the agenda item entitled "Training and research" at its sixtieth session.

On the same date, the Assembly took note of the report [A/59/490] of the Second Committee, containing its decision to include in the agenda of its fifty-ninth (2004) session the item on UNITAR (decision 59/541).

On 23 December, the Assembly, in resolution 59/276, section X (see p. 1386), noted the conclusions of the UNITAR Board of Trustees and requested the Secretary-General to submit a report on the Institute's finances, including proposals for addressing the funding of rent and maintenance costs, at the beginning of its sixtieth (2005) session and prior to the introduction of the proposed 2006-2007 programme budget.

United Nations University

The Council of the United Nations University (UNU), at its fifty-first session (Helsinki, Finland, 6-10 December), reviewed the University's activities over the past year and assessed the financial situation and investment of the UNU Endowment Fund.

During the year, UNU continued to focus on peace and governance, and environment and development, and it worked on critical issues relating to key problem areas identified in the Millennium Development Goals (MDGs) [YUN 2000, p. 51]. It revised its strategic plan entitled "UNU Strategic Directions (2005-2008)", which would serve as a basis for the preparation of the 2006-2007 programme budget. In March, the Institute of Advanced Studies moved from Tokyo to Yokohama, which would help it to develop a clearer institutional profile for its work. In June, the Institute for Environment and Human Security was formally established in Bonn, Germany, and two operating units of the Institute for Natural Resources in Africa became operational in Yaoundé, Cameroon, and Cocody, Côte d'Ivoire.

In November [A/59/566], the Secretary-General provided a comprehensive report on UNU activities in 2003 and 2004.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 22 December [meeting 75], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Second Committee [A/59/490/Add. 2], adopted resolution 59/253 without vote [agenda item 92 (b)].

United Nations University

The General Assembly,

Reaffirming its previous resolutions on the United Nations University, including resolution 57/267 of 20 December 2002,

Having considered the report of the Council of the United Nations University, as presented by the Rector of the University on 16 November 2004, and the report of the Secretary-General,

Bearing in mind the importance of the intellectual contributions made by the University for the United Nations system,

Expressing its deep appreciation for the voluntary contributions made by Governments and other public and private entities in support of the University,

1. Notes with satisfaction the implementation of the "Strategic Plan, 2000", which lays out broad programmatic orientations with special focus on the priority concerns of the United Nations and the need to bring together theory and practice in a global perspective, and requests the United Nations University to continue to attach importance to the priority agendas of the United Nations system;

2. Highly appreciates the successful steps taken by the University to promote the work and visibility of the University, including its research and training centres and programmes, to strengthen interaction with and contributions to the work of the United Nations system and to create new networks of activity with the academic communities in host countries, including Japan, and encourages the University to continue with such efforts;

3. Expresses particular appreciation of the University's support to scholars from developing countries and the countries with economies in transition, especially young scholars, through its capacity and network development activities;

4. Notes with interest the inauguration of the new research and training programme in Bonn, Germany, and encourages the University to continue with efforts towards creating a critical mass of viable research and training centres and programmes around the world, focused in particular on meeting the urgent needs and concerns of developing countries;

5. Welcomes the adoption and use by the University of computer-mediated dissemination and learning technologies through the United Nations University Online Learning initiative, and in particular the establishment of the Global Virtual University, which facilitates the intensification of activities in the areas of education and training, and encourages the further strengthening of these activities;

6. Takes note with satisfaction of the consolidation of the joint initiative by the University and the United Nations Office at Geneva to convene a yearly research and policy dialogue that is thematically focused and involves the United Nations system and other entities engaged in policy research and analysis;

7. Encourages the University to continue its efforts to implement the Secretary-General's suggestion on innovative measures to improve interaction and communication between the University and other United Nations entities, in particular by identifying and giving priority to common themes of interest;

8. Requests the Secretary-General to encourage other bodies of the United Nations system to utilize more fully the capacity of the University for mobilizing a worldwide network of applied policy researchers to assist the United Nations, through research and capacity development, in resolving pressing global problems;

9. Appreciates the efficiency gains achieved by the University in order to make optimal use of modest and limited resources, and emphasizes the continuing need for cost-effectiveness in conducting the activities of the University;

10. Welcomes the University's increasing efforts to widen and diversify its financial base, and invites the international community to make voluntary contributions to the University, in particular to its Endowment Fund, as a means of consolidating the distinctive identity of the University in the United Nations system and the international academic community;

11. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its sixty-first session the sub-item entitled "United Nations University".

International Year of Physics, 2005

On 10 June [meeting 90], the General Assembly adopted resolution 58/293 [draft: A/58/L.62 & Add. 1] without vote [agenda item 169].

International Year of Physics, 2005

The General Assembly,

Recognizing that physics provides a significant basis for the development of the understanding of nature, Noting that physics and its applications are the basis of many of today's technological advances,

Convinced that education in physics provides men and women with the tools to build the scientific infrastructure essential for development,

Being aware that the year 2005 is the centenary of seminal scientific discoveries by Albert Einstein which are the basis of modern physics,

1. Welcomes the proclamation of 2005 as the International Year of Physics by the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization;

2. Invites the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization to organize activities celebrating the International Year of Physics, in collaboration with physics societies and other groups throughout the world, including in the developing countries;

3. Proclaims 2005 the International Year of Physics.

Education for all

JIU report. In April [A/59/76], the Secretary-General transmitted the report of the Joint Inspection Unit (JIU) on achieving the universal primary education goal [YUN 2000, p. 52] of the Millennium Declaration: new challenges for development cooperation. The report examined whether necessary conditions were in place for attaining the goal of universal primary education—that by 2015 children everywhere could enjoy their human right to a quality education and complete a full course of primary schooling. It also examined whether the international community could ensure that girls and boys would have equal access to all levels of education by that date.

According to JIU, education statistics showed that 104 million children were currently deprived of access to primary education, and the majority of children out of school were girls. Other challenges to be addressed were the shortage of teachers and the HIV/AIDS epidemic, which threatened gains already made. While many countries had made progress towards meeting the two MDGs, many others, especially the least developed countries, were seriously off track. JIU concluded that there was a real danger the MDGs on education and gender equality would not be met unless the international community strongly resolved to live up to its pledges made at the 2000 World Education Forum [YUN 2000, p. 1081]. In that regard, the report discussed the contributions of bilateral donors and prominent actors in education, such as the European Commission's Development Assistance Committee, as well as UN agencies, including UNESCO, the United Nations Children's Fund, the United Nations Population Fund, the International Labour Organization, the World Food Programme, the World Bank Group and the International Monetary Fund. The report made a number of recommendations to the Assembly and the Economic and Social Council on ways to speed up progress towards universal primary education.

In July [A/59/76/Add.1 & Corr.1], the Secretary-General transmitted his comments and those of the United Nations Chief Executives Board for Coordination (CEB) on the JIU report.

UN Literacy Decade. In accordance with General Assembly resolution 57/166 [YUN 2002, p. 1135], the Secretary-General transmitted, in August [A/59/267], a report by the UNESCO Director-General on the implementation of the International Plan of Action for the United Nations Literacy Decade (2003-2012), proclaimed by the Assembly in resolution 56/116 [YUN 2001, p. 1052]. The report addressed international, regional and national activities to launch the Decade, provided information on the activities of UN organizations and other partners to advance literacy during 2003 and up to May 2004 and on current literacy projects to advance the objectives of the Decade at all levels, and made recommendations for strengthening the Literacy Decade effort. The meeting of the United Nations Inter-Agency Working Group, established by UNESCO to share information on the Decade (Geneva, 6-7 April), decided that the theme for the first biennium (2003-2004) of the Decade would be "Literacy and gender".

According to the report, the UN Literacy Decade faced many challenges, especially at the national level and particularly in those countries where the levels of illiteracy were highest. There was also a growing concern that the issue was not sufficiently high on the agendas of both developed and developing countries. During the first stage of the Decade, attention was focused on its launch, involving sizeable human and financial investments. However, it was too soon to tell how much the Decade's call to action had elicited increased resources and heightened levels of activity, although some literacy partners were preparing to make greater efforts. While positive actions reported provided a basis for some optimism, current trends indicated that the world was unlikely to meet the literacy challenges, either by the end of the Decade in 2012 or by the target date for the achievement of the education-for-all goals of 2015. Current estimates put the number of illiterate adults worldwide at roughly 800 million, the majority of which (63 per cent) were women.

The Secretary-General recommended, among other things, that countries mobilize the political will and financial resources required to meet the literacy challenges they faced, especially investments in basic education for children, youth and young adults. The international community should support those efforts and address the need for an effective and substantive integration of the UN Literacy Decade efforts with the education-for-all and MDG processes, and for an enhanced linkage between the Decade and other global initiatives.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 20 December [meeting 74], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Third Committee [A/59/492], adopted resolution 59/149 without vote [agenda item 94 (b)].

United Nations Literacy Decade: education for all

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 56/116 of 19 December 2001, by which it proclaimed the ten-year period beginning on 1 January 2003 the United Nations Literacy Decade, and its resolution 57/166 of 18 December 2002, in which it welcomed the International Plan of Action for the United Nations Literacy Decade,

Recalling also the United Nations Millennium Declaration, in which Member States resolved to ensure that, by 2015, children everywhere, boys and girls alike, will be able to complete a full course of primary schooling and that girls and boys will have equal access to all levels of education, which requires a renewed commitment to promote literacy for all,

Reaffirming that a basic education is crucial to nation-building, that literacy for all is at the heart of basic education for all and that creating literate environments and societies is essential for achieving the goals of eradicating poverty, reducing child mortality, curbing population growth, achieving gender equality and ensuring sustainable development, peace and democracy,

Convinced that literacy is crucial to the acquisition by every child, youth and adult of the essential life skills that will enable them to address the challenges that they can face in life, and represents an essential step in basic education, which is an indispensable means for effective participation in the societies and economies of the twenty-first century,

Affirming that the realization of the right to education, especially for girls, contributes to the promotion of gender equality and the eradication of poverty,

Welcoming the considerable efforts that have been made to address the objectives of the Decade at various levels,

Noting with concern that over 100 million children are not in school and some 800 million adults are illiterate today, that the issue of illiteracy may not be sufficiently high on national agendas to generate the kind of political and economic support required to address global illiteracy challenges, and that the world is unlikely to meet those challenges if the present trends continue,

Deeply concerned about the persistence of the gender gap in education, which is reflected by the fact that nearly two thirds of the world's adult illiterates are women,

1. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General, prepared in cooperation with the Director-General of the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization, on the implementation of the International Plan of Action for the United Nations Literacy Decade, as well as the report prepared by the Joint Inspection Unit on achieving the universal primary education goal of the United Nations Millennium Declaration;

2. Welcomes the efforts made so far by Member States and the international community in launching the Decade and implementing the International Plan of Action;

3. Appeals to all Governments to develop reliable literacy data and information and to further reinforce political will, mobilize adequate national resources, develop more inclusive policy-making environments and devise innovative strategies for reaching the poorest and most marginalized groups and for seeking alternative formal and non-formal approaches to learning with a view to achieving the goals of the Decade;

4. Urges all Governments to take the lead in coordinating the activities of the Decade at the national level, bringing all relevant national actors together in a sustained dialogue and collaborative action on policy formulation, implementation and evaluation of literacy efforts;

5. Appeals to all Governments and professional organizations to strengthen national and professional educational institutions in their countries with a view to expanding their capacity and promoting the quality of education, with particular focus on literacy;

6. Appeals to all Governments and to economic and financial organizations and institutions, both national and international, to lend greater financial and material support to the efforts to increase literacy and achieve the goals of Education for All and those of the Decade, through, inter alia, the 20/20 initiative, as appropriate;

7. Invites Member States, the specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system, as well as relevant intergovernmental and non-governmental organizations, to intensify their efforts to implement effectively the International Plan of Action, and to integrate substantially those efforts in the Education for All process and other initiatives and activities of the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization and within the framework of the internationally agreed development goals, including those contained in the United Nations Millennium Declaration;

8. Requests the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization to reinforce its lead coordinating role in stimulating and catalysing the activities undertaken at the international level within the framework of the Decade in a manner that is complementary to and coordinated with the ongoing Education for All process, with the internationally agreed development goals, including those contained in the Millennium Declaration, and with other global initiatives;

9. Requests all relevant entities of the United Nations system, particularly the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization, in cooperation with national Governments, to take immediate, concrete steps to address the needs of countries with high illiteracy rates and/or with large populations of illiterate adults, with particular regard to women;

10. Requests the Secretary-General, in cooperation with the Director-General of the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization, to seek the views of Member States on the progress achieved in implementing their national programmes and plans of action for the Decade and to submit progress reports on the implementation of the International Plan of Action to the General Assembly on a biennial basis, beginning in 2006;

11. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its sixty-first session, under the item entitled "Social development, including questions relating to the world social situation and to youth, ageing, disabled persons and the family", the sub-item entitled "United Nations Literacy Decade: education for all".

Chapter X

Women

In 2004, the United Nations continued to promote the advancement of the status of women and ensure their rights within the framework of the Beijing Declaration and Platform for Action, adopted at the Fourth (1995) World Conference on Women, and the outcome of the General Assembly's twenty-third (2000) special session, which reviewed progress in their implementation (Beijing+5). In July, the Economic and Social Council agreed that, on the occasion of the tenth anniversary of the Beijing Declaration and Platform for Action and the fifth anniversary of the Assembly's twenty-third special session, in 2005, the Commission on the Status of Women should convene a high-level plenary meeting at its forty-ninth session to review the implementation of both instruments and consider the current challenges and forward-looking strategies for the advancement of women. The Assembly, in welcoming that decision in December, called upon Governments, UN system entities and civil society, including non-governmental organizations (NGOs), to continue to take action to implement the Beijing Declaration and Platform for Action and the outcome of the twenty-third special session. The Assembly also adopted resolutions on violence against women, crimes against women and girls committed in the name of honour, and trafficking in women and girls.

The Commission on the Status of Women, at its forty-eighth session in March, recommended to the Economic and Social Council for action agreed conclusions on the thematic issues of the role of men and boys in gender equality, and women's equal participation in conflict prevention, management and resolution. The Council endorsed those agreed conclusions in July. It also adopted resolutions on women and girls in Afghanistan; Palestinian women; the release of women and children taken hostage; mainstreaming a gender perspective into UN policies and programmes; women, the girl child and AIDS; and the revitalization of the International Research and Training Institute for the Advancement of Women (INSTRAW).

The United Nations Development Fund for Women (UNIFEM) focused on the implementation of the first year of its 2004-2007 multi-year funding framework, targeting goals in the key areas of feminized poverty, violence against women, the spread of HIV/AIDS, and gender equality in democratic governance and in post-conflict countries. UNIFEM also chaired the newly launched task force on gender equality and convened the first conference on gender justice in post-conflict situations in September.

INSTRAW completed the first phase of its revitalization process. The Institute's new Executive Board held its first session in July and October, at which it approved the 2004-2007 strategic framework, and the programme of work and budget for 2005. However, INSTRAW's financial situation remained precarious at year's end.

In August the Secretary-General presented the fifth update of the World Survey on the Role of Women in Development, which focused on women and international migration, and announced the appointment of Rachel Mayanja as the new Special Adviser on Gender Issues and Advancement of Women.

Follow-up to the Fourth World Conference on Women and Beijing+5

During 2004, the Commission on the Status of Women, the Economic and Social Council and the General Assembly continued to consider follow-up to the 1995 Fourth World Conference on Women, in particular, the implementation of the Beijing Declaration and Platform for Action [YUN 1995, p. 1170], and the political declaration and further actions and initiatives to implement the Beijing Declaration and Platform for Action, adopted at the twenty-third (2000) special session of the General Assembly (Beijing+5) by resolution S/23-2 [YUN 2000, p. 1084]. The political declaration had reaffirmed the commitment of Governments to the goals and objectives of the Fourth World Conference and to implementation of the 12 critical areas of concern set forth in the Platform for Action: women and poverty; education and training of women; women and health; violence against women; women and armed conflict; women and the economy; women in power and decision-making; institutional mechanisms for the advancement of women; human rights and women; women and the media; women and the environment; and the girl child (see p. 777). The issue of mainstreaming a gender perspective into UN policies and programmes continued to be addressed (see p. 1166).

Commission action. In March, The Commission on the Status of Women, in resolution [E/2004/27 (res. 48/5)] adopted in March, decided that the review at its forty-ninth (2005) session of the implementation of the Beijing Declaration and Platform for Action and the outcome documents of the General Assembly's twenty-third session would focus on a more interactive dialogue among delegations, civil society and organizations within the United Nations, with an emphasis on the sharing of experiences and good practices in overcoming the remaining implementation challenges. The Commission recommended that the Economic and Social Council recommend to the Assembly the convening of a high-level plenary meeting of the Commission during its forty-ninth session on implementation of the Beijing Platform and the outcome of the Assembly's twenty-third session.

By decision 2004/309 of 23 July, the Economic and Social Council took note of Commission resolution 48/5 (see above) and decided that the Commission would convene, at its forty-ninth session, a high-level plenary meeting open to all Member States, the outcome of which would be transmitted by the Chairperson, through the Council, to the Assembly's sixtieth (2005) session, including to its high-level event on the review of the Millennium Declaration.

Report of Secretary-General. In response to General Assembly resolution 58/148 [YUN 2003, p. 1165], the Secretary-General, in an August report [A/59/214], reviewed steps taken by the Assembly and its Main Committees, the Economic and Social Council and the Office of the Special Adviser on Gender Issues and Advancement of Women in support of gender mainstreaming in all UN programmes and policies. The report highlighted action taken relating to the World Summit on the Information Society [YUN 2003, p. 857]; follow-up to major international conferences and summits; and the São Paulo Consensus [TD/410], adopted by the eleventh session of the United Nations Conference on Trade and Development (UNCTAD XI) (see p. 954), which recognized that gender equality was essential for sustained economic growth, poverty eradication and employment creation.

The Secretary-General concluded that there was still limited qualitative attention to gender perspectives in reports submitted to the various committees, and few contained gender analysis and recommendations for further action. The situation was no better with respect to gender perspectives in Assembly resolutions. He recommended that the Assembly continue to call for the inclusion of gender equality in reports submitted to it and its subsidiary bodies and gender perspectives in draft resolutions adopted by its subsidiary bodies, in particular concrete recommendations for action, and that it encourage reporting on progress made. The Assembly should ensure gender mainstreaming in the implementation of and follow-up to major international conferences and summits, in particular the review, in 2005, of the implementation of the 2000 United Nations Millennium Declaration [YUN 2000, p. 49].

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 20 December [meeting 74], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Third (Social, Humanitarian and Cultural) Committee [A/59/497], adopted resolution 59/168, without vote [agenda item 99].

Follow-up to the Fourth World Conference on Women and full implementation of the Beijing Declaration and Platform for Action and the outcome of the twenty-third special session of the General Assembly

The General Assembly,

Recalling its previous resolutions on the question, including resolution 58/148 of 22 December 2003,

Recalling also the contributions of the four World Conferences on Women, held in Mexico City, Copenhagen, Nairobi and Beijing, to the advancement of women and the promotion of gender equality,

Deeply convinced that the Beijing Declaration and Platform for Action and the outcome of the twenty-third special session of the General Assembly, entitled "Women 2000: gender equality, development and peace for the twenty-first century", are important contributions to the advancement of women worldwide in the achievement of gender equality and must be translated into effective action by all States, the United Nations system and other organizations concerned,

Reaffirming its commitment to the full and effective implementation of the Beijing Declaration and Platform for Action and the outcome document of the twenty-third special session, including the twelve critical areas of concern, namely women and poverty, education and training of women, women and health, violence against women, women and armed conflict, women and the economy, women in power and decision-making, institutional mechanisms for the advancement of women, human rights of women, women and the media, women and the environment and the girl child,

Also reaffirming its commitment to overcoming obstacles encountered in the implementation of the Beijing Declaration and Platform for Action and the outcome of the twenty-third special session and to strengthening a national and international enabling environment in this regard,

Recognizing that the responsibility for the implementation of the Beijing Declaration and Platform for Action and the outcome of the twenty-third special session rests primarily at the national level and that strengthened efforts are necessary in this respect, and reiterating that enhanced international cooperation is essential for the effective implementation of the Beijing Declaration and Platform for Action and the outcome of the twenty-third special session,

Welcoming the increased attention to the situation of women and girls and the integration of gender perspectives in the work of the United Nations, in particular in the outcomes of major conferences, special sessions and summit conferences and their follow-up processes, as well as the review and appraisal by the Economic and Social Council of the system-wide implementation of its agreed conclusions 1997/2 of 18 July 1997 on mainstreaming a gender perspective into all policies and programmes in the United Nations system, the inclusion of the question of gender mainstreaming in its agenda, the consideration of annual progress made in gender mainstreaming and the attention given to the gender perspective in the outcomes of its substantive session of 2004,

Reaffirming the primary and essential role of the General Assembly and the Economic and Social Council in promoting the advancement of women and gender equality, while noting the open debate on women and peace and security held in the Security Council on 28 October 2004, as well as previous debates,

Bearing in mind its relevant resolutions and Security Council resolution 1325(2000) of 31 October 2000,

1. Takes note with appreciation of the report of the Secretary-General on measures taken and progress achieved in follow-up to the implementation of the Beijing Declaration and Platform for Action and the outcome of the twenty-third special session of the General Assembly;

2. Reaffirms the goals, objectives and commitments contained in the Beijing Declaration and Platform for Action and in the political declaration and further actions and initiatives to implement the Beijing Declaration and Platform for Action adopted by the General Assembly at its twenty-third special session;

3. Stresses the need to undertake further action to ensure the full and accelerated implementation of the Beijing Declaration and Platform for Action and the outcome of the twenty-third special session, inter alia, through the promotion and protection of all human rights and fundamental freedoms, the mainstreaming of gender perspectives into all policies and programmes and the promotion of full and equal participation and empowerment of women and enhanced international cooperation for the full implementation of the Beijing Platform for Action;

4. Underlines the significance of the forty-ninth session of the Commission on the Status of Women, which will mark the tenth anniversary of the Beijing Declaration and Platform for Action and the fifth anniversary of the twenty-third special session, and at which the Commission will review the implementation of the Beijing Declaration and Platform for Action and the outcome of the twenty-third special session and consider the current challenges and forward-looking strategies for the advancement of women, as well as the comprehensive report of the Secretary-General;

5. Stresses the importance of strong, sustained political will and commitment at the national, regional and international levels for achieving full and accelerated implementation of the Beijing Declaration and Platform for Action and the outcome of the twenty-third special session;

6. Welcomes the opportunity provided by the forty-ninth session of the Commission on the Status of Women to demonstrate continued and full commitment to the full and effective implementation of the Beijing Declaration and Platform for Action and the outcome of the twenty-third special session;

7. Encourages participation in the forty-ninth session of the Commission on the Status of Women at a high political level;

8. Invites States and the United Nations system to publicize the forthcoming session of the Commission on the Status of Women, including through consultation with civil society;

9. Calls upon Governments, the relevant entities of the United Nations system, within their respective mandates, and all relevant actors of civil society, including non-governmental organizations, to continue to take effective action to achieve the full and effective implementation of the Beijing Declaration and Platform for Action and the outcome of the twenty-third special session;

10. Emphasizes that the creation of an enabling environment at the national and international levels, including by ensuring the participation of women on an equal basis with men at all levels of decision-making, is necessary to ensure the full participation of women in all aspects of social, political and economic activities, and in this regard calls upon States to remove obstacles to the full implementation of the Beijing Declaration and Platform for Action and the outcome of the twenty-third special session;

11. Emphasizes also the importance of men and boys taking joint responsibility with women and girls in the promotion of gender equality, taking into account the agreed conclusions adopted by the Commission on the Status of Women at its forty-eighth session on 12 March 2004;

12. Welcomes the contributions of the Commission on the Status of Women to the follow-up and review of the implementation of the commitments made in the Beijing Declaration and Platform for Action and the outcome of the twenty-third special session, reaffirms that the Commission will continue to play a central role in this regard, and encourages Governments, the relevant specialized agencies, funds and programmes of the United Nations system and civil society to continue to support its work;

13. Stresses the importance of implementing the agreed conclusions adopted by the Commission on the Status of Women since its fortieth session;

14. Reaffirms its decision that the General Assembly, the Economic and Social Council and the Commission on the Status of Women, in accordance with their respective mandates and with General Assembly resolutions 48/162 of 20 December 1993 and 57/270 B of 23 June 2003 and other relevant resolutions, constitute a three-tiered intergovernmental mechanism that plays the primary role in overall policy-making and follow-up and in coordinating the implementation and monitoring of the Beijing Platform for Action and the outcome of the twenty-third special session;

15. Recalls that, in accordance with resolution 57/270 B, the follow-up to the Fourth World Conference on Women and the twenty-third special session will continue to be undertaken within the framework of an integrated and coordinated follow-up to major international conferences and summits in the economic, social and related fields, and also recalls in this regard the request to each functional commission of the Economic and Social Council to examine its methods of work in order to better pursue the implementation of the outcomes of major United Nations conferences and summits and report to the Council no later than 2005 on the outcome of this examination;

16. Recognizes the importance attached to the regional and subregional monitoring of the global and regional platforms for action and of the implementation of the outcome of the twenty-third special session by regional commissions and other regional or sub-regional structures, within their mandates, in consultation with Governments, calls for the promotion of further cooperation in that respect among Governments and, where appropriate, national machineries of the same region, and welcomes in this regard the contributions of the United Nations regional commissions to the forty-ninth session of the Commission on the Status of Women;

17. Encourages the Economic and Social Council to reiterate its request to the regional commissions that have not yet done so, within their respective mandates and resources, to intensify efforts to build up a database, to be updated regularly, in which all programmes and projects carried out in their respective regions by organizations or bodies of the United Nations system are listed, and to facilitate the dissemination of information on such programmes and projects, as well as the evaluation of their impact on the empowerment of women through the implementation of the Beijing Platform for Action;

18. Welcomes Economic and Social Council decision 2004/309 of 23 July 2004, in which the Chairperson of the forty-ninth session of the Commission on the Status of Women is requested to submit the outcome of the session, through the Economic and Social Council, to the General Assembly at its sixtieth session, including to the high-level event of the Assembly on the review of the United Nations Millennium Declaration;

19. Emphasizes that the full and effective implementation of the Beijing Declaration and Platform for Action and the promotion of gender equality and of women's empowerment and participation, together with the mainstreaming of a gender perspective, are among the essential elements for advancing the implementation of the Millennium Declaration, with a view, in particular, to achieving the internationally agreed development goals, including those contained in the Millennium Declaration and the outcomes of United Nations summits, conferences and special sessions;

20. Recognizes that adequate mobilization of resources at the national and international levels, as well as new and additional resources for the developing countries, including the least developed countries and countries with economies in transition, from all available funding mechanisms, including multilateral, bilateral and private sources, will also be required;

21. Requests the Secretary-General to highlight the contribution of the Beijing Declaration and Platform for Action to the implementation of the Millennium Declaration and to integrate gender perspectives in his preparations, including reports, for the review of the Millennium Declaration;

22. Calls upon Member States to incorporate gender perspectives in their preparations for the review of the Millennium Declaration;

23. Requests the Secretary-General to include in his report on the follow-up to the Millennium Declaration an assessment of the progress made in promoting the goal of gender equality, in particular in relation to the development goals set forth in the Millennium Declaration, and recommendations to improve the measurement and coverage of indicators so that progress towards gender equality can be evaluated over time;

24. Invites States parties to the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women to include information on measures taken to implement the outcome of the twenty-third special session, as well as the Beijing Platform for Action, in their reports to the Committee on the Elimination of Discrimination against Women under article 18 of the Convention;

25. Urges States parties to comply fully with their obligations under the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women and those that have not yet done so to consider signing, ratifying or acceding to the Optional Protocol thereto;

26. Recognizes the important role of law, including legislation, in the promotion of gender equality and the implementation of the Beijing Platform for Action, commends the progress made by States in the area of legal reform, and calls upon States to continue their efforts to repeal laws and eradicate practices that discriminate against women and to adopt laws and promote practices that protect the rights of women and promote gender equality;

27. Urges Member States to consider signing, ratifying or acceding to the United Nations Convention against Transnational Organized Crime and the Protocols thereto, in particular the Protocol to Prevent, Suppress and Punish Trafficking in Persons, Especially Women and Children, supplementing the United Nations Convention against Transnational Organized Crime;

28. Calls upon Governments, the United Nations system and all other relevant actors to continue to integrate gender perspectives into the implementation of and follow-up to recent United Nations conferences, summits and special sessions;

29. Affirms that, in order to ensure the effective implementation of the strategic objectives of the Beijing Platform for Action and the outcome of the twenty-third special session, the United Nations system should continue to promote an active and visible policy of mainstreaming gender perspectives, including through the work of the Division for the Advancement of Women and the Office of the Special Adviser on Gender Issues and Advancement of Women and the maintenance of gender units, focal points and gender specialists, and with the active support of all United Nations bodies, including by ensuring that all United Nations personnel, especially in the field, receive training on gender perspectives in their work, including gender impact analysis, and that appropriate follow-up training is provided;

30. Recognizes the need to further include gender perspectives in the work of its Main Committees and other intergovernmental bodies;

31. Requests all bodies that deal with programme and budgetary matters, including the Committee for Programme and Coordination, to ensure that all programmes, plans and programme budgets visibly mainstream gender perspectives;

32. Encourages the Economic and Social Council to continue its efforts to ensure that gender mainstreaming is an integral part of all activities in its work and that of its subsidiary bodies, through, inter alia, the system-wide implementation of its agreed conclusions 1997/2 and its resolution 2004/4 of 7 July 2004;

33. Welcomes the convening of the World Summit on the Information Society in Tunis in 2005, and encourages Governments and all other stakeholders to integrate a gender perspective into the preparatory processes and outcome documents, taking into account the agreed conclusions adopted by the Commission on the Status of Women at its forty-seventh session on 14 March 2003;

34. Recognizes the important role of women in the prevention and resolution of conflicts and in peacebuilding, and urges Governments and the United Nations system to take further steps to ensure the integration of gender perspectives and the full and equal participation of women at all levels of decision-making and implementation in all aspects of conflict prevention and resolution and peacebuilding activities and to ensure that efforts to strengthen the rule of law and transitional justice in conflict and post-conflict situations incorporate gender perspectives, with a view to achieving gender equality in constitutional, legislative and judicial reform;

35. Strongly encourages Governments to continue to support the role and contribution of civil society, in particular non-governmental organizations and women's organizations, in the implementation of the Beijing Declaration and Platform for Action and the outcome of the twenty-third special session;

36. Requests the Secretary-General to continue to promote the Beijing Declaration and Platform for Action and the outcome of the twenty-third special session and to disseminate those documents as widely as possible in all the official languages of the United Nations;

37. Also requests the Secretary-General to report annually to the General Assembly, the Economic and Social Council and the Commission on the Status of Women on the follow-up to and progress made in the implementation of the Beijing Declaration and Platform for Action and the outcome of the twenty-third special session, with an assessment of progress made in mainstreaming a gender perspective within the United Nations system, including by providing information on key achievements, lessons learned and best practices, and to recommend further measures and strategies for future action within the United Nations system;

38. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its sixtieth session the item entitled "Implementation of the outcome of the Fourth World Conference on Women and of the twenty-third special session of the General Assembly, entitled 'Women 2000: gender equality, development and peace for the twenty-first century'".

Critical areas of concern

Violence against women

In response to General Assembly resolutions 57/181 [YUN 2002, p. 1139] and 58/185 [YUN 2003, p. 1172], the Secretary-General submitted an August report [A/59/281] providing information about legislative, policy and other measures undertaken by 26 Member States, and by UN bodies and entities to combat all forms of violence against women, including honour crimes (see p. 1150). Those included action taken to adhere to international and regional human rights instruments issues, including those specifically addressing the rights of women, the elaboration of new national action plans to combat violence against women, and campaigns to raise public awareness about domestic violence and discriminatory practices against women. The report discussed issues and considered measures taken by the Commission on the Status of Women at its forty-eighth session (2004), the Commission on Human Rights, human rights treaty bodies and UN system organizations. Among notable UN system activities were the World Health Organization (WHO) multi-country study on women's health and domestic violence against women, and its research on sexual violence. The report also provided an update on the preparation of the Secretary-General's in-depth study on all forms of violence against women, for which a funding proposal outlining the framework for the study, the areas to be studied, the scope and methodology and efforts to identify a project officer was prepared.

The Secretary-General recommended that Governments accelerate the preparation of comprehensive legislative frameworks to criminalize all forms of violence against women, including honour crimes; put in place adequate penalties for perpetrators; and ensure that violence against women was prosecuted and punished. Priority attention should be given to adequate funding for the implementation of legislation, in addition to efforts to monitor and assess the impact of actions taken; raise awareness about all forms of violence against women as a violation of human rights of women; and improve data collection in all areas of violence against women. Support should be provided for anti-violence networks, and partnerships should be encouraged between governmental and non-governmental actors working for attitudinal and legislative change.

UNIFEM activities. In compliance with General Assembly resolution 50/166 [YUN 1995, p. 1188], the Secretary-General transmitted a December report [E/CN.6/2005/7-E/CN.4/2005/70] of the United Nations Development Fund for Women (UNIFEM) on the elimination of violence against women, which covered its 2004 activities undertaken in that regard (see p. 1171). Those activities concentrated on specific thematic interlinkages with gender-based violence, with grant-making during the year focusing on strategies to prevent and respond to gender-based violence in conflict and post-conflict settings. In October, the Trust Fund in Support of Actions to Eliminate Violence against Women provided $900,000 to 17 initiatives in 21 countries, bringing the total awarded since its inception in 1997 to $8.3 million in grants to 175 initiatives in more than 96 countries.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 20 December [meeting 74], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Third Committee [A/59/497], adopted resolution 59/167 without vote [agenda item 99].

Elimination of all forms of violence against women, including crimes identified in the outcome document of the twenty-third special session of the General Assembly, entitled “Women 2000: gender equality, development and peace for the twenty-first century”

The General Assembly,

Recalling the purposes and principles of the Charter of the United Nations, which, inter alia, calls for international cooperation in promoting and encouraging respect for human rights and fundamental freedoms for all without distinction as to race, sex, language or religion,

Recalling also the Universal Declaration of Human Rights, the Declaration on the Elimination of Discrimination against Women, the Declaration on the Elimination of Violence against Women, the United Nations Declaration on the Elimination of All Forms of Racial Discrimination, the Beijing Declaration and Platform for Action adopted by the Fourth World Conference on Women, the Vienna Declaration and Programme of Action, adopted on 25 June 1993 by the World Conference on Human Rights and the United Nations Millennium Declaration,

Recalling further its resolution 57/181 of 18 December 2002 and the agreed conclusions adopted by the Commission on the Status of Women at its forty-eighth session on 12 March 2004,

Reaffirming the obligations of all States to promote and protect human rights and fundamental freedoms, as enunciated in the Charter, and reaffirming also the obligations of States parties under international human rights instruments, in particular the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights, the International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights, the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women, the International Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Racial Discrimination, the Convention on the Rights of the Child, the Convention against Torture and Other

Cruel, Inhuman or Degrading Treatment or Punishment and the International Convention on the Protection of the Rights of All Migrant Workers and Members of Their Families,

Reaffirming also the outcome document of the twenty-third special session of the General Assembly, entitled “Women 2000: gender equality, development and peace for the twenty-first century”,

Reaffirming further the call for the elimination of violence against women and girls, especially all forms of commercial sexual exploitation as well as economic exploitation, including trafficking in women and children, female infanticide, crimes committed in the name of honour, crimes committed in the name of passion, racially motivated crimes, the abduction and sale of children, dowry-related violence and deaths, acid attacks and harmful traditional or customary practices, such as female genital mutilation and early and forced marriage,

Stressing the importance of the empowerment of women as a tool to eliminate all forms of violence against women, including crimes identified in the outcome document of the twenty-third special session,

1. Welcomes the report of the Secretary-General;

2. Expresses deep concern at the persistence of various forms of violence and crimes against women in all parts of the world, especially all forms of commercial sexual exploitation as well as economic exploitation, including trafficking in women and children, female infanticide, crimes committed in the name of honour, crimes committed in the name of passion, racially motivated crimes, the abduction and sale of children, dowry-related violence and deaths, acid attacks and harmful traditional or customary practices, such as female genital mutilation and early and forced marriage;

3. Stresses that all forms of violence against women, including crimes identified in the outcome document of the twenty-third special session of the General Assembly, are obstacles to the advancement and empowerment of women, and reaffirms that violence against women both violates and impairs or nullifies the enjoyment by women of their human rights and fundamental freedoms;

4. Also stresses the need to treat all forms of violence against women and girls of all ages as a criminal offence punishable by law, including violence based on all forms of discrimination;

5. Welcomes specific legal and comprehensive legislative measures being enacted or contemplated, in particular with regard to various forms of violence against women and girls;

6. Also welcomes in this regard the launching of various initiatives, strategies and action plans aimed at, among other things, eradication, prevention, promotion, information, legislation, protection and welfare, education and research, enhancement of the economic capacity of women and the monitoring of the various forms of violence against women;

7. Reaffirms that there is increased awareness of and commitment to preventing and combating violence against women, including crimes identified in the outcome document of the twenty-third special session, welcomes in this context various legal, administrative and other measures taken by Governments for their prevention and elimination, and calls for high priority to be attached to the further strengthening of such measures;

8. Urges Member States to strengthen awareness and preventive measures for the elimination of all forms of violence against women, whether occurring in public or private life, by encouraging and supporting public campaigns to enhance awareness about the unacceptability and the social costs of violence against women, inter alia, through educational and media campaigns in cooperation with educators, community leaders and the electronic and print media;

9. Calls upon States to encourage and support the active participation of men and boys in the prevention and elimination of all forms of violence, especially gender-based violence, and to increase the awareness of men and boys of their responsibility in ending violence against women;

10. Expresses its appreciation of the work being done by non-governmental organizations, including women's organizations, community-based organizations and individuals, in raising awareness about the economic, social and psychological costs of all forms of violence against women, including crimes identified in the outcome document of the twenty-third special session, and in this regard encourages Governments to continue their support for the work of the non-governmental organizations in addressing this issue;

11. Calls upon States to fulfil their obligations under the relevant human rights instruments and to implement the Beijing Platform for Action as well as the outcome document of the twenty-third special session;

12. Encourages States parties to include in their reports to the Committee on the Elimination of Discrimination against Women and other relevant treaty bodies, wherever possible, sex-disaggregated data and information on measures taken or initiated to eliminate all forms of violence against women, including crimes identified in the outcome document of the twenty-third special session;

13. Urges relevant entities of the United Nations system, within their mandates, to assist countries, upon their request, in their efforts to prevent and eliminate all forms of violence against women, including crimes identified in the outcome document of the twenty-third special session, and in this regard expresses its appreciation of the work being done by the United Nations Population Fund, the United Nations Children's Fund and the United Nations Development Fund for Women and other relevant funds and programmes aimed at preventing and eliminating violence against women and girls;

14. Invites the Special Rapporteur of the Commission on Human Rights on violence against women, its causes and consequences to further devote equal attention to all forms of violence against women, including crimes identified in the outcome document of the twenty-third special session, in her work and her reports, within her mandate, to the Commission on Human Rights and the General Assembly;

15. Requests the Secretary-General to submit a comprehensive report on the matter to the General Assembly at its sixtieth session.

Honour crimes

The Secretary-General, in his August report [A/59/281] on violence against women (see p. 1148), provided information on measures taken by 23

Member States and the UN system to eliminate honour crimes against women, including resolutions adopted in April by the Commission on Human Rights relating to honour crimes and to violence against women migrant workers (see p. 777). Several Member States indicated that crimes committed in the name of honour did not exist, or were not known to exist, and were not covered by any specific legislation, while other States did not distinguish them from other crimes of violence against women and dealt with them under the relevant provisions of their criminal code. In some countries, policies and measures were being developed to provide greater insight into the nature and scale of honour and honour-related violence. Guidelines were also being developed to give more adequate protection to women in the asylum process. The Secretary-General recommended that crimes against women committed in the name of honour, where reported, should be criminalized and speedily prosecuted.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 20 December [meeting 74], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Third Committee [A/59/496], adopted resolution 59/165 without vote [agenda item 98].

Working towards the elimination of crimes against women and girls committed in the name of honour

The General Assembly,

Reaffirming the obligation of all States to promote and protect human rights and fundamental freedoms, including the right to life, liberty and security of person, as stated in the Universal Declaration of Human Rights, and reaffirming also the obligations of States parties under human rights instruments, in particular the International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights, the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights, the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women and the Convention on the Rights of the Child,

Reaffirming also the Vienna Declaration and Programme of Action and the Declaration on the Elimination of Violence against Women, as well as the goals and commitments contained in the Beijing Declaration and Platform for Action adopted at the Fourth World Conference on Women, and the outcome document of the special session of the General Assembly entitled "Women 2000: gender equality, development and peace for the twenty-first century",

Recalling its resolutions 57/179 of 18 December 2002 and 58/147 of 22 December 2003, as well as Commission on Human Rights resolution 2004/46 of 20 April 2004,

Recalling also its resolution 58/185 of 22 December 2003, in which it called for an in-depth study on violence against women, including crimes committed in the name of honour, as well as its resolution 57/190 of 18 December 2002, in which it called for an in-depth study on violence against children,

Bearing in mind that States have an obligation to exercise due diligence to prevent, investigate and punish the perpetrators of crimes against women and girls committed in the name of honour and to provide protection to the victims, and that not doing so violates and impairs or nullifies the enjoyment of their human rights and fundamental freedoms,

Stressing the need to treat all forms of violence against women and girls, including crimes committed in the name of honour, as a criminal offence, punishable by law,

Stressing also the need to identify and effectively address the root causes of violence against women, in particular crimes committed in the name of honour, which take many different forms,

Aware that inadequate data on violence against women, including crimes committed in the name of honour, hinder informed policy analysis, at both the domestic and the international levels, and efforts to eliminate such violence,

Deeply concerned that women and girls continue to be victims of these crimes, as described in the relevant sections of the reports of the Human Rights Committee, the Committee on the Elimination of Discrimination against Women, the Committee on the Rights of the Child and the Committee on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights, and noting in this regard successive reports of the Special Rapporteur of the Commission on Human Rights on violence against women, its causes and consequences,

Emphasizing that such crimes are incompatible with all religious and cultural values,

Emphasizing also that the elimination of crimes against women and girls committed in the name of honour requires greater efforts and commitment on the part of Governments and the international community, inter alia, through international cooperation efforts, and civil society, including non-governmental organizations, and that fundamental changes in societal attitude are required,

Underlining the importance of the empowerment of women and their effective participation in decision-making and policy-making processes as one of the critical tools to prevent and eliminate crimes against women and girls committed in the name of honour,

1. Welcomes:

(a) The report of the Secretary-General on violence against women;

(b) The activities and initiatives of States aimed at the elimination of crimes against women committed in the name of honour, including the adoption of amendments to relevant national laws relating to such crimes, the effective implementation of such laws and educational, social and other measures, including national information and awareness-raising campaigns, as well as activities and initiatives of States aimed at the elimination of all other forms of violence against women;

(c) The efforts, such as projects, undertaken by United Nations bodies, funds and programmes, including the United Nations Population Fund, the United Nations Children's Fund and the United Nations Development Fund for Women, to address the issue of crimes against women committed in the name of honour, and encourages them to coordinate their efforts;

(d) The work carried out by civil society, including non-governmental organizations, such as women's organizations, grass-roots movements and individuals, in raising awareness of such crimes and their harmful effects;

2. Expresses its concern that women continue to be victims of crimes committed in the name of honour, and at the continuing occurrence in all regions of the world of such violence, which takes many different forms, and at failures to prosecute and punish perpetrators;

3. Calls upon all States:

(a) To fulfil their obligations under the relevant international human rights instruments and to implement the Beijing Declaration and Platform for Action and the outcome document of the special session of the General Assembly;

(b) To continue to intensify efforts to prevent and eliminate crimes against women and girls committed in the name of honour, which take many different forms, by using legislative, administrative and programmatic measures;

(c) To investigate promptly and thoroughly, prosecute effectively and document cases of crimes against women and girls committed in the name of honour and punish the perpetrators;

(d) To intensify efforts to raise awareness of the need to prevent and eliminate crimes against women and girls committed and condoned in the name of honour, with the aim of changing the attitudes and behaviour that allow such crimes to be committed by involving, inter alia, community leaders;

(e) To intensify efforts to raise awareness about the responsibility of men to promote gender equality and bring about change in attitudes to eliminate gender stereotypes, including, specifically, their role in preventing crimes against women and girls committed in the name of honour;

(f) To encourage the efforts of the media to engage in awareness-raising campaigns;

(g) To encourage, support and implement measures and programmes aimed at increasing the knowledge and understanding of the causes and consequences of crimes against women and girls committed in the name of honour, including the provision of training for those responsible for enforcing the law, such as police personnel and judicial and legal personnel, and to strengthen their capacity to respond to complaints of such crimes in an impartial and effective manner and take necessary measures to ensure the protection of actual and potential victims;

(h) To continue to support the work of civil society, including non-governmental organizations, in addressing this issue and to strengthen cooperation with intergovernmental and non-governmental organizations;

(i) To establish, strengthen or facilitate, where possible, support services to respond to the needs of actual and potential victims by, inter alia, providing for them the appropriate protection, safe shelter, counselling, legal aid, health-care services, including in the areas of sexual and reproductive health, psychological health and other relevant areas, rehabilitation and reintegration into society;

(j) To address effectively complaints of crimes against women and girls committed in the name of honour, inter alia, by creating, strengthening or facilitating institutional mechanisms so that victims and others can report such crimes in a safe and confidential environment;

(k) To gather and disseminate statistical information on the occurrence of such crimes, including information disaggregated by sex and age, and to make any such information available to the Secretariat for use in the in-depth study on violence against women, in accordance with resolution 58/185, and the in-depth study on violence against children, in accordance with resolution 57/190;

(l) To include, where appropriate, in their reports to the human rights treaty bodies information on legal and policy measures adopted and implemented in their efforts to prevent and eliminate crimes against women and girls committed in the name of honour;

4. Invites:

(a) The international community, including relevant United Nations bodies, funds and programmes, inter alia, through technical assistance and advisory services programmes, to support the efforts of all countries, at their request, aimed at strengthening institutional capacity for preventing crimes against women and girls committed in the name of honour and at addressing the root causes of such crimes;

(b) The relevant human rights treaty bodies, where appropriate, and the Special Rapporteur of the Commission on Human Rights on violence against women, its causes and consequences to continue to address this issue;

5. Requests the Secretary-General to report on the implementation of the present resolution in his report on the question of violence against women to the General Assembly at its sixtieth session.

Women, peace and security

In response to Security Council resolution 1325(2000) on women and peace and security [YUN 2000, p. 1113], the Secretary-General reported in October [S/2004/814] on progress achieved thus far and identified gaps and challenges in the implementation of that resolution within the intergovernmental processes, and in the areas of conflict prevention and early warning; peace processes and negotiations; peacekeeping operations; humanitarian response; post-conflict reconstruction; disarmament, demobilization and reintegration; prevention of and response to gender-based violence in armed conflict; gender balance in recruitment; coordination and partnership; monitoring and reporting; and information dissemination and exchange.

Initiatives were taken to develop policies, action plans, guidelines and indicators, increase access to gender expertise, provide training and promote consultation with and participation of women, increase attention to human rights and support women's groups. Gaps and challenges remained in relation to women's participation in conflict prevention and peace processes, and attention to the contribution and needs of women in decision-making positions.

The Secretary-General said that he intended to develop system-wide strategies and action plans for increasing attention to gender perspectives in conflict prevention and for mainstreaming them into peacekeeping activities, particularly in the planning of new operations, and to review recent peace processes and analyse the obstacles to and missed opportunities for women's full participation in negotiations and develop strategies accordingly. He also intended to routinely incorporate gender perspectives in all thematic and country reports to the Security Council and urged Member States, UN entities and civil society to develop guidelines and training initiatives based on the model provisions on promoting gender equality in peace agreements and guidelines for increasing attention to the needs and contribution of women and girls in disarmament, demobilization and reintegration programmes. He made other recommendations for action by Member States, the General Assembly, the Security Council, civil society and UN system organizations.

He concluded that, since the adoption of resolution 1325(2000), a positive shift had taken place in international understanding of the importance of women's participation as equal partners in all areas related to peace and security. However, the real test of the adequacy of efforts so far taken was in their impact on the ground. Gender perspectives were not systematically incorporated in planning, implementation, monitoring and reporting. Increasing the number of women in high-level, decision-making positions in peacekeeping operations was a challenge, as was the protection and promotion of the human rights of women and girls in armed conflicts. Inadequate resource allocation had also contributed to the slow progress in implementing the resolution. He recommended that budgetary resources be specifically allocated for gender mainstreaming and initiatives targeted at women and girls.

SECURITY COUNCIL ACTION

On 28 October [meeting 5066], following consultations among Security Council members, the President made statement S/PRST/2004/40 on behalf of the Council:

The Security Council reaffirms its commitment to the continuing and full implementation of its resolution 1325(2000), and welcomes the increasing focus on the situation of women and girls in armed conflict since the adoption of resolution 1325(2000) in October 2000. The Council recalls the statement by its President of 31 October 2002 and the meeting held on 29 October 2003 as valuable demonstrations of that commitment.

The Council also recalls the Beijing Declaration and Platform for Action and the outcome document of the twenty-third special session of the General Assembly, entitled "Women 2000: gender equality, development and peace for the twenty-first century", in particular the commitments concerning women and armed conflict.

The Council welcomes the report of the Secretary-General on women and peace and security, and expresses its intention to study its recommendations. The Council welcomes the efforts of the United Nations system, Member States, civil society and other relevant actors, to promote the equal participation of women in efforts to build sustainable peace and security.

The Council strongly condemns the continued acts of gender-based violence in situations of armed conflict. The Council also condemns all violations of the human rights of women and girls in situations of armed conflict and the use of sexual exploitation, violence and abuse. The Council urges the complete cessation by all parties of such acts with immediate effect. It stresses the need to end impunity for such acts as part of a comprehensive approach to seeking peace, justice, truth and national reconciliation. The Council welcomes the efforts of the United Nations system to establish and implement strategies and programmes to prevent and report on gender-based violence, and urges the Secretary-General to further his efforts in this regard. The Council requests the Secretary-General to ensure that human rights monitors and members of commissions of inquiry have the necessary expertise and training in gender-based crimes and in the conduct of investigations, including in a culturally sensitive manner favourable to the needs, dignity and rights of the victims. The Council urges all international and national courts specifically established to prosecute war-related crimes to provide gender expertise, gender training for all staff and gender-sensitive programmes for victims and witness protection. It emphasizes the urgent need for programmes that provide support to survivors of gender-based violence. The Council further requests that appropriate attention be given to the issue of gender-based violence in all future reports to it.

The Council reaffirms the important role of women in the prevention of conflict and supports the Secretary-General's intention to develop a comprehensive system-wide strategy and action plan for increasing attention to gender perspectives in conflict prevention. The Council urges all relevant actors to work collaboratively, including through strengthened interaction with women's organizations, to ensure the full participation of women and the incorporation of a gender perspective in all conflict prevention work.

The Council also welcomes the Secretary-General's intention to develop a comprehensive strategy and action plan for mainstreaming a gender perspective into all peacekeeping activities and operations and to incorporate gender perspectives in each thematic and country report to the Council. In support of this process, the Council reaffirms its commitment to integrate fully gender perspectives into the mandates of all peacekeeping missions. It recognizes the contribution of the gender adviser within the Department of Peacekeeping Operations to advancing the implementation of resolution 1325 (2000), and requests the Secretary-General to consider an equivalent arrangement within the Department of Political Affairs to further support such implementation.

The Council considers that an increase in the representation of women in all aspects of conflict prevention, peacekeeping and peacebuilding operations and humanitarian response is urgently needed. To that end, the Council urges the Secretary-General to strengthen his efforts to identify suitable female candidates, including, as appropriate, from troop-contributing countries, in conformity with Article 101 of the Charter of the United Nations and taking into account the principle of equitable geographical balance. Such efforts should include the implementation of targeted recruitment strategies and also seek to identify candidates for senior level positions, including in the military and civilian police services.

The Council recognizes the vital contribution of women in promoting peace and their role in reconstruction processes. The Council welcomes the Secretary-General's intention to develop strategies to encourage the full participation of women in all stages of the peace process. The Council also requests the Secretary-General to encourage gender mainstreaming in disarmament, demobilization and reintegration programmes by developing guidelines to increase attention to the needs of women and girls in such programmes. It further requests the Secretary-General to mainstream a gender perspective in all aspects of post-conflict reconstruction programmes, including through the strengthening of gender theme groups in countries emerging from conflict, and to ensure that all policies and programmes in support of post-conflict constitutional, judicial and legislative reform, including truth and reconciliation and electoral processes, promote the full participation of women, gender equality and women's human rights.

The Council recognizes the important contribution of civil society to the implementation of resolution 1325(2000), and encourages Member States to continue to collaborate with civil society, in particular with local women's networks and organizations, in order to strengthen implementation. To that end, the Council welcomes the efforts of Member States in implementing resolution 1325(2000) at the national level, including the development of national action plans, and encourages Member States to continue to pursue such implementation.

The Council recognizes that significant progress has been made in the implementation of resolution 1325(2000) in certain areas of United Nations peace and security work. The Council expresses its readiness to further promote the implementation of this resolution, and in particular through active cooperation with the Economic and Social Council and the General Assembly. In order to further consolidate this progress, the Council requests the Secretary-General to submit to it in October 2005 an action plan, with time lines, for implementing resolution 1325(2000) across the United Nations system, with a view to strengthening commitment and accountability at the highest levels, as well as to allow for improved accountability, monitoring and reporting on progress on implementation within the United Nations system.

Conflict prevention, management and resolution

On 2 March [E/2004/27], the Commission on the Status of Women held a panel discussion on women's equal participation in conflict prevention, management and conflict resolution in post-conflict peace-building. It had before it a report of the Secretary-General on the subject [E/CN.6/2004/10]. The report was based on the recommendations of an expert group meeting (10-13 November 2003, Ottawa, Canada) on the theme "Peace agreements as a means for promoting gender equality and ensuring participation of women—a framework of model provisions" [EMG/PEACE/2003/REPORT]; case studies and contributions provided by regional experts, UN entities and civil society; and the Secretary-General's study and report on women, peace and security [YUN 2002, p. 1142]. It covered UN peace and security initiatives, and the role of peace agreements in promoting gender equality and the participation of women in peace processes.

According to the report, although there was increasing understanding of the important contribution of women to peace-building, they continued to be largely absent from formal peace negotiations. Support by donors and the international community of women's efforts for their effective engagement in formal peace processes was often lacking, provided late or not sustained long enough to have an impact. Customs, traditions and stereotypes also limited or narrowly defined women's roles in public life and decision-making. Women were often excluded from internationally sponsored peace processes because they were not political leaders or political decision-makers, nor had they participated in conflicts as combatants. Even when women did participate in formal peace agreements, they often lacked the capacity to contribute to shaping the agenda of such negotiations and a mandate to speak on behalf of the majority of women. Moreover, issues related to equality and the position of women within post-conflict society were typically excluded from peace agreements, as gender relations were rarely perceived as central to the causes of conflict and hence the solution.

The expert group meeting (above) identified the obligations of various actors in peace processes to enhance attention to gender equality and participation of women, and with regard to the gender-sensitive implementation of peace agreements. The Secretary-General recommended that the Commission take note of the recommendations of the expert group and call for their systematic use by all actors, or consider the actions he was recommending in his report to strengthen the use of peace agreements as tools for the promotion of gender equality and the participation of women. It might also wish to invite different actors, particularly UN entities, to use the Secretary-General's recommendations as a guide for action in all peace processes.

Also before the Commission was the report of an expert group meeting on enhancing women's participation in electoral processes in post-conflict countries (New York, 19-22 January) [E/CN.6/2004/CRP.7], which made recommendations on the incorporation of gender perspectives into the phases of elections and the roles of a diverse range of actors in support of women's full participation.

ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL ACTION

On 21 July [meeting 47], the Economic and Social Council, on the recommendation of the Commission on the Status of Women [E/2004/27], adopted resolution 2004/12 without vote [agenda item 14 (a)].

Agreed conclusions of the Commission on the Status of Women on women's equal participation in conflict prevention, management and resolution and in post-conflict peace-building

Endorses the following agreed conclusions adopted by the Commission on the Status of Women at its forty-eighth session with respect to women's equal participation in conflict prevention, management and resolution and in post-conflict peace-building:

1. The Commission on the Status of Women recalls and reiterates the strategic objectives and actions of the Beijing Declaration and Platform for Action, the outcome document of the twenty-third special session of the General Assembly entitled "Women 2000: gender equality, development and peace for the twenty-first century", and its agreed conclusions on women and armed conflict adopted at its forty-second session in 1998. It also recalls the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women, Security Council resolution 1325(2000) of 31 October 2000 on women and peace and security and all relevant resolutions of the General Assembly, including resolution 58/142 of 22 December 2003 on women and political participation.

2. The Commission calls for the full respect of international human rights law and international humanitarian law, including the four Geneva Conventions of 12 August 1949, in particular Geneva Convention relative to the Protection of Civilian Persons in Time of War.

3. The Commission calls for the promotion and protection of the full enjoyment of all human rights and fundamental freedoms by women and girls at all times, including during conflict prevention, conflict management and conflict resolution and in post-conflict peacebuilding. It further calls for protection and security for women and girls under threat of violence and their freedom of movement and participation in social, political and economic activities.

4. The Commission recognizes that the root causes of armed conflict are multidimensional in nature and thus require a comprehensive and integrated approach to the prevention of armed conflict.

5. International cooperation based on the principles of the Charter of the United Nations enhances women's full and equal participation in conflict prevention, conflict management and conflict resolution and in post-conflict peacebuilding and contributes to the promotion of sustainable and durable peace.

6. To achieve sustainable and durable peace, the full and equal participation of women and girls and the integration of gender perspectives in all aspects of conflict prevention, management and resolution and in post-conflict peacebuilding is essential. Yet women continue to be underrepresented in the processes, institutions and mechanisms dealing with these areas. Further effort is therefore needed to promote gender equality and ensure women's equal participation at all levels of decision-making in all relevant institutions. Further effort, including consideration of adequate resourcing, is also needed to build and consolidate the capacity of women and women's groups to participate fully in these processes, as well as to promote understanding of the essential role of women. In this regard, the international community should use lessons learned from actual experience to identify and overcome barriers to women's equal participation.

7. The Commission recognizes that while both men and women suffer from the consequences of armed conflict, there is a differential impact on women and girls, who are often subject to, and affected by, particular forms of violence and deprivation. The Commission calls for measures to prevent gender-based violence, including sexual violence against women and girls, as well as trafficking in human beings, especially trafficking in women and girls, arising from armed conflict and in post-conflict situations and to prosecute perpetrators of such crimes.

8. The Commission encourages the collection and dissemination of sex-disaggregated data and information for planning, evaluation and analysis in order to promote the mainstreaming of a gender perspective into conflict prevention, management and resolution and in post-conflict peace-building.

9. Peace agreements provide a vehicle for the promotion of gender equality and the participation of women in post-conflict situations. Significant opportunities for women's participation arise in the preparatory phase leading up to a peace agreement. The content of a peace agreement likewise offers significant scope for ensuring that the rights, concerns and priorities of women and girls are fully addressed. Finally, once a peace agreement has been concluded, its implementation should be pursued with explicit attention to women's full and equal participation and the goal of gender equality.

10. Women's full and equal participation and the integration of gender perspectives are crucial to democratic electoral processes in post-conflict situations. A gender-sensitive constitutional and legal framework, especially electoral laws and regulations, is necessary to ensure that women can fully participate in such processes. Political parties can play a crucial role in promoting women's equal participation. Steps are also necessary to ensure that women participate fully in, and that a gender perspective is incorporated throughout, the design and implementation of voter and civic education programmes and in election administration and observation.

11. Governments in particular, as well as the United Nations system, especially those United Nations entities having a mandate with regard to peace and security, and other relevant international, regional and national actors, including civil society, have a responsibility for advancing gender equality and ensuring women's full and equal participation in all aspects of peace processes and in post-conflict peacebuilding, reconstruction, rehabilitation and reconciliation, where they are participants in these processes.

12. In regard to conflict prevention, the Commission calls upon Governments, as well as all other relevant participants in these processes:

(a) To improve the collection, analysis and inclusion of information on women and gender issues as part of conflict prevention and early warning efforts;

(b) To ensure better collaboration and coordination between efforts to promote gender equality and efforts aimed at conflict prevention;

(c) To support capacity-building, especially for civil society, in particular for women's organizations, in order to increase community commitment to conflict prevention;

(d) To continue to make resources available nationally and internationally for the prevention of conflict and ensure women's participation in the elaboration and implementation of strategies for preventing conflict.

13. In regard to peace processes, the Commission calls upon Governments, as well as all other relevant participants in these processes:

(a) To promote women's full, equal and effective participation as actors in all peace processes, in particular negotiation, mediation and facilitation;

(b) To ensure that peace agreements address, from a gender perspective, the full range of security aspects, including legal, political, social, economic and physical, and also address the specific needs and priorities of women and girls;

(c) To ensure, in the implementation phase of a peace agreement, that all provisions concerning gender equality and the participation of women are fully complied with and that all provisions of the peace agreement, including those concerning demobilization, disarmament, reintegration and rehabilitation, are implemented in a manner that promotes gender equality and ensures women's full and equal participation;

(d) To promote women's full and equal access to public information relative to peace processes;

(e) To review, on a regular basis, their contributions to the promotion of gender equality and the full and equal participation of women, and to fulfil their monitoring, accountability and reporting obligations in the implementation of peace agreements;

(f) With regard to gender mainstreaming, to ensure and support the full participation of women at all levels of decision-making and implementation in development activities and peace processes, including conflict prevention and resolution, post-conflict reconstruction, peacemaking, peacekeeping and peacebuilding and, in this regard, support the involvement of women's organizations, community-based organizations and non-governmental organizations;

(g) To develop and strengthen the provision of gender advisory capacity and gender-sensitive training programmes for all staff in missions relating to armed conflicts. In this regard, the Commission takes note of the report of the Secretary-General.

14. In regard to post-conflict peacebuilding, the Commission calls upon Governments, as well as all other relevant participants in these processes,

Concerning elections:

(a) To ensure equal access of women in all stages of the electoral process and to consider the adoption of measures for increasing women's participation in elections through, inter alia, individual voter registration, temporary gender-specific positive actions and access to information, representation on bodies administering elections and as election monitors and observers, as well as encouraging political parties to involve women fully and equally in all aspects of their operations;

(b) To ensure equal access for women to voter and civic education, to provide women candidates with full support, training and financial resources and to eliminate discriminatory practices hampering women's participation either as voters or candidates.

Concerning reconstruction and rehabilitation:

(a) To ensure the full participation of women on an equal basis in the reconstruction and rehabilitation process;

(b) To ensure the equal access of women to social services, in particular in the areas of health and education, and, in this regard, to promote the provision of adequate health care and health services, assistance for women and girls in conflict and post-conflict situations and counselling for post-conflict trauma;

(c) To facilitate equal employment opportunities for women to achieve economic empowerment.

15. The realization and the achievement of the goals of gender equality, development and peace need to be supported by the allocation of the necessary human, financial and material resources for specific and targeted activities to ensure gender equality at the local, national, regional and international levels, as well as by enhanced and increased international co-operation.

16. The Commission requests the Secretary-General to disseminate the present agreed conclusions widely, including to the high-level panel on global security threats and reform of the international system.

The Conference on Gender Justice in Post-Conflict Situations (New York, 15-17 September) [S/2004/862], organized by UNIFEM and the International Legal Assistance Consortium (ILAC), brought together women legal and judicial officials from over twelve conflict-affected countries and regions, UN officials, Member States' representatives, regional organizations, academic institutions, foundations and private entities. The Conference considered: the reform of national laws (including customary/traditional systems) and constitutions in order to address discriminatory practices and gaps and to advance the protection of women's rights; the establishment of more gender-sensitive justice and transitional justice mechanisms and the provision of reparations and rehabilitative services to victims; rehabilitation and reform of the judicial infrastructure, institutions and processes to enhance women's involvement in, and their access to, justice; increased employment and specialized training for women judges, prosecutors and lawyers; establishing/ strengthening of institutions, mechanisms, policies and strategies to redress gender-based disparities; addressing the factors preventing equal access to public services and economic opportunities; increased participation of women in peace-making processes and negotiation of peace agreements and their implementation; participation of women and incorporation of gender dimensions in the planning and implementation of UN peace operations; enhancing responsibility and accountability of UN peacekeeping and humanitarian personnel in relation to the female population in deployed areas; and the prioritization of gender justice within the UN system and new structures to accelerate progress on gender justice.

The conference recommended the establishment of a high-level mechanism to determine the issues and recommendations requiring follow-up action, and to discuss the need for a separate UN office to coordinate assistance for justice systems and related institutions, including gender justice requirements.

Women and children taken hostage

In response to Commission resolution 46/1 [YUN 2002, p. 1144], the Secretary-General transmitted a report [E/CN.6/2004/6 & Corr.1] on the release of women and children taken hostage, including those subsequently imprisoned, in armed conflicts, which summarized information provided by 11 Member States and relevant UN system entities. He recommended that the Commission might wish to renew its commitment to resolution 46/1 and encourage Governments to report on its implementation and relevance in the context of the follow-up to Security Council resolution 1325(2000).

Communication. On 4 March [E/CN.6/2004/13], Armenia drew attention to a number of allegations contained in the Secretary-General's report (see p. 1154), which, it said, were against it. Armenia refuted those allegations.

Commission action. In a March resolution [E/2004/27 (res. 48/3)], the Commission emphasized the importance of objective, responsible and impartial information on hostages, verifiable by international organizations, in facilitating their release, and called for assistance to those organizations in that regard. It requested the Secretary-General and international organizations to facilitate the release of civilian women and children taken hostage. It further requested the Secretary-General to submit a report to the Commission at its fiftieth (2006) session on the implementation of the resolution.

Role of men and boys

In March [E/2004/27], the Commission on the Status of Women reviewed the role of men and boys in achieving gender equality. It had before it a summary of its 2 March panel discussion [E/CN.6/2004/14/CRP.10] and the Secretary-General's report [E/CN.6/2004/9] on the subject, which focused on the role of men and boys in achieving gender equality in socialization and education; as agents of change in the labour market and workplace; in the sharing of family responsibilities, including caring roles; and the prevention of HIV/AIDS. The report concluded that, since men had the potential to bring about change in attitudes, roles and relationships, they should be actively involved in developing and implementing legislation and policies to foster gender equality, and in providing positive role models for doing so in the family, workplace and society at large. The report provided specific recommendations for action by Governments, international organizations, including the United Nations, non-governmental organizations (NGOs), the private sector, the media and other stakeholders.

On 12 March, the Commission took note of the Secretary-General's report.

ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL ACTION

On 21 July [meeting 47], the Economic and Social Council, on the recommendation of the Commission on the Status of Women [E/2004/27], adopted resolution 2004/11 without vote [agenda item 14(a)].

Agreed conclusions of the Commission on the Status of Women on the role of men and boys in achieving gender equality

The Economic and Social Council

Endorses the following agreed conclusions adopted by the Commission on the Status of Women at its forty-eighth session with respect to the role of men and boys in achieving gender equality:

1. The Commission on the Status of Women recalls and reiterates that the Beijing Declaration and Platform for Action encouraged men to participate fully in all actions towards gender equality and urged the establishment of the principle of shared power and responsibility between women and men at home, in the community, in the workplace and in the wider national and international communities. The Commission also recalls and reiterates the outcome document adopted at the twenty-third special session of the General Assembly entitled "Women 2000: gender equality, development and peace for the twenty-first century", which emphasized that men must take joint responsibility with women for the promotion of gender equality.

2. The Commission recognizes that, while men and boys sometimes face discriminatory barriers and practices, they can and do make contributions to gender equality in many capacities, including as individuals and as members of families, social groups and communities, in all spheres of society.

3. The Commission recognizes that gender inequalities still exist and are reflected in imbalances of power between women and men in all spheres of society. The Commission further recognizes that everyone benefits from gender equality and that the negative impacts of gender inequality are borne by society as a whole and emphasizes, therefore, that men and boys, by taking responsibility themselves and working jointly in partnership with women and girls, are essential to the achievement of the goals of gender equality, development and peace. The Commission recognizes the capacity of men and boys to bring about change in attitudes, relationships and access to resources and decision-making, which are critical for the promotion of gender equality and the full enjoyment of all human rights by women.

4. The Commission acknowledges and encourages men and boys to continue to take positive initiatives to eliminate gender stereotypes and promote gender equality, including combating violence against women, through networks, peer programmes, information campaigns and training programmes. The Commission acknowledges the critical role of gender-sensitive education and training in achieving gender equality.

5. The Commission also recognizes that the participation of men and boys in achieving gender equality must be consistent with the empowerment of women and girls, and acknowledges that efforts must be made to address the undervaluation of many types of work, abilities and roles associated with women. In this regard, it is important that resources for gender equality initiatives for men and boys do not compromise equal opportunities and resources for women and girls.

6. The Commission urges Governments and, as appropriate, the relevant funds, programmes and organizations and the specialized agencies of the United Nations system, the international financial institutions, civil society, including the private sector and non-governmental organizations, and other stakeholders to take the following actions:

(a) Encourage and support the capacity of men and boys to foster gender equality, including by acting in partnership with women and girls as agents for change and providing positive leadership, in particular where men are still key decision makers, responsible for policies, programmes and legislation, as well as holders of economic and organizational power and public resources;

(b) Promote understanding of the importance of fathers, mothers, legal guardians and other caregivers for the well-being of children and the promotion of gender equality, and the need to develop policies, programmes and school curricula that encourage and maximize their positive involvement in achieving gender equality and positive results for children, families and communities;

(c) Create and improve training and education programmes to enhance awareness and knowledge among men and women of their roles as parents, legal guardians and caregivers and the importance of sharing family responsibilities, and include fathers as well as mothers in programmes that teach infant childcare and development;

(d) Develop and include in education programmes for parents, legal guardians and other caregivers information on ways and means to increase the capacity of men to raise children in a manner oriented towards gender equality;

(e) Encourage men and boys to work with women and girls in the design of policies and programmes for men and boys aimed at gender equality, and foster the involvement of men and boys in gender mainstreaming efforts in order to ensure improved design of all policies and programmes;

(f) Encourage the design and implementation of programmes at all levels to accelerate a sociocultural change towards gender equality, especially through the upbringing and educational process and by changing harmful traditional perceptions of and attitudes regarding male and female roles in order to achieve the full and equal participation of women and men in society;

(g) Develop and implement programmes for pre-schools, schools, community centres, youth organizations, sport clubs and centres and other groups dealing with children and youth, including training for teachers, social workers and other professionals who deal with children, in order to foster positive attitudes and behaviour with regard to gender equality;

(h) Promote critical reviews of school curricula, textbooks and other information, education and communication materials at all levels in order to recommend ways to strengthen the promotion of gender equality that involves the engagement of boys as well as girls;

(i) Develop and implement strategies to educate boys and girls and men and women about tolerance, mutual respect for all individuals and the promotion of all human rights;

(j) Develop and utilize a variety of methods in public information campaigns on the role of men and boys in promoting gender equality, including through approaches specifically targeting boys and young men;

(k) Engage media, advertising and other related professionals, through the development of training and other programmes, on the importance of promoting gender equality, the non-stereotypical portrayal of women and girls and men and boys and on the harm caused by portraying women and girls in a demeaning or exploitative manner, as well as on the enhanced participation of women and girls in the media;

(l) Take effective measures, to the extent consistent with freedom of expression, to combat the growing sexualization of, and use of pornography in, media content and in the rapid development of information and communication technology, encourage men in the media to refrain from presenting women as inferior beings and exploiting them as sexual objects and commodities, combat information and communications technology- and media-based violence against women, including criminal misuse of information and communication technology for sexual harassment, sexual exploitation and trafficking in women and girls, and support the development and use of such technology as a resource for the empowerment of women and girls, including those affected by violence, abuse and other forms of sexual exploitation;

(m) Adopt and implement legislation and/or policies to close the gap between women's and men's pay, and promote reconciliation of occupational and family responsibilities, including through the reduction of occupational segregation, the introduction or expansion of parental leave, and flexible working arrangements, such as voluntary part-time work, teleworking and other home-based work;

(n) Encourage men, through training and education, to participate fully in the care and support of others, including older persons, persons with disabilities and sick persons, in particular children and other dependants;

(o) Encourage the active involvement of men and boys, through education projects and peer-based programmes, in eliminating gender stereotypes as well as gender inequality, in particular in relation to sexually transmitted infections, including HIV/AIDS, as well as their full participation in prevention, advocacy, care, treatment, support and impact evaluation programmes;

(p) Ensure men's access to and utilization of reproductive and sexual health services and programmes, including HIV/AIDS-related programmes and services, and encourage men to participate with women in programmes designed to prevent the transmission and treat all forms of HIV/AIDS and other sexually transmitted infections;

(q) Design and implement programmes to encourage and enable men to adopt safe and responsible sexual and reproductive behaviour and to use effectively methods to prevent unwanted pregnancies and sexually transmitted infections, including HIV/AIDS;

(r) Encourage and support men and boys to take an active part in the prevention and elimination of all forms of violence, especially gender-based violence, including in the context of HIV/AIDS, and increase awareness of men's and boys' responsibility in ending the cycle of violence, inter alia, through the promotion of attitudinal and behavioural change, integrated education and training prioritizing the safety of women and children, the prosecution and rehabilitation of perpetrators of violence and support for survivors, recognizing that men and boys also experience violence;

(s) Encourage increased understanding among men of how violence, including trafficking for the purposes of commercialized sexual exploitation, forced marriage and forced labour, harms women, men and children and undermines gender equality, and consider measures aimed at eliminating the demand for trafficked women and children;

(t) Encourage and support both women and men in leadership positions, including political leaders, traditional leaders, business leaders, community and religious leaders, musicians, artists and athletes, to provide positive role models of gender equality;

(u) Encourage men in leadership positions to ensure equal access for women to education, property rights and inheritance rights and to promote equal access to information technology and business and eco-conomic opportunities, including in international trade, in order to provide women with the tools to enable them to take part fully and equally in economic and political decision-making processes at all levels;

(v) Identify and fully utilize all contexts in which a large number of men can be reached, particularly in male-dominated institutions, industries and associations, in order to sensitize men on their roles and responsibilities in the promotion of gender equality and the full enjoyment of all human rights by women, including in relation to HIV/AIDS and violence against women;

(w) Develop and use statistics to support and/or carry out research, inter alia, on the cultural, social and economic conditions that influence the attitudes and behaviour of men and boys towards women and girls, their awareness of gender inequalities and their involvement in promoting gender equality;

(x) Carry out research on the views of men and boys on gender equality and their perceptions of their roles, through which further programmes and policies can be developed, identify and widely disseminate good practices, and assess the impact of efforts undertaken to engage men and boys in achieving gender equality;

(y) Promote and encourage the representation of men in institutional mechanisms for the advancement of women;

(z) Encourage men and boys to support the equal participation of women in conflict prevention, management and resolution and in post-conflict peace-building;

7. The Commission urges all entities within the United Nations system to take into account the recommendations contained in the present agreed conclusions and to disseminate the agreed conclusions widely.

Women's health

Women, the girl child and HIV/AIDS

In a March resolution on women, the girl child and HIV/AIDS [E/2004/27 (res. 48/2)], the Commission on the Status of Women stressed that gender equality and the empowerment of women and girls were fundamental elements in the reduction of their vulnerability to HIV/AIDS and that their advancement was key to reversing the pandemic. It welcomed the launch in February by the Joint United Nations Programme on HIV/AIDS (UNAIDS) and its partners, of the Global Coalition on Women and AIDS to raise awareness of the effects of HIV/AIDS on women and girls and to stimulate the fight against the disease. It called for enhanced efforts by all relevant actors to include a gender perspective in the development of HIV/AIDS programmes and policies and in the training of personnel involved in their implementation, and requested the Secretary-General to do so when preparing his report on the implementation of the 2001 Declaration of Commitment on HIV/AIDS, adopted by the twenty-sixth special session of the General Assembly in resolution S-26/2 [YUN 2001, p. 1126].

Traditional practices affecting the health of women and girls

By decision 2004/276 of 22 July, the Economic and Social Council endorsed the decision of the Commission on Human Rights to renew for a further three years the mandate of the Special Rapporteur on traditional practices affecting the health of women and the girl child (see p. 777).

Women and human rights

Trafficking in women and girls

In July [A/59/185 & Corr.1], the Secretary-General, responding to General Assembly resolution 57/176 [YUN 2002, p. 1146], reported on trafficking in women and girls, focusing on information provided by 41 Member States on their legal and policy measures. He also reported on the activities of the UN system and other organizations to combat trafficking in women and girls, including the adoption by the Commission on Human Rights, at its sixtieth (2004) session, of a resolution on the trafficking in women and girls [E/2004/23 (res. 2004/45)], and a decision establishing the mandate of a new Special Rapporteur for three years to focus on the human rights aspects of trafficking in persons victims, especially women and children [dec. 2004/110] (see p. 778).

The Secretary-General concluded that to successfully combat trafficking, the prosecution of traffickers had to go hand in hand with the protection of the victims. He recommended that States continue to ratify international instruments and conclude agreements to ensure and facilitate the prosecution of offenders, and seek international cooperation for assistance and in the exchange of information on good practices against trafficking; place emphasis on adopting and enforcing anti-trafficking legislation; and address the root causes of trafficking in women. He emphasized that all actors, including judicial and law enforcement personnel, migration authorities, academic institutions, NGOs and civil society groups, should collaborate at the national level in the development and implementation of a comprehensive and interdisciplinary approach to trafficking, and that measures to combat trafficking should be continuously monitored to assess their impact.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 20 December [meeting 74], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Third Committee [A/59/496], adopted resolution 59/166 without vote [agenda item 98].

Trafficking in women and girls

The General Assembly,

Recalling all previous resolutions on the problem of trafficking in women and girls adopted by the General Assembly and the Commission on Human Rights, including their reaffirmation of the principles set forth in relevant human rights instruments and declarations, as well as the Optional Protocol to the Convention on the Rights of the Child on the sale of children, child prostitution and child pornography, the Optional Protocol to the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women and the Convention for the Suppression of the Traffic in Persons and of the Exploitation of the Prostitution of Others,

Welcoming the entry into force of the United Nations Convention against Transnational Organized Crime on 29 September 2003 and of the Protocol to Prevent, Suppress and Punish Trafficking in Persons, Especially Women and Children, supplementing the United Nations Convention against Transnational Organized Crime on 25 December 2003 and the Protocol against the Smuggling of Migrants by Land, Sea and Air, supplementing the United Nations Convention against Transnational Organized Crime on 28 January 2004,

Recalling the United Nations Millennium Declaration, in particular the resolve expressed by Heads of State and Government to intensify efforts to fight transnational organized crime in all its dimensions, including trafficking in human beings,

Reaffirming the provisions pertaining to trafficking in women and girls contained in the outcome documents of relevant international conferences and summits, in particular the strategic objective on the issue of trafficking contained in the Beijing Declaration and Platform for Action adopted by the Fourth World Conference on Women,

Acknowledging the inclusion of gender-related crimes in the Rome Statute of the International Criminal Court, which entered into force on 1 July 2002,

Recognizing the need to address the impact of globalization on the particular problem of trafficking in women and children, in particular girls,

Bearing in mind that all States have an obligation to exercise due diligence to prevent, investigate and punish perpetrators of trafficking in persons and to provide protection to the victims and that not doing so violates and impairs or nullifies the enjoyment of their human rights and fundamental freedoms,

Seriously concerned that an increasing number of women and girls from developing countries and from some countries with economies in transition are being trafficked to developed countries, as well as within and between regions and States, and that men and boys are also victims of trafficking, including for sexual exploitation,

Recognizing that victims of trafficking are particularly exposed to racism, racial discrimination, xenophobia and related intolerance and that women and girl victims are often subject to multiple forms of discrimination on the grounds of their gender as well as their origins,

Acknowledging that women and girl victims of trafficking, on account of their gender, are further disadvantaged and marginalized by a general lack of information or awareness and recognition of their human rights, as well as by the obstacles they meet in gaining access to information and recourse mechanisms in cases of violation of their rights, and that special measures are required for their protection and to increase their awareness,

Recognizing the importance of bilateral, subregional and regional cooperation mechanisms and initiatives of Governments and intergovernmental and non-governmental organizations to address the problem of trafficking in persons, especially women and children,

Recognizing also that global efforts, including international cooperation and technical assistance programmes, to eradicate trafficking in persons, especially women and children, demand the strong political commitment, shared responsibility and active cooperation of all Governments of countries of origin, transit and destination,

Recognizing further that policies and programmes for prevention, rehabilitation and reintegration should be developed through a child- and gender-sensitive, comprehensive and multidisciplinary approach involving all actors in countries of origin, transit and destination,

Concerned about the use of new information technologies, including the Internet, for purposes of exploitation of the prostitution of others and for child pornography, paedophilia and any other forms of sexual exploitation of children, trafficking in women as brides and sex tourism,

Concerned also at the increasing activities of transnational criminal organizations and others that profit from international trafficking in persons, especially women and children, without regard to dangerous and inhumane conditions and in flagrant violation of domestic laws and international standards,

Convinced of the need to protect and assist all victims of trafficking, with full respect for their human rights,

1. Takes note with appreciation of the report of the Secretary-General;

2. Welcomes the efforts of Governments, United Nations bodies and agencies and intergovernmental and non-governmental organizations to address the particular problem of trafficking in women and girls, and encourages them to continue doing so and to share their knowledge and best practices as widely as possible;

3. Also welcomes the appointment of the Special Rapporteur of the Commission on Human Rights on trafficking in persons, especially women and children;

4. Urges Governments to take appropriate measures to address the root factors, including poverty and gender inequality, as well as external factors that encourage the particular problem of trafficking in women and girls for prostitution and other forms of commercialized sex, forced marriage and forced labour, in order to eliminate such trafficking, including by strengthening existing legislation with a view to providing better protection of the rights of women and girls and to punishing perpetrators, through both criminal and civil measures;

5. Also urges Governments to devise, enforce and strengthen effective measures to combat and eliminate all forms of trafficking in women and girls, including for sexual exploitation, as part of a comprehensive anti-trafficking strategy that integrates a gender and human rights perspective, and to draw up, as appropriate, national action plans in this regard;

6. Further urges Governments to consider signing and ratifying and States parties to implement relevant United Nations legal instruments such as the United Nations Convention against Transnational Organized Crime and the Protocols thereto, in particular the Protocol to Prevent, Suppress and Punish Trafficking in Persons, Especially Women and Children, supplementing the United Nations Convention against Transnational Organized Crime, the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women, the Convention on the Rights of the Child, the Optional Protocol to the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women and the Optional Protocol to the Convention on the Rights of the Child on the sale of children, child prostitution and child pornography, as well as the Convention concerning Discrimination in respect of Employment and Occupation, 1958 (Convention No. 111) and the Convention concerning the Prohibition and Immediate Action for the Elimination of the Worst Forms of Child Labour, 1999 (Convention No. 182), of the International Labour Organization;

7. Encourages Member States to conclude bilateral, subregional, regional and international agreements, as well as to undertake initiatives, including regional initiatives, to address the problem of trafficking in persons, and to ensure that such agreements and initiatives pay particular attention to the problem of trafficking in women and girls;

8. Calls upon all Governments to criminalize all forms of trafficking in persons, recognizing its increasing occurrence for purposes of sexual exploitation and sex tourism, and to condemn and penalize all those offenders involved, including intermediaries, whether local or foreign, through the competent national authorities, either in the country of origin of the offender or in the country in which the abuse occurs, in accordance with due process of law, while also ensuring that the victims of those practices are not penalized for being trafficked, and to penalize persons in authority found guilty of sexually assaulting victims of trafficking in their custody;

9. Invites Governments to strengthen international cooperation aimed at preventing and combating corruption and the laundering of proceeds derived from trafficking, including for purposes of commercialized sexual exploitation;

10. Also invites Governments to consider setting up or strengthening a national coordinating mechanism, for example, a national rapporteur or an inter-agency body, with the participation of civil society, including non-governmental organizations, to encourage the exchange of information and to report on data, root causes, factors and trends in violence against women, in particular trafficking;

11. Encourages Governments and relevant United Nations bodies, within existing resources, to take appropriate measures to raise public awareness of the issue of trafficking in persons, particularly in women and girls, including to address the demand side of the problem and to publicize the laws, regulations and penalties relating to this issue, and to emphasize that trafficking is a crime, in order to eliminate the demand, including by sex tourists, recognizing that the majority of trafficked victims are women and girls;

12. Urges concerned Governments, in cooperation with intergovernmental and non-governmental organizations, to support and allocate resources for programmes to strengthen preventive action, in particular education and campaigns to increase public awareness of the issue at the national and grass-roots levels;

13. Calls upon concerned Governments to allocate resources, as appropriate, to provide comprehensive programmes for the physical, psychological and social recovery of victims of trafficking, including through job training, legal assistance and health care, including for HIV/AIDS, and by taking measures to cooperate with intergovernmental and non-governmental organizations to provide for the social, medical and psychological care of the victims;

14. Encourages Governments, in cooperation with intergovernmental and non-governmental organizations, to undertake campaigns aimed at clarifying opportunities, limitations and rights in the event of migration so as to enable women to make informed decisions and to prevent them from becoming victims of trafficking;

15. Also encourages Governments to intensify collaboration with non-governmental organizations to develop and implement programmes for effective counselling, training and reintegration into society of victims of trafficking and programmes that provide shelter and helplines to victims or potential victims;

16. Calls upon Governments to take steps to ensure that the treatment of victims of trafficking, as well as all measures taken against trafficking in persons, in particular those that affect the victims of such trafficking, pay particular attention to the needs of women and girls and are applied with full respect for the human rights of those victims and are consistent with internationally recognized principles of non-discrimination, including the prohibition of racial discrimination and the availability of appropriate legal redress, which may include measures that offer victims the possibility of obtaining compensation for damage suffered;

17. Invites Governments to take steps to ensure that criminal justice procedures and witness protection programmes are sensitive to the particular situation of trafficked women and girls and that they are enabled to make complaints to the police or other authorities, as appropriate, and to be available when required by the criminal justice system, and to ensure that during this time they have access to protection and social, medical, financial and legal assistance, as appropriate;

18. Also invites Governments to consider preventing, within the legal framework and in accordance with national policies, victims of trafficking in persons, in particular women and girls, from being prosecuted for their illegal entry or residence, bearing in mind that they are victims of exploitation;

19. Further invites Governments to encourage Internet service providers to adopt or strengthen self-regulatory measures to promote the responsible use of the Internet with a view to eliminating trafficking in women and children, in particular girls;

20. Invites the business sector, in particular the tourism and telecommunications industries, including mass media organizations, to cooperate with Governments in eliminating trafficking in women and children, in particular girls, including through the dissemination by the media of information regarding the rights of trafficked persons and services available to victims of trafficking;

21. Stresses the need for systematic data collection and comprehensive studies at both the national and the international levels and the development of common methodologies and internationally defined indicators to make it possible to develop relevant and comparable figures, and encourages Governments to enhance information-sharing and data-collection capacity as a way of promoting cooperation to combat the trafficking problem;

22. Urges Governments to strengthen national programmes to combat trafficking in persons, especially women and girls, through increased bilateral, regional and international cooperation, taking into account innovative approaches and best practices, and invites Governments, United Nations bodies and organizations, intergovernmental and non-governmental organizations and the private sector to undertake collaborative and joint research and studies on trafficking in women and girls that can serve as a basis for policy formulation or change;

23. Invites Governments, with the support of the United Nations as required, and other intergovernmental organizations, taking into account best practices, to formulate training manuals for law enforcement and medical personnel and judicial officers, with a view to sensitizing them to the special needs of women and girl victims;

24. Urges Governments to provide or strengthen training for law enforcement, immigration and other relevant officials in the prevention and combating of trafficking in persons, including the sexual exploitation of women and girls, which should focus on methods used in preventing such trafficking, prosecuting the traffickers and protecting the rights of victims, including protecting the victims from traffickers, to ensure that the training includes human rights and child- and gender-sensitive perspectives, and to encourage cooperation with non-governmental organizations, other relevant organizations and other elements of civil society;

25. Invites States parties to the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women, the Convention on the Rights of the Child and the International Covenants on Human Rights to include information and statistics on trafficking in women and girls as part of their national reports to their respective committees and to work towards developing a common methodology and statistics to obtain comparable data;

26. Requests the Secretary-General to compile, as reference and guidance, successful interventions and strategies in addressing the various dimensions of the particular problem of trafficking in women and children, in particular girls, based on reports, research and other materials from within the United Nations, including the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime, as well as from outside the United Nations, and to submit a report on the implementation of the present resolution to the General Assembly at its sixty-first session.

Women in Afghanistan

In response to Economic and Social Council resolution 2003/43 [YUN 2003, p. 1175], the Secretary-General submitted to the Commission a report [E/CN.6/2004/5] on the situation of women and girls in Afghanistan, which provided information on the political, social and economic developments affecting Afghan women in 2003. It detailed steps taken by the Afghan Transitional Administration (TA), the UN system and other actors to empower women and strengthen their status, particularly women's representation and participation in constitutional and electoral processes. The report revealed that women participated in significant numbers in the public consultations on the draft constitution for Afghanistan. To ensure that their voices were heard, a diverse group of women, meeting in Kahandar in September 2003, issued an Afghan Women's Bill of Rights, calling for the inclusion in the constitution of such rights as the right to education, protection and security, freedom of speech and the right to vote. Women were also represented in the Constitutional Loya Jirga (grand council) convened to draft the constitution. In that regard, a Committee for the Protection of Women's Rights in the Constitution was established to formulate a platform of action for women delegates to the Loya Jirga.

In preparation for the holding of general elections in October (see p. 318), tribal and religious community leaders and Afghan civil society organizations were being mobilized to encourage women to participate in the electoral process. The United Nations Assistance Mission in Afghanistan (UNAMA) electoral component reported that gender issues were fully taken into consideration in the planning of the voter registration exercise. It also developed a 2004 mission implementation plan to integrate gender perspectives throughout all aspects of its work in support of the Afghan Government's development policies and strategies. The Afghan Ministry of Education, with the United Nations Children's Fund (UNICEF), launched the Back-to-School campaign, which resulted in 4.2 million children being enrolled in schools, while the World Food Programme provided school feeding as an incentive to encourage girls' enrolment. Other areas addressed in the report included women's human rights and violence against women; disarmament and reintegration; return of refugees and displaced persons; narcotics trade; mine action; health; and employment. The Secretary-General made a number of recommendations to the TA and future Government, the UN system, donors and civil society to further strengthen the status of women and girls in Afghanistan and their full participation in the reconstruction and development of their country (see also p. 777).

ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL ACTION

On 21 July [meeting 47], the Economic and Social Council, on the recommendation of the Commission on the Status of Women [E/2004/27], adopted resolution 2004/10 without vote [agenda item 14 (a)].

Situation of women and girls in Afghanistan

The Economic and Social Council,

Guided by the Charter of the United Nations, the Universal Declaration of Human Rights, the International Covenants on Human Rights, the Convention against Torture and Other Cruel, Inhuman or Degrading Treatment or Punishment, the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women, the Declaration on the Elimination of Violence against Women, the Convention on the Rights of the Child and the Optional Protocols thereto on the involvement of children in armed conflict and on the sale of children, child prostitution and child pornography, the Beijing Declaration and Platform for Action, the further actions and initiatives to implement the Beijing Declaration and Platform for Action, adopted by the General Assembly at its twenty-third special session, accepted humanitarian rules as set out in the Geneva Conventions of 12 August 1949, and other instruments of human rights and international law,

Recalling that Afghanistan is a party to the Convention on the Prevention and Punishment of the Crime of Genocide, the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights, the International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights, the Convention against Torture and Other Cruel, Inhuman or Degrading Treatment or Punishment, the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women, the Convention on the Rights of the Child and the Optional Protocols thereto, the Geneva Conventions of 12 August 1949 and the Rome Statute of the International Criminal Court,

Reaffirming that all States have an obligation to promote and protect human rights and fundamental freedoms,

Recalling the importance of the implementation of Security Council resolutions 1325(2000) of 31 October 2000, on women and peace and security and 1460(2003) of 30 January 2003, on children and armed conflict, and in this context recalling also the Security Council mission to Afghanistan from 31 October to 7 November 2003, which reviewed, inter alia, the humanitarian and human rights situation of women,

Welcoming the entry into force on 26 January 2004 of a new Constitution following the successful outcome of the Constitutional Loya Jirga, in which women played a prominent and crucial role, and also welcoming, in particular, the provisions of the new Constitution which state that the citizens of Afghanistan, whether men or women, are equal before the law, and guarantee the right of women to serve in the National Assembly,

Welcoming also the continuing commitment of the Transitional Administration of Afghanistan to the full enjoyment of all human rights and fundamental freedoms by women and girls, the restoration of the active participation of Afghan women in political, economic and social life, the education of girls as well as boys and the opportunity for women to work outside the home,

Welcoming further the fact that the Back-to-School campaign launched by the Ministry of Education and the United Nations Children's Fund has been a major success and that 4.2 million children are now enrolled in school, while recognizing the need for the enrolment rate of girls in school to improve considerably,

Welcoming the inclusion of women in the Transitional Administration, the Judicial Reform Commission, the Independent Human Rights Commission, the Constitutional Commission and the Secretariat of the Constitutional Loya Jirga, and stressing the importance of the full and effective participation of women in all decision-making processes regarding the future of Afghanistan,

Welcoming also the fact that the National Development Framework of the Transitional Administration reflects the needs of, and the importance of the role to be taken by, women and girls in the process of peace-building, reconstruction and development, and welcoming in this regard the assistance provided by the international community to achieve these goals,

Welcoming further the efforts of Afghanistan's neighbouring countries, which host millions of Afghan refugees, especially women and children, and have provided humanitarian assistance in many areas, such as education, health and other basic services,

Recognizing that, in spite of recent improvements, women in Afghanistan continue to face serious violations of their rights in many parts of the country, in particular in rural areas,

Recognizing also that Afghan women are primary stakeholders and agents of change, who must have the opportunity to identify their own needs, interests and priorities in all sectors of society as full partners in the rebuilding of their society,

Strongly emphasizing that a safe environment, free from violence, discrimination and abuse, for all Afghans, is essential for a viable and sustainable recovery and reconstruction process,

1. Welcomes:

(a) The ongoing commitments made by the Transitional Administration of Afghanistan to recognize, protect and promote all human rights and fundamental freedoms and to respect and promote respect for international humanitarian law;

(b) The provisions of the new Constitution which state that the citizens of Afghanistan, whether men or women, are equal before the law and that at least two women are to be elected to the Wolesi Jirga (Lower House of Parliament) from each province, as a national average, and which provide for half of the President's nominees to the Meshrano Jirga (Upper House of Parliament) to be women;

(c) The ongoing security sector reform processes being undertaken by the Transitional Administration with the support of the international community, including the demobilization, disarmament and reintegration of former combatants and the recruitment of a new cadre of women police;

2. Also welcomes the report of the Secretary-General to the Commission on the Status of Women;

3. Urges the Transitional Administration and future Government:

(a) To ensure that the provisions of the new Constitution are implemented fully and that any legislative, administrative and other measures support the full enjoyment by women and girls of human rights and fundamental freedoms, including by mainstreaming gender issues into the activities of all Transitional Administration ministries;

(b) To enable the full, equal and effective participation of women and girls in civil, cultural, economic, political and social life throughout the country at all levels;

(c) To protect the right to freedom of movement, expression and association for women and girls;

(d) To implement fully its obligations under the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women and prepare the initial report due in March 2004 and to raise awareness and strengthen the knowledge of women and girls and their families about their rights, including the full enjoyment of all human rights by women and girls;

(e) To ensure that the electoral processes, including those in 2004, are carried out and monitored closely to make certain that women are able to register and participate fully, and to support special measures that would guarantee that they are represented in local, provincial and national government positions;

(f) To ensure that the Ministry of Women's Affairs, the Independent Human Rights Commission and the permanent Afghan judicial institutions have adequate human and financial resources to fulfil their mandates and address gender perspectives in line with international standards;

(g) To continue its efforts to re-establish the rule of law, in accordance with international standards, inter alia, by ensuring that law enforcement agencies respect and uphold human rights and fundamental freedoms, with a particular emphasis on access to justice for women;

(h) To continue its efforts to reflect a gender perspective in the training and activities of its police, army, prosecutors and judiciary and to promote the recruitment of Afghan women in all ranks;

(i) To review and improve the practices of law enforcement personnel when dealing with women victims of violence, including domestic and sexual violence, and trafficking, in particular those accused of offences based on tradition or imprisoned for social reasons;

(j) To strengthen efforts, including through legislative measures, to prevent and eliminate violence against women, including domestic and sexual violence and trafficking, inter alia, by raising awareness of the need to prevent and eliminate violence against women, with the aim of changing the attitudes and behaviour that allow such crimes to take place;

(k) To ensure that gender-sensitive approaches are applied in the development and application of procedures during data collection for the census and the registration of voters to deliver universal suffrage and the full participation of women in the national elections in 2004;

(l) To ensure the equal rights of women and girls to education, the effective functioning of schools throughout the country and the admission of women and girls to all levels of education, in a safe and secure environment, and to support the educational needs of those women and girls who were excluded from education in the past;

(m) To respect the equal right of women to work and promote their reintegration in employment in all sectors and at all levels of Afghan society;

(n) To protect the equal right of women and girls to security of person and to bring to justice those responsible for violence against women and girls;

(o) To continue demobilization and disarmament and facilitate the reintegration into society and work of women and girls who have been affected by war;

(p) To ensure the effective and equal access of women and girls, on the basis of equality among all Afghans, to the facilities necessary to protect the right to the enjoyment of the highest attainable standard of physical and mental health, in accordance with the obligations of Afghanistan under the International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights;

(q) To ensure the equal right of women to own land and other property, inter alia, through the right to inheritance, and to undertake administrative reforms and other necessary measures to give women the same rights as men to credit, capital, appropriate technologies and access to and control over natural resources, as well as access to markets and information;

(r) To consider implementing gender budgeting in the national budget and in all budgets of ministries;

(s) To ensure that Afghan women are well represented at international conferences and that during the Berlin Conference adequate attention is given to issues relating to the rights of women and girls;

(t) To support measures to ensure the full enjoyment of human rights and fundamental freedoms by women and girls, to hold accountable those who were responsible for gross violations of human rights in the past and to ensure that full investigations are conducted and the perpetrators brought to justice, in accordance with international standards, in order to combat impunity;

4. Encourages the continuing efforts of the United Nations and its agencies, donors and civil society, guided by Security Council resolution 1325(2000):

(a) To provide financial and technical assistance, including support to the Ministry of Women's Affairs and the Independent Human Rights Commission, to ensure the full enjoyment of human rights and fundamental freedoms by women and girls so as to strengthen the capacity of Afghan women to participate fully and effectively in conflict resolution and peacebuilding efforts and in civil, political, economic, cultural and social life;

(b) To support fully the Transitional Administration regarding the participation of women in society, inter alia, by providing support to ministries to develop their capacity to mainstream gender issues into their programmes;

(c) To support capacity-building for Afghan women to enable them to participate fully in all sectors, with special emphasis on ensuring the participation and representation of women in all aspects of the 2004 electoral process;

(d) To provide technical and other relevant assistance so that the judicial system has the capacity to adhere to international human rights standards;

5. Invites the United Nations system, international and non-governmental organizations, and donors:

(a) To ensure a human rights-based approach and coherent policy and resources for gender mainstreaming in all programmes and operations, based on the principles of non-discrimination and equality between women and men, and to ensure that women benefit equally with men from such programmes in all sectors;

(b) To ensure the full and effective participation of Afghan women in all stages of humanitarian assistance, recovery, reconstruction and development, including planning, programme development, implementation, monitoring and evaluation;

(c) To support the elements of civil society active in the field of human rights and encourage the involvement of women therein;

(d) To ensure that all their international and national personnel, prior to beginning their service, receive training in gender equality, as well as appropriate training in the history, culture and traditions of Afghanistan, and are fully familiar with and guided by international human rights standards;

(e) To integrate efforts to improve the health status of women into all reconstruction efforts, especially through access to skilled prenatal care, increased access to skilled birth attendance, education programmes on basic health issues, community information activities and emergency obstetric care;

(f) To continue to support measures for the employment of women and the integration of a gender perspective into all social, development and reconstruction programmes, taking into account the special needs of widows and returning refugee and displaced women and girls, as well as those living in rural areas;

6. Strongly urges the Secretary-General to ensure that the important post of Senior Gender Adviser in the United Nations Assistance Mission in Afghanistan is filled immediately and with due regard to the need for continuity in this task;

7. Requests the Secretary-General to continue to review the situation of women and girls in Afghanistan and to submit to the Commission on the Status of Women at its forty-ninth session a report on progress made in the implementation of the present resolution.

Palestinian women

In response to Economic and Social Council resolution 2003/42 [YUN 2003, p. 494], a report of the Secretary-General [E/CN.6/2004/4] summarized the situation of and assistance to Palestinian women during the period from September 2002 to September 2003 (see p. 483). It indicated that living conditions had drastically declined and recommended that UN entities continue to operate in the Occupied Palestinian Territory and refugee camps. Further opportunities should be sought to highlight the ways in which the crisis impacted on women as compared to men so that targeted actions could be taken to mitigate the gender-specific impacts.

On 23 July, the Economic and Social Council, in resolution 2004/56, took action on the situation of and assistance to Palestinian women (see p. 484).

Women and development

World survey and international migration

The Commission considered a note [E/CN.6/2004/CRP.4] by the Secretary-General, which responded to the General Assembly's request in resolution 54/210 [YUN 1999, p. 1097] for an update to the World Survey on the Role of Women in Development for consideration at its fifty-ninth (2004) session. The Secretary-General indicated that the Survey would address the increased movement of people, particularly women, within and across national borders, from a gender perspective.

Report of Secretary-General. Responding to General Assembly resolution 58/206 [YUN 2003, p. 1178], the Secretary-General submitted to the Assembly, in September, the World Survey on the Role of Women in Development: Women and International Migration [A/59/287/Add.1], together with an August summary of the key elements contained therein [A/59/287]. The Survey focused on women and international migration and presented key issues on labour migration; family formation and reunification; rights of migrant women, refugees and displaced persons; and trafficking in women and girls. The Survey revealed that, as at 2000, 49 per cent of all international migrants were women or girls and the proportion of females among international migrants had reached 51 per cent in more developed regions. Refugee women and girls faced particular problems regarding their legal and physical protection; an increasing area of concern was the trafficking of people, especially women, for prostitution and forced labour. International migration affected gender roles and opportunities for women in destination countries, and some countries had laws that particularly disadvantaged women migrants and native spouses of male migrants. The Survey concluded that the mobility of women affected the roles of both female and male migrants, the families left behind in the migration process and societies in the source and destination countries of migrants. Migration of women within and from developing countries affected the development process in those countries and also raised challenges to immigration and refugee policies. The Survey set out recommendations for improving the situation of migrant, refugee and trafficked women, including the ratification and implementation of all international legal instruments that protected the rights of migrant women and girls; review of national emigration and immigration laws and policies to identify discriminatory provisions that undermined the rights of migrant women; development of policies that enhanced employment opportunities, access to safe housing, education, language training in the host country, health care and other services; education and communication programmes to inform migrant women of their rights and responsibilities; and research and data collection that improved understanding of the causes of female migration and its impact on women, their countries of origin and their countries of destination to provide a basis for the formulation of appropriate policies and programmes.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 22 December [meeting 75], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Second (Economic and Financial) Committee [A/59/487/Add.2], adopted resolution 59/248, without vote [agenda item 89 (b)].

World Survey on the role of women in development

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 54/210 of 22 December 1999 and 58/206 of 23 December 2003 and all its other resolutions on the integration of women in development,

1. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General entitled "World Survey on the Role of Women in Development", which focuses on women and international migration, and decides to consider the report at its sixtieth session under the sub-item entitled "Women in development";

2. Requests the Secretary-General to update the World Survey on the Role of Women in Development for the consideration of the General Assembly at its sixty-fourth session, noting that the survey should continue to focus on selected emerging development themes that have an impact on the role of women in the economy at the national, regional and international levels, to be identified at its sixtieth session.

Eradication of poverty

Communication. A letter [E/CN.6/2004/12] from the President of the Economic and Social Council informed the Commission on the Status of Women of the themes for the Council's 2004 high-level segment (Resources mobilization and enabling environment for poverty eradication in the context of the implementation of the Programme of Action for the Least Developed Countries (LDCs) for the Decade 2001-2010 [YUN 2001, p. 771]) and coordination segment (Review and appraisal of the system-wide implementation of the Council's agreed conclusions 1997/2 on mainstreaming gender perspective into all programmes and policies of the United Nations (see p. 1427) and Coordinated and integrated UN system approach to promote rural development in developing countries, with due consideration for least developed countries, for poverty eradication and sustainable development (see p. 827)). The Council President requested the Commission's early consideration of the themes to ensure that the Commission's concerns were fully reflected in the Council's work. A Secretariat note [E/CN.6/2004/CRP.6], which discussed gender-equality and poverty eradication in least developed countries and gender-responsive poverty eradication, including poverty and rural women, creating an enabling environment for poverty eradication and mobilization of domestic and international resources, was submitted to assist the Commission should it consider providing input to the high-level segment.

Institutional mechanisms for the advancement of women

Inter-Agency Network. The United Nations Inter-Agency Network on Women and Gender Equality (IANWGE), at its third session (New York, 23-26 February) [IANWGE/2004/REPORT], endorsed decisions and recommendations made by task forces and working groups regarding gender and the Millennium Development Goals (MDGs); gender and information and communication technologies; women, peace and security; mainstreaming a gender perspective in development programming processes; gender mainstreaming in programme budgets; database activities, including WomenWatch, an Internet portal to UN gender sources; gender and trade; gender and water; the ten-year review of the Beijing Platform of Action; new task forces; and the review and appraisal of the system-wide implementation of Economic and Social Council Agreed Conclusions 1997/2 on mainstreaming a gender perspective into all UN system policies and programmes. The Network established new task forces on indigenous women and on gender mainstreaming in evaluation, monitoring and programme reporting. It also held a workshop on mainstreaming a gender perspective in evaluation, monitoring and programme reporting. Network members selected "Women and HIV/AIDS" as the theme for International Women's Day, celebrated on 8 March.

Report of Secretary-General. In January, pursuant to Commission resolution 47/2 [YUN 2003, p. 1188], the Secretary-General submitted a report [E/CN.6/2004/3] on measures taken and progress achieved in the follow-up to the Fourth World Conference on Women in mainstreaming a gender perspective in entities of the UN system, which was based on an analysis of inputs received from UN entities and the findings of the Office of the Special Adviser on Gender Issues and Advancement of Women and the Inter-Agency Network on Women and Gender Equality. The Secretary-General concluded that, although policies and strategies were in place in many entities and there had been increased focus on the development of training, methodologies and tools, a large gap remained between policy and practice. Constraints to full implementation of gender mainstreaming included inadequate support for and follow-up to gender equality policies and strategies; poor utilization of gender analysis; inadequate monitoring mechanisms, including indicators for assessing progress; and institutional constraints, such as the lack of competence and poor accountability. He added that considerable work remained to be done on developing awareness, commitment and capacity among UN staff, as the existence of policies and strategies had not always led to the desired change in attitudes or practices and methodologies. Resources were also not being utilized to the fullest extent. Increased explicit support from senior management levels in clarifying responsibilities demanding accountability and providing support would be critical for moving forward. The report also provided further measures the Commission might wish to recommend to enhance implementation and impact of the gender mainstreaming strategy.

Commission on Status of Women. In March [E/2004/27 (res. 48/4)], the Commission invited the UN system to link gender equality policies to organizational goals, develop and strengthen strategies and action plans and assess the impact of such policies and strategies to identify constraints to their full implementation. It recommended that the Economic and Social Council incorporate an assessment of the remaining gaps in the frameworks for gender equality policies and strategies in its review and appraisal of the implementation of its agreed conclusions 1997/2. The Secretary-General should include an assessment of the implementation of the Commission's resolution in his report on the follow-up to the Fourth World Conference on Women at the Commission's forty-ninth (2005) session.

Further report of Secretary-General. In response to Economic and Social Council resolution 2003/49 [YUN 2003, p. 1188], the Secretary-General, in a May report [E/2004/59] on the review and appraisal of the system-wide implementation of the Council's agreed conclusions 1997/2, provided an analysis and highlighted continuing gaps in and challenges to mainstreaming gender perspectives in UN system policies and programmes and at the intergovernmental level. The report concluded that the agreed conclusions remained a valid framework for gender mainstreaming in the United Nations and that progress made in mainstreaming gender perspectives at the intergovernmental level had had an important impact on efforts throughout the UN system. However, initiatives needed to be taken at all levels to increase the active and visible use of gender mainstreaming as a complement to women-focused strategies, in addition to increased inter-agency collaboration, particularly at operational levels. Recommendations to the Council included encouraging UN entities to establish gender equality policy frameworks linked to overall organizational policies and regularly assessing their impact; fully incorporating gender perspectives in all reports prepared for inter-governmental bodies, including the Security Council, its functional commissions, and the General Assembly; and increasing awareness of the responsibilities of all staff for gender mainstreaming, including senior management, and developing effective accountability mechanisms. In addition to Council suggestions to the Commission on the Status of Women, the Assembly, the Security Council, IANWGE and governing bodies of agencies, funds and programmes, the report recommended that the Economic and Social Council establish gender mainstreaming as a regular agenda item in meetings of its bureau with those of its functional commissions.

UNDP consideration. The United Nations Development Programme/United Nations Population Fund (UNDP/UNFPA) Executive Board requested UNDP to prepare a detailed plan of action on gender mainstreaming for review in 2005 [E/2004/35 (dec. 2004/21)] (see p. 883). It also requested that the UNDP organizational scorecard on gender balance be presented at that time [ibid., (dec. 2004/22)] (see p. 884), and that UNDP submit, in 2005, more detailed information on specific gender indicators, and an update on the progress achieved in the partnership between UNDP and UNIFEM [ibid., (dec. 2004/38)] (see p. 883).

On 7 July [meeting 27], the Economic and Social Council adopted resolution 2004/4 [draft: E/2004/L.14] without vote [agenda item 4 (a)].

Review of Economic and Social Council agreed conclusions 1997/2 on mainstreaming the gender perspective into all policies and programmes in the United Nations system

Recalling its agreed conclusions 1997/2 of 18 July 1997 on mainstreaming the gender perspective into all policies and programmes in the United Nations system, and its decision 2003/287 of 24 July 2003, in which it decided to undertake, during the coordination segment of its substantive session of 2004, a review and appraisal of the system-wide implementation of the agreed conclusions,

Recalling also its resolution 2001/41 of 26 July 2001, in which it decided to establish a regular sub-item entitled "Mainstreaming a gender perspective into all policies and programmes of the United Nations system", as well as its resolutions 2002/23 of 24 July 2002 and 2003/49 of 24 July 2003,

Reaffirming that gender mainstreaming constitutes a major strategy for the full implementation of the Beijing Platform for Action and the outcome of the twenty-third special session of the General Assembly, as a complement to strategies for the empowerment of women,

Underlining the catalytic role played by the Commission on the Status of Women, as well as the important role played by the Economic and Social Council and the General Assembly, in promoting and monitoring gender mainstreaming within the United Nations system,

1. Reaffirms its agreed conclusions 1997/2 as a valid framework for promoting and monitoring the implementation of gender mainstreaming within the United Nations system;

2. Welcomes the report of the Secretary-General on the review and appraisal of the system-wide implementation of Economic and Social Council agreed conclusions 1997/2 on mainstreaming the gender perspective into all policies and programmes of the United Nations system;

3. Notes with appreciation the progress made by the United Nations in mainstreaming gender perspectives into policies and programmes since 1997, including the ongoing activities of and efforts made by the entities of the United Nations system, both individually and through inter-agency cooperation;

4. Recognizes that mainstreaming the gender perspective into all aspects of the work of the United Nations is an ongoing process and that further concrete steps are required, as a matter of urgency, to ensure full implementation of agreed conclusions 1997/2;

5. Recommends that the General Assembly encourage its committees and other intergovernmental bodies to take further measures to integrate systematically gender perspectives into all areas of their work, including the integrated and coordinated implementation of and follow-up to the outcomes of major United Nations summits and conferences, and in particular the 2005 high-level event planned in pursuance of General Assembly resolution 58/291 of 6 May 2004;

6. Reaffirms its commitment to ensuring systematic attention to gender perspectives in all aspects of its work;

7. Encourages the governing bodies of United Nations agencies, funds and programmes to ensure that gender perspectives are integrated into all aspects of their monitoring functions in relation to policies and strategies, medium-term plans, multi-year funding frameworks and operational activities, including those relating to the implementation of the United Nations Millennium Declaration and the outcomes of major United Nations conferences and summits in the economic and social fields;

8. Calls upon its functional commissions to take further measures to incorporate recommendations on their areas of work provided by the Commission on the Status of Women and fully to integrate gender perspectives into their work, including through their annual or multi-year programmes of work and in the integrated and coordinated follow-up to major United Nations conferences and summits, and, to that end, requests its Bureau to strengthen further the regular dialogue with the bureaux of the functional commissions on the issue of gender mainstreaming;

9. Requests all entities of the United Nations system to enhance the effectiveness of gender specialist resources, gender focal points and gender theme groups by establishing clear mandates, by ensuring adequate training and access to information and to adequate and stable resources, and by increasing the support and participation of senior staff;

10. Encourages the Commission on the Status of Women to continue its catalytic role in relation to United Nations entities and intergovernmental bodies and to provide further practical guidance on gender mainstreaming;

11. Requests all entities of the United Nations system, including funds and programmes, fully to incorporate gender perspectives in their programmes and operational activities and to ensure, within their mandates, systematic integration of reporting on their efforts in mainstreaming gender into existing evaluation and monitoring processes within the United Nations system, including those relating to the development goals contained in the Millennium Declaration;

12. Recommends that all entities of the United Nations system continue to promote cooperation, coordination, sharing of methodologies and good practices, including through the development of tools and effective processes for monitoring and evaluation within the United Nations, in the implementation of agreed conclusions 1997/2, in particular through the Inter-agency Network on Women and Gender Equality, and recommends further that all inter-agency mechanisms pay attention to gender perspectives in their work;

13. Takes note of work already undertaken to implement General Assembly resolution 58/144 of 22 December 2003, and urges continued efforts towards its full implementation;

14. Also takes note of work already undertaken to implement Security Council resolution 1325(2000) of 31 October 2000 on women and peace and security, and urges continued efforts towards its full implementation;

15. Requests the Secretary-General to ensure that all entities of the United Nations system develop action plans with time lines for implementing agreed conclusions 1997/2 which address the gap between policy and practice identified in the report of the Secretary-General, with a view to strengthening commitment and accountability at the highest levels within the United Nations system as well as to establishing mechanisms to ensure accountability, systematic monitoring and reporting on progress in implementation;

16. Also requests the Secretary-General to continue to review the implementation of agreed conclusions 1997/2 within the framework of his annual reports to the Commission on the Status of Women, the Economic and Social Council and the General Assembly on the follow-up to and progress made in the implementation by United Nations entities and intergovernmental bodies of the Beijing Declaration and Platform for Action and the outcome of the twenty-third special session of the General Assembly, with a particular focus on bridging the gap between policies and practice on the basis of gender mainstreaming action plans;

17. Decides to undertake a further review and appraisal of the implementation of its agreed conclusions 1997/2 at a future session before 2010.

By decision 2004/317 of 23 July, the Council also took note of the Secretary-General's report on the review and appraisal of the system-wide implementation of the Economic and Social Council's agreed conclusions 1997/2 on mainstreaming the gender perspective into all policies and programmes of the United Nations (see p. 1166).

Status of women in the United Nations

In response to General Assembly resolution 58/144 [YUN 2003, p. 1449], the Secretary-General presented a report [A/59/357] on progress made in the representation of women within the UN system as at 31 December 2003 and in the UN Secretariat from 1 July 2003 to 30 June 2004 (see p. 1428).

In resolution 59/164 of 22 December (see p. 1429), the Assembly requested the Secretary-General to provide a verbal update to the Commission on the Status of Women at its forty-ninth (2005) and fiftieth (2006) sessions and to report to the Assembly at its sixty-first (2006) session.

UN machinery

Convention on the elimination of discrimination against women

As at 31 December 2004, 179 States were parties to the 1979 Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women, adopted by the General Assembly in resolution 34/180 [YUN 1979, p. 895]. During the year, Kiribati, the Federated States of Micronesia, Swaziland and the United Arab Emirates acceded to it. At year's end, 45 States parties had also accepted the amendment to article 20, paragraph 1, of the Convention in respect of the meeting time of the Committee on the Elimination of Discrimination against Women, which was adopted by the States parties in 1995 [YUN 1995, p. 1178]. The amendment would enter into force when accepted by a two-thirds majority of States parties.

The Optional Protocol to the Convention, adopted by the Assembly in resolution 54/4 [YUN 1999, p. 1100] and which entered into force in 2000 [YUN 2000, p. 1123], had 70 States parties by year's end.

Meeting of States parties. The thirteenth meeting of States parties to the Convention (New York, 5 August) [CEDAW/SP/2004/4] elected 11

CEDAW members to replace those members whose terms were to expire on 31 December 2004. The newly elected members would serve from 1 January 2005 to 31 December 2007. The meeting had before it a June document [CEDAW/SP/2004/2] containing declarations, reservations, objections and notifications of withdrawal of reservations relating to the Convention.

CEDAW

In 2004, the Committee on the Elimination of Discrimination against Women (CEDAW), established in 1982 [YUN 1982, p. 1149] to monitor compliance with the 1979 Convention, held two regular sessions in New York [A/59/38].

At its thirtieth session (12-30 January), CEDAW reviewed the initial/periodic reports of Belarus, Bhutan, Ethiopia, Germany, Kyrgyzstan, Kuwait, Nigeria and Nepal on measures they had taken to implement the Convention. CEDAW considered a Secretariat report on ways and means of expediting its work [CEDAW/C/2004/I/4] and notes by the Secretariat on an overview of the current working methods of the Committee [CEDAW/C/2004/I/4 & Add.1] and on enhancing the working methods of the Committee under article 18 of the Convention [CEDAW/C/2004/I/4 & Add.2]. By three decisions, CEDAW adopted general recommendation 25 on article 4, paragraph 1 of the Convention, on temporary special measures [A/59/38 (dec. 30/1)]; decided to mark the twenty-fifth (2004) anniversary of the adoption of the Convention with an event at the fifty-ninth (2004) session of the General Assembly [ibid., (dec. 30/II)]; and adopted a statement on the situation of women in Iraq [ibid., (dec. 30/III)], which was annexed to the report. In other action, the Committee took note of the report and decisions of the Working Group on Communications under the Optional Protocol, in respect of issues arising from article 2, and continued its work under article 8 of the Optional Protocol.

At its thirty-first session (6-23 July), CEDAW reviewed the initial or periodic reports of Angola, Argentina, Bangladesh, Dominican Republic, Equatorial Guinea, Latvia, Malta and Spain. It also considered the report on ways and means of expediting the work of the Committee [CEDAW/C/2004/II/4] and the reports of specialized agencies [CEDAW/C/2004/II/3 & Add.1-4] on the implementation of the Convention in areas falling within the scope of their activity. The Committee requested the General Assembly to authorize the Committee to meet for an additional week at its thirty-third, thirty-fourth and thirty-fifth sessions (July 2005 and January and July 2006) and to hold three annual sessions of three weeks each, with a one-week pre-session working group for each session, effective January 2007 [A/59/38 (dec. 31/I)]. The Committee also adopted a statement on the situation of women in Iraq [ibid., (dec. 31/II)] and measures to further enhance and strengthen its working methods [ibid., (dec. 31/III)]. In a summary of Committee activities concerning the inquiry of allegations of abduction, rape and murder of women in the Ciudad Juarez area of Chihuahua, Mexico, the Committee noted that it would consider follow-up measures taken by the Government at its thirty-second (2005) session and issue a summary of its findings and recommendations and the Government's response at a future date.

By decision 59/524 of 20 December, the General Assembly took note of the report of CEDAW on the work of its thirtieth and thirty-first sessions.

Commission on the Status of Women

The Commission on the Status of Women, at its forty-eighth session (New York, 1-12 March) [E/2004/27], recommended four draft resolutions to the Economic and Social Council for adoption on the situation of women and girls in Afghanistan (see p. 1162) and the situation of and assistance to Palestinian women (see p. 484), and its agreed conclusions on the role of men and boys in achieving gender equality (see p. 1157) and on women's equal participation in conflict prevention, management and resolution and in post-conflict peace-building (see p. 1154). It also recommended a draft decision for Council adoption on the report of the Commission's forty-eighth (2004) session and the provisional agenda for its forty-ninth (2005) session (see below). The Commission adopted and brought to the Council's attention resolutions on the revitalization and strengthening of INSTRAW (see p. 1173); the release of women and children taken hostage in armed conflict (see p. 1156); women, the girl child and HIV/AIDS (see p. 1159); mainstreaming a gender perspective in all UN system policies and programmes (see p. 1166); and preparations for its forty-ninth (2005) session (see p. 1171). The Commission adopted three decisions, which were brought to the Council's attention, regarding its working methods [dec. 48/101] (see below); the future work of the Working Group on Communications [dec. 48/103] (see below); and documents before the Commission under agenda item 3 on women's equal participation in conflict prevention, management and conflict resolution and in post-conflict peace-building [dec. 48/102].

By decision 2004/239 of 21 July, the Economic and Social Council took note of the Commission's report on its forty-eighth session and approved the provisional agenda for its forty-ninth (2005) session.

Review of working methods

Report of Secretary-General. In response to General Assembly resolution 57/270 B [YUN 2003, p. 1468], the Secretary-General submitted a January report [E/CN.6/2004/2] on the review of the working methods of the Commission on the Status of Women in the context of integrated and coordinated implementation of, and follow-up to, the outcomes of major UN conferences and summits in the economic and social fields. The Secretary-General recommended that the Commission ensure that the outcomes of its examination of thematic issues contained policy developments and recommendations for action; developed ways to effectively incorporate emerging issues into future multi-year work programmes; strengthened linkages with other functional commissions; increased the contributions of the regional commissions in the work of the Commission; encouraged increased involvement by the entities of the UN system and further participation of all stakeholders in expert panel and round-table discussions; and found innovative means of supporting and monitoring gender mainstreaming.

Communications on the status of women

Report of Secretary-General. As requested by the Commission at its forty-seventh session [YUN 2003, p. 1193], the Secretary-General transmitted a report [E/CN.6/2004/11 & Add.1,2] on the future work of the Working Group on Communications on the Status of Women, established in 1993 [YUN 1993, p. 1050] to consider ways of making the communications procedure more transparent and efficient. The report was based on preliminary discussions held at that session and the written views of Member States. The issues raised related to the criteria for inclusion of communications, their volume and sources and continuity of the term of membership of the Working Group. Among the recommendations made were that the Commission elaborate criteria for screening out communications that fell outside the scope of the procedure and criteria for selecting communications; expand and specify the sources of communications; and extend the term of members of the Working Group to two or more years and stagger the nominations.

Working Group. At two meetings in March [E/2004/27], including one closed meeting, the Commission considered the report of the Working Group. The Working Group considered 15 confidential communications received directly by the Division for the Advancement of Women and seven confidential communications received by the Office of the High Commissioner for Human Rights (OHCHR). No non-confidential communications were received. The Group noted that one communication that had been selected from the 1503 procedure material had also been submitted directly to the Division. The Working Group noted that Governments had replied to five of the 15 communications received by the Division and to six of the seven transmitted by OHCHR. The Group ascertained that communications were most frequently submitted on discriminatory application of punishments in law based on sex, including corporal and capital punishment; sexual violence and threats of sexual violence against women; violations of the rights of female human rights defenders and women participating in political life; violations of the rights of women belonging to ethnic or religious minorities, particularly the widespread use of rape, involving extreme brutality, and discrimination against such women, for example, in relation to access to health care; violations of women's human rights during armed conflict, including multiple rapes, sexual mutilation, sexual slavery, and forced pregnancies and abortions; acid attacks against women stemming from rejected offers of marriage and dowry and property disputes; violence, degrading treatment and discrimination based on religious beliefs against women prisoners committed by guards; violations of human rights of migrant women and trafficked women; and denial of visitation rights (visas) and humiliating treatment of spouses of foreign male inmates. The Working Group was concerned about the application under law of certain forms of criminal punishment of women that constituted cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment; the application of criminal punishment based on sex, where only women were punished for certain crimes or sentenced to harsher punishments than men committing the same crime; lack of due diligence in investigating and prosecuting violence, including rape, against migrant women and women victims of trafficking; and the impunity and inadequate punishment of the perpetrators of such violence or those involved in trafficking.

In a March decision [E/2004/27 (dec. 48/103)], the Commission decided to postpone until its fiftieth (2006) session further consideration of the Secretary-General's report on the future work of the Working Group, and the views and proposals put forward by Member States.

Participation of NGOs in the Commission's forty-ninth session

Economic and Social Council consideration.

On 23 July, the Economic and Social Council considered a draft resolution [E/2004/L.51] on participation of non-governmental organizations (NGOs) in the forty-ninth (2005) session of the Commission. The Netherlands, speaking on behalf of the European Union, emphasized the valuable contribution of civil society and NGOs to the outcomes of major UN conferences and summits and requested that the draft resolution address the possibility of accrediting additional NGOs to the Commission's 2005 session.

ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL ACTION

On 23 July [meeting 51], the Economic and Social Council adopted resolution 2004/57 [draft: E/2004/L.51] without vote [agenda item 14 (a)].

Participation of non-governmental organizations in the forty-ninth session of the Commission on the Status of Women

The Economic and Social Council,

Underlining the significance of the forty-ninth session of the Commission on the Status of Women, to be held in 2005, which will mark the tenth anniversary of the adoption of the Beijing Declaration and Platform for Action, the twentieth anniversary of the adoption of the Nairobi Forward-looking Strategies for the Advancement of Women and the thirtieth anniversary of the World Conference of the International Women's Year, held in Mexico City from 19 June to 2 July 1975,

Noting that the Commission on the Status of Women will undertake, at its forty-ninth session, a review of the implementation of the Beijing Platform for Action and the outcome documents of the twenty-third special session of the General Assembly, entitled "Women 2000: gender equality, development and peace for the twenty-first century", and will consider current challenges and forward-looking strategies for the advancement and empowerment of women and girls,

1. Decides, on an exceptional basis, to invite those non-governmental organizations that were accredited to the Fourth World Conference on Women or to the twenty-third special session of the General Assembly to attend the forty-ninth session of the Commission on the Status of Women;

2. Urges that, in recognition of the importance of equitable geographical participation of non-governmental organizations in the forty-ninth session of the Commission on the Status of Women, relevant bodies of the United Nations system assist those non-governmental organizations that do not have resources, in particular non-governmental organizations from developing countries, including the least developed countries and countries with economies in transition, to participate in the forty-ninth session of the Commission.

UN Development Fund for Women (UNIFEM)

In January [E/2004/35 (dec. 2004/10)], the Executive Board of the United Nations Development Programme and of the United Nations Population Fund (UNDP/UNFPA) endorsed the strategic direction and priorities of the UNIFEM multi-year funding framework (MYFF), 2004-2007 [DP/2004/5 & Corr.1] and approved the 2004-2007 integrated resources framework contained therein. It requested UNIFEM, in collaboration with UNDP/UNFPA, and in consultation with Member States, to explore options for harmonized reporting of the results of its implementation and to report on the issue at the Board's annual session in 2004. In June [ibid., (dec. 2004/20)], the Board adopted the joint UNDP/UNFPA/UNIFEM proposal [DP/2004/4] for reporting on the multi-year funding framework.

UNIFEM activities. In 2004 [A/60/274], UNIFEM focused on the implementation of the first year of the 2004-2007 MYFF, which contained a strategic results framework highlighting four key UNIFEM goals: reducing feminized poverty and exclusion; ending violence against women; halting and reversing the spread of HIV/AIDS; and achieving gender equality in democratic governance and in post-conflict countries. Reports from the first year of implementation of the 2004-2007 MYFF reflected 41 instances in which UNIFEM contributed to strengthening policies and laws to enhance the empowerment and rights of women; 77 instances in which it contributed to strengthening the capacity of key institutions to deliver on commitments to gender equality; 64 instances in which it expanded the capacity of governmental and non-governmental organizations and networks to advocate for gender equality; and 16 instances in which it contributed to reversing harmful practices that discriminated against women and girls.

UNIFEM efforts to achieve its performance goals resulted in support of programmes in 43 countries and the provision of technical advice and/or catalytic funding in 40 others; coordination of gender theme groups in 11 countries; input into the MDG processes in 20 countries; participation in common country assessment/United Nations Development Assistance Framework processes and in the UN response to the Indian Ocean tsunami in December (see p. 952); establishment of UNIFEM as the chair of the United Nations Development Group task force on gender equality; enhanced cooperation with UNDP, UNAIDS, UNICEF and UNFPA; and revised guidelines on the operational relationship between UNDP and UNIFEM, signed by both parties on 7 June (see p. 883). Other UNIFEM activities included the convening in September of the first conference on "Gender Justice in Post-Conflict Situations", in collaboration with the International Legal Assistance Consortium and an independent assessment of UNIFEM [A/60/62-E/2005/10] commissioned by the Consultative Committee, which highlighted opportunities lost due to the failure to strengthen its positioning and resources.

In 2004, UNIFEM resources totaled $50.3 million, an increase of $14 million over the 2003 figure, of which $23.2 million was in core resources and $25.5 million in non-core resources.

By decision 59/540 of 22 December, the General Assembly took note of the report [A/59/135] on UNIFEM's 2003 activities [YUN 2003, p. 1193], transmitted by the Secretary-General in July.

International Research and Training Institute (INSTRAW)

A May report of the Director of INSTRAW [E/2004/66], submitted in accordance with Economic and Social Council resolution 2003/57 [YUN 2003, p. 1195], covered the Institute's activities for the period from December 2003 to May 2004. The report dealt with developments related to the Institute's institutional structure in line with Council resolution 2003/57, including the election of the members of the new Executive Board; development of a strategic plan for 2004-2007 to be presented to the Executive Board at its first session for approval; convening of a meeting (11 March) for donors and other interested parties; publication of a paper on "overcoming the gender digital divide"; and the reinstatement of the Institute's internship programme.

Commission on Status of Women. In a March resolution [E/2004/27 (res. 48/1)] on the revitalization and strengthening of INSTRAW, the Commission on the Status of Women welcomed the appointment by the Secretary-General of the Director of the Institute on 4 December 2003 and noted his plan to develop a targeted work programme and funding activities. It invited voluntary contributions by Member States to the United Nations Trust Fund for INSTRAW. The Commission encouraged efforts to revitalize INSTRAW and monitor its progress during its forty-ninth (2005) session.

Note of Secretary-General. In response to General Assembly resolution 57/311 [YUN 2003, p. 1200], the Secretary-General transmitted a November report [A/59/560] of the Director of INSTRAW on its work programme and on the implementation of the recommendations contained in the report of the Office of Internal Oversight

Services (OIOS) on the audit of INSTRAW [YUN 2002, p. 1165]. The report indicated that the INSTRAW Executive Board, at its first session on 27 July, approved the 2004-2007 strategic framework, which identified four strategic areas of work: research; information and communication; capacity-building/training; and institutional development. At the resumed session on 1 October, the Board approved the 2005 programme of work, which encompassed both core and project activities and contained the financial requirements for the Institute's operations. However, the Board pointed out that there were no resources in the INSTRAW Trust Fund to finance those requirements. INSTRAW developed 16 project profiles, totalling $7.7 million, which it had submitted to several financial partners for funding.

The report also detailed measures taken by the Institute to implement OIOS recommendations, including the revision of INSTRAW's statute; replacement of the Board of Trustees by an Executive Board; redesign of the Institute's website; and development of a draft strategic framework and portfolio of projects for consideration by donors.

Future of INSTRAW

Report of Secretary-General. In response to General Assembly resolution 58/244 [YUN 2003, p. 1199] and Economic and Social Council resolution 2003/57 [ibid., p. 1195], the Secretary-General submitted an August report [A/59/313] on the future operation of INSTRAW. As part of the revitalization process, INSTRAW had undertaken several important initiatives, including the launching of a redesigned website, strengthening cooperative arrangements with UN entities, expanding its research programme, intensifying its fund-raising campaign and enhancing communications with Governments, civil society, academia and the private sector. With the preparation of the programme of work, the related budget and portfolio of projects, the first phase of the revitalization of the Institute would be completed. However, full implementation of the revitalization process depended on the support of Governments, including making available the financial resources for the operation of the Institute.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 23 December [meeting 76], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Third Committee [A/59/496], adopted resolution 59/260, by a recorded vote of 125 to 10, with 30 abstentions [agenda item 98].

Future operation of the International Research and Training Institute for the Advancement of Women

The General Assembly,

Recalling all of its previous resolutions on the situation of the International Research and Training Institute for the Advancement of Women, in particular resolutions 55/219 of 23 December 2000, 56/125 of 19 December 2001, 57/175 of 18 December 2002 and 58/244 of 23 December 2003,

Reaffirming its resolution 57/311 of 18 June 2003 on the financial situation of the Institute,

Recalling Economic and Social Council resolution 2003/57 of 24 July 2003, in which the Council decided to amend articles III and IV of the statute of the Institute,

Welcoming the constitution of the Executive Board of the Institute, in particular the important results of its first session, held on 27 July 2004, and its resumed first session, held on 1 October 2004,

Welcoming also the adoption by the Executive Board of the framework of the strategic plan for the Institute, 2004-2007,

Bearing in mind the recommendation made by the Executive Board at its resumed first session that the report of the Director of the Institute, the proposed operational budget for 2005 and other relevant documents be submitted to the General Assembly,

Taking note with appreciation of a number of important strategic initiatives, including the redesign of the web site of the Institute, the strengthening of cooperative arrangements with entities of the United Nations system, the expansion of the research programme of the Institute, the intensification of its fund-raising campaign, the enhancement of communications with governmental agencies, civil society, academia and the private sector, and the strengthening of the training, capacity-building and outreach activities undertaken by the Institute,

1. Welcomes the report of the Secretary-General;

2. Welcomes also the fact that the first phase of the revitalization process has been completed with the preparation of the programme of work, portfolio of projects and related budget of the International Research and Training Institute for the Advancement of Women, as noted by the Secretary-General in his report, and decides that all of its projects should be fully implemented in order to strengthen the Institute, thus enabling it to carry out effectively its mandate, in particular to address the challenges facing women in developing and least developed countries in all regions;

3. Recognizes that the implementation of the programme of work and strategic plan for the Institute will contribute to the review and appraisal of the implementation of the Beijing Declaration and Platform for Action and the outcome document of the twenty-third special session of the General Assembly;

4. Requests the Institute, in accordance with its mandate, to actively participate in and contribute to the review and appraisal of the implementation of the Beijing Declaration and Platform for Action and the outcome document of the twenty-third special session of the General Assembly in the context of the forty-ninth session of the Commission on the Status of Women;

5. Also requests that the Institute, in the formulation of future programmes and projects, take into account the particular challenges facing women in developing and least developed countries in the different regions;

6. Stresses the critical importance of voluntary financial contributions by Member States to the United Nations Trust Fund for the International Research and Training Institute for the Advancement of Women to enable it to carry out its mandate;

7. Urges Member States to make voluntary contributions to the Trust Fund, particularly during this critical transitional period;

8. Decides to provide its full support to the current efforts to revitalize the Institute and, in this regard, to ensure that the Institute will be able to continue functioning for a period of at least one year;

9. Requests the Secretary-General to report to the General Assembly at its sixtieth session on the implementation of the present resolution.

In favour: Algeria, Andorra, Antigua and Barbuda, Argentina, Armenia, Azerbaijan, Bahamas, Bahrain, Bangladesh, Barbados, Belarus, Belize, Benin, Bhutan, Bolivia, Bosnia and Herzegovina, Brazil, Brunei Darussalam, Burkina Faso, Burundi, Cambodia, Cameroon, Cape Verde, Central African Republic, Chile, China, Colombia, Comoros, Congo, Costa Rica, Cuba, Cyprus, Democratic People's Republic of Korea, Democratic Republic of the Congo, Djibouti, Dominica, Dominican Republic, Ecuador, Egypt, El Salvador, Eritrea, Fiji, Ghana, Grenada, Guatemala, Guinea, Guyana, Haiti, Honduras, India, Indonesia, Iran, Iraq, Italy, Jordan, Kazakhstan, Kenya, Kuwait, Kyrgyzstan, Lao People's Democratic Republic, Lebanon, Lesotho, Liberia, Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Madagascar, Malaysia, Maldives, Mali, Malta, Marshall Islands, Mauritius, Mexico, Micronesia, Monaco, Mongolia, Morocco, Mozambique, Myanmar, Namibia, Nepal, Nicaragua, Niger, Nigeria, Oman, Pakistan, Panama, Papua New Guinea, Paraguay, Peru, Philippines, Portugal, Qatar, Rwanda, Saint Lucia, Saint Vincent and the Grenadines, Saudi Arabia, Senegal, Serbia and Montenegro, Sierra Leone, Singapore, Slovakia, Solomon Islands, South Africa, Spain, Sri Lanka, Sudan, Suriname, Syrian Arab Republic, Thailand, The former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia, Timor-Leste, Togo, Tonga, Trinidad and Tobago, Tunisia, Turkmenistan, Uganda, United Arab Emirates, United Republic of Tanzania, Uruguay, Venezuela, Viet Nam, Yemen, Zambia, Zimbabwe.

Against: Australia, Canada, Denmark, Finland, Japan, Latvia, New Zealand, Sweden, United Kingdom, United States.

Abstaining: Albania, Austria, Belgium, Bulgaria, Croatia, Czech Republic, Estonia, France, Georgia, Germany, Hungary, Iceland, Ireland, Israel, Liechtenstein, Lithuania, Luxembourg, Netherlands, Norway, Poland, Republic of Korea, Republic of Moldova, Romania, Russian Federation, San Marino, Slovenia, Switzerland, Turkey, Ukraine, Uzbekistan.

By decision 2004/317 of 23 December, the Council also took note of the Secretary-General's note transmitting the report of the INSTRAW Director on the revitalization and strengthening of the Institute (see p. 1172).

Financial situation

Report of Secretary-General. In an October report [A/59/433] on the financial situation of INSTRAW, the Secretary-General indicated that, because of additional voluntary contributions received in December 2003 and lower than anticipated expenses in November-December 2003, the available balance of the INSTRAW Trust Fund as at 31 December 2003 amounted to $843,417. For the period 1 January to 30 September 2004, $109,100 in additional income was received in the Trust Fund, comprising $101,706 in voluntary contributions and $7,394 in miscellaneous income. As the Fund balance as at 30 September was estimated at $314,420 and anticipated expenditures for October-December at $290,703, it was determined that the Institute would have adequate resources to function until the end of 2004, with a projected closing balance of $23,717. Core requirements for the 2005 budget were estimated at $1,183,760. However, funds had neither been pledged nor received to finance operations in 2005. The Secretary-General concluded that, under the circumstances, the General Assembly would need to consider the future viability of the Institute.

Communication. On 4 October [A/C.3/59/2], Spain, on behalf of the Executive Board of INSTRAW, informed the General Assembly that the Institute's Trust Fund did not contain sufficient resources to meet its financial requirements for the 2005 proposed work plan and budget approved by the Executive Board in October. The Executive Board had called on the Assembly to provide financial assistance to the Institute.

Statement of Secretary-General. In a November statement [A/C.5/59/16] on programme budget implications of draft resolution [A/C.3/59/L.26], the Secretary-General indicated that financial requirements for 2005 were estimated at $1,183,700. Taking into account $67,613 in additional contributions to the INSTRAW Trust Fund in October, resulting in a projected balance of $91,300 in the Fund as at 31 December 2004, an additional amount of $1,092,400 might be required from the UN regular budget to maintain the Institute in 2005.

ACABQ report. In November [A/59/579], the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions, recommended that the Fifth (Administrative and Budgetary) Committee inform the General Assembly that should it adopt the draft resolution (above), an additional provision of up to $1,092,400 would arise under Section 9, Economic and social affairs, of the 2004-2005 programme budget.

Fifth Committee consideration. In December [A/59/641], the Fifth Committee informed the Assembly accordingly and recommended that the Secretary-General be requested to report to the Assembly, as a matter of priority, during the main part of its sixtieth (2005) session on the Institute's overall financial situation.

Chapter XI

Children, youth and ageing persons

In 2004, the United Nations Children's Fund (UNICEF) continued to work with diverse partners to ensure that children worldwide were given the best start in life—immunization against vaccine-preventable diseases; accurate information about HIV/AIDS prevention; a quality primary school education; and protection from harm, abuse, violence and discrimination, including during times of war and in emergencies.

Significant progress was made towards mainstreaming children's priorities into national policy. At least 170 of the 190 countries that had adopted "A world fit for children"—the outcome document of the General Assembly's twenty-seventh (2002) special session on children—had taken action on or planned to initiate policies to put the goals of the session into action, and some 105 countries had incorporated those commitments into poverty-reduction strategies, national development plans or sector plans. In February, the General Assembly decided to hold a commemorative plenary meeting in 2007 to chart further progress.

UNICEF continued work on its five organizational priorities for 2002-2005: girls' education; fighting HIV/AIDS; integrated early childhood development; immunization "plus"; and improved protection of children from violence, exploitation, abuse and discrimination.

United Nations policies and programmes on youth continued to focus on efforts to implement the 1995 World Programme of Action for Youth to the Year 2002 and Beyond. In December, the General Assembly decided to hold two follow-up plenary meetings at its sixtieth (2005) session to evaluate progress in implementation, which would be preceded by an interactive round table. The third meeting of the High-level Panel of the Youth Employment Network focused on promoting development and financing of youth employment in national action plans prior to the five-year review of the Millennium Development Goals in 2005.

In 2004, United Nations efforts to implement the 2002 Madrid International Plan of Action on Ageing continued through the road map drafted in 2003, and in his report on progress, the Secretary-General called for greater efforts to link ageing to development policy.

Children

Follow-up to the 2002 General Assembly special session on children

Pursuant to its decision 58/565 [YUN 2003, p. 1203], the General Assembly considered, at its resumed fifty-eighth (2004) session, follow-up to the Assembly's twenty-seventh (2002) special session on children [YUN 2002, p. 1168], including progress in realizing the commitments of the session's final document, "A world fit for children", consisting of a Declaration and Plan of Action, adopted in resolution S-27/2 [ibid., p. 1169]. The Assembly had before it the Secretary-General's 2003 report [YUN 2003, p. 1202] on the follow-up, which highlighted action taken under the four major goals of the Plan of Action.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 9 February [meeting 80], the General Assembly adopted resolution 58/282 [draft: A/58/L.58] without vote [agenda item 41].

Follow-up to the outcome of the special session on children

The General Assembly,

Reaffirming the Declaration and the Plan of Action contained in the final document of the special session of the General Assembly on children, entitled "A world fit for children", and recognizing that their implementation is a major contribution to protecting the rights and promoting the well-being of children,

Recalling the Convention on the Rights of the Child, the most universally embraced human rights treaty in history, and the Optional Protocols thereto,

Recalling also its resolutions on the special session on children, including resolution 57/190 of 18 December 2002, in which, inter alia, it decided to include in the agenda of its fifty-eighth session the item entitled "Follow-up to the outcome of the special session on children", and allocated its consideration to the plenary,

Recalling further its resolution 57/270 B of 23 June 2003 on the integrated and coordinated implementation of and follow-up to the outcomes of the major United Nations conferences and summits in the economic and social fields,

Bearing in mind that, by 2007, several of the time-bound and quantified commitments set out in the Declaration and the Plan of Action should have been met, and that other targets are to be met by 2010 and 2015,

1. Welcomes the report of the Secretary-General;
 2. Takes note of the initial progress made in the implementation of the Declaration and the Plan of Action by Governments, as well as by intergovernmental organizations and non-governmental organizations, and the support provided to them by relevant United Nations agencies, funds and programmes;

3. Calls upon Member States that have not yet done so to prepare or strengthen national action plans and, where appropriate, regional action plans, with a set of specific time-bound and measurable goals and targets, and in this context encourages cooperation with civil society actors, including non-governmental organizations working for and with children, as well as children themselves, in order to implement the commitments made at the special session on children and at other relevant major United Nations conferences and summits, in particular the Millennium Summit;

4. Urges all relevant specialized agencies, funds and programmes of the United Nations system, and invites intergovernmental organizations, non-governmental organizations and civil society, to lend their full support to implementing the commitments made in the final document of the twenty-seventh special session, entitled "A world fit for children", and to keep the Secretary-General informed of their actions;

5. Requests the United Nations Children's Fund to continue to prepare and disseminate, in close collaboration with Governments, relevant specialized agencies, funds and programmes of the United Nations system and all other relevant actors, as appropriate, information on the progress made in the implementation of the Plan of Action;

6. Requests the governing bodies of the relevant specialized agencies to ensure that, within their mandates, the agencies give their fullest possible support for the achievement of the goals outlined in the Plan of Action and to keep the General Assembly fully informed, through the Economic and Social Council, of progress and additional action required using existing reporting frameworks and procedures;

7. Requests the Secretary-General to continue to report regularly to the General Assembly on the progress made in implementing the Declaration and the Plan of Action;

8. Decides to convene a commemorative plenary meeting in 2007, on a date to be decided at its sixtieth session, devoted to the follow-up to the outcome of its twenty-seventh special session and the progress made in implementing the Declaration and the Plan of Action, based on a report to be prepared by the Secretary-General, and invites the President of the General Assembly to finalize organizational matters in consultation with Member States;

9. Decides also to include in the provisional agenda of its fifty-ninth session the item entitled "Follow-up to the outcome of the special session on children".

Report of Secretary-General. In response to General Assembly resolutions 58/157 [YUN 2003, p. 701] and 58/282 (above), the Secretary-General issued his second report [A/59/274] on follow-up to the Assembly's special session on children.

The report updated progress achieved in realizing the commitments outlined in the session's final document, entitled "A world fit for children", which committed Governments to a time-bound set of goals for children, with a focus on health, education, protection from abuse, exploitation and violence, and combating HIV/AIDS. The report also identified problems and constraints, and recommended actions needed to achieve further progress.

In 2004, the overall rate of progress was more encouraging than the previous year. Some 105 countries had incorporated national policy instruments such as poverty-reduction strategies, national development plans or sector plans into the follow-up process, and at least 170 countries had taken or intended to take action to put the special session's goals into operation. UNICEF, as at the end of May, indicated that 25 countries had completed national action plans for children since the special session; 55 countries were in the process of doing so; and another 32 foresaw developing such plans. The report covered regional trends, noting outstanding progress in Central and Eastern Europe, the Commonwealth of Independent States (CIS) and the Baltic States; widespread efforts to develop or improve national action plans in Latin America and the Caribbean and Asia and the Pacific; and efforts to integrate the special session's goals into poverty reduction strategies among two-thirds of the countries in sub-Saharan Africa. However, it noted limited progress in the Middle East and North Africa.

The report highlighted strengths and weaknesses in the follow-up process to incorporate goals for children into local and national strategies and policies; involve civil society; reach the most disadvantaged groups; foster synergy between the Millennium Development Goals (MDGs) [YUN 2000, p. 49] and the goals of the special session; allocate funds to meet those goals; and link national action plans with the 1989 Convention on the Rights of the Child [YUN 1989, p. 560] (see p. 667).

In some countries, the special session appeared to have promoted stronger monitoring mechanisms of child-related goals. Widespread national reporting in the last few years on the MDGs indicated a positive response to monitoring child-related goals. Some 73 countries had issued monitoring reports on the MDGs as of July 2004. However, even though some countries had well-established monitoring systems for health and education indicators, few had disaggregated data on all the priority areas identified in the special session, particularly child protection.

UN agencies and other international actors were collaborating to achieve a consolidated statistical system to monitor and report on the relevant MDGs. UNICEF was developing multiple in-indicator cluster surveys (MICs) that would provide the largest single source of data for charting progress in reaching child-related MDGs and the goals of “A world fit for children.” It also worked with demographic and health surveys sponsored by the United States Agency for International Development (USAID) to ensure that comparable child-related data were produced. More than 40 countries had adopted the ChildInfo/DevInfo database system for compiling child related data and that number was expected to double by the end of 2004. The system, a user-friendly technology platform which encouraged dialogue among stakeholders and facilitated reporting, was developed with UNICEF sponsorship.

The Secretary-General concluded that since the 2002 special session there had been numerous, but often isolated, examples of rapid progress in countries and regions, demonstrating that accelerated progress was possible, but it would require increased resource allocations and political action. Of the 190 countries that had adopted the “A world fit for children” Plan of Action, at least 169 had taken or were planning action to achieve related goals. However, many countries had yet to link such plans to national budgeting and monitoring mechanisms. The fact that the MDGs did not explicitly include child protection targets raised the challenge of ensuring that the relevant issues were appropriately considered in national planning processes, including strategies to end child trafficking, child labour and violence against children. Greater efforts were needed to ensure adequate and sustained national budget allocations for children, supplemented by donor funding when necessary. In many countries, weaknesses in institutional capacity, and in some cases conflict and instability, would challenge implementation of programmes for children.

As a way forward, the Secretary-General recommended the establishment of national councils for children, capacity-building of national child agencies and collaboration with parliamentarians and civil society organizations to promote child-focused budgets. He emphasized the importance of civil society involvement in mobilizing resources for children’s rights and noted the participation of children and young people as a major constituency in many government-led decision-making processes, which had proliferated in the two years since the special session. He called on countries to report regularly to the public on progress in implementing the MDGs and the goals of “A world fit for children” as a means of social mobilization for those goals and to strengthen accountability. In addition, assistance should be provided to civil society and community groups to enable them to generate information on specific groups, such as children orphaned by AIDS.

The Secretary-General also proposed that regional mechanisms be utilized to encourage countries to share experiences and good practices in child-related programmes and that the Committee on the Rights of the Child promote closer linkages between follow-up to the special session, the MDGs and States parties’ periodic reports on the Convention on the Rights of the Child. He indicated that further updates on progress in implementing the Declaration and Plan of Action would be provided to the General Assembly in 2005 and 2006, and a more detailed analysis in 2007.

On 23 December, the Assembly decided that its agenda item entitled “follow-up to the outcome of the special session on children” would be considered during its resumed fifty-ninth (2005) session (decision 59/552).

United Nations Children’s Fund

UNICEF was committed to achieving the MDGs [YUN 2000, p. 51] and the goals set by the Assembly’s twenty-seventh (2002) special session on children [YUN 2002, p. 1168] in its outcome document, “A world fit for children” [ibid., p. 1169]. Its mission was to defend children’s rights, help meet their basic needs, ensure their survival and increase their opportunities to flourish; rally political will to invest in children’s well-being; respond to emergencies and strengthen the ability of children and their families to handle crisis, including armed conflict, natural disasters and HIV/AIDS; assist countries in transition to protect young people’s rights and provide vital services to children and their families; advance equal rights for boys and girls and encourage their full participation in developing their communities; and work towards the human development goals adopted by the world community and the peace, justice and social progress enshrined in the Charter of the United Nations.

UNICEF’s annual flagship publication, The State of the World’s Children 2004, emphasized the importance of girls’ education to development and sought to draw attention to the plight of girls who, in most countries, were the most disadvantaged in regard to education. Millions of them never attended school; millions more never completed their education; and countless others never received quality education. Ill prepared as women to participate in the political, social and economic development of their communities, such uneducated or poorly educated girls—and their children—were at higher risk for poverty, HIV/AIDS, sexual exploitation, violence and abuse. Girls' education raised economic productivity, reduced infant and maternal mortality, improved nutrition and promoted health, including helping to prevent the spread of HIV/AIDS. Noting that some 121 million children were out of school, and 65 million of them were girls, the report stressed the urgency of eliminating gender disparity in primary and secondary schools by 2005 as the first step towards meeting the MDGs relating to education.

In 2004, UNICEF cooperated with 157 countries, areas and territories: 45 in sub-Saharan Africa; 35 in Latin America and the Caribbean; 34 in Asia; 20 in the Middle East and North Africa; and 23 in Central and Eastern Europe, and the Baltic States.

Total expenditures, including write-offs, amounted to $1,606 million (compared to $1,480 million in 2003), of which 93.9 per cent ($1,508 million) was for programme assistance and support; 5.7 per cent ($92 million) for management and administration; and 0.4 per cent ($6 million) for write-offs. (For programme expenditures by priority, see p. 1181.) UNICEF operations in 2004 were described in the UNICEF Annual Report covering the period 1 January to 31 December 2004; the annual report of its Executive Director [E/ICEF/2005/3]; and a report of the Executive Director [E/ICEF/2005/6] on results achieved for children during the year in support of UNICEF's 2002-2005 medium-term strategic plan (MTSP), which was approved by the Executive Board in 2001 [YUN 2001, p. 1094].

The UNICEF Executive Board held its first regular session of 2004 (19-23 and 26 January), its annual session (7-11 June) and its second regular session (13-16 September), all in New York [E/2004/34/Rev.1]. The Board adopted 17 decisions during those sessions.

By decision 2004/232 of 12 July, the Economic and Social Council took note of the Board's report on its first regular session; the Board's decisions at its annual session; and the annual report of the Executive Director covering the year 2003 [E/2004/3], which was transmitted to the Council in accordance with a January decision of the Board [E/2004/34/Rev.1 (dec. 2004/3)].

On 22 January [dec. 2004/4], the Board requested that the Bureau continue its lead role in exploring approaches to further improve working methods and to submit specific recommendations. In June the Board reviewed the Bureau's report on methods [E/ICEF/2004/CRP.10]; took note of the Bureau's recommendations; and indicated it would do its best to implement them.

On 16 September, the Executive Board adopted the programme of work and dates for its 2005 sessions [dec. 2004/17].

Programme policies

In December, the Executive Director transmitted to the Economic and Social Council her annual report [E/2005/6-ICEF/2005/3], which described UNICEF efforts to implement the Secretary-General's reform programme (see p. 1359) and the provisions of the triennial comprehensive policy review (TCPR) of operational activities for development of the UN system (see p. 1866). The report covered the areas of structures and mechanisms; funding for operational activities; capacity-building; the resident coordinator system; common country programming; common premises and common services; monitoring and evaluation; gender mainstreaming; and collaboration with the World Bank. It also discussed follow-up to international conferences, including the General Assembly's special session on children (see p. 1175).

Other issues highlighted the Greentree Report, produced at a private meeting (New York, 6 January) of the Executive Heads of the United Nations Development Group (UNDG); the progressive implementation of the new common country programming process and the 15 countries in 2004 that made up the first group of countries applying the full common country programming process; efforts to develop national plans of action (NPAs) for orphaned children; the participation of more than 400 national professionals and UN staff from 120 countries in introductory workshops on DevInfo, a tool adapted from the ChildInfo technology (see p. 1177).

Medium-term strategic plan (2002-2005)

In March, the Executive Director submitted a report [E/ICEF/2004/9] on the results achieved for children in 2003 in support of UNICEF's medium-term strategic plan (MTSP) (2002-2005), which provided information on progress, partnerships, constraints and key results achieved in 2002-2003 in the plan's five priority areas of girls' education, early childhood development (ECD), immunization "plus", fighting HIV/AIDS, and protection of children from violence, abuse, exploitation and discrimination. The report also presented UNICEF income and expenditures in 2003.

The report indicated that the second year (2003) of the MTSP period saw growing achievements from UNICEF's partnerships in the five priority areas. The linkages between priorities, such as the integration of actions against HIV/AIDS and for child protection in sectoral programmes, had become stronger. Within the MTSP framework, emergency assistance was provided to children and their families in 55 crisis-affected countries across the globe. Progress was made in operational areas, including an improvement in key performance indicators in the UNICEF global supply system. The introduction of matrices setting out strategic outcomes had assisted in the drive for results-oriented programmes. As the MTSP progressed, UNICEF would need to define more clearly its role and articulate its contributions to the Millennium Agenda [YUN 2000, p. 49] and the UN reform process—both overall and in specific areas such as early childhood and the struggle against HIV/AIDS. UNICEF would also need to focus on improving the quality of its publications, donor reporting and country programme management; ensuring a scaled-up response to the orphan crisis and HIV infection among young people through further cooperation with the World Health Organization (WHO) to expand access to treatment; and strengthening other areas, such as, expanded immunization services, supply of bednets and vitamin supplements, and enhanced efforts against child trafficking, child soldiery and gender-based violence.

Mid-term review. A July UNICEF report [E/ICEF/2004/13] on the MTSP mid-term review summarized the views of external partners and UNICEF field offices on their experience of MTSP so far; discussed key issues which had increased in prominence in the first two years of the plan; assessed organizational performance and lessons learned in the five priority areas and supporting strategies of the plan; and presented proposed adjustments to the current MTSP and implications for the next one.

The report recommended that UNICEF maintain strengths identified in the current MTSP, such as the emphasis on clear organization priorities coupled with a flexible approach that responded to national conditions, increased emphasis on results-based management, dynamic linkages among the priorities and between community-based and policy-oriented work, and a more coherent approach to external communication and fund-raising. Only limited adjustments to the MTSP were envisaged. The review confirmed that UNICEF should further specify its role in the development and implementation of poverty reduction strategy papers and sector-wide approach processes (SWAPs).

In general, UNICEF staff and a number of external partners envisaged a high degree of continuity in the organizational priorities for the next plan. Suggested changes included more focus on young child survival and development, as well as quality education and issues of inequality in the discussion on girls' education. Other areas that needed more attention were water, sanitation and nutrition; emergency response; work in post-conflict transitions; humanitarian response; streamlining of programming and operational procedures; recruitment and retention of high-quality staff; and development of a fund-raising strategy, with a focus on a balance between regular and other resources.

On 16 September [dec. 2004/16], the Executive Board took note of the conclusions of the report on the mid-term review of the UNICEF MTSP and requested the Executive Director to report on progress in effecting the recommended adjustments at its annual session in 2005.

Medium-term financial plan (2004-2007)

At its September session, the Executive Board considered the MTSP: financial plan and related recommendation for 2004-2007 [E/ICEF/2004/AB/L.4], which provided a flexible framework of projections for that period, including the preparation of up to $492 million in programme expenditures from regular resources to be submitted to the Board in 2005. That amount was subject to the availability of resources and to the condition that income and expenditure estimates in the plan continued to be valid.

On 16 September [dec. 2004/14], the Executive Board approved the medium-term financial plan as a framework of projections.

Evaluation system

As requested by the Executive Board [YUN 2002, p. 1184], the UNICEF Secretariat issued an April progress report [E/ICEF/2004/11] on its evaluation function, which provided an overview of the evaluation system, of progress made in strengthening the evaluation function and of evaluations conducted by the Evaluation Office. The report noted that during the 2002-2003 period, some 2,435 evaluative exercises were registered in the database, of which 576 or 24 per cent were evaluation reports. The rest were surveys or research studies. Sixty-three per cent of the evaluation reports were related to organizational priorities of the MTSP, and of those, 42 per cent dealt with child protection, 20 per cent with early childhood development, 19 per cent with HIV/AIDS, 11 per cent with immunization, and 8 per cent with girls' education.

In 2003, the Evaluation Office conducted a meta-evaluation of one half of the evaluation reports received in 2001 and 2002 and found that the quality of evaluations supported by UNICEF country offices was inconsistent. Approximately 20 per cent were excellent, but one-third were poorly executed. UNICEF cited measures it would take to improve the quality of the bottom third of the evaluations and its overall evaluation function process. On 11 June [dec. 2004/9], the Executive Board, while commending UNICEF's progress in evaluation, noted that work remained to be done, including sharpening the strategic focus of evaluation work plans, improving efficiency and raising the standards of evaluation work. It emphasized that the evaluation function should be carried out in consultation with national authorities. Recommending areas for further strengthening the evaluation function, the Board requested the Executive Director to report on evaluation at its annual session in 2006 and to present key findings of evaluations of the MTSP thematic areas when they became available.

Health coordinating committee. At its January session, the Executive Board considered a note [E/ICEF/2004/6] on the evaluation of the WHO/UNICEF/United Nations Population Fund (UNFPA) Coordinating Committee on Health (CCH). On 21 January [dec. 2004/1], the Board endorsed the note's recommendation to discontinue CCH and recommended that those three organizations continue to strengthen coordination in health.

Emergency assistance

A July report [E/ICEF/2004/14] on the updated humanitarian priorities of UNICEF indicated that in 2003-2004, one third of the countries in which UNICEF operated were responding to crises and emergencies, and approximately 25-30 per cent of UNICEF funding was allocated for emergencies. As the organization's income had increased, so had the portion for emergencies, from $116 million in 1998 to $443 million in 2003. That illustrated the significant rise in the scale and nature of emergencies, especially large-scale displacement of populations, the breakdown of State institutions and community structures, political turbulence, human rights violations, disruption of social service systems, the lack of governance and presence of non-State entities. In recent years, the context for humanitarian action had changed, and both the number and complexity of emergencies had increased.

In 2003, UNICEF had updated its Core Commitments for Children in Emergencies (CCCs) in order to enhance the timeliness, effectiveness and predictability of its humanitarian response, and to reinforce its role in protecting women and children's rights. The revised CCCs covered four main areas: rapid assessment, including an objective analysis of the capacity to manage and respond to the situation; coordination and partnerships formed with other organizations to ensure achievement of the CCCs, particularly through initial emergency response commitments in the first six to eight weeks; programmatic response to attain the required minimum intervention in various sectors; and the operational capacities, procedures and resources to ensure that the funds, staff and supplies required were available on a timely basis. Focusing greater attention on HIV/AIDS prevention, strengthening child protection and increasing support for post-conflict transition periods, the new CCC format provided guiding principles for UNICEF to follow in an emergency. UNICEF applied the CCC format a number of times during 2004 in Caribbean countries ravaged by natural disasters and man-made crises—floods, hurricanes and political unrest—particularly in the Dominican Republic, Grenada, Haiti and Jamaica. The organization also responded to the terrorist attack on 1 September against a school in Beslan, Russian Federation (see p. 73), with emergency medical and school supplies, and to the devastating earthquake in Bam, Iran, on 26 December 2003, by supplying emergency water, medicines, tents and generators, as well as counseling to many of the 80,000 survivors. The war-torn Darfur region of the Sudan (see p. 235) remained a challenge throughout the year, due to insecurity and the remote locations of displaced people. UNICEF provided emergency health kits, primary health care and vaccinations, safe drinking water, latrines, food, shelter, blankets, mosquito nets and soap to many of those affected. It also assisted in providing education and psychosocial support, especially to child victims of violence.

In its resolution 59/173 (see p. 485), the General Assembly, concerned about the continued deterioration of the situation of children in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, called upon the international community to urgently provide needed assistance and services to alleviate the dire humanitarian crisis affecting Palestinian children and their families.

UNICEF programmes by region

A report of the Executive Director [E/ICEF/2005/6] indicated that in 2004, UNICEF regional programme expenditures totalled $1,344 million, of which $317 million (24 per cent) went to programmes in Eastern and Southern Africa; $266 million (20 per cent) to Western and Central Africa; $241 million (18 per cent) to South Asia; $215 million (16 per cent) to the Middle East and North Africa; $122 million (9 per cent) to East Asia and the Pacific; $84 million (6 per cent) to the Americas and the Caribbean; $58 million

(4 per cent) to the Commonwealth of Independent States (CIS) and the Baltic States; and $40 million (3 per cent) to interregional programmes. Programme support costs totalled an additional $164 million. The percentage of programme expenditure to sub-Saharan Africa as a whole was 48 per cent.

Programme expenditures were highest in countries with low income and high, or very high, under-five mortality rates. The 63 low-income countries—defined as those with a per capita gross national income of $735 or less—which had a total child population in 2002 of 1 billion, or 56 per cent of all children worldwide, received 66 per cent of total programme expenditures.

Field visits

Executive Board members who visited the Democratic Republic of the Congo (13–23 March) reported [E/ICEF/2004/CRP.7] that UNICEF played a lead role in responding to the needs of the community where many children and women faced some of the worst conditions in the world, including HIV/AIDS, rape and other violence, high infant and child mortality rates, recruitment of child soldiers and poor education. Members concluded that urgent attention was required and the Board called for the immediate cessation of all acts of violence against women and children; legal action against sexual violence perpetrators; disarmament, demobilization and reinsertion into communities of children associated with armed groups; an internationally supported post-conflict transition process; increased funding for community-focused activities; and reinforcement of UNICEF programme activities.

In a report [E/ICEF/2004/CRP.8] on the joint visit to Guatemala (21 March–2 April) by members of the Executive Boards of UNICEF, the United Nations Development Programme (UNDP), UNFPA and the World Food Programme (WFP), the participants concluded that there was a need to strengthen the functions of the resident coordinator and the UN funds, agencies and programmes in Guatemala, as the United Nations Verification Mission in Guatemala (MINUGUA) would end on 31 December 2004 (see p. 286). Members called for an assessment to determine which resources and infrastructure could be transferred from MINUGUA to the Resident Coordinator's office so that it could fulfil its new responsibilities. The report concluded that the United Nations should continue its advocacy and support for legislative and judicial frameworks that progress in such areas as, water and sanitation, food security and reform of the legal framework regulating adoption of children. Public policies, capacity-building at all levels and social investments benefiting children also needed improvement. Responding to the rapid spread of HIV/AIDS in Guatemala, especially among women in recent years, Board members called for extending nationwide coverage of programmes to stop mother-to-child transmission of the disease.

Members of the Bureau of the UNICEF Executive Board travelled to Guyana (30 May–4 June) and reported [E/ICEF/2004/CRP.9] on UNICEF-supported projects and how the country programme implemented the MTSP priorities in that country. Key achievements included UNICEF's catalytic role in supporting pilot projects in national programmes and government programme integration, such as the incorporation of the "Prevention of Mother-to-Child Transmission of HIV" project into a national programme, and of the Escuela Nueva and Child-Friendly Schools approach into Guyana's education strategic plan and the Education for All (EFA) Fast Track Initiative. To strengthen weak areas, the members recommended that UNICEF introduce results-based management and an integrated monitoring and evaluation plan; develop a communication strategy focusing on behavioural change; and create opportunities for the development and participation of children. Particular attention was needed for the "forgotten group" of children ages 7 to 12 to prevent the spread of HIV/AIDS, teen pregnancies, school drop-outs and violence. The report also noted the establishment of a child protection monitoring database through UNICEF's technical support, which would help to improve social statistics, and the ability of non-governmental organizations (NGOs) to attract additional resources from funding agencies, thus developing broad-based partnerships in the country.

In a July report [E/ICEF/2004/19] on proposed guidelines for field visits by Board members, UNICEF provided a flexible frame of reference for preparing visits, which would specify the type and number of visits, the selection of the countries and the purpose and scope of visits. On 15 September [dec. 2004/13], the Board adopted the proposed guidelines.

UNICEF programmes by sector

In 2004, UNICEF programme expenditures, which were linked to the five organizational priorities established in 2001 under the 2002–2005 MTSP [YUN 2001, p. 1093], totalled $1,344 million, a 10 per cent increase over 2003 [E/ICEF/2005/6]. The largest share of total expenditures, $459 million (34 per cent), was spent early childhood development (ECD); followed by $293 million (22 per cent) for immunization "plus"; $282 million (21 per cent) for girls' education; $140 million (10 per cent) for child protection; $115 million (9 per cent) for HIV/AIDS prevention; and $55 million (4 per cent) for other matters. Programme support costs amounted to an additional $164 million.

The total share for girls' education and ECD had risen significantly since 2002. Decisions on contributions for other purposes by UNICEF funding partners and patterns of spending in emergencies had a growing effect on those shares. In 2004, it was notable that girls' education and HIV/AIDS prevention accounted for a significantly higher share of regular resources programme expenditures (25 and 13 per cent, respectively) than of total expenditures.

Early childhood development

An intensive review in 2004 of early childhood development (ECD) resulted in UNICEF modifications to its approach and possible changes to its next MTSP, including greater focus on young children's survival and development, and support for families and marginalized groups. Service delivery in basic health, and water and sanitation had improved, as had parenting programmes, birth registration and centre-based childcare, and efforts to strengthen breast-feeding practices had begun. UNICEF continued to cooperate with a number of national agencies, UN organizations, Governments and NGOs in supporting programmes in those areas.

In 2004, an estimated 34 countries had national ECD policies, up from 17 in 2002, which resulted in family issues and child development being more fully incorporated into national programmes. In partnership with the Netherlands, UNICEF supported innovative ECD programmes in 21 countries. It supported several countries in developing policies for: nutrition and infant and young child feeding, including in Kenya, Madagascar, Rwanda and Timor-Leste; water and sanitation, in Eritrea, Nepal, Nicaragua and Zimbabwe; early childhood education in Ghana, Mozambique and Uganda; and a stronger UN focus on young children through common country assessments (CCAs) and the United Nations Development Assistance Framework (UNDAF). Many countries were using Sector-wide approaches (SWAs) to fill major gaps in national policy or to deal with new challenges, such as the HIV/AIDS impact on young children. Some 90 countries were implementing the Integrated Management of Childhood Illness (IMCI) and the Accelerated Child Survival and Development (ACSD) initiatives, reaching an estimated 124 million people in an expanded coverage of health and nutrition interventions to tackle major causes of child death.

UNICEF joined national aid agencies and others in supporting community programmes for pneumonia treatment in Senegal and Uganda, and training healthcare workers in new diarrhoea treatments in Cambodia, Ethiopia, Ghana and elsewhere. The organization distributed insecticide-treated nets (ITNs) to prevent malaria in 35 African countries and in parts of Asia and the Pacific, and also teamed with WHO to introduce artemisinin-based combination therapy (ACT) for malaria in many countries. As the world's largest supplier of ITNs, UNICEF procured $32 million worth of ITNs and insecticide in 2004, up from $17.2 million in 2003, and $6.7 million worth of ACTs (11.6 million treatments), up from $1 million in 2003. Declines in malaria-related deaths and illness were reported in Eritrea, Sierra Leone and Zambia.

Through partnerships with other agencies, NGOs and the African Development Bank, UNICEF helped upgrade 121 facilities for emergency treatment and care for pregnant women in Senegal, and teamed with others to upgrade 470 such facilities in South Asia. It helped 84 countries strengthen policies or services for infant and young child feeding, and promoted the "Baby-Friendly" Hospital Initiative in 50 countries. Due to the growing interest in food supplements and flour fortification to prevent anaemia and thus maintain women's health and the intellectual development of infants and young children, UNICEF collaborated with private-sector partners, the Fortification Initiative, the Micronutrient Initiative, the Global Alliance for Improved Nutrition and the Asian Development Bank, in a number of activities, including food fortification testing in China and Viet Nam.

UNICEF's 15-year leadership of the global campaign to eliminate iodine deficiency disorders, the most widespread cause of preventable mental retardation in children, resulted in a drop in the number of countries with iodine deficiency as a public health problem from 110 in 1993 to 54 in 2003. Deficiency levels in 40 of the 54 countries were mild.

In 2004, UNICEF supported water, sanitation and hygiene programmes in 93 countries, ranging from national policy development to service delivery in focus districts. Support to schools in 76 countries was provided in hygiene education and construction of water, sanitation and washing facilities. It also supported birth registration campaigns in 90 countries, particularly in West and Central Africa; a "catch-up" campaign in India, which issued some 25 million birth certificates; and campaigns in Afghanistan linked to immunization, which registered 2.7 million children since 2003.

By 2004, 94 countries, up from 67 in 2002, had developed a set of family and community practices for child survival, growth and development—fundamental to realizing the MDGs on child mortality reduction and education. UNICEF supported a community-oriented approach to IMCI in 85 countries and parenting programmes in 56 countries on early learning, psychosocial care, child health and nutrition. Sixty-five countries used baseline surveys and other data to evaluate existing family-care practices. Further deepening of the evidence base was needed, in particular for assessing the role of fathers in child care, which UNICEF promoted in 13 countries, and on how families were coping with conflict and HIV/AIDS.

UNICEF supported home-based care programmes in 70 countries and centre-based care in 84 countries. Efforts to include young children in conflict, with disabilities or affected by HIV/AIDS in childcare programmes grew significantly, and it appeared that, gradually, local childcare programmes were reaching more marginalized children. UNICEF continued to try to improve the quality of early learning programmes as a tool for improving school achievement and, in the longer run, for breaking the cycle of poverty. In some 53 countries, UNICEF-assisted early learning programmes specifically supported girls' preparation for school.

Immunization "plus"

Routine immunization in recent years reached about 75 per cent of the world's children. That strategy of immunizing as many children as possible, combined with routine services and accelerated disease control programmes, prevented an estimated 2.5 million child deaths annually. However, over 29 million children had no access to routine immunization and unless the gap was closed, 2 million children under five years of age would continue to die annually from vaccine-preventable diseases. UNICEF and WHO, with other partners, worked in 2004 to develop a Global Immunization Vision and Strategy (GIVS) for 2006-2015. At least 125 countries had adopted multi-year, comprehensive national immunization action plans.

Global coverage for three doses of the diphtheria/pertussis/tetanus vaccine (DPT3) was 78 per cent, reaching 98 million children in 2003, and the accelerated measles mortality reduction programme made exceptional progress. The Measles Partnership, involving a number of national organizations, including UNICEF and WHO, supported measles vaccination in priority countries in Africa. During 2001-2004, an additional 200 million children in sub-Saharan Africa were vaccinated, reducing measles deaths from an estimated 482,000 in 1999 to fewer than 240,000 in 2004 and achieving the target of halving measles mortality. The Global Polio Eradication Initiative achieved an almost 50 per cent decline in reported cases in Asia in 2004, but an outbreak of polio in Nigeria spread to 13 previously polio-free African countries. UNICEF played a role in the effort to stem the ensuing epidemic in 23 countries. As part of its advocacy programme, it encouraged African religious and traditional leaders to support immunization, notably during the "Pan-African Forum on Building Trust for Immunization and Child Survival" (Dakar, Senegal, October). By 2004, 89 countries had established national communication strategies for immunization. UNICEF continued to support vaccination drives in 41 countries to eliminate maternal and neonatal tetanus (MNT), which still existed in 58 countries, but uncertain funding for the future jeopardized that goal. Seventy-two UNICEF-assisted countries were currently using auto-disable syringes with injectable vaccines and other safer injection practices for routine immunizations, compared to 45 countries in 2002.

Vaccine availability rose significantly in 2004 due to the collective effort of donors, UNICEF, WHO and other partners. Only 35 per cent of countries covered by field reports had national vaccine stock-outs in their routine immunization programmes, down from 44 per cent in 2002. Routine vaccine costs were fully covered by national budgets in 75 per cent of the countries for which information was available, suggesting gradual, but clear, gains in national capacities for routine immunization across the developing world.

UNICEF supported the inclusion of vitamin A supplements in 89 countries with high child mortality, and more than two thirds of children in least developed countries received vitamin A supplements. Twenty-one countries achieved over 70 per cent coverage of children under five years, with two rounds of supplementation, thereby conferring full life-saving protection.

During 2002-2004, UNICEF provided measles vaccines and vitamin A supplements to an estimated 100 million children in 25 countries affected by emergencies. Within a week of the tsunami disaster in late December, UNICEF began providing measles vaccines to children in camps and high-risk areas in India and Indonesia. It also provided vitamin A to those in affected areas, as well as in Kenya and the Sudan's Darfur region. Large-scale UNICEF support sustained immunization services in post-conflict Iraq for over 5 million children, despite insecurity in some areas. In 2004, some 90 UNICEF-assisted countries had national strategies to reach marginalized groups with life-saving intervention. The “Reaching Every District” plan, promoted jointly by UNICEF and WHO, contributed to increased immunization coverage, including by 5 to 10 per cent in 20 countries from 2001 to 2003.

Girls’ education

In 2004, efforts to show the urgency of achieving the millennium target for gender parity in basic education by 2015 [YUN 2000, p. 52] helped create a climate for action in most regions, and UNICEF focused on supporting capacities in national systems. Political commitment to girls’ education was growing, both as a result of advocacy and in response to problems, such as HIV/AIDS. Some 79 countries had national plans relating to the EFA goal, which included explicit measures to reduce the numbers of girls out of school and to create opportunities to incorporate health, nutrition, water, sanitation and protection initiatives in schools.

UNICEF supported Governments in their applications for EFA Fast Track Initiative (FTI) funds and other funding for girls’ education. In several African countries, girls’ education clubs helped to enrol girls and encourage them to complete their education. Consultative meetings or launches of the United Nations Girls’ Education Initiative (UNGEI) were held in Kenya, Lesotho, Malawi, Rwanda, South Africa, Uganda, United Republic of Tanzania and Zimbabwe.

In crisis and post-conflict situations in 2004, as in Burundi, Liberia and parts of the Middle East and North Africa, humanitarian response programmes included education as a force for normalization and healing. Further opportunities for boosting access were provided through engagement with SWAPs, which helped address gender disparities in access to and quality of education, while gender reviews and advocacy helped remove financial barriers for poor families to send girls to school.

In 2004, 55 countries, up from 47 in 2002, took steps to boost girls’ progression to post-primary education and reduce drop-out rates. However, sexual exploitation and violence continued to pose obstacles. In parts of the Middle East, the lack of post-school opportunities and life skills among adolescent girls tended to offset the high levels of girls’ enrolment. UNICEF supported “second chance” initiatives for girls in several countries.

By 2004, some 41 countries, compared to 33 in 2002, had adopted national standards to promote child-friendly, gender-sensitive school environments, which were often based on lessons learned from UNICEF-supported pilot projects and were being developed in nearly 50 other countries. UNICEF also procured $71 million worth of education materials during the year, up from $56 million in 2003, due to special emphasis on accelerating girls’ education in 25 countries.

As part of its contribution to the implementation of the International Plan of Action for the United Nations Literacy Decade (2003-2012) [A/59/267] (see p. 1142), UNICEF focused on the theme “literacy, girls and women”. Among related activities, UNICEF supported programmes in Kosovo, which provided literacy to 2,300 women and girls, as well as projects in Bolivia, Burkina Faso, Kazakhstan, Pakistan, Uganda and Yemen, which linked literacy for women to other programmes, such as early childcare, life skills, income generating activities, and vocational and management training.

Protection from violence, abuse, exploitation and discrimination

The growth in information and promising initiatives, combined with continued advocacy for policy reform had helped raise awareness of violence, exploitation and abuse against children. Global initiatives such as the mid-term review of the Yokohama Commitments [YUN 2001, p. 1097], had also increased attention to child protection. The most prominent gaps in protecting children worldwide were in the areas of sexual abuse and exploitation, including in armed conflict, trafficking, the use of children as soldiers, harmful practices, and the situation of children not in the care of their families or in conflict with the law.

The “protective environment” approach continued to be an important vehicle for making responses more strategic and UNICEF’s cooperation had shifted from programmes primarily for specific groups of children, to fostering institutional and attitudinal change, with emphasis on prevention strategies. In emergencies, immediate protection continued to focus on unaccompanied and separated children, and where necessary, on child soldiers, in line with the CCCs.

In April, the “Handbook for Parliamentarians on Child Protection”, launched by UNICEF and the Inter-Parliamentary Union, created momentum for partnerships at regional and country levels, as illustrated by the first conference on child protection for Arab parliamentarians (Amman, Jordan, 22-23 November). An Arabic-language version of the handbook was presented at the conference.

A child protection analysis had either been completed or was under development in 113 countries in 2004, compared to 91 in 2002. Indicators on juvenile justice and formal care were developed by a wide range of partners and field tested during the year. Tools for measuring violence against children were also under development. In 2005-2006, MICs would collect data on child labour, birth registration, child marriage, female genital mutilation/cutting (FGM/C), prevalence of orphans, child discipline and childhood disability. A management information system to monitor progress in combating commercial sexual exploitation of children was being tested in the East Asia and Pacific region and a similar system was envisaged in Latin America and the Caribbean.

In 2004, UNICEF continued to cooperate with the International Labour Organization (ILO) to combat child labour in 62 countries, and by the end of the year, 151 countries had ratified ILO Convention 182 on the worst forms of child labour. An estimated 57 Governments in UNICEF programme countries monitored the most egregious forms of child labour through regular data gathering. The year also saw a number of initiatives against trafficking, especially through cross-border collaboration. Partnerships to address violence and trafficking had been pursued with UN agencies and regional governmental organizations, such as the League of Arab States and the Council of Europe. In 2004, UNICEF successfully promoted the inclusion of key child protection standards in the Council of Europe's draft convention against trafficking in human beings.

Advocacy related to children affected by armed conflict was carried out by 54 UNICEF offices, with 23 offices focusing specifically on the demobilization of child soldiers. UNICEF supported demobilization and reintegration of child soldiers in conflict and post-conflict transition countries, including some 15,000 demobilized in Burundi, Liberia and southern Sudan, and some 8,500 child soldiers in Afghanistan, as well as, war-affected children and young people enrolled in reintegration programmes in that country. By 2004, legal standards protecting children from violence had been reviewed in 87 countries and 102 UNICEF country offices had worked to change attitudes towards violence. With UNICEF support, 90 countries responded to a questionnaire of the Independent Expert for the Study on Violence against Children. UNICEF also increased its focus on violence in schools, resulting in improved data and school-based initiatives.

In April, the Security Council addressed the issue of children in armed conflict and in its resolution 1539(2004) (see p. 787), condemned the recruitment and use of child soldiers by parties to armed conflict and other violations of children's human rights. In a September report [A/59/331] on the assessment of the UN system response to children affected by armed conflict (see p. 789), the Secretary-General stated that UNICEF, as well as NGOs, had contributed to the development of a robust framework for norms and standards related to such children.

UNICEF worked with partners in 23 African countries to end the practice of FGM/C, which remained widespread in many parts of the continent. Djibouti and Ethiopia passed laws against the practice. A UNICEF-assisted project in Senegal to promote change through a community-based approach was being replicated in Burkina Faso, Guinea, Mali and the Sudan.

UNICEF developed training materials for use by partners and staff to increase awareness of the Secretary-General's Bulletin on Special Measures for Protection from Sexual Exploitation and Abuse [ST/SGB/2003/13], which set standards of behaviour for UN personnel. A child protection training package for peacekeepers was finalized, together with the Office of the Special Representative of the Secretary-General for Children in Armed Conflict (see p. 786) and Save the Children (Sweden). Training for humanitarian personnel and peacekeepers was conducted in collaboration with UN country teams, mainly in sub-Saharan Africa.

UNICEF worked on combating threats posed to children by landmines in 34 countries. With its support, a national mine action strategy was developed in Angola and a centre for mine action was established in Burundi. Mine-risk education was integrated into primary school curricula in Afghanistan and Eritrea. UNICEF helped Sri Lanka educate 20,000 children, using child-to-child techniques, about the risks of landmines, and more than 200,000 people participated in community awareness programmes. A programme was developed in Chad to protect refugees and local communities, and in Liberia, UNICEF supported UN peacekeeping operations in undertaking mine awareness. UNICEF also developed standards for mine-risk education, which were endorsed by the United Nations, as part of the International Mine Action Standards.

HIV/AIDS

As a co-sponsor of the Joint United Nations Programme on HIV/AIDS (UNAIDS), UNICEF remained active in the response to the epidemic, working to stop its spread and to ensure care for children affected by it. In 2004, an estimated 510,000 children below 15 years of age died of AIDS and 640,000 were newly infected with HIV, mostly through a lack of prevention of mother-to-child transmission (PMTCT). In sub-Saharan Africa, about 1.9 million children under 15 years of age were living with HIV by the end of the year. In the 20 worst-affected countries, the epidemic was taking a toll most heavily on young people 15-24 years old, especially young women. While UNICEF had stepped up efforts to combat HIV/AIDS, total expenditures on HIV/AIDS remained at around 9 per cent of programme spending, compared to 13 per cent of regular resources expenditures, owing to the limited availability of other resources for that priority. The “three ones” principles, which called for support to one national plan, one coordinating mechanism and one monitoring evaluation system per country (see p. 1219), was adopted by developing countries and key partners in 2004.

A national situation analysis on HIV/AIDS and its impact on children and young people had been undertaken in 78 countries. UNICEF advocated for increased investment for children and young people in poverty reduction strategies. Major new comprehensive approaches to children and HIV/AIDS were adopted by countries in 2004, including 89 that had adopted national strategies for PMTCT; 89 for the prevention of HIV infection among young people; 79 for school-based life skills education; and 47 for the protection and care of orphans and vulnerable children (OVCs). While progress had been encouraging, greater efforts were needed, particularly in countries with low prevalence, to establish baselines and improve understanding of the impact of HIV/AIDS on children. An in-depth review of the effectiveness of the school-based life skills programme in reducing HIV transmission in the United Republic of Tanzania had disappointing results and pointed to the need for community awareness-raising. Following the mid-term review, UNICEF attempted to ensure that life-skills programmes were better focused on risks specific to the HIV context of each country.

Other highlights included peer education activities supported by 63 UNICEF country offices; collaboration by UNICEF and UNFPA in 15 countries to support national consultations with young people on HIV prevention; UNICEF's scaled up promotion of PMTCT programmes, particularly in developing countries, which provided support in 88 countries in 2004 compared with 58 in 2002; and the collaborative search by UNICEF, WHO and USAID for solutions to the challenges of paediatric HIV care and the cost of paediatric formulations of anti-retroviral drugs (ARVs). The three organizations also convened in Zambia to review accelerated actions to treat children with HIV/AIDS in the Southern African region. China's Ministry of Health and UNICEF, in partnership with the Clinton Foundation, launched the country's first paediatric AIDS care and treatment initiative.

UNICEF supported the development of infant feeding and PMTCT policies in 72 countries, as well as measures to provide help to HIV-positive women in using safe child feeding options in 60 countries. UNICEF and WHO organized 13 country orientations on the UN framework on infant feeding and HIV/AIDS. UNICEF, the Food and Agriculture Organization (FAO) and WFP supported nutritional security initiatives for children affected by HIV/AIDS. In 2004, UNICEF procurement services for ARV prophylaxis had grown extraordinarily, to an estimated $18.4 million worth of supplies, and an additional $2.9 million worth of HIV/AIDS-related test kits and diagnostic equipment were also supplied.

UNICEF continued to serve as a global convener and leader on issues concerning OVCs. More than half of UNICEF-assisted programmes for home-based and centre-based care for young children included children affected by HIV/AIDS. In parts of Africa, such centres were increasingly the first line of food, healthcare and other support for such children. UNICEF, UNAIDS, USAID and WFP joined national task forces in rapid assessment, analysis and action planning exercises in 16 African countries to increase interventions and funding for OVCs. UNICEF and partners also developed cost estimates for the protection, care and support services for OVCs in sub-Saharan Africa, which would be used for planning and leveraging resources. A UNICEF/World Bank partnership on ECD and HIV/AIDS was launched in five African countries to increase awareness of the needs of young children affected by HIV/AIDS.

UNAIDS programme coordination

A July report [E/ICEF/2004/15] on UNICEF's follow-up to the fourteenth meeting of the UNAIDS Programme Coordinating Board [YUN 2003, p. 1248] summarized UNICEF efforts to track costs and assess global resource needs; assist countries in accessing new resources; promote issues relating to women and girls in response to HIV/AIDS; integrate emergency, humanitarian and development response; and reduce the stigma and discrimination associated with the disease. The Executive Board considered the report at its second regular session in September.

Operational and administrative matters

UNICEF finances

In 2004, UNICEF's income totalled $1,978 million, an increase of $290 million (17 per cent) over 2003, resulting from substantial growth in contributions to other regular resources (non-emergency) from both governmental and private-sector sources. The increase in those contributions was partly offset by a $72 million reduction in government contributions to other resources (emergency). Total 2004 contributions were 17 per cent higher than forecast in the financial plan. UNICEF derived its income primarily from Governments, which contributed $1,339 million (68 per cent), and from private-sector or intergovernmental sources, which provided $578 million (29 per cent). The balance of $61 million (3 per cent) came from other sources.

During its September session, the Executive Board considered UNICEF's financial report and statements for the biennium ended 31 December 2003 [E/ICEF/2004/AB/L.6]. However, it deferred action until its first regular (2005) session in order to consider the discussion of the document by the General Assembly's Fifth (Administrative and Budgetary) Committee.

Budget appropriations

In June [dec. 2004/6], the Executive Board approved recommendations for the aggregate indicative budgets for 23 country programmes, amounting to the following totals for regular and other resources, respectively, by region: Africa, $63,663,000 and $151,450,000; the Americas and the Caribbean, $5,900,000 and $18,800,000; Asia, $13,070,000 and $33,500,000; Central and Eastern Europe, The Commonwealth of Independent States (CIS) and the Baltic States, $51,230,000 and $114,460,000; and the Middle East and North Africa, $11,752,000 and $202,200,000. It further approved a $140,000,000 increase in the other resources ceiling for the 2004 Iraq country programme.

On 15 September [dec. 2004/10], the Board approved a recommendation for the aggregate indicative budget for Guatemala's 2005-2008 country programme in the amount of $3,648,000 in regular resources and $18,478,000 in other resources. On the same date [dec. 2004/11], it approved allocations of additional regular resources for a number of countries, amounting to the following totals by region: Central and Eastern Europe, The Commonwealth of Independent States (CIS) and Baltic States, $38,234; East Asia and the Pacific, $116,000; and Eastern and Southern Africa, $531,000. The Board also confirmed [dec. 2004/12] a recommendation to increase other resources ceilings for approved country programmes to the following levels: Dominican Republic, $13,400; Cambodia, $64,000; Sri Lanka, $20,000; and Malawi, $52,120.

Budget approval process

In response to a 2003 Executive Board decision [YUN 2003, p. 1211], the Executive Director submitted a March report [E/ICEF/2004/AB/L.2] on the timing of the approval of the UNICEF biennial support budget. The report cited factors affecting the timing of the presentation of the biennial support budget, including those relating to the submission of draft country documents to the Executive Board prior to the commencement of a new programme cycle and the approval of future biennial support budgets before the end of the preceding biennium. The Executive Director recommended that the biennial support budget be reviewed at the Board's first regular (January) session of the first year of the biennium, and that during its second regular (September) session preceding the new biennium, the Board approve an advance allocation for spending for the month of January.

ACABQ action. In May [E/ICEF/2004/AB/L.3], the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions (ACABQ) considered the Executive Director's report on the timing of the approval of the budget (above) and expressed its view that the review of the support budget should start before the beginning of UNICEF's financial period. It noted that the time line schedule annexed to the report for the integrated programme and budget planning and approval process had built-in flexibility for timing adjustments for some of the steps. If needed, the Committee would review the UNICEF budget in September rather than October of the year before the beginning of the biennium, and the informal briefing with Board members on budget proposals could be conducted in November, prior to the December Executive Board meeting.

On 10 June [dec. 2004/7], the Board decided that the biennial support budget for 2006-2007 would be reviewed at its first regular (January) session in 2006, and that at its second regular (September) session in 2005, an advance allocation would be approved for spending for January 2006, based on expenditures for January 2005.

Audits

In a June report [E/ICEF/2004/AB/L.7] to the UN Board of Auditors, UNICEF described measures taken or planned in response to the recommendations of the Board of Auditors on UNICEF accounts for the 2001-2002 biennium. The report focused on those recommendations that were either not implemented or only partially implemented at the time of the Board's previous report [YUN 2003, p. 1212].

OIA report. In a July report [E/ICEF/2004/AB/L.8] on internal audit activities in 2003, the seventh annual report of the secretariat, the Office of Internal Audit (OIA) indicated that it had completed 33 audits in 2003, including two audits of regional offices and one global summary report. Overall, UNICEF controls in country offices were generally satisfactory, although there was room for improving management of some aspects of finance and accounts and supply assistance, which were weak in almost half of all country offices audited. In 2003, UNICEF had strengthened its guidance to country offices to address common weaknesses in programme and operations management. However, scope remained for improving the programme and operations support provided by regional offices, as well as the regional and global monitoring of country office practices in areas of common weakness. The Executive Board took note of the report in September.

Recovery policy

In September, the Executive Board considered a July update [E/ICEF/2004/AB/L.5] on the UNICEF recovery policy for support costs for programmes funded from other resources, which was approved in 2003 [YUN 2003, p. 1212] as an interim measure. The report provided status updates on harmonization discussions among UN organizations and on UNICEF recovery policy, as well as information on thematic contributions and recovery rates.

Highlights of the report included the positive trend towards the goal of eliminating the subsidy of other resources from regular resources and increasing funding for regular resources programmes, as well as the positive response to the 4 per cent recovery rate reduction offered to donors making thematic contributions to reflect the lowered transaction costs attributable to the flexibility of strategic earmarking and donors' acceptance of consolidated reporting. The report indicated that as of mid-June, $34.8 million had been received in thematic contributions—surpassing the total amount of $26 million received in 2003—and during the previous 12 months, thematic funding had grown to $64.4 million.

In 2003, the Executive Board had established a 12 per cent recovery rate for non-thematic contributions and additional reductions of 1 per cent for 90 per cent upfront payment; 1 per cent for contributions over $500,000; 2 per cent for contributions over $2 million; 3 per cent for contributions over $10 million; and, as a transitional arrangement for 2004, a 4 per cent reduction for contributions over $40 million. The Executive Director recommended that the 4 per cent reduction for contributions over $40 million be continued beyond 2004 so that a comprehensive proposal could be prepared for the Board's review in 2005, taking into account the results of the harmonization discussions and UNICEF's experience in implementing the Board's 2003 decision on recovery policy.

On 16 September [dec. 2004/15], the Executive Board noted the positive trend in recovering indirect costs attributed to the management of other resources contributions, expressed appreciation for the progress made with other UN organizations to harmonize the recovery methodology and encouraged UNICEF to continue active involvement in the working group of the High-Level Committee on Management on cost recovery. It also decided that the 4 per cent reduction in the recovery rate for contributions over $40 million would be maintained after 2004.

Resource mobilization and allocation

UNICEF continued to collaborate with Governments to mobilize regular and other resources. At the annual January pledging event, 55 countries pledged a total of $257.3 million and by year's end, 93 countries (35 high-income, 41 middle-income and 17 low-income countries) had contributed to regular resources. Some 18 Governments increased their contributions to regular resources in local currency and 14 Governments increased their amounts by 7 per cent or more. The United States remained the largest donor to regular resources with a contribution of $119.3 million, followed by Norway ($48.3 million), Sweden ($45.1 million), the Netherlands ($35.2 million), the United Kingdom ($34.5 million), Denmark ($29.7 million), Japan ($23.4 million), Finland ($16 million), Switzerland ($14.4 million) and Italy ($13.5 million).

Thematic funding for medium-term strategic plan (MTSP) priorities, particularly for girls' education and humanitarian response, increased rapidly in 2004. Some $157.7 million was mobilized, up from $29 million in 2003. Seven donor Governments and 34 national committees contributed $107 million and $47 million respectively, with Norway ($57 million) and Sweden ($44 million) providing the bulk of thematic contributions. Some 41 per cent of donors gave at the global level, 12 per cent at the regional level and 47 per cent at the country level. Those funds enabled UNICEF to programme more responsively, based on country and global priorities, without having to negotiate project agreements and conditions on individual contributions. A total of 23 Governments contributed other resources for emergencies, compared to 32 in the previous year, with the United Kingdom, Canada and the Netherlands as the top three donors. Funding of the UNICEF component of the 2004 consolidated appeals reached 63 per cent of the target, recovering to the level of 2002, but 11 out of 23 consolidated appeals were funded below 50 per cent of their targets, indicating that a number of emergency situations continued to receive inadequate attention.

Executive Director report. In response to a 2003 Executive Board request [YUN 2003, p. 1212], the Executive Director submitted a July report [E/ICEF/2004/16] on an analysis of the use of regular and other resources by country and by aggregate for each priority area of the UNICEF MTSP during 2002 and 2003. That included an analysis of the patterns of country programme allocations and expenditures in relation to the target allocation of 60 per cent of all regular resources to the least developed countries (LDCs) by 2005. Fifty-seven per cent of such resources were allocated to LDCs in 2004, and the target of 60 per cent was expected to be reached in 2005. The goal of allocating 50 per cent of regular resources to sub-Saharan Africa by 2005, was met in 2003; that allocation reached 51 per cent in 2004; and was projected to reach 52 per cent in 2005. The report also indicated that the increase in the amount of programme expenditures in 2003 as compared to 2002, in four out of the five priority areas, was due to a roll-over of unspent resources in country programmes and substantial increases in contributions. It concluded that the current systems for the allocation and expenditure of regular and other resources were consistent with the approved directives of the Executive Board. Stagnation in regular resources income, however, compromised the ability of UNICEF to be more responsive and effective in implementing Board directives. The allocation of other resources was uneven among country programmes, with some consistently and seriously underfunded, but the report indicated that those gaps between approved planning levels and allocations were beyond the control of UNICEF. The Executive Board took note of the report at its second regular session in September.

Private Sector Division

Net income from UNICEF Private Sector Division (PSD) activities for the year ended 31 December 2004 totalled $291.1 million for regular resources, which was $1.7 million (0.6 per cent) higher than the $289.4 million achieved in 2003 [E/ICEF/2005/AB/L.5]. That amount included $55.9 million from UNICEF cards and gift sales, $250.7 million from private sector fund-raising activities, a negative exchange rate adjustment of $1.3 million, and investment fund expenditures of $14.2 million. In addition, $218.8 million ($172.2 million in 2003) was raised from private sector fund-raising activities that were earmarked for other resources. The net consolidated income, including both regular and other resources, amounted to $509.9 million, an increase of $48.3 million compared to the 2003 net consolidated income of $461.6 million.

On 21 January [dec. 2004/2], the Executive Board approved budgeted expenditures of $89 million for the PSD work plan for 2004 [E/ICEF/2004/AB/L.1] and authorized the Executive Director to redeploy resources between various budget lines up to a maximum of 10 per cent of the amounts approved, and to spend, when necessary, an additional amount between Executive Board sessions up to the amount resulting from currency fluctuations, to implement the 2004 approved work plan. The Board renewed investment funds with $16.4 million established for 2004; authorized the Executive Director to incur expenditures in 2004 relating to the cost of goods delivered (production/purchase of raw materials, cards and other products) for 2005, up to $31 million; and approved the PSD medium-term plan for 2005-2008.

In September, the Board took note of the PSD financial report and statements for the year ended 31 December 2003 [E/ICEF/2004/AB/L.9].

Joint programming

In response to a 2003 Executive Board request [YUN 2003, p. 1213], the Executive Director submitted a March report [E/ICEF/2004/10] on the assessment of UNICEF experience in joint programming and other innovative and collaborative approaches to improve programming effectiveness and reduce transaction costs for programme countries. The report discussed the rights-based approach to programming and goals for children, including advocacy and planning; support for programme implementation and management; and joint programme monitoring and evaluation. It also presented the experiences of the five pilot countries whose new programme cycles began in 2004—Benin, Ecuador, Kenya, Niger and Pakistan—and were the first to use some of the harmonized country programme tools, including the revised CCA/UNDAF guidelines.

On 11 June, the Executive Board [dec. 2004/8] took note of the report and deferred consideration of a decision on joint programming to 2005.

JIU report

In January, the Executive Board considered a secretariat note [E/ICEF/2004/5] on the activities of the Joint Inspection Unit (JIU) of specific relevance to UNICEF. The document provided information on reports prepared during 2002, action taken by UNICEF, and the views of the UNICEF Executive Director on the issues raised by the JIU inspectors. At its January session, the Board took note of the report.

Human resources

In September, the Executive Board took note of a July update on developments in human resources [E/ICEF/2004/17], which provided information on UNICEF staff composition and structure, and summarized human resources in the context of inter-agency collaboration and UN reform. The report also covered strategic initiatives aimed at ensuring adequate human resources capacity to achieve MTSP and MDG targets, such as the Brasilia resources change plan and the introduction of a new human resources management system.

As of May, UNICEF staff totalled 8,311 personnel. While the distribution of staff reflected the field-based nature of the organization and indicated that significant progress had been made in achieving gender diversity, challenges remained in achieving the same at senior managerial levels, and in achieving greater staff representation from programme countries. A projection of retirements within the next five years (2004-2008) highlighted the need to find timely replacements for retiring staff to ensure continuity in management and programme implementation. The report called for better change management, including improved accountability at all levels in overseeing the process.

Youth

Implementation of the World Programme of Action for Youth

In 2004, UN policies and programmes on youth continued to focus on efforts to implement the 1995 World Programme of Action for Youth to the Year 2000 and Beyond, adopted by the General Assembly in resolution 50/81 [YUN 1995, p. 121]. The Programme of Action addressed problems faced by youth worldwide and identified ways to enhance youth participation in national and international policy- and decision-making.

The United Nations Programme on Youth, in partnership with interregional advisers of the Department of Economic and Social Affairs (DESA), organized several workshops to deepen understanding of youth issues and mobilize local, national and regional action, including the "Youth and Employment in Post-Conflict Situations in the Arab Region" workshop (Beirut, Lebanon, 28-30 January), where youth from Algeria, Egypt, Jordan, Lebanon and Syria assessed policies and programmes for youth employment focusing on employability, equal opportunity, entrepreneurship and job creation; the "Global Media-Driven Youth Culture" workshop (New York, 28-29 April), which explored the impact of a powerful global media culture on young people and how it had affected their socialization and values; the "Strategies for Creating Urban Youth Employment in Africa" workshop (Nairobi, Kenya, 21-25 June), which brought together experts in youth employment from various regions of the world, as well as young people from African countries, who addressed the challenges of urban youth employment; and the "Youth in Poverty in Southeast Asia" workshop (Yogyakarta, Indonesia, 2-4 August), which focused on developing policies and programmes for poor youth in the region.

The Policy Workshop on HIV/AIDS and Family Well-being (Windhoek, Namibia, 28-30 January) brought together representatives of Governments, NGOs, and academic experts and practitioners from southern African countries to discuss the impact of HIV/AIDS on families in the region, to consider how families and communities were coping with the disease, and contribute to the development of strategic policy to help Governments strengthen the capacity of families and family networks to cope.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 20 December [meeting 74], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Third (Social, Humanitarian and Cultural) Committee [A/59/492], adopted resolution 59/148 without vote [agenda item 94 (a)].

Policies and programmes involving youth: tenth anniversary of the World Programme of Action for Youth to the Year 2000 and Beyond

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 50/81 of 14 December 1995, by which it adopted the World Programme of Action for Youth to the Year 2000 and Beyond, annexed thereto,

Recalling also its resolution 58/133 of 22 December 2003, in which it, inter alia, recommended devoting two plenary meetings at its sixtieth session, in 2005, to review the situation of youth and achievements attained in the implementation of the World Programme of Action ten years after its adoption,

Recognizing the importance of the full and effective participation of young people and youth organizations at the local, national, regional and international levels in promoting and implementing the World Programme of Action and in evaluating the progress achieved and the obstacles encountered in its implementation,

1. Decides to convene, at its sixtieth session, two plenary meetings of the General Assembly devoted to the evaluation of the progress made in the implementation of the World Programme of Action for Youth to the Year 2000 and Beyond, to be held during the general debate of the Third Committee under the agenda item entitled "Social development, including questions relating to the world social situation and to youth, ageing, disabled persons and the family";

2. Decides also to hold, prior to the plenary meetings, an informal, interactive round-table discussion on the theme "Young people: making commitments matter", which will be open to the participation of Member States, observers, organizations of the United Nations system and non-governmental youth organizations;

3. Decides further that one youth representative from a Member State shall orally present a summary of the informal round-table discussion to the General Assembly at the beginning of the plenary meeting;

4. Urges Member States to consider being represented by youth representatives to address the plenary on this occasion, as well as in the above-mentioned informal round-table discussion, bearing in mind the principle of gender balance;

5. Decides to facilitate access to United Nations Headquarters by the non-governmental organizations that were accredited to the World Conference of Ministers Responsible for Youth in 1998 and interested non-governmental organizations that are neither in consultative status with the Economic and Social Council nor were accredited to the World Conference to participate in the informal round-table discussions and side events to be held during the tenth anniversary of the World Programme of Action;

6. Urges, in recognition of the importance of ensuring the equitable geographical participation of non-governmental youth organizations in the tenth anniversary of the World Programme of Action, relevant United Nations entities to assist non-governmental organizations that do not have the resources, in particular non-governmental organizations from developing countries, including the least developed countries and countries with economies in transition, to participate in the tenth anniversary;

7. Requests the Secretary-General to disseminate widely to the community of non-governmental youth organizations all available information on the events associated with the tenth anniversary of the World Programme of Action;

8. Decides that the arrangements outlined in paragraph 5 above shall in no way create a precedent for other similar events;

9. Notes with appreciation the ongoing efforts of the United Nations system to solicit input from youth organizations and young people into the current review of the World Programme of Action, as requested by the General Assembly in paragraph 14 of its resolution 58/133, and invites the Secretary-General to provide an overview of the input gathered from youth organizations as a supplement to his report to the Assembly at its sixtieth session.

Youth employment

DESA and the World Bank hosted the third meeting of the High-level Panel of the Youth Employment Network (YEN) (Washington, D.C., 27-28 September). Participants sought to catalyse the development and financing of national action plans (NAPs) on youth employment and to mobilize Governments in the lead countries to prepare NAPs in time for the five-year review of the MDGs in 2005. During the meeting, YEN launched the "Youth Consultative Group", comprising representatives of international and regional youth organizations, who worked to represent the concerns of young people on the function, direction and priorities of the Network. Other issues discussed by the meeting included the development of a joint ILO-World Bank support programme within the framework of the Network; a letter from the High-level Panel to the Secretary-General requesting a meeting to discuss how youth employment could be strengthened in the five-year review of MDGs; and the Panellists' call on the Network's Core Partners to highlight the importance of youth employment in global development strategies based on the MDGs, including poverty reduction.

Ageing persons

Follow-up to the Second World Assembly on Ageing (2002)

Note by Secretariat. The Commission for Social Development, at its forty-second session (New York, 21 February 2003 and 4-13 and 20 February 2004) [E/2004/26] (see p. 1092), considered a Secretariat note [E/CN.5/2004/6] on modalities for the review and appraisal of the Madrid International Plan of Action on Ageing [YUN 2002, p. 1194], adopted by the Second World Assembly on Ageing in 2002 [ibid., p. 1193]. The Economic and Social Council, in resolution 2003/14 [YUN 2003, p. 1219] had invited Governments, the UN system and civil society to participate in a "bottom-up" approach to the review and appraisal of the Plan of Action through the sharing of ideas, data collection and best practices, which sought to link local and national activities to UN regional inter-governmental bodies and global processes of review and appraisal. The note reviewed recent progress in defining those modalities and proposed, for the Commission's consideration, an approach for the review and appraisal at national, regional and international levels.

The note recommended that the monitoring process include a feedback mechanism so that policy could be adjusted as necessary and that an advocacy campaign lead to the assessment of local needs, the setting of targets and the formulation of appropriate programmes of action. In conclusion, the Secretariat proposed that the Commission request Governments to: include ageing-specific policies and ageing-mainstreaming efforts in their national review and appraisal exercise; identify a lead agency to coordinate the national mainstreaming process; establish a national coordinating body to facilitate implementation of the Madrid Plan of Action, including its review and appraisal; and adopt the bottom-up approach to review and appraisal, with focus on the key elements of awareness-raising, assessing needs and setting targets, gathering information, distilling local findings into policy-relevant formats, and adjusting policies and programmes. The Commission was urged to request UN regional commissions to facilitate the review and appraisal by: promoting networking and the sharing of information; assisting Governments in the gathering, distillation and analysis of information; and developing a regional analysis and defining priorities for future policies.

The Secretariat also recommended that the Commission hold a series of informal discussions and consultations, such as round tables, symposiums and workshops, bringing together all major stakeholders. The outcome of the Commission's review and appraisal would be the identification of achievements and obstacles and the establishment of priorities for future international cooperation in implementing the Madrid Plan. It proposed that the Commission undertake its review and appraisal every five years and that it select a specific theme emanating from the Madrid Plan for each review cycle. That theme would then be adopted by Governments and regional commissions in initiating the bottom-up participatory process.

Commission action. In a February resolution [E/2004/26 (res. 42/1)] on modalities for the review and appraisal of the Madrid International Plan of Action on Ageing, the Commission, taking note of the Secretariat's note (see p. 1191), called on all actors to participate in implementing the Madrid Plan; decided to review and appraise it every five years; and requested the Secretary-General, through DESA, to facilitate and promote the Plan, including by proposing guidelines for policy development and implementation, advocating means to mainstream ageing issues into development agendas, engaging in dialogue with civil society and the private sector and promoting information exchange. The Secretary-General was also requested to propose guidelines for the review and appraisal process, taking into account the views of Member States, civil society and the private sector, and to report on the Plan's implementation to the Commission in 2005. Regional commissions were requested to promote and facilitate the implementation, review and appraisal of the Plan at the regional level by assisting national institutions, and UN bodies were requested to support national review and appraisal efforts by providing technical assistance, including for developing modalities for disaggregating statistics by age and sex.

Report of Secretary-General. In response to General Assembly resolution 58/134 [YUN 2003, p. 1220], the Secretary-General submitted a July report [A/59/164] on follow-up to the Second World Assembly on Ageing (2002), which summarized efforts and activities of the Secretariat and the funds, programmes and specialized agencies of the UN system, as well as major international NGOs, to implement the Madrid Plan of Action. Based on input from 14 UN-system focal points on ageing and NGOs, the report highlighted progress made and obstacles encountered in implementing the Plan of Action's road map [YUN 2003, p. 1219] and provided recommendations for consideration by the General Assembly.

The report noted that the Commission on Social Development (see p. 1191) had encouraged Member States to devise ageing-specific policies and ageing-mainstreaming efforts for review and appraisal of the Plan of Action. The Committee on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women (CEDAW) (see p. 1169), which had consistently paid attention to the situation of older women, expressed concern over inadequate pension schemes, health, education and employment opportunities for women, particularly in rural areas, as well as the lack of statistics on older women in some countries. The Commission on the Status of Women (see p. 1167) urged Governments to train and educate men to participate fully in the care and support of others, including older persons, persons with disabilities and sick persons, in particular children and other dependants.

The Secretary-General indicated that capacity-building and mainstreaming ageing into national development agendas were essential to promote and implement the Plan of Action. He suggested that the Assembly encourage Governments to support the trust fund on ageing to enable DESA to expand assistance to countries, and recommended that ongoing efforts to achieve the MDGs include the plight of older persons; ensure the integration of ageing issues into policies and programmes; and provide opportunities for older persons to participate in decision-making and other activities.

Noting that the Economic Commission for Europe, the Economic Commission for Latin America and the Caribbean and the Economic and Social Commission for Asia and the Pacific had formed regional strategies to implement the Plan of Action, the report suggested that the Assembly encourage other regional commissions to do the same. Further, it recommended that the Assembly invite Governments, intergovernmental organizations and NGOs to support comprehensive, diversified and specialized research on ageing, particularly in developing countries, which should include international research with a view to promoting international research coordination, exchange knowledge and support policy responses to ageing.

The report concluded that although some progress had been achieved since 2002, notably on linking ageing and development within the programmes of the organizations and bodies of the UN system, much remained to be done, particularly to implement the development perspective of ageing policy at the national level. Other challenges that impeded progress in activities dedicated to ageing issues included limited UN human and financial resources and the perception in development policy discussions that older persons were among the most marginalized groups because they were vulnerable, dependent on resources, unproductive, and that they would continue to be cared for by their families. The lack of reliable age- and sex-aggregated data in most developing countries for determining poverty rates and whether older persons should be included in poverty reduction strategies contributed to the perception, as did inadequate data on their health-care needs, social integration, employment and roles as both providers and recipients of family and community support.

The report recommended that the Assembly invite the functional commissions of the Economic and Social Council to integrate population and individual ageing issues into their work programmes in order to implement the Plan of Action, and to reiterate its call for full-time, adequately funded focal points on ageing within the UN system.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 20 December [meeting 74], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Third Committee [A/59/493], adopted resolution 59/150 without vote [agenda item 95].

Follow-up to the Second World Assembly on Ageing

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 57/167 of 18 December 2002, in which it endorsed the Political Declaration and the Madrid International Plan of Action on Ageing, 2002, as well as its resolution 58/134 of 22 December 2003, in which it took note, inter alia, of the road map for the implementation of the Madrid Plan of Action,

Recalling also Economic and Social Council resolution 2003/14 of 21 July 2003, in which the Council invited Governments, the United Nations system and civil society to participate in a “bottom-up” approach to the review and appraisal of the Madrid Plan of Action,

Recalling further Commission for Social Development resolution 42/1 of 13 February 2004, entitled “Modalities for the review and appraisal of the Madrid International Plan of Action on Ageing, 2002”, in which the Commission decided to undertake a review and appraisal of the Madrid Plan of Action every five years, with each review and appraisal cycle to focus on one of the priority directions of the Madrid Plan of Action,

1. Recommends that ongoing efforts to achieve the internationally agreed development goals, including those contained in the United Nations Millennium Declaration, take into account the situation of older persons;

2. Calls upon Governments and the agencies and organizations of the United Nations system, within their mandates, and encourages the non-governmental community, to ensure that the challenges of population ageing and the concerns of older persons are adequately incorporated into their programmes and projects;

3. Invites Member States and the organizations and bodies of the United Nations system to take into account the needs and concerns of older persons in decision-making at all levels;

4. Stresses the need for additional capacity-building at the national level in order to promote and facilitate the implementation of the Madrid International Plan of Action on Ageing, 2002, and in this connection, encourages Governments to support the United Nations Trust Fund for Ageing to enable the Department of Economic and Social Affairs of the Secretariat to provide expanded assistance to countries, upon their request;

5. Invites Governments, intergovernmental organizations and non-governmental organizations to encourage and support comprehensive, diversified and specialized research on ageing in all countries;

6. Invites the functional commissions of the Economic and Social Council to integrate the issues of population and individual ageing into their work in order to promote the implementation of the Madrid Plan of Action;

7. Recommends that the Commission on the Status of Women continue to consider the situation of older women, in particular those who are most vulnerable, including those living in rural areas;

8. Encourages those regional commissions that have not yet done so to elaborate a regional strategy for the implementation of the Madrid Plan of Action;

9. Takes note of Commission for Social Development resolution 42/1, and in this context requests the Secretary-General to present his proposals for conducting the review and appraisal exercise at the regional and global levels to the Commission at its forty-fourth session;

10. Requests the organizations and bodies of the United Nations system to continue to strengthen the capacity of the focal points on ageing and to provide them with adequate resources for the further implementation of the Madrid Plan of Action, in particular through appropriate mainstreaming action;

11. Stresses the importance of the collection of data and population statistics disaggregated by age and sex on all aspects of policy formulation by all countries, and encourages the relevant entities of the United Nations system to support national efforts in capacity-building, especially those of developing countries and countries with economies in transition, takes note in this context of the establishment by the United Nations of an Internet-accessible database on ageing, and invites States to submit, whenever possible, information for inclusion in the database;

12. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General, and requests that it be forwarded to the Commission for Social Development at its forty-third session in order to assist the Commission in its deliberations;

13. Requests the Secretary-General to report to the General Assembly at its sixtieth session on the implementation of the present resolution.

Chapter XII

Refugees and displaced persons

In 2004, the total number of persons of concern to the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees (UNHCR) increased by some 13 per cent to 19.2 million, from 17 million in 2003. An estimated 1.5 million refugees returned to their places of origin during the year, while hundreds of thousands of others were driven out by conflicts and related instability in various parts of the world. UNHCR made progress in seeking durable solutions for those affected, but its efforts were undermined in some areas by such obstacles and challenges as new refugee outflows, attacks on humanitarian personnel, measures that eroded the international protection regime, the increasing volume and complexity of migratory flows and difficulties in sustaining voluntary repatriation.

During the year, repatriation was one of the key areas of UNHCR focus. Through its efforts, momentum in the repatriation of Afghan refugees was maintained, with some 1 million returning home—the highest number of returns during the year—despite persisting instability in parts of the country. Similar repatriation operations resulted in thousands returning to their places of origin in Angola, Bosnia and Herzegovina, Burundi, the Democratic Republic of the Congo (DRC), Iraq, Liberia, Rwanda, Sierra Leone, Somalia and Sri Lanka. The Office helped to resettle approximately 30,000, as compared to 26,000 in 2003, and worked to reduce statelessness and protect stateless persons, estimated at over 1 million worldwide. However, despite UNHCR's concerted efforts, millions of others—some two thirds of the global refugee population—remained out of reach of durable solutions and continued to suffer in protracted refugee situations, most notably Myanmar refugees in Bangladesh, Bhutanese nationals in Nepal and Saharawi refugees in Algeria. An estimated 2 million internally displaced persons (IDPs) in Colombia and hundreds of thousands of other IDPs and refugees were awaiting solutions in Africa, Asia, Europe and the Middle East. In many cases, already complex situations were exacerbated by fresh refugee outflows that sometimes created large-scale emergencies, as in the Darfur region of the Sudan; in the DRC, where 20,000 persons fled the outbreak of fighting in the town of Bukavu; and in Somalia, where tension caused 19,000 persons to flee their homes. Other outflows included nationals of Côte d'Ivoire, Iraq and Yemen.

In continuing efforts to implement the "Convention Plus" initiative launched in 2003 to help strengthen the commitment of States and other partners to resolving refugee situations through multilateral action plans, UNHCR established in June a Framework of Understandings on the strategic use of resettlement and developed a methodology for assessing gaps in protection capacity. In October, the Joint Inspection Unit (JIU), following its review of UNHCR's management and administration, recommended measures for their improvement, including streamlining and rationalizing its organizational structure. In December, the General Assembly encouraged UNHCR to continue to improve its management systems. To enhance protection and durable solutions to refugee problems, UNHCR proposed the establishment of a post of Assistant High Commissioner (Protection) to oversee protection and the related advocacy role of the Office. As part of its ongoing headquarters review process, UNHCR re-examined its security procedures and made recommendations for improvement, which complemented the UN-wide changes in security management practices.

Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees

Programme policy

Executive Committee action. At its fifty-fifth session (Geneva, 4-8 October) [A/59/12/Add.1], the Executive Committee of the UNHCR Programme, in a conclusion on international protection, emphasized the continuing importance of the Agenda for Protection [YUN 2002, p. 1205], the multi-year programme of action for improving the protection of refugees and asylum-seekers. It acknowledged the increasing complexities of the international protection environment and the many challenges facing States and UNHCR in ensuring and providing protection for refugees and other persons of concern. The Committee expressed concern at the persecution, violence and human rights violations perpetuating the displacement of populations within and beyond national borders and increasing the challenges to durable solutions. It called on States to address those challenges, and on UNHCR to strengthen its protection presence in the field. The Committee also adopted conclusions on international co-operation and burden- and responsibility-sharing in mass influx situations and on legal safety issues in the context of the voluntary repatriation of refugees. Decisions were adopted on administrative, programme and financial, and institutional matters.

In his opening statement to the Committee, the High Commissioner drew attention to the crisis in the Sudan, particularly in the Darfur region, and to the challenges facing UNHCR in its response, as part of the wider UN effort. To oversee that response, a Director of Operations for the Sudan situation was appointed. Elsewhere in Africa, the number of repatriation programmes reached record levels. UNHCR continued to assist Burundian refugees, who were returning home at the rate of some 10,000 monthly, as well as hundreds of thousands of displaced persons to return to Angola, Eritrea, Liberia and Sierra Leone. It also helped some 14,000 refugees to return to Iraq from neighbouring countries, and about 775,000 to Afghanistan, despite the deteriorating security situation there, bringing the total repatriated since 2002 to over 3.5 million. In Western Sahara, UNHCR's oldest caseload, the year witnessed a breakthrough with the first exchange of visits between family members separated for decades by the conflict there. Unfortunately, no such progress was made in the Middle East, where UNHCR continued to address the potential for population displacement. In Europe, the number of displaced persons and refugees returning home to Bosnia and Herzegovina reached 1 million. UNHCR increased its field presence in the Russian Federation and the Commonwealth of Independent States (CIS), thus enabling it to find solutions to a range of problems and to make significant progress in capacity-building in the asylum field. However, in the North Caucasus, which continued to be plagued by insecurity and conflict, UNHCR was committed to working with the Russian Federation in responding to displacements from Chechnya. In Asia, while developments in Myanmar provided a rationale for planning the eventual return of 120,000 refugees from Thailand, less encouraging was the situation of Bhutanese people in camps in Nepal. Other situations of displacement requiring attention included those in Sri Lanka, the plight of North Korean asylum-seekers in China, and protection and resettlement issues in Latin America, which was commemorating the twentieth anniversary of the 1984 Cartagena Declaration—a regional initiative for refugee welfare.

One of UNHCR's global operational challenges was translating its priority commitments on refugee women into action in all its operations, especially their participation in food distribution. It reviewed its security procedures and made recommendations complementing anticipated UN system-wide changes, as part of the overall review of the Organization's global security management practices. Other notable operational developments during the year included proposals by the Joint Inspection Unit (JIU) relating to UNHCR's organizational structure, budget planning, and the work of its Inspector-General, (see p. 1199), and the High Commissioner's proposal for the establishment of a new position of Assistant High Commissioner for Protection (see p. 1200). UNHCR also made efforts to improve the use of partnerships, including with UN bodies and non-governmental organizations (NGOs). The High Commissioner reported that, for the first time in recent memory, UNCHR did not face a funding crisis, owing to increased donor support and better financial management.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 20 December [meeting 74], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Third (Social, Humanitarian and Cultural) Committee [A/59/498], adopted resolution 59/170 without vote [agenda item 100].

Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees

The General Assembly,

Having considered the report of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees on the activities of his Office and the report of the Executive Committee of the Programme of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees on the work of its fifty-fifth session and the conclusions and decisions contained therein,

Recalling its previous annual resolutions on the work of the Office of the High Commissioner since its establishment by the General Assembly,

Recalling also its resolution 58/153 of 22 December 2003 on implementing actions proposed by the High Commissioner to strengthen the capacity of his Office to carry out its mandate,

Expressing its appreciation for the leadership shown by the High Commissioner, commending the staff and implementing partners of the Office of the High Commissioner for the competent, courageous and dedicated manner in which they discharge their responsibilities, and underscoring its strong condemnation of all forms of violence to which humanitarian personnel and United Nations and associated personnel are increasingly exposed,

1. Endorses the report of the Executive Committee of the Programme of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees on the work of its fifty-fifth session;

2. Welcomes the important work undertaken by the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees and the Executive Committee in the course of the year, and notes in this context the adoption of the general conclusion on international protection, the conclusion on international cooperation and burden- and responsibility-sharing in mass influx situations and the conclusion on legal safety issues in the context of voluntary repatriation of refugees, which are aimed at strengthening the international protection regime, consistent with the Agenda for Protection, and at assisting Governments in meeting their protection responsibilities in today's changing international environment;

3. Reaffirms the 1951 Convention relating to the Status of Refugees and its 1967 Protocol as the foundation of the international refugee protection regime, and recognizes the importance of their full and effective application by States parties and the values that they embody, notes with satisfaction that one hundred and forty-five States are now parties to one instrument or to both, encourages States not parties to consider acceding to those instruments, underlines in particular the importance of full respect for the principle of non-refoulement, and recognizes that a number of States not parties to the international refugee instruments have shown a generous approach to hosting refugees;

4. Notes that fifty-seven States are now parties to the 1954 Convention relating to the Status of Stateless Persons and that twenty-nine States are parties to the 1961 Convention on the Reduction of Statelessness, and encourages the High Commissioner to continue his activities on behalf of stateless persons;

5. Notes also that 2004 marks the twentieth anniversary of the Cartagena Declaration on Refugees and that States convened in Mexico City in November 2004 to commemorate this anniversary, recalls the contribution to refugee protection which regional approaches can make, and encourages States to strengthen further international protection of refugees in the region, in conjunction with relevant international organizations as well as representatives of civil society;

6. Re-emphasizes that the protection of refugees is primarily the responsibility of States, whose full and effective cooperation, action and political resolve are required to enable the Office of the High Commissioner to fulfil its mandated functions;

7. Urges all States and relevant non-governmental and other organizations, in conjunction with the Office of the High Commissioner and in a spirit of international solidarity and burden- and responsibility-sharing, to cooperate and to mobilize resources with a view to enhancing the capacity of, and reducing the heavy burden borne by, countries that have received large numbers of refugees and asylum-seekers, including by holding international consultations aimed at developing a comprehensive plan of action, as appropriate, to respond to a specific mass influx or protracted refugee situation, and calls upon the Office to continue to play its catalytic role in mobilizing assistance from the international community to address the root causes as well as the economic, environmental and social impact of large-scale refugee populations in developing countries, in particular the least developed countries, and countries with economies in transition;

8. Emphasizes that international protection of refugees is a dynamic and action-oriented function that is at the core of the mandate of the Office of the High Commissioner and that includes, in cooperation with States and other partners, the promotion and facilitation of, inter alia, the admission, reception and treatment of refugees and the ensuring of durable, protection-oriented solutions, bearing in mind the particular needs of vulnerable groups, and notes in this context that the delivery of international protection is a staff-intensive service that requires adequate staff with the appropriate expertise, especially at the field level;

9. Welcomes the progress attained so far in regard to the High Commissioner's Convention Plus initiative, including the development of the Multilateral Framework of Understandings on the strategic use of resettlement, and encourages the High Commissioner and interested States to strengthen the international protection regime through the development of comprehensive approaches to resolving refugee situations, including improving international burden- and responsibility-sharing and realizing durable solutions that give due regard to the importance of both protection and, where possible, refugee self-reliance;

10. Recalls the important role of effective partnerships and coordination in meeting the needs of refugees and other displaced persons and in finding durable solutions to their situations, welcomes the efforts under way, in cooperation with refugee-hosting countries and countries of origin, including their respective local communities, United Nations agencies and other development actors, to promote a framework for durable solutions, particularly in protracted refugee situations, which includes the "4Rs" approach (repatriation, reintegration, rehabilitation and reconstruction) to sustainable return, and encourages States, in cooperation with United Nations agencies and other development actors, to support, inter alia, through the allocation of funds, the development and implementation of the 4Rs and of other programming tools to facilitate the transition from relief to development;

11. Strongly reaffirms the fundamental importance and the purely humanitarian and non-political character of the function of the Office of the High Commissioner of providing international protection to refugees and seeking permanent solutions to refugee problems, and recalls that these solutions include voluntary repatriation and, where appropriate and feasible, local integration and resettlement in a third country, while reaffirming that voluntary repatriation, supported by necessary rehabilitation and development assistance to facilitate sustainable reintegration, remains the preferred solution;

12. Recognizes the desirability of countries of origin, in cooperation with the Office of the High Commissioner, other States and other concerned actors, as necessary and appropriate, addressing, at an early stage, issues of a legal and administrative nature which are likely to hinder voluntary repatriation in safety and dignity, bearing in mind that some legal safety or administrative issues may be addressed only over time and that voluntary repatriation can and does take place without all legal and administrative issues having first been resolved;

13. Emphasizes the obligation of all States to accept the return of their nationals, calls upon States to facilitate the return of their nationals who have been determined not to be in need of international protection, and affirms the need for the return of persons to be undertaken in a safe and humane manner and with full respect for their human rights and dignity, irrespective of the status of the persons concerned;

14. Condemns all acts that pose a threat to the personal security and well-being of refugees and asylum-seekers, such as refoulement, unlawful expulsion and physical attacks, deplores, in particular, the armed attacks that took place in the Gatumba transit centre in Burundi in August 2004, calls upon all States of refuge, in cooperation with international organizations, where appropriate, to take all necessary measures to ensure respect for the principles of refugee protection, including the humane treatment of asylum-seekers, notes with interest that the High Commissioner has continued to take steps to encourage the development of measures to better ensure the civilian and humanitarian character of asylum, and encourages the High Commissioner to continue those efforts in consultation with States and other relevant actors;

15. Encourages the Office of the High Commissioner to continue to improve its management systems and to ensure effective and transparent use of its resources, recognizes that adequate and timely resources are essential for the Office to continue to fulfil the mandate conferred upon it through its statute and by subsequent General Assembly resolutions on refugees and other persons of concern, recalls its resolutions 58/153 and 58/270 of 23 December 2003 concerning the implementation of paragraph 20 of the statute of the Office, and urges Governments and other donors to respond promptly to the annual and supplementary appeals issued by the Office for requirements under its programmes;

16. Requests the High Commissioner to report on his activities to the General Assembly at its sixtieth session.

Strengthening UNHCR

Oral report of High Commissioner. In response to General Assembly resolution 58/153 [YUN 2003, p. 1226] on strengthening UNHCR's capacity to carry out its mandate, the UNHCR representative, in an oral report to the Economic and Social Council on 22 July [E/2004/SR.48], said that the Office had worked with the Executive Committee on Humanitarian Affairs (ECHA) and the Inter-Agency Standing Committee (IASC) to strengthen refugee protection through cooperation, particularly by contributing to the work of the IASC Task Force on Protection from Sexual Exploitation and Abuse in Humanitarian Crises and to the inter-agency review of the collaborative approach on internally displaced persons (IDPs). UNHCR developed a Framework for Durable Solutions under the key strategies of repatriation, reintegration, rehabilitation and reconstruction (the "4Rs"); development through local integration; and development assistance for refugees. Regarding security issues, UNHCR worked with the Office of the United Nations Security Coordinator, IASC and ECHA to develop a clearer vision and strategy for managing increased risks to humanitarian personnel. It also worked with other UN bodies to address refugee welfare, including the Joint United Nations Programme on HIV/AIDS (UNAIDS), the World Food Programme (WFP), the International Labour Organization (ILO), the United Nations Volunteers (UNVs) and the International Organization for Migration (IOM). In April, the High Commissioner and the Under-Secretary-General of the UN Department of Peacekeeping Operations (DPKO) signed a joint letter on enhanced cooperation, particularly regarding security for refugees, IDPs and returnees, among other areas.

Addressing Africa's refugee situation, the High Commissioner highlighted UNHCR's various repatriation operations on the continent, in particular those in Angola, Burundi, Eritrea, Rwanda, Sierra Leone and Somalia; its enhanced resettlement operations; and the development of a methodology for comprehensive plans of action for specific refugee situations. UNHCR recognized that it could not address the challenge of the reintegration of returnees alone, as rapidly evolving situations in Africa called for a strong emergency preparedness and response capacity. It had built innovative partnerships with regional and subregional organizations, with which it was advocating for the recognition of good governance, peace and security, and conflict resolution as preconditions for sustainable development and successful repatriation on the continent. The Office was chairing the sub-cluster on humanitarian response and post-conflict recovery under the New Partnership for Africa's Development (NEPAD) (see p. 920).

By decision 2004/317 of 23 July, the Economic and Social Council took note of the High Commissioner's oral report on coordination aspects of UNHCR's work and on assistance to refugees, returnees and displaced persons in Africa.

Coordination of emergency humanitarian assistance

In 2004 [A/60/12], UNHCR continued to collaborate in the development of more effective UN system inter-agency coordination, particularly within the context of the humanitarian response review commissioned by the UN Emergency Relief Coordinator. The Office remained committed to the collaborative approach to internal displacement, adopting a more active and predictable disposition to address related protection challenges. As part of inter-agency efforts to develop guidelines and training support, UNHCR developed emergency team leadership training and helped to address such aspects as HIV/AIDS field training, an early warning/early action system, and gender-based violence interventions in humanitarian settings. Regarding collaboration on lessons learned, a key function of inter-agency forums, UNHCR participated in reviewing and adjusting the needs-assessment framework into a more analytical tool. The Office commented on a DPKO/Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs (OCHA) study of UN integrated missions, and was promoting and implementing the Secretary-General's bulletin on sexual exploitation and abuse [YUN 2003, p. 1238]. UNHCR and DPKO agreed to enhance cooperation in refugee/returnee security; the rule of law; disarmament, demobilization and reintegration; mine action; and technical cooperation. As part of efforts to develop a more systematic and timely system for reporting on key protection concerns in situations of armed conflict, UNHCR convened an expert meeting (Geneva, 9-11 June) on maintaining the civilian and humanitarian character of asylum, which was part of the process of developing operational guidelines. In related action, UNHCR was preparing operational guidelines on the separation of armed elements from refugee populations.

Bilateral partnerships to assist displaced persons improved in 2004. UNHCR and WFP were developing a joint donor communication strategy to address the challenges of securing acceptable levels of food and water for refugees, and agreed that WFP would participate in all future UNHCR appeals and reports. Cooperation with the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations (FAO) and ILO increased in the area of refugee welfare. Partnerships with NGOs also grew, as those organizations were more actively involved in the assessment, planning, implementation and evaluation phases of UNHCR operations. In 2004, implementation agreements were signed with over 600 of them, and the Office was establishing guidelines to help build their capacity at the national level to respond to protection and assistance needs in field operations.

UNHCR, in a July report [A/AC.96/994] on its evaluation function, stated that interest had grown in inter-agency collaboration in joint evaluation activities, as the UNHCR Evaluation and Policy Analysis Unit (EPAU), together with the WFP evaluation service, began a joint evaluation of five pilot countries in which WFP was responsible for food distribution to refugees. The findings would help determine whether or not to replicate the arrangement globally. EPAU and the Technical Support Section, in coordination with the Inter-Agency Working Group on Reproductive Health Services for Refugees, led an inter-agency global evaluation of reproductive health services for refugees and IDPs, the final report of which was expected in September. EPAU was also cooperating with the European Commission Humanitarian Office (ECHO) in developing an evaluation methodology for ECHO's 2004 evaluation of the effectiveness of its financial support to UNHCR. The findings of its 2002 evaluations, including those on refugee children and women and on community services [YUN 2002, p. 1201], informed changes to UNHCR's operational policies and implementation procedures. The Office intended to ensure that evaluation findings were more widely discussed and that lessons learned were fully absorbed. EPAU was developing an electronic follow-up mechanism for compiling and cataloguing evaluation recommendations, so that their impact could be better measured against policy changes in the respective functional areas.

Evaluation projects undertaken or initiated in 2004 related to the needs of IDPs, real-time evaluations of emergency operations, refugee livelihoods, reintegration, a Canadian Government-sponsored pilot project on Royal Canadian Mounted Police secondment to UNHCR field operations in Guinea, UNHCR's worldwide vehicle fleet, and building capacity through training. Evaluations were conducted on regional resettlement activities in West Africa to ascertain the validity of some of the assumptions underpinning the regional resettlement scheme, and on enhancing UNHCR's capacity to monitor the protection, rights and well-being of refugees, based on a review of the Office's multiple roles in both protection and programme monitoring.

Inspections

In 2004 [A/60/12], standard inspections of UNHCR activities by its Inspector General's Office (IGO) were conducted in Japan, Sierra Leone and Spain, while ad hoc inspections were undertaken in Kazakhstan, Uganda and Uzbekistan. Operational reviews were undertaken in Armenia, Azerbaijan, Georgia, Somalia, Sri Lanka and the Sudan to assess specific operational strategies, focusing on finding solutions to refugee problems and on the effectiveness of UNHCR's partnerships with other organizations. In 2004, IGO received 105 complaints of alleged misconduct. Some one third of them, where the investigation supported a finding of misconduct, were forwarded to the Division of Human Resources Management for disciplinary action. The Investigation Unit produced a number of management implication reports to highlight vulnerabilities in UNHCR operations and to help managers adjust their actions accordingly. In September, UNHCR's Oversight Committee, whose terms of reference were revised and strengthened, was reconstituted as a decision-making body, chaired by the Deputy High Commissioner, with the mandate to decide on and oversee administrative measures to be taken in cases of continuing failure to comply with oversight recommendations. IGO no longer served as the secretariat of the Oversight Committee.

The UN Office of Internal Oversight Services (OIOS) audited UNHCR operations and activities involving expenditure of $362 million, or 34 per cent of UNHCR's total expenditure of $1,063 million in 2004. Those audits covered operations in 26 countries, as well as the payroll, mobility and hardship allowances and the headquarters management systems renewal project. OIOS also reviewed the functions of headquarters desk officers, and of two international NGOs to assess their systems and procedures and to advise on ways of complying with UN auditing requirements.

Enlargement of the Executive Committee

On 21 July, the Economic and Social Council, by decision 2004/238, took note of requests from Romania [E/2004/49] and Ghana [E/2004/76] for admission to membership in the UNHCR Executive Committee and recommended that the General Assembly take a decision at its fifty-ninth (2004) session on the question of enlarging the Committee's membership from 66 to 68 States.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 20 December [meeting 74], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Third Committee [A/59/498], adopted resolution 59/169 without vote [agenda item 100].

Enlargement of the Executive Committee of the Programme of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees

The General Assembly,

Taking note of Economic and Social Council decision 2004/238 of 21 July 2004 concerning the enlargement of the Executive Committee of the Programme of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees,

Taking note also of the requests regarding the enlargement of the Executive Committee contained in the letter dated 23 March 2004 from the Permanent Representative of Romania to the United Nations addressed to the Secretary-General and the letter dated 2 June 2004 from the Permanent Representative of Ghana to the United Nations addressed to the Secretary-General,

1. Decides to increase the number of members of the Executive Committee of the Programme of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees from sixty-six to sixty-eight States;

2. Requests the Economic and Social Council to elect the additional members at its resumed organizational session for 2005.

Financial and administrative questions

UNHCR's initial annual programme budget target for 2004 was set at $923 million by the Executive Committee in 2003 [YUN 2003, p. 1227]. Total income for 2004 amounted to $1,001.2 million, comprising $805.2 million in contributions and miscellaneous income (including currency exchange gains) for the annual programme budget, $10 million for the Junior Professional Officer (JPO) programme, $27.7 million provided by the UN regular budget, and $158.3 million in contributions for the 2004 supplementary programmes. Expenditures totalled $1,062.6 million, of which Africa accounted for some $468.3 million; Central Asia, South-West Asia, North Africa and the Middle East, $192.5 million; Europe, $114.3 million; Asia and the Pacific, $50.8 million; and the Americas, $28.5 million.

In October, the Executive Committee approved the revised 2004 annual programme budget, amounting to $955.8 million, including the UN regular budget contribution of $25.8 million, which, with the provision of $7 million for JPOs and $170.6 million for the supplementary programmes, brought total requirements for 2004 to $1,126 million.

The Committee approved $974.6 million for the 2005 annual programme budget, including an operational reserve of $62.5 million, or 7.5 per cent, of programme activities, and $50 million, continued on a further trial basis to provide appropriation authority for fully funded additional activities. Those provisions, together with $7 million for the JPO programme, brought total requirements in 2005 to $981.6 million. The Committee authorized the High Commissioner, within the total appropriation, to effect adjustments in regional and global programmes and in headquarters budgets, and to create supplementary programmes and issue corresponding special appeals to meet any additional new emergency needs that could not be filled from the operational reserve.

The Committee noted the proposal to create a post of Assistant High Commissioner (Protection) [A/AC.96/992/Add.1], at the Assistant Secretary-General level, for which an amount of $300,000 had been included in the annual programme budget. It stated that no expenditure should be charged against the item until the matter had been discussed by the Standing Committee in 2005 and a decision taken by the Executive Committee. In that regard, the Committee requested UNHCR to provide more detailed terms of reference for the proposed position. It requested UNHCR to commission an independent evaluation of the operational reserve, category II, including a review of the criteria for accepting contributions. The Committee welcomed the High Commissioner's initiative to consolidate UNHCR's information technology functions within the new Division of Information Systems and Technology.

Implementation of article 20 of the UNHCR statute

In response to General Assembly resolution 58/270 [YUN 2003, p. 1399], the Secretary-General, in August [A/59/294], described efforts made over the past two bienniums to progressively implement article 20 of the UNHCR statute, which required that no expenditure other than administrative expenditures relating to the functioning of the Office should be borne by the UN regular budget and that all other expenditures be borne by voluntary contributions. Towards meeting that goal, the Assembly had approved some $2 million in increases to UNHCR's proposed 2002-2003 and 2004-2005 programme budgets to meet management and administrative post and non-post costs, using a ratio of 50.8 per cent. For future bienniums, the Secretary-General proposed increased contributions similar to that applied for the 2002-2003 and 2004-2005 bienniums.

In November [A/C.5/59/SR.26], the ACABQ Chairman, in an oral statement to the Fifth Committee, recommended that the Assembly note the Secretary-General's report, with the understanding that proposals for subsequent increases in UN contributions to UNHCR's management and administrative costs would be submitted for its review in the context of the proposed programme budget for future bienniums.

The Assembly, in Part III of resolution 59/276 of 23 December (see p. 1384), took note of the Secretary-General's report and ACABQ's related comments and recommendations. It requested the Secretary-General to include in the programme budget proposals for progressive increases of contributions from the UN regular budget to UNHCR, with a view to the full implementation of article 20 of the statute of the Office and to report in 2005 on progress made in the context of the 2006-2007 proposed programme budget, while recognizing that the 50.8 percentage referred to in his report did not represent a ceiling. The Assembly called on UNHCR to keep its support costs, including management and administration, under review, with the objective of reducing them as a percentage of total budget expenditure.

The audited financial statements of voluntary funds administered by UNHCR for the year ended 31 December 2003 [A/59/5/Add.5] showed total expenditures of some $957.4 million and total income of $981.2 million, with a reserve balance of $171 million.

The Board of Auditors found that: the unallocated available reserves at the end of 2003 ($78 million) were insufficient to cover the staff termination liabilities of some $290 million; the value of the non-expendable property as at 31 December 2003 remained inaccurate due to errors in data entry and non-recording of assets; the 2003 operational expenditure not unsupported by implementing partners' financial reports totalled $9.6 million as at 15 June 2004, an improvement over previous years; the accounting of unliquidated obligations still suffered from inaccurate disclosure; after spending some $13 million on the decentralization of its Africa Bureau (1999-2001), UNHCR recentralized its structure; UNHCR did not fully monitor the management of its many offices and buildings around the world and had no proactive policy to comply with UN common premises policy; and the Office had not developed a plan against the risk of corruption and fraud. The Board made recommendations for improving financial management and reporting, information technology and programme management, while noting that UNHCR had, in some respects, responded to the recommendations, although some had yet to be implemented.

In an October report [A/59/400], the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions (ACABQ) expressed concern at the level of cash assistance from UNHCR implementing partners not yet justified, and over the extent of continued overstatement of unliquidated obligations. ACABQ was also concerned that UNHCR did not have a clear picture of its numerous buildings worldwide and had no proactive policy to comply with UN instructions on common premises at the country level.

The Executive Committee, in a decision on administrative, financial and programme matters [A/59/12/Add.1], requested that it be informed regularly on measures taken to address the recommendations and observations made by the Board of Auditors and ACABQ.

Management and administrative review

JIU report. On 1 October [A/59/394], the Secretary-General transmitted a report of the Joint Inspection Unit (JIU) on its review of UNHCR's management and administration, as part of the ongoing reform to improve the functioning of the Office. JIU focused on UNHCR's organizational structure; planning, programming, budgeting, monitoring and evaluation activities; information management; human resources management; oversight activities; and field operations, using Tanzania as a case study. It took into consideration, for benchmarking purposes, the management practices of other UN system organizations.

The Inspectors found that UNHCR's management was characterized by multiple managerial policies and guidelines, formulated through various internal committees and boards. Its current organizational structure was fragmented and revealed shortcomings related to functional duplications between departmental units, the placement of some functional units, and non-uniformity in the organizational nomenclature. The structure was also anomalous in terms of the functional hierarchy, with the Deputy High Commissioner responsible for management and administration and the Assistant High Commissioner overseeing programmes and operations, both employed at the Assistant Secretary-General level. The structure suffered from a cumbersome, lengthy and expensive programme and budget process, a multitude of separate information systems with a proliferated information structure, a problematic flow of communication technology information, a failure to fully recognize results-based management in developing the Enterprise Resource Planning System, shortcomings in its internal oversight system, a lack of correlation between refugee caseloads and structural staffing levels of the different field offices, and high vacancy rates at some duty stations classified as family-duty stations.

JIU proposed that the Executive Committee recommend that the General Assembly authorize the creation of a second Deputy High Commissioner post by upgrading the existing Assistant High Commissioner position, resulting in two Deputies—one in charge of programme/operations and the other in charge of administration/management, with the understanding that such a measure would have no financial implications, and that the UNHCR Statute would be amended accordingly. The High Commissioner should present to the Executive Committee a streamlined and rationalized structure of the UNHCR secretariat, consolidating functions and relocating some organizational units, based on a uniform organizational nomenclature. The Executive Committee should modify the programme budget cycle from the current annual to a biennial cycle, in alignment with the UN regular budget. To further enhance the results-based approach to planning, programming, budgeting, monitoring and evaluation, the High Commissioner should apply the UN logical framework to the UNHCR budget; integrate the Management Systems Renewal Project (MSRP) into the results-based management process; incorporate evaluation findings and recommendations into planning, programming, budgeting and monitoring; and enhance real-time evaluation. The High Commissioner should submit to the Executive Committee a long-term strategic framework containing UNHCR's guiding principles, organizational priorities and strategic goals, linked to activities, indicators of achievement, and target dates for completion. The High Commissioner should prepare a comprehensive information management strategy, consolidate information and communication technology (ICT) related functions into a centralized organizational entity and appoint a Chief Information Officer as the head of that entity. The Division of Human Resources should prepare a comprehensive strategic corporate policy on human resources management for submission to the Executive Committee in 2005, and an annual report on the composition of the secretariat. The High Commissioner should strengthen the role of the Oversight Committee, and the Executive Committee should approve a non-career five-year, non-renewable Inspector General position. JIU made a number of other recommendations to help strengthen UNHCR's human resources management and field operations.

In a September report [A/AC.96/992/Add.2], ACABQ concurred with JIU on the need for UNHCR to modify its programme cycle from annual to biennial but was not convinced of UNHCR's concern that biennialization would lead to loss of flexibility in responding to emergencies and possible resistance by donors who had annual budgets. UNHCR needed to move towards longer-term planning and strategic goals, particularly with its change from a five-year mandate to an open-ended one, pursuant to General Assembly resolution 58/153 [YUN 2003, p. 1226]. Regarding the creation of the additional post of Deputy High Commissioner, ACABQ, while favouring the proposal, believed that UNHCR should await the results of its headquarters review before establishing another top management post. ACABQ encouraged UNHCR to support the JIU recommendations on its oversight activities, especially that relating to the Office of the Inspector General.

A December report of the Secretary-General [A/59/394/Add.1], containing his comments on the JIU report, indicated UNHCR's general agreement with most of the findings and recommendations of the Inspectors, and the High Commissioner's intention to take them into account during the review of the Office.

Standing Committee

The UNHCR Standing Committee held three meetings in 2004 (9-11 March [A/AC.96/988]; 29 June-1 July [A/AC.96/998]; and 23-24 September [A/AC.96/1001]). It considered issues relating to UNHCR's programmes, budgets and funding; international protection; protection/programme policy; coordination; management, finance, oversight and human resources; governance; and consultations.

In October [A/59/12/Add.1], the Executive Committee adopted the following items for the Standing Committee's 2005 programme of work: international protection; protection programme policy; programme budgets and funding; regional activities and Global Programmes; management, financial control, administrative oversight and human resources; coordination; and governance. The Standing Committee was authorized to add or delete items, as appropriate, to its intersessional work programme.

Staff safety

At the September meeting of the Standing Committee (23-24 September) [A/AC.96/1001], the Director of UNHCR's Emergency and Security Service (ESS), in an update on staff safety and security management, stated that UNHCR was taking innovative measures to meet its safety obligations to staff. The High Commissioner was considering some 80 recommendations made by the Steering Committee on Security Policy and Policy Implementation, which had conducted a comprehensive review of the issue. The policy changes envisaged would enable UNHCR to: integrate security considerations fully into its operations, including through a restructured ESS; train staff in effective security management concepts; emphasize levels of accountability; promote the conduct of operations from a risk management and risk mitigation perspective; and ensure its role within the wider scope of the United Nations' global security management. UNHCR's reforms, which would complement those of the United Nations, would require additional resources, with significant initial requirements particularly in the field of telecommunications. In addition to the estimated funding needs presented in the 2005 annual programme budget, further requirements were being quantified in relation to the needs outlined in the Steering Committee's report.

ACABQ, in its September report [A/AC.96/992/Add.2], noted that $28.9 million had been included in the 2005 programme budget for security, which did not include an additional estimated $17.5 million to implement the Steering Committee's recommendations. ACABQ was of the opinion that the UNHCR security arrangements and related resource requirements should be kept under review to ensure that they were in harmony with the overall UN system security plan as might be adopted by the General Assembly, following consideration of the Steering Committee's report.

Refugee protection and assistance

Protection issues

In his annual report covering 2004 [A/60/12], the High Commissioner described the main challenges facing UNHCR and the international community to protect refugees, including concerns about terrorism and the confusion between migration and asylum issues, which affected the international protection regime and the right of refugees to seek asylum. UNHCR was working to preserve access to asylum for those seeking it on the basis of a well-founded fear of persecution. By mainstreaming the goals and objectives of the 2002 Agenda for Protection [YUN 2002, p. 1205], UNHCR had reinforced links between its Department of International Protection and its field operations, thereby helping to give focus to protection interventions. The physical security of refugees remained an issue of central concern for UNHCR during the year, particularly the rape of refugee women as a weapon of conflict and the abduction and humiliation of refugee children in displacement situations. There were also worrisome instances of refoulement, occasionally carried out under curious arrangements between asylum host States and countries of origin. The Office closely monitored developments in migration-related forums to ensure that the protection needs of the forcibly displaced were met. It developed a comprehensive framework for assessing protection capacity needs and facilitated a consultative process to develop activities to address the gaps identified. Particular efforts were made to enhance the protection of refugee women and children through a pilot project on age, gender and diversity mainstreaming, launched in February in 16 countries. UNHCR continued to promote accession to the 1951 Convention relating to the Status of Refugees [YUN 1951, p. 520] and its 1967 Protocol [YUN 1967, p. 477], and the 1954 Convention relating to the Status of Stateless Persons [YUN 1954, p. 416] and other related instruments.

In a July note on international protection [A/AC.96/989], the High Commissioner stated that, despite positive developments, particularly the repatriation of significant numbers of refugees, the movement of several countries towards peace and the impetus to implement the 1951 Convention in many regions, major challenges persisted due to non-existent or weak legal frameworks, measures taken that undermined the protection regime, the increasing volume and complexities of migratory flows and the difficulties associated with ensuring the sustainability of voluntary repatriation. The High Commissioner noted that protection responses were intrinsically linked, and the successful implementation of each element of the Agenda for Protection helped to reinforce the international protection regime as a whole. The strength and effectiveness of the regime would grow proportionately with the political and operational commitment of States and actors to resolving long-standing refugee situations, and the improvement of the conditions on which humanitarian action depended, among other factors.

The Executive Committee, in October [A/59/12/Add.1], acknowledged the increasing complexities of the environment in which international protection was provided and the many challenges faced by States and UNHCR in ensuring the protection of refugees and other persons of concern. Recognizing that the delivery of international protection was resource-intensive, the Committee reaffirmed the need for UNHCR to address protection in a holistic manner, and called on States to support it through the timely and predictable provision of resources. The Committee emphasized the continuing importance of the Agenda for Protection and encouraged all concerned actors to provide timely information on their follow-up initiatives to enable UNHCR to keep it informed on implementation initiatives.

As at 31 December 2004, the number of States parties to both the 1951 Convention relating to the Status of Refugees [YUN 1951, p. 520] and to its 1967 Protocol [YUN 1967, p. 477] stood at 142. The accessions of the Czech Republic and Uruguay to the 1954 Convention relating to the Status of Stateless Persons [YUN 1954, p. 416], and of Liberia and the Libyan Arab Jamahiriya to the 1961 Convention on the Reduction of Statelessness [YUN 1961, p. 533], increased the number of States parties to those instruments to 57 and 29, respectively.

Convention Plus

In 2004, the “Convention Plus” initiative, launched in 2003 [YUN 2003, p. 1229] to help strengthen the commitment of States and UNHCR partners to resolving refugee situations, continued to provide the basis for action on behalf of refugees through enhanced burden sharing. Activities designed to make international cooperation more robust and effective in that regard included the establishment in June of a Framework of Understandings on Resettlement and discussions on irregular secondary movement of asylum-seekers and refugees and targeting development assistance to achieve durable solutions to refugee problems. Future efforts would focus on situation-specific approaches, notably for protracted refugee situations. Another innovative initiative under Convention Plus was the project on strengthening protection capacity, which helped develop a comprehensive methodology for assessing gaps in protection capacity and generated multilateral approaches to enhancing the protection capacity of host countries. In October, the High Commissioner’s Forum, a mechanism for engaging States and humanitarian actors in dialogue on refugee issues, considered a methodology for making comprehensive approaches to resolving refugee problems more systematic.

Assistance measures

According to the High Commissioner’s 2004 report [A/60/12], the global population of concern to UNHCR rose to 19.2 million in 2004, from 17 million in 2003. Despite the repatriation of significant numbers of refugees to their countries of origin in 2004, following the resolution of many conflict situations, new mass outflows resulted from other conflicts and human rights abuses around the world, with over 232,000 refugees fleeing their countries. The main refugee outflows comprised hundreds of thousands of Sudanese forced by militia attacks in that country’s Darfur region to flee to Chad, Uganda and Kenya, resulting in one of the most complex and demanding UNHCR humanitarian operations in 2004. Others affected elsewhere included 37,900 who fled the DRC into Burundi, Rwanda, Zambia and Uganda; 19,000 from Somalia to Yemen and Kenya; and 5,500 from Côte d’Ivoire to Liberia. Another outflow was the movement of Iraqis fleeing to Syria, Lebanon and Jordan. The main IDP situations of concern were in Colombia, estimated to have over 2 million displaced persons, the Sudan's Darfur region and Liberia. During the year, an estimated 1.5 million refugees repatriated voluntarily to their countries of origin, of whom the largest number (approximately 1 million) returned to Afghanistan from Iran and Pakistan. Others returned to Angola (80,000), Burundi (90,000), the DRC (13,800), Iraq (194,000), Liberia (56,900), Rwanda (14,100), Sierra Leone (26,300), Somalia (18,100) and Sri Lanka (10,000). The number of those resettled during the year rose to approximately 30,000, from 26,000 in 2003, while the number of stateless persons was estimated at 1.5 million.

Refugees and the environment

In 2004, UNHCR continued to incorporate environmental concerns into all aspects of refugee operations. It updated sectoral guidelines on forestry and livestock management and publications on permaculture in refugee situations and sustainable land use. It enhanced technical support in operations in Africa and Asia, notably in Chad, where it collaborated with the Government on an environmental assessment in refugee-hosting areas. In cooperation with the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization (UNESCO) Programme for Education for Emergencies and Reconstruction, UNHCR continued environmental education for refugees to raise awareness and compliance with environmental strategies.

Refugees and HIV/AIDS

In 2004, as one of the co-sponsors of UNAIDS, UNHCR facilitated synergy and coordination of action in combating HIV/AIDS among persons of concern. Issues relating to conflicts, displacement and refugees featured more prominently in global and regional strategies on prevention, education, food and nutrition, and in interventions in emergency settings. UNHCR staff worked to improve measures to reduce stigmatization or discrimination against refugees affected by HIV/AIDS and to increase refugee access to public sector care and treatment programmes, including anti-retroviral therapy. Collaboration with partners and Governments on subregional initiatives was prioritized, and in that regard, UNHCR signed a memorandum of understanding with the participating States of the Great Lakes Initiative on AIDS and developed similar initiatives in West and Central Africa for improving continuity of services to mobile populations. The strategy involved building agreements on diagnostic and treatment protocols, bulk ordering of medication and supplies, and helping with repatriation planning and implementation.

Refugee women

During the year, UNHCR launched a pilot project on age, gender and diversity mainstreaming in 16 countries, through multifunctional teams and country-level work plans to promote gender equality and the rights of refugees of all ages. Initial results indicated that the project had helped boost awareness of gender issues in refugee situations and facilitated interaction between UNHCR staff and refugee men and women, better knowledge of refugee concerns and the identification of protection risks and gaps by age and gender. UNHCR supplemented its Guidelines for Prevention and Response to Sexual and Gender-based Violence in refugee and refugee-like settings with regular capacity-building sessions for its staff and those of its partners. In mid-2004, a joint UNHCR-WFP study on effective operational practices in relation to women's control of food and participation in food distribution identified ways to further secure women's interests in that regard. In collaboration with ILO, UNHCR secured technical support for refugee women entrepreneurship and economic empowerment in several countries.

Refugee children

In 2004, UNHCR promoted a rights-based approach to enhancing the protection and care of refugee children and adolescents. The strategy included the continuing prioritization of protection concerns, such as separation; sexual exploitation, abuse and violence; military recruitment; education; and the specific needs of adolescents. In collaboration with other humanitarian agencies and NGOs, the Office published a global registration form for unaccompanied and separated children, and through the inter-agency Action for the Rights of Children, undertook field-focused capacity-building initiatives in Africa, Latin America and Asia. UNHCR continued to support the education of persons of concern, with particular focus on access to primary education. It launched a number of capacity-building projects, and pursued the development of educational tools and the provision of scholarships for secondary and post-secondary education. Innovative strategies, undertaken in partnership with others, including through private sector funding and support, showed positive results in Kenya, demonstrating the value of affirmative action for girls' education.

Regional activities

Africa

In 2004, the total population of concern to UNHCR in Africa, excluding North Africa, totalled 4.5 million, of whom 2.8 million were refugees, 1 million IDPs and 199,603 asylum-seekers, compared to 3.3 million in 2003 [YUN 2003, p. 1232].

The Secretary-General, in an August report submitted in response to General Assembly resolution 58/149 [YUN 2003, p. 1234], updated information on assistance provided by UNHCR to refugees, returnees and displaced persons in Africa [A/59/317], covering 2003 and the first half of 2004. He noted that, despite the continuing decrease in the number of refugees in Africa in 2004, their situation and that of displaced persons in many parts of the continent remained precarious, especially in the Darfur province of the Sudan, from where some 200,000 refugees had fled into Chad and up to 1.5 million were displaced in the Sudan itself (see p. 235). UNHCR assisted hundreds of thousands of refugees on the continent to repatriate to their countries of origin, mainly nationals of Angola, Burundi, Eritrea, Liberia, Rwanda, Sierra Leone and Somalia. The main refugee groups continued to originate from some of those countries, and from the Sudan and the DRC, which recorded major new outflows during 2004.

In East Africa and the Horn of Africa, UNHCR assisted over 17,000 of the 770,517 refugees registered in the region to repatriate to Eritrea from the Sudan, and supported the Eritrean Government in protecting and assisting other camp-based refugees and asylum-seekers inside Eritrea. In Ethiopia, the deterioration of the security situation in the western region of Gambella hampered UNHCR's access to refugee camps and affected humanitarian assistance. However, the Office assisted refugees in other parts of the country and promoted the voluntary repatriation of thousands of Somali refugees there. In Kenya, where some 240,000 refugees were in camps, an expanded multisectoral approach to combating HIV/AIDS increased awareness of preventive patient care among the camp population. Over 10,000 Somali refugees repatriated voluntarily from neighbouring countries, but the return programme was undermined by continuing instability in most parts of southern Somalia, the lack of social services and economic prospects upon return, severe drought in the north and endemic human rights violations. The deteriorating security situation hampered humanitarian access to the 200,000 refugees from the Darfur region living in Chad and malnourished IDPs. In Uganda, an estimated 1.6 million people were displaced as a result of the conflict between the Government and the rebel Lord's Resistance Army, whose continuing operation around settlements in the north of the country remained a major constraint for refugee programmes.

In the Central Africa and Great Lakes sub-region, host to some 1.3 million refugees, some 55,000 Burundians and 23,300 Rwandans were assisted in returning to their places of origin. However, hopes for the further repatriation of hundreds of thousands more refugees as a result of the improved political climate in Burundi and the DRC were not realized owing to continuing instability in some areas, including northern Central African Republic, where tension prevented some 41,000 of its nationals from repatriating from Chad. Meanwhile, the situation in Chad was further aggravated by the new influx of Sudanese fleeing from the Darfur region. UNHCR relocated 122,000 refugees to safer locations away from the border in eastern Chad during the first half of 2004. At mid-year, the Office faced another challenging situation, following the outbreak of fighting in the DRC town of Bukavu, which resulted in a fresh outflow of an estimated 20,000 refugees to Rwanda and Burundi (see p. 124).

In West Africa, where 471,328 refugees resided, the continuing instability in Côte d'Ivoire limited access to refugee-hosting areas, a situation further aggravated by the involvement of Liberian fighters in the Ivorian conflict, which fuelled animosity towards Liberian refugees in the country. An emergency resettlement programme for some 8,000 of those refugees was initiated in the United States. In Liberia itself, marked improvement in the security situation, following the deployment of UN peacekeepers, facilitated the spontaneous return of 50,000 refugees and several thousand IDPs. The challenge facing the international community was the return and reintegration of another 300,000 Liberian refugees in neighbouring countries and 260,000 IDPs residing in camps in the country. Similar progress in the peace process in Sierra Leone (see p. 212) facilitated the repatriation of some 270,000 refugees, mainly from Guinea and Liberia. Reintegration programmes for the returnees would continue throughout 2004 and into 2005.

In Southern Africa, host to some 245,064 refugees, organized return programmes in Angola resumed in May, allowing some 8,000 refugees to be repatriated with UNHCR assistance. However, the lack of access to some parts of the country, owing to landmines and poor infrastructure, prevented repatriation to some 40 per cent of the key areas of refugee return. Another major constraint was the lack of adequate implementing partners. In South Africa, host to the largest number of urban refugees in the subregion, the phenomenon of mixed migration movements continued to pose a major challenge. Syndicates engaged in illegal activities abused the asylum system, thereby tarnishing the image of refugees and contributing to xenophobia, which prompted UNHCR to embark on a sensitization drive to raise government awareness and mobilize civil society support. In Zambia, the Office protected and assisted an estimated 200,000 refugees and promoted repatriation and resettlement programmes for many of them, particularly those returning mostly to Angola. Others opting to remain in Zambia benefited from economic and social empowerment programmes.

The Secretary-General also described inter-agency cooperation efforts to protect and assist refugees and displaced persons in Africa, and UNHCR's cooperation with regional bodies and initiatives. In that regard, UNHCR seconded one of its staff to the African Union (AU) to help build that organization's capacity to respond effectively to issues relating to refugees, IDPs and returnees in the continent. In collaboration with the African Parliamentary Union, UNHCR organized a regional conference on refugees in Africa: the challenges of protection and solutions (Cotonou, Benin, 1-3 June), which adopted a declaration and programme of action on ways to promote solutions to refugee problems on the continent, including through heightened awareness of international and regional refugee law.

UNHCR report. According to UNHCR's Global Report 2004, which provided information to the end of the year, UNHCR assisted almost 130,000 people to return to their countries in Central Africa and the Great Lakes subregion. However, the instability in eastern DRC and the insurrection by elements of the Congolese army in Bukavu in May/June led to an exodus of refugees into Rwanda and Burundi. Militia groups operating from the DRC attacked refugee sites in Gatumba in Burundi, killing some 160 refugees (see p. 149). In Gabon where repatriation was not successful, UNHCR made progress with local economic integration as the most durable solution. In the Sudan, UNHCR also maintained efforts in search of durable solutions for thousands of refugees from other countries, most notably Eritrea, and for an estimated 80,000 IDPs. One of the main constraints to its programmes in that country was its simultaneous involvement in three operations in the east, west and north, which overstretched its resources.

Repatriation programmes in East Africa and the Horn of Africa were facilitated by increased prospects for stability in Somalia, owing to the formation of the Transitional Federal Government of Somalia and significant international impetus to peace processes in the subregion. UNHCR assisted approximately 18,000 refugees to return to the Somaliland region from Ethiopia and Djibouti, and another 9,900 to repatriate to Eritrea from the Sudan. The Office continued to use resettlement as a tool to enhance the physical safety and security of refugees at risk, and succeeded in resettling, in the United States, thousands of refugees from Ethiopia. In West Africa, increasing stability in Sierra Leone and Liberia enabled UNHCR to assist the repatriation of 26,000 Sierra Leonean and some 72,000 Liberian refugees from neighbouring countries. Nonetheless, the subregion still hosted over 400,000 refugees from various conflicts on the continent. In some cases, particularly in protracted refugee situations, resettlement was considered a viable durable solution, with over 7,300 persons submitted for resettlement in Australia, Canada, Denmark, Finland, the Netherlands, Norway, Sweden and the United States. UNHCR's overriding concerns in the subregion were conflict prevention and the negative effects of socio-economic and political instability, as well as food insufficiency. The main challenges for the reintegration of returnees were the absence of employment opportunities and the implementation of the regional disarmament, demobilization, rehabilitation and reintegration process. In Southern Africa, UNHCR concentrated on durable solutions for the protracted refugee situations in various countries of asylum in the region. The integration of HIV/AIDS programmes into refugee operations remained a high priority, as did effective resource management. Progress was made with the repatriation of Angolan refugees, some 90,000 of whom returned from Botswana, the DRC, Namibia, the Republic of the Congo, South Africa and Zambia. For those who did not wish to repatriate, local integration schemes were initiated in Malawi, Mozambique and Zambia, for implementation in 2005. However, the backlog of asylum applications remained a serious challenge, as did the continuing reluctance of Rwandan refugees to repatriate; the outbreak of a meningitis epidemic in Namibia, which disrupted the return programme to Angola; and the general lack of facilities and hardship in areas of return in Angola, which discouraged voluntary returns.

UNHCR assisted 1.4 million persons in Central Africa and the Great Lakes region, which received $185.4 million in agency expenditures; East Africa and the Horn of Africa, $111 million for 1.5 million persons of concern; West Africa, some $118 million for 1.1 million persons in need; and Southern Africa, $54.2 million for 463,202 persons of concern.

Other developments. The Executive Council of the African Union (AU), at its fifth ordinary session (Addis Ababa, 30 June–3 July), adopted decision EX.CL/Dec.127(V) on the situation of refugees, returnees and IDPs in Africa, reaffirming the importance of voluntary repatriation and urging AU member States to create conditions conducive to the repatriation and sustainable reintegration of refugees in their communities.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 20 December [meeting 74], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Third Committee [A/59/498], adopted resolution 59/172 without vote [agenda item 100].

Assistance to refugees, returnees and displaced persons in Africa

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 58/149 of 22 December 2003,

Recalling also the Organization of African Unity Convention governing the specific aspects of refugee problems in Africa of 1969 and the African Charter on Human and Peoples' Rights,

Reaffirming that the 1951 Convention relating to the Status of Refugees, together with the 1967 Protocol thereto, as complemented by the Organization of African Unity Convention of 1969, remains the foundation of the international refugee protection regime in Africa,

1. Takes note of the reports of the Secretary-General and the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees;

2. Notes the need for African States to address resolutely the root causes of all forms of forced displacement in Africa and to foster peace, stability and prosperity throughout the African continent so as to forestall refugee flows, and calls upon the international community, including States, the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees, and other relevant United Nations organizations, within their respective mandates, to take concrete action to meet the protection and assistance needs of refugees, returnees and displaced persons and to contribute generously to projects and programmes aimed at alleviating their plight and facilitating durable solutions for refugees and displaced persons;

3. Welcomes decision EX.CL/Dec.127(V) on the situation of refugees, returnees and displaced persons in Africa adopted by the Executive Council of the African Union at its fifth ordinary session, held at Addis Ababa from 30 June to 3 July 2004;

4. Takes note of the holding of the conference organized by the African Parliamentary Union and the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees on "Refugees in Africa: the challenges of protection and solutions" at Cotonou, Benin, from 1 to 3 June 2004;

5. Expresses its appreciation for the leadership shown by the High Commissioner since assuming office in January 2001, and commends the Office of the High Commissioner for its ongoing efforts, with the support of the international community, to assist African countries of asylum and to respond to the protection and assistance needs of refugees, returnees and displaced persons in Africa;

6. Encourages the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees to continue to cooperate with the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights and the African Commission on Human and Peoples' Rights, in conjunction with relevant agencies of the United Nations system and intergovernmental organizations, within their respective mandates, in the promotion and protection of the human rights and fundamental freedoms of refugees, returnees and displaced persons in Africa, and welcomes in this regard the appointment by the African Commission on Human and Peoples' Rights of its Special Rapporteur on refugees and internally displaced persons in Africa;

7. Recognizes that, among refugees, returnees and internally displaced persons, women and children are the majority of the population affected by conflict and bear the brunt of atrocities and other consequences of conflict, and in this regard takes note of the report of the Secretary-General on women and peace and security submitted to and discussed by the Security Council;

8. Reiterates the importance of the full and effective implementation of standards and procedures to better address the specific protection needs of refugee children and adolescents and to safeguard rights and, in particular, to ensure adequate attention to unaccompanied and separated children and former child soldiers in refugee settings, as well as in the context of voluntary repatriation and reintegration measures;

9. Notes with great concern that, despite all of the efforts made so far by the United Nations, the African Union and others, the situation of refugees and displaced persons in Africa remains precarious, calls upon States and other parties to armed conflict to observe scrupulously the letter and the spirit of international humanitarian law, bearing in mind that armed conflict is one of the principal causes of forced displacement in Africa, and welcomes in this regard the appointment by the African Union of its Special Representative on the protection of civilians in armed conflict;

10. Recognizes the importance of early registration and effective registration systems and censuses as a tool of protection and as a means to enable the quantification and assessment of needs for the provision and distribution of humanitarian assistance and to implement appropriate durable solutions;

11. Also recognizes the need to strengthen the capacity of States to provide assistance to and protection for refugees, returnees and displaced persons, and calls upon the international community, in the context of burden- and responsibility-sharing, to increase its material, financial and technical assistance in countries affected by refugees, returnees and displaced persons, to address simultaneously the inadequacies of existing assistance arrangements and to support initiatives in this regard;

12. Reaffirms that host States have the primary responsibility to ensure the civilian and humanitarian character of asylum, and calls upon States, in cooperation with international organizations, within their mandates, to take all necessary measures to ensure respect for the principles of refugee protection and, in particular, to ensure that the civilian and humanitarian nature of refugee camps is not compromised by the presence or the activities of armed elements or used for purposes that are incompatible with their civilian character;

13. Condemns all acts that pose a threat to the personal security and well-being of refugees and asylum-seekers, such as refolement, unlawful expulsion and physical attacks, deplores, in particular, the armed attacks that took place in the Gatumba transit centre in Burundi in August 2004, calls upon States of refuge, in cooperation with international organizations, where appropriate, to take all necessary measures to ensure respect for the principles of refugee protection, including the humane treatment of asylum-seekers, notes with interest that the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees has continued to take steps to encourage the development of measures to better ensure the civilian and humanitarian character of asylum, and encourages the High Commissioner to continue these efforts in consultation with States and other relevant actors;

14. Deplores the deaths, injuries and other forms of violence sustained by staff members of the Office of the High Commissioner and other humanitarian organizations, urges States, parties to conflict and all other relevant actors to take all necessary measures to protect activities related to humanitarian assistance, prevent attacks on and kidnapping of national and international humanitarian workers and ensure their safety and security, calls upon States to investigate fully any crime committed against humanitarian personnel and bring to justice the persons responsible for such crimes, and calls upon organizations and aid workers to abide by the national laws and regulations of the countries in which they operate;

15. Calls upon the Office of the High Commissioner, the African Union, subregional organizations and all African States, in conjunction with agencies of the United Nations system, intergovernmental and non-governmental organizations and the international community, to strengthen and revitalize existing partnerships and forge new ones in support of the international refugee protection system, and welcomes in this regard the High Commissioner joining the Joint United Nations Programme on HIV/AIDS in 2004 as a co-sponsor;

16. Calls upon the Office of the High Commissioner, the international community and other concerned entities to intensify their support to African Governments through appropriate capacity-building activities, including training of relevant officers, disseminating information about refugee instruments and principles, providing financial, technical and advisory services to accelerate the enactment or amendment and implementation of legislation relating to refugees, strengthening emergency response and enhancing capacities for the coordination of humanitarian activities, and welcomes in this regard the conclusion on international cooperation and burden- and responsibility-sharing in mass influx situations adopted by the Executive Committee of the Programme of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees at its fifty-fifth session;

17. Reaffirms the right of return and the principle of voluntary repatriation, appeals to countries of origin and countries of asylum to create conditions that are conducive to voluntary repatriation, and recognizes that, while voluntary repatriation remains the pre-eminent solution, local integration and third-country resettlement, where appropriate and feasible, are also viable options for dealing with the situation of African refugees who, owing to prevailing circumstances in their respective countries of origin, are unable to return home;

18. Notes with satisfaction the voluntary return of thousands of refugees to their countries of origin, and welcomes in this regard the conclusion on legal safety issues in the context of voluntary repatriation of refugees adopted by the Executive Committee of the Programme of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees at its fifty-fifth session;

19. Reaffirms that voluntary repatriation should not necessarily be conditioned on the accomplishment of political solutions in the country of origin in order not to impede the exercise of the refugees' right to return, and recognizes that the voluntary repatriation and reintegration process is normally guided by the conditions in the country of origin, in particular that voluntary repatriation can be accomplished in conditions of safety and dignity;

20. Welcomes the development by the High Commissioner, in cooperation with other United Nations agencies and development actors, of the framework for durable solutions, aimed at promoting lasting solutions, particularly in protracted refugee situations, including the "4Rs" approach (repatriation, reintegration, rehabilitation and reconstruction) to sustainable return;

21. Appeals to the international community to respond positively, in the spirit of solidarity and burden- and responsibility-sharing, to the third-country resettlement needs of African refugees, and in this regard notes with interest the development of the Multilateral Framework of Understandings on the strategic use of resettlement in the context of the High Commissioner's Convention Plus initiative;

22. Calls upon the international donor community to provide financial and material assistance that allows for the implementation of community-based development programmes that benefit both refugees and host communities, as appropriate, in agreement with host countries and consistent with humanitarian objectives;

23. Also calls upon the international donor community to provide material and financial assistance for the implementation of programmes intended for the rehabilitation of the environment and infrastructure affected by refugees in countries of asylum;

24. Urges the international community, in the spirit of international solidarity and burden-sharing, to continue to fund generously the refugee programmes of the Office of the High Commissioner and, taking into account the substantially increased needs of programmes in Africa, to ensure that Africa receives a fair and equitable share of the resources designated for refugees;

25. Expresses grave concern about the plight of internally displaced persons in Africa, calls upon States to take concrete action to pre-empt internal displacement and to meet the protection and assistance needs of internally displaced persons, recalls in that regard the Guiding Principles on Internal Displacement, and urges the international community, led by relevant United Nations organizations, to contribute generously to national projects and programmes aimed at alleviating the plight of internally displaced persons;

26. Invites the Representative of the Secretary-General on the human rights of internally displaced persons to continue his ongoing dialogue with Member States and the intergovernmental and non-governmental organizations concerned, in accordance with his mandate, and to include information thereon in his reports to the Commission on Human Rights and the General Assembly;

27. Requests the Secretary-General to submit a comprehensive report on assistance to refugees, returnees and displaced persons in Africa to the General Assembly at its sixtieth session, taking fully into account the efforts expended by countries of asylum, under the item entitled "Report of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees, questions relating to refugees, returnees and displaced persons and humanitarian questions", and to present an oral report to the Economic and Social Council at its substantive session of 2005.

The Americas

Notable developments in North America and the Caribbean during the year included the entry into force of the 2002 "safe third country" agreement (STCA) between Canada and the United States [YUN 2002, p. 1212], the implementation of which UNHCR was formally invited to monitor. In both countries, UNHCR remained active on the issue of access and undertook missions to various ports of entry, particularly land borders, which would be the focus of its monitoring role within the STCA framework. In Canada, the Office worked to ensure that asylum-seekers were guaranteed legal aid, advocated for the protection of victims of human smuggling and/or trafficking and intercepted persons, and helped resettle some 7,400 persons of concern. A major development in the region was the exodus of an estimated 2,500 to 3,000 Haitian refugees who fled the political violence sparked by the departure of President Jean-Bertrand Aristide (see p. 292). Most were intercepted and returned home by the United States Coast Guard. UNHCR assisted those who sought refuge in neighbouring islands, particularly Cuba and Jamaica. In another development, the United States reinvigorated its resettlement programme, admitting over 53,000 refugees during the year. However, concern about international terrorism and national security in the country resulted in consideration by the United States House of Representatives of asylum and immigration measures that would be detrimental to refugees and asylum-seekers. Policy changes were also expected in Canada, where UNHCR worked closely with the authorities to ensure that persons of concern were not adversely affected. In Central America and Mexico, which recorded 2,010 new refugee arrivals during the year, UNHCR assisted Belize, Costa Rica, El Salvador, Guatemala, Honduras, Mexico and Nicaragua to strengthen their national institutions to protect and assist asylum-seekers and refugees, with special attention to women and children, to manage fair and efficient refugee status determination procedures, to interpret international refugee law and to improve related national legal frameworks. UNHCR's direct assistance to refugees in the subregion included the provision of food, lodging and other necessities. A notable challenge in the subregion was irregular migration northwards through Mexico, forcing regional States to apply restrictive measures, which made the identification of asylum-seekers difficult. In South America, the conflict in Colombia led over half a million of its citizens to seek protection in neighbouring Ecuador (250,000), Costa Rica (50,000), Panama (100,000) and Venezuela (270,000). In all refugee-receiving countries, the Office helped to strengthen and increase access to national protection regimes and to improve refugees' self-reliance through community-based projects. It facilitated resettlement programmes in Brazil, Canada, Chile and the United States, promoted refugee education in Ecuador and Venezuela, and implemented refugee welfare pilot programmes on gender and age in a number of subregional States. Elsewhere in South America, UNHCR focused on intra-regional debates on migration and human rights and helped register and assist new arrivals of asylum-seekers, mostly in Argentina, Brazil and Chile. At events organized in collaboration with UNHCR to commemorate the twentieth anniversary of the Cartagena Declaration (Mexico City, 16 November), the Mexico Declaration and Plan of Action for strengthening the international protection of refugees in Latin America were adopted. Under the Plan of Action, resettlement programmes in Brazil and Chile were accelerated during the year. In a related development, the regional States established a common agenda on the development of refugee legislation, local integration and resettlement.

Total UNHCR expenditure in the Americas in 2004 was $28.5 million, for a population of concern numbering 2.4 million.

Asia and the Pacific and the Arab States

In 2004, UNHCR spent approximately $51 million on activities in Asia and the Pacific, for a total population of concern of 1.3 million. For operations in Central Asia, South-West Asia, North Africa and the Middle East, a total of $192.5 million was spent for a population of concern of 4.2 million.

South Asia

In late 2004, UNHCR responded, as part of the overall UN effort, to the devastation caused by the Indian Ocean tsunami (see p. 952) in Sri Lanka, Indonesia's Aceh province and Bangladesh, where the protracted nature of the operation resulted in increased security problems in the refugee camps, disrupting programme delivery. At the end of the year, some 20,300 refugees remained in two camps in Bangladesh, and UNHCR worked closely with WFP to assist them, as well as over 11,000 other Afghan and Myanmar refugees in India. In Nepal, where UNHCR had accorded a high priority to ending the protracted plight of Bhutanese refugees, not much progress was made in securing durable solutions, partly owing to security. In Sri Lanka, 33,700 IDPs were repatriated to their places of origin, relatively fewer than in previous years, owing to human rights violations and other protection problems. Durable solutions were yet to be found for another 353,000 IDPs and 61,000 refugees living in camps.

East Asia and the Pacific

In East Asia and the Pacific, UNHCR, in co-operation with the Government of Myanmar, gained access to the main areas of origin of 140,000 Myanmar refugees in Thailand and assisted the return of IDPs to those areas. In Malaysia, progress was made in protecting persons of concern through greater government involvement and increased public awareness and visibility of refugee issues. In other regional States, including Cambodia, China, Fiji, Indonesia, Mongolia, Papua New Guinea, the Republic of Korea, Thailand and Timor-Leste, the Office undertook a variety of activities to assist and protect refugees. Notably, it initiated a five-point plan in Indonesia to ensure the effective local integration of East Timorese remaining in the country, and assisted with the family reunification of over 2,350 formerly separated children and the local integration of another 1,100 children. UNHCR also strengthened mechanisms for addressing issues related to sexual and gender-based violence for refugees and asylum-seekers in the subregion. Operational challenges concerned the status of North Koreans seeking refuge and asylum in China, the lack of a legal framework in the Hong Kong region of China for determining asylum and refugee status, the lack of durable solutions for mandate refugees in Japan and strained relations with Viet Nam and Cambodia over asylum issues.

Central Asia, South-West Asia, North Africa and the Middle East

In Central Asia, UNHCR assisted Turkmenistan to initiate the registration of all refugees in the country, to be completed in 2005, including the estimated 12,100 Tajik and 1,000 Afghan refugees in the country. UNHCR planned to discuss with the Turkmenistan Government durable solutions for them. In Uzbekistan, the Office successfully implemented a project funded by the European Union (EU) to rehabilitate two border crossing points in the country, which subsequently led to an agreement by the EU on technical assistance to the Commonwealth of Independent States for funding a regional project to strengthen protection capacity and support asylum systems in the subregion. In other action, UNHCR undertook an initiative in Central Asia to assess refugee protection gaps and identify solutions thereto, for discussion at a regional conference of Central Asian Governments. During the year, 605 refugees were repatriated, including nationals of Turkmenistan (249), Kyrgyzstan (174), Uzbekistan (89), Tajikistan (66) and Kazakhstan (27). Local integration in Turkmenistan and Kyrgyzstan through citizenship was pursued on behalf of some 2,863 refugees, while resettlement, mostly in Canada and the United States, was sought for other refugees. Despite the progress made, operational challenges remained in efforts to strengthen asylum institutions and in achieving durable solutions. In South-West Asia, the repatriation programme for Afghan refugees, mostly from Iran and Pakistan, continued, facilitated by presidential elections in the country, the formation of the national army and police, accelerated demobilization and disarmament programmes and the strengthening of regional trade relations. Overall, approximately 761,000 Afghan refugees returned to their places of origin during the year. However, despite its relative economic and social recovery, conditions inside Afghanistan remained difficult, making the provision of incentives for voluntary repatriation a daunting task.

UNHCR's primary focus in North Africa remained the protracted plight of the Saharawi refugees in the Tindouf camps in Algeria, and while a political solution remained elusive, the Office continued to implement its basic humanitarian assistance activities for refugees. Owing to a marked increase in the mixed flow of asylum-seekers and economic migrants transiting through North Africa in an attempt to enter Europe illegally, the five countries of the Union of the Arab Maghreb took measures to stem migratory flow through their territories. As many as 120,000 people, of whom 35,000 were of sub-Saharan origin, were estimated to have attempted to cross the Mediterranean during the year through unseaworthy vessels, which resulted in the drowning of some migrants. A strategy for addressing the phenomenon and for strengthening the institution of asylum were among UNHCR's concerns in the subregion, as was the fragility of the refugee protection framework in most of the subregional States.

In the Middle East, events in Iraq remained prominent in subregional operations. Although a small number of Iraqi refugees and IDPs had repatriated during the year, unfavourable conditions in parts of the country resulted in fresh outflows of thousands of other Iraqis, who fled mostly to Syria, Jordan and Lebanon. The outbreak of fighting in Yemen in the summer of 2004 between Government forces and dissidents displaced several thousand Yemeni nationals, even as thousands of other asylum-seekers and refugees from Ethiopia and Somalia continued to embark on risky sea journeys to Yemen. In Egypt, the refugee status determination of Sudanese asylum-seekers was suspended in June, in view of progress towards peace in southern Sudan. Some 4,000 of those refugees who had already been recognized were resettled in Australia, Canada, Finland and the United States. During the year, UNHCR piloted a project in Egypt, Jordan, Lebanon and Syria, aimed at enhancing a community development approach to protection and assistance operations for refugees, and at mainstreaming age and gender concerns in related activities.

Europe

In 2004, UNHCR's expenditure for activities in Europe totalled $114.2 million, for a population of concern numbering over 5 million. Nearly half of that amount ($52 million) was spent for approximately 1 million persons of concern in South-Eastern Europe.

Western, Central and Eastern Europe

In Western Europe, asylum claims continued to drop markedly, with the 25 EU countries receiving 19 per cent fewer claims than the 288,100 recorded in 2003 [YUN 2003, p. 1239]. The drop, however, was uneven in individual States, and in a number of cases, claims actually increased. In leading asylum destinations, including Germany, the Netherlands, the United Kingdom and Switzerland, claims declined by 30 per cent or more, while in other popular destinations, particularly France, which received the highest number of asylum applications (61,600), a 3 per cent rise in claims was recorded. Applications also increased by some 4 per cent on average for the 10 new EU member States. The largest group of asylum-seekers (30,100) were nationals of the Russian Federation, of whom the majority were reportedly Chechens. Others came from Serbia and Montenegro, particularly the province of Kosovo (22,300); China (19,700); Turkey (16,200); and India (11,900). In April, the first phase of the EU asylum harmonization process was completed with a political agreement on asylum procedures, comprising the establishment of databases and regulations that were designed to determine which EU member State would be responsible for examining asylum applications in another member State and a number of other directives relating to key aspects of asylum/refugee status. In November, EU member States adopted the Hague Programme, which, among other things, set out the parameters for the second phase in developing a common asylum system. While endorsing the initiative, UNHCR encouraged the EU to develop appropriate systems of responsibility/burden sharing in addressing asylum claims and hoped that the special needs of refugees and other persons of concern would be taken into consideration. The Office continued to concentrate on protection and advocacy, focusing on monitoring and commenting on legislative proposals at the national and regional levels. The operational challenges it confronted included more restrictive asylum laws and policies in some regional States, despite the declining number of asylum claims; poor reception and prolonged detention of asylum-seekers; abuse of the asylum procedure; variations in refugee recognition among the regional States; and aspects of the first phase of EU harmonization of the asylum system which might lead to breaches of international law.

In Central Europe and the Baltic States, where asylum claims increased slightly to 43,390 from 43,370 in 2003, the experience of individual countries also differed sharply. Contrary to the situation of Cyprus, which saw a dramatic 124 per cent increase in applications, and of Poland and Slovakia, where significant increases had also occurred, the Czech Republic experienced a 52 per cent decline, while in Bulgaria, Hungary, Lithuania and Romania, asylum applications dropped by over 20 per cent. The Central European countries that acceded to the EU in May 2004 began to enhance their structures and capacities as destination countries for asylum-seekers. UNHCR made considerable progress in strengthening asylum procedures and enhancing relevant skills, which enabled more asylum-seekers to gain access to refugee status determination procedures and helped improve the quality of judicial reviews. Also, as a result of UNHCR's advocacy, NGOs and border guard agencies in 12 regional States were able to collaborate effectively, thereby enhancing their protection role and involvement in border monitoring. Despite the progress made, challenges remained, such as obstacles to the implementation of legislation by some regional States to enhance integration; the tenuous capacity of the new EU member States in the region to manage secondary movements and monitor irregular migration on the Union's eastern border; the tendency in some regional States to detain asylum-seekers; lengthy and cumbersome procedures in processing asylum claims; and the failure of some States to follow the legal procedure in determining the best interests of the child when assigning them to foster care.

In Eastern Europe, despite widespread violence and insecurity linked to the conflict in the Chechnya republic of the Russian Federation, some 19,000 Chechen IDPs returned to their homes during the year, while those left in Ingushetia moved closer to full integration. Other refugees repatriated from Ukraine, Belarus and the Republic of Moldova. Some 400 refugees found solutions through integration in Belarus, as did 255 others in Ukraine. In Georgia, where the international community continued to promote peace in its two breakaway provinces, UNHCR began verifying IDP registration to prepare for voluntary return programmes, should they become viable. The Office also helped to ensure more effective and targeted assistance to Chechen refugees in Georgia's Pankisi Valley region and assisted the displaced and other persons of concern in the Russian Federation's northern Caucasus, Azerbaijan, Armenia and the Republic of Moldova. In May, it held discussions with CIS members, and began a detailed gaps analysis to define areas where further action was needed. The Söderköping process—the regional cross-border cooperation mechanism managed jointly by UNHCR, IOM and the Swedish Migration Board—expanded its activities in helping regional States strengthen asylum, migration, protection and border management. However, ongoing conflicts, particularly in Georgia, and the restructuring of refugee and asylum services in Belarus and Ukraine hampered asylum system development in those countries. An additional source of concern was UNHCR's lack of sufficient funds, which limited its capacity to assist IDPs, particularly in Azerbaijan.

South-Eastern Europe

In South-Eastern Europe, where progress was maintained in securing durable solutions in the Balkans, over 20,000 persons of concern, including 2,400 refugees from abroad, returned to their places of origin in Bosnia and Herzegovina, bringing to over 1 million the total number of those who had returned since the signing of the General Framework Agreement for Peace in Bosnia and Herzegovina [YUN 1995, p. 544]. Others returned to Croatia (over 7,400), Serbia and Montenegro (129) and The former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia (725). UNHCR facilitated the return process, assisted the returnees, and helped to secure alternative options for durable solutions and to strengthen the regional asylum system. In Serbia and Montenegro, UNHCR enhanced its protection activities with the publication of a study, "Analysis of the situation of internally displaced persons from Kosovo: law and practice", which identified areas where action was needed to improve protection for IDPs. Another UNHCR publication facilitated asylum registration in the country. In Serbia itself, the Office helped the authorities provide alternative durable solutions to over 400 refugees and IDPs, and assisted with refugee registration, designed to review refugee status so as to reduce substantially the 275,000 refugees currently in the country. In the Serbian province of Kosovo, where the outbreak of inter-ethnic violence in March displaced some 4,200 ethnic minorities, UNHCR led efforts to provide emergency assistance to those affected. However, the violence and its aftermath, coupled with continuing uncertainties over Kosovo's future status (see p. 404), posed the greatest challenge to UNHCR's activities in Serbia and Montenegro and neighbouring countries, as they hampered minority returns, which fell to some 2,400 in 2004, from 3,800 in 2003. The prospects for finding durable solutions for displaced Kosovars in general were also diminished.

Chapter XIII

Health, food and nutrition

In 2004, the United Nations continued to promote human health, coordinate food aid and food security, and support research in nutrition.

By the end of the year, close to 40 million people were living with the human immunodeficiency virus (HIV) and approximately 3 million died as a result of acquired immune deficiency syndrome (AIDS)-related illnesses. The incidence of malaria showed no evidence of diminishing and tuberculosis infection rates were only reduced by a small margin in most parts of the world. Although stopping the spread of HIV/AIDS, malaria, tuberculosis and other major diseases received political and financial support from donors, annual funding remained short. In an effort to meet the UN Millennium Development Goal of halting and beginning to reverse the spread of HIV/AIDS by 2015, the General Assembly decided to hold a high-level meeting in June 2005 to examine constraints in realizing the commitments set out in the Declaration of Commitment on HIV/AIDS, which was adopted during its twenty-sixth special session in 2001 and served as a blueprint for global action against AIDS. The results of that meeting would, in turn, contribute to the review of progress on the United Nations Millennium Declaration, scheduled for the Assembly's sixtieth session in 2005. The Joint United Nations Programme on HIV/AIDS (UNAIDS), which continued to coordinate UN activities for AIDS prevention and control, sought to address the duplication of effort and fragmentation of resources through the "Three Ones" principle, adopted at a high-level meeting in Washington, D.C. By that principle, the donors gathered at the meeting agreed to coordinate their work, to promote a unified AIDS policy at the country level, and to seek a national evaluation system. The Economic and Social Council requested the United Nations Office of Drugs and Crime (UNODC) to guide Governments in dealing with HIV/AIDS in pre-trial and correctional facilities.

In support of the Decade to Roll Back Malaria in Developing Countries, Particularly in Africa, 2001-2010, the General Assembly called on the international community to commit funds to develop new anti-malarial medicines that were effective against resistant strains of malaria. The Assembly also called for improved global road safety and invited the World Health Organization (WHO) to coordinate road safety issues within the UN system. With regard to tobacco control, the fortieth instrument of ratification for the WHO Framework Convention on Tobacco Control, negotiated among WHO member States more than four years earlier, was deposited in November, enabling the treaty to enter into force in 2005.

The World Food Programme (WFP) delivered 50 per cent of the year's global food aid, reaching 113 million people in 80 countries. The Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations (FAO) continued efforts to implement the Plan of Action adopted at the 1996 World Food Summit, which called on the international community to fulfil the Summit's pledge to halve the number of hungry people by 2015, and cooperated with WHO, among others, to tackle the current outbreak of avian influenza.

HealthFollow-up to Millennium Summit

The Secretary-General, in response to General Assembly resolution 56/95 [YUN 2001, p. 1279], submitted in August [A/59/282 & Corr.1] the third annual report on progress achieved by the UN system and Member States in implementing the Millennium Development Goals (MDGs) [YUN 2000, p. 51]. With regard to progress in achieving the goal on health, specifically to halve by 2015 the number of new cases of certain diseases, the Secretary-General noted that the number of new HIV/AIDS infections was higher than ever before, raising concerns about development prospects in the affected regions. The prevalence of infection declined in countries where prevention, testing and control programmes had been adopted, notably in Uganda; nevertheless, interventions continued to fall short, particularly in sub-Saharan Africa. The incidence of malaria showed no evidence of diminishing, and once again, sub-Saharan Africa was the most affected area. Tuberculosis infection rates were also on the increase in that region, and they had only been reduced by a small margin in most other regions.

Global health was threatened by outbreaks of new and re-emerging diseases. To respond to such threats, WHO and UN partners worked with Governments, particularly in least developed countries, to improve the preparedness of national health systems through capacity-building, exchange of information, and building up laboratory and epidemiological capacity.

At the global level, new initiatives, such as the Global Outbreak Alert and the Response Network, established in 2000 by WHO, were bringing more than 120 partners together to provide timely, high-quality technical support. It had become clear that WHO International Health Regulations, which served as a global regulatory framework for addressing global health security and epidemic alert and response, needed to adapt to the health challenges of the twenty-first century.

Although stopping the spread of HIV/AIDS, malaria, tuberculosis and other major diseases had received greater political and financial support from donors, annual funding remained short of the estimated $12 billion needed in 2005, and the $20 billion for 2006. Though spending on HIV/AIDS more than doubled in 2003, national commitment remained inadequate to effect any major global success. The report also noted that in almost no country had the spread of HIV/AIDS been definitely stopped, and there was no region where HIV/AIDS was not a potential serious threat to the population.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 23 November [meeting 60], the General Assembly adopted resolution 59/27 [draft: A/59/L.30 & Add.1, orally revised] without vote [agenda item 55].

Enhancing capacity-building in global public health

The General Assembly,

Recalling the United Nations Millennium Declaration, adopted by Heads of State and Government at the Millennium Summit of the United Nations, and the development goals contained therein, in particular the health-related development goals, and its resolutions 55/162 of 14 December 2000, 56/95 of 14 December 2001, 57/144 of 16 December 2002 and 58/3 of 27 October 2003,

Recalling also World Health Assembly resolutions 48.13 of 12 May 1995, 54.14 of 21 May 2001 and 56.28 and 56.29 of 28 May 2003,

Taking note of the report of the Secretary-General on the implementation of the Millennium Declaration,

Recognizing that Member States have to strengthen their efforts to halt and begin to reverse, by 2015, the spread of HIV/AIDS and the incidence of malaria and other major diseases,

Reaffirming its Declaration of Commitment on HIV/AIDS,

Recognizing that the globalization of trade and increased international travel have increased the risk of a rapid worldwide spread of infectious diseases, posing new challenges to public health,

Noting with concern the deleterious impact on humankind of HIV/AIDS, tuberculosis, malaria and other major infectious diseases and epidemics, and the heavy disease burden borne by poor people, especially in developing countries, including the least developed countries, as well as countries with economies in transition, and in this regard noting with appreciation the work of the Joint United Nations Programme on HIV/AIDS, its co-sponsoring agencies and the Global Fund to Fight AIDS, Tuberculosis and Malaria, and the holding of the XV International AIDS Conference in Bangkok, from 11 to 16 July 2004, with the theme of "Access for all" in respect of people living with HIV/AIDS,

Also noting with concern the recent outbreak of avian influenza, recognizing its impact on human health as well as on the economy, and welcoming the Joint Ministerial Statement on the Current Poultry Disease Situation,

Welcoming the current success of the affected countries in combating the severe acute respiratory syndrome, which illustrates the importance of political commitment and strong leadership by affected countries and the role of the World Health Organization in controlling such epidemics, while mindful of the fact that the fight against new and re-emerging diseases such as the severe acute respiratory syndrome and avian influenza is far from over,

Noting new initiatives at the global level responding to public health threats, such as the Global Outbreak Alert and the Response Network, which brings together more than one hundred and twenty partners to provide timely and high-quality technical support,

Convinced that strengthening public health systems is critical to the development of all Member States, and that economic and social development are enhanced through measures that strengthen capacity-building in public health, including systems of prevention and of immunization against infectious diseases,

Emphasizing that Member States have primary responsibility for strengthening their capacity-building in public health to detect and respond rapidly to outbreaks of major infectious diseases, through the establishment and improvement of effective public health mechanisms, while recognizing that the magnitude of the necessary response may be beyond the capabilities of many developing countries,

Convinced that the control of outbreaks of diseases, particularly new diseases whose origins remain unknown, requires international and regional cooperation, and noting in this regard, inter alia, the holding of the fifty-fifth session of the World Health Organization Regional Committee for the Western Pacific in Shanghai, China, from 13 to 17 September 2004,

Recognizing the need for greater international and regional cooperation to meet new and existing challenges to public health, in particular in promoting effective measures such as safe, affordable and accessible vaccines, as well as assisting developing countries in securing vaccines against preventable infectious diseases and supporting the development of new vaccines,

Recognizing also the expertise of the World Health Organization and its role in, inter alia, coordinating actions with Member States in the areas of information exchange, personnel training, technical support, resource utilization, the improvement of global public health preparedness and response mechanisms and stimulating and advancing work on the prevention, control and eradication of epidemic, endemic and other diseases, as well as the work of the World Health Organization office dedicated to communicable disease surveillance and response,

Underscoring the continued importance of the International Health Regulations as an instrument for ensuring the maximum possible protection against the international spread of diseases with minimum interference in international traffic, and urging Member States to give high priority to the work on the revision of the Regulations,

Welcoming the efforts of the World Health Organization, in cooperation with Member States, the United Nations system, the Bretton Woods institutions, the private sector and civil society, in enhancing capacity-building in global public health and in promoting public health at the country level,

Welcoming also the Doha Declaration on the Agreement on Trade-Related Aspects of Intellectual Property Rights and Public Health, adopted on 14 November 2001, and noting the decision of the World Trade Organization General Council of 30 August 2003 on the implementation of paragraph 6 of the Declaration,

Recognizing the need to strengthen national health and social infrastructures to reinforce measures to eliminate discrimination in access to public health, information and education for all people, and especially for the most underserved and vulnerable groups,

1. Urges Member States to further integrate public health into their national economic and social development strategies, including through the establishment and improvement of effective public health mechanisms, in particular networks of disease surveillance, response, control, prevention, treatment and information exchange and the recruitment and training of national public health personnel;

2. Calls upon Member States and the international community to raise awareness of good public health practices, including through education and the mass media;

3. Emphasizes the importance of active international cooperation in the control of infectious diseases, based on the principles of mutual respect and equality, with a view to strengthening capacity-building in public health, especially in developing countries, including through the exchange of information and the sharing of experience, as well as research and training programmes focusing on surveillance, prevention, control, response, and care and treatment in respect of infectious diseases, and vaccines against them;

4. Calls for the improvement of the global public health preparedness and response systems, including systems of prevention and monitoring of infectious diseases, to better cope with major diseases, including in cases of global outbreaks of new diseases;

5. Encourages Member States to participate actively in the verification and validation of surveillance data and information concerning public health emergencies of international concern and, in close collaboration with the World Health Organization, to exchange information and experience in a timely and open manner on epidemics and the prevention and control of emerging and re-emerging infectious diseases that pose a risk to global public health;

6. Invites the regional commissions of the Economic and Social Council, as appropriate, to cooperate closely with Member States, the private sector and civil society, when requested, in their capacity-building in public health, as well as in regional cooperation to diminish and eliminate the deleterious impact of major infectious diseases;

7. Encourages Member States, as well as United Nations agencies, bodies, funds and programmes, in accordance with their respective mandates, to continue to address public health concerns in their development activities and programmes, and to actively support capacity-building in global public health and health-care institutions, such as through the provision of technical and other relevant assistance to the developing countries, as well as countries with economies in transition;

8. Requests the Secretary-General to include observations on the issue of enhancing capacity-building in global public health in his report on the follow-up to the outcome of the Millennium Summit of the United Nations to be submitted to the General Assembly at its sixtieth session.

AIDS prevention and control

Follow-up to the twenty-sixth special session

The Declaration of Commitment on HIV/AIDS, adopted at the twenty-sixth special session of the General Assembly by resolution S-26/2 [YUN 2001, p. 1126], called for an expanded global response to the epidemic and established time-bound targets relating to HIV/AIDS prevention, care and treatment, and impact alleviation for those made vulnerable by the disease. The special session's participants pledged to devote at least one full day of the Assembly's annual session to review progress on the Declaration's implementation. Accordingly, the fifty-eighth session of the General Assembly held a day-long, high-level review on 22 September 2003 [YUN 2003, p. 1244], and in resolution 58/236 [ibid., p. 1245], it requested the Secretary-General to report on progress. On 1 July 2004, the Assembly, in resolution 58/313 (below), decided that the next high-level review would be held on 2 June 2005.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 1 July [meeting 92], the General Assembly adopted resolution 58/313 [draft: A/58/L.65] without vote [agenda item 47].

Organizational arrangements for the high-level meeting to review the progress achieved in realizing the commitments set out in the Declaration of Commitment on HIV/AIDS

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution S-26/2 of 27 June 2001, entitled "Declaration of Commitment on HIV/AIDS", in which it decided to devote sufficient time and at least one full day of the annual session of the General Assembly to review and debate a report of the Secretary-General,

Bearing in mind that the Declaration of Commitment contains time-bound commitments to be met by 2005, and noting that more complete data on fulfilment of the 2005 targets will be available for comprehensive review in 2006,

Recalling that in its resolution 58/236 of 23 December 2003, entitled "Follow-up to the outcome of the twenty-sixth special session: implementation of the Declaration of Commitment on HIV/AIDS", the General Assembly decided to hold a high-level meeting in 2005 to review the progress achieved in realizing the commitments set out in the Declaration of Commitment, and decided also that the scheduling, format, participation, including civil society participation, and other organizational details would be further considered during the fifty-eighth session of the General Assembly,

Recalling also its resolution 58/291 of 6 May 2004 entitled "Follow-up to the outcome of the Millennium Summit and integrated and coordinated implementation of and follow-up to the outcomes of the major United Nations conferences and summits in the economic and social fields",

1. Decides that the high-level meeting to review the progress achieved in realizing the commitments set out in the Declaration of Commitment on HIV/AIDS will be convened on 2 June 2005 and will have a technical focus with the aim of identifying the level of progress achieved, problems and constraints facing the full realization of those commitments and the prospects for achieving them and for sharing best practices;

2. Decides also that the review will, inter alia, contribute to the high-level plenary meeting, to be held in New York at the commencement of the sixtieth session of the General Assembly in 2005, to undertake a comprehensive review of the progress made in the fulfilment of all the commitments contained in the United Nations Millennium Declaration, including the internationally agreed development goals and the global partnership required for their achievement, and of the progress made in the integrated and coordinated implementation of the major United Nations conferences and summits in the economic, social and related fields;

3. Decides further that the organizational arrangements for the high-level meeting will be as follows:

(a) The high-level meeting will comprise opening and closing plenary meetings and interactive round tables covering areas related to the implementation of the Declaration of Commitment, particularly prevention, treatment, care and support, human rights including gender, orphans and resources;

(b) The opening plenary meeting will set the stage for the subsequent discussions and feature statements by the President of the General Assembly, the Secretary-General and the Executive Director of the Joint United Nations Programme on HIV/AIDS;

(c) A representative nominated by each of the five regional groups will chair each round table, with the support of the executive heads of the co-sponsoring agencies of the Joint Programme;

(d) In addition to Member States, observers, representatives of the entities of the United Nations system, non-governmental organizations in consultative status with the Economic and Social Council and non-governmental members of the Programme Coordinating Board of the Joint Programme, invitations to the round tables will be extended to the Global Fund to Fight AIDS, Tuberculosis and Malaria and not more than fifteen civil society representatives of international, national or community organizations, including those representing and working for people living with HIV/AIDS, and the private sector, including pharmaceutical companies. The President of the General Assembly, following appropriate consultations with Member States, will draw up a list of those civil society representatives, on the basis of the recommendations of the Joint Programme and taking into account the principle of geographical representation, and will submit the list to Member States for consideration on a no-objection basis for a final decision by the Assembly on participation;

(e) In order to ensure interactive and substantive discussions of high quality, participation in each round table will be limited to a maximum of forty to forty-five participants;

(f) Every effort will be made to ensure equitable geographical representation in each round table, while taking into account the importance of ensuring a mix of countries in terms of size, HIV prevalence rates and levels of development;

(g) Participation of Member States and observers will be limited to one round table, and each Member State representative may be accompanied by two advisers;

(h) Participation by accredited and invited civil society representatives will be limited to one round table, and participation will not exceed five representatives in each round table;

(i) The Chairmen of the round tables will submit summaries to the President of the General Assembly reflecting the views expressed during the discussions;

(j) The President of the General Assembly will present the summaries of the round-table discussions to the closing plenary meeting, and they will be submitted to the 2005 high-level event planned in pursuance of resolution 58/291;

4. Decides that the arrangements outlined in paragraph 3 (d) above shall in no way create a precedent for other similar events;

5. Decides also that the President of the General Assembly, with support from the Joint United Nations Programme on HIV/AIDS and in consultation with Member States, will finalize the details and scheduling of the round tables, several of which are expected to take place concurrently, and any outstanding organizational matters.

On 23 December, the Assembly, by decision 59/552, decided that the item on the follow-up to the outcome of the twenty-sixth special session and implementation of the Declaration of Commitment on HIV/AIDS would remain for consideration at its resumed fifty-ninth (2005) session.

Global Media AIDS Initiative. More than 20 of the world's leading media executives and producers joined the Global Media AIDS Initiative (GMAI), launched by the Secretary-General on 15 January, with the goal of mobilizing the media around the world in the HIV/AIDS response. The UN Headquarters meeting was held by the Joint

United Nations Programme on HIV/AIDS (UNAIDS), the UN Department of Public Information and the Kaiser Family Foundation, with additional support from the Bill and Melinda Gates Foundation. Members of the Initiative made commitments to integrate HIV messaging into television programming, give air time and page space to the issue, put in place HIV policies and training for staff, and establish a formal corporate position on the commitments.

Fifteenth International AIDS Conference. On 13 July, GMAI was showcased at the International AIDS Society's Fifteenth International AIDS Conference (Bangkok, Thailand, 11-16 July), a biennial meeting organized in part by UNAIDS. Also at the Conference, the International Labour Organization (ILO) launched a report, "HIV/AIDS and work: Global estimates, impact and response 2004", to be issued biennially as part of its programme on HIV/AIDS and the world of work.

IASC Task Force. During the year, the Inter-Agency Standing Committee (IASC) Task Force on HIV/AIDS in Emergency Settings, formally established by the IASC working group in 2002 as a reference group [YUN 2002, p. 1220], published its guidelines for HIV/AIDS interventions in emergency situations. Designed to help Governments and cooperating agencies give the minimum required multisectoral response to HIV/AIDS during the early phase of an emergency situation, the guidelines contained a planning and response matrix incorporating various sectors: co-ordination; assessment and monitoring; protection; water and sanitation; food security and nutrition; shelter and site planning; health; education; communication behaviour change; and HIV/AIDS in the workplace. As a Task Force member, the United Nations Population Fund (UNFPA) collaborated in the development and field-testing of the guidelines.

Economic and Social Council. On 21 July, the Economic and Social Council, in resolution 2004/35 (see p. 1137) on combating the spread of HIV/AIDS in criminal justice pre-trial and correctional facilities, requested UNODC to analyse the situation of HIV/AIDS in pre-trial and correctional facilities with a view to providing programmatic and policy guidance to Governments. Appropriate training for managers and wardens of pre-trial and correctional facilities was also suggested as part of the effort to combat the spread of the disease in those facilities.

Joint UN Programme on HIV/AIDS

UNAIDS, which became fully operational in 1996 [YUN 1996, p. 1121] and served as the main advocate for global action on HIV/AIDS, had ten cosponsors: UNFPA, UNODC, the United Nations Children's Fund (UNICEF), the United Nations Development Programme (UNDP), the United Nations Office of the High Commissioner for Refugees (UNHCR), ILO, the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization (UNESCO), the World Food Programme (WFP), the World Health Organization (WHO) and the World Bank. UNAIDS was mandated to lead, strengthen and support an expanded response to the epidemic, with the aim of preventing the transmission of HIV, providing care and support, reducing the vulnerability of individuals and communities to HIV/AIDS, and alleviating the impact of the epidemic.

Trends

According to UNAIDS, at the end of 2004, close to 40 million people were living with HIV and approximately 3 million died during the year as a result of AIDS-related illnesses. Of those with HIV, 37 million were adults and just over 2 million were children under the age of 15. The number of new infections during the year was estimated at 5 million.

The epidemic continued to expand in sub-Saharan Africa, where an estimated 3 million people became infected in 2004 and roughly 2 million Africans died of the disease. The number of people living with HIV in that region was estimated to be over 25 million. However, some countries in East Africa showed signs of declines in HIV infection levels, in particular Uganda, where national adult HIV prevalence fell from 13 per cent in the early 1990s to 4 per cent by the end of 2003. In Asia, roughly 1 million people became infected during 2004, and just over 8 million people were living with HIV. East Asia experienced the fastest-growing epidemic, mainly due to the high rate of infection in China, where the estimated number of people living with HIV—840,000 in 2004—could grow to 10 million by 2010 if no immediate action was taken. India's national adult HIV prevalence rate was estimated at less than 1 per cent, or 5 million people. In Cambodia and Thailand, where large-scale prevention programmes had addressed sexual transmission of HIV, there were declining levels of new HIV infections. Although Oceania had low levels of infection, Papua New Guinea's high prevalence rate elicited concern; an estimated 16,000 out of 2.6 million adults were living with HIV at the beginning of the year. In the Middle East and North Africa, an estimated 92,000 people acquired the virus in 2004, bringing the total number of people living with HIV to 540,000. In Eastern Europe and Central Asia, 1.4 million people were living with HIV, of whom more than 80 per cent were under 30 years of age. An estimated 210,000 people became infected and 60,000 died of AIDS. In Latin America, around 1.7 million people were living with HIV, with 240,000 new infections and 95,000 deaths during the year. The Caribbean had the second highest rate of HIV prevalence among the world's regions, at 2.3 per cent, with 440,000 people living with the virus and some 53,000 newly infected.

In high-income countries—where 65,000 people became infected and an estimated 1.6 million people lived with HIV—antiretroviral therapy had reduced AIDS-related mortality and led to a decline in the number of reported deaths. Demographic data showed heterosexual transmission increasing sharply in those countries, coupled with a progressive shift of the epidemic into poorer and marginalized sectors of the community.

The growing feminization of AIDS continued in 2004, largely as a consequence of the low social, economic and legal status of women in many countries. While women made up 41 per cent of adults living with the virus in 1998, that number increased to 50 per cent during 2004. The ratio tilted further towards women in the Caribbean (52 per cent) and in Africa (58 per cent). Male-to-female transmission during sex was about twice as likely to occur as female-to-male. Among people younger than 24, girls and young women made up nearly two thirds of those living with HIV. Inadequate knowledge about AIDS, insufficient access to HIV prevention services, inability to negotiate safer sex, and a lack of female-controlled prevention methods, such as microbicides, heightened women's vulnerability to the virus.

UNAIDS activities

As a vehicle for addressing the growing feminization of the AIDS epidemic, UNAIDS launched the Global Coalition on Women and AIDS (2 February, London), a network of civil society groups, Governments, UN agencies and concerned citizens, to focus on HIV prevention for women and girls, promoting access to treatment and prevention, protecting women's property and inheritance rights, and reducing violence against women. The Coalition was highlighted in the Secretary-General's message on International Women's Day (8 March), which carried the theme "Women and HIV/AIDS".

UNAIDS, joined by UNICEF and WHO, organized a ministerial conference on "Breaking the Barriers—Partnership to Fight HIV/AIDS in Europe and Central Asia" (Dublin, Ireland, 23-24 February), which was co-hosted by Development Cooperation Ireland and Ireland's Department of Health and Children. Concerned about the high number of HIV infections in Europe and Central Asia, participants, in the conference's Dublin Declaration, agreed on ways to accelerate the implementation of the UN Declaration of Commitment on HIV/AIDS.

Two months later, UNAIDS, the United Kingdom and the United States co-hosted a high-level meeting (Washington, D.C., 25 April), at which key donors endorsed the "Three Ones"—a single strategy for planning and promoting three principles: one agreed HIV/AIDS action framework to coordinate the work of all partners; one national AIDS coordinating authority with a broad-based multisectoral mandate; and one agreed country-level monitoring and evaluation system. The intent was to optimize coordination, reduce duplication of effort, achieve the most efficient use of resources and ensure rapid action and results-based management.

At its fifteenth meeting, the UNAIDS Programme Coordinating Board (PCB) (Geneva, 23-24 June) [DP/2004/CRP.9] endorsed the UNAIDS decision to include activities of the "Three Ones" in the Programme's 2006-2007 unified budget and work plan [UNAIDS/PCB(15)/04.4]. The Board also supported UNAIDS' development of a revitalized prevention strategy, incorporating prevention, treatment and impact alleviation, in particular stigma and discrimination, with a clear link to sexual and reproductive health and basic health services. It agreed with the bid to include the UNAIDS Country Coordinator in the UN country team to implement joint programming. The Board urged UNAIDS to promote discussions within countries to propose legislation against discrimination, and to provide assistance to countries that wished to declare HIV and AIDS a health emergency. In addition, the Board supported UNAIDS efforts to strengthen policy work and country analysis generating aggregate indicators and plans to address the problems of insufficient institutional and human resources of countries to respond to the epidemic.

At its sixteenth meeting and thematic session (Montego Bay, Jamaica, 14-15 December) [DP/2005/40], the Board focused on the growth of the AIDS epidemic in the Caribbean; discussed the theme of women, gender and AIDS; and reviewed the unified budget and work plan. It urged UNAIDS to play a leading role in making the "Three Ones" a reality, and it requested UNAIDS to ensure that the prevention strategy was based on evidence, integrated with global and national prevention, care and treatment initiatives, and grounded in a human-rights approach that addressed the needs of those at risk of HIV exposure.

UNDP/UNFPA consideration. In following up key decisions taken at the fourteenth PCB meeting in June 2003 [YUN 2003, p. 1248], both UNDP [DP/2004/13] and UNFPA [DP/FPA/2004/5] issued reports on their responses and implementation of the PCB recommendations. UNDP described its interventions in the areas of technical support at the country level, financial and technical resources, addressing the feminization of the epidemic, HIV/AIDS and food insecurity, combating stigma and discrimination, development of country-level leadership, and support to vulnerable groups, among others. For its part, UNFPA reported on activities in the areas of improving focus at the country level, scaling up national responses, addressing the feminization of the disease, increased access to affordable preventive commodities, responding to the crisis in southern Africa, intensified action in Asia and the Pacific, tracking resource flows, accessing resources, and improving management and performance monitoring. The UNDP/UNFPA Executive Board, on 30 January [E/2004/35 (dec. 2004/5)], welcomed the UNDP and UNFPA reports as a step towards a more consistent UN system response to the pandemic and requested them to provide more detailed information in their annual reports on how the two organizations would act on the PCB recommendations.

Consequently, UNDP [DP/2004/CRP.9] and UNFPA [DP/FPA/2004/CRP.6] submitted further reports in September on implementing the PCB recommendations, providing details of their activities in numerous countries. UNDP, for example, described its leadership development programmes for action on the epidemic in Botswana, Cambodia, the Dominican Republic, Ethiopia, Ghana, Haiti, India, Malaysia, Nepal, South Africa, Senegal, Swaziland and Ukraine, and a regional leadership development programme for six Caribbean countries. In addressing the needs of women and girls, UNFPA, while supporting the ABC approach for HIV prevention—abstinence, be faithful and condom use—had found that it was not always a viable option, and it continued to strengthen national capacities to provide reproductive health services.

Taking note of the reports, the Executive Board, on 24 September [dec. 2004/40], urged the two agencies to continue to strengthen the UNAIDS partnership, especially at the country level, thereby contributing to a comprehensive response to HIV/AIDS. The agencies were also urged to ensure the inclusion of the UNAIDS country coordinator as a member of the UN country team and to develop an outcome-oriented format for their annual reports on HIV/AIDS activities to PCB, in cooperation with the UNAIDS secretariat and other co-sponsors. The Board recognized the importance of the “Three Ones” framework as a framework for coordinating the work of all partners.

HIV/AIDS and food security

The High-level Committee on Programmes (HLCP) of the United Nations System Chief Executives Board for Coordination (CEB), at its seventh session (Beirut, Lebanon, 26-27 February) [CEB/2004/4], discussed the UN system’s response to the linked threats of HIV/AIDS, food security and governance. An ad hoc inter-agency task group led by UNAIDS and WFP had prepared a framework, endorsed by CEB at its September 2003 session [YUN 2003, p. 1250], to guide the response. The process was led by the United Nations Development Group (UNDG) in coordination with IASC and in consultation with the Regional Inter-Agency Coordination and Support Office. CEB called on its members to provide the necessary support to carry out the measures recommended by the task group.

The UNDG Chairman (also the Administrator of UNDP) continued to lead the process for ensuring implementation of the measures at the country level, especially through UN representatives in countries of the Southern African Development Community, where special focal points were established to work closely with UNAIDS and WFP. At UNDG’s request, the twenty-third meeting of the UNAIDS Committee of Co-sponsoring Organizations (CCO) (Zambia, 1-4 March), attended by a wide group of UNDG members, discussed implementation, monitoring and follow-up. The CCO meeting endorsed UNDG instructions to the UN country teams, and began assessing the country teams’ capacities to implement the recommendations. Joint missions would review CEB recommendations and decisions with all country teams and make proposals on how best to support them, including the mobilization of resources to meet capacity gaps, the development of reform pilot initiatives, and the organization of a Regional Director’s meeting to report on progress.

At its eighth session (Florence, Italy, 15-17 September) [CEB/2004/7], HLCP noted the summary prepared by UNAIDS entitled “Review of the United Nations progress on the ‘triple threat’ of food insecurity, weakened capacities for governance and AIDS in eastern and southern Africa” [CEB/2004/HLCP/VIII/CRP.6/Add.3], as well as its update on the fifteenth International Conference on AIDS (Bangkok, Thailand, 11-16 July).

Tobacco

The World Health Assembly unanimously adopted the WHO Framework Convention on Tobacco Control (FCTC) in 2003 [YUN 2003, p. 1251], with WHO as the interim secretariat. Negotiated among WHO members States for over four years, the Convention committed States parties to eliminating tobacco advertising, promotion and sponsorship within five years; requiring warning labels on cigarette packs; prohibiting misleading tobacco product descriptors such as “light” and “mild”; and protecting non-smokers from tobacco smoke in public places. The Convention urged strict regulation of tobacco product contents, higher tobacco taxes, global coordination to fight tobacco smuggling, and promotion of tobacco prevention, cessation and research programmes. On 29 November 2004, Peru deposited the fortieth instrument of ratification, enabling the treaty to enter into force in February 2005. As at 31 December 2004, there were 49 parties to the Convention. Pursuant to a World Health Assembly resolution [WHA56.1], the first session of the Open-ended Intergovernmental Working Group on the Framework Convention took place in Geneva (21-25 June) to prepare for the first session of the Conference of the Parties (Geneva, 6-17 February 2006).

Ad Hoc Inter-Agency Task Force

In accordance with Economic and Social Council decision 2002/242 [YUN 2002, p. 1222], the Secretary-General submitted an April report [E/2004/55] on progress made by the Ad Hoc Inter-Agency Task Force on Tobacco Control, established under the leadership of WHO in 1999 [YUN 1999, p. 1151]. The report linked tobacco with the adverse impact on health, economic development, poverty, malnutrition, education and environment. It stressed that tobacco control should be recognized as a factor in poverty reduction and the achievement of the MDGs. Tobacco-related diseases had a negative impact on labour productivity, while illicit trade and aggressive marketing only led to increased production and consumption of tobacco products. The report recommended that UNDG nurture collaboration between Government agencies to implement the Framework Convention at the country level, and that tobacco control be included on the agendas of regional commissions.

At the sixth session (Geneva, 30 November) of the Task Force, co-hosted by ILO and WHO, participants discussed smoke-free workplaces, the illicit trade of tobacco products, the link between tobacco control and economic development, and preparations for FCTC implementation in member countries.

ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL ACTION

On 23 July [meeting 51], the Economic and Social Council adopted resolution 2004/62 [draft: E/2004/L.49] without vote [agenda item 7 (h)].

Tobacco control

The Economic and Social Council,

Noting with profound concern the escalation in smoking and other forms of tobacco use worldwide,

Recognizing the adverse impact of tobacco consumption on public health, as well as its social, economic and environmental consequences, including for efforts towards poverty alleviation,

Acknowledging that tobacco control at all levels, particularly in developing countries and in countries with economies in transition, requires financial and technical resources commensurate with the current and projected need for tobacco control activities,

Recognizing the need for strong political commitment, at all levels, for effective tobacco control, consistent with the provisions of the World Health Organization Framework Convention on Tobacco Control,

Mindful of the social and economic difficulties that tobacco control programmes may engender in the medium and long term in some developing countries and countries with economies in transition, and recognizing their need for technical and financial assistance in the context of nationally developed strategies for sustainable development,

Noting with appreciation the report of the Secretary-General on the activities of the Ad Hoc Inter-Agency Task Force on Tobacco Control, Welcoming the adoption, by consensus, of the Framework Convention by the fifty-sixth World Health Assembly,

Emphasizing the need for the expeditious entry into force of the Framework Convention and its effective implementation,

1. Calls upon Member States that have not yet done so to consider ratifying, accepting, approving or acceding to the World Health Organization Framework Convention on Tobacco Control at the earliest opportunity, with a view to bringing it into force as soon as possible;

2. Urges Member States to strengthen tobacco control measures;

3. Calls upon the relevant United Nations agencies, funds and programmes, and invites other relevant international organizations, to continue to provide support for strengthening national and international tobacco control programmes;

4. Requests the Secretary-General to submit a report on the work of the Ad Hoc Inter-Agency Task Force on Tobacco Control to the Economic and Social Council at its substantive session of 2006.

Roll Back Malaria initiative

In an August report [A/59/261], the Secretary-General provided an update prepared by WHO of the implementation of General Assembly resolution 57/294 [YUN 2002, p. 1223] on the Decade to Roll Back Malaria in Developing Countries, Particularly in Africa (2001-2010), which was proclaimed by the Assembly in resolution 55/284 [YUN 2001, p. 1139]. The report analysed the problem of increased resistance to conventional anti-malarial medicines, discussed alternative treatments and the continuing effectiveness of insecticide-treated nets, and highlighted efforts to reduce the impact of malaria on pregnant women and infants through intermittent preventive treatments during pregnancy. While noting that WHO had recommended a change in the treatment policy for malaria, the report remarked on significant problems, mainly relating to the lack of resources that prevented the widespread use of newer, more effective treatments. Describing malaria as preventable, treatable and curable, the report called on the international community to expand access to new treatments for populations at risk of falciparum malaria in Africa, to support development of new medicines and insecticides for malaria control and to improve the monitoring of interventions.

The Roll Back Malaria Partnership (RBM), founded by WHO in 1998 [YUN 1998, p. 1384] with the goal of halving the world's malaria burden by 2010, was restructured in 2002 to include a Partnership Board, a secretariat and thematic working groups. The Board oversaw the work of RBM, and brought together parties at the country-level involved with scaling up malaria control efforts. The secretariat took charge of partnership development and networking, country support development, communication and advocacy, and resource mobilization and financing. Thematic groups were used to establish consensus on best practices for increasing use of insecticide-treated nets, malaria treatment during pregnancy, and other areas, while the Monitoring and Evaluation Reference Group—established in 2003 [YUN 2003, p. 1251] and co-chaired by WHO and UNICEF—developed a malaria indicator survey for use at the country level.

The report concluded that major advances in malaria control could be rapidly achieved in many countries using existing tools; however, more resources were required from Governments to achieve that end. For Africa alone, only one quarter of the $2 billion per year needed to combat malaria had been made available. The report recommended that the General Assembly call upon the international community to commit new funds and establish innovative financial and procurement mechanisms for the cause.

On 23 December [meeting 76], the General Assembly adopted resolution 59/256 [draft: A/59/L.56 & Add.1] without vote [agenda item 46].

2001-2010: Decade to Roll Back Malaria in Developing Countries, Particularly in Africa

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 49/135 of 19 December 1994, 50/128 of 20 December 1995, 55/284 of 7 September 2001, 57/294 of 20 December 2002 and 58/237 of 23 December 2003 concerning the struggle against malaria in developing countries, particularly in Africa,

Bearing in mind the relevant resolutions of the Economic and Social Council relating to the struggle against malaria and diarrhoeal diseases, in particular resolution 1998/36 of 30 July 1998,

Taking note of the declarations and decisions on health issues adopted by the Organization of African Unity, in particular the declaration and plan of action on the "Roll Back Malaria" initiative adopted at the Extraordinary Summit of Heads of State and Government of the Organization of African Unity, held in Abuja on 24 and 25 April 2000, as well as decision AHG/Dec.155(XXXVI) concerning the implementation of that declaration and plan of action, adopted by the Assembly of Heads of State and Government of the Organization of African Unity at its thirty-sixth ordinary session, held in Lomé from 10 to 12 July 2000,

Also taking note of the Maputo Declaration on Malaria, HIV/AIDS, Tuberculosis and Other Related Infectious Diseases, adopted by the Assembly of the African Union at its second ordinary session, held in Maputo from 10 to 12 July 2003,

Recognizing the linkages in efforts being made to reach the targets set at the Abuja Summit as necessary and important for the attainment of the "Roll Back Malaria" goal and the targets of the United Nations Millennium Declaration by 2010 and 2015, respectively,

Also recognizing the urgent need for scaling up national malaria control programmes if African countries are to meet the intermediate target set by the Abuja Summit for the five-year period 2000-2005,

Further recognizing that malaria-related ill health and deaths throughout the world can be eliminated with political commitment and commensurate resources if the public is educated and sensitized about malaria and appropriate health services are made available, particularly in countries where the disease is endemic,

Emphasizing the importance of implementing the Millennium Declaration, and welcoming in this connection the commitment of Member States to respond to the specific needs of Africa,

Commending the efforts of the World Health Organization, the United Nations Children's Fund and other partners to fight malaria over the years, including the launching of the Roll Back Malaria Partnership in 1998,

1. Takes note of the note by the Secretary-General transmitting the report of the World Health Organization, and calls for support for the recommendations contained therein;

2. Calls upon the international community to continue to support the "Roll Back Malaria" partner organizations, including the World Health Organization and the United Nations Children's Fund, as vital complementary sources of support for the efforts of malaria-endemic countries to combat the disease;

3. Appeals to the international community to ensure increased support for bilateral and multilateral assistance to combat malaria, including support for the Global Fund to Fight AIDS, Tuberculosis and Malaria, in order to assist in the development of sound national plans to control malaria in malaria-endemic countries and their implementation in a sustained and equitable way that, inter alia, contributes to health system development;

4. Urges malaria-endemic countries to increase domestic resource allocation to malaria control;

5. Encourages all African countries that have not yet done so to implement the recommendations of the Abuja Summit to reduce or waive taxes and tariffs for nets and other products needed for malaria control, both to reduce the price of nets to consumers and to stimulate free trade in insecticide-treated nets;

6. Calls upon malaria-endemic countries, in particular those in sub-Saharan Africa, to establish and strengthen policies and programmes to ensure a rapid scale-up in the coverage of insecticide-treated nets to at least 60 per cent of those at risk, wherever the use of such nets is the vector-control method of choice, by applying expeditious approaches, including targeted free or highly subsidized distribution to vulnerable groups;

7. Expresses its concern about the increase in resistant strains of malaria in several regions of the world;

8. Encourages all Member States experiencing resistance to conventional monotherapies to replace them with combination therapies, as recommended by the World Health Organization, in a timely manner;

9. Recognizes the importance of the development of effective vaccines and new medicines to prevent and treat malaria and the need for further and accelerated research, including through effective global partnerships such as the various malaria vaccine initiatives and the Medicines for Malaria Venture, where necessary stimulated by new incentives to secure their development;

10. Reiterates the need for expanded public-private partnerships for malaria control and prevention, and in this context urges petroleum companies operating in Africa to consider providing polymer for the manufacture of mosquito nets at reduced prices as a contribution to rolling back malaria in Africa;

11. Calls upon the international community to support investment in the development of new anti-malarial medicines and insecticides for the effective control of malaria in view of the challenging resistance of the parasite to anti-malarial medicines and the resistance of mosquitoes to insecticides;

12. Also calls upon the international community to support ways to expand access to artemisinin-based combination therapy for populations at risk of exposure to resistant strains of falciparum malaria in Africa, including the commitment of new funds, innovative mechanisms for the financing and national procurement of artemisinin-based combination therapy and the scaling up of artemisinin production to meet the increased need;

13. Further calls upon the international community to support coordinated efforts to improve surveillance, monitoring and evaluation systems so as to better track and report changes in the coverage of recommended "Roll Back Malaria" interventions and subsequent reductions in the burden of malaria;

14. Requests the Secretary-General, in close collaboration with the World Health Organization, the United Nations Children's Fund, developing countries and regional organizations, including the African Union, to conduct in 2005 an evaluation of the measures taken and progress made towards the achievement of the mid-term targets, the means of implementation provided by the international community in this regard and the overall goals of the Decade, and to report thereon to the General Assembly at its sixtieth session;

15. Also requests the Secretary-General to report to the General Assembly at its sixtieth session on the implementation of the present resolution under the agenda item entitled "2001-2010: Decade to Roll Back Malaria in Developing Countries, Particularly in Africa".

Access to medication

On 16 April [E/2004/23 (res. 2004/26)], the Commission on Human Rights, in a resolution on access to medication in the context of pandemics such as HIV/AIDS, tuberculosis and malaria, called on Governments to pursue policies to make pharmaceutical products and medical technologies for treating HIV/AIDS, tuberculosis and malaria available in sufficient quantities for all (see also p. 770). The Commission called upon Governments to refrain from denying or limiting equal access to such products or technologies, and urged them to consider adapting national laws in the light of the World Trade Organization's 2003 decision to support related aspects dealt with in the 2001 Doha Declaration on the Agreement on Trade-Related Aspects of Intellectual Property Rights and Public Health [YUN 2001, p. 1432].

Road safety

Pursuant to General Assembly resolution 57/309 [YUN 2003, p. 1257] on the global road safety crisis, WHO designated road safety as the theme of World Health Day 2004 (7 April), with the slogan "Road safety is no accident". At a World Health Day event in Paris, WHO and the World Bank launched a joint report entitled "World Report on Road Traffic Injury Prevention", highlighting recommendations proven to reduce road-related deaths, including setting and enforcing laws on seat-belts, child restraints, helmets and drunk driving, and promoting daytime running lights and improving road visibility. In addition to enacting laws and raising awareness, countries were urged to formulate policies promoting safer vehicles, traffic management and road design. The report estimated that road traffic crashes had cost $518 billion globally, and predicted that road traffic injuries would become the third largest contributor to the global burden of disease by 2020, putting a strain on health-care budgets worldwide.

Building on the events of World Health Day, and in accordance with resolution 58/9 [YUN 2003, p. 1258], the General Assembly held a plenary meeting on 14 April to raise awareness of the road traffic injury problem and its magnitude. It called for global road safety to be improved and invited WHO to coordinate road safety issues within the UN system (see below).

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 14 April [meeting 84], the General Assembly adopted resolution 58/289 [draft: A/58/L.60/Rev.1] without vote [agenda item 160].

Improving global road safety

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 57/309 of 22 May 2003 and 58/9 of 5 November 2003,

Having considered the report of the Secretary-General on the global road safety crisis,

Noting the recommendation contained in the report of the Secretary-General that a coordinating body be identified within the United Nations system to provide support in this field and the recommendation that the United Nations regional commissions undertake certain activities,

Convinced that responsibility for road safety rests at the local, municipal and national levels,

Recognizing that many developing countries and countries with economies in transition have limited capacities to address these issues, and underlining, in this context, the importance of international cooperation towards further supporting the efforts of developing countries, in particular, to build capacities in the field of road safety, and of providing financial and technical support for their efforts,

Commending the initiative of the Government of France, the World Health Organization and the World Bank in launching the World Report on Road Traffic Injury Prevention in Paris on 7 April 2004, in observance of World Health Day, with the theme "Road safety is no accident", which contains a number of recommendations,

Also commending the United Nations regional commissions and their subsidiary bodies for responding to the above-mentioned resolutions and to the report of the Secretary-General,

1. Takes note of the recommendations contained in the World Report on Road Traffic Injury Prevention,

2. Invites the World Health Organization, working in close cooperation with the United Nations regional commissions, to act as a coordinator on road safety issues within the United Nations system;

3. Requests the Secretary-General, in submitting his report to the General Assembly at its sixtieth session in accordance with resolution 58/9, to draw upon the expertise of the United Nations regional commissions, as well as the World Health Organization and the World Bank;

4. Underlines the need for the further strengthening of international cooperation, taking into account the needs of developing countries, to deal with issues of road safety.

To complement the General Assembly plenary session of 14 April, in which only Member States could participate, a stakeholders' forum was held at UN Headquarters (15 April) where over 100 participants spoke on multisectoral strategies to address the crisis, on behalf of numerous organizations, including public health, transportation and finance organizations; non-governmental organizations, advocacy groups and researchers; international organizations; and the private sector. A report documenting stakeholders' efforts to stimulate action on road safety, entitled "The Global Road Safety Crisis: We Should Do Much More", was submitted to the WHO Executive Director on 1 October.

Inter-agency coordination in health policy

The WHO/UNICEF/UNFPA Coordinating Committee on Health (CCH), established in 1997 [YUN 1997, p. 1255] to coordinate the three agencies' health policies, reported in January 2004 [DP/FPA/2004/CRP.1] to the UNDP/UNFPA Executive Board on its review of its current terms of reference, roles, functions and methods of work, in order to assess its relevance and value. The report outlined the changing dynamics of cooperation in health among the three agencies, highlighting in particular the reforms initiated by the Secretary-General and a range of new collaborative mechanisms used by the organizations at global and country levels. It explored the implications of those developments for the future of CCH in relation to its effectiveness and resource costs, and recommended that CCH be discontinued and that the secretariats of the three organizations continue to strengthen coordination.

On 30 January [E/2004/35 (dec. 2004/11)], the UNDP/UNFPA Executive Board endorsed the recommendation.

Food and agriculture

Food aid

World Food Programme

In July, the Economic and Social Council had before it two reports relating to the World Food Programme (WFP): the annual report of the WFP

Executive Director for 2003 [E/2004/14] and a report of the WFP Executive Board containing the decisions and recommendations of its 2003 sessions [E/2004/36]. By decision 2004/232 of 12 July, the Council took note of those reports.

The WFP Executive Board decided on organizational and programme matters and approved a number of projects at its 2004 sessions [E/2005/36] held in Rome; first regular session (23-26 February), annual session (24-26 May), second regular session (26-27 May) and third regular session (11-14 October). In October, the Board approved the 2005-2006 provisional biennial work programme.

The WFP strategic plan (2004-2007) and biennial management plan (2004-2005), approved by the Board in October 2003 [YUN 2003, p. 1259], established 2004 as the initial year for the Programme to report on achievements under the new governance framework, making WFP's 2004 Annual Performance Report (APR) [WFP/EB.A/2005/4] a major accountability tool and the first to contain results-based reporting under new strategic and management priorities.

According to the 2004 APR, global food aid deliveries amounted to 7.5 million tons in 2004, a decrease of about 27 per cent from the 10.3 million tons delivered in 2003. By year's end, WFP delivered $2.9 billion worth of food aid to 113 million people in 80 countries. The year opened with WFP providing relief to thousands of earthquake victims in Bam, Iran, and as 2005 approached, it was responding to the needs in tsunami-ravaged areas throughout the Indian Ocean region. During the year, it responded to numerous challenges, including those in the Darfur region of the Sudan and Chad, bringing food aid to millions of people displaced by conflict, hunger and extreme poverty. Of the people aided by WFP in 2004, 89 million were women and children, including 8.7 million boys and 7.9 million girls assisted through school feeding programmes. Some 2.8 million beneficiaries were refugees and 6.9 million were internally displaced persons. Nearly 51 per cent of food aid deliveries went to sub-Saharan Africa, 26 per cent to South and East Asia, 9 per cent to Latin America and the Caribbean, 8 per cent to North Africa and the Middle East and 6 per cent to Europe and the Commonwealth of Independent States. Almost 84 per cent of WFP's food deliveries in 2004, excluding food provided for the Iraq bilateral operation, was directed to emergency and protracted relief and recovery operations. The ten largest relief operations delivered emergency food aid to 41 million people in Afghanistan, Bangladesh, Burundi, the Democratic People's Republic of Korea (DPRK), Ethiopia, Indonesia, southern Africa, the Sudan, Uganda and the United Republic of Tanzania. In 21 of the 29 such operations, the prevalence of acute malnutrition declined, as did crude mortality rates in four of nine African operations.

Through its wider development operations to support longer term food security, WFP assisted 24 million people in 52 countries, of whom 94 per cent were in low income food deficit countries.

WFP operations helped to improve the nutrition and health of women, children and other vulnerable people. For example, the proportion of chronically malnourished or stunted children in the DPRK declined from 42 per cent in 2002 to 37 per cent in 2004, with acute malnutrition or wasting declining from 9 to 7 per cent. In Afghanistan, WFP treated nearly 4.5 million children in a de-worming campaign at 8,000 schools. WFP special operations, designed to enhance logistical coordination, provided support to 11 protracted relief and recovery operations and 16 emergency operations in 2004.

Administrative and financial matters

The Executive Boards of UNDP/UNFPA, UNICEF and WFP, at a joint meeting in New York (23-26 January), reviewed the implementation of the declaration adopted by UN regional directors at a meeting in Maputo, Mozambique (July 2003), to accelerate country and regional action on HIV/AIDS in Southern and Eastern Africa and implications for the different UN organizations. The Boards assessed progress on the simplification and harmonization process undertaken by UNDG in June 2002, reviewed the Resident Coordinator Assessment Centre and the function of the Resident Coordinator, and received a briefing on staff security and developments in the UN security management system.

At the World Leaders Meeting on Action Against Hunger and Poverty (New York, 20 September), attended by 50 heads of State and Government, WFP reviewed new ways to finance the fight against hunger and poverty.

Resources and financing

WFP operational expenditures for 2004 amounted to $2.9 billion, a decrease from the previous year's $3.3 billion [WFP/EB.A/2005/4]. Confirmed contributions in 2004 totalled $2.2 billion, also a decrease from the $2.6 billion received the year before. The United States continued to be the largest contributor, providing $1 billion to the Programme. Of the total contributed, $1.1 billion went to the International Emergency Food Reserve, $616 million to protracted relief and recovery operations, $276 million to development activities, $95 million to special operations and $25 million to the Immediate Response Account.

Food security

Follow-up to the 1996 World Food Summit

At its 2004 session in (Rome, 22-27 November), the Council of the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations (FAO) considered a report of the FAO Committee on World Food Security [CFS:2004/3-Rev.1] on the implementation of the Plan of Action adopted at the 1996 World Food Summit [YUN 1996, p. 1129]. The Plan of Action called on countries to halve the number of undernourished people by 2015. According to the report, in 1999-2001, the number of undernourished people in developing countries stood at 798 million—only 19 million below the 1990-1992 estimate. To achieve the 2015 goal, annual reductions of 26 million were required worldwide. While the number of undernourished declined in Asia and the Pacific and Latin America, undernourishment increased in sub-Saharan Africa, the Near East and North Africa. At the national level, the number of undernourished declined in only 19 countries and increased in 26 countries.

The Council agreed with the Committee's decision to hold a multi-stakeholder dialogue during its thirty-first session (2005) to prepare for a Special Forum in 2006 that would review implementation of the Plan of Action [CL 127/10]. It also adopted voluntary guidelines [CFS: 2004/6] developed by the Intergovernmental Working Group for the Elaboration of a Set of Voluntary Guidelines to Support the Progressive Realization of the Right to Adequate Food in the Context of National Food Security, established by the Council in 2002 [YUN 2002, p. 1225].

World Food Day. During the observance of World Food Day 2004 at FAO Headquarters (Rome, Italy, 15 October), which carried the theme "Biodiversity for Food Security", farmers spoke of their experience in enhancing biodiversity and increasing food production in a sustainable way. Addressing the meeting, the FAO Director-General remarked that as agricultural biodiversity declined, the food supply became more vulnerable. Agriculture was less able to adapt to environmental changes, such as global warming or the appearance of new pests and diseases. Farmers' rights to use genetic resources for food and agriculture, to be involved in policy discussions and decision-making, and to use, save, sell and exchange seeds in accordance with national laws were recognized in the Treaty on Plant Genetic Resources for Food and Agriculture, which entered into force on 29 June. The Treaty was approved by FAO Conference resolution 3/2001, adopted in November 2001.

International Year of Rice (2004)

As part of the International Year of Rice 2004, declared by the General Assembly in resolution 57/162 [YUN 2002, p. 1226], FAO convened a two-day international rice conference (Rome, 12-13 February), where experts discussed the challenges faced in the global market for rice and in sustainable rice-based production systems. The strategy of the Year of Rice was to use the Year as a catalyst for country-driven programmes throughout the world. FAO projections showed that, by 2030, total demand for rice would be 38 per cent higher than that of the years 1997 to 1999. More than 50 per cent of the 840 million people suffering from chronic hunger lived in areas dependent on rice production for food, income and employment, while more than 2 billion people in developing nations depended on the rice-based system for their economic livelihood. Because rice did not contain all the elements of a balanced diet, rice producers were encouraged to intensify their system of rice production and their capacity to raise fish and livestock.

Avian influenza

According to FAO, an outbreak of avian influenza occurred in Asia in 2003 and continued in 2004. As a result of the outbreak, FAO estimated that around 20-25 million birds had been culled in the region as at the end of January 2004. That figure accounted for less than one per cent of the region's total inventories. The impact was potentially devastating to local economies and to both commercial poultry operations and small farmers, particularly in Thailand, where the industry was heavily reliant on trade. In 2003, poultry exports from Thailand accounted for nearly 7 per cent of global poultry meat trade, with an export value of approximately $1 billion.

Particularly concerned over the outbreak of avian influenza in East Asia, FAO issued a joint statement with WHO and the World Organization for Animal Health (OIE) in January calling for international collaboration to fight the disease, including a targeted poultry vaccination campaign in affected countries. An agreement to strengthen cooperation in tackling transboundary animal diseases was signed by the FAO and OIE in May. In 2004, FAO provided $1.6 million in emergency assistance to Cambodia, Laos, Pakistan and Viet Nam to combat avian influenza. Research showed that avian influenza viruses did not normally infect species other than birds and pigs, but there were some cases of infection of humans.

Nutrition

Standing Committee on Nutrition

The United Nations System Standing Committee on Nutrition (SCN), at its thirty-first session (New York, 22-26 March), held a symposium on "Nutrition and the Millennium Development Goals", at which participants discussed the links between nutrition and human rights, economics, the environment and health. A presentation on SCN's Fifth Report on the World Nutrition Situation summarized nutrition trends and described how health sector reform, poverty reduction, trade liberalization and governance could become more effective with attention to nutrition. The Committee reviewed reports of working groups on breastfeeding and complementary feeding; capacity development in food and nutrition; household food security; nutrition and HIV/AIDS; nutrition in emergencies; nutrition, ethics and human rights; micronutrients; nutrition of school-age children; and nutrition throughout the life-cycle.

UNU Activities

The United Nations University Food and Nutrition Programme for Human and Social Development (UNU-FNP) assisted developing regions to enhance individual, organizational and institutional capacity, carried out coordinated global research activities and served as the academic arm for the UN system in areas of food and nutrition that were best addressed in a non-regulatory, non-normative environment.

In 2004, UNU-FNP worked with WHO to develop new growth standards for infants and young children in a six-year project backed by a $6.5 million grant from the Bill and Melinda Gates Foundation. The project would use growth and development data gathered from a study of 8,500 children in Brazil, Ghana, India, Norway, Oman and the United States. The standards would enable researchers to recognize when children were becoming under-nourished or overweight, assess their motor development and track progress in reaching a range of health and social equity goals. The 99 countries that currently used the international references were expected to begin using the new standards by 2010, with help from the project.

Under the University's capacity development programme, plans to provide leadership training for mid-career professionals were discussed at a July meeting of the Middle East Capacity Development Task Force in Cairo, Egypt. Regional task forces in leadership training exercises for food and nutrition professionals were also held in Africa and Latin America. During the year, 50 former fellows of UNU-FNP met at the congress of the Latin American Nutrition Society in Acapulco, Mexico (November) and decided to provide capacity-building assistance to the Nutrition Institute of Central America and Panama in Guatemala, established in 1949.

Cooperation between UNU and FAO in nutrition data management continued with a three-week course on production and the use of food composition data in nutrition (Beijing, China, October-November). Five fellows began a year-long training programme in food science and technology organized by UNU at the National Food Research Institute in Tsukuba, Japan; five others completed their training and received grants to return to their home countries for follow-up research projects. UNU continued its quarterly publication of the Food and Nutrition Bulletin and the Journal of Food Composition and Analysis.

Chapter XIV

International drug control

During 2004, the United Nations, through the Commission on Narcotic Drugs, the International Narcotics Control Board (INCB) and the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime (UNODC), reaffirmed its commitment to strengthen international cooperation and increase efforts to counter the world drug problem. UN system drug control activities focused mainly on carrying out the 1999 Action Plan for the Implementation of the Declaration on the Guiding Principles of Drug Demand Reduction, which served as a guide for Member States in adopting strategies and programmes for reducing illicit drug demand in order to achieve significant results by 2008.

UNODC continued to promote the mainstreaming of drug control matters into the work of UN organizations, strengthen the international drug control system and support the international community in achieving the objectives and measures adopted by the General Assembly at its twentieth special session on the world drug problem, held in 1998. In 2004, the Office assisted States in complying with international drug control treaties and supported INCB in monitoring their implementation. It also helped States in establishing new law enforcement mechanisms and national drug abuse information systems and in improving data collection and analysis. Its integrated portfolio of global programmes and regional and country projects included legislative and capacity-building assistance in addressing problems involving drugs, crime, corruption and terrorism. Focusing its work on the area of sustainable livelihoods, it promoted best practices in alternative development and supported projects in key illicit drug production areas.

The Commission on Narcotic Drugs—the main UN policy-making body dealing with drug control—recommended a number of draft resolutions to the Economic and Social Council and adopted resolutions on demand reduction and the prevention of drug abuse, illicit drug trafficking and supply, regional cooperation and strengthening UN international drug control machinery. In July, the Council urged Governments to continue contributing to the maintenance of a balance between the licit supply of and demand for opiate raw materials for medical and scientific needs. It requested Member States to develop programmes to reduce the illicit supply of and demand for amphetamine-type stimulants, and called on the international community to enhance support to Afghanistan in the implementation of its drug control strategy. The Council requested UNODC to support the strengthening of strategies for the eradication of cannabis crops, and to assist countries emerging from conflict in their drug control efforts.

INCB analysed the interaction between illicit drug supply and demand, emphasizing the need for a balanced and integrated approach. It continued to oversee the implementation of the three major international drug control conventions, analyse the drug situation worldwide and draw Governments' attention to weaknesses in national control and treaty compliance, making suggestions and recommendations for improvements at the national and international levels.

Follow-up to the twentieth special session

In response to General Assembly resolution 58/141 [YUN 2003, p. 1263], the Secretary-General, in a July report [A/59/188], gave an overview of the implementation of mandates relating to international drug control, in particular the outcome of the Assembly's twentieth special session on countering the world drug problem [YUN 1998, p. 1135], and the Action Plan for the Implementation of the Declaration on the Guiding Principles of Drug Demand Reduction, adopted by the Assembly in resolution 54/132 [YUN 1999, p. 1157]. The report reviewed the follow-up by the Commission on Narcotic Drugs; demand reduction; the Action Plan against Illicit Manufacture, Trafficking and Abuse of Amphetamine-type Stimulants and Their Precursors, adopted by Assembly resolution S-20/4 A [YUN 1998, p. 1139]; judicial and law enforcement cooperation; countering money-laundering; and illicit crop eradication and alternative development. The Secretary-General also reported on action taken by the UN system, including UNODC organizational arrangements, promulgated in March 2004.

The Secretary-General concluded that the results achieved so far in implementing the outcome of the Assembly's twentieth special session had been mixed and he appealed to Member States to strengthen their efforts in that regard. He called on relevant UN entities, other international organizations and financial institutions to mainstream drug control issues into their programmes.

On 18 and 19 March [E/2004/28 & Corr.1], the Commission on Narcotic Drugs considered the agenda item on follow-up to the twentieth special session: general overview and progress achieved by Governments in meeting the goals and targets for the years 2003 and 2008 set out in the Political Declaration adopted by the Assembly at that session.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 20 December [meeting 74], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Third (Social, Humanitarian and Cultural) Committee [A/59/495], adopted resolution 59/163 without vote [agenda item 97].

International cooperation against the world drug problem

The General Assembly,

Recalling the United Nations Millennium Declaration, its resolution 58/141 of 22 December 2003 and its other previous resolutions,

Reaffirming its commitment to the outcome of the twentieth special session of the General Assembly, devoted to countering the world drug problem together, held in New York from 8 to 10 June 1998, and welcoming the continuing determination of Governments to overcome the world drug problem by a full and balanced application of national, regional and international strategies to reduce the demand for, production of and trafficking in illicit drugs,

Reaffirming the importance of the commitments of Member States in meeting the objectives targeted for 2003 and 2008, as set out in the Political Declaration adopted by the General Assembly at the twentieth special session, and welcoming the guidelines and elements recommended by the Commission on Narcotic Drugs to the Executive Director of the United Nations International Drug Control Programme for the preparation of subsequent reports on the follow-up to the twentieth special session,

Emphasizing the importance of the Action Plan for the Implementation of the Declaration on the Guiding Principles of Drug Demand Reduction, which introduces a new global approach balanced between illicit supply and demand reduction, under the principle of shared responsibility, and of the Action Plan on International Cooperation on the Eradication of Illicit Drug Crops and on Alternative Development, which recognizes the importance of supply reduction as an integral part of a balanced drug control strategy,

Recognizing the efforts of all countries, in particular those that produce narcotic drugs for scientific and medical purposes, and of the International Narcotics

Control Board in preventing the diversion of such substances to illicit markets and in maintaining production at a level consistent with licit demand, in line with the Single Convention on Narcotic Drugs of 1961 and the Convention on Psychotropic Substances of 1971,

Aware that progress has been uneven in meeting the goals set in the Political Declaration, as also reflected in the biennial reports of the Executive Director of the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime, and recognizing that the drug problem is still a global challenge that constitutes a serious threat to public health and safety and the well-being of humankind, in particular children and young people, and that it undermines socio-economic and political stability and sustainable development, including efforts to reduce poverty, and causes violence and crime, including in urban areas,

Concerned by the increase in the abuse of illicit drugs among children, including adolescents, and young people,

Concerned also by the challenges posed by links between the spread of HIV/AIDS and injecting drug use,

Concerned further by the serious challenges and threats posed by the continuing links between illicit drug trafficking and terrorism and other national and transnational criminal activities, such as trafficking in human beings, especially women and children, money-laundering, corruption, trafficking in arms and trafficking in chemical precursors, and reaffirming that strong and effective international cooperation is needed to counter these threats,

Concerned about policies and activities in favour of the legalization of illicit narcotic drugs and psychotropic substances that are not in accordance with the international drug control treaties and that might jeopardize the international drug control regime,

Concerned also by the increase in the diversion of chemical precursors used in the illicit manufacture of drugs,

Acknowledging that international cooperation in countering drug abuse and illicit production and trafficking has shown that positive results can be achieved through sustained and collective efforts, and expressing its appreciation for the initiatives in this regard,

I

Respect for the principles enshrined in the Charter of the United Nations and international law in countering the world drug problem

1. Reaffirms that countering the world drug problem is a common and shared responsibility that must be addressed in a multilateral setting, requires an integrated and balanced approach, and must be carried out in full conformity with the purposes and principles of the Charter of the United Nations and international law, and in particular with full respect for the sovereignty and territorial integrity of States, the principle of non-intervention in the internal affairs of States and all human rights and fundamental freedoms, and on the basis of the principles of equal rights and mutual respect;

2. Urges all States to ratify or accede to, and States parties to implement all the provisions of, the Single Convention on Narcotic Drugs of 1961 as amended by the 1972 Protocol, the Convention on Psychotropic

Substances of 1971 and the United Nations Convention against Illicit Traffic in Narcotic Drugs and Psychotropic Substances of 1988;

3. Invites all States, as a matter of priority, to sign, ratify or accede to, and States parties to implement, the United Nations Convention against Transnational Organized Crime and the Protocols thereto and the United Nations Convention against Corruption, in order to counter comprehensively the transnational criminal activities that are related to illicit drug trafficking;

II

International cooperation to counter the world drug problem and follow-up to the twentieth special session

1. Reaffirms the Joint Ministerial Statement and further measures to implement the action plans emanating from the twentieth special session of the General Assembly, adopted during the ministerial segment of the forty-sixth session of the Commission on Narcotic Drugs, which emphasizes that the world drug problem must be addressed in multilateral, regional, bilateral and national settings and that, in order to succeed, action to counter it has to involve all Member States, that action must be supported by strong international and development cooperation and must be further included in national development priorities, and that it requires a balance between supply reduction and demand reduction, as well as a comprehensive strategy that combines alternative development, including, as appropriate, preventive alternative development, eradication, interdiction, law enforcement, prevention, treatment and rehabilitation as well as education;

2. Calls upon all States to strengthen their efforts in the fight against the world drug problem, in order to achieve the objectives targeted for 2008 in the Political Declaration adopted by the General Assembly at the twentieth special session;

3. Calls upon all relevant actors to continue their close cooperation with Governments in promoting and implementing the outcome of the twentieth special session and the ministerial segment of the forty-sixth session of the Commission on Narcotic Drugs;

4. Stresses that data collection, analysis and evaluation of the results of ongoing national and international policies are essential tools for further developing sound, evidence-based drug control strategies;

Demand reduction

5. Urges all Member States to implement the Action Plan for the Implementation of the Declaration on the Guiding Principles of Drug Demand Reduction and to strengthen their national efforts to counter the abuse of illicit drugs in their population, in particular among children and young people;

6. Urges States, in order to achieve a significant and measurable reduction of drug abuse by 2008:

(a) To further implement comprehensive demand reduction policies and programmes, including research, covering all the drugs under international control, in order to raise public awareness of the drug problem, paying special attention to prevention and education and providing, especially to young people and others at risk, information on developing life skills, making healthy choices and engaging in drug-free activities;

(b) To further develop and implement comprehensive demand reduction policies, including risk reduction activities, that are in line with sound medical practice and the international drug control treaties and that reduce the adverse health and social consequences of drug abuse, and to provide a wide range of comprehensive services for the treatment, rehabilitation and social reintegration of drug abusers, with appropriate resources being devoted to such services, since social exclusion constitutes an important risk factor for drug abuse;

(c) To enhance early intervention programmes that dissuade children and young people from using illicit drugs, including polydrug use and the recreational use of substances such as cannabis and synthetic drugs, especially amphetamine-type stimulants, and to encourage the active participation of the younger generation in campaigns against drug abuse;

(d) To provide a comprehensive range of services for preventing the transmission of HIV/AIDS and other infectious diseases associated with drug abuse, including education, counselling and drug abuse treatment, and in particular to assist developing countries in their efforts to deal with these issues;

Illicit synthetic drugs

7. Urges States to renew their efforts, at the national, regional and international levels, to implement the comprehensive measures covered in the Action Plan against Illicit Manufacture, Trafficking and Abuse of Amphetamine-type Stimulants and Their Precursors, to make special efforts to counter the abuse and recreational use of amphetamine-type stimulants, especially by young people, and to disseminate information on the adverse health, social and economic consequences of such abuse;

Control of substances

8. Encourages States to establish or strengthen mechanisms and procedures to ensure strict control of substances that are listed in the international drug treaties and are used to manufacture illicit drugs of natural and synthetic origin, and to support international operations aimed at preventing their diversion, including through coordination and cooperation between regulatory and enforcement services involved in their control;

Control of precursors

9. Encourages States to establish or strengthen mechanisms and procedures to ensure strict control of chemical precursors used to manufacture illicit drugs, to support international operations aimed at preventing the diversion of chemical precursors, including through coordination and cooperation between regulatory and enforcement services involved in precursor control, in cooperation with the International Narcotics Control Board, and to counter smuggling networks effectively, inter alia, by conducting backtracking law enforcement investigations;

Judicial cooperation

10. Calls upon all States to strengthen international cooperation among judicial and law enforcement authorities at all levels in order to prevent and combat illicit drug trafficking and to share and promote best operational practices in order to interdict illicit drug trafficking, including by establishing and strengthening regional mechanisms, providing technical assistance and establishing effective methods for cooperation, in particular in the areas of air, maritime, port and border control and in the implementation of extradition treaties;

Countering money-laundering

11. Urges States to strengthen action, in particular international cooperation and technical assistance aimed at preventing and combating the laundering of proceeds derived from drug trafficking and related criminal activities, with the support of the United Nations system, international institutions such as the World Bank and regional development banks, to develop and strengthen comprehensive international regimes to combat money-laundering, and to improve information-sharing among financial institutions and agencies in charge of preventing and detecting the laundering of those proceeds;

12. Calls upon States to consider including provisions in their national drug control plans for the establishment of national networks to enhance their respective capabilities to prevent, monitor, control and suppress serious offences connected with money-laundering and the financing of terrorist acts, and in general to counter all acts of transnational organized crime, and to supplement existing regional and international networks dealing with money-laundering;

International cooperation in illicit crop eradication and alternative development

13. Recognizes the efforts made by States to implement innovative alternative programmes, inter alia, in reforestation, agriculture and small and medium enterprise, and stresses the importance of the United Nations system and the international community contributing to the economic and social development of the communities that benefit from such programmes;

14. Calls upon States, where appropriate:

(a) To enhance support, including, where appropriate, through the provision of new and additional financial resources, for alternative development, environmental protection and eradication programmes undertaken by countries affected by the illicit cultivation of cannabis, especially in Africa, of opium poppy and of coca bush, in particular national programmes that seek to reduce social marginalization and promote sustainable economic development;

(b) To enhance joint strategies, through international and regional cooperation, to strengthen, including by training, education and providing technical assistance, alternative development, eradication and interdiction capacity, with the aim of eliminating illicit crop cultivation and fostering economic and social development;

(c) To encourage international cooperation, including, as appropriate, preventive alternative development, to prevent illicit crop cultivation from emerging in or being relocated to other areas;

(d) To provide, in accordance with the principle of shared responsibility, greater access to their markets for products of alternative development programmes, which are necessary for the creation of employment and the eradication of poverty;

(e) To establish or reinforce, where appropriate, national mechanisms to monitor and verify illicit crops;

(f) To continue to contribute to the maintenance of a balance between the licit supply of and demand for opiate raw materials used for medical and scientific purposes and to cooperate in preventing the proliferation of sources of production of opiate raw materials;

(g) To share their experience, expertise and best practices in the eradication of illicit drug crops and the implementation of alternative development programmes with affected States;

15. Calls upon the international community to enhance financial and technical support for Afghanistan in order to enable the Government to implement successfully its national drug control strategy;

III

Action by the United Nations system

1. Emphasizes that the multidimensional nature of the world drug problem calls for the promotion of integration and coordination of drug control activities throughout the United Nations system, including in the follow-up to major United Nations conferences, as well as in other relevant multilateral institutions and organizations;

2. Reaffirms its resolve to continue to strengthen the United Nations machinery for international drug control, in particular the Commission on Narcotic Drugs, the United Nations International Drug Control Programme and the International Narcotics Control Board, in order to enable them to fulfil their mandates, bearing in mind the recommendations contained in Economic and Social Council resolution 1999/30 of 28 July 1999 and the measures taken and recommendations adopted by the Commission on Narcotic Drugs at its forty-fourth, forty-fifth, forty-sixth and forty-seventh sessions, aimed at the enhancement of its functioning;

3. Encourages the Commission on Narcotic Drugs, as the global coordinating body in international drug control and as the governing body of the United Nations International Drug Control Programme, and the International Narcotics Control Board to continue their useful work on the control of precursors and other chemicals used in the illicit manufacture of narcotic drugs and psychotropic substances;

4. Notes that the International Narcotics Control Board needs sufficient resources to carry out all its mandates, including those that will enable it to perform effectively its task within the framework of Operation Purple, Operation Topaz and Project Prism, and therefore urges Member States to commit themselves in a common effort to assigning adequate and sufficient budgetary resources to the Board, in accordance with Economic and Social Council resolution 1996/20 of 23 July 1996, emphasizes the need to maintain its capacity, inter alia, through the provision of appropriate means by the Secretary-General and adequate technical support by the United Nations International Drug Control Programme, and calls for enhanced cooperation and understanding between Member States and the Board in order to enable it to implement all its mandates under the international drug control conventions;

5. Welcomes the efforts of the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime to implement its mandate, and requests the Office to continue:

(a) To strengthen dialogue with Member States and also to ensure continued improvement in management, so as to contribute to enhanced and sustainable programme delivery and further encourage the Executive Director to maximize the effectiveness of the drug programme of the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime, inter alia, through the full implementation of Commission on Narcotic Drugs resolutions, in particular the recommendations contained therein;

(b) To strengthen cooperation with Member States and with United Nations programmes, funds and relevant agencies, as well as relevant regional organizations and agencies and non-governmental organizations, and to provide, on request, assistance in implementing the outcome of the twentieth special session;

(c) To increase its assistance, within the available voluntary resources, to countries that are deploying efforts to reduce illicit crop cultivation by, in particular, adopting alternative development programmes, and to explore new and innovative funding mechanisms;

(d) To allocate, while keeping the balance between supply and demand reduction programmes, adequate resources to allow it to fulfil its role in the implementation of the Action Plan for the Implementation of the Declaration on the Guiding Principles of Drug Demand Reduction, and support countries, upon their request, to further develop and implement drug demand reduction policies;

(e) To develop action-oriented strategies to assist Member States to implement the Action Plan for the Implementation of the Declaration, and to report to the Commission on Narcotic Drugs at its forty-eighth session on the follow-up to the Action Plan;

(f) To strengthen dialogue and cooperation with multilateral development banks and with international financial institutions so that they may undertake lending and programming activities related to drug control in interested and affected countries to implement the outcome of the twentieth special session, and to keep the Commission on Narcotic Drugs informed of further progress made in this area;

(g) To take into account the outcome of the twentieth special session, to include in its report on the illicit traffic in drugs an updated, objective and comprehensive assessment of worldwide trends in illicit traffic and transit in narcotic drugs and psychotropic substances, including methods and routes used, and to recommend ways and means of improving the capacity of States along those routes to address all aspects of the drug problem;

(h) To publish the World Drug Report, with comprehensive and balanced information about the world drug problem, and to seek additional extrabudgetary resources for its publication in all the official languages;

(i) To provide technical assistance, from available voluntary contributions for that purpose, to those States identified by relevant international bodies as the most affected by the transit of drugs, in particular developing countries in need of such assistance and support;

(j) To provide assistance, at the request of States and respecting fully their sovereignty and territorial integrity, and with the support of the United Nations

Office for Outer Space Affairs and the European Space Agency, among others, in detecting on time the emergence or relocation of illicit crop cultivation;

6. Welcomes also the follow-up, led by the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime, to the 2003 Paris Conference on Drug Routes from Central Asia to Europe (the Paris Pact), and encourages the Office and other relevant international institutions to continue their efforts;

7. Welcomes further the decision of the Commission on Narcotic Drugs, at its forty-seventh session, to select the topic "Preventing HIV/AIDS and other blood-borne diseases in the context of drug abuse prevention" as part of the thematic debate of its forty-eighth session, in 2005;

8. Requests the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime, subject to the availability of resources and the Commission on Narcotic Drugs guidelines for the use of general-purpose funds, together with international financial institutions and the organizations involved in preventing and suppressing money-laundering and drug trafficking, to facilitate the provision of training and advice through technical cooperation in States, when requested, taking into account, inter alia, the recommendations on money-laundering and the financing of terrorism formulated by the Financial Action Task Force on Money Laundering and its regional groups;

9. Urges all Governments to provide the fullest possible financial and political support to the United Nations International Drug Control Programme by widening its donor base and increasing voluntary contributions, in particular general-purpose contributions, to enable it to continue, expand and strengthen its operational and technical cooperation activities, and recommends that a sufficient share of the regular budget of the United Nations be allocated to the Programme to enable it to fulfil its mandates and to work towards securing assured and predictable funding;

10. Encourages the meetings of Heads of National Drug Law Enforcement Agencies and of the Sub-commission on Illicit Drug Traffic and Related Matters in the Near and Middle East of the Commission on Narcotic Drugs to continue to contribute to the strengthening of regional and international cooperation, taking into account the outcome of the twentieth special session and the ministerial segment of the forty-sixth session of the Commission;

11. Calls upon the relevant United Nations agencies and entities, other international organizations and international financial institutions, including regional development banks, to mainstream drug control issues into their programmes, and calls upon the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime to maintain its leading role by providing relevant information and technical assistance;

12. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General, and, taking into account the promotion of integrated reporting, requests the Secretary-General to submit to the General Assembly at its sixtieth session a report on the implementation of the present resolution.

Conventions

International efforts to control narcotic drugs were governed by three global conventions: the 1961 Single Convention on Narcotic Drugs [YUN 1961, p. 382], which, with some exceptions of detail, replaced earlier narcotics treaties and was amended by the 1972 Protocol [YUN 1972, p. 397] to strengthen the role of the International Narcotics Control Board (INCB); the 1971 Convention on Psychotropic Substances [YUN 1971, p. 380]; and the 1988 United Nations Convention against Illicit Traffic in Narcotic Drugs and Psychotropic Substances [YUN 1988, p. 690].

As at 31 December 2004, 176 States were parties to the 1961 Convention, as amended by the 1972 Protocol. During the year, the Congo acceded to the Convention.

The number of parties to the 1971 Convention stood at 175 as at 31 December 2004, with the accession of the Congo during the year.

At year's end, 170 States and the European Community were parties to the 1988 Convention, with the Congo, the Lao People's Democratic Republic and Micronesia acceding in 2004.

Commission action. At its forty-seventh session in March [E/2004/28 & Corr.1], the Commission on Narcotic Drugs reviewed implementation of the international drug control treaties. It had before it the INCB report covering 2003 activities [YUN 2003, p. 1270] and the 2003 INCB technical report on the implementation of article 12 of the 1988 Convention entitled "Precursors and Chemicals Frequently Used in the Illicit Manufacture of Narcotic Drugs and Psychotropic Substances" [Sales No. E.04.XI.4].

The Commission welcomed INCB efforts to promote the global balance between the supply of and demand for opiates used for medical and scientific purposes, as required under the 1961 Convention as amended by the 1972 Protocol, and called on States to contribute to the maintenance of that balance and to cooperate in preventing the proliferation of sources of production of opiate raw materials. Concerned over the large number of Internet pharmacies trafficking in internationally controlled drugs, the Commission encouraged Governments to take action against them. It stressed the importance of adherence to and full implementation of the provisions of the international drug control treaties, and encouraged Member States to provide technical assistance to other Governments to strengthen the required regulatory controls. Regarding implementation of article 12 of the 1988 Convention, the Commission acknowledged the success achieved under Operation Purple, Operation Topaz and Project Prism (see, p. 1237), but was concerned that, without additional resources, the Board would have to curtail its involvement in those operations. It agreed that the General Assembly should be requested to provide those resources. Noting that Governments continued to implement and update legislation relating to the control of precursor chemicals, the Commission emphasized the need for mechanisms to monitor both imports to and exports from national territories, and called on countries to establish networks among Governments and within countries to respond quickly to, and exchange information on, cross-border smuggling. The Commission noted that, in specific regions, pharmaceutical preparations were increasingly diverted from licit trade for use in the illicit manufacture of amphetamine-type stimulants, and called on Governments to introduce mechanisms to prevent the diversions of pharmaceutical preparations from international trade and from domestic distribution channels.

INCB action. In its report covering 2004 [Sales No. E.05.XI.3], INCB called on States that had not done so to become parties to the 1961 Convention and to accede to or ratify the 1972 Protocol amending it. The Board urged States concerned to implement the 1971 Convention and become parties without delay, as well as the 1988 Convention to implement the provisions of article 12. It noted that, with the exception of Switzerland, all States that were major manufacturers, exporters and importers of scheduled chemicals were parties to the 1988 Convention.

ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL ACTION

On 21 July [meeting 47], the Economic and Social Council, on the recommendation of the Commission on Narcotic Drugs [E/2004/28 & Corr.1], adopted resolution 2004/43 without vote [agenda item 14 (d)].

Demand for and supply of opiates used to meet medical and scientific needs

The Economic and Social Council,

Recalling its resolution 2003/40 of 22 July 2003 and previous relevant resolutions,

Emphasizing that the need to balance the global licit supply of opiates against the legitimate demand for opiates used to meet medical and scientific needs is central to the international strategy and policy of drug control,

Noting the fundamental need for international cooperation with the traditional and established supplier countries in drug control to ensure the universal application of the provisions of the Single Convention on Narcotic Drugs of 1961 and that Convention as amended by the 1972 Protocol,

Reiterating that a balance between consumption and production of opiate raw materials was achieved in the past as a result of efforts made by the two traditional supplier countries, India and Turkey, together with other producer countries,

Expressing deep concern at the continued increase in the global production of opiate raw materials and the significant accumulation of stocks over the past few years as a consequence of the operation of market forces, which is causing a mismatch and is now upsetting the delicate balance between the licit supply of and demand for opiates used to meet medical and scientific needs,

Emphasizing the importance of adhering to the estimates furnished to and confirmed by the International Narcotics Control Board on the extent of cultivation and production of opiate raw materials, particularly in view of the current oversupply,

Recalling the Joint Ministerial Statement adopted during the ministerial segment of the forty-sixth session of the Commission on Narcotic Drugs, in which ministers and other government representatives called upon States to continue to contribute to the maintenance of a balance between the licit supply of and demand for opiate raw materials used for medical and scientific purposes and to cooperate in preventing the proliferation of sources of production of opiate raw materials,

Reiterating the importance of medically appropriate use of opiates in pain relief therapy as advocated by the World Health Organization,

Noting that countries differ significantly in their level of consumption of narcotic drugs and that in most developing countries the use of narcotic drugs for medical purposes has remained at an extremely low level,

1. Urges all Governments to continue to contribute to maintaining a balance between the licit supply of and demand for opiate raw materials used to meet medical and scientific needs, the achievement of which would be facilitated by maintaining, insofar as their constitutional and legal systems permit, support to the traditional and established supplier countries, and to cooperate in preventing the proliferation of sources of production of opiate raw materials;

2. Urges the Governments of all producer countries to adhere strictly to the provisions of the Single Convention on Narcotic Drugs of 1961 and that Convention as amended by the 1972 Protocol and to take effective measures to prevent the illicit production or diversion of opiate raw materials to illicit channels, especially when increasing licit production, invites the relevant Governments to contribute to the study being carried out by the International Narcotics Control Board on the relative merits of different methods of producing opiate raw materials, and encourages producer countries to adopt best practices in the cultivation and production of opiate raw materials;

3. Urges the Governments of consumer countries to assess their licit needs for opiate raw materials realistically and to communicate those needs to the International Narcotics Control Board in order to ensure easy supply, calls upon all Governments of countries producing opium poppy to limit the cultivation of opium poppy, taking into account the current level of global stocks, to the estimates furnished to and confirmed by the Board, in accordance with the requirements of the Single Convention on Narcotic Drugs of 1961, and calls upon producer countries, in providing estimates of such cultivation, to consider the specific demand requirements of consumer countries;

4. Urges the Governments of all countries where, in the past, opium poppy has not been cultivated for the licit production of opiate raw materials, in the spirit of collective responsibility, to refrain from engaging in the commercial cultivation of opium poppy in order to avoid the proliferation of supply sites;

5. Commends the International Narcotics Control Board for its efforts in monitoring the implementation of the relevant Economic and Social Council resolutions and, in particular:

(a) In urging the Governments concerned to adjust global production of opiate raw materials to a level corresponding to actual licit needs and to avoid unforeseen imbalances between the licit supply of and demand for opiates caused by the exportation of products manufactured from seized and confiscated drugs;

(b) In inviting the Governments concerned to ensure that opiates imported into their countries for medical and scientific use do not originate in countries that transform seized and confiscated drugs into licit opiates;

(c) In arranging informal meetings, during sessions of the Commission on Narcotic Drugs, with the main States that import and produce opiate raw materials;

6. Requests the International Narcotics Control Board to continue its efforts in monitoring the implementation of the relevant Economic and Social Council resolutions in full compliance with the Single Convention on Narcotic Drugs of 1961 and that Convention as amended by the 1972 Protocol;

7. Requests the Secretary-General to transmit the text of the present resolution to all Governments for consideration and implementation and to report on the implementation of the resolution to the Commission on Narcotic Drugs at its forty-eighth session.

On the same date [meeting 47], the Council, on the recommendation of the Commission [E/2004/28 & Corr.1], adopted resolution 2004/38 without vote [agenda item 14 (d)].

Follow-up on strengthening the systems of control over chemical precursors and preventing their diversion and trafficking

The Economic and Social Council,

Recommends to the General Assembly the adoption of the following draft resolution:
[For text, see General Assembly resolution 59/162 below.]

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 20 December [meeting 74], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Third Committee [A/59/495], adopted resolution 59/162 without vote [agenda item 97].

Follow-up on strengthening the systems of control over chemical precursors and preventing their diversion and trafficking

The General Assembly,

Concerned about the continued diversion and misuse of precursors and the fact that, despite efforts undertaken by all States, including the producing, exporting, importing and transit States, chemical substances are increasingly feeding the manufacture of illicit drugs of natural or synthetic origin, a problem that deserves the utmost attention of all States,

Recalling the Political Declaration adopted by the General Assembly at its twentieth special session, devoted to countering the world drug problem together, in which Member States decided to establish 2008 as a target date for States to eliminate or considerably reduce the diversion of precursors,

Recalling also the Joint Ministerial Statement and further measures to implement the action plans emanating from the twentieth special session of the General Assembly, adopted during the ministerial segment of the forty-sixth session of the Commission on Narcotic Drugs,

Stressing the importance of Economic and Social Council resolutions 2003/32 and 2003/35 of 22 July 2003 on training in precursor control, countering money-laundering and drug abuse prevention, and on strengthening the prevention and suppression of illicit drug trafficking,

Recalling article 12, paragraphs 1, 9 (c) and 10, of the United Nations Convention against Illicit Traffic in Narcotic Drugs and Psychotropic Substances of 1988,

Reaffirming the importance of using all available legal means or measures to prevent the diversion of chemicals from legitimate trade to illicit drug manufacture as an essential component of comprehensive strategies against drug abuse and trafficking and of preventing access to chemical precursors by those engaged in or attempting to engage in the processing of illicit drugs,

Reiterating the importance of the effective and real-time exchange of information relating to the interdiction, diversion and suspected diversion of precursors, as an essential component of strategies to facilitate comprehensive investigations into cases relating to such diversion, including the identification of the modus operandi and entities involved and the initiation of appropriate legal action,

Encouraging Member States to conduct backtracking law enforcement investigations in order to counter organized smuggling networks effectively,

Also encouraging Member States to facilitate the exchange of information between the relevant agencies in order to identify the sources of seized precursor chemicals and those responsible for the shipping and diversion of those substances and to identify the sources of pharmaceutical preparations misused for illicit drug manufacture,

Noting that links are increasingly being uncovered between the smuggling of drugs and the smuggling of precursor chemicals, including the use of similar modus operandi to conceal consignments in order to avoid detection,

Welcoming with satisfaction the results achieved so far under Operation Purple and Operation Topaz and the new initiative called Project Prism, which were launched by the International Narcotics Control Board, in cooperation with Member States, to enhance controls over chemicals used in the illicit manufacture of cocaine, heroin and amphetamine-type stimulants respectively,

Concerned that, without additional resources, the International Narcotics Control Board will not be able to carry out its important functions under the above-mentioned operations,

1. Urges all Member States to put in place systems and procedures to ensure that the details of any interdiction, seizure, diversion or attempted diversion of precursors are communicated expeditiously to all Governments concerned and the International Narcotics Control Board and, insofar as possible, share relevant information so that methods frequently used for national and international trafficking in chemicals may be identified, pursuant to article 12 of the United Nations Convention against Illicit Traffic in Narcotic Drugs and Psychotropic Substances of 1988;

2. Reiterates the importance of applying the know-your-customer principle referred to in Economic and Social Council resolution 2003/39 of 22 July 2003, and stresses the necessity of strengthening the use of the mechanism of pre-export notifications, including by providing timely responses, especially through the efficient sharing of information;

3. Invites those States which do not have mechanisms to enable the real-time exchange of information under the current international operations to consider establishing a national focal point or central national authority in line with the standard operating procedures of the international operations, through which all information on licit and illicit consignments can be channelled, and invites all Member States to contribute to updating the directory of competent national authorities under the international drug control treaties, with a view to implementing article 12 of the 1988 Convention;

4. Recommends that Member States develop or further adapt, where necessary, their regulatory and operational control procedures to counter the diversion of chemical substances into illicit drug production or manufacture, and encourages authorities to initiate or further strengthen coordination and cooperation between all regulatory and enforcement services involved in precursor control;

5. Invites Member States and appropriate international and regional bodies to review intelligence on the smuggling of drugs and the smuggling of precursor chemicals, in order to identify common links and to plan appropriate operations to stop such activities;

6. Encourages Member States to ensure that stopped diversion attempts receive the same investigative attention that would be afforded to a seizure of the same substance, since such cases could provide valuable intelligence that could prevent diversions elsewhere;

7. Emphasizes the need to ensure that adequate mechanisms are in place, where necessary and to the extent possible, to prevent the diversion of preparations containing chemicals listed in tables I and II of the 1988 Convention, pertaining to illicit drug manufacture, in particular those containing ephedrine and pseudoephedrine;

8. Encourages Member States, in order to counter smuggling networks effectively, to conduct backtracking law enforcement investigations and, where appropriate, to identify the source of the seized chemical precursors and those responsible for the consignment and ultimately the diversion;

9. Also encourages Member States to investigate the possibility of establishing operational chemical profiling programmes, and invites all States to support, to the extent possible, such programmes;

10. Requests the International Narcotics Control Board, pursuant to Economic and Social Council resolution 1995/20 of 24 July 1995, to monitor international trade so that diversion attempts can be identified, preventing chemical precursors from reaching the illicit market;

11. Urges the International Narcotics Control Board to continue to follow up all such cases of diversion by facilitating investigations by national authorities and to make its findings available to Governments through its annual report;

12. Requests the Secretary-General to provide the necessary resources to the International Narcotics Control Board to enable it to continue its work effectively under Operation Purple, Operation Topaz and Project Prism;

13. Requests the Executive Director of the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime, within the framework of his biennial reports on the implementation of the outcome of the twentieth special session of the General Assembly and taking into account the relevant resolutions adopted on the subject since the special session, to include in his report on the control of precursors, starting with his report to be submitted to the Commission on Narcotic Drugs at its forty-eighth session, recommendations on how to strengthen the use of the pre-export notification mechanism and ensure timely responses.

Internet drug sales

On 21 July [meeting 47], the Economic and Social Council, on the recommendation of the Commission on Narcotic Drugs [E/2004/28 & Corr.1], adopted resolution 2004/42 without vote [agenda item 14 (d)].

Sale of internationally controlled licit drugs to individuals via the Internet

The Economic and Social Council,

Recognizing that unauthorized trade in internationally controlled licit drugs ordered via the Internet has reached epidemic proportions,

Strongly suggesting that Member States prohibit the international sale of internationally controlled licit drugs via the Internet and that, when permitted, the sale of such drugs via the Internet within their national borders be strictly regulated, while acknowledging that some Member States already have laws that preclude the sale of internationally controlled substances via the Internet,

Aware that the non-prescribed or falsely prescribed use of internationally controlled licit drugs constitutes a serious risk to public health and that such use is facilitated by the Internet,

Noting that the Commission on Narcotic Drugs, in its resolution 43/8 of 15 March 2000, encouraged Member States to consider taking measures to prevent the diversion of internationally controlled licit drugs via the Internet,

Noting also that the Secretary-General submitted to the Commission on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice at its eleventh session a report on effective measures to prevent and control computer-related crime, in which he recognized the use of online pharmacies to procure internationally controlled licit drugs without medical supervision as an emerging problem for law enforcement, regulatory and health authorities,

Further noting the frequent calls made by the International Narcotics Control Board in 2001, 2002 and 2003 for Governments to take measures to prevent the misuse of the Internet for the illegal offer, sale and distribution of internationally controlled licit drugs,

Recognizing that the procurement of internationally controlled licit drugs over the Internet is illegal in all cases when an international treaty or national legislation is contravened,

Recalling the successes that have been realized in the control of domestic and international diversion of licit pharmaceuticals, pursuant to the provisions of the relevant conventions,

1. Encourages Member States to consider new means and strategies to establish avenues of cooperation in order to prohibit the international offering and acquisition by individuals of internationally controlled licit drugs acquired illegally over the Internet;

2. Calls upon Member States to enforce, as appropriate, the provisions of article 30 of the Single Convention on Narcotic Drugs of 1961 and article 10 of the Convention on Psychotropic Substances of 1971 as they apply to pharmacies within their territory, specifically with regard to the need:

(a) To license those that distribute internationally controlled licit drugs via the Internet and to require them to disclose information regarding the identity of the parties responsible and their legal location;

(b) To actively pursue those that are in violation of the importing and exporting provisions of those conventions;

3. Urges Member States to develop, as appropriate, well-coordinated and focused policies to identify and take appropriate measures to terminate Internet sites used to offer internationally controlled licit drugs in an unauthorized way, through greater coordination between the judicial, police, postal, customs and other competent agencies;

4. Encourages Member States to enact or, where appropriate, to enhance sanctions or penalties for providing internationally controlled licit drugs over the Internet without a valid prescription within their national borders;

5. Also encourages Member States to identify those who operate web sites that illegally offer internationally controlled licit drugs by, for example, seeking the cooperation and support of Internet service providers;

6. Encourages Member States that do not have laws that preclude trade in internationally controlled licit drugs via the Internet to establish, as appropriate, laws or regulations governing the sale of such drugs via the Internet, with a view to minimizing the risks, including, as a minimum:

(a) The obligation for companies within their national borders offering internationally controlled licit drugs via the Internet to have preliminary operating licences;

(b) The necessity for those companies within their national borders to supply internationally controlled licit drugs via the Internet only to persons who have met all the medical and legal obligations required to obtain such substances;

(c) The prohibition of authorized companies within their national borders from making direct deliveries of internationally controlled licit drugs outside their national borders when such deliveries are made to individual persons or companies not authorized to import such drugs, as opposed to being made to authorized companies in accordance with the relevant international conventions;

(d) The necessity for suppliers to keep records of all acquisitions and deliveries of internationally controlled licit drugs for a period of at least two years, in accordance with the relevant international conventions;

7. Encourages the competent national authorities to increase public awareness of the risks associated with the unauthorized acquisition of internationally controlled licit drugs via the Internet, in particular with regard to the uncertain quality of the products and the disadvantage that there is no accompanying medical supervision;

8. Requests the Secretary-General to transmit the text of the present resolution to all Member States for consideration.

International Narcotics Control Board

The 13-member International Narcotics Control Board held its seventy-ninth (9-13 February), eightieth (17-28 May) and eighty-first (27 October-12 November) sessions, all in Vienna.

In performing the tasks assigned to it under the international conventions, the Board maintained a permanent dialogue with Governments, and used the information received from them to identify the enforcement of treaty provisions requiring them to limit to medical and scientific purposes the licit manufacture of, trade in and distribution and use of narcotic drugs and psychotropic substances. The Board, which was requested by the international drug control treaties to report annually on the drug control situation worldwide, noted weaknesses in national control and treaty compliance and made recommendations for improvements at the national and international levels.

The Board's 2004 report [Sales No. E.05.XI.3] reviewed the interaction between illicit drug supply and demand strategies, emphasizing the need for policy makers, national authorities and others to utilize balanced, combined and integrated approaches at all levels for maximum effectiveness. It also examined the operation of the drug control system. The Board recommended that supply reduction activities should be integrated into and coordinated with demand reduction activities; a central national authority with a balanced representation of supply and demand reduction agencies should be considered; strategies and training programmes on the interaction of both dimensions of the problem should be developed; and research and analysis of existing programmes should be conducted. Governments should compile effective experiences of supply and demand strategies and exchange them with local, national, regional and international authorities. The eradication of illicit crop cultivation and interdiction in source areas should be accompanied by parallel social and alternative development programmes.

In its analysis of the operation of the international drug control system, the Board expressed concern that several States, including some major manufacturers, importers, exporters or users of narcotic drugs, did not comply with their treaty obligation to submit timely annual statistical reports. It urged States and territories concerned to establish their own estimates of narcotic drug requirements for 2005 and furnish them to the Board as soon as possible.

INCB, noting that the diversion of pharmaceutical products containing narcotic drugs from licit domestic distribution channels and their abuse remained problems in both developing and some developed countries, urged the World Health Organization (WHO) and UNODC to assist Governments in preventing their diversion and abuse and in monitoring trends in that area. Reports in various countries on the abuse of psychotropic substances and their seizure indicated that the diversion of pharmaceuticals containing such substances from licit domestic distribution channels had become the most important source for illicit drug suppliers.

With regard to precursors, INCB continued to act as the international focal point for the exchange of information under Project Prism, Operation Purple and Operation Topaz. During 2004, the activities of Project Prism, the international initiative against diversion of precursors of amphetamine-type stimulants, focused on the monitoring of international trade in safrole, preventing diversions of pharmaceutical preparations containing pseudoephedrine, and locating laboratories involved in the illicit manufacture of 1-phenyl-2-propanone. Operation Purple continued to be useful to Governments in preventing the diversion of potassium permanganate for use in the illicit manufacture of cocaine. The Board noted the increase in shipments of potassium permanganate to non-participating countries in Africa. Concerned at the limited reporting on its trafficking in countries in Central and South America, it urged them to establish mechanisms for providing information on seizures of the drug. Shipments of acetic anhydride to West Asia remained a special focus of Operation Topaz. The Board urged Governments to make full use of the mechanisms established for addressing the issue of heroin manufacture in West Asia. It emphasized the usefulness of operational meetings such as the one hosted by Austria in Vienna in June, to exchange information on investigations and decide on action for dismantling trafficking activities.

As to ensuring the availability of drugs for medical purposes, INCB urged producing countries to maintain opiate raw materials production at actual worldwide requirement levels. The low consumption of opioid analgesics for the treatment of moderate to severe pain, especially in developing countries, continued to be a matter of concern. The Board called on Governments to maintain a balance between the licit supply of and demand for opiate raw materials and to co-operate in preventing the proliferation of sources of their production. It urged producing countries to review the adequacy of controls over the licit cultivation of opium poppy in their territories. INCB convened two meetings (Vienna, May and October) with permanent representatives to the United Nations to examine the system for balancing the supply of and demand for opiates and to raise awareness of the necessity of measuring actual medical needs. Governments that had not done so were encouraged to examine the extent to which their health-care systems and laws and regulations permitted the use of opioids for medical purposes, to identify impediments thereto and to develop plans for long-term pain management strategies so as to facilitate the supply and availability of narcotic drugs.

The illicit sale of pharmaceuticals containing internationally controlled narcotic drugs and psychotropic substances through the Internet and by mail had become a global problem. Some 90 per cent of such sales by Internet pharmacies were without prescriptions, with substances of high abuse potential, such as certain opioids, stimulants and benzodiazepines, and health risks, such as fentanyl and secobarbital, being among those frequently traded. In October, the Board convened an expert group in Vienna to consider the problem, which recommended several measures to combat it. The Board emphasized the need for a mechanism to ensure the sharing of experience and the exchange of information on specific cases and the standardization of data collected. Urgent action was required specifically for sharing information on national legislation regarding Internet pharmacies and individual mail order shipments, which should be supported by the universal application of international regulations. Weaknesses in national regulatory systems for domestic distribution should be identified, and countries should cooperate with the pharmaceutical industry and Internet service providers.

The INCB report was supplemented by three technical reports: Narcotic Drugs: Estimated World Requirements for 2005; Statistics for 2003 [E/INCB/2004/2]; Psychotropic Substances: Statistics for 2003; Assessments of Medical and Scientific Requirements for Substances in Schedules II, III and IV [E/INCB/2004/3]; and Precursors and Chemicals Frequently Used in the Illicit Manufacture of Narcotic Drugs and Psychotropic Substances: Report of the International Narcotics Control Board for 2004 on the Implementation of Article 12 of the United Nations Convention against Illicit Traffic in Narcotic Drugs and Psychotropic Substances of 1988 [E/INCB/2004/4].

By decision 2004/245 of 21 July, the Economic and Social Council took note of the INCB report for 2003 [YUN 2003, p. 1270].

World drug situation

In its 2004 report [Sales No.E.05.XI.3], INCB presented a regional analysis of world drug abuse trends and control efforts, so that Governments would be kept aware of situations that might endanger the objectives of international drug control treaties.

Africa

Africa's limited institutional and technical capacity to deal with the drug issue in an effective and comprehensive manner had impacted negatively on national drug control strategies. Mechanisms or skilled human resources to counter drug trafficking were insufficient, and counseling, treatment and rehabilitation facilities for drug abusers were inadequate, as was the investment by Governments to deal with the situation, making the continent a very weak link in international drug control. The uncontrolled sale in licensed pharmacies of prescription medication containing narcotic drugs and psychotropic substances, the proliferation of illegal retail pharmaceutical outlets and the diversion from licit distribution channels of such products into street markets continued. Most African countries had no adequate legislative framework, lacked administrative mechanisms for the control of precursor chemicals, and were increasingly targeted by traffickers attempting to obtain the chemicals needed for illicit drug manufacture.

Cannabis remained the major drug of concern throughout the continent, but trafficking in and abuse of cocaine, heroin and amphetamine-type stimulants were increasing, as was drug use by injection. The abuse of psychotropic substances was facilitated by the absence of licit control measures in most African countries.

The region continued to be a major source of the cannabis found in its illicit markets or smuggled out, mainly into Europe. Cannabis production and trafficking were reported in all countries, while the production of cannabis resin was concentrated in Morocco, which accounted for 40 per cent of its global production, and 60 per cent of that seized worldwide. Cannabis herb remained the most abused illicit drug in most countries. Its cultivation for commercial purposes increased in several countries, especially in Eastern Africa, as a result of declining prices for other agricultural products. There was evidence to suggest that some civil conflicts in Africa were funded by profits from cannabis trafficking.

Cocaine originating in South America continued to enter Southern and Western Africa on its way to Europe and North America. Several countries reported seizures of cocaine, the largest being recorded in 2004 in the Gulf of Guinea. Cocaine abuse was relatively small in Africa, mainly confined to Nigeria, Senegal and South Africa, and transit countries, notably Cape Verde. Heroin originating in South-East and South-West Asia was smuggled into Eastern and Western Africa on its way to Europe and, to a lesser extent, North America. While there was an upward trend in trafficking, the quantities involved remained small and Africa accounted for only 0.5 per cent of all the heroin seized worldwide. A number of countries reported growing heroin abuse, albeit at a low level, most of it being smoked, but its use by injection was increasingly reported in Eastern and Southern Africa.

The abuse of pharmaceutical products, particularly those containing psychotropic substances, remained a matter of concern, as they were increasingly sold without medical prescription or adequate control measures. Ephedrine and diazepam were often sold by street vendors or in neighbourhood shops in several Western and Central African countries. In South Africa, the abuse in the Cape Town area of methamphetamine hydrochloride (commonly called "ice") and the growing availability of methcathinone (commonly called "cat") increased. The abuse of methylenedioxymethamphetamine (MDMA) (Ecstasy) seemed to be confined to South Africa. Amphetamine and methamphetamine tablets were smuggled from West Africa, via the Sudan, to Saudi Arabia and other countries in the Persian Gulf. Khat, which was not under international control, continued to be cultivated in Ethiopia and Kenya, the Comoros, Madagascar and the United Republic of Tanzania but abused mainly in Djibouti, Ethiopia and Somalia.

As to regional cooperation, the Board noted the continuing commitment of the African Union (AU) to drug control, and the steps taken to create a sustainable drug control coordination and advisory capacity and a review and monitoring system throughout Africa. Regional collaboration in drug control was achieved through regular meetings of regional law enforcement authorities. INCB and UNODC organized a training seminar on licit drug control for Eastern African countries in Nairobi, Kenya, in January. Activities against money-laundering were also initiated in a number of subregions: the Groupe intergouvernemental d'action contre le blanchiment d'argent en Afrique de l'Ouest (GIABA) (Dakar, Senegal, 22-25 June) approved the formal establishment of the GIABA secretariat and its 2004-2006 work plan; the countries in Central Africa inaugurated the Action Group against Money-Laundering in Central Africa (Bangui, Central African Republic, March); and the Eastern and Southern Africa Anti-Money Laundering Group held a meeting in Cape Town in May to assist its member States in the drafting and finalization of national plans to counter money-laundering and the financing of terrorism. At the national level, several African countries, including Algeria, Cape Verde, Madagascar and Mauritius, took steps to establish and implement national drug control master plans. In June, INCB sent missions to Madagascar and South Africa and a technical mission to Mauritania.

Americas

Central America and the Caribbean

Cannabis cultivation occurred in most Central American and Caribbean countries, most of which was abused locally or smuggled into neighbouring countries. Despite some success in eliminating illicit cannabis cultivation, Jamaica remained a major source. The subregion was also affected by large-scale cocaine trafficking and its increased abuse. In response to rigorous efforts by law enforcement agencies, drug trafficking organizations in some countries were adapting their methods, such as increasing their use of air and sea routes in Honduras and small boats in Jamaica, to transport illicit consignments.

Heroin abuse was relatively low, but the situation was changing as drug trafficking throughout the region increased, especially in the Dominican Republic and El Salvador. The abuse of pharmaceutical medications containing psychotropic substances was at a high level in certain countries, in particular flunitrazepam and diazepam, which were the main drugs of abuse among street children in Port-au-Prince, Haiti. Those substances were mostly diverted from the licit market or international donations, or were smuggled from Costa Rica, the Dominican Republic, the Netherlands Antilles, Panama and Venezuela. During the year, several countries took steps to strengthen the control of precursors. Guatemala adopted new regulations and established an inter-ministerial committee to coordinate its action, while Honduras commenced implementation of its national action plan to strengthen precursor control. The Bahamas adopted a national drug control plan for 2003-2008, and Jamaica implemented stricter controls over the shipment of controlled chemical substances at authorized ports of entry, but the lack of resources created difficulties for it in pursuing such operations. Concrete information on drug abuse in many Central American and Caribbean countries remained scarce.

North America

North America was the largest market in the world for illicit drugs. Cannabis, the most abused drug, was produced in significant amounts in all three countries in the region. In Canada, debate continued regarding proposed legislation for reducing the sanctions for the possession of small amounts of cannabis from criminal prosecution to a fine. Cocaine was trafficked in large quantities throughout North America, with the United States being the largest market for the drug. It was also abused in Canada and, to a lesser extent, in Mexico. The amount of cocaine seized by Mexico increased significantly and there were indications that the country was being used as a transit point for cocaine destined for Europe. In the United States, cocaine (in powder or crack form) continued to be regarded as the drug that posed the greatest threat.

In the United States, the abuse or misuse, especially by youth, of prescription drugs under international control, including oxycodone and hydrocodone used for pain treatment, was an increasing problem. The majority of prescription drugs abused were diverted from the licit market and obtained through Internet pharmacies. The illicit manufacture of methamphetamine in North America had increased, and its abuse in the United States remained at a high level. In Canada, the abuse of amphetamine-type stimulants (ATS), including MDMA (Ecstasy) and methamphetamine, had also increased.

The three countries in North America continued their cooperation, in particular in the area of law enforcement, registering major successes against international drug trafficking organizations and dismantling money-laundering rings. At the national level, Canada commenced the first national survey on drug abuse since 1994, and Mexico continued its law enforcement efforts against drug trafficking organizations. The Board noted that the large amount of drugs trafficked through Mexico left it vulnerable to the spillover effect, and there were high rates of abuse for some drugs in the northern part of the country. The Board encouraged the Government to continue strengthening its efforts in demand reduction. The rate of drug abuse in the United States remained high, and the Board encouraged the Government to continue its efforts in drug abuse prevention and to take the differences in drug abuse among various ethnic groups into account in formulating and implementing demand reduction programmes. In July 2004, law enforcement authorities in the country closed down several websites used to sell controlled psychotropic substances.

South America

In South America, drug control continued to be an issue of considerable political importance, not only to the region but also to the rest of the world. Drug trafficking, and the money-laundering and corruption associated with it, continued to endanger stability in the region, and traffickers responded to interdiction efforts by using different trafficking routes, entering into new strategic alliances with trafficking organizations from other regions and merging organizations. Several Governments in the region achieved considerable success against drug trafficking networks as a result of strengthened regional and bilateral cooperation in interdiction efforts. In Colombia, the Government made progress in combating drug trafficking and the guerrilla and paramilitary groups involved.

Illicit cultivation of cannabis continued to be detected in most countries and increased in several of them. However, cannabis herb and resin were not the primary drugs of abuse. In Venezuela, they were second only to cocaine abuse, and in Brazil they ranked second after benzodiazepines.

In 2003, the total area under coca bush cultivation in Bolivia, Colombia and Peru decreased by 11 per cent compared with 2002. However, that reduction appeared to be offset by increasing agricultural yields. In Colombia, where the total area under cultivation decreased the most, mainly due to strict law enforcement and crop spraying, increases were recorded in certain parts of the country and was no longer confined to remote areas. There was also a shift towards smaller plots and high-yield varieties. In Peru, the reduction in the area under cultivation was partly offset by higher yields, resulting from improved farming techniques, as was the case in Bolivia, where the yield of coca leaf was greater than in previous years. In Ecuador and Venezuela, illicit coca bush cultivation continued to be reported in border areas close to Colombia. The Board emphasized that the continued reduction of coca bush cultivation, either voluntarily or as a result of interdiction efforts, would depend on the ability to offer sustainable alternative livelihoods to farmers in the producing countries. The international community should therefore continue to support and expand alternative development initiatives. In Bolivia and Peru, numerous effective alternative development schemes were under way; however, too many coca bush farmers remained dependent on income from such illicit cultivation. In Bolivia, clashes between growers and the Government, which was trying to reduce such cultivation, continued. In Peru, the frequency and violence of such clashes increased, and some federations of coca bush growers were demanding the legalization of such cultivation.

Cocaine trafficking, mainly of transit trafficking of consignments destined for the United States or, increasingly, Europe, mostly affected Brazil, Ecuador and Venezuela, although it increased in other countries in the region, such as Argentina and Chile. Increasing amounts from Brazil and Colombia were smuggled through Portugal into Portuguese-speaking countries in Africa, primarily Angola and Mozambique, and also into South Africa. Cocaine from South America was also trans-shipped via several African countries to Europe.

Heroin manufacture continued, mainly in Colombia, most of which was destined for the United States. Heroin was smuggled out of the region through Venezuela. The illicit manufacture of psychotropic substances in the region was limited, but stimulants, mainly smuggled out of Europe, continued to be seized in some countries. The diversion and over-prescription of a variety of psychotropic substances also continued.

As to regional cooperation, countries in South America continued to participate in the multilateral cooperation mechanisms of the Inter-American Drug Abuse Control Commission of the Organization of American States, the main regional forum for coordinating drug control issues in the Americas. In addition, many States with common geographical characteristics or shared borders entered into bilateral or multilateral agreements, to which they continued to adhere. The United States and countries in Europe provided resources for drug control in South America through bilateral and multilateral agreements. At the national level, in Bolivia, the 2004-2008 integrated strategy to fight drug trafficking was approved in September and the 2004-2008 national plan for alternative development in May. Peru's 2002-2007 national drug control strategy was approved in January, while in Ecuador, the decree on the national policy to fight drugs strengthened the role of the competent authority and provided for a balanced approach between demand and supply reduction activities.

The Board encouraged Brazil, to which it had sent a mission in December 2003, to continue to attach high priority to drug control issues and, in particular, to ensure that all bodies involved in drug-related issues had adequate resources. It should also monitor and analyse prescription patterns more closely, especially those for medicines such as benzodiazepines or medications containing codeine, and to ensure cooperation between the regulatory and law enforcement authorities involved in the control of precursors.

Asia

East and South-East Asia

In East and South-East Asia, cannabis continued to be cultivated and abused, especially in Brunei Darussalam, Indonesia, Malaysia, Mongolia, the Philippines and the Republic of Korea. Meanwhile, illicit opium poppy production continued to decline, mainly in the Lao People's Democratic Republic and Myanmar, where, as a result of continued government efforts, the total area under cultivation was reduced by a further 45 per cent and 28 per cent, respectively; total production of raw opium also declined by some 64 per cent and 54 per cent, respectively, compared to the previous year. Thailand was no longer a major source of illicit opium and heroin, but small-scale opium poppy cultivation took place in remote areas in the northern part of the country. Seizures of opium were reported in several countries, including Japan, the Lao People's Democratic Republic, Malaysia, Myanmar, the Republic of Korea and Viet Nam.

Opiates were the most abused drugs in the region, the highest prevalence being reported in the Lao People's Democratic Republic, Myanmar and Thailand. Opium abuse increased in Hong Kong, China, as well as in Malaysia and the Republic of Korea. Some 70 per cent of China's registered drug addicts were heroin abusers, and Cambodia, Japan, Malaysia, Myanmar, Thailand and Viet Nam reported increased heroin abuse. Increased cocaine abuse was reported in a few countries; in the region as a whole, however, cocaine trafficking and abuse remained limited. Most of the countries in the region, including China, Japan, Malaysia, Myanmar, the Philippines and the Republic of Korea, reported a significant increase in the amount of ATS seized. The East and South-East Asia region accounted for nearly 90 per cent of all seizures worldwide, with large seizures of crystallized methamphet-amine being reported in Japan, Myanmar, the Philippines and Thailand. The Lao People's Democratic Republic emerged as an important transit country for the trafficking of ATS illicitly manufactured in the border areas of Myanmar and destined for Thailand. Cambodia was also increasingly used as a transit country. A significant increase in the amount of MDMA (Ecstasy) seized was reported in the majority of countries in 2003. While its abuse remained relatively low compared with that of methamphetamine, it increased in Cambodia, China, Thailand and Viet Nam.

At the regional level, the Board welcomed continued cooperation under the Association of South-East Asian Nations and the China Cooperative Operations in Response to Dangerous Drugs Plan of Action, including the signing, in January, of a memorandum of understanding to develop strategies for combating transnational crime, including drug trafficking, terrorism and money-laundering. The annual meeting (Krabi, Thailand, 17-19 May) of senior officials of the signatories of the 1993 memorandum of understanding on drug control between the countries in the Mekong area (Cambodia, China, Lao People's Democratic Republic, Myanmar, Thailand, Viet Nam) agreed to strengthen regional cooperation and establish institutional links to share innovative approaches and best practices in the areas of community-based alternative development and the elimination of illicit opium poppy cultivation.

INCB sent missions to Indonesia in March and to Thailand in May. It also made a technical visit to Timor-Leste in March.

South Asia

South Asia continued to experience increased drug availability and abuse because of its proximity to the major opiate production areas, the Golden Crescent (Afghanistan, Iran, Pakistan) and the Golden Triangle (Laos, Myanmar, Thailand), widespread cultivation of cannabis and increasing diversion of pharmaceutical products.

Cannabis was produced and abused in large quantities, with Bangladesh and India being important sources for cannabis herb and Nepal a major source for cannabis resin. The flow of heroin from Afghanistan towards South Asia increased. In India, quantities of licitly produced opium continued to be diverted into illicit channels, for local abuse or for processing into heroin to be sold on illicit markets outside the area. A low-quality heroin, known as "brown sugar" was sold locally or smuggled into Maldives and Sri Lanka. The trafficking and abuse of pharmaceuticals containing narcotic drugs, such as codeine, remained widespread in the region. In India, because of its lower price and easy availability, propoxyphene abuse by injection was as prevalent as that of heroin. Pharmaceutical preparations containing psychotropic substances, notably benzodiazepines and analgesics, were diverted from licit distribution channels and smuggled through South Asia into countries outside the region, such as the Russian Federation and Scandinavian countries. The abuse of analgesics, anxiolytics and sedative hypnotics increased in the region, as well as buprenorphine.

India was the world's largest illicit manufacturer of methaqualone (Mandrax), destined for South Africa. Laboratories illicitly manufacturing methaqualone were also used for the illicit manufacture of other psychotropic substances, notably MDMA (Ecstasy) and amphetamines. The anaesthetic ketamine was abused in India's Goa tourist area, while inhalants were abused by the poorer segments of society and street children.

At the regional level, India and Pakistan identified focal points for sharing information and operational intelligence on drug trafficking, and customs officials from India and Sri Lanka adopted operational-level strategies to combat drug smuggling, while India and Maldives decided to establish contact point for law enforcement activities, including for drug smuggling. Noting that controls over the licit manufacture of, trade in and distribution of narcotic drugs and psychotropic substances in India needed to be strengthened, the Board called on the Government to step up its law enforcement activities, especially at the retail level, and to carry out education and information campaigns regarding the abuse liability of narcotic drugs and psychotropic substances.

West Asia

The central elements of the drug situation in West Asia were Afghanistan's opium production and its impact on peace and security, as illicit drug production and related activities reached an unprecedented level in 2004, threatening the country's stability. The widespread cultivation of opium poppy, the processing of and trafficking in opiates and the illicit drug trade dominated Afghanistan's economic, social and political life, and despite the efforts of the Government, assisted by the international community, the drug control situation continued to deteriorate. In other countries in the region, drug trafficking and abuse increased, undermining social and economic stability. In Central Asia, concerns were raised over trafficking in and abuse of Afghan opiates and the illicit movement of acetic anhydride, while injecting drug abuse became the main contributory factor to the spread of HIV/AIDS. Countries on the Arabian peninsula were more frequently used as transit points for heroin and cannabis destined for Europe, while precursors were smuggled in the opposite direction. The abuse of opiates, especially heroin, increased in the subregion, as did the already widespread abuse of synthetic drugs.

Cannabis, the most widely available and abused drug in West Asia, was illicitly cultivated in several countries and grown wild in others, including Afghanistan, Pakistan and Kazakhstan, where the Government was developing new strategies to prevent its illegal harvesting.

In Afghanistan, the illicit cultivation of opium poppy continued unabated, reaching an estimated 3,600 tons in 2003, more than three quarters of the world's illicit production, and 4,200 tons in 2004, despite efforts to counter the trend; the total area under cultivation increased from 80,000 hectares in 2003 to over 130,000 hectares in 2004. Eradication efforts were limited to only one province. In Pakistan, illicit opium poppy cultivation, which had re-emerged in 2003 after years of decline, continued in 2004, mostly in non-traditional growing areas. The processing of opium into heroin continued on a large scale in many countries, including in Afghanistan, the main producer. Trafficking in opiates from Afghanistan, and cannabis resin originating in various West Asian countries, to, or through, other countries in the region and to Europe, continued on a large scale, while synthetic drugs and precursors were frequently smuggled in the opposite direction. The main transit countries were Iran and Pakistan, the countries of Central Asia and increasingly those in the Persian Gulf, such as Kuwait and the United Arab Emirates, as well as Turkey.

Drug abuse was a serious concern in many countries in West Asia. Iran reported an increase in heroin consumption, including injecting drug use, and opium remained the most widely used drug in that country. Pakistan had one of the highest prevalence rates for heroin abuse in the world, where cannabis was also widely abused. Countries in the eastern Mediterranean and on the Arabian peninsula experienced an increase in the abuse of opiates, especially heroin, in addition to the widespread abuse of synthetic drugs. As a consequence of large quantities of illicit drugs being trafficked throughout Central Asia, there was a rising incidence of heroin, opium and cannabis abuse. The abuse of psychotropic substances, mainly benzodiazepines and barbiturates, which were often freely available and obtained without prescription, increased, particularly among women. Of increasing concern in many countries was the abuse of inhalants, mainly by youth, especially street children.

At the regional level, Afghan representatives, in July, participated in the Intergovernmental Technical Committee meeting, a forum for the exchange of drug law enforcement information in the region. In August, Pakistan hosted a seminar for member States of the South Asian Association for Regional Cooperation to review progress in achieving the goals related to precursor control set by the General Assembly's twentieth special session [YUN 1998, p. 1135]. A number of bilateral and multilateral agreements were adopted by countries in the region to intensify cooperation among national drug control agencies, promote joint law enforcement operations, harmonize national drug control legislation and build capacities. On 17 June, the member States of the Shanghai Cooperation Organization (China, Kazakhstan, Kyrgyzstan, Russian Federation, Tajikistan, Uzbekistan) adopted the Tashkent Declaration, expressing their common objective at joint efforts to counter new threats, including illicit drug trafficking, and to foster cooperation.

Noting the lack of long-term and sustainable solutions to the development of alternative livelihoods in opium-producing areas in Afghanistan, the Board emphasized the need to address that situation in a comprehensive manner, with support from the international community.

In July, an INCB mission visited Pakistan. The Board encouraged that Government to, among other things, monitor the domestic manufacture and distribution of narcotic drugs and psychotropic substances, while ensuring availability of and accessibility to controlled drugs for medical purposes. The Board, which visited Turkmenistan in December 2003, stressed that, in view of its proximity to Afghanistan, it was important that the country complied with its obligations under international treaties, took efforts against illicit drug trafficking and co-operated with the international community.

Afghanistan

The Secretary-General, in his March report on the situation in Afghanistan [A/58/742-S/2004/230], said that the international counter-narcotics conference on Afghanistan, organized by Afghanistan's Counter-Narcotics Directorate, the United Kingdom and UNODC (Kabul, 8-9 February), identified the priorities for: mainstreaming drug control into all development sectors; improving coordination among principal ministries and donors; extending Afghanistan's counter-narcotics police to priority regions; and providing effective drug-awareness programmes and skill-based training.

At the Berlin Conference on Afghanistan (31 March–1 April), the Transitional Authority of Afghanistan and its six neighbours (China, Iran, Pakistan, Tajikistan, Turkmenistan, Uzbekistan) adopted the Berlin Declaration on Counter-Narcotics within the Framework of the Kabul Declaration on Good-Neighbourly Relations, which provided, among other things, for increased collaboration in the fight against narcotics and the establishment of a security belt around Afghanistan.

The Board called on the Government of Afghanistan and the international community to continue to accord drug control the highest priority and to strengthen efforts to address the drug problem in a comprehensive manner, within the framework of overall development plans and programmes, to establish law and order throughout the country and make alternative development in areas under drug crop cultivation more effective.

On 21 July [meeting 47], the Economic and Social Council, on the recommendation of the Commission on Narcotic Drugs [E/2004/28 & Corr.1], adopted resolution 2004/37 without vote [agenda item 14 (d)].

Providing support to the Government of Afghanistan in its efforts to eliminate illicit opium and foster stability and security in the region

The Economic and Social Council

Recommends to the General Assembly the adoption of the following draft resolution:

[For text, see General Assembly resolution 59/161 below.]

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 20 December [meeting 74], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Third Committee [A/59/495], adopted resolution 59/161 without vote [agenda item 97].

Providing support to the Government of Afghanistan in its efforts to eliminate illicit opium and foster stability and security in the region

The General Assembly,

Recalling the United Nations Millennium Declaration outlining the interrelated commitments, goals and targets to be achieved on, inter alia, development, peace and security and setting the required framework for international cooperation for achieving those goals,

Recognizing that the threat emanating from illicit opium poppy cultivation and production of and trafficking in illicit opium, as addressed at the Conference on Drug Routes from Central Asia to Europe, held in Paris on 21 and 22 May 2003, is a serious challenge to the security and stability of Afghanistan, its neighbouring countries and the region and poses a problem for countries throughout the world,

Taking note of Afghanistan: Opium Survey 2003, published by the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime, Recognizing the strong and continuing commitment made by the Transitional Administration of Afghanistan at the institutional, legal and administrative levels to eliminate opium poppy cultivation by 2013,

Reaffirming the commitments undertaken by Member States in the Political Declaration adopted by the General Assembly at its twentieth special session, in which Member States recognized that action against the world drug problem was a common and shared responsibility and expressed their conviction that it must be addressed in a multilateral setting,

Recalling that the Security Council, on 17 June 2003, called upon the international community to provide assistance to the Transitional Administration of Afghanistan in collaboration with the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime and in line with the national drug control strategy,

Recalling also that, in section II of its resolution 58/141 of 22 December 2003, the General Assembly reaffirmed the Joint Ministerial Statement and further measures to implement the action plans emanating from the twentieth special session of the General Assembly, adopted during the ministerial segment of the forty-sixth session of the Commission on Narcotic Drugs, and recommended that adequate help be provided to Afghanistan in support of the commitment of the Transitional Administration of Afghanistan to eliminate illicit opium,

Stressing the importance and urgency of the implementation of the five action plans adopted by the International Counter-Narcotics Conference on Afghanistan, held in Kabul on 8 and 9 February 2004, which were to form part of the discussion at the international conference entitled “Afghanistan and the International Community: a Partnership for the Future”, held in Berlin on 31 March and 1 April 2004, and the conclusion of the Kabul conference that the illicit drug issue is a top priority of all those interested in securing the future of Afghanistan,

Recalling that, in the Joint Ministerial Statement and further measures to implement the action plans emanating from the twentieth special session of the General Assembly, the ministers and other government representatives participating in the ministerial segment of the forty-sixth session of the Commission on Narcotic Drugs recommended that adequate help be provided to Afghanistan within the framework of the comprehensive international strategy carried out, inter alia, under the auspices of the United Nations and through other multilateral forums, in support of the commitment of the Transitional Government of Afghanistan to eliminate the illicit cultivation of opium poppy and in response to the unique situation of that country, reaffirmed that that should help the provision of alternative livelihoods and the fight against illicit trafficking in drugs and precursors within Afghanistan and in neighbouring States and countries along trafficking routes, including the strengthening of “security belts” in the region, and that extensive efforts had to be made to reduce the demand for drugs globally in order to contribute to the sustainability of the elimination of illicit cultivation in Afghanistan and, in that context, affirmed that their response to that unique situation would not detract from their commitment and resources devoted to the fight against drugs in other parts of the world,

Recalling also that the International Narcotics Control Board, in its report for 2003, pointed out that trade in Afghan opiates generated funds that corrupted institutions, financed terrorism and insurgency and led to destabilization of the region,

Recalling further the appeal to the international community made by the International Narcotics Control Board on 12 February 2004 to support fully the Afghan authorities in addressing the drug control situation, in order to meet the requirements of the international drug treaties, including article 14 of the Single Convention on Narcotic Drugs of 1961 and that Convention as amended by the 1972 Protocol,

1. Welcomes the bilateral and multilateral support being provided by the international community, through the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime and other organizations;

2. Expresses its support for the efforts of Member States aimed at strengthening regional cooperation in order to counter the threat to the international community posed by the illicit cultivation of opium poppy in Afghanistan and its illicit trade;

3. Calls upon the international community to enhance financial and technical support to Afghanistan in order to enable the Government to implement successfully its national drug control strategy and thereby reduce the demand for illicit drugs in Afghanistan and the threat that illicit opium poppy cultivation and illicit opium trade have created to the peace, stability and socio-economic recovery of Afghanistan and to the security of the region and the other parts of the world;

4. Urges all stakeholders to accelerate efforts to implement a combined strategy, comprising law enforcement, eradication, interdiction, demand reduction and awareness-building, including alternative livelihoods conceived in a broader development context than currently understood, with a view to creating sustainable livelihoods, independent of illicit opium;

5. Encourages the Transitional Administration of Afghanistan to accelerate the implementation of the commitment that it courageously made to the five action plans adopted by the International Counter-Narcotics Conference on Afghanistan, held in Kabul on 8 and 9 February 2004;

6. Reaffirms the need to strengthen measures to reduce the global demand for illicit drugs, in order to support and contribute to the sustainability of efforts to eliminate illicit opium in Afghanistan;

7. Requests the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime, subject to the availability of voluntary funds, which might be either from general-purpose funds, in accordance with the Commission on Narcotic Drugs guidelines for the use of general-purpose funds, or from earmarked funds, and encourages concerned Member States, international organizations and financial institutions to routinely mainstream counter-narcotics measures as part of their development cooperation strategies, in coordination with the development objectives of the Government of Afghanistan, so that sustainable alternative livelihoods are created in Afghanistan.

Europe

Cannabis was the most widely abused illicit drug in Europe, accounting for an estimated 20 per cent of its abuse worldwide. It was cultivated and trafficked in Western Europe, mainly in the Netherlands and, to a lesser extent, in Switzerland. Cannabis herb was increasingly cultivated locally, particularly in the European Union (EU) countries, while Morocco and the Russian Federation were major sources of cannabis resin. Albania and other Balkan countries (Bulgaria, Croatia, Serbia and Montenegro and The former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia) plus the Russian Federation and Slovenia remained the main suppliers to Eastern Europe.

Portugal and Spain, the main points of entry for cocaine from South America, accounted for 5 per cent of the cocaine seized worldwide. The amount of cocaine seized in some Western European countries (Belgium, France, Italy) increased, as well as in Eastern Europe, albeit at a lower level. Cocaine abuse also increased in Europe, although the level of abuse in Eastern Europe was well below that of Western Europe.

Whereas heroin abuse was stable or declining in Western Europe, it increased in Eastern Europe and in the Commonwealth of Independent States (CIS). Some 4 million people in Europe abused opiates, two thirds of whom were in Eastern Europe, primarily in the Russian Federation, which had become the largest heroin market in Europe. In Western Europe, in descending order, Luxembourg, Portugal, the United Kingdom, Italy and Switzerland had the highest level of abuse. Illicit opium poppy cultivation was at a low level in Central and Eastern Europe and in the CIS States, but the trafficking volume was high. Heroin seizures increased in Europe, 90 per cent of which came from Afghanistan. The northern and southern branches of the Balkan route continued to supply up to 80 per cent of the heroin distributed in Europe.

The illicit manufacture and abuse of ATS in Europe were significant. While the abuse level stabilized in Western Europe, Eastern Europe was becoming increasingly important in terms of the manufacture and abuse potential of amphetamines and MDMA (Ecstasy). The Netherlands remained their main source of supply, although increasing amounts originated from Central and Eastern Europe, especially Estonia and Poland. Preparations containing psychotropic substances were abused in several countries in Europe.

Regional cooperation remained strong with the eastward expansion of the EU, and Southern European and CIS countries were becoming increasingly open to regional partnerships. The Russian Federation joined Operation Purple, and Serbia and Montenegro joined Operation Topaz. Ukraine participated in Project Prism and Operation Purple and took part in Operation Topaz as an observer. Joint efforts were undertaken in implementing measures against illicit drug supply and money-laundering, while emphasizing the drug abuse prevention and treatment components of national strategies and integrating drug control activities of the national authorities of the new EU member States into the framework of the European Monitoring Centre for Drugs and Drug Addiction.

In 2004, INCB sent missions to Belgium, Denmark, Portugal and Sweden, examined the drug situations in Albania and Serbia and Montenegro, and reviewed Ukraine's progress in implementing its recommendations.

Oceania

In Australia, hydroponic cultivation, because of its higher yield and the perceived reduced risk of detection, continued to be the most common method for cultivating cannabis for the domestic market. In New Zealand, cannabis growers were also involved in the illicit manufacture of methamphetamine in clandestine laboratories. Heroin abuse declined in Australia, but the purity of seized heroin increased slightly. Most of the heroin abused in Australia originated in South-East Asia. Heroin detection increased, while there was a decrease in the amount of heroin seized, suggesting a shift in methods used by traffickers. However, the reduction in its availability resulted in heroin abusers turning to other drugs.

Demand for ATS, including MDMA (Ecstasy), remained high in Australia and New Zealand, where ATS illicit manufacture and abuse increased. The two countries accounted for the majority of the drug and precursor seizures made in Oceania. Trafficking organizations based outside New Zealand shipped large quantities of ATS into the country. ATS precursors, such as ephedrine and pseudoephedrine, were increasingly seized at the borders; medicines containing those substances were smuggled into New Zealand by mail and air passengers from China and South-East Asian countries for use in the illicit manufacture of methamphetamine. In Australia, the increasing abuse of gamma-hydroxybutyric acid, ketamine and various anti-depressants was cause for concern, as was the abuse of several benzodiazepines diverted from licit distribution channels. Most of the Pacific island countries remained vulnerable to drug transit trafficking and to ATS abuse.

At the regional level, the Board welcomed the launching in the Cook Islands of a Combined Law Agency Group, and the establishment in Suva, Fiji, in June, of the Pacific Transnational Crime Coordination Centre. Cooperation between law enforcement agencies in Australia and police authorities from several countries, including Cambodia, Peru and the Philippines, resulted in major drug seizures. The Board encouraged Australia to intensify its cooperation with countries in South America to fight cocaine trafficking and abuse. At the national level, Australia adopted a national drug strategy for 2004-2009.

UN action to combat drug abuse

UN Office on Drugs and Crime

The United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime (UNODC) implemented the Organization's drug programme and crime programme (see p. 1110) in an integrated manner, addressing the interrelated issues of drug control, crime prevention and international terrorism in the context of sustainable development and human security. The drug programme continued to be implemented in accordance with General Assembly resolution 45/179 [YUN 1990, p. 874]. The Office served as the central drug control entity responsible for coordinating all UN drug control activities, and as the repository of technical expertise in international drug control for the UN Secretariat. It acted on behalf of the Secretary-General in fulfilling his responsibilities under the terms of international treaties and resolutions relating to drug control; and provided services to the General Assembly, the Economic and Social Council, and committees and conferences dealing with drug control matters. On 15 March, the Secretary-General issued a bulletin setting out the organizational structure of the Office [ST/SGB/2004/6].

The UNODC Executive Director described the Office's 2004 activities in a report to the Commission on Narcotic Drugs and to the Commission on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice [E/CN.7/2005/6-E/CN.15/2005/2]. UNODC supported the implementation of the three international drug control conventions and provided legal assistance, working with national and international partners to help jurisdictions establish and run drug treatment courts. Programme delivery was decentralized through its presence in the field and through regional and country initiatives. In Afghanistan, legal assistance activities supported authorities in implementing the new drug control law and strengthening the drug control machinery, including the training of judges, prosecutors and law enforcement personnel. In the Caucasus and Eastern Europe, the Office assisted task groups in developing workplans for drug law reform and in drafting amendments to their drug control laws. In law enforcement, UNODC focused on training officials in specialized investigative techniques and advanced intelligence software. It promoted best practices in policing and facilitated cross-border cooperation. Through its Laboratory and Scientific Support Programme, UNODC enhanced national capacity for drug-testing, and provided technical assistance to strengthen national laboratories and related institutions in Africa, Asia, the Caucasus, Latin America and the Russian Federation. To support law enforcement agencies in countering illicit drug production, manufacture and trafficking, the Office produced and distributed field test kits for the rapid detection of controlled drugs and precursors, and developed new tests for identifying non-scheduled chemicals used in clandestine heroin processing.

UNODC also focused on sustainable livelihoods, supporting the implementation of alternative development programmes and projects in all key illicit drug-producing regions. It assisted Afghanistan to establish institutional capacities on alternative development; supported Andean countries in generating agro-industries with proven markets; and helped the Lao People's Democratic Republic and Myanmar in further reducing opium poppy cultivation, with a focus on food security, health and improved market access. UNODC also assisted Morocco in revising its development plan for the northern region to address the problem of cannabis cultivation. It supported Afghanistan, Bolivia, Colombia, the Lao People's Democratic Republic, Morocco, Myanmar and Peru in carrying out monitoring surveys of illicit crops. The UNODC Illicit Crop Monitoring Programme assisted the international community and Governments concerned to monitor the extent and evolution of the illicit cultivation of narcotic crops, and to assess the progress of the measures implemented to eliminate or reduce illicit crop cultivation by 2008. It also assisted the Governments concerned to plan and deliver alternative development and poverty alleviation interventions. The Office strengthened inter-agency collaboration in alternative development, developing, with the United Nations Industrial Development Organization, a joint project in the Lao People's Democratic Republic, and implementing alternative development projects jointly with the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations, the International Labour Organization and other aid agencies.

As to public health promotion and drug demand reduction, the Office, in collaboration with Governments in all regions, implemented projects to expand and improve drug dependence treatment and rehabilitation services. Under the Global Assessment Programme on Drug Abuse, it provided technical assistance in training, situation analysis and network establishment to 51 countries.

UNODC made the African region a priority and cooperated with partners in programme delivery. It provided technical and advisory services to the AU under the New Partnership for Africa's Development [YUN 2001, p. 899], and, in collaboration with the Economic Community of West African States and the Southern African Development Community, ran subregional drug demand reduction expert networks in Eastern, Northern and Western Africa. In August, UNODC launched a new Africa-wide project on the prevention of drug abuse and HIV/AIDS. It also strengthened the capacity of treatment and rehabilitation centres.

UNODC restructured its operations and streamlined its processes, emphasizing a new integrated approach on drugs and crime and the critical role of prevention in combating them. Reforms were initiated in the areas of human resources, finance and information technology. In July, UNODC established a partnership with the World Bank on money-laundering, terrorist financing, corruption, HIV/AIDS and alternative livelihoods.

In June, UNODC published the first annual World Drug Report 2004 [Sales No. E.04.XI.16] which merged the former Global Illicit Drug Trends with the World Drug Report.

Administrative and budgetary matters

A February report by the Executive Director [E/CN.7/2004/11] provided an overview on the status of implementation of Commission resolution 46/9 [YUN 2003, p. 1281] on securing assured and predictable funding for the United Nations International Drug Control Programme (UNDCP). Among the important developments, the Executive Director noted, in respect of the adequacy of the resources provided to the programme, that the General Assembly, in resolution 58/270 [YUN 2003, p. 1399] on the 2004-2005 programme budget, had approved real resource growth of only 1.1 per cent, rejecting additional posts proposed by the Secretary-General. In the new 2006-2007 strategic framework (see below), the Executive Director intended to request additional resources; consultation in that regard would be held in early 2005 during preparation of the 2006-2007 regular budget. As to exploring ways of obtaining financial donations, significant success had been recorded in mobilizing resources under cost-sharing arrangements with a number of countries, and negotiations were ongoing with other States. Direct contributions were also made by some organizations. As a result of good governance during the 2002-2003 biennium, general-purpose income increased by 23 per cent, which, coupled with cost-saving measures, prevented a potential deficit and restored the general-purpose fund above the minimum of $8 million.

In a March note to the Commission on Narcotic Drugs and to the Commission on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice [E/CN.7/2004/12-E/CN.15/2004/13], prepared pursuant to Assembly resolution 58/269 [YUN 2003, p. 1395], the Secretary-General submitted the programme on drugs and crime of the proposed UN strategic framework for the 2006-2007 biennium (see p. 1400). The framework consisted of a plan outline, reflecting longer-term objectives of the Organization, and a two-year biennial programme plan. The two Commissions were invited to review the proposed biennial programme plan for the programme on drugs and crime, annexed to the note, and to provide comments to the Secretary-General.

On 19 March [E/2004/28 & Corr.1], the Commission was unable to undertake detailed consideration of the proposed 2006-2007 framework, due to limited time; a detailed discussion was to take place later.

Commission on Narcotic Drugs

The Commission on Narcotic Drugs held its forty-seventh session in Vienna from 15 to 19 March, during which it recommended five resolutions and two decisions for adoption by the Economic and Social Council and three resolutions for recommendation by the Council to the General Assembly. It also adopted six resolutions to be brought to the attention of the Council.

Following the closure of the forty-seventh session on 19 March, the Commission opened its forty-eighth session to elect the new chairman and other bureau members.

By decision 2004/244 of 21 July, the Council took note of the Commission's report on its forty-seventh session [E/2004/28 & Corr.1] and approved the provisional agenda and documentation for the forty-eighth (2005) session, on the understanding that they would be finalized at inter-session meetings, to be held in Vienna at no additional cost.

Drug demand reduction and drug abuse

In 2004, the Commission on Narcotic Drugs had before it a January report by the Secretariat [E/CN.7/2004/2], which provided an overview of the world situation with regard to drug abuse and trends between 1998 and 2002 and the mechanisms used to measure trends and improve the global database. The analysis was based on information provided by 106 countries and territories (a response rate of 55 per cent) that had completed and returned part II of the annual reports questionnaire for 2002 by 16 December 2003, in compliance with their obligations under the international treaties. Analysis of the reported trends indicated that cannabis abuse increased in most countries; however, in those countries with high prevalence and long-term prevention efforts, prevalence stabilized or even declined. Abuse of opioids also increased in most regions, with significant differences within the various regions. Amphetamine-type stimulants (ATS) were a major drug of choice and abuse increased in all regions. Cocaine abuse was not very widespread, although it increased slightly in the Americas, the main region of consumption. The report also examined the role of the biennial reports for assessing progress in demand reduction and the annual reports questionnaire for assessing progress with regard to drug abuse. It was noted that not all countries were in a position to provide data on all the key indicators, but were doing their best to improve their data collection systems. However, to address the problem, a proactive approach was required. UNODC, through the Global Assessment Programme on Drug Abuse and other programmes, was providing advice in that regard.

The Commission, by a 19 March resolution [E/2004/28 & Corr.1 (res. 47/1)] on optimizing integrated drug information systems, requested UNODC to promote the development of integrated drug information systems by utilizing data on both the demand for and the supply of illicit drugs and by strengthening collaboration with INCB, WHO and other international bodies. It asked UNODC and regional organizations to continue providing expert advice to States on epidemiological methods of collecting information. The UNODC Executive Director was encouraged to strengthen the Global Assessment Programme on Drug Abuse to improve data collection and analysis on the extent and patterns of and trends in drug abuse and the related negative health consequences, taking into account regional initiatives and using epidemiologically sound and cost-effective methods, and to report in 2005.

HIV/AIDS and other blood-borne viruses

As requested by the Commission in its resolution 46/2 [YUN 2003, p. 1284], the Executive Director submitted a January report [E/CN.7/2004/3 & Corr.1], which reviewed the status of the HIV/AIDS epidemic and its linkages with drug use, highlighting some UNODC programme activities in support of Member States. It described collaborative efforts with the Joint United Nations Programme on HIV/AIDS (UNAIDS) and its co-sponsors and UNODC activities to strengthen its capacity to address HIV/AIDS issues as they related to drug use.

According to the report, there were some 12.6 million injecting drug users in the world; in some areas, up to 80 per cent of them were HIV-positive. In a number of countries (Indonesia, Myanmar, Russian Federation, Ukraine, Viet Nam), the majority of people living with HIV/AIDS were injecting drug users; and in others (India, Thailand, Ukraine, Viet Nam), the epidemic started in the drug injecting population and moved to the general public. It was estimated that at least 10 per cent of people living with HIV/AIDS worldwide were injecting drug users. UNODC, as co-sponsor of UNAIDS, was the convening agency for all matters pertaining to injecting drug use as it related to HIV/AIDS. Over the past two years, it had assumed a leadership role in terms of information development, advocacy and capacity-building. It had also informed its staff in the field about how to address HIV/AIDS issues among injecting drug users, emphasizing the need to address HIV/AIDS issues related to drug use in a comprehensive and holistic manner. UNODC was significantly strengthening its capacity to respond to HIV/AIDS issues related to drug use, by establishing an HIV/AIDS unit within the Division of Operations, which was to be operational by March 2004. At the regional level, it was placing HIV/AIDS advisers in its regional offices in Bangkok, Moscow and Tashkent, and planned organizing capacity-building events, including in-house information-sharing and training in addressing HIV/AIDS issues related to drug abuse, for staff in countries where drug use was a significant route of HIV transmission.

On 19 March [E/2004/28 & Corr.1 (res. 47/2)], the Commission urged that studies and research be conducted to identify vulnerable groups and the extent and patterns of risk-taking behaviour. It also urged the strengthening of health policies that promoted the diagnosis and treatment of drug dependence and infection by HIV and other blood-borne diseases and addressed risk-taking behaviour. The Commission encouraged the strengthening of civil society activities for promoting the health care and social support of drug users and their families. It reinforced the necessity of access for drug users to information on HIV prevention. UNODC, with UNAIDS, WHO and other relevant organizations, should study the effectiveness of drug-related HIV/AIDS prevention programmes, convene an intergovernmental expert group meeting in Vienna to assist in developing a programme on HIV/AIDS and drug abuse, and report to the Commission in 2005.

Drug control and related crime prevention assistance

On 21 July [meeting 47], the Economic and Social Council, on the recommendation of the Commission on Narcotic Drugs [E/2004/28 & Corr.1], adopted resolution 2004/39 without vote [agenda item 14 (d)].

Drug control and related crime prevention assistance for countries emerging from conflicts

The Economic and Social Council,

Bearing in mind the provisions of the Single Convention on Narcotic Drugs of 1961 as amended by the 1972 Protocol, the Convention on Psychotropic Substances of 1971 and the United Nations Convention against Illicit Traffic in Narcotic Drugs and Psychotropic Substances of 1988,

Recalling the Declaration on the Guiding Principles of Drug Demand Reduction adopted by the General Assembly at its twentieth special session, and the Action Plan for the Implementation of the Declaration on the Guiding Principles of Drug Demand Reduction,

Bearing in mind that, in the Political Declaration adopted by the General Assembly at its twentieth special session, the Assembly set goals and targets to be met by Member States by 2003 and 2008,

Recalling Commission on Narcotic Drugs resolution 42/5 of 25 March 1999 on international action to mitigate the effects of the relationship between drug abuse, illicit trafficking and conflict situations and resolution 43/4 of 15 March 2000 on international cooperation for the prevention of drug abuse among children,

Fully aware that the international community is confronted with the problem of conflict and war in some parts of the world, especially in Africa, Asia, Latin America and the Caribbean and Oceania, and with the threat to civil society posed by illicit drugs,

Concerned that the demand for, production of and trafficking in illicit narcotic drugs and psychotropic substances by organized criminal groups continue to pose a serious threat to the socio-economic and political systems, stability, national security and sovereignty of an increasing number of States, especially those emerging from conflict and war,

Concerned also about the activities of national and international organized criminal groups engaged in drug trafficking and, in particular, about the destabilizing impact of those activities on peacekeeping and reconstruction efforts,

Concerned further about reports of widespread abuse of drugs in countries emerging from conflict and war, among the general population and soldiers, especially child soldiers,

Aware that, in treating victims of conflict or war, self-medication or the long-term prescription of drugs by medical personnel may lead to drug dependence,

Convinced of the priority that must be assigned to the prevention of drug use and abuse among children, within the framework of the Action Plan for the Implementation of the Declaration on the Guiding Principles of Drug Demand Reduction,

Recognizing the social, political, economic and other post-conflict challenges to reconstruction faced by countries emerging from conflict, in particular with regard to meeting the targets set out in the Political Declaration adopted by the General Assembly at its twentieth special session,

Recognizing also the importance of the rule of law for post-conflict reconstruction,

Noting with satisfaction the steady progress being made towards restoring peace in a number of conflict zones around the world, especially in Africa, Asia, Latin America and the Caribbean and Oceania,

Mindful of the need to ensure that effective measures for the protection, rehabilitation, physical and psychological recovery and reintegration of women and children are systematically incorporated into all stages of the peace process, including peacekeeping and peace-building programmes,

Convinced that extending support for drug control will facilitate the consolidation of peace in countries emerging from conflict,

1. Requests the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime to consider specific strategies to assist countries emerging from conflict in their drug control and related crime prevention efforts, in collaboration with the Governments of the affected countries and other relevant United Nations entities involved in the peace process, and to give priority to those countries, subject to the availability of voluntary funds, which might be from general-purpose funds, in accordance with the Commission on Narcotic Drugs guidelines for the use of general-purpose funds, or from earmarked funds;

2. Calls upon the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime to facilitate the mainstreaming of drug control programmes in the development efforts of countries emerging from conflict;

3. Urges Member States emerging from conflict to give adequate priority to addressing the drug problem and related crime in their post-conflict reconstruction efforts and to collaborate with the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime and other development partners in order to address those problems in an integrated and comprehensive manner;

4. Urges Member States providing development assistance to countries emerging from conflict to increase, where relevant, their bilateral assistance in drug control and related crime prevention to those countries;

5. Requests the Executive Director of the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime to report to the Commission on Narcotic Drugs at its forty-eighth session on the progress made in the implementation of the present resolution.

Guidelines for travellers

A January report by the Executive Director [E/CN.7/2004/8] reviewed provisions regarding travellers under medical treatment with drugs containing narcotic drugs and psychotropic substances under international control. The report, submitted to the Commission on Narcotic Drugs pursuant to its resolution 46/6 [YUN 2003, p. 1284], stated that the 2002 guidelines [YUN 2002, p. 1249] had been published in the form of a multilingual booklet in the six UN official languages and distributed to the national authorities. They were also available in English, French and Spanish on the INCB website. INCB intended to publish regularly details of communications from States on restrictions currently applicable in their countries to such travellers in the list of narcotic drugs (the "Yellow List") and the list of psychotropic substances (the "Green List") under international control and on the INCB website.

Guidelines for pharmacological treatment of opioid dependency

On 21 July [meeting 47], the Economic and Social Council, on the recommendation of the Commission on Narcotic Drugs [E/2004/28 & Corr.1], adopted resolution 2004/40 without vote [agenda item 14 (d)].

Guidelines for psychosocially assisted pharmacological treatment of persons dependent on opioids

The Economic and Social Council,

Recognizing the existence of a large number of persons dependent on opioids, who are either receiving or are in need of treatment for their opioid dependence,

Respecting the sovereign right of Member States to establish and implement effective treatment strategies,

Noting the evidence on the effectiveness of various treatments, inter alia, abstinence therapy,

Recognizing the existence of a wide range of evidence-based treatment options,

Emphasizing that psychosocially assisted pharmacological treatment is one of the treatment options available for improving the health, well-being and social functioning of persons dependent on opioids and for preventing the transmission of HIV and other blood-borne diseases,

Acknowledging that the present resolution may be applicable only to Member States that are providing or planning psychosocially assisted pharmacological treatment for opiate addiction,

Recalling the Single Convention on Narcotic Drugs of 1961 as amended by the 1972 Protocol, in particular article 38 thereof, on measures against the abuse of drugs,

Recalling also the Declaration on the Guiding Principles of Drug Demand Reduction adopted by the General Assembly at its twentieth special session,

Taking into account the conclusions and recommendations adopted by the World Health Organization in 1993 after the twenty-eighth meeting of the Expert Committee on Drug Dependence, on the need to increase access to effective treatment,

Taking note of the report of the International Narcotics Control Board for 2003, in particular paragraphs 222 and 328 thereof,

Taking note also of the position paper of the World Health Organization, the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime and the Joint United Nations Programme on HIV/AIDS (UNAIDS) on substitution maintenance therapy in the management of opioid dependence and HIV/AIDS prevention, Acknowledging that work has been undertaken on psychosocially assisted pharmacological treatment in different regions,

Invites the World Health Organization, in collaboration with the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime, subject to the availability of voluntary funds, which might be either from general-purpose funds, in accordance with the Commission on Narcotic Drugs guidelines for the use of general-purpose funds, or from earmarked funds, to develop and publish minimum requirements and international guidelines on psychosocially assisted pharmacological treatment of persons dependent on opioids, taking into account regional initiatives in this field, in order to assist the Member States concerned.

Illicit cultivation, manufacture and trafficking

At its forty-seventh session, the Commission considered a January report by the Executive Director on international assistance to the States affected by the transit of illicit drugs [E/CN.7/2004/7], prepared in response to Economic and Social Council resolution 2003/34 [YUN 2003, p. 1285]. The report reviewed UNODC activities to assist States through programmes in Africa, Asia and the Pacific, Central and Eastern Europe, Central Asia, and Latin America and the Caribbean. Assistance was provided to upgrade legislation and judicial procedures; strengthen the technical skills of law enforcement agencies; improve data collection by national agencies to support informed responses to combat illicit drug trafficking and the problems associated with it; provide equipment to front-line operations; and strengthen cross-border and regional cooperation and assistance to develop self-sustaining training in the best operating practices for government law enforcement services.

Another January report by the Executive Director [E/CN.7/2004/6], submitted in response to Commission resolution 45/9 [YUN 2002, p. 1249], analysed connections between organized criminal groups trafficking in drugs and those involved in other types of illicit trafficking, and reviewed UNODC activities in counteracting such criminality. UNODC assisted Governments in upgrading their professional skills and introducing new approaches and procedures to break the link between drug trafficking and cross-border criminality. It provided training and assistance in special investigative techniques, and helped law enforcement agencies to upgrade their technical capacity so as to keep pace with the sophisticated technology used by organized criminal groups. The Office placed special emphasis on the use and promotion of controlled delivery in dismantling trafficking networks and in identifying and prosecuting criminal groups. In that regard, it assisted States in drafting and introducing legislation.

On 19 March [E/2004/28 & Corr.1 (res. 47/5)], the Commission affirmed the need to develop and harmonize the illicit drug profiling activities of the international drug law enforcement community, and requested UNODC, in cooperation with Member States, to prepare a report identifying drug profiling initiatives and best practices. It encouraged Member States to enhance their capacity to undertake profile analysis of seized illicit drugs; participate in the international exchange of drug profile analysis information and samples; and review their legislation to facilitate the exchange of drug profiling information and samples with other States. Member States were invited to promote the utilization of laboratory data to support the work of regulatory and health authorities and to establish programmes and law enforcement frameworks for that purpose.

Also on 19 March [res. 47/6], the Commission invited Member States to adopt or review national laws and procedures on controlled delivery operations; strengthen internal cooperation and coordination and establish joint training courses on controlled delivery. It requested UNODC to consider preparing a training manual on controlled delivery operations and compile, in conjunction with relevant international organizations and with the assistance of Member States, all relevant information. UNODC was requested to report on the progress made in 2005.

ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL ACTION

On 21 July [meeting 47], the Economic and Social Council, on the recommendation of the Commission on Narcotic Drugs [E/2004/28 & Corr.1], adopted resolution 2004/41 without vote [agenda item 14 (d)].

Control of the manufacture of, trafficking in and abuse of synthetic drugs

The Economic and Social Council,

Concerned at the escalation of the problem of illicit supply of, trafficking in and diversion of synthetic drugs and the expansion of the illicit market for such drugs,

Noting that the supply of illicit drugs, including synthetic drugs, is harmful to public health and that the demand for such drugs is prevalent among young people,

Recognizing that education and training are prerequisites for the efficient performance of the various tasks that institutions and their officials must carry out in order to deal with the world drug problem,

Deeply concerned that an increasing number of people are placing their health at risk by abusing amphetamine-type stimulants because they do not recognize or are not aware of the health hazards associated with the abuse of such stimulants, in particular the abuse of methylenedioxymethamphetamine, commonly known as Ecstasy,

Noting that reducing both the illicit demand for and the illicit supply of amphetamine-type stimulants in a comprehensive and proactive manner requires strong political commitment,

Noting also that strategies to reduce the illicit demand for and supply of amphetamine-type stimulants require accurate information, including data on the manufacture of, trafficking in and abuse of such stimulants,

Considering that, in view of the extent of the abuse of amphetamine-type stimulants among young people and among persons in certain occupational groups, there is a need for more systematic research into the health hazards of the abuse of such stimulants that will contribute to improving the design of health education and prevention programmes, as well as treatment services, to meet the needs of all persons abusing amphetamine-type stimulants,

Considering also that systematic research into the health hazards of the abuse of amphetamine-type stimulants is crucial to assessments of the broader health and social implications of the specific patterns of abuse of such stimulants,

Acknowledging the importance of early warning mechanisms and rapid and global dissemination of information on new drugs, drug combinations and drug abuse patterns and more detailed information, such as the dyes, logos, machinery and other equipment used in the manufacture of amphetamine-type stimulants,

1. Expresses its gratitude to the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime for the publication of Ecstasy and Amphetamines: Global Survey 2003, which provides a quantitative assessment of the extent of manufacture of, trafficking in and abuse of amphetamine-type stimulants throughout the world;

2. Requests Member States to continue to develop programmes to reduce both the illicit supply of and the illicit demand for amphetamine-type stimulants;

3. Urges Member States to take the steps necessary to ensure that their national drug control agencies are aware of and well trained in the recognition of amphetamine-type stimulants and the current modi operandi used to smuggle such stimulants and are also well trained in the interdiction of consignments of illicitly manufactured amphetamine-type stimulants;

4. Also urges Member States to monitor changing patterns in the abuse and availability of synthetic drugs, including methylenedioxymethamphetamine, commonly known as Ecstasy;

5. Calls upon Member States to include, in a multi-faceted strategy, action against the illicit manufacture of, trafficking in and abuse of amphetamine-type stimulants and to identify and dismantle clandestine laboratories manufacturing such stimulants;

6. Encourages Member States to provide their full and active support to Project Prism, an initiative of the International Narcotics Control Board, to address the illicit manufacture of amphetamine-type stimulants by following the twofold approach of the Project, namely, by establishing mechanisms to prevent precursor chemicals from being diverted from licit international trade or domestic distribution channels and by launching backtracking investigations of seizures and interceptions to identify the illicit sources and the persons involved;

7. Urges Member States to provide accurate evidence-based information on the harmful effects of amphetamine-type stimulants, through education and information campaigns to increase public knowledge and awareness of those harmful effects, with a view to decreasing the demand for such stimulants, particularly among young people;

8. Urges States engaged in the licit manufacture, import, export and transit of precursor chemicals used in the illicit manufacture of amphetamine-type stimulants to implement fully the United Nations Convention against Illicit Traffic in Narcotic Drugs and Psychotropic Substances of 1988 and, where appropriate, to strengthen controls over those substances, in conformity with that Convention;

9. Urges the relevant international organizations to consider providing support for training and other forms of technical assistance aimed at countering the threat of synthetic drugs, including by strengthening preventive measures;

10. Encourages the relevant international organizations and other entities, in particular the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime, to continue to recognize the serious global threat posed by synthetic drugs and to pursue appropriate action to ameliorate the situation;

11. Requests the Executive Director of the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime to report to the Commission on Narcotic Drugs at its forty-eighth session on the implementation of the present resolution.

On the same day [meeting 47], the Council, on the recommendation of the Commission [E/2004/28 & Corr.1], adopted resolution 2004/36 without vote [agenda item 14 (d)].

Control of cultivation of and trafficking in cannabis

The Economic and Social Council

Recommends to the General Assembly the adoption of the following draft resolution:

[For text, see General Assembly resolution 59/160 below.]

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 20 December [meeting 74], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Third Committee [A/59/495], adopted resolution 59/160 without vote [agenda item 97].

Control of cultivation of and trafficking in cannabis

The General Assembly,

Recalling the Single Convention on Narcotic Drugs of 1961, that Convention as amended by the 1972 Protocol, the Convention on Psychotropic Substances of 1971 and the United Nations Convention against Illicit Traffic in Narcotic Drugs and Psychotropic Substances of 1988,

Recalling also Commission on Narcotic Drugs resolution 45/8 of 15 March 2002 on the control of cannabis in Africa,

Concerned that, of all the substances listed in the international drug control treaties, cannabis is by far the most widely and most frequently abused, especially among young people,

Concerned also that the abuse of cannabis, especially among young people, often leads to risk-taking behaviour,

Concerned further that cultivation of and trafficking in cannabis are on the increase in Africa partly as a result of extreme poverty and the absence of any viable alternative crop and partly because of the profitability of such activity and the high demand for cannabis in other regions of the world,

Noting with concern that increased cultivation of cannabis in Africa is extremely dangerous for the ecosystem because it leads to extensive use of fertilizers, overexploitation of the soil and destruction of forests to make room for new cannabis fields, thus accelerating soil erosion,

Taking note of the report of the International Narcotics Control Board for 2003, in which the Board confirmed that the production of, trafficking in and abuse of cannabis continued to pose a serious problem in various regions of the world,

Aware of the importance of programmes promoting alternative development, including, where appropriate, preventive alternative development,

Emphasizing the primary importance of international cooperation in combating drug trafficking and drug abuse,

1. Welcomes the 2003 cannabis survey conducted by Morocco in cooperation with the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime;

2. Requests the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime, subject to the availability of voluntary funds, which might be either from general-purpose funds, in accordance with the Commission on Narcotic Drugs guidelines for the use of general-purpose funds, or from earmarked funds, to begin a global survey of cannabis, initially with a market survey, before the forty-eighth session of the Commission on Narcotic Drugs;

3. Also requests the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime to support the creation or strengthening of national and subregional strategies and plans of action for the eradication of cannabis crops, subject to the availability of voluntary funds, which might be either from general-purpose funds, in accordance with the Commission on Narcotic Drugs guidelines for the use of general-purpose funds, or from earmarked funds;

4. Urges Member States, in accordance with the principle of shared responsibility and as a sign of their commitment to the fight against illicit drugs, to extend cooperation to affected States, particularly in Africa, in the area of alternative development, including funding for research into crops offering viable alternatives to cannabis, environmental protection and technical assistance;

5. Encourages Member States with experience and expertise in the eradication of illicit drug crops and alternative development programmes to share their experience and expertise with affected States, particularly in Africa;

6. Urges all Member States to encourage appropriate access to international markets for products of alternative development projects in order to support efforts aimed at eliminating the production of narcotic drugs and promoting sustainable development;

7. Encourages Member States to apply new strategies and tools to complement existing ones in efforts to combat trafficking in cannabis;

8. Calls upon all States to ensure strict compliance with all the provisions of the Single Convention on Narcotic Drugs of 1961, that Convention as amended by the 1972 Protocol, the Convention on Psychotropic Substances of 1971 and the United Nations Convention against Illicit Traffic in Narcotic Drugs and Psychotropic Substances of 1988;

9. Requests the Executive Director of the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime to report to the Commission on Narcotic Drugs at its forty-eighth session on the implementation of the present resolution.

Secretariat report. A report by the Secretariat [E/CN.7/2005/4] described global trends and patterns in illicit drug crop cultivation and production of plant-based drugs during 2003-2004 and in illicit drug trafficking up to 2003, and summarized the information received from Governments and elsewhere. The primary sources of information were from the UNODC illicit crop monitoring surveys, the replies to the annual reports questionnaire and reports on significant drug seizures. The information received was as at 10 November 2004. The report also gave an overview on drug-related crime and other types of crime and provided information pursuant to Commission resolutions 47/5 and 47/6 (see p. 1251).

Cannabis continued to be the world's most trafficked drug, accounting for over two thirds of global drug seizures in 2003. It was the most seized drug in Africa and the Americas, while cannabis resin was the most seized drug in Asia and Europe. Trafficking in cannabis herb seriously affected countries in Africa and the Americas, where it accounted for 26 and 68 per cent, respectively, of global seizures. Trafficking routes for cannabis herb were more diffuse than for other illicit drugs because of the large number of source countries. Opiates, followed by cocaine, remained the principal problem drugs in the world. Global seizures of opiates (heroin, morphine and opium converted into heroin equivalents) increased 33 per cent, with Asia accounting for 76 per cent, Europe 17 per cent, the Americas 6 per cent and Africa and Oceania less than 1 per cent. Cocaine traffickers continued to target countries in the Americas and, increasingly, markets in Western Europe. Both continents accounted for the bulk of the cocaine seizures worldwide, with Colombia and the United States reporting 52 per cent of global seizures in 2003. Brazil and Venezuela were affected by trafficking in cocaine bound for the United States and Europe. ATS accounted for 3.5 per cent of global drug seizures, of which methamphetamine was responsible for 69 per cent, followed by amphetamine (14 per cent) and Ecstasy (13 per cent). East and South-East Asia were the most affected sub-regions.

In its conclusion, the report stated that future trends in trafficking in opiates would be determined by events in Afghanistan, where the development of that country's legitimate economy through private sector investment would provide the conditions for alternative sustainable livelihoods. Also of concern were opium poppy cultivation in Colombia and Mexico and the spread of coca bush to fragile ecosystems and Indian lands in the Andean subregion. The spread of illicit cannabis cultivation and the consequent increase in cannabis users worldwide would require further attention from the international community. The relatively low volume of seizures in certain subregions, in particular in Africa, was not indicative of the absence of trafficking, but of under-reporting of seizures or inadequate resources available by Governments and the international community to law enforcement agencies. Interdiction figures for ATS in 2003 pointed to a regained momentum in its illicit manufacturing and trafficking and called for renewed efforts by Governments in the regions concerned.

Regional cooperation

A December report by the Secretariat [E/CN.7/2005/5] reviewed action taken by the Commission's subsidiary bodies in 2004. Following a review of drug trafficking trends and regional and subregional cooperation, each subsidiary body addressed drug law enforcement issues of priority in its region and made recommendations. The thirty-ninth session of the Subcommission on Illicit Drug Traffic and Related Matters in the Near and Middle East (Beirut, Lebanon, 26-29 October) [UNODC/SUBCOM/2004/5] considered trafficking in opiates and the heightened need for coordination between States and law enforcement agencies across the region; current regional trends in the illicit manufacture of and trafficking in ATS; and combating corruption through effective and uncompromising law enforcement. The fourteenth meeting of Heads of National Drug Law Enforcement Agencies (HONLEA), Africa (Cairo, Egypt, 30 May-3 June) [UNODC/HONLAF/2004/6] considered drug trafficking, conflict and violence: the challenge to law enforcement in conflict and post-conflict situations; emerging trafficking challenges; and cannabis: the African connection. The fourteenth meeting of HONLEA, Latin America and the Caribbean (Mexico City, 11-15 October) [UNODC/HONLAC/2004/5] examined effective measures against cocaine manufacture and trafficking; procedures to identify, seize and confiscate goods and assets derived from crime; and drug trafficking by sea: a review of controls over the sea container traffic in Latin America and the Caribbean. The twenty-eighth meeting of HONLEA, Asia and the Pacific (Bangkok, Thailand, 29 November-3 December) [UNODC/HONLAP/2004/5] considered detecting and dismantling clandestine drug laboratories; effective measures to counter heroin trafficking; effective procedures to identify, seize and confiscate goods and assets derived from crime; and a regional approach to strategic planning to counter cross-border organized crime.

On 19 March [E/2004/28 & Corr.1 (res. 47/4)], the Commission affirmed the relevance of measures that facilitated effective cooperation in international investigations of cases involving illicit drugs, in conformity with treaties on mutual legal assistance, and encouraged Member States to utilize established liaison channels and to develop new channels to enhance their capacity to participate in joint and/or coordinated targeting initiatives and international cooperation in investigating cases involving illicit drug trafficking.

Strengthening UN mechanisms

The Commission on Narcotic Drugs had before it a January report by the Executive Director on strengthening UNDCP and the role of the Commission [E/CN.7/2004/10]. The report, prepared in response to Commission resolution 46/8 [YUN 2003, p. 1288], reviewed action taken to facilitate dialogue between Member States and UNDCP, and the Programme's operations, management and funding.

On 19 March [E/2004/28 & Corr.1 (res. 47/3)], the Commission welcomed the UNODC restructuring and ongoing process of reform, which should continue so as to maintain a culture of continuous improvement. It encouraged the Executive Director to facilitate dialogue with Member States on programmatic and management issues and on the reform process, and welcomed the measures taken to ensure good governance within UNODC and the establishment of the new independent evaluation unit. It called for continued transparency in the management of human resources. Reaffirming its governing role in the UNODC budget process, the Commission requested UNODC to facilitate that role by continuing to present timely briefings and reports to Member States. It encouraged the Executive Director to expand on the strategic framework called for in Assembly resolution 58/269 [YUN 2003, p. 1395] and to develop a plan for UNODC that would provide medium- and long-term strategic direction. The Commission welcomed the development of a transparent financial system and supported the efforts of the Executive Director to ensure that issues on the fight against drugs and related crime were included in sustainable development policies. The Executive Director was requested to report in 2005.

Chapter XV

Statistics

During 2004, the United Nations continued to broaden its work in the area of statistics, mainly through the activities of the Statistical Commission and the United Nations Statistics Division. In March, the Statistical Commission recommended the establishment of an expert group to focus on the next (2010) round of population and housing censuses; requested the expansion of the Statistics Division website; and endorsed two new United Nations Human Settlements Programme initiatives—the Monitoring Urban Inequities Programme and the Geographic Information System to 1,000 Cities Programme. It welcomed the findings of the Friends of the Chair on health statistics, calling for a review of international health statistics programmes and the establishment of an intersecretariat working group. The Commission approved changes to the 2004-2005 work programme of the Statistics Division and the strategic framework for the 2006-2007 biennium.

The Commission reviewed the work of groups of countries and international organizations in various areas of economic, social, demographic and environment statistics and made specific recommendations and suggestions.

Work of Statistical Commission

The Statistical Commission, in accordance with Economic and Social Council decision 2004/215 of 13 February, held its thirty-fifth session in New York from 2 to 5 March [E/2004/24 & Corr.1]. Actions included: endorsement of the recommendations of the Expert Group on International Economic and Social Classifications; agreement with the proposed work plan for revision of the International Standard Industrial Classification of All Economic Activities (ISIC) and the Central Product Classification (CPC); a request to the Statistics Division to find a forum of coordination, to be decided on at the next Committee for the Coordination of Statistical Activities (CCSA) meeting; and acknowledgement of the work of the World Tourism Organization.

Having reviewed the statistical work of groups of countries and international organizations, the Commission took note of steps taken by the World Health Organization (WHO) to address health statistics concerns; progress achieved towards the preparation of a poverty statistics handbook; and the issuance of the Handbook of National Accounting on the System of Integrated Environmental and Economic Accounting, 2003 (SEEA-2003) on the Statistics Division web site. Welcoming the work of CCSA and progress made in the implementation of the Fundamental Principles of Official Statistics, the Commission emphasized the need for a coordinated effort to further develop indicators on information and communication technologies. It supported the work programme and timetable for updating the System of National Accounts, 1993 [YUN 1993, p. 1112] and the Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development (OECD) proposal on coordination of services statistics. The Commission reaffirmed its support for the International Comparison Programme and emphasized the usefulness of purchasing power parities. It concluded that further investment in the development of sustainable statistical capacity would be required if availability of statistics, including those needed to monitor the Millennium Development Goals (MDGs) [YUN 2000, p. 51], was to be achieved. In support of coordinated follow-up to UN conferences and summits, the Commission asked its Bureau to examine the Commission's working methods and to present the outcome at its thirty-sixth (2005) session. The Commission approved changes to the 2004-2005 Statistics Division work programme and endorsed the proposed 2006-2007 programme plan.

On 13 February (decision 2004/215), the Council noted the Commission's report on its thirty-fourth session [YUN 2003, p. 1289]. On 20 July (decision 2004/236), it noted the Commission's report on its thirty-fifth session (above), decided that the thirty-sixth session should be held in New York from 1 to 4 March 2005 and approved the provisional agenda and documentation for that session.

Economic statistics

National accounts

In response to a 2003 Statistical Commission request [YUN 2003, p. 1290], the Secretary-General transmitted the report of the Intersecretariat Working Group on National Accounts (ISWGNA) [E/CN.3/2004/10]. The report examined the work programme for the 2008 update of the System of National Accounts, 1993 (1993 SNA) [YUN 1993, p. 1112], including issues relating to selection criteria, the governance and decision-making process, a timetable for consultations and comments from Commission members. It also discussed the assessment of the implementation of the 1993 SNA, particularly compliance with the 1993 SNA concepts, the scope of the accounts and quality issues.

The Commission expressed satisfaction with progress achieved during the first meeting (Washington, D.C., 16-20 February) of the Advisory Expert Group on National Accounts. Reconfirming the importance of updating the 1993 SNA, it supported the detailed work programme and noted the adequateness of the governance structure and decision-making mechanism. It reiterated that the revision process should build upon the conceptual basis of the 1993 SNA and reconfirmed the eligibility criteria for issues to be updated. The Commission also reiterated the need for maintaining consistency with ongoing revisions of the Balance of Payments Manual and related public sector accounting frameworks, and for coherence with business accounting standards. Emphasizing the need for transparency and involvement of the global statistical community in the updating process, the Commission suggested using electronically circulated questionnaires to record member States' opinions and strengthening the consultation process through additional regional workshops. In regard to funding the 1993 SNA updating programme, the Commission welcomed the financial and human resources commitments of member countries and encouraged additional funding to supplement resources committed by international agencies. The Commission, while noting progress in the implementation of the 1993 SNA and the increased compliance with its recommendations, called for further technical support to countries not yet in a position to adopt it. The Commission suggested further research into factors that impeded SNA implementation and requested the Statistics Division, in collaboration with regional offices, to draft an action plan for that purpose and seek the necessary funding.

Service statistics

In March, the Commission had before it the 2003 report of the Voorburg Group on Service Statistics [E/CN.3/2004/11], focusing on the core areas of: producer price indices, classifications of service activities and products, and information society statistics, and other issues such as turnover by product, strategy, and products, and activities for the Group's 2004 meeting.

It also had before an interim OECD report on service statistics [E/CN.3/2004/12], submitted in response to a 2003 Statistical Commission request [YUN 2003, p. 1291], which described the OECD project to improve the coordination of international development work in service statistics and outlined ideas for developing a strategic approach. OECD proposed that its coordination role should be light and feasible by identifying issues and contact persons to provide annual reports on progress and new outputs for the Commission and the Voorburg Group, coordinate with other non-OECD expert groups, maintain a web page with outputs and information and contribute ideas and proposals on service statistics. The OECD Statistics Directorate would integrate those reports in an annual report to the Commission and the Voorburg Group. A draft proposal for developing a matrix of issues/groups/coordinators and relevant information was set out in the report. The report also set out a timetable for preparing a proposal on service coordination and strategy development for presentation to the Commission and OECD in 2004 and other service activities.

The Commission also considered a report of the Inter-Agency Task Force on Statistics of International Trade in Services, which discussed implementation of the guidelines contained in the Manual on Statistics of International Trade in Services. The Task Force held its nineteenth meeting in Paris on 13 and 14 September.

The Commission welcomed the reports of OECD and the Voorburg Group. While expressing appreciation for the work of the Voorburg Group and supporting strategic discussions planned for its next meeting, the Commission cautioned against expanding the topics discussed by the Group. It supported the OECD proposal for a light approach to coordination and noted the desire of countries and regional bodies to participate in future OECD and Voorburg Group meetings. The OECD 2005 strategy paper, the Commission emphasized, should provide guidance to the service statistics agenda, including the Voorburg Group agenda.

International Comparison Programme

The Secretary-General submitted the World Bank report on the International Comparison Programme (ICP) [E/CN.3/2004/14], which detailed the establishment of the ICP international secretariat (Global Office) and its Executive Board—a consortium of national, regional and international institutions, including OECD and the Statistical Office of the European Communities (Eurostat). In addition to coverage of the first meeting of the ICP Technical Advisory Group (TAG) (Washington, D.C., 21-23 May 2003), the report summarized the TAG review of the ICP handbook, the creation of the ICP tool pack software system, efforts to compute poverty-specific purchasing power parities (PPPs), features of the new ICP website and a new approach to product description called structured product description. The Programme faced a $6.8 million funding shortfall.

In March, the Commission reaffirmed its support for ICP, emphasizing the usefulness of PPPs in poverty issues analysis and the Programme's potential for capacity-building in consumer price and national accounts statistics. It appreciated the progress achieved in the implementation of the 2004-2006 round of ICP, welcomed the wider dissemination of Programme information through the enhanced ICP web site and noted the progress in the preparation of the ICP handbook and development of ICP software. The Commission acknowledged the World Bank's role in the coordination of ICP, the guidance provided by the Executive Board and TAG, as well as the cooperation of OECD and Eurostat, efforts of regional coordinating agencies, the contribution of donor agencies and the work of participating countries. The Commission underlined the importance of the timely release of results to maximize the usefulness of data and noted that the effect of rapid price increases on the results of affected countries needed to be taken into account. Supporting the view that seeking funding, rather than reducing or limiting the Programme's goals, was the preferred approach, the Commission recommended that efforts to secure additional funding and in-kind support should be intensified to overcome the shortfall.

A December World Bank report [E/CN.3/2005/7] indicated that the Programme's financial status had improved due to a contribution from the World Bank's internal data budget, which reduced the deficit to about $1.1 million through fiscal year 2007.

Other economic statistics

Tourism statistics

The Statistical Commission had before it the report of the World Tourism Organization (WTO/OMT) on the development of tourism statistics [E/CN.3/2004/13]. The report discussed the implementation of the main functions of WTO/OMT and its 2004-2006 work programme, which included proposed initiatives for updating the conceptual framework of tourism statistics, deepening the relationship between the tourism satellite account and the 1993 SNA, providing countries with guidelines for setting up a tourism satellite account and disseminating international guidelines for the presentation of statistical data and metadata.

The Commission acknowledged work done by WTO/OMT to develop and promote implementation of standards and disseminate tourism statistics, to provide training and capacity-building assistance in new areas, such as tourism satellite accounts, and to improve the international comparability and quality of tourism data. Noting the need for an international exchange of experiences in the compilation of tourism statistics, the Commission asked WTO/OMT to facilitate an exchange of best practices. To address the need for stronger coordination in tourism statistics and in the periodic revision of international recommendations, the Commission requested the Statistics Division to facilitate finding an appropriate coordination forum to be decided on by CCSA.

Statistics of science and technology

The Commission took note of the report of the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization and OECD on statistics of science and technology [E/CN.3/2004/15], which was transmitted by the Secretary-General, describing current work in that area, highlighting challenges faced and outlining expected future developments.

Information and communication technologies statistics

The Statistical Commission considered the report of the International Telecommunication Union (ITU) on information and communication technologies (ICT) statistics [E/CN.3/2004/16]. It discussed the OECD definition of ICT, ways of organizing ICT statistics for analytical purposes and the role of ICT in achieving the MDGs [YUN 2000, p. 51].

The Commission took note of the ITU report and emphasized the need for a coordinated effort to further develop indicators on ICT. It expressed the need for capacity-building, particularly in developing countries, and noted the suggestion that measures of ICT use should also include the government sector.

Business surveys and informal sector statistics

The Commission noted the report of the Round Table on Business Survey Frames [E/CN.3/2004/17] and recommended that it should review its priorities and focus on issues such as adequate business register frames for the service industries. It also noted underrepresentation of developing countries at Round Table meetings and encouraged their closer involvement in the future work of the group.

Taking note of the report of the Delhi Group on Informal Sector Statistics [E/CN.3/2004/18], the Commission acknowledged the progress achieved in the development and refinement of a harmonized definition of the informal sector and its measurement methods. It supported the Group's planned activities and expressed the need for building on existing household survey capability of national statistical offices. The Commission took note of the adoption by the International Labour Organization (ILO) of revised guidelines on informal employment and plans for the Statistics Division and the Delhi Group to prepare jointly a recommendation on the informal sector as part of the updating of the 1993 SNA.

Environmental statistics

The Commission had before it the report of the London Group on Environmental Accounting [E/CN.3/2004/19], which summarized its work programme and organizational structure, and the report of the Inter-Agency Working Group on Environment Statistics [E/CN.3/2004/20], established in 2003 [YUN 2003, p. 1293].

The Commission welcomed the report of the London Group, endorsed its organization and means of operation and supported its strategic directions. It also supported the preparation of an issue paper on the possible expansion of SEEA-2003 to include social aspects. It noted developing countries' success in the implementation of water and other natural resources accounting and stressed the usefulness of the accounts as tools for integrated resource management and dialogue with policy makers.

It also noted the report of the Inter-Agency Working Group.

Demographic and social statistics

Population and housing censuses

In March, the Statistical Commission [E/2004/24 & Corr.1] recommended the establishment of an international expert group to focus on planning issues related to the next (2010) round of population and housing censuses. It agreed to consider a resolution in 2005 requesting the Secretary-General to proceed with the development of a 2010 World Population and Housing Census Programme and recommended that Member States carry out population and housing censuses during the period 2005-2014. Recognizing that the Statistics Division decennial census programme could not cover all emerging topics, the Commission asked the expert group to set priorities at its first meeting. It welcomed action 2 of the Marrakesh Action Plan for improving development statistics in support of preparation for the 2010 census round (see p. 1261).

At the global level, the Statistics Division conducted the United Nations Symposium on Population and Housing Censuses (New York, 13-14 September), which outlined a range of activities relevant to the 2010 Programme and the United Nations Expert Group Meeting to Review Critical Issues Relevant to the Planning of the 2010 Round of Population and Housing Censuses (New York, 15-17 September), which produced a set of recommendations on technical and scientific aspects of emerging issues [E/CN.3/2005/11 & Corr.1].

Human settlements statistics

The Statistical Commission had before it the report of the United Nations Human Settlements Programme (UN-Habitat) on human settlements statistics [E/CN.3/2004/5].

UN-Habitat pursued a two-pronged strategy. It continued to collect and report on official city statistics, including the preparation of the Compendium of Human Settlements Statistics [YUN 1999, p. 1196], and to reform its Urban Indicators Programme, and launched two new programmes: the Monitoring of Urban Inequities Programme (MUIP), under which Urban Inequities Household Surveys would be conducted in 35 cities in Asia, Latin America and Africa, and the Geographic Information System (GIS) to 1,000 cities, a capacity-building project, which supported the implementation of urban information systems at the local level using GIS technology.

The Commission endorsed the MUIP and GIS to 1,000 cities initiatives and noted points in the UN-Habitat report that needed reconsideration, including consideration of extra-legal aspects under country-specific conditions; the definition of slums and their determinants; and the proposed classification used for human settlements (urban, rural and slums). It also recognized the need for capacity-building of the national statistical offices to generate urban settlements statistics and indicators.

Health statistics

The Commission had before it the report of the Friends of the Chair on health statistics [E/CN.3/2004/4], established in response to a 2003

Commission request [YUN 2003, p. 1294] to examine coordination among and between international organizations and national statistical offices in health statistics and to recommend improvements.

The report discussed the official statistics framework, databases, technical resource requirements, the role of national statistical offices and areas of mutual interest, such as health surveys and the development of core health indicators.

The Commission welcomed the findings of the Friends of the Chair and noted the steps taken by WHO to address such concerns as the establishment of the Health Metrics Network; the proposed meeting of stakeholders on methods used to compile and generate mortality and health statistics; and the proposed joint Economic Commission for Europe (ECE)/WHO/Eurostat meeting to enhance consultation, coordination and collaboration in health statistics (see below). It underscored that the Fundamental Principles of Official Statistics should be applied in the development of official health statistics and requested that the declaration of principles under preparation by CCSA take into account relevant issues listed in the Friends of the Chair report. It also underscored the need to strengthen national capacities in health statistics.

The Commission called for a strategic review of international programmes on the production of health statistics and for an intersecretariat working group on health statistics to develop a coordinated agenda for the production of health statistics and to agree on standard definitions, classifications and methodologies. It also called on WHO to prepare an annual report on progress on specific initiatives in support of harmonization and improved coordination of health statistics. Reiterating its interest in being informed on alternative methods of estimating the prevalence of HIV/AIDS, the Commission requested closer cooperation at the regional level among WHO, its regional offices and other health statistics agencies.

A joint ECE/WHO/Eurostat meeting [E/CN.3/2005/12] on the measurement of health status (Geneva, 24-26 May) agreed on the WHO conceptual framework to measure health.

In June, WHO organized a one-day meeting of agency, donor and academic experts to address the requests made by participants at the high-level forum on health-related MDGs (Geneva, January).

Drug statistics

The Commission had before it the report of the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime

(UNODC) on statistics of drugs and drug use [E/CN.3/2004/6], which provided a summary of the 2003 edition of its annual statistical publication, Global Illicit Drug Trends. The Commission took note of UNODC's work on drug statistics, the need for national capacity-building to produce reliable statistics and the need for further development of methods for measuring various components of the world drug problem.

Labour statistics

Having considered the report of the Paris Group on Labour and Compensation [E/CN.3/2004/7], the Commission endorsed the activities proposed by the Group related to the outcome of the Seventeenth International Conference of Labour Statisticians (Geneva, 24 November–3 December 2003). It recommended work programme topics for the Group to explore, suggested that it continue to work with ILO in developing international standards in “working time”, and requested it to encourage greater participation of developing countries in its deliberations.

Poverty statistics

The Commission had before it the report of the Secretary-General on poverty statistics [E/CN.3/2004/8] and the report of the Rio Group on Poverty Statistics [E/CN.3/2004/9].

The Commission noted the progress made in the preparation of a handbook on poverty statistics and expressed appreciation for the broad consultative process put in place by the Statistics Division for its further elaboration. The handbook should be a practical guide to poverty measurements based on country practices, address specific analytical aspects and broaden its focus to include best practices of poverty measurements in developed countries.

The Commission noted the continuing preparation by the Rio Group of a compendium on best practices of poverty statistics and welcomed the Statistics Division's intention to work with the Group on a joint publication.

Social statistics

The Commission had before it the Secretary-General's report on social statistics (programme review) [E/CN.3/2004/2], which described activities carried out by the Statistics Division in 2003 and its proposed 2004-2014 work programme, including plans to establish a social statistics forum to review the international work programme for social statistics; expand the web site on international statistics; conduct an integrated review of international principles and recommendations; and undertake a thorough review of the Demo- graphic Yearbook work programme for 2004-2005. It also considered the report of the Siena Group for Social Statistics [E/CN.3/2004/3].

The Commission endorsed the proposal presented by the Statistics Division for replacing the proposed social statistics forum and related activities set out in the Secretary-General's report. It requested that the Division, as part of its alternative dissemination programme for the Demographic Yearbook, establish a well-structured web site to ensure the exchange of census and other data free of charge.

The Commission took note of the report of the Siena Group and requested that it focus on key issues, such as considering the possibility of developing model survey modules for social statistics and contributing to Commission activities by identifying a clear list of deliverable outputs and lead members. The Commission also noted the inadequate participation of developing countries in the Group's meetings.

Disability statistics

The Commission had before it the "Executive summary of the Third Meeting of the Washington Group on Disability Statistics" (Brussels, Belgium, 19-20 February). It took note of the presentation made and of progress being made by the Group.

Other statistical activities

International economic and social classifications

The Statistical Commission had before it a January report of the Secretary-General on international economic and social classifications [E/CN.3/2004/22], which outlined how Commission recommendations on international statistical classifications had been addressed since its 2003 session.

The Commission endorsed the recommendations of the Expert Group on International Economic and Social Classifications and its Technical Subgroup on the revision of ISIC and CPC, including the proposed ISIC high-level structure as a basis for detailed work on the classification. It agreed with the proposed work plan for the revisions and supported the development of a limited top-level structure for ISIC in conjunction with the ISWGNA. The Commission noted the efforts of the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations to work on the classification of agricultural activities and products as part of the ISIC and CPC revisions and endorsed the work undertaken to ensure the consistency of ISIC and the Statistical Classification of Economic Activities in the European Community. It noted ILO plans for revising the International Standard Classification of Occupations by 2007, and agreed with the International Merchandise Trade Statistics Task Force that the fourth revision of the Standard International Trade Classification should be prepared for 2007.

Official statistics

The Secretary-General submitted a report on the result of a survey on the implementation of the Fundamental Principles of Official Statistics [E/CN.3/2004/21], prepared by ECE and adopted by the Statistical Commission in 1994 [YUN 1994, p. 1265].

The Commission, while welcoming the progress made in the implementation of the Principles, expressed disappointment that only 58 per cent of all countries (50 per cent of developing countries and 31 per cent of least developed countries) had responded to the survey. It considered it important to obtain information from those that had not responded, study the implementation in greater depth for a sample of countries and analyse the variations in implementation to determine what action to take. It reaffirmed that the Principles should be broadly applied by all national statistical systems. The Commission considered that a compendium of best practices would be helpful to countries in their implementation efforts and that more advocacy efforts were needed. It identified areas in the Principles and related issues for additional thought and research, and considered it useful to survey the extent to which statistical services in the international organizations had implemented them.

Statistical capacity-building

The Commission considered a report of the Secretary-General on indicators for monitoring the implementation of the MDGs [E/CN.3/2004/23], submitted in response to a 2003 Commission request [YUN 2003, p. 1295], which described Statistics Division activities in leading inter-agency monitoring of the achievement of the MDGs, reviewed data availability and problems in compiling MDG indicators and described the activities of the Inter-Agency Expert Group on MDG Indicators for improving the situation. The Commission also had before it the report of the Advisory Committee on Indicators [E/CN.3/2004/24], the report of the Steering Committee of the Partnership in Statistics for Development in the Twenty-first Century (PARIS 21) [E/CN.3/2004/25], which presented the results of an independent evaluation of the PARIS 21 programme and its 2003 activities, and a World Bank document entitled "The Marrakesh Action Plan for Statistics: Better Data for Better Results: An Action Plan for Improving Development Statistics", adopted at the Second International Round Table on Managing for Development Results (Marrakesh, 4-5 February)".

The Commission concluded that the Advisory Committee recommendations on the harmonization of indicators should be accepted and that the Commission should carefully consider further international work to improve methods and technical specifications for development indicators to ensure a transparent process, with greater involvement of developed and developing countries and competent international agencies. Work on information technologies statistics and indicators should be coordinated and further investment in developing sustainable statistical capacity would be required to improve the availability of statistics at national and international levels, including those needed to monitor implementation of the MDGs.

The Commission encouraged further progress in the PARIS 21 programme and the proposed activities related to the Partnership Library of Statistical System Documentation. It concluded that statistical capacity-building should continue to feature in its agenda. Statistical capacity-building in developing countries should be stressed, as well as the support from developed countries and donors in that regard. The importance of the Marrakesh Action Plan should be noted also.

Standards for data dissemination and exchange

The Commission had before it an OECD report on the presentation of statistical data and metadata [E/CN.3/2004/26], which outlined proposals for the preparation of a manual containing guidelines and recommended best practice for presenting statistical data and metadata disseminated by national agencies and international organizations, and links to related international initiatives, including the statistical data and metadata exchange (SDMX) project—a consortium of international organizations working to develop a set of common business practices in statistical information sharing. The Commission also considered the report of the task force to establish standards on data and metadata exchange [E/CN.3/2004/27], detailing the first phase (2001-2003) and future plans (2004-2005) of the SDMX initiative.

The Commission took note of the OECD work and that of the task force in the presentation of and common open standards for the exchange and sharing of statistical data and metadata.

Coordination and integration of statistical programmes

The Commission considered the report of Committee for the Coordination of Statistical Activities (CCSA) on its first (New York, 3 March 2003) and second (Geneva, 8-10 September 2003) meetings [E/CN.3/2004/29], which covered aggregation of national data to regional and global estimates; harmonization of base years for index numbers; development of international guidelines for the presentation of statistical data and metadata; good practices in citation in the outputs of international statistical offices; strengthening governance of statistical systems; statistics at the subnational level; and new initiatives planned by organizations. The Commission welcomed the work of the Committee.

CCSA held its third (1 March) and fourth (1-3 September) meetings in New York, which addressed, respectively, plans for and follow-up to the Q2004 satellite conference on data quality (Wiesbaden, Germany, 27-28 May) [E/CN.3/2005/24].

Follow-up to Economic and Social Council policy decisions

The Commission had before it a note by the Secretary-General on the policy decisions of the Economic and Social Council that were relevant to the Commission's work [E/CN.3/2004/28].

The Commission agreed that the actions outlined in the Secretary-General's note were consistent with the Council's requests and reflected the work being undertaken and planned by the Commission and the Statistics Division. It asked the Bureau to examine the Commission's working methods in support of the coordinated follow-up to UN conferences and summits and to report thereon in 2005.

Programme and institutional questions

The Commission approved changes to the 2004-2005 Statistics Division work programme [YUN 2003, p. 1296] and the revised list of expert group meetings and workshops to be held in 2004/05 [E/CN.3/2004/30], and endorsed the proposed programme plan set out in the document "Proposed strategic framework for the biennium 2006-2007".

The Commission also approved its multi-year (2004-2007) work programme [E/CN.3/2004/31], as amended; took note of the activities of the Commission on Sustainable Development; recommended that its thirty-sixth session be held in New York from 1 to 4 March 2005; and approved the provisional agenda and documentation for that session.

PART FOUR

Legal questions

Chapter I

International Court of Justice

In 2004, the International Court of Justice (ICJ) delivered nine Judgments and one Advisory Opinion, made 6 Orders and had 21 contentious cases and one request for an advisory opinion pending before it. In a 4 November address to the General Assembly, the ICJ President underlined the role of the Court and its contribution to the promotion and development of a unified international legal system, both by the adjudication of contentious disputes between States and by the exercise of its advisory function. He noted the increased use of the Court by States in recent years and recalled that, in order to meet the growing demand and fulfil its judicial responsibilities, the Court had taken further steps to improve its judicial efficiency.

Judicial work of the Court

During 2004, the Court delivered a Judgment on the merits in the case concerning Avena and other Mexican Nationals (Mexico v. United States of America), eight Judgments on the preliminary objections raised by the respondent Party in each of the cases concerning Legality of Use of Force (Serbia and Montenegro v. Belgium), (Serbia and Montenegro v. Canada), (Serbia and Montenegro v. France), (Serbia and Montenegro v. Germany), (Serbia and Montenegro v. Italy), (Serbia and Montenegro v. Netherlands), (Serbia and Montenegro v. Portugal) and (Serbia and Montenegro v. United Kingdom), and one Advisory Opinion in the case concerning Legal Consequences of the Construction of a Wall in the Occupied Palestinian Territory (Request for advisory opinion).

During the year, the Court was seized of one new case: Maritime Delimitation in the Black Sea (Romania v. Ukraine).

The Court and its President made Orders on the conduct of the proceedings in the cases concerning Certain Criminal Proceedings in France (Republic of the Congo v. France); Maritime Delimitation in the Black Sea (Romania v. Ukraine) and Legal Consequences of the Construction of a Wall in the Occupied Palestinian Territory (Request for advisory opinion) and one Order in the case concerning the Frontier Dispute (Benin/Niger).

The Court held hearings in the cases concerning Legality of Use of Force (Serbia and Montenegro v. Belgium), (Serbia and Montenegro v. Canada), (Ser- bia and Montenegro v. France), (Serbia and Montenegro v. Germany), (Serbia and Montenegro v. Italy), (Serbia and Montenegro v. Netherlands), (Serbia and Montenegro v. Portugal) and (Serbia and Montenegro v. United Kingdom); and Certain Property (Liechtenstein v. Germany) and on the request of the General Assembly for an advisory opinion in the case concerning Legal Consequences of the Construction of a Wall in the Occupied Palestinian Territory.

During the year, there were no new developments in the cases concerning Application of the Convention on the Prevention and Punishment of the Crime of Genocide (Bosnia and Herzegovina v. Serbia and Montenegro) [YUN 1993, p. 1138], Ahmadou Sadio Diallo (Guinea v. Democratic Republic of the Congo) [YUN 1998, p. 1190], Armed Activities on the Territory of the Congo (Democratic Republic of the Congo v. Uganda) [YUN 1999, p. 1209], Application of the Convention on the Prevention and Punishment of the Crime of Genocide (Croatia v. Serbia and Montenegro) [YUN 1999, p. 1210], Maritime Delimitation between Nicaragua and Honduras in the Caribbean Sea (Nicaragua v. Honduras) [YUN 1999, p. 1210] and Armed Activities on the Territory of the Congo (New Application: 2002) (Democratic Republic of the Congo v. Rwanda) [YUN 2002, p. 1271].

ICJ activities in 2004 were covered in two reports to the General Assembly, for the periods 1 August 2003 to 31 July 2004 [A/59/4] and 1 August 2004 to 31 July 2005 [A/60/4]. On 4 November 2004, the Assembly took note of the 2003/2004 report (decision 59/508).

Use of force (Serbia and Montenegro v. Belgium), (Serbia and Montenegro v. Canada), (Serbia and Montenegro v. France), (Serbia and Montenegro v. Germany), (Serbia and Montenegro v. Italy), (Serbia and Montenegro v. Netherlands), (Serbia and Montenegro v. Portugal), (Serbia and Montenegro v. Spain), (Serbia and Montenegro v. United States) and (Serbia and Montenegro v. United Kingdom)

Serbia and Montenegro, then known as the Federal Republic of Yugoslavia, instituted proceedings on 29 April 1999 [YUN 1999, p. 1207] against Belgium, Canada, France, Germany, Italy, the Netherlands, Portugal, Spain, the United Kingdom and the United States for alleged violation of the obligation not to use force. In the cases against Belgium, Canada, the Netherlands, Portugal, Spain and the United Kingdom, Serbia and Montenegro invoked the jurisdiction of the Court based on Article 36, paragraph 2, of the Statute of the Court and on article IX of the 1948 Convention on the Prevention and Punishment of the Crime of Genocide (the Genocide Convention), adopted by the General Assembly in resolution 260 A (III) [YUN 1948-49, p. 959], and, in the cases against France, Germany, Italy and the United States, on article IX of the Convention and Article 38, paragraph 5, of the Rules of Court.

In its Applications, Serbia and Montenegro stated that the disputes involved acts of the respondent States concerned, by which they had violated the international obligation banning the use of force against another State, the obligation not to intervene in the internal affairs of another State, the obligation not to violate the sovereignty of another State, the obligation to protect the civilian population and civilian objects in war-time, the obligation to protect the environment, the obligation relating to free navigation on international rivers, the obligation regarding fundamental human rights and freedoms, the obligation not to use prohibited weapons and the obligation not to deliberately inflict conditions of life calculated to cause the physical destruction of a national group.

Also on 29 April 1999 [YUN 1999, p. 1208], Serbia and Montenegro submitted, in each of the cases, a request for the indication of provisional measures, asking the Court to indicate that “the [respondent State concerned] shall cease immediately its acts of use of force and shall refrain from any act of threat or use of force” against Serbia and Montenegro. Hearings on the requests for the indication of provisional measures were held between 10 and 12 May 1999.

On 2 June 1999 [ibid.], the Court delivered eight Orders, by which, in the cases (Serbia and Montenegro v. Belgium), (Serbia and Montenegro v. Canada), (Serbia and Montenegro v. France), (Serbia and Montenegro v. Germany), (Serbia and Montenegro v. Italy), (Serbia and Montenegro v. Netherlands), (Serbia and Montenegro v. Portugal) and (Serbia and Montenegro v. United Kingdom), the Court rejected the requests for the indication of provisional measures and reserved the subsequent procedure for further decision. In the cases of (Serbia and Montenegro v. Spain) and (Serbia and Montenegro v. United States of America), the Court—having found that it manifestly lacked jurisdiction to entertain Serbia and Montenegro’s Application, and that, within a system of consensual jurisdiction, to maintain on the General List a case upon which it appeared certain that the Court would not be able to adjudicate on the merits and would most assuredly not contribute to the sound administration of justice—rejected Serbia and Montenegro’s requests for the indication of provisional measures and ordered that those cases be removed from the List.

Following the filing of the Memorial of Serbia and Montenegro, in each of the eight cases maintained on the Court’s List, within the prescribed time limit of 5 January 2000, each of the respondent States raised preliminary objections of lack of jurisdiction and admissibility. By virtue of Article 79, paragraph 3, of the Rules of Court, the proceedings were accordingly suspended.

By an Order of 8 September 2000 [YUN 2000, p. 1217], the Court fixed 5 April 2001 as the time limit for the filing, in each of the cases, of a written statement by Serbia and Montenegro on the preliminary objections raised by the respondent State. By Orders of 21 February 2001 [YUN 2001, p. 1190] and 20 March 2002 [YUN 2002, p. 1267], the Court, in each of the cases, extended the time limit to 5 April 2002 and 7 April 2003, respectively. On 20 December 2002, within the extended time limit, Serbia and Montenegro filed a written statement on the preliminary objections raised by the respondent State concerned in each of the cases [ibid.].

Public hearings were held from 19 to 23 April 2004 on the preliminary objections raised by each of the respondent States. At the conclusion of the hearings, the parties presented their final submissions to the Court.

For the reasons set out in its preliminary objections and those set out during the oral submissions on 19 and 22 April 2004, Belgium requested the Court to remove from the List the case brought against it by Serbia and Montenegro, and, in the alternative, to rule that the Court lacked jurisdiction in the case and/or that the case was inadmissible.

Canada requested the Court to adjudge and declare that the Court lacked jurisdiction because the Applicant had abandoned all the grounds of jurisdiction originally specified in its Application pursuant to Article 38, paragraph 2, of the Rules of the Court and had identified no alternative grounds of jurisdiction. In the alternative, Canada requested the Court to adjudge and declare that: the Court lacked jurisdiction over the proceedings brought by the Applicant against Canada on 29 April 1999 on the basis of the purported declaration of 25 April 1999; the Court also lacked jurisdiction on the basis of article IX of the Genocide Convention; the new claims respecting the period beginning 10 June 1999 were inadmissible because they would transform the subject of the dispute originally brought before the Court; and the claims in their entirety were inadmissible because the subject matter of the case required the presence of essential third parties that were not before the Court.

France, for the reasons it had set out orally and in its written pleadings, requested the Court: principally, to remove the case from the List; in the alternative, to decide that it lacked jurisdiction to rule on the Application filed by Serbia and Montenegro against France; and in the further alternative, to decide that the Application was inadmissible.

Germany requested the Court to dismiss the Application for lack of jurisdiction and, additionally, as being inadmissible on the grounds it had stated in its preliminary objections and during its oral pleadings.

Italy, for the reasons set out in its preliminary objections and oral statements, requested the Court to adjudge and declare, principally, that no decision was called for on the Application filed in the Registry of the Court on 29 April 1999 [YUN 1999, p. 1207] by Serbia and Montenegro against Italy for “violation of the obligation not to use force”, as supplemented by the Memorial filed on 5 January 2000 [YUN 2000, p. 1216], inasmuch as there was no longer any dispute between Serbia and Montenegro and Italy or as the subject matter of the dispute had disappeared. In the alternative, Italy requested the Court to adjudge and declare that: the Court lacked jurisdiction ratione personarum to decide the case, since Serbia and Montenegro was not a party to the Statute when the Application was filed and did not consider itself a party to a “treaty in force” such as would confer jurisdiction on the Court, in accordance with Article 35, paragraph 2, of the Statute; the Court lacked jurisdiction ratione materiae to decide the case, since Serbia and Montenegro did not regard itself as bound by article IX of the Genocide Convention, to which it made a reservation upon giving notice of accession in March 2001 [YUN 2001, p. 1184] and since, in any event, the dispute arising from the terms of the Application instituting proceedings, as supplemented by the Memorial, was not a dispute relating to “the interpretation, application or fulfilment” of the Genocide Convention, as provided in article IX; Serbia and Montenegro’s Application, as supplemented by the Memorial in its entirety, was inadmissible, inasmuch as Serbia and Montenegro sought thereby to obtain from the Court a decision regarding the legality of action undertaken by subjects of international law not present in the proceedings or not all so present; and Serbia and Montenegro’s Application was inadmissible with respect to the eleventh submission, mentioned for the first time in the Memorial, inasmuch as Serbia and Montenegro sought thereby to introduce a dispute altogether different from the original dispute deriving from the Application.

The Netherlands requested the Court to adjudge and declare that the Court had no jurisdiction or should decline to exercise jurisdiction, as the parties in fact agreed that the Court had no jurisdiction or as there was no longer a dispute between the parties on the jurisdiction of the Court. Alternatively, the Netherlands asked the Court to adjudge and declare that: Serbia and Montenegro was not entitled to appear before the Court; the Court had no jurisdiction over the claims brought against the Netherlands by Serbia and Montenegro; and/or the claims brought against the Netherlands by Serbia and Montenegro were inadmissible.

Portugal requested the Court to adjudge and declare that the Court was not called upon to give a decision on the claims of Serbia and Montenegro; or, alternatively, that the Court lacked jurisdiction, either under Article 36, paragraph 2, of the Statute or under article IX of the Genocide Convention, and the claims were inadmissible.

The United Kingdom, for the reasons given in its written preliminary objections and at the oral hearing, requested the Court to remove the case from its List; or, in the alternative, to adjudge and declare that it lacked jurisdiction over the claims brought against the United Kingdom by Serbia and Montenegro and/or that those claims were inadmissible.

Serbia and Montenegro, for the reasons given in its pleadings, and, in particular, in its written observations, subsequent correspondence with the Court and at the oral hearing, requested the Court to: adjudge and declare on its jurisdiction ratione personae in the current cases; dismiss the remaining preliminary objections of the respondent States; and order proceedings on the merits if it found that it had jurisdiction ratione personae.

On 15 December 2004, the Court delivered its Judgment in each of the cases. The Court found that it had no jurisdiction to entertain the claims made in the Application filed by Serbia and Montenegro on 29 April 1999.

In each of the cases, Vice President Ranjeva and Judges Guillaume, Higgins, Kooijmans, Al-Khasawneh, Buergenthal and Elaraby appended a joint declaration to the Judgment, and Judge Koroma appended a declaration. Judges Higgins, Kooijmans and Elaraby and Judge ad hoc Kreca appended separate opinions.

Certain property (Liechtenstein v. Germany)

On 1 June 2001 [YUN 2001, p. 1194], Liechtenstein filed an Application instituting proceedings against Germany concerning Germany’s decisions to treat certain property of Liechtenstein nationals as German assets, seized for the purposes of reparation or restitution as a consequence of the Second World War, without ensuring any compensation.

In the Application, Liechtenstein requested the Court to adjudge and declare that Germany had incurred international legal responsibility and was bound to make appropriate reparation to Liechtenstein for the damage and prejudice suffered. Liechtenstein further requested that the nature and amount of such reparation should, in the absence of agreement between the Parties, be assessed and determined by the Court, if necessary, in a separate phase of the proceedings. As a basis for the Court's jurisdiction, Liechtenstein invoked article 1 of the European Convention for the Peaceful Settlement of Disputes, signed at Strasbourg, France, on 29 April 1957.

By an Order of 28 June 2001 [ibid.], the Court fixed 28 March and 27 December 2002, respectively, as the time limits for the filing of a Memorial by Liechtenstein and of a Counter-Memorial by Germany. The Memorial was filed within the fixed time limit.

On 27 June 2002 [YUN 2002, p. 1271], Germany filed certain preliminary objections to the jurisdiction of the Court and the admissibility of the Application; the proceedings on the merits were suspended in accordance with Article 79 of the Rules of the Court. Within the 15 November 2002 time limit fixed by the President of the Court, Liechtenstein filed a written statement of its observations and submissions with regard to the preliminary objections raised by Germany.

Public hearings on the preliminary objections raised by Germany were held from 14 to 18 June 2004, at the conclusion of which the Parties presented their final submissions to the Court.

Germany requested the Court to adjudge and declare that it lacked jurisdiction over the claims brought against Germany by Liechtenstein, which were referred to it by Liechtenstein's 2001 Application [YUN 2001, p. 1194], and that those claims were inadmissible to the extent specified in its preliminary objections.

Liechtenstein requested the Court to adjudge and declare that the Court had jurisdiction over the claims presented in its Application and that they were admissible, and, accordingly, to reject Germany's preliminary objections in their entirety.

The Court deliberated its Judgment.

Territorial and maritime dispute (Nicaragua v. Colombia)

In 2001 [YUN 2001, p. 1195], Nicaragua instituted proceedings against Colombia in respect of a dispute concerning "a group of related legal issues subsisting" between the two States "concerning title to territory and maritime delimitation". In its Application, Nicaragua first requested the Court to adjudge and declare that Nicaragua had sovereignty over the islands of Providencia, San Andres and Santa Catalina and all the appurtenant islands and keys, and also over the Roncador, Serrana, Serranilla and Quitasueño keys (insofar as they were capable of appropriation); and, second, in the light of the determinations concerning the title requested above, asked the Court to determine the course of the single maritime boundary between the areas of the continental shelf and the exclusive economic zone appertaining respectively to Nicaragua and Colombia, in accordance with equitable principles and relevant circumstances recognized by general international law as applicable to such a delimitation of a single maritime boundary. Nicaragua reserved the right to claim compensation for elements of unjust enrichment consequent upon Colombian possession of the islands of San Andres and Providencia, as well as the keys and maritime spaces up to the 82 meridian, in the absence of lawful title. It also reserved the right to claim compensation for interference with fishing vessels of Nicaraguan nationality or vessels licensed by Nicaragua.

By an Order of 26 February 2002 [YUN 2002, p. 1271], the Court fixed 28 April 2003 and 28 June 2004, respectively, as the time limits for the filing of a Memorial by Nicaragua and of a Counter-Memorial by Colombia. The Memorial of Nicaragua was filed within the time limit [YUN 2003, p. 1305].

On 21 July 2003 [ibid.], Colombia filed preliminary objections to the jurisdiction of the Court; under Article 79 of the Rules of Court, proceedings on the merits were suspended accordingly. Nicaragua filed a written statement of its observations and submissions on the preliminary objections raised by Colombia within the time limit of 26 January 2004, fixed by the Court by an Order of 24 September 2003.

Frontier dispute (Benin/Niger)

In 2002 [YUN 2002, p. 1271], Benin and the Niger jointly notified the Court of a Special Agreement, which was signed between them on 15 June 2001 and entered into force on 11 April 2002. Under article 1 of the Agreement, the Parties agreed to submit their boundary dispute to a chamber to be formed by the Court, pursuant to Article 26, paragraph 2, of the Court's Statute, and that each of them would choose a judge ad hoc. Article 2 of the Agreement stated that the Court was requested to determine the course of the boundary between Benin and the Niger in the River Niger sector; specify which State owned each of the islands in the River Niger, in particular Lété Island; and determine the course of the boundary between the two States in the River Mekrou sector. Article 10 contained a “special undertaking” as follows: “Pending the judgment of the Chamber, the Parties undertake to preserve peace, security and quiet among the peoples of the two States”.

By an Order of 27 November 2002 [ibid.], the Court decided to accede to the Parties’ request and form a special chamber of five judges; the Court formed a Chamber of three members of the Court together with two judges ad hoc chosen by the Parties. The Court fixed 27 August 2003 as the time limit for the filing of a Memorial by each Party. The Memorials were filed within the time limit.

By an Order of 11 September 2003 [YUN 2003, p. 1305], the President of the Chamber fixed 28 May 2004 as the time limit for the filing of a Counter-Memorial by each of the Parties; the Counter-Memorials were filed within the time limit fixed. On 20 November 2003 [ibid.], the Chamber held its first public sitting to enable the two judges ad hoc to make the solemn declaration required by the Statute and the Rules of Court.

By an Order of 9 July 2004, the President of the Chamber, taking into account the wish of the Parties to be authorized to submit a third pleading as provided for by the Special Agreement, authorized the submission of a Reply by each of the Parties and fixed 17 December 2004 as the time limit for the filing of that pleading. The Replies were deposited within the time limit thus prescribed.

Certain criminal proceedings in France (Republic of the Congo v. France)

On 9 December 2002 [YUN 2002, p. 1263], the Republic of the Congo filed an Application by which it sought to institute proceedings against France seeking the annulment of the investigation and prosecution measures taken by the French judicial authorities further to a complaint for crimes against humanity and torture filed by various associations against the President of the Congo, Denis Sassou Nguesso, the Congolese Minister of the Interior, Pierre Oba, and other individuals, including General Norbert Dabira, Inspector General of the Congolese Armed Forces. The Application further stated that, in connection with the proceedings, an investigating judge of the Meaux (France) tribunal de grande instance had issued a warrant for the President of the Congo to be examined as witness.

The Congo contended that by “attributing to itself universal jurisdiction in criminal matters and by arrogating to itself the power to prosecute and try the Minister of the Interior of a foreign State for crimes allegedly committed by him in connection with the exercise of his powers for the maintenance of public order in his country”, France violated “the principle that a State may not, in breach of the principle of sovereign equality among all Members of the United Nations . . . exercise its authority on the territory of another State”. The Congo further submitted that, in issuing a warrant instructing police officers to examine the President of the Congo as witness in the case, France violated “the criminal immunity of a foreign head of State, an international customary rule recognized by the jurisprudence of the Court”.

In its Application, the Congo indicated that it sought to found the jurisdiction of the Court, pursuant to Article 38, paragraph 5, of the Rules of Court, “on the consent of the French Republic, which will certainly be given”. In accordance with that provision, the Application by the Congo was transmitted to France and no further action was taken in the proceedings at that stage.

By an 8 April 2003 letter [YUN 2003, p. 1308], France stated that it “consent [ed] to the jurisdiction of the Court to entertain the Application pursuant to Article 38, paragraph 5”. That consent made it possible to enter the case in the Court’s List and to open the proceedings. In its letter, France added that its consent to the Court’s jurisdiction applied strictly within the limits “of the claims formulated by the Republic of the Congo” and that “Article 2 of the Treaty of Co-operation signed on 1 January 1974 by the French Republic and the People’s Republic of the Congo, to which the latter refers in its Application, does not constitute a basis of jurisdiction for the Court in the present case”.

The Application of the Congo was accompanied by a request for the indication of a provisional measure “seek [ing] an order for the immediate suspension of the proceedings being conducted by the investigating judge of the Meaux tribunal de grande instance”.

Taking into account the consent given by France and in accordance with Article 74, paragraph 3, of the Rules of Court, the President of the Court fixed 28 April 2003 as the date for the opening of the public hearings on the request for the indication of a provisional measure submitted by the Congo. The hearings were held on 28 and 29 April 2003 [ibid.].

On 17 June 2003 [ibid.], the President of the Court read the Order, by which the Court found, by 14 votes to 1, that the circumstances, as they presented themselves to the Court, were not such as to require the exercise of its power under Article 41 of the Statute of the Court to indicate provisional measures. Judges Koroma and Vereshchetin appended a joint separate opinion to the Order, and Judge ad hoc de Cara a dissenting opinion.

By an Order of 11 July 2003 [ibid.], the President of the Court fixed 11 December 2003 as the time limit for the Memorial of the Congo and 11 May 2004 as the time limit for the Counter-Memorial of France. The Memorial was filed within the time limit.

By an Order of 17 June 2004, the Court, taking account of the agreement of the Parties and of the particular circumstances of the case, authorized the submission of a Reply by the Congo and a Rejoinder by France, and fixed 10 December 2004 and 10 June 2005 as the respective time limits for the filing of those pleadings. By Orders of 8 and 29 December 2004, the President of the Court, taking account of the reasons given by the Congo and of the agreement of the Parties, extended to 10 January and 10 August 2005 those respective time limits.

Avena and other Mexican nationals (Mexico v. United States)

On 9 January 2003 [YUN 2003, p. 1306], Mexico instituted proceedings before the Court against the United States in a dispute concerning alleged violations of articles 5 and 36 of the 1963 Vienna Convention on Consular Relations [YUN 1963, p. 510] with respect to 54 Mexican nationals who had been sentenced to death in the States of Arizona, Arkansas, California, Florida, Illinois, Nevada, Ohio, Oklahoma, Oregon and Texas. In its Application, Mexico maintained that the 54 cases (later adjusted by Mexico to 52) illustrated the systemic nature of the United States violation of its obligation under article 36 of the Vienna Convention to inform nationals of Mexico of their right to consular assistance and to provide relief adequate to redress such a violation. Mexico claimed that in at least 49 of the cases it had found no evidence that the competent United States authorities attempted to comply with article 36 before Mexico's nationals were tried, convicted and sentenced to death. It further noted that in four cases, some attempt was apparently made to comply with article 36 but the authorities still failed to provide the required notification "without delay"; and in one case, the detained national was informed of his rights to consular notification and access in connection with immigration proceedings, but not in connection with pending capital charges. Mexico invoked as a basis for the Court's jurisdiction article I of the Vienna Convention's Optional Protocol concerning the Compulsory Settlement of Disputes [YUN 1963, p. 512], which provided that "disputes arising out of the interpretation or application of the Convention shall lie within the compulsory jurisdiction of the International Court of Justice".

Also on 9 January 2003 [YUN 2003, p. 1307], Mexico filed an urgent request for the indication of provisional measures. At hearings held on 21 January 2003, Mexico confirmed that request, while the United States asked the Court to reject it and not to indicate any such measures.

On 5 February 2003 [ibid.], the Court unanimously adopted an Order indicating provisional measures. In the Order, it decided that the United States should take "all measures necessary" to ensure that César Roberto Fierro Reyna, Roberto Moreno Ramos and Osvaldo Torres Aguilera, of Mexican nationality, were not executed pending a final judgment of the Court; the United States should inform the Court of all measures taken to implement the Order; and the Court would remain seized of the matters which formed the subject of the Order until it had rendered its final judgment.

In a further separate Order of 5 February 2003 [ibid.], the Court fixed 6 June 2003 as the time limit for the filing of a Memorial by Mexico and 6 October 2003 as the time limit for the filing of a Counter-Memorial by the United States. By an Order of 22 May 2003, the President of the Court, at the joint request of the Parties, extended the time limits to 20 June 2003 for the Memorial of Mexico and to 3 November 2003 for the Counter-Memorial of the United States. The Memorial and Counter-Memorial were filed within the extended time limits. At the conclusion of public hearings held from 15 to 19 December 2003, the Parties presented final submissions to the Court.

In its Judgment of 31 March 2004, the Court, by 13 votes to 2, rejected Mexico's objection to the admissibility of the objections presented by the United States to the jurisdiction of the Court and the admissibility of the Mexican claims. It rejected unanimously the four objections by the United States to the jurisdiction of the Court and the five objections by the United States to the admissibility of Mexico's claims. By six separate votes of 14 to 1, the Court found that: by not informing, without delay upon their detention, the 51 Mexican nationals referred to in paragraph 106 (1) of the Judgment of their rights under article 36, paragraph 1 (b), of the 1963 Vienna Convention, the United States breached the obligations incumbent upon it under that subparagraph; by not notifying the appropriate Mexican consular post without delay of the detention of the 49 Mexican nationals referred to in paragraph 106 (2) of the Judgment and thereby depriving Mexico of the right, in a timely fashion, to render the assistance provided for by the Vienna Convention to the individuals concerned, the United States breached the obligations incumbent upon it under article 36, paragraph 1 (b); in relation to the 49 Mexican nationals referred to in paragraph 106 (3) of the Judgment, the United States deprived Mexico of the right, in a timely fashion, to communicate with and have access to those nationals and to visit them in detention, and thereby breached the obligations incumbent upon it under article 36, paragraph 1 (a) and (c), of the Vienna Convention; in relation to the 34 Mexican nationals referred to in paragraph 106 (4) of the Judgment, the United States deprived Mexico of the right, in a timely fashion, to arrange for legal representation of those nationals, and thereby breached the obligations incumbent upon it under article 36, paragraph 1 (c), of the Convention; by not permitting the review and reconsideration, in the light of the rights set forth in the Convention, of the conviction and sentences of César Roberto Fierro Reyna, Roberto Moreno Ramos and Osvaldo Torres Aguilera, after the violations referred to in subparagraph (4) of the Judgment had been established in respect of those individuals, the United States breached the obligations incumbent upon it under article 36, paragraph 2, of the Convention; and the appropriate reparation in that case consisted in the United States obligation to provide, by means of its own choosing, review and reconsideration of the convictions and sentences of the Mexican nationals referred to in subparagraphs (4), (5), (6) and (7) of the Judgment, by taking account both of the violation of the rights set forth in article 36 of the Convention and of paragraphs 138 to 141 of the Judgment. Unanimously, the Court took note of the commitment undertaken by the United States to ensure implementation of the specific measures adopted in performance of its obligations under article 36, paragraph 1 (b), of the Convention; found that the commitment had to be regarded as meeting Mexico's request for guarantees and assurances of non-repetition; and found that, should Mexican nationals nonetheless be sentenced to severe penalties, without their rights under article 36, paragraph 1 (b), of the Convention having been respected, the United States would provide, by means of its own choosing, review and reconsideration of the conviction and sentence, so as to allow full weight to be given to the violation of the rights set forth in the Convention, taking account of paragraphs 138 to 141 of the Judgment.

President Shi and Vice President Ranjeva appended declarations to the Judgment; Judges Vereshchetin, Parra-Aranguren and Tomka and Judge ad hoc Sepúlveda appended separate opinions.

Sovereignty over Pedra Branca/Pulau Batu Puteh, Middle Rocks and South Ledge (Malaysia/Singapore)

On 24 July 2003 [YUN 2003, p. 1308], Malaysia and Singapore jointly notified the Court of a Special Agreement, which was signed between them on 6 February 2003 at Putrajaya, Malaysia, and entered into force on 9 May 2003. In article 2 of the Special Agreement, the Parties requested the Court to determine whether sovereignty over Pedra Branca/Pulau Batu Puteh, Middle Rocks and South Ledge belonged to Malaysia or Singapore. In article 6, the Parties agreed to accept the judgment of the Court as final and binding upon them. The Parties further set out their views on the procedure to be followed.

By an Order of 1 September 2003 [ibid., p. 1309], the Court, taking into account the provisions of article 4 of the Special Agreement, fixed 25 March 2004 and 25 January 2005 as the respective time limits for the filing, by each of the Parties, of a Memorial and of a Counter-Memorial. The Memorials were filed within the time limit.

On 16 September, Romania filed an Application instituting proceedings against Ukraine in respect of a dispute concerning the establishment of a single maritime boundary between the two States in the Black Sea, thereby delimiting the continental shelf and the exclusive economic zones appertaining to them.

In its Application, Romania explained that Ukraine and itself signed, on 2 June 1997, a Treaty on Relations of Co-operation and Good Neighbourliness, and concluded an Additional Agreement by exchange of letters between their respective Ministers for Foreign Affairs. Both instruments entered into force on 22 October 1997. By those agreements, the two States assumed the obligation to conclude a treaty on the State Border Regime between them, as well as an agreement for the delimitation of the continental shelf and the exclusive economic zones in the Black Sea. At the same time, the Additional Agreement provided for the principles to be applied in the delimitation of the above-mentioned areas, and set out the commitment of the two countries that the dispute could be submitted to the Court, subject to the fulfilment of certain conditions. Between 1998 and 2004, 24 rounds of negotiations were held. However, according to Romania, no result was obtained and an agreed delimitation of the maritime areas in the Black Sea was not accomplished. Romania brought the matter before the Court “in order to avoid the indefinite prolongation of discussions that, in [its] opinion, obviously cannot lead to any outcome”.

Romania requested the Court to draw, in accordance with international law, and specifically the criteria laid down in article 4 of the Additional Agreement, a single maritime boundary between the continental shelf and the exclusive economic zone of the two States in the Black Sea.

As a basis for the Court’s jurisdiction, Romania invoked article 4 (h) of the Additional Agreement, which provided that, if the negotiations should not determine the conclusion of an agreement on the delimitation of the continental shelf and the exclusive economic zones in the Black Sea in a reasonable period of time, not later than two years after their initiation, Romania and Ukraine would agree that the delimitation problem would be solved by ICJ, at the request of any of the Parties, provided that the treaty on the regime of the State border between Romania and Ukraine had entered into force. However, should ICJ consider that the delay of the entry into force of the treaty on the border regime was the result of the other Party’s fault, it might examine the request concerning the delimitation before the entry into force of the treaty.

Romania contended that the two conditions set out in article 4 (h) of the Additional Agreement had been fulfilled, since the negotiations had by far exceeded two years and the Treaty on the Romanian-Ukrainian State Border Régime had entered into force on 27 May 2004.

In its Application, Romania further provided an overview of the applicable law for solving the dispute, citing a number of provisions of the Additional Agreement of 1997, as well as the 1982 United Nations Convention on the Law of the Sea [YUN 1982, p. 181], to which both Ukraine and Romania were parties, together with other relevant instruments binding the two countries.

By an Order of 19 November 2004, the Court, taking into account the views of the Parties, fixed 19 August 2005 and 19 May 2006, respectively, as the time limits for the filing of a Memorial by Romania and a Counter-Memorial by Ukraine.

Legal consequences of the construction of a wall in the Occupied Palestinian Territory

In response to General Assembly resolution ES-10/14 [YUN 2003, p. 480], which requested the Court urgently to render an advisory opinion on the legal consequences arising from the construction of the wall being built by Israel in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, ICJ, by an Order of 19 December 2003 [ibid., p. 1309], decided that the United Nations and its Member States were likely, in accordance with Article 66, paragraph 2, of the ICJ Statute, to be able to furnish information on all aspects raised by the question submitted to the Court for an advisory opinion and fixed 30 January 2004 as the time limit within which written statements might be submitted, in accordance with Article 66, paragraph 4, of the Statute. By the same Order, the Court further decided that, in the light of resolution ES-10/14 and the report of the Secretary-General transmitted with the request [ibid., p. 478], and taking into account the fact that the Assembly had granted Palestine a special status of observer and that the latter was co-sponsor of the draft resolution requesting the advisory opinion, Palestine might also submit a written statement on the question within the time limit. Also by the Order, the Court decided, in accordance with Article 105, paragraph 4, of the Rules of Court, to hold public hearings, during which oral statements and comments might be presented to it by the United Nations and its Member States, regardless of whether or not they had submitted written statements, and fixed 23 February 2004 as the date for the opening of the hearings. In the Order, the Court also decided that, for the reasons set out above, Palestine might take part in the hearings. By letters of 19 December 2003 [ibid., p. 1309], the Registrar informed them of the Court’s decisions and transmitted to them a copy of the Order.

Ruling on requests submitted subsequently by the League of Arab States (LAS) and the Organization of the Islamic Conference (OIC), the Court decided, in accordance with Article 66 of its Statute, that those two organizations were likely to be able to furnish information on the question submitted to the Court, and that, consequently, they might, for that purpose, submit written statements within the time limit fixed by the Court in its Order of 19 December 2003 and take part in the hearings. Pursuant to Article 65, paragraph 2, of the Statute, the Secretary-General communicated to the Court a dossier of documents likely to throw light upon the question.

By an Order of 30 January 2004 regarding its composition in the case, the Court decided that the matters brought to its attention by the Government of Israel in a letter of 31 December 2003, and in a confidential letter of 15 January 2004 addressed to the President pursuant to Article 34, paragraph 2, of the Rules of Court, were not such as to preclude Judge Elaraby from sitting in the case.

Within the time limit fixed by the Court for that purpose, written statements were filed by, in order of their receipt: Guinea, Saudi Arabia, LAS, Egypt, Cameroon, Russian Federation, Australia, Palestine, United Nations, Jordan, Kuwait, Lebanon, Canada, Syrian Arab Republic, Switzerland, Israel, Yemen, United States, Morocco, Indonesia, OIC, France, Italy, Sudan, South Africa, Germany, Japan, Norway, United Kingdom, Pakistan, Czech Republic, Greece, Ireland on its own behalf, Ireland on behalf of the European Union, Cyprus, Brazil, Namibia, Malta, Malaysia, Netherlands, Cuba, Sweden, Spain, Belgium, Palau, Federated States of Micronesia, Marshall Islands, Senegal and Democratic People's Republic of Korea.

In the course of hearings held from 23 to 25 February 2004, the Court heard oral statements, in the following order, by: the Palestinian Authority, South Africa, Algeria, Saudi Arabia, Bangladesh, Belize, Cuba, Indonesia, Jordan, Madagascar, Malaysia, Senegal, Sudan, LAS and OIC.

At a public sitting held on 9 July 2004, the Court delivered its Advisory Opinion. The Court found unanimously that it had jurisdiction to give the advisory opinion requested and, by a vote of 14 to 1, decided to comply with that request. In four separate votes of 14 to 1, the Court replied that: the construction of the wall being built by Israel, the occupying Power, in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including in and around East Jerusalem, and its associated regime, were contrary to international law; Israel was under an obligation to terminate its breaches of international law, and was under an obligation to cease forthwith the works of construction of the wall being built in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including in and around East Jerusalem, dismantle forthwith the structure therein situated, and repeal or render ineffective forthwith all legislative and regulatory acts relating thereto, in accordance with paragraph 151 of the Opinion; Israel was under an obligation to make reparation for all damage caused by the construction of the wall in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including in and around East Jerusalem; and the United Nations, and especially the Assembly and the Security Council, should consider what further action was required to bring to an end the illegal situation resulting from the construction of the wall and the associated regime, taking due account of the Advisory Opinion. By a vote of 13 to 2, the Court replied that all States were under an obligation not to recognize the illegal situation resulting from the construction of the wall and not to render aid or assistance in maintaining the situation created by such construction; all States parties to the 1949 Geneva Convention relative to the Protection of Civilian Persons in Time of War (Fourth Geneva Convention) had in addition the obligation, while respecting the UN Charter and international law, to ensure compliance by Israel with international humanitarian law as embodied in that Convention.

Judges Koroma, Higgins, Kooijmans and Al-Khasawneh appended separate opinions to the Advisory Opinion; Judge Buerghenthal appended a declaration; and Judges Elaraby and Owada appended separate opinions.

The Assembly, in resolution ES-10/15 of 20 July (see p. 465), acknowledged the Court's Advisory Opinion.

Other questions

Composition of the Court

On 21 October [S/2004/830], the Secretary-General informed the Security Council that Judge Gilbert Guillaume, a former President of the Court whose term of office as a Court member was to expire on 5 February 2009, intended to resign effective 11 February 2005. He drew the Council's attention to Articles 14 and 5 of the Statute of the Court regarding the fixing of a date for the election to fill the vacancy. Noting that the date of the election was to be fixed by the Council, the Secretary-General suggested that it might wish to consider the question at an early meeting.

Also in October [A/59/237], the Secretary-General informed the General Assembly of the vacancy.

On 23 December, the Assembly decided that the agenda item on the election of a member of ICJ would remain for consideration during its resumed fifty-ninth (2005) session (decision 59/552).

SECURITY COUNCIL ACTION

On 4 November [meeting 5070], the Security Council adopted resolution 1571(2004) without vote. The draft [S/2004/879] was prepared during Council consultations.

The Security Council,

Noting with regret the resignation of Judge Gilbert Guillaume, to take effect on 11 February 2005,

Noting that a vacancy in the International Court of Justice for the remainder of the term of office of Judge Gilbert Guillaume will thus occur and must be filled in accordance with the terms of the Statute of the Court,

Noting also that, in accordance with Article 14 of the Statute, the date of the election to fill the vacancy shall be fixed by the Security Council, Decides that the election to fill the vacancy shall take place on 15 February 2005 at a meeting of the Security Council and at a meeting of the General Assembly at its fifty-ninth session.

Rules of the Court

Practice Directions

In the ongoing review of its procedures and working methods, the Court took further measures to increase its productivity. The new measures mostly concerned the Court's internal functioning and provided practical methods for increasing the number of decisions rendered each year, including shortening the period between the closure of written proceedings and the opening of oral proceedings and stricter application of the Court's procedures. In addition, the Court amended Practice Direction V, which limited the period for the presentation by a party of its observations and submissions on preliminary objections to four months. It promulgated three new Practice Directions: Practice Direction X requesting the agents of parties to attend, without delay, any meeting called by the ICJ President whenever a decision on a procedural issue needed to be made in a case; Practice Direction XI limiting parties in oral proceedings on provisional measures to what was relevant to the criteria for the indication of such measures; and Practice Direction XII establishing the procedure to be followed with regard to written statements and/or documents submitted by international non-governmental organizations in connection with advisory proceedings.

Trust Fund to Assist States in the Settlement of Disputes

In September [A/59/372], the Secretary-General reported on the activities and status of the Trust Fund to Assist States in the Settlement of Disputes through ICJ since the submission of his 2003 report [YUN 2003, p. 1309]. The Fund, established in 1989 [YUN 1989, p. 818], provided financial assistance to States for expenses incurred in connection with a dispute submitted to ICJ by way of a special agreement or the execution of a judgment resulting from such an agreement.

During the period under review (1 July 2003–30 June 2004), the Fund received one joint application from Benin and the Niger to defray the expenses incurred in connection with the submission of their boundary dispute to the Court (see p. 1268). On the recommendation of the Panel of Experts set up in accordance with the Fund's terms of reference, the Secretary-General awarded financial assistance in the amount of $350,000 to each applicant.

Three States contributed to the Fund, which, as at 30 June, had a total balance of $1,936 million.

As a result of a review conducted by the UN Office of Legal Affairs, in consultation with the Court's Registry and the Controller, the Fund's Terms of Reference were revised. The revised terms of reference were annexed to the report.

Chapter II

International tribunals

In 2004, the International Tribunal for the Prosecution of Persons Responsible for Serious Violations of International Humanitarian Law Committed in the Territory of the Former Yugoslavia since 1991 (ICTY) completed remaining investigations and subsequently filed indictments for war crimes, thereby meeting the first of three deadlines set out in its 2002 completion strategy to accomplish its mandate by 2010. The other two deadlines were to complete first instance trials by 2008 and the rest of its work by 2010. The International Criminal Tribunal for the Prosecution of Persons Responsible for Genocide and Other Serious Violations of International Humanitarian Law Committed in the Territory of Rwanda and Rwandan Citizens Responsible for Genocide and Other Such Violations Committed in the Territory of Neighbouring States between 1 January and 31 December 1994 (ICTR) formalized and revised its completion strategy, based on the same objectives and targets as those of ICTY. It met its first deadline of completing investigations by year's end. Both Tribunals focused efforts during the year on the implementation of other deadlines under their respective completion strategies. In May and November progress reports, they detailed specific measures being taken in that regard and potential obstacles. In August, the Security Council encouraged them to remain on track for meeting the relevant target dates.

In related developments, the Office of the Prosecutor of ICTY developed measures to enhance its operations and streamline its procedures under the leadership of a new Deputy Prosecutor and a new Chief of Prosecutions, while the Registrar, mandated to support and facilitate the work of ICTY's other organs, began to implement an action plan to enforce sentences. ICTY also made efforts to increase the cooperation of relevant countries, which resulted in numerous arrests and a number of fugitive surrenders. In October, the review functions performed by the ICTY Prosecutor, which had enabled the Tribunal to oversee prosecutions by national authorities under the 1996 Rome Agreement (known as the "Rules of the Road"), were transferred to the State Prosecutor of Bosnia and Herzegovina. In November, the General Assembly elected 14 permanent judges to ICTY, to replace those whose terms would expire in November 2005.

During the year, ICTR achieved its full complement of nine ad litem judges, which enabled it to initiate four new trials and to maintain its 2003 record of five trial judgements within a single year. To further facilitate its work, ICTR established an Appeals Section in the Office of the Prosecutor and enhanced its tracking activities to ensure that as many fugitives as possible were arrested in good time to enable trials to be completed before the end of 2008.

International Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia

In 2004, the International Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia (ICTY) pushed forward with the implementation of its completion strategy [YUN 2002, p. 1275], adopting further reforms to ensure compliance with Security Council resolutions 1503(2003) [YUN 2003, p. 1330] and 1534(2004) (see p. 1292). In April, ICTY amended the following Rules of Procedure and Evidence: rule 28 (A), to ensure that all indictments confirmed by the Tribunal met the Council's directive that they concentrate, prima facie, on one or more of the most senior leaders suspected of being most responsible for crimes within the Tribunal's jurisdiction; and rule 11 bis, to facilitate the referral of cases involving intermediate- and lower-level accused by increasing the jurisdictions available to receive its cases. The latter amendment authorized the Trial Chambers to refer a case to any jurisdiction in which the accused could be tried fairly and where the death penalty would not be imposed. In December, rule 98 bis, which concerned a Trial Chamber's oral decision after hearing oral submissions of the parties at the close of the prosecutor's case, was also amended.

ICTY continued its work in preparing the States in the Balkan region for the prosecution of war crimes cases. To advance the establishment of a special chamber for that purpose in the State Court of Bosnia and Herzegovina, it formed working groups comprising representatives from the office of the President, the Registry, the Office of the Prosecutor and the Office of the High Representative for the Implementation of the Peace Agreement for Bosnia and Herzegovina, which made substantial progress with regard to legal reform, witness protection and detention facilities. ICTY also conducted a number of training seminars in Croatia to ensure the trial-readiness of its courts.

Investigations were streamlined to concentrate on the highest-level political and military leaders responsible for having committed the gravest crimes. Particular efforts were mounted to achieve the first major deadline foreseen by the completion strategy, namely, completion by year's end of pre-indictment investigations of all remaining suspects. However, the strategy posed a number of challenges relating to the transfer of cases to courts in the former Yugoslavia, and to human resources, scheduling and legacy issues. Attention was moreover drawn to the budget limitations for the Investigations Section of the Office of the Prosecutor, the shortfall in contributions and the associated recruitment freeze amidst an increasing vacancy rate throughout ICTY, all of which could result in serious obstacles to achieving the completion schedule set by the Council.

The activities of ICTY, established by Council resolution 827(1993) [YUN 1993, p. 440], were covered in two reports to the Council and the General Assembly, for the periods 1 August 2003 to 31 July 2004 [A/59/215-S/2004/627] and 1 August 2004 to 31 July 2005 [A/60/267-S/2005/532 & Corr.1]. On 15 November, the Assembly took note of the 2003/2004 report (decision 59/511).

The Chambers

The judicial activities of the Tribunal's three Trial Chambers, which ran six trials simultaneously during the year, and of its Appeals Chamber included first instance and appeals proceedings against judgements, interlocutory decisions and State requests for review; proceedings concerning the Tribunal's primacy; and contempt cases. ICTY had a total of 25 judges—14 permanent judges, 2 judges from ICTR serving in the Appeals Chamber and 9 ad litem judges.

New arrests, surrenders and indictments

On 3 March, the following officials of the former self-proclaimed "Croatian Union of Herceg-Bosna" [YUN 1993, p. 460] and of Croatia were indicted jointly for crimes committed against Serbs in the Croatian-held part of northern Bosnia in 1992 and 1993: Jadranko Prlic (Prime Minister), Bruno Stojic (Head, Ministry of Defence) and Valentin Coric (Head, Military Police); and Slobodan Praljak (Croatia's Deputy Defence Minister and Military Commander, Croatian Defence Council (HVO)), Milivoj Petkovic (Chief, HVO military staff) and Berislav Pusic (Head, HVO Commission for Exchange of Prisoners). They surrendered to the Tribunal on 5 April and pleaded not guilty at their initial appearance the following day to 26 counts of war crimes (wilful killing, torture, inhumane treatment, extensive destruction of property, plunder, unlawful labour and attacks on civilians), violations of the laws and customs of war (wanton destruction of cities and villages) and crimes against humanity (persecution, murder, torture, inhumane treatment, imprisonment and deportation). On 30 July, the Trial Chamber granted the applications of all six co-accused for provisional release on the grounds that they posed no threat to victims, witnesses and other persons and that they would appear for trial. However, 16 preliminary motions filed on 15 December by defence counsel challenging the form of the indictment and the Tribunal's jurisdiction, and calling for severance of the cases, were denied by the Chamber. A request for certification to appeal that decision was filed.

Ivan Cermak and Mladen Markac, whose indictment was confirmed on 24 February, surrendered in Croatia on 11 March. At their initial appearance on 12 March, they pleaded not guilty to seven counts of crimes against humanity and violations of the laws or customs of war (persecutions; murder; plunder of property; wanton destruction of cities, towns or villages; deportation and forced displacement; and other inhumane acts) committed against the Serb population in the Krajina region of Croatia. On 1 April, the Trial Chamber granted protective measures to victims and witnesses, and on 29 April, it denied motions for provisional release filed by the accused, who again filed similar motions in July and alleged defects in the form of the indictment. On 2 December, the Appeals Chamber overturned the Trial Chamber's decision and ordered that the accused be provisionally released under various terms and conditions.

On 11 May, Colonel Mirko Norac, who was serving a national prison sentence imposed on him in Croatia for other war crimes, was indicted with two counts of crimes against humanity (persecutions and murder) and three counts of violations of the laws and customs of war (murder, plunder of property and wanton destruction of cities) committed against Serb civilians during the military operation in the Medak pocket in Croatia [YUN 1993, p. 490]; he pleaded not guilty. On 27 May, the Prosecutor filed a motion for joinder with the case against General Rahim Ademi [YUN 2001, p. 1199; YUN 2003, p. 1313], with the intention of seeking referral of the joint case to a Court in Croatia. On 30 July, the Trial Chamber granted the joinder application and, on 2 September, the Prosecutor moved for referral of the joint case. The referral bench was currently deliberating.

Ljubisa Beara, Chief of Security in the Bosnian Serb Army, who was arrested in Serbia and transferred to the Tribunal on 10 October, made his initial appearance on 11 November and pleaded not guilty of crimes in Srebrenica, for which he was indicted.

Beqe Beqaj, indicted on 21 October for contempt or attempted contempt for allegedly interfering or attempting to interfere with potential witnesses in the trial against Fatmir Limaj, Haradin Bala and Isak Musliu [YUN 2003, p. 1311], was arrested by the international security force (KFOR) in Kosovo on 4 November and made his initial appearance on 5 November.

Miroslav Bralo, member of the HVO Special Forces Unit, whose indictment was made public in October, surrendered voluntarily on 12 November and was transferred to the Tribunal the following day. At his initial appearance on 13 December, he pleaded not guilty to eight counts of crimes in Lasva River Valley, Bosnia and Herzegovina.

Dragomir Milosevic, Chief Commander, Romanija Corps of the Bosnian Serb Army, who was indicted in 1999 for crimes in Sarajevo and who remained at large until 2004, arrived at the Tribunal on 3 December and made his initial appearance on 7 December.

In 2004, public indictments were made against Goran Hadzic and Stojan Zupljanin (Commander of the Serb-operated Regional Security Services Centre), both of whom remained at large.

Ongoing cases and trials

On 12 January, Milan Babic, indicted in 2003 for a crime against humanity and violations of the laws and customs of war [YUN 2003, p. 1312], filed a joint plea agreement with the Prosecutor, in exchange for cooperation with the prosecution in other cases. As part of the plea agreement, Mr. Babic pleaded guilty as an aider and abettor of a joint criminal enterprise, for which the prosecutor recommended a sentence not exceeding 11 years' imprisonment. He later changed his plea. On 29 June 2004, he was sentenced to 13 years in prison. The accused appealed the judgement.

In the case against Mitar Rasevic, who was indicted with other accused, and for whom the judge in 2003 entered pleas of not guilty [YUN 2003, p. 1312], a motion for leave to amend the indictment was filed on 2 December 2003 by the prosecution. The defence did not oppose the motion but filed, on 12 January 2004, a fresh preliminary motion on the form of the indictment. On 28 April, the Trial Chamber granted the motion to amend the indictment. On 12 May, the prosecution filed an amended indictment, and on 10 June, the defence filed a further motion challenging parts of the amended indictment, which was denied on 27 July. In November, the prosecution moved for referral of the case to the authorities of Bosnia and Herzegovina.

Vojislav Seselj, charged in 2003 [YUN 2003, p. 1311] in a 14-count indictment alleging crimes against humanity and violations of the laws or customs of war, filed an interlocutory appeal on 12 January 2004, following the Trial Chamber's rejection of his request for permission to be visited in detention by a representative of his religion. On 29 January, the Appeals Chamber dismissed the appeal, having considered that the determination of visits an accused was allowed to receive while at the detention unit fell within the competence of the Registry and not of the Chambers. On 15 January, Mr. Seselj filed a motion challenging the Tribunal's jurisdiction and parts of the indictment. On 26 May, the Trial Chamber rejected the first part of the motion concerning the Tribunal's jurisdiction and most of the complaints of the accused about the indictment, and ordered the prosecution to amend the indictment, as the crimes for which Mr. Seselj was held responsible, committed in Vojvodina, were not properly charged. On 28 June, the prosecution filed an interlocutory appeal from the Trial Chamber's decision, submitting that the Chamber had applied an incorrect and narrow standard for the jurisdictional elements charged under article 5 of the ICTY statute; had interpreted too narrowly the words "committed in armed conflict"; and for those reasons, had erred when it held that article 5 could apply to crimes that allegedly occurred in Vojvodina only if an armed conflict existed there at the relevant time. The prosecution sought clarification from the Appeals Chamber of the phrase "committed in armed conflict", and a finding that the Trial Chamber had erred in requiring an armed conflict in Vojvodina to have occurred. On 29 July, the Appeals Chamber decided that the appeal was validly filed.

On 13 January, Blagoje Simic, found guilty of a crime against humanity and sentenced to 17 years in prison in 2003 [YUN 2003, p. 1315], was granted an extension to file his appeal brief, which he did on 17 June 2004. On 25 June, he filed a motion for disclosure of documents, and on 22 September, he filed an amended notice of appeal. On 21 October, Mr. Simic was granted provisional release from 4 to 7 November to attend a memorial service for his father.

In the case against Dragoljub Ojdanic, charged jointly with Milan Milutinovic, Slobodan Milosevic, Nikola Sainovic and Vlatko Stojiljkovic in 1999 [YUN 1999, p. 1214], a scheduled appeal briefing resumed on 16 January 2004 regarding the Trial Chamber's dismissal of Mr. Ojdanic's motion challenging ICTY's jurisdiction. Mr. Ojdanic submitted that the Trial Chamber had erred in finding that the Tribunal had jurisdiction to try him for crimes allegedly committed in the territory of Kosovo as the Security Council did not have the power to vest the Tribunal with jurisdiction over the territory of the Federal Republic of Yugoslavia (currently known as Serbia and Montenegro), which, at that time, was not a Member of the United Nations. On 12 May (with reasons issued on 8 June), the Appeals Chamber dismissed the appeal. Pre-trial briefs were filed by the prosecution on 14 June, and by the defence on 13 September. In December, Mr. Milutinovic filed his second, Mr. Ojdanic his fourth, and Mr. Sainovic his third application for provisional release.

On 16 January, Dragan Nikolic, convicted and sentenced to 23 years in prison [YUN 2003, p. 1314], filed a notice of appeal from the judgement on 16 January 2004 and an appeal brief on 30 June.

Enver Hadzihanovic and Amir Kubura, who had pleaded not guilty in 2001 [YUN 2001, p. 1199] and, by a third amended indictment, were further charged in 2003 with violations of the laws or customs of war [YUN 2003, p. 1314], were granted provisional release from 18 to 20 January 2004 and from 13 to 15 March, respectively, to attend the funerals of relatives in Bosnia and Herzegovina. On a defence motion relating to the scope of prosecution examination of its witnesses, the Trial Chamber ruled on 16 March that, in the absence of an explicit mention in the third amended indictment, a charge of cruel treatment did not include allegations of inhuman treatment consisting of the use of detainees to carry out forced labour (trench digging). On 2 April, the Appeals Chamber reversed the Trial Chamber's 2003 decision [ibid.] barring the prosecution from showing one of its witnesses written extracts from his previous statement to refresh his memory. On 23 July 2004, the prosecution closed its case, having called 99 prosecution witnesses and one court witness. Mr. Hadzihanovic's defence opened its case on 18 October.

In the case against Slobodan Milosevic [YUN 1999, p. 1214; YUN 2001, p. 1201; YUN 2002, p. 1277], the Trial Chamber had granted the accused an adjournment of three months to prepare his defence, and required him to present within six weeks a list of witnesses and evidentiary exhibits. In an appeal, the amici curiae argued that both periods were unreasonably short for the accused to prepare a meaningful defence, given that the case had come to trial in a relatively short period of time, that the prosecution had had a considerable amount of time available to it and that the accused was suffering from ill health. On 20 January, the Appeals Chamber dismissed the appeal and held that the Trial Chamber had acted with proper sensitivity to the concerns of a self-representing defendant and that there had been no violation of the right of the accused to a fair trial by the time limits imposed. On 25 February, the prosecution rested its case-in-chief, subject to several matters pertaining to the admission of documents and its case in rebuttal. The accused opened his case on 31 August. However, owing to frequent interruptions and delays caused by his chronic health condition, the Trial Chamber decided that, in order to safeguard his right to a fair trial, it was necessary to assign him counsel to assist him in his defence. Subsequently, two amici curiae were appointed as counsel for the defence. Following a challenge of that decision by the accused, the Appeals Chamber upheld the assignment of counsel in November, but reversed a subsequent order of the Trial Chamber regarding the modalities by which assigned counsel would fulfil their mandate.

An amended indictment, dated 23 January, brought further charges against Mile Mrksic, Miroslav Radic and Veselin Sljivancanin, who had been indicted jointly with other accused in 1997 [YUN 1997, p. 1322] for the alleged execution in Ovcara (near Vukovar, Croatia) of some 200 Croatian and other non-Serb persons removed from Vukovar Hospital in 1991. Mr. Radic and Mr. Sljivancanin had made initial appearances before the Tribunal in 2003 [YUN 2003, p. 1311]. In its decision authorizing additional charges, the Trial Chamber upheld challenges from the accused and ordered the prosecution to amend the indictment in a manner that complied with the Tribunal's pleading principles. A further decision on the form of the indictment, issued on 20 July 2004, which partly granted motions by the accused, directed the prosecution to amend and re-file the indictment no later than 17 August.

Sentencing hearings were held on 27 January and 5 March in the case of Miroslav Deronjic, who was arrested in 2002 [YUN 2002, p. 1276] and pleaded guilty in 2003 [YUN 2003, p. 1315] to charges brought against him. On 30 March 2004, the Trial Chamber entered a single conviction against the accused for persecutions, a crime against humanity, and sentenced him to 10 years in prison.

The presiding judge, in his dissent, held that the accused deserved a sentence of no less than 20 years' imprisonment. On 28 April, Mr. Deronjic filed a notice of appeal from the judgement.

Ivica Rajic, who pleaded not guilty in 2003 [YUN 2003, p. 1311], entered the same plea on 29 January 2004 to an amended indictment alleging five counts of war crimes (wilful killing, inhumane treatment and sexual assault, unlawful confinement, appropriation of property and wanton destruction) and five counts of violations of the laws and customs of war (murder, outrages upon personal dignity, cruel treatment, plunder, wanton destruction of towns and unjustified devastation). In response to a defence motion on the form of the second indictment, the Trial Chamber ordered the Prosecutor on 27 April to clarify a number of allegations in the indictment.

In January, Franko Simatovic and Jovica Stanisic, who pleaded not guilty in 2003 to four counts of crimes against humanity and one count of violating the laws or customs of war [YUN 2003, p. 1311], filed applications for provisional release, which were granted on 28 July 2004, based mainly on expert evidence as to the medical condition of Mr. Stanisic. On 29 July, the Trial Chamber, upon request from the prosecution, ordered the stay of the decisions to enable the prosecution to seek leave to appeal. On 3 December, the Appeals Chamber dismissed the prosecution's appeal and ordered the provisional release of both accused.

The trial of Momcilo Krajisnik, who pleaded not guilty to charges of genocide and other crimes in 2000 [YUN 2000, p. 1221], began on 3 February 2004 with the prosecution's opening arguments and presentation of evidence. By 27 February, seven witnesses had testified for the prosecution, including an expert witness on the Bosnian Serb leadership. The proceedings were adjourned several times to allow the defence team time to prepare its case and for the two sides to negotiate the number of crime-based and expert witnesses.

In the case against General Pavle Strugar, accused, in a third amended indictment, of crimes against persons and crimes against property [YUN 2003, p. 1314], the Trial Chamber, on 26 May, denied a 3 February motion by the defence, which again sought to terminate the trial based on a claim that the accused was unfit to stand trial. The prosecution case, comprising 29 viva voce witnesses and over 200 exhibits, concluded on 18 May. The defence case commenced on 28 June and concluded on 22 July.

Milomir Stakic, found guilty and sentenced in 2003 [YUN 2003, p. 1313] to life imprisonment, with a minimum term of 20 years, filed his appeal brief and a motion for the admission of additional evidence on 3 February 2004; he re-filed the appeal on 9 March. On 8 June, the prosecution filed a motion to strike an alleged new ground of appeal of the defendant raised in the reply brief, which the Appeals Chamber granted on 20 July.

In the case against Milka Maglov, who had pleaded not guilty in December 2003 to two counts of contempt of court for allegedly intimidating a witness in the Radoslav Brdanin case (see p. 1280), in which she had formerly served as defence co-counsel, the Trial Chamber, on 6 February 2004, upheld a motion by the amicus curiae Prosecutor to amend the indictment. The amendment added a third charge of attempted interference or intimidation. The prosecution case was heard from 16 to 19 February. On 19 March, a motion for acquittal brought by Ms. Maglov was dismissed, and her request for certification to appeal the decision was denied. The defence case was delayed by a confidential application, which was dismissed, seeking the disqualification and withdrawal of some judges, and the filing of an unopposed motion on 15 July for continuance on the basis that she was unfit to stand trial. On the same day, the Trial Chamber adjourned the case and directed the Registry to identify a psychiatrist who could establish the respondent's fitness to stand trial.

In the trial of Sefer Halilovic, who was charged with one count of violation of the laws of war and was granted provisional release in 2001 [YUN 2001, p. 1199], the Trial Chamber dismissed, on 16 February 2004, a defence motion for subpoenas to be issued so that certain prosecution witnesses could be interviewed by the defence. On appeal by the defence, the Appeals Chamber, with one of the judges dissenting, allowed the appeal in part, on 21 June, having found that the Trial Chamber had erred in rejecting the defence request for subpoenas solely on the basis that the defence would have the opportunity to cross-examine the witnesses, and should have examined whether the defence had presented reasons for the need to interview those witnesses, which went beyond the need to prepare a more effective cross examination. The Appeals Chamber directed the Trial Chamber to reconsider the matter and to issue subpoenas if its re-examination disclosed a need to interview the witnesses. Other issues that preoccupied the defence and prosecution related to counsel, assistance in obtaining access to material and information, and disclosures of materials and further investigations in the case.

On 16 February, the Appeals Chamber dismissed motions for additional evidence presented by Mlado Radic, Dragoljub Prcac and Zoran Zigic, who were sentenced with other accused to prison terms in 2001 [YUN 2001, p. 1201]. However, the Appeals Chamber found two pieces of evidence presented by Mr. Zigic admissible as additional evidence on appeal, and two witnesses were called to testify in that regard.

Dario Kordic and Mario Cerkez, sentenced in 2001 [YUN 2001, p. 1200] to 25 and 15 years' imprisonment, respectively, for crimes against humanity and violations of the laws and customs of war, appealed the judgement. In that regard, Mr. Kordic filed a supplemental appeal brief on 23 February 2004. On 26 March, the Appeals Chamber dismissed motions by Mr. Cerkez for the admission of additional evidence, and on 16 April, rejected his motion for admission of a witness transcript. On 17 December, the Appeals Chamber rendered its final judgement on the appeals of the accused; it rejected Mr. Kordic's first, second, fifth and sixth grounds of appeal, as well as his appeal concerning his responsibility for crimes committed in various locations. The Chamber did allow Mr. Kordic's appeal concerning his responsibility for crimes committed in other locations, and accordingly, pursuant to article 7 (1) of the ICTY statute, reversed his convictions under eight counts of the indictment relating to the respective locations in question, but affirmed his convictions with regard to 12 other counts. The Chamber also reversed his remaining convictions under count 1 and affirmed the sentence of 25 years' imprisonment. Regarding Mr. Cerkez, the Appeals Chamber allowed his appeal in part, rejecting a number of his grounds of appeal but allowing his appeal concerning his responsibility for certain crimes. It reversed his conviction, imposing a new sentence of 6 years' imprisonment.

On 25 February, the Appeals Chamber dismissed the appeal filed by Mitar Vasiljevic, who was sentenced to 20 years in prison in 2002 [YUN 2002, p. 1280]. However, the Chamber reduced his sentence to 15 years' imprisonment, having found, contrary to the Trial Chamber's findings, with one of the judges dissenting, that he was responsible as an aider and abettor, and not as a co-perpetrator, to murder as a violation of the laws or customs of war under article 3 of the ICTY statute, and to persecution under article 5.

In the trial, which began in 2003 [YUN 2003, p. 1312], of Vidoje Blagojevic and Dragan Jokic, charged jointly with other accused in 2001 [YUN 2001, p. 1199] for their alleged involvement in events in and around Srebrenica in 1995 [YUN 1995, p. 529], the prosecution's case concluded on 27 February 2004, and that of the defence for the two accused on 25 June and 23 July, respectively. The trial ended on 1 October, and judgement was expected in 2005.

The trial of Fatmir Limaj, Haradin Bala and Isak Musliu, arrested in 2003 with other accused for alleged crimes against Kosovo Serbs [YUN 2003, p. 1311], began on 15 November 2004; pre-trial briefs were filed by the prosecution on 28 February and the accused on 1 June.

Following a February defence motion seeking dismissal of the contempt of court charge against Dusko Jovanovic, a media practitioner, the prosecution filed a request in March to withdraw the indictment, on the understanding, as agreed between the parties, that the accused would publish a written statement acknowledging full personal and professional responsibility for publishing the details of a protected witness, in violation of protective measures orders issued by the Trial Chamber. Following the publication of the agreed statement on 19 April, the prosecution motion to withdraw the indictment was granted and the proceedings against Mr. Jovanovic were terminated.

The prosecution, in the case of Stanislav Galic, sentenced to 20 years in prison in 2003 [YUN 2003, p. 1315], with one of the judges filing a separate and partially dissenting opinion, with an alternative recommendation of 10 years in prison, filed its appeal brief on 2 March 2004. In response, Mr. Galic filed a notice of appeal on 4 May, and on 18 June, a motion for the admission of additional evidence.

In the case against Naser Oric, who was arrested in 2003 [YUN 2003, p. 1311] and pleaded not guilty to six counts of violations of the laws or customs of war, the defence filed its pre-trial brief on 4 March 2004. The trial commenced on 6 October.

On 11 March, Ranko Cesic, arrested in 2002 [YUN 2002, p. 1276], pleaded guilty under a plea agreement to all 12 counts charged in the indictment against him and was sentenced to 18 years in prison.

Miodrag Jokic, who entered into a plea agreement in 2003 [YUN 2003, p. 1314], according to which he pleaded guilty to six counts in an amended indictment, was sentenced to seven years in prison on 18 March 2004. Mr. Jokic filed a notice of appeal from the sentencing judgement on 16 April, two motions for the admission of additional evidence on 2 and 21 June, and his appeal brief on 30 June. The Appeals Chamber denied those motions on 31 August.

In the trial of Radoslav Brdanin, which began in 2002 [YUN 2002, p. 1277] on charges of genocide and crimes against humanity, the Appeals Chamber ruled on 19 March 2004 on a prosecution motion requesting the reversal of the Trial Chamber's 2003 decision [YUN 2003, p. 1313] to grant a defence motion for acquittal of genocide in the context of the third category of joint criminal enterprise liability. The Appeals Chamber allowed the prosecution's appeal, reversed the decision of the Trial Chamber and reinstated the charge of genocide, having found that the Trial Chamber had erred by conflating the mens rea requirement of the crime of genocide with the mental requirement of the mode of liability. Closing arguments in the case were heard in April 2004. On 1 September, the Trial Chamber acquitted Mr. Brdanin of genocide, complicity in genocide and extermination, but found him guilty of persecutions as a crime against humanity. He was sentenced to 32 years' imprisonment. Notices of appeal were filed by the Prosecutor on 30 September, and by Mr. Brdanin on 1 October.

On 31 March, Darko Mrda, who was charged in 2002 [YUN 2002, p. 1276] and pleaded guilty in 2003 [YUN 2003, p. 1313] to murder and inhuman acts under a plea agreement, was sentenced to 17 years' imprisonment.

Pre-trial briefs were filed by the prosecution on 1 April, and by the defence on 21 June in the case against Radovan Stankovic, charged in 2002 along with other accused [YUN 2002, p. 1277] of crimes against humanity and violations of the laws or customs of war for acts allegedly committed against Muslim women. On 21 September 2004, the Prosecutor moved for referral of the case to the State Court of Bosnia and Herzegovina in Sarajevo. That decision was appealed on its merits by the accused, while the Prosecutor appealed the part of the decision ordering it to monitor the process in Sarajevo and report regularly to the Referral Bench. On 29 November, the Prosecutor moved again for the referral of the case to Bosnia and Herzegovina.

On 19 April, the Appeals Chamber rendered its judgement in the case of Radislav Krstic, who had filed appeal briefs in 2002 [YUN 2002, p. 1278] against his conviction and sentencing in 2001 [YUN 2001, p. 1201]. The Appeals Chamber set aside Mr. Krstic's conviction as a participant in a joint criminal enterprise to commit genocide and his conviction as a participant in murder under article 3 of the ICTY statute, committed between 13 and 19 July 1995. He was found guilty, however, of aiding and abetting in genocide and murder as a violation of the laws or customs of war. The Appeals Chamber confirmed his conviction for participation in murder committed at other times (between 10 and 13 July 1995) as a violation of the laws or customs of war and as persecution. The Appeals Chamber further held that the Trial Chamber had incorrectly disallowed Mr. Krstic's convictions as a participant in extermination and persecution (on the grounds that they were cumulative with his conviction for genocide), but that his level of responsibility was that of an aider and abettor in extermination and persecution as crimes against humanity. Appeals by both Mr. Krstic and the prosecution were otherwise dismissed, and Mr. Krstic was sentenced to 35 years' imprisonment. One of the judges appended a partial dissenting opinion.

In the case against Zeljko Mejakic, Momcilo Gruban, Dusen Fustar and Dusko Knezevic, charged jointly in 2002 [YUN 2002, p. 1279] with Pedrag Banovic, who was sentenced to eight years in prison in 2003 [YUN 2003, p. 1311], the Trial Chamber ruled in April 2004 on a prosecution motion to admit 252 facts that were the subject of prior adjudication by Trial Chambers in three other cases. It granted the prosecution's request in part, excluding those facts that were too broad, too tendentious, not sufficiently significant or not sufficiently relevant to the case; it also rejected facts that were derived from a judgement based on a plea agreement. On 17 June, the Chamber ruled, on the question of a potential conflict of interest arising from the appointment by the Registrar as counsel for Mr. Mejakic the same counsel already assigned as lead counsel to Dragoljub Prcac, that in the light of the hypothetical nature of the application, the matter was best left to the relevant Trial Chamber to decide when and if it arose. On 13 July, the prosecution filed an appeal brief submitting that the Trial Chamber erred in law in finding that the representation of two accused by one and the same counsel was not likely to affect the integrity of the proceedings or otherwise irreversibly prejudice the administration of justice. On 2 September, the Prosecutor filed a motion requesting referral of the case against the four accused to the authorities of Bosnia and Herzegovina.

On 7 May, the prosecution filed its pre-trial brief in the case against Milan Martić, who pleaded not guilty in 2003 [YUN 2003, p. 1315] to 10 counts of crimes against humanity and nine charges of violations of the laws or customs of war. The defence appealed the Trial Chamber's 1 July 2004 decision to uphold the Registrar's determination of the level of complexity of the case. The defence was given until 15 September to file its pre-trial brief.

On 24 May, Momir Nikolic, who was sentenced to 27 years in prison in 2003 [YUN 2003, p. 1313], filed an appeal against the sentence. On 8 June 2004, the prosecution filed a motion to strike out parts of the appeal, and, on 18 June, Mr. Nikolic filed a motion for the admission of additional evidence.

In the case against Vladimir Kovacevic and Milan Zec [YUN 2001, p. 1200], Mr. Kovacevic was released provisionally on 2 June and, on 7 June, he was transferred to a mental institution in Belgrade for psychiatric treatment for an initial period of six months to ascertain whether he would be fit to stand trial. On 28 October, the Prosecutor moved for referral of the case to Serbia and Montenegro, but the Referral Bench refrained from considering the motion until the question of Mr. Kovacevic's fitness to stand trial was determined.

On 18 June, Dragan Obrenovic, who was sentenced to 17 years in prison in 2003 [YUN 2003, p. 1313], was transferred to Norway to serve his sentence.

In the case of Pasko Ljubicic, the prosecution and defence filed pre-trial briefs in 2003 [YUN 2003, p. 1313], but Mr. Ljubicic was not deemed ready for trial until documents sought by the defence were produced by the Governments of Bosnia and Herzegovina and Croatia. The defence declared on 23 July 2004 that the accused was ready to go to trial even if not all the documents had been produced.

Regarding the notices of appeal filed by Tihomir Blaskic [YUN 2000, p. 1223; YUN 2002, p. 1280] following his 1999 trial [YUN 1999, p. 1216], the Appeals Chamber delivered its judgement on 29 July 2004; it allowed by majority, with one of the judges dissenting, Mr. Blaskic's grounds of appeal concerning his responsibility for the crimes committed in Ahmici, Santici, Pirici and Nadiol on 16 April 1993 and reversed his convictions pursuant to articles 7 (1) and 7 (3) of the ICTY statute. It also unanimously allowed his appeal against his convictions for a number of other counts in the indictment, but affirmed his conviction for the detention-related crimes committed in detention facilities, for ordering the use of protected persons for the construction of defensive military installations and for the inhuman treatment of detainees occasioned by their use as human shields, but dismissed his appeal in all other respects. It did, however, allow in part Mr. Blaskic's grounds of appeal against his sentence and imposed on him, by majority, with one of the judges dissenting, a new sentence of nine years' imprisonment. The dissenting judge appended a partial dissenting opinion and another judge appended a separate opinion limited to the sentence. On 29 July 2004, Mr. Blaskic was granted early release, effective 2 August.

On 20 October, the Appeals Chamber dismissed rule 115 motions on the admission of additional evidence filed by Vinko Martinovic and Mladen Naletilic in connection with their appeal of the Trial Chamber's sentence in 2003 [YUN 2003, p. 1312] of 18 years and 20 years in prison, respectively. In November 2004, the accused filed further motions with the same request, which were being considered by the Appeals Chamber.

Election of judges

Permanent judges

On 5 April [S/2004/288], the Secretary-General informed the Security Council President that Judge Richard May (United Kingdom) had resigned as a permanent judge of ICTY, effective 31 May, and that the United Kingdom had presented Iain Bonomy to replace him. Annexed to the letter was Lord Bonomy's curriculum vitae.

Following consultations with Council members, the Council President, on 8 April [S/2004/289], informed the Secretary-General that he supported his intention to appoint Lord Bonomy as a permanent judge of ICTY.

In September [S/2004/754] and October [A/59/438], the Secretary-General forwarded to the Council and the General Assembly, respectively, the list of candidates nominated to replace the 14 permanent judges of ICTY whose terms would expire on 16 November 2005. The memorandum also contained the procedure for electing them. By a 21 October note [A/59/439], the Secretary-General submitted to the Assembly the curricula vitae of the 22 nominated candidates.

SECURITY COUNCIL ACTION

On 14 October [meeting 5057], the Security Council unanimously adopted resolution 1567(2004). The draft [S/2004/813] was prepared in consultations among Council members.

The Security Council,

Recalling its resolutions 827(1993) of 25 May 1993, 1166(1998) of 13 May 1998, 1329(2000) of 30 November 2000, 1411(2002) of 17 May 2002, 1481(2003) of 19 May 2003, 1503(2003) of 28 August 2003 and 1534(2004) of 26 March 2004,

Having considered the nominations for Permanent Judges of the International Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia received by the Secretary-General,

Forwards the following nominations to the General Assembly in accordance with Article 13 bis, paragraph 1 (d), of the statute of the International Tribunal:

Mr. Carmel A. Agius (Malta)
 Mr. Jean-Claude Antonetti (France)
 Mr. Iain Bonomy (United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland)
 Mr. Liu Daqun (China)
 Mr. Mohamed Amin El-Abbassi El Mahdi (Egypt)
 Mr. Elhagi Abdulkader Emberesh (Libyan Arab Jamahiriya)
 Mr. Rigoberto Espinal Irias (Honduras)
 Mr. O-gon Kwon (Republic of Korea)
 Mr. Theodor Meron (United States of America)
 Mr. Bakone Melema Moloto (South Africa)
 Ms. Prisca Matimba Nyambe (Zambia)
 Mr. Alphonsus Martinus Maria Orie (Netherlands)

Mr. Kevin Horace Parker (Australia)
 Mr. Fausto Pocar (Italy)
 Mr. Yenyi Olungu (Democratic Republic of the Congo)
 Mr. Sharada Prasad Pandit (Nepal)
 Ms. Vonimbolana Rasoazanany (Madagascar)
 Mr. Patrick Lipton Robinson (Jamaica)
 Mr. Wolfgang Schomburg (Germany)
 Mr. Mohamed Shahabuddeen (Guyana)
 Ms. Christine Van den Wyngaert (Belgium)
 Mr. Volodymyr A. Vassylenko (Ukraine)

On the same day [A/59/437], the Council President transmitted the text of the Council's resolution to the General Assembly.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 19 November [meeting 57], the General Assembly adopted decision 59/406 without vote [agenda item 18].

Election of judges of the International Tribunal for the Prosecution of Persons Responsible for Serious Violations of International Humanitarian Law Committed in the Territory of the Former Yugoslavia since 1991

At its 57th plenary meeting, on 19 November 2004, the General Assembly, pursuant to article 13 bis of the statute of the International Tribunal for the Prosecution of Persons Responsible for Serious Violations of International Humanitarian Law Committed in the Territory of the Former Yugoslavia since 1991, elected the following fourteen permanent judges for a four-year term of office beginning on 17 November 2005:

Mr. Carmel AGIUS (Malta)
 Mr. Jean-Claude ANTONETTI (France)
 Mr. Iain BONOMY (United Kingdom)
 Mr. O-gon KWON (Republic of Korea)
 Mr. LIU Daqun (China)
 Mr. Theodor MERON (United States)
 Mr. Bakone Melema MOLOTO (South Africa)
 Mr. Alphonsus Martinus Maria ORIE (Netherlands)
 Mr. Kevin Horace PARKER (Australia)
 Mr. Fausto POCAR (Italy)
 Mr. Patrick Lipton ROBINSON (Jamaica)
 Mr. Wolfgang SCHOMBURG (Germany)
 Mr. Mohamed SHAHABUDEEN (Guyana)
 Ms. Christine VAN DEN WYNGAERT (Belgium)

Office of the Prosecutor

During the year, the efficiency and work of the Office of the Prosecutor improved markedly, as it completed remaining investigations and the subsequent filing of the indictments for war crimes, thereby enabling it to meet the first deadline of the completion strategy initiated in 2002 [YUN 2002, p. 1275]. Also, as part of the strategy, the Prosecutor filed motions for the transfer of 10 cases concerning 18 accused to be tried by national jurisdictions in Bosnia and Herzegovina, Croatia, or Serbia and Montenegro. The transfer of four of those cases had been granted, one was denied and the outcome on the others was pending. The Office continued its pre-trial, trial and appeals activities. It enhanced its operations and streamlined its procedures under the leadership of a new Deputy Prosecutor and a new Chief of Prosecutions, both of whom were appointed during the reporting period.

Efforts were made to increase the cooperation of relevant countries, resulting in numerous arrests and some fugitive surrenders. Cooperation with Croatia remained satisfactory in terms of requests for assistance, information, archives, witnesses and suspects, but no progress was made regarding that country's efforts to arrest Ante Gotovina, one of the high-profile fugitives accused of serious violations of international humanitarian law. Cooperation by Serbia and Montenegro improved late in the year, but was still not complete, consistent and speedy. Problems persisted with respect to the production of sensitive documents, and although the Government had secured surrenders of outstanding and new accused—a total of 14 accused were transferred from or through Belgrade—its reluctance to execute Tribunal arrest warrants continued.

In Bosnia and Herzegovina, cooperation by the entity government of the Federation of Bosnia and Herzegovina was satisfactory. However, cooperation by the other entity, the Republika Srpska, though improved, was still insufficient, particularly with regard to the transfer of fugitives and wartime documentation. To further cooperation, the Office of the High Representative promoted and implemented the Monitoring Group on Cooperation with the Tribunal, formed in 2003 [YUN 2003, p. 408], involving all relevant entities and State structures. In October 2004, the Prosecutor's review functions, which had enabled ICTY to oversee the prosecution of accused persons by relevant national authorities under the 1996 Rome Agreement [YUN 1996, p. 1187] (also known as the "Rules of the Road"), were transferred to the State Prosecutor of Bosnia and Herzegovina.

There were no problems regarding cooperation with the former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia, enabling the Office of the Prosecutor to complete all investigations concerning that country.

Communication. On 6 May [S/2004/353], the President of the Tribunal transmitted to the Security Council President the report of the Prosecutor regarding the non-compliance by Serbia and Montenegro with its obligation to cooperate with ICTY. According to the Prosecutor, the level of that cooperation had declined since December 2003, particularly its failure to execute Tribunal arrest warrants, cooperate with the Prosecutor in securing the testimony of witnesses and documentary evidence, and respond to the Registrar's requests for an explanation of those failures, which could impinge on the Tribunal's ability to meet the expectations of its completion strategy.

The Registry

The Registry continued its managerial, administrative and judicial support functions to facilitate the work of the Chambers, the Office of the Prosecutor and the defence. It also managed the Detention Unit, the Victims and Witnesses Section, the legal aid office and the interpretation and translation service. The Registry also facilitated the implementation of the Tribunal's completion strategy, initiated in 2002 [YUN 2002, p. 1275], including an action plan to enforce sentences and relocate protected witnesses and their families. Consistent with Security Council resolution 1534(2004) (see p. 1292), the Registrar, in consultation with the President of the Tribunal and the Prosecutor, launched an initiative to convince more States to accept convicted persons to serve sentences in their respective territories. In that regard, on 11 March 2004, the Tribunal signed, on behalf of the United Nations, an agreement on the enforcement of sentences with the United Kingdom, the tenth UN Member State to conclude such an agreement; other States indicated their willingness to do the same.

As recommended in Council resolution 1503 (2003) [YUN 2003, p. 1330], the Tribunal continued to develop and improve its outreach programme as part of its completion strategy, with special attention paid to improving the capacity of national jurisdictions to prosecute war crimes cases. The programme significantly enhanced its activities in that regard. It assisted in the establishment of a responsible body of lawyers, prosecutors and other legal professionals in the former Yugoslavia, and organized in Croatia between May and October training seminars for judges and prosecutors likely to participate in the trial of war crimes cases. In efforts to engage victims across the region, particularly those whose communities were most affected by the crimes under the Tribunal's jurisdiction, the programme held the first in a series of community events in Bosnia and Herzegovina, intended to promote better local visibility of justice served, prevent historical revisionism and foster reconciliation.

2004-2005 biennium

Report of Secretary-General. The first performance report of ICTY for the 2004-2005

biennium [A/59/547], submitted by the Secretary-General in response to General Assembly resolution 58/255 [YUN 2003, p. 1318], reflected a requirement of additional appropriations of $26.8 million, net of staff assessment, over the initial appropriation for that biennium. The increased requirement included, among other things, changes with respect to exchange rates resulting from the weakening of the United States dollar vis-à-vis the euro and changes in inflation ($22,579,200), and provision for the Investigations Division for 2005 ($15,240,400), including staff and travel costs. The Assembly was requested to revise the appropriation for 2004-2005 in the amount of $329,501,900 gross ($298,437,000 net) to the ICTY Special Account.

ACABQ report. In November [A/59/561], the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions (ACABQ) recommended approval of the Secretary-General's proposed staffing and travel requirements for ICTY's Investigations Division for 2005.

Board of Auditors

The Secretary-General submitted his financial report on the ICTY accounts for the 2002-2003 biennium, including the report of the Board of Auditors for the same period [A/59/5/Add.12].

The budget for the biennium totalled $288.3 million, with actual expenditures amounting to $284.3 million, leaving an unencumbered balance of $4.0 million. The total expenditure represented an increase of 35.8 per cent over total expenditures for 2000-2001.

Following a review of the operations of ICTY and an audit of its financial statements for the year ended 31 December 2003, the Board of Auditors was concerned about the level of unpaid assessed contributions, which stood at $53.3 million. It found that: the balance of reserves showed a shortfall of $12.6 million; procedures in place had led to an initial understatement of $79.0 million in deferred charges; liabilities for judges' pensions were neither assessed nor disclosed in financial statements; the usual UN staff medical standards were not applied to candidates for a judgeship; and the criteria for assigning counsel to indigent accused were still to be completed. In addition, while responsibility for the United Nations House in Sarajevo had been transferred to the Tribunal, no entity had been specified for handover in 2006, when the Tribunal was scheduled to downsize its Sarajevo site. The Board recommended that the Tribunal liaise with UN Headquarters to improve the rate of occupancy of the building and to transfer its management to another entity before the Tribunal left the premises. The Board remained concerned that the 2010 deadline set by the completion strategy might not be met. It recommended that the Tribunal develop efforts to collect outstanding contributions from Member States and review procedures for reporting on deferred charges. It further recommended that the Tribunal liaise with UN Headquarters to account for the liability relating to judges' pensions and plan for the transfer of pension commitments to a permanent entity at the termination of the Tribunal. In addition, the Tribunal should ensure that amendments were made to ICTY's Rules of Procedure and Evidence concerning the conditions for the designation of counsel by the accused, and consider applying the usual UN staff medical standards to candidates for judgeship.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 23 December [meeting 76], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth (Administrative and Budgetary) Committee [A/59/604], adopted resolution 59/274 without vote [agenda item 122].

Financing of the International Tribunal for the Prosecution of Persons Responsible for Serious Violations of International Humanitarian Law Committed in the Territory of the Former Yugoslavia since 1991

The General Assembly,

Having considered the reports of the Secretary-General, namely the first performance report for the biennium 2004-2005 on the International Tribunal for the Prosecution of Persons Responsible for Serious Violations of International Humanitarian Law Committed in the Territory of the Former Yugoslavia since 1991 and the report on biennial budgeting at the Tribunals,

Having also considered the report of the Board of Auditors and the recommendations contained therein,

Having further considered the related report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions,

Recalling its resolution 47/235 of 14 September 1993 on the financing of the Tribunal and its subsequent resolutions thereon, the most recent of which were resolutions 58/254 and 58/255 of 23 December 2003,

1. Takes note of the first performance report of the Secretary-General for the biennium 2004-2005 on the International Tribunal for the Prosecution of Persons Responsible for Serious Violations of International Humanitarian Law Committed in the Territory of the Former Yugoslavia since 1991 and his report on biennial budgeting at the Tribunals;

2. Endorses the conclusions and recommendations contained in the report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions;

3. Notes with concern the precarious financial situation of the Tribunal;

4. Also notes with concern the levels of unpaid assessed contributions, and urges Member States to pay their assessed contributions on time, in full and without conditions;

5. Further notes with concern the resulting freeze imposed by the Secretariat on the Tribunal and the negative impact it is having on the completion strategy schedule, and requests the Secretary-General, in consultation with the Tribunal, to submit proposals on ways to ameliorate the staffing situation at the Tribunal in the context of the proposed budget for the biennium 2006-2007;

6. Requests the Secretary-General to ensure that areas critical to the successful completion of the mandate of the Tribunal, in accordance with the completion strategy, are exempt from any freezes;

7. Also requests the Secretary-General to make every effort to reduce the vacancy rate and improve staff retention at the Tribunal, including through extending contracts of staff performing functions that are central to the implementation of the completion strategy beyond the period of the current budget;

8. Decides to approve the proposed post and non-post resources for the Investigations Division for 2005;

9. Also decides on a revised appropriation to the Special Account for the International Tribunal for the Prosecution of Persons Responsible for Serious Violations of International Humanitarian Law Committed in the Territory of the Former Yugoslavia since 1991 of a total amount of 329,317,900 United States dollars gross (298,437,000 dollars net) for the biennium 2004-2005;

10. Further decides, for the year 2005, to apportion among Member States, in accordance with the scale of assessments applicable to the regular budget of the United Nations for the year, the amount of 90,148,375 dollars gross (81,300,850 dollars net), including 15,637,800 dollars gross (13,383,200 dollars net), being the increase in assessments;

11. Decides, for the year 2005, to apportion among Member States, in accordance with the rates of assessment applicable to peacekeeping operations for the year, the amount of 90,148,375 dollars gross (81,300,850 dollars net), including 15,637,800 dollars gross (13,383,200 dollars net), being the increase in assessments;

12. Also decides that, in accordance with the provisions of its resolution 973(X) of 15 December 1955, there shall be set off against the apportionment among Member States, as provided for in paragraphs 10 and 11 above, their respective share in the Tax Equalization Fund in the amount of 17,695,050 dollars, including 4,509,200 dollars, being the increase in the estimated staff assessment income approved for the Tribunal for the biennium 2004-2005.

Also on 23 December, the Assembly decided that the item on the financing of ICTY would remain for consideration during its resumed fifty-ninth (2005) session (decision 59/552).

International Tribunal for Rwanda

In 2004, the International Criminal Tribunal for Rwanda (ICTR), in Arusha, the United Republic of Tanzania, rendered five trial judgements, the same as in the previous year [YUN 2003, p. 1320]. The number of ad litem judges serving ICTR rose to nine—the maximum number permitted under Security Council resolution 1512(2003) [ibid., p. 1324]. That enabled the Tribunal to increase the number of new trials initiated during the year to four, concerning seven accused, bringing the total number of persons on trial to 25. In April [S/2004/341], as requested in Security Council resolution 1503(2003) [ibid., p. 1330], the ICTR President submitted an updated and revised version of the ICTR completion strategy (see p. 1292), which was further revised in November [S/2004/921].

The 2004 activities of ICTR, established by Council resolution 955(1994) [YUN 1994, p. 299], were covered in two reports to the Council and the General Assembly, for the periods 1 July 2003 to 30 June 2004 [A/59/183-S/2004/601] and 1 July 2004 to 30 June 2005 [A/60/229-S/2005/534]. On 15 November, the Assembly took note of the 2003/04 report (decision 59/510).

The Chambers

New cases

On 25 February, Ephrem Setako, former senior official in the Rwanda Armed Forces, was arrested in the Netherlands, and he was transferred to ICTR on 17 November. He made his initial appearance on 22 November.

Yusuf Munyakazi, a businessman and leader of a militia group in Cyangugu Prefecture, who was arrested in the Democratic Republic of the Congo on 5 May, was transferred to ICTR on 7 May and made his initial appearance on 12 May.

On 16 July, Gaspard Kanyarukiga was arrested in South Africa and was transferred to the Tribunal on 19 July. At his initial appearance on 22 July, he pleaded not guilty to charges of genocide, complicity in genocide, conspiracy to commit genocide and extermination as a crime against humanity.

Ongoing trials

On 22 January, Jean de Dieu Kamuhanda, who pleaded not guilty in 2000 to charges of genocide and crimes against humanity [YUN 2000, p. 1225] and whose trial was held in 2001 [YUN 2001, p. 1208] and 2002 [YUN 2002, p. 1285], was convicted and sentenced to life in prison. The accused appealed the judgement.

In the case of Juvénal Kajelijeli, who was sentenced in 2003 [YUN 2003, p. 1321] to three concurrent sentences (a life sentence each for genocide and for a crime against humanity and 15 years in prison for direct and public incitement to commit genocide), and who had appealed the judgement at the time, the Appeals Chamber, on 23 January 2004, denied the prosecution's motion for acceptance of its notice of appeal out of time, stating that the prosecution's failure to file a timely notice was not excused by "good cause".

On 12 February, the Appeals Chamber dismissed the prosecution's appeal against the Trial Chamber's decision denying leave to amend the indictment in the case against Casimir Bizimungu, Justin Mugenzi, Jérôme Bicomumpaka and Prosper Mugiraneza, referred to as the "Government II" case [YUN 1999, pp. 1222 & 1223], and whose trial began in 2003 [YUN 2003, p. 1321]. On 15 July 2004, the Appeals Chamber rendered a decision on Mr. Mugiraneza's appeal against the decision of the Trial Chamber on exclusion of evidence and directed that the request of the accused be reconsidered. The Prosecutor's counter-appeal was dismissed.

In the trial against Edouard Karemera, Andre Rwamakuba, Matthieu Ndirumapatse and Joseph Nzirorera, which began in 2003 [YUN 2003, p. 1321] and was referred to as the “Government I” case [YUN 1999, pp. 1222 & 1223], the Appeals Chamber granted the prosecution’s appeal against a decision to deny leave to amend the indictment. On 13 February 2004, the indictment was amended, and an initial appearance was held on 23 February to enable the accused to plead the new charges. On 29 March, the defence filed motions for the disqualification of the three judges on the case for alleged bias; those motions were dismissed. However, one of the judges elected to withdraw and the remaining two decided to continue the trial with a substitute judge. By a decision of 21 June, the Appeals Chamber allowed the appeals of Messrs. Rwamakuba, Karemera and Ngirumpatse challenging the decision of the remaining judges, who were found to have erred in law by deciding to continue the trial without giving the accused the opportunity to be heard. The matter was remanded to the remaining judges for reconsideration. Following an appeal filed by the defence, the Appeals Chamber, in its decision of 28 September and reasons of 22 October, disqualified the three judges engaged in the trial and ordered that the trial start de novo before a newly constituted Trial Chamber. Other appeals by Messrs. Karemera, Ngirumpatse and Nzirorera challenging the indictment, ICTR’s jurisdiction and a number of other decisions relating to the case were dismissed.

On 25 February, the Chamber rendered a judgement in the joint trial of Samuel Imanishimwe, Emmanuel Bagambiki and André Ntagerura, referred to as the “Cyangugu” case [YUN 1999, p. 1222], which began in 2000 [YUN 2000, p. 1226] and terminated in 2003 [YUN 2003, p. 1321]. Mr. Imanishimwe, former officer in the Rwandan Armed Forces, was sentenced to 27 years in prison, while Messrs. Bagambiki, former Prefect of Cyangugu, and Ntagerura, former Minister of Transport, were both acquitted. Mr. Imanishimwe and the prosecution appealed the judgement.

In the case against Mikaeli Muhimana, who was arrested in 1999 [YUN 1999, p. 1223] and charged with genocide, crimes against humanity and violations of the Geneva Conventions, the trial began on 29 March 2004, and on 30 April, the prosecution closed its case. The defence case was scheduled to start later in the year.

On 26 March, the Trial Chamber granted the prosecution’s motion for leave to amend the indictment in the case against Augustin Bizimungu, former Chief of Staff of the Rwandan Army, who was arrested in 2002 [YUN 2002, p. 1285], Augustin Ndindiliyimana, former Chief of Staff of the Gendarmerie, Francois-Xavier Nzuwonemeye, former Commander of the 42

Battalion, and Innocent Sagahutu, former Second-in-Command of the Reconnaissance Battalion, all of whom were arrested in 2000 [YUN 2000, p. 1225], in a case consolidated as the “Military II” case. On 31 March 2004, the prosecution filed the amended indictment, and further initial appearances were held on 30 April. The joint trial of the accused began on 20 September.

On 9 July, the Appeals Chamber upheld the conviction and affirmed the life sentence imposed on Eliezer Niyitegeka in 2003 [YUN 2003, p. 1321]. The appellant was currently seeking a review of the appeal judgement on the grounds that the prosecutor failed to disclose to him alleged exculpatory statements by witnesses, which were disclosed in another case. The briefing was ongoing.

On 4 June, the Appeals Chamber dismissed in part the appeal against the Trial Chamber’s decision on the preliminary defence motion regarding defects in the form of the indictment in the case of Aloys Simba, who had pleaded not guilty in 2002 [YUN 2002, p. 1285] to charges of genocide or complicity in genocide. On 29 July 2004, a further appeal by the accused challenging the indictment was also dismissed, and on 30 August his trial began. On 30 September, the Appeals Chamber dismissed Mr. Simba’s appeal challenging the decision of the Trial Chamber, which had found that the second indictment adequately pleaded the mens rea for joint criminal enterprise and that the allegations relating to murder as a crime against humanity were adequately connected to the widespread and systemic attack that had occurred. The prosecution closed its case on 10 November, and, on 13 December, the defence case began.

On 17 June, Sylvestre Gacumbitsi, who had pleaded not guilty in 2001 [YUN 2001, p. 1207] and whose trial began in 2003 [YUN 2003, p. 1321], was convicted of genocide and crimes against humanity (extermination and rape), but acquitted of a crime against humanity (murder). He was sentenced to 30 years’ imprisonment.

In the joint trial against Pauline Nyiramasuhuko, Arsène Shalom Ntahobali, Sylvain Nsabimana, Alphonse Nteziryayo, Joseph Kanyabashi and Elie Ndayambaje, referred to as the “Butare” case, which began in 2001 [YUN 2001, p. 1208], the Appeals Chamber partially granted appeals by Ms. Nyiramasuhuko and Mr. Ntahobali against the Trial Chamber’s decision to declare parts of the evidence of certain witnesses inadmissible. On 27 September, the Appeals Chamber dismissed Ms. Nyiramasuhuko’s request for reconsideration of the appeal, and on 4 October, it also dismissed her appeal concerning a decision to admit as evidence a diary allegedly belonging to her. On 4 November, the prosecution closed its case.

Appeals were heard from 7 to 9 July in the case against Elizaphan Ntakirutimana and his son, Gérard Ntakirutimana, who were sentenced in 2003 to 10 and 25 years' imprisonment, respectively [YUN 2003, p. 1320]. On 13 December 2004, the Appeals Chamber rendered its judgement; it quashed a number of the convictions against both appellants, but affirmed the sentences imposed on them.

Emmanuel Ndindabahizi, a former Minister of Finance, who was arrested and pleaded not guilty in 2001 [YUN 2001, p. 1207], and whose trial began in 2003 [YUN 2003, p. 1321], was convicted on 15 July 2004 of genocide and crimes against humanity (extermination and murder) and sentenced to life in prison.

On 20 September, the trial began against Athanase Seromba, the Catholic priest of Nyange Parish in the Kivumu Commune, Kibuye Prefecture, who surrendered to ICTR in 2002 [YUN 2002, p. 1285].

On 14 October 2004, the prosecution closed its case in the joint trial, begun in 2002 [YUN 2002, p. 1285], of four senior Rwandan military officers (Théoneste Bagosora, Gratien Kabiligi, Anatole Nsengiyumva, Aloys Ntabakuze), consolidated in 1999 [YUN 1999, p. 1222] and currently referred to as the "Military I" case. Defence motions for acquittal were denied, and the defence case was scheduled for 2005.

On 8 December 2004, Vincent Rutaganira, who had pleaded not guilty in 2002 [YUN 2002, p. 1285], entered a guilty plea for crimes against humanity (extermination). As he had been indicted jointly with other accused, the Trial Chamber ordered the severance of the indictment against him. The parties presented their submissions on sentencing, and a joint recommendation was made for a term of imprisonment ranging from six to eight years.

In the case of Laurent Semanza, whose trial began in 2000 [YUN 2000, p. 1226] and was ongoing in 2001 [YUN 2001, p. 1208] and 2002 [YUN 2002, p. 1286], the Appeals Chamber granted a motion for admission of additional evidence. Hearings were heard on 13 and 14 December 2004.

Election of judges

By a 23 July letter [S/2004/619] to the President of the Security Council, the Secretary-General informed the Council of the resignation, effective 30 June, of Judge Asoka Gunawardana (Sri Lanka) as a permanent judge of ICTR. To replace him, the Government of Sri Lanka had presented the candidacy of Judge J. Asoka de Silva, whose curriculum vitae was annexed to the letter and who, in the view of the Secretary-General, met the qualifications prescribed in article 12 of the ICTR statute.

On 27 July [S/2004/620], the Council President, having consulted with Council members, expressed support for the Secretary-General's intention to appoint Judge de Silva.

On 3 August [S/2004/621], the Secretary-General appointed Judge de Silva as a permanent judge of ICTR, for the remainder of the term of office of Judge Gunawardana, which would expire on 24 May 2007.

Office of the Prosecutor

The Office of the Prosecutor, in a continuing effort to implement the ICTR completion strategy, established an Appeals Section in January. Investigations were completed to meet the new targets within the completion strategy deadline of 31 December 2004, and the Office stepped up its tracking activities to ensure that as many fugitives as possible were arrested sufficiently early to enable trials to be completed before the end of 2008. The Prosecutor continued to focus attention on accused persons who were allegedly in positions of leadership and who bore the gravest responsibility for the crimes committed. Other suspects alleged to have been mid- to low-level participants would be transferred to national jurisdictions, including Rwanda, for trial. The Prosecutor believed it was important to explore the idea of transferring cases to those African countries where certain suspects currently lived. In that regard, the possibility of transferring cases to Rwanda raised a number of issues, including the question of the death penalty, which had been imposed in genocide cases; the capacity of that country's judicial system to handle transferred cases at a time when it faced difficulties in coping with tens of thousands of local cases relating to genocide; and the issue of resources. It was decided that the transmission of the files of suspects and transfer of current detainees to Rwanda should await the resolution of those issues. Moreover, in preliminary discussions with national authorities, the Office of the Prosecutor found that the laws of the State in which a suspect was present might not confer jurisdiction over the suspect or the crime. Should it, therefore, not be possible to transfer cases to national jurisdictions, the Prosecutor would make alternative proposals to the Security Council and highlight related budgetary implications.

As part of global activities to mark the tenth anniversary of the Rwandan genocide (see p. 159), the Office of the Prosecutor hosted a colloquium of prosecutors of international criminal tribunals (Arusha, United Republic of Tanzania, 25-27 November), attended by representatives of ICTR, ICTY, the International Criminal Court and the Special Court for Sierra Leone, and legal practitioners from 12 countries. The aim was to discuss common problems, share ideas and solutions and adopt best practices. Participants discussed how to better prepare themselves for meeting the challenges of delivering international criminal justice. On 27 November, they issued a joint statement reaffirming commitment to ending impunity, deterring crimes against humanity, instituting a culture of accountability and bringing about peace and reconciliation in post-conflict societies. They also called on national and international authorities to assist the Tribunals by arresting and transferring indicted fugitives for trial.

The Registry

The Registry continued to support the judicial process by servicing the Tribunal's other organs and by participating in implementing the completion strategy. During the year, it signed a wide range of agreements with States and institutions concerning the reinforcement of sentences, the movement and relocation of witnesses and financial support for activities not covered by the regular budget. On 17 March and 27 April, Italy and Sweden became the fifth and sixth countries, respectively, to sign an agreement with the Tribunal on the enforcement of sentences imposed by ICTR. Between 20 and 22 September, top-level Rwandan Government officials and senior ICTR members discussed practical modalities for an agreement between the Rwandan Government and the United Nations regarding enforcement of ICTR sentences in Rwanda, pursuant to article 26 of the ICTR statute. The European Union also finalized details for an agreement to fund projects strengthening the managerial and operational capacity of the Tribunal.

Report of Secretary-General. In November [A/59/549], the Secretary-General submitted, in response to General Assembly resolution 58/253 [YUN 2003, p. 1327], the first performance report of ICTR for the 2004-2005 biennium. The report reflected a requirement of additional appropriations of $18.2 million, net of staff assessment. The increased requirements reflected changes arising from variations to budgetary assumptions ($10,705,600 net) and the provision of resources for the Tribunal's Investigations Division for 2005 ($12,587,400 net), including provision for the staffing component approved for 2004, comprising 106 temporary posts (88 in the Professional and higher categories and 18 in the General Service category), and proposed resource requirements for investigative travel in the amount of $550,000. It also reflected projected savings of $5,062,000. The Secretary-General recommended that the Assembly approve the proposed staffing and resource requirements for the Division, and revise the appropriation for 2004-2005 in the amount of $255,909,500 gross ($231,506,500 net) to the Special Account for ICTR.

ACABQ report. In November [A/59/561], ACABQ recommended approval of the Secretary-General's proposed staffing and travel requirements for ICTR's Investigative Division for 2005.

Board of Auditors

The Secretary-General submitted his financial report on the ICTR accounts for the 2002-2003 biennium, including the report of the Board of Auditors for the same period [A/59/5/Add.11].

Against a budget of $208.5 million for the biennium, actual expenditures amounted to $208.4 million, leaving an unencumbered balance of $0.1 million. The total expenditure represented an increase of 15.9 per cent over total expenditures for 2000-2001.

The Board of Auditors, having reviewed ICTR's operations and audited its financial statements for the year ended 31 December 2003, found that its total reserves and fund balances decreased by approximately 52 per cent, from $5.5 million in 2000-2001 to $2.6 million in 2002-2003, and that its financial position had significantly worsened due to an increase in unpaid assessed contributions, which stood at $34.8 million. The Board also found that amounts owed to the Organization were reflected in accounts payable, while amounts owed by the Organization were reflected in accounts receivable, resulting in the netting-off of payables against receivables, which contravened UN system accounting standards, and the Tribunal's reserves were inadequate to cover its end-of-service and post-retirement benefit liabilities of $27.4 million. It did not seem possible that ICTR would be able to complete its work by 2010, and there was a risk that many of the indictees might never be brought to trial owing to the closure in April of the Investigations Unit at Kigali, Rwanda. The Board further found that the impact of initiatives to improve the Tribunal's legal aid system was yet to be evaluated; requests for the translation of documents that were apparently of no probative value to cases before the Tribunal added to the already heavy workload of the Language Services Section; and procurement contracts or extensions thereto were, in some instances, signed after the commencement date of the contract or not at all.

The Board recommended measures to improve the presentation and disclosure of the Tribunal's financial statements, review the funding mechanism for end-of-service and post-retirement benefit liabilities, monitor progress in implementing the completion strategy, intensify efforts to gain the cooperation of States, continue to monitor and limit defence counsel expenditures, prevent the translation of non-essential documents, shorten the procurement lead time and improve the process of approving contracts.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 23 December [meeting 76], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee [A/59/603], adopted resolution 59/273 without vote [agenda item 121].

Financing of the International Criminal Tribunal for the Prosecution of Persons Responsible for Genocide and Other Serious Violations of International Humanitarian Law Committed in the Territory of Rwanda and Rwandan Citizens Responsible for Genocide and Other Such Violations Committed in the Territory of Neighbouring States between 1 January and 31 December 1994

The General Assembly,

Having considered the reports of the Secretary-General, namely the first performance report for the biennium 2004-2005 on the International Criminal Tribunal for the Prosecution of Persons Responsible for Genocide and Other Serious Violations of International Humanitarian Law Committed in the Territory of Rwanda and Rwandan Citizens Responsible for Genocide and Other Such Violations Committed in the Territory of Neighbouring States between 1 January and 31 December 1994 and the report on biennial budgeting at the Tribunals,

Having also considered the report of the Board of Auditors and the recommendations contained therein,

Having further considered the related report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions,

Recalling its resolution 49/251 of 20 July 1995 on the financing of the Tribunal and its subsequent resolutions thereon, the latest of which were resolutions 58/252 and 58/253 of 23 December 2003,

1. Takes note of the first performance report of the Secretary-General for the biennium 2004-2005 on the International Criminal Tribunal for the Prosecution of Persons Responsible for Genocide and Other Serious Violations of International Humanitarian Law Committed in the Territory of Rwanda and Rwandan Citizens Responsible for Genocide and Other Such Violations Committed in the Territory of Neighbouring

States between 1 January and 31 December 1994 and his report on biennial budgeting at the Tribunals;

2. Endorses the conclusions and recommendations contained in the report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions;

3. Notes with concern the precarious financial situation of the Tribunal;

4. Also notes with concern the levels of unpaid assessed contributions, and urges Member States to pay their assessed contributions on time, in full and without conditions;

5. Further notes with concern the resulting freeze imposed by the Secretariat on the Tribunal and the negative impact it is having on the completion strategy schedule, and requests the Secretary-General, in consultation with the Tribunal, to submit proposals on ways to ameliorate the staffing situation at the Tribunal in the context of the proposed budget for the biennium 2006-2007;

6. Requests the Secretary-General to ensure that areas critical to the successful completion of the mandate of the Tribunal, in accordance with the completion strategy, are exempt from any freezes;

7. Also requests the Secretary-General to make every effort to reduce the vacancy rate and improve staff retention at the Tribunal, including by extending contracts of staff performing functions that are central to the implementation of the completion strategy beyond the period of the current budget;

8. Further requests the Secretary-General to submit the reports requested in paragraphs 17 and 23 of resolution 58/253 in the context of the proposed budget of the Tribunal for the biennium 2006-2007;

9. Welcomes the efforts of the Tribunal, in accordance with its statute, to assist the Government of Rwanda in strengthening its judiciary, and requests the Tribunal to increase its capacity-building efforts for the judiciary of Rwanda, including through recruitment of Rwandan legal professionals and training and attachment programmes, in view of the intention to transfer cases for prosecution to Rwanda as from 2005;

10. Recognizes the importance of carrying out an effective outreach programme within the overall mandate of the Tribunal and its completion strategy, and requests the Tribunal, in accordance with its mandate, to develop and implement outreach programmes that are proactive, utilizing available resources optimally, and that contribute to the reconciliation process by effectively developing an increased understanding of its work among Rwandans;

11. Requests the Secretary-General to report on the outreach programme of the Tribunal and on future measures to ensure the smooth transfer of cases to national jurisdiction in the context of the proposed budget of the Tribunal for the biennium 2006-2007;

12. Decides to approve the proposed post and non-post resources for the Investigations Division for 2005;

13. Decides also on a revised appropriation to the Special Account for the International Criminal Tribunal for the Prosecution of Persons Responsible for Genocide and Other Serious Violations of International Humanitarian Law Committed in the Territory of Rwanda and Rwandan Citizens Responsible for Genocide and Other Such Violations Committed in the Territory of Neighbouring States between 1 January and 31 December 1994 of a total amount of 255,909,500 United States dollars gross (231,506,500 dollars net) for the biennium 2004-2005;

14. Decides further, for the year 2005, to apportion among Member States, in accordance with the scale of assessments applicable to the regular budget of the United Nations for the year, the amount of 69,123,700 dollars gross (62,434,375 dollars net), including 10,292,650 dollars gross (9,115,500 dollars net), being the increase in assessments;

15. Decides, for the year 2005, to apportion among Member States, in accordance with the rates of assessment applicable to peacekeeping operations for the year, the amount of 69,123,700 dollars gross (62,434,375 dollars net), including 10,292,650 dollars gross (9,115,500 dollars net), being the increase in assessments;

16. Decides also that, in accordance with the provisions of its resolution 973(X) of 15 December 1955, there shall be set off against the apportionment among Member States, as provided for in paragraphs 14 and 15 above, their respective share in the Tax Equalization Fund in the amount of 13,378,650 dollars, including 2,354,300 dollars, being the increase in the estimated staff assessment income approved for the Tribunal for the biennium 2004-2005.

for consideration during its resumed fifty-ninth (2005) session (decision 59/552).

Functioning of the Tribunals

Office of the Prosecutor

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 8 April [meeting 83], the General Assembly, having considered the 2003 report of the Office of Internal Oversight Services (OIOS) on its review of the Office of the Prosecutor of ICTY and ICTR [YUN 2003, p. 1331], on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee [A/58/752], adopted resolution 58/287 without vote [agenda items 131 & 132].

Review of the Office of the Prosecutor at the International Criminal Tribunal for Rwanda and the International Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 48/218 B of 29 July 1994 and 54/244 of 23 December 1999,

Recalling also its resolutions 57/289 of 20 December 2002 and 58/253 and 58/255 of 23 December 2003,

Having considered the report of the Office of Internal Oversight Services on the review of the Office of the Prosecutor at the International Criminal Tribunal for Rwanda and the International Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia, Takes note of the report of the Office of Internal Oversight Services on the review of the Office of the Prosecutor at the International Criminal Tribunal for Rwanda and the International Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia.

Biennial budgeting

Report of Secretary-General. In response to General Assembly resolutions 58/253 [YUN 2003, p. 1327] and 58/255 [ibid., p. 1318], the Secretary-General submitted a July report [A/59/139] on the results of the biennialization of the budgets of ICTR and ICTY, introduced at the United Nations in 1974 but only used in the Tribunals for the 2002-2003 biennium. The Secretary-General noted that the implementation of the biennial budgeting cycle had saved the Tribunals time and effort, providing them a greater scope for planning, managing and coordinating their activities, and had enabled them to become more focused on the realization of their completion strategy. Biennialization was also helping to alleviate the heavy agenda of the legislative and expert bodies, thereby allowing more time for the review of budget performance and evaluation, among other things. Returning to annual budgets would imply the issuance of yearly staff contracts, thereby exacerbating the already difficult situation of staff retention, and have a negative impact on staff morale and the functioning of the Tribunals and their completion strategies. The Secretary-General therefore proposed that the Assembly maintain a biennial budget presentation for the Tribunals.

Annexed to the report were the views of the Board of Auditors, which concurred with the Secretary-General's proposal.

ACABQ report. In November [A/59/561], ACABQ also supported the Secretary-General's proposal that the Assembly maintain the biennial format for the presentation of the Tribunals' budgets.

Implementation of completion strategies

Following its consideration in March of the work of ICTY and ICTR, the Security Council emphasized the importance of fully implementing the completion strategies, as set out in Council resolution 1503(2003) [YUN 2003, p. 1330], which called for completing investigations by the end of 2004, first instance trials by 2008 and the work of both Tribunals by 2010. The Council requested each Tribunal to provide, by 31 May and every six months thereafter, assessments of progress made in that regard (see below).

SECURITY COUNCIL ACTION

On 26 March [meeting 4935], the Security Council unanimously adopted resolution 1534(2004). The draft [S/2004/232] was prepared in consultations among Council members.

The Security Council,

Recalling its resolutions 827(1993) of 25 May 1993, 955(1994) of 8 November 1994, 978(1995) of 27 February 1995, 1165(1998) of 30 April 1998, 1166(1998) of 13 May 1998, 1329(2000) of 30 November 2000, 1411(2002) of 17 May 2002, 1431(2002) of 14 August 2002 and 1481(2003) of 19 May 2003,

Recalling and reaffirming in the strongest terms the statement of 23 July 2002 made by the President of the Security Council endorsing the International Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia Completion Strategy, and its resolution 1503(2003) of 28 August 2003,

Recalling that resolution 1503(2003) called upon the International Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia and the International Tribunal for Rwanda to take all possible measures to complete investigations by the end of 2004, to complete all trial activities at first instance by the end of 2008, and to complete all of its work in 2010 (the completion strategies), and requested the Presidents and Prosecutors of the Tribunals, in their annual reports to the Council, to explain their plans to implement the completion strategies,

Welcoming the presentations made by the Presidents and Prosecutors of the Tribunals to the Security Council on 9 October 2003,

Commending the important work of both Tribunals in contributing to lasting peace and security and national reconciliation and the progress made since their inception, commending them on their efforts so far to give effect to the completion strategies, and calling upon them to ensure effective and efficient use of their budgets, with accountability,

Reiterating its support for the Prosecutors of the Tribunals in their continuing efforts to bring at-large indictees before the Tribunals,

Noting with concern the problems highlighted in the presentations to the Security Council on 9 October 2003 in securing adequate regional cooperation,

Also noting with concern indications in the presentations made on 9 October that it might not be possible to implement the completion strategies set out in resolution 1503(2003),

Acting under Chapter VII of the Charter of the United Nations,

1. Reaffirms the necessity of trial of persons indicted by the International Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia, reiterates its call upon all States, especially Serbia and Montenegro, Croatia, and Bosnia and Herzegovina, and on the Republika Srpska within Bosnia and Herzegovina, to intensify cooperation with and render all necessary assistance to the Tribunal, particularly to bring Radovan Karadzic and Ratko Mladic, as well as Ante Gotovina and all other indictees, to the Tribunal, and calls upon all at-large indictees of the Tribunal to surrender to it;

2. Reaffirms the necessity of trial of persons indicted by the International Tribunal for Rwanda, reiterates its call upon all States, especially Rwanda, Kenya, the Democratic Republic of the Congo and the Republic of the Congo, to intensify cooperation with and render all necessary assistance to the Tribunal, including on investigations of the Rwandan Patriotic Army and efforts to bring Felicien Kabuga and all other such indictees to the Tribunal, and calls upon all at-large indictees of the Tribunal to surrender to it;

3. Emphasizes the importance of fully implementing the completion strategies as set out in paragraph 7 of resolution 1503(2003), which calls upon the Tribunals to take all possible measures to complete investigations by the end of 2004, to complete all trial activities at first instance by the end of 2008 and to complete all of its work in 2010, and urges each Tribunal to plan and act accordingly;

4. Calls upon the Prosecutors of the Tribunals to review the case load of the International Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia and the International Tribunal for Rwanda, respectively, in particular with a view to determining which cases should be proceeded with and which should be transferred to competent national jurisdictions, as well as the measures which will need to be taken to meet the completion strategies referred to in resolution 1503(2003), and urges them to carry out this review as soon as possible and to include a progress report in the assessments to be provided to the Council under paragraph 6 of the present resolution;

5. Calls upon each Tribunal, in reviewing and confirming any new indictments, to ensure that any such indictments concentrate on the most senior leaders suspected of being most responsible for crimes within the jurisdiction of the relevant Tribunal, as set out in resolution 1503(2003);

6. Requests each Tribunal to provide to the Council, by 31 May 2004 and every six months thereafter, assessments by its President and Prosecutor, setting out in detail the progress made towards the implementation of the Completion Strategy of the Tribunal, explaining what measures have been taken to implement the Completion Strategy and what measures remain to be taken, including the transfer of cases involving intermediate- and lower-rank accused to competent national jurisdictions; and expresses the intention of the Council to meet with the President and the Prosecutor of each Tribunal to discuss these assessments;

7. Declares the determination of the Council to review the situation, and, in the light of the assessments received under the foregoing paragraph, to ensure that the time frames set out in the Completion Strategies and endorsed in resolution 1503(2003) can be met;

8. Commends those States which have concluded agreements for the enforcement of sentences of persons convicted by the International Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia or the International Tribunal for Rwanda or have otherwise accepted such convicted persons to serve their sentences in their respective territories; encourages other States in a position to do so to act likewise; and invites the International Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia and the International Tribunal for Rwanda to continue and intensify their efforts to conclude further agreements for the enforcement of sentences or to obtain the cooperation of other States in this regard;

9. Recalls that the strengthening of competent national judicial systems is crucially important to the rule of law in general and to the implementation of the International Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia and the International Tribunal for Rwanda completion strategies in particular;

10. Welcomes, in particular, the efforts of the Office of the High Representative, the International Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia and the donor community to create a war crimes chamber in Sarajevo; encourages all parties to continue efforts to establish the chamber expeditiously; and encourages the donor community to provide sufficient financial support to ensure the success of domestic prosecutions in Bosnia and Herzegovina and in the region;

11. Decides to remain actively seized of the matter.

Progress assessment

In response to Security Council resolution 1534(2004) (see p. 1292), the Presidents of ICTY and ICTR submitted May and November reports containing revised and updated versions of their completion strategies and detailing progress made towards implementing them.

The May report on ICTY [S/2004/420] reviewed the progress of proceedings regarding first instance trials and cases on appeal. It outlined measures taken to implement the completion strategy, including the referral of cases involving lower- and intermediate-rank accused to competent national jurisdictions, compliance with the requirement of seniority contained in Council resolution 1534(2004), operation of the Trial

Chambers at full capacity, efforts to make interlocutory appeals more effective and to shorten appeal judgements, and the establishment of a working group on scheduling cases, tasked with improving the efficiency of scheduling trials. The report also provided an updated prognosis of ICTY's ability to realize the completion strategy under current conditions, emphasizing that the Tribunal, in order to meet its mandate, needed to be able to try the most senior fugitives accused of serious violations of international humanitarian law, particularly Radovan Karadzic and Ratko Mladic, both of whom were indicted in 1995 [YUN 1995, p. 1314], as well as Ante Gotovina, indicted in 2001 [YUN 2001, p. 1199]. Although the unsealing of new indictments in March and April 2004 had created additional uncertainties for the completion strategy, the Tribunal was still in a position to try all accused currently in detention and on provisional release by the end of 2008, including Mr. Gotovina, provided he arrived in The Hague before 2006. However, because the new indictments would likely result in two new trials involving eight new defendants, it was unlikely that the Tribunal would be able to try within the completion strategy deadlines any other fugitives or new indictees, including Messrs. Karadzic and Mladic, unless some cases could be resolved through referral to a domestic jurisdiction or by a guilty plea. Other measures, including enhanced cooperation by Member States in transferring the high-profile fugitives and eliminating delays due to the election of new judges in 2005, would help the Tribunal meet the goals set out in the completion strategy. Such other measures as the general freeze on hiring personnel were bound to interfere with the Tribunal's work and with the completion strategy. It was, therefore, imperative that the Tribunal be in a position to replace departing essential staff, particularly in the Chambers. ICTY's November report [S/2004/897] updated information provided in May and demonstrated that the implementation of the completion strategy was on course. The first deadline would be met with the completion of all new investigations by year's end, when 11 motions requesting the transfer of cases to be tried by local jurisdictions would have been filed. However, the successful implementation of the completion strategy called for further increasing the Tribunal's efficiency. In that regard, the freeze on new recruitment needed to be lifted as soon as possible, and States of the former Yugoslavia needed to arrest and transfer all remaining 20 fugitives promptly.

The May report on ICTR [S/2004/341] outlined the Tribunal's completion strategy, based on the information available as at 26 April and taking into account the deadlines set in Council resolutions 1503(2003) [YUN 2003, p. 1330] and 1534(2004). The report reviewed recent judgements and trials in progress; the status of detainees awaiting trial; the Tribunal's workload relating to detainees currently in Arusha, United Republic of Tanzania, persons at large and other trial work; the transfer of cases to national jurisdictions; and past and current strategies. It was projected that by 2008 ICTR could complete trials and judgements relating to 65 to 70 persons, depending on the progress of current and future trials. Assessing ICTR's human resources needs, the report noted that the prosecution envisaged a substantial increase in the number of trial attorneys, an expansion of the Tribunal's Appeals Section and investigative and administrative support. The prosecution expected that at the anticipated conclusion of investigations at year's end, some posts currently held by investigators could be redeployed to increase the number of trial attorneys, legal advisers and other staff required for trial. The November report on ICTR [S/2004/921], which revised its completion strategy based on information available as at 19 November, noted, however, that in order to adhere to the time frames set out in relevant Council resolutions, ICTR needed to continue to receive the necessary resources. In that regard, the recruitment of new staff had been frozen because some Member States had failed to pay their assessed contributions.

SECURITY COUNCIL ACTION

On 4 August [meeting 5016], following consultations among Security Council members, the President made statement S/PRST/2004/28 on behalf of the Council:

The Security Council takes note of the letter dated 21 May 2004 from the President of the International Tribunal for the Prosecution of Persons Responsible for Serious Violations of International Humanitarian Law Committed in the Territory of the Former Yugoslavia since 1991 addressed to the President of the Security Council.

The Council also takes note of the letter dated 30 April 2004 from the President of the International Criminal Tribunal for the Prosecution of Persons Responsible for Genocide and Other Serious Violations of International Humanitarian Law Committed in the Territory of Rwanda and Rwandan Citizens Responsible for Genocide and Other Such Violations Committed in the Territory of Neighbouring States between 1 January and 31 December 1994 addressed to the President of the Security Council.

The Council thanks the Presidents and Prosecutors of the two Tribunals for these assessments requested by resolution 1534(2004), as supplemented by their oral reports at the 4999th meeting of the Council on 29 June 2004.

The Council reaffirms its support for the two Tribunals and welcomes their efforts to carry out their completion strategies. The Council strongly encourages the Tribunals to make every effort to ensure that they remain on track to meet the target dates of the completion strategies.

The Council stresses that the full cooperation of all States with the Tribunals is not only a mandatory obligation of all States under its resolutions 827(1993) and 955(1994) and the statutes of the Tribunals, but is also an essential element in realizing the completion strategies. In this regard, the Council takes careful note of the assessments presented with respect to the level of cooperation by the authorities of Serbia and Montenegro and the Republika Srpska within Bosnia and Herzegovina with the International Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia. We welcome as well the commitments made by the new Government in Serbia regarding cooperation with the International Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia. The Council takes note of developments in Croatian and Rwandan cooperation with the International Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia and the International Criminal Tribunal for the Rwanda, respectively.

The Council reiterates its call upon all States, especially Serbia and Montenegro, Croatia, Bosnia and Herzegovina, and the Republika Srpska within Bosnia and Herzegovina, to intensify cooperation with and render all necessary assistance to the International Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia, particularly to bring Radovan Karadzic and Ratko Mladic, as well as Ante Gotovina and all other such indictees to the Tribunal.

The Council reiterates its call upon all States, especially Rwanda, Kenya, the Democratic Republic of the Congo and the Republic of the Congo, to intensify cooperation with and render all necessary assistance to the International Criminal Tribunal for Rwanda, including on investigations of the Rwandan Patriotic Army and efforts to bring Felicien Kabuga and all other such indictees to the Tribunal.

The Council notes with concern that the shortfall in financial contributions from Member States is having a disruptive effect on the work of the Tribunals and urges Member States to fulfil their commitments in a timely manner.

The Council emphasizes the importance of the referral of cases involving lower- and intermediate-rank accused to competent national jurisdictions in achieving the completion strategies and recalls the provisions of its resolutions 1503(2003) and 1534(2004), including the call for assistance to ensure the success of this effort.

The Council also notes the concerns expressed by the President of the International Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia on the effect the expiry of the terms of permanent judges may have on case management and takes note of the letter of 15 July 2004 from the Acting Legal Counsel bringing forward an invitation to Member States to submit nominations for permanent judges of the Tribunal before 13 September 2004.

The Council encourages further dialogue between the Tribunals and its Working Group on matters of mutual concern.

The Council will remain seized of the matter.

Chapter III

Legal aspects of international political relations

In 2004, the International Criminal Court (ICC), established by the 1998 Rome Statute of the International Criminal Court, focused on meeting its primary objective of becoming an independent and credible institution of international criminal justice. Significant developments included the adoption in May of the Regulations of the Court and the creation of an operational Office of the Prosecutor. In July, the Prosecutor opened the first ICC investigations, which concerned alleged crimes falling within the Court's jurisdiction committed in the territory of the Democratic Republic of the Congo. On 4 October, the Relationship Agreement between ICC and the United Nations, which set out a legal framework for their cooperation in the effective discharge of their respective responsibilities, entered into force. In December, the General Assembly called on States not yet parties to the Rome Statute to consider acceding to it. In other action, the Assembly adopted the United Nations Convention on Jurisdictional Immunities of States and Their Property, the draft of which had been prepared by the Ad Hoc Committee established in 2000 to elaborate the Convention.

The International Law Commission continued to examine topics suitable for the progressive development and codification of international law, provisionally adopting additional draft guidelines on reservations to treaties, as well as draft articles on diplomatic protection and draft principles on the allocation of loss in the case of transboundary harm arising out of hazardous activities.

The Ad Hoc Committee on the convention for suppression of nuclear terrorism and the Sixth (Legal) Committee of the General Assembly continued to elaborate a comprehensive convention on international terrorism and to resolve outstanding issues related to the preparation of a draft international convention for the suppression of acts of nuclear terrorism.

The Ad Hoc Committee on the Scope of Legal Protection under the 1994 Convention on the Safety of United Nations and Associated Personnel continued to consider measures to enhance the existing protective legal regime for UN and associated personnel.

Establishment of the International Criminal Court

The 1998 Rome Statute of the International Criminal Court [YUN 1998, p. 1209], which established ICC as a permanent institution with jurisdiction over persons accused of the most serious crimes of international concern—genocide, crimes against humanity, war crimes and the crime of aggression—entered into force on 1 July 2002 [YUN 2002, p. 1298]. As at 31 December 2004, the Statute had 139 signatories and 97 States parties.

During 2004, the Assembly of States Parties to the Rome Statute, the management oversight and legislative body of ICC, agreed on the future composition of ICC's Bureau and approved the negotiated draft Relationship Agreement between the United Nations and the Court (for more on the Assembly's deliberations, see p. 1296).

In 2004, the Security Council did not renew the request it had made in previous years that ICC delay, for a 12-month period, investigation or prosecution of any case involving officials or personnel from a State not party to the Rome Statute, in respect of acts or omissions relating to an operation authorized or established by the UN. That development represented a significant contribution to the Organization's efforts to promote justice and the rule of law in international affairs.

Relationship Agreement between the UN and ICC

Pursuant to General Assembly resolution 58/79 [YUN 2003, p. 1333], the Secretary-General, by an August note [A/58/874], submitted to the Assembly the draft Relationship Agreement between the United Nations and ICC, which would enter into force upon signature and approval by the General Assembly and the Assembly of States Parties to the Rome Statute. On 7 June, the text of the negotiated draft Agreement was initialed by the Secretary-General's Acting Legal Counsel and by the Chef de Cabinet of the ICC President in The Hague (Netherlands).

In an 8 September addendum to his note [A/58/874/Add.1], the Secretary-General said that he had been advised by the President of the Assembly of States Parties to the Rome Statute of ICC that the Assembly had approved the Agreement. On 13 September, the General Assembly, in resolution 58/318 (below), also approved the Relationship Agreement, allowing ICC to attend and participate in its work as an observer.

On 4 October, the Relationship Agreement entered into force. It set out the legal framework for cooperation between the United Nations and the Court, in order to facilitate the effective discharge of their respective responsibilities. Under the Agreement, the United Nations might provide, at the request of ICC or the Prosecutor, information and documents that were relevant to the Court's work.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 13 September [meeting 95], the General Assembly adopted resolution 58/318 [draft: A/58/L.68] without vote [agenda item 154].

Cooperation between the United Nations and the International Criminal Court

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 58/79 of 9 December 2003, in which it invited the Secretary-General to take steps to conclude a relationship agreement between the United Nations and the International Criminal Court and to submit the negotiated draft relationship agreement to the General Assembly for approval,

Noting the initialling of the negotiated draft Relationship Agreement between the United Nations and the International Criminal Court on 7 June 2004 in The Hague,

Taking note of the decision of 7 September 2004 taken by the Assembly of States Parties to the Rome Statute of the International Criminal Court at its third session to approve the negotiated draft Relationship Agreement, as noted by the Secretary-General,

Having considered the negotiated draft Relationship Agreement,

1. Approves the draft Relationship Agreement between the United Nations and the International Criminal Court;

2. Decides to apply the Relationship Agreement provisionally pending its formal entry into force;

3. Also decides that all expenses resulting from the provision of services, facilities, cooperation and any other support rendered to the International Criminal Court or the Assembly of States Parties to the Rome Statute of the International Criminal Court, including under any arrangements that may be otherwise agreed under article 10 of the Relationship Agreement, that may accrue to the United Nations as a result of the implementation of the Relationship Agreement shall be paid in full to the Organization.

Assembly of States Parties

The Assembly of States Parties to the Rome Statute of the International Criminal Court met in The Hague for its third annual session (6-10 September) [ICC-ASP/3/25].

The Assembly took note of its President's report on the activities of the Bureau, which, during the second year (September 2003-September 2004), held meetings aimed at assisting the Assembly in carrying out its activities under the Statute. The Assembly also heard statements by, among others, the Court's President, Judge Philippe Kirsch (Canada), and the Court's Prosecutor, Luis Moreno-Ocampo (Argentina). It elected as Deputy Prosecutor, Fatou Bensouda (the Gambia), for a nine-year term, with effect from 1 November 2004, and six members of the Committee on Budget and Finance, whose term of office would commence on 21 April 2005.

The Assembly approved by consensus the Court's programme budget for 2005, with total appropriations of 66,784,200 euros for the major programmes. It took note of the reports of external auditors on the audit of the Court's financial statements for the period 1 September 2002 to 31 December 2003 and of the Trust Fund for Victims financial statements for the same period. It requested ICC and the auditors to follow up on matters identified in the report of the Committee on Budget and Finance on its third session. In particular, ICC was encouraged to implement risk management procedures in its operations and to ensure better planning and implementation of procurement. Other areas warranting future attention from the auditors—results-based budgeting, information technology investment and human resources management—were also identified.

The Assembly considered, among other reports, the Registrar's reports on activities regarding defence counsel, including legal representation of victims and the process of consultation followed, and on the participation of and reparations to victims; the report of the Board of Directors of the Trust Fund for Victims; and the report of the Special Working Group on the Crime of Aggression.

The Assembly approved the negotiated draft Relationship Agreement between ICC and the United Nations (see above). It also agreed on the following future composition of the Bureau: five seats each for the Group of Western European and other States, and the Group of African States; four seats each for the Group of Latin American and Caribbean States, and the Group of Eastern European States; three seats for the Group of Asian States, on the understanding that the next Chair of the Credentials Committee would be elected from a State Party belonging to the Asian Group and who was not a Bureau member, and that the Bureau would extend to the next Chair a standing invitation to participate in its meetings, but without voting rights. That compromise, however, should not extend beyond the term of office of the next Bureau (2005-2008).

The Assembly considered and adopted by consensus the Bureau's proposal on the procedure for the nomination and election of ICC judges. It also adopted, among other things, the conditions of service and compensation of judges, as well as decisions on tax reimbursement of ICC staff and officials, the protection of the Court's name, the Staff Pension Committee and the Code of professional conduct for counsel. The Assembly agreed to intensify dialogue with the Court and welcomed the establishment of a Trust Fund for the participation of least developed countries in its activities.

At the same meeting, the Assembly amended rule 29 of its Rules of Procedure, elected by acclamation Bruno Stagno Ugarte (Costa Rica) as President for its fourth to sixth sessions and decided to hold its fourth session in The Hague in November 2005. It also decided that the Committee on Budget and Finance would meet in The Hague in April 2005.

ICC report. In July, ICC submitted a report [ICC-ASP/3/10] for consideration by the Assembly of States Parties (see p. 1296) at its September session, describing the Court's activities since September 2003. Significant developments included: the adoption by ICC judges of the Regulations of the Court; the creation of an operational Office of the Prosecutor, including staff recruitment, development of structures, priorities, policies and procedures and commencement of operations; the receipt by the Office of the Prosecutor of two referrals from States Parties (Uganda and the Democratic Republic of the Congo) on situations within their territories; the first meeting of members of the Board of Directors of the Trust Fund for Victims; the recruitment of an appropriate level of staff for the institution as a whole; the development of policies and procedures pertaining to issues essential for the future functioning of the Court, including matters relating to the defence, detention, victims, witnesses, counsel, court management and information technology; and the initialling of the Relationship Agreement between ICC and the United Nations. The Court's overall focus had been on meeting the primary objective of being an independent and credible institution of international criminal justice.

Report of Secretary-General (August). In an August report [S/2004/616] on the rule of law and transitional justice in conflict and post-conflict societies (see also p. 65), the Secretary-General noted that the most significant recent development in the international community's struggle to advance the cause of justice and rule of law was the establishment of ICC. The Court was making an impact by putting would-be violators on notice that impunity was not assured and by serving as a catalyst for enacting national laws against the gravest international crimes. It was crucial to ensure that ICC had the requisite resources, capacities, information and support to investigate, prosecute and bring to trial those responsible for war crimes, crimes against humanity and genocide, in situations where national authorities were unable or unwilling to do so. The Security Council had a particular role to play in that regard, given that it was empowered to refer situations to ICC, even in cases where the countries concerned were not States Parties to the Court's Statute.

Note of Secretary-General (September). In a September note [A/59/356], the Secretary-General summarized the activities undertaken by the Secretariat to facilitate an orderly and smooth transition of work from the UN Secretariat to the secretariat of the Assembly of States Parties to the Rome statute of ICC, as called for in General Assembly resolution 58/79 [YUN 2003, p. 1333]. The Secretariat ceased to serve as the provisional secretariat of the Assembly of States Parties on 31 December 2003. In addition to material transmitted previously to the Court's Registrar, the Secretariat facilitated the transfer of documents concerning the second session of the Assembly of States Parties, held in 2003 [ibid., p. 1332], and other material relevant to assisting the Assembly's secretariat in its future work, particularly regarding preparations for its third session (see p. 1296). The Secretariat also took steps to close trust funds administered by the Secretary-General relating to the establishment of ICC and its subsequent activities.

The Security Council, in presidential statement S/PRST/2004/34 of 6 October (see p. 66), thanked the Secretary-General for his August report (see above) and reaffirmed the importance it attached to promoting justice and the rule of law. It would consider, as appropriate, the recommendations contained in the report.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 2 December [meeting 65], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Sixth (Legal) Committee [A/59/512], adopted resolution 59/43 without vote [agenda item 146].

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 47/33 of 25 November 1992, 48/31 of 9 December 1993, 49/53 of 9 December 1994, 50/46 of 11 December 1995, 51/207 of 17 December 1996, 52/160 of 15 December 1997, 53/105 of 8 December 1998, 54/105 of 9 December 1999, 55/155 of 12 December 2000, 56/85 of 12 December 2001, 57/23 of 19 November 2002 and 58/79 of 9 December 2003,

Noting that the Rome Statute of the International Criminal Court was adopted on 17 July 1998 and entered into force on 1 July 2002,

Noting also the adoption of the Regulations of the International Criminal Court, the entry into force of the Agreement on the Privileges and Immunities of the Court, the opening of the first investigations by the Prosecutor and the constitution of the Pre-Trial Chambers of the Court,

Acknowledging the Relationship Agreement between the United Nations and the International Criminal Court ("Relationship Agreement") as approved by the Assembly of States Parties on 7 September 2004 and by the General Assembly in its resolution 58/318 of 13 September 2004, including paragraph 3 of the resolution with respect to the full reimbursement of expenses resulting from the implementation of the Relationship Agreement, and signed by the United Nations and the Court on 4 October 2004, thereby entering into force,

Reiterating the historic significance of the adoption of the Rome Statute of the International Criminal Court,

1. Calls upon all States that are not yet parties to the Rome Statute of the International Criminal Court to consider ratifying or acceding to it without delay, and encourages efforts aimed at promoting awareness of the results of the United Nations Diplomatic Conference of Plenipotentiaries on the Establishment of an International Criminal Court, held in Rome from 15 June to 17 July 1998, the provisions of the Statute and the process leading to the establishment of the International Criminal Court;

2. Calls upon all States to consider becoming parties to the Agreement on the Privileges and Immunities of the International Criminal Court without delay;

3. Welcomes the holding of the third session of the Assembly of States Parties in The Hague from 6 to 10 September 2004, and also welcomes the election of the new President of the Assembly of States Parties, new members to the Committee on Budget and Finance and the second Deputy-Prosecutor, and the important decisions taken on that occasion, including the establishment of the secretariat of the Board of Directors of the Trust Fund for Victims, as well as the adoption of a number of resolutions;

4. Recalls the establishment of the Special Working Group on the Crime of Aggression by the Assembly of States Parties to the Rome Statute of the International Criminal Court, open to all States on an equal footing;

5. Expresses its appreciation to the Secretary-General for providing effective and efficient assistance in the establishment of the International Criminal Court;

6. Takes note of the statement by the President of the Security Council of 6 October 2004, in which the Secretary-General is thanked for his report on the rule of law, in which reference was made to a number of efforts, in particular by the International Criminal Court to promote justice and the rule of law;

7. Welcomes the report of the Secretary-General on the work of the Organization, in which references were made to the International Criminal Court;

8. Welcomes also the steps taken as explained in the note by the Secretariat on the International Criminal Court, amongst which were those to close the various trust funds administered by the Secretary-General relating to the establishment of the Court and subsequent activities;

9. Recalls that pursuant to article 4, paragraph 2, of the Relationship Agreement, the International Criminal Court may attend and participate in the work of the General Assembly in the capacity of observer and that pursuant to article 6 of the Relationship Agreement the Court may submit reports on its activities to the fifty-ninth and following sessions of the General Assembly;

10. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its sixtieth session an item entitled "Report of the International Criminal Court", under which shall be considered, with the Court invited to attend and to participate, pursuant to article 4, paragraph 2, of the Relationship Agreement, any report of the International Criminal Court, pursuant to article 6 of the Relationship Agreement.

On 23 December, the Assembly, decided that the agenda item on ICC remained for consideration during its resumed fifty-ninth (2005) session (decision 59/552).

International Law Commission

The International Law Commission (ILC) held its fifty-sixth session in Geneva in two parts (3 May–4 June; 5 July–6 August) [A/59/10]. During the second part, the International Law Seminar held its fortieth session, which was attended by 24 participants, mostly from developing countries. They observed ILC meetings, attended specially arranged lectures and participated in working groups on specific topics.

ILC, assisted by working groups and a Drafting Committee, continued to advance its work on reservations to treaties by provisionally adopting further guidelines on widening the scope of a reservation, modification and withdrawal of interpretative declarations. It also adopted draft articles on diplomatic protection and on responsibility of international organizations, as well as draft principles on allocation of loss in the case of transboundary harm arising out of hazardous activities. In addition, ILC considered draft articles on the topics of shared natural resources and of unilateral acts of States. It considered the Special Rapporteur's report, which contained a survey of State practice in respect of unilateral acts. Subsequently, the Commission reconstituted a working group to consider specific examples of such acts. It also reconstituted the study group on the topic of fragmentation of international law: difficulties arising from the diversification and expansion of international law, to further study the lex specialis rule and the question of self-contained regime.

In furtherance of cooperation with other bodies concerned with international law, ILC continued its traditional information exchanges with the International Court of Justice, the Inter-American Judicial Committee, the Asian-African Legal Consultative Organization, the European Committee on Legal Cooperation and the Committee of Legal Advisers on Public International Law. ILC members also held informal meetings with other bodies and associations on matters of mutual interest.

Among its other decisions, ILC reconstituted the working group on its long-term programme of work, decided to include in its current work programme two new topics on “expulsion of aliens” and “effects of armed conflicts on treaties”, and appointed as Special Rapporteurs Maurice Kamto (Cameroon) and Ian Brownlie (United Kingdom), to consider them, respectively. ILC noted with approval the Strategic Framework (2006-2007) for the programme on progressive development and codification of international law, prepared by the Secretary-General (see p. 1400) pursuant to General Assembly resolution 58/269 [YUN 2003, p., 1395]. Reflecting on Assembly resolution 58/250 [ibid., p. 1486], ILC emphasized the importance of summary records, which it considered a vital requirement for establishing the procedures and methods of its work and an indispensable part of the process of progressive development of international law. It also stressed that the reduction of the payment of honorariums to the nominal amount of $1 in Assembly resolution 56/272 [YUN 2002, p. 1402] mostly affected Special Rapporteurs, particularly those from developing countries, as it compromised support for their research. ILC decided to hold its fifty-seventh session in two parts: from 2 May to 3 June and from 4 July to 5 August.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 2 December [meeting 65], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Sixth Committee [A/59/510], adopted resolution 59/41 without vote [agenda item 144].

Report of the International Law Commission on the work of its fifty-sixth session

The General Assembly,

Having considered the report of the International Law Commission on the work of its fifty-sixth session,

Emphasizing the importance of furthering the codification and progressive development of international law as a means of implementing the purposes and principles set forth in the Charter of the United Nations and in the Declaration on Principles of International Law concerning Friendly Relations and Cooperation among States in accordance with the Charter of the United Nations,

Recognizing the desirability of referring legal and drafting questions to the Sixth Committee, including topics that might be submitted to the International Law Commission for closer examination, and of enabling the Sixth Committee and the Commission to enhance further their contribution to the progressive development of international law and its codification,

Recalling the need to keep under review those topics of international law which, given their new or renewed interest for the international community, may be suitable for the progressive development and codification of international law and therefore may be included in the future programme of work of the International Law Commission,

Welcoming the holding of the International Law Seminar, and noting with appreciation the voluntary contributions made to the United Nations Trust Fund for the International Law Seminar,

Stressing the usefulness of focusing and structuring the debate on the report of the International Law Commission in the Sixth Committee in such a manner that conditions are provided for concentrated attention to each of the main topics dealt with in the report and for discussions on specific topics,

Wishing to enhance further, in the context of the revitalization of the debate on the report of the International Law Commission, the interaction between the Sixth Committee as a body of governmental representatives and the Commission as a body of independent legal experts, with a view to improving the dialogue between the two bodies,

Welcoming initiatives to hold interactive debates, panel discussions and question time in the Sixth Committee, as envisaged in resolution 58/316 of 1 July 2004 on further measures for the revitalization of the work of the General Assembly,

1. Takes note of the report of the International Law Commission on the work of its fifty-sixth session, and recommends that the Commission continue its work on the topics in its current programme, taking into account the comments and observations of Governments, whether submitted in writing or expressed orally in debates in the General Assembly;

2. Expresses its appreciation to the International Law Commission for the work accomplished at its fifty-sixth session, in particular for the completion of the first reading of draft articles on Diplomatic protection and of the draft principles on the allocation of loss in the case of transboundary harm arising out of hazardous activities;

3. Draws the attention of Governments to the importance for the International Law Commission of having their views on the various aspects involved in the topics on the agenda of the Commission identified in chapter III of its report and in particular on:

(a) The draft articles and commentary on Diplomatic protection;

(b) The draft principles on Allocation of loss in the case of transboundary harm arising out of hazardous activities;

4. Invites Governments, within the context of paragraph 3 above, to provide information to the International Law Commission regarding:

(a) Their practice, bilateral or regional, relating to the allocation of groundwaters from transboundary aquifer systems and the management of non-renewable transboundary aquifer systems relating to the topic currently entitled "Shared natural resources";

(b) State practice on the topic "Unilateral acts of States";

5. Endorses the decision of the International Law Commission to include in its agenda the topics "Expulsion of aliens" and "Effects of armed conflicts on treaties";

6. Takes note of paragraphs 362 and 363 of the report of the International Law Commission with regard to its long-term programme of work and the syllabus on the new topic annexed to the report;

7. Invites the International Law Commission to continue taking measures to enhance its efficiency and productivity;

8. Encourages the International Law Commission to continue taking cost-saving measures at its future sessions;

9. Takes note of paragraph 370 of the report of the International Law Commission, and decides that the next session of the Commission shall be held at the United Nations Office at Geneva from 2 May to 3 June and from 4 July to 5 August 2005;

10. Welcomes the enhanced dialogue between the International Law Commission and the Sixth Committee at the fifty-ninth session of the General Assembly, stresses the desirability of further enhancing the dialogue between the two bodies, and in this context encourages, inter alia, the continued practice of informal consultations in the form of discussions between the members of the Sixth Committee and the members of the Commission attending the sixtieth session of the Assembly;

11. Encourages delegations, during the debate on the report of the International Law Commission to adhere as far as possible to the structured work programme agreed to by the Sixth Committee and to consider presenting concise and focused statements;

12. Encourages Member States to consider being represented at the level of legal adviser during the first week in which the report of the International Law Commission is discussed in the Sixth Committee (International Law Week) to enable high-level discussions on issues of international law;

13. Requests the International Law Commission to continue to pay special attention to indicating in its annual report, for each topic, any specific issues on which expressions of views by Governments, either in the Sixth Committee or in written form, would be of particular interest in providing effective guidance for the Commission in its further work;

14. Takes note of paragraphs 371 to 376 of the report of the International Law Commission with regard to cooperation with other bodies, and encourages the Commission to continue the implementation of article 16, paragraph (e), and article 26, paragraphs 1 and 2, of its statute in order to further strengthen cooperation between the Commission and other bodies concerned with international law, having in mind the usefulness of such cooperation;

15. Notes that consulting with national organizations and individual experts concerned with international law may assist Governments in considering whether to make comments and observations on drafts submitted by the International Law Commission and in formulating their comments and observations;

16. Reaffirms its previous decisions concerning the indispensable role of the Codification Division of the Office of Legal Affairs of the Secretariat in providing assistance to the International Law Commission;

17. Approves the conclusions reached by the International Law Commission in paragraph 367 of its report and reaffirms its previous decisions concerning the documentation and summary records of the International Law Commission;

18. Expresses the hope that the International Law Seminar will continue to be held in connection with the sessions of the International Law Commission and that an increasing number of participants, in particular from developing countries, will be given the opportunity to attend the Seminar, and appeals to States to continue to make urgently needed voluntary contributions to the United Nations Trust Fund for the International Law Seminar;

19. Requests the Secretary-General to provide the International Law Seminar with adequate services, including interpretation, as required, and encourages him to continue considering ways to improve the structure and content of the Seminar;

20. Also requests the Secretary-General to forward to the International Law Commission, for its attention, the records of the debate on the report of the Commission at the fifty-ninth session of the General Assembly, together with such written statements as delegations may circulate in conjunction with their oral statements, and to prepare and distribute a topical summary of the debate, following established practice;

21. Requests the Secretariat to circulate to States, as soon as possible after the conclusion of the session of the International Law Commission, chapter II of its report containing a summary of the work of that session, chapter III containing the specific issues on which the views of Governments would be of particular interest to the Commission and the draft articles adopted on either first or second reading by the Commission;

22. Recommends that the debate on the report of the International Law Commission at the sixtieth session of the General Assembly commence on 24 October 2005.

International liability

Under the topic of international liability for injurious consequences arising out of acts not prohibited by international law, ILC considered the second report by Special Rapporteur Pemmaraju Sreenivasa Rao (India) on the legal regime for the allocation of loss in case of transboundary harm arising out of hazardous activities [A/CN.4/540]. The report, which analysed comments submitted by States on the main issues concerning allocation of loss, also contained 12 draft principles proposed by the Special Rapporteur. ILC established a Working Group to examine those proposals and subsequently referred eight draft principles submitted by the Group to the Drafting Committee and also adopted a set of draft principles on allocation of loss in the case of transboundary harm arising out of hazardous activities.

Unilateral acts of States

ILC considered the seventh report on unilateral acts of States [A/CN.4/542 & Corr.1-3] by Special Rapporteur Victor Rodríguez Cedeño (Venezuela). The report, which was an initial study on the practice of States regarding unilateral acts, took account of the need to identify the relevant rules for codification and progressive development. In order to determine the criteria for the classification of acts and declarations that might represent the practice of States, the Special Rapporteur examined the following three categories: acts by which a State assumed obligations (promise and recognition); acts by which a State waived a right or a legal claim (waiver); and acts by which a State reaffirmed a right or a legal claim (protest). The report also examined conduct that could produce legal effects similar to unilateral acts, and in that context, analysed silence, consent and estoppel and their relationship with unilateral acts and described the practice of some international courts. The report concluded that unilateral acts and declarations of States were mostly addressed to other States and occasionally to other subjects, such as international organizations. They were usually formulated individually or otherwise issued by groups of States, and most were formulated by persons authorized to act at the international level on behalf of the State, such as the head of State or Government, the Minister for Foreign Affairs, ambassadors, heads of delegation and representatives of the State. It could be affirmed, however, that some existing rules were generally applicable to all unilateral acts and forms of conduct. Highlighting the difficulty involved in differentiating conducts from acts and in comparing both, the report advocated the elaboration of a draft definition based on the draft adopted in 2003 [YUN 2003, p. 1336] by the Working Group on Unilateral Acts. ILC reconstituted the Group to focus on a detailed consideration of specific examples of such acts. Other questions, such as that of the bodies which had the power to bind States by unilateral acts, could be settled by reference to the 1969 Vienna Convention on the Law of Treaties [YUN 1969, p. 734].

Communication. On 12 July [A/59/140], Cuba transmitted its observations to ILC on the topic of unilateral acts of States, in response to General Assembly resolution 58/77 [YUN 2003, p. 1334].

Responsibility of international organizations

ILC considered the second report on the topic of responsibility of international organizations [A/CN.4/541] by Special Rapporteur Giorgio Gaja (Italy). The report proposed articles 4 to 7, relating to attribution of conduct, conduct of organs or agents, excess of authority and conduct acknowledged and adopted, which ILC referred to the Drafting Committee. On the Committee's recommendation, ILC adopted the four articles and the commentaries thereto.

ILC also had before it a June report [A/CN.4/545] submitted pursuant to General Assembly resolution 58/77 [YUN 2003, p. 1334], which contained information received from the UN Secretariat and ten international organizations concerning their practice relevant to the topic of responsibility of international organizations, including cases in which States members of such an organization might be regarded as responsible for the organization's actions.

Fragmentation of international law

In 2004, ILC reconstituted the study group established in 2002 [YUN 2002, p. 1304] on the topic of fragmentation of international law: difficulties arising from the diversification and expansion of international law. The group considered the preliminary report on the study on the functions and scope of the lex specialis rule and the question of self-contained regimes, as well as outlines on the study on the application of successive treaties relating to the same subject matter (article 30 of the 1969 Vienna Convention on the Law of Treaties); on the study concerning the modification of multilateral treaties between certain parties only (article 41 of the Vienna Convention); on the study on the interpretation of treaties in the light of "any relevant rules of international law applicable in relations between parties" (article 31 (3) (c) of the same Convention); and on the study on hierarchy in international law: jus cogens, obligations erga omnes, Article 103 of the Charter of the United Nations, as conflict rules.

Based on the studies it had considered, the group agreed to draw conclusions regarding the nature and consequences of the phenomenon of "fragmentation" of international law, with the intention of developing a collective document that would be submitted to ILC in 2006. The document would comprise a substantive study on fragmentation and a concise summary containing the proposed conclusions and, if appropriate, guidelines on how to deal with such fragmentation.

Shared natural resources

In March and April, ILC considered the second report on shared natural resources [A/CN.4/539 & Add.1] by Special Rapporteur Chusei Yamada (Japan). In view of the opinions expressed both in ILC and the Sixth Committee on the use of the term “shared resources”, which might refer to the common heritage of mankind or to the notion of shared ownership, the report focused on the sub-topic of transboundary groundwaters without using the term “shared”. The report contained several draft articles formulated to generate comments and more concrete proposals, and to identify additional areas to be addressed. ILC established an open-ended Working Group on Transboundary Groundwaters and agreed that a questionnaire, prepared by the Special Rapporteur, be circulated to Governments and relevant intergovernmental organizations seeking their views and information regarding groundwaters. In particular, ILC would welcome information on Governments’ practice that might be relevant to the principles to be incorporated in the draft articles, particularly on bilateral or regional practice relating to the allocation of groundwaters from transboundary aquifer systems, and to the management of non-renewable transboundary aquifer systems.

International State relations and international law

State succession

The Sixth Committee, on 28 October and 17 November, considered the item on nationality of natural persons in relation to the succession of States. For its consideration of the item, the Committee had before it a note by the Secretariat containing the comments and observations of nine Governments on the question of a convention on the nationality of natural persons in relation to the succession of States [A/59/180 & Add. 1, 2], submitted in response to General Assembly resolutions 54/112 [YUN 1999, p. 1230] and 55/153 [YUN 2000, p. 1242]. ILC, at its fifty-first session in 1999 [YUN 1999, p. 1230], had adopted draft articles on the item and recommended that they be adopted by the Assembly in the form of a declaration. Subsequently, the Assembly, in the resolutions mentioned above, invited Governments to submit comments and observations, with a view to considering the elaboration of such a convention at a future session.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 2 December [meeting 65], the Assembly, on the recommendation of the Sixth Committee [A/59/504], adopted resolution 59/34 without vote [agenda item 138].

Nationality of natural persons in relation to the succession of States

The General Assembly,

Having examined the item entitled “Nationality of natural persons in relation to the succession of States”,

Recalling its resolution 54/112 of 9 December 1999, in which it decided to consider at its fifty-fifth session the draft articles on nationality of natural persons in relation to the succession of States prepared by the International Law Commission,

Recalling also its resolution 55/153 of 12 December 2000, the annex to which contains the articles on nationality of natural persons in relation to the succession of States,

Taking into consideration the comments and observations of Governments and the discussion held in the Sixth Committee at the fifty-ninth session of the General Assembly on the question of nationality of natural persons in relation to the succession of States, in particular, to preventing the occurrence of statelessness as a result of a succession of States,

Taking note, in this regard, of the efforts made at the regional level towards the elaboration of a legal instrument on the avoidance of statelessness in relation to State succession,

1. Reiterates its invitation to Governments to take into account, as appropriate, the provisions of the articles contained in the annex to resolution 55/153, in dealing with issues of nationality of natural persons in relation to the succession of States;

2. Encourages States to consider, as appropriate, at the regional or subregional levels, the elaboration of legal instruments regulating questions of nationality of natural persons in relation to the succession of States, with a view, in particular, to preventing the occurrence of statelessness as a result of a succession of States;

3. Invites Governments to submit comments concerning the advisability of elaborating a legal instrument on the question of nationality of natural persons in relation to the succession of States, including the avoidance of statelessness as a result of a succession of States;

4. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its sixty-third session the item entitled “Nationality of natural persons in relation to the succession of States”.

State responsibility

Pursuant to General Assembly resolution 56/83 [YUN 2001, p. 1218], the item on responsibility of States for internationally wrongful acts was included in the provisional agenda of the Assembly’s fifty-ninth (2004) session. The item was considered and discussed by the Sixth Committee on 28 and 29 October and on 9 and 17 November.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 2 December [meeting 65], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Sixth Committee [A/59/505], adopted resolution 59/35 without vote [agenda item 139].

Responsibility of States for internationally wrongful acts

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 56/83 of 12 December 2001, the annex to which contains the text of the articles on responsibility of States for internationally wrongful acts,

Emphasizing the continuing importance of the codification and progressive development of international law, as referred to in Article 13, paragraph 1 (a), of the Charter of the United Nations,

Noting that the subject of responsibility of States for internationally wrongful acts is of major importance in relations between States,

1. Commends once again the articles on responsibility of States for internationally wrongful acts to the attention of Governments, without prejudice to the question of their future adoption or other appropriate action;

2. Requests the Secretary-General to invite Governments to submit their written comments on any future action regarding the articles;

3. Also requests the Secretary-General to prepare an initial compilation of decisions of international courts, tribunals and other bodies referring to the articles and to invite Governments to submit information on their practice in this regard, and further requests the Secretary-General to submit this material well in advance of its sixty-second session;

4. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its sixty-second session the item entitled "Responsibility of States for internationally wrongful acts".

Jurisdictional immunities of States and their property

In accordance with General Assembly resolution 58/74 [YUN 2003, p. 1337], the Ad Hoc Committee on Jurisdictional Immunities of States and Their Property, established by Assembly resolution 55/150 [YUN 2000, p. 1246], reconvened (New York, 1-5 March) to formulate a preamble and final clauses, with a view to completing a convention on jurisdictional immunities of States and their property.

The Working Group of the Whole proceeded with the formulation of a preamble and final clauses for a draft Convention, based on written and oral proposals submitted by delegations, as well as the suggestions of the Committee Chairman. The issues considered included the relationship between the draft articles and the understandings, as well as the provisions of the preamble and final clauses (relationship between the draft Convention and other international agreements; settlement of disputes; signature; ratification, acceptance, approval or accession; entry into force; denunciation; depositary and notifications; authentic texts; and reservations). The Working Group agreed on a preamble and final clauses, as well as the chapeau for the understandings regarding certain provisions of the draft Convention (annex I). It was also agreed that the draft should be entitled United Nations Convention on Jurisdictional Immunities of States and Their Property. The Working Group, while emphasizing the general understanding that the draft Convention did not cover criminal proceedings, noted that a more appropriate placement for that issue was in a General Assembly resolution.

On 5 March, the Ad Hoc Committee adopted its report [A/59/22], which contained the text of the draft Convention.

The Sixth Committee considered the item on the Convention on 25 and 26 October and on 5 and 9 November. On 25 October, the Chairman of the Ad Hoc Committee introduced the Committee's report and proposed some corrections to the draft Convention. He said that the Committee had based its work on the draft articles on jurisdictional immunities of States adopted by ILC in 1991 at its forty-third session [YUN 1991, p. 829], and on the discussions of an open-ended working group of the Sixth Committee established by resolution 53/98 [YUN 1998, p. 1215]. The draft Convention was therefore the culmination of 27 years of sometimes difficult work by ILC, the Sixth Committee and the Ad Hoc Committee. The drafting of the text had been possible only because several States belonging to different legal systems and regions had made considerable concessions and demonstrated great flexibility, which was not easy when domestic legislation was already in force. The Chairman, further noting that one of the issues raised was whether military activities were covered by the Convention, clarified that the general understanding had always prevailed that they were not. However, reference should be made to ILC's 1991 commentary on article 12, stating that "neither did the article affect the question of diplomatic immunities, as provided in article 3, nor did it apply to situations involving armed conflicts". In addition, according to the preamble, the rules of customary international law continued to govern matters not regulated by the provisions of the Convention. In fact, that was the general approach of the Convention: it did not apply where there was a special immunity regime, including immunities ratione personae (lex specialis).

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 2 December [meeting 65], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Sixth Committee [A/59/508], adopted resolution 59/38 without vote [agenda item 142].

United Nations Convention on Jurisdictional Immunities of States and Their Property

The General Assembly,

Bearing in mind Article 13, paragraph 1 (a), of the Charter of the United Nations,

Recalling its resolution 32/151 of 19 December 1977, in which it recommended that the International Law Commission take up the study of the law of jurisdictional immunities of States and their property with a view to its progressive development and codification, and its subsequent resolutions 46/55 of 9 December 1991, 49/61 of 9 December 1994, 52/151 of 15 December 1997, 54/101 of 9 December 1999, 55/150 of 12 December 2000, 56/78 of 12 December 2001, 57/16 of 19 November 2002 and 58/74 of 9 December 2003,

Recalling also that the International Law Commission submitted a final set of draft articles, with commentaries, on the law of jurisdictional immunities of States and their property in chapter II of its report on the work of its forty-third session,

Recalling further the reports of the open-ended Working Group of the Sixth Committee, as well as the report of the Working Group on Jurisdictional Immunities of States and Their Property of the International Law Commission, submitted in accordance with General Assembly resolution 53/98 of 8 December 1998,

Recalling that in its resolution 55/150 it decided to establish the Ad Hoc Committee on Jurisdictional Immunities of States and Their Property, open also to participation by States members of the specialized agencies, to further the work done, consolidate areas of agreement and resolve outstanding issues with a view to elaborating a generally acceptable instrument based on the draft articles on jurisdictional immunities of States and their property adopted by the International Law Commission and also on the discussions of the open-ended Working Group of the Sixth Committee,

Having considered the report of the Ad Hoc Committee on Jurisdictional Immunities of States and Their Property,

Stressing the importance of uniformity and clarity in the law of jurisdictional immunities of States and their property, and emphasizing the role of a convention in this regard,

Noting the broad support for the conclusion of a convention on jurisdictional immunities of States and their property,

Taking into account the statement of the Chairman of the Ad Hoc Committee introducing the report of the Ad Hoc Committee,

1. Expresses its deep appreciation to the International Law Commission and the Ad Hoc Committee on Jurisdictional Immunities of States and Their Property for their valuable work on the law of jurisdictional immunities of States and their property;

2. Agrees with the general understanding reached in the Ad Hoc Committee that the United Nations Convention on Jurisdictional Immunities of States and Their Property does not cover criminal proceedings;

3. Adopts the United Nations Convention on Jurisdictional Immunities of States and Their Property, which is contained in the annex to the present resolution, and requests the Secretary-General as depositary to open it for signature;

4. Invites States to become parties to the Convention.

Annex

United Nations Convention on Jurisdictional Immunities of States and Their Property

The States Parties to the present Convention,

Considering that the jurisdictional immunities of States and their property are generally accepted as a principle of customary international law,

Having in mind the principles of international law embodied in the Charter of the United Nations,

Believing that an international convention on the jurisdictional immunities of States and their property would enhance the rule of law and legal certainty, particularly in dealings of States with natural or juridical persons, and would contribute to the codification and development of international law and the harmonization of practice in this area,

Taking into account developments in State practice with regard to the jurisdictional immunities of States and their property,

Affirming that the rules of customary international law continue to govern matters not regulated by the provisions of the present Convention,

Have agreed as follows:

Part I

Introduction

Article 1

Scope of the present Convention

The present Convention applies to the immunity of a State and its property from the jurisdiction of the courts of another State.

Article 2

Use of terms

1. For the purposes of the present Convention:

(a) "court" means any organ of a State, however named, entitled to exercise judicial functions;

(b) "State" means:

(i) the State and its various organs of government;

(ii) constituent units of a federal State or political subdivisions of the State, which are entitled to perform acts in the exercise of sovereign authority, and are acting in that capacity;

(iii) agencies or instrumentalities of the State or other entities, to the extent that they are entitled to perform and are actually performing acts in the exercise of sovereign authority of the State;

(iv) representatives of the State acting in that capacity;

(c) "commercial transaction" means:

(i) any commercial contract or transaction for the sale of goods or supply of services;

(ii) any contract for a loan or other transaction of a financial nature, including any obligation of guarantee or of indemnity in respect of any such loan or transaction;

(iii) any other contract or transaction of a commercial, industrial, trading or professional nature, but not including a contract of employment of persons.

2. In determining whether a contract or transaction is a "commercial transaction" under paragraph 1 (c), reference should be made primarily to the nature of the contract or transaction, but its purpose should also be taken into account if the parties to the contract or transaction have so agreed, or if, in the practice of the State of the forum, that purpose is relevant to determining the non-commercial character of the contract or transaction.

3. The provisions of paragraphs 1 and 2 regarding the use of terms in the present Convention are without prejudice to the use of those terms or to the meanings which may be given to them in other international instruments or in the internal law of any State.

Article 3

Privileges and immunities not affected by the present Convention

1. The present Convention is without prejudice to the privileges and immunities enjoyed by a State under international law in relation to the exercise of the functions of:

(a) its diplomatic missions, consular posts, special missions, missions to international organizations or delegations to organs of international organizations or to international conferences; and

(b) persons connected with them.

2. The present Convention is without prejudice to privileges and immunities accorded under international law to Heads of State ratione personae.

3. The present Convention is without prejudice to the immunities enjoyed by a State under international law with respect to aircraft or space objects owned or operated by a State.

Article 4

Non-retroactivity of the present Convention

Without prejudice to the application of any rules set forth in the present Convention to which jurisdictional immunities of States and their property are subject under international law independently of the present Convention, the present Convention shall not apply to any question of jurisdictional immunities of States or their property arising in a proceeding instituted against a State before a court of another State prior to the entry into force of the present Convention for the States concerned.

Part II

General principles

Article 5

State immunity

A State enjoys immunity, in respect of itself and its property, from the jurisdiction of the courts of another State subject to the provisions of the present Convention.

Article 6

Modalities for giving effect to State immunity

1. A State shall give effect to State immunity under article 5 by refraining from exercising jurisdiction in a proceeding before its courts against another State and to that end shall ensure that its courts determine on their own initiative that the immunity of that other State under article 5 is respected.

2. A proceeding before a court of a State shall be considered to have been instituted against another State if that other State:

(a) is named as a party to that proceeding; or

(b) is not named as a party to the proceeding but the proceeding in effect seeks to affect the property, rights, interests or activities of that other State.

Article 7

Express consent to exercise of jurisdiction

1. A State cannot invoke immunity from jurisdiction in a proceeding before a court of another State with regard to a matter or case if it has expressly consented to the exercise of jurisdiction by the court with regard to the matter or case:

(a) by international agreement;

(b) in a written contract; or

(c) by a declaration before the court or by a written communication in a specific proceeding.

2. Agreement by a State for the application of the law of another State shall not be interpreted as consent to the exercise of jurisdiction by the courts of that other State.

Article 8

Effect of participation in a proceeding before a court

1. A State cannot invoke immunity from jurisdiction in a proceeding before a court of another State if it has:

(a) itself instituted the proceeding; or

(b) intervened in the proceeding or taken any other step relating to the merits. However, if the State satisfies the court that it could not have acquired knowledge of facts on which a claim to immunity can be based until after it took such a step, it can claim immunity based on those facts, provided it does so at the earliest possible moment.

2. A State shall not be considered to have consented to the exercise of jurisdiction by a court of another State if it intervenes in a proceeding or takes any other step for the sole purpose of:

(a) invoking immunity; or

(b) asserting a right or interest in property at issue in the proceeding.

3. The appearance of a representative of a State before a court of another State as a witness shall not be interpreted as consent by the former State to the exercise of jurisdiction by the court.

4. Failure on the part of a State to enter an appearance in a proceeding before a court of another State shall not be interpreted as consent by the former State to the exercise of jurisdiction by the court.

Article 9

Counterclaims

1. A State instituting a proceeding before a court of another State cannot invoke immunity from the jurisdiction of the court in respect of any counterclaim arising out of the same legal relationship or facts as the principal claim.

2. A State intervening to present a claim in a proceeding before a court of another State cannot invoke immunity from the jurisdiction of the court in respect of any counterclaim arising out of the same legal relationship or facts as the claim presented by the State.

3. A State making a counterclaim in a proceeding instituted against it before a court of another State cannot invoke immunity from the jurisdiction of the court in respect of the principal claim.

Part III
Proceedings in which State immunity cannot be invoked

Article 10

Commercial transactions

1. If a State engages in a commercial transaction with a foreign natural or juridical person and, by virtue of the applicable rules of private international law, differences relating to the commercial transaction fall within the jurisdiction of a court of another State, the State cannot invoke immunity from that jurisdiction in a proceeding arising out of that commercial transaction.
2. Paragraph 1 does not apply:
 - (a) in the case of a commercial transaction between States; or
 - (b) if the parties to the commercial transaction have expressly agreed otherwise.
3. Where a State enterprise or other entity established by a State which has an independent legal personality and is capable of:
 - (a) suing or being sued; and
 - (b) acquiring, owning or possessing and disposing of property, including property which that State has authorized it to operate or manage, is involved in a proceeding which relates to a commercial transaction in which that entity is engaged, the immunity from jurisdiction enjoyed by that State shall not be affected.

Article 11

Contracts of employment

1. Unless otherwise agreed between the States concerned, a State cannot invoke immunity from jurisdiction before a court of another State which is otherwise competent in a proceeding which relates to a contract of employment between the State and an individual for work performed or to be performed, in whole or in part, in the territory of that other State.
2. Paragraph 1 does not apply if:
 - (a) the employee has been recruited to perform particular functions in the exercise of governmental authority;
 - (b) the employee is:
 - (i) a diplomatic agent, as defined in the Vienna Convention on Diplomatic Relations of 1961;
 - (ii) a consular officer, as defined in the Vienna Convention on Consular Relations of 1963;
 - (iii) a member of the diplomatic staff of a permanent mission to an international organization or of a special mission, or is recruited to represent a State at an international conference; or
 - (iv) any other person enjoying diplomatic immunity;
 - (c) the subject-matter of the proceeding is the recruitment, renewal of employment or reinstatement of an individual;
 - (d) the subject-matter of the proceeding is the dismissal or termination of employment of an individual and, as determined by the Head of State, the Head of Government or the Minister for Foreign Affairs of the employer State, such a proceeding would interfere with the security interests of that State;
 - (e) the employee is a national of the employer State at the time when the proceeding is instituted, unless this person has the permanent residence in the State of the forum; or
 - (f) the employer State and the employee have otherwise agreed in writing, subject to any considerations of public policy conferring on the courts of the State of the forum exclusive jurisdiction by reason of the subject-matter of the proceeding.

Article 12

Personal injuries and damage to property

Unless otherwise agreed between the States concerned, a State cannot invoke immunity from jurisdiction before a court of another State which is otherwise competent in a proceeding which relates to pecuniary compensation for death or injury to the person, or damage to or loss of tangible property, caused by an act or omission which is alleged to be attributable to the State, if the act or omission occurred in whole or in part in the territory of that other State and if the author of the act or omission was present in that territory at the time of the act or omission.

Ownership, possession and use of property

Unless otherwise agreed between the States concerned, a State cannot invoke immunity from jurisdiction before a court of another State which is otherwise competent in a proceeding which relates to the determination of:

- (a) any right or interest of the State in, or its possession or use of, or any obligation of the State arising out of its interest in, or its possession or use of, immovable property situated in the State of the forum;
- (b) any right or interest of the State in movable or immovable property arising by way of succession, gift or bona vacantia; or
- (c) any right or interest of the State in the administration of property, such as trust property, the estate of a bankrupt or the property of a company in the event of its winding up.

Article 14

Intellectual and industrial property

Unless otherwise agreed between the States concerned, a State cannot invoke immunity from jurisdiction before a court of another State which is otherwise competent in a proceeding which relates to:

- (a) the determination of any right of the State in a patent, industrial design, trade name or business name, trademark, copyright or any other form of intellectual or industrial property which enjoys a measure of legal protection, even if provisional, in the State of the forum; or
- (b) an alleged infringement by the State, in the territory of the State of the forum, of a right of the nature mentioned in subparagraph (a) which belongs to a third person and is protected in the State of the forum.

Participation in companies or other collective bodies

1. A State cannot invoke immunity from jurisdiction before a court of another State which is otherwise competent in a proceeding which relates to its participation in a company or other collective body, whether incorporated or unincorporated, being a proceeding concerning the relationship between the State and the body or the other participants therein, provided that the body:

- (a) has participants other than States or international organizations; and
- (b) is incorporated or constituted under the law of the State of the forum or has its seat or principal place of business in that State.

2. A State can, however, invoke immunity from jurisdiction in such a proceeding if the States concerned have so agreed or if the parties to the dispute have so provided by an agreement in writing or if the instrument establishing or regulating the body in question contains provisions to that effect.

Article 16

Ships owned or operated by a State

1. Unless otherwise agreed between the States concerned, a State which owns or operates a ship cannot invoke immunity from jurisdiction before a court of another State which is otherwise competent in a proceeding which relates to the operation of that ship if, at the time the cause of action arose, the ship was used for other than government non-commercial purposes.

2. Paragraph 1 does not apply to warships, or naval auxiliaries, nor does it apply to other vessels owned or operated by a State and used, for the time being, only on government non-commercial service.

3. Unless otherwise agreed between the States concerned, a State cannot invoke immunity from jurisdiction before a court of another State which is otherwise competent in a proceeding which relates to the carriage of cargo on board a ship owned or operated by that State if, at the time the cause of action arose, the ship was used for other than government non-commercial purposes.

4. Paragraph 3 does not apply to any cargo carried on board the ships referred to in paragraph 2, nor does it apply to any cargo owned by a State and used or intended for use exclusively for government non-commercial purposes.

5. States may plead all measures of defence, prescription and limitation of liability which are available to private ships and cargoes and their owners.

6. If in a proceeding there arises a question relating to the government and non-commercial character of a ship owned or operated by a State or cargo owned by a State, a certificate signed by a diplomatic representative or other competent authority of that State and communicated to the court shall serve as evidence of the character of that ship or cargo.

Effect of an arbitration agreement

If a State enters into an agreement in writing with a foreign natural or juridical person to submit to arbitration differences relating to a commercial transaction, that State cannot invoke immunity from jurisdiction before a court of another State which is otherwise competent in a proceeding which relates to:

- (a) the validity, interpretation or application of the arbitration agreement;
- (b) the arbitration procedure; or
- (c) the confirmation or the setting aside of the award, unless the arbitration agreement otherwise provides.

Part IV

State immunity from measures of constraint in connection with proceedings before a court

Article 18

State immunity from pre-judgment measures of constraint

No pre-judgment measures of constraint, such as attachment or arrest, against property of a State may be taken in connection with a proceeding before a court of another State unless and except to the extent that:

- (a) the State has expressly consented to the taking of such measures as indicated:
 - (i) by international agreement;
 - (ii) by an arbitration agreement or in a written contract; or
 - (iii) by a declaration before the court or by a written communication after a dispute between the parties has arisen; or
- (b) the State has allocated or earmarked property for the satisfaction of the claim which is the object of that proceeding.

Article 19

State immunity from post-judgment measures of constraint

No post-judgment measures of constraint, such as attachment, arrest or execution, against property of a State may be taken in connection with a proceeding before a court of another State unless and except to the extent that:

- (a) the State has expressly consented to the taking of such measures as indicated:
 - (i) by international agreement;
 - (ii) by an arbitration agreement or in a written contract; or
 - (iii) by a declaration before the court or by a written communication after a dispute between the parties has arisen; or
- (b) the State has allocated or earmarked property for the satisfaction of the claim which is the object of that proceeding; or
- (c) it has been established that the property is specifically in use or intended for use by the State for other than government non-commercial purposes and is in the territory of the State of the forum, provided that post-judgment measures of constraint may only be taken against property that has a connection with the entity against which the proceeding was directed.

Article 20

Effect of consent to jurisdiction to measures of constraint

Where consent to the measures of constraint is required under articles 18 and 19, consent to the exercise of jurisdiction under article 7 shall not imply consent to the taking of measures of constraint.

Article 21

Specific categories of property

1. The following categories, in particular, of property of a State shall not be considered as property specifically in use or intended for use by the State for other than government non-commercial purposes under article 19, subparagraph (c):

- (a) property, including any bank account, which is used or intended for use in the performance of the functions of the diplomatic mission of the State or its consular posts, special missions, missions to international organizations or delegations to organs of international organizations or to international conferences;
- (b) property of a military character or used or intended for use in the performance of military functions;
- (c) property of the central bank or other monetary authority of the State;

(d) property forming part of the cultural heritage of the State or part of its archives and not placed or intended to be placed on sale;

(e) property forming part of an exhibition of objects of scientific, cultural or historical interest and not placed or intended to be placed on sale.

2. Paragraph 1 is without prejudice to article 18 and article 19, subparagraphs (a) and (b).

Part V

Miscellaneous provisions

Article 22

Service of process

1. Service of process by writ or other document instituting a proceeding against a State shall be effected:

(a) in accordance with any applicable international convention binding on the State of the forum and the State concerned; or

(b) in accordance with any special arrangement for service between the claimant and the State concerned, if not precluded by the law of the State of the forum; or

(c) in the absence of such a convention or special arrangement:

(i) by transmission through diplomatic channels to the Ministry of Foreign Affairs of the State concerned; or

(ii) by any other means accepted by the State concerned, if not precluded by the law of the State of the forum.

2. Service of process referred to in paragraph 1 (c) (i) is deemed to have been effected by receipt of the documents by the Ministry of Foreign Affairs.

3. These documents shall be accompanied, if necessary, by a translation into the official language, or one of the official languages, of the State concerned.

4. Any State that enters an appearance on the merits in a proceeding instituted against it may not thereafter assert that service of process did not comply with the provisions of paragraphs 1 and 3.

Article 23

Default judgment

1. A default judgment shall not be rendered against a State unless the court has found that:

(a) the requirements laid down in article 22, paragraphs 1 and 3, have been complied with;

(b) a period of not less than four months has expired from the date on which the service of the writ or other document instituting a proceeding has been effected or deemed to have been effected in accordance with article 22, paragraphs 1 and 2; and

(c) the present Convention does not preclude it from exercising jurisdiction.

2. A copy of any default judgment rendered against a State, accompanied if necessary by a translation into the official language or one of the official languages of the State concerned, shall be transmitted to it through one of the means specified in article 22, paragraph 1, and in accordance with the provisions of that paragraph.

3. The time-limit for applying to have a default judgment set aside shall not be less than four months and shall begin to run from the date on which the copy of the judgment is received or is deemed to have been received by the State concerned.

Privileges and immunities during court proceedings

1. Any failure or refusal by a State to comply with an order of a court of another State enjoining it to perform or refrain from performing a specific act or to produce any document or disclose any other information for the purposes of a proceeding shall entail no consequences other than those which may result from such conduct in relation to the merits of the case. In particular, no fine or penalty shall be imposed on the State by reason of such failure or refusal.

2. A State shall not be required to provide any security, bond or deposit, however described, to guarantee the payment of judicial costs or expenses in any proceeding to which it is a respondent party before a court of another State.

Part VI

Final clauses

Article 25

Annex

The annex to the present Convention forms an integral part of the Convention.

Article 26

Other international agreements

Nothing in the present Convention shall affect the rights and obligations of States Parties under existing international agreements which relate to matters dealt with in the present Convention as between the parties to those agreements.

Article 27

Settlement of disputes

1. States Parties shall endeavour to settle disputes concerning the interpretation or application of the present Convention through negotiation.

2. Any dispute between two or more States Parties concerning the interpretation or application of the present Convention which cannot be settled through negotiation within six months shall, at the request of any of those States Parties, be submitted to arbitration. If, six months after the date of the request for arbitration, those States Parties are unable to agree on the organization of the arbitration, any of those States Parties may refer the dispute to the International Court of Justice by request in accordance with the Statute of the Court.

3. Each State Party may, at the time of signature, ratification, acceptance or approval of, or accession to, the present Convention, declare that it does not consider itself bound by paragraph 2. The other States Parties shall not be bound by paragraph 2 with respect to any State Party which has made such a declaration.

4. Any State Party that has made a declaration in accordance with paragraph 3 may at any time withdraw that declaration by notification to the Secretary-General of the United Nations.

Article 28

Signature

The present Convention shall be open for signature by all States until 17 January 2007, at United Nations Headquarters, New York.

Article 29Ratification, acceptance, approval or accession

1. The present Convention shall be subject to ratification, acceptance or approval.
2. The present Convention shall remain open for accession by any State.
3. The instruments of ratification, acceptance, approval or accession shall be deposited with the Secretary-General of the United Nations.

Article 30Entry into force

1. The present Convention shall enter into force on the thirtieth day following the date of deposit of the thirtieth instrument of ratification, acceptance, approval or accession with the Secretary-General of the United Nations.
2. For each State ratifying, accepting, approving or acceding to the present Convention after the deposit of the thirtieth instrument of ratification, acceptance, approval or accession, the Convention shall enter into force on the thirtieth day after the deposit by such State of its instrument of ratification, acceptance, approval or accession.

Article 31Denunciation

1. Any State Party may denounce the present Convention by written notification to the Secretary-General of the United Nations.
2. Denunciation shall take effect one year following the date on which notification is received by the Secretary-General of the United Nations. The present Convention shall, however, continue to apply to any question of jurisdictional immunities of States or their property arising in a proceeding instituted against a State before a court of another State prior to the date on which the denunciation takes effect for any of the States concerned.
3. The denunciation shall not in any way affect the duty of any State Party to fulfil any obligation embodied in the present Convention to which it would be subject under international law independently of the present Convention.

Article 32Depositary and notifications

1. The Secretary-General of the United Nations is designated the depositary of the present Convention.
2. As depositary of the present Convention, the Secretary-General of the United Nations shall inform all States of the following:
 - (a) signatures of the present Convention and the deposit of instruments of ratification, acceptance, approval or accession or notifications of denunciation, in accordance with articles 29 and 31;
 - (b) the date on which the present Convention will enter into force, in accordance with article 30;
 - (c) any acts, notifications or communications relating to the present Convention.

Article 33Authentic texts

The Arabic, Chinese, English, French, Russian and Spanish texts of the present Convention are equally authentic.

IN WITNESS WHEREOF, the undersigned, being duly authorized thereto by their respective Governments, have signed this Convention opened for signature at United Nations Headquarters in New York on 17 January 2005.

Annex to the ConventionUnderstandings with respect to certain provisions of the Convention

The present annex is for the purpose of setting out understandings relating to the provisions concerned.

With respect to article 10

The term “immunity” in article 10 is to be understood in the context of the present Convention as a whole.

Article 10, paragraph 3, does not prejudice the question of “piercing the corporate veil”, questions relating to a situation where a State entity has deliberately misrepresented its financial position or subsequently reduced its assets to avoid satisfying a claim, or other related issues.

With respect to article 11

The reference in article 11, paragraph 2 (d), to the “security interests” of the employer State is intended primarily to address matters of national security and the security of diplomatic missions and consular posts.

Under article 41 of the 1961 Vienna Convention on Diplomatic Relations and article 55 of the 1963 Vienna Convention on Consular Relations, all persons referred to in those articles have the duty to respect the laws and regulations, including labour laws, of the host country. At the same time, under article 38 of the 1961 Vienna Convention on Diplomatic Relations and article 71 of the 1963 Vienna Convention on Consular Relations, the receiving State has a duty to exercise its jurisdiction in such a manner as not to interfere unduly with the performance of the functions of the mission or the consular post.

With respect to articles 13 and 14

The expression “determination” is used to refer not only to the ascertainment or verification of the existence of the rights protected, but also to the evaluation or assessment of the substance, including content, scope and extent, of such rights.

With respect to article 17

The expression “commercial transaction” includes investment matters.

With respect to article 19

The expression “entity” in subparagraph (c) means the State as an independent legal personality, a constituent unit of a federal State, a subdivision of a State, an agency or instrumentality of a State or other entity, which enjoys independent legal personality.

The words “property that has a connection with the entity” in subparagraph (c) are to be understood as broader than ownership or possession.

Article 19 does not prejudice the question of “piercing the corporate veil”, questions relating to a situation where a State entity has deliberately misrepresented its financial position or subsequently reduced its assets to avoid satisfying a claim, or other related issues.

International terrorism

Conventions on international terrorism and for suppression of acts of nuclear terrorism

Ad Hoc Committee

In accordance with General Assembly resolution 58/81 [YUN 2003, p. 1339], the Ad Hoc Committee on the convention for suppression of nuclear terrorism, established by Assembly resolution 51/210 [YUN 1996, p. 1208], held its eighth session (New York, 28 June–2 July) to continue, within the framework of a working group of the Sixth Committee, to elaborate a draft comprehensive convention on international terrorism, with appropriate time allocated to the continued consideration of outstanding issues relating to the elaboration of a draft international convention for the suppression of acts of nuclear terrorism. It kept on its agenda the question of convening a high-level conference under UN auspices to formulate a joint organized response of the international community to terrorism in all its forms and manifestations.

The Ad Hoc Committee held a general exchange of views on issues within its mandate and proceeded with informal consultations regarding the draft comprehensive convention on international terrorism and on outstanding issues pertaining to articles 18 and 2 bis of the draft international convention for the suppression of acts of nuclear terrorism. The Chairman informed the Committee that, although some delegations had informal contacts on the question of convening a high-level conference under the auspices of the United Nations to formulate a joint organized response of the international community to terrorism in all its forms and manifestations, no specific proposals on the issue were set forth. The Chairman also informed the Committee that the Bureau had prepared a text of the draft international convention for the suppression of acts of nuclear terrorism, in order to facilitate discussion on the matter.

On 2 July, the Ad Hoc Committee adopted its report [A/59/37], to which were annexed the Chairman's informal summary of the general discussion, the coordinators' reports and amendments and proposals submitted to the Committee in connection with the draft international convention for the suppression of acts of nuclear terrorism. The Ad Hoc Committee recommended that the Sixth Committee, at the Assembly's fifty-ninth (2004) session, establish a working group to continue the elaboration of the two draft conventions and to keep on its agenda the question of convening a high-level conference.

Sixth Committee working group

As recommended by the Ad Hoc Committee (see above), the Sixth Committee established an open-ended working group on measures to eliminate international terrorism, which held two meetings (New York, 5 and 8 October). Before it were the reports of the Ad Hoc Committee on its sixth [YUN 2002, p. 1306], seventh [YUN 2003, p. 1338] and eighth sessions (see above); the 1998 report of the Sixth Committee working group [YUN 1998, p. 1216], as well as the 2000 [YUN 2000, p. 1248], 2001 [YUN 2001, p. 1225], 2002 [YUN 2002, p. 1307] and 2003 [YUN 2003, p. 1338] reports.

The working group held informal consultations on outstanding issues on the two draft conventions, and on 8 October, the coordinators orally reported on the results of those consultations. The working group was informed by its Chairman that several delegations had indicated that consultations on the question of convening a high-level conference were continuing at the political level in their capitals. Also on 8 October, the group adopted its report [A/C.6/59/L.10], which it referred to the Sixth Committee with a recommendation that work on finalizing the texts of the two draft conventions continue, building on what had already been accomplished.

Measures to eliminate terrorism

In accordance with General Assembly resolution 50/53 [YUN 1995, p. 1330], the Secretary-General, in August, issued his annual report [A/59/210 & Corr.1] containing information on measures taken at the national and international levels by 20 States and 8 UN system entities to implement the 1994 Declaration on Measures to Eliminate International Terrorism, approved by Assembly resolution 49/60 [YUN 1994, p. 1294] and Security Council resolution 1269(1999) [YUN 1999, p. 1240]. It listed 22 international instruments pertaining to terrorism, indicating the status of State participation in each, and also provided information on workshops and training courses on combating terrorism by three UN bodies. The report noted that the Secretariat had prepared the material to be published in the second volume of the United Nations Legislative Series entitled "National Law and regulations on the Prevention and Suppression of International Terrorism, Part II".

Further measures

In other action, the Commission on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice, at its thirteenth session (11–20 May) [E/2004/30], recommended to the Economic and Social Council for approval a draft resolution for adoption by the General Assembly entitled "Strengthening international cooperation and technical assistance in promoting the implementation of the universal conventions and protocols related to terrorism within the framework of the activities of the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime". The resolution was approved on 21 July by the Council as resolution 2004/19 (see p. 1125) and adopted on 20 December by the Assembly as resolution 59/153 (see p. 1125).

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 2 December [meeting 65], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Sixth Committee [A/59/514], adopted resolution 59/46 without vote [agenda item 148].

Measures to eliminate international terrorism

The General Assembly,

Guided by the purposes and principles of the Charter of the United Nations,

Recalling the Declaration on the Occasion of the Fiftieth Anniversary of the United Nations,

Recalling also the United Nations Millennium Declaration,

Recalling further the Declaration on Measures to Eliminate International Terrorism, contained in the annex to General Assembly resolution 49/60 of 9 December 1994, and welcoming the celebration this year of the tenth anniversary of its adoption, and recalling the Declaration to Supplement the 1994 Declaration on Measures to Eliminate International Terrorism, contained in the annex to resolution 51/210 of 17 December 1996,

Recalling all General Assembly and Security Council resolutions on measures to eliminate international terrorism,

Convinced of the importance of the consideration of measures to eliminate international terrorism by the General Assembly as the universal organ having competence to do so,

Deeply disturbed by the persistence of terrorist acts, which have been carried out worldwide,

Reaffirming its strong condemnation of the heinous acts of terrorism that have caused enormous loss of human life, destruction and damage, including those which prompted the adoption of General Assembly resolution 56/1 of 12 September 2001, as well as Security Council resolutions 1368(2001) of 12 September 2001, 1373(2001) of 28 September 2001 and 1377(2001) of 12 November 2001, and those that have occurred since the adoption of General Assembly resolution 58/81 of 9 December 2003,

Recalling the strong condemnation of the atrocious and deliberate attack against the headquarters of the United Nations Assistance Mission for Iraq in Baghdad on 19 August 2003 in General Assembly resolution 57/338 of 15 September 2003 and Security Council resolution 1502(2003) of 26 August 2003,

Affirming that States must ensure that any measure taken to combat terrorism complies with all their obligations under international law and should adopt such measures in accordance with international law, in particular international human rights, refugee and humanitarian law,

Stressing the need to strengthen further international cooperation among States and among international organizations and agencies, regional organizations and arrangements and the United Nations in order to prevent, combat and eliminate terrorism in all its forms and manifestations, wherever and by whomsoever committed, in accordance with the principles of the Charter, international law and the relevant international conventions,

Noting the role of the Security Council Committee established pursuant to resolution 1373(2001) concerning counter-terrorism in monitoring the implementation of that resolution, including the taking of the necessary financial, legal and technical measures by States and the ratification or acceptance of the relevant international conventions and protocols,

Mindful of the need to enhance the role of the United Nations and the relevant specialized agencies in combating international terrorism, and of the proposals of the Secretary-General to enhance the role of the Organization in this respect,

Mindful also of the essential need to strengthen international, regional and subregional cooperation aimed at enhancing the national capacity of States to prevent and suppress effectively international terrorism in all its forms and manifestations,

Reiterating its call upon States to review urgently the scope of the existing international legal provisions on the prevention, repression and elimination of terrorism in all its forms and manifestations, with the aim of ensuring that there is a comprehensive legal framework covering all aspects of the matter,

Emphasizing that tolerance and the enhancement of dialogue among civilizations are among the most important elements in promoting cooperation and success in combating terrorism,

Reaffirming that no terrorist act can be justified in any circumstances,

Taking note of the Final Document of the Thirteenth Conference of Heads of State or Government of Non-Aligned Countries, adopted in Kuala Lumpur on 25 February 2003, which reiterated the collective position of the Movement of Non-Aligned Countries on terrorism and reaffirmed the previous initiative of the Twelfth Conference of Heads of State or Government of Non-Aligned Countries, held in Durban, South Africa, from 29 August to 3 September 1998, calling for an international summit conference under the auspices of the United Nations to formulate a joint organized response of the international community to terrorism in all its forms and manifestations, as well as other relevant initiatives,

Bearing in mind the recent developments and initiatives at the international, regional and subregional levels to prevent and suppress international terrorism, including those identified in the annex to the present resolution,

Recalling its decision in resolutions 54/110 of 9 December 1999, 55/158 of 12 December 2000, 56/88 of 12 December 2001, 57/27 of 19 November 2002 and 58/81 that the Ad Hoc Committee established by General Assembly resolution 51/210 of 17 December 1996 should address, and keep on its agenda, the question of convening a high-level conference under the auspices of the United Nations to formulate a joint organized response of the international community to terrorism in all its forms and manifestations,

Aware of its resolutions 57/219 of 18 December 2002 and 58/187 of 22 December 2003,

Noting regional efforts to prevent, combat and eliminate terrorism in all its forms and manifestations, wherever and by whomsoever committed, including through the elaboration of and adherence to regional conventions,

Having examined the report of the Secretary-General, the report of the Ad Hoc Committee established by resolution 51/210 and the report of the Working Group of the Sixth Committee established pursuant to resolution 58/81,

1. Strongly condemns all acts, methods and practices of terrorism in all its forms and manifestations as criminal and unjustifiable, wherever and by whomsoever committed;

2. Reiterates that criminal acts intended or calculated to provoke a state of terror in the general public, a group of persons or particular persons for political purposes are in any circumstances unjustifiable, whatever the considerations of a political, philosophical, ideological, racial, ethnic, religious or other nature that may be invoked to justify them;

3. Reiterates its call upon all States to adopt further measures in accordance with the Charter of the United Nations and the relevant provisions of international law, including international standards of human rights, to prevent terrorism and to strengthen international cooperation in combating terrorism and, to that end, to consider in particular the implementation of the measures set out in paragraphs 3 (a) to (f) of resolution 51/210;

4. Also reiterates its call upon all States, with the aim of enhancing the efficient implementation of relevant legal instruments, to intensify, as and where appropriate, the exchange of information on facts related to terrorism and, in so doing, to avoid the dissemination of inaccurate or unverified information;

5. Reiterates its call upon States to refrain from financing, encouraging, providing training for or otherwise supporting terrorist activities;

6. Urges States to ensure that their nationals or other persons and entities within their territory that willfully provide or collect funds for the benefit of persons or entities who commit, or attempt to commit, facilitate or participate in the commission of terrorist acts are punished by penalties consistent with the grave nature of such acts;

7. Reminds States of their obligations under relevant international conventions and protocols and Security Council resolutions, including Security Council resolution 1373(2001), to ensure that perpetrators of terrorist acts are brought to justice;

8. Reaffirms that international cooperation as well as actions by States to combat terrorism should be conducted in conformity with the principles of the Charter, international law and relevant international conventions;

9. Urges all States that have not yet done so to consider, as a matter of priority, and in accordance with Security Council resolutions 1373(2001), and 1566 (2004) of 8 October 2004, becoming parties to the relevant conventions and protocols as referred to in paragraph 6 of General Assembly resolution 51/210, as well as the International Convention for the Suppression of Terrorist Bombings and the International Convention for the Suppression of the Financing of Terrorism, and calls upon all States to enact, as appropriate, the domestic legislation necessary to implement the provisions of those conventions and protocols, to ensure that the jurisdiction of their courts enables them to bring to trial the perpetrators of terrorist acts, and to cooperate with and provide support and assistance to other States and relevant international and regional organizations to that end;

10. Urges States to cooperate with the Secretary-General and with one another, as well as with interested intergovernmental organizations, with a view to ensuring, where appropriate within existing mandates, that technical and other expert advice is provided to those States requiring and requesting assistance in becoming parties to and implementing the conventions and protocols referred to in paragraph 9 above;

11. Notes with appreciation and satisfaction that, consistent with the call contained in paragraph 7 of resolution 58/81, a number of States became parties to the relevant conventions and protocols referred to therein, thereby realizing the objective of wider acceptance and implementation of those conventions;

12. Reaffirms the Declaration on Measures to Eliminate International Terrorism and the Declaration to Supplement the 1994 Declaration on Measures to Eliminate International Terrorism, and calls upon all States to implement them;

13. Calls upon all States to cooperate to prevent and suppress terrorist acts;

14. Urges all States and the Secretary-General, in their efforts to prevent international terrorism, to make the best use of the existing institutions of the United Nations;

15. Welcomes the continuing efforts of the Terrorism Prevention Branch of the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime in Vienna, after reviewing existing possibilities within the United Nations system, to enhance, through its mandate, the capabilities of the United Nations in the prevention of terrorism, and recognizes, in the context of Security Council resolution 1373(2001), its role in assisting States in becoming parties to and implementing the relevant international conventions and protocols relating to terrorism;

16. Invites regional intergovernmental organizations to submit to the Secretary-General information on the measures they have adopted at the regional level to eliminate international terrorism, as well as on intergovernmental meetings held by those organizations;

17. Notes the progress attained in the elaboration of the draft comprehensive convention on international terrorism and the draft international convention for the suppression of acts of nuclear terrorism during the meetings of the Ad Hoc Committee established by General Assembly resolution 51/210 of 17 December 1996 and the Working Group of the Sixth Committee established pursuant to General Assembly resolution 58/81;

18. Decides that the Ad Hoc Committee shall, on an expedited basis, continue to elaborate the draft comprehensive convention on international terrorism and to resolve the outstanding issues relating to the elaboration of the draft international convention for the suppression of acts of nuclear terrorism as a means of further developing a comprehensive legal framework of conventions dealing with international terrorism, and shall keep on its agenda the question of convening a high-level conference under the auspices of the United Nations to formulate a joint organized response of the international community to terrorism in all its forms and manifestations;

19. Decides also that the Ad Hoc Committee shall meet from 28 March to 1 April 2005 in order to fulfil the mandate referred to in paragraph 18 above, and that the work shall continue, if necessary, during the sixtieth session of the General Assembly, within the framework of the Working Group of the Sixth Committee;

20. Requests the Secretary-General to continue to provide the Ad Hoc Committee with the necessary facilities for the performance of its work;

21. Also requests the Secretary-General to make a comprehensive inventory of the response of the Secretariat to terrorism as part of his report on measures to eliminate international terrorism;

22. Requests the Ad Hoc Committee to report to the General Assembly at its fifty-ninth session in the event of the completion of the draft comprehensive convention on international terrorism or the draft international convention for the suppression of acts of nuclear terrorism;

23. Also requests the Ad Hoc Committee to report to the General Assembly at its sixtieth session on progress made in the implementation of its mandate;

24. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its sixtieth session the item entitled "Measures to eliminate international terrorism".

Additional Protocols I and II to the 1949 Geneva Conventions

In response to General Assembly resolution 57/14 [YUN 2002, p. 1309], the Secretary-General submitted a September report with a later addendum [A/59/321 & Add.1] on the status of the two 1977 Protocols Additional to the Geneva Conventions of 12 August 1949 and relating to the protection of victims of armed conflicts [YUN 1977, p. 706], as well as on measures taken to strengthen the existing body of international humanitarian law with respect to, among other things, its dissemination and implementation at the national level, based on information received from a total of 19 States and the International Committee of the Red Cross. Annexed to the report was a list of 162 States parties to one or both of the Protocols as at 2 June 2004.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 2 December [meeting 65], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Sixth Committee [A/59/506], adopted resolution 59/36 without vote [agenda item 140].

Status of the Protocols Additional to the Geneva Conventions of 1949 and relating to the protection of victims of armed conflicts

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 32/44 of 8 December 1977, 34/51 of 23 November 1979, 37/116 of 16 December 1982, 39/77 of 13 December 1984, 41/72 of 3 December 1986, 43/161 of 9 December 1988, 45/38 of 28 November 1990, 47/30 of 25 November 1992, 49/48 of 9 December 1994, 51/155 of 16 December 1996, 53/96 of 8 December 1998, 55/148 of 12 December 2000 and 57/14 of 19 November 2002,

Having considered the report of the Secretary-General,

Thanking Member States and the International Committee of the Red Cross for their contribution to the report of the Secretary-General,

Convinced of the continuing value of established humanitarian rules relating to armed conflicts and the need to respect and ensure respect for those rules in all circumstances within the scope of the relevant international instruments, pending the earliest possible termination of such conflicts,

Stressing the possibility of making use of the International Fact-Finding Commission in relation to an armed conflict, pursuant to article 90 of Protocol I to the Geneva Conventions of 1949,

Stressing also the possibility for the International Fact-Finding Commission to facilitate, through its good offices, the restoration of an attitude of respect for the Geneva Conventions and Protocol I,

Stressing further the need to consolidate the existing body of international humanitarian law through its universal acceptance and the need for wide dissemination and full implementation of such law at the national level, and expressing concern about all violations of the Geneva Conventions and the two Additional Protocols,

Noting with satisfaction the increasing number of national commissions and other bodies involved in advising authorities at the national level on the implementation, dissemination and development of international humanitarian law,

Noting with appreciation the meetings of representatives of those bodies organized by the International Committee of the Red Cross to facilitate the sharing of concrete experience and the exchange of views on their roles and on the challenges they face,

Mindful of the role of the International Committee of the Red Cross in offering protection to the victims of armed conflicts,

Noting with appreciation the continuing efforts of the International Committee of the Red Cross to promote and disseminate knowledge of international humanitarian law, in particular the Geneva Conventions and the two Additional Protocols,

Recalling that the Twenty-eighth International Conference of the Red Cross and Red Crescent stressed the need to reinforce the implementation of and respect for international humanitarian law,

Noting the fiftieth anniversary of the Convention for the Protection of Cultural Property in the Event of Armed Conflict, adopted at The Hague in 1954, which was observed in May 2004, as well as the commemorative events organized in particular by or in cooperation with the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization and the International Committee of the Red Cross, and recalling the important achievement of enhancing the protection of cultural property in the event of armed conflicts,

Recalling the entry into force, on 9 March 2004, of the second Protocol to the 1954 Hague Convention, and appreciating the ratifications received so far,

Acknowledging the fact that the Rome Statute of the International Criminal Court, which entered into force on 1 July 2002, includes the most serious crimes of international concern under international humanitarian law, and that the Statute, while recalling that it is the duty of every State to exercise its criminal jurisdiction over those responsible for such crimes, shows the determination of the international community to put an end to impunity for the perpetrators of such crimes and thus to contribute to their prevention,

Acknowledging also the usefulness of discussing in the General Assembly the status of instruments of international humanitarian law relevant to the protection of victims of armed conflicts,

1. Appreciates the virtually universal acceptance of the Geneva Conventions of 1949, and notes the trend towards a similarly wide acceptance of the two Additional Protocols of 1977;

2. Calls upon all States parties to the Geneva Conventions that have not yet done so to consider becoming parties to the Additional Protocols at the earliest possible date;

3. Calls upon all States that are already parties to Protocol I, or those States not parties, on becoming parties to Protocol I, to make the declaration provided for under article 90 of that Protocol;

4. Calls upon all States that have not yet done so to consider becoming parties to the Convention for the Protection of Cultural Property in the Event of Armed Conflict and the two Protocols thereto, and to other relevant treaties on international humanitarian law relating to the protection of victims of armed conflict;

5. Calls upon all States parties to the Protocols Additional to the Geneva Conventions to ensure their wide dissemination and full implementation;

6. Notes with appreciation the Declaration and Agenda for Humanitarian Action adopted by the Twenty-eighth International Conference of the Red Cross and Red Crescent, which noted that all States must take national measures to implement international humanitarian law, including training of the armed forces and making this law known among the general public, as well as the adoption of legislation to punish war crimes in accordance with their international obligations;

7. Affirms the necessity of making the implementation of international humanitarian law more effective;

8. Welcomes the advisory service activities of the International Committee of the Red Cross in supporting efforts made by Member States to take legislative and administrative action to implement international humanitarian law and in promoting the exchange of information on those efforts between Governments;

9. Also welcomes the increasing number of national commissions or committees for the implementation of international humanitarian law and for promoting the incorporation of treaties on international humanitarian law into national law and disseminating the rules of international humanitarian law;

10. Calls upon States to consider becoming parties to the Optional Protocol to the Convention on the Rights of the Child on the involvement of children in armed conflict;

11. Requests the Secretary-General to submit to the General Assembly at its sixty-first session a report on the status of the Additional Protocols relating to the protection of victims of armed conflicts, as well as on measures taken to strengthen the existing body of international humanitarian law, inter alia, with respect to its dissemination and full implementation at the national level, based on information received from Member States and the International Committee of the Red Cross;

12. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its sixty-first session the item entitled "Status of the Protocols Additional to the Geneva Conventions of 1949 and relating to the protection of victims of armed conflicts".

Safety and security of United Nations and associated personnel

Ad Hoc Committee consideration. The Ad Hoc Committee on the Scope of Legal Protection under the 1994 Convention on the Safety of United Nations and Associated Personnel [YUN 1994, p. 1289], established by General Assembly resolution 56/89 [YUN 2001, p. 1227], held its third session (New York, 12-16 April) on ways to expand the scope of the legal protection under the Convention, including by means of a legal instrument.

Accordingly, a working group of the whole Committee deliberated on the relation between a possible protocol and the Convention and the definition of UN operations, to ascertain which UN operations would fall within the expanded scope of the Convention. The group also deliberated on the respective responsibilities of host States and personnel engaged in UN operations and the scope of legal protection under the Convention in relation to international humanitarian law. It had before it two proposals: one by New Zealand, containing a draft optional additional protocol aimed at preserving the Convention's regime for States preferring to be bound exclusively by its provisions, while allowing those wishing to expand the Convention's scope to do so by becoming parties to the protocol as well as to the Convention; and a second by Costa Rica, which sought to delineate the scope of application of the mutually exclusive regimes of international humanitarian law and the Convention's protective regime.

On 16 April, the Ad Hoc Committee adopted its report [A/59/52], which annexed the proposals and recommended that the Assembly renew its mandate for 2005, to enable it to continue its work to expand the scope of legal protection under the Convention.

Report of Secretary-General. In response to General Assembly resolution 58/82 [YUN 2003, p. 1342], the Secretary-General submitted a report on the scope of legal protection under the Convention on the Safety of United Nations and Associated Personnel [A/59/226]. The report discussed developments concerning the incorporation of key provisions of the Convention into status-of-forces and status-of-mission agreements; circumstances supporting a declaration of exceptional risk pursuant to article 1 (c) (ii) of the Convention; the provision of information on matters of fact relevant to the Convention's application; the provision, to requesting Member States, of the list of non-governmental organizations (NGOs) contractually linked to the Organization; and practical measures taken to strengthen the protection of UN personnel, particularly locally recruited staff.

The Secretary-General observed that the Convention's core provisions had been introduced into a growing number of recently concluded status-of-forces and status-of-mission agreements, effectively extending its scope of application to UN operations in respect of which no declaration was made, or in countries which were not signatories to the Convention. However, the General Assembly should continue to pressure Member States to prosecute those responsible for crimes against UN and associated personnel, thus ensuring full application of the Convention in theory and practice. Noting that no declarations of a "risky operation" had been made, including in Afghanistan, where UN operations remained risky, the Secretary-General said efforts to expand the Convention's scope of application to all UN operations by means of a legal instrument dispensing with the need for a declaration should be encouraged.

No request for information in matters relevant to the Convention's application had been received by the UN Secretariat, and few States had requested to be provided with the list of NGOs contractually linked to the United Nations. Such requests had been met at both the field and Headquarters levels. In most cases, however, tripartite agreements concluded between a UN agency, the Government and the NGO implementing partner had obviated the need for such a request. Since locally recruited personnel remained vulnerable to attacks, additional measures, short of evacuation, had been taken to strengthen their security.

Sixth Committee working group. On 4 October, the Sixth Committee established a working group to continue the work of the Ad Hoc Committee. The report on the group's work [A/C.6/59/L.9] contained details of its discussions on expansion of the scope of legal protection under the Convention, on the basis of the Chairman's text, which was annexed to the report, and on the revised text of a proposal by Costa Rica (see above) concerning the relationship between the Convention and international humanitarian law. Delegations, voicing concern over continued attacks and acts of violence against UN and associated personnel, expressed support for the preparation of an additional protocol to the Convention, which would broaden the scope of its protective regime, cover certain UN operations other than peacekeeping operations and dispense with the requirement for a declaration of exceptional risk. The working group recommended that the Chairman's text be used as the basis for the Ad Hoc Committee's work and that the proposal by Costa Rica be considered by the Committee separately.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 2 December [meeting 65], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Sixth Committee [A/59/515 & Corr.1], adopted resolution 59/47 without vote [agenda item 149].

Scope of legal protection under the Convention on the Safety of United Nations and Associated Personnel

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 58/82 of 9 December 2003 on the scope of legal protection under the Convention on the Safety of United Nations and Associated Personnel, as well as the adoption by the Security Council of resolution 1502(2003) on 26 August 2003,

Recalling also its resolution 57/338 of 15 September 2003, in which it strongly condemned the atrocious and deliberate attack against the headquarters of the United Nations Assistance Mission in Iraq in Baghdad on 19 August 2003,

Recalling further its resolution 49/59 of 9 December 1994, by which it adopted the Convention on the Safety of United Nations and Associated Personnel,

Recalling the letter dated 24 October 2000 addressed to the President of the Security Council on behalf of the global staff of the United Nations system, drawing attention to the safety and security problems faced by United Nations and associated personnel,

Recalling also the report of the Secretary-General on the scope of legal protection under the Convention on the Safety of United Nations and Associated Personnel and the recommendations contained therein, and also recalling the further report of the Secretary-General on this issue,

Reaffirming the need to promote and ensure respect for the principles and rules of international law, including international humanitarian law, as well as relevant provisions of human rights and refugee law,

Reaffirming also the obligation of all humanitarian personnel and United Nations and associated personnel to respect the national laws of the country in which they are operating, in accordance with international law and the Charter of the United Nations,

Deeply concerned by the increasing dangers and security risks faced by United Nations and associated personnel at the field level, and mindful of the need to provide the fullest possible protection for their security,

Expressing its concern that locally recruited personnel are particularly vulnerable to attacks directed at the United Nations,

Paying tribute to the courage of those who have served and who continue to serve in United Nations operations throughout the world, in particular those who have lost their lives in the course of their duties,

Deeply concerned that perpetrators of attacks against United Nations and associated personnel seemingly operate with impunity,

Welcoming the tenth anniversary of the adoption of the Convention, which entered into force on 15 January 1999, and noting that the Convention has been ratified or acceded to by seventy-seven States as at the date of the present resolution,

Underlining the need to promote the universality of the Convention and thereby strengthen the safety and security of United Nations and associated personnel,

Having considered the report of the Ad Hoc Committee on the Scope of Legal Protection under the Convention on the Safety of United Nations and Associated Personnel, established pursuant to resolution 56/89 of 12 December 2001, and the report of the Working Group of the Sixth Committee, and bearing in mind the recommendations of the Working Group contained in paragraphs 7 and 8 of its report,

1. Expresses its appreciation for the work done by the Ad Hoc Committee on the Scope of Legal Protection under the Convention on the Safety of United Nations and Associated Personnel;

2. Urges States to take all necessary measures, in accordance with their international obligations, to prevent crimes against United Nations and associated personnel from occurring;

3. Also urges States to ensure that crimes against United Nations and associated personnel do not go unpunished and that the perpetrators of such crimes are brought to justice;

4. Affirms the obligation of all States to comply fully with their obligations under the relevant rules and principles of international law in relation to the safety and security of United Nations and associated personnel;

5. Calls upon all States to consider becoming parties to and to respect fully their obligations under the relevant international instruments, in particular the Convention on the Safety of United Nations and Associated Personnel;

6. Recommends that the Secretary-General continue to seek the inclusion of, and that host countries include, key provisions of the Convention, including those regarding the prevention of attacks against members of an operation, the establishment of such attacks as crimes punishable by law and the prosecution or extradition of offenders, in future as well as, if necessary, in existing status-of-forces, status-of-mission and host country agreements negotiated between the United Nations and those countries, mindful of the importance of the timely conclusion of such agreements;

7. Recommends also that, consistent with his existing authority, the Secretary-General advise the Security Council or the General Assembly, as appropriate, where in his assessment circumstances would support a declaration of exceptional risk for the purposes of article 1 (c) (ii) of the Convention;

8. Confirms that, consistent with his existing authority, the Secretary-General, who has knowledge of the facts and easy access to the information, may provide information, upon the request of a State, on matters of fact relevant to the application of the Convention, such as the fact and content of any declaration of exceptional risk by the Security Council or the General Assembly or any agreement concluded between the United Nations and a humanitarian non-governmental organization or agency;

9. Notes that the Secretary-General has prepared a standardized provision for incorporation into the agreements concluded between the United Nations and humanitarian non-governmental organizations or agencies for the purposes of clarifying the application of the Convention to persons deployed by those organizations or agencies, and requests the Secretary-General to make available to Member States the names of organizations or agencies that have concluded such agreements;

10. Urges the Secretary-General and relevant bodies to continue to take such other practical measures as are within their authority and existing institutional mandates to strengthen protection for United Nations and associated personnel, including locally recruited personnel, who are particularly vulnerable and account for the majority of casualties among United Nations or associated personnel;

11. Decides that the Ad Hoc Committee established under resolution 56/89 shall reconvene for one week, from 11 to 15 April 2005, with a mandate to expand the scope of legal protection under the Convention on the Safety of United Nations and Associated Personnel, including, inter alia, by means of a legal instrument, and that the work shall continue during the sixtieth session of the General Assembly within the framework of a working group of the Sixth Committee;

12. Requests the Ad Hoc Committee to submit a report on its work to the General Assembly at the sixtieth session;

13. Requests the Secretary-General to report to the General Assembly at its sixtieth session on the measures taken to implement the present resolution;

14. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its sixtieth session the item entitled "Scope of legal protection under the Convention on the Safety of United Nations and Associated Personnel".

Diplomatic relations

Protection of diplomatic and consular missions and representatives

As at 31 December 2004, the States parties to the following conventions relating to the protection of diplomats and diplomatic and consular relations were: 181 States parties to the 1961 Vienna Convention on Diplomatic Relations [YUN 1961, p. 512], 50 parties to the Optional Protocol concerning the acquisition of nationality [ibid., p. 516] and 62 parties to the Optional Protocol concerning compulsory settlement of disputes [ibid.].

The 1963 Vienna Convention on Consular Relations [YUN 1963, p. 510] had 166 parties, the Optional Protocol concerning the acquisition of nationality [ibid., p. 512] had 39 and the Optional Protocol concerning the compulsory settlement of disputes [ibid.] had 46.

Parties to the 1973 Convention on the Prevention and Punishment of Crimes against Internationally Protected Persons, including Diplomatic Agents [YUN 1973, p. 775], numbered 147.

Report of Secretary-General. In a July report with a later addendum [A/59/125 & Add.1], the Secretary-General summarized information received from 13 States pursuant to paragraphs 10 and 12 of General Assembly resolution 57/15 [YUN 2002, p. 1313]. Five reported instances of serious violations of the protection, security and safety of diplomatic and consular missions and representatives.

The report also updated the status of State participation in the conventions named above.

ILC consideration. ILC, at its fifty-sixth session [A/59/10], had before it the fifth report of Special Rapporteur Christopher John R. Dugard (South Africa) on diplomatic protection [A.CN.4/538]. The report addressed issues relating to the protection of persons in a territory controlled or occupied by a State or administered by an international intergovernmental organization and the delegation or transfer of the right of diplomatic protection. It also proposed, for ILC's consideration, several draft articles dealing with the subject of competing claims to the protection of an individual by an international organization and a State, and the protection of a ship's crew by the flag State. ILC, following its deliberations, referred to the Drafting Committee draft articles 26 and 21 addressing human rights, diplomatic protection and a general saving clause, with a view to reformulating draft article 21 on the specific subject of lex specialis. The Commission requested that the Drafting Committee consider elaborating a provision on the connection between the protection of ships' crews and diplomatic protection, and to consider also the possible relationship between the clean hands doctrine and diplomatic protection, for discussion at the Commission's next session. ILC adopted on first reading 19 draft articles on diplomatic protection and decided to transmit them, through the Secretary-General, to Governments for comments.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 2 December [meeting 65], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Sixth Committee [A/59/507], adopted resolution 59/37 without vote [agenda item 141].

Consideration of effective measures to enhance the protection, security and safety of diplomatic and consular missions and representatives

The General Assembly,

Having considered the report of the Secretary-General,

Conscious of the need to develop and strengthen friendly relations and cooperation among States,

Convinced that respect for the principles and rules of international law governing diplomatic and consular relations is a basic prerequisite for the normal conduct of relations among States and for the fulfilment of the purposes and principles of the Charter of the United Nations,

Alarmed by the recent acts of violence against diplomatic and consular representatives, as well as against representatives of international intergovernmental organizations and officials of such organizations, which have endangered or taken innocent lives and seriously impeded the normal work of such representatives and officials,

Expressing sympathy for the victims of such illegal acts,

Concerned at the failure to respect the inviolability of diplomatic and consular missions and representatives,

Recalling that, without prejudice to their privileges and immunities, it is the duty of all persons enjoying such privileges and immunities to respect the laws and regulations of the receiving State,

Recalling also that diplomatic and consular premises must not be used in any manner incompatible with the functions of diplomatic and consular missions,

Emphasizing the duty of States to take all appropriate measures as required by international law, including measures of a preventive nature, and to bring offenders to justice,

Welcoming measures already taken by States to this end in conformity with their international obligations,

Convinced that the role of the United Nations, which includes the reporting procedures established pursuant to General Assembly resolution 35/168 of 15 December 1980 and further elaborated in subsequent Assembly resolutions, is important in promoting efforts to enhance the protection, security and safety of diplomatic and consular missions and representatives,

1. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General;
2. Strongly condemns acts of violence against diplomatic and consular missions and representatives, as well as against missions and representatives of international intergovernmental organizations and officials of such organizations, and emphasizes that such acts can never be justified;

3. Urges States to strictly observe, implement and enforce the principles and rules of international law governing diplomatic and consular relations and, in particular, to ensure, in conformity with their international obligations, the protection, security and safety of the missions, representatives and officials mentioned in paragraph 2 above officially present in territories under their jurisdiction, including practical measures to prohibit in their territories illegal activities of persons, groups and organizations that encourage, instigate, organize or engage in the perpetration of acts against the security and safety of such missions, representatives and officials;

4. Also urges States to take all necessary measures at the national and international levels to prevent any acts of violence against the missions, representatives and officials mentioned in paragraph 2 above, and to ensure, with the participation of the United Nations where appropriate, that such acts are fully investigated with a view to bringing offenders to justice;

5. Recommends that States cooperate closely through, inter alia, contacts between the diplomatic and consular missions and the receiving State with regard to practical measures designed to enhance the protection, security and safety of diplomatic and consular missions and representatives and with regard to the exchange of information on the circumstances of all serious violations thereof;

6. Urges States to take all appropriate measures, in accordance with international law, at the national and international levels, to prevent any abuse of diplomatic or consular privileges and immunities, in particular serious abuses, including those involving acts of violence;

7. Recommends that States cooperate closely with the State in whose territory abuses of diplomatic and consular privileges and immunities may have occurred, including by exchanging information and providing assistance to its juridical authorities in order to bring offenders to justice;

8. Calls upon States that have not yet done so to consider becoming parties to the instruments relevant to the protection, security and safety of diplomatic and consular missions and representatives;

9. Calls upon States, in cases where a dispute arises in connection with a violation of their international obligations concerning the protection of the missions or the security of the representatives and officials mentioned in paragraph 2 above, to make use of the means available for peaceful settlement of disputes, including the good offices of the Secretary-General, and requests the Secretary-General, when he deems it appropriate, to offer his good offices to the States directly concerned;

10. Requests:

(a) All States to report to the Secretary-General as promptly as possible serious violations of the protection, security and safety of diplomatic and consular missions and representatives as well as missions and representatives with diplomatic status to international intergovernmental organizations;

(b) The State in which the violation took place—and, to the extent possible, the State where the alleged offender is present—to report to the Secretary-General as promptly as possible on measures taken to bring the offender to justice and eventually to communicate, in accordance with its laws, the final outcome of the proceedings against the offender, and to report on measures adopted with a view to preventing a repetition of such violations;

(c) The States so reporting to consider using or taking into account the guidelines prepared by the Secretary-General;

11. Requests the Secretary-General:

(a) To send, without delay, a circular note to all States reminding them of the request contained in paragraph 10 above;

(b) To circulate to all States, upon receipt, the reports received by him pursuant to paragraph 10 above, unless the reporting State requests otherwise;

(c) To draw the attention, when appropriate, of the States directly concerned to the reporting procedures provided for in paragraph 10 above, when a serious violation has been reported pursuant to paragraph 10 (a) above;

(d) To address reminders to States where such violations have occurred if reports pursuant to paragraph 10 (a) above or follow-up reports pursuant to paragraph 10 (b) above have not been made within a reasonable period of time;

12. Also requests the Secretary-General to invite States, in the circular note referred to in paragraph 11 (a) above, to inform him of their views with respect to any measures needed or already taken to enhance the protection, security and safety of diplomatic and consular missions and representatives as well as missions and representatives with diplomatic status to international intergovernmental organizations;

13. Further requests the Secretary-General to submit to the General Assembly at its sixty-first session a report containing:

(a) Information on the state of ratification of, and accessions to, the instruments referred to in paragraph 8 above;

(b) A summary of the reports received and views expressed pursuant to paragraphs 10 and 12 above;

14. Invites the Secretary-General to include in his report to the General Assembly any views he may wish to express on the matters referred to in paragraph 13 above;

15. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its sixty-first session the item entitled "Consideration of effective measures to enhance the protection, security and safety of diplomatic and consular missions and representatives".

Treaties and agreements

Reservations to treaties

ILC, at its fifty-sixth session [A/59/10], considered the ninth report of Special Rapporteur Alain Pellet (France) relating to the object and definition of objections [A/CN.4/544], which complemented his eighth report [YUN 2003, p. 1343] on the formulation of objections to reservations and interpretative declarations. Following its consideration of the report, ILC decided to refer to the Drafting Committee draft guidelines 2.6.1 (definition of objections to reservations) and 2.6.2 (objections to the late formulation of widening of the scope of a reservation). It considered and provisionally adopted the following draft guidelines that had been referred to the Drafting Committee in 2003 [ibid.]: 2.3.5 (widening of the scope of a reservation), 2.4.9 (modification of an interpretative declaration), 2.4.10 (limitation and widening of the scope of a conditional interpretative declaration), 2.5.12 (withdrawal of an interpretative declaration), and 2.5.13 (withdrawal of a conditional interpretative declaration). ILC also adopted the commentaries to those draft guidelines and reproduced in its report the text of the draft guidelines to treaties it had adopted, together with the commentaries thereto.

Treaties involving international organizations

The 1986 Vienna Convention on the Law of Treaties between States and International Organizations or between International Organizations

[YUN 1986, p. 1006], which had not yet entered into force, had 39 States parties as at 31 December 2004.

Registration and publication of treaties by the United Nations

During 2004, 1,388 international agreements were received and 1,125 subsequent actions were registered or filed and recorded by the Secretariat. In addition, 890 formalities concerning agreements for which the Secretary-General performed depositary functions were registered. Twelve issues of the Monthly Statement of Treaties and International Agreements were published.

In addition, the texts of international agreements registered or filed and recorded were published in the UN Treaty Series (UNTS) in 84 volumes in the original languages, with translations into English and French where necessary. The United Nations Treaty Collection on the Internet (UNTC), which contained published UNTS volumes up to 2004, the League of Nations Treaty Series, the Treaty Handbook, the Handbook of Final Clauses, Multilateral Treaties deposited with the Secretary-General, the Summary of Practice of the Secretary-General as Depositary of Multilateral Treaties, the Focus Books, information on training and a range of materials on treaty law and practice, received an average of 1.7 million hits per month in 2004.

Multilateral treaties

The UN Treaty Series and the regularly updated status of multilateral treaties deposited with the Secretary-General were available on the Internet at the UN Treaty Collection website (<http://untreaty.un.org>).

New multilateral treaties concluded under UN auspices

The following treaties, concluded under UN auspices, were deposited with the Secretary-General during 2004:

United Nations Convention on Jurisdictional Immunities of States and Their Property, adopted in New York on 2 December 2004

Amendment to the Convention on Environmental Impact Assessment in a Transboundary Context, adopted in Cavtat, Croatia, on 4 June 2004

Amendments to Articles 25 and 26 of the Convention on the Protection and Use of Transboundary Watercourses and International Lakes, adopted in Geneva on 17 February 2004

Multilateral treaties
deposited with the Secretary-General

At the end of 2004, the Secretary-General performed depositary functions for 512 multilateral treaties. During the year, 184 signatures were affixed to treaties for which he performed depositary functions and 1,487 instruments of ratification, accession, acceptance and approval were deposited.

The following multilateral treaties, among others, in respect of which the Secretary-General acted as depositary, came into force in 2004:

International Convention on Maritime Liens and Mortgages, adopted in Geneva on 6 May 1993

Protocol against the Smuggling of Migrants by Land, Sea and Air, supplementing the United Nations Convention against Transnational Organized Crime, adopted by General Assembly resolution 55/25 of 15 November 2000

Agreement on the Privileges and Immunities of the International Criminal Court, adopted in New York on 9 September 2002

Amendment to the Convention on Prohibitions or Restrictions on the Use of Certain Conventional Weapons which may be Deemed to be Excessively Injurious or to have Indiscriminate Effects, adopted in Geneva on 21 December 2001

Rotterdam Convention on the Prior Informed Consent Procedure for Certain Hazardous Chemicals and Pesticides in International Trade, adopted in Rotterdam, the Netherlands, on 10 September 1998

Stockholm Convention on Persistent Organic Pollutants, adopted in Stockholm, Sweden, on 22 May 2001

Agreement on Succession Issues, adopted in Vienna on 29 June 2001

Special Protocol concerning Statelessness, adopted in The Hague, the Netherlands, on 12 April 1930

Information for 2004 regarding all multilateral treaties deposited with the Secretary-General was contained in Multilateral Treaties Deposited with the Secretary-General: Status as at 31 December 2004, Vols. I & II [ST/LEG/SER.E/23], Sales No. E.05.V.3.

Chapter IV

Law of the sea

The United Nations continued in 2004 to promote universal acceptance of the 1982 United Nations Convention on the Law of the Sea and its two implementing Agreements on the conservation and management of straddling fish stocks and highly migratory fish stocks and on the privileges and immunities of the International Tribunal for the Law of the Sea.

The three institutions created by the Convention—the International Seabed Authority, the International Tribunal for the Law of the Sea and the Commission on the Limits of the Continental Shelf—held sessions during the year.

The tenth anniversary of the Convention's entry into force was marked on 16 November 2004. The Secretary-General stated that the challenge during the anniversary year was for States and organizations to implement the Convention's provisions fully in their legislation, administrations and daily practice, and in cooperation with other States.

UN Convention on the Law of the Sea

Signatures and ratifications

In 2004, Denmark and Latvia ratified or acceded to the United Nations Convention on the Law of the Sea (UNCLOS), bringing the number of parties to 147. The Convention, which was adopted by the Third United Nations Conference on the Law of the Sea in 1982 [YUN 1982, p. 178], entered into force on 16 November 1994 [YUN 1994, p. 1301].

Meeting of States Parties

The fourteenth Meeting of States Parties to the Convention (New York, 14-18 June) [SPLOS/119 & Corr.1] discussed the 2003 activities of the International Tribunal for the Law of the Sea [YUN 2003, p. 1353] and took action on financial and administrative issues, including: approving the first biennial budget for 2005-2006 in the amount of 15.5 million euros; approving the establishment of a trust fund financed by the Korea International Cooperation Agency to support the participation of interns from developing countries in the Tribunal's internship programme; authorizing the financing of overexpenditures in 2004 by transfers between appropriation sections as far as possible and, if necessary, by using savings up to $500,000; authorizing the appointment of an Auditor to examine the Tribunal's 2004 financial statement; and approving the Tribunal's financial rules and the inclusion of budget lines in the 2005-2006 budget for the reimbursement of national taxes levied on the remuneration of Tribunal members and officials. Also discussed were the 2004 activities of the International Seabed Authority (see p. 1329) and of the Commission on the Limits of the Continental Shelf (see p. 1331), and the possible inclusion in the agenda of future meetings of issues arising from the implementation of UNCLOS. A symposium on maritime delimitation, organized in commemoration of the tenth anniversary of the Convention's entry into force, took place on the premises of the Tribunal on 25 and 26 September. On 14 December, the headquarters agreement between the Tribunal and the host country, Germany, was signed.

Agreement relating to the Implementation of Part XI of the Convention

During 2004, the number of parties to the 1994 Agreement relating to the Implementation of Part XI of the Convention (governing exploitation of seabed resources beyond national jurisdiction), adopted by General Assembly resolution 48/263 [YUN 1994, p. 1301], reached 119. The Agreement, which entered into force on 28 July 1996 [YUN 1996, p. 1215], was to be interpreted and applied together with the Convention as a single instrument, and, in the event of any inconsistency between the Agreement and Part XI of the Convention, the provisions of the Agreement would prevail. Any ratification of or accession to the Convention after 28 July 1994 represented consent to be bound by the Agreement also. Parties to the Convention prior to the Agreement's adoption had to deposit a separate instrument of ratification of or accession to the Agreement.

Agreement relating to conservation and management of straddling fish stocks and highly migratory fish stocks

As at 31 December 2004, the number of parties to the 1995 Agreement for the Implementation of the Provisions of the United Nations Convention on the Law of the Sea of 10 December 1982 relating to the Conservation and Management of Straddling Fish Stocks and Highly Migratory Fish Stocks [YUN 1995, p. 1334] reached 52. Referred to as the Fish Stocks Agreement, it entered into force on 11 December 2001 [YUN 2001, p. 1232].

Report of Secretary-General. In response to General Assembly resolution 58/14 [YUN 2003, p. 1347], the Secretary-General submitted an August report [A/59/298] on the status and implementation of the Fish Stocks Agreement. The report contained information on steps and initiatives taken or recommended by the international community to improve the conservation and management of fishery and other marine living resources with a view to achieving sustainable fisheries and protecting marine ecosystems and biodiversity. It included a specific consideration of risks to the marine biodiversity of vulnerable marine ecosystems related to fishing activities and provided a review of existing conservation and management measures at the global, regional, subregional or national levels that addressed those issues.

The report concluded that one of the main tasks of fishery managers was to mitigate the impact of fishing activities on marine ecosystems, while maintaining fishing as a viable economic activity. The report emphasized the importance of the full implementation by States of all international fishery instruments, whether legally binding or voluntary, which provided for conservation and management measures and sustainable use of marine living resources. It also invited States to cooperate in all aspects of fishery conservation and management, including the establishment of new regional fisheries management organizations where none existed in a particular region or subregion; apply the precautionary and ecosystem approaches; and collect and exchange fishery data and statistics. The report further pointed out that regional and subregional fisheries-management organizations and arrangements were required to adopt effective conservation and management measures for fishery resources under their competence; improve fishery data to ensure the availability of the best scientific evidence; adopt effective monitoring, control and surveillance policies; and agree on effective decision-making procedures.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 17 November [meeting 56], the General Assembly adopted resolution 59/25 [draft: A/59/L.23 & Add.1] without vote [agenda item 49 (b)].

Sustainable fisheries, including through the 1995 Agreement for the Implementation of the Provisions of the United Nations Convention on the Law of the Sea of 10 December 1982 relating to the Conservation and Management of Straddling Fish Stocks and Highly Migratory Fish Stocks, and related instruments

The General Assembly,

Reaffirming its resolutions 46/215 of 20 December 1991, 49/116 and 49/118 of 19 December 1994, 50/25 of 5 December 1995 and 57/142 of 12 December 2002, as well as other resolutions on large-scale pelagic drift-net fishing, unauthorized fishing in zones of national jurisdiction and on the high seas, fisheries by-catch and discards, and other developments, its resolutions 56/13 of 28 November 2001 and 57/143 of 12 December 2002 on the Agreement for the Implementation of the Provisions of the United Nations Convention on the Law of the Sea of 10 December 1982 relating to the Conservation and Management of Straddling Fish Stocks and Highly Migratory Fish Stocks ("the Agreement"), and its resolution 58/14 of 24 November 2003,

Recalling the relevant provisions of the United Nations Convention on the Law of the Sea ("the Convention"), and bearing in mind the relationship between the Convention and the Agreement,

Recognizing that, in accordance with the Convention, the Agreement sets forth provisions concerning the conservation and management of straddling fish stocks and highly migratory fish stocks, including provisions on subregional and regional cooperation in enforcement, binding dispute settlement and the rights and obligations of States in authorizing the use of vessels flying their flags for fishing on the high seas, and specific provisions to address the requirements of developing States in relation to the conservation and management of straddling fish stocks and highly migratory fish stocks and the development of fisheries for such stocks,

Noting that the Code of Conduct for Responsible Fisheries of the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations ("the Code") and its associated international plans of action set out principles and global standards of behaviour for responsible practices for the conservation of fisheries resources and the management and development of fisheries,

Noting with concern that effective management of marine capture fisheries has been made difficult in some areas by unreliable information and data caused by unreported and misreported fish catch and fishing effort and the contribution this lack of data makes to continued overfishing in some areas,

Noting with satisfaction the Strategy for Improving Information on Status and Trends of Capture Fisheries recently adopted by the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations, and recognizing that the long-term improvement of the knowledge and understanding of fishery status and trends is a fundamental basis for fisheries policy and management for implementing the Code,

Recognizing the need to implement, as a matter of priority, the Plan of Implementation of the World Summit on Sustainable Development ("Johannesburg Plan of Implementation"), in relation to achieving sustainable fisheries,

Deploing the fact that fish stocks, including straddling fish stocks and highly migratory fish stocks, in many parts of the world are overfished or subject to sparsely regulated and heavy fishing efforts, mainly as a result of, inter alia, unauthorized fishing, inadequate regulatory measures, harmful fisheries subsidies and excess fishing capacity,

Concerned that illegal, unreported and unregulated fishing threatens seriously to deplete populations of certain fish species and to significantly damage marine ecosystems, to the detriment of sustainable fisheries as well as the food security and the economies of many States, particularly developing States,

Noting with satisfaction resolution 6/2003 of 9 December 2003, adopted by the Conference of the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations, relating to preventing, deterring and eliminating illegal, unreported and unregulated fishing,

Recognizing that the problem of overfishing continues to be exacerbated by inadequate flag State control over fishing vessels, including those fishing for straddling fish stocks and highly migratory fish stocks, and insufficient monitoring, control and surveillance measures,

Recognizing also that the interrelationship between ocean activities, such as shipping and fishing, and environmental issues needs further consideration,

Noting that the contribution of aquaculture to global fish supplies continues to increase its potential in developing countries to enhance local food security and poverty alleviation and meet future demands in fish consumption, bearing in mind article 9.1.4 of the Code,

Calling attention to the circumstances affecting fisheries in many developing States, in particular African States and small island developing States, and recognizing the urgent need for capacity-building to assist such States in meeting their obligations under international instruments and realizing the benefits from fisheries resources,

Noting the obligation of all States, pursuant to the provisions of the Convention, to cooperate in the conservation and management of straddling fish stocks and highly migratory fish stocks, and recognizing the importance of coordination and cooperation at the global, regional, subregional as well as national levels in the areas, inter alia, of data collection, information-sharing, capacity-building and training for the conservation, management and sustainable development of marine living resources,

Recognizing the duty provided in the Convention, the Agreement to Promote Compliance with International Conservation and Management Measures by Fishing Vessels on the High Seas ("the Compliance Agreement"), the Agreement and the Code for flag States to exercise effective control over fishing vessels flying their flag and vessels flying their flag which provide support to such vessels, and to ensure that the activities of such vessels do not undermine the effectiveness of conservation and management measures taken in accordance with international law and adopted at the national, subregional, regional or global levels,

Recognizing also the urgent need for action at all levels to ensure the long-term sustainable use and management of fisheries resources through the wide application of a precautionary approach and appropriate measures to reduce pollution and waste, and other factors, such as discards and catch by lost or abandoned gear, which adversely affect fish stocks,

Recognizing further the economic and cultural importance of sharks in many countries, the biological importance of sharks in the marine ecosystem, the vulnerability of some shark species to over-exploitation, the need for measures to promote the long-term sustainability of shark populations and fisheries and the relevance of the International Plan of Action for the Conservation and Management of Sharks, adopted by the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations in 1999, in providing development guidance of such measures,

Reaffirming its support for the initiative of the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations and relevant regional and subregional fisheries management organizations and arrangements on the conservation and management of sharks, while noting with concern that only a small number of countries have implemented the International Plan of Action for the Conservation and Management of Sharks,

Noting with satisfaction the outcomes of the third round of informal consultations of States parties to the Agreement, held in New York on 8 July 2004,

Taking note with appreciation of the report of the Secretary-General, including the section outlining current risks to the marine biodiversity of vulnerable marine ecosystems related to fishing activities, and conservation and management measures in place at the global, regional, subregional or national levels addressing these issues, in particular the useful role of the report in gathering and disseminating information on or relating to the sustainable development of the world's marine living resources,

Expressing concern that the practice of large-scale pelagic drift-net fishing remains a threat to marine living resources, although the incidence of this practice has continued to be low in most regions of the world's oceans and seas,

Emphasizing that efforts should be made to ensure that the implementation of resolution 46/215 in some parts of the world does not result in the transfer to other parts of the world of drift nets that contravene the resolution,

Expressing concern, while recognizing considerable efforts to reduce by-catch in longline fishing through various regional fisheries management organizations, at the reports of continued loss of seabirds, particularly albatrosses, as a result of incidental mortality from longline fishing operations, and the loss of other marine species, including sharks, fin-fish species and marine turtles, as a result of incidental mortality,

Welcoming the fact that a growing number of States, and entities referred to in the Convention and in article 1, paragraph 2 (b), of the Agreement, as well as regional and subregional fisheries management organizations and arrangements, have taken measures, as appropriate, towards the implementation of the provisions of the Agreement,

Recognizing the significant contribution of sustainable fisheries to food security, income and wealth for present and future generations,

I

Achieving sustainable fisheries

1. Reaffirms the importance it attaches to the long-term conservation, management and sustainable use of the marine living resources of the world's oceans and seas and the obligations of States to cooperate to this end, in accordance with international law, as reflected in the relevant provisions of the Convention, in particular the provisions on cooperation set out in Part V and Part VII, section 2, of the Convention, and where applicable, the Agreement;

2. Calls upon all States that have not done so, in order to achieve the goal of universal participation, to become parties to the Convention, which sets out the legal framework within which all activities in the oceans and seas must be carried out, taking into account the relationship between the Convention and the Agreement;

3. Reaffirms the importance of the Johannesburg Plan of Implementation in relation to fisheries, in particular the commitment made therein to restore depleted fish stocks on an urgent basis and, where possible, not later than 2015;

4. Urges all States to apply the precautionary approach and the ecosystem approach widely to the conservation, management and exploitation of fish stocks, including straddling fish stocks and highly migratory fish stocks, and also calls upon States parties to the Agreement to implement fully the provisions of article 6 of the Agreement as a matter of priority;

II

Implementation of the 1995 Agreement for the Implementation of the Provisions of the United Nations Convention on the Law of the Sea of 10 December 1982 relating to the Conservation and Management of Straddling Fish Stocks and Highly Migratory Fish Stocks

5. Calls upon all States, and entities referred to in the Convention and in article 1, paragraph 2 (b), of the Agreement, that have not done so to ratify or accede to the Agreement and in the interim to consider applying it provisionally;

6. Emphasizes the importance of the effective implementation of the provisions of the Agreement, including those provisions relating to bilateral, regional and subregional cooperation in enforcement, and urges continued efforts in this regard;

7. Welcomes the entry into force of the Convention on the Conservation and Management of Highly Migratory Fish Stocks in the Western and Central Pacific Ocean on 19 June 2004, and encourages relevant States to become Parties to that Convention in accordance with its terms;

8. Also welcomes the inaugural meeting at Swakopmund, Namibia, from 9 to 13 March 2004 of the Commission of the South-East Atlantic Fisheries Organization as well as its continual operationalization and assumption of full competence for the conservation and management of resources that fall under its responsibility within the area of the Convention on the Conservation and Management of Fishery Resources in the South-East Atlantic Ocean, and encourages signatory States and other States with real interest whose vessels fish in that Convention area for fishery resources covered by that Convention to become parties to the Convention and, in the interim, to consider applying it and the measures adopted thereunder provisionally, to ensure that vessels entitled to fly their flags apply such measures;

9. Calls upon all States to ensure that their vessels comply with the conservation and management measures that have been adopted by subregional and regional fisheries management organizations and arrangements in accordance with relevant provisions of the Convention and of the Agreement;

10. Urges States parties to the Agreement, in accordance with article 21, paragraph 4, thereof to inform, either directly or through the relevant regional or subregional fisheries management organization or arrangement, all States whose vessels fish on the high seas in the same region or subregion of the form of identification issued by those States parties to officials duly authorized to carry out boarding and inspection functions in accordance with articles 21 and 22 of the Agreement;

11. Also urges States parties to the Agreement, in accordance with article 21, paragraph 4, to designate an appropriate authority to receive notifications pursuant to article 21 and to give due publicity to such designation through the relevant subregional or regional fisheries management organization or arrangement;

12. Invites States and international financial institutions and organizations of the United Nations system to provide assistance according to Part VII of the Agreement, including, if appropriate, the development of special financial mechanisms or instruments to assist developing States, in particular the least developed among them and small island developing States, to enable them to develop their national capacity to exploit fishery resources, including developing their domestically flagged fishing fleet, value-added processing and the expansion of their economic base in the fishing industry, consistent with the duty to ensure the proper conservation and management of those fisheries resources;

13. Recalls paragraph 10 of its resolution 58/14, in which it decided to establish an Assistance Fund under Part VII of the Agreement to assist developing States parties in the implementation of the Agreement, and encourages States, intergovernmental organizations, international financial institutions, national institutions, non-governmental organizations, as well as natural and juridical persons to make voluntary financial contributions to the Fund;

14. Notes with satisfaction the conclusion of an arrangement between the United Nations and the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations regarding the administration of the Assistance Fund;

15. Emphasizes the importance of outreach to potential donor organizations to contribute to the programme of assistance, including the Assistance Fund;

16. Requests the Secretary-General to convene, pursuant to article 36 of the Agreement, a one-week review conference in the first part of 2006, with a view to assessing the effectiveness of the Agreement in securing the conservation and management of straddling fish stocks and highly migratory fish stocks, and to render the necessary assistance and provide such services as may be required for the review conference;

17. Also requests the Secretary-General to present to the conference a comprehensive report, prepared in cooperation with the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations, in accordance with paragraph 2 of article 36 of the Agreement;

18. Recalls paragraph 6 of its resolution 56/13, and requests the Secretary-General to convene a fourth round of informal consultations of States parties to the Agreement, to consider, principally, but not exclusively, issues related to preparation for the review conference to be convened by the Secretary-General pursuant to article 36 of the Agreement, and to make any appropriate recommendation to the General Assembly;

19. Requests the Secretary-General to invite States, and entities referred to in the Convention and in article 1, paragraph 2 (b), of the Agreement, not party to the Agreement, as well as the United Nations Development Programme, the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations and other specialized agencies, the Commission on Sustainable Development, the World Bank, the Global Environment Facility and other relevant international financial institutions, subregional and regional fisheries management organizations and arrangements, other fisheries bodies, and relevant non-governmental organizations to attend the fourth round of informal consultations of States parties to the Agreement as observers;

III

Related fisheries instruments

20. Emphasizes the importance of the effective implementation of the provisions of the Compliance Agreement, and urges continued efforts in this regard;

21. Calls upon all States and other entities referred to in article X, paragraph 1, of the Compliance Agreement that have not yet become parties to that Agreement to do so as a matter of priority and, in the interim, to consider applying it provisionally;

22. Urges parties to the Compliance Agreement to exchange information in the implementation of that Agreement;

23. Urges States and subregional and regional fisheries management organizations and arrangements to implement and promote the application of the Code within their areas of competence;

24. Urges States, as a matter of priority, to support implementation of the Strategy for Improving Information on Status and Trends of Capture Fisheries at the national and regional levels, giving particular emphasis to capacity-building in developing countries;

25. Also urges States to develop and implement, as a matter of priority, national and, as appropriate, regional plans of action to put into effect the international plans of action of the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations;

IV

Illegal, unreported and unregulated fishing

26. Emphasizes once again its serious concern that illegal, unreported and unregulated fishing remains one of the greatest threats to marine ecosystems and continues to have serious and major implications for the conservation and management of ocean resources, and renews its call upon States to comply fully with all existing obligations and to combat such fishing and urgently to take all necessary steps to implement the International Plan of Action to Prevent, Deter and Eliminate Illegal, Unreported and Unregulated Fishing of the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations;

27. Calls upon States not to permit vessels flying their flag to engage in fishing on the high seas or in areas under the national jurisdiction of other States, unless duly authorized by the authorities of the States concerned and in accordance with the conditions set out in the authorization, without having effective control over their activities, and to take specific measures, including deterring the reflagging of vessels by their nationals, in accordance with the relevant provisions of the Convention, the Agreement and the Compliance Agreement, to control fishing operations by vessels flying their flag;

28. Affirms the need to strengthen, where necessary, the international legal framework for intergovernmental cooperation, in particular at the regional and subregional levels, in the management of fish stocks and in combating illegal, unreported and unregulated fishing, in a manner consistent with international law, and for States and entities referred to in the Convention and in article 1, paragraph 2 (b), of the Agreement to collaborate in efforts to address these types of fishing activities, including, inter alia, the development and implementation of vessel monitoring systems and the listing of vessels in order to prevent illegal, unreported, and unregulated fishing activities and, where appropriate and consistent with international law, trade monitoring schemes, including to collect global catch data, through subregional and regional fisheries management organizations and arrangements;

29. Encourages States to consider becoming members of the International Monitoring, Control and Surveillance Network for Fisheries-Related Activities, a voluntary network of monitoring, control and surveillance professionals designed to facilitate exchange of information and to support countries in discharging their obligations pursuant to international agreements, in particular the Compliance Agreement;

30. Requests the Secretary-General to report to the General Assembly at its sixty-first session on the study undertaken by the International Maritime Organization, in cooperation with other competent international organizations, following the invitation extended to it in resolution 58/14 and resolution 58/240 of 23 December 2003, to examine and clarify the role of the "genuine link" in relation to the duty of flag States to exercise effective control over ships flying their flag, including fishing vessels, and the potential consequences of non-compliance with the duties and obligations of flag States prescribed in the relevant international instruments;

31. Calls upon flag and port States to take all measures consistent with international law necessary to prevent the operation of sub-standard vessels and illegal, unreported and unregulated fishing activities;

32. Encourages the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations and subregional and regional fisheries management organizations and arrangements to develop further ideas to devise means of discouraging owners and operators from non-compliance with the requirements imposed by flag States in carrying out their duties and obligations under relevant international instruments;

33. Recognizes the commitment made in the Johannesburg Plan of Implementation for States urgently to develop and implement national and, where appropriate, regional plans of action, to put into effect by 2004 the International Plan of Action to Prevent, Deter and Eliminate Illegal, Unreported and Unregulated Fishing, and to establish effective monitoring, reporting, enforcement and control of fishing vessels, including by flag States, to further the International Plan of Action, and calls upon States to adhere to this commitment as a matter of priority;

34. Also recognizes that common means of conducting illegal, unreported and unregulated fishing involves the unreported or misreported transshipments of fish at sea, and urges States, either directly or through relevant subregional and regional fisheries management organizations and arrangements, to establish comprehensive systems, where appropriate, for monitoring and control of transshipments on the high seas;

35. Urges relevant regional and subregional fisheries management organizations and arrangements to implement effective measures against illegal, unreported and unregulated fishing, inter alia, by compiling a record of vessels authorized to fish in their area of competence, in accordance with the Code;

36. Commends the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations for its activities in combating illegal, unreported and unregulated fishing, including its initiative to organize the intergovernmental technical consultation on the role of the port State in combating illegal, unreported and unregulated fishing, held from 31 August to 2 September 2004, and welcomes the outcome of the consultation;

37. Urges States to eliminate subsidies that contribute to illegal, unreported and unregulated fishing, while completing the efforts undertaken at the World Trade Organization to clarify and improve its disciplines on fisheries subsidies, taking into account the importance of this sector to developing countries;

38. Recognizes the need for enhanced port State controls to combat illegal, unreported and unregulated fishing, urges States to cooperate, in particular at the regional level, and through regional and subregional fisheries management organizations and arrangements, as well as through participation, where appropriate, in the efforts of the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations in cooperation with the International Maritime Organization to address substantive issues relating to the role of the port State, noting that such efforts include the elaboration of a draft model scheme on port State measures to prevent, deter and eliminate illegal, unreported and unregulated fishing;

Fishing overcapacity

39. Calls upon States and relevant regional and subregional fisheries management organizations and arrangements, as a matter of priority, to take effective measures to improve the management of fishing capacity and to put into effect by 2005 the International Plan of Action for the Management of Fishing Capacity, taking into account the need, through these actions, to avoid the transfer of fishing capacity to other fisheries or areas including, but not limited to, those areas where fish stocks are overexploited or in a depleted condition;

40. Urges States to eliminate subsidies that contribute to fishing overcapacity, while completing the efforts undertaken at the World Trade Organization to clarify and improve its disciplines on fisheries subsidies, taking into account the importance of this sector to developing countries;

41. Notes with satisfaction that information about more than 5,500 fishing vessels authorized to fish on the high seas has been provided to the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations by at least seventeen flag States and entered on the High Seas Vessels Authorization Record established by the Organization in accordance with article VI of the Compliance Agreement, and urges those States and other entities referred to in article X, paragraph 1, of the Compliance Agreement that have become parties to it to establish a record of fishing vessels authorized to fish on the high seas and, pursuant to articles IV and VI thereof, to make such a record available to the Organization as a matter of priority, and promptly to notify the Organization of any modifications to such a record;

42. Calls upon all States to assist this work of the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations, and to take measures to halt the increase of large-scale fishing vessels in accordance with the International Plan of Action for the Management of Fishing Capacity;

43. Welcomes the significant outcomes of the Technical Consultation to Review Progress and Promote the Full Implementation of the International Plan of Action to Prevent, Deter and Eliminate Illegal, Unreported and Unregulated Fishing and the International Plan of Action for the Management of Fishing Capacity of the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations, held from 24 to 29 June 2004, which recommended specific actions to the Committee on Fisheries of the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations and other relevant regional and subregional fisheries management organizations and arrangements with regard to illegal, unreported and unregulated fishing and fishing overcapacity, and also suggested measures to be taken by States and fishing entities regarding expanding fishing capacity by certain fishing operations in the Central and Western Pacific Ocean;

VI

Large-scale pelagic drift-net fishing

44. Reaffirms the importance it attaches to continued compliance with its resolution 46/215 and other subsequent resolutions on large-scale pelagic drift-net fishing, and urges States and entities referred to in the Convention and in article 1, paragraph 2 (b), of the Agreement to enforce fully the measures recommended in those resolutions;

VII

Fisheries by-catch and discards

45. Urges States, relevant international organizations and regional and subregional fisheries management organizations and arrangements that have not done so to take action to reduce or eliminate by-catch, catch by lost or abandoned gear, fish discards and post-harvest losses, including juvenile fish, consistent with international law and relevant international instruments, including the Code, and in particular to consider measures including, as appropriate, technical measures related to fish size, mesh size or gear, discards, closed seasons and areas and zones reserved for selected fisheries, particularly artisanal fisheries, the establishment of mechanisms for communicating information on areas of high concentration of juvenile fish, taking into account the importance of ensuring confidentiality of such information, and support for studies and research that will reduce or eliminate by-catch of juvenile fish;

46. Encourages States and entities referred to in the Convention and in article 1, paragraph 2 (b), of the Agreement to give due consideration to participation, as appropriate, in regional and subregional organizations with mandates to conserve non-target species taken incidentally in fishing operations, and notes in particular the Inter-American Convention for the Protection and Conservation of Sea Turtles and Their Habitats, regional sea turtle conservation instruments in the West African, the wider Caribbean, and the Indian Ocean/ South-East Asia regions, the work of the Southeast Asian Fisheries Development Centre on turtle conservation and management, the Agreement on the Conservation of Small Cetaceans of the Baltic and North Seas, and the Agreement on the Conservation of Cetaceans of the Black Sea, Mediterranean Sea and Contiguous Atlantic Area in this regard;

47. Notes with satisfaction the entry into force on 1 February 2004 of the Agreement on the Conservation of Albatrosses and Petrels under the Convention on the Conservation of Migratory Species of Wild Animals, and encourages relevant States which have not already done so to become parties to that Agreement in accordance with its terms;

48. Also notes with satisfaction the activities of the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations, in cooperation with relevant United Nations agencies and programmes, in particular the United Nations Environment Programme and the Global Environment Facility, aimed at promoting the reduction of by-catch and discards in fisheries activities;

49. Notes the Technical Consultation on Sea Turtles Conservation and Fisheries to be organized by the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations from 29 November to 2 December 2004, and encourages States to participate actively in this work;

VIII

Subregional and regional cooperation

50. Urges coastal States and States fishing on the high seas, in accordance with the Convention and the Agreement, to pursue cooperation in relation to straddling fish stocks and highly migratory fish stocks, either directly or through appropriate subregional or regional fisheries management organizations or arrangements, to ensure the effective conservation and management of such stocks;

51. Encourages States fishing for straddling fish stocks and highly migratory fish stocks on the high seas, and relevant coastal States, where a subregional or regional fisheries management organization or arrangement has the competence to establish conservation and management measures for such stocks, to give effect to their duty to cooperate by becoming members of such an organization or participants in such an arrangement, or by agreeing to apply the conservation and management measures established by such an organization or arrangement;

52. Invites, in this regard, subregional and regional fisheries management organizations and arrangements to ensure that all States having a real interest in the fisheries concerned may become members of such organizations or participants in such arrangements, in accordance with the Convention and the Agreement;

53. Encourages relevant coastal States and States fishing on the high seas for a straddling fish stock or a highly migratory fish stock, where there is no subregional or regional fisheries management organization or arrangement to establish conservation and management measures for such stock, to cooperate to establish such an organization or enter into another appropriate arrangement to ensure the conservation and management of such stocks, and to participate in the work of the organization or arrangement;

54. Welcomes the initiation of negotiations and ongoing preparatory work to establish regional and subregional fisheries management organizations or arrangements in several fisheries, and urges participants in those negotiations to apply provisions of the Convention and the Agreement to their work;

55. Notes with satisfaction, in this regard, the recent recommendation of the Western Central Atlantic Fisheries Commission that established an intersessional working group tasked to study the feasibility of strengthening regional fisheries management in that region, encourages relevant States and organizations to work actively to fulfil the recommendation, and notes the important contribution of the Caribbean Regional Fisheries Mechanism to this process;

56. Encourages States to develop ocean policies and mechanisms on integrated management, including at the subregional and regional levels, and also including assistance to developing States in accomplishing these objectives, as well as by promoting improved cooperation between regional fisheries management organizations and other regional entities, such as the United Nations Environment Programme regional seas programmes and conventions;

57. Encourages subregional or regional fisheries management organizations or arrangements and States and entities referred to in the Convention and in article 1, paragraph 2 (b), of the Agreement that are members of or participate in such organizations or arrangements, to consider adopting, where appropriate and in accordance with international law, conservation and management measures for fish stocks that fall within the competence of such organizations and/or arrangements but are not yet managed by them, in particular for those stocks that have vulnerable life histories, that scientific data indicate are in decline and/or are subject to an international plan of action of the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations;

IX

Responsible fisheries in the marine ecosystem

58. Encourages States to apply by 2010 the ecosystem approach, notes the Reykjavik Declaration on Responsible Fisheries in the Marine Ecosystem and decision VII/11 and other relevant decisions of the Conference of the Parties to the Convention on Biological Diversity, notes the work of the Food and Agriculture

Organization of the United Nations related to guidelines for the implementation of the ecosystem approach to fisheries management, and also notes the importance to this approach of relevant provisions of the Agreement and the Code;

59. Also encourages States to increase scientific research in accordance with international law on the marine ecosystem;

60. Calls upon States, the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations, the International Maritime Organization, the United Nations Environment Programme, in particular its Regional Seas programme, regional and subregional fisheries management organizations and arrangements and other appropriate intergovernmental organizations that have not yet done so to take action to address the issue of lost or abandoned fishing gear and related marine debris, including through the collection of data on gear loss, economic costs to fisheries and other sectors, and the impact on marine ecosystems;

61. Requests the Secretary-General, in his next report concerning fisheries, to include information on the actions taken by the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations, the United Nations Environment Programme, in particular its Regional Seas programme, the International Maritime Organization, regional and subregional fisheries management organizations and arrangements, and other appropriate intergovernmental organizations, to give effect to paragraph 60 above;

62. Urges States to ratify and implement relevant international agreements, including annex V to the International Convention for the Prevention of Pollution from Ships, 1973, as modified by the Protocol of 1978 relating thereto;

63. Calls upon States, where relevant, to establish systems for retrieving lost gear and nets;

64. Notes that 2005 will mark the ten-year anniversary of the adoption of the Global Programme of Action for the Protection of the Marine Environment from Land-based Activities, and urges all States to implement the Global Programme of Action and to accelerate activity to safeguard the marine ecosystem, including fish stocks, against pollution and physical degradation;

65. Calls upon States, the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations and other specialized agencies of the United Nations, subregional and regional fisheries management organizations and arrangements, where appropriate, and other appropriate intergovernmental bodies, to cooperate in achieving sustainable aquaculture, including through information exchange, developing equivalent standards on such issues as aquatic animal health and human health and safety concerns, assessing the potential positive and negative impacts of aquaculture, including socio-economics, on the marine and coastal environment, including biodiversity, and adopting relevant methods and techniques to minimize and mitigate adverse effects;

66. Calls upon States, either by themselves or through regional fisheries management organizations or arrangements, where these are competent to do so, to take action urgently, and consider on a case-by-case basis and on a scientific basis, including the application of the precautionary approach, the interim prohibition of destructive fishing practices, including bottom trawling that has adverse impacts on vulnerable marine ecosystems, including seamounts, hydrothermal vents and cold water corals located beyond national jurisdiction, until such time as appropriate conservation and management measures have been adopted in accordance with international law;

67. Calls upon regional fisheries management organizations or arrangements with the competence to regulate bottom fisheries urgently to adopt, in their regulatory areas, appropriate conservation and management measures, in accordance with international law, to address the impact of destructive fishing practices, including bottom trawling that has adverse impacts on vulnerable marine ecosystems, and to ensure compliance with such measures;

68. Calls upon members of regional fisheries management organizations or arrangements without the competence to regulate bottom fisheries and the impacts of fishing on vulnerable marine ecosystems to expand the competence, where appropriate, of their organizations or arrangements in this regard;

69. Calls upon States urgently to cooperate in the establishment of new regional fisheries management organizations or arrangements, where necessary and appropriate, with the competence to regulate bottom fisheries and the impacts of fishing on vulnerable marine ecosystems in areas where no such relevant organization or arrangement exists;

70. Requests the Secretary-General, in cooperation with the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations, to include in his next report concerning fisheries a section on the actions taken by States and regional fisheries management organizations and arrangements to give effect to paragraphs 66 to 69 above, in order to facilitate discussion of the matters covered in those paragraphs;

71. Agrees to review within two years progress on action taken in response to the requests made in paragraphs 66 to 69 above, with a view to further recommendations, where necessary, in areas where arrangements are inadequate;

72. Calls upon States, the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations and subregional or regional fisheries management organizations and arrangements to implement fully the International Plan of Action for the Conservation and Management of Sharks as a matter of priority, inter alia, by conducting assessments of shark stocks and developing and implementing national plans of action, recognizing the need of some States, in particular developing States, for assistance in this regard;

73. Urges States, including those working through subregional or regional fisheries management organizations and arrangements in implementing the International Plan of Action for the Conservation and Management of Sharks, to collect scientific data regarding shark catches and to consider adopting conservation and management measures, particularly where shark catches from directed and non-directed fisheries have a significant impact on vulnerable or threatened shark stocks, in order to ensure the conservation and management of sharks and their long-term sustainable use, including by banning directed shark fisheries conducted solely for the purpose of harvesting shark fins and by taking measures for other fisheries to minimize waste and discards from shark catches, and to encourage the full use of dead sharks;

74. Requests the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations to develop programmes to assist States, including developing States, in carrying out the tasks mentioned in paragraph 73 above, in particular the adoption of appropriate conservation and management measures, including the banning of directed shark fisheries conducted solely for the purpose of harvesting shark fins;

75. Reaffirms the requests contained in paragraph 50 of its resolution 58/14, and invites the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations to report to the Secretary-General, for inclusion in his report on sustainable fisheries, on progress regarding the preparation of the study mentioned therein, as well as the programmes mentioned in paragraph 74 above, and to consider at the sixty-second session of the General Assembly whether additional action is required;

X

Capacity-building

76. Reiterates the crucial importance of cooperation by States directly or, as appropriate, through the relevant regional and subregional organizations, and by other international organizations, including the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations through its FishCODE programme, including through financial and/or technical assistance, in accordance with the Agreement, the Compliance Agreement, the Code and the International Plan of Action to Prevent, Deter and Eliminate Illegal, Unreported and Unregulated Fishing and the International Plan of Action for the Conservation and Management of Sharks, to increase the capacity of developing States to achieve the goals and implement the actions called for in the present resolution;

77. Invites States and relevant intergovernmental organizations to develop projects, programmes and partnerships with relevant stakeholders and mobilize resources for the effective implementation of the outcome of the African Process for the Protection and Development of the Marine and Coastal Environment, and to consider the inclusion of fisheries components in this work;

78. Also invites States and relevant intergovernmental organizations to further implement sustainable fisheries management and improve financial returns from fisheries by supporting and strengthening relevant regional fisheries management organizations, as appropriate, such as the Caribbean Regional Fisheries Mechanism and such agreements as the Convention on the Conservation and Management of Highly Migratory Fish Stocks in the Western and Central Pacific;

XI

Cooperation within the United Nations system

79. Requests the relevant parts of the United Nations system, international financial institutions and donor agencies to support increased enforcement and compliance capabilities for regional fisheries management organizations and their member States;

80. Invites the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations to continue its cooperative arrangements with United Nations agencies on the implementation of the international plans of action and to report to the Secretary-General, for inclusion in his annual report on sustainable fisheries, on priorities for cooperation and coordination in this work;

81. Invites the Division for Ocean Affairs and the Law of the Sea of the Office of Legal Affairs of the Secretariat, the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations and other relevant bodies of the United Nations system to consult and cooperate in the preparation of questionnaires designed to collect information on sustainable fisheries, in order to avoid duplication;

XII

Sixtieth session of the General Assembly

82. Requests the Secretary-General to bring the present resolution to the attention of all members of the international community, relevant intergovernmental organizations, the organizations and bodies of the United Nations system, regional and subregional fisheries management organizations and relevant non-governmental organizations, and to invite them to provide the Secretary-General with information relevant to the implementation of the present resolution;

83. Also requests the Secretary-General to submit to the General Assembly at its sixtieth session a report on "Sustainable fisheries, including through the 1995 Agreement for the Implementation of the Provisions of the United Nations Convention on the Law of the Sea of 10 December 1982 relating to the Conservation and Management of Straddling Fish Stocks and Highly Migratory Fish Stocks, and related instruments", taking into account information provided by States, relevant specialized agencies, in particular the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations, and other appropriate organs, organizations and programmes of the United Nations system, regional and subregional organizations and arrangements for the conservation and management of straddling fish stocks and highly migratory fish stocks, as well as other relevant intergovernmental bodies and non-governmental organizations, and consisting, inter alia, of elements provided in relevant paragraphs in the present resolution;

84. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its sixtieth session, under the item entitled "Oceans and the law of the sea", the sub-item entitled "Sustainable fisheries, including through the 1995 Agreement for the Implementation of the Provisions of the United Nations Convention on the Law of the Sea of 10 December 1982 relating to the Conservation and Management of Straddling Fish Stocks and Highly Migratory Fish Stocks, and related instruments".

Institutions created by the Convention

International Seabed Authority

Through the International Seabed Authority, established by UNCLOS and the 1994 Implementation Agreement [YUN 1994, p. 1301], States organized and conducted exploration of the resources of the seabed and ocean floor and subsoil beyond the limits of national jurisdiction. In 2004, the Authority, which had 147 members as at 31 December, held its tenth session (Kingston, Jamaica, 24 May–4 June) [ISBA/10/A/12]. Its subsidiary bodies, namely, the Assembly, the Council, the Legal and Technical Commission and the Finance Committee, also met during the session. On 25 and 26 May, the Authority held a commemorative special session to celebrate the tenth anniversary of the Authority's establishment.

The Assembly considered the annual report of the Authority's Secretary-General [ISBA/10/A/3], which recapitulated the work of the Authority since its inception in November 1994. He noted that the organizational phase was complete and that the Authority had entered a new substantive phase. During the next three-year (2005-2007) period, the secretariat's work programme would focus mainly on the Authority's supervisory functions with respect to exploration contracts, the preparation of an appropriate regulatory regime for the future development of sea floor sulphides and deposits of cobalt-rich crusts of the Area (the seabed area beyond the limits of national jurisdiction), and the promotion and encouragement of marine scientific research. A key component of the work programme would be the establishment of a geological model of polymetallic nodule deposits in the Clarion-Clipperton Fracture Zone of the Pacific Ocean; all but one of the seven exploration contracts issued by the Authority were for mining operations there. During 2005-2007, the secretariat would explore the possibility of obtaining funds from the Global Environment Facility to further the international collaborative work required to manage environmental impacts from deep seabed mining, while the Secretary-General would explore the possible secondment of specialized scientific and technical staff from relevant national and international institutions to carry out specific projects within the scope of the work programme and to strengthen the Authority's technical capabilities.

The Assembly considered and approved the Finance Committee's report on the Authority's 2005-2006 budget in the amount of $10,816,700 [ISBA/10/A/6-ISBA/10/C/7]. It elected the Secretary-General of the Authority, Satya N. Nandan (Fiji), to serve a third four-year term, as well as 20 members of the 36-member Council for the period from 1 January 2005 to 31 December 2008. In addition, it approved the December 2003 Supplementary Agreement between the Authority and the Government of Jamaica regarding the headquarters of the Authority and the use of the Jamaica Conference Centre complex [YUN 2003, p. 1353].

The Legal and Technical Commission, reporting to the Council on its work during the current session [ISBA/10/C/4], stated that, as at 19 April 2004, the third set of annual reports had been received from all seven contractors engaged in the exploration of polymetallic nodules, namely: Deep Ocean Resources Development Ltd., the Government of the Republic of Korea, China Ocean Mineral Resources Research and Development Association, State Enterprise Yuzhmorgeologiya (Russian Federation), Interoceanmetal Joint Organization, and l'Institut français de recherche pour l'exploration de la mer/l'Association française pour l'étude et la recherche des nodules [YUN 2001, p. 1235]; and the Government of India [YUN 2002, p. 1321]. Most of the contractors followed the format and structure for annual reports recommended by the Commission in 2002 [ibid.]. The Commission's report and recommendations on the evaluation of the annual reports were contained in a May document [ISBA/10/LTC/3].

During its deliberations on the draft regulations for prospecting and exploration for polymetallic sulphides and cobalt-rich ferromanganese crusts in the Area, the Commission benefited from the advice of three internationally renowned experts who had reviewed the draft, specifically with regard to the size of the exploration area, the system of exploration to be recommended in the light of experience with the system for polymetallic nodules, and the related option. In the light of the advice provided, the Commission reviewed the draft regulations and proposed a size of exploration area for both resources of 10,000 square kilometres, which had the potential for localizing a mineable area with at least 40 million tons of core for each resource and a mining operation lasting 20 years.

International Tribunal for the Law of the Sea

The International Tribunal for the Law of the Sea held its seventeenth (22 March-2 April) and eighteenth (20 September-1 October) sessions at its seat in Hamburg, Germany [SPLOS/122].

The Tribunal met from 30 November to 18 December to deal with the "Juno Trader" case (Saint Vincent and the Grenadines v. Guinea-Bissau), Prompt Release. On 18 November, an application under article 292 of the Convention was filed on behalf of Saint Vincent and the Grenadines against Guinea-Bissau for the release of the vessel Juno Trader, flying the flag of Saint Vincent and the Grenadines, and its crew. By an Order dated 19 November, the Tribunal's President fixed 1 and 2 December as the dates for the hearing. On 26 November, the agent of Guinea-Bissau requested a postponement of the hearing and, on 29 November, the agent of Saint Vincent and the Grenadines transmitted his observations on that request. Oral proceedings were opened at a public sitting on 1 December, at which the President read the Order of the Tribunal of the same date concerning Guinea-Bissau's request for postponement. By that Order, the Tribunal postponed the continuation of the hearing to 6 December and extended the time limit for the filing of a statement by Guinea-Bissau to 2 December. Oral statements were made by representatives of the parties at four public sittings held on 6 and 7 December. On 18 December, the Tribunal delivered its judgement in the case.

In 2004, the Tribunal received communications from parties on matters relating to compliance with judgements and orders with respect to the Case concerning Land Reclamation by Singapore in and around the Straits of Johor (Malaysia v. Singapore) [YUN 2003, p. 1353]. By a joint communication dated 9 January, Malaysia and Singapore submitted to the Tribunal the initial report referred to in article 95, paragraph 1, of the Rules, pursuant to paragraph 106 (3) of the Order of the Tribunal of 8 October 2003. By a joint communication from the parties dated 24 September 2004, the Tribunal received the interim report regarding works in Area D at Pulau Tekong referred to in paragraph 106 (1) (a) (ii) of the Order of the Tribunal dated 8 October 2003. By a joint communication of 8 October 2004, the parties informed the Tribunal that the group of experts established to conduct the study referred to in paragraph 106 (1) (a) (i) of the Tribunal's Order had requested an extension of the deadline for the completion of the study. The Tribunal received the final study of the group of experts by a joint communication from the parties dated 8 November.

On 14 December, the Agreement between the International Tribunal for the Law of the Sea and the Federal Republic of Germany regarding the Headquarters of the Tribunal was signed. The Agreement defined the legal status of the Tribunal in Germany and regulated the relations between them.

Commission on the Limits of the Continental Shelf

In 2004, the Commission on the Limits of the Continental Shelf, established in 1997 [YUN 1997, p. 1362], held its thirteenth (26-30 April) [CLCS/39] and fourteenth (30 August-3 September) [CLCS/ 42] sessions in New York.

At its thirteenth session, the Commission finalized the review of its procedures by adopting a revised set of Rules of Procedures [CLCS/40], annex III of which contained the "Modus Operandi for the consideration of a submission made to the Commission on the Limits of the Continental Shelf", consolidating the Modus Operandi of the Commission. In addition, the Commission adopted several amendments to the Rules of Procedure. The revision process was carried out on the basis of the practical experience gained from examining the first (2003) submission, by the Russian Federation, regarding the establishment of the outer limits of the continental shelf beyond 200 nautical miles. The consolidation of all existing procedural rules into a single document would make them easier to understand and facilitate their application and interpretation by coastal States wishing to make submissions.

The Commission was informed that the development of a training manual to assist States in acquiring the knowledge and skills necessary to prepare a submission was at an advanced stage. It was under preparation by the Division for Ocean Affairs and the Law of the Sea of the Office of Legal Affairs, with the assistance of two Commission members as coordinators.

The Commission also signed a letter for transmittal to the Russian Federation in response to its questions regarding the recommendations made on its submission.

At its fourteenth session, the Commission considered, among other agenda items, a submission by Brazil, the training manual on submissions, the projected workload of the Commission and its need for appropriate facilities, the consolidation of the rules of procedure, the election of officers, and vacancies in the subcommission established to consider the Russian Federation's submission.

The nineteenth Hamilton Shirley Amerasinghe Fellowship, established in 1981 [YUN 1981, pp. 130 & 139], was awarded to Milinda Gunetilleke of Sri Lanka.

Other developments related to the Convention

In response to General Assembly resolution 58/240 [YUN 2003, p. 1355], the Secretary-General submitted a March report with a later addendum on oceans and the law of the sea [A/59/62 & Add.1], in which he described the status of UNCLOS and its two implementing Agreements, and discussed issues related to marine space; developments relating to the institutions established by UNCLOS since 1994; capacity-building; developments relating to international shipping activities; maritime security and crimes at sea; the marine environment, marine resources and sustainable development; new sustainable use of the oceans, including the conservation and management of the biological diversity of the seabed in areas beyond national jurisdiction; and international co-operation and coordination.

The Secretary-General noted that maritime security and assistance to persons in distress at sea dominated discussions in several forums in the area of navigation. He said it was paramount for States to take all necessary action to strengthen maritime security to ensure that ships were not used for terrorist or criminal purposes and emphasized that captains of merchant ships were duty-bound to assist persons in distress at sea regardless of their nationality or status.

The Secretary-General further emphasized that increasing awareness of the rich biological diversity of the areas beyond the limits of national jurisdiction, as well as concerns regarding the threats posed to it by human activities, had led to closer examination of the existing conservation and management regimes. UNCLOS had set out a legal framework within which all activities in the oceans were to be conducted, including in areas beyond national jurisdiction, which was supplemented by a number of international instruments adopted at the global and regional levels. He suggested that the General Assembly consider what further action was required, keeping in mind that the protection of vulnerable marine ecosystems and biodiversity depended on the specificities of particular marine areas and on the type of activities that would need to be regulated. As a first step, the location of ecosystems or species and their degree of sensitivity to threats, the specific threats to which such ecosystems or species were highly sensitive, and the activities posing such threats needed to be clearly identified on the basis of sound science and the precautionary approach. Second, priorities for action should include the identification of existing and/or required mechanisms to confront and alleviate threats in those areas and of the authorities responsible for dealing with those threats.

The Secretary-General recommended that States parties review their national legislation to ensure its conformity with the Convention; review any declarations made at the time of signature or ratification or accession to ensure that they were in accordance with the Convention; and submit the charts and/or coordinates required under the Convention. Other recommendations called on States to deposit their oceans-related legislation with the Division for Ocean Affairs and the Law of the Sea for publication in the Law of the Sea Bulletin and on its website; endeavour to establish the limits of their maritime zones and to settle any maritime boundaries with their neighbours; consider establishing national marine policies integrating all aspects of ocean affairs; endeavour to coordinate better the work of their various departments dealing with ocean affairs in order to manage the areas and activities under their national jurisdiction in an integrated manner; and be guided by those same consistent, integrated oceans policies in their cooperation with other States. International organizations were to collect national legislation in their areas of competence for publication on their websites. Since some States might lack the technical, administrative or financial capacity to implement the Convention, capacity-building by the United Nations and other international organizations was essential to assist individual States and to ensure the development of an integrated global regime for the oceans.

Marine environment:

Global Marine Assessment

Further responding to General Assembly resolution 58/240 [YUN 2003, p. 1355], the Secretary-General submitted a July report [A/59/126] providing an account of the discussions that took place at the Global Marine Assessment (GMA) International Workshop (New York, 8-11 June), convened in conjunction with the fifth meeting of the United Nations Open-ended Informal Consultative Process on Oceans and the Law of the Sea (7-11 June). The Workshop further considered and reviewed a draft document [A/AC.271/WP.1] prepared by a group of experts, as requested by resolution 58/240, on the scope, general framework and outline of the regular process of GMA reporting; peer review; secretariat; capacity-building; and funding. It also considered the comments sent by States, intergovernmental organizations and non-governmental organizations (NGOs) [A/AC.271/WP.2 & Add.1].

The GMA Workshop recommended that the Assembly invite the Secretary-General to establish an inter-agency task force to initiate and co-ordinate the next stage of preparatory work necessary to establish the formal GMA and inform Member States accordingly. For the start-up phase, the task force should first organize an "Assessment of Assessments" aimed at: assembling information about scientific assessments (including assessments covering social and economic issues) relevant to GMA that had already been carried out under the purview of UN agencies and global treaty organizations, regional organizations, national Governments and other organizations as appropriate; making a critical appraisal of those assessments; and assessing how well they had been communicated to policy makers at the national, regional and global levels. Second, in the light of that assessment, the task force should consult with Member States and relevant regional organizations to identify where the technical or scientific capacity to undertake marine assessments needed strengthening. Third, it should prepare summary information on relevant existing intergovernmental regional organizations and arrangements, and current scientific work. In carrying out its work, the task force should conform to the 2002 Johannesburg Plan of Implementation [YUN 2002, p. 822] and relevant Assembly resolutions. It should communicate its plans and progress to all Member States on a regular basis and provide them the opportunity to comment on and contribute to the development of the work at appropriate points.

United Nations Open-ended Informal Consultative Process

In accordance with General Assembly resolution 58/240 [YUN 2003, p. 1355], the fifth meeting of the United Nations Open-ended Informal Consultative Process on Oceans and the Law of the Sea (New York, 7-11 June) [A/59/122] focused its discussions on new sustainable uses of the oceans, including the conservation and management of the biological diversity of the seabed in the areas beyond national jurisdiction. It also discussed the report of the Consultative Group on Flag State Implementation [A/59/63 & Corr.1], which conducted a thorough investigation into all aspects—political, legal, economic and social—of the issues raised by the lack of control by flag States over their vessels, in contravention of international rules and standards. The Group's report contained a list of flag State obligations under UNCLOS, the United Nations Fish Stocks Agreement and a broad range of other international instruments. Based on its discussions and also with respect to Assembly resolution 54/14 [YUN 2003, p. 1347], the Consultative Process presented a series of agreed recommendations for the Assembly's consideration.

Established by Assembly resolution 54/33 [YUN 1999, p. 994] to facilitate the Assembly's annual review of developments in ocean affairs, the Consultative Process noted that the period since its fourth meeting [YUN 2003, p. 1355] had seen increasing concerns expressed by many States, scientists and several NGOs over the ineffective conservation and management of the biodiversity of the seabed beyond national jurisdiction. That was a part of the ocean environment that remained largely unexplored but contained areas rich in unique and diverse species and ecosystems, with high levels of endemism and, in some instances, with a relationship to the non-living resources of the Area.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 17 November [meeting 56], the General Assembly adopted resolution 59/24 [draft: A/59/L.22 & Add.1] by recorded vote (141-1-2) [agenda item 49 (a)].

Oceans and the law of the sea

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 49/28 of 6 December 1994, 52/26 of 26 November 1997, 54/33 of 24 November 1999, 57/141 of 12 December 2002, 58/240 of 23 December 2003 and other relevant resolutions adopted subsequent to the entry into force of the United Nations Convention on the Law of the Sea ("the Convention") on 16 November 1994,

Emphasizing the universal and unified character of the Convention and its fundamental importance for the maintenance and strengthening of international peace and security, as well as for the sustainable development of the oceans and seas,

Reaffirming that the Convention sets out the legal framework within which all activities in the oceans and seas must be carried out and is of strategic importance as the basis for national, regional and global action and cooperation in the marine sector, and that its integrity needs to be maintained, as recognized also by the United Nations Conference on Environment and Development in chapter 17 of Agenda 21,

Noting with satisfaction the tenth anniversary of the entry into force of the Convention on 16 November 2004, and recognizing the pre-eminent contribution provided by the Convention to the strengthening of peace, security, cooperation and friendly relations among all nations in conformity with the principles of justice and equal rights and to the promotion of the economic and social advancement of all peoples of the world, in accordance with the purposes and principles of the United Nations as set forth in the Charter of the United Nations,

Conscious that the problems of ocean space are closely interrelated and need to be considered as a whole through an integrated, interdisciplinary and intersectoral approach,

Reaffirming the need to improve cooperation and coordination at all levels, in accordance with the Convention, in order to address all aspects of oceans and seas in an integrated manner and to promote the integrated management and sustainable development of the oceans and seas,

Recalling the essential role of international cooperation and coordination at all levels to support and supplement the efforts of each State in promoting the implementation and observance of the Convention, including the integrated management and sustainable development of coastal and marine areas,

Reiterating the essential need for capacity-building to ensure that all States, especially developing countries, in particular the least developed countries and small island developing States, as well as coastal African States, are able both to implement the Convention and to benefit from the sustainable development of the oceans and seas, as well as to participate fully in global and regional forums and processes dealing with oceans and law of the sea issues,

Recognizing the important role that the competent international organizations have in relation to ocean affairs, in implementing the Convention and in promoting the sustainable development of the oceans and seas,

Emphasizing the need to strengthen the ability of competent international organizations to contribute, at the global, regional, subregional and bilateral levels, through cooperation programmes with Governments, to the development of national capacity in marine science and the sustainable management of the oceans and their resources,

Recalling that marine science, by improving knowledge, through sustained research efforts and the evaluation of monitoring results, and applying such knowledge to management and decision-making, is important for eradicating poverty, contributing to food security, conserving the world's marine environment and resources, helping to understand, predict and respond to natural events, and promoting the sustainable development of the oceans and seas,

Recalling also its decision to establish a regular process under the United Nations for global reporting and assessment of the state of the marine environment, including socio-economic aspects, both current and foreseeable, building on existing regional assessments, in its resolutions 57/141 and 58/240, as recommended by the World Summit on Sustainable Development, noting the work of the International Workshop, held in conjunction with the fifth meeting of the United Nations Open-ended Informal Consultative Process on Oceans and the Law of the Sea ("the Consultative Process") held from 8 to 11 June 2004, reaffirming its support for this objective, and noting the need for cooperation among all States to this end,

Reiterating its concern at the adverse impacts on the marine environment and biodiversity, in particular on vulnerable marine ecosystems, including corals, of human activities, such as overutilization of living marine resources, the use of destructive practices, physical impacts by ships, the introduction of alien invasive species and marine pollution from all sources, including from land-based sources and vessels, in particular through the illegal release of oil and other harmful substances and from dumping, including the dumping of hazardous waste such as radioactive materials, nuclear waste and dangerous chemicals,

Recognizing that hydrographic surveys and nautical charting are critical to the safety of navigation and life at sea, environmental protection, including vulnerable marine ecosystems and the economics of the global shipping industry, and recognizing in this regard that the move towards electronic charting not only provides significantly increased benefits for safe navigation and management of ship movement, but also provides data and information that can be used for sustainable fisheries activities and other sectoral uses of the marine environment, the delimitation of maritime boundaries and environmental protection,

Noting the important role of the Commission on the Limits of the Continental Shelf ("the Commission") in assisting States parties in the implementation of the Convention, through the examination of submissions by coastal States regarding the outer limits of the continental shelf beyond 200 nautical miles, and also noting the need to ensure the effective functioning of the Commission and its subcommissions, in particular the participation of the members of the Commission in its subcommissions,

Taking note of the report on the work of the fifth meeting of the Consultative Process, established by the General Assembly in its resolution 54/33 in order to facilitate the annual review by the Assembly of developments in ocean affairs and extended for three years by its resolution 57/141,

Taking note also of the report of the Secretary-General, and emphasizing in this regard the critical role of the annual comprehensive report of the Secretary-General, which integrates information on developments relating to the implementation of the Convention and the work of the Organization, its specialized agencies and other institutions in the field of ocean affairs and the law of the sea at the global and regional levels, and as a result constitutes the basis for the annual consideration and review of developments relating to ocean affairs and the law of the sea by the General Assembly as the global institution having the competence to undertake such a review,

Noting the responsibilities of the Secretary-General under the Convention and related resolutions of the General Assembly, in particular resolutions 49/28, 52/26 and 54/33, and in this context the increase in responsibilities of the Division for Ocean Affairs and the Law of the Sea of the Office of Legal Affairs of the Secretariat, in particular in view of the growing involvement of the Division with new developments such as the regular process for the global reporting and assessment of the state of the marine environment, including socio-economic aspects, with increasing capacity-building activities and assistance to the Commission, and the role of the Division in inter-agency coordination and cooperation,

Emphasizing that ships and watercraft of all descriptions and ages hold essential information on the history of humankind and that archaeological heritage is a non-renewable resource, deposited over thousands of years, but vulnerable to destruction through modern technologies,

I

Implementation of the Convention and related agreements and instruments

1. Calls upon all States that have not done so, in order to achieve the goal of universal participation, to become parties to the Convention, and the Agreement relating to the Implementation of Part XI of the United Nations Convention on the Law of the Sea of 10 December 1982 ("the Agreement");

2. Reaffirms the unified character of the Convention;

3. Calls upon all States that have not done so to become parties to the Agreement for the Implementation of the Provisions of the United Nations Convention on the Law of the Sea of 10 December 1982 relating to the Conservation and Management of Straddling Fish Stocks and Highly Migratory Fish Stocks ("the Fish Stocks Agreement");

4. Once again calls upon States to harmonize, as a matter of priority, their national legislation with the provisions of the Convention, to ensure the consistent application of those provisions and to ensure also that any declarations or statements that they have made or make when signing, ratifying or acceding to the Convention do not purport to exclude or to modify the legal effect of the provisions of the Convention in their application to the State concerned and to withdraw any such declarations or statements;

5. Calls upon States parties to the Convention to deposit with the Secretary-General charts or lists of geographical coordinates, as provided for in the Convention;

6. Requests the Secretary-General to improve the existing Geographic Information System for the deposit by States of charts and geographical coordinates concerning maritime zones, including lines of delimitation, submitted in compliance with the Convention, and to give due publicity thereto, in particular by implementing, in cooperation with relevant international organizations, such as the International Hydrographic Organization, the technical standards for the collection, storage and dissemination of the information deposited, in order to ensure compatibility among the Geographic Information System, electronic nautical charts and other systems developed by these organizations;

7. Urges all States to cooperate, directly or through competent international bodies, in taking measures to protect and preserve objects of an archaeological and historical nature found at sea, in conformity with article 303 of the Convention;

II

Capacity-building

8. Calls upon bilateral and multilateral donor agencies and international financial institutions to keep their programmes systematically under review to ensure the availability in all States, particularly in developing States, of the economic, legal, navigational, scientific and technical skills necessary for the full implementation of the Convention and the objectives of the present resolution as well as the sustainable development of the oceans and seas nationally, regionally and globally, and in so doing to bear in mind the rights of landlocked developing States;

9. Encourages intensified efforts to build capacity for developing countries, in particular for the least developed countries and small island developing States, as well as coastal African States, to improve hydrographic services and the production of nautical charts, including the mobilization of resources and building of capacity with support from international financial institutions and the donor community, recognizing that economies of scale can apply in some instances at the regional level through shared facilities, technical capabilities and information for the provision of hydrographic services and the preparation of and access to nautical charts;

10. Calls upon States and international financial institutions, including through bilateral, regional and global cooperation programmes and technical partnerships, to continue to strengthen capacity-building activities, in particular in developing countries, in the field of marine scientific research by, inter alia, training the necessary skilled personnel, providing the necessary equipment, facilities and vessels and transferring environmentally sound technologies;

11. Encourages the Intergovernmental Oceanographic Commission of the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization to continue to disseminate and implement the Criteria and Guidelines on the Transfer of Marine Technology, approved by the Assembly of the Oceanographic Commission at its twenty-second session, in 2003;

12. Encourages States to assist developing States, and especially the least developed States and small island developing States, as well as coastal African States, on a bilateral and, where appropriate, regional level, in the preparation of submissions to the Commission, including the assessment of the nature of the continental shelf of a coastal State made in the form of a desktop study, and the mapping of the outer limits of its continental shelf;

III

Trust funds and fellowships

13. Welcomes recent capacity-building initiatives, and in this context takes note with satisfaction of the conclusion of an arrangement between the United Nations and the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations regarding the administration of the Assistance Fund established under Part VII of the Fish Stocks Agreement, and the conclusion of a capacity-building trust fund project agreement between the United Nations and the Nippon Foundation of Japan, focusing on human resources development for developing coastal States parties and non-parties to the Convention in the field of ocean affairs and the law of the sea or related disciplines;

14. Recognizes the importance of assisting developing States, in particular the least developed States and small island developing States, in implementing the Convention, and urges States, intergovernmental organizations and agencies, national institutions, non-governmental organizations and international financial institutions, as well as natural and juridical persons, to make voluntary financial or other contributions to the trust funds, as referred to in resolution 57/141, established for this purpose;

15. Also recognizes the importance of the Hamilton Shirley Amerasinghe Memorial Fellowship Programme on the Law of the Sea established by the General Assembly in its resolution 35/116 of 10 December 1980, and urges Member States and others in a position to do so to contribute to the further development of the Fellowship Programme;

IV

Meeting of States Parties

16. Takes note of the report of the fourteenth Meeting of States Parties to the Convention;

17. Requests the Secretary-General to convene the fifteenth Meeting of States Parties to the Convention in New York from 16 to 24 June 2005 and to provide the services required;

Settlement of disputes

18. Notes with satisfaction the continued and significant contribution of the International Tribunal for the Law of the Sea ("the Tribunal") to the peaceful settlement of disputes in accordance with Part XV of the Convention, and underlines the important role and authority of the Tribunal concerning the interpretation or application of the Convention and the Agreement;

19. Equally pays tribute to the important and long-standing role of the International Court of Justice with regard to the peaceful settlement of disputes concerning the law of the sea;

20. Encourages States parties to the Convention that have not yet done so to consider making a written declaration choosing from the means set out in article 287 of the Convention for the settlement of disputes concerning the interpretation or application of the Convention and the Agreement;

21. Recalls the obligation under article 296 of the Convention requiring all parties to a dispute before a court or a tribunal referred to in article 287 of the Convention to comply promptly with any decisions rendered by such court or tribunal;

22. Encourages States parties to the Convention that have not yet done so to nominate conciliators and arbitrators in accordance with annexes V and VII to the Convention, and requests the Secretary-General to continue to update and circulate lists of these conciliators and arbitrators on a regular basis;

VI The Area

23. Notes with satisfaction the progress of the discussions on issues relating to the regulations for prospecting and exploration for polymetallic sulphides and cobalt-rich ferromanganese crusts in the Area, and reiterates the importance of the ongoing elaboration by the International Seabed Authority ("the Authority"), pursuant to article 145 of the Convention, of rules, regulations and procedures to ensure the effective protection of the marine environment, the protection and conservation of the natural resources of the Area and the prevention of damage to its flora and fauna from harmful effects that may arise from activities in the Area;

24. Takes note of the Workshop for the establishment of environmental baselines at deep seafloor cobalt-rich crusts and deep seabed polymetallic sulphide mine sites in the Area for the purpose of evaluating the likely effects of exploration and exploitation on the marine environment, held in Kingston from 6 to 10 September 2004;

VII

Effective functioning of the Authority and the Tribunal

25. Appeals to all States parties to the Convention to pay their assessed contributions to the Authority and to the Tribunal in full and on time;

26. Calls upon States that have not done so to consider ratifying or acceding to the Agreement on the Privileges and Immunities of the Tribunal and to the Protocol on the Privileges and Immunities of the Authority;

VIII

The continental shelf and the work of the Commission

27. Encourages States parties to the Convention that are in a position to do so to make every effort to make submissions to the Commission regarding the establishment of the outer limits of the continental shelf beyond 200 nautical miles within the time period established by the Convention, taking into account the decision of the eleventh Meeting of States Parties to the Convention;

28. Notes with satisfaction the progress in the work of the Commission, especially that the consideration of the first submissions regarding the establishment of the outer limits of the continental shelf beyond 200 nautical miles has begun, and that a number of States have advised of their intention to make submissions in the near future;

29. Approves the convening by the Secretary-General of the fifteenth session of the Commission in New York from 4 to 22 April 2005, and of the sixteenth session of the Commission from 29 August to 16 September 2005, on the understanding that the second and third weeks of each session will be used by the Commission for a technical examination of submissions at the Geographic Information System Laboratory and other technical facilities at the Division for Ocean Affairs and the Law of the Sea;

30. Urges the Secretary-General to take all necessary actions to ensure that the Commission can fulfil the functions entrusted to it under the Convention;

31. Requests the Secretary-General to submit to the General Assembly at its sixtieth session proposals on how the requirements of the Commission could be best accommodated, taking into account the concerns expressed in the statement by the Chairman of the Commission at its fourteenth session, regarding the expectation that new submissions will require concomitant meetings of several subcommissions for their examination;

32. Also requests the Secretary-General, in cooperation with States and relevant international organizations and institutions, to consider developing and making available training courses, based on the outline for a five-day training course prepared by the Commission in order to facilitate the preparation of submissions in accordance with its Scientific and Technical Guidelines, and welcomes the progress made by the Division for Ocean Affairs and the Law of the Sea in preparing a training manual to assist States in preparation of submissions to the Commission;

33. Encourages States to exchange views in order to increase understanding of issues arising from the application of article 76 of the Convention, thus facilitating preparation of submissions by States, in particular developing States, to the Commission, and welcomes initiatives in this regard, including the Conference on Legal and Scientific Aspects of Continental Shelf Limits, held in Reykjavik from 25 to 27 June 2003, the proceedings of which have been published and distributed worldwide;

IX

Maritime safety and security and flag State implementation

34. Encourages States to ratify or accede to international agreements addressing the safety and security of navigation and to adopt the necessary measures consistent with the Convention, aimed at implementing and enforcing the rules contained in those agreements;

35. Welcomes the adoption by the International Maritime Organization of Guidelines on Places of Refuge for Ships in Need of Assistance, encourages States to draw up plans and to establish procedures to implement those Guidelines, and invites States to participate in the consideration of those instruments by the International Maritime Organization;

36. Invites the International Hydrographic Organization and the International Maritime Organization to continue their coordinated efforts, to jointly adopt measures with a view to encouraging greater international cooperation and coordination for the transition to electronic nautical charts and to increase the coverage of hydrographic information on a global basis, especially in the areas of international navigation and ports and where there are vulnerable or protected marine areas;

37. Welcomes the adoption by the General Conference of the International Atomic Energy Agency at its forty-eighth session of resolution GC(48)/RES/10, concerning measures to strengthen international co-operation in nuclear, radiation and transport safety and waste management, including those aspects relating to maritime transport, and also welcomes the approval of the Action Plan for the Safety of Transport of Radioactive Materials by the Board of Governors of the Agency in March 2004;

38. Once again urges flag States without an effective maritime administration and appropriate legal frameworks to establish or enhance the necessary infrastructure, legislative and enforcement capabilities to ensure effective compliance with, and implementation and enforcement of, their responsibilities under international law and, until such action is undertaken, to consider declining the granting of the right to fly their flag to new vessels, suspending their registry or not opening a registry;

39. Welcomes the report of the Consultative Group on Flag State Implementation, and invites all concerned organizations to disseminate it widely;

40. Also welcomes the progress made by the International Maritime Organization on the establishment and further development of a voluntary International Maritime Organization member State audit scheme, in such a manner as not to exclude the possibility in the future of it becoming mandatory;

41. Requests that the Secretary-General report to the General Assembly at its sixty-first session on the study undertaken by the International Maritime Organization in cooperation with other competent international organizations following the invitation extended to it in resolution 58/240 and resolution 58/14 of 24 November 2003 to examine and clarify the role of the "genuine link" in relation to the duty of flag States to exercise effective control over ships flying their flag, including fishing vessels, and the potential consequences of non-compliance with duties and obligations of flag States described in relevant international instruments;

42. Encourages relevant international organizations to further develop ideas to devise means of discouraging owners and operators from non-compliance with the requirements imposed by flag States in carrying out their duties and obligations under relevant international instruments;

43. Welcomes the progress made by the International Labour Organization in the preparation of a consolidated maritime labour convention;

44. Recognizes the important role of port State control in promoting the effective enforcement by flag States of, and compliance by shipowners and charterers with, flag States' and internationally agreed safety, labour and pollution standards, as well as maritime security regulations and conservation and management measures, and encourages Member States to improve the exchange of appropriate information between port States control authorities;

45. Invites the International Maritime Organization to take steps within its mandate to harmonize, coordinate and evaluate port State control in relation to safety and pollution standards, as well as maritime security regulations and, in collaboration with the International Labour Organization, labour standards so as to promote the implementation of globally agreed minimum standards by all States, and invites the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations to continue its work in promoting port State measures in relation to fishing vessels in order to combat illegal, unreported and unregulated fishing;

46. Calls upon flag and port States to take all measures consistent with international law necessary to prevent the operation of sub-standard vessels and illegal, unreported and unregulated fishing activities;

47. Urges all States, in cooperation with the International Maritime Organization, to combat piracy and armed robbery at sea by adopting measures, including those relating to assistance with capacity-building through training of seafarers, port staff and enforcement personnel in the prevention, reporting and investigation of incidents, bringing the alleged perpetrators to justice, in accordance with international law, and by adopting national legislation, as well as providing enforcement vessels and equipment and guarding against fraudulent ship registration;

48. Welcomes the progress in regional cooperation in the prevention and suppression of piracy and armed robbery at sea in some geographical areas, and urges States to give urgent attention to promoting, adopting and implementing cooperation agreements, in particular at the regional level in high-risk areas;

49. Notes the concerns of the Council and the Secretary-General of the International Maritime Organization with regard to keeping shipping lanes of strategic importance and significance safe and open to international maritime traffic and thereby ensuring the uninterrupted flow of traffic, and welcomes the request of the Council in this regard that the Secretary-General of the International Maritime Organization continue work on the issue in collaboration with parties concerned and report developments to the Council at its next session;

50. Urges States to become parties to the Convention for the Suppression of Unlawful Acts against the Safety of Maritime Navigation and its Protocol, invites States to participate in the review of those instruments by the Legal Committee of the International Maritime Organization to strengthen the means of combating such unlawful acts, including terrorist acts, and also urges States to take appropriate measures to ensure the effective implementation of those instruments, in particular through the adoption of legislation, where appropriate, aimed at ensuring that there is a proper framework for responses to incidents of armed robbery and terrorist acts at sea;

51. Welcomes the entry into force of the International Ship and Port Facility Security Code and related amendments to the International Convention for the Safety of Life at Sea on 1 July 2004, as well as the adoption by the International Maritime Organization of the theme "International Maritime Organization 2004: Focus on Maritime Security" for the twenty-seventh World Maritime Day, and urges all States to work with that organization to promote safe and secure shipping while ensuring freedom of navigation;

52. Also welcomes the entry into force of the Protocol against the Smuggling of Migrants by Land, Sea and

Air, supplementing the United Nations Convention against Transnational Organized Crime and of the Protocol to Prevent, Suppress and Punish Trafficking in Persons, Especially Women and Children, supplementing the United Nations Convention against Transnational Organized Crime, and urges States that have not yet done so to become parties to the Protocols and to take appropriate measures to ensure their effective implementation;

53. Further welcomes the adoption by the International Maritime Organization of amendments to the International Convention on Maritime Search and Rescue and to the International Convention for the Safety of Life at Sea relating to the delivery of persons rescued at sea to a place of safety and of the associated Guidelines on the Treatment of Persons Rescued at Sea;

Marine environment, marine resources, marine biodiversity and the protection of vulnerable marine ecosystems

54. Emphasizes once again the importance of the implementation of Part XII of the Convention in order to protect and preserve the marine environment and its living marine resources against pollution and physical degradation, and calls upon all States to cooperate and take measures, directly or through competent international organizations, for the protection and preservation of the marine environment;

55. Calls upon all States that have not yet done so to become parties to and implement the 1996 Protocol to the Convention on the Prevention of Marine Pollution by Dumping of Wastes and Other Matter, 1972, and protect and preserve the marine environment from all sources of pollution and take effective measures, according to their scientific, technical and economic capabilities, to prevent, reduce and, where practicable, eliminate pollution caused by dumping or incineration at sea of wastes or other matter;

56. Welcomes the adoption by the International Maritime Organization of amendments to the International Convention for the Prevention of Pollution from Ships of 1973, as modified by the Protocol of 1978 relating thereto, providing for the accelerated phase-out of single-hull tankers and a phase-out scheme for the carriage of heavy grade fuel oil in single-hull tankers;

57. Also welcomes the adoption by the International Maritime Organization of the International Convention for the Control and Management of Ships' Ballast Water and Sediments, and calls upon States to become parties to that Convention;

58. Calls upon all States that have not yet done so to become parties to the International Convention on the Control of Harmful Anti-fouling Systems on Ships;

59. Welcomes the adoption of the Protocol establishing an International Oil Pollution Compensation Supplementary Fund, and calls upon States to become parties to that Protocol;

60. Encourages States, in accordance with the Convention and other relevant instruments, either bilaterally or regionally, to jointly develop and promote contingency plans for responding to pollution incidents, as well as other incidents that are likely to have significant adverse effects on the marine environment and biodiversity;

61. Notes with interest the decision taken at the fifty-second session of the Marine Environment Protection Committee of the International Maritime Organization to designate the Western European Waters as a particularly sensitive sea area;

62. Welcomes the entry into force of the Stockholm Convention on Persistent Organic Pollutants, and calls upon all States that have not yet done so to become parties to that Convention;

63. Calls upon States to continue to prioritize action on marine pollution from land-based sources as part of their national sustainable development strategies and programmes, in an integrated and inclusive manner, and to advance the implementation of the Global Programme of Action for the Protection of the Marine Environment from Land-based Activities and the Montreal Declaration on the Protection of the Marine Environment from Land-based Activities;

64. Welcomes the adoption of resolution A.962(23) by the International Maritime Organization on 5 December 2003, entitled "International Maritime Organization Guidelines on Ship Recycling", and calls upon States to follow these Guidelines in order to minimize marine pollution;

65. Also welcomes the continued work of States, the United Nations Environment Programme and regional organizations in the implementation of the Global Programme of Action for the Protection of the Marine Environment from Land-based Activities, and encourages increased emphasis on the link between freshwater, the coastal zone and marine resources in the implementation of international development goals, including those contained in the United Nations Millennium Declaration and of the time-bound targets in the Plan of Implementation of the World Summit on Sustainable Development ("Johannesburg Plan of Implementation"), in particular the target on sanitation, and the Monterrey Consensus of the International Conference on Financing for Development;

66. Calls upon States to implement strategies and programmes for an integrated ecosystem-based approach to management, developed by the Conference of the Parties to the Convention on Biological Diversity, the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations and other relevant global and regional organizations, and urges those organizations to cooperate in the development of practical guidance to assist States in this regard;

67. Takes note of part two of the addendum to the report of the Secretary-General on oceans and the law of the sea describing the threats and risks to vulnerable and threatened marine ecosystems and biodiversity in areas beyond national jurisdiction, as well as details of conservation and management measures addressing these issues, prepared pursuant to the request contained in paragraph 52 of resolution 58/240;

68. Reaffirms the need for States and competent international organizations to urgently consider ways to integrate and improve, on a scientific basis and in accordance with the Convention and related agreements and instruments, the management of risks to the marine biodiversity of seamounts, cold water corals, hydrothermal vents and certain other underwater features;

69. Welcomes decision VII/5 on marine and coastal biological diversity adopted at the seventh meeting of the Conference of the Parties to the Convention on Biological Diversity;

70. Calls upon States and international organizations to urgently take action to address, in accordance with international law, destructive practices that have adverse impacts on marine biodiversity and ecosystems, including seamounts, hydrothermal vents and cold water corals;

71. Welcomes decision VII/28 adopted at the seventh meeting of the Conference of the Parties to the Convention on Biological Diversity in which the Conference decided to establish an ad hoc open-ended working group on protected areas, and encourages the participation of oceans experts in the working group;

72. Reaffirms the need for States to continue their efforts to develop and facilitate the use of diverse approaches and tools for conserving and managing vulnerable marine ecosystems, including the possible establishment of marine protected areas, consistent with international law and based on the best scientific information available, and the development of representative networks of any such marine protected areas by 2012;

73. Decides to establish an Ad Hoc Open-ended Informal Working Group to study issues relating to the conservation and sustainable use of marine biological diversity beyond areas of national jurisdiction:

(a) To survey the past and present activities of the United Nations and other relevant international organizations with regard to the conservation and sustainable use of marine biological diversity beyond areas of national jurisdiction;

(b) To examine the scientific, technical, economic, legal, environmental, socio-economic and other aspects of these issues;

(c) To identify key issues and questions where more detailed background studies would facilitate consideration by States of these issues;

(d) To indicate, where appropriate, possible options and approaches to promote international cooperation and coordination for the conservation and sustainable use of marine biological diversity beyond areas of national jurisdiction;

74. Requests the Secretary-General to report on the issues referred to in paragraph 73 above in the context of his report on oceans and the law of the sea to the General Assembly at its sixtieth session, in order to assist the Ad Hoc Open-ended Informal Working Group in preparing its agenda, in consultation with all relevant international bodies; to convene the meeting of the Working Group in New York not later than six months after the release of the report; and to arrange support for the performance of its work to be provided by the Division for Ocean Affairs and the Law of the Sea;

75. Encourages States to include relevant experts in their delegations attending the meeting of the Working Group;

76. Recognizes the importance of making the outcomes of the Working Group widely available;

77. Urges States and relevant global and regional bodies to enhance their cooperation in the protection and preservation of mangroves, seagrass beds and coral reefs, including through the exchange of information;

78. Reiterates its support for the International Coral Reef Initiative, takes note of the tenth International Coral Reef Symposium, held in Okinawa, Japan, in 2004, supports the work under the Jakarta Mandate on Marine and Coastal Biological Diversity, and the elaborated Programme of Work on Marine and Coastal Biological Diversity, and notes the progress that the International Coral Reef Initiative and other relevant bodies have made to incorporate cold water coral ecosystems into their programmes;

79. Encourages States to cooperate, directly or through competent international bodies, in exchanging information in the event of accidents involving foreign vessels on coral reefs and in promoting the development of economic assessment techniques for both restoration and non-use values of coral reef systems;

80. Emphasizes the need to mainstream sustainable coral reef management and integrated watershed management into national development strategies, as well as into the activities of relevant United Nations agencies and programmes, international financial institutions and the donor community;

XI

Marine science

81. Calls upon States, individually, or in collaboration with each other or with relevant international organizations and bodies, to improve understanding and knowledge of the deep sea, including, in particular, the extent and vulnerability of deep sea biodiversity and ecosystems, by increasing their marine scientific research activities in accordance with the Convention;

82. Notes the potential for gas hydrates as one source for energy development, as well as the possible associated risks, including those in the context of climate change, and encourages States and, if appropriate, the Authority and the international scientific community to continue to cooperate in deepening the understanding of the issues and in investigating the feasibility, methodology, safety and environmental impacts of the extraction of gas hydrates from the seabed, their distribution and their use;

83. Also notes the potential for cobalt-rich ferromanganese crusts and polymetallic sulphides as important sources of minerals, and in this context encourages States, the Authority and the scientific community to cooperate to explore this potential and to minimize the environmental impacts of the exploration;

XII

Regular process for global reporting and assessment of the state of the marine environment, including socio-economic aspects

84. Takes note of the report on the International Workshop on the regular process for global reporting and assessment of the state of the marine environment, including socio-economic aspects ("the regular process"), including its draft conclusions, convened to consider and review the draft document prepared by the group of experts;

85. Recognizes the urgent need to initiate a start-up phase, the "Assessment of Assessments", as a preparatory stage towards the establishment of the regular process provided for in the Johannesburg Plan of Implementation and resolutions 57/141 and 58/240;

86. Requests the Secretary-General to convene the second International Workshop on the regular process for global reporting and assessment of the state of the marine environment, including socio-economic aspects, from 13 to 15 June 2005 with representatives from States, relevant organizations, agencies and programmes of the United Nations system, other competent intergovernmental organizations and relevant non-governmental organizations, to continue considering issues relating to the establishment of the process, including the scope of the process and a task force to initiate the start-up phase, the "Assessment of Assessments";

87. Also requests the Secretary-General to report on progress relating to establishment of the aforementioned regular process in his annual report to the General Assembly at its sixtieth session;

XIII

Regional cooperation

88. Emphasizes once again the importance of regional organizations and arrangements for cooperation and coordination in integrated oceans management, and, where there are separate regional structures for different aspects of oceans management, such as environmental protection and conservation of marine ecosystems, fisheries management, navigation, scientific research and maritime delimitation, calls for those different structures, where appropriate, to work together for optimal cooperation and coordination;

89. Notes that there have been a number of initiatives at the regional level, in various regions, to further the implementation of the Convention, takes note in this context of the Caribbean-focused Assistance Fund, which is intended to facilitate, mainly through technical assistance, the voluntary undertaking of maritime delimitation negotiations between Caribbean States, takes note once again of the Fund for Peace: Peaceful Settlement of Territorial Disputes, established by the General Assembly of the Organization of American States in 2000 as a primary mechanism, given its broader regional scope, for the prevention and resolution of pending territorial, land border and maritime boundary disputes, and calls upon States and others in a position to do so to contribute to these funds;

XIV

Open-ended informal consultative process on oceans and the law of the sea

90. Requests the Secretary-General to convene the sixth meeting of the Consultative Process in New York from 6 to 10 June 2005 and to provide it with the necessary facilities for the performance of its work and to arrange for support, as appropriate;

91. Recalls its decision to further review the effectiveness and utility of the Consultative Process at its sixtieth session;

92. Recommends that, in its deliberations on the report of the Secretary-General on oceans and the law of the sea at its meeting, the Consultative Process should organize its discussions around the following areas:

(a) Fisheries and their contribution to sustainable development;

(b) Marine debris;

as well as issues discussed at previous meetings;

XV

Inter-agency coordination and cooperation

93. Notes the establishment of the Oceans and Coastal Areas Network (UN-Oceans), a new inter-agency mechanism for coordination and cooperation on issues relating to oceans and coastal issues, called for in paragraph 69 of resolution 58/240;

94. Urges the close and continuous involvement in UN-Oceans of all relevant United Nations programmes, funds and the specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system and the participation of international financial institutions, relevant intergovernmental and other organizations, as well as the Authority and the secretariats of multilateral environmental agreements;

95. Requests the Secretary-General to bring the present resolution to the attention of heads of inter-governmental organizations, the specialized agencies and funds and programmes of the United Nations engaged in activities relating to ocean affairs and the law of the sea, drawing their attention to paragraphs of particular relevance to them, and underlines the importance of their constructive and timely input for the report of the Secretary-General on oceans and the law of the sea and of their participation in relevant meetings and processes;

96. Invites the competent international organizations, as well as funding institutions, to take specific account of the present resolution in their programmes and activities and to contribute to the preparation of the comprehensive report of the Secretary-General on oceans and the law of the sea;

97. Encourages the sponsoring organizations of the Joint Group of Experts on the Scientific Aspects of Marine Environmental Protection to continue to support and provide the necessary assistance to the process of restructuring the Group of Experts;

XVI

Activities of the Division for Ocean Affairs and the Law of the Sea

98. Expresses its appreciation to the Secretary-General for the annual comprehensive report on oceans and the law of the sea and its addendum, prepared by the Division for Ocean Affairs and the Law of the Sea, as well as for the other activities of the Division, in accordance with the provisions of the Convention and the mandate set forth in resolutions 49/28, 52/26, 54/33, and 56/12 of 28 November 2001;

99. Requests the Secretary-General to continue to carry out the responsibilities entrusted to him in the Convention and related resolutions of the General Assembly, including resolutions 49/28 and 52/26, and to ensure that appropriate resources are made available to the Division for Ocean Affairs and the Law of the Sea for the performance of such responsibilities under the approved budget for the Organization;

100. Invites Member States and others in a position to do so to support the capacity-building activities of the Division for Ocean Affairs and the Law of the Sea, including, in particular, the training activities to assist developing States in the preparation of their submission to the Commission, and the TRAIN-SEA-COAST Programme of the Division;

XVII

Sixtieth session of the General Assembly

101. Requests the Secretary-General to report to the General Assembly at its sixtieth session on the implementation of the present resolution, including other developments and issues relating to ocean affairs and the law of the sea, in connection with his annual comprehensive report on oceans and the law of the sea, and to provide the report in accordance with the modalities set out in resolutions 49/28, 52/26 and 54/33, and also requests the Secretary-General to make the report available, in its current comprehensive format, at least six weeks in advance of the meeting of the Consultative Process;

102. Notes that the report referred to in paragraph 101 above will also be presented to States parties pursuant to article 319 of the Convention regarding issues of a general nature that have arisen with respect to the Convention;

103. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its sixtieth session the item entitled "Oceans and the law of the sea".

RECORDED VOTE ON RESOLUTION 59/24:

Division for Ocean Affairs and the Law of the Sea

During 2004, the Division for Ocean Affairs and the Law of the Sea of the Office of Legal Affairs continued to fulfil its role as the substantive unit of the UN Secretariat responsible for reviewing and monitoring all developments related to the law of the sea and ocean affairs, as well as for the implementation of UNCLOS and related General Assembly resolutions.

Under its TRAIN-SEA-COAST programme [YUN 1998, p. 1232], designed to build in-country capacity to improve skills in integrated coastal and ocean management, the Division conducted a training course for project managers in the South Pacific (Suva, Fiji, 9-27 February), entitled "Economics in community-based management projects". Another training course for project managers on improving waste-water management in coastal cities was also delivered (Rio Grande, Brazil, 21-25 June).

Chapter V

Other legal questions

The Special Committee on the Charter of the United Nations and on the Strengthening of the Role of the Organization continued in 2004 to consider, among other items, proposals relating to the maintenance of international peace and security in order to strengthen the Organization and the implementation of Charter provisions on assistance to third States affected by the application of sanctions under Chapter VII.

The Committee on Relations with the Host Country continued to address complaints by permanent missions to the United Nations. Matters discussed included transportation and parking issues, delays in issuing visas, travel regulations and acceleration of immigration and customs procedures.

The Sixth (Legal) Committee continued consideration of an international convention against reproductive cloning of human beings and recommended the establishment of a working group to finalize the text of a UN declaration on human cloning.

The United Nations Commission on International Trade Law adopted the Legislative Guide on Insolvency Law and requested the Secretary-General to transmit it to Governments and other interested bodies. The Commission decided to undertake a revision of its Model Law on Procurement of Goods, Construction and Services to reflect new practices, including those resulting from the use of electronic communications in public procurement.

The General Assembly noted the progress achieved towards enhancing cooperation between the United Nations and the Asian-African Legal Consultative Organization.

International organizations and international law

Strengthening the role of the United Nations

Special Committee on United Nations Charter

In accordance with General Assembly resolution 58/248 [YUN 2003, p. 1364], the Special Committee on the Charter of the United Nations and on the Strengthening of the Role of the Organization, at its fifty-ninth session (New York, 29 March–8 April) [A/59/33], continued to consider proposals relating to: the maintenance of international peace and security, according priority to the implementation of the provisions of the Charter of the United Nations on assistance to third States affected by the application of sanctions; the peaceful settlement of disputes between States; the future of the Trusteeship Council; the improvement of the Committee's working methods; and the status of the publications Reperatory of Practice of United Nations Organs and Reperatoire of the Practice of the Security Council.

With regard to the first item, the Russian Federation introduced a revision of its working paper entitled "Declaration on the basic conditions and standard criteria for the introduction of sanctions and other coercive measures and their implementation", reflecting amendments previously proposed, including those at the first reading [YUN 2003, p. 1363]. The Special Committee's working group of the whole completed a paragraph-by-paragraph reading of the paper, subject to additional amendments. Accordingly, the sponsor on 5 April submitted a new revised version for the Committee's consideration in 2005.

The Libyan Arab Jamahiriya observed that the Russian Federation's paper already included two of the three principles proposed in Libya's own revised working paper (2002) on the strengthening of certain principles concerning the impact and application of sanctions; namely, that sanctions constituted exceptional action of last resort and that their imposition should not place economic or humanitarian burdens on the targeted State. Nonetheless, the third principle, on the right of compensation for any unlawful damage done to a targeted State by sanctions imposed without good grounds, deserved further discussion, considering that it related to the topic "Responsibility of international organizations" currently on the work programme of the International Law Commission (see p. 1298).

Regarding the proposal submitted by the Russian Federation (1998) entitled "Fundamentals of the legal basis for United Nations peace-keeping operations in the context of Chapter VI of the Charter of the United Nations", the sponsor stressed that, while the practical issues of peacekeeping were discussed in other UN bodies, the Committee should not be precluded from dealing with its legal aspects. As for referring the working paper to the Special Committee on Peacekeeping Operations and exploring possible cooperation with it towards the preparation of a joint declaration on the subject as suggested by the sponsor, the Chairman pointed out that the Committee had no mandate for such a referral, nor was there a practical need for it.

In regard to the working papers submitted by Cuba (1997 and 1998) entitled "Strengthening the role of the Organization and enhancing its effectiveness", the sponsor pointed out that its proposal contained all of the basic criteria for the revision of the procedures and practices of the Assembly and other UN organs with respect to the maintenance of international peace and security and as such merited discussion by the Committee, notwithstanding the work of other bodies within the Organization on the subject.

Libya stated that its revised proposal (1998) on strengthening the role of the United Nations in the maintenance of international peace and security aimed at analysing the relationship between the Assembly and the Security Council and offering a precise definition of such a relationship. Libya reiterated the imperative of considering its proposal and suggested that it be taken into account, along with Cuba's proposal, in the reform process of those two principal organs, and that the Sixth Committee consider the legal aspects of both proposals and make appropriate recommendations to the Assembly.

Regarding the revised working paper jointly submitted by Belarus and the Russian Federation (2001) proposing that an advisory opinion be sought from the International Court of Justice (ICJ) on the legal consequences of a State's resort to the use of force without prior Council authorization, except in the exercise of the right to self-defence, Belarus pointed to the recent emergence of what it called new approaches to interpreting the Charter provisions on the use of armed force, such as the expansive interpretation of the right to self-defence for the purpose of combating international terrorism. An ICJ opinion would help answer the question of the legality of such approaches and contribute to a uniform interpretation and application of the relevant Charter provisions. It would moreover affirm the Council's key role in legitimizing any enforcement action or use of armed force by individual or groups of States, and regional and subregional bodies.

During the exchange of views on the peaceful settlement of disputes, the point was made that the Committee should identify proposals for discussion on the subject, since it was in that area that it had registered some impressive and valuable successes. The Committee was challenged to be innovative in devising ways of enhancing the various methods of resolving disputes elaborated in the Handbook on the peaceful settlement of disputes between States [Sales No. E.92.V.7], specifically with respect to facilitating resort to arbitration, by drawing attention to texts of compromissory clauses adopted after the publication of the Handbook and other instruments for arbitrating disputes that had since been adopted.

On the future of the Trusteeship Council, it was reiterated that it would be premature to abolish it or change its status since its existence entailed no financial implications for the United Nations, and the purpose for which it had been established remained relevant.

A revised working paper on measures to improve the Special Committee's working methods, currently sponsored by Australia, Japan, the Republic of Korea, Thailand and Uganda, was introduced in March. Shortly after its review by the working group, the sponsors, taking account of the various points of view expressed during informal consultations coordinated by Japan, submitted a further revised version of the working paper for consideration in 2005. The text of the agreed points was reproduced in the Committee's report.

As to the Repertory of Practice of United Nations Organs and Repertoire of the Practice of the Security Council, an oral report on the status of the Repertoire was made by the Deputy Director of the Security Council Affairs Division of the Department of Political Affairs, who said the Secretariat was developing a two-track approach for future volumes by simultaneously drafting a supplement covering the period 1996-1999 and a volume covering 2000-2003. This would help address the backlog in the publication by producing a streamlined version of the Repertoire and focus on the contemporary practice and procedure of the Council. The intention was to post individual chapters of the publication, once approved, on the UN website in an advance version. Supplement No. 11 should begin to be available in that format in the spring of 2004; chapters of Supplement No. 12 should follow shortly. Supplement No. 10, covering 1985-1988, had been published in all official languages. Member States were urged to make further contributions to the trust fund for the Repertoire, which was currently depleted.

The Assistant Secretary-General, Officer-in-Charge of the Office of Legal Affairs, reported on the status of the Repertory of Practice of United Nations Organs. He provided information on progress achieved in 2003, including the finalization and submission for publication of four volumes and the preparation of numerous studies for several other volumes; the overall status of the Repertory, comprising 24 published volumes and five volumes submitted for publication; and the UN website for the Repertory providing access to studies from all 29 volumes and to studies on individual Charter Articles from volumes not yet completed. A pilot project was undertaken in co-operation with academia in early 2004 involving a group of externs.

Because the Assembly had not provided for the Repertory as an output of the Organization for 2004-2005, the Special Committee recommended that the Assembly, at its fifty-ninth (2004) session, review at the appropriate technical level the possibility of establishing a trust fund for the preparation, updating and publication of the Repertory, which should accept only voluntary contributions by States, private institutions and individuals.

Report of Secretary-General. In response to General Assembly resolution 58/248 [YUN 2003, p. 1364], the Secretary-General submitted a July report [A/59/189] outlining the efforts taken by the Secretariat to reduce the backlog in the publication of both the Repertory and the Repertoire. The Assembly was invited to consider the Special Committee's recommendation on establishing a trust fund for the Repertory and encouraging contributions to another trust fund for updating the Repertoire.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 2 December [meeting 65], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Sixth Committee [A/59/513], adopted resolution 59/44 without vote [agenda item 147].

Report of the Special Committee on the Charter of the United Nations and on the Strengthening of the Role of the Organization

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 3499(XXX) of 15 December 1975, by which it established the Special Committee on the Charter of the United Nations and on the Strengthening of the Role of the Organization, and its relevant resolutions adopted at subsequent sessions,

Recalling also its resolution 47/233 of 17 August 1993 on the revitalization of the work of the General Assembly,

Recalling further its resolution 47/62 of 11 December 1992 on the question of equitable representation on and increase in the membership of the Security Council,

Taking note of the report of the Open-ended Working Group on the Question of Equitable Representation on and Increase in the Membership of the Security Council and Other Matters Related to the Security Council,

Recalling the elements relevant to the work of the Special Committee contained in its resolution 47/120 B of 20 September 1993,

Recalling also its resolution 51/241 of 31 July 1997 on the strengthening of the United Nations system and its resolution 51/242 of 15 September 1997, entitled "Supplement to an Agenda for Peace", by which it adopted the texts on coordination and the question of sanctions imposed by the United Nations, which are annexed to that resolution,

Recalling further that the International Court of Justice is the principal judicial organ of the United Nations, and reaffirming its authority and independence,

Considering the desirability of finding practical ways and means to strengthen the Court, taking into consideration, in particular, the needs resulting from its increased workload,

Taking note of the ongoing debate on the revised working papers on the working methods of the Special Committee,

Taking note also of the report of the Secretary-General on the Repertory of Practice of United Nations Organs and the Repertoire of the Practice of the Security Council,

Recalling its resolution 58/248 of 23 December 2003,

Having considered the report of the Special Committee on the work of its session held in 2004,

Noting with appreciation the work done by the Special Committee to encourage States to focus on the need to prevent and to settle peacefully their disputes which are likely to endanger the maintenance of international peace and security,

1. Takes note of the report of the Special Committee on the Charter of the United Nations and on the Strengthening of the Role of the Organization;

2. Decides that the Special Committee shall hold its next session from 14 to 24 March 2005;

3. Requests the Special Committee, at its session in 2005, in accordance with paragraph 5 of General Assembly resolution 50/52 of 11 December 1995:

(a) To continue its consideration of all proposals concerning the question of the maintenance of international peace and security in all its aspects in order to strengthen the role of the United Nations and, in this context, to consider other proposals relating to the maintenance of international peace and security already submitted or which may be submitted to the Special Committee at its session in 2005;

(b) To continue to consider, on a priority basis and in an appropriate substantive manner and framework, the question of the implementation of the provisions of the Charter of the United Nations related to assistance to third States affected by the application of sanctions under Chapter VII of the Charter based on all of the related reports of the Secretary-General and the proposals submitted on the question;

(c) To keep on its agenda the question of the peaceful settlement of disputes between States;

(d) To continue to consider proposals concerning the Trusteeship Council in the light of the report of the Secretary-General submitted in accordance with General Assembly resolution 50/55 of 11 December 1995, the report of the Secretary-General entitled "Renewing the United Nations: a programme for reform" and the views expressed by States on this subject at previous sessions of the Assembly;

(e) To continue to consider, on a priority basis, ways and means of improving its working methods and enhancing its efficiency with a view to identifying widely acceptable measures for future implementation;

4. Invites the Special Committee at its session in 2005 to continue to identify new subjects for consideration in its future work with a view to contributing to the revitalization of the work of the United Nations;

5. Notes the readiness of the Special Committee to provide, within its mandate, such assistance as may be sought at the request of other subsidiary bodies of the General Assembly in relation to any issues before them;

6. Requests the Special Committee to submit a report on its work to the General Assembly at its sixtieth session;

7. Takes note of paragraphs 10 and 17 of the report of the Secretary-General;

8. Endorses the efforts of the Secretary-General to eliminate the backlog in the publication of the Reper-toire of the Practice of the Security Council;

9. Requests the Secretary-General to establish a trust fund to eliminate the backlog of the Repertory of Practice of United Nations Organs, which shall accept voluntary contributions by States, private institutions and individuals;

10. Also requests the Secretary-General to continue his efforts, within the level of the currently approved budget, towards making available electronically all versions of the Repertory of Practice of United Nations Organs as early as possible;

11. Further requests the Secretary-General to submit a report on both the Repertory of Practice of United Nations Organs and the Reper-toire of the Practice of the Security Council to the General Assembly at its sixtieth session;

12. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its sixtieth session the item entitled "Report of the Special Committee on the Charter of the United Nations and on the Strengthening of the Role of the Organization".

Charter provisions relating to sanctions

Special Committee consideration. During the Special Committee's consideration of the implementation of the Charter provisions related to assistance to third States affected by sanctions [A/59/33], support was expressed for the continuing consideration of the matter through a working group of the Sixth Committee. Reference was made to the need for pre-assessment and ongoing assessment reports on potential and actual unintended impact of sanctions on those States. To alleviate the hardships they encountered, a number of relief measures were reiterated or advanced, among them the provision of international assistance, the establishment of a fund or a permanent consultative mechanism, multi-channel financial arrangements or economic assistance to minimize losses incurred, and facilitating applications for compensation. Delegations welcomed the continuing recourse by the Council to targeted sanctions and encouraged it to continue making further refinements to sanctions regimes to avoid unintended consequences.

The Committee recommended that the Assembly continue to consider the results of the 1998 expert group's deliberations and findings on developing a methodology for assessing the consequences incurred by third States as a result of preventive or enforcement measures [YUN 1998, p. 1235], taking into account the Committee's current debate; views presented in the Secretary-General's 1999 [YUN 1999, p. 1252] and 2000 [YUN 2000, p. 1271] reports; his views on the main findings of the ad hoc expert group [YUN 2002, p. 1333]; information he was to submit on the follow-up to a 1999 Security Council note [YUN 1999, p. 1252]; and the implementation of the Charter provisions related to assistance to third States affected by the application of sanctions called for by Assembly resolutions yearly since 1995, the latest being resolution 58/80 [YUN 2003, p. 1367].

Security Council consideration. By a January note [S/2004/5], the President of the Security Council announced the Council's agreement that Joël W. Adechi (Benin) would serve as Chairman of the informal working group of the Security Council on general issues relating to sanctions, established in 2000 [YUN 2000, p. 1270], until 31 December 2004. He further announced, by a 23 December note [S/2004/1014], that the Council had extended the working group's mandate until 31 December 2005.

In addition to its original mandate of developing general recommendations on how to improve the effectiveness of UN sanctions, the group was also mandated to address the following sanctions-related issues: improving cooperation among sanctions committees, the duration and lifting of sanctions, assessments of the unintended impact of sanctions, improving national implementation of sanctions, enforcement of targeted sanctions, de-listing procedures in relation to the implementation of targeted sanctions, secondary sanctions against States violating sanctions, and improving Secretariat archives and databases, including the Roster of Experts.

Report of Secretary-General. In response to General Assembly resolution 58/80 [YUN 2003, p. 1367], the Secretary-General submitted a September report [A/59/334] highlighting measures for further improving the procedures and working methods of the Security Council and its sanctions committees related to assistance to third States affected by the application of sanctions. It reviewed recent developments on the roles of the Assembly, the Economic and Social Council and the Committee for Programme and Coordination in that regard, as well as the Secretariat's capacity and modalities for implementing inter-governmental mandates and the recommendations of the 1998 ad hoc expert group meeting [YUN 1998, p. 1235] on assistance to such States.

By decision 2004/301 of 23 July, the Economic and Social Council took note of the Secretary-General's note on assistance to third States affected by the application of sanctions and of his 2003 report on the implementation of the Charter provisions related to such assistance.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 2 December [meeting 65], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Sixth Committee [A/59/513], adopted resolution 59/45 without vote [agenda item 147].

Implementation of the provisions of the Charter of the United Nations related to assistance to third States affected by the application of sanctions

The General Assembly,

Concerned about the special economic problems confronting certain States arising from the carrying out of preventive or enforcement measures taken by the Security Council against other States, and taking into account the obligation of Members of the United Nations under Article 49 of the Charter of the United Nations to join in affording mutual assistance in carrying out the measures decided upon by the Security Council,

Recalling the right of third States confronted with special economic problems of that nature to consult the Security Council with regard to a solution of those problems, in accordance with Article 50 of the Charter,

Recognizing the desirability of the consideration of further appropriate procedures for consultations to deal in a more effective manner with the problems referred to in Article 50 of the Charter,

Recalling:

(a) The report of the Secretary-General entitled "An Agenda for Peace", in particular paragraph 41 thereof,

(b) Its resolution 47/120 A of 18 December 1992, entitled "An Agenda for Peace: preventive diplomacy and related matters", its resolution 47/120 B of 20 September 1993, entitled "An Agenda for Peace", in particular section IV thereof, entitled "Special economic problems arising from the implementation of preventive or enforcement measures", and its resolution 51/242 of 15 September 1997, entitled "Supplement to an Agenda for Peace", in particular annex II thereto, entitled "Question of sanctions imposed by the United Nations",

(c) The position paper of the Secretary-General entitled "Supplement to an Agenda for Peace",

(d) The statement by the President of the Security Council of 22 February 1995,

(e) The report of the Secretary-General prepared pursuant to the statement by the President of the Security Council regarding the question of special economic problems of States as a result of sanctions imposed under Chapter VII of the Charter,

(f) The annual overview reports of the Administrative Committee on Coordination for the period from 1992 to 2000 and the annual overview reports of the United Nations System Chief Executives Board for Coordination for 2001 to 2003, in particular the sections on assistance to countries invoking Article 50 of the Charter,

(g) The reports of the Secretary-General on economic assistance to States affected by the implementation of the Security Council resolutions imposing sanctions against the Federal Republic of Yugoslavia and General Assembly resolutions 48/210 of 21 December 1993, 49/21 A of 2 December 1994, 50/58 E of 12 December 1995, 51/30 A of 5 December 1996, 52/169 H of 16 December 1997, 54/96 G of 15 December 1999, 55/170 of 14 December 2000 and 56/110 of 14 December 2001,

(h) The reports of the Special Committee on the Charter of the United Nations and on the Strengthening of the Role of the Organization on the work of its sessions held in the years 1994 to 2004,

(i) The reports of the Secretary-General on the implementation of the provisions of the Charter related to assistance to third States affected by the application of sanctions under Chapter VII of the Charter,

(j) The report of the Secretary-General to the Millennium Assembly of the United Nations, in particular section IV.E thereof, entitled "Targeting sanctions",

(k) The United Nations Millennium Declaration, in particular paragraph 9 thereof,

(l) The report of the Secretary-General entitled "Road map towards implementation of the United Nations Millennium Declaration", in particular paragraphs 56 to 61 thereof,

(m) The report of the Committee for Programme and Coordination on the work of its forty-third session, in particular the recommendation that the Chief Executives Board play a role in better coordinating the analysis of the problems of the countries invoking Article 50 of the Charter, and the development of new methodologies to identify the damage to affected States and new mechanisms to determine the appropriate compensation for them,

Taking note of the report of the Secretary-General on the work of the Organization, in particular paragraphs 78 to 81 thereof,

Recalling that the question of assistance to third States affected by the application of sanctions has been addressed recently in several forums, including the General Assembly, the Security Council, the Economic and Social Council and their subsidiary organs,

Recalling also the measures taken by the Security Council, in accordance with the statement by the President of the Security Council of 16 December 1994, that, as part of the effort of the Council to improve the flow of information and the exchange of ideas between members of the Council and other States Members of the United Nations, there should be increased recourse to open meetings, in particular at an early stage in its consideration of a subject,

Recalling further the measures taken by the Security Council in accordance with the note by the President of the Security Council of 29 January 1999 aimed at improving the work of the sanctions committees, including increasing the effectiveness and transparency of those committees,

Stressing that, in the formulation of sanctions regimes, due account should be taken of the potential effects of sanctions on third States,

Stressing also, in this context, the powers of the Security Council under Chapter VII of the Charter and the primary responsibility of the Council under Article 24 of the Charter for the maintenance of international peace and security in order to ensure prompt and effective action by the United Nations,

Recalling that, under Article 31 of the Charter, any Member of the United Nations that is not a member of the Security Council may participate, without vote, in the discussion of any question brought before the Council whenever the latter considers that the interests of that Member are specially affected,

Recognizing that the imposition of sanctions under Chapter VII of the Charter has been causing special economic problems in third States and that it is necessary to intensify efforts to address those problems effectively,

Taking into consideration the views of third States which could be affected by the imposition of sanctions,

Recognizing that assistance to third States affected by the application of sanctions would further contribute to an effective and comprehensive approach by the international community to sanctions imposed by the Security Council,

Recognizing also that the international community at large and, in particular, international institutions involved in providing economic and financial assistance should continue to take into account and address in a more effective manner the special economic problems of affected third States arising from the carrying out of preventive or enforcement measures taken by the Security Council under Chapter VII of the Charter, in view of their magnitude and of the adverse impact on the economies of those States,

Recalling the provisions of its resolutions 50/51 of 11 December 1995, 51/208 of 17 December 1996, 52/162 of 15 December 1997, 53/107 of 8 December 1998, 54/107 of 9 December 1999, 55/157 of 12 December 2000, 56/87 of 12 December 2001, 57/25 of 19 November 2002 and 58/80 of 9 December 2003,

1. Renews its invitation to the Security Council to consider the establishment of further mechanisms or procedures, as appropriate, for consultations as early as possible under Article 50 of the Charter of the United Nations with third States which are or may be confronted with special economic problems arising from the carrying out of preventive or enforcement measures imposed by the Council under Chapter VII of the Charter, with regard to a solution of those problems, including appropriate ways and means for increasing the effectiveness of its methods and procedures applied in the consideration of requests by the affected States for assistance;

2. Welcomes the measures taken by the Security Council since the adoption of General Assembly resolution 50/51, most recently the note by the President of the Security Council of 18 December 2003, whereby the members of the Security Council agreed to extend the mandate of the informal working group of the Council established in 2000 to develop general recommendations on how to improve the effectiveness of United Nations sanctions, looks forward to the adoption of the proposed outcome document of the working group, in particular those provisions thereof regarding the issues of the unintended impact of sanctions and assistance to States in implementing sanctions, and strongly recommends that the Council continue its efforts to enhance further the effectiveness and transparency of the sanctions committees, to streamline their working procedures and to facilitate access to them by representatives of States that find themselves confronted with special economic problems arising from the carrying out of sanctions;

3. Invites the Security Council, its sanctions committees and the Secretariat to continue to ensure, as appropriate, that:

(a) Both pre-assessment reports and ongoing assessment reports include as part of their analysis the likely and actual unintended impact of the sanctions on third States and recommend ways in which the negative impact of sanctions can be mitigated;

(b) Sanctions committees provide opportunities for third States affected by sanctions to brief them on the unintended impact of sanctions they are experiencing and on assistance needed by them to mitigate the negative impact of sanctions;

(c) The Secretariat continues to provide, upon request, advice and information to third States to help them to pursue means to mitigate the unintended impact of sanctions, for example, on invoking Article 50 of the Charter for consultation with the Security Council;

(d) Where economic sanctions have had severe effects on third States, the Security Council is able to request the Secretary-General to consider appointing a special representative or dispatching, as necessary, fact-finding missions on the ground to undertake necessary assessments and to identify, as appropriate, possible ways of assistance;

(e) The Security Council is able, in the context of situations referred to in subparagraph (d) above, to consider establishing working groups to consider such situations;

4. Requests the Secretary-General to pursue the implementation of General Assembly resolutions 50/51, 51/208, 52/162, 53/107, 54/107, 55/157, 56/87, 57/25 and 58/80 and to ensure that the competent units within the Secretariat develop the adequate capacity and appropriate modalities, technical procedures and guidelines to continue, on a regular basis, to collate and coordinate information about international assistance available to third States affected by the implementation of sanctions, to continue developing a possible methodology for assessing the adverse consequences actually incurred by third States and to explore innovative and practical measures of assistance to the affected third States;

5. Welcomes the report of the Secretary-General containing a summary of the deliberations and main findings of the ad hoc expert group meeting on developing a methodology for assessing the consequences incurred by third States as a result of preventive or enforcement measures and on exploring innovative and practical measures of international assistance to the affected third States, and renews its invitation to States and relevant international organizations within and outside the United Nations system that have not yet done so to provide their views regarding the report of the ad hoc expert group meeting;

6. Takes note of the most recent report of the Secretary-General on this question and, in particular, of his views on the deliberations and main findings, including the recommendations of the ad hoc expert group on the implementation of the provisions of the Charter related to assistance to third States affected by the application of sanctions, as well as the views of States, the organizations of the United Nations system, international financial institutions and other international organizations, as contained in the previous reports of the Secretary-General;

7. Reaffirms the important role of the General Assembly, the Economic and Social Council and the Committee for Programme and Coordination in mobilizing and monitoring, as appropriate, the economic assistance efforts of the international community and the United Nations system on behalf of States confronted with special economic problems arising from the carrying out of preventive or enforcement measures imposed by the Security Council and, as appropriate, in identifying solutions to the special economic problems of those States;

8. Takes note of the decision of the Economic and Social Council, in its resolution 2000/32 of 28 July 2000, to continue its consideration of the question of assistance to third States affected by the application of sanctions, invites the Council, at its organizational session for 2005, to make appropriate arrangements for this purpose within its programme of work for 2005, further invites the Council to continue its consideration of the question of assistance to third States affected by the application of sanctions, and decides to transmit the most recent report of the Secretary-General on the implementation of the provisions of the Charter related to assistance to third States affected by the application of sanctions, together with the relevant background materials, to the Council at its substantive session of 2005;

9. Invites the organizations of the United Nations system, international financial institutions, other international organizations, regional organizations and Member States to address more specifically and directly, where appropriate, the special economic problems of third States affected by sanctions imposed under Chapter VII of the Charter and, for this purpose, to consider improving procedures for consultations to maintain a constructive dialogue with such States, including through regular and frequent meetings, as well as, where appropriate, special meetings between the affected third States and the donor community, with the participation of United Nations agencies and other international organizations;

10. Requests the Special Committee on the Charter of the United Nations and on the Strengthening of the Role of the Organization, at its session in 2005, to continue to consider on a priority basis and in an appropriate substantive manner and framework the question of the implementation of the provisions of the Charter related to assistance to third States affected by the application of sanctions under Chapter VII of the Charter based on all of the related reports of the Secretary-General, in particular the 1998 report containing a summary of the deliberations and main findings of the ad hoc expert group meeting convened pursuant to paragraph 4 of General Assembly resolution 52/162, together with the most recent report of the Secretary-

General on this question, taking into consideration the forthcoming report of the informal working group of the Security Council on general issues relating to sanctions, the proposals submitted on the question, the debate on the question in the Sixth Committee during the fifty-ninth session of the Assembly and the text on the question of sanctions imposed by the United Nations contained in annex II to Assembly resolution 51/242, as well as the implementation of the provisions of Assembly resolutions 50/51, 51/208, 52/162, 53/107, 54/107, 55/157, 56/87, 57/25, 58/80 and the present resolution;

11. Decides to consider within the Sixth Committee or a working group of the Committee, at the sixtieth session of the General Assembly, further progress in the elaboration of effective measures aimed at the implementation of the provisions of the Charter related to assistance to third States affected by the application of sanctions under Chapter VII of the Charter;

12. Requests the Secretary-General to submit a report on the implementation of the present resolution to the General Assembly at its sixtieth session, under the item entitled "Report of the Special Committee on the Charter of the United Nations and on the Strengthening of the Role of the Organization".

Cooperation with Asian-African Legal Consultative Organization

Pursuant to General Assembly resolution 57/36 [YUN 2002, p. 1337], the Secretary-General submitted a report on cooperation between the United Nations and the Asian-African Legal Consultative Organization (AALCO), which was included in his September consolidated report [A/59/303] on cooperation between the United Nations and regional and other organizations. The report covered AALCO's activities during the biennium July 2002–July 2004. In line with the cooperative framework agreed upon by the two organizations, both routinely consulted and exchanged information and documentation on matters of common interest in the area of international law, including international trade law and the environment; aspects of refugee, human rights and humanitarian laws; and the peaceful settlement of disputes. AALCO continued to orient its work programme in order to accord priority to issues of concern to the United Nations and to initiate action aimed at strengthening its role.

The report provided details on AALCO representation at UN meetings and conferences and UN representation at AALCO sessions; measures taken by AALCO to further the work of the Assembly's Sixth Committee, to monitor the progress of the work of the United Nations Commission on International Trade Law and to promote the ratification and implementation of the 1982 United Nations Convention on the Law of the Sea [YUN 1982, p. 181]; and AALCO's ongoing study of refugee law and work, in close cooperation with the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees. Also described were activities relating to issues on AALCO's agenda, including environment and sustainable development; extra-territorial application of national legislation; sanctions imposed against third parties; deportation of Palestinians and other Israeli practices; cooperation in combating trafficking in women and children; legal protection of migrant workers; international terrorism; recent developments related to the work of the International Criminal Court; elaboration of an international legal instrument against corruption; promotion of international arbitration, research and training projects at the AALCO Centre for Research and Training; and AALCO's annual publications.

In his statement before the Assembly on 22 October [meeting 40], the AALCO Secretary-General affirmed AALCO's dedication to enhancing and contributing to the work of the United Nations, underlining its efforts to act as a forum for the exchange of views among Asian and African countries on issues of international law.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 22 October [meeting 40], the General Assembly adopted resolution 59/3 [draft: A/59/L.1 & Add.1] without vote [agenda item 56 (b)].

Cooperation between the United Nations and the Asian-African Legal Consultative Organization

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 36/38 of 18 November 1981, 37/8 of 29 October 1982, 38/37 of 5 December 1983, 39/47 of 10 December 1984, 40/60 of 9 December 1985, 41/5 of 17 October 1986, 43/1 of 17 October 1988, 45/4 of 16 October 1990, 47/6 of 21 October 1992, 49/8 of 25 October 1994, 51/11 of 4 November 1996, 53/14 of 29 October 1998, 55/4 of 25 October 2000 and 57/36 of 21 November 2002,

Having considered the report of the Secretary-General on cooperation between the United Nations and the Asian-African Legal Consultative Organization,

Having heard the statement made by the Secretary-General of the Asian-African Legal Consultative Organization on the steps taken by the Consultative Organization to ensure continuing, close and effective cooperation between the two organizations,

Acknowledging in particular the close interaction between the Consultative Organization and the Sixth Committee,

1. Takes note with appreciation of the report of the Secretary-General;

2. Notes with satisfaction the continuing efforts of the Asian-African Legal Consultative Organization towards strengthening the role of the United Nations and its various organs in enhancing the rule of law and wider adherence to related international instruments;

3. Also notes with satisfaction the commendable progress achieved towards enhancing cooperation between the United Nations, its agencies, other international organizations and the Consultative Organization;

4. Notes with appreciation the work of the Consultative Organization aimed at strengthening the efforts of the United Nations in respect of issues such as combating corruption, international terrorism and trafficking, as well as human rights issues;

5. Also notes with appreciation the initiative and efforts the Consultative Organization has undertaken to promote the objectives and principles set out in the United Nations Millennium Declaration, including wider acceptance of treaties deposited with the Secretary-General;

6. Recommends that, with a view to promoting close interaction between the Consultative Organization and the Sixth Committee, the consideration of the sub-item entitled "Cooperation between the United Nations and the Asian-African Legal Consultative Organization" should be scheduled to coincide with the deliberations of the Committee on the work of the International Law Commission;

7. Requests the Secretary-General to submit to the General Assembly at its sixty-first session a report on cooperation between the United Nations and the Consultative Organization;

8. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its sixty-first session the sub-item entitled "Cooperation between the United Nations and the Asian-African Legal Consultative Organization".

Host country relations

In three meetings held in New York (29 April, 26 July and 13 October), the Committee on Relations with the Host Country considered the following aspects of relations between the UN diplomatic community and the United States, the host country: transportation issues regarding the use of motor vehicles, parking and related matters; acceleration of immigration and customs procedures; entry visas to the host country; and host country travel regulations. The recommendations and conclusions on those items, approved by the Committee at its October meeting, were incorporated in its report [A/59/26].

Transportation

As recommended by the Legal Counsel in 2002 [YUN 2002, p. 1338], the Committee, at its April meeting, circulated a comprehensive database of submissions from permanent missions to the United Nations on their experience with the implementation of the Parking Programme for Diplomatic Vehicles in force since November 2002 [ibid.]. The Committee Secretary summarized the issues raised as follows: failure to uphold the availability of the designated spaces 24 hours a day, seven days a week, as stipulated in the Programme; failure to ticket or tow unauthorized vehicles parked in those spaces; insufficient education of law enforcement officials and the general public on the Programme's provisions and on the status of, and treatment to be accorded to, the diplomatic community; failure of review and appeals panels to uphold the deadlines provided for in the Programme; failure of such panels to provide the grounds and explanations for their conclusions; the invalidity/contestability of most summonses issued; and problems with the operation and effectiveness of the tow hotline and website.

The questions raised outside the scope of the Programme concerned the legality of subjecting the permanent missions to the jurisdiction of the host city; the non-transferability of decals; the inadequate number of parking spaces and decals; and the absence of designated spaces at diplomatic residences. Many delegations had protested the burdensome nature of the Programme, characterizing it as an impediment to their functions and security in contravention of the host country's obligation to facilitate the work of the missions.

To address the problems identified, the New York City Commissioner for the United Nations, Consular Corps and Protocol reported that the city had increased the number of tow trucks assigned to remove unauthorized vehicles from diplomatic spaces and patrols to issue summonses to unauthorized users; issued new city policies and procedures on the use of decals in other locations and on the unauthorized use of diplomatic spaces by construction companies; initiated a city training programme to promote due respect for diplomatic status; and improved response time and compliance with deadlines in the review and appeals process.

The Committee requested the host country to continue to bring to the attention of New York City officials reports on other problems experienced by the permanent missions or their staff regarding the Programme in order to improve its functioning and promote compliance with international norms concerning diplomatic privileges and immunities.

Acceleration of immigration and customs procedures

The Committee heard a complaint from Turkey regarding new customs procedures for the import of household effects. The complaint concerned two of its diplomats whose containers were put on hold for x-ray purposes beyond the four-day grace period for holding cargo, thereby incurring additional storage and demurrage charges. A request for reimbursement to the Office of Foreign Missions was denied. While expressing sympathy with the need of the host country to enhance security, Turkey urged it to ensure that such searches be conducted in the presence of a diplomatic agent of the countries concerned, that they be exempted from any related charges and that the grace period be extended.

The United States responded that, as the matter had not been drawn to the attention of the United States Mission but rather to the competent authorities in Washington, D.C., it would have to await a reply from them.

Entry visas

The Committee heard a complaint from the Russian Federation regarding delays in issuing entry visas to Russian experts assigned to attend official UN meetings in New York, stating that the host country was not complying with its own time frames for issuing visas. The United States responded that applications for such persons were handled by the consulates in the countries concerned, and that, unless problems or delays were promptly brought to the attention of the United States Mission, it would not be able to intervene with the competent authorities.

The Committee anticipated that the host country would enhance its efforts to ensure the timely issuance of entry visas to representatives of Member States pursuant to article IV, section II, of the Agreement between the United Nations and the United States of America regarding the Headquarters of the United Nations [YUN 1947-48, p. 199].

Travel regulations

The Committee heard a complaint from Cuba regarding the host country's travel restrictions on its mission personnel, in particular the denial of a Cuban delegate's request to travel beyond the 25-mile radius to attend an informal meeting at Princeton University, in New Jersey. The United States reiterated that it regarded its obligations as host country very seriously but recalled that such obligations arose only in respect of formal UN meetings. Cuba responded that the host country's position violated customary diplomatic standards.

The Committee, noting that some travel restrictions had been removed, continued to urge the host country to remove the remaining travel restrictions as soon as possible.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 2 December [meeting 65], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Sixth Committee [A/59/511], adopted resolution 59/42 without vote [agenda item 145].

Report of the Committee on Relations with the Host Country

The General Assembly,

Having considered the report of the Committee on Relations with the Host Country,

Recalling Article 105 of the Charter of the United Nations, the Convention on the Privileges and Immunities of the United Nations, the Agreement between the United Nations and the United States of America regarding the Headquarters of the United Nations and the responsibilities of the host country,

Recalling also that, in accordance with paragraph 7 of General Assembly resolution 2819(XXVI) of 15 December 1971, the Committee should consider, and advise the host country on, issues arising in connection with the implementation of the Agreement between the United Nations and the United States of America regarding the Headquarters of the United Nations,

Recognizing that effective measures should continue to be taken by the competent authorities of the host country, in particular to prevent any acts violating the security of missions and the safety of their personnel,

1. Endorses the recommendations and conclusions of the Committee on Relations with the Host Country contained in paragraph 26 of its report;

2. Considers that the maintenance of appropriate conditions for the normal work of the delegations and the missions accredited to the United Nations and the observance of their privileges and immunities, which is an issue of great importance, are in the interest of the United Nations and all Member States, and requests the host country to continue to solve, through negotiations, problems that might arise and to take all measures necessary to prevent any interference with the functioning of missions;

3. Notes that the Committee conducted an initial detailed review of the implementation of the Parking Programme for Diplomatic Vehicles, as recommended by the Legal Counsel in his opinion on 24 September 2002, with a view to addressing the problems experienced by some permanent missions during the first year of the Programme and continuously ensuring its proper implementation in a manner that is fair, non-discriminatory, effective and therefore consistent with international law, and that it shall remain seized of the matter;

4. Expresses its appreciation for the efforts made by the host country, and hopes that the issues raised at the meetings of the Committee will continue to be resolved in a spirit of cooperation and in accordance with international law;

5. Notes that during the reporting period some travel restrictions previously imposed by the host country on staff of certain missions and staff members of the Secretariat of certain nationalities were removed, and requests the host country to consider removing the remaining travel restrictions, and in this regard notes the positions of affected States, of the Secretary-General and of the host country;

6. Notes also that the Committee anticipates that the host country will enhance its efforts to ensure the issuance, in a timely manner, of entry visas to representatives of Member States, pursuant to article IV, section II, of the Agreement between the United Nations and the United States of America regarding the Headquarters of the United Nations, inter alia, for the purpose of their attending official United Nations meetings;

7. Requests the Secretary-General to remain actively engaged in all aspects of the relations of the United Nations with the host country;

8. Requests the Committee to continue its work in conformity with General Assembly resolution 2819 (XXVI);

9. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its sixtieth session the item entitled "Report of the Committee on Relations with the Host Country".

Convention against cloning of human beings

Pursuant to General Assembly decision 58/523 [YUN 2003, p. 1374], the Sixth Committee met (21-22 October and 19 November) [A/59/516 & Corr.1] to continue its consideration, begun in 2002 [YUN 2002, p. 1339], of an international convention against the reproductive cloning of human beings. Among the documents before the Committee was a paper submitted by the Holy See [A/C.6/59/INF.1]. Following informal consultations, the Committee adopted a draft decision for consideration by the Assembly.

On 23 December, the Assembly, by decision 59/547, took note of the Sixth Committee's decision to establish a Working Group open to all States Members of the United Nations or members of specialized agencies or of the International Atomic Energy Agency to finalize the text of a UN declaration on human cloning, based on the draft resolution entitled "United Nations Declaration on Human Cloning" and report to the Committee during the current session. The Group would meet on 14, 15 and 18 February 2005, and the Committee in the afternoon of 18 February to take action on the Group's report. The Sixth Committee Chairman would be Chairman of the Working Group and members of the Committee's Bureau would serve as Friends of the Chairman.

Also on 23 December, the Assembly, by decision 59/552, decided that the agenda item entitled "International Convention against reproductive cloning of human beings" would remain for consideration during its fifty-ninth (2005) session.

International economic law

In 2004, legal aspects of international economic law continued to be considered by the United Nations Commission on International Trade Law (UNCITRAL) and by the Sixth Committee of the General Assembly.

International trade law

At its thirty-seventh session (New York, 14-25 June), UNCITRAL finalized and adopted the UNCITRAL Legislative Guide on Insolvency Law. It continued its work on arbitration, transport law, electronic commerce and security interests. It reviewed the implementation of the 1958 New York Convention on the Recognition and Enforcement of Foreign Arbitral Awards (the New York Convention) [YUN 1958, p. 390], the work on the collection and dissemination of case law on UNCITRAL texts (CLOUT), and training and technical assistance activities. It also considered possible future work in public procurement.

The report on the session [A/59/17] described actions taken on those topics (for details, see below).

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 2 December [meeting 65], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Sixth Committee [A/59/509], adopted resolution 59/39 without vote [agenda item 143].

Report of the United Nations Commission on International Trade Law on the work of its thirty-seventh session

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 2205(XXI) of 17 December 1966, by which it established the United Nations Commission on International Trade Law with a mandate to further the progressive harmonization and unification of the law of international trade and in that respect to bear in mind the interests of all peoples, in particular those of developing countries, in the extensive development of international trade,

Reaffirming its belief that the progressive modernization and harmonization of international trade law, in reducing or removing legal obstacles to the flow of international trade, especially those affecting the developing countries, would contribute significantly to universal economic cooperation among all States on a basis of equality, equity and common interest and to the elimination of discrimination in international trade and, thereby, to the well-being of all peoples,

Having considered the report of the Commission on its thirty-seventh session,

Reiterating its concern that activities undertaken by other bodies in the field of international trade law without adequate coordination with the Commission might lead to undesirable duplication of efforts and would not be in keeping with the aim of promoting efficiency, consistency and coherence in the unification and harmonization of international trade law,

Reaffirming the mandate of the Commission, as the core legal body within the United Nations system in the field of international trade law, to coordinate legal activities in this field, in particular to avoid duplication of efforts, including among organizations formulating rules of international trade, and to promote efficiency, consistency and coherence in the modernization and harmonization of international trade law, and to continue, through its secretariat, to maintain close cooperation with other international organs and organizations, including regional organizations, active in the field of international trade law,

1. Takes note with appreciation of the report of the United Nations Commission on International Trade Law on its thirty-seventh session;

2. Commends the Commission for the completion and adoption of its Legislative Guide on Insolvency Law;

3. Also commends the Commission for the progress made in the work on a draft convention on electronic contracting, on a draft instrument on transport law, on a draft legislative guide on secured transactions and on model legislative provisions on interim measures in international commercial arbitration, and for the Commission's decision to undertake a revision of its Model Law on Procurement of Goods, Construction and Services to reflect new practices, including those resulting from the increasing use of electronic communications in public procurement;

4. Endorses the efforts and initiatives of the Commission, as the core legal body within the United Nations system in the field of international trade law, aimed at increasing coordination of and cooperation on legal activities of international and regional organizations active in the field of international trade law, and in this regard appeals to relevant international and regional organizations to coordinate their legal activities with those of the Commission, to avoid duplication of efforts and to promote efficiency, consistency and coherence in the modernization and harmonization of international trade law;

5. Reaffirms the importance, in particular for developing countries, of the work of the Commission concerned with training and legislative technical assistance in the field of international trade law, and in this connection:

(a) Welcomes the Commission's initiatives towards expanding, through its secretariat, its training and legislative technical assistance programme;

(b) Expresses its appreciation to the Commission for organizing seminars and briefing missions in Azerbaijan, Colombia, Serbia and Montenegro, the Sudan, Thailand, Venezuela and Yemen;

(c) Expresses its appreciation to the Governments whose contributions enabled the seminars and briefing missions to take place, and appeals to Governments, the relevant bodies of the United Nations system, organizations, institutions and individuals to make voluntary contributions to the United Nations Commission on International Trade Law Trust Fund for Symposia and, where appropriate, to the financing of special projects, and otherwise to assist the secretariat of the Commission in carrying out training and legislative technical assistance activities, in particular in developing countries;

(d) Reiterates its appeal to the United Nations Development Programme and other bodies responsible for development assistance, such as the World Bank and regional development banks, as well as to Governments in their bilateral aid programmes, to support the training and legislative technical assistance programme of the Commission and to cooperate and coordinate their activities with those of the Commission;

6. Takes note with regret that, since the previous session of the Commission, no contributions have been made to the trust fund established to provide travel assistance to developing countries that are members of the Commission, at their request and in consultation with the Secretary-General, stresses the need for contributions to the trust fund in order to increase expert representation from developing countries at sessions of the Commission and its working groups, and reiterates its appeal to Governments, the relevant bodies of the United Nations system, organizations, institutions and individuals to make voluntary contributions to the trust fund;

7. Decides, in order to ensure full participation by all Member States in the sessions of the Commission and its working groups, to continue, in the competent Main Committee during the fifty-ninth session of the General Assembly, its consideration of granting travel assistance to the least developed countries that are members of the Commission, at their request and in consultation with the Secretary-General;

8. Recalls its resolutions on partnerships between the United Nations and non-State actors, in particular the private sector, and in this regard welcomes the Commission's consideration of the means of actively engaging non-State actors in its work, and encourages the Commission to further explore different approaches to the use of partnerships with non-State actors in the implementation of its mandate, in particular in the area of training and technical assistance, in accordance with the applicable principles and guidelines and in cooperation and coordination with other relevant offices of the Secretariat;

9. Approves, in conformity with its resolutions on documentation-related matters, which, in particular, emphasize that any reduction in the length of documents should not adversely affect either the quality of the presentation or the substance of the documents, the conclusions reached by the Commission in paragraphs 124 to 128 of its report regarding the imposition of page limits on its documentation, and requests the Secretary-General to bear in mind the particular characteristics of the mandate and work of the Commission in implementing page limits with respect to the documentation of the Commission;

10. Also approves the conclusions of the Commission in paragraph 130 of its report regarding the need for the continuing provision of summary records of its meetings relating to the formulation of normative texts;

11. Stresses the importance of bringing into effect the conventions emanating from the work of the Commission for the global unification and harmonization of international trade law, and, to this end, urges States that have not yet done so to consider signing, ratifying or acceding to those conventions;

12. Notes that 2005 will mark the twenty-fifth anniversary of the adoption of the United Nations Convention on Contracts for the International Sale of Goods and the twentieth anniversary of the adoption of the Model Law on International Commercial Arbitration of the United Nations Commission on International Trade Law, and in this regard welcomes initiatives being undertaken to organize conferences and similar events to provide a forum for assessing the experience, in particular of courts and arbitral tribunals, with those texts;

13. Expresses its appreciation for the preparation of a digest of case law on the United Nations Convention on Contracts for the International Sale of Goods, intended to assist in the dissemination of information on the Convention and promote its adoption, use and uniform interpretation, and for the progress of work on a digest of case law relating to the Model Law on International Commercial Arbitration.

International commercial arbitration

UNCITRAL [A/59/17] took note of the reports of Working Group II (Arbitration and Conciliation) on its thirty-ninth (Vienna, 10-14 November 2003) [A/CN.9/545] and fortieth (New York, 23-27 February 2004) [A/CN.9/547] sessions. At those sessions, the Group continued deliberations on a draft text for a revision of article 17 of the UNCITRAL Model Law on International Commercial Arbitration on the power of an arbitral tribunal to grant interim measures of protection, and on a draft provision on the recognition and enforcement of such measures (for insertion as a new article of the Model Law, tentatively 17 bis). UNCITRAL commended the Group for the progress accomplished so far and hoped for an early consensus on the contentious issue of ex parte interim measures.

UNCITRAL observed that the Group had yet to complete its work on a draft article dealing with interim measures issued by State courts in support of arbitration (tentatively 17 ter) and in relation to the "writing requirement" contained in article 7, paragraph 2, of the Model Law, and article II, paragraph 2, of the Convention on the Recognition and Enforcement of Foreign Arbitral Awards (the New York Convention).

UNCITRAL was informed that the Working Group had been invited to consider the possible inclusion of the New York Convention in the list of international instruments to which the draft convention on the use of electronic communications in international contracts applied (see below). That question, in addition to the continued discussion on draft article 17, was considered by the Group at its forty-first session (Vienna, 13-17 September) [A/CN.9/569].

Implementation of the 1958 New York Convention

Under the ongoing project approved by UNCITRAL in 1995 [YUN 1995, p. 1364], aimed at monitoring the legislative implementation of the 1958 New York Convention [YUN 1958, p. 390], UNCITRAL [A/59/17] noted that, as at 8 April, replies from 75 States parties to the Convention (out of the current 134) had been received to the questionnaire relating to the legal regime in those States governing the recognition and enforcement of foreign arbitral awards. UNCITRAL called on the remaining States parties to submit their replies and invited the Secretariat to produce a preliminary analysis of those received for UNCITRAL's consideration in 2005.

Transport law

UNCITRAL [A/59/17] considered the reports of Working Group III (Transport Law) on its twelfth (Vienna, 6-17 October 2003) [YUN 2003, p. 1377] and thirteenth (New York, 3-14 May 2004) [A/CN.9/552] sessions, describing its continuing work on the provisions of a draft instrument on the carriage of goods [wholly or partly] [by sea]. It noted that, at the second reading of the draft, the Group had made progress on the scope of the instrument's application and on key liability provisions. An informal consultation group was created to meet between Working Group sessions so as to accelerate the exchange of views and arrive at a consensus in preparation for a third and final reading of the draft instrument. UNCITRAL agreed that 2006 was a desirable time frame for completing the project, but would revisit the matter of a deadline in 2005.

The Working Group, at its fourteenth session (Vienna, 29 November-10 December) [A/CN.9/572], continued to review the draft instrument based on a first revision of the draft prepared by the Secretariat and proposed interim redrafts of articles considered at the Group's previous two sessions. On the basis of its deliberations and conclusions, the Group requested the Secretariat to prepare a revised draft of a number of provisions.

Electronic commerce

UNCITRAL [A/59/17] took note of the reports of Working Group IV (Electronic Commerce) on its forty-second (Vienna, 17-21 November 2003) [YUN 2003, p. 1377] and forty-third (New York, 15-19 March 2004) [A/CN.9/548] sessions, during which it reviewed articles 1-15 and articles X and Y of the preliminary draft convention on electronic commerce dealing with selected issues related to electronic contracting. The Group's focus was to incorporate in the draft convention provisions aimed at removing possible legal obstacles to electronic commerce that might arise under existing international trade-related instruments and to formulate a broader legal framework for electronic contracting.

At its forty-fourth session (Vienna, 11-22 October) [A/CN.9/571], the Group resumed deliberations on a newly revised preliminary draft convention. It adopted articles 1-14, 18 and 19, and exchanged views on the preamble and final clauses, including proposals for additional provisions in chapter IV. In the light of its deliberations on chapters I to III and articles 18 and 19, the Group asked the Secretariat to make the consequential changes in the draft final provisions of chapter IV and to insert within square brackets the draft provisions proposed for addition to the final revised version of the draft convention for submission to UNCITRAL. The Group further asked the Secretariat to circulate the final revised version of the draft convention to Governments and international organizations for their comments, and for submission to UNCITRAL.

UNCITRAL took note of various suggestions for future work, among them the preparation of guidelines to assist States in establishing a comprehensive legal framework to facilitate the use of electronic commerce.

Insolvency law

Legislative Guide on Insolvency Law

Working Group V (Insolvency Law), at its thirtieth session (New York, 29 March-2 April) [A/CN.9/551], completed its deliberations on the substantive parts of the draft legislative guide on insolvency law; for lack of time, however, it could not finalize its consideration of the glossary. The Group's deliberations were informed by those of its joint session with Working Group VI (Security Interests) (see p. 1355).

In addition, the Group noted a proposal to jointly publish the World Bank's Principles and Guidelines for Effective Insolvency and Creditor Rights System, currently under revision, and the finalized UNCITRAL Legislative Guide on Insolvency Law to form a unified standard on insolvency and creditor rights.

UNCITRAL in June [A/59/17] considered the draft legislative guide. It had before it a Secretariat note [A/CN.9/559 & Add.1,2] setting forth the terms of the glossary that were finalized by Working Group V and those that were not, as well as the Model Law on Cross-Border Insolvency and the Guide to Enactment of the Model Law [YUN 1997, p. 1379]. Having approved the substance of Parts One and Two, together with amendments and revisions, UNCITRAL concluded its review of the draft guide. It asked the Secretariat to edit and finalize the text in the light of its deliberations and to undertake any further revision required to align the commentary with the recommendations in the document.

On 25 June, UNCITRAL adopted the Legislative Guide on Insolvency Law, annexing the Model Law on Cross-Border Insolvency and the Guide to Enactment, and requested the Secretary-General to transmit it to Governments and other interested bodies. It recommended that all States utilize the Legislative Guide to assess the economic efficiency of their insolvency law regimes and give favourable consideration to the Legislative Guide when revising or adopting legislation relevant to insolvency. It further recommended that all States continue to consider implementing the UNCITRAL Model Law on Cross-Border Insolvency.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 2 December [meeting 65], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Sixth Committee [A/59/509], adopted resolution 59/40 without vote [agenda 143].

Legislative Guide on Insolvency Law of the United Nations Commission on International Trade Law

The General Assembly,

Recognizing the importance to all countries of strong, effective and efficient insolvency regimes as a means of encouraging economic development and investment,

Noting the growing realization that reorganization regimes are critical to corporate and economic recovery, the development of entrepreneurial activity, the preservation of employment and the availability of finance in the capital market,

Noting also the importance of social policy issues to the design of an insolvency regime,

Noting with satisfaction the completion and adoption of the Legislative Guide on Insolvency Law of the United Nations Commission on International Trade Law by the Commission at its thirty-seventh session, on 25 June 2004,

Believing that the Legislative Guide, which includes the text of the Model Law on Cross-Border Insolvency and the Guide to Enactment recommended by the General Assembly in its resolution 52/158 of 15 December 1997, contributes significantly to the establishment of a harmonized legal framework for insolvency and will be useful both to States that do not have an effective and efficient insolvency regime and to States that are undertaking a process of review and modernization of their insolvency regimes,

Recognizing the need for cooperation and coordination between international organizations active in the field of insolvency law reform to ensure consistency and alignment of that work and to facilitate the development of international standards,

Noting that the preparation of the Legislative Guide was the subject of due deliberations and extensive consultations with Governments and international inter-governmental and non-governmental organizations active in the field of insolvency law reform,

1. Expresses its appreciation to the United Nations Commission on International Trade Law for the completion and adoption of its Legislative Guide on Insolvency Law;

2. Requests the Secretary-General to publish the Legislative Guide and to make all efforts to ensure that it becomes generally known and available;

3. Recommends that all States give due consideration to the Legislative Guide when assessing the economic efficiency of their insolvency regimes and when revising or adopting legislation relevant to insolvency;

4. Recommends also that all States continue to consider implementation of the Model Law on Cross-Border Insolvency of the United Nations Commission on International Trade Law.

Security interests

UNCITRAL [A/59/17] took note of the reports of Working Group VI (Security Interests) on its fourth (Vienna, 8-12 September 2003) [YUN 2003, p. 1378] and fifth (New York, 22-25 March) sessions [A/CN.9/549], at which the Working Group continued its work on the development of an efficient legal regime for security rights in goods involved in a commercial activity, in the form of a legislative guide. Also noted was the report of the Group's second joint session (New York, 26-29 March) [A/CN.9/550] with Working Group V (Insolvency Law), at which the two Groups continued deliberations on the treatment of security interests in case of insolvency proceedings.

UNCITRAL commended Working Group VI for completing the second reading of the draft legislative guide on secured transactions, including the chapters on the introduction, key objectives and creation of security rights; and the third reading of the chapters on publicity, priority, insolvency and conflict of laws. In that connection, UNCITRAL noted the Group's agreement that publicity be a precondition of the effectiveness of security rights against third parties and of ensuring the protection of third parties.

UNCITRAL noted the progress made in the coordination of the Group's work on conflict of laws with the Hague Conference on Private International Law, the International Institute for the Unification of Private Law (Unidroit) and the World Bank, in particular for the agreement that the relevant sections of the Bank's Principles would form with the draft legislative guide on secured transactions, once finalized, a single international standard on the subject.

At its sixth session (Vienna, 27 September-1 October) [A/CN.9/570], the Working Group continued its work on the chapters of the draft legislative guide on secured transactions, including basic approaches to security, pre-default rights and obligations, transition (from the old to the new legislative regime), default and enforcement, and effectiveness of security rights against third parties.

Case law on UNCITRAL texts

UNCITRAL [A/59/17] noted the ongoing work under the established system for the collection and dissemination of case law on UNCITRAL texts (CLOUT), consisting of the preparation of case abstracts and of research aids and analytic tools, such as thesauri and indices, and the compilation of full texts of decisions. A total of 42 issues of CLOUT, dealing with 489 cases, had been published.

UNCITRAL expressed its appreciation to the national correspondents for their work in selecting decisions and preparing case abstracts. CLOUT was an important aspect of the overall training and technical assistance information activities undertaken by UNCITRAL. Its wide distribution in both print and electronic formats promoted the uniform interpretation and application of UNCITRAL texts by facilitating access to decisions and awards from other jurisdictions.

Training and technical assistance

UNCITRAL [A/59/17] considered a Secretariat note [A/CN.9/560] describing training and technical assistance activities undertaken since 2003 and the direction of future activities under its expanded functions. Reported, among other things, were 13 seminars and briefing missions organized to promote understanding of international commercial law conventions, model laws and other legal texts, and participation in 37 seminars, conferences and courses examining UNCITRAL texts for possible adoption or use. UNCITRAL also co-sponsored the eleventh Willem C. Vis International Commercial Arbitration Moot (Vienna, 2-8 April) to disseminate information about uniform law texts and teaching international trade law.

UNCITRAL reiterated its appeal to all States, international organizations and other interested entities to consider making contributions to its trust funds to enable it to meet increasing demands on its training and technical assistance programme. It requested the Secretariat to prepare a work programme and timetable for implementing its expanded technical assistance function, identifying national and regional needs, technical legal assistance requirements in international trade law reform and opportunities for developing joint programmes in that area.

Future work

Public procurement

UNCITRAL [A/59/17] discussed its future work in public procurement based on a Secretariat note [A/CN.9/539 & Add.1] submitted in response to its 2003 request [YUN 2003, p. 1379]. UNCITRAL agreed that the Model Law on Procurement of Goods, Construction and Services [YUN 1994, p. 1328] would benefit from being updated to reflect new practices, particularly those resulting from the use of electronic communications in public procurement, experiences gained from the use of the Model Law and possible additional issues. It entrusted the preparation of proposals for revising the Model Law to its Working Group I (Procurement), with a flexible mandate to identify the issues to be addressed. It requested the Secretariat to prepare detailed studies and proposals on the issues outlined in its note for the Group's consideration.

Working Group I began its work on the elaboration of proposals for the revision of the Model Law at its sixth session (Vienna, 30 August–3 September) [A/CN.9/568]. It gave preliminary consideration to the electronic publication of procurement-related information; the use of electronic communications in the procurement process and controls over such use; electronic reverse auctions; the use of suppliers' lists; framework agreements; procurement of services; evaluation and comparison of tenders and the use of procurement to promote industrial, social and environmental policies; remedies and enforcement; alternative methods of procurement; community participation in procurement; simplification and standardization of the Model Law; and legalization of documents. The Group would proceed with in-depth consideration of those topics at its future sessions.

PART FIVE

Institutional, administrative and budgetary questions

Chapter I

Strengthening and restructuring of the United Nations system

In 2004, the implementation of the Secretary-General's reform proposals to further improve the work of the Organization was largely completed. Notable achievements included the alignment of the Organization's activities with the priorities agreed upon at the Millennium Summit in 2000 and at the global conferences of the 1990s, a major reorganization of two large Departments—the Department for General Assembly and Conference Management and the Department of Public Information—as well as reforms at the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees. Regarding planning and budgeting, a two-year strategic framework replaced the four-year medium-term plan, with good results. The processes for programme planning and resource allocation became better aligned, and the intergovernmental review process, streamlined.

In June, a 12-member panel of eminent persons established by the Secretary-General to review the relationship between the United Nations and civil society within the context of UN reform made recommendations for enhancing the Organization's capacity to engage relevant actors in tackling global problems. In December, the High-level Panel on Threats, Challenges and Change, appointed in 2003 to evaluate how the UN addressed current threats, also recommended measures to strengthen the Organization, including the establishment of an additional Deputy Secretary-General position to assist the Secretary-General.

The Assembly decided to convene in 2005 a high-level plenary meeting to undertake a comprehensive review of progress made in fulfilling the commitments contained in the Millennium Declaration. It also adopted a text regarding further measures to revitalize its own work. It urged the Open-ended Working Group on the Question of Equitable Representation and Increase in the Membership of the Security Council and Other Matters Related to the Security Council to make progress in considering all issues relevant to the question. While stressing the importance of the evaluation work of the Office of Internal Oversight Services, the Assembly decided to review at its sixty-fourth (2009) session the functions and reporting procedures of that Office.

Programme of reform

General aspects

In his annual report on the work of the Organization (see p. 3), the Secretary-General stated that the implementation of his reform proposals, initiated in 2002 [YUN 2002, p. 1352], to further improve the work of the Organization was largely complete. Notable achievements included the alignment of the Organization's activities with the priorities agreed upon at the 2000 Millennium Summit [YUN 2000, p. 45] and at the global conferences of the 1990s, the reorganization of the Department for General Assembly and Conference Management (DGACM) [YUN 2003, p. 1486] and the Department of Public Information (DPI) [YUN 2002, p. 585], and reforms in the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees (UNHCR) (see p. 1195). Other positive developments included the discontinuation of a large number of reports, meetings and activities of marginal utility, the reallocation of over $100 million within or between programmes and the approval of significant increases in funds for improving information and communication technology services and related staff training. With regard to planning and budgeting, a two-year strategic framework replaced the four-year medium-term plan (see p. 1400), while the processes for programme planning and resource allocation had become better aligned and the intergovernmental review process streamlined. The implementation of the integrated human resources management reform programme (see p. 1416) continued with the further refinement of practices and procedures, and progress in implementing the Organization's human resources strategy. The administration of justice had also become more efficient. Improvements were made in client servicing, and efforts continued to implement the capital master plan (see p. 1473), improve financial management and enhance the Organization's accountability and oversight functions. In view of increasing threats to the Organization and its staff, measures were taken to enhance security at Headquarters and in field offices.

UN system funds and programmes continued to strengthen their presence at the country level and to address the issues of joint programming and management of resources.

Agenda for change

Strengthening of the UN system

Panel of eminent persons

By a June note [A/58/817 & Corr.1], the Secretary-General transmitted the report of the Panel of Eminent Persons on United Nations-Civil Society Relations entitled "We the peoples: civil society, the United Nations and global governance". First proposed in his 2002 report on strengthening of the United Nations: an agenda for further change [YUN 2002, p. 1352] and endorsed by the General Assembly in resolution 57/300 [ibid., p. 1353], the Secretary-General asked the Panel, among other things, to review guidelines, decisions and practices that affected civil society organizations' access to and participation in UN deliberations and processes, to identify new and better ways to interact with them, especially those from developing countries, and to review the Secretariat's organizational structure for facilitating, managing and evaluating UN relationships with civil society.

The Panel, chaired by Fernando Henrique Cardoso (Brazil), recognized that civil society organizations, through their global networks of activists, websites and other channels, were creating a new phenomenon, the global public opinion, which was shaping the political agenda and generating a set of norms and citizen demands that transcended national boundaries and had contributed to the opening of a global public space for debate. Over the years, the United Nations had consistently promoted the participation of civil society in its deliberative processes, leading to the emergence of values and norms, especially in the areas of human rights, gender relations, governance and the environment. However, the Panel questioned whether the United Nations had been clear enough in articulating its case for enhancing such engagement. The Panel found that civil societies and other constituencies were important to the United Nations because of their experience and social connections that could help the Organization work better, improve its legitimacy, identify priorities and connect it with public opinion. They could also raise new issues, focus attention on the moral and ethical dimensions of decisions in the public sphere, expand resources and skills, challenge basic assumptions and priorities and protest unfair decisions. Enhanced engagement, carefully planned, would make the United Nations more effective in its actions and contributions to global governance, empower it, and increase its relevance to the issues of our times. The Panel established four paradigm shifts to guide the United Nations in strengthening its relations with civil society and other constituencies: becoming an outward-looking organization; embracing a plurality of constituencies; connecting the local with the global; and helping to reshape democracy for the twenty-first century.

The Panel made 30 proposals for reform in several areas. It proposed the creation of global policy networks of Government and others sharing specific concerns to promote global debate and/or pilot activities to combat problems directly, and that the United Nations be more proactive in bringing together all constituencies relevant to global issues and galvanize appropriate networks for effective results. In that regard, the Assembly should include civil society more regularly in its affairs, and public hearings involving a full range of relevant constituencies could be used for reviving progress on agreed global goals. Other proposed reforms concerned the need to invest more in partnerships, including the establishment by the Secretary-General of a Partnership Development Unit and the identification of partnership focal points throughout all UN organs and agencies. At the country level, the United Nations Development Group should ensure that all constituencies contributed to the goals of the United Nations by, among other actions, enhancing the capacity of UN resident coordinators' offices to identify, convene and broker partnerships to meet the main challenges and build consensus on country-specific goals. The Security Council should be enabled to draw from the experience of civil society organizations, and discuss with elected representatives issues of emerging importance, and convene independent commissions of inquiry after Council-mandated operations. The United Nations should encourage national parliaments to debate major matters on its agendas, and the Secretary-General should form an Elected Representatives Liaison Unit to provide information to parliaments and help create more effective opportunities for parliamentarians to take part in UN forums. The United Nations should streamline and depoliticize accreditation and access issues, including widening the access of civil society organizations beyond Economic and Social Council forums, and create a single UN accreditation process. The review of applications for accreditation should be shifted to the Secretariat and an accreditation unit established within DGACM to advise an Assembly Committee, which would decide on accreditation. The Secretary-General should initiate a review on UN accreditation, based on which proposals would be made to the Assembly for revising accreditation categories. The Secretary-General should appoint an Under-Secretary-General in charge of the new Office of Constituency Engagement and Partnerships, which would be responsible for formulating and implementing the UN strategy for engagement with constituencies. It would comprise a Civil Society Unit, which would absorb the Non-Governmental Liaison Service; a Partnership Development Unit to absorb the United Nations Fund for International Partnerships; the Elected Representative Liaison Unit; the Global Compact Office; and the secretariat of the Permanent Forum of Indigenous Issues. The Secretary-General should appoint 30 to 40 constituency engagement specialists in the offices of resident coordinators, and make redressing North-South imbalances a priority in enhancing UN-civil society relations. The United Nations should establish a fund to enhance the capacity of civil society in developing countries to engage in UN processes and partnerships.

Report of Secretary-General. In a September report [A/59/354], the Secretary-General commended the Panel's recommendations to the General Assembly for consideration. He welcomed the majority of those recommendations, which he supplemented with several of his own. In terms of increasing the participation of non-governmental organizations (NGOs) in intergovernmental bodies, the Secretary-General proposed the convening of a two-day, informal, interactive hearing with them prior to the opening of the Assembly each year, beginning on a trial basis at the Assembly's sixtieth (2005) session, to coincide with the 10-year review of the MDGs [YUN 2000, p. 51]. The Security Council could adopt the practice of conducting an assessment, with NGO participation, following completion of each peace mission, while reserving the Panel's proposal for an independent commission of inquiry after Council-mandated operations for special cases. The Assembly could recommend, organize or support meetings of parliamentarians at the national, regional or global levels in 2006 to provide input to the meeting to review the Declaration of Commitment on HIV/AIDS (see p. 1216). The Secretary-General said that he would create a single trust fund to support NGO participation in intergovernmental meetings, subsuming existing funds into it, and develop a detailed cost plan for administering it. He encouraged Member States to contribute to the fund. The Secretary-General said that there was not much merit in consolidating the various UN accreditation processes or the structures for handling them. However, the Assembly could assume responsibility for a single accreditation system, with the General Committee being charged with that responsibility. The Secretary-General promised to review Secretariat experiences with NGOs in tandem with the Panel's proposals, with a view to determining how best to intensify dialogue with them. He would also establish a trust fund to enhance NGO capacity at the country level and to finance additional capacity in the office of the resident coordinator.

The Secretary-General did not agree with the Panel's proposal to incorporate the secretariat of the Permanent Forum of Indigenous Issues into the new Office of Constituency Engagement and Partnerships.

By decision 59/552 of 23 December, the Assembly decided that the item on strengthening of the UN system would remain for consideration during its resumed fifty-ninth (2005) session.

High-level Panel on Threats, Challenges and Change

The High-level Panel on Threats, Challenges and Change, in its report transmitted by the Secretary-General in December [A/59/565 & Corr.1] (see p. 54), discussed, among other proposals for strengthening the Organization, institutional reform for a more effective United Nations in the twenty-first century. The Panel looked at the institutional weaknesses in current responses to threats in the functioning of the General Assembly, the Security Council, the arrangements for addressing countries under stress, as well as the economic and social threats to international security, and to a legitimacy deficit regarding the functioning of the United Nations Commission on Human Rights.

The Panel recommended reform initiatives for addressing those weaknesses. It proposed that Member States renew efforts to enable the Assembly to function as the main deliberative organ, including better conceptionalization and shortening of its agenda, smaller and more tightly focused committees to sharpen and improve resolutions, and the establishment of a better mechanism to enable systematic engagement with civil society. A decision on the enlargement of the Council was a necessity based on the membership models proposed: model A provided for six new permanent seats with no veto and three new two-year term non-permanent seats, divided among regional areas; while model B provided for no new permanent seats, but created a new category of eight four-year renewable-term seats and one new two-year non-permanent (non-renewable seat), divided among major regional areas. The Panel also recommended that the composition of the Council should be reviewed in 2020, there should be no expansion of the veto, and introduction of a system of “indicative voting” (public indication of positions on a proposed action) should be introduced. Proposals were also made for strengthening the Council’s relations with regional organizations. The Panel recommended that the Economic and Social Council establish a Committee on the Social and Economic Aspects of Security Threats and provide a regular venue for engaging the development community at the highest level by transforming itself into a “development cooperation forum”. To that end, it should create an executive committee to provide orientation and direction.

Regarding reform of the Secretariat, the Panel recommended strengthening support for the Secretary-General, primarily through the establishment of an additional Deputy Secretary-General position responsible for peace and security. The Secretary-General should also be provided with the requisite resources to do his job effectively. In that regard, Member States should commit themselves to articles 100 and 101 of the Charter relating to the duties of the Secretary-General and increase his flexibility in managing the staff, subject to his accountability to the Assembly. The Secretary-General’s 1997 [YUN 1997, p.1389] and 2002 [YUN 2002, p.1352] reform proposals should be fully implemented, and there should be a one-time review and replacement of personnel, including through early retirement, to ensure that the Secretariat was staffed with the right people to undertake the task at hand. In addition, the Secretary-General should be provided with 60 posts for the purpose of increasing the Secretariat’s capacity as proposed in the report. In addition to any amendment of Article 23 of the UN Charter required by the proposed reform of the Security Council, the Panel suggested that articles 53 and 107 referring to “enemy States” should be revised; and Chapter XIII (the Trusteeship Council) should be deleted, as well as article 47 (the Military Staff Committee) and all references to it in Articles 26, 45 and 46.

Implementation of the Millennium Declaration

Report of Secretary-General. In his August report [A/59/282 & Corr.1] on the implementation of the United Nations Millennium Declaration [YUN 2000, p. 49], the Secretary-General reviewed progress made and the results achieved by the UN system and by Member States in peace and security, especially in the areas of peacekeeping and curbing transnational crime, meeting the MDGs and protecting the vulnerable.

In the area of security, the Secretary-General reported that, since his last report, UN peace operations had achieved significant success in Afghanistan, Ethiopia and Eritrea, Georgia, the Kosovo province of Serbia and Montenegro and Sierra Leone. However, 2004 saw the establishment of new missions in Burundi, Côte d’Ivoire and Haiti in the space of six months and planning for new or expanded operations in Iraq and the Sudan. That surge in demand for peacekeeping went beyond the needs envisaged in the reforms and the capacities that had been built. The Department of Peacekeeping Operations (DPKO) was addressing the new challenges, but critical gaps remained and further reforms were required. Careful political management and coordination were called for since each new or planned mission was complex and multi-dimensional.

Across the globe, the growth of transnational criminal activity was having a significant impact on peace and development, prospects for economic growth, human rights, democracy and good governance. The nature of criminal organizations involved in such activities, with the associated problems of corruption and linkages to terrorism, constituted one of the key security challenges facing the global community. The increasingly global nature of organized crime required a global response, of which the key instrument was the United Nations Convention against Transnational Organized Crime and its supplementary Protocols, which came into force in 2003 [YUN 2003, p. 1125]. Similarly, the adoption of the United Nations Convention against Corruption, adopted by the General Assembly in resolution 58/4 [ibid., p. 1127], was a significant achievement. In April 2004, the United Nations System Chief Executives Board for Coordination endorsed immediate and medium-term measures to ensure more effective action against organized crime in sectors where UN agencies were active.

In the area of development, in the four years since the adoption of the Millennium Declaration, the eight MDGs derived from it had transformed global development cooperation, generating unprecedented, coordinated action within the UN system, including the Bretton Woods institutions (the World Bank Group and the International Monetary Fund), the wider donor community and developing countries themselves. The commitment of Governments to the MDGs and their integration into national and international development strategies, policies and actions were expected to produce improved development results. Data available as at 2002 suggested that developing countries fell into three broad groups in terms of their progress towards meeting the MDGs: those in Asia and Northern Africa, which were largely on track to meeting the targets of halving extreme poverty by 2015 and achieving many of the social targets; those, mainly in West Asia and Latin America and the Caribbean, which were making good progress towards some individual goals, such as universal primary education, but were less successful in reducing poverty; and those, largely comprising countries in sub-Saharan Africa and least developed countries in other regions, which were far from making adequate progress on most of the goals.

In protecting the vulnerable, the report noted that the consequences of disasters resulting from environmental hazards continued to fall disproportionately on the world's poor, and trends suggested that the frequency of and vulnerability to such hazards would only get worse, with significant implications for humanitarian and development actors. Vulnerability to conflict continued to be widespread also, as prolonged violence significantly altered political, social and economic relations, with immediate and long-term implications. Some progress was made in strengthening support and protecting the internally displaced and ensuring more focused planning and funding of post-crisis transition, especially in Liberia and Sierra Leone. However, much more needed to be done by the international community to harmonize transition planning and fundraising, bring coherence to needs assessment and build local institutions.

The Secretary-General observed that, in order to succeed, the United Nations required a range of key inputs, including vision and political support, adequate financing, staff of the highest calibre, adequate security and institutional agility to adapt to changing circumstances in the world. The institutional arrangements required to achieve the goals contained in the Millennium Declaration also had to be agile. As the primary actors and stakeholders in the international system, Member States would have to be flexible in their own approaches. While major headway had been made on reform and revitalization in recent years, adaptation was a constant process as new realities called for new solutions in terms of mechanisms and processes.

Review of the Millennium Declaration (2005)

High-level plenary meeting of the General Assembly

On 6 May [meeting 86], the General Assembly adopted resolution 58/291 [draft: A/58/L.8/Rev.1] without vote [agenda items 50 & 60].

Follow-up to the outcome of the Millennium Summit and integrated and coordinated implementation of and follow-up to the outcomes of the major United Nations conferences and summits in the economic and social fields

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 57/144 of 16 December 2002 on follow-up to the outcome of the Millennium Summit and 57/270 A of 20 December 2002 and 57/270 B of 23 June 2003 on integrated and coordinated implementation of and follow-up to the outcomes of the major United Nations conferences and summits in the economic and social fields,

1. Decides to convene in New York in 2005, at the commencement of the sixtieth session of the General Assembly, a high-level plenary meeting of the Assembly with the participation of heads of State and Government, on dates to be decided by the Assembly at its fifty-ninth session;

2. Also decides that this major event will undertake a comprehensive review of the progress made in the fulfilment of all the commitments contained in the United Nations Millennium Declaration, including the internationally agreed development goals and the global partnership required for their achievement, and of the progress made in the integrated and coordinated implementation, at the national, regional and international levels, of the outcomes and commitments of the major United Nations conferences and summits in the economic, social and related fields, on the basis of a comprehensive report to be submitted by the Secretary-General;

3. Requests the Secretary-General to submit to the General Assembly at its fifty-ninth session a report on suggested modalities, format and organization of this major event for consideration and a final decision by the Assembly, taking into account the open-ended consultations to be carried out by the President of the Assembly.

CEB consideration. The United Nations System Chief Executives Board (CEB), at its second regular session (New York, 29-30 October) [CEB/2004/2], discussed the 2005 comprehensive review of follow-up to the Millennium Declaration, particularly the UN system response. CEB discussed the themes and messages that should be given prominence in the Secretary-General's report for the high-level meeting scheduled for 2005, focusing on the progress made in implementing the Millennium Declaration, the key conditions to be highlighted for future progress and how the report might best convey UN system contributions in implementing the Declaration.

CEB also considered the reports of its High-level Committee on Programmes (HLCP) on its seventh (Beirut, Lebanon, 26-27 February) [CEB/2004/4], inter-sessional (Frascati, Italy, 31 May-1 June) [CEB/2004/5] and eighth (Florence, Italy, 15-17 September) [CEB/2004/7] sessions regarding its preparatory work for the 2005 comprehensive review. HLCP focused on articulating UN system contributions in implementing the Declaration, to be presented as an "accountability report", a draft of which was annexed to the report of its eighth session. CEB invited the Committee to continue its work on the report and to pursue a related proposal by the Director-General of the United Nations Industrial Development Organization for renewing the role of the UN in the field of economic development as a means of advancing the achievement of the MDGs.

Report of Secretary-General. In response to General Assembly resolution 58/291 (see above), the Secretary-General submitted a November report [A/59/545] on the modalities, format and organization of the high-level plenary meeting of the Assembly—a summit—to be held at the commencement of its sixtieth (2005) session. The report made suggestions regarding the duration, participation and preparatory process for the meeting, which the Secretary-General observed would be an event of decisive importance, given that the decisions taken there might determine the Organization's future. He urged Member States to take an active and positive interest in the issues before the summit, and to prepare for it at the highest level.

In a 16 December statement on programme budget implications [A/C.5/59/25], the Secretary-General informed the Assembly that the planned high-level plenary meeting would give rise to additional requirements estimated at $1,060,700 under the 2004-2005 programme budget, to be charged against the contingency fund and, as such, would require a related increase in appropriations for that biennium. Efforts would be made to absorb the $317,100 for the change in venue of the 2005 substantive session of the Economic and Social Council from Geneva to New York.

Report of ACABQ. The Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions (ACABQ), in its report of the same date, [A/59/613], recommended that every effort be made to absorb the amount requested and that the Fifth (Administrative and Budgetary) Committee inform the Assembly that, should it adopt draft resolution [A/59/L.53], no additional appropriation would arise at that time, pending the submission of the second performance report on the 2004-2005 programme budget.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 17 December [meeting 73], the General Assembly adopted resolution 59/145 [draft: A/59/L.53] without vote [agenda items 44 & 55].

Modalities, format and organization of the High-level Plenary Meeting of the sixtieth session of the General Assembly

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 58/291 of 6 May 2004 by which it decided to convene in New York in 2005, at the commencement of the sixtieth session of the General Assembly, a high-level plenary meeting of the Assembly with the participation of Heads of State and Government, on dates to be decided by the Assembly at its fifty-ninth session,

Recalling that in its resolution 58/291 it also decided that the High-level Plenary Meeting would undertake a comprehensive review of the progress made in the fulfilment of all the commitments contained in the United Nations Millennium Declaration, including the internationally agreed development goals and the global partnership required for their achievement, and of the progress made in the integrated and coordinated implementation, at the national, regional and international levels, of the outcomes and commitments of the major United Nations conferences and summits in the economic, social and related fields, on the basis of a comprehensive report to be submitted by the Secretary-General,

Welcoming the report of the Secretary-General entitled “Modalities, format and organization of the high-level plenary meeting of the sixtieth session of the General Assembly” requested in its resolution 58/291 and following informal consultations convened by the President of the General Assembly,

Convinced that the High-level Plenary Meeting will constitute a significant event,

1. Decides that the High-level Plenary Meeting of the sixtieth session of the General Assembly shall be held from 14 to 16 September 2005 in New York;

2. Reiterates that the High-level Plenary Meeting will be held with the participation of Heads of State and Government, and encourages all Member States to be represented at that level;

3. Decides that the High-level Plenary Meeting will be composed of six plenary meetings, on the basis of two meetings a day, and four interactive round-table sessions, and also that each round-table session will cover the entire agenda of the High-level Plenary Meeting and will be held in concurrence with a plenary meeting;

4. Decides also to hold the High-level Dialogue on Financing for Development on 27 and 28 June 2005 in New York immediately prior to the high-level segment of the 2005 substantive session of the Economic and Social Council in order for the recommendations of the High-level Dialogue to be considered in the preparatory process for the High-level Plenary Meeting and also decides to hold a separate meeting on Financing for Development within the framework of the High-level Plenary Meeting;

5. Decides further to change the venue of the 2005 substantive session of the Economic and Social Council from Geneva to New York on an exceptional basis and that the venue for the 2006 and 2007 substantive sessions of the Council shall be Geneva in order to resume the alternation in 2008, as established by the General Assembly;

6. Decides to hold the general debate at its sixtieth session from Saturday, 17 September, to Friday, 23 September, and from Monday, 26 September, to Wednesday, 28 September 2005, on the understanding that these arrangements shall in no way create a precedent for the general debate at future sessions;

7. Notes that, prior to the High-level Plenary Meeting, the second World Conference of Speakers of Parliament will be convened from 7 to 9 September 2005 at United Nations Headquarters;

8. Requests the President of the General Assembly, in consultation with representatives of non-governmental organizations, to organize informal interactive hearings in June 2005 in New York with representatives of non-governmental organizations, civil society organizations and the private sector, as an input to the preparatory process of the High-level Plenary Meeting;

9. Looks forward to the comprehensive report requested in its resolution 58/291, which the Secretary-General will submit in March 2005 and which will serve as the basis for the consultations leading to the High-level Plenary Meeting;

10. Strongly urges all Member States to take a positive interest in the process of formal and informal consultations leading to the High-level Plenary Meeting and to engage actively, at the highest level of government, with a view to reaching a successful outcome of the High-level Plenary Meeting;

11. Requests the President of the General Assembly to continue to hold consultations with all Member States in an open-ended manner, with a view to taking decisions on all process-related outstanding issues of the High-level Plenary Meeting.

On 23 December, the Assembly decided that the item on the follow-up to the outcome of the Millennium Summit would remain for consideration during its resumed fifty-ninth (2005) session (decision 59/552).

Managerial reform and oversight

Procurement

JIU report. During the year, the Joint Inspection Unit (JIU) reviewed procurement practices within the UN system [JIU/REP/2004/9 & Corr.1] to identify opportunities for increasing procurement efficiency in the common system, through productivity enhancement, improved cooperation and coordination and technological innovations. The review, which focused on the cost-effectiveness of common system organizations' procurement services, provided an overview of procurement operations in 2002, particularly the aggregate procurement value and trends, the distribution of procurement activities, procurement expenditures, geographic distribution, procurement from programme countries, common and specialized items, and major clients. Also examined were issues relating to the training of procurement staff; cooperation and coordination among common system organizations, including on the question of policy and related mechanisms; electronic procurement (e-procurement); and capacity-building in public procurement, particularly in recipient client countries.

JIU found that the procurement function had evolved over the previous ten years from a relatively obscure administrative activity to a financially high-profile and high-risk function, accounting in 2002 for about $4.6 billion or 37 per cent of the organizations' combined regular and extrabudgetary resources. However, while procurement operations at Headquarters had been streamlined under a reform programme [YUN 1996, p. 1381] mandated and guided by the General Assembly in resolutions 49/216 C [YUN 1994, p. 1369] and 51/231 [YUN 1997, p. 1395], such reform measures were yet to filter down to other major duty stations, including field offices and the collective membership of the Inter-Agency Procurement Working Group (IAPWG)—the only inter-agency procurement forum involving virtually all common system organizations. JIU concluded that IAPWG had not done enough to research and develop procurement performance benchmarks or efficiency and quality paradigms to guide performance of the procurement function within the UN system, with special attention on related facilities and practices at field level. In addition, there was a need for rationalization, particularly the procurement of common user items, and increased outsourcing of procurement tasks among organizations as a means for reducing overlap and competition within the procurement community. Other shortcomings included the inadequacy of financial resources devoted to the training of procurement staff; the lack of central policy guidance in procurement; and major constraints that undermined the potential benefits of e-procurement.

JIU recommended that the Secretary-General continue to evaluate the results achieved by the Procurement Working Group of the Task Force on Common Services at Headquarters and other locations, including its findings on procurement performance benchmarks and other best practices resulting from procurement reforms, and that the evaluation report be discussed by the High-level Committee on Management of CEB and by IAPWG, which should, in turn, adopt recommendations for the procurement community. IAPWG should adopt and implement the concept of lead agency and promote a division of labour among common system organizations, aimed at the further rationalization of procurement practices by its members. Other recommendations advocated the establishment of a unified system of reporting and accountability for procurement services of the International Civil Aviation Organization, the International Telecommunications Union and the Universal Postal Union; staff training in the legal aspects of procurement; increasing procurement training budgets and related training initiatives; expanding training in e-procurement; the development of e-procurement solutions; the provision of procurement manuals in the working languages of common system organizations and the development of a generic system-wide policy and procedures manual; and formalizing the mandate of the inter-agency cooperation and coordination role of IAPWG and requiring it to report annually and to make action-oriented proposals on continuous improvements in the management, performance measurement and coordination of procurement services. In addition, JIU recommended further strengthening procurement reform at Headquarters through the establishment of a central procurement facility by 2010 to provide a frame of reference for similar streamlining of procurement services at other duty stations; avoiding overlap between the United Nations Office for Project Services procurement service and the Inter-Agency Procurement Services Office, including the option of merging the two entities; and capacity-building in public procurement agencies in recipient developing countries to strengthen their ability to participate in procurement.

Report of Secretary-General. In response to General Assembly resolution 57/279 [YUN 2002, p. 1358], the Secretary-General, in an August report [A/59/216], described the progress made since his 2002 report [YUN 2002, p. 1357] in procurement reform, in the areas of procurement opportunities for vendors from developing countries and countries with economies in transition, harmonization of the procurement process, the operation of air transportation service, audit observations, field procurement, efficiency in procurement, procurement training, vendor management, contract award and the work of the Committee on Rules of Origin. Annexed to the report were procurement statistics covering 1999 to 2003 and country procurement value by procurement division and local peacekeeping mission in 2002 and 2003, respectively.

The Secretary-General reported that the Secretariat had strengthened its cooperation with other UN system organizations through IAPWG and the Common Services Procurement Working Group. A newly designed web-based vendor registration system, designated the United Nations Global Marketplace, was launched in February to help harmonize the procurement process by simplifying the registration component. In terms of vendor management, IAPWG agreed that in future, different organizations would take the lead in evaluating and pre-qualifying vendors: the United Nations would take the lead in air charter services, information technology and communication goods and services; the United Nations Population Fund, in reproductive health items; the United Nations Children's Fund and the World Health Organization, in medical items and pharmaceuticals; and the World Food Programme and the United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine refugees in the Near East (UNRWA), in basic food commodities. That would eliminate administrative duplication and make the registration process more efficient and timely. The UN Secretariat and other system organizations created a standing working group to coordinate activities related to business seminars, including the development of guidelines, the prioritization of requests and the coordination of representation in an effort to further promote procurement opportunities for vendors from developing countries and countries with economies in transition. The Secretariat's Procurement Division revised the Procurement Manual. In terms of developing a code of conduct for procurement staff, the Secretariat had developed ethical guidelines, which the Inter-Agency Procurement Working Group agreed, in May, would be used by UN organizations to develop common guidelines for all. To improve the efficiency of the procurement decision-making process, the Secretariat further developed a system, known as the eHCC system, to process presentations to the Headquarters Committee on Contracts electronically. That would allow peacekeeping missions to submit local procurement cases to be reviewed by Headquarters directly to the Procurement Division for immediate review and processing. The Division also introduced electronic procurement data monitoring tools, a requisition tracking system and a workload monitoring system.

The Secretary-General concluded that the report demonstrated the Secretariat's commitments and collaborative efforts to increase transparency, fairness and responsiveness in the procurement process, as well as to enlist the collaboration and support of other common system organizations in developing a harmonized approach for improving efficiency in the procurement practices of the entire UN system.

ACABQ report. ACABQ, in an October report [A/59/540], acknowledged the Secretariat's efforts to promote procurement from developing countries, particularly through seminars. It encouraged the exploration of other avenues, including an analysis of the current approach to seminars, in order to make them more results-oriented, and recommended that follow-up mechanisms be considered. ACABQ welcomed initiatives developed to improve efficiency, including the review of vendor management and implementation of related recommendations. On the question of accountability, the Advisory Committee requested that related information be provided in the Secretary-General's next report and rec-commended that weaknesses in the procurement process identified by the Board of Auditors be addressed. Concerning the training of field procurement staff, ACABQ was of the opinion that training programmes should focus on a train-the-trainers approach, through which large numbers of junior personnel could be trained in a more cost-effective and efficient way. It recalled that it had drawn attention in its 2003 report [YUN 2003, p. 82] to the need to monitor and evaluate training needs in that regard.

Oversight activities

Internal oversight

At its resumed fifty-eighth session, the General Assembly had before it the OIOS report on its activities for the period from 1 July 2002 to 30 June 2003 [YUN 2003, p. 1386]. By decision 58/564 B of 8 April, the Assembly decided to defer consideration of the report until its fifty-ninth (2004) session.

The Assembly also had before it OIOS reports on the evaluation of the impact of the recent restructuring of DPKO (see p. 102); the follow-up review of the status of OIOS recommendations on mission liquidation activities at the United Nations [YUN 2003, p. 94]; the administration of Peacekeeping trust funds [ibid., p. 90]; and the investigation into the fraudulent diversion of $4.3 million by a senior staff member of the reconstruction pillar of the United Nations Interim Administration Mission in Kosovo [ibid., p. 427].

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 18 June [meeting 91], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth (Administrative and Budgetary) Committee [A/58/582/Add.2], adopted resolution 58/299 without vote [agenda item 134].

Reports of the Office of Internal Oversight Services

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 48/218 B of 29 July 1994, 54/244 of 23 December 1999, 56/241 and 56/246 of 24 December 2001 and 57/278 B of 18 June 2003,

Having considered the reports of the Office of Internal Oversight Services on the evaluation of the impact of the recent restructuring of the Department of Peacekeeping Operations, the follow-up review of the status of recommendations of the Office of Internal Oversight Services on mission liquidation activities at the United Nations, the administration of peacekeeping trust funds, and the investigation into the fraudulent diversion of 4.3 million United States dollars by a senior staff member of the reconstruction pillar of the United Nations Interim Administration Mission in Kosovo,

1. Takes note of the reports of the Office of Internal Oversight Services on the evaluation of the impact of the recent restructuring of the Department of Peacekeeping Operations, the follow-up review of the status of recommendations of the Office of Internal Oversight Services on mission liquidation activities at the United Nations, the administration of peacekeeping trust funds, and the investigation into the fraudulent diversion of 4.3 million dollars by a senior staff member of the reconstruction pillar of the United Nations Interim Administration Mission in Kosovo;

2. Decides to revert to the consideration of the report of the Office of Internal Oversight Services on the audit of the policies and procedures for recruiting staff for the Department of Peacekeeping Operations, during its fifty-ninth session, in the context of its consideration of the items entitled "Human resources management" and "Administrative and budgetary aspects of the financing of the United Nations peacekeeping operations";

3. Notes that the Board of Auditors will act upon General Assembly resolution 57/318 of 18 June 2003 once it has considered the report of the Office of Internal Oversight Services and assessed what additional evaluation it might provide, and also notes that the General Assembly may revert at that time to the report of the Office of Internal Oversight Services.

At its fifty-ninth session, the Assembly continued consideration of the reports of OIOS on its activities for the period from 1 July 2002 to 30 June 2003 [YUN 2003, p. 1386] and on the review of the structure and operations of the United Nations Information Centres [ibid., p. 636]. It also had before it the OIOS report on its audit of regional commissions (see p. 992).

OIOS activities. In October, the Secretary-General transmitted the tenth annual report of OIOS covering its activities from 1 July 2003 to 30 June 2004 [A/59/359]. During the reporting period, OIOS issued several reports, which the Secretary-General transmitted to the General Assembly. Those issued in 2004, in addition to its report on its own activities, were on: the review of the Office of the Prosecutor at the International Criminal Tribunals for Rwanda and for the former Yugoslavia [A/58/677]; audit of the policies and procedures for recruiting DPKO staff [A/58/704]; strengthening the investigation functions in the United Nations [A/58/708]; evaluation of the impact of the recent restructuring of DPKO [A/58/746]; the implementation of the recommendations of OIOS on the Investment Management Service of the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Fund [A/58/725]; audit of the regional commissions [A/58/785]; programme performance of the United Nations for the biennium 2002-2003 [A/59/69]; strengthening the role of evaluation findings in programme design, delivery and policy directives [A/59/79]; integration of global management of conference services [A/59/133 & Corr.1]; follow-up audit of DPKO policies and procedures for recruitment [A/59/152]; inspection of programme management and administrative practices of the International Trade Centre sponsored by the United Nations Conference on Trade and Development and the World Trade Organization (UNCTAD/WTO) [A/59/229]; audit of safeguarding air safety standards while procuring air services for UN peacekeeping missions [A/59/347]; review of the operation and management of United Nations Libraries [A/59/373]; impact of the human resources management reform [A/59/253]; report on the availability in local labour markets of the skills for which international recruitment for the General Service category took place [A/59/388]; report on the utilization and management of funds appropriated during the 2002-2003 biennium for strengthening the security and safety of United Nations premises [A/59/396]; management review of the appeals process at the United Nations [A/59/408]; the United Nations capital master plan for the period August 2003-July 2004 [A/59/420]; and first year of experience of regional investigations in two hubs, Vienna and Nairobi [A/59/546].

One OIOS report, transmitted to the Economic and Social Council, was on the evaluation of the United Nations Voluntary Fund for Victims of Torture [E/CN.4/2005/55].

Those for transmittal to the Committee for Programme and Coordination (CPC) were on: further development of topics for a pilot thematic evaluation [E/AC.51/2004/2]; in-depth evaluation of the programme on public administration, finance and development [E/AC.51/2004/3]; and triennial reviews of the implementation of the recommendations made by CPC in 2001 on the in-depth evaluation of sustainable development [E/AC.51/2004/4] and of the population programme [E/AC.51/2004/5].

During the period under review, OIOS issued 1,515 recommendations, of which 473 or 35.7 per cent were classified as critical. The overall implementation rate for all recommendations was 52.3 per cent. As at 30 June 2004, the implementation of 80 (including four critical) recommendations issued during 2001/02 and 114 recommendations (including 22 critical) issued during 2002/03 had not started owing to their complexity or to lengthy negotiations on the modalities for implementation. Of the 473 critical recommendations issued, 49 per cent were aimed at improving operational efficiency and effectiveness; 33 per cent, administration and management; 14 per cent, accuracy of management information; and 4 per cent, security and disclosure of mismanagement, misconduct or fraud. Savings and recoveries from OIOS audits and investigations totalled $26.6 million, compared to $15.4 million in the previous reporting period [YUN 2003, p. 1387].

The report highlighted the oversight results for various high-risk areas, which were the outcome of audits, evaluation, inspection, investigation and management consulting activities undertaken to mitigate the risks identified. In that context, the report provided the definitions of risk and risk management and described the OIOS planning process. The caseload for investigation continued to rise during the reporting period, and the consequent backlog of cases in the Investigations Division presented a risk in terms of the ability of the Office to provide adequate professional investigative services to the Organization.

Between November 2003 and June 2004, OIOS conducted an Office-wide review of its activities to assist the General Assembly in its five-year evaluation and review of the Office, in accordance with resolution 54/244 [YUN 1999, p. 1274]. The review indicated that OIOS achievements and strengths derived from its operational independence, reporting procedures and functions (audit, monitoring/evaluation/consulting and investigations) and the risk mitigation component of its strategy for internal oversight. One of the most important findings of the review was the value that client departments placed on ongoing dialogue with OIOS on constructive teamwork in the common quest for good governance of the Organization. The review enabled OIOS to identify lessons learned and best practices aimed at improving its internal management, make proposals for enhancing its efficiency and effectiveness, and assist the Organization in addressing the opportunities and risks it faced.

Appointment of Under-Secretary-General.

The Assembly, by decision 59/552 of 23 December, decided that the item on the appointment of the Under-Secretary-General for Internal Oversight Services remained for consideration during its resumed fifty-ninth (2005) session.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 23 December [meeting 76], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee [A/59/648], adopted two resolutions related to the activities of OIOS. The Assembly adopted resolution 59/270 without vote [agenda item 118].

Reports of the Secretary-General on the activities of the Office of Internal Oversight Services

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 48/218 B of 29 July 1994 and 54/244 of 23 December 1999,

Recalling also its resolutions 56/246 of 24 December 2001 and 58/101 B of 9 December 2003,

Having considered the annual report of the Office of Internal Oversight Services for the period 1 July 2002 to 30 June 2003 and the report of the Office of Internal Oversight Services on the review of the structure and operations of United Nations information centres,

1. Notes with appreciation the work of the Office of Internal Oversight Services;

2. Takes note of the annual report of the Office of Internal Oversight Services;

3. Requests the Secretary-General to ensure that the Office of Internal Oversight Services continues to provide internal oversight of the entire claims process of the United Nations Compensation Commission and to report regularly thereon in the context of the annual reports of the Office;

4. Recalls regulation 1.2 of the Staff Regulations and Rules of the United Nations, and requests the Secretary-General to provide information to the General Assembly at its sixty-first session in the context of its consideration of matters related to procurement reform on actions taken to prevent recurrence of incidents of possible conflict of interest and inappropriate procurement practices;

5. Notes the description of the mission of the Office of Internal Oversight Services, as outlined in its annual report, and in this regard stresses that the mission of the Office should be in full conformity with its mandate, as approved by the General Assembly in its resolution 48/218 B;

6. Requests the Secretary-General to ensure that the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees develops and utilizes comprehensive policy guidelines for the selection and management of consultants to ensure transparency and objectivity in their engagement, monitoring and evaluation as well as to make greater efforts to ensure a geographical balance in the use of qualified consultants, in accordance with the relevant resolutions of the General Assembly, and to report thereon to the Assembly at its sixty-first session;

7. Endorses the relevant recommendations of the Office of Internal Oversight Services regarding improvement of internal controls in management, accounting and reporting of assets of all United Nations field missions to establish reliable records, and requests the Secretary-General to ensure their full implementation and to report thereon to the General Assembly at the second part of its resumed sixtieth session;

8. Requests the Secretary-General to codify appropriate procedures for the purchase and utilization of vehicles and other equipment by United Nations field missions to ensure compliance by all missions with the procedures and to report thereon to the General Assembly at the second part of its resumed sixtieth session;

9. Notes with concern the contents of paragraph 97 of the annual report of the Office of Internal Oversight Services on the management and control of United Nations laissez-passes, and requests the Secretary-General to ensure the development of appropriate Organization-wide rules, policies and procedures for managing laissez-passes and to report thereon to the General Assembly, as appropriate;

10. Recalls paragraph 38 of General Assembly resolution 58/101 B, and takes note of the report of the Office of Internal Oversight Services on the review of the structure and operations of United Nations information centres.

The Assembly adopted resolution 59/271 without vote [agenda item 118].

Report of the Secretary-General on the activities of the Office of Internal Oversight Services

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 48/218 B of 29 July 1994 and 54/244 of 23 December 1999,

Having considered the annual report of the Office of Internal Oversight Services for the period 1 July 2003 to 30 June 2004,

1. Notes with appreciation the work of the Office of Internal Oversight Services;

2. Takes note of the annual report of the Office of Internal Oversight Services;

3. Notes the description of the mission of the Office of Internal Oversight Services, as outlined in its annual report, and in this regard stresses that the mission of the Office should be in full conformity with its mandate, as approved by the General Assembly in its resolution 48/218 B;

4. Notes also the information provided by the Office of Internal Oversight Services on the economies and savings generated by its recommendations, and requests the Office to explain its guidelines for measuring the impact of such economies and/or savings and to report to the General Assembly thereon in its next annual report;

5. Requests the Secretary-General, with regard to paragraph 53 of the annual report of the Office of Internal Oversight Services, to ensure strict conformity with the highest standards of quality when recruiting staff to fill language posts, in accordance with legislative mandates;

6. Notes with concern the findings of the Office of Internal Oversight Services on investigations, as reflected in paragraphs 42 to 47 of its annual report, as well as the fact that some of them reflect serious managerial problems and lack of control;

7. Stresses, in this regard, the crucial importance of establishing an effective and efficient system of accountability throughout the Secretariat in order to prevent such problems and to make programme managers accountable;

8. Takes note of the report of the Office of Internal Oversight Services on its audit of the regional commissions, and requests the Secretary-General to report to the General Assembly at its sixtieth session on the actions taken by the legislative bodies of the regional commissions with regard to the recommendations of the report;

9. Takes note also of paragraph 63 of the annual report, relating to the audit of the non-governmental organization accreditation process;

10. Reiterates, in the context of paragraphs 8 and 9 above, paragraph 8 of its resolution 54/244, in which it emphasized that the approval, change and discontinuation of legislative mandates are the exclusive prerogatives of intergovernmental legislative bodies;

11. Concurs with the observation of the Office of Internal Oversight Services in paragraph 55 of its annual report, and requests the Secretary-General to ensure that the Office continues to provide internal oversight of the entire claims process of the United Nations Compensation Commission and to report regularly thereon in the context of the annual reports of the Office.

On the same date, the Assembly decided that the item on the report of the Secretary-General on the activities of the Office of Internal Oversight Services would remain for consideration during its resumed fifty-ninth (2005) session (decision 59/552).

OIOS reporting procedures

On 23 December [meeting 76], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee [A/59/649], adopted resolution 59/272 without vote [agenda item 119].

Review of the implementation of General Assembly resolutions 48/218 B and 54/244

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 48/218 B of 29 July 1994 and 54/244 of 23 December 1999,

1. Decides to maintain the reporting procedures for the Office of Internal Oversight Services in full compliance with its resolutions 48/218 B and 54/244, and in this context requests the Secretary-General to ensure that:

(a) Annual reports submitted by the Office of Internal Oversight Services to the General Assembly contain the titles and brief summaries of all reports of the Office issued during the year;

(b) Semi-annual reports of the Office of Internal Oversight Services contain the titles and brief summaries of all other reports of the Office issued in the reporting period;

(c) Original versions of the reports of the Office of Internal Oversight Services not submitted to the General Assembly are, upon request, made available to any Member State;

2. Also decides that when access to a report would be inappropriate for reasons of confidentiality or the risk of violating the due process rights of individuals involved in Office of Internal Oversight Services investigations, the report may be modified, or withheld in extraordinary circumstances, at the discretion of the Under-Secretary-General for Internal Oversight Services, who will provide reasons for this to the requesting party;

3. Further decides that reports of the Office of Internal Oversight Services shall be submitted directly to the General Assembly as submitted by the Office and that the comments of the Secretary-General may be submitted in a separate report;

4. Affirms its primary role in the consideration of and action taken on the reports submitted to it;

5. Notes that no mechanism has been established for the follow-up to Office of Internal Oversight Services recommendations, including those considered by the General Assembly;

6. Emphasizes the importance of establishing real, effective and efficient mechanisms for responsibility and accountability;

7. Regrets that despite previous information provided by the Secretary-General on the establishment of accountability mechanisms, including the accountability panel, such mechanisms are not in place, thereby affecting the efficient and effective functioning of the Organization;

8. Takes note of paragraph 129 (b) of the annual report of the Office of Internal Oversight Services, and concurs with the view that a high-level follow-up mechanism under the authority of the Secretary-General should be established in the Organization to effectively feed findings and recommendations of the Office, as well as relevant findings of the Joint Inspection Unit and the Board of Auditors, into the executive management processes;

9. Requests the Secretary-General to submit annually to the General Assembly a report under the agenda item entitled "Review of the efficiency of the administrative and financial functioning of the United Nations" addressing the measures implemented with the aim of strengthening accountability in the Secretariat and the results achieved;

10. Also requests the Secretary-General to establish the aforementioned follow-up mechanism as soon as possible and to report to the General Assembly on the results achieved in the context of the report referred to in paragraph 9 above, with specific reference to:

(a) The composition of such a mechanism, including the seniority of the Chair and members;

(b) Terms of reference of the mechanism and frequency of its meetings;

(c) The inclusion in the mechanism of one or more participants with relevant expertise from United Nations-system oversight bodies;

(d) Reporting procedures;

11. Reaffirms the role of the Board of Auditors and the Joint Inspection Unit as external oversight bodies, and, in this regard, affirms that any external review, audit, inspection, monitoring, evaluation or investigation of the Office can be undertaken only by such bodies or those mandated to do so by the General Assembly;

12. Also reaffirms the importance of effective coordination, in the implementation of their respective mandates, between the Joint Inspection Unit, the Board of Auditors and the Office of Internal Oversight Services, in order to maximize the use of resources and share experiences, knowledge, best practices and lessons learned;

13. Stresses the vital importance of the evaluation function of the Office of Internal Oversight Services, and requests the Secretary-General to better reflect the objectives, expected accomplishments and performance indicators related to this function in future biennial programmes and budgetary submissions of the Office;

14. Reaffirms its oversight role as well as the role of the Fifth Committee in administrative and budgetary matters;

15. Notes paragraph 129 (a) of the annual report of the Office of Internal Oversight Services, and in this context requests the Secretary-General to report to the General Assembly at its sixtieth session, taking into account the views of external oversight bodies, on how to guarantee the full operational independence of the Office within the context of its resolution 48/218 B;

16. Decides to evaluate and review at its sixty-fourth session the functions and reporting procedures of the Office of Internal Oversight Services and any other matter which it deems appropriate, and to that end to include in the provisional agenda of that session an item entitled "Review of the implementation of General Assembly resolutions 48/218 B, 54/244 and 59/272”.

Also on 23 December, the Assembly decided that the item on review of the implementation of General Assembly resolutions 48/218 B [YUN 1994, p. 1362] and 54/244 [YUN 1999, p. 1274] would remain for consideration during its resumed fifty-ninth (2005) session (decision 59/552).

Strengthening the investigations function

In response to General Assembly resolution 57/282 [YUN 2002, p. 1393], the Secretary-General, by a February note [A/58/708], transmitted a report of OIOS on strengthening the investigation function in the United Nations. OIOS reviewed 59 UN departments, offices, funds, programmes and missions to obtain information that would permit an assessment of the nature and extent of investigations conducted in 2002, the role played by management, whether guidelines existed and were followed, and the nature of any training. The review sought to determine whether programme managers involved in investigative processes retained the requisite independence in their administrative and managerial functions, had been given sufficient and proper investigative training and had used appropriate written procedures for investigations.

OIOS found, among other things, that: few investigations were done despite the yearly increase in serious matters reported by the offices reviewed; none of the offices reported having had any formal training programmes other than those provided by OIOS; and written procedures were not common, even though guidelines had been developed by OIOS and formally endorsed by UN system oversight offices. OIOS reaffirmed the importance of the 2001 JIU recommendations [YUN 2001, p. 1284] for training and procedures for those performing investigations. It intended, in coordination with other UN oversight bodies and relevant departments, to develop a policy on the role of programme managers in investigative activities; address how basic training could be provided for those responsible, including security officers and any other personnel assigned to conduct basic investigations; prepare procedures for handling less complex matters; further the development of the independent investigation function in the UN system; and conduct a follow-up review and report thereon to the Assembly.

Responses by the offices reviewed were included in the report, to which were also annexed the investigations conducted in 2002 by UN programme managers and the text for uniform guidelines for investigations proposed by OIOS.

By decision 58/564 B of 8 April, the Assembly deferred until its fifty-ninth session consideration of the item related to the OIOS report on strengthening the investigation functions in the United Nations.

External oversight

Joint Inspection Unit

At its resumed fifty-eighth session, the General Assembly had before it the 2002 report of JIU [YUN 2002, p. 1361] and notes by the Secretary-General transmitting: JIU's work programme for 2003 [YUN 2003, p. 1388], the preliminary list of reports for potential inclusion in its work programme for 2004 and beyond [ibid.], JIU reports on the preliminary and in-depth reviews of its statute and working methods [ibid. & A/58/343/Add/2] and the Secretary-General's 2003 report on the status of implementation of JIU recommendations [ibid.].

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 8 April [meeting 83], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee [A/58/751], adopted resolution 58/286 without vote [agenda item 129].

Joint Inspection Unit

The General Assembly,

Reaffirming its previous resolutions on the Joint Inspection Unit, in particular resolutions 50/233 of 7 June 1996, 54/16 of 29 October 1999, 55/230 of 23 December 2000, 56/245 of 24 December 2001 and 57/284 A and B of 20 December 2002,

Having considered the report of the Joint Inspection Unit for 2002, the note by the Secretary-General transmitting the programme of work of the Unit for 2003, the note by the Secretary-General transmitting the preliminary listing of reports for potential inclusion in the programme of work of the Unit for 2004 and beyond, the report of the Secretary-General on the implementation of the recommendations of the Unit, the note by the Secretary-General transmitting the report of the Unit on the preliminary review of its statute and working methods and notes by the Secretary-General transmitting the reports of the Unit on the in-depth review of its statute and working methods,

1. Takes note with appreciation of the report of the Joint Inspection Unit for 2002;
2. Takes note of the note by the Secretary-General transmitting the programme of work of the Unit for 2003;
3. Also takes note of the note by the Secretary-General transmitting the preliminary listing of reports for potential inclusion in the programme of work of the Unit for 2004 and beyond;
4. Further takes note of the report of the Secretary-General on the implementation of the recommendations of the Unit;

5. Takes note with appreciation of the active contribution of the Unit to the review of its statute and working methods;

6. Welcomes the internal reform process undertaken by the Unit, including its strategic framework and its internal working procedures, and urges the Unit to continue these efforts;

7. Requests the secretariats of the United Nations and all participating organizations to facilitate the work of the Unit, including in particular by offering full access to all information, as required by the Unit;

8. Reiterates once again its request to the executive heads of the participating organizations that have not yet done so to take the steps necessary to facilitate the consideration of and action on the system of follow-up to the reports of the Unit, and invites the legislative organs concerned to consider the system and take action in that regard;

9. Decides to revert to the issue of the reform of the Unit at its fifty-ninth session.

JIU activities. In its annual report to the General Assembly [A/60/34], JIU gave an overview of its activities in 2004, during which it issued reports on: multilingualism and access to information: case study on the International Civil Aviation Organization [JIU/REP/2004/1]; a review of Headquarters agreements concluded by UN system organizations: human resources issues affecting staff [JIU/REP/2004/2]; administration of justice: harmonization of the statutes of the United Nations Administrative Tribunal and the International Labour Organization Administrative Tribunal [JIU/REP/2004/3]; a review of management and administration in the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees [JIU/REP/2004/4]; an overview of the series of reports on managing for results in the UN system [JIU/REP/2004/5]; implementation of results-based management in UN organizations [JIU/REP/2004/6], delegation of authority and accountability [JIU/REP/2004/7], and managing performance and contracts [JIU/REP/2004/8]; procurement practices within the UN system [JIU/REP/2004/9]; harmonization of the conditions of travel throughout the UN system [JIU/REP/2004/10]; and knowledge management at the International Labour Organization [JIU/NOTE/2004/1].

During 2004, JIU continued to review its statute and working methods. The progress achieved in that regard was described in a February report [A/58/343/Add.2] to the Assembly. Pending an Assembly decision on some of the proposals outlined in its 2003 reports on the subject [YUN 2003, p. 1388], JIU continued to implement changes in other fields that did not require legislative approval or direction. Among those changes were the adoption of internal working procedures; the development of new mechanisms to implement the strategic framework adopted by JIU in 2003 [ibid.], particularly concerning risk assessment, selecting topics for reports and improving the quality of reports; pilot risk assessment exercises; and the initiation of the peer review process foreseen in the new internal working procedures, through which JIU would exercise collective responsibility for the preparation of reports, notes and confidential letters. The February report was complemented by a September conference room paper [A/C.5/59/CRP.1].

On 22 April [A/59/75], the Secretary-General transmitted to the Assembly the JIU work programme for 2004. On 10 September [A/59/349], he also transmitted information on the status of implementation of the recommendations contained in JIU reports on: administration of justice at the United Nations [YUN 2000, p. 1359]; delegation of authority for management of human and financial resources in the UN Secretariat [ibid., 1350]; results-based budgeting; the experience of UN system organizations [YUN 1999, p. 1284]; and young professionals in selected organizations of the UN system: recruitment, management and retention [YUN 2001, p. 1352].

By a December note [A/59/617], the Secretary-General transmitted a JIU report entitled "Overview of the series of reports on managing for results in the United Nations system".

Appointment of JIU members. By an April note [A/59/108], the Secretary-General noted that four persons would be needed to fill the vacancies on JIU that would arise as at 31 December 2005.

On 23 December, the Assembly, by decision 59/552, decided that the item on the appointment of members of JIU would remain for consideration during its resumed fifty-ninth (2005) session.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 23 December [meeting 76], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee [A/59/646], adopted resolution 59/267 without vote [agenda item 115].

Reports of the Joint Inspection Unit

The General Assembly,

Reaffirming its previous resolutions on the Joint Inspection Unit, in particular resolutions 31/192 of 22 December 1976, 50/233 of 7 June 1996, 54/16 of 29 October 1999, 55/230 of 23 December 2000, 56/245 of 24 December 2001, 57/284 A and B of 20 December 2002 and 58/286 of 8 April 2004,

Having considered the report of the Joint Inspection Unit for 2003, the note by the Secretary-General transmitting the programme of work of the Joint Inspection Unit for 2004 and the report of the Secretary-General on the implementation of the recommendations of the Joint Inspection Unit,

Noting with appreciation the recent adoption by the Joint Inspection Unit of internal working procedures and mechanisms to complement its standards and guidelines, which are aimed at improving the quality and impact of the Unit's activities,

Recognizing that in order for the Unit to further improve its effectiveness, the provisions of the statute of the Unit should be fully implemented,

1. Takes note with appreciation of the report of the Joint Inspection Unit for 2003;

2. Takes note of the note by the Secretary-General transmitting the programme of work of the Unit for 2004;

3. Also takes note of the report of the Secretary-General on the implementation of the recommendations of the Unit;

4. Decides to discontinue the requirement for the report of the Secretary-General on the implementation of the recommendations of the Unit;

5. Considers that the implementation in full of the provisions of the statute of the Unit should contribute to the enhancement of its role and an increase in the effectiveness of its activities;

6. Urges Member States requested to propose candidates for membership in the Unit to strictly adhere to the qualifications and experience outlined in article 2, paragraph 1, of the statute;

7. Stresses the importance of ensuring that candidates have experience in at least one of the fields illustrated as follows: oversight, audit, inspection, investigation, evaluation, finance, project evaluation, programme evaluation, human resources management, management, public administration, monitoring and/ or programme performance, as well as knowledge of the United Nations system and its role in international relations;

8. Invites the President of the General Assembly to ensure the full implementation of the procedures and mechanisms for reviewing the qualifications of proposed candidates as outlined in article 3, paragraph 2, of the statute of the Unit, including through joint consultations with the President of the Economic and Social Council and the Chairman of the United Nations System Chief Executives Board for Coordination, as well as drawing, as appropriate, on relevant expertise from expert and intergovernmental bodies concerned with budgetary and human resources matters, and with consultations with the States concerned, after which the President of the Assembly submits the list of such candidates to the Assembly for appointment;

9. Also invites the President of the General Assembly to review the procedures followed by the Assembly for the appointment of inspectors, with a view to enhancing the efficiency of the application of article 3, paragraph 2, of the statute, bearing in mind the procedures followed for the selection of members of other expert bodies and to report to the Assembly at the first part of its resumed sixtieth session for its decision, as appropriate;

10. Reaffirms article 11, paragraph 2, of the statute of the Unit, and requests that the Unit, as a whole, also take responsibility in the exercise of its collective wisdom with regard to all its reports, notes and recommendations, in order to improve the effectiveness of the Unit;

11. Re-emphasizes paragraph 9 of its resolution 56/245;

12. Decides that the Unit shall perform its functions and responsibilities strictly in accordance with the provisions of its statute;

13. Also decides that the programme of work of the Unit shall be collectively approved, providing the rationale for choice as well as the relevance of the envisaged outcome to improving management and methods and promoting greater coordination between organizations;

14. Affirms that, in the implementation of article 18 of the statute of the Unit, the Chair shall be responsible for overseeing the Unit's programme of work, including, in the event of disagreement, the division of assignments, and for enforcing the internal working procedures of the Unit to ensure, through collective responsibility, the quality of its reports;

15. Welcomes the peer review system established by the Unit, and decides that if, in the opinion of the majority of the inspectors, the report in question does not meet the established quality standards, the Chair shall reflect such views and the reasons therefor in the introduction to the report;

16. Emphasizes the desirability of continuity in the term of office of the Chair and Vice-Chair, and calls upon the Unit to bear this in mind in implementing article 18 of the statute, so as to re-elect the Chairman and the Vice-Chairman for overlapping terms, thereby balancing the need for institutional memory and reasonable rotation;

17. Also emphasizes the need to assess resource management from a system-wide perspective, including the contribution of, and coordination between, organizations;

18. Decides that the Unit shall mainly focus on identifying means to improve management and to ensure that optimum use is made of available resources, as stipulated in article 5, paragraphs 1 to 3, of the statute, and to this end the Unit will set out management criteria and methods for assessment of management performance and effectiveness relevant to participating organizations;

19. Also decides that the Unit shall include, in its annual reports, information on implementation and the results achieved by organizations in respect of their follow-up to the recommendations of the Unit, as endorsed by their legislative bodies, and the arrangements put in place by participating organizations for reporting thereon;

20. Further decides that the Unit, as part of its focus on management issues, should assess the development and application in participating organizations of the principle of accountability in its relevant reports;

21. Decides that the Unit shall undertake inspections with a sharp focus on the areas stipulated in article 5, paragraphs 1 to 3, of the statute, bearing in mind paragraphs 18 and 20 above;

22. Invites the Committee for Programme and Coordination, in performing its programmatic, coordination, monitoring and evaluation functions, as contained in its mandate, to consider relevant reports of the Unit;

23. Requests the Secretary-General to ensure that the staff recruited according to article 19 of the statute fully meet the qualifications and have proven experience in specific areas required to assist the Unit in the fulfilment of its functions, namely, inspection, investigation and evaluation;

24. Reaffirms that the working languages of the General Assembly are those of the Unit, in application of article 51 of the rules of procedure of the Assembly, and also reaffirms that the working languages of the Secretariat of the United Nations are those of the secretariat of the Unit, in application of Assembly resolution 2(1) of 1 February 1946;

25. Decides to continue providing translation in all official languages for the reports of the Unit and also to provide interpretation, as necessary, within existing resources;

26. Reaffirms its request to the Secretariat and all participating organizations to facilitate the work of the Unit, including, in particular, through offering full access to all relevant information, as required by the Unit;

27. Also reaffirms its request to the executive heads of the participating organizations that have not yet done so to take the steps necessary to facilitate the consideration of and action on the system of follow-up to the reports of the Unit, and invites the legislative organs concerned to consider the system and take action in that regard;

28. Emphasizes the need to ensure respect for the separate and distinct roles and functions of external and internal oversight mechanisms and also to strengthen the external oversight mechanisms;

29. Decides to consider the implementation of the provisions of the present resolution, which are aimed at increasing the effectiveness of the Unit, at its sixty-first session.

By decision 59/552 of 23 December, the Assembly decided that the item on the Joint Inspections Unit would remain for consideration during its resumed fifty-ninth (2005) session.

The Assembly, in section VIII of resolution 59/276 of the same date (see p. 1385), approved the gross budget for JIU for 2005 in the amount of $5,385,700 and to appropriate the amount of $1,712,700 under section 31, Jointly financed administrative activities, for the financing of JIU in 2005.

Revitalization of the work of the General Assembly

At its resumed fifty-eighth session, the General Assembly adopted a text regarding further measures for the revitalization of its work. It also had before it Secretariat notes, submitted in response to resolution 58/216 [YUN 2003, p. 1389], on: options for the rescheduling of the Assembly's main Committees [A/58/CRP.3]; an illustrative agenda of the Assembly [A/58/CRP.4] and an analysis of its agenda [A/58/CRP.6]; a historical and analytical note on the practices and working methods of the Main Committees [A/58/CRP.5]; and control and limitation of documentation [A/58/CRP.7].

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 1 July [meeting 92], the General Assembly adopted resolution 58/316 [draft A/58/L.66] without vote [agenda item 55].

Further measures for the revitalization of the work of the General Assembly

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 58/126 of 19 December 2003 on the revitalization of the work of the General Assembly,

Recalling also its previous resolutions relating to the revitalization of its work,

1. Decides to adopt the text contained in the annex to the present resolution;

2. Determines to continue with efforts for the revitalization of its work;

3. Requests the Secretary-General to report on all aspects of the implementation of resolution 58/126 and the present resolution to the General Assembly at its sixtieth session.

Annex

A. Reordering the work of the General Assembly

1. Recalling section B, paragraph 2, of the annex to General Assembly resolution 58/126 of 19 December 2003, and having reviewed the note by the Secretariat entitled "Options for the rescheduling of the Main Committees of the General Assembly", it is decided that:

(a) The consideration of the implementation of paragraph 2 of section B of the annex to resolution 58/126 shall be deferred until its fifty-ninth session, taking into account the views expressed as well as the suggestions made by Member States in the context of the deliberations of the open-ended meetings of the General Committee during the fifty-eighth session;

(b) With effect from the fifty-ninth session of the General Assembly, the meetings of the plenary Assembly shall normally be held on Mondays and Thursdays.

B. Organization of the agenda of the General Assembly

2. Recalling section B, paragraph 4, of the annex to resolution 58/126, and having reviewed the note by the Secretariat entitled "Illustrative agenda of the General Assembly", and taking into account the views expressed by Member States on the matter, it is decided that:

(a) Pursuant to paragraph 4 of section B of the annex to resolution 58/126, the agenda of the General Assembly shall be organized under headings corresponding to the priorities of the Organization, as contained in the medium-term plan for the period 2002-2005 (or in the strategic framework, as appropriate), with an additional heading for "Organizational, administrative and other matters" for the purpose of giving a sense of structure to the work of the Assembly, achieving a better presentation of the issues and challenges with which the Assembly deals and making the work of the Assembly more accessible, with the understanding that the new arrangement will not prejudice the way in which the work of the Assembly is organized and carried out;

- (b) The headings of the agenda shall consequently be:
 - (i) Maintenance of international peace and security;
 - (ii) Promotion of sustained economic growth and sustainable development in accordance with the resolutions of the General Assembly and recent United Nations conferences;
 - (iii) Development of Africa;
 - (iv) Promotion of human rights;
 - (v) Effective coordination of humanitarian assistance efforts;
 - (vi) Promotion of justice and international law;
 - (vii) Disarmament;
 - (viii) Drug control, crime prevention and combating international terrorism in all its forms and manifestations;
 - (ix) Organizational, administrative and other matters;

(c) The General Committee shall make recommendations, after consultation with Member States, to the General Assembly at its fifty-ninth session on the placement of the agenda items for the fifty-ninth session under the headings set out above, with a view to making the new arrangement effective;

(d) The provisions of the present section shall be reviewed by the General Assembly at its sixty-first session with a view to making further improvements, as appropriate.

C. Practices and working methods of the Main Committees

3. Recalling section B, paragraph 8, of the annex to resolution 58/126, and having reviewed the note by the Secretariat entitled "Historical and analytical note on the practices and working methods of the Main Committees", recalling that the Main Committees are bound by the rules of procedure of the General Assembly, and taking into account the views expressed by Member States on the matter, it is decided that:

(a) Main Committees shall give specific attention to the rationalization of their future agendas by the biennialization, triennialization, clustering and elimination of items, and make recommendations to the plenary Assembly for its decision by 1 April 2005;

(b) Main Committees shall adopt a provisional programme of work at the end of the session for the next session to help them better to plan, prepare and organize and, in this context, review the related documentation requirements;

(c) The practice of interactive debates and panel discussions shall be utilized or expanded, as appropriate, by all Main Committees so as to enhance informal, in-depth discussions and to bring together experts from various fields without prejudicing the progress of the substantive work of the Main Committees;

(d) The practice of "question time" shall be introduced, as appropriate, in all Main Committees to enable a dynamic and candid exchange with heads of departments and offices, representatives of the Secretary-General and special rapporteurs;

(e) The web sites of the Main Committees shall be enhanced and thereafter regularly updated and their content maintained by the secretariats of the Main Committees;

(f) The bureaux-elect of the Main Committees shall meet immediately after their election in order to discuss the organization and division of their work;

(g) With a view to ensuring the continuity and the effective organization of their work, the incoming bureaux of the Main Committees shall, no later than two weeks after their election, meet with the outgoing bureaux in order to consult on and review issues relating to the efficient functioning of the Main Committees;

(h) Prior to the opening of each session, informal briefings of each Main Committee shall be convened to discuss the organization of work.

D. Review of the agenda of the General Assembly

4. Recalling section B, paragraph 5, of the annex to resolution 58/126, having reviewed the note by the Secretariat entitled "Analysis of the agenda of the General Assembly", which provides factual information on the frequency of consideration, origin and history of action on the 333 items and sub-items on the agenda, taking into account the views expressed by Member States, and following consultations with concerned Member States, it is decided that:

(a) The items entitled "Launching of global negotiations on international economic cooperation for development" and "Restructuring and revitalization of the United Nations in the economic, social and related fields" shall be eliminated from the agenda;

(b) The items entitled "Question of Cyprus", "Armed aggression against the Democratic Republic of the Congo", "Question of the Falkland Islands (Malvinas)", "The situation of democracy and human rights in Haiti", "Armed Israeli aggression against the Iraqi nuclear installations and its grave consequences for the established international system concerning the peaceful uses of nuclear energy, the non-proliferation of nuclear weapons and international peace and security", "Consequences of the Iraqi occupation of and aggression against Kuwait", and "Declaration of the Assembly of Heads of State and Government of the Organization of African Unity on the aerial and naval military attack against the Socialist People's Libyan Arab Jamahiriya by the present United States Administration in April 1986" shall remain on the agenda for consideration upon notification by a Member State;

(c) The item entitled "Report of the Economic and Social Council" shall be considered in its entirety in plenary;

(d) While remaining on the agenda of the plenary, the sub-item entitled "Sport for peace and development: building a peaceful and better world through sport and the Olympic ideal" shall be considered every other year and the items entitled "Return or restitution of cultural property to the countries of origin" and "Elimination of unilateral extraterritorial coercive economic measures as a means of political and economic compulsion" shall be considered every three years;

(e) The item entitled "Information and communication technologies for development" and the sub-item entitled "Strengthening of the coordination of humanitarian and disaster relief assistance of the United Nations, including special economic assistance: special economic assistance to individual countries or regions" shall be allocated for annual consideration in the Second Committee;

(f) The item entitled "Towards global partnerships" shall be allocated for consideration every other year in the Second Committee;

(g) The sub-item entitled "Strengthening of the coordination of humanitarian and disaster relief assistance of the United Nations, including special economic assistance: participation of volunteers, 'White Helmets', in the activities of the United Nations in the field of humanitarian relief, rehabilitation and technical cooperation for development" shall be allocated for consideration every three years in the Second Committee;

(h) The item entitled "Global road safety crisis" shall be allocated for consideration every other year in the Third Committee;

(i) The item entitled "Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples" shall be allocated for annual consideration in the Special Political and Decolonization Committee (Fourth Committee);

(j) The item entitled "Assistance in mine action" shall be allocated for consideration every other year in the Special Political and Decolonization Committee (Fourth Committee);

(k) The item entitled "University for Peace" shall be allocated for consideration every three years in the Special Political and Decolonization Committee (Fourth Committee);

(l) Bearing in mind that the General Assembly decided in resolution 55/285 of 7 September 2001 to cluster all cooperation items under one item, to make individual cooperation items sub-items and to hold a joint debate for all sub-items, the Secretary-General shall submit a single consolidated report under the item entitled "Cooperation between the United Nations and regional and other organizations";

(m) The adjustments outlined in the paragraphs above shall take effect beginning with the fifty-ninth session of the General Assembly;

(n) The General Assembly shall monitor the effects of the adjustments outlined in the paragraphs above and continue to make efforts, as appropriate, to further streamline the agenda of the plenary.

E. General Committee

5. Recalling section B, paragraph 1, of the annex to resolution 58/126, having conducted a review of the work of the General Committee, and taking into account the views expressed by Member States on the matter, it is decided that:

(a) The work of the General Committee shall be carried out in accordance with section VI of the rules of procedure of the General Assembly;

(b) The General Committee shall continue to meet throughout the session and to play the leading role in advising the General Assembly on the efficient organization, coordination and management of its work;

(c) To ensure the effective implementation of rule 42 of the rules of procedure of the General Assembly, the General Committee shall meet regularly throughout the session with the bureaux of the Main Committees to review the progress of the work of the Main Committees and to make recommendations for furthering such progress;

(d) In July of each year, the General Committee shall conduct a review of the proposed programme of work for the forthcoming session of the General Assembly, on the basis of a report to be submitted by the Secretary-General, and submit recommendations on the matter to the forthcoming Assembly. The report of the Secretary-General shall include information on the status of documentation to be issued during the forthcoming session;

(e) The General Committee, meeting in open-ended consultations, shall continue to consider the further biennialization, triennialization, clustering and elimination of items on the customary agenda of the General Assembly and make recommendations thereon to the Assembly during its fifty-ninth session;

(f) On the basis of proposals from the President of the General Assembly, and in the light of the positive experience during the fifty-eighth session, the General Committee shall be encouraged, as appropriate, to continue to schedule informal briefings on topical issues;

(g) At the beginning of each session, the General Committee, following recommendations from the President of the General Assembly, shall recommend to the Assembly a programme of, and format for, interactive debates on the items on its agenda;

(h) The General Committee shall continue to consider ways and means to further improve its working methods to increase its efficiency and effectiveness in all aspects, and make recommendations on the matter to the General Assembly for its decision by 1 April 2005.

F. Documentation

6. In the light of its decision in section B, paragraph 7, of the annex to resolution 58/126 that the heavy volume of documentation that is submitted to the General Assembly for its consideration should be reduced, the Secretary-General is requested:

(a) To update the note by the Secretariat entitled "Control and limitation of documentation", in the light of the provisions of the present resolution;

(b) To submit the updated version of the note by the Secretariat for the consideration of the General Committee, meeting in open-ended consultations, so that it may make recommendations to the General Assembly at its fifty-ninth session;

(c) To take the necessary action to initiate the implementation of the provisions of paragraph 20 of resolution 57/300 of 20 December 2002, in which the General Assembly requested the Secretary-General to start, on a trial basis, a consultative process with the President of the General Assembly and the Chairmen of the Main Committees of the Assembly at the end of the main part of each session of the Assembly, with a view to consolidating reports on related subjects, if decided by the Main Committees.

Report of Secretary-General. In response to General Assembly resolution 58/316 (see above), the Secretary-General submitted a 30 July report [A/58/864] containing the provisional agenda of the Assembly's fifty-ninth (2004) session [A/59/150]; the provisional agenda of the same session organized under headings corresponding to the priorities of the 2002-2005 medium-term plan; the draft programme of work of the Assembly plenary and of the six main Committees; and the status of documentation to be issued during the fifty-ninth session.

By decision 59/552 of 23 December, the Assembly decided that the item on the revitalization of the work of the General Assembly would remain for consideration during its resumed fifty-ninth (2005) session.

Improving the methods of work of the First Committee

In response to General Assembly resolution 58/41 [YUN 2003, p. 1390], the Secretary-General, in a July report with later addenda [A/59/132 & Adds. 1, 2 & Corr.1, Adds. 3-6], presented the views of 17 Member States and the Non-aligned Movement on appropriate options for improving the effectiveness of the methods of work of the First (Disarmament and International Security) Committee.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 3 December [meeting 66], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the First Committee [A/59/459 and Corr.1], adopted resolution 59/95 without vote [agenda item 65 (h)].

Improving the effectiveness of the methods of work of the First Committee

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 48/87 of 16 December 1993, 49/85 of 15 December 1994, 57/300 of 20 December 2002, 58/41 of 8 December 2003, 58/126 of 19 December 2003 and 58/316 of 1 July 2004,

Affirming that its rules of procedure permit the Main Committees to undertake organizational refinements to improve the effectiveness of their methods of work, and noting with satisfaction that the First Committee already has done so,

Emphasizing that improved functioning of the First Committee should be considered in an integrated and comprehensive manner through the existing three stages, namely general debate, thematic/structured debate, and consideration of and action on draft resolutions,

Determining to continue its efforts to improve the efficiency and effectiveness of the methods of work of the First Committee, as a means to enhance the role of the General Assembly in promoting international peace and security,

1. Invites Member States to consider the biennialization or triennialization of the agenda items discussed in the First Committee, on a voluntary basis, and particularly when no specific action is required for the implementation of relevant resolutions;

2. Also invites Member States to continue to hold interactive debates based on a programme and format elaborated through informal consultations between the Bureau and Member States in advance of each First Committee session;

3. Further invites Member States to submit draft resolutions in a more concise, focused and action-oriented manner and, where practical, to consider the possibility of submitting draft decisions;

4. Recommends that the respective sponsors of draft resolutions hold informal consultations, both before and during First Committee meetings, with the participation of all interested Member States for furthering discussions on draft resolutions already submitted or yet to be submitted to the Committee;

5. Encourages Member States to introduce draft resolutions on related or complementary issues to find commonalities in the language and purpose of those draft resolutions, and invites Member States to consider pursuing mergers of such texts through consultations with all sponsors;

6. Also encourages Member States, in particular those that present any draft resolution, to follow up on the agreed resolution in order to contribute to the achievement of the objective of such resolution;

7. Encourages the First Committee to introduce presentations of, and focus discussions on, reports on the work of expert groups, the United Nations regional centres for peace and disarmament, the United Nations Institute for Disarmament Research and the Advisory Board on Disarmament Matters initiated by the Committee;

8. Reiterates that the Secretary-General, in accordance with rule 154 of the rules of procedure of the General Assembly, shall keep all Committees, including the First Committee, informed of the detailed estimated cost of all resolutions and decisions that have been recommended by the Committees for approval by the Assembly;

9. Requests the First Committee, in the light of the growing interconnectedness of issues before the General Assembly, to explore the forms of mutual cooperation with other Main Committees;

10. Decides to develop further, within existing resources, the electronic support for the work of the First Committee, in particular through the existing web sites;

11. Decides also to review regularly the implementation of the present resolution.

Review of Security Council membership and related matters

The Open-ended Working Group on the Question of Equitable Representation on and Increase in the Membership of the Security Council and Other Matters related to the Security Council submitted a report on its work during three substantive sessions and nine rounds of informal consultations held between 19 February and 21 July [A/58/47 & Corr.1]. In the light of the Chairman's view that the Group should adopt an approach in its work that would create new opportunities for progress in the consideration of Council reform, the Group agreed to proceed with informal consultations, contrary to its approach in previous sessions when it considered proposals and/or position papers in two clusters on the questions of the increase in membership of the Council and related matters, its working methods and the transparency of its work. The Group also discussed separately in informal sessions held between 26 March and 8 April, the five topics proposed by the Bureau: an enlarged Security Council; the question of regional representation; criteria for membership; on the relationship between the General Assembly and the Security Council; and accountability. On the proposal of the Chairman, a sixth topic on the use of the veto was discussed on 19 April. The Chairman's summary of those discussions was annexed to the Group's report. In addition, delegates raised issues related to the reform of the Council, including its meetings with troop-contributing countries and the Secretariat, its annual report to the Assembly, further transparency of the Council vis-à-vis the wider membership of the United Nations, and the role of the Council in setting international legal norms. On 14 May, the Group held an formal exchange of views with the Council President and three other Council members on the topics discussed during the sessions. On 21 July, the Group considered and adopted its report to the Assembly.

By decision 58/572 of 13 September, the Assembly took note of the Working Group's report and the six topics discussed by the Group; urged the Group to continue to work towards achieving progress in the consideration of all issues relevant to the question of equitable representation on and increase in the Council's membership and other related matters; and decided that the Group should continue its work, taking into account the progress achieved during the forty-eighth (1993) through the fifty-eighth (2003) Assembly sessions, and the views to be expressed on the question during the fifty-ninth (2004) session, and to report to the Assembly before the end of that session.

On 23 December, the Assembly decided that the item on the question of equitable representation on and increase in the membership of the Security Council and related matters would remain for consideration during its resumed fifty-ninth (2005) session (decision 59/552).

Revitalization of the United Nations in the economic, social and related fields

Work of the functional commissions

The Economic and Social Council, by decision 2004/218 of 27 February, took note of the 2003 reports of the Secretary-General on the work of its functional commissions [YUN 2003, p. 1392] and on progress in implementing its agreed conclusions 2002/1 [YUN 2002, p. 1365] and related provisions of General Assembly resolution 50/227 [YUN 1996, p. 1249].

Report of Secretary-General. The Secretary-General, responding to the Council's agreed conclusions 2002/1, submitted a consolidated report [E/2004/81] in June on the work of the functional commissions of the Council in 2004. The report focused on the commissions' contributions to the achievement of various aspects of the MDGs [YUN 2000, p. 51] relevant to their areas of activity, aimed at assisting the Council in providing policy guidance regarding the commission's contributions to the high-level plenary meeting of the Assembly, scheduled for 2005. The report also examined the commissions' contributions to the Council's work and follow-up action by them to policy guidance provided by the Council in 2003, and reviewed key issues relating to coordination or procedural aspects of the Commission's work in 2004.

The Secretary-General recommended that the Council request its functional commissions and other relevant subsidiary bodies to contribute to the Council's High-level segment and other segments dealing with themes relating to the 2005 high-level plenary meeting of the Assembly; encourage the commissions to further promote synergies among themselves regarding their work towards the achievement of the MDGs; encourage the Commission on the Status of Women to continue its catalytic role and to contribute to the work of other functional commissions; request all international organizations to ensure coherence and collaboration with requests for data on conference indicators; and encourage further investment in sustainable statistical capacities. In other recommendations, the Council was encouraged to consider ways of promoting closer interaction between the functional commissions and governing bodies of UN funds and programmes; invite its commissions and their secretariats to clearly identify the operational implications of their work and bring them to the attention of the governing bodies of funds and programmes for their consideration and guidance on operational activities; continue to examine their methods of work in order to better implement the outcomes of major UN conferences and summits; and adhere to the guidelines regarding their reports to the Council. The Council should encourage its subsidiary bodies to present oral reports on issues that did not require extensive deliberations by the Council, consolidate reports that dealt with closely related topics and encourage the bureaux of the functional commissions to focus their joint meetings and meetings with the Bureau of the Council on cross-cutting issues in order to develop a common approach to work.

ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL ACTION

On 23 July [meeting 51], the Economic and Social Council adopted resolution 2004/63 [draft E/2004/L.48] without vote [agenda items 13 and 14].

Promoting coordination and consolidation of the work of the functional commissions

The Economic and Social Council,

Recalling General Assembly resolutions 50/227 of 24 May 1996 and 52/12 B of 19 December 1997, and resolution 57/270 B of 23 June 2003, entitled “Integrated and coordinated implementation of and follow-up to the outcomes of the major United Nations conferences and summits in the economic and social fields”,

Recalling also its agreed conclusions 2002/1 of 26 July 2002 on strengthening further the role of the Economic and Social Council,

1. Takes note with appreciation of the consolidated report of the Secretary-General on the work of the functional commissions of the Economic and Social Council in 2004;

2. Welcomes the contribution of the functional commissions to the substantive session of the Economic and Social Council of 2004, and requests the functional commissions and other relevant subsidiary bodies to contribute to the substantive session of the Council of 2005 and, in accordance with the modalities to be set out by the General Assembly at its fifty-ninth session, to contribute, through the Council, to the high-level plenary meeting of the Assembly;

3. Requests its functional commissions, in their review of conference implementation in 2005, to promote complementarity in their work and to follow the guidance of the Economic and Social Council and the General Assembly;

4. Also requests its commissions, in their reports, to identify clearly the operational implications of their work for consideration and appropriate action by the governing bodies of the United Nations funds and programmes;

5. Encourages greater cooperation between its functional commissions and the regional commissions;

6. Invites its Bureau to give due regard in its consultations with the bureaux of the functional commissions to their contributions to the various segments of the substantive session of the Economic and Social Council;

7. Requests the Chairpersons of the functional commissions to communicate to the President of the Economic and Social Council the issues requiring special attention or action by the Council, as determined by the commissions;

8. Requests the Secretary-General to submit to the Economic and Social Council a consolidated report on the work of the functional commissions in 2005, focusing on the substantive aspects of their activities so as to complement the report on the role of the Council in the implementation of General Assembly resolutions 50/227, 52/12 B and 57/270 B.

Review of structure and functions of liaison offices

Report of Secretary-General. In response to General Assembly resolution 58/270 [YUN 2003, p. 1399], the Secretary-General, in an October report [A/59/395], reviewed the structure and functions of all liaison or representation offices in New York of organizations headquartered elsewhere but funded by the regular budget. Those organizations included UNCTAD, the United Nations Environment Programme (UNEP), the United Nations Human Settlements Programme (UN-HABITAT), UNRWA, the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights (OHCHR), the United Nations Office at Vienna (UNOV), the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime (UNODC) and the New York office of the regional commissions. The report also described the functions and level of staff resources of those offices.

The Secretary-General observed that it was evident from the review that representative offices in New York provided substantive contributions to the work programme of their parent offices, while maintaining a much smaller portion of traditional liaison functions. Activities focused on matters requiring the representatives’ participation in meetings, both at the intergovernmental level and within the Secretariat. Those offices were operating with the benefit of current technology and were striving to be as effective as possible within the limited budgetary resources available to them.

ACABQ report. ACABQ, in a 3 November report [A/59/552], recommended that the Assembly take note of the Secretary-General’s report (see above). It intended to revert to the issue and examine the functions and levels of staff resources of the liaison offices in New York in the context of its examination of the proposed programme budget for the 2006-2007 biennium.

Chapter II

United Nations financing and programming

The financial situation of the United Nations continued to improve in 2004 despite some areas of concern. By the end of the year, unpaid assessments almost doubled, compared to 2003, and the number of Member States paying their contributions to the regular budget in full and on time fell. While aggregate cash increased slightly, the Organization was still obliged to cross-borrow from other accounts and was still using reserves at the end of the year. Unpaid assessments reached $2.9 billion, compared to $1.6 billion in 2003, and debt to Member States for troops and contingent-owned equipment was $549 million, against $449 million in 2003.

In December, the General Assembly adopted revised budget appropriations for the 2004-2005 biennium of $3,608,173,900, an increase of $428,977,800 over the revised appropriation of $3,179,196,100 approved in June, to provide for the strengthening of UN security management. It invited the Secretary-General to prepare his proposed 2006-2007 programme budget on the basis of a preliminary estimate of $3,621,900,000.

The Committee on Contributions considered the methodology for calculating future scales of assessments, the criteria for ad hoc adjustments to assessments and measures to encourage the payment of arrears in contributions to the UN budget, including multi-year payment plans.

The Assembly also examined the proposed strategic framework for 2006-2007, which replaced the four-year medium-term plan, and endorsed the proposed biennial programme plan for that period.

Financial situation

Although the overall financial situation of the United Nations showed some improvement in 2004, serious problems remained. In October [A/59/524], the Secretary-General reported that aggregate assessments increased significantly to $5.9 billion as at 15 October (compared to $3.9 billion in 2003). Cash availability under the regular budget and related reserve accounts at the beginning of the year stood at $23 million, and only for two weeks in September was it necessary to engage in cross-borrowing. Based on information provided by the major contributor, a positive cash balance of $96 million was projected for the end of the year.

As at 15 October, unpaid assessments for the regular budget, peacekeeping and the two international tribunals (see p. 1275) totalled $3.3 billion, which included: $2.5 billion for peacekeeping (compared to $1.6 billion in 2003), $725 million for the regular budget ($32 million more than in 2003) and some $80 million for the tribunals ($37 million less than in 2003). Amounts that would be owed to Member States by 31 December were forecast to total $605 million, primarily due to the deployment of three new peacekeeping missions in Burundi, Côte d'Ivoire and Haiti. Member States that had paid their assessments in full as at 15 October numbered 111 (two less than at the same date in 2003).

In his end-of-year review of the financial situation [A/59/524/Add.1], the Secretary-General noted that the performance of the four indicators of the Organization's financial health was mixed: aggregate cash available amounted to $1.8 billion, with the tribunals showing a net balance of $5 million, the regular budget $192 million, and peacekeeping $1.6 billion. Nonetheless, the Organization was still obliged to cross-borrow from other accounts in November for the regular budget and was still using reserves at year's end. Total unpaid assessments decreased slightly to $2.9 billion and the actual debt to Member States amounted to $549 million. The number of Member States paying their regular budget assessments in full and on time fell to 124, down from 131 in 2003.

On 13 September, the General Assembly deferred consideration of the agenda item on improving the financial situation of the United Nations and included it in the draft agenda of its fifty-ninth (2004) session (decision 58/575). It further decided on 23 December that the item would remain for consideration at its resumed fifty-ninth (2005) session (decision 59/552).

Budget for 2004-2005

Revised appropriations

In April [A/58/756], the Secretary-General submitted revised estimates of $85,965,800 net

($92,433,500 gross) to finance the immediate and long-term measures he had proposed for strengthening the security and safety of the United Nations (see p. 1434) under sections 3, 4, 5, 7, 18, 19, 21, 22, 26, 28, 29A, 29C-G, 31, 33 and 34 and income sections 1 and 2 of the 2004-2005 programme budget, the budget for the International Criminal Tribunal for Rwanda (ICTR), and the relevant budgets of UN peacekeeping operations. The Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions (ACABQ) recommended [A/58/758] that the General Assembly appropriate $40 million (gross) under the 2004-2005 programme budget to implement those measures. ACABQ further recommended that the estimated expenses of $4.9 million in respect of peacekeeping operations and ICTR be accommodated within existing budgets, and that some $8.9 million of the provision for the Office of the United Nations Security Coordinator be borne by the participating organizations under existing cost-sharing arrangements. To strengthen security of UN operations, the General Assembly, in resolution 58/295 of 18 June (see p. 1476), decided to appropriate $2,583,000, being the portion of costs normally attributable to the United Nations and to revert to the required residual funding of $8,162,100 at its fifty-ninth session when determining cost-sharing arrangements. It approved an additional appropriation of $18,287,100 under the budget sections identified by the Secretary-General and $48,700 under staff assessment.

In the first performance report on the 2004-2005 programme budget [A/59/578], the Secretary-General identified adjustments to the level of appropriations as a result of variations in the rates of inflation and exchange and in the standards assumed in the calculation of the initial appropriations.

The adjustments yielded revised expenditures of $3,351.1 million, an increase of $172 million, as compared with a revised appropriation level of $3,179.2 million approved by resolution 58/295, and an increase in income of $9.4 million, resulting in a revised income estimate of $424.7 million. The revised net estimate for the 2004-2005 biennium therefore amounted to $2,926.4 million, an increase of $162.5 million over the appropriation approved in Assembly resolutions 58/271 A and B [YUN 2003, p. 1414] and 58/295.

ACABQ recommended in December [A/59/601] that, with the exception of $815,000 related to staffing in the Office of the President of the General Assembly, the Assembly approve the revised estimates submitted by the Secretary-General, subject to adjustments resulting from its consideration of matters currently before it, including estimates related to special political missions and security, and to the consolidated statement of revised estimates and programme budget implications.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 23 December, the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth (Administrative and Budgetary) Committee [A/59/448/Add.2], adopted resolution 59/277 A-C [agenda item 108].

Programme budget for the biennium 2004-2005

REVISED BUDGET APPROPRIATIONS FOR THE BIENNIUM 2004-2005

The General Assembly

Resolves that, for the biennium 2004-2005, the amount of 3,179,196,100 United States dollars appropriated by it in its resolutions 58/271 A of 23 December 2003 and 58/295 of 18 June 2004 shall be adjusted by 428,977,800 dollars, as follows:

Questions relating to the 2004-2005 programme budget

The Fifth Committee considered a number of questions related to the 2004-2005 programme budget, among them revised estimates resulting from resolutions and decisions by the Economic and Social Council in 2004, unforeseen and extraordinary expenses, estimates in respect of special political missions, good offices and other political initiatives authorized by the General Assembly and/or the Security Council, the first performance report of the programme budget for the 2004-2005 biennium, and the contingency fund: consolidated statement of programme budget implications and revised estimates.

Other subjects covered concerned the International Trade Centre of the United Nations Conference on Trade and Development (UNCTAD) and the World Trade Organization (WTO) (see p. 965), the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees (see p. 1195), the United Nations Institute for Disarmament Research (see p. 584), the construction of additional conference centre facilities at the Vienna International Centre (see p. 1384), the Department of Public Information websites (see p. 629), the United Nations Institute for Training and Research (see p. 1139), UN security management system (see p. 1387), and the International Civil Service Commission (see p. 1407).

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 23 December, the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee [A/59/448/Add.2], adopted resolution 59/276 [agenda item 108].

Questions relating to the programme budget for the biennium 2004-2005

The General Assembly,

I

Administrative arrangements for the International Trade Centre UNCTAD/WTO

Recalling its decision 57/572 of 20 December 2002 and its resolutions 57/312 of 18 June 2003, 48/218 B of 29 July 1994 and 54/244 of 23 December 1999,

1. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General on administrative arrangements for the International Trade Centre UNCTAD/WTO and of the related report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions, and endorses the recommendations contained therein;

2. Also takes note of the report of the Office of Internal Oversight Services on the inspection of programme management and administrative practices of the International Trade Centre UNCTAD/WTO, and requests the Secretary-General to ensure that the recommendations contained therein are implemented expeditiously;

II

Revised estimates resulting from resolutions and decisions adopted by the Economic and Social Council at its substantive session and resumed substantive sessions of 2004

Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General on the revised estimates resulting from resolutions and decisions adopted by the Economic and Social Council at its substantive and resumed substantive sessions of 2004 and the related reports of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions, on the understanding that such appropriations as may be necessary and not exceeding 573,600 United States dollars will be requested by the Secretary-General in the context of a consolidated statement of programme budget implications and revised estimates to be submitted to the General Assembly;

III

Progressive implementation of article 20 of the statute of the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees

Recalling paragraph 49 of its resolution 58/270 of 23 December 2003,

1. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General on the progressive implementation of article 20 of the statute of the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees and the related report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions presented orally by its Chairman;

2. Requests the Secretary-General to include in the programme budget proposals for progressive increases for contributions from the regular budget to the Office of the High Commissioner with a view to the full implementation of article 20 of the statute of the Office and to report on the progress made to the General Assembly at its sixtieth session in the context of the proposed programme budget for the biennium 2006-2007, while recognizing that the percentage referred to in paragraph 6 of the report of the Secretary-General does not represent a ceiling;

3. Calls upon the Office of the High Commissioner to keep its support costs, including management and administration, under review with the objective of reducing these as a percentage of total budget expenditure, and welcomes the decision of the Office to initiate a headquarters process review with the aim of simplifying and streamlining administration;

4. Requests the Secretary-General to include in the proposed programme budget for the biennium 2006-2007 a transparent presentation of the purposes for which regular budget funds are proposed, including the composition of administrative costs and information on efficiency measures;

5. Also requests the Secretary-General to ensure that oversight and accountability mechanisms in the Office of the High Commissioner are operating effectively with the required independence, authority and transparency;

IV

Unforeseen and extraordinary expenses

Having considered the report of the Secretary-General on the comprehensive review of the resolution on unforeseen and extraordinary expenses relating to expenses certified by the President of the International Court of Justice and the related report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions,

1. Approves the request to change the ceiling to 200,000 dollars under the resolution on unforeseen and extraordinary expenses for expenses that may be certified by the President of the Court without prior concurrence of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions in connection with the designation of ad hoc judges with effect from the biennium 2006-2007;

2. Also approves the proposal to maintain an amount of 400,000 dollars in the regular budget of the Court to accommodate the recurring requirements for ad hoc judges, with effect from the biennium 2006-2007, to be included in the proposed programme budget for the biennium 2006-2007;

V

Request for a subvention to the United Nations Institute for Disarmament Research resulting from the recommendations of the Board of Trustees of the Institute on the programme of work of the Institute for 2005

Recalling its resolution 58/272 of 23 December 2003,

1. Takes note of the note by the Secretary-General on the request for a subvention to the United Nations Institute for Disarmament Research resulting from the recommendations of the Board of Trustees of the Institute on the programme of work of the Institute for 2005 and of the related report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions;

2. Approves the request for a subvention to the Institute of 227,600 dollars, to be recosted, for 2005 from the regular budget of the United Nations, on the understanding that no additional appropriation would be required under section 4, Disarmament, of the programme budget for the biennium 2004-2005;

3. Requests the Secretary-General to make proposals in the context of the proposed programme budget for the biennium 2006-2007 for biennial review and approval by the General Assembly of subvention requirements of the Institute beginning with the biennium 2006-2007;

VI

Construction of additional conference facilities at the Vienna International Centre

Having considered the note by the Secretary-General on the construction of additional conference facilities at the Vienna International Centre and the related report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions presented orally by its Chairman,

1. Takes note with appreciation of the proposal of the Government of Austria to construct a new conference facility within the boundaries of the Vienna International Centre;

2. Approves the participation of the United Nations, along with the other organizations located in the Vienna International Centre, in the arrangements for the proposed new conference facility on the terms proposed by the Secretary-General in his note;

3. Entrusts the Secretary-General to determine, in cooperation with the other three organizations located at the Vienna International Centre, the cost-sharing arrangements for potential future costs arising from the project within the amount indicated in his note, on the understanding that the related financial requirements will be dealt with in the context of the proposed programme budget for the respective bienniums, and to report thereon to the General Assembly for its review and decision;

4. Requests the Secretary-General to report on the progress in the project implementation to the General Assembly at its sixty-first session;

VII

Estimates in respect of special political missions, good offices and other political initiatives authorized by the General Assembly and/or the Security Council

Having considered the report of the Secretary-General on estimates in respect of special political missions, good offices and other political initiatives authorized by the General Assembly and/or the Security Council and on the request for a subvention to the Special Court for Sierra Leone, as well as the related report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions,

Reaffirming section VI of its resolution 45/248 B of 21 December 1990,

1. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General on estimates in respect of special political missions, good offices and other political initiatives authorized by the General Assembly and/or the Security Council;

2. Endorses the observations and recommendations of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions contained in its report, subject to the provisions of the present resolution;

3. Notes that the charging of expenditures against the appropriation for special political missions would be subject to the extension of the respective mandates;

4. Reaffirms, in the context of all Security Council decisions on special political missions, the prerogatives of the General Assembly in issues related to administrative and budgetary matters;

5. Reiterates that, in accordance with the Financial Regulations and Rules of the United Nations, the submission of the budget proposals is a prerogative of the Secretary-General;

6. Invites the Secretary-General to provide all inter-governmental bodies with the required information regarding procedures for administrative and budgetary matters;

7. Regrets the late issuance of the reports of the Secretary-General on estimates in respect of special political missions, and requests the Secretary-General, in the future, to present budget proposals for special political missions at an earlier date, in order to facilitate proper consideration by the General Assembly;

8. Approves the budgets of the 25 special political missions presented in table 1 of the report of the Secretary-General;

9. Decides to appropriate under the procedures provided for in paragraph 11 of annex I to its resolution 41/213 of 19 December 1986, under section 3, Political affairs, of the programme budget for the biennium 2004-2005 an amount of 678,600 dollars for the three special political missions presented in table 1, part A, of the report of the Secretary-General, emanating from the decisions taken or to be taken by the General Assembly;

10. Also decides to appropriate under the procedures provided for in paragraph 11 of annex I to resolution 41/213, under section 3 of the programme budget an amount of 161,936,100 dollars for the 22 special political missions presented in table 1, part B, of the report of the Secretary-General, emanating from the decisions taken or to be taken by the Security Council;

11. Further decides to appropriate an amount of 12,132,500 dollars under section 34, Staff assessment, to be offset by a corresponding amount under income section 1, Income from staff assessment, of the programme budget for the biennium 2004-2005;

12. Requests the Secretary-General, in preparing the next budget proposals for the Counter-Terrorism Committee Executive Directorate, to review and consider possible streamlining of the structure and level of positions, bearing in mind its temporary nature and its status as a subsidiary body of the Security Council, as well as to address its relationship with the Department of Political Affairs of the Secretariat;

13. Decides to approve the proposed waiver requested for the implementation of section III.B, paragraph 26, of resolution 51/226 of 3 April 1997, on an exceptional and extraordinary basis, and requests the Secretary-General to report in the next budget submission on how many consultants given such waiver were recruited, along with their nationalities and functions performed;

14. Requests the Secretary-General to recruit staff for the Counter-Terrorism Committee Executive Directorate in full compliance with relevant resolutions of the General Assembly;

15. Decides that the use of experts and consultants for the Counter-Terrorism Committee Executive Directorate and for the Security Council Committee established pursuant to Council resolution 1540(2004) of 28 April 2004 should also be in full compliance with the relevant resolutions of the General Assembly;

16. Takes note that the commitment authority authorized in resolution 58/284 of 8 April 2004 and valid through 31 December 2004 to support a subvention for the Special Court for Sierra Leone has been held unused in view of the continued dependence of the Court on voluntary contributions during the period and is being surrendered;

17. Authorizes the Secretary-General to enter into commitments in an amount not to exceed 20 million dollars to supplement the financial resources of the Special Court for Sierra Leone, with effect from 1 January to 30 June 2005, under special political missions of section 3, Political affairs, of the programme budget for the biennium 2004-2005;

18. Requests the Secretary-General, in concert with the Management Committee of the Special Court for Sierra Leone, to continue efforts to raise voluntary contributions to support the work of the Court and to report to the General Assembly at its resumed fifty-ninth session on progress made;

19. Appeals to Member States, as a matter of urgency, to contribute voluntary funds in support of the Court and to honour existing pledges;

20. Requests the Secretary-General to submit to the General Assembly at its resumed fifty-ninth session a progress report in respect of the Special Court for Sierra Leone;

21. Requests the President of the General Assembly to bring to the attention of the President of the Security Council the contents of the present resolution;

VIII

First performance report on the programme budget for the biennium 2004-2005

Having considered the first performance report of the Secretary-General on the programme budget for the biennium 2004-2005 and the related report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions,

Recalling its resolutions 58/270 and 58/271 A to C of 23 December 2003 and 58/295 of 18 June 2004,

1. Reaffirms the budgetary process as approved in its resolution 41/213 and as reaffirmed in subsequent resolutions;

2. Takes note of the first performance report of the Secretary-General on the programme budget for the biennium 2004-2005 and the addendum on the implementation of the United Nations Official Document System, and endorses the observations and recommendations contained in the related report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions, subject to the provisions of the present resolution;

3. Reaffirms the importance that Member States attach to the work of the Office of the President of the General Assembly in support of the activities carried out by the President of the General Assembly;

4. Recalls paragraph 10 of the annex to its resolution 58/126 of 19 December 2003, notes the assurances given by the Secretariat that the three remaining positions, namely, one D-2, one D-1 and one General Service, needed to strengthen the Office of the President of the General Assembly will be provided, and in this context requests the Secretary-General to ensure its full and expeditious implementation;

5. Requests the Secretary-General to report to the General Assembly on the implementation of paragraph 4 above in the context of the second performance report;

6. Decides to approve a gross budget for the Joint Inspection Unit for the year 2005 in the amount of 5,385,700 dollars and to appropriate the amount of 1,712,700 dollars under section 31, Jointly financed administrative activities, for the financing of the Joint Inspection Unit in 2005;

7. Notes the contents of paragraph 42 of the report of the Secretary-General and requests the Secretary-General to report to the General Assembly comprehensively on this issue at the beginning of its sixtieth session;

8. Recalls paragraph 9 of its resolution 58/270, and notes that its implementation resulted in a decrease of 4,007,000 dollars from the original proposed appropriation in section 23, Regular programme of technical cooperation;

9. Requests the Secretary-General to fill expeditiously vacant positions for web-site assistants in all official languages from external candidates, utilizing general temporary assistance;

10. Recalls paragraph 44 of its resolution 58/270 and takes note of the relevant paragraph of the Secretary-General's report regarding the Repertory of Practice of the United Nations Organs, and requests the Secretary-General to keep the matter under review and to report thereon to the General Assembly in the context of the proposed programme budget for the biennium 2006-2007;

11. Approves a net increase of 172,851,200 dollars in the appropriation approved for the biennium 2004-2005 and a net increase of 9,406,800 dollars in the estimates of income for the biennium, to be apportioned among expenditure and income sections as indicated in the report of the Secretary-General and amended to reflect the recommendation of the Advisory Committee;

IX

Strengthening the Department of Public Information, within the existing capacity, in order to support and enhance the United Nations web site in all official languages of the Organization: status of implementation

Having considered the report of the Secretary-General entitled "Strengthening the Department of Public Information, within the existing capacity, in order to support and enhance the United Nations web site in all official languages of the Organization: status of implementation" and the related report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions,

Recalling paragraph 42 of its resolution 58/270 and paragraph 95 of its resolution 59/126 B of 10 December 2004, in which it requested the Secretary-General to strengthen the web site through further redeployment to the required language posts,

Reaffirming the need to achieve full parity among the six official languages on the United Nations web site,

Also reaffirming its request to the Secretary-General to ensure that the Department of Public Information has appropriate staffing capacity in all official languages of the United Nations to undertake all its activities,

1. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General and paragraphs 19 to 23 of the report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions;

2. Requests the Secretary-General to submit proposals to strengthen the United Nations web site within the context of the proposed programme budget for the biennium 2006-2007;

X

Financial viability of the United Nations Institute for Training and Research

Recalling section XIV of its resolution 58/272 of 23 December 2003,

Having considered the note by the Secretary-General on the financial viability of the United Nations Institute for Training and Research, transmitting the note by the Board of Trustees of the Institute on the rationalization of the financial structure of the Institute, and the related report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions presented orally by its Chairman,

1. Takes note with concern of the observations and conclusions of the Board of Trustees of the United Nations Institute for Training and Research transmitted under the cover of the note by the Secretary-General;

2. Stresses the importance of maintaining the current level of the training programmes of the Institute, and requests the Board of Trustees to make every effort to ensure that in 2005 the level of training programmes will be maintained;

3. Stresses also the need for continued consideration of the issues related to the Institute's rent, rental rates and maintenance costs, taking into account its financial situation, with a view to its expeditious resolution;

4. Requests the Secretary-General to submit, as a priority, to the General Assembly at the beginning of its sixtieth session, and prior to the introduction of the proposed programme budget for the biennium 2006-2007, a comprehensive report on all aspects of the financial situation of the Institute, including proposals which would address the long-term, sound and predictable funding of rent and maintenance costs;

5. Decides to consider the outcome of its consideration of that report in the context of the proposed programme budget for the biennium 2006-2007;

XI

Strengthened and unified security management system for the United Nations

Recalling its resolutions 56/255 of 24 December 2001, 56/286 of 27 June 2002, 57/305 of 15 April 2003, 58/270 of 23 December 2003, 58/295 of 18 June 2004 and all relevant resolutions regarding the security and safety of United Nations operations, staff and premises,

Having considered the report of the Secretary-General on a strengthened and unified security management system for the United Nations and the report of the Office of Internal Oversight Services on the utilization and management of funds appropriated during the biennium 2002-2003 for strengthening the security and safety of United Nations premises,

Having also considered the report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions,

Underlining the importance of achieving the highest levels of professionalism and expertise within United Nations security management,

Reaffirming Article 97 of the Charter of the United Nations,

Reaffirming also the role of the General Assembly in carrying out a thorough analysis and approval of posts and financial resources as well as human resources policies with a view to ensuring the full implementation of all mandated programmes and activities and the implementation of all policies in this regard,

Reaffirming further that the Fifth Committee is the appropriate Main Committee of the General Assembly responsible for administrative and budgetary matters,

1. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General;

2. Reaffirms the importance of ensuring the safety and security of United Nations staff, operations and premises;

3. Emphasizes that the primary responsibility for ensuring the safety and security of United Nations staff and premises rests with the host country, and also emphasizes the role of the relevant host country agreements in defining this responsibility;

4. Recognizes the need for the urgent implementation of a unified and strengthened security management system in order to ensure the safety and security of United Nations staff, operations and premises at United Nations Headquarters and main duty stations, as well as in the field;

5. Stresses that the effective functioning at the country level of security operations on a decentralized basis as proposed by the Secretary-General requires a unified capacity for policy, standards, coordination, communication, compliance and threat and risk assessment;

6. Endorses the conclusions and recommendations of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions, subject to the provisions of the present resolution;

7. Decides, bearing in mind the observations of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions contained in paragraph 64 of its report and General Assembly resolution 32/204 of 21 December 1977 on organizational nomenclature in the Secretariat, to establish a Department of Safety and Security;

8. Welcomes the report of the Office of Internal Oversight Services on the utilization and management of funds appropriated by the General Assembly in its resolution 56/286 in response to concerns about delays and cost escalation, notes the progress made more recently in the implementation of these projects, and urges the Secretary-General to complete their implementation expeditiously;

9. Notes with concern the delays, cost escalation and deficiencies in planning and administering security-strengthening projects, particularly at Headquarters and at the United Nations Office at Geneva, in relation to funds appropriated by the General Assembly in its resolution 56/286, as set out by the Office of Internal Oversight Services in its report, and requests the Secretary-General to ensure that in the implementation of Assembly resolution 58/295, as well as the present resolution, funds appropriated for security-strengthening projects are managed and disbursed with great oversight, efficiency and effectiveness and in a timely manner;

10. Requests the Secretary-General to report on the implementation of recommendations contained in the report of the Office of Internal Oversight Services and also to entrust the Office of Internal Oversight Services to report on the utilization and management of funds approved by the General Assembly in its resolution 58/295 and in the present resolution for security-strengthening projects for submission to the Assembly at its sixtieth session;

11. Emphasizes the need for an enhanced culture of security awareness on the part of all staff and compliance with safety and security rules and procedures throughout the United Nations system, as well as clear lines of authority and accountability;

12. Affirms that United Nations security management requires clear lines of authority and accountability at all managerial levels at Headquarters and in the field for the implementation of safety and security rules and procedures;

13. Requests the Secretary-General to submit to the General Assembly at its sixtieth session an accountability framework for the United Nations security management system as a whole, which would, inter alia:

(a) Update the report on field security;

(b) Make clear the role of each responsible official;

(c) Provide information on how non-military lines of security-related authority lead to the head of the Department of Safety and Security;

14. Also requests the Secretary-General, in consultation with the executive heads of United Nations funds and programmes that maintain their own security personnel in the field, to elaborate in the updated accountability framework on how such security staff are integrated into the unified security management structure at the country level under the authority of the designated official and to clarify the authority of the designated official over such staff;

15. Further requests the Secretary-General, in order to strengthen security compliance, to apply available measures for disciplinary action to be taken at all levels, especially at the managerial level, in all departments for non-compliance with security standards, norms and procedures, and to report thereon to the General Assembly at its sixtieth session;

16. Requests the Secretary-General, in order to strengthen security compliance, as Chairman of the United Nations System Chief Executives Board for Coordination, to propose to the executive heads of agencies, funds and programmes that participate in the United Nations security management system that they apply available measures for disciplinary action to be taken at all levels for non-compliance with security standards, norms and procedures;

17. Reaffirms Article 101 of the Charter of the United Nations;

18. Urges the Secretary-General to preserve the international character of the Organization in the recruitment of relevant categories of safety and security staff;

19. Recognizes that the Professional posts created by the present resolution under the regular budget would be added to the pool of posts subject to the system of geographical distribution in accordance with established procedures;

20. Urges the Secretary-General to ensure that recruitment to Professional and higher categories is made on a wide geographical basis;

21. Requests the Secretary-General to elaborate further on his proposals concerning career development, a new profile for security officers and the further professionalization of security personnel referred to in paragraphs 25 and 31 of his report, to submit detailed proposals on retirement policy given the special requirements for security staff and to report thereon to the General Assembly at its sixtieth session;

22. Decides, on an exceptional basis and without setting any precedent, that the Under-Secretary-General for Safety and Security shall serve for one non-renewable term not exceeding five years;

23. Also decides that the Under-Secretary-General for Safety and Security shall be appointed with full respect for the principle of equitable geographical representation and guided by its resolution 46/232 of 2 March 1992, whereby the General Assembly decided, inter alia, that as a general rule no national of a Member State should succeed a national of that State in that post and that there should be no monopoly on senior posts by nationals of any State or group of States;

24. Further decides to establish a D-2 post of deputy to the Under-Secretary-General and to review the post in the context of the implementation report to be submitted by the Secretary-General to the General Assembly at its sixtieth session;

25. Decides to establish the post of the head of the Division of Safety and Security Services at the D-2 level and to review the post in the context of the implementation report to be submitted by the Secretary-General to the General Assembly at its sixtieth session;

26. Also decides to establish 383 new security and safety officer posts within the General Service and related categories, of which 249 are established posts and 134 are on a temporary post basis;

27. Further decides to review the newly approved posts referred to in paragraph 26 above in the light of a comprehensive report to be submitted by the Secretary-General to the General Assembly at its sixtieth session addressing all elements contributing to the security planning of the Organization, including the updating and revision of host country agreements as well as the different capacities of host countries to provide security to the United Nations, as outlined in paragraphs 19 and 20 of the report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions;

28. Decides to establish an Executive Office in the Department of Safety and Security consisting of 17 posts to handle its administrative support functions;

29. Also decides to appropriate 500,000 dollars under general temporary assistance to provide surge capacity for the Department of Safety and Security;

30. Further decides to approve the creation of the posts proposed by the Secretary-General in field locations;

31. Recognizes the need for the security and safety sections at the eight headquarters and main duty stations of the United Nations to convey threat and risk assessments through the appropriate regional desks;

32. Notes that threat and risk assessments will be conducted primarily by the field offices and reviewed by the regional desks;

33. Decides to enhance the capacity for threat and risk assessment by establishing one P-4, two P-3 and one General Service post in addition to the existing P-5 post, and further decides that this capacity will be located in the Office of the Director of Regional Operations;

34. Reaffirms paragraph 2 of its resolution 58/295;

35. Notes that in paragraph 54 of his report, the Secretary-General proposed getting input on threats and risks from sources other than international organizations and Governments, and emphasizes that it is incumbent on the Department of Safety and Security, in making its objective judgement, to weigh the reliability and responsibility of the source as well as the reliability and validity of the information being used in order to produce threat and risk assessments;

36. Decides, in this context, that threat and risk assessments to be provided to Headquarters should be prepared by country offices and other components of the United Nations system, on an objective basis and in full cooperation with the national authorities of host countries;

37. Reaffirms, in this context, Article 100 of the Charter of the United Nations;

38. Requests the Secretary-General to strengthen the process for the continuous review of threat and risk assessment so as to enable timely, systematic and periodic review of the phases, and requests the Secretary-General to keep the respective national Governments apprised in a timely manner of any changes resulting from such review;

39. Also requests the Secretary-General to provide information, upon request by Member States, about the methodology used for determining phases of threat and risk assessment;

40. Further requests the Secretary-General to provide, in the context of the implementation report, information on strengthening the cooperation between the Department of Safety and Security and the Department of Peacekeeping Operations with respect to security decisions that may affect the conduct of peacekeeping operations, in the framework of the unified security management system, which would be led by the Department of Safety and Security under the provisions of the present resolution;

41. Notes that the malicious acts insurance policy has a worldwide coverage except in headquarters countries, namely, Austria, Canada, France, Germany, Italy, Japan, the Netherlands, Switzerland, the United Kingdom and the United States of America;

42. Notes with concern that there are some staff in the United Nations system who are working in the field and are not covered by the malicious acts insurance policy or a comparable scheme;

43. Requests the Secretary-General, as Chairman of the United Nations System Chief Executives Board for Coordination, to address this matter in the context of the Board and to report to the General Assembly thereon at its sixtieth session with a view to ensuring that all staff are covered;

44. Decides to defer until the second part of the resumed fifty-ninth session of the General Assembly consideration of the proposal of the Secretary-General on the global access control system, pending the receipt of a detailed report by the Secretary-General, which will include the following:

(a) Integration with projects approved by the General Assembly in previous resolutions, including those in the context of the overall information technology strategy;

(b) The impact of implementing the global access control system on human resources requirements in the area of safety and security;

(c) The individual characteristics of each United Nations headquarters and main duty station;

(d) The implications of the global access control system for the capital master plan;

(e) Detailed information regarding the global identity management system, including the principles and guidelines for sharing the information obtained through the system, the level of centralization needed for managing this information and who would have access to the information;

(f) The time frame for implementation of the system;

45. Decides also to defer consideration of the expansion of the security service fitness facility and to revert to this issue in the context of its consideration of the scope of work of the capital master plan;

46. Requests the Secretary-General to ensure that infrastructure projects approved for Headquarters under the present resolution should not, pending a decision on the capital master plan, incur additional unnecessary costs at a later date under the capital master plan;

47. Also requests the Secretary-General to submit to the General Assembly at its sixtieth session the results of the technical study on information and communication technology security, business continuity and disaster recovery, with detailed costing and a timetable;

48. Decides to maintain existing arrangements with regard to cost-sharing for safety and security;

49. Requests the Secretary-General, in his capacity as the Chairman of the United Nations System Chief Executives Board for Coordination, while fully implementing the decision of the General Assembly to maintain the current cost-sharing arrangements, to submit a report to the General Assembly at its sixty-first session on measures taken to improve the operational administration of existing cost-sharing arrangements;

50. Stresses the importance that all entities participating in specific arrangements in place at headquarters duty stations for sharing the costs of the central security and safety services should provide prompt and secure funding for such arrangements;

51. Decides that the present cost-sharing arrangements relating to field security for those organizations which are not part of the United Nations system should be retained;

52. Invites those organizations of the United Nations system which are currently in arrears with their contributions to the United Nations under the present cost-sharing arrangements to take steps to ensure prompt payment of the outstanding sums;

53. Decides to approve an additional appropriation under the regular budget in the amount of 53,633,300 dollars, as detailed in the annex to the present section;

54. Also decides to approve an additional appropriation in the amount of 6,069,700 dollars under section 34, Staff assessment, of the programme budget for the biennium 2004-2005, to be offset by an equivalent amount of income under income section 1, Income from staff assessment;

55. Recognizes the need for a clearer presentation of security spending by each organization of the United Nations system, and requests the Secretary-General, as Chairman of the United Nations System Chief Executives Board for Coordination, to inform the General Assembly at its sixtieth session on this issue;

56. Requests the Secretary-General to examine the possibility for further integration and rationalization of the security management system and to report thereon to the General Assembly at its sixty-first session;

57. Also requests the Secretary-General to submit to the General Assembly at its sixtieth session a report on the implementation of the present resolution;

Administrative and financial implications of decisions and recommendations of the International Civil Service Commission for 2004

Recalling its resolution 59/268 of 23 December 2004 on the United Nations common system,

Takes note of the statement submitted by the Secretary-General on the administrative and financial implications of the decisions and recommendations contained in the report of the International Civil Service Commission for 2004 and the related report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions;

XIII

Contingency fund: consolidated statement of programme budget implications and revised estimates

Decides to appropriate the required amounts, as contained in the report of the Secretary-General;

Notes that a balance of 7,854,800 dollars remains in the contingency fund.

On 23 December, the Assembly decided that the item on the programme budget for the 2004-2005 biennium would remain for consideration at its resumed fifty-ninth (2005) session (decision 59/552).

Revised estimates resulting from Economic and Social Council action

In a September report [A/59/393], the Secretary-General submitted expenditure requirements resulting from resolutions and decisions adopted by the Economic and Social Council at its 2004 substantive and first resumed substantive sessions relating to activities in the areas of indigenous issues, ad hoc advisory groups of the Council on African countries emerging from conflict, and human rights. Those requirements were estimated at $1,537,600, of which $964,000 could be absorbed within resources approved for the 2004-2005 biennium.

ACABQ, in its October report [A/59/542], recommended that the Fifth Committee take note of the estimate of $573,600, on the understanding that the Secretary-General would request any required appropriations in the context of the consolidated statement of programme budget implications and revised estimates to be submitted to the General Assembly.

In a later addendum [A/59/393/Add.1], the Secretary-General presented details of additional expenditure requirements arising from the Council's adoption of resolution 2004/69, relating to activities in the area of international cooperation in tax matters (see p. 985), estimated at $294,900 for 2005, which could be absorbed within approved 2004-2005 resources. The related requirements of $589,800 for the 2006-2007 biennium would be included in the proposed programme budget for that biennium and subsequent bienniums.

In December [A/59/597], ACABQ recommended approval of the Secretary-General's proposals.

Inflation and currency fluctuations

In December [A/C.5/59/24], the Secretary-General submitted adjustments to the revised estimates and programme budget implications that were subject to recosting, as indicated in the first performance report for the 2004-2005 biennium (see p. 1380). The adjustments, which were the result of the application of the new costing parameters approved by the General Assembly in the context of its consideration of the first performance report, showed an overall increase of $2,951,600, reflecting net increased requirements of $2,047,900 due to exchange rate fluctuation, with inflation and other standards adjustments amounting to $903,700, and an increase in staff assessment requirements of $159,300, to be offset by a corresponding increase under the income section.

The ACABQ Chairman, in an oral report to the Fifth Committee on 31 December [A/C.5/59/SR.31], recommended approval of the revised estimates submitted by the Secretary-General.

By decision 59/550 of 23 December, the Assembly approved the adjustments, subject to the approval of related amounts for individual revised estimates and statements of programme budget implications.

Unforeseen and extraordinary expenses

Under the terms of resolution 58/273 [YUN 2003, p. 1422], the Secretary-General was authorized by the General Assembly to enter into commitments to meet unforeseen and extraordinary expenses arising either during or subsequent to the 2004-2005 biennium without prior ACABQ concurrence for certain specific commitments, including for expenses certified by the President of the International Court of Justice (ICJ). In a May report [A/59/90], the Secretary-General reviewed the adequacy of the provisions of the resolution as they related to ICJ and recommended that the Assembly approve his proposal to change the ceiling for expenses that might be certified by the ICJ President without prior ACABQ concurrence, with effect from the 2006-2007 biennium, and to maintain an amount of $400,000 in the regular ICJ budget to accommodate the recurring requirements for ad hoc judges, with effect from the same biennium, while adjusting the ceiling under that component of the resolution on unforeseen and extraordinary expenses from $330,000 to $200,000. No change was proposed for the 2004-2005 biennium.

ACABQ recommended in November [A/59/551] that the Assembly take note of the Secretary-General's report and approve his proposal.

Revised estimates in respect of matters of which the Security Council was seized

The Secretary-General, in November [A/59/534/Add.1], submitted proposed additional requirements for the period until 31 December 2005 for 25 political missions authorized by the Security Council and/or the General Assembly estimated at $162,614,700 net ($174,747,200 gross), after taking account of the balances expected to remain unencumbered for those missions at the end of their mandate periods, totalling an estimated $14,932,900.

In an interim progress report of 7 December [A/59/534/Add.2] on the implementation of Assembly resolution 58/284 (see p. 222), the Secretary-General recommended that the Assembly take note that the commitment authority valid through 31 December to support a subvention for the Special Court for Sierra Leone had been unused and was being surrendered in lieu of a request for an appropriation in 2005; it might also wish to decide to appropriate $20 million, with effect from 1 January through 30 June 2005, under special political missions of section 3, Political affairs, of the 2004-2005 programme budget, and revert to this matter at its resumed (2005) fifty-ninth session.

ACABQ pointed out that it could not make a detailed recommendation as to the level of financial assistance for the Special Court, since a fully justified presentation of its 2004-2005 budget would not be submitted to the Assembly until its resumed fifty-ninth (2005) session. In the meantime, and despite the perceived difficulty of fund-raising, ACABQ urged renewed and continued effort to mobilize voluntary resources. Should the Assembly agree to another subvention, ACABQ recommended that a commitment authority be granted in an amount not to exceed $20 million to allow the Court to continue its operations to 30 June 2005 [A/59/569/Add.2].

In other related action, the Assembly authorized the Secretary-General to enter into commitments in the amount of $6 million to support the Cameroon-Nigeria Mixed Commission until 30 November (resolution 58/294) (see p. 231). Based on revised requirements of $5,419,300 for the period 1 June to 31 December submitted by the Secretary-General [A/58/886] and on the recommendation of ACABQ [A/59/411& Corr.1], the Assembly approved that amount, to be charged against the unallocated balance under section 3, Political affairs, of the 2004-2005 programme budget, for special political missions (resolution 59/12) (see p. 232).

Following the Council's establishment in June of an advance team to the Sudan, the Secretary-General, in October [A/59/534], proposed resource requirements for the 90-day extension of the team in the amount of $21,789,400 gross ($21,008,100 net), which the Assembly approved, to be charged against the balance for special political missions under section 3, Political affairs, of the 2004-2005 programme budget (resolution 59/58) (see p. 248).

Contingency fund

The contingency fund, established by General Assembly resolution 41/213 [YUN 1986, p. 1024], accommodated additional expenditures relating to each biennium that derived from legislative mandates not provided for in the proposed programme budget or from revised estimates. Guidelines for its use were annexed to Assembly resolution 42/211 [YUN 1987, p. 1098].

The Fifth Committee considered the Secretary-General's December report [A/C.5/59/27] containing a consolidated statement of all programme budget implications and revised estimates falling under the guidelines for the use of the fund. The consolidated amount of new and potential charges of $3,888,200 at revised 2004-2005 rates were within the available balance of the fund.

Programme budget implications of CPC recommendations

The Secretary-General submitted to the Fifth Committee in November [A/C.5/59/13] a statement of programme budget implications of the recommendations contained in the report of the Committee for Programme and Coordination (CPC) on its forty-fourth session (New York, 7 June-2 July) [A/59/16], concerning programme 24, as follows: Management and support services, of the proposed 2006-2007 strategic framework; Management and central support services, of the revised 2002-2005 medium-term plan; and section 29, Management and central support services, of the 2004-2005 programme budget.

The CPC recommendation for a biennial report on the improvement of management practices and for a time-bound plan for the reduction of duplication, complexity and bureaucracy in UN administrative processes and procedures could be prepared from existing resources of the 2004-2005 programme budget; the recommendation for a feasibility study to analyse available cost-accounting techniques and their applicability for identifying and analysing the costs of UN activities and outputs, drawing on best international practices, required an estimated $500,000 in additional appropriation under section 29B, Office of Programme Planning, of the 2004-2005 budget, representing a charge against the contingency fund. To reflect those recommendations, the programme of work under section 29 (see above) would have to be modified accordingly.

ACABQ in November [A/59/567] recommended that the Fifth Committee inform the General Assembly that its endorsement of the CPC recommendations would entail the additional appropriation and modification mentioned above.

The Assembly, by decision 59/549 of 23 December, endorsed ACABQ's observations and recommendations. It noted that, should it adopt the draft resolution on programme planning [A/C.5/59/L.20], the programme of work under section 29 would be modified as indicated in the Secretary-General's statement, and an additional amount of $500,000 at initial 2004-2005 rates would be required under section 29B, subject to the procedures for the use of the contingency fund. The Assembly also noted the possible substantial financial costs related to the implementation of a cost accounting system and requested of the Secretary-General a full presentation, at its sixtieth (2005) session, of the financial implications of options for the possible implementation of such a system.

Programme budget outline for 2006-2007

Report of Secretary-General. In October [A/59/415], the Secretary-General presented the proposed programme budget outline for 2006-2007, describing preliminary estimate of resources, priorities reflecting trends of a broad sectoral nature, real growth compared with the previous budget, and the size of the contingency fund as a percentage of the overall level of resources. The preliminary estimate for the 2006-2007 biennium, expressed in 2004-2005 prices, amounted to $3,359.2 million.

Recosted for inflation but not for exchange rates, the total requirements for 2006-2007 would amount to $3,556.9 million. The programme budget for 2006-2007 would reflect the priorities proposed in the strategic framework for that biennium (see p. 1400).

The preliminary estimate before the inclusion of special political missions maintained the level of 2004-2005 regular budget activities, which was equivalent to zero real growth. Once account was taken of the full inclusion of required provisions for those missions, the total preliminary estimate of $3,359.2 million would represent an increase of $180 million, or 5.7 per cent, compared with existing 2004-2005 provisions.

Noting that the size of the contingency fund was set at 0.75 per cent of the overall resource level, the Secretary-General recommended that the fund again be set at the same rate, or at $25.2 million, for the 2006-2007 biennium.

ACABQ report. ACABQ, in its December report [A/59/600], recommended that the General Assembly adopt a preliminary estimate of $3,760 million for the 2006-2007 biennium at revised 2004-2005 rates. That figure took into account adjustments consequential to the first performance report for the 2004-2005 biennium (see p. 1381), and requirement proposals for security, special political missions and other revised estimates and programme budget implications currently before the Fifth Committee, totalling $261.9 million as at 6 December. The total figure amounted to $3,745.6 million, rounded up to $3,760 million.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 23 December [meeting 76], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee [A/59/652], adopted resolution 59/278 without vote [agenda item 107].

Proposed programme budget outline for the biennium 2006-2007

The General Assembly,

Reaffirming its resolution 41/213 of 19 December 1986, in which it requested the Secretary-General to submit in off-budget years an outline of the proposed programme budget for the following biennium,

Reaffirming also section VI of its resolution 45/248 B of 21 December 1990,

Reaffirming further rule 153 of its rules of procedure,

Recalling its resolution 58/269 of 23 December 2003,

Having considered the report of the Secretary-General on the proposed programme budget outline for the biennium 2006-2007 and the related recommendations of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions,

1. Endorses the observations and recommendations of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions;

2. Reaffirms that the proposed programme budget outline shall contain an indication of the following:

(a) A preliminary estimate of resources needed to accommodate the proposed programme of activities during the biennium;

(b) Priorities, reflecting general trends of a broad sectoral nature;

(c) Real growth, positive or negative, compared with the previous budget;

(d) Size of the contingency fund expressed as a percentage of the overall level of resources;

3. Also reaffirms that the budget outline should provide a greater level of predictability of resources required for the following biennium and promote greater involvement of Member States in the budgetary process, thereby facilitating the broadest possible agreement on the programme budget;

4. Further reaffirms that the budget proposals of the Secretary-General should reflect resource levels commensurate with mandates for their full, efficient and effective implementation;

5. Notes that the budget outline is a preliminary estimate of resources;

6. Invites the Secretary-General to prepare his proposed programme budget for the biennium 2006-2007 on the basis of a preliminary estimate of 3,621,900,000 United States dollars at revised 2004-2005 rates;

7. Decides that the proposed programme budget for the biennium 2006-2007 shall contain provisions for recosting on the basis of the existing methodology;

8. Decides also that the priorities for the biennium 2006-2007 shall be the following:

(a) Maintenance of international peace and security;

(b) Promotion of sustained economic growth and sustainable development, in accordance with the relevant resolutions of the General Assembly and recent United Nations conferences;

(c) Development of Africa;

(d) Promotion of human rights;

(e) Effective coordination of humanitarian assistance efforts;

(f) Promotion of justice and international law;

(g) Disarmament;

(h) Drug control, crime prevention and combating international terrorism in all its forms and manifestations;

9. Requests the Secretary-General, in view of his preliminary indicative estimates contained in the proposed budget outline, to reflect the priorities outlined in paragraph 8 above when presenting the proposed programme budget for the biennium 2006-2007;

10. Decides that the contingency fund shall be set at the level of 0.75 per cent of the preliminary estimate, namely, at 27.2 million dollars, that this amount shall be in addition to the overall level of the preliminary estimate and that it shall be used in accordance with the procedures for the use and operation of the contingency fund.

Contributions

According to the Secretary-General's report on improving the financial situation of the United Nations [A/59/524/Add.1], unpaid assessed contributions to the UN budget at the end of 2004 totalled $2.887 million (compared to $1,603 million in 2003); outstanding peace-keeping arrears totalled $2,500 million (compared to $1,066 million in 2003); and total unpaid assessments to the international tribunals were reduced to $30 million (compared to $88 million in 2003).

The number of Member States paying their regular budget assessments in full decreased to 124 (compared to 131 at the end of 2003).

Assessments

Application of Article 19

Committee on Contributions. The Committee on Contributions, at its sixty-fourth session (New York, 7-25 June) [A/59/11], reviewed requests from 10 Member States for exemption under Article 19 of the United Nations Charter, whereby a Member would lose its vote in the General Assembly if the amount of its arrears should equal or exceed the amount of contributions due from it for the preceding two full years. The Committee duly noted the Members' written and oral representations and evaluated them against their payment records and economic and political circumstances.

The Committee noted that Burundi's request stemmed from its expectation that it would be unable to pay, before 2005, the necessary $14,100 to avoid application of the Article. It further noted that the Central African Republic had still not submitted its promised multi-year payment plan, nor had it made payments against its unpaid assessed contributions since 1994, apart from the $512,567 paid in 1998. In the light of the information that the newly elected parliament of the Comoros was considering the question of its arrears with the expectation that the current exemption request would be the last, the Committee understood that the Comoros would not be able to pay before 31 December the amount necessary to avoid application of the Article. It encouraged Guinea-Bissau, whose outstanding assessments had steadily increased since 1997, to resume reducing them and promptly to submit its intended multi-year payment plan. It encouraged Iraq, which faced exceptional problems, to do likewise.

Niger had submitted a payment plan under which it had already made the first payment. The Republic of Moldova, despite its continuing problems, had more than met its scheduled payments for 2001-2003 and had made an initial payment in 2004. Somalia's inability to meet its assessments was due principally to the devastating impact of civil war raging in the country since 1991 and of the current drought. Tajikistan, which faced severe economic and social problems, had fulfilled its commitments under its payment plan, exceeding those scheduled for 2000-2004.

The Committee concluded that, since Burundi did not fall under the provisions of Article 19 in 2004, no Assembly action was required in its case. It recalled the Article's provision that a Member might be permitted to vote if the Assembly was satisfied that its failure to pay the full minimum amount of arrears to avoid application of the Article was due to conditions beyond its control. In that context, it determined that that was true in the cases of the Central African Republic, the Comoros, Guinea-Bissau, Iraq, Niger, the Republic of Moldova, Sao Tome and Principe, Somalia and Tajikistan; it therefore recommended that those nine Members be allowed to vote until 30 June 2005.

At the end of the Committee's session on 25 June 2004, seven Member States—Benin, Cape Verde, Chad, Iraq, Liberia, Malawi and Mauritania—were in arrears in the payment of their assessed contributions under the terms of Article 19 and had no vote in the Assembly. In addition, nine Members—the Central African Republic, the Comoros, Georgia, Guinea-Bissau, the Niger, the Republic of Moldova, Sao Tome and Principe, Somalia and Tajikistan—were similarly in arrears but had been permitted to vote until 30 June 2004 pursuant to Assembly resolution 58/1 A [YUN 2003, p. 1424].

The Committee noted that Cyprus, Morocco, Pakistan and Trinidad and Tobago, availing themselves of the opportunity afforded by Assembly resolution 55/5 B [YUN 2000, p. 1311], had paid the equivalent of $2,069,770.03 in non-United States dollar currencies.

Report of Secretary-General. During the year, the Secretary-General reported on payments made by certain Member States to reduce the level of their arrears below that specified in Article 19, so that they could vote in the Assembly. As at 19 January [A/58/688], 26 Member States were below the gross amount assessed for the preceding two full years (2002-2003). That number was reduced to 16 by 29 June [A/58/855] and to 13 by 10 September [A/59/350], remaining at that number by 11 October [A/59/430].

Communications. On 6 January [A/58/674], Azerbaijan requested, in the light of its continued good payment record, that it be included in the list posted on the website of the Office of the Spokesman for the Secretary-General of countries that had paid their contributions in full and on time to the UN budget for 2004.

On 1 July [A/C.5/58/40], the Assembly President transmitted to the Fifth Committee a 28 June letter from the Chairman of the Committee on Contributions regarding its report on the requests from Member States concerned for exception under Article 19.

Statements by Georgia and Liberia. During the Fifth Committee's consideration of the item on the scale of assessment for the apportionment of the expenses of the United Nations on 4 October [A/C.5/59/SR.2], Georgia expressed surprise that it should be deprived of its right to vote in the Assembly since, for the first time, it had discharged its obligation in full under its multi-year payment plan but, for reasons beyond its control resulting from the political upheaval in the country in 2003, it had been unable to meet the deadline for submitting the necessary information to the Committee on Contributions. Georgia thus hoped that the Fifth Committee would again authorize its full participation in the work of the United Nations.

At the Committee's 7 October meeting [A/C.5/59/SR.4], Liberia requested that it be exempted from the application of Article 19 and its right to vote restored for the current Assembly session. It had not been able to pay its assessed contributions owing to the protracted conflict in the country, but would draw up a repayment plan as soon as possible, of which it would inform the Committee on Contributions.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 11 October [meeting 24], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee [A/59/421], adopted resolution 59/1 A without vote [agenda item 113].

Scale of assessments for the apportionment of the expenses of the United Nations: request under Article 19 of the Charter

The General Assembly,

Having considered the letter dated 1 July 2004 from the President of the General Assembly to the Chairman of the Fifth Committee transmitting a letter dated 28 June 2004 from the Chairman of the Committee on Contributions regarding the recommendations of the Committee on Contributions on requests for exemption under Article 19 of the Charter of the United Nations and the statements by the representatives of Georgia and Liberia,

Reaffirming the obligation of Member States under Article 17 of the Charter to bear the expenses of the Organization as apportioned by the General Assembly,

1. Reaffirms its role in accordance with the provisions of Article 19 of the Charter of the United Nations and the advisory role of the Committee on Contributions in accordance with rule 160 of the rules of procedure of the General Assembly;

2. Also reaffirms its resolution 54/237 C of 23 December 1999;

3. Agrees that the failure of the Central African Republic, the Comoros, Guinea-Bissau, Iraq, the Niger, the Republic of Moldova, Sao Tome and Principe, Somalia and Tajikistan to pay the full minimum amount necessary to avoid the application of Article 19 of the Charter was due to conditions beyond their control;

4. Decides that the Central African Republic, the Comoros, Guinea-Bissau, Iraq, the Niger, the Republic of Moldova, Sao Tome and Principe, Somalia and Tajikistan should be permitted to vote in the General Assembly until 30 June 2005;

5. Takes note of the information provided by Georgia and Liberia;

6. Concludes that the failure of Georgia and Liberia to pay the full minimum amount necessary to avoid the application of Article 19 of the Charter was due to conditions beyond their control, and invites Georgia and Liberia to submit appropriate information to the Committee on Contributions if similar circumstances prevail in the future;

7. Decides that Georgia and Liberia should be permitted to vote in the General Assembly until 30 June 2005.

Other matters related to payment of assessed contributions

The General Assembly also considered the recommendations of the Committee on Contributions on the methodology for future scale of assessments, the criteria for ad hoc adjustments of the rates of assessments and multi-year payment plans, and the treatment of the outstanding assessed contributions of the former Yugoslavia [YUN 2003, p. 1428] (see sections below).

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 23 December [meeting 76], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee [A/59/421/Add.1], adopted resolution 59/1 B without vote [agenda item 113].

Scale of assessments for the apportionment of the expenses of the United Nations

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 55/5 B and C of 23 December 2000, 56/243 A of 24 December 2001, 56/243 B of 27 March 2002, 57/4 B of 20 December 2002, and 58/1 B of 23 December 2003,

Recalling also rule 160 of the rules of procedure of the General Assembly,

Having considered the report of the Committee on Contributions on the work of its sixty-fourth session,

Having also considered the report of the Secretary-General on multi-year payment plans, the letter dated 27 December 2001 from the Secretary-General addressed to the President of the General Assembly and the related note by the Secretary-General,

1. Takes note of the report of the Committee on Contributions;

2. Takes note also of the report of the Secretary-General on multi-year payment plans;

3. Urges all Member States to pay their assessed contributions in full, on time and without imposing conditions;

4. Reaffirms paragraph 1 of its resolution 57/4 B;

5. Decides to defer until the first part of its resumed fifty-ninth session consideration of the question of the outstanding assessed contributions of the former Yugoslavia.

On 23 December, the Assembly decided that the item on the scale of assessments for the apportionment of the expenses of the United Nations would remain for consideration during its resumed fifty-ninth (2005) session (decision 59/552).

Scale Methodology

Committee on Contributions. Pursuant to General Assembly resolution 58/1 B [YUN 2003, p. 1424], the Committee on Contributions continued to review the methodology for future scales of assessments in respect of its different elements, as well as the pattern of major scale-to-scale changes in Member States' rates of assessments in recent scales. In concluding that changes in scale methodology were a significant factor in many cases, it recalled that, while the scale methodology should not be so rigid as to fail to accommodate changes in economic and technical circumstances, part of the Committee's mandate was to promote stability in the scale methodology, and any proposals for changes in it should be seen in that light.

The Committee undertook an initial review of the criteria for deciding when to replace market exchange rates (MERs) with price-adjusted rates of exchange (PAREs) or other appropriate conversion rates for purposes of preparing the scale of assessment; it would consider the matter further at its 2005 session on the basis of additional information from the UN Statistics Division. Based on its finding that the revised method of calculating PAREs had serious shortcomings as a tool for adjusting exchange rates, the Committee decided not to consider that method further; instead, it would consider, at its session in 2005, the concept of relative PARE, a comparatively simple method reflecting the movement of domestic prices relative to those of the United States, rather than their absolute movement. It decided to review, also in 2005, other elements of the scale methodology so as to reach agreement on the scale of assessments for the 2007-2009 period, to assist the Assembly in considering the question.

Criteria for ad hoc adjustments

The Committee on Contributions [A/59/11], in considering the question of criteria for ad hoc adjustments of the rates of assessment, focused on two recent, distinct requests for such adjustment: one called for a correction stemming from problems with data used in preparing the assessment scale; the other called for an adjustment to reflect substantive changes in relative capacity to pay since the adoption of the scale. The Committee concluded that, because of their exceptional and extraordinary nature, such cases should be considered on a case-by-case basis. It was therefore not feasible to elaborate more specific standard criteria for determining future ad hoc adjustments.

Measures to encourage payment of arrears

Committee on Contributions. The Committee on Contributions [A/59/11], in considering the question of measures to encourage the payment of arrears, had before it updated information on measures used by the UN system to encourage the payment of assessed contributions, which was annexed to its report, and a case study on the impact of incentive measures on the timely payment of assessed contributions in the World Health Organization. The Committee reaffirmed its earlier conclusion that it might be prudent to fix the deadline for timely payment from the date of issuance of the assessments, rather than from the date of their receipt, and to extend the deadline from 30 to 35 days. The Committee decided not to consider further the proposals for incentive payments based on the payment status of Member States, and for priority reimbursements of troop and equipment costs to Member States that were current in their payments to the United Nations, pending more specific guidance from the General Assembly. On the question of interest on or indexation of arrears, the Committee agreed that interest applied to arrears arising after the adoption of the related Assembly decision should also apply to any similar measures that the Assembly might adopt. It decided to consider further, based on information from the Secretariat, the suggestion of a composite approach, whereby payments received within a specified period after the issuance of the assessment would attract a rebate or share of interest income, while payment received after such period would attract a penalty. The Committee recommended that the Assembly encourage Member States with outstanding assessed contributions and credit balances to authorize the Secretariat to apply such credits towards reducing their outstanding assessed contributions.

The Committee also had before it the Secretary-General's March report [A/59/67] on multi-year payment plans prepared in response to Assembly resolutions 57/4 B [YUN 2002, p. 1385] and 58/1 B [YUN 2003, p. 1424]. Information was provided on the payment plans/schedules submitted by Georgia, the Niger, the Republic of Moldova, Sao Tome and Principe and Tajikistan and on the status of their implementation as at 31 December 2003. During the 2001-2003 period, Tajikistan, the Republic of Moldova, and Sao Tome and Principe had made payments exceeding that foreseen in their schedules. The schedule submitted by Niger and the most recent revision of Georgia's payment plan only began in 2004.

The Committee took note of the payment plan submitted by the Niger in March; of a long-term calendar of debt payments under preparation by the Central African Republic and soon to be announced; and that Guinea-Bissau, which had the issue of multi-year payment plans under continuous consideration, would, as the country's situation normalized, establish such a plan as a matter of priority. No further plans had been submitted.

The Committee also noted the considerable effort made by those Member States that had honoured their payment plan commitments and urged those that had not yet done so to do likewise so as to reduce their outstanding assessed contributions.

Accounts and auditing

The General Assembly, at its resumed fifty-eighth (2004) session, considered the report of the Board of Auditors on UN peacekeeping operations for the period 1 July 2002 to 30 June 2003 [A/58/5, vol. II], together with the Secretary-General's report on the implementation of the Board's recommendation thereon [A/58/737], and ACABQ's related comments and recommendations [A/58/759]. On 18 June, the Assembly, in resolution 58/249 B, endorsed the Board's report (see p. 97).

Board of Auditors report. The Chairman of the Board of Auditors transmitted to the Secretary-General the financial reports and audited financial statements for the biennium ended 31 December 2003 on the United Nations [A/59/5, vol. I], and on the following entities: the International Trade Centre UNCTAD/WTO [A/59/5, vol. III], the United Nations University [A/59/5, vol. IV], the United Nations Development Programme (UNDP) [A/59/5/Add.1], the United Nations Children's Fund (UNICEF) [A/59/5/Add.2], the United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East [A/59/5/Add.3], the United Nations Institute for Training and Research [A/59/5/Add.4], the voluntary funds administered by the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees [A/59/5/Add.5], the Fund of the United Nations Environment Programme (UNEP) [A/59/5/Add.6], the United Nations Population Fund (UNFPA) [A/59/5/Add.7], the United Nations Human Settlements Programme (UN-Habitat) [A/59/5/Add.8], the United Nations International Drug Control Programme (UNDCP) [A/59/5/Add.9], the United Nations Office for Project Services (UNOPS) [A/59/5/Add.10], the International Criminal Tribunal for the Prosecution of Persons Responsible for Genocide and Other Serious Violations of International Humanitarian Law Committed in the Territory of Rwanda and Rwandan Citizens Responsible for Genocide and Other Such Violations Committed in the Territory of Neighbouring States between 1 January and 31 December 1994 (ICTR) [A/59/5/Add.11], and the International Tribunal for the Prosecution of Persons Responsible for Serious Violations of International Humanitarian Law Committed in the Territory of the Former Yugoslavia since 1991 (ICTY) [A/59/5/Add.12]. The Board also submitted, through the Secretary-General, its report on the financial statements of the United Nations Compensation Commission for the biennium ended 31 December 2003 [S/2004/789].

Introducing the reports in the Fifth Committee [A/C.5.59/SR.10], the Chairman of the Board drew attention to the progress made by the United Nations and its funds and programmes in the implementation of previous Board recommendations, of which 46 per cent had been fully implemented for the 2000-2001 biennium. At the same time, he underscored the principal shortcomings revealed by the audit. According to the Chairman, the Board had modified its audit report on the financial statements of UNDP, UNDCP, UNFPA and UNOPS. It did not express an opinion on the UNOPS statement as it was unable to obtain adequate assurances regarding a number of issues; it was concerned that failure by UNOPS to meet its 2004 targets could result in deficits that might not be absorbed by its operational reserve and that no proper system was in place to give reliable estimates of the cost of services provided. While the modified report had not affected the Board's audit opinion on the financial statements of the three other entities, concerns remained, notably the lack of adequate controls at UNDP and UNFPA even after the introduction of the new enterprise resource planning system known as Atlas and of procedures at UNDCP to ensure the complete and timely recording of field obligations.

The Board had made various recommendations for improving the presentation and disclosure of financial statements and reports, but noted that none of the organizations had addressed the General Assembly's request in its resolution 57/278 A [YUN 2002, p. 1389] that they examine UN system governance structures, principles and accountability throughout the UN system and make proposals for a future report format. Unfunded end-of-service and post-retirement benefits were also a cause for concern, given that, as at 31 December 2003, an aggregate amount of over $3 billion remained unfunded, as did non-expendable equipment of some $1.1 billion. The Board had again noted weaknesses at the United Nations, UNDP, UNFPA, UN-Habitat and UNOPS relating to inadequate physical inventory counts and inaccurate and unreliable inventory records.

Monitoring and control of programme expenditure for several funds and programmes had improved, including efforts to simplify and harmonize resource transfer modalities. As to project management, it had been difficult to compare financial versus technical implementation, with the resultant risk that financial resources could be depleted before projects were completed or that excess resources might not be reprogrammed appropriately. Some projects that were operationally closed remained open in financial terms for long periods. The Board was concerned that 63 UN trust funds, with combined reserves and fund balances of $54 million as at 31 December 2003, did not show any expenditures for the 2002-2003 biennium, except for transactions pertaining to the investment and other related accounts.

The Board noted that the return on the significant funds in short- or medium-term financial assets or investments managed by the United Nations and by several of its funds and programmes had been generally close to benchmark, and, in the case of UNICEF, the Board's previous recommendations on funds management had been implemented. In other instances, however, it had found a number of problems relating to guidelines and management: the United Nations Office at Geneva managed an investment portfolio of $375 million (as at 31 December 2003) without an investment policy or committee, and, while over 75 per cent of that portfolio came from Geneva-based funds and programmes, formal guidelines or reporting procedures for their respective shares were non-existent; the former Director of the Investment Management Service of the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Fund had not provided a proper audit trail for the real estate investments he had personally managed, nor had the purchase of an office building in New York been conducted in a consistent manner; moreover, the UN system maintained a large number of bank accounts that had encountered problems of disclosure and reconciliation. Further steps had also to be taken to improve the efficiency of inter-agency transactions, since the Board had found a difference of some $22 million between the accounting records of Headquarters and of UNDP.

While recognizing the recent initiatives to improve coordination in information and communication technology, the Board was of the view that a comprehensive, system-wide initiative needed to be implemented. It recognized the need for the United Nations and its funds and programmes to establish a comprehensive fraud prevention policy. While some organizations had instituted measures in that regard, they seldom included formal corruption and fraud risk assessment mechanisms or a fraud prevention committee. Mechanisms for resolving incidents and allegations of corruption and fraud were not always designed or implemented efficiently.

The level of unpaid contributions to ICTR and ICTY, amounting to $34.8 million and $53 million, respectively, had significantly worsened their financial positions, leading to cross-borrowing from peacekeeping operations. The Board remained concerned that those tribunals might not be able to complete their work by the 2010 deadline.

By a July note [A/59/162], the Secretary-General transmitted to the Assembly a summary of the Board's principal findings, conclusions and recommendations, classified by audit area. He also submitted his first report [A/59/318 & Add.1] on measures taken to implement the Board's recommendations on the accounts for the biennium ended 31 December 2003. The related comments and observations of ACABQ were contained in its 1 October report [A/59/400].

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 23 December [meeting 76], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee [A/59/588], adopted resolution 59/264 without vote [agenda item 106].

Financial reports and audited financial statements, and reports of the Board of Auditors

The General Assembly,

Reaffirming its resolutions 50/222 of 11 April 1996, 51/218 E of 17 June 1997, 52/212 B of 31 March 1998, 53/204 of 18 December 1998, 53/221, section VIII, of 7 April 1999, 54/13 B of 23 December 1999, 55/220 A of 23 December 2000, 55/220 B and C of 12 April and 14 June 2001 and 57/278 A of 20 December 2002,

Having considered, for the period ended 31 December 2003, the financial reports and audited financial statements and the reports and audit opinions of the Board of Auditors on the United Nations, the International Trade Centre UNCTAD/WTO, the United Nations University, the United Nations Development Programme, the United Nations Children's Fund, the United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East, the United Nations Institute for Training and Research, the voluntary funds administered by the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees, the Fund of the United Nations Environment Programme, the United Nations Population Fund, the United Nations Human Settlements Programme, the Fund of the United Nations International Drug Control Programme, the United Nations Office for Project Services, the International Criminal Tribunal for the Prosecution of Persons Responsible for Genocide and Other Serious Violations of International Humanitarian Law Committed in the Territory of Rwanda and Rwandan Citizens Responsible for Genocide and Other Such Violations Committed in the Territory of Neighbouring States between 1 January and 31 December 1994, and the International Tribunal for the Prosecution of Persons Responsible for Serious Violations of International Humanitarian Law Committed in the Territory of the Former Yugoslavia since 1991, the concise summary of principal findings, conclusions and recommendations contained in the reports prepared by the Board of Auditors, the reports of the Secretary-General on the implementation of the recommendations of the Board of Auditors by the United Nations and its funds and programmes and the report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions,

1. Accepts the financial reports and audited financial statements and the reports and audit opinions of the Board of Auditors for the above-mentioned organizations, with the exception of the financial statements of the United Nations Office for Project Services;

2. Notes with concern that the Board of Auditors was unable to express an opinion on the financial statements of the United Nations Office for Project Services, and acknowledges the comprehensive steps taken by the Office to address the issues raised by the Board;

3. Notes the view of the Board of Auditors that it would be premature to conduct an audit in 2005 of the financial statements of the United Nations Office for Project Services for 2004 owing to the time needed to address the critical issues raised in the Board's report, and decides to revert to the issue, at its sixtieth session, in the context of the report of the Board of Auditors on the implementation of its recommendations relating to the biennium 2002-2003;

4. Approves the recommendations and conclusions contained in the reports of the Board of Auditors and endorses the observations and recommendations contained in the report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions, with the proviso that, should the need arise, the recommendations and conclusions of the Board of Auditors and the comments thereon by the Advisory Committee, including those on the International Criminal Tribunal for Rwanda, the International Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia, the capital master plan and the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Fund, will be considered under the respective agenda items;

5. Commends the Board of Auditors for the superior quality of its reports, in particular with respect to its comments on the management of resources and improving the presentation of financial statements;

6. Notes with concern the late issuance of the reports of the Board of Auditors despite the timely submission of these reports to the Secretariat, and requests the Secretary-General to ensure sufficient priority in completing their editing and translation in order that they may be submitted to the General Assembly in accordance with the six-week rule;

7. Takes note of the reports of the Secretary-General on the implementation of the recommendations of the Board of Auditors by the United Nations and its funds and programmes, and invites the Board of Auditors, in consultation with the Secretary-General and the executive heads of the funds and programmes, to categorize the recommendations according to their priority for implementation;

8. Requests the Secretary-General and the executive heads of the funds and programmes of the United Nations to indicate an expected time frame for the implementation of the recommendations of the Board of Auditors, including the office holders to be held accountable;

9. Reiterates its request to the Secretary-General and the executive heads of the funds and programmes of the United Nations to examine governance principles and to report thereon to the General Assembly at its sixty-first session, through the respective governing bodies of the funds and programmes of the United Nations;

10. Requests the Secretary-General and the executive heads of the funds and programmes of the United Nations also to consider strengthening the internal control framework, harmonizing the administrative mechanisms that would systematically act upon the findings and recommendations of oversight bodies and improving financial reporting, as well as the proper forums for the consideration of the reports of the Board of Auditors by the respective executive boards and the General Assembly, and to report thereon to the General Assembly at its sixty-first session;

11. Notes that the Secretariat has been collecting information on the experiences of audit committees within the United Nations system and other international organizations, and requests the Secretary-General to report on and provide an assessment of its findings to the General Assembly at its sixtieth session.

On 23 December, the Assembly decided that the item on the financial reports and audited financial statements, and the Board of Auditors would remain for consideration at its resumed fifty-ninth (2005) session (decision 59/552).

Administrative and budgetary coordination

The General Assembly, at its resumed fifty-eighth session had before it the Secretary-General's note transmitting the report of the Joint Inspection Unit (JIU) on support costs related to the extrabudgetary activities in UN system organizations [YUN 2002, p. 1391], the comments of ACABQ [A/57/434] and those of the Secretary-General and the United Nations System Chief Executives Board for Coordination (CEB) [YUN 2003, p. 1429] on the recommendations contained in the report, and a note by JIU [A/59/714] containing further clarifications on its recommendations 1, 4, 6, 8 and 9 as requested by the Assembly in decision 58/560 [YUN 2003, p. 1429].

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 8 April [meeting 83], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee [A/58/572/Add.2], adopted resolution 58/283 without vote [agenda item 120].

Report of the Joint Inspection Unit on support costs related to extrabudgetary activities in organizations of the United Nations system

The General Assembly,

Recalling its decision 58/560 of 23 December 2003,

Having considered the report of the Joint Inspection Unit on support costs related to extrabudgetary activities in organizations of the United Nations system, the note by the Secretary-General transmitting his comments and those of the United Nations System Chief Executives Board for Coordination thereon and the related report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions, as well as the note by the Joint Inspection Unit submitted in response to General Assembly decision 58/560, clarifying further some of the recommendations contained in its report,

1. Concurs with the observations and recommendations of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions contained in its report, subject to the provisions of the present resolution;

2. Takes note of the comments of the Secretary-General and those of the United Nations System Chief Executives Board for Coordination;

3. Endorses the recommendations contained in the report of the Joint Inspection Unit on support costs related to extrabudgetary activities in organizations of the United Nations system to the extent that they apply to the United Nations, subject to the provisions of the present resolution;

4. Recognizes that recommendations 2, 3, 5, 6, 8 and 10 are directed to executive heads, and invites executive heads to consider those recommendations;

5. Takes note of recommendation 1, and agrees with the Joint Inspection Unit that governing bodies should take the steps they consider necessary to ensure that extrabudgetary resources are accepted for purposes that are consistent with programme priorities and approved mandates;

6. Also takes note of recommendation 4, and draws the attention of legislative organs to the practice of the United Nations Children's Fund under which interest earned on some extrabudgetary contributions is retained by the organization, and invites legislative organs to consider the applicability or relevance of this practice to them;

7. Further takes note of recommendation 9, and agrees with the Joint Inspection Unit that legislative organs should enact support cost policies to ensure that extrabudgetary resources continue to be mobilized and deployed effectively so as to further the mandated activities in developmental, humanitarian and other substantive areas, and also agrees that those policies should be straightforward, transparent, easy to administer and must provide for a consistent and equitable approach to special arrangements.

CEB report. By a September note [A/59/315], the Secretary-General transmitted to the General Assembly the CEB statistical report on the budgetary and financial situation of the organizations of the UN system. The Assembly took note of the report on 23 December (decision 59/548).

Also on 23 December, the Assembly decided that the items on the review of the efficiency of the administrative and financial functioning of the United Nations, and on the administrative and budgetary coordination of the United Nations with the specialized agencies and the International Atomic Energy Agency would remain for consideration at its resumed fifty-ninth (2005) session (decision 59/552).

Programme planning

Strategic framework for 2006-2007

In May, the Secretary-General submitted the proposed strategic framework for 2006-2007 [A/59/6 (Part One) & Corr.1], which represented a translation of legislative mandates into programmes and subprogrammes. As affirmed by the General Assembly in its resolution 58/269 [YUN 2003, p. 1395], the strategic framework, to replace the four-year medium-term plan, constituted the principal policy directive of the United Nations and served as the basis for programme planning, budgeting, monitoring and evaluation.

The framework comprised two parts. Part one was a plan outline reflecting the longer-term objectives of the internationally agreed development goals, including those contained in the United Nations Millennium Declaration [YUN 2000, p. 49] and the outcomes of major UN conferences and international agreements since 1992. It also included the priorities for the 2006-2007 biennium, proposed for reaffirmation by the Assembly: maintenance of international peace and security; promotion of sustained economic growth and development; development of Africa; promotion of human rights; coordination of humanitarian assistance; promotion of justice and international law; disarmament; and drug control, crime prevention and combating international terrorism.

Part two was the biennial programme plan, covering 26 programmes structured as in the current (2002-2005) medium-term plan, each corresponding to the work to be carried out by an organizational entity, usually at the departmental level, and subdivided into subprogrammes, each corresponding to an organizational entity, generally at the division level. The international drug control programme and the crime prevention and criminal justice programme were combined into the international drug control, crime prevention and criminal justice programme (new programme 11). The Management and support services programme (programme 24) was modified to include in greater depth the work of UN offices away from Headquarters: Geneva, Vienna and Nairobi. A new programme (programme 26) was included to reflect the work of the International Civil Service Commission, JIU and the Office of the United Nations Security Coordinator.

CPC [A/59/16], having examined the Secretary-General's proposed 2006-2007 strategic framework, recommended that the Assembly review part one at its fifty-ninth (2004) session and approve the programme narrative of 21 of the 26 programmes in part two, with certain modifications. It further recommended that the Assembly allocate, for consideration and action prior to submission to the Fifth Committee, programme 3, Disarmament, to the First (Disarmament and International Security) Committee; programme 10, Trade and development, to the Second (Economic and Financial) Committee, following its consideration in the light of the recommendations of the Working Party on the Medium-term Plan and the Programme Budget of UNCTAD made at its resumed forty-second session; programme 19, Human rights, to the Third (Social, Humanitarian and Cultural) Committee; programme 23, Public information, to the Fourth (Special Political and Decolonization) Committee; and review programme 25, Internal oversight, at its fifty-ninth session.

On 4 [A/C.5/59/14], 9 [A/C.5/59/15] and 16 November [A/C.5/59/17], and 20 December [A/C.5/59/26], the Assembly President submitted to the Chairman of the Fifth Committee the revised versions of programmes 23, 10, and 3 and 19 of the 2006-2007 strategic framework as approved by the respective Assembly Committee.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 23 December [meeting 76], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee [A/59/651], adopted resolution 59/275 without vote [agenda item 109].

Programme planning

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 37/234 of 21 December 1982, 38/227 A of 20 December 1983, 41/213 of 19 December 1986, 55/234 of 23 December 2000, 56/253 of 24 December 2001, 57/282 of 20 December 2002 and 58/268 and 58/269 of 23 December 2003,

Having considered the report of the Committee for Programme and Coordination on the work of its forty-fourth session, the proposed strategic framework for the period 2006-2007: part one: plan outline and part two: biennial programme plan and the reports of the Secretary-General on the programme performance of the United Nations for the biennium 2002-2003 and on priority-setting, as well as the report of the Office of Internal Oversight Services on strengthening the role of evaluation findings in programme design, delivery and policy directives,

Appreciating the letters from the President of the General Assembly transmitting the recommendations of the First Committee concerning programme 3, Disarmament, the Second Committee concerning programme 10, Trade and development and the Special Political and Decolonization Committee (Fourth Committee) concerning programme 23, Public information, and concerning programme 19, Human rights,

Emphasizes the role of the plenary and the Main Committees in reviewing and taking action on the appropriate recommendations of the Committee for Programme and Coordination relevant to their work, in accordance with regulation 4.10 of the Regulations and Rules Governing Programme Planning, the Programme Aspects of the Budget, the Monitoring of Implementation and the Methods of Evaluation;

Strategic framework for the period 2006-2007

Recalling paragraph 5 of its resolution 58/269, in which it requested the Secretary-General to prepare, on a trial basis, a strategic framework, which would comprise in one document a plan outline, reflecting the longer-term objectives of the Organization, and a biennial programme plan, to cover two years,

1. Notes that the proposed strategic framework for the period 2006-2007 constitutes the first proposal submitted since the adoption of its resolution 58/269;

2. Also notes that the Committee for Programme and Coordination at its forty-fourth session recommended that the General Assembly review part one, plan outline, of the proposed strategic framework for the period 2006-2007;

3. Recalls its decision in resolution 58/269 to review, with a view to taking a final decision at its sixty-second session, the format, content and duration of the strategic framework, including the necessity of maintaining part one;

4. Decides, in view of the differences between Member States on the content of part one: plan outline of the proposed strategic framework for the period 2006-2007, to take no decision on part one;

5. Requests the Secretary-General to prepare and propose a plan outline, reflecting the longer-term objectives of the Organization, and a biennial programme plan in the context of the strategic framework for the biennium 2008-2009, based, inter alia, on the following principal criteria:

(a) The longer-term objectives consistent with all the relevant legislative mandates in all areas of the activities of the United Nations;

(b) Outcomes of the intergovernmental conferences and summits;

(c) Inputs from relevant programme managers;

(d) Use of intergovernmentally agreed terms and expressions;

6. Invites the Committee for Programme and Coordination to consider at its forty-fifth session additional guidelines, if any, for the preparation of the plan outline;

7. Decides that the priorities for the period 2006-2007 shall be the following:

(a) Maintenance of international peace and security;

(b) Promotion of sustained economic growth and sustainable development in accordance with the relevant resolutions of the General Assembly and recent United Nations conferences;

(c) Development of Africa;

(d) Promotion of human rights;

(e) Effective coordination of humanitarian assistance efforts;

(f) Promotion of justice and international law;

(g) Disarmament;

(h) Drug control, crime prevention and combating international terrorism in all its forms and manifestations;

8. Requests the Secretary-General to prepare the proposed programme budget for the biennium 2006-2007 based on the above priorities and the biennial programme plan as adopted in the present resolution;

9. Also requests the Secretary-General to issue in one document, before the forty-fifth session of the Committee for Programme and Coordination, only the priorities and the biennial programme plan, as adopted in the present resolution;

10. Endorses the conclusions and recommendations of the Committee for Programme and Coordination on the proposed biennial programme plan for the period 2006-2007 contained in the report of the Committee on the work of its forty-fourth session, those of the First Committee regarding programme 3, Disarmament, those of the Second Committee regarding programme 10, Trade and development, those regarding programme 19, Human rights and those of the Special Political and Decolonization Committee (Fourth Committee) regarding programme 23, Public information, subject to the provisions of the present resolution and the additional modifications contained in the annex hereto;

11. Requests the Secretary-General to propose a relevant indicator of achievement for programme 1, General Assembly and Economic and Social Council affairs and conference management, section A, Conference management, New York, subprogramme 4, Meetings and publishing services, in the context of the proposed programme budget for the biennium 2006-2007;

12. Notes that the overall system of the administration of justice in the Secretariat will be considered by the General Assembly at its fifty-ninth session;

13. Requests the Secretary-General to make recommendations to the General Assembly by the end of its fifty-ninth session on how to ensure the ongoing discharge of key functions of the Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs of the Secretariat at Headquarters as defined by the Committee for Programme and Coordination;

Programme performance report

14. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General on the programme performance of the United Nations for the biennium 2002-2003;

15. Endorses the conclusions and recommendations of the Committee for Programme and Coordination regarding the report of the Secretary-General;

16. Stresses that, while future reports on programme performance will be more aligned with the objectives, expected accomplishments and indicators of achievement, information on the outputs shall continue to be provided in the reports;

17. Requests the Secretary-General to ensure that future programme performance reports provide more detailed information on the reasons for less-than-full implementation of programmed outputs, or the postponement and termination thereof;

Evaluation

18. Recalls paragraph 19 of its resolution 58/269, in which it emphasized the need to strengthen the monitoring and evaluation system;

19. Re-emphasizes the importance of the contribution of the relevant intergovernmental bodies, in particular the Main Committees of the General Assembly, in reviewing the relevant recommendations on evaluation;

20. Reiterates section III of its resolution 57/282 on evaluation;

21. Requests the General Committee to take fully into account the above-mentioned resolutions in the allocation of agenda items to the Main Committees;

22. Endorses the conclusions and recommendations of the Committee for Programme and Coordination on strengthening the role of evaluation findings in programme design, delivery and policy directives, on in-depth evaluation of the programme on public administration, finance and development, on the triennial review of the implementation of the recommendations made by the Committee on the in-depth evaluation of sustainable development and on the triennial review of the implementation of the recommendations made by the Committee on the in-depth evaluation of the population programme, and on the further development of topics for a pilot thematic evaluation;

Improving the working methods and procedures of the Committee for Programme and Coordination within the framework of its mandate

23. Requests the Secretary-General to schedule the organizational session of the forty-fifth session of the Committee for Programme and Coordination as soon as possible at the resumed session of the Fifth Committee at the fifty-ninth session;

24. Recalls paragraph 18 of its resolution 58/269, in which it invited the Committee for Programme and Coordination to submit, at its forty-fourth session, recommendations on improving its working methods;

25. Welcomes the decision of the Committee for Programme and Coordination to revert to the agenda item entitled "Improving the working methods and procedures of the Committee for Programme and Coordination within the framework of its mandate", as a matter of priority, at the beginning of its forty-fifth session;

Other conclusions and recommendations of the Committee for Programme and Coordination

26. Endorses the conclusions and recommendations of the Committee for Programme and Coordination regarding the annual overview report of the United Nations System Chief Executives Board for Coordination for 2003, and its conclusions and recommendations regarding the report of the Secretary-General on United Nations system support for the New Partnership for Africa's Development;

27. Also endorses the recommendation of the Committee for Programme and Coordination on the report of the Secretary-General on priority-setting;

Other matters

28. Invites the Committee for Programme and Coordination to take appropriate measures to ensure that the discussion sections of the report of the Committee are drafted so as to reflect fully the opinions expressed by delegations.

Annex

Additional modifications to the proposed biennial programme plan for the period 2006-2007

Programme 1

General Assembly and Economic and Social Council affairs and conference management

Overall orientation

In the second sentence of paragraph 1.3, after "the control and limitation of documents," add "in accordance with legislative mandates,".

A. Conference management, New York

Subprogramme 4

Meetings and publishing services

Delete indicator of achievement (b) (ii) and delete "(i)" in indicator of achievement (b) (i).

A, B, C and D. Conference management, New York, Geneva, Vienna and Nairobi

Subprogramme 2

Planning, development and coordination of conference services

Under Strategy, replace the text of paragraphs 1.5 (e), 1.7 (c), 1.10 (e) and 1.13 (c) of sections A, B, C and D, respectively, with the following: "Upgrading, pursuant to the managerial responsibilities of the Secretary-General, the technological capacity in conference services in line with new developments in technology, in accordance with legislative mandates, while keeping the General Assembly aware of new technologies that can be issued in the Organization to achieve timeliness and better quality of services provided".

At the end of expected accomplishment (b), add “where feasible and more cost-effective, without adversely affecting the quality of services provided”.

Subprogramme 4

Meetings and publishing services

Under Strategy, in paragraphs 1.7 (b), 1.9 (b), 1.12 (b) and 1.15 (b) of sections A, B, C and D, respectively, after “documentation publishing”, add “to achieve better quality, and timeliness”.

Programme 21

Palestine refugees

Overall orientation

After the first sentence of paragraph 21.2, add the following sentence: “In its resolution 3331 B(XXIX) of 17 December 1974, the General Assembly decided that, with effect from 1 January 1975, the expenses relating to the emoluments of international staff in the service of the United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East, which would otherwise have been charged to voluntary contributions, should be financed by the regular budget of the United Nations for the duration of the Agency’s mandate.”

Programme 25

Internal oversight

Overall orientation

Replace the first sentence of paragraph 25.1 with the following: “The overall purpose of the programme is to enhance effectiveness in the implementation of all programmes through continually improved internal control mechanisms within the Organization. The mandate for the programme derives from the responsibility of the Secretary-General as the chief administrative officer of the United Nations, entrusted to him under Article 97 of the Charter of the United Nations.”

Paragraph 25.3 should read as follows: “The Office assists Member States and the Organization in protecting its assets, and ensuring the compliance of programme activities with resolutions, regulations, rules and policies, and the more efficient and effective delivery of the Organization’s activities; preventing and detecting fraud, waste, abuse, malfeasance or mismanagement; and improving the delivery of the Organization’s programmes and activities to enable it to achieve better results by determining all factors affecting the efficient and effective implementation of programmes.”

In the second sentence of paragraph 25.4, replace “ensure” with “assist”.

The second sentence of paragraph 25.5 should read as follows: “In addition, the Office assists the Organization in achieving better results by determining the factors affecting the efficient and effective implementation of programmes in accordance with, inter alia, the internationally agreed development goals, including those contained in the United Nations Millennium Declaration and in the outcomes of the major United Nations conferences and international agreements since 1992.”

Subprogramme 1

Internal audit

The objective of the Organization should read as follows: “To ensure efficient and effective implementation and management of programmes, activities and operations by programme managers, in accordance with the relevant legislative mandates, regulations and rules.”

Expected accomplishment (c) should read as follows: “Improved levels of efficiency and effectiveness in the implementation of programmes, and enhanced accountability by programme managers.”

Subprogramme 2

Monitoring, evaluation and consulting

The objective of the Organization should read as follows: “To strengthen programme implementation by monitoring the delivery of the programmes using results-based management methods as well as their outputs and to determine whether they are adequate, timely and in accordance with the mandates, whether they address effectively the objectives of the programmes and whether the resources are used efficiently.”

Subprogramme 3

Investigations

The objective of the Organization should read as follows: “To ensure compliance with regulations and rules of the United Nations and to minimize the occurrence of fraud, violations of regulations and rules of the United Nations, mismanagement, misconduct, waste of resources and abuse of authority.”

Expected accomplishment (a) should read as follows: “Better protection of the Organization’s assets and resources and greater compliance with the Organization’s rules and regulations.”

Also on 23 December, the Assembly decided that the item on programme planning would remain for consideration at its resumed fifty-ninth (2005) session (decision 59/552).

Priority-setting

The Secretary-General submitted a May report [A/59/87], prepared in response to General Assembly resolution 58/268 [YUN 2003, p. 1430], which described the experience with priority-setting since the introduction of programme planning and budgeting in 1974, gave a brief historical background of matters related to its implementation and discussed a number of related issues. Annexed to the report were: a list of the designated priorities for the medium-term plan and related parts of the programme budget for 1998-2001 and 2002-2005; and a series of extracts on priority-setting from the Regulations and Rules Governing Programme Planning, the Programme Aspects of the Budget, the Monitoring of Implementation and the Methods of Evaluation [ST/SGB/2000/8].

According to the report, the system of priority-setting as a guide for focusing on issues considered by Member States as requiring specific attention and for allocating resources had encountered difficulties related to the structure of planning and budget documents as well as to questions of definition, criteria for designating priorities, political considerations, governance mechanisms, level of activity, unforeseen events and limited resources. While different criteria had been applied over the years, the problem was not how to implement the designated priorities but how to identify, agree upon and designate them, which was basically a political one. Moreover, the link between the designation of priorities and the level of resources was not always obvious, and technical budgetary issues unrelated to priority-setting for programmes could affect relative resource allocations. At the level of the programme budget, therefore, the determination of whether or not priorities established by Member States had been adequately reflected required careful scrutiny and analysis.

The Secretary-General recommended that the Assembly, taking into account the recommendations in resolution 58/269 [YUN 2003, p. 1395] and bearing in mind the most recent changes to the planning and budgeting process (see above), might wish to decide that priorities reflecting general trends of a broad sectoral nature would continue to be established for the strategic framework, on the recommendation of CPC; that the priorities in the budget outline would be in conformity with those contained in the strategic framework; and that both strategic framework and budget outline, once approved, would serve as the basis for the Secretary-General's proposed programme budget.

CPC [A/59/16] decided to continue consideration of the Secretary-General's report at its 2005 session and recommended that the Assembly defer its consideration of the report also to 2005.

Programme performance

In an April report [A/59/69] on the programme performance of the United Nations for the 2002-2003 biennium, the Secretary-General gave an overview of key results achieved, delivery of outputs, and resource utilization and proposals for strengthening results-based monitoring and reporting. Under the 2002-2003 programme budget, a total of 33,131 outputs had been committed for implementation, including 27,611 programmed outputs, 626 carried over from the previous biennium, 2,957 added by legislative bodies and 1,937 by the Secretariat. Of the total, 22,706 were implemented, 643 were postponed to the next biennium and 4,324 were terminated. The implementation rate for mandated outputs was 84 per cent, while the total rate was 85 per cent. Of the 27 budget sections, 17 achieved implementation rates of 90 per cent or higher; only two sections registered markedly below-average rates. The most important factor affecting implementation rates was the number of outputs terminated, with the Department of General Assembly and Conference Management and the Department of Disarmament Affairs having the largest absolute and relative number of terminations, namely, 1,139 and 1,051, respectively, accounting for 50.6 per cent of all outputs terminated by the Secretariat. Implementation utilized 530,693 work-months.

The Secretary-General said that, during the 2002-2003 biennium, results of the Organization's activities were demonstrated in areas that ranged from facilitating new international agreements in all priority areas, setting up reliable mechanisms for monitoring their implementation and assisting in enhancing national and regional capacities to translate them into reality, to developing stronger peacemaking, peacekeeping and peace-building capacity, providing humanitarian assistance, assisting in the development of economic and social policies and building capacity, and advising on policy choices in support of sustainable development and environmental protection. Furthermore, the robust and extensive use of information technology during the biennium had greatly improved programme performance.

The distinguishing feature of the overview of achievements was that, for the first time, the programme performance report followed the results-based-budgeting approach. Efforts to create a results-based culture resulted in greater awareness of the importance of tracking the progress of results as they materialized and in more streamlined monitoring and reporting procedures. However, the degree of acceptance and ownership of the results-based concept and of its mastery varied significantly between departments and offices.

One of the main challenges in preparing the report was finding an effective means of tackling deficiencies and weaknesses in expected accomplishments and achievement indicators formulated more than two years ago. That was achieved by invoking relevant supplementary evidence and encouraging departments and offices to factor in the results of relevant evaluations into their performance reporting. The lessons from that experience led to the establishment of performance measures for the indicators of achievement in the proposed 2004-2005 programme budget and were taken into account in the development of the 2006-2007 strategic framework (see p. 1400).

The experience during the biennium highlighted the crucial importance of programme managers taking ownership of the objectives, expected accomplishments and indicators of achievement, and motivating their staff to focus on results. It had become clear that multifaceted efforts to strengthen results-based performance management, monitoring and reporting were not resource-neutral. Conceptual development, improvement of methods, strengthening of data collection and continuous and thorough training in all aspects of that enterprise required investment at the level of departments and offices and at the central monitoring and reporting point.

CPC consideration. CPC [A/59/16] took note of the performance report, particularly its improved format and sharper focus on results. It recommended that the Assembly request the Secretary-General to continue to explore ways to streamline and modernize future performance reports, including through greater use of electronic documentation and support materials; improve the implementation of results-based budgeting and management of programmes, with increased emphasis on results; and provide support and guidance to all departments in managing for results, including the issuance of guidelines, handbooks or manuals for the monitoring and evaluation of work undertaken so as to determine its continued relevance, usefulness, efficiency and effectiveness. CPC also recommended that future reporting on programme performance be more closely aligned with the objectives, expected accomplishments and indicators of achievement. Noting the inclusion in the report of a list of subprogrammes under each programme with highlights of programme results and subsections on subprogramme accomplishments, CPC requested that the 2004-2005 performance report include in each section a brief description of challenges, obstacles and unmet goals in order to facilitate the evaluation of issues affecting programme performance.

Evaluation

OIOS report. In May [A/59/79], the Secretary-General transmitted to the General Assembly, through CPC, the report of the Office of Internal Oversight Services (OIOS) presenting an overview for 2002-2003 of the Secretariat's evaluation capacity and the application of evaluation findings in programme design and delivery and policy directives. It examined the progress in implementing action called for in the Secretary-General's 2002 report [YUN 2002, p. 1368] that envisaged a strengthened results-oriented evaluation and monitoring system to better measure the impact of the Organization's work. It described five specific actions under way in the Secretariat to define roles and responsibilities for monitoring and evaluation, and for developing a stronger evaluation capacity within its programmes. The review concluded that the Secretariat's evaluation capacity was sustained by reasonably sound institutional arrangements and evaluation practices which could nevertheless be improved in the short term.

In its conclusions and recommendations, OIOS stated that the strengthening of monitoring and evaluation envisaged by the Secretary-General should include addressing the following key issues by programme managers: ensuring that the organizational placement and arrangements for the evaluation function were revisited in each programme; establishing the practice of reviewing evaluation results by senior management; identifying resources for carrying out monitoring and evaluation functions in all sections of the proposed 2006-2007 programme budget; and ensuring the preparation of evaluation plans for each programme along with the 2006-2007 budget proposals. OIOS would issue guidelines on evaluation planning in conjunction with the 2006-2007 budget instructions and would lead the production of a glossary of evaluation terms to be used uniformly in the Secretariat.

To help managers and Member States assess results and use lessons learned when making decisions on future plans, a revised time line of activities had been developed to enhance the availability and use of programme and performance evaluation for planning and budgeting, which involved the preparation of preliminary performance assessments by programme managers in the last quarter of the biennium prior to formulating strategic frameworks at the end of the biennium. Programme managers should emphasize reliance on baselines, benchmarks, performance measures and other qualitative indicators in carrying out evaluation; formulate lessons learned based on evaluation findings; draw up action plans for follow-up on lessons learned, with concrete responsibilities and deadlines; incorporate lessons learned into training activities; and monitor the implementation of evaluation recommendations and assign accountability for it.

CPC consideration. CPC [A/59/16] requested OIOS to include in future in-depth and thematic evaluations and triennial reviews, a section on questions regarding which intergovernmental guidance and follow-up would be useful, focusing on practical and policy issues, the solution of which required cooperation between the Secretariat and intergovernmental bodies. It took note of actions identified in the report to define roles and responsibilities for monitoring and evaluation, and recommended that the action calling for the recruitment, selection and assessment of programme managers with monitoring and evaluation skills and for the development of a suitable training programme be considered at the Assembly's fifty-ninth (2004) session in the context of the agenda item on human resources management. It endorsed the suggestion on support from intergovernmental bodies.

CPC also recommended that the relevant programme of the proposed strategic framework be considered in conjunction with the corresponding section of the programme performance report; since that report covered a period of two bienniums prior to the biennium covered by the proposed strategic framework, the Secretariat should present updated information on the relevant parts of the performance report.

Other OIOS reports submitted to CPC by the Secretary-General included reports on: further development of topics for a pilot thematic evaluation [E/AC.51/2004/2]; in-depth evaluation of the programme on public administration, finance and development [E/AC.51/2004/3] (see p. 852); triennial review of the implementation of the recommendations made by CPC at its forty-first (2001) session on the in-depth evaluation of sustainable development [E/AC.51/2004/4] (see p. 833); and the triennial review of the implementation of CPC recommendations made at the same session on the in-depth evaluation of the population programme [E/AC.51/2004/5 & Corr.1] (see p. 1087).

CPC selected the theme "Political affairs" for its in-depth evaluation in 2006, and agreed that OIOS should undertake a thematic evaluation on the theme "Linkages between headquarters and field activities: a review of best practices for poverty eradication in the framework of the United Nations Millennium Declaration" [YUN 2000, p. 49].

Chapter III

United Nations staff

In 2004, the work of the International Civil Service Commission (ICSC), the body which examined and made recommendations on the conditions of service of the staff of the UN common system, was reviewed by the Panel on the Strengthening of the International Civil Service, appointed by the Secretary-General. The Panel made recommendations for improving the functioning of the Commission, including proposals for enhancing the consultative process, facilitating the selection of high-level experts to bring to the Commission a mix of knowledge and expertise and limiting the terms of office of its members and the length of its sessions.

The General Assembly, through ICSC, continued to review the conditions of service of staff of the UN common system. The Assembly adopted ICSC recommendations relating to the level of the education grant, paternity leave, the base/floor salary scale and the level of children's and secondary dependants' allowances. It took note of the progress made in the review of the pay and benefits system, and requested ICSC to enhance transparency and administrative simplicity in that system. The Assembly took note of the progress made in establishing the Senior Management Service and requested the Secretary-General to redesignate that Service to enhance the managerial capacity of senior staff. The Assembly expressed concern that only limited progress had been made towards the advancement of women in the UN common system.

The Secretary-General reported on: the conditions of service and compensation of members of the International Court of Justice, judges of the International Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia and the International Criminal Tribunal for Rwanda, and ad litem judges of both Tribunals; compensation of members of the United Nations Administrative Tribunal (UNAT); human resources management reform; improving gender distribution in the UN Secretariat; new contractual arrangements; staff composition; the use of consultants and individual contractors; recruitment of nationals of unrepresented and underrepresented Member States; the use of retired personnel; the improvement of the status of women in the UN system; special measures for protection from sexual exploitation and sexual abuse; updated information on threats against the safety and security of UN personnel; a strengthened and unified security management system for the United Nations; implementation of the 2003 recommendations of the Office of Internal Oversight Services (OIOS) on the Investment Management Services of the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Fund; standards of accommodation for air travel; the administration of justice in the Secretariat; the work and role of the Panels on Discrimination and Other Grievances; the work of the Joint Appeals Board; and the financial independence of UNAT. In cooperation with OIOS and the Joint Inspection Unit (JIU), the Secretary-General also reported on measures to prevent discrimination on the basis of nationality, race, gender, religion or language in the United Nations.

OIOS evaluated the implementation of Assembly provisions on human resources management, the availability in local labour markets of the skills for which international recruitment for the General Service category took place, and reported on the management review of the appeals process at the United Nations. JIU reported on the harmonization of the Statutes of UNAT and the International Labour Organization Administrative Tribunal.

To strengthen the safety and security of UN staff and associated humanitarian personnel, the Assembly called on all Governments and parties in complex humanitarian emergencies to cooperate fully with the United Nations to ensure the safe and unhindered access of humanitarian personnel in order to allow them to perform their task efficiently, and requested the Secretary-General to take the necessary measures to ensure full respect for the human rights, privileges and immunities of UN and other personnel carrying out activities in fulfilment of the mandate of a UN operation.

Conditions of service

International Civil Service Commission

The International Civil Service Commission (ICSC) continued to regulate and coordinate the conditions of service and the salaries and allowances of the UN common system. ICSC held its fifty-eighth (Paris, France, 29 March–16 April) and fifty-ninth (New York, 12–30 July) sessions, at which it considered, in addition to organizational matters, the conditions of service applicable to both Professional and General Service categories of staff, and those relating specifically to the Professional and higher categories and to the General Service and other locally recruited categories.

The deliberations, recommendations and decisions of ICSC on those matters were detailed in its thirtieth annual report to the General Assembly [A/59/30 (Vols. I & II)] (see sections below).

In a 12 October statement on the administrative and financial implications of ICSC decisions and recommendations for the 2004–2005 programme budget [A/59/429], the Secretary-General estimated the additional resulting requirements at $ 2,267,700, net of staff assessment.

On 21 October [A/59/522], the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions (ACABQ) recommended approval of the Secretary-General's recommendation to accommodate the estimated supplementary requirements from within the common staff costs provision in the 2004–2005 programme budget.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

The General Assembly, in section XII of resolution 59/276 of 23 December (see p. 1383), took note of the Secretary-General's statement, the recommendations contained in ICSC's report and the related ACABQ report.

Also on 23 December [meeting 76], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth (Administrative and Budgetary) Committee [A/59/647], adopted resolution 59/268 without vote [agenda item 116].

United Nations common system: report of the International Civil Service Commission

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 51/216 of 18 December 1996, 52/216 of 22 December 1997, 53/209 of 18 December 1998, 55/223 of 23 December 2000, 56/244 of 24 December 2001, 57/285 of 20 December 2002 and 58/251 of 23 December 2003,

Having considered the report of the International Civil Service Commission for 2004, the note by the Secretariat submitting the report of the Panel on the Strengthening of the International Civil Service and the note by the Secretary-General on the findings and recommendations of the Panel,

Reaffirming its commitment to a single, unified United Nations common system as the cornerstone for the regulation and coordination of the conditions of service of the United Nations common system,

Convinced that the common system constitutes the best instrument through which to secure staff with the highest standards of efficiency, competence and integity for the international civil service, as stipulated in the Charter of the United Nations,

Reaffirming the statute of the Commission and the central role of the Commission and the General Assembly in the regulation and coordination of the conditions of service of the United Nations common system,

Takes note of the report of the International Civil Service Commission for 2004;

I

Conditions of service applicable to both categories of staff

A. Review of the pay and benefits system

1. Notes the information provided on the pilot study on broad banding and pay-for-performance;

2. Also notes that if all three models of the pay-for-performance system were not tested, this could diminish the value of the pilot project and requests the Commission to keep this in mind in its further consideration of the issue, and encourages volunteering organizations to test all three models;

3. Recognizes that an effective and credible performance appraisal system is the key for the possible introduction of a pay-for-performance system, and requests the Commission to ensure that the performance appraisal systems in volunteer organizations are developed, in full consultation with staff members, and are clear, effective and credible for all the parties concerned, including Member States;

4. Looks forward to receiving from the Commission annual updates on the pilot studies on broad banding and pay-for-performance;

5. Decides that no new strategy or pilot project in broad banding or pay-for-performance should be undertaken until the General Assembly has had an opportunity to review the results of the pilot study on broad banding and pay-for-performance being conducted by the Commission;

6. Requests the Commission to report on the contemporary rationale for separate salary scales for single staff and those with dependants in the context of its report on pay and benefits review;

B. Contractual arrangements

Recalling section I.A, paragraph 4, of its resolution 57/285 of 20 December 2002,

Notes the intention of the Commission to submit to the General Assembly at its sixtieth session a final report on contractual arrangements;

C. Mobility and hardship allowance

Recalling section VI of its resolution 51/216 of 18 December 1996, section I.C of its resolution 55/223 of 23 December 2000, and section II.A, paragraph 7, of its resolution 57/285 of 20 December 2002,

1. Recognizes the work undertaken by the Commission in reviewing the current mobility and hardship scheme in the context of the pay and benefits review;

2. Takes note of the decision taken by the Commission in paragraph 137 of its annual report;

D. Hazard pay

Recalling sections I.D of its resolutions 57/285 of 20 December 2002 and 58/251 of 23 December 2003,

Takes note of the decision of the Commission contained in paragraph 147 of its annual report;

E. Review of the level of the education grant

Recalling section IV of its resolution 51/216 of 18 December 1996, section III.A of its resolution 52/216 of 22 December 1997 and section I.E of its resolution 57/285 of 20 December 2002,

1. Approves the increases in the maximum reimbursement levels for fifteen countries, as well as other recommendations in respect of the reimbursement of expenses under the education grant, as recommended by the Commission in paragraphs 166 (a) to (f) of its annual report;

2. Reiterates its request to the organizations of the common system to bring the matter of the payment of the education grant to staff members living in their own countries to the attention of their governing bodies, with a view to harmonizing the staff rules and regulations along the lines of those of the United Nations, and invites governing bodies to take the relevant actions;

3. Requests the Commission to inform the General Assembly at its sixtieth session as to the practices of other relevant civil services and international organizations concerning the provision of education grants;

F. Review of pensionable remuneration

Recalling section II, paragraph 6, of its resolution 51/217 of 18 December 1996,

Takes note of the decision of the Commission contained in paragraph 181 of its annual report;

G. Review of allowances

1. Requests the Commission, in reviewing and modernizing the system of grants and allowances, to attach priority to enhancing transparency and administrative simplicity;

2. Also requests the Commission to inform the General Assembly at its sixtieth session on which entities it uses as comparators for the determination of entitlements such as leave and allowances, and to advise the Assembly on the merits and disadvantages of applying as a point of departure the practices of the civil service of the country used as comparator for salary purposes;

H. Common scale of staff assessment

Recalling its resolution 51/216 of 18 December 1996, Takes note of the decision of the Commission contained in paragraph 188 of its annual report;

I. Paternity leave

Takes note of the decision contained in paragraph 211 of the annual report of the Commission, and confirms its recommendations to have paternity leave implemented throughout the common system within the parameters set forth in the report;

IIConditions of service of staff in the Professional and higher categories*A. Examination of the Noblemaire principle and its application

Recalling its resolution 44/198 of 21 December 1989 and other relevant resolutions,

1. Reaffirms the continuing application of the Noblemaire principle;

2. Also reaffirms the need to continue to ensure the competitiveness of the conditions of service of the United Nations common system;

3. Takes note of the decision of the Commission contained in paragraph 273 of its annual report;

B. Grade equivalencies between the United States federal civil service and the United Nations common system

Recalling section I.A of its resolution 50/208 of 23 December 1995, section II.B of its resolution 55/223 of 23 December 2000, and section I.A, paragraph 7, of its resolution 57/285 of 20 December 2002,

1. Takes note of the decision of the Commission contained in paragraph 276 of its annual report;

2. Requests the Commission to include the review of grade equivalency in the study to determine the highest paid civil service on its work programme for 2005–2006;

C. Evolution of the margin

Recalling section I.B of its resolution 51/216 of 18 December 1996 and the standing mandate from the General Assembly, in which the Commission is requested to continue its review of the relationship between the net remuneration of the United Nations staff in the Professional and higher categories in New York and that of the comparator civil service (the United States federal civil service) employees in comparable positions in Washington, D.C. (referred to as “the margin”),

1. Notes that the margin between net remuneration of the United Nations staff in grades P-1 to D-2 in New York and that of officials in comparable positions in the United States federal civil service in Washington, D.C. for the period from 1 January to 31 December 2004 is 110.3, as shown in annex V to the annual report of the Commission;

2. Reaffirms that the range of 110 to 120 for the margin between the net remuneration of officials in the Professional and higher categories of the United Nations in New York and the officials in comparable positions in the comparator civil service should continue to apply, on the understanding that the margin would be maintained at a level around the desirable midpoint of 115 over a period of time;

D. Base/floor salary scale

Recalling its resolution 44/198 of 21 December 1989, by which it established a floor net salary level for staff in the Professional and higher categories by reference to the corresponding base net salary levels of officials in comparable positions serving at the base city of the comparator civil service (the United States federal civil service),

Approves, with effect from 1 January 2005, as recommended by the Commission, the revised base scale of gross and net salaries for staff in the Professional and higher categories, as contained in annex VI to the annual report of the Commission;

E. Review of the level of children’s and secondary dependants’ allowances

Recalling section II.F of its resolution 47/216 of 23 December 1992,

Approves the recommendations of the Commission contained in paragraph 244 of its annual report;

IIIA. Senior Management Service

Recalling section I.A, paragraphs 5 and 6, of its resolution 57/285 of 20 December 2002,

1. Recalls that, in section I.A, paragraph 5, of its resolution 57/285 of 20 December 2002, it requested the Commission to review the proposal for the introduction of the Senior Management Service, as described in paragraph 80 of the annual report of the Commission, in view of its intention to consider the question at its fifty-eighth session;

2. Also recalls that the Commission requested the United Nations System Chief Executives Board for Coordination to keep it informed and to report appropriately about the related developmental work proceeding under the auspices of the Board;

3. Further recalls its decision 55/488 of 7 September 2001;

4. Reaffirms articles 9 and 10 of the statute of the Commission;

5. Recognizes that measures to improve management capacity and performance among senior staff are highly desirable;

6. Affirms that the Commission is the only body responsible for recommending to the General Assembly the establishment of a separate category of staff for the common system;

7. Requests the Commission to continue to monitor the project regarding the improvement of management capacity and performance among senior staff by the United Nations System Chief Executives Board for Coordination, and to advise and make recommendations to the General Assembly as appropriate;

8. Requests the Secretary-General, in his capacity as Chairman of the United Nations System Chief Executives Board for Coordination, to redesignate the Senior Management Service to reflect its character as a set of collaborative efforts to enhance the managerial capacity and performance of senior staff by respective executive heads and to report to the General Assembly at its sixtieth session, clarifying the scope and content of such efforts, for consideration and action if it deems it necessary;

B. Gender balance in the United Nations system

1. Notes with concern, as pointed out by the Commission with regard to the organizations of the United Nations common system, that the rate of advancement of women had slowed over the years and that only limited progress had been made;

2. Takes note of the decision of the Commission in paragraph 297 of its annual report, and requests it to provide information on the outcome of its consideration of the report on further progress in this field;

IV

Strengthening of the international civil service

Decides to revert to the consideration of the report of the Panel on the Strengthening of the International Civil Service and the recommendations therein and the note by the Secretary-General on the findings and recommendations of the Panel during the first part of its resumed fifty-ninth session.

Also on 23 December, the Assembly decided that the agenda item on the UN common system would remain for consideration during its resumed fifty-ninth (2005) session (decision 59/552).

Functioning of ICSC

Strengthening of ICSC

In response to General Assembly resolution 57/285 [YUN 2002, p. 1397], the Secretary-General, in June [A/59/153], submitted the report of the Panel on the Strengthening of the International Civil Service. The Panel, chaired by Mary Chinery-Hesse (Ghana), examined ways to further strengthen ICSC in the context of its statute, maximize its ability to support the Assembly in guiding the UN common system and enhance ICSC's contribution to modernizing and reinforcing the international civil service. The Panel found that the success of the reform efforts under way throughout the Organization to enhance its ability to deliver the programmes mandated by Member States depended largely on the performance of the international civil service. To improve the effectiveness of the service, the system had to be able to attract, develop, motivate and retain staff of the highest calibre from all regions of the world. The main challenges facing ICSC were: supporting the Assembly in leading the current change management process; and being a proactive partner with executive heads in the reform process. The Panel proposed, among its recommendations, strengthening ICSC's capacity as a source of technical expertise and policy advice, and reinforcing its collaboration with Member States, system organizations and the staff association. It recommended that the revised ICSC working methods be fully reflected in its rules of procedure annexed to the report, so as to formalize the consultative process in the establishment of its agenda, greater use be made of working groups to strengthen the relationship between consultative partners, the ICSC statute be strictly applied in respect of the qualifications and the process of consultations for membership in the Commission, as provided for in articles 3 and 4, and specific criteria be introduced, as set out in the annex to the report, to assist in focusing all phases of the selection process. Member States should take those requirements and criteria into full consideration when submitting and electing candidates, and the Secretary-General should draw on them to improve the consultative process and facilitate the selection of high-level experts in different management areas to bring the Commission an effective mix of expertise, knowledge and experience. The Panel also proposed that the Assembly limit ICSC appointments to two terms; each ICSC session be limited to a maximum of ten working days, while making greater use of informal working groups; a system of performance-based pay be introduced; the application of the Noblemaire principle be reviewed to determine the extent of the competitiveness of the common system; and action be taken by the Assembly to restore and preserve that competitiveness. Consultative partners should ensure greater cohesiveness in the organizations' contractual arrangements, and UN system organizations should use the various contractual arrangements for their intended purpose and avoid continual extension of short-term contracts for long periods. The Panel also recommend that the Commission's future work programme should place special emphasis on inter-agency mobility and ensure that effective incentives were in place; and that the Commission undertake a comprehensive reassessment of the compensation policy and incentives for service in difficult and hazardous conditions.

ICSC report. ICSC, in its comments on the report (see above), submitted in August [A/59/30 (Vol. II)], noted that, while many of the Panel's recommendations were in line with decisions adopted at its most recent sessions, others would weaken ICSC and the future of the international civil service. In particular, some recommendations seemed to be in direct contravention of ICSC's statute. ICSC considered that the Panel's report should have specifically addressed the ways in which ICSC should be strengthened to assist the Secretary-General and the Assembly in meeting their objective relative to the regulation and coordination of the conditions of service of the UN common system. In particular, ICSC objected to the Panel's recommendations on the criteria and process for the selection of ICSC members; the length of their term of office; the frequency and length of ICSC sessions; and the recommendations on enhancing ICSC's capacity to strengthen the international civil service.

Note of Secretary-General. The Secretary-General and the United Nations System Chief Executives Board for Coordination (CEB), in their comments on the Panel's report, submitted in October [A/59/399], stated that the broader recommendations of the Panel were in line with the reform process under way in most of the organizations of the system and related to policies and practices that were, for the most part, being addressed in varying degrees of priority in the Commission's work programme. In terms of the specific recommendations, they shared the Panel's assessment that recent practices adopted by the Commission, including the establishment of working groups, had proved helpful in improving the consultative process, but they were disappointed that ICSC saw no need to formalize those improvements. Concerning the Panel's recommendations on the criteria for the selection of ICSC members and the length of their term of office, the Secretary-General and CEB considered them crucial in reinforcing the Commission and its capacity to support the Assembly. The recommendation for limiting membership on the Commission to two terms should be acceptable to the Assembly, since it constituted an appropriate balance between continuity and the renewal and updating of expertise, experience and knowledge, as well as maximizing the independence of those who served. CEB welcomed the recommendation to limit the length of the annual sessions to 10 working days, and found the Panel's recommendations for strengthening the international civil service constructive, responsive to, and supportive of, the reforms under way in most organizations of the system. They agreed especially on the need for greater focus on performance in the determination of pay and, among other things, in strengthening managerial capacity, including through the development of a senior management service, and shared the Panel's concern about the erosion of some elements of conditions of employment. It welcomed the recommendation for a review of the Noblemaire principle. CEB made a number of recommendation for assisting the Assembly in its response to the recommendations of the Panel.

CEB consideration. The High-level Committee on Management (HLCM) of CEB, at its eighth session (Rome, 5-6 October) [CEB/2004/6], endorsed the Secretary-General's comments on the Panel's report (see above), and recommended to CEB members that they convey to ICSC its strong disappointment at ICSC's comments on the Panel's report and the expectation that the Assembly would respond positively to the Panel's key recommendations.

CEB, at its second regular session of 2004 (New York, 29-30 October) [CEB/2004/2], endorsed HLCM's conclusions.

Remuneration issues

Pursuant to the standing mandate in General Assembly resolutions 47/216 [YUN 1992, p. 1055] and 55/223 [YUN 2000, p. 1331], ICSC continued to review the relationship between the net remuneration of UN staff in the Professional and higher categories (grades P-1 to D-2) in New York, and that of the current comparator, the United States federal civil service employees in comparable positions in Washington, D.C. (referred to as the margin). In its 2004 report to the Assembly [A/59/30 (Vols. I & II)], ICSC noted that a net remuneration margin of 110.3 was forecast for 2004, based on existing grade equivalencies between United Nations and United States officials in comparable positions, as shown in annex V to its report. The actual year-to-year (2003-2004) gross increase for Washington D.C., taking into account the employment cost index and locality pay adjustment of the United States general schedule, was 4.42 per cent, effective 1 January 2004.

In view of the movement of the federal civil service salaries in the United States as from 1 January 2004, an adjustment of the UN common system's scale of 1.88 per cent would be necessary in 2005 in order to maintain the base/floor scale in line with the comparator. ICSC therefore recommended that the base/floor salary for the Professional and higher categories be increased to 1.88 per cent through standard consolidation procedures, on a no-loss/no-gain basis, with effect from 1 January 2005. ICSC decided to further study the possibility of lowering the level of the base/floor salary scale, with the remaining portion of salary provided through the post adjustment, to address the issue of duty stations that had no or very low post adjustment, as shown in annex VI to the report.

On the basis of the 1997 revised methodology for surveys of best prevailing conditions of employment at Headquarters and non-Headquarters duty stations [YUN 1997, p. 1453], ICSC conducted a survey of best prevailing conditions of service for General Service staff in Madrid, Spain, with a reference date of April 2004. The survey resulted in the recommendation of a new salary scale, as reproduced in annex VII to the ICSC report, and of revised rates for dependency allowances.

The Commission also reviewed the level of children's and secondary dependant's allowances (see p. 1414).

Noblemaire principle

In 2004, ICSC undertook an in-depth review of the Noblemaire principle and its application [A/59/30 (Vol. I)]. The last review was conducted in 1995 [YUN 1995, p. 1404]. The Commission acknowledged that the Noblemaire principle, intended to ensure the competitiveness of UN compensation and recruitment from all Member States, including the one with the highest-paid civil service, had served the organizations well and should not be set aside. ICSC should be considering how to make it continue to serve the common system, but needed more facts and analyses before it could determine whether the current application of the principle was effective. Repeating its view that salaries alone should not be used to measure whether the United Nations was a competitive employer, ICSC was of the opinion that the appropriate means of doing so was to evaluate recruitment and retention in organizations to identify difficulties in attracting and retaining highly qualified staff. In that regard, organizations had not responded to its repeated requests for such analyses over the past 10 years. ICSC decided to report to the General Assembly that, in applying the Noblemaire principle, its practice of using the highest-paid national civil service, combined with a reference check with international organizations, was sound. ICSC had on its work programme for 2005-2006 a study to determine the highest-paid civil service, including a total comparison between the United Nations and the United States federal civil service.

Grade equivalencies

In 2004, ICSC was informed of a number of changes in the UN common system and the United States federal civil service, requiring a re-examination of the procedure for determining grade equivalencies. The Commission decided that a grade equivalency study should be conducted for the revised structure of the comparator's Senior Executive Service, using two comparison methods: one which assigned a midpoint or average salary to all members of the United States Senior Executive Service positions; and the other which would link the common system grades with the comparator's performance-based Senior Executive Service salaries. The results of the study should be reported to the Commission in 2005. A grade equivalency study should also be conducted for all other comparator pay systems in 2005.

Common staff assessment scale

In accordance with a 1997 recommendation of the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Board for a biennial update of the common staff assessment scale for all staff categories for determining pensionable remuneration levels, ICSC, at its fifty-ninth session, examined tax changes at the duty stations concerned between 2001 and 2003 [A/59/30 (Vol. I)]. Having found that average taxes had increased or decreased only minimally at the relevant income levels during that period, ICSC recommended continued application of the current common scale of staff assessment, which should be reviewed during the next comprehensive review of pensionable remuneration, scheduled for 2005-2006.

Other remuneration issues

Conditions of service and compensation for non-Secretariat officials

Judges of ICJ and the international tribunals

Report of Secretary-General. In September [A/C.5/59/2 & Corr.1], the Secretary-General submitted a report on the conditions of service and compensation of members of the International Court of Justice (ICJ), judges of the International Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia (ICTY) and of the International Criminal Tribunal for Rwanda (ICTR), and ad litem judges for both Tribunals. The emoluments of the members of the Court and the judges of the Tribunals had remained at $160,000 since January 1999, while the consumer price index for the Netherlands had increased by 17.4 per cent for the period between then and May 2004 and during the past two years the United States dollar had lost, on average, 26.8 per cent against the euro. Accordingly, for 2004, the floor rate was frozen at the 2003 level. While the application of the floor/ceiling mechanism at the 2003 rates provided significant protection against the weakening United States dollar vis-à-vis the euro, it did not provide total protection and, in real terms, the salaries of the judges lost 4.35 per cent. In addition, the base salaries of staff at the Under-Secretary-General level were increased by 6.3 per cent. Accordingly, the Secretary-General proposed that Member States consider increasing the annual emoluments of the members of the Court, the judges of ICTY and ICTR and the ad litem judges from $160,000 to $177,000 (10.6 per cent), and that the same floor/ceiling mechanism should continue to be applied to the emoluments of the judges.

Based on the proposed increase in the base salary of ICJ members, it was recommended that pensions in payment be increased by 10.6 per cent, effective 1 January 2005. The Secretary-General was of the view that consideration be given to applying the floor/ceiling mechanism to pensions in payment to former judges and their survivors residing in euro zone countries to protect the level of pensions from further erosion as a result of the devaluation of the United States dollar vis-à-vis the euro.

The Secretary-General also proposed that the level of the education grant, including that for disabled children, approved by the General Assembly in resolution 57/285 [YUN 2002, p. 1397], and effective from the school year in progress on 1 January 2003, should be extended, under the same conditions, to members of the Court and judges of the Tribunals, as well any decision taken at the Assembly's fifty-ninth session to update the level of the grant and provisions regarding disabled children.

The Secretary-General proposed that no change be effected in the arrangements for ad hoc judges, and that any increase in the annual emoluments decided upon for ICJ members and the judges of the Tribunals be extended to the ad litem judges of the Tribunals, effective 1 January 2005.

The Secretary-General observed that, should the Assembly approve his proposals, the programme budget implications would amount to an estimated $2,320,600 for the 2004-2005 biennium, which would be reported in the context of the performance report.

ACABQ report. In November [A/59/557], ACABQ recommended that the annual salary of ICJ members be set at $177,000 effective 1 January 2005. The Secretary-General should be requested to make proposals for the future, taking into account the uncertainties with regard to the current system, as the cost of living did not fluctuate evenly at all places where the members of ICJ and judges of the Tribunals sat. ACABQ had no objection to the Secretary-General's proposals regarding the education grant (including that for disabled children) and retirement benefits. ACABQ recommended further elaboration of the proposal to apply a floor/ceiling mechanism to pensions in payment to former judges and their survivors, including other options for protecting those pensions. The results of such a review should be presented to the Assembly at its resumed fifty-ninth (2005) session.

On 23 December, the Assembly deferred until its resumed fifty-ninth (2005) session, consideration of the Secretary-General's report on the conditions of service and compensation for ICJ members and judges and ad litem judges of ICTY and ICTR and the related ACABQ report (decision 59/551).

Members of the UN Administrative Tribunal

Communication. In a letter to the Chairman of the Fifth Committee [A/C.5/58/16], the President of the United Nations Administrative Tribunal (UNAT) requested the Secretary-General to take whatever steps were deemed appropriate to provide remuneration to the members of UNAT equivalent to that received by the judges of the Administrative Tribunal of the International Labour Organization (ILOAT).

Note of Secretary-General. In October [A/C.5/59/12], the Secretary-General noted that should the General Assembly decide that UNAT members were to be compensated in a manner comparable to ILOAT judges, it might wish to consider honorariums as follows: the UNAT member drafting a judgment would receive $1,000; and the two members signing the judgment would receive $250 for each case. On the assumption that implementation would take effect from 1 January 2005, additional requirements of $210,000 would arise under section 8, Legal Affairs, of the 2004-2005 programme budget. (For more information on UNAT, see p. 1443.)

On 23 December, the Assembly deferred consideration of the letter of the President of UNAT to the Chairman of the Fifth Committee and the Secretary-General's note on compensation for officials other than Secretariat officials: members of UNAT, to its resumed fifty-ninth (2005) session (decision 59/551).

Dependency allowances

For its biennial review of dependency allowances for the Professional and higher categories, ICSC considered details of the percentage change required in the children's and secondary dependants' allowances based on changes in the tax abatement and social legislation for headquarters duty stations between 1 January 2002 and 1 January 2004 [A/59/30 (Vol. I)]. ICSC recommended to the General Assembly that, starting from the current review, those allowances should be determined on the basis of the value of tax abatements and social security payments in the countries of the eight headquarters duty stations, including Spain, and their current levels should remain unchanged. The current list of duty stations where the allowances were payable in local currencies should be maintained, pending a review of the methodology for determining them, and the dependency allowances payable to eligible common system staff be reduced by the amount of any direct payment received from Governments in respect of dependants.

Education grant

Based on the revised methodology for determining the education grant levels, endorsed by the General Assembly in resolution 52/216 [YUN 1997, p. 1454], ICSC reviewed the operation of the grant. It had before it a related study by the Human Resources Network, which analysed 12,799 claims for the academic year 2002/03 in the 17 individual countries/currency areas in which the grant was applied.

ICSC recommended to the Assembly that, in areas where education-related expenses were incurred in the euro (Austria, Belgium, Denmark, France, Germany, Ireland, Italy, the Netherlands, Spain and Sweden), Swiss francs, the Japanese yen, pounds sterling and United States dollars (inside and outside the United States), the levels of maximum admissible expenses and the maximum grant should be set as shown in table 1 of annex IV to its report [A/59/30 (Vol. I)]. Other recommendations were that the maximum amount of admissible expenses and the maximum grant should remain at the current level for the countries/currency areas of Finland and Norway; the flat rates for boarding to be taken into account within the maximum admissible educational expenses and the additional amounts for reimbursement of boarding costs over and above the maximum grant payable to staff members at designated duty stations should be revised as shown in table 2 of annex IV to its report; and the amount of the special education grant for each disabled child should be equal to 100 per cent of the revised amounts of the maximum allowable expenses for the regular grant. For China, Indonesia, Romania and the Russian Federation, organizations would be allowed to reimburse 75 per cent of actual expenses up to and not exceeding the level of maximum admissible expenses in force for the United States dollar area inside the United States. All of the foregoing measures would apply as from the school year in progress on 1 January 2005.

Paternity leave

ICSC, in its review of policies designed to reconcile work and family life responsibilities, considered proposals for establishing the duration of paternity leave, separate conditions for that entitlement and measures for dealing with exceptional circumstances [A/59/30 (Vol. I)]. The Commission in 2002 had agreed that paternity leave of reasonable duration could be introduced in the common system under a uniform policy, superseding existing paternity leave entitlements in those organizations that had already introduced them. At its 2004 session, the Commission decided that up to four weeks paid leave for paternity purposes should be granted to staff at headquarters and family duty stations and up to eight weeks for staff at non-family duty stations or in exceptional circumstances, such as incapacity or death of a mother, inadequate medical facilities or complications encountered at the time of pregnancy. Those provisions should supersede existing paternity leave arrangements, and the administrative details covering the management of paternity leave should be determined at the level of the organizations. It also decided that the provisions for adoption leave should not be subsumed under the provisions for paternity leave.

Mobility and hardship allowance

ICSC, in its ongoing review of the mobility and hardship scheme, approved in 1989 [YUN 1989, p.885] to compensate staff for service at difficult duty stations and to encourage operational mobility, was presented with a number of options for delinking the scheme from the annual adjustment procedure applied to the base/floor scale, in response to its request [YUN 2003, p. 1439] to its secretariat to present alternative approaches to compensation for mobility and hardship in the context of the ongoing review of pay and benefits. ICSC noted that, while cognizant of the General Assembly's concern at the increasing costs generated by linking the allowance to the base/floor salary scale, it could not consider the linkage in isolation, but together with all aspects of the mobility and hardship scheme and organizations' mobility and rotation policies and their effects on career development before it could take a meaningful decision regarding linkage. The Commission therefore decided that the mobility and hardship scheme should be examined in the context of the pay and benefits reform. In that context, it was of the opinion that the primary incentive for staff mobility was career advancement and that the management of the mobility scheme should be approached differently from the scheme that compensated hardship. Although hardship had been equated with mobility in the past, they were not equal elements, nor were they linked, contrary to the organizations' belief.

The Commission decided to separate the mobility element from the hardship element; delink both the mobility and hardship allowances from the base/floor salary scale; defer the implementation of those two decisions until a new system had been put into place; and establish a working group to develop options for compensating staff for service in hardship duty stations and for encouraging mobility, and to estimate the cost of those options, and submit recommendations to the Commission at its sixtieth (2005) session.

Lump-sum payments for relocation grant

CEB action. The High-level Committee on Management (HLCM) of CEB, at its eighth session (Rome, 5-6 October) [CEB/2004/6], considered the findings of the review of the pilot phase of the relocation grant, which confirmed that, overall, the lump sum scheme had proved to be an effective new approach to entitlement design and administration for organizations and staff alike. It had contributed to organizational effectiveness in meeting the critical challenge of moving staff quickly and efficiently to new duty stations; enhanced staff satisfaction and morale; met with positive feedback from human resources administrators and practitioners; and yielded a favourable cost-benefit ratio, particularly if indirect cost savings and intangible benefits were added to the direct cost calculations. HLCM endorsed the lump sum approach as an option for staff in those organizations who felt ready for its formal introduction, and encouraged each agency to report in 2005 to the Human Resources Network on its decisions and experience within their specific organizational context.

Hazard pay

Pursuant to General Assembly resolution 58/251 [YUN 2003, p. 1432], ICSC reviewed the terms for granting hazard pay—payment for employment under conditions where war or active hostilities prevailed and the evacuation of families and non-essential staff had taken place—for local staff. The Commission decided that the level of hazard pay granted to locally recruited staff should be increased to 25 per cent of the midpoint of the local salary scale and that the decision be implemented with effect from 1 June 2004.

Pensionable remuneration

As requested by the General Assembly in resolution 51/217 [YUN 1996, p. 1334], ICSC, in cooperation with the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Fund (UNJSPF), undertook a comprehensive review, originally scheduled for 2002, of the methodologies for determining the pensionable remuneration of staff in the Professional and higher categories, and for the adjustment of pensionable remuneration between comprehensive reviews [A/59/30 (Vol. I)]. The Chief Executive Officer of the Pension Board presented specific modalities for the review and a detailed timetable. The items considered by the Pension Board included: a non-pensionable component; double taxation; reverse application of the special index for pensioners (at high-tax locations); and the impact of steep devaluation of local currency and/or high inflation. In addition, the Board considered that income replacement ratios, United States/ United Nations pension benefit comparisons and the impact of the pay and benefits review on pension benefits also needed close attention in the review. The Board proposed a collaborative work schedule extending from the autumn and winter of 2004-2005 to the completion of joint ICSC/Pension Board recommendations to the Assembly in 2006. In the context of the review, the Board recommended a formal joint ICSC-Pension Board Working Group and a Contact Group to facilitate communication prior to the establishment of the Working Group.

ICSC concurred with the Pension Board's proposals with regard to the terms of reference of the Working Group and modalities for cooperation.

Other staff matters

Senior Management Service

CEB action. The High-level Committee on Management (HLCM) of CEB, at its seventh session (London, 8-9 March) [CEB/2004/3], considered the report of the Human Resources Network on the establishment of a Senior Management Service. The Service was intended to build managerial capacity throughout the UN system in order to improve organizational performance, and contribute to the creation of a common managerial culture. It would complement existing management development programmes in organizations and would not diminish the prerogative of executive heads to create posts or appoint staff. The implementation of the Service was ongoing and could be extended to include, among other things, the development of an assessment approach for movement of staff into and out of the Service, and models/frameworks for performance accountability contracts and other tools for organizations. HLCM recommended that CEB approve the establishment of a Senior Management Service in the UN common system. It requested all organizations to establish and implement such a service; the Human Resources Network to continue to refine the competency map and to develop a learning framework for a leadership and management development programme together with the United Nations System Staff College; and the CEB's secretariat to follow up and provide support to the creation of the Senior Management Service.

CEB, at its first regular session of 2004 (Vienna, 2-3 April) [CEB/2004/1] approved HLCM's recommendation to establish a Senior Management Service.

At its eighth session (Rome, 5-6 October) [CEB/2004/6], HLCM received an update from CEB's secretariat on the establishment of the Senior Management Service. A working group of the Human Resources Network was collaborating with the UN Staff System College to prepare the bid proposals for the design and delivery of the leadership development programme. An evaluation committee comprising the Staff College and Human Resources Network representatives would review the proposals received and make the final selection. It was hoped that the programme would be ready for delivery in the first half of 2005.

Personnel policies

Human resources management

The General Assembly, by decision 58/564 of 8 April, deferred to its fifty-ninth (2004) session consideration of the Secretary-General's reports on amendments to the 100 and 200 series of Staff Rules [YUN 2003, p. 1452] and on staff composition in 2003 [ibid., p. 1446]; the list of staff of the Secretariat for 2003 [A/C.5/58/L.13]; and notes by the Secretary-General transmitting the report of the Office of Internal Oversight Services (OIOS) on possible discrimination due to nationality, race, sex, religion and language in recruitment, promotion and placement and the comments of the Joint Inspection Unit (JIU) thereon [YUN 2002, p. 1406].

At its fifty-ninth session, in addition to those reports, the Assembly had before it the Secretary-General's reports on measures to prevent discrimination on the basis of nationality, race, sex, religion and language in the United Nations [A/59/211]; amendments to the Staff Rules [A/59/213 & Add.1]; consultants and individual contractors [A/59/217]; the employment of retired former staff [A/59/222]; human resources management reform [A/59/263]; new contractual arrangements [A/59/263/Add.1]; proposals to improve gender distribution in the Secretariat [A/59/263/Add.2]; improving the equitable geographic representation in the Secretariat to include the development of a more robust capability in the Office of Human Resources Management (OHRM) to enable it to reduce the level of underrepresentation and the number of unrepresented Member States [A/59/264]; staffing of field missions, including the use of the 300 and 100 series of appointments (see p. 105); the composition of the Secretariat [A/59/299]; and the improvement of the status of women in the UN system [A/59/357] and the related ACABQ report [A/59/446]. It also had before it notes by the Secretary-General transmitting OIOS reports on the audit of the policies and procedures for recruiting Department of Peacekeeping Operations (DPKO) staff (see p. 103), the follow-up audit of DPKO policies and procedures for recruiting international civilian staff for field missions (see p. 104), the impact of human resources management reform [A/59/253], as well as a study on the availability in local labour markets of the skills for which international recruitment for posts in the General Service category took place [A/59/388], and the views of the staff representatives of the Secretariat [A/C.5/59/4] and a JIU report on the management review of the Office of the High Commissioner for Human Rights (see p. 650) and the comments of the Secretary-General thereon (see p. 651).

Reports of Secretary-General. In response to General Assembly resolutions 57/305 [YUN 2003, p. 1440] and 57/300 [YUN 2002, p. 1353], the Secretary-General submitted an August report [A/59/263] on progress achieved in consolidating and expanding the human resources management reform programme, outlined in his 1997 [YUN 1997, p. 1390] and 2002 [YUN 2002, p. 1352] reports on UN reform, and some of the challenges faced in that process.

Significant progress was made in bringing about the changes envisioned in the integrated reform programme based on 10 key building blocks: human resources planning; streamlined rules and procedures; recruitment, placement and promotion; mobility; competencies and continuous learning; performance management; career development; conditions of service; contractual arrangements; and administration of justice. Follow-up activities were carried out on the actions set out in the Secretary-General's 2002 report that fell within the human resources management reform programme, including action on conditions of service in the field, expanding opportunities for General Service staff and HIV/AIDS.

According to the Secretary-General, major achievements included the introduction of a system of human resources planning providing workforce profiles and trends; streamlining of policies and rules and the launching of an electronic Human Resources Handbook; a new staff selection system, which, with its supporting electronic tool, Galaxy e-staffing, had speeded up the selection process, while improving efficiency and transparency; a policy on organizational mobility aimed at developing a more versatile, multiskilled and experienced international civil service; definition and strengthening of organizational core values and core and managerial competencies; promotion of continuous learning and strengthening of core organizational competencies, which included the development of a plan for enhancing opportunities for the General Service staff; an enhanced performance appraisal system; human resources monitoring; and greater attention to work and life issues.

Developing and implementing the reform initiatives had presented considerable challenges. A key area remaining to be addressed was that of contractual arrangements, for which the Secretary-General had made a number of proposals to the General Assembly (see below). Other areas needing attention were the continued disparity in conditions of service among Secretariat staff and those of other organizations serving in the field and the limited career prospects for General Service staff.

Human resources management reform necessitated a paradigm shift in underlying principles, attitudes and work methods, making some of the initiatives difficult to reconcile with the priorities of staff, managers and Member States. The reform was also affected by operational challenges, such as the lack of dedicated reform, and the difficulty of consulting staff representatives at a time when the consultative machinery was not fully operational.

The Organization's human resources management programme would continue to focus on ensuring that its policies and practices were fully in line with operational needs and worldwide standards of good practice. Special emphasis would be placed, in the coming years, on the implementation of the managed mobility policy; the strengthening of the staff selection system and performance management; further enhancement of management capacity; increased monitoring, particularly of delegated authority; improving OHRM's client orientation and communication with staff; and the improvement of its electronic tools and the introduction of new ones. There would be continuing close cooperation with other common system organizations and ICSC in developing and enhancing a competitive package of conditions of service.

On 1 October [A/C.5/59/4], the Secretary-General transmitted to the Fifth Committee the views of the staff representatives of the UN Secretariat.

OIOS report. As requested by the General Assembly in resolution 57/305 [YUN 2003, p. 1440], the Secretary-General submitted, in September [A/59/253], an OIOS report on the impact of human resources management reform. OIOS found that, although the reform had achieved significant success to date, including a decrease in the time to fill a vacancy and greater organizational focus on creating opportunities for staff mobility and career development, its potential impact was not yet fully realized. Though OHRM's initiatives had started a cultural change, staff and managers were not fully committed to the nature, scope and purpose of reform. As a result, there was inconsistent prioritization of responsibilities and accountability for people management. OIOS recommended that OHRM address that lack of confidence in the reform initiatives. An organizational focus on effective performance management and strategic planning, rather than compliance, would enhance the ultimate success of the OHRM's integrated policy framework. OHRM also needed to improve its ability to measure and monitor human resources indicators. Although the new staff selection system had significantly enhanced opportunities to apply and enlarge the pool of applicants, neither the quality of candidates nor career prospects for junior staff had improved. The effectiveness of central review bodies was diminished by a lack of information relevant to reviewing evaluations and proposals. The new mobility policy had yet to result in reduced vacancy rates at duty stations with chronic vacancy issues. The organizational culture needed to shift from a compliance perspective to promulgating mobility strategies that satisfied operational requirements and benefitted staff careers. OIOS recommendations included specific suggestions designed to build upon the policies, tools and infrastructure currently in place. In addition to proposals for shortening the recruitment process, developing proactive recruiting strategies, increasing capacity to assess operational needs and tracking indicators at the department/office and individual levels, OIOS suggested steps to increase staff and manager commitment to the most challenging aspects of reform: mobility and performance management.

ACABQ report. In an October report [A/59/446], ACABQ said that the Secretary-General's report on human resources management reform was rather general and lacking in analysis, particularly with regard to progress achieved in implementation, problems encountered and measures planned to redress them. That was particularly the case with the issue of compliance. Not enough attention was given to setting criteria to monitor the quality of decisions made by programme managers rather than merely quantifying mechanical adherence to procedures as measured by raw statistics. In that connection, ACABQ stressed the importance of monitoring and recalled that the Assembly, in resolution 57/305, had endorsed the development of a more robust monitoring capacity in OHRM. The Committee trusted that the sample monitoring template and a sample human resources action plan provided at its request would streamline the reporting process and make it more effective. The Committee was of the opinion that, to succeed, such broad human resources management reforms had to be accompanied by close staff/management cooperation and consultation. Noting that relations between the two over human resources management had broken down somewhat, ACABQ encouraged the Secretary-General and OHRM to take a fresh look at ways to involve staff meaningfully so as to take into account their concerns, and trusted that management and staff would make concerted efforts to work together constructively in the best interest of the Organization.

The Committee requested that statistics on the length of the placement process be quantified as a basis for analysing and correcting problems. ACABQ regretted that more progress had not been made in screening the increased number of applications for vacant positions since the introduction of the Galaxy system. It emphasized that, unless such problems were resolved, the effectiveness of Galaxy would be compromised and its cost-effectiveness called into question. It recommended approval of the Secretary-General's proposal to further shorten vacancy advertising from 60 to 45 days, with the understanding that paper copies of vacancy announcements would also be provided, and expected the widest possible timely circulation of those announcements so as to attract qualified personnel from unrepresented or underrepresented countries. Effective implementation of the roster management module in Galaxy, including automatic electronic notification of programme managers concerning eligible roster candidates, could shorten the recruitment timeline. As to succession planning, not enough was being done to initiate the process for filling vacancies in a timely manner and thus reduce the long period that posts remained vacant. For internal candidates, improvement had to be made to ensure the timely release of the successful candidate to his or her new function.

With regard to the examination for recruitment from the General Service to the Professional category (G-P) and the national competitive recruitment examination, ACABQ noted that the limited number of posts available pointed to a larger problem, namely, the very small number of entry level (P-1/P-2) Professional posts in the Secretariat. To resolve the problem, the issue of redressing the imbalance in the grading pyramid would first need to be addressed, and the G-P roster used to help fill posts at duty stations with chronically high vacancy rates. ACABQ called upon the Secretariat to review the efficacy of the procedure of having staff members serve on the examinations boards on a voluntary basis outside of their regular functions.

ACABQ encouraged the Secretary-General to continue his efforts towards achieving gender parity, including at the Under-Secretary-General and Assistant Secretary-General levels. Care had to be taken, however, to ensure that such efforts did not unduly affect the timely filling of vacancies and were in conformity with Article 101, paragraph 3, of the UN Charter.

The Committee also considered the Secretary-General's comprehensive report on the staffing for field missions, including the use of 300 and 100 series appointments (see p. 105), and made a number of recommendations (see p. 106).

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 23 December [meeting 76], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee [A/59/650], adopted resolution 59/266 without vote [agenda item 114].

Human resources management

The General Assembly,
Recalling Articles 8, 97, 100 and 101 of the Charter of the United Nations,

Recalling also its resolutions 49/222 A and B of 23 December 1994 and 20 July 1995, 51/226 of 3 April

1997, 52/219 of 22 December 1997, 52/252 of 8 September 1998, 53/221 of 7 April 1999, 55/258 of 14 June 2001, 57/305 of 15 April 2003 and 58/296 of 18 June 2004, as well as its other relevant resolutions and decisions,

Having considered the relevant reports on human resources management questions submitted to the General Assembly for its consideration and the related report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions,

I

Human resources management reform

1. Reaffirms the principles set out in sections I and II of its resolution 53/221 and section I of its resolution 55/258 concerning human resources management and the role of the Office of Human Resources Management of the Secretariat;

2. Affirms that the Office of Human Resources Management shall remain the central authority within the Secretariat for the interpretation and enforcement of the Staff Regulations and Rules, without prejudice to regulation 12.3;

3. Stresses the crucial importance of a transparent and timely flow of information from the Secretariat to Member States in matters related to human resources management reform;

4. Requests the Secretary-General in future reports on mandated human resources management reform to include full information on achievements and the impact of its implementation;

5. Stresses that any proposals for changes in the building blocks of reform should be accompanied by transparent information for Member States on those changes;

6. Recalls section VII of its resolution 55/258, in which the General Assembly, inter alia, requested the Secretary-General to ensure that well-designed mechanisms of accountability are put in place before delegating authority to programme managers;

7. Stresses the need to ensure that adequate mechanisms are in place to ensure the accountability of programme managers for the implementation of human resources policies and the achievement of objectives contained in human resources action plans;

8. Emphasizes that effective accountability mechanisms are an integral and essential element of human resources management reform, and requests the Secretary-General to strengthen such mechanisms throughout the Organization;

9. Requests the Secretary-General to continue to improve the effectiveness of human resources action plans for achieving the human resources objectives of the Organization, including with respect to equitable geographical distribution and gender representation, as mandated by the General Assembly, and further requests him to report thereon to the Assembly at its sixty-first session;

10. Also requests the Secretary-General to reconstitute the Accountability Panel so as to strengthen the internal system of accountability, including with respect to human resources policies and objectives, and to ensure that the Panel has the authority necessary to hold programme managers accountable for their performance in achieving the objectives contained in human resources action plans;

11. Stresses that the staff selection system must provide transparency and fairness;

12. Emphasizes the importance of the participation of staff representatives in the work of the central review bodies, and requests the Secretary-General and invites staff representatives to engage in a consultative process with a view to resuming the participation of staff representatives in the work of the central review bodies;

13. Requests the Secretary-General to make every effort to ensure that the central review bodies discharge fully and effectively their roles in the staff selection system, as foreseen in annex II to the report of the Secretary-General entitled "Human resources management reform" and subsequently approved by the General Assembly in its resolution 55/258, including by addressing the deficiencies identified in the report of the Office of Internal Oversight Services, and to make proposals to amend the terms of reference of the central review bodies as necessary in the light of experience;

14. Recalls its request to the Secretary-General contained in section II, paragraph 2, of its resolution 51/226, as reiterated in section IV, paragraph 10, of its resolution 53/221, section VII of its resolution 55/258 and section III of its resolution 57/305, to enhance managerial accountability with respect to human resources management decisions, including imposing sanctions in cases of demonstrated mismanagement of staff and wilful neglect of, or disregard for, established rules and procedures, while safeguarding the right of due process of all staff members, including managers, and requests the Secretary-General to report comprehensively thereon to it at its sixty-first session;

15. Requests the Secretary-General to continue his efforts, as described in paragraphs 130 to 132 of his report, to report to the General Assembly on the experiences gained in the implementation of such measures and to make additional proposals for action by the Assembly as appropriate;

16. Notes with concern paragraph 91 of the report of the Secretary-General, and requests the Secretary-General to reassess the situation;

II

Recruitment and placement

1. Requests the Secretary-General to ensure that the highest standards of efficiency, competence and integrity serve as the paramount consideration in the employment of staff, with due regard for the principle of equitable geographical distribution, in accordance with Article 101, paragraph 3, of the Charter of the United Nations;

2. Recognizes the value of a transparent process of recruitment, placement and promotion in the Organization;

3. Notes the proposal of the Secretary-General, on the recommendation of the Office of Internal Oversight Services, to reduce the time required for advertising a vacancy from 60 to 45 days, and decides to revert to this issue in the context of a comprehensive study addressing all factors contributing to the process of selection, recruitment and placement at its sixty-first session;

4. Requests the Secretary-General to continue his efforts to reduce the period required to fill vacancies by addressing all factors contributing to delays in the process of selection, recruitment and placement and to report thereon to the General Assembly at its sixty-first session;

5. Also requests the Secretary-General to continue to maintain a system of circulating printed copies of all vacancy announcements, in accordance with its resolution 57/305, for distribution to all delegations, except those which indicate otherwise;

6. Reaffirms the need to respect the equality of each of the two working languages of the Secretariat, reaffirms also the use of additional working languages in specific duty stations as mandated, and in this regard requests the Secretary-General to ensure that vacancy announcements specify the need for either of the working languages of the Secretariat unless the functions of the post require a specific working language;

7. Requests the Secretary-General to report on the definition of language posts to the General Assembly at its sixty-first session in the context of his report on the composition of the Secretariat;

8. Expresses its concern over the deficiencies in the recruitment of international civilian staff in peace-keeping missions as referred to by the Office of Internal Oversight Services in its report, and requests the Secretary-General to make efforts to rectify the situation and to report thereon to the General Assembly at its sixty-first session;

9. Notes with concern the range of weaknesses related to the Galaxy support tool identified by the Office of Internal Oversight Services in its report;

10. Requests the Secretary-General to fully develop the Galaxy support tool and make it more efficient and user-friendly for the purpose of efficient recruitment, as embodied in Article 101 of the Charter, and to ensure that all applicants are informed about the final result of their applications in a timely fashion;

11. Also requests the Secretary-General to ensure the conversion of all printed applications into electronic form upon their submission for inclusion in the Galaxy system and to ensure that those applications are considered in the filling of advertised vacancies, and to report thereon to the General Assembly at its sixty-first session;

12. Further requests the Secretary-General to continue to develop screening mechanisms that ensure that all applications submitted in the Galaxy system are treated fairly, that well-qualified candidates are given due consideration and that keywords outside of the vacancy announcements are not used to exclude well-qualified candidates;

13. Requests the Secretary-General to continue to take the steps necessary to ensure that Galaxy is available in both of the working languages of the Organization;

14. Reiterates its requests to the Secretary-General to inform Member States monthly, through the Internet, through the United Nations public web site and, upon request, in printed form of appointments made;

III

National competitive examination and General Service to Professional examination

1. Reiterates its decision that the recruitment of qualified staff from the General Service to the Professional category should be limited to the P-1 and P-2 levels and should be permitted for up to 10 per cent of the appointments at those levels;

2. Authorizes the Secretary-General to appoint to posts not subject to geographical distribution at the P-2 level up to seven successful candidates from the General Service to Professional examination each year;

3. Also authorizes the Secretary-General to appoint to P-2 posts in duty stations with chronically high vacancy rates up to three successful candidates from the General Service to Professional examination each year when no successful candidates from the national competitive examination are available;

4. Requests the Secretary-General to make special efforts to appoint to the relevant vacant posts in the Secretariat successful candidates from unrepresented and underrepresented Member States who have passed the national competitive examination;

5. Also requests the Secretary-General to ensure the expeditious placement in appropriate posts of as many candidates as feasible who have been placed on the roster following the successful completion of national competitive examinations;

6. Reiterates section II, paragraph 43, of its resolution 57/305, and requests the Secretary-General to apply strictly the relevant administrative instruction for recruitment at the P-3 level and to report thereon to the General Assembly at its sixty-first session;

IV

Measures to improve equitable geographical distribution

1. Notes with appreciation the progress made since 1994 in reducing the number of countries that are unrepresented and underrepresented;

2. Requests the Secretary-General to continue his ongoing efforts to attain equitable geographical distribution in the Secretariat and to ensure as wide a geographical distribution of staff as possible in all main departments and offices of the Secretariat;

3. Welcomes the continuing efforts of the Secretary-General to improve the situation of unrepresented and underrepresented Member States and of those in danger of becoming underrepresented under the system of desirable ranges;

4. Notes the low percentage of appointments of staff from unrepresented and underrepresented Member States to posts subject to geographical distribution in 2004;

5. Notes with concern the decline in the proportion of nationals of developing countries in posts at the senior and policy-making levels of the Secretariat;

6. Reiterates its request that the Secretary-General take all measures necessary to ensure, at the senior and policy-making levels of the Secretariat, equitable representation of Member States, especially those with inadequate representation at those levels, including unrepresented and underrepresented States, in particular developing countries, in accordance with the relevant resolutions of the General Assembly, and to continue to include relevant information thereon in all future reports on the composition of the Secretariat;

7. Notes that the system of geographic ranges was designed to apply to countries rather than regions or groups;

8. Recalls section II, paragraph 30, of its resolution 57/305, and reiterates its request that the Secretary-General include an analysis of the level of underrepresentation in his next report on the composition of the Secretariat;

9. Authorizes the Secretary-General, for a trial period of two years during which the procedures would be fully developed, to establish a special roster of candidates from unrepresented and underrepresented Member States, as proposed in paragraphs 21 and 22 of his report, for a number of posts at the P-4 and P-5 levels only, until such Member States are within the desirable ranges, and requests the Secretary-General to report thereon to the General Assembly at its sixty-first session;

10. Welcomes the practice of conducting recruitment missions to unrepresented and underrepresented Member States, and requests the Secretary-General to intensify those efforts in order to increase the number of recruits from those Member States after going through the regular recruitment procedures for advertised vacancies;

11. Reiterates its request contained in section II, paragraph 29, of its resolution 57/305 that the Secretary-General set specific targets as well as develop a programme for achieving equitable geographical representation;

12. Notes the number of overrepresented countries under the system of desirable ranges, and requests the Secretary-General to provide the General Assembly with analytical information on this issue in the framework of his report on the composition of the Secretariat;

13. Reaffirms that, in accordance with its resolutions 41/206 B of 11 December 1986, 53/221, 55/258 and 57/305, no post should be considered the exclusive preserve of any Member State or group of States, including at the highest levels, and reiterates its request that the Secretary-General ensure that, as a general rule, no national of a Member State succeeds a national of that State in a senior post and that there is no monopoly on senior posts by nationals of any State or group of States, and to report thereon to the General Assembly at its sixty-first session;

System of equitable geographical distribution

1. Reiterates its request that the Secretary-General, as approved in its resolution 42/220 A of 21 December 1987, fully reach the level of posts subject to geographical distribution, which currently stands at 2,783;

2. Also reiterates its request that the Secretary-General submit the report requested in section IX, paragraph 2, of its resolution 57/305, which will include an assessment of the issues related to possible changes in the number of posts subject to the system of geographical distribution, and requests the Secretary-General to submit the report to the General Assembly by the second part of its resumed fifty-ninth session;

3. Recalls section IX, paragraph 1, of its resolution 57/305, and decides to revert to this subject at its sixty-first session;

4. Requests the Board of Auditors to conduct an audit of the implementation of the principle of equitable geographical representation in the Secretariat at all levels, as set out in relevant resolutions of the General Assembly, and to verify the application of established measures of transparency and accountability at all levels of the selection, recruitment and placement process in compliance with relevant resolutions of the Assembly;

5. Also requests the Board of Auditors to submit its findings and recommendations to the General Assembly at its sixty-first session for consideration and action;

VI

Gender representation

1. Reaffirms the goal of 50/50 gender distribution in all categories of posts within the United Nations system, especially at the senior and policy-making levels, with full respect for the principle of equitable geographical distribution, in conformity with Article 101 of the Charter, and regrets that progress towards attaining this goal has been slow;

2. Expresses concern at the continuing low proportion of women in the Secretariat, in particular the low proportion among them of women from developing countries, especially at the senior levels, and stresses that the continuing lack of representation or underrepresentation of women from certain countries, in particular from developing countries, should be taken into account and that those women should be accorded equal opportunities in the recruitment process, in full conformity with relevant resolutions;

3. Notes with concern that, in posts subject to the system of desirable ranges, 26 women from developing countries were recruited between 1 July 2003 and 30 June 2004 among the 86 women appointed during that period;

4. Requests the Secretary-General to increase his efforts to attain and monitor the goal of gender parity in the Secretariat, in particular at senior levels, and in this context to ensure that women, especially those from developing countries and countries with economies in transition, are appropriately represented within the Secretariat, and to report thereon to the General Assembly at its sixty-first session;

5. Also requests the Secretary-General, in the context of attaining this goal, to develop and implement recruitment targets, time frames for meeting those targets and accountability measures;

6. Further requests the Secretary-General to clarify the role of departmental focal points, including in the context of the staff selection system, and their participation in the development and monitoring of the departmental human resource action plans;

7. Encourages Member States to support the efforts of the Secretary-General by identifying more women candidates and encouraging them to apply for appointment to positions in the Secretariat and by creating awareness among their nationals, particularly women, of vacancies in the Secretariat;

VII

Post structure

Requests the Secretary-General to make proposals to the General Assembly, as appropriate, to reform the post structure with a view to considering a possible increase in the proportion of P-2 and P-3 posts, taking advantage of the opportunity provided by the retirement of many senior staff in the coming years;

VIII

Mobility

1. Reaffirms section V of its resolution 55/258, as well as the segment on mobility contained in section II of its resolution 57/305, and notes its previous requests to the Secretary-General in this regard;

2. Stresses, in this regard, that when implementing mobility policies, the Secretary-General should ensure that:

(a) Mobility does not negatively affect the continuity and the quality of services and the institutional memory and capacity of the Organization;

(b) Mobility does not lead to the transfer or abolition of posts as a result of vacancies;

(c) Mobility has a positive impact in filling existing high vacancy rates at some United Nations duty stations and regional commissions;

(d) There is a clear differentiation between mobility within duty stations and mobility across duty stations and that the latter is a more important factor in career development;

(e) Mobility is encouraged for all posts in the Professional and higher categories;

3. Notes that the implementation of mobility policies, while recognizing their anticipated positive effects, may also give rise to problems and challenges that should be addressed;

4. Requests the Secretary-General to take the steps necessary to ensure that mobility is not used as an instrument of coercion against staff and to ensure that appropriate monitoring and accountability measures are in place;

5. Notes the measures to facilitate the implementation of mobility policies set out in paragraph 85 of the report of the Secretary-General, and requests the Secretary-General to develop a strategic plan with indicators, benchmarks, time lines and clear criteria for the implementation of mobility policies and to report thereon, including with information on the financial implications, to the General Assembly at its sixty-first session for its consideration and action in order to solve any problems;

6. Requests the Secretary-General to continue to consult with staff in the development of mobility policies;

7. Requests the International Civil Service Commission, within its mandate, to keep under review the question of mobility in the United Nations common system, including its implications for career development, and to make recommendations to the General Assembly, as appropriate, in the context of its annual reports;

8. Requests the Secretary-General to consider the use of incentives with a view to encouraging staff to move to duty stations with chronically high vacancy rates;

9. Reiterates section II, paragraph 51, of its resolution 57/305, in which the General Assembly encouraged the Secretary-General to expedite, as appropriate, agreements between the Secretariat and the United Nations funds and programmes and the specialized agencies for all staff levels in relation to mobility, and requests the Secretary-General to report thereon to the Assembly at its sixty-first session;

10. Invites host countries, as appropriate, to review their policies for granting work permits to spouses of United Nations staff;

11. Invites the Secretary-General to continue to explore ways of assisting spouses to find employment opportunities, in consultation with host Governments where necessary, including by taking measures to expedite the issuance of work permits;

12. Acknowledges that mobility needs to be supported through greater efforts to improve conditions of life and work at the various duty stations;

IX

Contractual arrangements

Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General on contractual arrangements, and decides to revert to the issue at its sixtieth session in the context of its consideration of the report of the International Civil Service Commission on contractual arrangements with a view to taking a decision;

X

Use of appointments under the 100 and 300 series of the Staff Rules in the staffing of field missions

1. Decides to continue to suspend the application of the four-year maximum limit for appointments of limited duration under the 300 series of the Staff Rules in peacekeeping operations until 30 June 2005;

2. Authorizes the Secretary-General, bearing in mind paragraph 1 above, to reappoint under the 100 series of the Staff Rules those mission staff whose service under 300-series contracts has reached the four-year limit by 31 December 2004 or later, pending a decision by the General Assembly, provided that their functions have been reviewed and found necessary and their performance has been confirmed as fully satisfactory, and requests him to report thereon to the General Assembly at the second part of its resumed fifty-ninth session;

3. Requests the Secretary-General to submit proposals for which functions are relevant for reappointment under the 100 series for consideration and action by the General Assembly at the second part of its resumed fifty-ninth session;

4. Also requests the Secretary-General to continue the practice of using 300 series contracts as the primary instrument for the appointment of new mission staff, pending a decision by the General Assembly on the report requested above;

5. Requests the International Civil Service Commission, as a matter of high priority, to review the contractual instruments available for the employment of common system staff in the field, including the practice of conversion to the 100 series from other contractual arrangements, and requests the Commission to present an analysis to the General Assembly at its sixty-first session of the desirability and feasibility of harmonizing conditions of service in the field, including at non-family duty stations, and to provide full details of the financial implications;

6. Requests the Secretary-General to submit to the General Assembly at its sixty-first session a comprehensive report with proposals for conditions of field service addressing, inter alia, the feasibility and desirability of conditions of service distinct to peacekeeping operations and the feasibility and desirability of harmonized conditions of field service in the United Nations;

7. Recognizes the authority of the Secretary-General to assign and deploy staff according to the operational needs of the Organization, and requests him to limit the assignment of staff, in particular General Service staff, from Headquarters and other established offices to field missions unless required by operational necessity or the unavailability of requisite skills in local labour markets;

XIConsultants and individual contractors

1. Endorses the observations and recommendations of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions contained in paragraphs 59 to 61 of its report, and requests the Secretary-General to report to the General Assembly at its sixty-first session on the use of consultants and individual contractors, including actions taken to improve the monitoring capacity of the Office of Human Resources Management on this issue;

2. Reaffirms that consultants shall not perform functions of staff members of the Organization or have any representative or supervisory responsibility;

3. Reiterates that the Secretary-General should refrain from using consultants to carry out functions assigned to established posts and that consultants should be hired only in strict accordance with existing rules and relevant General Assembly resolutions and where expertise is not available within the Organization;

4. Also reiterates that in areas where consultants are frequently hired for a period of more than one year, the Secretary-General should submit proposals, where necessary, for the establishment of posts and should report thereon to the General Assembly at its sixty-first session;

XIIEmployment of retired former staff

1. Notes with concern the increased use of retired former staff members in substantive areas and in decision-making positions;

2. Also notes with concern that the lack of proper succession planning has a negative impact on the rejuvenation of the Organization and on attaining core human resources targets;

3. Endorses the views expressed by the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions in paragraphs 63 and 65 of its report;

4. Reiterates its request to the Secretary-General to ensure that the employment of retired former staff has no adverse effects on the career planning and mobility of other United Nations staff members;

5. Requests the Secretary-General to have recourse to the employment of retired former staff only if the operational requirements of the Organization cannot be met by existing staff;

6. Stresses that the hiring of retired former staff should be on an exceptional basis, and in this regard encourages the Secretary-General to fill vacant posts at senior and decision-making levels through the established staff selection process;

7. Requests the Secretary-General to report to the General Assembly at its sixty-first session on the use of retired former staff and to develop clear criteria for the selection of the retired former staff, in particular in the Professional category;

XIIIStudy of availability of skills in local labour markets

Having considered the report of the Office of Internal Oversight Services on the availability in local labour markets of the skills for which international recruitment for General Service staff takes place,

1. Requests the Secretary-General to conduct a study on the availability of skills in local labour markets for which international recruitment for General Service staff takes place and, drawing on the findings, to reassess the determination made in 1975 that recruitment from outside the area of the duty station is necessary to staff the text-processing units, bearing in mind the need for the highest standards of quality relevant to the language function, and to report to the General Assembly at its sixtieth session;

2. Decides to revert to its consideration of the issue and of the report of the Office of Internal Oversight Services at its sixtieth session in the context of its consideration of the report requested in paragraph 1 above;

XIVOffice of the United Nations*High Commissioner for Human Rights

1. Welcomes the report of the Joint Inspection Unit on its management review of the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights, and notes the observations of the Secretary-General on the report and the actions of the Office to implement the recommendations of the Joint Inspection Unit;

2. Emphasizes that recruitment in the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights should be done in full consultation with and under the guidance of the Office of Human Resources Management, consistent with the provisions of the present resolution and other relevant legislative mandates;

3. Notes that the Joint Inspection Unit will submit a follow-up report on this issue to the General Assembly at its sixty-first session for consideration under relevant agenda items;

XVMeasures to prevent discrimination

1. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General on measures to prevent discrimination on the basis of nationality, race, gender, religion or language in the United Nations, and requests him to develop further measures, as necessary, in cooperation with the Office of Internal Oversight Services and the Joint Inspection Unit, to prevent such discrimination, in accordance with the principles of the Charter and the provisions of the Staff Regulations and Rules of the United Nations, and to report thereon to the General Assembly at its sixty-first session;

2. Decides to revert to the consideration of the report of the Secretary-General in the context of the agenda item entitled "Administration of justice at the United Nations" during the first part of its resumed fifty-ninth session;

XVIStaff-management consultations

1. Takes note of the views expressed by staff representatives in the Fifth Committee, stresses the importance of a meaningful dialogue on human resources management issues between staff and management, and calls upon both parties to intensify efforts to overcome differences and to resume the consultative process;

2. Reiterates its requests that the Secretary-General take into account the views of staff representatives, in accordance with article VIII of the Staff Regulations and Rules and resolution 35/213 of 17 December 1980;

XVII Other matters

1. Stresses that all administrative issuances of the Secretary-General related to the implementation of resolutions and decisions of the General Assembly shall be in full compliance with such resolutions and decisions and shall be reported to the Assembly in conformity with the established regulations, rules and procedures;

2. Reaffirms that, in accordance with staff regulation 1.2, staff members shall not be actively associated with the management of, or hold a financial interest in, any profit-making, business or other concern if it were possible for the staff member or the profit-making, business or other concern to benefit from such association or financial interest by reason of his or her position with the United Nations;

XVIII Reporting

Requests the Secretary-General to submit to the General Assembly for consideration at its sixty-first session consolidated reports, as appropriate, on the results of the implementation of the present resolution.

On 23 December, the Assembly decided that the agenda item on human resources management would remain for consideration during its resumed fifty-ninth (2005) session (decision 59/552).

Pay and benefits system

ICSC, in its ongoing review of the UN pay and benefits system, reviewed the status of the pilot study on broadbanding and pay-for-performance, decided on in 2003 [YUN 2003, p. 1445]. It agreed that the study should commence on 1 July 2004 for a three-year period, and include four volunteer bodies (the World Food Programme, the International Fund for Agricultural Development, the Joint United Nations Programme on HIV/AIDS, and the United Nations Development Programme). It later agreed to include the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization's International Centre for Theoretical Physics as of 1 July 2005.

ICSC commenced its comprehensive review of the allowances and benefits payable in the UN common system, with a review of the education grant, and the mobility and hardship scheme. The Commission noted that since several of the allowances and benefits were linked, it would prefer to look at those together, and decided on a schedule for considering the allowances and benefits in related groupings.

Regarding the implications of the enlargement of the European Union (EU) on the operation of the mobility and hardship scheme and on the post adjustment system, ICSC decided that, for post adjustment purposes, the 10 countries joining the EU on 1 May 2004 (Cyprus, Czech Republic, Estonia, Hungary, Latvia, Lithuania, Malta, Poland, Slovakia and Slovenia) should be considered as Group I duty stations, starting with the implementation of new place-to-place surveys; those surveys should be conducted in 2004 for all 10 countries; organizations should start paying salaries for staff in the Professional and higher categories in local currencies, starting with the implementation of new place-to-place surveys for respective duty stations; a modification of the rental subsidy scheme corresponding to Group I duty stations should be introduced at the time of the implementation of new place-to-place surveys; the change from "A" to "H" in the classification of those duty stations under the mobility and hardship scheme should be applied with effect from 1 January 2005.

Contractual arrangements

ICSC consideration. As requested by ICSC [YUN 2003, p. 1445], its secretariat submitted a model for three contractual categories (continuing appointments, fixed-term appointments and temporary appointments) proposed in 2003 [ibid.], among the ever increasing types of contracts used in UN system organizations, including details on conditions of employment such as: duration of tenure; mobility requirements; probationary period; procedures for progression to other contract types; the compensation package; social security and health insurance provisions; and conditions for extension and/or termination.

ICSC, noting that significant progress had been made in categorizing contracts across organizations, decided to report to the General Assembly that there was a model within which to apply some definition to the varying contractual arrangements across the UN common system. It requested its secretariat to refine the model and to provide a revised version, as well as information on the distribution of all staff in the organizations by contractual category to ICSC, and a final report to the Assembly, all in 2005.

Report of Secretary-General. In accordance with Assembly resolution 57/305 [YUN 2003, p. 1440], the Secretary-General submitted, in September [A/59/263/Add.1], definitive proposals on new contractual arrangements for simplifying the existing system through the use of only three types of appointments for all Secretariat functions, departments, duty stations and field missions: a short-term appointment, up to a maximum of six months, for staff appointed to meet seasonal or peak workloads and specific short-term requirements; a fixed-term appointment, which could be renewed or extended to cover a maximum period of five years and during which time, staff members' performance and competencies would be thoroughly assessed; and a continuing appointment which, subject to the needs of service, would be granted to staff members who had served on fixed terms for five years, provided they had demonstrated adherence to the highest standards of efficiency, competence and integrity required by the UN Charter. Annex II to the report contained proposed amendments to the Staff Regulations and to the 100 series of the Staff Rules that would be necessary to implement the proposal.

The Secretary-General stated that the replacement of permanent appointments by continuing appointments would allow greater weight to be given to the needs of the Organization when an appointment was terminated, greatly assist the Secretary-General in his determination to enhance staff mobility, which was a major goal of his reform of human resources management, and remove the perception that there was a privileged group of staff in the Organization. Conversion to continuing appointment after five years of service on fixed-term appointments with the Organization, subject to performance and the continued needs of the service, would also be in the interest of the staff at large as it would ensure equal treatment.

To protect the acquired rights of staff in service at the time the amended regulations and rules came into force, there would be no change to the contractual status of staff with a permanent appointment, and those already serving on a probationary appointment would retain the right to a permanent appointment at the end of their probationary period. No new probationary appointment would be given after the effective date of the amended regulations and rules, and there would be a one-time review of staff members appointed under the 100 series of the Staff Rules for consideration of conversion of their contracts to permanent appointment. In order for the contracts to be converted, staff members would have to meet certain conditions, such as five years of continuous service on fixed-term appointments and outstanding performance.

The Secretary-General invited the Assembly to approve the proposal and the proposed amendments to the Staff Regulations contained in annex II to his report, and to take note of the proposed amendments to the 100 series of the Staff Rules also contained in annex II.

ACABQ report. ACABQ, in October [A/59/446], said that, should the Assembly approve those changes, care should be taken to handle the interim arrangements in an equitable and sensitive manner, with measures in place to ensure the application of objective criteria in considering conversions of probationary and fixed-term contracts into permanent appointments for eligible staff. The Committee welcomed the intention of the Secretariat to ensure that all options for placing staff would be considered carefully before termination was decided upon.

Measures to improve mobility

The Secretary-General, in his August report on progress in implementing human resources management reform in the United Nations [A/59/263], stated that the mobility policy, applied to all staff from G-5 to D-2, had been established as an integral part of the staff selection system. It set limits to post occupancy, as at 1 May 2002, of either five years up to the P-5 level or six above that level, and established minimum post occupancy of two years, or one year after a prior lateral move. The new policy linked mobility to career development, requiring two lateral moves before promotion to the P-5 level. All staff recruited at the P-2 level were required to serve in two different functions within their first five years of service. Over 100 staff at that level had moved successfully through the two mandatory managed reassignment exercises and five voluntary exercises held to date. An implementation plan leading up to the time of the first expiration of post occupancy limits in 2007 or 2008 was developed, which envisaged several pilot voluntary managed reassignment exercises prior to 2007. Starting in May 2007, mandatory managed reassignment exercises would be conducted to facilitate lateral moves of staff whose post occupancy deadlines had expired. There was clearly some resistance to the idea on the part of some staff and managers, but changing a culture and a mindset could only happen over time, and the experience with staff at the P-2 level was encouraging. Measures were being taken to inform and support staff and to ensure the maintenance of continuity, quality of service and institutional memory, through the implementation of knowledge management practices.

ACABQ, in its October report [A/59/446], requested the Secretary-General to pursue the development and implementation of the managed reassignment programmes for entry level and other staff and to budget the required posts accordingly. In his next report on human resources management, he should report on the concerns raised by the Assembly in resolutions 51/226, 53/221 [YUN 1999, p. 1324], 55/258 [YUN 2001, p. 1337] and 57/305 [YUN 2003, p. 1440], and address the financial implications of the reassignment programme. In particular, ACABQ pointed to the need to ensure that mobility would not be used as an instrument of coercion against staff, to recognize the difference between movement within a duty station and mobility across duty stations, and to ensure that lateral mobility would not negatively affect the continuity and quality of the services required for the implementation of mandated programmes and activities. The Committee also reiterated its view that staff members requested by the Organization to remain on mission assignment, whatever the period of time, should be guaranteed the ability to return to a job in their occupational network and duty station.

HLCM, at its seventh session (London, 8-9 March) [CEB/2004/3], considered measures to improve system-wide mobility, including the progress report on inter-agency mobility of the Working Group on Mobility. It requested the CEB secretariat, through a questionnaire-based exercise, to determine the baseline for organizations to increase or facilitate inter-agency mobility and to present its findings, in the form of a matrix, at its fall session.

At its eighth session (Rome, 5-6 October) [CEB/2004/6], HLCM approved the inter-agency mobility accord presented by the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations (FAO) on behalf of the Working Group on Mobility and requested the CEB secretariat, in consultation with the Human Resources Network, to refine it and ensure its timely finalization. HLCM also considered the results of the questionnaire-based exercise it had requested in March. Noting that interorganizational mobility remained limited, HLCM encouraged organizations to promote it through suitable policies, practices and systems. It requested that the CEB secretariat undertake a follow-up survey to the baseline in early 2007.

Family status

CEB consideration. HLCM, at its seventh session (London, 8-9 March) [CEB/2004/3], reached general agreement on principles with respect to the recognition of marriage and domestic partnerships, as part of the measures to improve mobility (see above). Those included: family status for the purpose of entitlements determined by reference to the law of nationality of the staff member concerned; a marriage recognized as valid under the law of the country of nationality of a staff member would qualify that staff member to receive the entitlements provided for eligible family members; and a legally recognized domestic partnership contracted by a staff member under the laws of the country of his or her nationality would qualify the staff member to receive the entitlements provided for eligible family members. Each organization would implement the principles, having regard to its own circumstances and requirements. Organizations would also share information, through the High Level Committee on Management Human Resources Network, on the issue. HLCM requested CEB's secretariat to consult with the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Fund secretariat on the implementation of that policy by the Fund.

CEB, at its first regular session for 2004 (Vienna, 2-3 April) [CEB/2004/1], noted the general principles on domestic partnerships submitted by HLCM, and requested the Committee to inform it in 2005 on developments in that regard, including the decision to be adopted by the General Assembly (see below), relevant outcomes of agency governing bodies, the experience of organizations applying the policy, and other implications.

Secretary-General's bulletin. The Assembly, at its resumed fifty-eighth session in April, had before it a bulletin by the Secretary-General on family status for purposes of United Nations entitlements [ST/SGB/2004/4]. Some Member States expressed concern with paragraph 4 of the bulletin, which noted that a legally recognized domestic partnership contracted by a staff member under the law of the country of his or her nationality would also qualify that staff member to receive the entitlements provided for eligible family members.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 8 April [meeting 83], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee [A/58/750], adopted resolution 58/285 without vote [agenda item 127].

Human resources management

The General Assembly,

Reaffirming the Charter of the United Nations, in particular Articles 101 and 97,

Reaffirming also the Staff Regulations and Rules of the United Nations,

Reaffirming further the prerogative of Member States to supplement or amend the Staff Regulations, in accordance with regulation 12.1,

Reaffirming that the Secretary-General, as the Chief Administrative Officer of the Organization, shall provide and enforce staff rules consistent with the broad principles of personnel policy for the staffing and administration of the Secretariat,

Reaffirming also that all provisional rules and/or amendments to the Staff Rules should be consistent with the intent and purposes of the Staff Regulations and should be reported to the General Assembly in accordance with regulation 12.3,

1. Notes the practice in the Organization of determining personal status for the purpose of entitlements as are set out in the Staff Regulations and Rules of the United Nations by reference to the law of nationality of the staff member concerned;

2. Invites the Secretary-General to reissue Secretary-General's bulletin ST/SGB/2004/4 after reviewing its contents, taking into account the views and concerns expressed by Member States thereon;

3. Notes the absence of the terms referred to in paragraph 4 of the bulletin in the context of the existing Staff Regulations and Rules, and decides that the inclusion of those terms shall require the consideration of and necessary action by the General Assembly.

Staff composition

In an August annual report on the UN Secretariat's staff composition [A/59/299], the Secretary-General updated information on the demographic characteristics of the Secretariat's staff and on the system of desirable ranges for geographical distribution. As at 30 June 2004, Secretariat staff numbered 14,823, some 259 less than at 30 June 2003. Of that total, 5,325 were in the Professional and higher categories, 8,623 were in the General Service and related categories and 875 were project personnel; 7,602 were paid from the regular budget and 7,221 from extrabudgetary sources. Staff in posts subject to geographical distribution numbered 2,515, of whom 1,063 (42.3 per cent) were female. Fifteen Member States were unrepresented in all staff categories, while 10 were underrepresented, compared to 17 and 10, respectively, in 2003. Appointments to posts subject to geographical distribution between 1 July 2003 and 30 June 2004 totalled 208. Of those, 12 (5.8 per cent) were nationals of underrepresented Member States, 136 (65.4 per cent) of within-range Member States, and 60 (28.8 per cent) of overrepresented Member States. Changes in representation status resulted from appointments or separation from service, adjustments to desirable ranges, owing to an increase or decrease in the number of posts subject to geographical distribution, changes in the number of Member States, scale of assessments, population of Member States and status of individual staff members.

The report also gave information on the demographic profile of Secretariat staff, staff movement from 1 July 2003 to 30 June 2004, and forecasts of anticipated retirements between 2004 and 2008.

Equitable geographical representation

Report of Secretary-General. In response to General Assembly resolutions 57/305 [YUN 2003, p. 1440] and 58/270 [YUN 2003, p. 1399], the Secretary-General submitted an August report [A/59/264] on progress made in the recruitment of nationals of unrepresented and underrepresented Member States from June 1994 to June 2004. The number of unrepresented Member States declined from 28 in 1994, to 15 in 2004, while the number of underrepresented Member States decreased from 25 in 1994 to 10 in 2004. However, of the 28 unrepresented Member States in June 1994, five continued to be unrepresented (Brunei Darussalam, Marshall Islands, Monaco, Sao Tome and Principe and Turkmenistan), and of the 25 underrepresented Member States in June 1994, three were currently still underrepresented (Japan, Norway and Saudi Arabia). For posts subject to geographical distribution, on average, 22 per cent, or more than one of every five recruitments, had been from an unrepresented or underrepresented Member State. Of the 534 successful national competitive examination candidates recruited over the past 10 years, 141 were from those States, reflecting a significant increase in both the number of Member States participating in the examination and in the number of candidates convoked to sit it. The OHRM human resources action plans, which included targets for the improvement of equitable geographical representation, had also contributed to the improved situation. To further improve representation, the Secretariat proposed the introduction of a fast-track recruitment procedure for candidates from unrepresented and underrepresented Member States to posts at the P-4 level and above in line with the overall principles and procedures of the staff selection system. The procedure would include targeted recruitment campaigns in partnership with departments and concerned Member States. OHRM proposed that relevant permanent missions should identify focal points with which the Secretariat would work on increasing their representation. A focal point was being established in OHRM for the systematic development and implementation of strategies to pursue the recruitment of candidates from unrepresented and underrepresented Member States at the P-5 level.

ACABQ report. In October [A/59/446], ACABQ expressed the hope that the measures that were being taken to improve equitable geographical representation would be pursued vigorously and would have concrete results.

Status of women

ICSC consideration. Under its standing mandate to review the status of women in the organizations of the common system, ICSC, at its fifty-ninth session [A/59/30 (Vol. I)], reviewed a statistical report submitted by its secretariat on gender balance at all levels in the common system organizations, including with regard to ungraded officials. ICSC expressed disappointment that the rate in the advancement of women had slowed over the years and that only limited progress had been made. It requested its secretariat to report on further progress in 2006, including information on the representation of women by region and on organizations' gender plans and their development, implementation and effectiveness.

Reports of Secretary-General. In response to General Assembly resolution 57/305 [YUN 2003, p. 1440], the Secretary-General submitted a September report [A/59/263/Add.2] on improving gender distribution in the UN Secretariat. The report complemented the Secretary-General's report on the improvement of the status of women in the UN system (see below). As at 30 June 2004, women comprised 37.4 per cent of staff in the Professional and higher categories with appointments of one year or more, a 1.7 per cent increase over the previous year, and the highest annual change since 1998. They also accounted for 42.5 per cent of recruitments into the Professional category between 1 July 2003 and 30 June 2004, with 37.7 per cent at the Director level; and 47.2 per cent of promotions, with 47.5 per cent at the Director level. The goal of gender parity had been achieved at the junior Professional level and in the General Service category. As at 30 June 2004, 50.8 per cent of staff at the P-2 level were women and 62.1 per cent in the General Service category. The Secretary-General was committed to ensuring that the progress achieved would not be eroded by the separation from the Organization of women staff members, particularly in the next five years (2004-2008), when, 1,689 staff members of the current workforce (14.6 per cent), or one of every three retirements in the Professional and higher categories (697) and more than one of every two in the General Service and related categories (992) would be a female staff member. That would be an opportunity to increase recruitment of women candidates.

Efforts to improve gender distribution had focused on increasing the number of women recruited, promoted and placed; raising gender sensitivity among programme managers and the staff at large; providing appropriate work/life policies to attract and retain staff, particularly women; enhancing career development opportunities for all staff; and establishing mechanisms to monitor progress towards the achievement of the gender parity goal. Several key initiatives introduced under the current human resources management reform programme contained features or provisions that sought to contribute to the improvement of gender distribution, including the human resources action plans, the staff selection system, work/life policies, performance management, career development programmes and gender sensitivity training. Human resources action plans, established jointly by heads of departments and offices and the Assistant Secretary-General for Human Resources Management, contained specific targets, such as the selection of women for at least 50 per cent of vacancies resulting from retirements, new posts, and posts vacated for other reasons, in order to reach gender balance in all categories of staff. Twenty departments or offices had met that target in the 2001-2002 biennium, and in the 2003-2004 biennium, those departments and offices that had not achieved gender parity were to reach and maintain an average annual increase of at least 2 per cent for female staff in the Professional and higher categories.

However, several factors had affected progress towards the achievement of the 50/50 gender goal, such as the need for: strengthened accountability for achieving gender balance; better forecasting of future workforce needs, including completion of a skills inventory to identify women with leadership potential, and for succession planning; better coordination in policy implementation among stakeholders; specific support strategies for departments facing problems in meeting their gender targets, for more targeting of women, especially for senior-level posts and for occupational groups where women were chronically underrepresented; better online monitoring tools to provide heads of departments and offices with timely information; and the limited advancement opportunity for the internal pool of qualified women in the General Service and related categories.

Specific actions to improve gender distribution focused on accountability, human resources planning, policy implementation and review, specific support to departments and offices, an expanded pool of qualified women candidates and online monitoring tools.

In response to General Assembly resolution 58/144 [YUN 2003, p. 1449], the Secretary-General submitted a September report [A/59/357] on the improvement of the status of women in the UN system. He noted that at the senior policy-making levels (D-1 level and above), the representation of women increased by 3.1 per cent from 33.3 to 36.4 per cent, with the largest increases at the Assistant Secretary-General (from 23.5 to 29.4 per cent) and D-1 levels (from 36.3 to 39.4 per cent). At the Under-Secretary-General level, the proportion of women increased from 20.8 to 22.7 per cent and at the D-2 level, from 31.2 to 33.86 per cent. At the P-1 to P-5 levels, the proportion of women comprised 43.2 per cent, with the only increase, from 37.2 to 39.5 per cent, at the P-4 level. All other levels showed negative growth.

The Secretary-General concluded that the overall representation of women still fell short of a 50/50 gender balance, and projections were that the attainment of gender balance would remain a challenge. Despite the significant gains achieved to attain gender balance systemwide, UN entities, including the Secretariat, had a long way to go to effectively integrate gender balance considerations into institutional and attitudinal systems and human resources management policies of the Organization.

The report also presented the analysis carried out by the Office of the Special Adviser on Gender Issues and Advancement of Women on the causes of the slow progress in the improvement of the status of women in the Secretariat, which revealed that gender imbalance was a multidimensional and systemic problem which required a systemic and integrated response. As candidates for recruitment, women were discriminated against by unfavourable external factors and within the Organization, by recruitment strategies, promotion and retention policies, career development, justice and anti-harassment policies, human resources and succession planning, work/ family policies, management culture and mechanisms for accountability needed to be reviewed to ensure that they did not directly or indirectly disadvantage women. Legislative bodies had not effectively addressed the problem of the disproportionately small number of women entering the UN system. At the entry level, the current staffing system was neither proactive nor targeted enough and relied too much on web-based vacancy announcements. Also, there was no accountability, particularly at the level of programme managers, for gender balance. Improved transparency and monitoring were also required. In that context, the new terms of reference of the departmental focal points were expected to include full access to data for purposes of regular monitoring of gender balance status, access to and regular consultations with programme managers and heads of departments or offices on human resources action plans and gender targets, and giving advice on the selection of women candidates.

The report identified several problems related to the retention of women, especially in the General Service category. Progression for that category of staff was severely restricted, owing to the need to pass the General to Professional (G-P) examination and the fact that only 10 per cent of vacant P-2 posts were allotted to them. The report revealed mismatches between formal and informal systems of selection and career development. Another key component of career progression was the impact of the working climate and culture. The report noted that the objective of introducing work/life policies to attract and retain quality staff, especially women, had not yet impacted the current managerial culture within the Secretariat, which continued to view those policies as a barrier to efficiency and productivity and as incompatible with career advancement and the performance of managerial level posts.

The Secretariat's gender balance system needed to be enhanced by special measures adapted to the current staff selection system and by clearly defined organizational responsibilities for gender balance at all levels throughout the Secretariat. The Secretary-General remained firmly committed to reaching the goal of 50/50 gender balance at all levels and in all categories of posts and would ensure that heads of departments and offices and central monitoring offices intensified efforts and strengthened measures towards that end.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 20 December [meeting 74], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Third (Social, Humanitarian and Cultural) Committee [A/59/496], adopted resolution 59/164 without vote [agenda item 98].

Improvement of the status of women in the United Nations system

The General Assembly,

Recalling Articles 1 and 101 of the Charter of the United Nations, as well as Article 8, which provides that the United Nations shall place no restrictions on the eligibility of men and women to participate in any capacity and under conditions of equality in its principal and subsidiary organs,

Recalling also the goal, contained in the Platform for Action adopted by the Fourth World Conference on Women, of achieving overall gender equality, particularly at the Professional level and above, by 2000 and the further actions and initiatives set out in the outcome document adopted by the General Assembly at its twenty-third special session, entitled "Women 2000: gender equality, development and peace for the twenty-first century",

1. Takes note with appreciation of the report of the Secretary-General;

2. Welcomes:

(a) The commitment of the Secretary-General to meeting the goal of gender equality and his assurance that gender balance will be given the highest priority in his continuing efforts to bring about a new management culture in the Organization;

(b) The new initiatives and strategies undertaken system-wide and at the Secretariat level to achieve gender balance, including paying special attention to the identification of suitably qualified women candidates, strengthening of recruitment sources for women, development of recruitment strategies in substantive areas, enhancing women's career development, fostering attitudinal changes and introducing family-friendly policies;

(c) The increase in the proportion of women in the Professional and higher categories of staff with appointments of one year or more;

3. Regrets that the goal of 50/50 gender distribution has not been met and that overall progress in achieving this goal remains limited;

4. Notes with concern the continuing lack of representation of women at higher levels of decision-making, especially at the Under-Secretary-General level;

5. Notes with particular concern that gender balance considerations have yet to be effectively integrated throughout the human resources management policies of the United Nations;

6. Reaffirms the urgent goal of achieving 50/50 gender distribution in all categories of posts within the United Nations system, especially at senior and policy-making levels, with full respect for the principle of equitable geographical distribution, in conformity with Article 101, paragraph 3, of the Charter of the United Nations;

7. Stresses the need to address the continuing lack of representation or underrepresentation of women from certain countries, in particular from developing and least developed countries, from countries with economies in transition and from unrepresented or largely underrepresented Member States;

8. Reaffirms the need to continue to develop innovative recruitment strategies to identify and attract suitably qualified women candidates, in particular from, and in, developing and least developed countries and countries with economies in transition and other Member States that are unrepresented or underrepresented in the Secretariat;

9. Reaffirms also its resolution 58/144 of 22 December 2003, and requests increased and sustained efforts towards its full implementation;

10. Requests the Secretary-General and the executive heads of the organizations of the United Nations system to ensure that recruitment strategies, promotion and retention policies, career development, justice, anti-harassment and sexual harassment policies, human resources and succession planning, work/family policies, management culture and mechanisms for managerial accountability accelerate the goal of 50/50 gender distribution;

11. Urges the Secretary-General and the executive heads of the organizations of the United Nations system to redouble their efforts to realize significant progress towards the goal of 50/50 gender distribution in the very near future;

12. Requests the Secretary-General to enable the Office of the Special Adviser on Gender Issues and Advancement of Women to effectively contribute to, monitor and facilitate the setting and achievement of gender targets in human resource action plans, including by ensuring access to the information required to carry out that work;

13. Strongly encourages Member States to support the efforts of the United Nations and the specialized agencies, funds and programmes to achieve the goal of 50/50 gender distribution, especially at senior and policy-making levels, by identifying and regularly submitting more women candidates for appointment to positions in the United Nations system, by identifying and proposing national recruitment sources in co-operation with national women's machineries and professional organization networks and by encouraging more women to apply for positions within the Secretariat, the specialized agencies, funds and programmes and the regional commissions, including in areas in which women are underrepresented, such as peacekeeping, peacebuilding and other non-traditional areas;

14. Requests the Secretary-General to provide an oral report to the Commission on the Status of Women at its forty-ninth and fiftieth sessions and to report to the General Assembly at its sixty-first session on the implementation of the present resolution, including by providing up-to-date statistics on all levels of the United Nations system.

Study of availability of skills in local labour markets

OIOS report. In response to General Assembly resolution 58/270 [YUN 2003, p. 1399], the Secretary-General transmitted a September OIOS report [A/59/388] on the availability in local labour markets, of the skills for which international recruitment for the General Service category took place. The Secretariat currently employed 6,761 staff in the General Service category, 304 of whom received international benefits. Of those receiving benefits, two-thirds were language staff working in the Department for General Assembly and Conference Management (DGACM), in New York and Geneva. OIOS assessed the granting of those benefits to staff in the General Service category throughout the Organization, which cost an estimated $9.25 million per biennium. The study also reviewed the rules governing local recruitment and its consequences, especially for DGACM's Text Processing Section in New York.

OIOS found that the determination regarding the absence of skills in the local labour market at Headquarters was not based on sufficient or up-to-date evidence about the characteristics of that market. Data indicated that the local labour market might have the skills required to fill posts expected to become vacant in the Arabic, Chinese, French, Spanish and Russian Text Processing Units. A definitive determination as to whether that was so should only be made on the basis of an examination for all four categories of skills required of editorial clerks/assistants, in addition to a systematic, aggressive outreach effort in the New York labour market. The United Nations Office at Geneva conducted such an outreach campaign and concluded that candidates with sufficient skills were available and, therefore, recruited staff in the General Service category for the Text Processing Units locally.

OIOS recommended that the Organization change the basis of recruitment for the General Service category to grant international status only to those recruited from outside the area of the duty station; require documentation to determine whether the local labour market contained the skills required in anticipation of vacancies; specify that staff members be regarded as locally recruited if recruited within the vicinity or country of the duty station; and amend Appendix B to the Staff Rules to clarify that payment of international benefits was subject to the determination that a particular post had been filled by international recruitment and/or could not be filled through local recruitment and discontinue such payment if the staff member moved to a post that could be filled locally. OHRM should pursue proactive recruitment strategies in New York, document the outcome of enhanced recruitment efforts for the Text Processing Units at Headquarters, ensure that adequate resources were provided for testing and create a trainee programme and short-term contract opportunities to develop a pool of eligible local candidates, especially in New York.

Consultants and individual contractors

Report of Secretary-General. In response to General Assembly 57/305 [YUN 2003, p. 1440] and 53/221 [YUN 1999, p. 1324], the Secretary-General, in August [A/59/217], submitted a biennial report on the use of consultants and individual contractors during 2002 and 2003. The report included statistics on the number of persons hired, the number and type of contracts awarded, the number of days worked, the total fees paid, the nationality of the persons hired, the purpose of engagement, occupational groups recruited, the duration of contracts, time actually worked, hiring departments, gender, level of education, performance evaluation, funding source and aggregate data for each duty station.

In 2002, a total of 3,307 consultants and 1,443 individual contractors were hired, accounting for 4,381 and 2,902 contracts, respectively, while in 2003, 3,543 consultants and 1,401 individual contractors were engaged under 4,693 and 2,652 contracts respectively. Overall, during the biennium, the number of consultants engaged increased by 243, or 7.1 per cent, compared to 2001, and individual contractors by 147, or 3.1 per cent. The average duration of all contracts was shorter, and the average individual cost of a consultant went down, whereas the cost of an individual contractor went up slightly. Fees for both categories amounted to $52 million in 2002 and $47.1 million in 2003, a total increase of 0.3 per cent, as compared to 2001. Of the 163 countries from which consultants were hired in 2002, 19 accounted for 57 per cent of all persons engaged, while individual contractors came from 108 countries, 11 of which accounted for 67 per cent of all engagements. In 2003, consultants were hired from 167 countries, with 19 of them accounting for 54 per cent of all consultations, and individual contractors from 114 countries, of which 11 accounted for 60 per cent of all engagements. Female representation increased, in the case of consultants to 29.7 per cent and of individual contractors to 54.8 per cent. Consultants and individual contractors were used mainly for advisory services, programme implementation, special analytical studies and the preparation of meetings, working as professionals, managers or technicians, and as economists and in technical cooperation related areas.

ACABQ report. In October [A/59/446], ACABQ found the information of limited value. It requested OHRM to broaden the scope of the report in the future to include more analysis and to assess the compliance of practice in the hiring of experts and consultants with existing rules and regulations. It also requested OHRM to complete the staff skills inventory expeditiously.

Employment of retirees

Report of Secretary-General. Pursuant to General Assembly resolution 57/305 and decision 51/408 [YUN 1996, p. 1329], the Secretary-General submitted an August report on the use of retired personnel, covering the 2002-2003 biennium [A/59/222]. The report provided statistical data on the use of persons who retired after ages 60 or 62, excluding those engaged by the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Fund, by the number of retirees engaged, the type and category of engagement, the departments and offices involved, and the retirees' nationality, gender, functions, age group, days worked and fees or salaries paid.

During 2002-2003, 620 retired staff were engaged by the Organization, a 65 per cent increase over the 2000-2001 biennium. The number of days worked increased by 99 per cent, as did the cost, from $10.5 million in 2000-2001 to $26.9 million in 2002-2003, an increase of 156 per cent. A total of 42 per cent of the engagements were in the Professional and higher categories and 25 per cent in the Field Service and General Service and related categories. Some 32 per cent of the engagements were by special service agreement, covering both consultants and individual contractors, and 54 per cent were on a short-term basis. The overall trend was an increase along all parameters (number engaged, days worked and fees) since 1998: 81 per cent more engagements, 86 per cent more days worked and a 162 per cent increase in cost.

The increases during the 2002-2003 biennium were due to an increase in the number of meetings and required documentation at major duty stations at a time when there was a simultaneous increase in the number of retirements, necessitating the hiring of retirees with specialized skills, such as translators, interpreters and editors, for limited periods, while the regular staff selection process was under way. There were also major increases in peacekeeping and humanitarian activities in the field, which required rapid reinforcement of backstopping capacity in the relevant departments. In both cases, the use of retirees was considered to be the most cost-effective way to meet short-term operational needs.

The three main groups of functions for which retired former staff were engaged in 2002-2003 were: language services (35 per cent), in particular revisers and interpreters; administrative functions (26 per cent); and political, economic, social, environmental, humanitarian, advisory and technical assistance functions (23 per cent).

ACABQ report. In October [A/59/446], ACABQ cautioned that the hiring of retirees to meet immediate organizational requirements did not obviate the need for proper succession planning. Progress in the streamlining of the staff selection process should also have an impact on the need for retirees. It recommended that greater efforts be made to hire qualified and skilled young persons to carry out functions for which the Secretariat was using retired staff. That might mean re-evaluating the levels of posts vacated by retirees prior to initiating recruitment procedures.

Discrimination

Pursuant to Assembly resolution 57/305 [YUN 2003, p. 1440], the Secretary-General submitted an August report, prepared in cooperation with OIOS and JIU, on measures to prevent discrimination on the basis of nationality, race, gender, religion or language in the United Nations [A/59/211]. The Secretary-General outlined the measures he had initiated to prevent or correct discrimination, or to create an environment free of discrimination. Those measures included: the definition of organizational core values and core and managerial competencies to build organizational capacity and promote shared values and common standards; issuance of a circular recalling that the core values of the Organization prohibited discrimination and harassment; the launching of an organizational integrity initiative; the establishment of monitoring and accountability mechanisms in the recruitment, promotion and placement processes; the enhancement of multilingualism, which minimized the likelihood of discrimination based on linguistic differences; the issuance of clear guidance for conflict resolution and complaint mechanisms, which included the establishment of the Office of the Ombudsman, panels on discrimination and other grievances, and revision of procedures to address all forms of discrimination and harassment.

Protection from sexual exploitation and sexual abuse

Report of Secretary-General. In response to General Assembly resolution 57/306 [YUN 2003, p. 1237], the Secretary-General submitted an April report [A/58/777], containing information on the responses by 48 UN entities to the Secretariat's query regarding investigations into cases of sexual exploitation or sexual abuse. In 2003, forty-two entities reported that they had received no reports of sexual exploitation or abuse, and six reported the opening of investigations into newly reported cases. DPKO reported 24 new cases, and in two of the five cases where the alleged perpetrators were civilian personnel, serious misconduct was found to have occurred and appropriate disciplinary action taken. Of the 19 cases in which military personnel were allegedly involved, investigations revealed serious misconduct in eight. The Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs reported one case, which had been closed. The Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees reported 24 new cases, of which 22 had been closed and 2 remained under investigation. The United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East reported 2 cases; one was closed and the other was under investigation. The United Nations Children's Fund and the World Food Programme reported one case each, both of which were under investigation.

The Secretariat was aware that the data gathered might not reflect the true extent of those incidents, and complaint procedures and victim support mechanisms were not yet adequate. In many cases, victims were reportedly too frightened or ashamed to lodge a complaint, and once reported, some victims failed to provide evidence during the investigation phase due to confusion or intimidation. In addition, staff members might not yet be fully aware of the responsibilities placed on them by the Secretary-General's October 2003 bulletin [ST/SGB/2003/13] on special measures for protection from sexual exploitation and sexual abuse.

Additional efforts were required to establish a system within which misconduct of that kind was systematically reported and effectively followed up, while safeguarding the rights of the victims. Measures were put in place in 2004 to help improve the situation, including enhanced sensization on the issue for managers and staff, particularly those in the field, and the development of tools and guidelines for the appropriate handling of complaints of sexual exploitation and abuse. The Inter-Agency Standing Committee Task Force on Protection from Sexual Exploitation and Abuse in Humanitarian Crises completed guidelines designed to assist with implementation of the measures outlined in the Secretary-General's bulletin. The Task Force also finalized model complaints procedures and investigative protocols.

On 18 June, the Assembly took note of the Secretary-General's report (decision 58/568).

Multilingualism

The Secretary-General transmitted to the Assembly his comments and those of CEB [A/58/93/Add.1] on the 2003 JIU report on the implementation of multilingualism in the UN system [YUN 2003, p. 1451]. CEB members generally concurred with the findings and conclusions of the report. Regarding the capabilities to provide language services, they said that system organizations were not quite as competitive as they could be in view of the prevailing salary conditions, and observed that considerable difficulty was still being encountered in the recruitment and retention of staff with the necessary language skills.

The General Assembly, on 5 August, at the request of France [A/58/862], on behalf of the States members of the Intergovernmental Agency of La Francophonie, decided to defer consideration of the item on multilingualism and to include it in the draft agenda of its fifty-ninth (2004) session, on the understanding that the biennial character of the item would not be called into question and the item would be considered next at the sixty-first (2006) session (decision 58/571).

On 23 December, the General Assembly decided that the agenda item on multilingualism would remain for consideration at its fifty-ninth (2005) session (decision 59/552).

Staff rules and regulations

In accordance with staff regulations 12.3 stipulating that the full text of provisional staff rules and amendments should be reported annually to the General Assembly, the Secretary-General, in August [A/59/213 & Add.1], outlined amendments to the 100, 200 and 300 series of Staff Rules, together with the rationale for the changes. Amendments to the 100 series related to sick leave, official travel, due process, and the Joint Disciplinary Committees. Amendments under the 200 and 300 series related to sick leave.

The Secretary-General recommended that the Assembly take note of the amendments in the annex to the report, which he proposed to implement as from 1 January 2005.

Headquarters agreements

JIU report. In October [A/59/526], the Secretary-General transmitted the JIU report entitled "Review of the Headquarters Agreements concluded by the organizations of the United Nations system: human resources issues affecting staff". The objective of the investigation was to identify where adjustments in headquarters agreements might be advisable, with an emphasis on areas essential for the reform of human resources management, and to contribute to the elaboration of model rules for future headquarters agreements and possible amendments to existing ones. JIU traced the evolution of headquarters agreements and its implications for current agreements, and addressed selected work/life issues requiring review in terms of their relevance to the agreements and their interpretation and implementation in host countries. Among the issues were: work permits for spouses and children, domestic helpers and non-dependent family members of staff; the acquisition, rental and sale of real estate by staff; staff integration into the social security system of host countries; staff retirement in host countries; and the payment of value added tax and similar taxes, and income taxation issues.

Recognizing that the employment of spouses of UN staff members was a concern that needed to be addressed if the UN system was to attract, employ and retain the best candidates for jobs in UN organizations worldwide, JIU recommended that legislative bodies of organizations bring to the attention of host countries the desirability of adopting more liberal policies regarding the granting of work permits or establishing similar arrangements for spouses of staff members and officials. It also recognized the need to reassess the procedures of host countries to facilitate the exercise of privileges, immunities and other facilities to ensure efficient and timely processing. In that regard, JIU recommended that legislative bodies of organizations remind host countries of the importance of fully implementing headquarters agreements and ensuring the use of simplified procedures to facilitate the exercise of those privileges, immunities and benefits, including those work/life issues mentioned above. To better acquaint staff, particularly new recruits and arrivals at a duty station, of the contents of host country agreements, executive heads were requested to issue comprehensive information and publicize the privileges, immunities and other benefits granted staff, and staff obligations. Host countries should likewise inform their local administrations, public services and business communities, especially those situated outside the capital or seat of the various organizations. Host countries should be reminded that any additional facilities granted to intergovernmental organizations should be extended to all UN system organizations, their staff and officials located in that territory. The Secretary-General should request CEB to coordinate the formulation of a model framework headquarters agreement, or standard articles ensuring uniformity, for approval by the Assembly, and which would be used to guide the conclusion of future and/or updating of existing headquarters agreements. Host countries should also be reminded of the significance of simplified procedures to ensure the speedy processing of visas for staff and officials travelling on mission for UN organizations, so as to prevent undue delays in the substantive work of the organization and possible financial losses.

Safety and security

Reports of Secretary-General. In response to General Assembly resolution 58/122 [YUN 2003, p. 1453], the Secretary-General, in September [A/59/332], updated information on threats against the safety and security of UN personnel between 1 July 2003 and 30 June 2004. He stated that, since 1992, 218 United Nations civilian staff members had been killed as a result of malicious acts. During the reporting period, 22 staff members were killed, the majority of whom were victims of the bomb attack on the UN headquarters in Baghdad in 2003 [YUN 2003, p. 346]. More than 120 incidents of assault, including 10 cases of rape or sexual assault on UN personnel were recorded, and at least 139 incidents of harassments at checkpoints or against convoys or other activities. There were also two serious incidents of kidnapping in Somalia, and four bomb threats against field offices in Ethiopia, Georgia, Guatemala and Pakistan. Attacks on UN premises and properties in the field were of increasing concern, with seven violent attacks against UN compounds and convoys, 52 reported forceful incursions into UN compounds, and more than 1,256 incidents of theft involving office equipment, official vehicles, staff residences and personal belongings.

The report described efforts to improve the security management system, including the results of the security evaluation conducted following the August 2003 attack against the UN premises in Baghdad. Immediate actions completed at Headquarters included the development and promulgation of an enhanced standardized procedure for conducting threat and risk assessment, upgrading of the Minimum Operating Security Standards (MOSS); dispatch of 19 support missions of the Office of the United Nations Security Coordinator (UNSECOORD) to countries of particular concern; elaboration by DPKO of specific security measures, including country-specific MOSS; a study on crisis management lessons; and a request to the Assembly (see p. 1380) for additional resources to fulfil immediate needs for security personnel and facilities protection at Headquarters and in field locations. To address in a comprehensive and integrated manner the issue of longer-term concepts and requirements for the entire United Nations, a separate report [A/59/356 & Corr.1 & Add.1] (see p. 1478) proposing a unified and strengthened UN security management system was submitted to the Assembly. Throughout the reporting period, UN organizations funds and programmes and UNSECOORD actively recruited, trained and deployed skilled field security coordination officers and agency field security officers. In terms of accountability, on 29 March, the Secretary-General announced disciplinary measures, following the release of the report by an investigative panel that had identified institutional and individual failures in assessing the security situation in Baghdad prior to the August 2003 attack.

The Secretary-General observed that the period under review was particularly difficult, forcing the UN system to reflect seriously on the future of its security management arrangements at all levels. There was a need for a proactive approach, which would allow the United Nations to monitor its environment more systematically. The Organization had to anticipate security incidents and plan for them in advance, as well as enhance its readiness and protection through training, equipment and physical security measures. That demanded a cultural change within the UN system. To ensure success, managers and staff had to be equally committed to the process.

CEB consideration. HLCM, at its eighth session (Rome, 5-6 October) [CEB/2004/6], welcomed the Secretary-General's proposals for a strengthened and unified security management system for the United Nations to be funded under the UN regular budget (see above), including the new organizational structure and approach to financing, and agreed that all organizations should be proactive in seeking the support of Member States in their governing bodies or executive boards; took note of further work to be undertaken on such issues as governance, an implementation strategy for the new security management system and strengthened coordination at all headquarters locations, including how to maximize partnerships and collaboration with the specialized agencies; noted that the new United Nations Security Directorate would not be responsible for security at the headquarters locations of the specialized agencies, which would continue their relationships with host Governments, the latter being ultimately responsible for the security and safety of personnel; and requested that security networks, both in the field and at headquarters, submit proposals to HLCM on mechanisms that would ensure a robust, well-coordinated global security management system.

HLCM endorsed the report of the Inter-Agency Security Management Network on its May 2004 meeting and approved its key recommendations related to security threat and risk assessments, minimum operating security standards, aviation safety, medical emergencies involving mass casualties, security training and accountability. HLCM also endorsed the revised MOSS policy document as the new baseline standard for security at the field level. Those baseline standards, combined with the outcome of the threat and risk assessment for specific local conditions should be incorporated into a location-specific MOSS. It agreed that compliance evaluations of and assistance with the implementation of MOSS should be undertaken by UNSECOORD. HLCM reiterated that security training was mandatory for all staff members depending on their individual specific needs, whether in the field or at headquarters and called on each organization to ensure adherence; agreed that staff should refresh their CD-ROM security training every three years on a mandatory basis; and agreed that all designated officials had to undergo mandatory security briefing and training prior to assuming their assignment.

HLCM also considered an update of a document presented at its fifth session [YUN 2003, p. 1453] on actions taken by individual organizations to improve their security and emergency preparedness so as to provide guidance for those organizations that had yet to complete their emergency preparedness and business continuity planning in the hope that experience gained by organizations might serve as a useful reference for others.

CEB, at its second regular session for 2004 (New York, 29-30 October) [CEB/2004/2], welcomed the progress in HLCM's work, the outcome of the 2004 census of UN system staff members and the situation of contingency planning and emergency preparedness in the organizations and bodies of the system.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 20 December [meeting 74], the General Assembly adopted resolution 59/211 [draft: A/59/L.51 & Add.1] without vote [agenda item 39].

Safety and security of humanitarian personnel and protection of United Nations personnel

The General Assembly,

Reaffirming its resolution 46/182 of 19 December 1991 on strengthening of the coordination of humanitarian emergency assistance of the United Nations,

Recalling all relevant resolutions on safety and security of humanitarian personnel and protection of United Nations personnel, including its resolution 58/122 of 17 December 2003, Economic and Social Council resolution 2004/50 of 23 July 2004 and Security Council resolution 1502(2003) of 26 August 2003,

Taking note of all resolutions and presidential statements of the Security Council and reports of the Secretary-General to the Council on the protection of civilians in armed conflict,

Recalling all relevant provisions of international law, including international humanitarian law and human rights law, as well as all relevant treaties,

Reaffirming the need to promote and ensure respect for the principles and rules of international law, including international humanitarian law,

Recalling that primary responsibility under international law for the security and protection of humanitarian personnel and United Nations and its associated personnel lies with the Government hosting a United Nations operation conducted under the Charter of the United Nations or its agreements with relevant organizations,

Urging all parties involved in armed conflicts, in compliance with international humanitarian law, in particular their obligations under the Geneva Conventions of 12 August 1949 and the obligations applicable to them under the Additional Protocols thereto, of 8 June 1977, to ensure the security and protection of all humanitarian personnel and United Nations and its associated personnel,

Welcoming the fact that the number of States parties to the Convention on the Safety of United Nations and Associated Personnel, which entered into force on 15 January 1999, has continued to rise, the number now having reached seventy-seven, and mindful of the need to promote universality of the Convention,

Deeply concerned by the dangers and security risks faced by humanitarian personnel and United Nations and its associated personnel at the field level, as they operate in increasingly complex contexts, as well as the continuous erosion, in many cases, of respect for the principles and rules of international law, in particular international humanitarian law,

Expressing profound regret at the deaths of international and national humanitarian personnel and United Nations and its associated personnel involved in the provision of humanitarian assistance, and strongly deploring the rising toll of casualties among such personnel in complex humanitarian emergencies, in particular in armed conflicts and in post-conflict situations,

Strongly condemning acts of murder and other forms of violence, rape and sexual assault and all forms of violence committed in particular against women, and intimidation, armed robbery, abduction, hostage-taking, kidnapping, harassment and illegal arrest and detention to which those participating in humanitarian operations are increasingly exposed, as well as attacks on humanitarian convoys and acts of destruction and looting of property,

Commending the courage and commitment of those who take part in humanitarian operations, often at great personal risk, especially of locally recruited staff,

Expressing concern that the occurrence of attacks and threats against humanitarian personnel and United Nations and its associated personnel is a factor that increasingly restricts the ability of the Organization to provide assistance and protection to civilians in fulfilment of its mandate under the Charter,

Recalling the inclusion of attacks intentionally directed against personnel involved in a humanitarian assistance or peacekeeping mission in accordance with the Charter as a war crime in the Rome Statute of the International Criminal Court, and noting the role that the Court could play in appropriate cases in bringing to justice those responsible for serious violations of international humanitarian law,

Reaffirming the need to ensure adequate levels of safety and security for United Nations personnel and its associated humanitarian personnel, which constitutes an underlying duty of the Organization, and mindful of the need to promote and enhance the security consciousness within the organizational culture of the United Nations and a culture of accountability at all levels,

Emphasizing the urgent need to take concrete measures to strengthen the effectiveness of the security management system for the United Nations, and in this regard mindful of the report of the Secretary-General on a strengthened and unified security management system for the United Nations,

1. Welcomes the report of the Secretary-General on the safety and security of humanitarian personnel and protection of United Nations personnel;

2. Urges all States to take the necessary measures to ensure the full and effective implementation of the relevant principles and rules of international law, including international humanitarian law, human rights law and refugee law related to the safety and security of humanitarian personnel and United Nations personnel;

3. Strongly urges all States to take the necessary measures to ensure the safety and security of humanitarian personnel and United Nations and its associated personnel and to respect and ensure respect for the inviolability of United Nations premises, which are essential to the continuation and successful implementation of United Nations operations;

4. Calls upon all Governments and parties in complex humanitarian emergencies, in particular in armed conflicts and in post-conflict situations, in countries in which humanitarian personnel are operating, in conformity with the relevant provisions of international law and national laws, to cooperate fully with the United Nations and other humanitarian agencies and organizations and to ensure the safe and unhindered access of humanitarian personnel in order to allow them to perform efficiently their task of assisting the affected civilian population, including refugees and internally displaced persons;

5. Calls upon all States to consider becoming parties to and to respect fully their obligations under the relevant international instruments, in particular the Convention on the Safety of United Nations and Associated Personnel;

6. Also calls upon all States to consider becoming parties to and to respect fully their obligations under the Convention on the Privileges and Immunities of the United Nations and the Convention on the Privileges and Immunities of the Specialized Agencies, which have been ratified so far by one hundred and forty-eight States and one hundred and eight States, respectively;

7. Further calls upon all States to consider becoming parties to the Rome Statute of the International Criminal Court;

8. Takes note with appreciation of the important progress made by the working group and the Ad Hoc Committee on the Scope of Legal Protection under the Convention on the Safety of United Nations and Associated Personnel, and notes that the Ad Hoc Committee will reconvene from 11 to 15 April 2005 with a mandate to expand the scope of legal protection under the said Convention, including by means of a legal instrument;

9. Expresses deep concern that, over the past decade, threats against the safety and security of humanitarian personnel and United Nations and its associated personnel have escalated dramatically and that perpetrators of acts of violence seemingly operate with impunity;

10. Strongly condemns all threats and acts of violence against humanitarian personnel and United Nations and its associated personnel, affirms the need to hold accountable those responsible for such acts, strongly urges all States to take stronger actions to ensure that any such acts committed on their territory are investigated fully and to ensure that the perpetrators of such acts are brought to justice in accordance with international law and national law, and notes the need for States to end impunity for such acts;

11. Calls upon all States to provide adequate and prompt information in the event of the arrest or detention of humanitarian personnel or United Nations and its associated personnel, to afford them the necessary medical assistance and to allow independent medical teams to visit and examine the health of those detained, and urges them to take the necessary measures to ensure the speedy release of those who have been arrested or detained in violation of the relevant conventions referred to in the present resolution and applicable international humanitarian law;

12. Calls upon all other parties involved in armed conflicts to refrain from abducting humanitarian personnel or United Nations and its associated personnel or detaining them in violation of the relevant conventions referred to in the present resolution and applicable international humanitarian law, and speedily to release, without harm or requirement of concession, any abductee or detainee;

13. Reaffirms the obligation of all humanitarian personnel and United Nations and its associated personnel to observe and respect the national laws of the country in which they are operating, in accordance with international law and the Charter of the United Nations;

14. Requests the Secretary-General to take the necessary measures to ensure full respect for the human rights, privileges and immunities of United Nations and other personnel carrying out activities in fulfilment of the mandate of a United Nations operation, and also requests the Secretary-General to seek the inclusion, in negotiations of headquarters and other mission agreements concerning United Nations and its associated personnel, of the applicable conditions contained in the Convention on the Privileges and Immunities of the United Nations, the Convention on the Privileges and Immunities of the Specialized Agencies and the Convention on the Safety of United Nations and Associated Personnel;

15. Recommends that the Secretary-General continue to seek the inclusion of, and that host countries include, key provisions of the Convention on the Safety of United Nations and Associated Personnel, among others, those regarding the prevention of attacks against members of the operation, the establishment of such attacks as crimes punishable by law and the prosecution or extradition of offenders, in future as well as, if necessary, in existing status-of-forces, status-of-mission and host country agreements negotiated between the United Nations and those countries, mindful of the importance of the timely conclusion of such agreements;

16. Requests the Secretary-General to take the necessary measures, falling within his responsibilities, to promote and enhance the security consciousness and measures within the organizational culture of the United Nations system, agencies, funds and programmes, including by disseminating and ensuring the implementation of the security procedures and regulations and by ensuring accountability at all levels;

17. Emphasizes the importance of paying special attention to the safety and security of United Nations and its associated personnel engaged in United Nations peacekeeping and peacebuilding operations;

18. Also emphasizes the need to give further consideration to the safety and security of locally recruited humanitarian personnel, who account for the majority of casualties;

19. Requests the Secretary-General to take the necessary measures to ensure that United Nations and other personnel carrying out activities in fulfilment of the mandate of a United Nations operation are properly informed about and operate in conformity with the minimum operating security standards and relevant codes of conduct and are properly informed about the conditions under which they are called upon to operate and the standards that they are required to meet, including those contained in relevant national and international law, and that adequate training in security, human rights law and international humanitarian law is provided so as to enhance their security and effectiveness in accomplishing their functions, and reaffirms the necessity for all other humanitarian organizations to provide their personnel with similar support;

20. Stresses the importance of ensuring that humanitarian personnel and United Nations and associated personnel remain sensitive to national and local customs and traditions in their countries of assignment and communicate clearly their purpose and objectives to local populations;

21. Also stresses the need to ensure that all United Nations staff members receive adequate security training, including physical and psychological training, prior to their deployment to the field, the need to attach a high priority to the improvement of stress and trauma counselling services available to United Nations staff members, including through the implementation of a comprehensive security and stress and trauma management training, support and assistance programme for United Nations staff throughout the system, before, during and after missions, and the need to make available to the Secretary-General the means for that purpose;

22. Recognizes the need for a strengthened and unified security management system for the United Nations, both at the headquarters and the field levels, and requests the United Nations system, as well as Member States, to take all appropriate measures to that end;

23. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General on a strengthened and unified security management system for the United Nations;

24. Welcomes the ongoing efforts of the Secretary-General to further enhance the security management system of the United Nations, and in this regard invites the United Nations and other humanitarian organizations to strengthen the analysis of threats to their safety and security in order to minimize security risks and to facilitate informed decisions on the maintenance of an effective presence in the field, inter alia, to fulfil their humanitarian mandate;

25. Requests the Secretary-General, inter alia, through the Inter-Agency Security Management Network, to promote increased cooperation and collaboration among United Nations agencies, funds and programmes, including between their headquarters and field offices, in the planning and implementation of measures aimed at improving staff security, training and awareness, and calls upon all relevant United Nations agencies, funds and programmes to support these efforts;

26. Recognizes the need for enhanced coordination and cooperation, both at the headquarters and the field levels, between the United Nations security management system and non-governmental organizations on matters relating to the safety and security of humanitarian personnel and United Nations and its associated personnel, with a view to addressing mutual security concerns in the field;

27. Underlines the need to allocate adequate and predictable resources to the safety and security of United Nations personnel, encourages all States to contribute to the Trust Fund for Security of Staff Members of the United Nations System and to meet requirements in the consolidated appeals, without prejudice to the outcome of the ongoing discussions in the General Assembly regarding the funding for safety and security;

28. Recalls the essential role of telecommunication resources in facilitating the safety of humanitarian personnel and United Nations and its associated personnel, calls upon States to consider acceding to or ratifying the Tampere Convention on the Provision of Telecommunication Resources for Disaster Mitigation and Relief Operations of 18 June 1998, and encourages them to facilitate and expedite, consistent with their national laws and regulations, the use of communications equipment in such operations, inter alia, through limiting and, whenever possible, lifting the restrictions placed on the use of communications equipment by United Nations and its associated personnel;

29. Requests the Secretary-General to submit to the General Assembly at its sixtieth session a comprehensive and updated report on the safety and security of humanitarian personnel and protection of United Nations personnel and on the implementation of the present resolution.

UN Joint Staff Pension Fund

As at 31 December 2004, the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Fund (UNJSPF) had 88,356 active participants compared to 85,245 at the end of 2003; the number of periodic payments in award increased from 52,496 to 53,879 over the year. The breakdown of the periodic benefits in award was 17,338 retirement benefits; 12,092 early retirement benefits; 6,613 deferred retirement benefits; 8,676 widows' and widowers' benefits; 960 disability benefits; 8,156 children's benefits; and 44 secondary dependants' benefits.

The Fund was administered by the 33-member United Nations Joint Staff Pension Board (UNJSPB), which held its fifty-second session (Montreal, Canada, 13-23 July) [A/59/9 & Add.1] to consider actuarial matters, including the twenty-seventh actuarial valuation of the Fund as at 31 December 2003; management of the Fund's investments and reports on the investment strategies and performance for the biennium 2002-2003; administrative matters, including the revised budget estimates for the 2004-2005 biennium; the Fund's benefits provisions, including the methodology for the calculation of the final average remuneration and the comprehensive review of pensionable remuneration; and the size and composition of the Fund and its Standing Committee. The Board also examined and approved the financial statements and schedules for the biennium ended 31 December 2003 and considered the report of the Board of Auditors on the Fund's accounts and operations. In addition, the Board considered the proposed transfer agreement between the Fund and the Organization for Security and Cooperation in Europe and the World Trade Organization, the integration of the goals of sustainable development and the principles of the Global Compact into the Fund's operating processes and investment policies, and the possible applications of the Inter-Parliamentary Union, the International Organization for Migration and the International Commission for the Conservation of Atlantic Tunas for membership in the Fund.

ACABQ report. ACABQ, in October [A/59/447], concurred with the Pension Board's recommendation that the current contribution rate of 23.7 per cent of pensionable remuneration be retained. It also agreed with the Board's recommendations that the General Assembly approve a phased approach in the elimination of the 1.5 per cent reduction in the first consumer price index adjustments due after retirement; that the Pension Adjustment System be amended to provide for an adjustable minimum guarantee on the local-currency track of 80 per cent of the United States dollar-track amount, with effect from 1 April 2005, on a prospective basis only; and that the Assembly approve additional resources of $5,340,700 for the 2004-2005 biennium for the Fund's administrative costs. ACABQ expressed concern with the upward trend in the Fund's administrative expenditures and intended to revert to the matter in the context of its examination of the Fund's administrative budget proposal for the 2006-2007 biennium.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 23 December [meeting 76], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee [A/59/606], adopted resolution 59/269 without vote [agenda item 117].

United Nations pension system

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 51/217 of 18 December 1996, 53/210 of 18 December 1998, 55/224 of 23 December 2000 and 57/286 of 20 December 2002, section V of its resolution 54/251 of 23 December 1999 and of its resolution 56/255 of 24 December 2001, and section X of its resolution 58/272 of 23 December 2003,

Having considered the report of the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Board on its fifty-second session, the report of the Secretary-General on the investments of the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Fund and the related report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions,

I

Actuarial matters

Recalling section I of its resolution 57/286,

Having considered the results of the actuarial valuation of the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Fund as at 31 December 2003 and the observations thereon by the Consulting Actuary of the Fund, the Committee of Actuaries and the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Board,

1. Takes note of the developments with respect to the actuarial surplus of the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Fund, which went from 0.36 per cent of pensionable remuneration as at 31 December 1997 to 4.25 per cent of pensionable remuneration as at 31 December 1999 to 2.92 per cent of pensionable remuneration as at 31 December 2001 and to 1.14 per cent of pensionable remuneration as at 31 December 2003, and, in particular, of the opinions on those developments provided by the Consulting Actuary and the Committee of Actuaries, as reproduced in annexes VII and VIII, respectively, to the report of the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Board on its fifty-second session;

2. Also takes note of the Board's agreement with the recommendation of the Committee of Actuaries that most of the surplus should be retained;

3. Further takes note of the view of the Committee of Actuaries and the recommendation of the Board that the current contribution rate of 23.7 per cent of pensionable remuneration should be maintained;

4. Takes note of the Board's approval of the terms of reference for the Committee of Actuaries, and notes that the Standing Committee of the Board will consider in 2005 provisions that would allow for the possible appointment of ad hoc members to the Committee of Actuaries;

5. Concurs, in accordance with article 13 of the Regulations of the Fund and with a view to securing continuity of pension rights:

(a) With the revised transfer agreements of the Fund with the Organization for Security and Cooperation in Europe and the World Trade Organization, as approved by the Board and set out in annex IX to the report of the Board, which will supersede existing transfer agreements, effective 1 January 2005;

(b) With the new transfer agreements of the Fund with the Universal Postal Union and the Preparatory Commission for the Comprehensive Nuclear-Test-Ban Treaty Organization, as approved by the Board and set out in annexes I and II, respectively, to the addendum to the report of the Board, which will become effective on 1 January 2005;

6. Decides, upon the affirmative recommendation of the Board, that the Inter-Parliamentary Union shall be admitted as a new member organization of the Fund, effective 1 January 2005;

II

Pension adjustment system

Recalling section II of its resolution 57/286,

Having considered the reviews carried out by the Consulting Actuary, the Committee of Actuaries and the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Board, as set out in the Board's report, of various aspects of the pension adjustment system,

1. Takes note of the recommendation of the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Board of a phased approach in the elimination of the 1.5 per cent reduction in the first consumer price index adjustments due after retirement, with effect from 1 April 2005, and also takes note of the Board's recommendation that the two-track pension adjustment system of the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Fund be amended to provide for an adjustable minimum guarantee at 80 per cent of the United States dollar-track amount, also with effect from 1 April 2005;

2. Approves, accordingly, with effect from 1 April 2005, the changes in the pension adjustment system set out in the annex to the present resolution, namely:

(a) A phased approach in the elimination of the 1.5 per cent reduction in the first consumer price index adjustments;

(b) The addition of a new provision under the two-track pension adjustment system for an adjustable minimum guarantee at 80 per cent of the United States dollar-track amount, with the understanding that, under the two-track pension adjustment system, benefits are subject to a maximum of 110 or 120 per cent of the local currency track, depending on the date of separation from service, and that the Board will continue to review the costs/savings of all the modifications introduced since 1992 with respect to the two-track feature of the pension adjustment system and will report thereon to the General Assembly every two years on the occasion of the actuarial valuations of the Fund;

3. Requests the Board to review the benefit of the two-track system vis-à-vis the United States dollar track for both the beneficiaries and the Fund as a whole, taking into account the effect of the adjustable minimum guarantee at 80 per cent of the United States dollar-track amount on the utilization rate of the two-track system, and to report thereon to the General Assembly at its sixty-first session;

4. Takes note of the Board's intention to address in 2006, subject to a favourable actuarial valuation as at 31 December 2005, the possible total elimination of the balance of the 1.5 per cent reduction and, on an equal footing, the possible elimination of the limitation on the right to restoration based on length of prior service;

5. Decides not to consider any further proposals to enhance or improve pension benefits until action is taken on the issues contained in section I, paragraph 4, and section II, paragraphs 2 and 3, of its resolution 57/286;

6. Invites the Board to provide information on the special situation of pensioners living in countries having undergone dollarization and on possible proposals to attenuate the adverse consequences arising from the reform;

III

Financial statements of the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Fund and report of the Board of Auditors

Having considered the financial statements of the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Fund for the biennium ended 31 December 2003, the audit opinion and report of the Board of Auditors thereon, the information provided on the internal audits of the Fund and the observations of the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Board,

1. Takes note of the implementation of the recommendations of the Board of Auditors, as described in paragraphs 11 and 12 of its report on the accounts of the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Fund for the biennium ended 31 December 2003, and stresses the need for the Fund to comply fully and in a timely manner with all recommendations of the Board of Auditors;

2. Takes note with satisfaction of the approval of the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Board of an internal audit charter, which recognizes and incorporates policy changes for the Office of Internal Oversight Services of the Secretariat;

3. Notes that the Standing Committee of the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Board will consider, in 2005, the desirability of and possible terms of reference for an audit committee of the Board;

IV

Administrative arrangements of the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Fund

Recalling section VII of its resolution 51/217, section V of its resolutions 52/222, 53/210 and 54/251, section IV of its resolution 55/224, section V of its resolution 56/255, section IV of its resolution 57/286 and section X of its resolution 58/272 concerning the administrative arrangements and expenses of the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Fund,

1. Takes note of the information set out in paragraphs 134 to 136 of the report of the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Board on the revised budget estimates for the biennium 2004-2005;

2. Also takes note of the upward trend in the administrative expenses of the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Fund and of the intention of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions to further consider the matter in the context of the Fund's budget proposals for the biennium 2006-2007;

3. Approves additional resources in the amount of 5,340,700 United States dollars for the biennium 2004-2005 for administrative costs of the Fund, noting that the revised estimates for the biennium would amount to a total appropriation of 41,011,800 dollars for administrative costs;

4. Takes note of the arrangements for leasing office space to accommodate in New York, outside United Nations Headquarters, the Fund secretariat and the Investment Management Service;

V

Size and composition of the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Board and its Standing Committee

Stressing the importance of fair representation of participating organizations in the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Board and its Standing Committee,

1. Takes note of the information set out in paragraphs 200 to 210 of the report of the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Board concerning the review of the size and composition of the Board and its Standing Committee and the decision of the Board that the matter should be further studied by the Working Group established to carry out that review, for consideration by the Standing Committee in 2005 and the Board in 2006;

2. Urges the Board to explore the possibility of meeting annually for a shorter duration and to report its conclusions, including all financial and administrative implications associated with that possibility, to the General Assembly at its sixty-first session;

VI

Other matters

1. Takes note of the agreement of the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Board:

(a) To make no changes to the current methodology used in the determination of final average remuneration but to consider at the meeting of its Standing Committee in 2005 a study containing actuarial cost assessments of a proposed early retirement protection measure, together with both the positive features and the anomalies that might arise as a consequence;

(b) To consider at the meeting of its Standing Committee in 2005 a report on a possible provision to allow for the purchase by participants in the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Fund of additional years of contributory service;

(c) To consider at the meeting of its Standing Committee in 2005 possible applications for membership in the Fund from the International Organization for Migration and the International Commission for the Conservation of Atlantic Tunas;

(d) To consider at its session in 2006 a study on all benefit provisions relating to family benefits;

(e) To consider at its session in 2006 a study, to be carried out in consultation with the medical directors of the common system, on disability issues;

2. Takes note with satisfaction of the progress report on the Fund's management charter, which introduced specific goals and objectives, a detailed action plan for achieving such goals and the status report on the implementation of each goal;

3. Takes note of the arrangements with respect to the comprehensive review of pensionable remuneration that is to be carried out by the International Civil Service Commission in close cooperation with the Board, and also takes note of the timetable and framework for the required close collaboration between the two bodies;

VII

Investments of the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Fund

1. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General on the investments of the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Fund, as well as the observations of the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Board set out in paragraphs 99 to 102 of its report;

2. Also takes note of the significant increase in the market value of the Fund's assets and the positive returns achieved during the biennium;

3. Notes that a comprehensive review will be carried out of the investment policies and practices of the Investment Management Service with a view to addressing the findings and recommendations contained in the audit reports of the Office of Internal Oversight Services of the Secretariat and the Board of Auditors;

4. Takes note of the Board's approval of the terms of reference for the Investments Committee, which will take effect on 1 January 2005;

VIII

Diversification of investments of the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Fund

Recalling its resolutions 36/119 A to C of 10 December 1981,

1. Takes note of the increase in investments of the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Fund in developing countries, and requests the Secretary-General to report to the General Assembly at its sixty-first session on the steps and efforts undertaken to increase, to the maximum extent possible, investments in developing countries;

2. Reaffirms the policy of diversification of the investments of the Fund across geographical areas, wherever this serves the interests of the participants and beneficiaries of the Fund, in accordance with the four criteria of safety, profitability, liquidity and convertibility;

IX

Implementation of the recommendations of the Office of Internal Oversight Services on the Investment Management Service of the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Fund

Recalling its resolution 58/279 of 23 December 2003, Having considered the report of the Secretary-General, Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General.

Annex

Changes to the pension adjustment system of the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Fund

Section H. Subsequent adjustments of the benefit

Add the following new text at the end of paragraph 20:

"Effective 1 April 2005, the reduction in the initial adjustments due after separation shall be by 1.0 percent tage point; with respect to benefits to which the 1.5 percentage point reduction was applied before 1 April 2005, there shall be a 0.5 percentage point increase in the first adjustments due on or after 1 April 2005.”

Section I. Payment of the benefit

Add the following new text at the end of paragraph 23:

“The limitations described in (a) and (b) above shall not result in a benefit being smaller than either the United States dollar base amount determined in accordance with the Regulations of the Fund or 80 per cent of the adjusted United States dollar-track amount.”

Also on 23 December, the Assembly, by decision 59/552, decided that the agenda item on the UN pension system would remain for consideration during its resumed fifty-ninth (2005) session.

Pension Fund investments

The market value of UNJSPF assets as at 31 December 2004 was $29.2 billion, an increase of about 13.6 per cent over the previous year. The Fund's investment assets were distributed in equities (62.5 per cent), bonds (25.7 per cent), real-estate related instruments (5.5 per cent) and short-term holdings (6.3 per cent). The total investment return, as at 31 March 2004, was 28.7 per cent, which after adjustment for the United States consumer price index, represented a real rate of 26.5 per cent.

In October [A/C.5/59/11], the Secretary-General described the economic and investment conditions prevailing in the reporting period ended 31 March 2004 and provided statistical information on the Fund's investment returns and diversification, including development-related investments.

Implementation of OIOS recommendations

In response to General Assembly resolution 58/279 [YUN 2003, p. 1458], the Secretary-General submitted a March report [A/58/725] on the implementation of the 2003 OIOS recommendations on the Investment Management Services of UNJSPF [YUN 2003, p. 1458]. The recommendations covered investment management and procurement and contract administration. Their implementation status was covered in an annex to the report.

On 8 April, the Assembly decided to defer until its fifty-ninth (2004) session consideration of the Secretary-General's report on the implementation of OIOS recommendations on the Investment Management Service of UNJSPF (decision 58/564 B).

Travel-related matters

In October, the Secretary-General submitted a biennial report on standards of accommodation for air travel [A/59/523], listing exceptions to those standards from 1 July 2002 to 30 June 2004 and comparative statistics for the two-year period ended 30 June 2002.

During the 2002-2004 period, the Secretary-General authorized 98 cases of first-class and 138 of business-class air travel, as exceptions to the standards of accommodations, and 87 and 74, respectively, during the 2000-2002 period. Included in the first-class group were the Deputy Secretary-General, the President of the General Assembly and the Secretary-General's personal aide/security officer.

ACABQ report. On 17 November [A/59/573], ACABQ reiterated its request for information on the date of booking, travel dates, itinerary and number of travel days and the nature of the event being attended. It was of the opinion that the time had come to reconsider the whole question of first-class travel. The Committee observed that, in recent years, many airlines had significantly cut back, if not entirely eliminated, first-class sections on aircraft. Instead, several varieties of enhanced business-class travel had been developed, and it appeared that differences in the level of accommodation between those classes and first class were minimal. Taking those developments into account, the General Assembly might wish to give further guidance on the future use of first-class travel with a view to its use in only the most exceptional circumstances.

Administration of justice

The General Assembly, at its resumed fifty-eighth session, had before it for consideration the 18 November 2003 letter from the President of the United Nations Administrative Tribunal addressed to the Chairman of the Fifth Committee [A/C.5/58/16] and the comprehensive report on the activities of the Tribunal [A/58/680] (see p. 1443). By decision 58/576 of 13 September, the Assembly decided to defer consideration of the item entitled “Administration of justice at the United Nations” and to include it in the draft agenda of its fifty-ninth (2004) session.

Follow-up to resolution 57/307

The Secretary-General submitted an October report [A/59/449] on the administration of justice in the Secretariat, in which he outlined action taken to implement General Assembly resolution 57/307 [YUN 2003, p. 1459]. The report examined the findings of the management review of the appeals process conducted by OIOS (see below), alternatives for strengthening the administration of justice, and action taken in respect of the independence of the United Nations Administrative Tribunal (see p. 1443), proposals on the role and work of the Panels on Discrimination and other grievances (see below), activities of the United Nations Administrative Tribunal (see p. 1443), written notification of allegations to staff members, and personal financial responsibility of officials for financial losses to the Organization caused by gross negligence. The Secretary-General also reported on legal insurance schemes and provided statistics on the disposition of cases and work of the Panel of Counsel.

On 23 December, the Assembly deferred until its resumed fifty-ninth (2005) session consideration of the Secretary-General's report (decision 59/551). Also on the same date, the Assembly decided that the agenda item on the administration of justice at the United Nations would remain for consideration until its resumed fifty-ninth (2005) session (decision 59/552).

Panels on Discrimination and Other Grievances

Report of Secretary-General. In response to General Assembly resolution 57/307 [YUN 2003, p. 1459], the Secretary-General submitted an October report on the work and role of the Panels on Discrimination and Other Grievances [A/59/414]. He agreed with the assessment of the team, which had been requested by the Ombudsman to review the functions of the Panels, that they were not effective in their current form, though he recognized that many staff members valued their existence. After consulting with the Ombudsman and staff representatives, the Secretary-General proposed to the Assembly two options as to the future role of the Panels. Under option one, the Panels would be eliminated and their functions assumed by the Office of the Ombudsman. He believed that their elimination would not deprive staff of having their complaints considered by their peers, as that could be done informally, as part of the conciliation carried out by the Joint Appeals Board (JAB), and they could raise employment-related issues with the Ombudsman, which would be appealable to the formal recourse system. Option two would establish a successor mechanism to the Panels, by which the Panels would be abolished and some of their functions (notably, the functions of fact-finding and of writing recommendations) would be taken over by new joint bodies of peers, to be named joint grievance committees, which would be administratively attached to JAB. If the Assembly decided to endorse the second option, it would be necessary that the members of the proposed joint grievance committees be provided with adequate resources in terms of training and administrative support, and would require system-wide consultation with the staff.

On 23 December, the Assembly deferred consideration of the Secretary-General's report until its resumed fifty-ninth (2005) session (decision 59/551).

Management review of the appeals process

OIOS report. Pursuant to General Assembly resolution 48/218 B [YUN 1994, p. 1362], 54/244 [YUN 1999, p. 1274] and 57/307, the Secretary-General transmitted an October report [A/59/408] on the management review of the appeals process at the United Nations carried out by OIOS from March to July 2004. In performing the review, OIOS focused on procedural and institutional matters. Accordingly, its findings could be grouped into four main categories: the time taken to complete the process; the institutional roles played by the various entities in the process; the resources available to the respective parties; and training and communication. With respect to the time taken to complete the process, OIOS found that the appeals process at most duty stations could be shortened, as during the past five years, the average time had ranged from 27 to 37 months for New York, 15 to 26 for Geneva, and 19 to 26 for Nairobi. Only in Vienna were appeals completed in 10 to 17 months. Such delays were attributed to gaps in the formal guidelines that governed the time lines for the process and bottlenecks in productivity caused by insufficient resources. OIOS recommended new time lines as set out in annex III to its report; the amendment of the staff rule III.2 (a) to allow staff wishing to appeal an administrative decision to first address a letter to the Secretary-General, copied to the relevant department or office, requesting that the administrative decision be reviewed; and that the JAB secretariat be directed to amend the Rules of Procedure to allow for only one extension, of no more than one month, to the respondent for preparation of an initial reply.

Regarding the resources available to the respective parties, OIOS found that respondents had available to them the five staff members, including one P-5 and two P-4s, who comprised the Administrative Law Unit of the Office of Human Resources Management (OHRM). Appellants had only the two General Service staff members and the volunteers provided through the Panel of Counsel available to them. Appellants had to pay the costs of any outside legal assistance, while respondents' legal costs were borne by the Organization. OIOS recommended that OHRM assess after one year the extent to which extra staff had reduced the delays in preparation of the respondent's replies and consider the need to amend the Staff Rules, whereby the Secretary-General would approve by default the appellant's access to the Administrative Tribunal should the respondent fail to respond within the prescribed time frame. It also made specific recommendations for additional staff resources to strengthen the resources available to the appellants, such as the establishment of a full-time post of Secretary for the Vienna Appeals Board and recruitment of additional Professional staff for the Panel of Counsel in New York.

With respect to the institutional roles played by the several entities in the process, OIOS found that the Department of Management served as respondent, handling the appeals process through the Administrative Law Unit as representative of the Secretary-General, and took decisions on the recommendations of the JAB Panel on behalf of the Secretary-General. OIOS recommended clarification of accountability and measures to mitigate conflict of interest.

As to training and communication, OIOS found that there were shortcomings in the training provided to members of JAB and the Panel of Counsel. OIOS also found that there was scope for improving the access of staff to information about the status of their appeals through secure electronic means.

The Secretary-General concurred with the OIOS recommendations, subject to the observations provided by the Secretariat, which he further elaborated in his report on the administration of justice (see p. 1441).

On 23 December, the Assembly deferred consideration of the Secretary-General's report to its resumed fifty-ninth (2005) session (decision 59/551).

Joint Appeals Board

In response to section XI of General Assembly resolution 55/258 [YUN 2001, p. 1340], the Secretary-General submitted a March report [A/59/70] on the outcome of the work of JAB in 2003. He stated that 145 appeals and suspension-of-action cases were filed with JAB in New York, Geneva, Vienna and Nairobi in 2003, compared to 159 cases the previous year. JAB disposed of 131 cases compared to 119 in 2002. Regarding disciplinary cases, which were accorded priority, 18 such cases were considered in 2003, compared to 11 the previous year. The Secretary-General accepted fully or partially 84 per cent of unanimous JAB decisions favourable to appellants in 2003 and rejected 17 per cent, compared to 85 per cent acceptances and 15 per cent rejections in 2002.

On 23 December, the Assembly deferred consideration of the Secretary-General's report to its resumed fifty-ninth (2005) session (decision 59/551).

UN Administrative Tribunal

In its annual note to the General Assembly [A/INF/59/5], the United Nations Administrative Tribunal (UNAT) reported in December, through the Secretary-General, that it delivered 59 judgments in 2004, relating to cases brought by staff against the Secretary-General or the executive heads of other UN bodies to resolve disputes involving terms of appointment and other issues. The Tribunal met in plenary in New York on 23 November and held two panel sessions (Geneva, 21 June–23 July; New York, 25 October–24 November).

UNAT report. Pursuant to Assembly resolution 57/307 [YUN 2003, p. 1459], UNAT submitted a January report [A/58/680] on its activities, which provided information on its organization, jurisdiction, functioning, judicial work and finances. The Tribunal supported the strengthening of the existing system and saw no great merit in radically modifying it or in creating a new one. UNAT stressed the importance of presenting an annual report to the Assembly, in order to keep it informed of emerging jurisprudence and of some of the possible conflictst between the Administration and staff members and to draw to its attention administrative practices that needed correction.

Report of Secretary-General. In response to General Assembly resolutions 57/307 and 58/270 [YUN 2003, p. 1399], the Secretary-General, in May [A/59/78], reported on the possibility of the financial independence of UNAT from the Office of Legal Affairs (OLA). The OLA Executive Office supported UNAT's secretariat in its day-to-day operations by providing administrative and logistical services as requested by the Executive Secretary. Without such service, UNAT's secretariat would need an entire administrative infrastructure of its own. UNAT was financially independent from OLA insofar as separate budgetary provisions were made for its operation under the heading "policy-making organs" of Section 8, Office of Legal Affairs, of the programme budget. However, to avoid any appearance of undue influence by the Respondent, the Secretary-General proposed that UNAT and its secretariat be included under Section 1, Overall policy-making, direction and coordination, of the programme budget. He recommended that the Assembly approve the transfer, effective with the beginning of the 2006-2007 biennium.

JIU report. In August [A/59/280 & Corr.1], the Secretary-General transmitted the Joint Inspection Unit (JIU) report on the harmonization of UNAT and the International Labour Organization Administrative Tribunal (ILOAT), prepared in response to General Assembly resolution 57/307. The objective of the report was to provide a definitive opinion of the feasibility of harmonizing the statutes of the two Tribunals. JIU concluded that there were only three major differences between the two Tribunals: selection and appointment of their members; authority of the Tribunals to order specific performance by the executive heads; and limitations on the amount of compensation that might be awarded by the Tribunals. Eliminating those discrepancies should close the gap between them, remove the perception of inequality within the UN internal justice system and strengthen the UN common system with regard to administration of justice. The Inspectors were of the view that all other differences in the statutes and practices of the two Tribunals were minor and did not materially affect the administration of justice, thus bringing the issue of any further harmonization of the statutes to a close.

JIU recommended that the Assembly should continue to keep under review the issue of selection and appointment of UNAT members with a view to bringing those practices into conformity with the statute and practices of ILOAT, and amend article 10 of UNAT's statute to bring it into conformity with ILOAT's statute and settle the issues of specific performance and compensation limitations. The Assembly should continue to treat, as a matter of priority, the improvement of other elements of the process of internal justice that preceded the Tribunal stage of a dispute, since those processes were slow and cumbersome, and expediting and improving them could lead to fewer cases being brought to the Tribunal and result in less costly decisions and procedures. The Secretary-General should invite CEB to develop a mechanism to enhance cooperation and facilitate professional exchange and regular dialogue between UNAT, ILOAT and other international administrative tribunals, particularly with respect to the uniform and consistent application of case law.

In an addendum [A/59/280/Add.1], the Secretary-General presented his comments on the JIU report, which he welcomed, and invited the Assembly to take into consideration the views expressed in his 2002 report on the administration of justice [YUN 2002, p. 1423].

On 23 December, the Assembly deferred consideration of the JIU report and the Secretary-General's comments thereon until its resumed fifty-ninth (2005) session (decision 59/551).

Chapter IV

Institutional and administrative matters

In 2004, the United Nations continued to address administrative and institutional matters in order to ensure the efficient functioning of the Organization. The General Assembly resumed its fifty-eighth session and its tenth emergency special session; it opened its fifty-ninth session on 14 September. The Assembly granted observer status to the Shanghai Cooperation Organization, the Southern African Development Community, the Collective Security Treaty Organization, the Economic Community of West African States, the Organisation of Eastern Caribbean States and the South Asian Association for Regional Cooperation. The Assembly also set out modalities for the participation of the Holy See in UN work.

The Security Council held 216 formal meetings to deal with regional conflicts, peacekeeping operations and other issues related to the maintenance of international peace and security. The Assembly again examined the question of expanding the Council's membership.

In addition to its organizational and substantive sessions, the Economic and Social Council held a special high-level meeting with the Bretton Woods institutions (the World Bank Group and the International Monetary Fund) and the World Trade Organization.

The Committee on Conferences examined requests for changes to the 2004 calendar of meetings and ways of improving the use of conference services and facilities. The Assembly noted the progress in the establishment of a task force to conduct a comprehensive study of workload standards and performance measurement with a view to making a recommendation to the Assembly on a comprehensive methodology. It requested the Secretary-General to elaborate all options for resolving the issue of the time frame for the provision of summary records, and to develop further the functions of the Electronic Meetings Planning and Resource Allocation System and the electronic documentation management concept.

The Secretary-General reported on progress in the implementation of the capital master plan for refurbishing the UN complex, including the offer by the host country of a loan for that purpose and other financing options, and on collaboration between the United Nations and the city and State of New York on arrangements for providing swing space during that period. He also reported on the implementation of the unified security management system for the United Nations and its financing.

On 23 December, the Assembly decided that the item entitled "Admission of new Members to the United Nations" would remain for consideration during its resumed fifty-ninth (2005) session (decision 59/552).

Institutional machinery

General Assembly

The General Assembly met throughout 2004; it resumed and concluded its fifty-eighth session and held the major part of its fifty-ninth session. The fifty-eighth session was resumed in plenary meetings on 9 and 25 February, 7-8 and 14 April, and 6 May. The fifty-ninth session opened on 14 September and continued until its suspension on 23 December.

The Assembly resumed the tenth emergency special session on 16 and 19-20 July to discuss "Illegal Israeli actions in Occupied East Jerusalem and the rest of the Occupied Palestinian Territory" (see p. 465).

Organization of Assembly sessions

2004 sessions

By decision 59/501 of 14 September, the General Assembly authorized the Committee on Relations with the Host Country, the Committee on the Exercise of the Inalienable Rights of the Palestinian People, the Working Group on the Financing of the United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East, the Disarmament Commission, the Special Committee to Investigate Israeli Practices Affecting the Human Rights of the Palestinian People and Other Arabs of the Occupied Territories, the Executive Board of the United Nations Development Programme (UNDP) and of the United Nations Population Fund (UNFPA), and the Executive Boards of the United Nations Children's Fund (UNICEF) and the International Research and Training Institute for the Advancement of Women (INSTRAW) to meet during the main part of its fifty-ninth session; on 4 October, it authorized the United Nations Administrative Tribunal to do likewise.

By decision 59/502 of 17 September, the Assembly adopted a number of provisions concerning the organization of the fifty-ninth session, as recommended by the General Committee [A/59/250 & Add.2-3]. On 14 October, the Assembly decided to hear a statement by UNFPA's Executive Director at the commemoration of the tenth anniversary (see p. 1078) of the 1994 International Conference on Population and Development [YUN 1994, p. 955], under the agenda item on integrated and coordinated implementation of and follow-up to the outcomes of the major UN conferences and summits in the economic, social and related fields. On 15 October, the Assembly decided to consider separately the agenda items on the role of diamonds in fuelling conflict and on the prevention of armed conflict. On 29 October, the Assembly decided to consider separately the agenda items on the situation in the Middle East and on the question of Palestine. On 10 and 20 December, the Assembly postponed the date of recess of the session to 20 and 23 December, respectively.

Credentials

The Credentials Committee, at its first meeting on 10 December [A/59/602], had before it a memorandum by the Secretary-General indicating that, to date, 133 Member States had submitted the formal credentials of their representatives. During the meeting, the Legal Counsel made a statement updating the information contained in the memorandum. Information concerning the representatives of 58 other Member States had been communicated also.

The Committee adopted a resolution accepting the credentials received and recommended a draft resolution to the General Assembly for adoption. On 20 December, the Assembly, by resolution 59/208, approved the Committee's report.

On 23 December, the Assembly decided that the agenda item on the report of the Credentials Committee would remain for consideration during the resumed fifty-ninth (2005) session (decision 59/552).

Agenda

During the resumed fifty-eighth (2004) session, the General Assembly, by decision 58/503 B, took a number of actions related to its agenda. It decided to reopen consideration of the agenda item on the implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples, in order to consider expeditiously a request by Saint Vincent and the Grenadines [A/58/692]; the item on support by the UN system of the efforts of Governments to promote and consolidate new or restored democracies, in order to consider expeditiously a draft resolution [A/58/L.57 & Add.1]; and the sub-item on the causes of conflict and the promotion of durable peace and sustainable development in Africa, in order to hold a plenary meeting to commemorate the International Day of Reflection on the 1994 Genocide in Rwanda. The Assembly also decided to reopen consideration of the sub-item on the further implementation of the Programme of Action for the Sustainable Development of Small Island Developing States and to examine it directly in plenary meeting, in order to consider expeditiously a draft resolution [A/58/L.63]; it agreed to proceed immediately to consideration of the sub-item. On the Secretary-General's proposal, the Assembly decided to include in its agenda the items on the financing of the United Nations Operation in Côte d'Ivoire [A/58/235], the United Nations Stabilization Mission in Haiti [A/58/236] and the United Nations Operation in Burundi [A/58/239], and to allocate those items to the Fifth (Administrative and Budgetary) Committee. On the recommendation of the General Committee [A/58/250/Add.3-4], the Assembly decided to include in the agenda the item on the International Year of Physics, 2005, and to consider it directly in plenary meeting, and to include the sub-item on the appointment of a member of the International Civil Service Commission and allocate it to the Fifth Committee. The Assembly also decided to submit to the Assembly section II of the Secretary-General's report [A/58/864] on the provisional agenda of the Assembly's fifty-ninth regular session organized under headings corresponding to the priorities of the Organization, as contained in the medium-term plan for the period 2002-2005; to submit to the Assembly annex I to the Secretary-General's report [ibid.] on the draft programme of work of the plenary of the Assembly at its fifty-ninth (2004) session, as orally revised; and that the item on the integrated and coordinated implementation of and follow-up to the outcomes of major UN conferences and summits in the economic, social and related fields should be considered jointly with the item on follow-up to the outcome of the Millennium Summit. It further decided to consider the agenda item on the International Criminal Court directly in plenary meeting in order to consider expeditiously a draft resolution [A/58/L.68].

On 8 April, the Assembly deferred until its fifty-ninth (2004) session consideration of the items on the review of the efficiency of the administrative and financial functioning of the United Nations, human resources management, and the Secretary-General's report on the activities of the Office of Internal Oversight Services (OIOS) (decision 58/564 B); the Secretary-General's report on the participation of United Nations Volunteers in peacekeeping operations and the report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions (ACABQ) thereon (decision 58/567). On the same date, the Assembly postponed to the second part of the resumed fifty-eighth session consideration of the issue of financing the capital master plan (decision 58/566).

On 18 June, the Assembly deferred until its fifty-ninth session consideration of the items on the 2004-2005 programme budget and the administrative and budgetary aspects of the financing of UN peacekeeping operations (decision 58/564 C).

On 1 July, the Assembly, on the proposal of its President, decided to consider the report of the World Summit on the Information Society [YUN 2003, p. 857] directly in plenary meeting at its sixtieth (2005) session (decision 58/569).

On 5 August (decision 58/571), the Assembly deferred consideration of the item on multilingualism and included it in the draft agenda of its fifty-ninth session, on the understanding that the item's biennial character would be considered next at the sixty-first (2006) session.

On 13 September, the Assembly decided to consider the report of the Secretary-General on the implementation of resolution 56/212 on the Global Code of Ethics for Tourism [YUN 2001, p. 752] at its sixtieth (2005) session, instead of at its fifty-ninth (2004) session, pursuant to that resolution (decision 58/573). On the same date, the Assembly deferred consideration of, and included in the draft agenda of the fifty-ninth session, the items on: the confirmation of the appointment of the Secretary-General of the United Nations Conference on Trade and Development (UNCTAD) (decision 58/574), improving the financial situation of the United Nations (decision 58/575), administration of justice at the United Nations (decision 58/576), the financing of the United Nations Angola Verification Mission and the United Nations Observer Mission in Angola (decision 58/577), and the financing of the United Nations Mission in East Timor (decision 58/578).

The Assembly took a number of actions in respect of its fifty-ninth (2004) session agenda, as listed in decision 59/503 A. On 17 September, on the recommendation of the General Committee

[A/59/250], it adopted the agenda [A/59/251] and allocation of agenda items [A/59/252], and deferred consideration of, and included in the provisional agenda of its sixtieth (2005) session, the items "Question of the Comorian island of Mayotte" and "Question of the Malagasy islands of Glorieuses, Juan de Nova, Europa and Bassas da India". On 4 October, also on the recommendation of the General Committee [A/59/250/Add.1], the Assembly included in the agenda of its fifty-ninth (2004) session an additional item on observer status for the Economic Community of West African States in the Assembly and allocated it to the Sixth (Legal) Committee; included in the agenda an additional sub-item on cooperation between the United Nations and the community of Portuguese-speaking countries under the item "Cooperation between the United Nations and other organizations" and decided to consider it directly in plenary meeting; and allocated to the Third (Social, Humanitarian and Cultural) Committee the item on programme planning, with respect to programme 19 (Human rights) of the strategic framework for the period 2006-2007. On 15 October, the Assembly, on the recommendation of the General Committee [A/59/250/Add.2], included an additional item on observer status for the Organisation of Eastern Caribbean States in the Assembly and allocated it to the Sixth Committee. On 29 October, on the recommendation of the General Committee [A/59/250/Add.3], it included in the agenda of its fifty-ninth (2004) session and decided to consider in plenary meeting the additional items "Andean zone of peace" and "The situation in the occupied territories of Azerbaijan"; included in the agenda and allocated to the Sixth Committee the item "Observer status for the South Asian Association for Regional Cooperation in the General Assembly"; and included in the agenda an additional sub-item on the election of a member of the International Court of Justice under the item "Elections to fill vacancies in principal organs" and decided to consider it directly in plenary meeting. On 30 November, the Assembly, on the recommendation of the General Committee [A/59/250/Add.4], included in the agenda and allocated to the Second (Economic and Financial) Committee the additional sub-item on rendering assistance to the poor mountain countries to overcome obstacles in socio-economic and ecological areas under the item "Sustainable development".

The Assembly included in the provisional agenda of its sixtieth (2005) session the items "Establishment of a nuclear-weapon-free zone in Central Asia" (decision 59/513), "United Nations conference to identify ways of eliminating nuclear dangers in the context of nuclear disarmament” (decision 59/514) (see p. 536), “Problems arising from the accumulation of conventional ammunition stockpiles in surplus” (decision 59/515), and “Assistance in mine action” (decision 59/516).

On 23 December, the Assembly deferred until its resumed fifty-ninth (2005) session consideration of the items on the 2004-2005 programme budget and the administration of justice at the United Nations (decision 59/551 A); retained 74 items for consideration during that session, including items on the election of its President and Vice-Presidents and the officers of its main committees (decision 59/552); and deferred consideration of, and included in the provisional agenda of its sixty-first (2006) session, the item on the role of the United Nations in promoting a new global human order (decision 59/543).

Resolutions and decisions of the General Assembly

By decision 59/509 of 8 November, the Assembly deferred consideration of the agenda item “Implementation of the resolutions of the United Nations” and included it in the provisional agenda of its sixtieth (2005) session.

Security Council

The Security Council held 216 formal meetings in 2004, adopted 59 resolutions and issued 48 presidential statements. It considered 51 agenda items (see APPENDIX IV). In a September note [A/59/335], the Secretary-General, in accordance with Article 12, paragraph 2 of the Charter of the United Nations and with the consent of the Council, notified the General Assembly of 61 matters relative to the maintenance of international peace and security that the Council had discussed since his previous annual notification [YUN 2003, p. 1465]. The Secretary-General also listed 85 matters that the Council had not discussed since then. The Assembly, on 11 October, took note of the Secretary-General’s note (decision 59/505).

On 13 October, the Assembly took note of the Council’s report for the period 1 August 2003 to 31 July 2004 [A/59/2] (decision 59/506). It decided on 23 December that the item on the Council’s report would remain for consideration during its resumed fifty-ninth (2005) session (decision 59/552).

Membership

The General Assembly continued to examine the question of expanding the Security Council’s membership. It considered the report of the Open-ended Working Group on the Question of Equitable Representation on and Increase in the Membership of the Security Council and Other Matters related to the Security Council [A/58/47]. (For details and related Assembly decisions, see p. 1378).

Economic and Social Council

The Economic and Social Council held its organizational session for 2004 on 21 January, 4 to 6, 13 and 27 February, 23 April, and 1 and 4 May; a resumed organizational session on 3, 15 and 23 June; and a special high-level meeting with the Bretton Woods institutions (the World Bank Group and the International Monetary Fund) and the World Trade Organization (WTO) on 26 April, all in New York. It held its substantive session from 28 June to 23 July and resumed substantive session on 16 September and on 5 and 11 November, all in New York.

On 21 January, the Council elected its Bureau (a President and four Vice-Presidents) for 2004 (see APPENDIX III) and adopted the agenda of its organizational session [E/2004/2 & Add.1].

On 4 February, the Council approved the change in the dates of its 2004 substantive session from 6 to 30 July to 28 June to 23 July (decision 2004/202), adopted the provisional agenda (decision 2004/203) and decided on the working arrangements for that session (decision 2004/205). On 28 June, it adopted the agenda [E/2004/100 & Corr. 2] and approved the proposed programme of work of that session [E/2004/L.7]. On 29 June, it approved the requests for hearings from non-governmental organizations (NGOs) [E/2004/84] (decision 2004/230).

Sessions and segments

During 2004, the Economic and Social Council adopted 69 resolutions and 128 decisions. By decision 2004/205 of 4 February, the Council decided that the high-level segment of its substantive session would be held from 28 to 30 June; the coordination segment from 1 to 7 July; the operational activities segment from 7 to 9 July; the humanitarian affairs segment from 10 to 14 July; and the general segment from 15 to 22 July. By decision 2004/207 of the same date, the Council decided that its high-level meeting with the Bretton Woods institutions and WTO would be held in New York on 26 April.

The work of the Council in 2004 was covered in its report to the General Assembly [A/59/3 & Add.1-2]. On 23 December, the Assembly decided that the item on the Council's report would remain for consideration at its resumed fifty-ninth (2005) session (decision 59/552).

2004 and 2005 sessions

On 4 February (decision 2004/206), the Council decided that the work of its 2004 operational activities segment should be devoted to the triennial comprehensive policy review of operational activities for development of the UN system and the implementation of General Assembly resolution 56/201 [YUN 2001, p. 784] and Council resolution 2003/3 [YUN 2003, p. 883]. On 13 February, it decided that the theme for the regional cooperation item at its 2004 substantive session should be "Information technology for development: a regional perspective" (decision 2004/213). On 3 May, it decided that the theme for the 2004 humanitarian affairs segment would be "Strengthening of the coordination of humanitarian assistance of the United Nations: present and future challenges", and that it would convene two panels on the themes "Strengthening preparedness and response to natural disasters, with an emphasis on capacity-building" and "Field-level coordination for the purpose of continuing the presence and operation of United Nations humanitarian assistance missions in higher risk environments" (decision 2004/219).

On 23 July, the Council, by decision 2004/294, adopted the following theme for its high-level segment in 2005: "Achieving the internationally agreed development goals, including those contained in the Millennium Declaration, as well as implementing the outcomes of the major UN conferences and summits: progress made, challenges and opportunities". On the same date, it adopted the theme "Towards achieving internationally agreed development goals, including those contained in the Millennium Declaration" for the coordination segment in 2005, and decided to continue consultations on a multi-year work programme for that segment, with a view to finalizing the programme before the beginning of the next substantive session in 2005 (decision 2004/292).

Work programme

On 4 February, the Economic and Social Council, having considered its proposed basic programme of work for 2004 and 2005 [E/2004/1 & Corr.1], took note of the list of questions for inclusion in the programme of work for 2005 (decision 2004/204).

Coordination, monitoring and cooperation

Institutional mechanisms

CEB activities

According to its annual overview report [E/2005/63], the work of the United Nations System Chief Executives Board for Coordination (CEB) was dominated by preparations for the comprehensive review, to take place at the High-level Plenary Meeting of the General Assembly in 2005, of the implementation of the Millennium Declaration, adopted by the General Assembly in resolution 55/2 [YUN 2000, p. 49]. In that context, it took up the themes of curbing transnational crime, bridging the digital divide and fostering inter-agency collaboration in information and communication technology. It continued to consider the issues of conflict prevention; strengthening system-wide support for Africa's development and the New Partnership for Africa's Development (NEPAD); and increasing the effectiveness and coherence of UN system activities at the country level. In the area of management, CEB continued to focus on staff security and safety, human and financial resources management, and UN system oversight. In response to a request by the Committee for Programme and Coordination (see below), the overview report contained information on inter-agency collaboration to fight hunger.

CEB held two regular sessions in 2004: the first in Vienna, Austria, (2-3 April) [CEB/2004/1] and the second in New York (29-30 October) [CEB/2004/2]. Its principal subsidiary bodies met as follows: the High-level Committee on Management (HLCM), seventh (London, 8-9 March) [CEB/2004/3] and eighth (Rome, 5-6 October) [CEB/2004/6] sessions; the High-level Committee on Programmes (HLCP), seventh (Beirut, Lebanon, 26-27 February) [CEB/2004/4] and eighth (Florence, Italy, 15-17 September) [CEB/2004/7] sessions, with an intersessional meeting (Frascati, Italy, 31 May and 1 June) [CEB/2004/5].

Report for 2003

The Committee for Programme and Coordination (CPC) [A/59/16] considered CEB's annual overview report for 2003 [YUN 2003, p. 1466]. It underlined the importance of effective coordination of system-wide efforts against hunger and recommended that CEB include, in its annual overview report for 2004 (see above), information on existing mechanisms in that area and on any further initiatives envisaged. CPC called for a further strengthening of UN system support for Africa's development by, among other things, promoting synergies among the five inter-agency thematic clusters (infrastructure development; governance, peace and security; agriculture, trade and market access; environment, population and urbanization; human resources development/employment and HIV/AIDS); mainstreaming HIV/AIDS, gender and human rights into all cluster activities; enhancing support for the Commission of the African Union (AU) and NEPAD; and further clarifying the roles and responsibilities of the various agencies operating at the regional and subregional levels in Africa. It welcomed CEB's intention to undertake an in-depth review of UN system support for Africa's development and NEPAD, with a view to strengthening such support. CPC supported CEB's efforts to build a system-wide capacity for conflict prevention through comprehensive, multidimensional and country-based approaches, as well as through enhanced dialogue and improved information-sharing among the organizations concerned, and encouraged CEB to continue to pursue its efforts in that regard. It reiterated its concern over the increased threats to the safety and security of UN system staff and reaffirmed its full support for ongoing efforts to strengthen the security management system. CPC urged CEB to intensify inter-agency cooperation and exchange of information on practices in measuring programme performance and results, productivity in service functions, and on conference management. It recommended that the General Assembly revert to the issue of the establishment of the Senior Management Service at its fifty-ninth (2004) session, under the agenda item on the UN common system.

The Economic and Social Council, by decision 2004/311 of 23 July, took note of CEB's 2003 report; welcomed progress in CEB's work, particularly as it related to harnessing UN system activities in support of the integrated follow-up to conferences and the Millennium Declaration [YUN 2000, p. 49]; and looked forward to further strengthening its dialogue with CEB members on all relevant aspects of UN system work and its effective coordination in the light of CEB's annual reports.

Programme coordination

The Committee for Programme and Coordination held an organizational meeting on 1 June and its forty-fourth session from 7 June to 2 July, all in New York [A/59/16].

CPC dealt with questions related to programme planning, UN programme performance for the 2002-2003 biennium, and the proposed strategic framework for 2006-2007. It considered OIOS reports on strengthening the role of evaluation findings in programme design, delivery and policy directives; further development of topics for a pilot thematic evaluation; the in-depth evaluation of the programme on public administration, finance and development; and two triennial reviews of the implementation of CPC recommendations on in-depth evaluations of sustainable development and the population programme. In addition to its review of CEB's 2003 annual report (see above), CPC also considered the Secretary-General's report on UN system support for NEPAD.

The Economic and Social Council, by decision 2004/295 of 23 July, deferred consideration of the reports of coordination bodies and the proposed strategic framework for the 2006-2007 biennium. On 16 September (decision 2004/318), the Council took note of CPC's report.

Joint Inspection Unit

The Joint Inspection Unit (JIU), in its annual report to the General Assembly covering the period 1 January to 31 December 2003 [A/59/34], described its process of reform which began during that year [YUN 2003, p. 1388]. It discussed its reports issued in 2003, the establishment of the follow-up system for the systematic tracking of the status of JIU recommendations and the potential impact of the recommendations. JIU increased cooperation with other oversight bodies and systematically sought contacts with their representatives.

(For General Assembly action on the report, see resolution 59/267 on p. 1373.)

Other coordination matters

Follow-up to international conferences

In response to General Assembly resolution 57/270 B [YUN 2003, p. 1468], the Secretary-General submitted a report outlining the overall approach and core elements for the integrated and coordinated follow-up to the outcomes of the major UN conferences and summits in the economic and social fields [A/58/359].

In a May report [E/2004/71], the Secretary-General identified steps that had been taken to implement the provisions of resolution 57/270 B that were relevant to the work of the Economic and Social Council and focused on areas that needed further action in order to promote coordinated implementation throughout the UN system. The report contained recommendations for: a Council review of conference implementation through a cross-sectoral approach and greater thematic unity and interlinkages between Council segments; guiding functional commissions to focus on implementation; promoting a coordinated UN system support to conference implementation; strengthening the relationship between the Council and financial and trade institutions; and complying with the specific mandates given to the Council in the outcomes of major UN conferences and summits, including the 2002 World Summit on Sustainable Development [YUN 2002, p. 821], the 2002 International Conference on Financing for Development [YUN 2002, p. 953], the Third (2001) United Nations Conference on the Least Developed Countries (LDCs) [YUN 2001, p. 770] and the 2003 International Ministerial Conference of Landlocked and Transit Developing Countries and Donor Countries and International Financial and Development Institutions on Transit Transport Cooperation [YUN 2003, p. 875]. The report also discussed the Council's contribution to the high-level plenary meeting of the Assembly scheduled to take place in 2005, which would undertake a comprehensive review of the progress achieved in implementing the commitments made in the Millennium Declaration. (For further information on preparations for the 2005 high-level plenary meeting, see p. 1363.)

By decision 2004/310 of 23 July, the Council deferred until its resumed substantive session in September consideration of draft resolutions on the implementation of the Programme of Action for the Least Developed Countries for the Decade 2001-2010 [E/2004/L.39], adopted at the Third UN Conference on LDCs in 2001, and on the 2002 International Conference on Financing for Development [E/2004/L.47].

ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL ACTION

On 22 July [meeting 48], the Economic and Social Council adopted resolution 2004/44 [draft: E/2004/L.24/Rev.1] without vote [agenda items 6 and 8].

Role of the Economic and Social Council in the integrated and coordinated implementation of the outcomes of and follow-up to major United Nations conferences and summits

The Economic and Social Council,

Recalling its agreed conclusions 1995/1 of 28 July 1995 and 2002/1 of 26 July 2002 and its relevant resolutions on the integrated and coordinated implementation of and follow-up to the outcomes of major United Nations conferences and summits,

Recalling also General Assembly resolutions 50/227 of 24 May 1996, 52/12 B of 19 December 1997 and 57/270 B of 23 June 2003,

Recalling further the internationally agreed development goals, including those contained in the United Nations Millennium Declaration, and the outcomes of the major United Nations conferences and summits and the reviews of their implementation in the economic, social and related fields,

Taking note of the report of the Secretary-General,

1. Decides to continue to take the steps necessary for the effective implementation of the provisions of resolutions 50/227, 52/12 B and 57/270 B, which are relevant to the work of the Economic and Social Council and its subsidiary machinery;

2. Welcomes General Assembly resolution 58/291 of 6 May 2004 on follow-up to the outcome of the Millennium Summit and integrated and coordinated implementation of and follow-up to the outcomes of the major United Nations conferences and summits in the economic and social fields, and decides to contribute to the overall preparation for the high-level plenary meeting of the Assembly in 2005, in accordance with the modalities to be set out by the Assembly at its fifty-ninth session;

3. Requests, in this regard, the functional commissions, the regional commissions and other relevant subsidiary bodies to contribute to the preparation of the input of the Economic and Social Council to the high-level plenary meeting of the General Assembly;

4. Requests the functional commissions and other relevant subsidiary bodies to continue to examine their methods of work, as mandated in resolution 57/270 B, in order better to pursue the implementation of the outcomes of major United Nations conferences and summits, and to submit their reports to the Council in 2005;

5. Decides to revise the title of agenda item 8 to read "Implementation of General Assembly resolutions 50/227, 52/12 B and 57/270 B" at the next substantive session of the Council in 2005;

6. Requests the Secretary-General to submit a report on the role of the Economic and Social Council in the implementation of General Assembly resolutions 50/227, 52/12 B and 57/270 B for consideration by the Council at its substantive session of 2005.

Report of Secretary-General. An August report of the Secretary-General [A/59/224] updated information on the implementation of General Assembly resolution 57/270 B [YUN 2003, p. 1468]. It described progress made by the intergovernmental bodies and the UN system in promoting an integrated and coordinated approach to the implementation of conference and summit outcomes, including the work of the Assembly and its Second and Third Committees, and made recommendations for further action in that regard. The report was to be read in conjunction with the Secretary-General's May report on the same subject (see p. 1450).

In February, the Economic and Social Council initiated consultations on the multi-year work programme for the coordination segment of its substantive session, based on a focused and balanced list of cross-sectoral thematic issues common to the outcomes of major UN conferences and summits. While the Council agreed on a cross-cutting theme focused on the Millennium Development Goals (MDGs) [YUN 2000, p. 51] and made some progress towards identifying themes for the multi-year programme, the consultations could not be finalized during the 2004 substantive session, thus the Council decided to continue consultations with a view to finalizing its programme before its 2005 substantive session. As requested in resolution 57/270 B, consultations were held between the presidents of the bureaux of the Assembly and Council to improve coordination between the two bodies in the consideration of the integrated coordinated implementation of and follow-up to conference outcomes. The functional commissions continued to examine their work methods in order to better implement conference outcomes, and were required to report to the Council no later than 2005 in that regard. The regional commissions were strengthening their role in linking global deliberations with regional implementation measures, while continuing to support subregional and regional integration and consensus-building. Further action was needed to strengthen the linkage between the Council's policy guidance and the operational activities of the UN system, in particular with regard to the coordinated implementation of conference outcomes. Under the aegis of the CEB High-Level Committee on Programmes (HLCP), work was under way on a system-wide contribution to the first comprehensive review of the implementation of the Millennium Declaration, to be undertaken during the high-level plenary meeting of the Assembly in 2005. The bureaux of the Second and Third Committees examined various aspects of their work during the fifty-eighth (2003) session and were expected to meet again during the fifty-ninth (2004) session, and the Assembly continued to explore ways and means of improving the work of its two Committees.

The Secretary-General concluded that ensuring a coherent and coordinated approach in the implementation of policies and actions to advance poverty eradication and sustainable development was more crucial than ever, and such an approach should facilitate the forming of coherent, cross-sectoral alliances around common themes and goals for joint action at the national and international levels. The guidance given to various entities by the Assembly was serving to reinforce the efforts of those institutions for more coordination and cooperation.

On 10 September, the Assembly decided that the agenda item on the integrated and coordinated implementation of and follow-up to the outcomes of the major UN conferences and summits in the economic, social and related fields should be considered jointly with the item on follow-up to the outcome of the 2000 Millennium Summit [YUN 2000, p. 47] (decision 58/503 B).

On 23 December, the Assembly decided that the agenda item would remain for consideration during its resumed fifty-ninth (2005) session (decision 59/552).

The UN and other organizations

Requests for conversion to UN specialized agency

International Civil Defence Organization

The Economic and Social Council, by decision 2004/209 of 4 February, deferred until further notice, at the request of the International Civil Defence Organization [E/2004/6], consideration of the request for conversion of the Organization, an intergovernmental body with observer status with the Council, to a specialized agency of the UN system [YUN 2002, p. 1437].

Cooperation with organizations

In response to General Assembly resolution 58/316 (see p. 1374), the Secretary-General submitted a September consolidated report [A/59/303] on cooperation between the United Nations and regional and other organizations, including the African Union (see p. 283); the Association of Southeast Asian Nations (see p. 388); the Caribbean Community (see p. 306); the Council of Europe (see p. 450); the Economic Community of Central African States (see p. 999); the League of Arab States (see p. 1454); the Organization of the Islamic Conference (see p. 1453); the Organization of American States (see p. 307); the International Organization of la Francophonie (see p. 1456); the Organization for Security and Cooperation in Europe (see p. 451); the Pacific Islands Forum (see p. 387); the Southern African Development Community (see p. 999); the Asian-African Legal Consultative Organization (see p. 1348); the Black Sea Economic Cooperation Organization (see p. 1017); the Economic Cooperation Organization (see p. 1011); the Inter-Parliamentary Union (see p. 1455); the Latin American Economic System (see p. 1026); the Organization for the Prohibition of Chemical Weapons (see p. 558); and the Preparatory Commission for the Comprehensive Nuclear-Test-Ban Treaty Organization (see p. 539).

Organization of the Islamic Conference

In response to General Assembly resolution 57/42 [YUN 2002, p. 1438], the Secretary-General, in his September consolidated report [A/59/303], provided information on cooperation between the United Nations and the Organization of the Islamic Conference (OIC). Consultations at all levels continued to be held on a regular basis between the two organizations on political, economic, social and humanitarian issues, focusing on the situation in the Middle East, Iraq, Afghanistan and the Sudan, and on conflict prevention and the fight against terrorism. The general meeting to evaluate the existing mechanisms of cooperation between the United Nations and OIC (Vienna, 13-15 July) produced a number of proposals to enhance liaison and the exchange of expertise in the political field, and decided on a series of joint projects in areas including science, technology, trade, food security, agriculture, human resources development, environment, health, arts and promotion of heritage, and education. The United Nations and its institutions continued to undertake joint activities and programmes and to exchange information and documents with OIC's specialized and affiliated institutions and subsidiary organs in support of social, economic and cultural development.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 22 October [meeting 40], the General Assembly adopted resolution 59/8 [draft: A/59/L.12 & Add.1, orally revised] without vote [agenda item 56 (p)].

Cooperation between the United Nations and the Organization of the Islamic Conference

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 37/4 of 22 October 1982, 38/4 of 28 October 1983, 39/7 of 8 November 1984, 40/4 of 25 October 1985, 41/3 of 16 October 1986, 42/4 of 15 October 1987, 43/2 of 17 October 1988, 44/8 of 18 October 1989, 45/9 of 25 October 1990, 46/13 of 28 October 1991, 47/18 of 23 November 1992, 48/24 of 24 November 1993, 49/15 of 15 November 1994, 50/17 of 20 November 1995, 51/18 of 14 November 1996, 52/4 of 22 October 1997, 53/16 of 29 October 1998, 54/7 of 25 October 1999, 55/9 of 30 October 2000, 56/47 of 7 December 2001 and 57/42 of 21 November 2002,

Recalling also its resolution 3369(XXX) of 10 October 1975, by which it decided to invite the Organization of the Islamic Conference to participate in the sessions and the work of the General Assembly and of its subsidiary organs in the capacity of observer,

Having considered the report of the Secretary-General on cooperation between the United Nations and regional and other organizations,

Taking into account the desire of the two organizations to continue to cooperate closely in the political, economic, social, humanitarian, cultural and scientific fields and in their common search for solutions to global problems, such as questions relating to international peace and security, disarmament, self-determination, decolonization, fundamental human rights and economic and social development,

Recalling the Articles of the Charter of the United Nations that encourage activities through regional cooperation for the promotion of the purposes and principles of the United Nations,

Noting the strengthening of cooperation between the United Nations, its funds and programmes and the specialized agencies and the Organization of the Islamic Conference, its subsidiary organs and its specialized and affiliated institutions,

Noting also the encouraging progress made in the ten priority areas of cooperation between the two organizations and their respective agencies and institutions, as well as in the identification of other areas of cooperation between them,

Convinced that the strengthening of cooperation between the United Nations and other organizations of the United Nations system and the Organization of the Islamic Conference and its organs and institutions contributes to the promotion of the purposes and principles of the United Nations,

Welcoming the results of the general meeting of the organizations and agencies of the United Nations system and the Organization of the Islamic Conference and its subsidiary organs and specialized and affiliated institutions, held in Vienna from 13 to 15 July 2004, and the fact that these meetings are now being held every two years, with the next one scheduled for 2006,

Noting with appreciation the determination of both organizations to strengthen further the existing cooperation by developing specific proposals in the designated priority areas of cooperation, as well as in the political field,

1. Takes note with satisfaction of the report of the Secretary-General;

2. Notes with satisfaction the active participation of the Organization of the Islamic Conference in the work of the United Nations towards the realization of the purposes and principles embodied in the Charter of the United Nations;

3. Requests the United Nations and the Organization of the Islamic Conference to continue to cooperate in their common search for solutions to global problems, such as questions relating to international peace and security, disarmament, self-determination, decolonization, fundamental human rights, emergency relief and rehabilitation, social and economic development and technical cooperation;

4. Welcomes the efforts of the United Nations and the Organization of the Islamic Conference to continue to strengthen cooperation between the two organizations in areas of common concern and to review and explore innovative ways and means of enhancing the mechanisms of such cooperation;

5. Welcomes with appreciation the continuing cooperation between the United Nations and the Organization of the Islamic Conference in the fields of peace-making, preventive diplomacy, peacekeeping and peacebuilding, and notes the close cooperation between the two organizations in reconstruction and development in Afghanistan and Sierra Leone;

6. Welcomes the efforts of the secretariats of the two organizations to strengthen information exchange, coordination and cooperation between them in areas of mutual interest in the political field and to develop practical modalities of such cooperation;

7. Also welcomes the periodic high-level meetings between the Secretary-General of the United Nations and the Secretary-General of the Organization of the Islamic Conference, as well as between senior secretariat officials of the two organizations, and encourages their participation in important meetings of the two organizations;

8. Encourages the specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system to continue to expand their cooperation with the subsidiary organs and specialized and affiliated institutions of the Organization of the Islamic Conference, in particular by negotiating cooperation agreements, and through necessary contacts and meetings of the respective focal points for cooperation in priority areas of interest to the United Nations and the Organization of the Islamic Conference;

9. Urges the United Nations and other organizations of the United Nations system, especially the lead agencies, to provide increased technical and other forms of assistance to the Organization of the Islamic Conference and its subsidiary organs and specialized and affiliated institutions in order to enhance cooperation;

10. Expresses its appreciation to the Secretary-General for his continued efforts to strengthen cooperation and coordination between the United Nations and other organizations of the United Nations system and the Organization of the Islamic Conference and its subsidiary organs and specialized and affiliated institutions to serve the mutual interests of the two organizations in the political, economic, social, cultural, humanitarian and scientific fields;

11. Requests the Secretary-General to report to the General Assembly at its sixty-first session on the state of cooperation between the United Nations and the Organization of the Islamic Conference;

12. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its sixty-first session the sub-item entitled "Cooperation between the United Nations and the Organization of the Islamic Conference".

League of Arab States

In response to General Assembly resolution 57/46 [YUN 2002, p. 1439], the Secretary-General, in his September consolidated report [A/59/303], provided information on the continuing and multifaceted cooperation between the United Nations and the League of Arab States (LAS). The two organizations agreed to enhance cooperation between the United Nations Industrial Development Organization and the Arab Industrial Development and Mining Organization in areas including the strengthening of technological capacity, development of a centre of training and excellence on industrial information and networks, and fostering a cleaner production concept in the Arab region in support of the implementation of multilateral environmental agreements.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 22 October [meeting 40], the General Assembly adopted resolution 59/9 [draft: A/59/L.13] without vote [agenda item 56 (I)].

Cooperation between the United Nations and the League of Arab States

The General Assembly,

Recalling its previous resolutions on cooperation between the United Nations and the League of Arab States,

Having considered the report of the Secretary-General on cooperation between the United Nations and regional and other organizations,

Recalling article 3 of the Pact of the League of Arab States, which entrusts the Council of the League with the function of determining the means whereby the League will collaborate with the international organizations which may be created in the future to guarantee peace and security and organize economic and social relations,

Noting the desire of both organizations to consolidate, develop and enhance further the ties existing between them in the political, economic, social, humanitarian, cultural, technical and administrative fields,

Taking into account the report of the Secretary-General entitled "An Agenda for Peace", in particular section VII, concerning cooperation with regional arrangements and organizations, and the "Supplement to an Agenda for Peace",

Convinced of the need for more efficient and coordinated utilization of available economic and financial resources in order to promote the common objectives of the two organizations,

Recognizing the need for the further strengthening of cooperation between the United Nations system and the League of Arab States and its specialized organizations for the realization of the common goals and objectives of the two organizations,

1. Takes note with satisfaction of the report of the Secretary-General;

2. Commends the continued efforts of the League of Arab States to promote multilateral cooperation among Arab States, and requests the United Nations system to continue to lend its support;

3. Expresses its appreciation to the Secretary-General for the follow-up action taken by him to implement the proposals adopted at the meetings between the representatives of the secretariats of the United Nations and other organizations of the United Nations system and the General Secretariat of the League of Arab States and its specialized organizations, including the sectoral meeting in 2004 on the theme "Achieving and financing the Millennium Development Goals and sustainable development for the members of the League of Arab States";

4. Requests the Secretariat of the United Nations and the General Secretariat of the League of Arab States, within their respective fields of competence, to intensify further their cooperation for the realization of the purposes and principles embodied in the Charter of the United Nations, the strengthening of international peace and security, economic and social development, disarmament, decolonization, self-determination and the eradication of all forms of racism and racial discrimination;

5. Requests the Secretary-General to continue his efforts to strengthen cooperation and coordination between the United Nations and other organizations and agencies of the United Nations system and the League of Arab States and its specialized organizations in order to enhance their capacity to serve the mutual interests and objectives of the two organizations in the political, economic, social, humanitarian, cultural and administrative fields;

6. Calls upon the specialized agencies and other organizations and programmes of the United Nations system:

(a) To continue to cooperate with the Secretary-General and among themselves, as well as with the League of Arab States and its specialized organizations, in the follow-up of multilateral proposals aimed at strengthening and expanding cooperation in all fields between the United Nations system and the League of Arab States and its specialized organizations;

(b) To strengthen the capacity of the League of Arab States and of its institutions and specialized organizations to benefit from globalization and information technology and to meet the development challenges of the new millennium;

(c) To step up cooperation and coordination with the specialized organizations of the League of Arab States in the organization of seminars and training courses and in the preparation of studies;

(d) To maintain and increase contacts and improve the mechanism of consultation with the counterpart programmes, organizations and agencies concerned regarding projects and programmes in order to facilitate their implementation;

(e) To participate whenever possible with organizations and institutions of the League of Arab States in the execution and implementation of development projects in the Arab region;

(f) To inform the Secretary-General of the progress made in their cooperation with the League of Arab States and its specialized organizations and, in particular, of the follow-up action taken on the multilateral and bilateral proposals adopted at the previous meetings between the two organizations;

7. Also calls upon the specialized agencies and other organizations and programmes of the United Nations system to increase their cooperation with the League of Arab States and its specialized organizations in the priority sectors of energy, rural development, desertification and green belts, training and vocational education, technology, environment, information and documentation, trade and finance, water resources, development of the agricultural sector, empowerment of women, transport, communications and information, promotion of the role of the private sector and capacity-building;

8. Requests the Secretary-General of the United Nations, in cooperation with the Secretary-General of the League of Arab States, to encourage periodic consultation between representatives of the Secretariat of the United Nations and of the General Secretariat of the League of Arab States in order to review and strengthen coordination mechanisms with a view to accelerating implementation of, and follow-up action on, the multilateral projects, proposals and recommendations adopted at the meetings between the two organizations;

9. Recommends that the United Nations and all organizations of the United Nations system make the greatest possible use of Arab institutions and technical expertise in projects undertaken in the Arab region;

10. Reaffirms that, in order to enhance cooperation and for the purpose of the review and appraisal of progress, a general meeting between representatives of the United Nations system and the League of Arab States should be held once every two years and that joint inter-agency sectoral meetings should also be convened on a biennial basis to address priority areas of major importance to the development of Arab States, on the basis of agreement between the United Nations system and the League of Arab States and its specialized organizations;

11. Also reaffirms the importance of holding the next general meeting on cooperation between representatives of the secretariats of the organizations of the United Nations system and the General Secretariat of the League of Arab States and its specialized organizations during 2005;

12. Requests the Secretary-General to submit to the General Assembly at its sixty-first session a report on the implementation of the present resolution;

13. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its sixty-first session the sub-item entitled "Cooperation between the United Nations and the League of Arab States".

Inter-Parliamentary Union

Pursuant to General Assembly resolution 57/47 [YUN 2002, p. 1441], the Secretary-General, in his September consolidated report [A/59/303], detailed the growing cooperation between the United Nations and the Inter-Parliamentary Union (IPU) in bringing a parliamentary dimension to UN work, including in the areas of peace and security, economic and social development, humanitarian affairs and crisis management, international law and human rights, democracy and gender issues. The report also addressed institutional efforts aimed at strengthening the relationship between the United Nations and IPU. The Secretary-General acknowledged IPU's contribution to meeting the major goals and objectives of the international community and welcomed the decision to hold, in August 2005, the Second Conference of Speakers of Parliaments, with a special focus on the contribution by parliaments in meeting the Millennium Development Goals (MDGs) [YUN 2000, p. 51], and on action and modalities to enhance the parliamentary dimension of international cooperation. He also looked forward to discussing the recommendations of the report of the Panel of Eminent Persons on United Nations-Civil Society Relations [A/58/817 & Corr.1] (see p. 1360) on engaging parliamentarians, parliaments and IPU more systematically in UN work.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 8 November [meeting 50], the General Assembly adopted resolution 59/19 [draft: A/59/L.5/Rev.2 & Add.1] without vote [agenda item 56 (j)].

Cooperation between the United Nations and the Inter-Parliamentary Union

The General Assembly,

Having considered the report of the Secretary-General of 1 September 2004, which takes stock of the broad cooperation between the United Nations and the Inter-Parliamentary Union over the past two years,

Taking note of the resolutions adopted by the Inter-Parliamentary Union and circulated in the General Assembly and the activities undertaken by the organization over the past two years in support of the United Nations,

Welcoming the annual parliamentary hearings at the United Nations as a regular feature of the programme of events held at United Nations Headquarters on the occasion of the sessions of the General Assembly,

Taking into consideration the Cooperation Agreement between the United Nations and the Inter-Parliamentary Union of 1996, which laid the foundation for cooperation between the two organizations,

Recalling the United Nations Millennium Declaration, in which Heads of State and Government resolved to strengthen further cooperation between the United Nations and national parliaments through their world organization, the Inter-Parliamentary Union, in various fields, including peace and security, economic and social development, international law and human rights, and democracy and gender issues,

Also recalling its resolution 57/32 of 19 November 2002, in which the Inter-Parliamentary Union was invited to participate in the work of the General Assembly in the capacity of observer, as well as resolution 57/47 of 21 November 2002,

Taking note of the recommendations contained in the report of the Panel of Eminent Persons on United Nations-Civil Society Relations in regard to engaging parliamentarians more systematically in the work of the United Nations,

1. Welcomes the efforts made by the Inter-Parliamentary Union to provide for a greater parliamentary contribution and enhanced support to the United Nations;

2. Welcomes with satisfaction the decision to convene the second World Conference of Speakers of Parliament at United Nations Headquarters in September 2005, in follow-up to the first such conference held in New York in 2000 in conjunction with the Millennium Assembly of the United Nations;

3. Calls upon the host country to extend the usual courtesies to participants of all parliamentary delegations of States Members of the United Nations at the second World Conference of Speakers of Parliament;

4. Takes note of the efforts of the Inter-Parliamentary Union to consult parliaments on the recommendations contained in the report of the Panel of Eminent Persons in regard to engaging parliamentarians more systematically in the work of the United Nations, and looks forward to learning of the outcome of this process as a contribution to the deliberations of the General Assembly prior to a final decision on the recommendations of the Panel in regard to parliamentarians;

5. Encourages the United Nations and the Inter-Parliamentary Union to continue to cooperate closely in various fields, in particular peace and security, economic and social development, international law, human rights, and democracy and gender issues, bearing in mind the significant benefits of cooperation between the two organizations, to which the report of the Secretary-General attests;

6. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its sixty-first session the sub-item entitled "Cooperation between the United Nations and the Inter-Parliamentary Union".

International Organization of la Francophonie

In response to resolution 57/43 [YUN 2002, p. 1442], the Secretary-General, in his September consolidated report on cooperation between the United Nations and regional and other organizations [A/59/303], provided information on cooperation between the United Nations and the International Organization of la Francophonie (OIF). A meeting held in New York in November 2003 between the UN Secretary-General and the Secretary-General of OIF led to strengthened collaboration between the two organizations in areas of common interest, including international peace and security. The report also covered cooperative activities in the areas of early warning and conflict prevention, elections, technical assistance, the rights of the child, human rights and education.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 8 November [meeting 50], the General Assembly adopted resolution 59/22 [draft: A/59/L.19 & Add.1] without vote [agenda item 56 (i)].

Cooperation between the United Nations and the International Organization of la Francophonie

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 33/18 of 10 November 1978, 50/3 of 16 October 1995, 52/2 of 17 October 1997, 54/25 of 15 November 1999, 56/45 of 7 December 2001 and 57/43 of 21 November 2002, as well as its decision 53/453 of 18 December 1998,

Considering that the International Organization of la Francophonie brings together a considerable number of States Members of the United Nations, among which it promotes multilateral cooperation in areas of interest to the United Nations,

Bearing in mind the Articles of the Charter of the United Nations which encourage the promotion of the purposes and principles of the United Nations through regional cooperation,

Bearing in mind also that, according to its charter, the objectives of the International Organization of la Francophonie are to assist in the establishment and development of democracy, the prevention of conflicts and support for the rule of law and for human rights, the intensification of dialogue between cultures and civilizations, the establishment of closer ties among peoples through mutual knowledge and strengthening of their solidarity through multilateral cooperation activities with a view to promoting the growth of their economies,

Welcoming the steps taken by the International Organization of la Francophonie to strengthen its ties with the organizations of the United Nations system and with international and regional organizations with a view to attaining its objectives,

Noting with satisfaction the commitment to multilateral cooperation in the search for solutions to the major international problems expressed by the Heads of State and Government of countries using French as a common language, at their ninth summit conference, held in Beirut from 18 to 20 October 2002, and their determination to extend the scope of francophone collaboration and cooperation in order to fight poverty and contribute to the emergence of a more equitable form of globalization that will bring progress, peace, democracy and human rights, in full respect for cultural and linguistic diversity, in the interests of the most vulnerable populations and the development of all countries,

Having considered the report of the Secretary-General on the implementation of resolution 57/43,

Noting with satisfaction the substantial progress achieved in cooperation between the United Nations, the specialized agencies and other United Nations bodies and programmes and the International Organization of la Francophonie,

Convinced that strengthening cooperation between the United Nations and the International Organization of la Francophonie serves the purposes and principles of the United Nations,

Noting the desire of the two organizations to consolidate, develop and strengthen the ties that exist between them in the political, economic, social and cultural fields,

1. Takes note with satisfaction of the report of the Secretary-General, and welcomes the increasingly close and productive cooperation between the United Nations and the International Organization of la Francophonie;

2. Notes with satisfaction that the International Organization of la Francophonie participates actively in the work of the United Nations, to which it makes a valuable contribution;

3. Notes with great satisfaction the initiatives taken by the International Organization of la Francophonie in the areas of conflict prevention, the promotion of peace and support for democracy, the rule of law and human rights, and commends it on the genuine contribution it makes, in cooperation with the United Nations, in Haiti, the Comoros, Côte d'Ivoire, Burundi, the Democratic Republic of the Congo and the Central African Republic;

4. Welcomes the initiation of cooperation between the United Nations and the International Organization of la Francophonie, with the participation of other regional and subregional organizations, as well as non-governmental organizations, in the fields of early warning and conflict prevention, and encourages the pursuit of this initiative with a view to formulating practical recommendations to facilitate the establishment of relevant operational mechanisms, where necessary;

5. Expresses its gratitude to the International Organization of la Francophonie for the steps it has taken in recent years to promote cultural and linguistic diversity and dialogue between cultures and civilizations;

6. Expresses its appreciation to the Secretary-General of the United Nations and the Secretary-General of the International Organization of la Francophonie for their sustained efforts to strengthen cooperation and coordination between the two organizations, thereby serving their mutual interests in the political, economic, social and cultural fields;

7. Welcomes the fact that the tenth summit conference of la Francophonie was devoted to solidarity for sustainable development, and calls upon the specialized agencies and the funds and programmes of the United Nations system to enhance their cooperation with the International Organization of la Francophonie in the area of sustainable development;

8. Also welcomes the involvement of the countries that use French as a common language, particularly through the International Organization of la Francophonie, in the preparation for, conduct of and follow-up to international conferences organized under United Nations auspices;

9. Commends the high-level meetings held periodically between the United Nations Secretariat and the Secretariat of the International Organization of la Francophonie, and advocates the participation of those Secretariats in major meetings of the two organizations;

10. Expresses its appreciation to the Secretary-General for including the International Organization of la Francophonie in the periodic meetings he holds with heads of regional organizations, and invites him to continue doing so, taking into account the role played by the International Organization of la Francophonie in conflict prevention and support for democracy and the rule of law;

11. Notes with satisfaction the continued collaboration between the United Nations and the International Organization of la Francophonie in the area of electoral monitoring and assistance, and advocates the strengthening of cooperation between the two organizations in that area;

12. Requests the Secretary-General of the United Nations, acting in cooperation with the Secretary-General of the International Organization of la Francophonie, to encourage the holding of periodic meetings between representatives of the United Nations Secretariat and representatives of the secretariat of the International Organization of la Francophonie in order to promote the exchange of information, coordination of activities and identification of new areas of cooperation;

13. Invites the Secretary-General of the United Nations to take the necessary steps, in consultation with the Secretary-General of the International Organization of la Francophonie, to continue to promote cooperation between the two organizations;

14. Invites the specialized agencies and funds and programmes of the United Nations system, as well as the regional commissions, including the Economic Commission for Africa, to collaborate to this end with the Secretary-General of the International Organization of la Francophonie by identifying new synergies in favour of development, in particular in the areas of poverty elimination, energy, sustainable development, education, training and the development of new information technologies;

15. Requests the Secretary-General to submit to the General Assembly at its sixty-first session a report on the implementation of the present resolution;

16. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its sixty-first session the sub-item entitled "Cooperation between the United Nations and the International Organization of la Francophonie".

Community of Portuguese-speaking Countries

In a 26 August letter to the General Assembly President [A/59/231], the eight member States of the Community of Portuguese-speaking Countries (CPLP)—Angola, Brazil, Cape Verde, Guinea-Bissau, Mozambique, Portugal, Timor-Leste, and Sao Tome and Principe—requested the inclusion of an item on cooperation between the United Nations and CPLP in the agenda of the Assembly's fifty-ninth session, and proposed a draft resolution on the issue. CPLP, which was founded in 1996, bringing together 240 million people of four continents, became a UN observer in 1999 [YUN 1999, p. 1360]. It devoted special attention to the political situation in Guinea-Bissau (see p. 223) through multilateralism and cooperation with the United Nations. CPLP sought to formalize that role and broaden cooperation by contributing to development and international security.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 8 November [meeting 50], the General Assembly adopted resolution 59/21 [draft: A/59/L.14] without vote [agenda item 56 (t)].

Cooperation between the United Nations and the Community of Portuguese-speaking Countries

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 54/10 of 26 October 1999, by which it granted observer status to the Community of Portuguese-speaking Countries and considered it mutually advantageous to provide for cooperation between the United Nations and the Community of Portuguese-speaking Countries,

Recalling also the Articles of the Charter of the United Nations that encourage activities through regional cooperation for the promotion of the purposes and principles of the United Nations,

Considering that the activities of the Community of Portuguese-speaking Countries complement and support the work of the United Nations,

Welcoming the participation of the Community of Portuguese-speaking Countries in the fifth high-level meeting between the United Nations and regional organizations, held in New York on 29 and 30 July 2003,

1. Invites the Secretary-General of the United Nations to undertake consultations with the Executive Secretary of the Community of Portuguese-speaking Countries, with a view to promoting cooperation between the secretariats of the two bodies, in particular by encouraging meetings that enable their representatives to consult one another on projects, measures and procedures that will facilitate and expand their mutual cooperation and coordination;

2. Requests the specialized agencies and other bodies and programmes of the United Nations system to cooperate to this end with the Secretary-General and the Executive Secretary;

3. Requests the Secretary-General to submit a report on the implementation of the present resolution to the General Assembly at its sixty-first session;

4. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its sixty-first session the sub-item entitled "Cooperation between the United Nations and the Community of Portuguese-speaking Countries".

Observer status

Shanghai Cooperation Organization

On 24 February [A/59/141], China requested the inclusion in the agenda of the General Assembly's fifty-ninth session of an item on observer status for the Shanghai Cooperation Organization (SCO) in the Assembly. An explanatory memorandum annexed to the request stated that SCO was founded in Shanghai, China, on 15 June 2001 by China, Kazakhstan, Kyrgyzstan, the Russian Federation, Tajikistan and Uzbekistan. SCO's main purposes were to strengthen mutual trust, good-neighbourliness and friendship among its members; develop effective cooperation in their political affairs, economic issues, trade, science and technology, culture, education, energy, transportation, environmental protection and other fields; work to maintain and guarantee regional peace, security and stability; and promote the creation of a new international political and economic order, with a focus on democracy and justice. SCO stated that, as an observer in the Assembly, it would take a more active part in international affairs, conduct wider cooperation with the United Nations and other organizations and countries in order to contribute to peace and security, as well as regional economic growth.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 2 December [meeting 65], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Sixth (Legal) Committee [A/59/517], adopted resolution 59/48 without vote [agenda item 151].

Observer status for the Shanghai Cooperation Organization in the General Assembly

The General Assembly,

Wishing to promote cooperation between the United Nations and the Shanghai Cooperation Organization,

1. Decides to invite the Shanghai Cooperation Organization to participate in the sessions and the work of the General Assembly in the capacity of observer;

2. Requests the Secretary-General to take the necessary action to implement the present resolution.

Southern African Development Community

On 15 April [A/59/142], the United Republic of Tanzania, on behalf of the Southern African Development Community (SADC), requested the inclusion in the agenda of the General Assembly's fifty-ninth session of an item on observer status for SADC in the Assembly. According to an explanatory memorandum annexed to the request, SADC was founded by a treaty signed in Windhoek, Namibia, on 17 August 1992. SADC's main objectives were to promote sustainable and equitable economic growth and socio-economic development in southern Africa, as well as common political values, systems and other shared values; consolidate, defend and maintain democracy, peace, security and stability; promote self-sustaining development on the basis of collective self-reliance and the interdependence of member States; achieve complementarity between national and regional strategies and programmes; promote and maximize productive employment and utilization of the region's resources; achieve sustainable utilization of natural resources and effective protection of the environment; strengthen and consolidate the long-standing historical, social and cultural affinities and links among the region's people; combat HIV/AIDS and other deadly and communicable diseases; ensure that poverty eradication was addressed in all SADC activities and programmes; and mainstream gender in the community-building process.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 2 December [meeting 65], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Sixth Committee [A/59/518], adopted resolution 59/49 without vote [agenda item 152].

Observer status for the Southern African Development Community in the General Assembly

The General Assembly,

Wishing to promote cooperation between the United Nations and the Southern African Development Community,

1. Decides to invite the Southern African Development Community to participate in the sessions and the work of the General Assembly in the capacity of observer;

2. Requests the Secretary-General to take the necessary action to implement the present resolution.

Collective Security Treaty Organization

On 10 August [A/59/195 & Corr.1], Armenia, Belarus, Kazakhstan, Kyrgyzstan, the Russian Federation and Tajikistan—the six member States of the Collective Security Treaty Organization (CSTO)—requested the inclusion in the agenda of the General Assembly's fifty-ninth session of an item on observer status for CSTO in the Assembly. An explanatory memorandum annexed to the request contained information on the founding of CSTO as a regional organization on 18 September 2003. CSTO sought to strengthen peace and international and regional security and stability, and protect collectively the independence, territorial integrity and sovereignty of its member States. CSTO believed that the granting of observer status would make it possible to strengthen coordination between CSTO and the United Nations and expand their mutual capacities for ensuring peace, security and cooperation on a regional and global scale.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 2 December [meeting 65], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Sixth Committee [A/59/519], adopted resolution 59/50 without vote [agenda item 157].

Observer status for the Collective Security Treaty Organization in the General Assembly

The General Assembly,

Wishing to promote cooperation between the United Nations and the Collective Security Treaty Organization,

1. Decides to invite the Collective Security Treaty Organization to participate in the sessions and the work of the General Assembly in the capacity of observer;

2. Requests the Secretary-General to take the necessary action to implement the present resolution.

Economic Community of West African States

On 15 September [A/59/232], the States members of the Economic Community of West African States (ECOWAS) requested the inclusion in the agenda of the General Assembly's fifty-ninth session of an item on observer status for ECOWAS in the Assembly. An explanatory memorandum stated that a treaty signed in 1975 led to the establishment of ECOWAS, which arose from the determination to accelerate the economic and social development of the States of West Africa through effective cooperation. ECOWAS had as its principal aim the integration of the region's national economies into an economic and monetary union, for the purpose of raising the standard of living of its peoples, increasing and maintaining economic stability, fostering closer relationships among its members and contributing to the progress and development of the African continent. Over the years, ECOWAS had developed close working relations with the UN system. The ECOWAS Monitoring Group (ECOMOG) helped resolve civil conflicts in Liberia, Sierra Leone, Guinea-Bissau and Côte d'Ivoire. A regional early-warning system and a high-level mediation organ formed part of the ECOWAS conflict-prevention mechanism in West Africa. (For more information on ECOWAS conflict-prevention and conflict-resolution activities in Africa, see PART ONE, Chapter II.)

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 2 December [meeting 65], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Sixth Committee [A/59/520], adopted resolution 59/51 without vote [agenda item 159].

Observer status for the Economic Community of West African States in the General Assembly

The General Assembly,

Wishing to promote cooperation between the United Nations and the Economic Community of West African States,

1. Decides to invite the Economic Community of West African States to participate in the sessions and the work of the General Assembly in the capacity of observer;
2. Requests the Secretary-General to take the necessary action to implement the present resolution.

Organisation of Eastern Caribbean States

On 4 October [A/59/233], Saint Lucia requested the inclusion in the agenda of the General Assembly's fifty-ninth session of an item on observer status for the Organisation of Eastern Caribbean States (OECS). An explanatory memorandum annexed to the request stated that OECS was established by the 1981 Treaty of Basseterre and comprised nine members, namely Antigua and Barbuda, Anguilla, the British Virgin Islands, Dominica, Grenada, Montserrat, Saint Kitts and Nevis, Saint Lucia, and Saint Vincent and the Grenadines. The main purposes of OECS were to promote cooperation, unity and solidarity among its members and defend their sovereignty, territorial integrity and independence; assist its members in the realization of their obligations and responsibilities to the international community; achieve the fullest possible harmonization of foreign policy; and promote economic integration among its members.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 2 December [meeting 65], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Sixth Committee [A/59/521], adopted resolution 59/52 without vote [agenda item 160].

Observer status for the Organisation of Eastern Caribbean States in the General Assembly

The General Assembly,

Wishing to promote cooperation between the United Nations and the Organisation of Eastern Caribbean States,

1. Decides to invite the Organisation of Eastern Caribbean States to participate in the sessions and the work of the General Assembly in the capacity of observer;

2. Requests the Secretary-General to take the necessary action to implement the present resolution.

South Asian Association for Regional Cooperation

On 12 October [A/59/234], Bangladesh, Bhutan, India, Maldives, Nepal, Pakistan and Sri Lanka—the seven member States of the South Asian Association for Regional Cooperation (SAARC)—requested the inclusion in the agenda of the General Assembly's fifty-ninth session of an item on observer status for SAARC in the Assembly. An explanatory memorandum annexed to the request provided information on SAARC's establishment in December 1985 and its objectives, which were to promote the welfare and improve the quality of life of the peoples of South Asia; accelerate economic growth, social progress and cultural development in the region and provide all individuals the opportunity to live in dignity and realize their full potential; promote and strengthen collective self-reliance among the countries of South Asia; contribute to mutual trust, understanding and appreciation of one another's problems; promote active collaboration and mutual assistance in the economic, social, cultural, technical and scientific fields; strengthen cooperation with other developing countries, and among States members in international forums on matters of common interests; and cooperate with international and regional organizations with similar aims and purposes. Poverty alleviation was the overarching goal of all SAARC activities. Granting SAARC observer status would enhance its profile in the international community and would act as an incentive to strengthen existing cooperation with UN agencies.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 2 December [meeting 65], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Sixth Committee [A/59/544], adopted resolution 59/53 without vote [agenda item 162].

Observer status for the South Asian Association for Regional Cooperation in the General Assembly

The General Assembly,

Wishing to promote cooperation between the United Nations and the South Asian Association for Regional Cooperation,

1. Decides to invite the South Asian Association for Regional Cooperation to participate in the sessions and the work of the General Assembly in the capacity of observer;

2. Requests the Secretary-General to take the necessary action to implement the present resolution.

Participation in UN work

Holy See

On 1 July [meeting 92], the General Assembly adopted resolution 58/314 [draft: A/58/L.64] without vote [agenda item 59].

Participation of the Holy See in the work of the United Nations

The General Assembly,

Recalling that the Holy See became a Permanent Observer State at the United Nations on 6 April 1964, and since then has always been invited to participate in the meetings of all the sessions of the General Assembly,

Recalling also that the Holy See is a party to diverse international instruments, including the Vienna Convention on Diplomatic Relations, the Vienna Convention on the Law of Treaties, the Convention relating to the Status of Refugees and the Protocol thereto, the Convention on the Rights of the Child and the Optional Protocols thereto, the Convention against Torture and Other Cruel, Inhuman or Degrading Treatment or Punishment, the International Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Racial Discrimination, the Convention for the Protection of Cultural Property in the Event of Armed Conflict, the Paris Convention for the Protection of Industrial Property, the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons, the main disarmament treaties and the Geneva Conventions and the Additional Protocols thereto,

Recalling further that the Holy See enjoys membership in various United Nations subsidiary bodies, specialized agencies and international intergovernmental organizations, including the Executive Committee of the Programme of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees, the United Nations Conference on Trade and Development, the World Intellectual Property Organization, the International Atomic Energy Agency, the Organization for the Prohibition of Chemical Weapons, the Preparatory Commission for the Comprehensive Nuclear-Test-Ban Treaty Organization and the International Committee of Military Medicine,

Aware that the Holy See actively participates as an observer in many of the specialized agencies, such as the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations, the International Labour Organization, the World Health Organization, the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization, the United Nations Industrial Development Organization, the International Fund for Agricultural Development and the World Tourism Organization, as well as in the World Trade Organization, that it is a full member of the Organization for Security and Cooperation in Europe and a Guest of Honour in its Parliamentary Assembly, and that it participates as an observer in various other regional intergovernmental organizations, including the Council of Europe, the Organization of American States and the African Union, and is regularly invited to take part in the main meetings of the Asian-African Legal Consultative Organization,

Aware also that the Economic and Social Council, by its decision 244(LXIII) of 22 July 1977, recommended that the Holy See attend sessions of the regional commissions on a basis similar to that provided for in the relevant terms of reference applicable to States Members of the United Nations not members of the regional commissions,

Recalling that the Holy See contributes financially to the general administration of the United Nations in accordance with the rate of assessment for the Holy See as a non-member State, as adopted by the General Assembly in its resolution 58/1 B of 23 December 2003,

Considering that it is in the interest of the United Nations that all States be invited to participate in its work,

Desirous of contributing to the appropriate participation of the Holy See in the work of the General Assembly in the context of the revitalization of the work of the Assembly,

1. Acknowledges that the Holy See, in its capacity as an Observer State, shall be accorded the rights and privileges of participation in the sessions and work of the General Assembly and the international conferences convened under the auspices of the Assembly or other organs of the United Nations, as well as in United Nations conferences as set out in the annex to the present resolution;

2. Requests the Secretary-General to inform the General Assembly during the current session about the implementation of the modalities annexed to the present resolution.

Annex

The rights and privileges of participation of the Holy See shall be effected through the following modalities, without prejudice to the existing rights and privileges:

1. The right to participate in the general debate of the General Assembly;
2. Without prejudice to the priority of Member States, the Holy See shall have the right of inscription on the list of speakers under agenda items at any plenary meeting of the General Assembly, after the last Member State inscribed on the list;
3. The right to make interventions, with a precursory explanation or the recall of relevant General Assembly resolutions being made only once by the President of the General Assembly at the start of each session of the Assembly;
4. The right of reply;
5. The right to have its communications relating to the sessions and work of the General Assembly issued and circulated directly, and without intermediary, as official documents of the Assembly;
6. The right to have its communications relating to the sessions and work of all international conferences convened under the auspices of the General Assembly issued and circulated directly, and without intermediary, as official documents of those conferences;
7. The right to raise points of order relating to any proceedings involving the Holy See, provided that the right to raise such a point of order shall not include the right to challenge the decision of the presiding officer;
8. The right to co-sponsor draft resolutions and decisions that make reference to the Holy See; such draft resolutions and decisions shall be put to a vote only upon request from a Member State;
9. Seating for the Holy See shall be arranged immediately after Member States and before the other observers when it participates as a non-member State observer, with the allocation of six seats in the General Assembly Hall;

10. The Holy See shall not have the right to vote or to put forward candidates in the General Assembly.

In a 16 August note [A/58/871], the Secretary-General described the modalities, as set out in resolution 58/314 (above), through which the rights and privileges of participation of the Holy See, in its capacity as an Observer State, would be effected.

Intergovernmental organizations

On 4 February, the Economic and Social Council included in the agenda of its 2004 substantive session the application of the World Deserts Foundation [E/2004/7] for observer status with the Council (decision 2004/208). The Council granted observer status to the Foundation on 28 June (decision 2004/231).

Non-governmental organizations

Committee on NGOs

On the recommendations made by the Committee on Non-Governmental Organizations (NGOs) at its 2003 resumed session [YUN 2003, p. 1481], the Economic and Social Council, on 4 February, granted consultative status to 59 NGOs; placed ten others on the Roster; reclassified one from special to general consultative status and two from the Roster to special consultative status; and noted 51 quadrennial reports (decision 2004/210). It took note of the Committee's report on its resumed 2003 session [ibid, p. 1480]; decided on the dates for the Committee's 2004 session (see below); and approved the provisional agenda and documentation for the 2004 session (decision 2004/211).

The Committee, at its 2004 regular session (New York, 10-28 May and 23 June) [E/2004/32 & Corr.1], considered 171 applications for consultative status with the Council, including those deferred from its 1998-2003 sessions. It recommended 114 NGOs for consultative status, of which 19 were recommended ad referendum, and deferred 50 applications for further consideration at a later date. The Committee did not recommend four NGOs, closed consideration of three, and closed consideration of one complaint by a Member State. It recommended reclassification for four NGOs from roster to special status and three others from special to general consultative status. The Committee took note of 42 quadrennial reports and deferred consideration of six others.

The Committee recommended five draft decisions for action by the Council, including draft decisions suspending the consultative status of two NGOs (see below), and adopted two decisions, which it brought to the Council's attention. By the first decision, the Committee acknowledged that the one-year suspension of the organization Reporters without Borders was due to come to an end on 24 July. By the second decision, the Committee requested that the International Council of the Associations for Peace in the Continents submit a special report, prior to the reinstatement of its consultative status, on its activities during the three years of suspension, the fulfilment in that period of the provisions of Council resolution 1996/31 [YUN 1996, p. 1360], the possible changes that had taken place in the organization and how it had overcome the reasons for its suspension.

The Committee reviewed its working methods relating to the implementation of Council resolutions 1996/31 [YUN 1996, p. 1360], including the process of NGO accreditation, and of decision 1995/304 [YUN 1995, p. 1445]. It also considered the implementation of Council decision 2001/295 [YUN 2001, p. 1377] relating to requests by those NGOs referred to in Council decision 1993/220 [YUN 1993, p. 668] to expand participation in other fields of the Council's work. During the Committee's consideration of the strengthening of the NGO section of the UN Department of Economic and Social Affairs (DESA), the chief of that section informed the Committee that the "Paperless Committee", a multifunctional, electronic meeting record management and archiving system introduced on a trial basis in 2003 [YUN 2003, p. 1481], was adopted as a normal mode of operation by the Committee on NGOs.

Following a request by the United States, the Committee, by a roll-call vote of 10 to 4, with 5 abstentions, recommended a draft decision for action by the Council to suspend for one year the consultative status of the Indian Movement "Tupaj Amaru". On 23 July, the Council, by a recorded vote of 28 to 4, with 22 abstentions, adopted the draft decision (decision 2004/306).

Following a request by Viet Nam, the Committee, by a roll-call vote of 9 to 8, with 2 abstentions, recommended a draft decision for action by the Council to suspend for three years the consultative status of the Transnational Radical Party. On 23 July, the Council, by a recorded vote of 22 to 20, with 11 abstentions, rejected the draft decision.

Also on 23 July, the Council granted special consultative status to 97 NGOs and placed 17 others on the Roster; reclassified three NGOs from special to general consultative status and four others from roster to special consultative status; and noted that the Committee had taken note of 42 quadrennial reports, closed consideration of requests by three NGOs for consultative status, decided not to grant consultative status to four, and closed the case of a complaint by a Member State against one NGO (decision 2004/305). On the same day, the Council took note of the report of the Committee on its 2004 session (decision 2004/307) and deferred until a resumed Council session action on the draft decision on the dates of the Committee's 2005 session and provisional agenda (decision 2004/308).

On 5 November, the Council decided that the Committee's 2005 regular session would be held from 5 to 18 January 2005 and its resumed session from 9 to 20 May 2005, and approved the provisional agenda for the Committee's 2005 session (decision 2004/321).

Requests for hearing

On 28 May, the Committee on NGOs approved 15 NGO requests to be heard during the Council's high-level segment and three during the coordination segment [E/2004/84].

Withdrawal of status

On 28 May, the Committee took note of the requests for withdrawal of status submitted by the International Committee for European Security and Cooperation, which informed the UN Secretariat of its dissolution, and the World Conservation Monitoring Centre, which informed the Secretariat that, as of 2000, it had become an office of the United Nations Environment Programme.

Conferences and meetings

Committee on Conferences

The Committee on Conferences held an organizational meeting on 25 March and its substantive session on 7, 8 and 10 September [A/59/32]. The Committee examined requests for changes to the approved calendar of conferences for 2004 [A/AC.172/2004/2] and the draft revised calendar for 2005 [A/59/159/Add.1]. On 8 September, the Committee, having considered the biennialization of the item entitled "Pattern of conferences" on the agenda of the General Assembly, recommended that the issue be referred to the Assembly in the light of the Committee's comments. The Committee also considered the utilization of conference-servicing resources and facilities, requests for exceptions to the Assembly's limitation on meetings during Assembly sessions [YUN 1985, p. 1256], documentation- and publication-related matters, translation and interpretation-related matters and information technology. (The Committee's deliberations and recommendations on those matters are detailed in the sections below.)

The Committee approved requests from several bodies for changes to the approved calendar for 2004, and reviewed the draft revised calendar of conferences and meetings for 2005.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 23 December [meeting 76], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee [A/59/644], adopted resolution 59/265 without vote [agenda item 112].

Pattern of conferences

The General Assembly,

Recalling its relevant resolutions, including resolutions 40/243 of 18 December 1985, 41/213 of 19 December 1986, 43/222 A to E of 21 December 1988, 51/211 A to E of 18 December 1996, 52/214 of 22 December 1997, 53/208 A to E of 18 December 1998, 54/248 of 23 December 1999, 55/222 of 23 December 2000, 56/242 of 24 December 2001, 56/254 D of 27 March 2002, 56/262 of 15 February 2002, 56/287 of 27 June 2002, 57/283 A of 20 December 2002, 57/283 B of 15 April 2003 and 58/250 of 23 December 2003,

Reaffirming its resolution 42/207 C of 11 December 1987, in which it requested the Secretary-General to ensure the equal treatment of the official languages of the United Nations,

Having considered the report of the Committee on Conferences, the relevant reports of the Secretary-General, the report of the Joint Inspection Unit, the comments of the Secretary-General thereon, and the report of the Office of Internal Oversight Services,

Having also considered the reports of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions,

Reaffirming the provisions relevant to conference services of its resolutions on multilingualism,

I

Calendar of conferences and meetings

1. Approves the draft revised calendar of conferences and meetings of the United Nations for 2005, as submitted by the Committee on Conferences, taking into account the observations of the Committee, and subject to the provisions of the present resolution;

2. Authorizes the Committee on Conferences to make any adjustments to the calendar of conferences and meetings for 2005 that may become necessary as a result of actions and decisions taken by the General Assembly at its fifty-ninth session;

3. Notes with satisfaction that the Secretariat has taken into account the arrangements referred to in General Assembly resolutions 53/208 A, 54/248, 55/222, 56/242, 57/283 B and 58/250 concerning Orthodox Good Friday and the official holidays of Eid al-Fitr and Eid al-Adha, and requests all intergovernmental bodies to observe those decisions when planning their meetings;

4. Notes the outcome of the consultations between the Governing Council of the United Nations Human Settlements Programme and the Commission on Sustainable Development to avoid the overlap between the sessions of the Council and the Commission, and decides to reflect the results of those consultations in the revised calendar of conferences and meetings for 2005;

5. Decides that, in future, there should be an intervening period of at least two weeks after the closing of the sessions of relevant intergovernmental bodies and the beginning of the session of the Commission on Sustainable Development, in accordance with the multi-year programme of work of the Commission, and encourages such intergovernmental bodies and the Commission to closely coordinate meeting dates and programmes of work so as to avoid overlap between sessions;

II

A. Utilization of conference-servicing resources and facilities

1. Notes that the overall utilization factor at the four main duty stations in 2003 increased to 77 per cent, and encourages the bureaux and secretariats to meet the benchmark;

2. Requests the Committee on Conferences to continue to consult with those bodies that have consistently utilized less than the applicable benchmark figure of their allocated resources of the past three sessions with a view to making appropriate recommendations in order to achieve the optimum utilization of conference-servicing resources, and urges the secretariats and bureaux of bodies that underutilize their conference-servicing resources, with the assistance of the Department for General Assembly and Conference Management of the Secretariat, to consider changes to their programme of work, as appropriate, based on previous patterns for recurring agenda items, with a view to making improvements in their utilization factors;

3. Requests the Secretary-General to conduct systematic follow-up regarding the utilization of conference services by those bodies that consistently underutilize their conference-servicing resources over a longer period of time in order to identify the underlying causes for their being unable to reach the benchmark;

4. Also requests the Secretary-General to report in future statistics on reassignments of services to meetings both related and unrelated to the cancelling body;

5. Welcomes the efforts that are being made to improve the utilization of the conference facilities at the United Nations Office at Nairobi, as set out in the report of the Secretary-General;

6. Reiterates its request to the Secretary-General to continue to intensify the marketing efforts being made by the United Nations Office at Nairobi to attract more meetings to its facilities;

7. Requests the Secretary-General to ensure that conference management services at the United Nations Office at Nairobi are in line with other duty stations, taking into account the operational requirements of the Office, and to submit a report thereon to the General Assembly at its sixtieth session for its consideration;

8. Recalls its several resolutions, including resolution 57/283 B, section II.A, paragraph 9, and reaffirms that all meetings of Nairobi-based United Nations bodies shall take place in Nairobi, except as otherwise authorized by the General Assembly or the Committee on Conferences acting on its behalf, and requests the Secretary-General to report on the subject to the Assembly at its sixtieth session through the Committee on Conferences;

9. Strongly discourages any invitation to host meetings that would violate the headquarters rule, in particular for the United Nations Office at Nairobi and other United Nations centres with a low utilization level;

10. Expresses deep concern over the remaining vacancies in the interpretation and translation services, in particular at the United Nations Office at Nairobi, notes the efforts of the Secretary-General to fill the vacancies, and requests the Secretary-General to continue to report thereon to the General Assembly through the Committee on Conferences;

11. Notes the improvements in the utilization of the conference centre at the Economic Commission for Africa in response to section II.A, paragraph 1, of its resolution 58/250, and requests the Secretary-General to continue to explore all possible options to increase further the utilization of the conference centre;

12. Welcomes the efforts so far undertaken to increase utilization and to make more efficient use of the conference facilities at the Economic Commission for Africa, and urges the Secretary-General to sustain the marketing campaign efforts and to report on the outcome to the General Assembly at its sixtieth session;

13. Requests the Secretary-General to ensure that the conference centre at the Economic Commission for Africa establishes and develops linkages with other centres and bodies, introduces and utilizes an integrated conference management system and considers the implementation of other modern technology systems, as appropriate, for a more efficient delivery of services, and to report thereon to the General Assembly at its sixtieth session;

14. Emphasizes that all duty stations shall be given adequate resources for the effective and efficient discharge of their respective mandates, and in this respect welcomes the efforts of the Secretary-General to provide the available conference-servicing management tools and best practices to all duty stations;

15. Recognizes the importance of meetings of regional and other major groupings of Member States for the smooth functioning of the sessions of intergovernmental bodies, and requests the Secretary-General to ensure that, as far as possible, all requests for conference services for meetings of regional and other major groupings of Member States are met;

16. Notes with concern that the percentage of meetings held by regional and other major groupings of Member States that were provided with interpretation services during the reporting period from May 2003 to April 2004 decreased to 90 per cent from 92 per cent during the period from May 2002 to April 2003 for the four main duty stations;

17. Notes that, in absolute terms, the number of meetings provided with interpretation services was 10 per cent higher in the period 2003-2004 than in the period 2002-2003;

18. Recalls that meetings held by regional and other major groupings of Member States are provided with interpretation services on an ad hoc basis, in accordance with established practice;

19. Requests the Secretary-General to review the current established practice concerning the provision of interpretation services for meetings of regional and other major groupings of Member States at Headquarters and other duty stations, with a view to improving the provision of interpretation services to those meetings;

B. Reform of the Department for General Assembly and Conference Management

1. Reaffirms that the Fifth Committee is the appropriate Main Committee of the General Assembly entrusted with responsibilities for administrative and budgetary matters;

2. Notes the steps taken by the Secretary-General in the implementation of the reform measures put forward in his report on the reform of the Department for General Assembly and Conference Management of the Secretariat in accordance with section II.B of its resolutions 57/283 B and 58/250, and encourages the continued implementation of the measures described in paragraph 65 of his report, subject to the provisions of the present resolution;

3. Appreciates the efforts of the Secretary-General in providing timely and detailed information during the consideration of the item entitled "Revitalization of the work of the General Assembly";

4. Affirms that the consideration of and decisions on the revitalization of the General Assembly remain its prerogative;

5. Stresses that the participation of the Department in the revitalization of the General Assembly should focus on the timely provision of the documentation needed in order to facilitate the intergovernmental negotiation process;

6. Stresses also that future reports on the reform of the Department should concentrate only on its effort to this end;

7. Stresses further that the reform of the Department is aimed at improving the quality of documents and their timely production and delivery as well as the quality of conference services provided to Member States, with a view to meeting their needs as efficiently and cost-effectively as possible and in accordance with the relevant resolutions of the General Assembly;

8. Reiterates its request contained in section II.B, paragraph 3, of its resolution 58/250;

9. Notes the ongoing efforts towards the establishment of the integrated global management system, and decides to consider at its sixtieth session the current outcomes in the light of the report of the Office of Internal Oversight Services on this issue;

10. Also notes the establishment by the Secretary-General of a Secretariat task force to conduct a comprehensive study of workload standards and performance measurement and the preliminary findings of the task force, and requests the Secretary-General to pursue the study of workload standards and performance measurement, in both qualitative and quantitative terms, with a view to submitting to the General Assembly a proposal for a comprehensive methodology for performance measurement and management from a full-system perspective, while also paying attention to the specificities of all the official languages and ensuring compliance with resolution 58/250;

11. Reiterates its request that the Secretary-General develop further effective measures to strengthen the responsibility and accountability system within the Secretariat, including the establishment of an interdepartmental mechanism to monitor the process in order to ensure the timely submission of documents for processing, and that he report comprehensively thereon to the General Assembly at its sixtieth session through the Committee on Conferences;

12. Requests the Secretary-General to pursue the delivery of summary records, a useful and vital tool for Member States, in particular in maintaining the institutional memory of the Organization, in a more efficient and cost-effective manner in full consultation with all the relevant intergovernmental bodies;

13. Also requests the Secretary-General to examine the option of setting a time frame for the publication of summary records, to study the related practical and financial implications and to present a pilot project to the General Assembly at its sixtieth session;

14. Further requests the Secretary-General to elaborate on all options, including those set out in paragraphs 59 to 63 of his report, in accordance with legislative mandates, and to report on their practical and financial implications to the General Assembly at its sixtieth session through the Committee on Conferences;

15. Requests the Secretary-General to develop further the functions of the Electronic Meetings Planning and Resource Allocation System (e-Meets) as the central tool for managing meetings to cover the entire spectrum of meeting-related activities and to continue consultations with other duty stations in order to expand its application across duty stations, or to integrate the system into other systems used in such offices;

16. Also requests the Secretary-General to continue his efforts to implement further the electronic documentation management concept (e-Doc), including the actual electronic transmission of documents through the documentation chain;

17. Further requests the Secretary-General to enhance the use of printing on demand for parliamentary documentation as a means of improving services provided to Member States, in full compliance with current legislative mandates, on the basis of experience gained and lessons learned, taking fully into account the special needs of developing countries and the views expressed by Member States, to consider the use of printing on demand for publications, and to report thereon to the General Assembly at its sixtieth session through the Committee on Conferences;

III

Documentation and publication-related matters

1. Emphasizes the paramount importance of the equality of the six official languages of the United Nations;

2. Notes with concern the delay in the issuance of verbatim and summary records, and in this regard requests the Secretary-General to take appropriate measures to ameliorate the situation, with a view to issuing them in a timely manner;

3. Notes with deep concern that the six-week rule for the issuance of documents is not fully complied with owing to, inter alia, the continued late submission of documents by author departments, and requests the Secretary-General to take further urgent measures to ensure strict compliance with the six-week rule for the timely issuance of documentation in view of the impact of their late issuance on the functioning of inter-governmental and expert bodies, which was acutely felt during the main part of the fifty-ninth session;

4. Notes that the rate of compliance with the page limits remains only partial and that reports not originating in the Secretariat comprise the bulk of the documents issued, and requests the Secretary-General to encourage compliance with drafting guidelines as set out in paragraph 15 of its resolution 53/208 B, to the extent possible, for such documents and to report on the matter to the General Assembly through the Committee on Conferences;

5. Recalls section III, paragraphs 25 to 28, of its resolution 57/283 B and section III, paragraph 10, of its resolution 58/250, and urges the Secretary-General to continue the consultations referred to in this context with a view to considering the possible broadening of the electronic distribution of documentation while maintaining the distribution of printed copies, as required, and to report on the matter to the General Assembly through the Committee on Conferences;

6. Notes with concern the violations of the rule that parliamentary documents must be distributed simultaneously in all official languages;

7. Requests the Secretary-General to ensure that the rules concerning the simultaneous distribution of documents in all official languages are followed with respect to both the distribution of printed copies and the posting of parliamentary documentation on the Official Document System of the United Nations and the United Nations web site, in keeping with section III, paragraph 5, of resolution 55/222;

8. Notes with concern the non-compliance with rule 59 of the rules of procedure of the General Assembly, and requests the Secretary-General to ensure the communication of resolutions adopted by the Assembly to Member States within fifteen days after the closure of the session;

9. Decides that the issuance of documents on planning, budgetary and administrative matters requiring urgent consideration by the General Assembly shall be accorded priority;

IV

Translation and interpretation-related matters

1. Requests the Secretary-General to ensure the highest quality of interpretation and translation services in all official languages;

2. Notes with appreciation the continued practice of holding informational meetings with Member States to consult with them on the improvement of the language services and the intention to establish additional channels for communication on the terminology used and the quality of services rendered, and requests the Secretary-General to organize informational meetings twice a year and in a more appropriate setting, with interpretation provided on an as-available basis;

3. Requests the Secretary-General, when recruiting temporary assistance in language services, to ensure that all the language services are given equal treatment and are provided with equally favourable working conditions and resources with a view to achieving maximum quality of their services, with full respect for the specificities of the six official languages, taking into account their respective workloads;

4. Reiterates its request that the Secretary-General continue the efforts to explore the use of new technologies, such as computer-assisted translation, remote and off-site translation and speech recognition, in the six official languages so as to enhance further the quality and productivity of the conference services, and to keep the General Assembly informed of the introduction of any other new technology;

5. Expresses deep concern for the high level of self-revision, and requests the Secretary-General to submit a comprehensive report on the matter to the General Assembly at its sixtieth session through the Committee on Conferences;

6. Reiterates its request to the Secretary-General, in updating the workload standards, to address the question of the appropriate level of self-revision that is consistent with quality in all official languages and to report thereon to the General Assembly at its sixtieth session;

7. Requests the Secretary-General to make sure that terminology used in translation and interpretation services reflects the latest linguistic norms and terminology of the official languages in order to ensure the highest quality;

8. Expresses deep concern at the high vacancy rates in interpretation and translation services at the United Nations Office at Nairobi and especially the chronic difficulty in staffing the Arabic Interpretation Unit;

9. Notes with concern the sharp disparities in interpretation and translation vacancy rates between the United Nations Office at Nairobi and the other duty stations;

10. Requests the Secretary-General to pay greater attention to succession planning in order to fill emerging vacancies in language services in a timely manner through outreach to eligible applicants;

11. Also requests the Secretary-General to continue conducting competitive examinations in all official languages in order to fill emerging vacancies in language services in a timely manner;

V

Information technology

1. Notes the progress achieved thus far across duty stations in integrating information technology into management and documentation-processing systems and the global approach to sharing standards, good practices and technological achievements among the conference services at all duty stations;

2. Welcomes efforts undertaken by the Secretary-General at the United Nations Office at Nairobi to include the Office in sharing of standards, good practices and technological achievements with the other United Nations Offices, consistent with its operational requirements;

3. Requests the Secretary-General to intensify the efforts to strengthen the information technology capacity at the United Nations Office at Nairobi, to re-deploy existing resources, as appropriate, to meet emerging priorities and to revert to this issue, as appropriate, in the context of the regular budget for the period 2006-2007;

4. Also requests the Secretary-General to ensure the compatibility of technologies used in all duty stations and to ensure that they are user-friendly for all official languages;

VI

1. Notes the comments in paragraphs 56 to 60 of the report of the Secretary-General, and paragraphs 12 to 14 of the report of the Committee on Conferences;

2. Decides to revert to the issue of biennialization of the agenda item entitled "Pattern of conferences" in the context of improving the working methods of the Fifth Committee.

Also on 23 December, the Assembly decided that the item "Pattern of conferences" would remain for consideration during its resumed fifty-ninth (2005) session (decision 59/552).

Reform of the Department for General Assembly and Conference Management

In response to General Assembly resolution 58/250 [YUN 2003, p. 1486], the Secretary-General reported in July [A/59/172] on the reform of the Department for General Assembly and Conference Management (DGACM), focusing on the technical secretariat support and conference services provided by the Department, and the three major studies undertaken during the past year—on integrated global management, workload standards and performance management, and summary records.

The Secretary-General observed that the momentum of the reform, which was in its second year, had been maintained and was fully integrated into the Department's daily operations. Its focus was on integrating and synchronizing the various projects envisioned at the beginning of the reform process and achieving synergy and full-system benefits by relying on management and technology. Highlighting the main achievements, the Secretary-General said that access to e-Meets, the electronic meetings management system, was provided to permanent missions in New York and UN programmes and organizations, and all servicing units outside DGACM were linked to the system. The Secretariat had also proceeded with the control and limitation of documentation by seeking reductions in the quantity, length and frequency of reports requested and by strictly enforcing page limits. The slotting mechanism for the submission of documents, part of e-Docs (the electronic documentation management system), was expanded in 2004 to cover all the pre-session documents of intergovernmental bodies. However, the mechanism was unable to cover all the documents processed by DGACM, including draft resolutions and decisions and force majeure documents, which would continue to impact on the timely issuance of documents submitted within the slotted time.

In the first of its three major studies, DGACM conducted a two-year project with the Office of Internal Oversight Services (OIOS) on integrated global management of conference services. Agreement was reached on a number of issues, laying the foundation for the full implementation of a global management approach to conference services (see below).

The second study, conducted by the Task Force on Workload Standards and Performance Management, reviewed existing workload standards for conference-servicing staff and the impact of the introduction of new technologies and working methods on staff performance. The Task Force feared that an exclusive emphasis on the productivity of individual staff members might obscure the more significant picture of full-system gains resulting from new technology. It noted, in particular, the case of editors, translators and interpreters, whose core functions were intellectual, and hence not amenable to automation. The Task Force believed that more work needed to be done to develop accurate performance measures to gauge the impact of changes as a result of new technology. It recommended that DGACM develop mechanisms for more systematically tracking user satisfaction of its products, and for analysing new developments and specific circumstances affecting the performance of conference-servicing staff and the regular exchange of information on workload standards and performance measurement.

In its study on summary records, DGACM confirmed the high costs of providing those records in all official languages. It presented several options, such as replacing summary records with digital recordings, reducing the number of bodies entitled to summary records, concentrating précis-writing in the English Translation Service to reduce delays in the translation of summary records, restricting the length of summary records, and eliminating publishing by keeping records only in electronic versions.

The Secretary-General said that the Department would follow-up on the study on integrated global management, begin implementation of the policies and measures agreed upon, and complete the project in 2005. It would pursue the study on workload standards and performance measurement with a view to presenting to the Assembly in 2005 a proposal for a comprehensive methodology from a full-system perspective.

The Committee on Conferences [A/59/32] said that there was need for a deliberate and balanced approach to reform that took into account the characteristics of the different Headquarters units and duty stations away from Headquarters. Innovations in technology and management should be considered from the perspective of full-system benefits, and pilot projects should be conducted over limited areas to ensure that mistakes did not negatively affect the entire system. It requested the Secretariat to pursue the delivery of summary records in a more efficient and cost-effective manner, including the options set out in the Secretary-General's report, to study their practical and financial implications and to make recommendations to the Assembly in 2005 for their implementation in the form of a pilot project.

Integration of global management of conference services

OIOS report. Pursuant to General Assembly resolution 58/250 [YUN 2003, p. 1485], the Secretary-General transmitted in July [A/59/133 & Corr.1] the OIOS report on the integration of global management of conference services. DGACM had requested OIOS to help identify ways of achieving better integration of the management of conference services at its four duty stations (New York, Geneva, Vienna, Nairobi) and to identify possible impediments.

OIOS found that authority within DGACM for policy-making and conference management was unclear, with some official documents providing for such authority to reside centrally in New York, while others provided for it to be decentralized. As a result of that inconsistency, the Under-Secretary-General of DGACM was responsible to the Secretary-General for budgets and expenditure of all four duty stations, with little authority over how those funds were spent. Moreover, inconsistent management practices had developed across all four duty stations in such areas as budgets and expenditures, staffing, workload standards, information technology, meeting planning, documentation management, outsourcing and examinations management.

To deal with those inconsistencies, OIOS proposed the establishment of a Cooperative Global Strategy, in which all duty stations would participate in setting policies and procedures that would be codified in a manual. The Strategy featured a consultative and cooperative culture; a focal point within the office of the Under-Secretary-General to promote the Strategy and act as a bridge between Headquarters and other duty stations; the establishment of cross-duty station task forces (on harmonization of statistical indicators, meeting and planning, human resources, contractual services, information technology, budget and finance, documentation and publishing, client orientation and examinations) to recommend practical policies and procedures and the harmonization of the structures of all duty stations, including measures to standardize the budgetary sources of all duty stations. OIOS also recommended that DGACM promulgate mandatory reporting requirements for staff to ensure compliance with the manual of policies and procedures; that Directors General consult with the Under-Secretary-General on senior staff appointments in the four duty stations; and that DGACM consider a system of staff exchanges among duty stations. DGACM management endorsed the OIOS proposals and took action to implement many of them.

ACABQ report. The Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions (ACABQ), having considered the Secretary-General's report on DGACM reform (see p. 1467) and the OIOS report on the integration of global management of conference services (see above), noted in October [A/59/418] that an interdepartmental review group was being set up to address weaknesses in the document slotting system. ACABQ believed that more emphasis should be placed on the optimal use of allocated conference resources by measuring results achieved with available resources, and urged that the methodology for calculating the use of conference resources be revisited. It pointed out that the introduction of new technologies in DGACM had not automatically increased productivity in areas such as editing, translation and interpretation. It was concerned that measurable gains in productivity and quality had not been realized, despite the large investment in information technology (IT), and requested the Department to continue developing a practical, results-oriented IT strategy, while ensuring that the needs and experience of language staff were taken into account in the use of IT. It was of the view that DGACM should pay greater attention to succession planning by identifying suitable applicants in local markets and developing a roster of qualified candidates in all official languages. ACABQ intended to revert to the issues of succession planning and vacancies in its review of the Secretary-General's submission on human resources management to the Assembly's fifty-ninth (2004) session (see p. 1418). ACABQ was not convinced that DGACM had made sufficient efforts to raise the performance of individual staff members by linking staff training programmes to workload standards and performance management. It asked DGACM to report on the matter in the study on workload standards and performance management.

Use of conference services

The Committee on Conferences considered the Secretary-General's August report [A/59/159], in which he discussed improved utilization of conference-servicing resources and facilities, documentation and publication, translation and interpretation, and IT. The report also provided meeting statistics of a sample of UN bodies, statistics on conference services for meetings of regional and other groupings of Member States at the four duty stations from 1 May 2003 to 30 April 2004, and requests for meetings during the General Assembly's fifty-ninth (2004) session. The overall utilization factor for 2003 at the four duty stations was 77 per cent, lower than the benchmark of 80 per cent but higher than the rate for the previous two years. When information was included on the number of reassignments of services to related bodies, the overall utilization was 72 per cent. The Committee welcomed the improvement in utilization of conference-servicing resources and suggested that the Secretary-General consider alternative methods for calculating the utilization factor. The Committee Chairman reported on his consultations with bodies that had consistently utilized less than the benchmark figure of their allocated resources for the previous three sessions and made proposals for improving the utilization of those bodies.

Use of regional conference facilities

Nairobi

The Committee on Conferences was informed of the steady improvement in the utilization of conference-servicing facilities at Nairobi and that the modernization of the Nairobi conference facilities was well along in the planning stage [A/59/32]. Unlike the other headquarters, Nairobi received only half of its funding from regular budget allocations, resulting in the majority of language posts, except interpreter posts, being extrabudgetary, with no career prospects. The United Nations Office at Nairobi (UNON) intended to address the problem in the next budget cycle. The Committee expressed concern over the high proportion of extrabudgetary funding and about security. It noted the need for new methods for attracting more meetings to Nairobi, and the competition from other conference centres in Africa.

Economic Commission for Africa

The Secretary-General, in his August report on the pattern of conferences [A/59/159], indicated that, as requested by the General Assembly in resolution 58/250 [YUN 2003, p. 1486], improvements were made to increase utilization of the Conference Centre at the Economic Commission for Africa (ECA) (Addis Ababa, Ethiopia), including the finalization and implementation of an action plan and a marketing campaign, and teaming up with the Ethiopian Tourism Commission, Ethiopian Airlines and other players to attract internal and external clients. The Conference Centre looked to establish and develop linkages and networks with other UN conference centres and international convention centres, tourism boards, tour operators and exhibition organizers worldwide, and to introduce and utilize an integrated management system and other modern technology. However, the Centre continued to be hampered by competition from smaller conference venues in sub-Saharan Africa, lack of adequate infrastructure and logistical support in Addis Ababa, visa and immigration restrictions, and inadequate financial resources for implementing marketing programmes.

Interpretation for regional and other groupings

In August [A/59/159], the Secretary-General reported on the provision of interpretation services to meetings of regional and other major groupings of Member States for the period 1 May 2003 to 30 April 2004. The Committee on Conferences [A/59/32] noted that all requests by such groupings for meetings without interpretation services were met at the four duty stations (New York, Geneva, Vienna and Nairobi), and that of the requests for interpretation, 90 per cent were met, a decrease from 92 per cent for the previous 12 months, but an increase of 10 per cent in the total number of such meetings.

Construction of conference facilities

Additional conference rooms at Headquarters

The Capital Master Plan (CMP) for the UN Headquarters complex in New York, introduced in 2000 [YUN 2000, p. 1405], had identified the possibility of creating three new mid-sized conference rooms on the first basement level of the Headquarters building. The Secretary-General submitted a report [A/58/556] on plans and options for the three conference rooms and viable solutions for allowing natural light into them, as requested by the General Assembly in resolution 57/292 [YUN 2002, p. 1375]. The introduction of natural lighting would increase the cost of the rooms by between $0.7 million to $1.2 million.

ACABQ, in November [A/59/556], stated that, given the current uncertainties of the financing arrangements for CMP (see p. 1473), it was premature to make a recommendation on the layout of additional conference rooms.

By decision 59/551 of 23 December, the General Assembly deferred consideration of the Secretary-General's report until its resumed fifty-ninth (2005) session.

Additional conference facilities at Vienna

The Secretary-General, reporting in December [A/C.5/59/23] on the construction of additional conference facilities at the Vienna International Centre, stated that the Centre's conference facilities were inadequate for the needs of the organizations headquartered there: the International Atomic Energy Agency, the United Nations Industrial Development Organization and the Preparatory Commission for the Comprehensive Nuclear-Test-Ban Treaty Organization, which had requested the host country to make additional conference facilities available. The Austrian Government offered to provide a new conference facility and signed a memorandum of understanding to that effect with the participating organizations in October. Under its terms, the new facility, of approximately 17,000 square metres, would have a ceiling cost of 52.5 million euros, of which 50 million euros would be provided by the Austrian Government and the remainder by the three organizations.

The Secretary-General recommended that the Assembly note the approval by the Vienna-based organizations of Austria's proposal for a new conference centre, approve the participation of the United Nations and those organizations in the proposed arrangements and entrust him with determining the cost-sharing arrangements for potential future costs.

The ACABQ Chairman, in an oral report to the Fifth Committee [meeting 31], recommended that the Assembly approve the Secretary-General's requests, which it did in resolution 59/276 of 23 December (see p. 1383).

Documentation

In May [A/58/CRP.7], the Secretary-General submitted a note on the control and limitation of documentation, in response to General Assembly resolutions 58/126 [YUN 2003, p. 1389] and 58/250 [ibid. p. 1486], and Economic and Social Council agreed conclusions 2002/1 [YUN 2002, p. 1365] on the consolidation of reports on related subjects, compliance with the guidelines on page limits, and streamlining documentation, respectively. The note contained measures taken to comply with those requests, including guidelines issued by the Council and further steps that could be taken to limit the reports of functional commissions and subsidiary bodies to the Council. After a review of all Secretariat departments and their mandates, it was believed that a consolidation of mandates could lead to a reduction of documentation of about 25 per cent.

The Assembly, in resolution 58/316 of 1 July (see p. 1374), requested the Secretary-General to update his note on the control and limitation of documentation and to initiate implementation of resolution 57/300 [YUN 2002, p. 1353] with a view to consolidating reports on related subjects.

Official Document System

JIU report. The General Assembly considered the report [A/58/435] of the Joint Inspection Unit (JIU) entitled "From the Optical Disk System to the Official Documents System (ODS): status of implementation and evaluation", which assessed the status of implementation of ODS and identified remaining policy and management issues, which, if addressed, could help to widen its use as an archival and retrieval system of official documents for the United Nations and other interested organizations. JIU made a number recommendations for improving the system, to which the Secretary-General responded in a later report [A/58/435/Add.1]. ACABQ, in its comments [A/58/620] on the OIOS report, requested information on the financial implications of extending usage of the system.

Report of Secretary-General. Responding to Assembly resolution 58/270 [YUN 2003, p. 1399], the Secretary-General submitted a November report [A/59/578/Add.1] on progress made in implementation of ODS, reviewing the expansion of the system's use over the past two bienniums and the improvements under way to enhance its application. The Secretary-General reported that ODS, provided free of charge, was available worldwide. The Dag Hammarskjöld Library was gradually digitizing documentation issued prior to 1993 for loading onto ODS, which was expected to be completed in early 2005. Since June, all UN offices away from Headquarters had been loading their documents, and with the expected installation of a new document loading server, offices away from Headquarters would have access to a more reliable and faster loading process. Arrangements had yet to be worked out to reflect language parity in ODS since the majority of documents archived by offices away from Headquarters were available only in the working language of the duty station or of the intergovernmental body concerned.

ACABQ, in its comments on the first performance report on the 2004-2005 programme budget [A/59/601], recommended that DGACM consider the feasibility of ensuring full parity for language versions of all documents posted on ODS, which the Assembly endorsed in resolution 59/276 (see p. 1383).

Translation and interpretation matters

Recruitment in language services

The Secretary-General reported in August [A/59/159] that several translation services at Headquarters continued to have relatively high vacancy rates as a result of retirements and other staff movements. While the situation at Geneva and Vienna was more stable, Nairobi's difficulties in filling translation and editorial vacancies mirrored those it faced in filling interpreters' posts. Recruitment to fill vacant posts would be speeded up, while special measures would be taken to mitigate the problems arising from the assimilation of large numbers of new staff over a relatively short period of time. In response to resolution 58/250, efforts had been made also to fill expeditiously the vacant posts in the interpretation and translation services at Nairobi.

The Committee on Conferences [A/59/32] expressed concern about the quality of translation and interpretation services, and the persistent vacancies in language service posts at Headquarters, and particularly at Nairobi.

Informational meetings

The Committee on Conferences [A/59/32] expressed support for holding informational meetings, organized in response to resolution 57/283 B [YUN 2003, p. 1481], to brief Member States on terminology and for consultations aimed at improving translation services. It proposed that they be held twice a year for each UN official language rather than once a year, and that interpretation services be provided on an as-available basis.

UN information systems

Information and communication technology

In September [A/59/265], the Secretary-General reported on progress in implementing the UN information and communication technology (ICT) strategy [YUN 2002, p. 1454] and on the impact of investments in ICT on the Organization's business processes. The report was made in line with General Assembly resolution 58/270 [YUN 2003, p. 1399].

The Secretariat had significantly upgraded its server and storage network infrastructures and the local area network at Headquarters. The installation of the Wi-Fi (wireless visitor network) public hotspots provided Internet access for portable devices in several areas in the Headquarters's building. To ensure security, the Organization had formally adopted the industry standard performance benchmark for security known as ISO-17799. Secretariat-wide planning activities were well under way to bring all offices into compliance with the standard and to obtain relevant certification. An ICT manual, constituting a compendium of policies, standards, procedures and plans for promoting best practices for ICT management and delivery, including security, was being prepared to comply with ISO-17799 requirements. The completed manual would become the operational guide by early 2005.

The governance of the ICT process was institutionalized by the Secretary-General [ST/SGB/2003/17] in setting up the Project Review Committee as a subsidiary body of the Information and Communications Technology Board. The Committee played a crucial role in applying the standards established by the Board, reviewing ICT initiatives and submitting recommendations on whether such initiatives should be implemented.

In terms of investments, during 2004, efforts and resources were devoted to further building the ICT infrastructure, as part of the ICT strategy. Although the aggregate figures on the positive return on those investments could not be produced, the methodology and mechanisms in place would allow the quantification of the return on investment at the individual project level.

ACABQ, in November [A/59/558], reviewed the implementation of the ICT strategy and recommended that the Assembly take note of the Secretary-General's report.

International cooperation in informatics

In response to Economic and Social Council resolution 2003/48 [YUN 2003, p. 1494], the Secretary-General submitted a May report [E/2004/78] on international cooperation in the field of informatics, which summarized the various activities in that field as reported by the Secretariat departments and the Ad Hoc Open-ended Working Group on Informatics. Activities of the Working Group included the circulation of the booklet entitled "Internet Services for Delegates", Andorra's initiative to allow delegates to download data onto their personal digital assistants, plans for improving ODS, and upgrading personal computer facilities for delegates. As of May, the Information Technology Services Division, in its efforts to provide connectivity and Internet access to all permanent and observer missions, had donated 1,157 personal computers and printers to missions.

ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL ACTION

On 23 July [meeting 50], the Economic and Social Council adopted resolution 2004/51 [draft: E/2004/L.28] without vote [agenda item 7 (c)].

The need to harmonize and improve United Nations informatics systems for optimal utilization and accessibility by all States

The Economic and Social Council,

Welcoming the report of the Secretary-General on international cooperation in the field of informatics and the initiatives of the Ad Hoc Open-ended Working Group on Informatics,

Recognizing the interest of Member States in taking full advantage of information and communication technologies for the acceleration of economic and social development,

Recalling its previous resolutions on the need to harmonize and improve United Nations information systems for optimal utilization and access by all States, with due regard to all official languages,

Welcoming the intensification of efforts by the Information Technology Services Division of the Department of Management of the Secretariat to provide interconnectivity and unhindered Internet access to all Permanent and Observer Missions at the United Nations,

1. Reiterates once again the high priority that it attaches to easy, economical, uncomplicated and unhindered access for States Members and observers of the United Nations, as well as non-governmental organizations accredited to the United Nations, to the computerized databases and information systems and services of the United Nations, provided that the unhindered access of non-governmental organizations to such databases, systems and services will not prejudice the access of Member States nor impose an additional financial burden for their use;

2. Requests the President of the Economic and Social Council to convene the Ad Hoc Open-ended Working Group on Informatics for one more year to enable it to carry out, from within existing resources, the due fulfilment of the provisions of the Council resolutions on this item, to facilitate the successful implementation of the initiatives being taken by the Secretary-General with regard to the use of information technology and to continue the implementation of measures required to achieve its objectives, and, in this regard, requests the Working Group to continue its efforts in order to act as a bridge between the evolving needs of Member States and the actions of the Secretariat;

3. Expresses its appreciation to the Information Technology Services Division for the cooperation it extended to the Working Group in the production of the booklet entitled "Internet services for delegates" and to the Government of Andorra for its initiative on the personal digital assistant pilot project;

4. Requests the Secretary-General to extend full cooperation to the Working Group and to give priority to implementing its recommendations;

5. Also requests the Secretary-General to report to the Council at its substantive session of 2005 on action taken on the follow up to the present resolution, including the findings of the Working Group and an assessment of its work and mandate.

Other matters

Common services

Outsourcing practices

In response to General Assembly resolution 58/276 [YUN 2003, p. 1499], the Secretary-General submitted an August report on UN outsourcing practices [A/59/227]. Annexed to the report was a list of outsourced activities in 2002-2003, specifying the location and type of each activity and reasons for outsourcing, with the reported savings where outsourcing was initiated with that aim. The Secretary-General reiterated his commitment to ensuring that programme managers were guided by the four criteria set out in Assembly resolution 55/232 [YUN 2000, p. 1401]. He also informed the Assembly that supplier performance evaluation forms used by the Procurement Division had been shared with the members of the Inter-Agency Procurement Working Group.

ACABQ, in an October report [A/59/540], said that the information should be provided through a thematic approach by locality, instead of just a list of outputs, and should include an analysis of trends.

UN premises and property

Addis Ababa office facilities

In response to General Assembly resolution 56/270 [YUN 2002, p. 1459], the Secretary-General reported in October [A/59/444] that design activities for the construction of additional office facilities at the Economic Commission for Africa (ECA) in Addis Ababa were near completion. The final construction cost estimates were expected in December, and the construction contractor would be selected in May 2005. Construction was to be completed by mid-2007. However, the delay in project implementation and security-related enhancements to the building design might result in additional project costs. While every effort would be made to keep the total cost within the budget ($7.7 million) approved by the Assembly in resolution 56/270, any additional cost resulting from the design revisions would be reported to the Assembly in 2005.

ACABQ, in a November report [A/59/572], recommended that clear understandings be reached with the various UN entities involved to allow priority-oriented planning and to ensure the most efficient allocation of space, and that such information should be included in the next report of the Secretary-General.

Parking space at Headquarters

In response to General Assembly resolution 57/292 [YUN 2002, p. 1375], the Secretary-General submitted a February study [A/58/712] on viable options for ensuring sufficient parking space at UN Headquarters to meet current and future needs of diplomatic missions and Secretariat staff within the projected overall budget of the capital master plan (CMP) (see below). The study evaluated needs, described physical changes and gave estimated costs for a number of options. Taking into consideration costs and environmental and aesthetic impact, the study recommended the least expensive option, which would entail reorganization and rationalization of the existing garage and would add 66 parking spaces at a low initial cost and no additional operating costs.

ACABQ, in November [A/59/556], took note of the Secretary-General's report, but considered that given the current uncertainties of the financing for CMP, it was premature to make a recommendation on the options for increasing parking space at Headquarters.

By decision 59/551 of 23 December, the Assembly deferred consideration of the Secretary-General's report until its resumed fifty-ninth (2005) session.

Capital master plan*Funding arrangements*

As requested by the General Assembly in resolution 57/292 [YUN 2002, p. 1375], the Secretary-General reported in March [A/58/729] on the status of possible funding arrangements for the capital master plan (CMP). He stated that the host Government had informed the Secretariat on 20 February of its offer, subject to approval by the United States Congress, to lend the United Nations $1.2 billion to finance CMP at an interest rate of 5.54 per cent. During the construction phase, interest would be paid only on the advances received, and on the completion of construction, the loan would be based on the total amount, repayable over 25 years at the same interest rate, or $89,808,700 annually. The total sum to be repaid would amount to $2,511,137,500. The Secretary-General recommended that the Assembly note with appreciation the offer by the host country Government; note that the loan would increase the overall cost if interest rates were applied; and request him to consult further with the host country authorities on the exact terms of the loan, explore other funding opportunities, including contributions from public and private sources, and report to the Assembly at its fifty-ninth (2004) session.

By decision 58/566 of 8 April, the Assembly postponed consideration of CMP financing to the second part of its resumed fifty-eighth (2004) session. It requested the Secretary-General to update section IV, entitled "Sources of funding, financing options and commercial borrowing" of his 2000 report on CMP [YUN 2000, p. 1405], and his report on the status of possible funding arrangements for CMP, and to submit all outstanding reports requested in resolution 57/292.

The Secretary-General, in his second annual report on the implementation of CMP, submitted in October [A/59/441] (see p. 1475) in response to resolution 57/292, stated that the Secretariat had sought more favourable financing options from the host country, which had since indicated that the maximum amount of the loan would be $1.2 billion and that the repayment period, including construction time, would be 35 years. Once approved by the Congress, a loan agreement between the United States and the United Nations should be entered into before 30 September 2005, or the offer would lapse. The loan could then be activated at any time over the next 35 years, with the United Nations drawing down all or part of it. The United Nations would incur no liability if it signed the loan agreement but did not activate the loan.

The Secretary-General sought advice on financing options from commercial financial institutions, which advised that the host country proposal was more favourable than a loan in capital markets. The Secretariat explored other options for reducing interest payments, such as taking advantage of short-term interest rates during the construction phase and using capital markets for longer-term borrowing. It determined, however, that the use of capital market alternatives would expose the United Nations to risk, especially with changes in interest rates on short-term borrowing.

The interest incurred on all financing proposals would be paid by Member States through the normal assessment process, with Member States having the option of paying the totality of their assessed share of the $1.2 billion prior to the start of construction, without any further obligation regarding future interest payments.

The Secretary-General said that the host country offer of an interest-bearing loan did not meet the Assembly's expectations. However, if accepted, it would allow the Organization to lock in the interest rate for the loan. The loan offer, when used as a guarantee, would enable the United Nations to have access to capital-market interest rates that could, particularly during construction, reduce the interest costs for the United Nations. A decision to use capital-market financing instead of the host country loan to finance either the CMP construction period or the permanent loan should be made prior to construction, when a more accurate comparison between the market interest rates and that offered by the host country could be made. Notwithstanding those options, the Secretary-General maintained the view that an interest-free loan would be the most advantageous option for the United Nations.

ACABQ, in November [A/59/556], said that since the proposed offer could not be formally made by the host country until the legislative process had been completed, it was not in a position to submit any views on it at that time, but would revert to the matter if and when a formal offer was made.

By decision 59/551 of 23 December, the Assembly deferred until its resumed fifty-ninth (2005) session, the Secretary-General's report on possible funding arrangements for CMP and his second annual report on CMP.

Cooperation with the City of New York

In accordance with General Assembly resolution 57/292 [YUN 2002, p. 1375], the Secretary-General in April [A/58/799] provided an update on the status of the negotiations with the City and State of New York on implementation of the CMP project, which was initially reported on in 2003 [A/58/599]. Under the plan, a new building would be constructed by the United Nations Development Corporation (UNDC), to be known as the UNDC-5 building, to provide swing space during the implementation of CMP. The City had developed a plan to mitigate the effects of the construction on the community and was working with the New York State legislature, which was expected to enact a mitigation plan in 2005. UNDC was finalizing a contract for the construction with the architectural firm selected and design work was expected to begin immediately upon the signing of the contract. A study on security requirements for the building was nearing completion. Construction was scheduled to start in late 2005, pending the resolution of all related matters.

In his second annual report on the implementation of CMP, submitted in October [A/59/441], the Secretary-General stated that a formal contract was signed in April with the design architects, Maki and Associates (Japan), and consultations between the architect and the Secretariat began in May. The United Nations, UNDC, the architect and New York City representatives met in July to discuss security requirements, which resulted in significantly increased costs. Other options and designs would be studied. The cost of the alternative building design by UNDC was estimated at $458.2 million, resulting in a fixed rent of $39.32 per square foot, compared to the preliminary estimate of $315.8 million prepared in 2002, with an estimated fixed rent of $27.59 per square foot. The Secretary-General recognized that the increase in the costs of the proposed building would impact on the overall cost of CMP and could call into question the viability of the building as swing space during the CMP construction phase. He would therefore evaluate other options for swing space during that period.

By decision 59/551 of 23 December, the Assembly deferred until its resumed fifty-ninth (2005) session consideration of the Secretary-General's report on UN cooperation with the City and State of New York related to CMP.

Review of CMP

Report of Board of Auditors. In July [A/59/161], the Secretary-General transmitted to the General Assembly the report of the Board of Auditors on CMP for the biennium ended 31 December 2003, in response to Assembly resolution 57/292 [YUN 2002, p. 1375]. The review covered the design development and construction documentation phases. Expenditures of $4.3 million in 2002-2003 increased the total cumulative expenditure for CMP since its inception in December 2000 from $6.9 million to $11.2 million as at 31 December 2003. The Board found that delays in the initiation of the design and construction documentation phases might result in increases of some 3.5 per cent in design fees and of some $2.6 million per annum in administrative and operating expenses for the Office of the United Nations Capital Master Plan. The Board recommended that the Administration comply strictly with UN regulations and rules on procurement and contracting; address all causes of delay in the initiation of the design development and construction documentation phases; and adopt measures to minimize administrative and management costs.

OIOS report. In October [A/59/420], the Secretary-General, in response to Assembly resolution 57/292, forwarded the OIOS report on CMP for the period from August 2003 to July 2004. During that period, OIOS provided continuous audit coverage of CMP activities, including the construction phase of the security strengthening project. It reviewed contracts with an aggregate value of $59 million.

OIOS concluded that the resources appropriated by the Assembly for CMP activities were generally utilized in accordance with UN Financial Rules, however, UN operating procedures and documents related to construction contracts needed to be improved for the CMP project to be implemented efficiently and economically. OIOS expressed concern that the construction documents for the security-strengthening project might not be entirely adequate because the construction manager and contract administrator were not on board during the design stage. Also, inconsistencies in the construction documents and the potential for cost savings had not been addressed by the Office of the Capital Master Plan prior to the issuance of the request for proposals, and the contractor's guarantees for the performance of the security-strengthening construction were not adequate. OIOS stressed that the audit resources allocated to it for CMP were insufficient and that oversight resources should be increased to provide for adequate audit coverage.

By decision 59/551 of 23 December, the Assembly deferred to its resumed fifty-ninth (2005) session consideration of the report of the Board of Auditors on CMP for the 2002-2003 biennium and the OIOS report on CMP for August 2003 to July 2004.

CMP implementation

In accordance with General Assembly resolution 57/292 [YUN 2002, p. 1375], the Secretary-General submitted his second annual report on the implementation of CMP [A/59/441]. The report discussed possible funding arrangements (see p. 1473), progress made by the United Nations Development Cooperation (see p. 1474), establishment of an advisory board, progress of the design work for the refurbishment of UN Headquarters, a procurement update and status of appropriations and expenditures.

As the Assembly requested, the Secretary-General established a CMP advisory board to advise on CMP, act as a sounding board on major project concepts and assist with decisions on financial issues. It would initially advise on commercial borrowing and other financing options, and on architectural issues.

Work on refurbishing Headquarters was in the design development phase. The first activity entailed confirmation of the details of the scope of the refurbishment. Each design firm would prepare a scope confirmation report of its work, which together would provide a coordinated framework for detailed design development. All design development was expected to be completed by September 2005. The functional programming process was well under way to determine the size and general location of space for functions at Headquarters. At the time of the report, 13 contracts, with a total value of $10.4 million, had been awarded, including five contracts for the design development phase and related advisory services. Actual expenditure on CMP in 2003 amounted to $3.2 million. Expenditure for 2004 was projected at $19.4 million, of which $9.6 million had been spent by 31 July.

The Secretary-General recommended that the Assembly: decide, if a formal offer for the proposed loan from the host country was received, to take up the matter during its resumed fifty-ninth (2005) session; review at that session his proposals for the allocation of conference (see p. 1469) and parking space (see p. 1473) at Headquarters; encourage him to continue negotiations with the City and State of New York on the construction of a new building (UNDC-5) at a lease-purchase cost in line with the current lease costs of the UNDC-1 and UNDC-2 buildings, and in the light of those negotiations, to evaluate other options for swing space during the CMP construction phase; and convert into an appropriation for 2004-2005 an amount of $18,642,000 of the commitment authority of the $26 million approved in Assembly resolution 57/292, and to extend the validity of the residual balance of $7,358,000 into the 2006-2007 biennium so as to continue the design work and related project management and pre-construction services.

ACABQ, in its November report [A/59/556], stated that a number of the basic parameters had changed since the adoption of Assembly resolution 57/292, including the nature of the financing arrangements and the construction costs, which the Assembly might wish to take into account when considering the Secretary-General's recommendations. It recommended approval of his proposal concerning the commitment authority for the 2004-2005 and 2006-2007 bienniums.

By decision 59/551 of 23 December, the Assembly deferred to its resumed fifty-ninth (2005) session the Secretary-General's second annual report on the implementation of CMP and the related ACABQ report.

Security

Strengthening security of UN operations, staff and premises

In April [A/58/756], the Secretary-General reported on strengthening the security and safety of UN operations, staff and premises. After the bombing of the UN facilities at Baghdad, Iraq, in August 2003 [YUN 2003, p. 346], he took a number of steps to strengthen the security and safety of the United Nations. In his April report, he proposed measures for the first phase of the long-term strengthening of security and safety, based on a review of arrangements at Headquarters and in the field. The total costs of the proposals were estimated at $92,433,500, including one-time requirements of $71,193,900 for upgrading the physical and security infrastructures, acquiring related equipment and other expenditures such as the interim strengthening of security staff using general temporary assistance. A net request for the appropriation of $85,965,800 was submitted for the Assembly's consideration, with the balance of $6,467,700 to be funded by Vienna-based organizations through cost-sharing.

ACABQ, having reviewed the Secretary-General's report in April [A/58/758], recommended that the Assembly appropriate $40 million (gross) under the 2004-2005 programme budget for the implementation of the measures proposed by the Secretary-General on an interim basis. It also recommended that for peacekeeping operations and the International Criminal Tribunal for Rwanda, expenses estimated at $4.9 million should be accommodated within existing budgets ($4.3 million for peacekeeping and $0.6 million for the Tribunal); such additional appropriations could be considered in the context of the relevant performance reports. Some $8.9 million of the provision for the Office of the United Nations Security Coordinator recommended by ACABQ would be borne by the participating organizations under cost-sharing arrangements. Compared with the Secretary-General's request for $85,965,800, ACABQ recommended a total of $63.0 million for the same functions.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 18 June [meeting 91], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee [A/58/820], adopted resolution 58/295 without vote [agenda items 121, 131, 134, 137, 138, 140, 141, 142, 145 (a) & (b), 146, 147].

Strengthening the security and safety of United Nations operations, staff and premises

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 56/255 of 24 December 2001, 56/286 of 27 June 2002, 57/305 of 15 April 2003, 58/270 of 23 December 2003 and all relevant resolutions regarding the security and safety of United Nations operations, staff and premises,

Having considered the report of the Secretary-General on strengthening the security and safety of United Nations operations, staff and premises,

Having also considered the related report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions,

1. Endorses the recommendations of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions contained in its report, subject to the provisions of the present resolution;

2. Stresses the need, for the purposes of objective analyses, for a dedicated functional staff at Headquarters to review the recommendations on country risk assessments made by security officers in the field with the assistance of and input from national authorities of the host country;

3. Approves the establishment of 58 new field security posts for the Office of the United Nations Security Coordinator, and decides, without prejudice to such decisions as may be arrived at regarding cost-sharing arrangements, to appropriate 2,583,000 United States dollars, being the portion of costs normally attributable to the United Nations using current formulas, and to revert to the required residual funding of 8,162,100 dollars at the fifty-ninth session when determining cost-sharing arrangements;

4. Decides to revert to the possible conversion of the 58 extrabudgetary field security posts for the Office of the United Nations Security Coordinator in the context of the comprehensive report at its fifty-ninth session;

5. Authorizes the Secretary-General to enter into commitments not to exceed 38,033,200 dollars for the financing of infrastructure projects;

6. Requests the Secretary-General to submit to it at its fifty-ninth session a comprehensive report on further strengthening the safety and security of United Nations operations, staff and premises, which should contain, inter alia, the following elements:

(a) Clearly established criteria for determining long-term needs;

(b) A rational framework for the enhancement of system-wide security arrangements, based on the completion of all ongoing reviews, including the change management study;

(c) Time frames for the completion of the various projects proposed in the report of the Secretary-General, as well as determinations as to which organizational units are responsible for their completion;

(d) Clearly established lines of accountability and responsibility and a clear chain of command for all participants in field security and at duty stations, including clarification of the relationship between all relevant United Nations entities and the Secretariat;

(e) Information on United Nations cooperation with and the role and responsibilities of host countries;

(f) Information on the need to ensure an enhanced professional capacity in the United Nations to conduct threat and risk assessment on a worldwide basis in order to address the issue raised in paragraph 18 of the report of the Secretary-General;

(g) Information on the utilization and cost of expertise sought on safety and security;

(h) Information on the need for adequate security-related training for all United Nations staff;

(i) Analysis of and recommendations on long-term funding arrangements for the Office of the United Nations Security Coordinator and related resource requirements;

7. Decides that the resource requirements in the requested report should be based on and justified in terms of the Secretary-General's comprehensive review of safety and security;

8. Requests the Secretary-General to entrust the Office of Internal Oversight Services with the conduct of an audit review of the utilization and management of the funds appropriated by the General Assembly in its resolution 56/286 for the implementation of measures to strengthen the security and safety of United Nations premises, including the causes for cost escalation and compliance with procurement procedures, and to report to the Assembly at its fifty-ninth session in conjunction with the comprehensive report on strengthening the security and safety of United Nations operations, staff and premises;

9. Decides to approve an additional appropriation under the regular budget in the amount of 18,287,100 dollars, broken down by budget section as follows:

Section 3. Political affairs	2 866 100
Section 4. Disarmament	70 200
Section 5. Peacekeeping operations	3 774 100
Section 7. International Court of Justice	84 000
Section 18. Economic and social development in Africa	55 700
Section 19. Economic and social development in Asia and the Pacific	592 900
Section 21. Economic and social development in Latin America and the Caribbean	80 900
Section 22. Economic and social development in Western Asia	233 400
Section 28. Public information	186 200
Section 29A. Office of the Under-Secretary-General for Management	500 000
Section 29C. Office of Human Resources Management	326 800
Section 29D. Office of Central Support Services	1 672 100
Section 29E. Administration, Geneva	2 683 500
Section 29F. Administration, Vienna	1 931 900
Section 29G. Administration, Nairobi	646 300
Section 31. Jointly financed administrative activities	2 583 000
Total	18 287 100

On 23 December, the Assembly took related action on a strengthened and unified UN security management system in resolution 59/276, section XI (see p. 1383).

OIOS report. The Secretary-General transmitted in October [A/59/396] the OIOS report on the utilization and management of funds appropriated during the 2002-2003 biennium for strengthening the security and safety of UN premises, pursuant to General Assembly resolution 58/295 (see above). The OIOS audit of the $57.7 million appropriated during 2002-2003 for that purpose focused on determining whether the funds were utilized in accordance with the proposals contained in the Secretary-General's 2002 report on the subject [YUN 2002, p. 1460].

By 31 May 2004, $48.6 million of that amount had been spent. The delay in the signing of the main construction contract for projects at Headquarters, which was not finalized until 31 March, had led to further delays and increased costs. Proposed changes in specifications for the access control system would result in further cost escalation, and OIOS stated that the decision to modify the specifications should be supported by a cost benefit and risk analysis to justify the additional investment. OIOS considered that the unspent balance of $4.8 million for projects deferred to CMP and pooled in a construction-in-progress account should be surrendered or used to reduce the additional funds requested in the current biennium. Noting that the guarantees provided by the contractor for the main construction contract were significantly lower than the Organization's requirements and industry standards, thereby exposing the United Nations to the risk of poor performance and payment defaults by the contractor, OIOS made recommendations for protecting more effectively the Organization's interests in future construction contracts.

The underutilization of about $9.6 million (or 62 per cent of the revised appropriation) for security-strengthening projects at the UN Office at Geneva (UNOG) resulted from the redesign and rescheduling of the projects owing to the increased level of threat to the United Nations following the incidents of 11 September 2001 [YUN 2001, p. 60] and 19 August 2003 [YUN 2003, p. 346]. UNOG expected most projects to be completed by December 2005. As projects were modified and the scope of work increased, the cost estimates more than doubled and further adjustments were likely. OIOS was of the opinion that, once all the security requirements were finalized, an up-to-date security strategy, a final plan and costing should be developed for each project. Senior management should ensure that the plan was respected and project objectives were achieved within the established costs and timelines. The steering committee established to oversee the projects should be revitalized to ensure a coordinated management decision-making process and to provide direction and oversight, and a dedicated project manager should be assigned to enhance UNOG project management capacity.

The value of the contract awarded for architectural/engineering work and overall supervision of the security projects increased from $670,000 to $4 million owing to a significant change in the scope of the work. It was expected that the fees would rise to $6.4 million because of a further increase in the scope of the construction work. In the opinion of OIOS, a market survey should be conducted to make certain that the total fees payable were still competitive.

Unified security management system

As requested in resolution 58/295 (see p. 1476), the Secretary-General reported in October [A/59/365] on the strengthened and unified security management system for the United Nations. The report examined the current state of the UN security system, reviewed changes made since his 2001 report on inter-organizational security measures [YUN 2001, p. 1348] and made recommendations for organizational reform aimed at better meeting the evolving security threat. Those recommendations called for the amalgamation of existing security components into a new Directorate of Security, to be headed by an Under-Secretary-General reporting directly to the Secretary-General; providing the Directorate with new capabilities in security threat and risk assessment, operational support in the field, policies and standards, compliance and evaluation, human resources management and training; increasing significantly the number of security personnel, particularly in the field; and phasing out the current cost-sharing arrangements for field security in favour of centrally funding security costs from assessed resources. In an addendum [A/59/365/Add.1 & Corr. 1] to the report, the Secretary-General proposed revised estimates under various sections of the 2004-2005 programme budget for the second phase of measures on the long-term strengthening of UN security and safety. The total gross costs of the proposed measures were estimated at $97.1 million, including one-time requirements of $29.6 million. Those resources would provide for the establishment of the Directorate of Security in New York, as well as activities to bring infrastructure and procedures up to a satisfactory standard of compliance with Headquarters minimum operating security standards.

ACABQ reviewed the recommendations in October [A/59/539] and stated that the new unified security management system should be focused primarily on the field, with a streamlined central capacity at Headquarters. It was of the view that the United Nations should enhance cooperation with national and/or local law enforcement agencies where host countries had well developed security structures, and make use of their capacity in security threat and risk assessment. In countries where that was absent, the United Nations should strengthen its ability to ensure its own security. Concerning accountability and responsibility, ACABQ said that it was still not clear how the lines of reporting and decision-making would work in complex operations involving regional commissions, peacekeeping activities, special political missions, and activities of UN agencies, funds and programmes. The role of each responsible official should be clarified, as well as their place in the security framework.

ACABQ recommended against the proposal to phase out the cost-sharing arrangements for field-related costs among organizations using the services of the field security management system, in favour of the United Nations appropriating the entire financial requirement, subject to proportional reimbursement from the agencies. According to ACABQ, it was not necessary for the proposed Directorate of Security to have an autonomous administrative and support capacity at Headquarters. The Headquarters operation should focus on policy guidance, general direction and monitoring functions. ACABQ expressed its firm view that the UN security system should be primarily focused on the field, with a streamlined central capacity at Headquarters. In that regard, ACABQ suggested a regional field presence, using national experience where relevant, in a structure to be accommodated within the total number of the proposed field desk posts. An additional 394 posts were proposed for the reinforcement of Security and Safety Services at Headquarters and at the other seven main UN locations.

In regard to the Secretary-General's proposal for a system to control access to UN premises, ACABQ requested him to submit for Assembly consideration a detailed blueprint of the system, with justification for the costs involved. He should be authorized to enter into commitments not exceeding $11.2 million for the planning and initial work pending consideration of the requested report.

ACABQ looked forward to the further refinement of the Secretary-General's security plan and to his implementation report which it had requested. It would revert to the matter of achieving economies in resources. The current request for appropriation would be adjusted to take into account the financial consequences of those ACABQ recommendations that the Assembly might adopt.

The Assembly took action on the reports of the Secretary-General on UN security and those of OIOS and ACABQ in resolution 59/276, section XI, of 23 December (see p. 1383).

Chapter I

International Atomic Energy Agency (IAEA)

In 2004, the International Atomic Energy Agency (IAEA) continued to act as a catalyst for the development and transfer of peaceful nuclear technologies; to build and maintain a global nuclear safety regime; and to assist in efforts to prevent the proliferation of nuclear weapons.

The forty-eighth session of the IAEA General Conference (Vienna, Austria, 20-24 September) adopted resolutions and decisions on strengthening IAEA's activities in nuclear science, technology and applications; strengthening international cooperation in nuclear, radiation, transport and waste safety; improving the effectiveness and efficiency of the safeguards system; strengthening IAEA technical cooperation activities; applying safeguards in the Middle East; implementing the safeguards agreement between IAEA and the Democratic People's Republic of Korea (DPRK); and measures to protect against nuclear and radiological terrorism.

In 2004, IAEA had 138 member States.

Activities

Nuclear safety and security

IAEA continued to support a global nuclear safety regime based on strong national safety infrastructures and widespread subscription to international legal instruments. During 2004, it published five standards dealing with the safety of nuclear installations. In December, IAEA and the European Commission signed a "Contribution Agreement", which established the modalities for the European Union's support, through the Nuclear Security Fund, to IAEA efforts to secure nuclear and other radioactive material and to enhance detection and response capabilities in a number of States across southeastern Europe and Central Asia. In 2004, 11 additional States became parties to the 1979 Convention on the Physical Protection of Nuclear Material [YUN 1979, p. 1239], making a total of 109 States Parties.

Radiation safety

IAEA's radiation safety programme continued to focus on the development of a unified set of safety standards and their application; the implementation of the Agency's radiation protection rules; and the provision of advice and services to member States. In 2004, the IAEA Board of Governors approved an action plan for the safety of transport of radioactive material, which provided direction for the Agency's transport safety activities over the next five years. The Board also approved an Agency policy for promoting effective and sustainable national regulatory infrastructures for the control of radiation sources. International consensus was reached with the publication of a Safety Guide on the Application of the Concepts of Exclusion, Exemption and Clearance, which established levels of radioactivity in materials such as wood and foodstuff below which regulatory controls needed not be applied. Also in 2004, the IAEA Commission on Safety Standards approved the Safety Guide on the categorization of radioactive sources.

Nuclear power

In 2004, IAEA continued to assist member States in planning and implementing programmes for the utilization of nuclear power, supported them in improving safety, and provided them with information and training. To mark the 50th anniversary of when electricity was first produced by nuclear energy—in Obninsk, Russian Federation—IAEA organized a conference entitled "Fifty Years of Nuclear Power—The Next Fifty Years" (Moscow/Obninsk, June–July). The Conference highlighted the vital role played by nuclear power in a number of countries and supported continued innovation in technology and infrastructure to advance spent fuel recycling and fast reactor and waste management technologies. In addition, the Agency undertook technical cooperation projects on integrated nuclear power and desalination system design and the simulation of a nuclear desalination plant.

Nuclear fuel cycle

In 2004, IAEA continued to publish reports on the uranium production cycle and the environment. Within the framework of its technical cooperation programme, expert teams visited Romania to review the status of a project on restructuring the uranium mining industry. Another team visited Argentina for a project on prospecting for uranium and other elements using gamma ray spectrometry surveys. In connection with its work on nuclear fuel performance and technology, IAEA assisted member States in enhancing the performance and reliability of zirconium alloy-clad fuel, and continued its work on spent fuel management and on nuclear fuel cycle issues and information systems.

Radioactive waste management

In 2004, IAEA's Board of Governors approved an action plan on the decommissioning of nuclear facilities. One of the first activities undertaken under the plan was the publication of a report on the Status of the Decommissioning of Nuclear Facilities around the World. During the year, the intercomparison of safety assessment methodologies was extended with the establishment of a new project known as Safety Assessment Driving Radioactive Waste Management Solutions. The project's goal was to examine different approaches to the safety assessment of activities involving the predisposal of radioactive waste, including waste conditioning and storage. In December, IAEA held an international symposium on the disposal of low activity radioactive waste (Cordoba, Spain, 13-17 December), which discussed policies and strategies for low level waste management.

Marine environment and water resources

In 2004, IAEA continued to promote the linkage between water and human development, and in that regard, it assisted Egypt, Chad, the Libyan Arab Jamahiriya and the Sudan to improve the management of the shared Nubian Aquifer System. During the year, IAEA convened a conference in Monaco on isotopes in environmental studies, which reviewed the latest applications of isotopes to marine geochemistry and biology, including pollution budgeting in coastal zones, marine food chain dynamics, and predictions of regional and global climate change using high resolution isotopic records in dated sediments and corals. In October, the Agency co-sponsored a roundtable meeting on the 'World Groundwater Vision', held in Zacatecas, Mexico, which was an important step in the development by international organizations of a global strategic vision for groundwater use and protection, to be launched at the fourth World Water Forum in 2006.

Food and agriculture

In 2004, IAEA's support regarding the use of nuclear techniques enabled member States to address some of the challenges associated with sustainable intensification of crop production systems, particularly concerning, among other things, the achievement of better soil, nutrient and water management practices to improve low crop yields. The Agency's efforts in the sustainable intensification of livestock production systems were directed at intensifying and disseminating nuclear technologies and related guidelines and standards that led to improvements in productivity and income generation from domestic and international trade in livestock and livestock products. IAEA's activities also focused on the use of nuclear and related analytical methods for ensuring compliance with maximum residue limits for pesticides and veterinary drugs, and integrated approaches to the application of agricultural countermeasures following a nuclear or radiological emergency.

Human health

In 2004, IAEA continued to promote professional training, innovative teaching technologies and the application of information and communication tools through technical cooperation projects on tele-nuclear medicine and distance assisted teaching. The Agency also addressed issues pertaining to applied radiation biology and radiotherapy, dosimetry and medical radiation physics, and nutrition and the effects of contaminants on human health.

Technical cooperation

In 2004, IAEA's secretariat delivered $75.6 million worth of training, expert services, equipment and other assistance to member States under its technical cooperation programme. New extra-budgetary resources remained at a level comparable with that of the previous year. Funds received in 2004 totalled $10.9 million, compared with $11.8 million in 2003. A total of $3.7 million was contributed as government cost-sharing by member States to support project activities in their own countries. During the year, IAEA began a phased restructuring of its Department of Technical Cooperation. The initial phase, reorganizing the Department's five regional sections into four (Africa, Asia and the Pacific, Europe and Latin America) had been completed.

Safeguard responsibilities

The year 2004 was marked by increased international attention on IAEA's verification programme, particularly its inspection activities relating to the compliance by a number of States with their safeguards agreements. The discovery of covert nuclear trade networks and continuing uncertainty regarding DPRK's nuclear capabilities also contributed to heighten awareness of the risk of nuclear weapons proliferation. Based on the information available to it, IAEA concluded that, except for the nuclear material in the DPRK, all nuclear material and other items placed under safeguards remained in peaceful nuclear activities or were otherwise adequately accounted for. The Agency was unable to verify the DPRK's nuclear material under safeguards and, therefore, could not draw any conclusions about the country's nuclear material or activities. During the year, safeguards were applied for 152 States with safeguards agreements in force with IAEA. In 21 of those States, IAEA was able to complete sufficient work to provide credible assurance regarding the absence of undeclared nuclear material and activities. Four States (Iran, the Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, the Republic of Korea and Egypt) had been found to have been previously engaged in nuclear activities of varying significance which they had failed to report; corrective actions were being taken by those States, while IAEA's efforts to verify the correctness and completeness of their respective declarations remained ongoing.

Nuclear information

The International Nuclear Information System (INIS), IAEA's largest database, continued to collect and distribute scientific information in all areas of nuclear science and technology published in member States. IAEA also maintained two other databases and one simulation system which were available online (<http://www-nfcis.iaea.org>): World Distribution of Uranium Deposits; Post-Irradiation Examination Facilities; and the Nuclear Fuel Cycle Simulation System.

Secretariat

At the end of 2004, IAEA secretariat staff totalled 2,244 for both the Professional and higher categories and the General Service category.

Budget

The 2004 regular budget amounted to $304 million. Actual budget expenditure amounted to $284 million. A total of $54.5 million in extrabudgetary funds was provided by member States, the United Nations, international organizations and other sources.

Chapter II

International Labour Organization (ILO)

In 2004, the International Labour Organization (ILO) continued to promote social justice and economic stability and improve labour conditions. ILO's strategic objectives were to promote and realize fundamental principles and rights at work; create greater opportunities for women and men to secure decent employment and income; enhance the coverage and effectiveness of social protection; and strengthen tripartism and social dialogue.

In 2004, ILO membership increased to 178.

Meetings

The ninety-second session of the International Labour Conference (ILC) (Geneva, 1-17 June) adopted a new plan of action to ensure that migrant workers were covered by international labour standards, while benefiting from national labour and social laws. The plan called for the development of a non-binding multilateral framework for a rights-based approach to labour migration and the establishment of an ILO dialogue on migration, in partnership with international and multilateral organizations. ILC also adopted a new Recommendation on human resources development (see below) and a resolution on gender equality, pay equity, and maternity protection. The Conference made progress in forging new labour standards to improve the working conditions and safety of the world's 35 million fishing sector workers, and considered the situation of workers in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, forced labour in Myanmar, and rights at work in other countries.

As follow-up to the 1998 ILO Declaration of Fundamental Principles and Rights at Work [YUN 1998, p. 1375], the Director-General submitted to the Conference a global report entitled "Organizing for social justice", which indicated that, despite continued threats to workers and employers seeking to organize, global respect for fundamental rights at work was improving.

Sectoral and other meetings convened in Geneva during 2004 included: China Employment Forum (28-30 April); Preparatory Technical Maritime Conference (13-24 September); Tripartite Meeting on the Future of Work and Quality in the Information Society: The Media, Culture, Graphical Sector (18-22 October); and Tripartite Meeting of Experts on the Fishing Sector (13-17 December).

International standards

During the year, ILO activities with regard to Conventions and Recommendations included standard-setting and the supervision and promotion of the application of standards. Supervisory bodies reviewed existing procedures and standard-setting policy, withdrawing outdated Recommendations.

In June, ILC adopted a new Recommendation on human resources development, focusing on education, training and lifelong learning.

Employment and development

ILO continued in 2004 to help constituents combat unemployment and poverty through the creation of employment opportunities and improvement of existing jobs. It provided advice and guidance on employment and labour market policies and on labour market information and statistical systems. Activities to promote employment included support to constituents to develop entrepreneurship through the creation of cooperatives and small and micro-enterprises.

Regarding human resources development, ILO emphasized the need for the adaptation of training policy and delivery to the rapidly changing skill requirements and special needs of vulnerable groups. It also responded to the needs of countries affected by conflict.

Field activities

In 2004, expenditure on technical cooperation programmes totalled $138.4 million, slightly more than the amount spent in 2003 [YUN 2003, p. 1508]. The leading fields of activity were: the standards and fundamental principles and rights at work sector, with 43.1 per cent ($59.6 million); followed by the employment sector, with 27.8 per cent ($38.5 million); the social protection sector, with 12.1 per cent ($16.7 million); and social dialogue, with 11 per cent ($15.3 million).

In terms of regional distribution, Africa accounted for 22.9 per cent of total expenditure ($31.7 million); Asia and the Pacific, 24.2 per cent ($33.5 million); Latin America and the Caribbean, 19.3 per cent ($26.7 million); Europe,

5.2 per cent ($7.2 million); and the Arab States, 1.5 per cent ($2.1 million). Interregional and global activities accounted for the greatest share, at 26.9 per cent ($37.2 million).

Educational activities

The Turin Centre and the International Institute for Labour Studies, both autonomous institutions within ILO, reported to the ILO Governing Body. The Centre continued to carry out training and related activities in a wide range of technical areas as an integral part of ILO technical cooperation activities. The Institute continued to conduct research, encouraged networking related to emerging labour policy issues, and acted as a catalyst for future ILO programme development. The Institute analysed the relationships between social exclusion, labour institutions and poverty, and explored the changing global organization of production and its social implications at the local level.

Secretariat

As at 31 December, ILO employed a total of 2,500 full-time staff, of whom 1,040 were in the Professional and higher categories and 1,460 were in the General Service category.

Budget

The ILO budget for 2004-2005, adopted by ILC in 2003 [YUN 2003, p. 1509], stood at $529.6 million.

Chapter III

Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations (FAO)

The Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations (FAO) continued to work towards achieving sustainable global food security by raising nutrition levels and living standards, improving agricultural productivity and advancing the condition of rural populations.

At its one hundred and twenty-seventh session (Rome, 22-27 November), the FAO Council adopted a set of voluntary guidelines aimed at providing practical guidance to States in implementing their obligations relating to the right to adequate food in the context of national food security and improving the chances of reaching the hunger reduction goals set by the 1996 World Food Summit [YUN 1996, p. 1129] and the United Nations Millennium Summit [YUN 2000, p. 49].

As part of the follow-up to the World Food Summits held in 1996 [YUN 1996, p. 1397] and 2002 [YUN 2002, p. 1225], FAO helped its members to prepare strategies in meeting the goal of halving the number of hungry by 2015 and in the preparation of medium-term food security and agricultural development programmes. With the collaboration of financial institutions, FAO also helped to formulate projects that would hasten a reversal of the declining resources to agriculture.

As lead agency for the International Year of Rice (2004), declared by the General Assembly in resolution 57/162 [YUN 2002, p. 1226], FAO worked with UN agencies, Governments and non-governmental organizations (NGOs) to increase global awareness and promote the importance of rice development and its positive consequences for poverty alleviation and global food security.

In 2004, FAO membership remained at 187 countries and the European Union.

World food situation

FAO estimated world cereal production at a record 2.042 million tonnes in 2004, 8.2 per cent higher than in 2003. Cereal output was forecast to exceed utilization in 2004/05, which could lead to an increase in stock for the first time in five years. World livestock production in 2004 was estimated at 258 million tonnes of meat, an increase of 2 per cent from the previous year. World fish output in 2003, the latest year for which data were available, stood at 132.5 million tonnes, of which about 32 per cent was from aquaculture, a sub-sector under continuous expansion.

Activities

FAO continued to provide emergency assistance in the agriculture, livestock and fisheries sectors to developing countries affected by exceptional natural or man-made calamities. In 2004, FAO received $232 million to fund 250 emergency relief and rehabilitation projects in over 70 countries and regions. FAO missions toured countries hit by the Indian Ocean tsunami of 26 December (see p. 952) to assess damage to the agriculture and fisheries sectors and provide detailed information on the assistance needed.

Through its field programmes, FAO provided technical assistance in food and agriculture, fisheries, forestry and rural development totalling $368.3 million, of which $129.5 million was expended for its emergency agricultural rehabilitation programme and $238.8 million for development and technical support. FAO's Investment Centre assisted developing and transition countries to identify and assess investment opportunities, and formulated 163 investment projects worth $5.6 billion, of which $4.1 billion was provided through external loans from funding partners. The Special Programme for Food Security assisted developing countries, particularly low-income food-deficit countries, to improve national and household food security on an economically and environmentally sustainable basis. By the end of 2004, 101 countries were participating in the programme.

In 2004, FAO continued to participate in activities related to plant biological diversity, crop management and diversification, seed production and improvement, crop protection, agricultural engineering, the prevention of food losses, and food and agricultural industries. It also contributed to the development of animal production and health programmes through better resource utilization, improved processing and commercialization, and better control of animal diseases. The Global Rinderpest Eradication Programme continued to work to eliminate the fatal livestock virus by 2010. Asia was considered free of the disease and the only remaining suspect area was in the Horn of Africa.

The FAO Forestry Department continued its work in forest resource management, policy and planning, and forest products. FAO hosted the secretariat of the International Partnership for Sustainable Development in Mountain Regions and continued to work with NGOs, Governments and the private sector in promoting support for mountain livelihoods, especially for the 270 million mountain people who lived in developing and transition countries and suffered from hunger.

The FAO Fisheries Department promoted sustainable development of responsible fisheries and contributed to food security through activities in fishery resources, policy, industries and information. FAO's main priority was to enlist the international community in promoting more widespread adherence to the FAO Code of Conduct for Responsible Fisheries. In 2004, FAO established an advisory commission on fisheries management and development, known as the South-West Indian Ocean Fisheries Commission.

During the year, FAO provided technical assistance in plant breeding and the safe movement of germoplasm, as well as associated legislation.

The International Treaty on Plant Genetic Resources for Food and Agriculture, approved by the FAO Conference in 2001 [YUN 2001, p.1406], entered into force in 2004. The Treaty aimed at the conservation of plant genetic resources, their sustainable use, and the fair and equitable sharing of benefits resulting from commercialization.

In 2004, the Codex Alimentarius Commission, responsible for implementing the joint FAO/World Health Organization Food Standards Programme, adopted over 20 new and amended food standards. Among the new standards and other texts to protect consumers' health and facilitate fair practices in the food trade worldwide were those related to animal feeding, milk products and a newly adopted definition of traceability/product tracing.

Secretariat

As at 31 December 2004, FAO staff numbered 3,821, of whom 1,620 were in the Professional or higher categories, and 2,201 were in the General Service category.

Budget

The regular programme budget for the 2004-2005 biennium totalled $749.1 million.

Chapter IV

United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization (UNESCO)

The United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization (UNESCO) continued in 2004 to promote cooperation in education, science, culture and communication among its member States. The General Conference, which met biennially to decide on policy, programme and budgetary matters, was scheduled to hold its thirty-third session in October 2005. The 58-member Executive Board held its one hundred and sixty-ninth (19-29 April) and one hundred and seventieth (4-14 October) sessions in Paris.

UNESCO membership remained at 190, with six associate members.

Activities

Education

As the lead agency for the United Nations Literacy Decade (2003-2012), launched on 13 February 2003 under the theme "Literacy as freedom", UNESCO continued to promote literacy as a human right and a prerequisite for participating in social, cultural and economic activities. In collaboration with the Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development (OECD), UNESCO launched a global review on early childhood care and education. It promoted the increased enrolment of girls in primary and secondary education in sub-Saharan Africa and gave special attention to girls affected by HIV/AIDS to enable them to attend school.

UNESCO convened the fourth annual meeting of the High-level Group on Education for All (EFA) (Brasilia, Brazil, 8-10 November) [YUN 2001, p. 1408] and issued two publications: the third edition of the Global Monitoring Report on EFA and the Minimum Standards for Education in Emergencies, Chronic Crises and Early Reconstruction. To reinforce EFA progress, UNESCO launched three initiatives—the Literacy Initiative for Empowerment, the Teacher Training Initiative in Sub-Saharan Africa and the Global Initiative on HIV/AIDS and Education.

Meetings were held to develop joint UNESCO/OECD guidelines on higher education and globalization, in addition to the First Colloquium on Research and Higher Education Policy (Paris, 1-3 December). UNESCO also organized meetings of the Interagency Task Team on Education and HIV/AIDS (Ottawa, Canada, 12-13 May). Progress was made in drafting the convention against doping in sport at the Fourth International Conference of Ministers and Senior Officials Responsible for Physical Education and Sport (Athens, Greece, 6-8 December).

Natural sciences

UNESCO's Intergovernmental Oceanographic Commission (IOC) and Natural Disaster Reduction team responded immediately to the Indian Ocean tsunami disaster in December (see p. 952). IOC coordinated United Nations activities in ocean and coastal issues and participated in drafting a ten-year plan for the implementation of the Global Earth Observing System of Systems, which was designed to help countries identify and address challenges such as climate change and natural disasters. Other natural sciences activities focused on the advancement and sharing of scientific and technical knowledge and on the capacity-building of scientists and engineers and of national Governments for science and technology policy-making and planning. The International Geoscience Programme continued to provide a multidisciplinary platform for scientists to exchange knowledge on global geological problems.

Social and human sciences

UNESCO, in its leading role as an ethical forum, drafted a declaration on universal norms on bioethics for submission to its General Conference in 2005. It also collaborated with the World Commission on the Ethics of Scientific Knowledge and Technology to establish a programme to develop national capacities in science and technology ethics and helped it raise public awareness on the ethical implications of scientific knowledge and technology and on the responsibility of science and technology professionals.

UNESCO collaborated with the City of Nantes (France) in organizing the World Forum on Human Rights (16-18 May), and under its International Coalition of Cities against Racism project, it successfully launched (Nuremburg, Germany, 10 December) the first regional coalition in Europe.

Culture

UNESCO continued its activities for safeguarding tangible cultural heritage in post-conflict situations. Within the framework of the 2003 UNESCO Convention for the Safeguarding of Intangible Cultural Heritage [YUN 2003, p. 1513], the Director General proclaimed 47 Masterpieces of the Oral and Intangible Heritage of Humanity to further raise awareness regarding the importance of safeguarding vulnerable expressions of cultural heritage. On 9 March, the Second Protocol to the 1954 Hague Convention for the Protection of Cultural Property in the Event of Armed Conflict entered into force; the Convention had taken effect in 1956 [YUN 1956, p. 436]. In order to establish a new standard-setting instrument in the field of cultural diversity, UNESCO convened the first intergovernmental meeting (Paris, 20-24 September) to exchange views on the preliminary draft text of the Convention on the Protection of Diversity of Cultural Contents and Artistic Expressions. It also organized activities in recognition of the International Year to Commemorate the Struggle against Slavery and its Abolition, including an itinerant international exhibition, "Lest We Forget", organized by the Schomburg Center for Research on Black Culture.

UNESCO broadened the scope of its activities on the global agenda for Dialogue among Civilizations and Cultures, conducting conferences in Albania, France, Kyrgyzstan, Spain, Viet Nam and Yemen. It also continued its partnership with Daimler Chrysler, known as "Mondialogo", which promoted intercultural dialogue through an international school contest and an engineering award.

Communication

UNESCO continued to support and promote activities related to media development in developing countries, the celebration of World Press

Freedom Day (3 May) and the empowerment of people to enable them to access and contribute to information and knowledge flows. UNESCO's Information for All Programme (IFAP) provided the policy framework for setting standards, raising awareness and monitoring progress in an effort to achieve universal access to information and knowledge. IFAP promoted the formulation of strategies and policies that conformed with the Principles and Action Plan adopted at the World Summit on the Information Society [YUN 2003, p. 857].

Supporting youth and a culture of peace

UNESCO continued its cooperation with youth and intergovernmental organizations and produced several publications on empowering youth, young people and the Universal Declaration on Cultural Diversity, and UNESCO's commitment to youth. On 10 May, a tool for measuring youth development—the Youth Development Index—was launched by the UNESCO office in Brasilia.

UNESCO promoted culture of peace activities within the context of the International Decade (2001-2010) for a Culture of Peace and Non-Violence for the Children of the World. It also organized the International Colloquium on Women in Service of Peace (Paris, 8 June).

Secretariat

As at 31 December 2004, UNESCO employed 2,181 full-time staff, of whom 1,066 were in the Professional or higher categories and 1,115 in the General Service category.

Budget

In October 2003, the UNESCO General Conference approved a budget of $610 million for the 2004-2005 biennium.

Chapter V

World Health Organization (WHO)

In 2004, the World Health Organization (WHO) continued to implement its corporate strategy by focusing on its core functions, which included efforts to stimulate and advance the eradication of epidemic, endemic and other diseases; promote and conduct research; propose conventions, agreements and regulations; promote cooperation and partnerships; provide information, counsel and assistance in the field of health; and develop, establish and promote relevant international standards on health issues.

The World Health Assembly, WHO's governing body, at its fifty-seventh session (Geneva, 17-22 May), adopted global strategies on diet, physical activity and health, aimed at combating cardiovascular disease, diabetes, cancers and obesity-related conditions, and on reproductive health, which targeted the priority aspects of reproductive and sexual health, including improving antenatal, delivery, postpartum and newborn care and providing high-quality services for family planning.

Both strategies were endorsed by the one hundred and thirteenth session of the WHO Executive Board (Geneva, 19-24 January), which also adopted resolutions relating to the control of Mycobacterium ulcerans disease (Buruli ulcer) and of human African trypanosomiasis (sleeping disease); the promotion of health and healthy lifestyles; road safety; genomics (the study of genes, their functions and related techniques); and human organ and tissue transplantation. At its one hundred and fourteenth session (Geneva, 19-24 May), the Board adopted resolutions on sustainable financing for tuberculosis control; cancer prevention and control; and disability, including prevention, management and rehabilitation.

In another development, the WHO World Health Report 2004: Changing History called for a comprehensive HIV/AIDS strategy linking prevention, treatment, care and support for people living with the disease, especially in developing countries. WHO designated road safety as the theme for World Health Day, 2004, marked globally on 7 April. The joint WHO/World Bank World Report on Road Traffic Injury Prevention highlighted evidence-based recommendations to reduce the death toll on roads.

As at 29 November, 40 countries had ratified the WHO Framework Convention on Tobacco Control, adopted in 2003 [YUN 2003, p. 1514] as the first global health treaty aimed at reducing global tobacco consumption and cutting the number of tobacco-related deaths. Consequently, the Convention would enter into force in February 2005, in accordance with the terms of article 36 (see also p. 1221).

In 2004, WHO membership remained at 192, with two associate members.

2004 activities

In 2004, the World Health Assembly established the Commission on Intellectual Property Rights, Innovation and Public Health. The Commission would summarize evidence on the prevalence of significant diseases, review the volume and distribution of existing research, analyse proposals for improvements to current incentive and funding regimes and formulate a final report with proposals for consideration in 2006.

WHO prepared and distributed new surveillance guidelines and a risk assessment and preparedness framework for severe acute respiratory syndrome (SARS), which had reappeared four times since July 2003, resulting in 17 cases. It continued to assess the risk of an avian influenza pandemic and supported national and international action in pandemic preparedness.

As part of its work in monitoring medicine quality, WHO pre-qualified 12 new products in 2004, nine of which were for the treatment of HIV/AIDS, one for malaria and two for tuberculosis. It also initiated systematic inspections of contract research organizations which had carried out bioequivalence studies for pre-qualified medicines, starting with priority medicines for treating HIV/AIDS.

The Indian Ocean tsunami of 26 December devastated coastal areas, killing hundreds of thousands of people and displacing millions more (see p. 952). Within hours of the tragedy, WHO staff were deployed to the affected regions, where they assessed the damage and identified needs. Early work to ensure adequate clean water and sanitation, including the delivery of millions of water purification tablets and health emergency kits, averted potential outbreaks of diarrhoeal diseases. WHO also facilitated information gathering and the coordination of health-related relief and recovery efforts.

Secretariat

As at 31 December 2004, WHO employed a staff of 4,017, of whom 1,565 were in the Professional and higher categories and 2,207 in the General Service category. The remaining 245 were employed under other contracts. In addition, 3,973 staff held temporary appointments, including consultancies.

Budget

The World Health Assembly appropriated a working budget of $880.1 million for the 2004-2005 biennium. Extrabudgetary resources were expected to be about $1,824.5 million, leading to a total effective budget of $2,704.6 million for that period.

Chapter VI

World Bank (IBRD and IDA)

The World Bank consisted of the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development (IBRD) and the International Development Association (IDA). Collectively, the following five institutions were known as the World Bank Group: IBRD, IDA, the International Finance Corporation (IFC) (see p. 1494), the Multilateral Investment Guarantee Agency (MIGA) and the International Centre for Settlement of Investment Disputes (ICSID).

In fiscal 2004 (1 July 2003–30 June 2004), the World Bank continued to promote sustainable economic development by providing loans, guarantees and related technical assistance for projects and programmes in developing countries. It also maintained a leading role in the debt relief process under the Heavily Indebted Poor Countries Initiative, in order to increase resources for poverty reduction. In June, the first Global Monitoring Report published by the Bank and IMF assessed progress on policies and actions for achieving the Millennium Development Goals (MDGs) [YUN 2000, p. 51].

In 2004, the Bank joined with several partner organizations to make generic HIV/AIDS drugs available in more than 100 poor countries. In co-operation with the United Nations, the Bank also produced a Joint Iraq Needs Assessment, which identified Iraq's reconstruction and development requirements and estimated its financing needs.

At the end of fiscal 2004, IBRD membership remained at 184.

Lending operations

IBRD continued to promote sustainable development through loans, guarantees and non-lending, including analytical and advisory services. As at 30 June 2004, its cumulative lending totalled $394 billion.

IBRD's loan commitment for fiscal 2004 totalled $11 billion for 87 new operations in 33 countries, compared to $11.2 billion in 2003 for 99 operations. In fiscal 2004, IBRD lending commitments were highest in Latin America and the Caribbean ($5 billion), followed by Europe and Central Asia ($3 billion), East Asia and the Pacific ($1.7 billion), the Middle East and North Africa ($1 billion) and South Asia ($.44 billion). Public administration was the leading sector for IBRD lending, with $2.7 billion, or about 24 per cent of the total, followed by transportation, with $2.5 billion, and health and social services, with $1.8 billion.

In fiscal 2004, the four largest borrowers were Argentina, Turkey, Brazil and China, which collectively accounted for 51 per cent of total IBRD lending.

International Development Association

Established in 1960 as the Bank's concessional lending arm, IDA provided interest-free loans and other services to low-income countries to reduce poverty and improve the quality of life. In fiscal 2004, IDA commitments totalled $9 billion for 158 operations in 62 countries, compared with $7.3 billion for 141 operations in 55 countries in fiscal 2003 [YUN 2003, p. 1516]. In addition, IDA provided $1.7 billion in grants and a guarantee for $70 million.

Lending to Africa constituted 45 per cent or $4.1 billion of total IDA commitments. South Asia and East Asia and the Pacific followed with $3 billion and $0.9 billion, respectively. Bangladesh, the Democratic Republic of the Congo, India, Pakistan and Vietnam represented the largest recipients of IDA financing.

In fiscal 2004, about 19 per cent of total IDA financing was provided in the form of grants to the following clients and projects: the poorest countries ($264 million); debt-vulnerable countries ($529 million); post-conflict countries ($536 million); HIV/AIDS projects and related components ($381 million); and natural disaster reconstruction projects ($2 million).

Public administration, including law and justice, was the leading sector for IDA support, receiving $2.3 billion, or 24 per cent, of the total.

At the end of fiscal 2004, IDA membership increased to 165 countries.

International Centre for Settlement of Investment Disputes

ICSID, established in 1966, continued to encourage foreign investments by providing international facilities for coordination and arbitration of investment disputes. In 2004, 30 new cases were registered with the Centre. ICSID also undertook research and publishing activities in arbitration and foreign investment law.

In 2004, ICSID membership increased to 140.

Multilateral Investment Guarantee Agency

The Multilateral Investment Guarantee Agency (MIGA), established in 1988, continued to encourage foreign direct investment in developing countries by providing guarantees to foreign investors against losses caused by non-commercial risks. It also provided technical assistance and advisory services to help developing countries strengthen the capacity of investment promotion intermediaries and disseminate information on investment opportunities.

In fiscal 2004, MIGA had 164 members and issued $1.1 billion in guarantee coverage, for a cumulative total of $13.5 billion.

World Bank Institute

In 2004, the World Bank Institute continued to organize global training activities in an effort to empower people through knowledge- and capacity-building. It also developed diagnostic and analytical tools that helped countries assess their governance practices and preparedness to compete in the global knowledge economy. As part of its efforts to decentralize its programmes, the Institute and the Middle East and North African region launched the Marseilles Knowledge Hub. In partnership with local training centres and through the Global Development Learning Network's distance learning facilities, the Institute delivered 1,016 training activities to 78,500 participants in some 124 countries.

Co-financing

Major co-financing partners included the Inter-American Development Bank, the European Commission and the British Department for International Development. By region, most of the co-financing went to Latin America and the Caribbean ($4 billion), followed by Africa ($3 billion) and South Asia ($1.3 billion).

Financial activities

During fiscal 2004, IBRD raised $13 billion in medium- and long-term debt, compared to $19 billion in fiscal 2003. The decrease in funding was primarily attributed to lower borrowing requirements as a result of the reduction in the loan portfolio. IBRD followed a strategy of selective bond issuance, composed of cost-effective private placements and public issues placed with large institutional investors, and those targeted to retail investors. During fiscal 2004, IBRD repurchased or called $4 billion of its outstanding borrowings (net of unamortized discounts, premiums, and issuance costs).

Capitalization

As at 30 June 2004, the total authorized capital of IBRD was $190,811 million, of which $189,718 million had been subscribed. Of the subscribed capital, $11,483 million had been paid in and $178,235 million was callable.

Income, expenditures and reserves

IBRD's net income was $2.4 billion in fiscal 2004, down from $5.34 billion in fiscal 2003. As at 30 June 2004, the Bank's liquid asset portfolio was $31 billion, up from $27 billion in fiscal 2003.

Secreteriat

At the end of fiscal 2004, IBRD's regular, fixed-term and long-term consultants and long-term temporary staff in Washington, D.C., and local offices numbered 9,758.

Chapter VII

International Finance Corporation (IFC)

The International Finance Corporation (IFC), part of the World Bank Group, continued in fiscal 2004 (1 July 2003–30 June 2004) to promote sustainable growth in developing countries by financing private sector investments, helping to mobilize capital in the international financial markets and providing technical assistance and advice to Governments and businesses. To address the environmental and social consequences of development, IFC continued to focus on sustainability as a top priority in its investment and advisory activities.

During fiscal 2004, IFC membership increased to 176.

Financial and advisory services

In fiscal 2004, IFC's total committed portfolio amounted to $17.4 million, of which $5.64 million was dedicated to 217 new projects in six regions. IFC aligned its network of small and medium enterprise facilities with its regional departments, reflecting the growing importance of providing technical assistance and advice in all regions. IFC also worked to standardize the procedures, data recording, partner relations and monitoring across all its donor-funded operations.

The Foreign Investment Advisory Service (FIAS) assisted Governments to develop policies and institutions to attract more foreign investment. FIAS completed 60 advisory projects in fiscal year 2004, with the largest number of programmes in Europe and Central Asia (17 projects), followed by Asia and the Pacific (16).

Throughout fiscal 2004, the donor community provided cumulative contributions of $188 million to support the technical assistance trust funds (TATF) programme, which included a budgetary allocation from IFC's own resources of $14.4 million. Since the inception of the programme in 1988, donors had approved more than 1,380 technical assistance projects. The TATF programme financed feasibility studies, sector studies, and advisory activities on privatization and on policies to strengthen the business environment in developing countries. It also assessed the environmental and social impacts of investment projects. Other funds provided by donors assisted small and medium enterprise project development facilities, such as IFC's new technical assistance initiatives in the Balkans and the Middle East. Cumulative contributions to all IFC managed technical assistance programmes reached $931 million in fiscal 2004.

Regional projects

In fiscal 2004, the new projects for which IFC committed $5.63 billion were grouped under six regions.

In order to address sub-Saharan Africa's development needs, IFC expanded its programmes for the smaller businesses that constituted much of Africa's private sector. For larger projects, the strategy targeted more support at the formative stages of project development, thus expanding IFC's role beyond the provision of finance. IFC's commitments in the region totalled $1.83 million for 25 projects in 12 countries.

In East Asia and the Pacific, IFC focused on improving the investment climate, developing local financial markets, and expanding private provision of physical and social infrastructure development. It also allocated more specialized resources for financial sector activities. IFC's commitments in the region totalled $3.8 million for 40 projects in seven countries.

In South Asia, IFC provided investments and technical assistance to help companies improve competitiveness, access longer-term funding, and reach new markets. It also helped build internationally competitive enterprises throughout South Asia. IFC's commitments in the region totalled $1.8 million for 19 projects in five countries.

In Europe and Central Asia, the largest share of funding went to the Russian Federation, reflecting the country's growth and stability and IFC's increasing work with local companies and firms based outside of Moscow. IFC also supported the private sector throughout Eastern Europe through advisory work and investment, with a focus on strengthening small businesses. IFC's commitments in the region totalled $5.5 million for 65 projects in 17 countries.

In Latin America and the Caribbean, IFC's strategy centered on added-value services tailored to specific market segments and on addressing social inequality through investments and technical assistance. IFC continued to emphasize increasing competitiveness and supported intra-regional investments. IFC's commitments in the region totalled $8.6 million for 45 projects in 16 countries.

In the Middle East and North Africa, IFC focused on its technical assistance and advisory programme for the region, with an emphasis on creating greater synergies with its more traditional investment activities. The North Africa Enterprise Development facility, which operated in Algeria, Egypt and Morocco, completed its second year of work with small and medium enterprises. During fiscal year 2004, IFC launched the Private Enterprise Partnership for the Middle East, a facility to support private sector development in four frontier markets: Afghanistan, Iraq, the West Bank and Gaza, and Yemen. IFC's commitments in the region totalled $1.87 million for 18 projects in eight countries.

Financial performance

In fiscal 2004, IFC's operating income was $982 million, compared with $528 million in fiscal 2003. IFC's committed portfolio at the end of fiscal 2004 was $17.9 billion, up from $16.8 billion in fiscal 2003. The portfolio consisted of loans, equity investments, risk management products, and guarantees in 1,337 companies in 119 countries.

Capital and retained earnings

As at 30 June 2004, IFC's net worth reached $7.8 billion, compared with $6.8 billion at the end of fiscal 2003.

Secretariat

As at 31 December 2004, IFC employed 2,200 staff, of whom 1,276 were in the Professional or higher categories and 924 were in the General Service category.

Chapter VIII

International Monetary Fund (IMF)

In 2004, the activities of the International Monetary Fund (IMF) related mainly to its responsibility for overseeing the international monetary system and the economic, financial and exchange rate policies of its member countries. The Fund continued to foster sustainable growth and financial stability, promote sound policies and assist in the global fight against poverty, particularly in low-income countries. Following the expiration of its contingent credit lines instrument, IMF began exploring the scope for adapting precautionary arrangements for crisis prevention and introduced ex post assessment of the programmes it supported. It also continued to emphasize financial sector surveillance and to combat money laundering.

In fiscal year 2004 (1 May 2003–30 April 2004), IMF membership remained at 184.

IMF facilities and policies

In fiscal 2004, IMF changed its lending policies and facilities and reviewed the design of several programmes and the policy conditions that borrowing countries were expected to meet. It completed an expanded review of its access policy in the credit tranches, the extended fund facility (EFF), the poverty reduction and growth facility (PRGF), and the exceptional access policy, which established a global limit on access to IMF's general resources account. The PRGF process continued to emphasize the need to build on progress in several areas, including designing policies to foster pro-poor economic growth, improving the quality and efficiency of government spending, coordinating programme design with the World Bank, and enhancing communication with the authorities, donors and civil society in PRGF countries.

The Independent Evaluation Office (IEO) issued reports on the role of IMF in the capital account crises of Brazil, Indonesia and the Republic of Korea, and on fiscal adjustment in IMF-supported programmes. IMF's Executive Directors noted that, while the Fund's efforts to deal with crises were appropriate, the crises highlighted the need for improvements in its policies and procedures. The Directors welcomed the conclusion of the latter report that there was no evidence that IMF-supported programmes were uniformly contradictory or caused a decline in social spending. The Directors supported IEO's recommendation that programme documentation provide a more coherent justification for the magnitude and pace of fiscal adjustment.

During the year, IMF's Executive Board discussed the Fund's support for trade-related balance of payments adjustments, particularly ways to give its member countries more confidence to pursue ambitious trade liberalization under the World Trade Organization's Doha (Qatar) round of trade negotiations (see p. 958). In April, the Board established the Trade Integration Mechanism, designed to mitigate the fear of some developing countries that their balance of payments position could suffer temporarily as multilateral liberalization changed their competitive position in world markets.

Financial assistance

New IMF lending commitments in fiscal 2004 declined to 14.5 billion special drawing rights (SDR) from SDR 29.4 billion in fiscal 2003. Commitments were largely dominated by Argentina and Brazil, which together accounted for over 90 per cent of the total new commitments. Burundi purchased SDR 9.6 million under the IMF policy of emergency assistance. No extended arrangements were approved and no commitments were made under the IMF's Compensatory Financing Facility (CFF).

IMF approved five new standby arrangements and an augmentation of existing arrangements totalling SDR 14.5 billion. Drawings under PRGF amounted to SDR 865 million compared with SDR 1.2 billion in fiscal 2003. IMF also committed SDR 1.8 billion in Highly Indebted Poor Countries Initiative grants to 28 countries, of which SDR 1.2 billion was disbursed.

As at April 2004, 13 standby arrangements and extended arrangements, and 36 PRGF arrangements were in effect, while outstanding IMF credit amounted to SDR 62.2 billion, compared with SDR 72.9 billion a year earlier.

Liquidity

As at 30 April, IMF's usable resources totalled SDR 103.8 billion, a slight increase from SDR 98 billion in fiscal 2003. Net uncommitted usable resources totalled SDR 70 billion at the end of fiscal 2004, compared with SDR 60.6 billion in fiscal 2003.

The Fund's liquid liability totalled SDR 63 billion, compared with SDR 68 billion in 2003, while the ratio of its net uncommitted usable resources to its liquid liabilities increased to 119.4 per cent at the end of April 2004, from 89.1 per cent a year earlier.

SDR activity

In fiscal 2004, total transfers of SDRs declined to SDR 13.8 billion from SDR 15.6 billion in fiscal 2003.

Transfers of SDRs among participants and prescribed holders fell to SDR 2.4 billion in 2004 from SDR 6 billion the previous year. In contrast, transfers from participants to the general resources account (GRA) increased to SDR 5.5 billion from SDR 4.5 billion in fiscal 2003, due to increased payments for members' quotas. Drawings from IMF in SDRs increased to SDR 3.5 billion from SDR 2.2 billion in fiscal 2003.

IMF holdings of SDRs in the GRA declined to SDR 0.5 billion in fiscal 2004 from SDR 1 billion a year earlier, while SDRs held by prescribed holders amounted to SDR 0.4 billion. SDR holdings by participants increased to SDR 20.6 billion from SDR 19.9 billion in fiscal 2003.

Policy on arrears

As at 30 April 2004, total overdue financial obligations to IMF increased slightly to SDR 2.05 billion, from SDR 2.01 billion. Almost all arrears were protracted (outstanding for more than six months) and over four-fifths of the debt was to GRA, and the remainder to the SDR and the PRGF Trust. The Sudan and Liberia maintained the largest arrears, accounting for 77 per cent of the overdue financial obligations to the Fund, with Somalia and Zimbabwe accounting for most of the remainder. The application of remedial measures against Iraq and Somalia continued to be delayed or suspended owing to ongoing civil conflicts, the absence of a functioning government, and/or international sanctions.

Despite approval by IMF's Board of Directors of the resumption of technical assistance to Liberia, that country, together with Somalia, the Sudan and Zimbabwe, remained ineligible to use the Fund's general resources. In addition, Zimbabwe continued to be excluded from the PRGF list and the Board began consideration of its compulsory withdrawal from the Fund. Declarations of non-cooperation against Liberia and Zimbabwe remained in effect, and both countries had their voting and related rights suspended.

Technical assistance

During fiscal 2004, technical assistance increased for policy reform and capacity building, and for countries trying to meet international standards and codes and to promote financial sector improvements. Sub-Saharan Africa continued to receive the largest share, although technical assistance to the Asia-Pacific region also increased, owing partly to the assistance provided to such post-conflict countries as Cambodia and Timor-Leste, and support for reforms in China, Indonesia and Mongolia. Technical assistance was also provided to a number of countries in Central and Eastern Europe, in support of their preparations for European Union membership. In March, IMF's Executive Board reviewed the Fund's technical assistance programme, particularly as it affected low-income countries, and emphasized that the Fund's main challenges in that regard were to ensure that such assistance was focused and that appropriate priorities were set.

The IMF Institute continued to expand its training, mainly through the Fund's six regional institutes and programmes, located in Austria, Brazil, China, Singapore, Tunisia and the United Arab Emirates.

Secretariat

As at 31 December 2004, IMF employed 2,712 staff members, of whom 1,994 were Professional staff and 718 assistant staff.

Budget

The fund's administrative budget for fiscal 2004 was approved at $837.5 million ($785.5 million net of estimated reimbursements). In April, the Board approved $905.1 million ($849.6 million net of estimated reimbursement) for 2005.

Chapter IX

International Civil Aviation Organization (ICAO)

The International Civil Aviation Organization (ICAO) continued in 2004 to promote the safety, security and efficiency of civil air transport by prescribing standards and recommending practices and procedures for facilitating international civil aviation operations. Its objectives were set forth in annexes to the Convention on International Civil Aviation, adopted in Chicago, United States, in 1944 (the Chicago Convention).

In 2004, domestic and international scheduled traffic of the world's airlines increased to some 457 billion tonne-kilometres. Overall, passenger traffic increased by about 9 per cent to some 1.8 billion, and freight carriage by about 9 per cent to some 38 million tonne-kilometres. The passenger load factor on scheduled services in 2004 increased to about 73 per cent. Air freight increased by almost 13 per cent to 140.9 billion tonne-kilometres, while there was little change in airmail traffic, which remained at about 4.6 billion tonne-kilometres. Overall passenger/freight/mail tonne-kilometres increased by some 13 per cent and international tonne-kilometres increased by about 14 per cent.

The thirty-fifth session of the ICAO Assembly (Montreal, Canada, 28 September–8 October) elected a new Council and adopted resolutions to strengthen and promote greater transparency in its global safety and security programmes, while endorsing long-term plans of action in other major areas of global air transport.

ICAO observed International Civil Aviation Day (7 December) under the theme "International Cooperation: Solutions to Global Aviation Challenges".

In 2004, ICAO membership remained at 188 countries.

Activities

Air navigation

ICAO continued to update and implement international specifications and regional plans, with particular emphasis on aviation safety, communications, and navigation and surveillance/air traffic management (CNS/ATM) systems. The specifications consisted of International Standards and Recommended Practices contained in 18 technical annexes to the Chicago Convention, and Procedures for Air Navigation Services (PANS). In that regard, the ICAO Council adopted amendments to nine annexes and approved amendments to three PANS documents.

Other projects that were given special attention in 2004 included: harmonization of ICAO safety management provisions; reduction of runway incursions; development of ATM system requirements, transition strategies and a performance framework in support of seamless, global ATM systems; development of material to facilitate the integration of new larger aircraft; passenger health issues, including the development of a harmonized contingency plan for airports to help prevent the spread of communicable diseases by air travel; and agreement on the implementation of a unified strategy for resolving safety deficiencies.

Air transport

ICAO's air transport programmes were directed towards economic analysis, policy, forecasting and planning; collection and publication of air transport statistics; financial management of airports and air navigation services, including user charges; economic aspects of CNS/ATM systems; environmental protection; facilitation of formalities for international air transport operations; and aviation security.

The sixth meeting of the Committee on Aviation Environmental Protection (Montreal, 2–12 February) developed recommendations concerning aircraft noise and the impact of aircraft engine emissions, market-based options, environmental goals and future work.

The twelfth session of the Facilitation Division (Cairo, Egypt, 22 March–1 April) recommended some 75 changes to standards in annex 9 on facilitation, to provide for the smoother passage of travellers through border controls, heightened aviation security and controls on travel document fraud and illegal migration.

Progress was made in the implementation of the ICAO Aviation Security Plan of Action. Through the Universal Security Audit Programme, 44 States were audited by ICAO aviation security audit teams, bringing the total number of States audited to 64 by year's end.

Further work was undertaken by the Aviation Security Panel on amendment 11 to annex 17 on security, on the development of guidance material, on the use of in-flight security officers, also called sky marshals, and on the development of national quality control tools and guidance material for States.

Legal matters

The Secretariat Study Group on Legal Aspects of CNS/ATM Systems, in its final report to the ICAO Council, covered consideration of a contractual framework and of an international convention relating to CNS/ATM systems. The Council submitted its report to the thirty-fifth session of the ICAO Assembly, and on that basis, the Assembly adopted resolution A35-3: A practical way forward on legal and institutional aspects of communications, navigation, surveillance/air traffic management systems.

The Legal Committee considered during its thirty-second session (Montreal, 15-21 March) the text of a draft Convention on Damage Caused by Foreign Aircraft to Third Parties. The ICAO Council considered the Legal Committee's report on the subject, which included the text of the draft Convention. The Council agreed that the text was not mature enough for submission to a diplomatic conference and required additional study. A Special Group on the Modernization of the Rome Convention of 1952 was established to advance the work.

In relation to the subject "International interests in mobile equipment (aircraft equipment)", the ICAO Secretary-General received the necessary start-up funding for the work of the Preparatory Commission for the International Registry, provided on a voluntary basis by Contracting States and interested private parties. The Preparatory Commission, in May, selected Aviareto (Ireland) as the entity to establish the International Registry and to act as the Registrar, in accordance with the 2001 Convention on International Interests in Mobile Equipment and the Protocol thereto on matters specific to aircraft equipment. The working group set up by the Preparatory Commission agreed on a set of draft regulations for the International Registry.

The Legal Committee also considered a draft amendment to the technical annex to the 1991 Convention on the Marking of Plastic Explosives for the Purpose of Detection and recommended that certain provisions of the Convention be applied, mutatis mutandis, without amending either the Convention or its technical annex. Based on that recommendation, as endorsed by the Council on 31 May, the thirty-fifth session of the Assembly adopted resolution A35-2: Application of article IV of the Convention on the Marking of Plastic Explosives for the Purpose of Detection.

Technical cooperation

In 2004, ICAO undertook 253 technical cooperation projects in 113 countries. The technical cooperation programmes financed by the United Nations Development Programme (UNDP) trust funds, management service agreements and the Civil Aviation Purchasing Service had total expenditures of $120.3 million. Over 95 per cent of that amount was provided by Governments to fund their own projects.

A total of 539 fellowships were awarded in 2004, of which 515 were implemented. ICAO employed 515 experts from 32 countries, of whom 51 were on assignment under UNDP and 464 worked on trust fund projects. There were 116 Governments and organizations registered with ICAO in 2004 under its Civil Aviation Purchasing Service. Equipment purchases in 2004 totalled $102.45 million, compared with $82.8 million in 2003.

Secretariat

As at 31 December 2004, ICAO employed 796 staff members, including 323 in the Professional and higher categories and 473 in the General Service and related categories.

Budget

Appropriations for the ICAO budget in 2004 were $61,001,778.

NOTE: For further details on the activities of ICAO in 2004, see Annual Report of the Council, 2004.

Chapter X

Universal Postal Union (UPU)

In 2004, the Universal Postal Union (UPU) continued to promote an efficient and accessible universal postal service at affordable prices through international collaboration among its member countries. It assisted postal administrations to improve the quality of their service and to stimulate growth in mail traffic.

UPU's 190 member countries remained the largest physical distribution network in the world, with more than 5 million postal employees in some 660,000 post offices.

Activities of UPU organs

Universal Postal Congress

The Universal Postal Congress, UPU's supreme legislative authority, held its twenty-third session (Bucharest, Romania, 15 September–5 October). It adopted the Bucharest World Postal Strategy, a road map for action by Governments, postal administrations and UPU bodies. Related activities would focus on universal postal service and programmes to help member countries improve mail security, quality of service and the development of markets, including letter-mail, parcels, postal financial services and philately. The Congress established a new UPU body—the Consultative Committee—to give postal stakeholders other than public postal operators and regulators a voice in the organization's deliberations and to provide a framework for effective dialogue among those stakeholders.

The Congress decided that it would convene every four years instead of five.

Council of Administration

The Council of Administration, which ensured the continuity of the Union's work between Congresses and studied regulatory, administrative, legislative and legal issues of concern to the Union, held its annual session (Berne, Switzerland, land, 10–13 February). It undertook, among other tasks, a study on extraterritorial offices of exchange and submitted several scenarios on that topic to the 2004 Bucharest Congress (see above).

Postal Operations Council

The Postal Operations Council, at its annual session (Berne, 29 January–9 February), endorsed the principles of the future terminal dues system (payments postal services made to each other for the delivery of inbound foreign mail) and finalized the quality link for industrialized countries, aimed at implementation of the country-specific terminal dues system adopted at the 2004 Bucharest Congress.

International Bureau

The UPU Bureau continued to provide support, liaison, information and consultation to the postal administrations of member countries. It studied developments in the postal environment, monitored the quality of global postal service and published information and statistics on international postal services. UPU's Postal Technology Centre introduced new technology applications and information technology solutions aimed at improving the quality, reliability and speed of national and international postal services.

As at 31 December 2004, the Bureau's permanent staff numbered 151, of whom 60 were in the Professional or higher categories and 91 were in the General Service category.

Budget

The Council of Administration approved a budget of 71.4 million Swiss francs for the 2005–2006 budget.

NOTE: For further details on UPU's 2004 activities, see Universal Postal Union Biennial Report 2004–2005, published by UPU.

Chapter XI

International Telecommunication Union (ITU)

The International Telecommunication Union (ITU) continued in 2004 to promote the worldwide development and efficient operation of telecommunication systems.

At its annual session (Geneva, 9-18 June), the ITU Council discussed preparations for the second phase of the World Summit on the Information Society (see p. 844), the biennial budget for 2004-2005, international telecommunication regulations, Internet issues, issues involving management of the Union, and forthcoming conferences and events.

During the year, the Union staged numerous events, including the World Telecommunication Standardization Assembly (Florianópolis, Brazil, 5-14 October), ITU TELECOM Africa 2004 (Cairo, Egypt, 4-8 May) and ITU TELECOM Asia 2004 (Busan, Republic of Korea, 7-11 September).

ITU membership remained at 189 in 2004.

Radiocommunication Sector

ITU's Radiocommunication Sector (ITU-R) reduced its backlog of satellite network filings as the processing time for most procedures was reduced to less than one year, down from two years at the end of 2003. Preparatory work for the 2007 World Radiocommunication Conference and Radiocommunication Assembly began, and dialogue was initiated with a number of organizations to finalize formal arrangements for facilitating access to their technical standards and for referencing them in ITU-R recommendations. Some 88 new and revised recommendations were published, including on compatibility between passive and active services based on band-by-band studies, digital sound broadcasting below 30 MHz, protection of passive services, spectrum and sharing issues concerning wireless access systems, use of earth stations onboard vessels, and future development of International Mobile Telecommunications 2000 (IMT-2000) and systems beyond IMT-2000. The Radiocommunication Bureau implemented a new component of TerRaSys to streamline workflows by making it possible to examine numerous pending notices related to shared bands more quickly and effectively, thus reducing the backlog in that area.

Telecommunication Standardization Sector

The Telecommunication Standardization Sector (ITU-T) continued to ensure the efficient and on-time production of high-quality standards covering all areas of telecommunications. In 2004, the World Telecommunication Standardization Assembly (Florianópolis, Brazil, 5-14 October) adopted 17 revised resolutions and 14 new ones in areas ranging from budgeting and operational planning to Internet top level domains, cyber security, spam, standardization issues for developing countries and gender issues in ITU-T work.

ITU-T also adopted 257 recommendations and supplements on a wide range of issues, including standards for security architecture for systems providing end-to-end communications, quadrupling fiber optic transmission capacity, lowering costs, and setting a standard that encouraged innovation in interactive television.

Telecommunication Development Sector

The Telecommunication Development Sector (ITU-D) continued in 2004 to promote investment and foster the expansion of telecommunication infrastructure in developing countries.

ITU-D's Telecommunication Development Bureau continued to assist countries to reform and restructure their telecommunication sectors through the introduction of new technologies, capacity development to ensure sustainability in management and operations, and by promoting financing and partnerships as a strategy to attract investment. The Bureau's Sector Reform Unit carried out an annual telecommunication regulation survey and published the sixth annual Trends in Telecommunication Reform report, which focused on licensing issues for regulators.

The fifth annual Global Symposium for Regulators (Geneva, 8-10 December) established a set of Best Practice Guidelines for the Promotion of Low-Cost Broadband and Internet Connectivity.

ITU-D published the Yearbook of Statistics, the leading source of information and communication technology (ICT) statistics, and the World Telecommunication Development Report 2004, which tracked trends in national, regional and international ICT development.

Secretariat

As at 31 December 2004, ITU had 742 staff members, comprising 5 elected officials, 299 in the Professional and higher categories and 438 in the General Service category.

Budget

The ITU Council in 2003 set the budget for 2004-2005 at 328,872,000 Swiss francs.

NOTE: For further details regarding ITU activities, see the ITU 2004 Annual Report, published by the Union.

Chapter XII

World Meteorological Organization (WMO)

In 2004, the World Meteorological Organization (WMO) facilitated worldwide cooperation in the generation and exchange of meteorological and hydrological information and the application of meteorology to aviation, shipping, water problems, agriculture and other activities. It also promoted operational hydrology and encouraged research and training in meteorology. Major new cross-cutting programmes—the WMO Space Programme and the Disaster Prevention and Mitigation Programme—became fully operational.

The WMO Executive Council, at its fifty-sixth session (Geneva, 8-18 July), reviewed the activities of WMO and National Meteorological and Hydrological Services (NMHSs). It addressed several issues, including redesigning the Global Observing System (GOS); improving the capabilities of WMO members in climate activities; establishing a WMO information system on hydrometeorological phenomena leading to natural disasters; and technical assistance to members.

WMO's membership remained at 181 States and six Territories at the end of 2004.

Observation systems

In 2004, GOS provided standardized observations of the atmosphere and ocean surfaces through surface- and space-based subsystems. The redesign and establishment of a future composite GOS as part of the modernization of WMO's World Weather Watch Programme were underway. The third WMO Workshop on the Impact of Various Observing Systems on Numerical Weather Prediction (Alpbach, Austria, 9-12 March) advanced the redesign process.

The Integrated Global Observing Strategy panel approved the Atmospheric Chemistry Theme Report, which critically evaluated requirements for accuracy/precision and spatial/temporal resolution and the state of modelling chemical cycles in forecast and climate models.

The Global Climate Observing System completed its 10-year implementation plan in support of the United Nations Framework Convention on Climate Change (see p. 1051). The plan contained a number of recommendations aimed at the parties to the Convention.

World Climate Programme

The World Climate Programme, which marked its twenty-fifth anniversary in 2004, continued to contribute to the infrastructure and human resources capacities of NMHSs in climate monitoring, prediction and data management for improved climate services, especially in developing countries. In the context of the Programme, WMO worked with the International Strategy for Disaster Reduction, other UN agencies, and international institutions to address climate issues. Emphasis was placed on understanding climate-related extreme events and their associated impacts.

Natural disaster prevention and mitigation

Following the Indian Ocean tsunami of 26 December (see p. 952), WMO, through its Natural Disaster Prevention and Mitigation Programme, mobilized efforts with key partners to establish a multi-hazard early warning system for areas at risk, building on the telecommunication and human resources infrastructure already in place for tropical cyclone and storm surge warnings. It also facilitated the reinforcement of preparedness measures.

WMO collaborated with UN system organizations on the proposed Global Disaster Alert System and on preparations for the World Conference on Disaster Reduction, scheduled to take place in Kobe, Japan, in January 2005.

In 2004, WMO worked on further developing the WMO Global Telecommunication System, especially on the Improved Main Telecommunication Network and the enhanced use of data-communication technologies.

Research

In 2004, WMO's Atmospheric Research and Environment Programme focused on research on the multi-hazard mitigation strategy and the establishment of an interdisciplinary, interactive global prediction system. The World Weather Research Programme (WWRP) launched the Beijing Olympics 2008 Project and the Sand and Dust Storm Project.

The Observing System Research and Predictability Experiment (THORPEX), a WWRP global atmospheric research programme, entered its implementation stage in December with approval of its International Research Implementation Plan. The first THORPEX International Science Symposium (Montreal, Canada, 6-10 December) discussed issues related to predictability, observing systems, data assimilation strategies and economic and societal applications.

WMO and the International Council for Science established the Joint Committee for the International Polar Year 2007-2008 (IPY), and WMO formed an inter-commission task group to coordinate IPY preparation and implementation activities in the two polar regions.

The World Climate Research Programme (WCRP) organized the First International Climate Variability and Predictability Science Conference (Baltimore, United States, 21-25 June), the largest climate research conference to date. The Third Stratospheric Processes and their Role in Climate General Assembly (Victoria, Canada, August) discussed climate and chemistry interaction. The WCRP Climate and Cryosphere project, initiated in 2003 [YUN 2003, p. 1528], began its implementation phase.

Applications of meteorology

The Applications of Meteorology Programme focused on enhancing the capability of WMO members to provide comprehensive weather and related services, stressing public safety and welfare, and helping the public better understand NMHS capabilities and how to benefit from them. The final phase of the World Area Forecast System, with a completion date of 1 July 2005, began on 25 November 2004. The Agricultural Meteorology Programme continued to promote weather and climate information applications in agriculture, forestry and fisheries. In the light of the locust infestation in West Africa in 2004, WMO and the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations developed the Database of Meteorological Information for Locust Control to facilitate effective control operations.

Hydrology and water resources

The twelfth session of the WMO Commission for Hydrology (Geneva, 20-29 October) discussed water-resources development as a means of achieving socio-economic benefits. Hydrological networks in 11 countries in Africa were strengthened through the Volta and Niger Hydrological Cycle Observing Systems, and WMO introduced the Historical Hydrological Data Rescue project in Egypt and Nigeria. The report of the Integrated Global Water Cycle Observations theme of the Integrated Global Observing Strategy Partnership was published and the implementation phase began. A theme component, the Coordinated Enhanced Observing Period, collected global data on the hydrological cycle for two years, completing its main observation period in December. The Water Resources Assessment—Handbook for Water Review of National Capabilities was published jointly by WMO and the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization. Three regional workshops on flood forecasting and warning were held in Africa.

Technical cooperation

In 2004, WMO technical assistance, valued at $20.51 million, was financed by the WMO Voluntary Cooperation Programme ($8.57 million), the United Nations Development Programme ($3.32 million), trust funds ($7.89 million), and the WMO regular budget ($0.73 million).

The WMO Trust Fund for the Least Developed Countries was established during the year.

Secretariat

As at 31 December 2004, WMO staff totalled 244, including 112 in the Professional and higher categories and 132 in the General Service category.

Budget

A regular budget of 127,169,800 Swiss francs (SwF) for the 2004-2005 biennium was approved by the WMO Executive Council in 2003. The Fourteenth World Meteorological Congress, in 2003, approved a maximum expenditure of SwF 253,800,000 for the fourteenth financial period (2004-2007).

Chapter XIII

International Maritime Organization (IMO)

In 2004, the International Maritime Organization (IMO) continued to facilitate cooperation to improve the safety and security of international shipping and to protect the maritime environment. It adopted a convention on ballast water management, a key new instrument in the organization's work on the prevention of marine pollution by ships.

New measures to enhance maritime security and other amendments to the International Convention for the Safety of Life at Sea entered into force during 2004, as did the 1996 Protocol to the 1976 Convention on Limitation of Liability for Maritime Claims.

In 2004, IMO membership increased to 164 with three associate members.

Activities in 2004

Prevention of pollution

In February, IMO adopted the International Convention for the Control and Management of Ships' Ballast Water and Sediments, which aimed to prevent the potentially devastating effects of the spread of harmful aquatic organisms carried by ships' ballast water. The Convention would enter into force 12 months after ratification by 30 States, representing 35 per cent of world merchant shipping tonnage.

IMO also adopted revised Annexes I and II of the International Convention for the Prevention of Pollution from Ships, 1973, as modified by the Protocol of 1978 relating thereto (MARPOL 73/78). The Annexes, which contained regulations to prevent pollution by oil and noxious liquid substances, were expected to enter into force in 2007. IMO's Marine Environment Protection Committee (MEPC) designated the Oman Area of the Arabian Sea as a special area in Annex I of the MARPOL convention and the Western European Waters as a new Particularly Sensitive Sea Area.

Ship security and safety at sea

International maritime security measures for enhancing maritime security, the International Ship and Port Facility Security Code, entered into force on 1 August.

The Legal Committee continued the revision of the suppression of unlawful acts treaties and preparation for a conference in 2005 to adopt protocols to revise the Convention for the Suppression of Unlawful Acts against the Safety of Maritime Navigation, 1988, and its Protocol of 1988 relating to Fixed Platforms Located on the Continental Shelf. Uniform global rules for the safe transport by sea of dangerous goods and marine pollutants in packaged form became compulsory on 1 January. The IMO Maritime Safety Committee approved the Code of Security for Fisherman and Fishing Vessels, 2005, and the Voluntary Guidelines for the Design, Construction and Equipment of Fishing Vessels, 2005. Amendments to the International Conventions for the Safety of Life at Sea and on Maritime Search and Rescue concerning the treatment of persons rescued at sea, refugees and stowaways were adopted. IMO continued its work on passenger ship safety and on the development of new ship construction standards.

Secretariat

As at 31 December, IMO had 282 staff members, of whom 127 were in the Professional and higher categories and 155 were in the General Service category.

Budget

The IMO Assembly, in 2003, approved budget appropriations of 46,194,900 pounds sterling for the 2004-2005 biennium.

Chapter XIV

World Intellectual Property Organization (WIPO)

The World Intellectual Property Organization (WIPO) continued to help ensure that the rights of creators and owners of intellectual property (IP) were protected worldwide, thus ensuring that inventors and authors were recognized and rewarded for their ingenuity.

The governing bodies of WIPO and the Unions administered by the organization held their thirty-ninth (Geneva, 22 September–1 October 2003) and fortieth (Geneva, 27 September–5 October 2004) series of meetings.

During 2004, WIPO membership increased to 181. The number of States adhering to the treaties administered by WIPO increased: as at 31 December, 168 States were parties to the Paris Convention for the Protection of Industrial Property, 157 to the Berne Convention for the Protection of Literary and Artistic Works, and 124 to the Patent Cooperation Treaty (PCT).

World Intellectual Property Day was celebrated on 26 April, under the theme “Encouraging Creativity”.

Activities in 2004

Development cooperation

During 2004, WIPO continued to assist developing countries in optimizing their intellectual property systems for economic, social and cultural benefit. Some 12,000 representatives from 124 developing countries participated in WIPO activities in the areas of human capacity-building, institutional strengthening, public policy issues and business opportunities. The WIPO Worldwide Academy, through its distance learning programmes, reached out to 10,000 people, mostly from developing and transition countries, and provided professional training in intellectual property to officials from 83 developing and transition countries and a policy development programme for some 800 government officials, university professors and judges from over 40 countries. WIPO developed an audit tool to help Governments determine those components of their national intellectual property infrastructure that needed strengthening. It provided legal advice to 44 countries and worked on optimizing intellectual property use among enterprises to create employment and generate revenue. WIPO evaluated the intellectual property situation in 10 African countries with a view to assisting them in formulating appropriate national strategies, and worked in partnership with regional institutions to ensure consistency with broader economic development goals. It assisted Egypt, Jordan, Lebanon, Morocco and Tunisia in realizing the economic potential of cultural industries, and helped Jordan formulate an intellectual property rights policy and set up a management office. WIPO worked in partnership with the Association of Southeast Asian Nations to launch a series of economic studies, and implemented specific projects throughout the Asia and Pacific region to improve productive links between research institutions and national intellectual property administrations, and to develop synergies between science, business and government support agencies. Industrial property offices of five Andean countries in Latin America adopted a common manual on the processing of patent applications, the result of four years of regional cooperation with WIPO's support.

Intellectual property law

The Standing Committee on the Law of Patents continued to discuss the provisions of the draft substantive patent law treaty. Work was directed towards agreeing on provisions which would enable patent applicants to rely on common requirements in different countries, improve the quality of granted patents and facilitate the sharing of results between interested member countries.

The Standing Committee on the Law of Trademarks, Industrial Design and Geographical Indication made substantive progress towards revising the 1994 Trademark Law Treaty (TLT) in order to introduce: modern and flexible rules concerning communications, including electronic communications; relief measures in case of failure to comply with time limits; rules on the recording of trademark licenses; and provisions concerning the establishment of a TLT Assembly with powers to amend the TLT regulations.

The Standing Committee on Copyright and Related Rights continued to develop a treaty on the protection of broadcasting organizations, taking into account the emergence of digital and other new technology and the spread of the Internet.

The Intergovernmental Committee on Intellectual Property and Genetic Resources, Traditional Knowledge and Folklore began work on international legal provisions, setting out objectives and principles for the protection of traditional knowledge and traditional cultural expressions.

Arbitration and Mediation Centre

In 2004, the Arbitration and Mediation Centre, the leading provider of services for domain name and other intellectual property disputes, received 1,178 new cases from 50 countries. It continued to assist administrators of country code Top Level Domains in establishing efficient procedures for the protection of intellectual property rights against abusive domain name registrations. Also, the center published practical guides and ran workshops based on material developed by its staff for IP specialists from 35 countries.

International registration activities

PCT. The year 2004 was a landmark for PCT, with the receipt of the one-millionth international patent application since the system began operation in 1978. The number of international patent applications filed in 2004 using PCT set an all time record of 120,000.

Madrid System. In the trademark system under the Madrid Agreement concerning the International Registration of Trademarks and its 1989 protocol, the number of international trademark applications filed totalled 29,482, signalling a major increase in use of the Madrid System in 2004.

Hague System. Under the Hague Agreement concerning industrial designs, nearly 35,000 international registrations were in force by the end of 2004. Two thirds of the total 2004 registrations were filed by Switzerland and Germany.

Lisbon System. In 2004, the International Bureau received five international applications, bringing the total number of internationally registered appellations of origin in force to 781.

Secretariat

As at 31 December 2004, WIPO employed 855 staff members, 380 of whom were in the Professional and higher categories and 475 in the General Service category.

Budget

The approved programme and budget for 2006-2007 amounted to 531 million Swiss francs. Contributions by member States represented 7 per cent of the overall budget. WIPO remained largely a self-funding agency, financing its activities from revenues acquired through the provision of services to the private sector.

Chapter XV

International Fund for Agricultural Development (IFAD)

The International Fund for Agricultural Development (IFAD) continued in 2004 to promote the economic advancement of the rural poor by providing low-interest loans and grants.

The twenty-seventh session of the Governing Council (Rome, Italy, 18-19 February) focused on rural finance, rural enterprises, remittances, sector-wide approaches and access to markets. The Executive Board held three regular sessions (April, September, December) and approved loans for 25 programmes and projects, and 87 grants.

In 2004, IFAD membership remained at 163, of which 23 were in List A (developed countries), 12 in List B (oil-exporting developing countries) and 128 in List C (other developing countries). Of the latter, 49 were in Sub-List C1 (Africa), 48 in Sub-List C2 (Europe, Asia and the Pacific) and 31 in Sub-List C3 (Latin America and the Caribbean).

Resources

On 1 January 2004, IFAD entered the three-year period of its sixth replenishment. By year's end, pledges equivalent to $505.7 million had been received, representing over 90 per cent of the sixth replenishment target of $560 million. The 2004 programme of work was approved for $462.5 million.

Activities

In 2004, loans approved and finalized through IFAD totalled $433.4 million, and grants worth $33.3 million were also approved. The total cost of the 25 new projects and programmes that were approved was estimated at over $928 million, of which $176.2 million would be provided by other external financiers, and $316.1 million by financiers in the recipient countries—primarily Governments.

Regular Programme lending was distributed as follows: Asia and the Pacific, $127.9 million for six projects (29.3 per cent); Eastern and Southern Africa, $92.5 million for five projects (21.2 per cent); the Near East and North Africa, $91.2 million for six projects (20.9 per cent); Latin America and the Caribbean, $75 million for four projects (17.2 per cent); and Western and Central Africa, $49.8 million for four projects (11.4 per cent).

During 2004, 27 programmes and projects were completed; 192 were ongoing at the end of the year.

Secretariat

As at 31 December 2004, the IFAD secretariat had 316 staff members, comprising 143 in the Professional and higher categories and 172 in the General Service category.

Income and expenditure

At the end of 2004, IFAD's income from loans was $48 million and that from cash and investments was $115.2 million. Operating expenses for the year totalled $57 million.

Chapter XVI

United Nations Industrial Development Organization (UNIDO)

The United Nations Industrial Development Organization (UNIDO) continued in 2004 to promote the sustainable industrial development of developing countries and countries in transition.

The Industrial Development Board, at its twenty-eighth session (Vienna, 25-27 May), considered UNIDO's medium-term programme framework (2004-2007), which focused on decentralization and field representation; UNIDO's financial situation; and the adoption of the draft statute of the International Centre for Science and High Technology. At its twenty-ninth session (Vienna, 9-11 November), member States considered recommendations of the Programme and Budget Committee on a number of issues and reviewed, among other things, decentralization, South-South cooperation and UNIDO activities in countries emerging from crisis situations. The eleventh session of the General Conference would take place in 2005.

UNIDO membership remained at 171 in 2004.

Global forum activities

Through its global forum activities, UNIDO continued to promote industrial development and cooperation between countries, partnerships, knowledge-sharing, technology and investment. It also assisted developing countries and countries with economies in transition in the implementation of multilateral environmental agreements.

Global forum activities included the compilation and dissemination worldwide of the 2004 edition of UNIDO's databases on industrial statistics through several media, including CD-ROM, hard copy publication and the Internet; the publication of the Industrial Development Report 2004; the continued implementation of a research programme on combating marginalization and poverty through industrial development; and the Global Biotechnology Forum (Concepción, Chile, 2-5 March). Cooperation arrangements continued between UNIDO and leading research institutions with a view to strengthening the Organization's global forum activities.

Technical cooperation

UNIDO continued to provide technical cooperation through its integrated programmes and country service frameworks, most of which dealt with capacity-building; many were geared towards increasing productivity and competitiveness with a particular emphasis on small and medium-sized enterprises and on environmental protection. During 2004, UNIDO's technical cooperation programmes and projects totalled some $117.2 million. Africa remained the focus of UNIDO's cooperation, with its share of the Organization's total services amounting to 47 per cent.

Secretariat

As at 31 December 2004, UNIDO employed a total of 646 staff members: 252 were in the Professional or higher categories, 386 were in the General Service category and 8 were national officers.

Budget

The tenth (2003) session of the UNIDO General Conference approved the 2004-2005 regular budget in the amount of 142,000,000 euros.

Chapter XVII

World Trade Organization (WTO)

During 2004, the World Trade Organization (WTO), the legal and institutional foundation of the multilateral trading system, continued to oversee the rules of international trade, settle trade disputes and organize trade negotiations.

Significant progress was made in advancing the Doha Development Agenda, adopted by WTO's Fourth (2001) Ministerial Conference [YUN 2001, p. 1432], following resolution, in July, of the deadlock in negotiations, which arose among WTO members during the Fifth (2003) Ministerial Conference [YUN 2003, p. 1535]. That enabled the adoption by WTO's General Council of framework agreements to advance negotiations in some of the most difficult areas, particularly agriculture and non-agricultural market access. Members also agreed on a package of measures on development issues, to begin negotiations on trade facilitation (see p. 958), to continue those negotiations beyond the timeframe of 1 January 2005 set in the Doha Ministerial Declaration [YUN 2001, p. 1432] and to schedule the next Ministerial Conference for December 2005 in Hong Kong, China.

WTO's General Council, the body overseeing the organization's work between meetings of the Ministerial Conference—its highest body—continued throughout the year to monitor the implementation and operation of the multilateral trading system embodied in the WTO Agreement [YUN 1994, p. 1474]. The Council played a key role in the negotiations and decisions that put the Doha Development Agenda work programme back on track in July. It also took decisions to improve transparency in WTO operations and to achieve better cooperation and coordination between the organization, the International Monetary Fund, the World Bank and other international organizations.

As at 31 December 2004, WTO membership (members and observers) totalled 148.

General activities

The three working groups established by the 1996 Ministerial Conference [YUN 1996, p. 1441], which met within the framework of the Doha Development Agenda, did not meet in 2004. In August, the General Council decided that the three issues they were set up to consider—the relationship between trade and investment, interaction between trade and competition policy, and transparency in government procurement—no longer formed part of the work programme set out in the Doha Ministerial Declaration. As such, no negotiation on those issues would take place within WTO during the Doha Round.

WTO continued to settle trade disputes between members covered by the Understanding on Rules and Procedures Governing the Settlement of Disputes and provided technical assistance and capacity-building to developing countries in that regard.

During the year, the Trade Policy Review Body carried out reviews of Belize, Benin, Brazil, Burkina Faso, the European Union, the Gambia, the Republic of Korea, Liechtenstein, Mali, Norway, Rwanda, Singapore, Sri Lanka, Suriname, Switzerland and the United States.

Trade in goods

During 2004, the Council for Trade in Goods (CTG) continued to monitor the implementation of multilateral trade agreements and examined and approved requests for waivers and waiver extensions from members in connection with the transposition of their schedules into the Harmonized System. It carried out a transitional review under the Protocol of accession of China, discussed the review of the operation of the Trade-Related Investment Measures Agreement and considered a request for extension of the transition period under the Agreement. CTG also conducted the third and final major review of the implementation of the Agreement on Textiles and Clothing, as 2004 was the last year of implementation. The Committee on Agriculture continued to review the implementation of WTO commitments resulting from the Uruguay Round agricultural reform programme, or from accession to WTO.

The Committee on Sanitary and Phytosanitary Measures monitored the implementation of the Agreement on the Application of Sanitary and Phytosanitary Measures, which set out the rights and obligations of members to ensure food safety, protect humans from plant- or animal-spread diseases, or protect plants and animals from pests and diseases.

The Committee on Safeguards continued to review national safeguard legislation and/or regulations.

Trade in services

In 2004, the Council for Trade in Services held seven formal meetings, which considered proposals for a technical review of the General Agreement on Trade in Services (GATS) provisions; Albania's request for a waiver from specific commitments under GATS; the deadline for negotiations on emergency safeguard measures under the Agreement; the European Community's request for continued restriction of the report of the Council's meeting in June; and issues submitted by India relating to the implementation of GATS. It also conducted the third transitional review under the Protocol of accession of China and the second review of most favoured nation (MFN) exemptions.

Intellectual property

The Trade-related Aspects of Intellectual Property Rights Agreement (TRIPS) provided for minimum international standards of protection in copyright, trademarks, geographic indications, industrial designs, patents, layout designs of integrated circuits and undisclosed information. In 2004, the Council for TRIPS continued to review national implementing legislation of developing countries and economies in transition.

Regional trade agreements

As at December 2004, WTO received notifications of 33 additional regional trade agreements, bringing the total number of notified agreements in force to 226.

Trade and development

In 2004, the Committee on Trade and Development continued to consider special and differential treatment of developing countries to facilitate their participation in world trade, technical cooperation and training, and market access for least developed countries. It also considered the declining terms of trade for primary commodities and its implication for the trade and development of primary commodity exporting countries.

Plurilateral agreements

The Committee on Government Procurement continued negotiations on expanding the coverage of the Agreement on Government Procurement, its simplification and improvement, including adaptation to advances in information technology, expansion of the coverage of the Agreement and the elimination of discriminatory measures and practices that distorted open procurement.

The Agreement on Trade in Civil Aircraft eliminated customs duties and other charges on imports of civil aircraft products and repairs, bound them at zero level and required the adoption or adaptation of end-use customs administration. Although it was part of the 1994 WTO Agreement, it remained outside the organization's framework. The Committee on Trade in Civil Aircraft discussed end-use customs administration, including a revised proposal concerning the definition of "civil" vs. "military" aircraft based on initial certification.

International Trade Centre

The International Trade Centre (ITC), operated jointly by WTO and the United Nations Conference on Trade and Development (see p. 954), continued to play a crucial role in trade-related technical cooperation and trade-related capacity-building. In 2004, it focused its technical assistance on helping businesses understand WTO rules, strengthening enterprises, competitiveness and developing new trade promotion strategies.

Budget

The WTO budget for 2004 was 161.7 million Swiss francs.

Secretariat

As at 31 December 2004, WTO staff numbered 630.

Chapter XVIII

World Tourism Organization (UNWTO)

In 2004, the World Tourism Organization (UNWTO), recognized by the UN General Assembly in resolution 58/232 [YUN 2003, p. 1475] as a specialized agency of the United Nations, continued to play a central role in promoting responsible, sustainable and universally accessible tourism, with particular attention to the interests of developing countries. In its first year as a UN agency, UNWTO established links with similar organizations and sought to better align its work programme with UN strategies and campaigns.

The UNWTO General Assembly, its governing body, did not meet in 2004; its sixteenth session was scheduled to be held in Dakar, Senegal, in 2005. The UNWTO Executive Council, which met between Assembly sessions, held its seventy-third (Hyderabad, India, 8-9 July) and seventy-fourth (Salvador de Bahia, Brazil, 2-3 December) sessions. Other meetings of UNWTO organs convened in 2004 included a supplementary meeting of the Commission of the Americas (Costa Rica, October), a meeting of the Strategic Group (Monaco, October) and the second meeting of the Quality Support and Trade Committee (Madrid, Spain, November). During the year, UNWTO also organized a Tourism Policy Forum, in cooperation with the George Washington University, Washington, D.C., and a meeting among the tourism-related agencies and programmes of the UN system, designed to improve coordination among them.

World Tourism Day was commemorated on 27 September under the theme "Sport and tourism; two living forces for mutual understanding, culture and social development".

As at 31 December 2004, UNWTO comprised 144 member States, seven associate members and over 300 affiliate members, representing the private sector, educational institutions and destination management organizations.

Activities

One of UNWTO's main areas of focus in 2004 was a programme designed to develop sustainable tourism as a force for eliminating poverty, as part of its commitment to contribute to the implementation of the United Nations Millennium Development Goals [YUN 2000, p. 51]. The programme, known as the Sustainable Tourism—Eliminating Poverty (ST-EP) initiative, which was first launched at the World Summit for Sustainable Development [YUN 2002, p. 821] in cooperation with the United Nations Conference on Trade and Development (UNCTAD), was unanimously supported by the fifteenth UNWTO General Assembly in 2003.

In 2004, the UNWTO ST-EP Foundation was established in Seoul, Republic of Korea, as an institution aimed at encouraging international cooperation on sustainable tourism development for poverty elimination. Some $500,000 remaining from the execution of past technical cooperation activities was allocated to new projects within the Foundation's framework.

The World Committee on Tourism Ethics, established by the UNWTO Assembly in 2003 as an independent body to assist in implementing and monitoring the Global Code of Ethics for Tourism, at its second meeting (Madrid, Spain, 4-5 October), adopted its rules of procedure and guidelines relative to the dispute settlement procedure. A report on the Committee's work regarding the implementation of the Code was considered by the Executive Council, which met twice during the year (see above). Italy offered to host the Committee headquarters in Rome.

Other UNWTO activities addressed issues relating to cooperation for development, in terms of transferring tourism know-how to developing countries; quality in tourism development, with regard to measures to improve the design and supply of tourism products and services; sustainable tourism development, designed to ensure that the benefits of tourism could be enjoyed for generations; statistics, involving the provision of facts and figures that demonstrated the economic impact of tourism; market intelligence, in terms of identifying market trends, forecasting, research and analysis of key market issues and evaluation tools for promotional campaigns; human resource development, particularly regarding the preparation of professionals for leadership roles in the tourism sector of UNWTO member countries; and communications and documentation, in terms of increasing awareness of the importance of the tourism industry and related media activities.

Regional activities to strengthen and support national tourism were undertaken by UNWTO in Africa, the Americas, Asia and the Pacific, the Middle East and Europe.

During the year, UNWTO revised its “vision 2020” report, a long-term forecast and assessment of the development of tourism, covering the first 20 years of the new millennium. Based on the revision, a “provisional outlook for 2010” would be prepared.

higher categories and 58 were in the General Service category.

Budget

The UNWTO Executive Council approved a budget of 10,645,000 euros for 2005.

Secretariat

As at 31 December 2004, UNWTO staff numbered 103, of whom 45 were in the Professional or ¹Czechoslovakia, which was an original Member of the United Nations from 24 October 1945, split up on 1 January 1993 and was succeeded by the Czech Republic and Slovakia.

²Egypt and Syria, both of which became Members of the United Nations on 24 October 1945, joined together—following a plebiscite held in those countries on 21 February 1958—to form the United Arab Republic. On 13 October 1961, Syria, having resumed its status as an independent State, also resumed its separate membership in the United Nations; it changed its name to the Syrian Arab Republic on 14 September 1971. The United Arab Republic continued as a Member of the United Nations and reverted to the name of Egypt on 2 September 1971.

³Through accession of the German Democratic Republic to the Federal Republic of Germany on 3 October 1990, the two German States (both of which became United Nations Members on 18 September 1973) united to form one sovereign State. As from that date, the Federal Republic of Germany has acted in the United Nations under the designation Germany.

⁴On 20 January 1965, Indonesia informed the Secretary-General that it had decided to withdraw from the United Nations. By a telegram of 19 September 1966, it notified the Secretary-General of its decision to resume participation in the activities of the United Nations. On 28 September 1966, the General Assembly took note of that decision and the President invited the representatives of Indonesia to take their seats in the Assembly.

⁵On 16 September 1963, Sabah (North Borneo), Sarawak and Singapore joined with the Federation of Malaya (which became a United Nations Member on 17 September 1957) to form Malaysia. On 9 August 1965, Singapore became an independent State and on 21 September 1965 it became a Member of the United Nations.

⁶The Union of Soviet Socialist Republics was an original Member of the United Nations from 24 October 1945. On 24 December 1991, the President of the Russian Federation informed the Secretary-General that the membership of the USSR in all United Nations organs was being continued by the Russian Federation.

⁷Tanganyika was admitted to the United Nations on 14 December 1961, and Zanzibar, on 16 December 1963. Following ratification, on 26 April 1964, of the Articles of Union between Tanganyika and Zanzibar, the two States became represented as a single Member: the United Republic of Tanganyika and Zanzibar; it changed its name to the United Republic of Tanzania on 1 November 1964.

⁸Yemen was admitted to the United Nations on 30 September 1947 and Democratic Yemen on 14 December 1967. On 22 May 1990, the two countries merged and have since been represented as one Member.

Appendix II

Charter of the United Nations and Statute of the International Court of Justice

Charter of the United Nations

NOTE: The Charter of the United Nations was signed on 26 June 1945, in San Francisco, at the conclusion of the United Nations Conference on International Organization, and came into force on 24 October 1945. The Statute of the International Court of Justice is an integral part of the Charter.

Amendments to Articles 23, 27 and 61 of the Charter were adopted by the General Assembly on 17 December 1963 and came into force on 31 August 1965. A further amendment to Article 61 was adopted by the General Assembly on 20 December 1971 and came into force on 24 September 1973. An amendment to Article 109, adopted by the General Assembly on 20 December 1965, came into force on 12 June 1968.

The amendment to Article 23 enlarges the membership of the Security Council from 11 to 15. The amended Article 27 provides that decisions of the Security Council on procedural matters shall be made by an affirmative vote of nine members (formerly seven) and on all other matters by an affirmative vote of nine members (formerly seven), including the concurring votes of the five permanent members of the Security Council.

The amendment to Article 61, which entered into force on 31 August 1965, enlarged the membership of the Economic and Social Council from 18 to 27. The subsequent amendment to that Article, which entered into force on 24 September 1973, further increased the membership of the Council from 27 to 54.

The amendment to Article 109, which relates to the first paragraph of that Article, provides that a General Conference of Member States for the purpose of reviewing the Charter may be held at a date and place to be fixed by a two-thirds vote of the members of the General Assembly and by a vote of any nine members (formerly seven) of the Security Council. Paragraph 3 of Article 109, which deals with the consideration of a possible review conference during the tenth regular session of the General Assembly, has been retained in its original form in its reference to a "vote of any seven members of the Security Council", the paragraph having been acted upon in 1955 by the General Assembly, at its tenth regular session, and by the Security Council.

WE THE PEOPLES OF THE UNITED NATIONS DETERMINED to save succeeding generations from the scourge of war, which twice in our lifetime has brought untold sorrow to mankind, and to reaffirm faith in fundamental human rights, in the dignity and worth of the human person, in the equal rights of men and women and of nations large and small, and to establish conditions under which justice and respect for the obligations arising from treaties and other sources of international law can be maintained, and to promote social progress and better standards of life in larger freedom,

AND FOR THESE ENDS

to practice tolerance and live together in peace with one another as good neighbours, and to unite our strength to maintain international peace and security, and to ensure, by the acceptance of principles and the institution of methods, that armed force shall not be used, save in the common interest, and to employ international machinery for the promotion of the economic and social advancement of all peoples,

HAVE RESOLVED TO COMBINE OUR EFFORTS TO ACCOMPLISH THESE AIMS

Accordingly, our respective Governments, through representatives assembled in the city of San Francisco, who have exhibited their full powers found to be in good and due form, have agreed to the present Charter of the United Nations and do hereby establish an international organization to be known as the United Nations.

Chapter I PURPOSES AND PRINCIPLES

Article 1

The Purposes of the United Nations are:

1. To maintain international peace and security, and to that end: to take effective collective measures for the prevention and removal of threats to the peace, and for the suppression of acts of aggression or other breaches of the peace, and to bring about by peaceful means, and in conformity with the principles of justice and international law, adjustment or settlement of international disputes or situations which might lead to a breach of the peace;
2. To develop friendly relations among nations based on respect for the principle of equal rights and self-determination of peoples, and to take other appropriate measures to strengthen universal peace;
3. To achieve international co-operation in solving international problems of an economic, social, cultural or humanitarian character, and in promoting and encouraging respect for human rights and for fundamental freedoms for all without distinction as to race, sex, language or religion; and
4. To be a centre for harmonizing the actions of nations in the attainment of these common ends.

Article 2

The Organization and its Members, in pursuit of the Purposes stated in Article 1, shall act in accordance with the following Principles:

1. The Organization is based on the principle of the sovereign equality of all its Members.
2. All Members, in order to ensure to all of them the rights and benefits resulting from membership, shall fulfil in good faith the obligations assumed by them in accordance with the present Charter.

3. All Members shall settle their international disputes by peaceful means in such a manner that international peace and security, and justice, are not endangered.

4. All Members shall refrain in their international relations from the threat or use of force against the territorial integrity or political independence of any state, or in any other manner inconsistent with the Purposes of the United Nations.

5. All Members shall give the United Nations every assistance in any action it takes in accordance with the present Charter, and shall refrain from giving assistance to any state against which the United Nations is taking preventive or enforcement action.

6. The Organization shall ensure that states which are not Members of the United Nations act in accordance with these Principles so far as may be necessary for the maintenance of international peace and security.

7. Nothing contained in the present Charter shall authorize the United Nations to intervene in matters which are essentially within the domestic jurisdiction of any state or shall require the Members to submit such matters to settlement under the present Charter; but this principle shall not prejudice the application of enforcement measures under Chapter VII.

Chapter II MEMBERSHIP

Article 3

The original Members of the United Nations shall be the states which, having participated in the United Nations Conference on International Organization at San Francisco or having previously signed the Declaration by United Nations of 1 January 1942, sign the present Charter and ratify it in accordance with Article 110.

Article 4

1. Membership in the United Nations is open to all other peace-loving states which accept the obligations contained in the present Charter and, in the judgment of the Organization, are able and willing to carry out these obligations.

2. The admission of any such state to membership in the United Nations will be effected by a decision of the General Assembly upon the recommendation of the Security Council.

Article 5

A Member of the United Nations against which preventive or enforcement action has been taken by the Security Council may be suspended from the exercise of the rights and privileges of membership by the General Assembly upon the recommendation of the Security Council. The exercise of these rights and privileges may be restored by the Security Council.

Article 6

A Member of the United Nations which has persistently violated the Principles contained in the present Charter may be expelled from the Organization by the General Assembly upon the recommendation of the Security Council.

Chapter III ORGANS

Article 7

1. There are established as the principal organs of the United Nations: a General Assembly, a Security Council, an Economic and Social Council, a Trusteeship Council, an International Court of Justice, and a Secretariat.

2. Such subsidiary organs as may be found necessary may be established in accordance with the present Charter.

Article 8

The United Nations shall place no restrictions on the eligibility of men and women to participate in any capacity and under conditions of equality in its principal and subsidiary organs.

Chapter IV THE GENERAL ASSEMBLY

Composition

Article 9

1. The General Assembly shall consist of all the Members of the United Nations.

2. Each Member shall have not more than five representatives in the General Assembly.

Functions and Powers

Article 10

The General Assembly may discuss any questions or any matters within the scope of the present Charter or relating to the powers and functions of any organs provided for in the present Charter, and, except as provided in Article 12, may make recommendations to the Members of the United Nations or to the Security Council or both on any such questions or matters.

Article 11

1. The General Assembly may consider the general principles of co-operation in the maintenance of international peace and security, including the principles governing disarmament and the regulation of armaments, and may make recommendations with regard to such principles to the Members or to the Security Council or to both.

2. The General Assembly may discuss any questions relating to the maintenance of international peace and security brought before it by any Member of the United Nations, or by the Security Council, or by a state which is not a Member of the United Nations in accordance with Article 35, paragraph 2, and, except as provided in Article 12, may make recommendations with regard to any such questions to the state or states concerned or to the Security Council or to both. Any such question on which action is necessary shall be referred to the Security Council by the General Assembly either before or after discussion.

3. The General Assembly may call the attention of the Security Council to situations which are likely to endanger international peace and security.

4. The powers of the General Assembly set forth in this Article shall not limit the general scope of Article 10.

Article 12

1. While the Security Council is exercising in respect of any dispute or situation the functions assigned to it in the present Charter, the General Assembly shall not make any recommendation with regard to that dispute or situation unless the Security Council so requests.

2. The Secretary-General, with the consent of the Security Council, shall notify the General Assembly at each session of any matters relative to the maintenance of international peace and security which are being dealt with by the Security Council and shall similarly notify the General Assembly, or the Members of the United Nations if the General Assembly is not in session, immediately the Security Council ceases to deal with such matters.

Article 13

1. The General Assembly shall initiate studies and make recommendations for the purpose of:

- a. promoting international co-operation in the political field and encouraging the progressive development of international law and its codification;
- b. promoting international co-operation in the economic, social, cultural, educational and health fields, and assisting in the realization of human rights and fundamental freedoms for all without distinction as to race, sex, language or religion.

2. The further responsibilities, functions and powers of the General Assembly with respect to matters mentioned in paragraph 1 (b) above are set forth in Chapters IX and X.

Article 14

Subject to the provisions of Article 12, the General Assembly may recommend measures for the peaceful adjustment of any situation, regardless of origin, which it deems likely to impair the general welfare or friendly relations among nations, including situations resulting from a violation of the provisions of the present Charter setting forth the Purposes and Principles of the United Nations.

Article 15

1. The General Assembly shall receive and consider annual and special reports from the Security Council; these reports shall include an account of the measures that the Security Council has decided upon or taken to maintain international peace and security.

2. The General Assembly shall receive and consider reports from the other organs of the United Nations.

Article 16

The General Assembly shall perform such functions with respect to the international trusteeship system as are assigned to it under Chapters XII and XIII, including the approval of the trusteeship agreements for areas not designated as strategic.

Article 17

1. The General Assembly shall consider and approve the budget of the Organization.

2. The expenses of the Organization shall be borne by the Members as apportioned by the General Assembly.

3. The General Assembly shall consider and approve any financial and budgetary arrangements with specialized agencies referred to in Article 57 and shall examine the administrative budgets of such specialized agencies with a view to making recommendations to the agencies concerned.

Voting

Article 18

1. Each member of the General Assembly shall have one vote.

2. Decisions of the General Assembly on important questions shall be made by a two-thirds majority of the members present and voting. These questions shall include: recommendations with respect to the maintenance of international peace and security, the election of the non-permanent members of the Security Council, the election of the members of the Economic and Social Council, the election of members of the Trusteeship Council in accordance with paragraph 1 (c) of Article 86, the admission of new Members to the United Nations, the suspension of the rights and privileges of membership, the expulsion of Members, questions relating to the operation of the trusteeship system, and budgetary questions.

3. Decisions on other questions, including the determination of additional categories of questions to be decided by a two-thirds majority, shall be made by a majority of the members present and voting.

Article 19

A Member of the United Nations which is in arrears in the payment of its financial contributions to the Organization shall have no vote in the General Assembly if the amount of its arrears equals or exceeds the amount of the contributions due from it for the preceding two full years. The General Assembly may, nevertheless, permit such a Member to vote if it is satisfied that the failure to pay is due to conditions beyond the control of the Member.

Procedure

Article 20

The General Assembly shall meet in regular annual sessions and in such special sessions as occasion may require. Special sessions shall be convoked by the Secretary-General at the request of the Security Council or of a majority of the Members of the United Nations.

Article 21

The General Assembly shall adopt its own rules of procedure. It shall elect its President for each session.

Article 22

The General Assembly may establish such subsidiary organs as it deems necessary for the performance of its functions.

Chapter V

THE SECURITY COUNCIL

Composition

Article 23¹

1. The Security Council shall consist of fifteen Members of the United Nations. The Republic of China, France, the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland and the United States of America shall be permanent members of the Security Council. The General Assembly shall elect ten other Members of the United Nations to be non-permanent members of the Security Council, due regard being specially paid, in the first instance to the contribution of Members of the United Nations to the maintenance of international peace and security and to the other purposes of the Organization, and also to equitable geographical distribution.

2. The non-permanent members of the Security Council shall be elected for a term of two years. In the first election of the non-permanent members after the increase of the membership of the Security Council from eleven to fifteen, two of the four additional members shall be chosen for a term of one year. A retiring member shall not be eligible for immediate re-election.

3. Each member of the Security Council shall have one representative.

Functions and Powers

Article 24

1. In order to ensure prompt and effective action by the United Nations, its Members confer on the Security Council primary responsibility for the maintenance of international peace and security, and agree that in carrying out its duties under this responsibility the Security Council acts on their behalf.

2. In discharging these duties the Security Council shall act in accordance with the Purposes and Principles of the United Nations. The specific powers granted to the Security Council for the discharge of these duties are laid down in Chapters VI, VII, VIII and XII.

3. The Security Council shall submit annual and, when necessary, special reports to the General Assembly for its consideration.

Article 25

The Members of the United Nations agree to accept and carry out the decisions of the Security Council in accordance with the present Charter.

Article 26

In order to promote the establishment and maintenance of international peace and security with the least diversion for armaments of the world's human and economic resources, the Security Council shall be responsible for formulating, with the assistance of the Military Staff Committee referred to in Article 47, plans to be submitted to the Members of the United Nations for the establishment of a system for the regulation of armaments.

Voting

Article 27²

1. Each member of the Security Council shall have one vote.
2. Decisions of the Security Council on procedural matters shall be made by an affirmative vote of nine members.
3. Decisions of the Security Council on all other matters shall be made by an affirmative vote of nine members including the concurring votes of the permanent members; provided that, in decisions under Chapter VI, and under paragraph 3 of Article 52, a party to a dispute shall abstain from voting.

Procedure

Article 28

1. The Security Council shall be so organized as to be able to function continuously. Each member of the Security Council shall for this purpose be represented at all times at the seat of the Organization.
2. The Security Council shall hold periodic meetings at which each of its members may, if it so desires, be represented by a member of the government or by some other specially designated representative.
3. The Security Council may hold meetings at such places other than the seat of the Organization as in its judgment will best facilitate its work.

Article 29

The Security Council may establish such subsidiary organs as it deems necessary for the performance of its functions.

Article 30

The Security Council shall adopt its own rules of procedure, including the method of selecting its President.

Article 31

Any Member of the United Nations which is not a member of the Security Council may participate, without vote, in the discussion of any question brought before the Security Council whenever the latter considers that the interests of that Member are specially affected.

Article 32

Any Member of the United Nations which is not a member of the Security Council or any state which is not a Member of the United Nations, if it is a party to a dispute under consideration by the Security Council, shall be invited to participate, without vote, in the discussion relating to the dispute. The Security Council shall lay down such conditions as it deems just for the participation of a state which is not a Member of the United Nations.

Chapter VI

PACIFIC SETTLEMENT OF DISPUTES

Article 33

1. The parties to any dispute, the continuance of which is likely to endanger the maintenance of international peace and security, shall, first of all, seek a solution by negotiation, enquiry, mediation, conciliation, arbitration, judicial settlement, resort to regional agencies or arrangements, or other peaceful means of their own choice.
2. The Security Council shall, when it deems necessary, call upon the parties to settle their dispute by such means.

Article 34

The Security Council may investigate any dispute, or any situation which might lead to international friction or give rise to a dispute, in order to determine whether the continuance of the dispute or situation is likely to endanger the maintenance of international peace and security.

Article 35

1. Any Member of the United Nations may bring any dispute, or any situation of the nature referred to in Article 34, to the attention of the Security Council or of the General Assembly.
2. A state which is not a Member of the United Nations may bring to the attention of the Security Council or of the General Assembly any dispute to which it is a party if it accepts in advance, for the purposes of the dispute, the obligations of pacific settlement provided in the present Charter.
3. The proceedings of the General Assembly in respect of matters brought to its attention under this Article will be subject to the provisions of Articles 11 and 12.

Article 36

1. The Security Council may, at any stage of a dispute of the nature referred to in Article 33 or of a situation of like nature, recommend appropriate procedures or methods of adjustment.
2. The Security Council should take into consideration any procedures for the settlement of the dispute which have already been adopted by the parties.
3. In making recommendations under this Article the Security Council should also take into consideration that legal disputes should as a general rule be referred by the parties to the International Court of Justice in accordance with the provisions of the Statute of the Court.

Article 37

1. Should the parties to a dispute of the nature referred to in Article 33 fail to settle it by the means indicated in that Article, they shall refer it to the Security Council.
2. If the Security Council deems that the continuance of the dispute is in fact likely to endanger the maintenance of international peace and security, it shall decide whether to take action under Article 36 or to recommend such terms of settlement as it may consider appropriate.

Article 38

Without prejudice to the provisions of Articles 33 to 37, the Security Council may, if all the parties to any dispute so request, make recommendations to the parties with a view to a pacific settlement of the dispute.

Chapter VII

ACTION WITH RESPECT TO THREATS TO THE PEACE, BREACHES OF THE PEACE, AND ACTS OF AGGRESSION

Article 39

The Security Council shall determine the existence of any threat to the peace, breach of the peace, or act of aggression and shall make recommendations, or decide what measures shall be taken in accordance with Articles 41 and 42, to maintain or restore international peace and security.

Article 40

In order to prevent an aggravation of the situation, the Security Council may, before making the recommendations or deciding upon the measures provided for in Article 39, call upon the parties concerned to comply with such provisional measures as it deems necessary or desirable. Such provisional measures shall be without prejudice to the rights, claims or position of the parties concerned. The Security Council shall duly take account of failure to comply with such provisional measures.

Article 41

The Security Council may decide what measures not involving the use of armed force are to be employed to give effect to its decisions, and it may call upon the Members of the United Nations to apply such measures. These may include complete or partial interruption of economic relations and of rail, sea, air, postal, telegraphic, radio and other means of communication, and the severance of diplomatic relations.

Article 42

Should the Security Council consider that measures provided for in Article 41 would be inadequate or have proved to be inadequate, it may take such action by air, sea or land forces as may be necessary to maintain or restore international peace and security. Such action may include demonstrations, blockade, and other operations by air, sea, or land forces of Members of the United Nations.

Article 43

1. All Members of the United Nations, in order to contribute to the maintenance of international peace and security, undertake to make available to the Security Council, on its call and in accordance with a special agreement or agreements, armed forces, assistance and facilities, including rights of passage, necessary for the purpose of maintaining international peace and security.

2. Such agreement or agreements shall govern the numbers and types of forces, their degree of readiness and general location, and the nature of the facilities and assistance to be provided.

3. The agreement or agreements shall be negotiated as soon as possible on the initiative of the Security Council. They shall be concluded between the Security Council and Members or between the Security Council and groups of Members and shall be subject to ratification by the signatory states in accordance with their respective constitutional processes.

Article 44

When the Security Council has decided to use force it shall, before calling upon a Member not represented on it to provide armed forces in fulfilment of the obligations assumed under Article 43, invite that Member, if the Member so desires, to participate in the decisions of the Security Council concerning the employment of contingents of that Member's armed forces.

Article 45

In order to enable the United Nations to take urgent military measures, Members shall hold immediately available national air-force contingents for combined international enforcement action. The strength and degree of readiness of these contingents and plans for their combined action shall be determined, within the limits laid down in the special agreement or agreements referred to in Article 43, by the Security Council with the assistance of the Military Staff Committee.

Article 46

Plans for the application of armed force shall be made by the Security Council with the assistance of the Military Staff Committee.

Article 47

1. There shall be established a Military Staff Committee to advise and assist the Security Council on all questions relating to the Security Council's military requirements for the maintenance of international peace and security, the employment and command of forces placed at its disposal, the regulation of armaments, and possible disarmament.

2. The Military Staff Committee shall consist of the Chiefs of Staff of the permanent members of the Security Council or their representatives. Any Member of the United Nations not permanently represented on the Committee shall be invited by the Committee to be associated with it when the efficient discharge of the Committee's responsibilities requires the participation of that Member in its work.

3. The Military Staff Committee shall be responsible under the Security Council for the strategic direction of any armed forces placed at the disposal of the Security Council. Questions relating to the command of such forces shall be worked out subsequently.

4. The Military Staff Committee, with the authorization of the Security Council and after consultation with appropriate regional agencies, may establish regional sub-committees.

Article 48

1. The action required to carry out the decisions of the Security Council for the maintenance of international peace and security shall be taken by all the Members of the United Nations or by some of them, as the Security Council may determine.

2. Such decisions shall be carried out by the Members of the United Nations directly and through their action in the appropriate international agencies of which they are members.

Article 49

The Members of the United Nations shall join in affording mutual assistance in carrying out the measures decided upon by the Security Council.

Article 50

If preventive or enforcement measures against any state are taken by the Security Council, any other state, whether a Member of the United Nations or not, which finds itself confronted with special economic problems arising from the carrying out of those measures shall have the right to consult the Security Council with regard to a solution of those problems.

Article 51

Nothing in the present Charter shall impair the inherent right of individual or collective self-defence if an armed attack occurs against a Member of the United Nations, until the Security Council has taken measures necessary to maintain international peace and security. Measures taken by Members in the exercise of this right of self-defence shall be immediately reported to the Security Council and shall not in any way affect the authority and responsibility of the Security Council under the present Charter to take at any time such action as it deems necessary in order to maintain or restore international peace and security.

Chapter VIII
REGIONAL ARRANGEMENTS

Article 52

1. Nothing in the present Charter precludes the existence of regional arrangements or agencies for dealing with such matters relating to the maintenance of international peace and security as are appropriate for regional action, provided that such arrangements or agencies and their activities are consistent with the Purposes and Principles of the United Nations.

2. The Members of the United Nations entering into such arrangements or constituting such agencies shall make every effort to achieve pacific settlement of local disputes through such regional arrangements or by such regional agencies before referring them to the Security Council.

3. The Security Council shall encourage the development of pacific settlement of local disputes through such regional arrangements or by such regional agencies either on the initiative of the states concerned or by reference from the Security Council.

4. This Article in no way impairs the application of Articles 34 and 35.

Article 53

1. The Security Council shall, where appropriate, utilize such regional arrangements or agencies for enforcement action under its authority. But no enforcement action shall be taken under regional arrangements or by regional agencies without the authorization of the Security Council, with the exception of measures against any enemy state, as defined in paragraph 2 of this Article, provided for pursuant to Article 107 or in regional arrangements directed against renewal of aggressive policy on the part of any such state, until such time as the Organization may, on request of the Governments concerned, be charged with the responsibility for preventing further aggression by such a state.

2. The term enemy state as used in paragraph 1 of this Article applies to any state which during the Second World War has been an enemy of any signatory of the present Charter.

Article 54

The Security Council shall at all times be kept fully informed of activities undertaken or in contemplation under regional arrangements or by regional agencies for the maintenance of international peace and security.

Chapter IX

INTERNATIONAL ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL CO-OPERATION

Article 55

With a view to the creation of conditions of stability and well-being which are necessary for peaceful and friendly relations among nations based on respect for the principle of equal rights and self-determination of peoples, the United Nations shall promote:

- a. higher standards of living, full employment, and conditions of economic and social progress and development;
- b. solutions of international economic, social, health, and related problems; and international cultural and educational co-operation; and
- c. universal respect for, and observance of, human rights and fundamental freedoms for all without distinction as to race, sex, language, or religion.

Article 56

All Members pledge themselves to take joint and separate action in co-operation with the Organization for the achievement of the purposes set forth in Article 55.

Article 57

1. The various specialized agencies, established by inter-governmental agreement and having wide international responsibilities, as defined in their basic instruments, in economic, social, cultural, educational, health, and related fields, shall be brought into relationship with the United Nations in accordance with the provisions of Article 63.

2. Such agencies thus brought into relationship with the United Nations are hereinafter referred to as specialized agencies.

Article 58

The Organization shall make recommendations for the co-ordination of the policies and activities of the specialized agencies.

Article 59

The Organization shall, where appropriate, initiate negotiations among the states concerned for the creation of any new specialized agencies required for the accomplishment of the purposes set forth in Article 55.

Article 60

Responsibility for the discharge of the functions of the Organization set forth in this Chapter shall be vested in the General Assembly and, under the authority of the General Assembly, in the Economic and Social Council, which shall have for this purpose the powers set forth in Chapter X.

Chapter X

THE ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL

Composition

Article 61³

1. The Economic and Social Council shall consist of fifty-four Members of the United Nations elected by the General Assembly.

2. Subject to the provisions of paragraph 3, eighteen members of the Economic and Social Council shall be elected each year for a term of three years. A retiring member shall be eligible for immediate re-election.

3. At the first election after the increase in the membership of the Economic and Social Council from twenty-seven to fifty-four members, in addition to the members elected in place of the nine members whose term of office expires at the end of that year, twenty-seven additional members shall be elected. Of these twenty-seven additional members, the term of office of nine members so elected shall expire at the end of one year, and of nine other members at the end of two years, in accordance with arrangements made by the General Assembly.

4. Each member of the Economic and Social Council shall have one representative.

Functions and Powers

Article 62

1. The Economic and Social Council may make or initiate studies and reports with respect to international economic, social, cultural, educational, health, and related matters and may make recommendations with respect to any such matters to the General Assembly, to the Members of the United Nations, and to the specialized agencies concerned.

2. It may make recommendations for the purpose of promoting respect for, and observance of, human rights and fundamental freedoms for all.

3. It may prepare draft conventions for submission to the General Assembly, with respect to matters falling within its competence.

4. It may call, in accordance with the rules prescribed by the United Nations, international conferences on matters falling within its competence.

Article 63

1. The Economic and Social Council may enter into agreements with any of the agencies referred to in Article 57, defining the terms on which the agency concerned shall be brought into relationship with the United Nations. Such agreements shall be subject to approval by the General Assembly.

2. It may co-ordinate the activities of the specialized agencies through consultation with and recommendations to such agencies and through recommendations to the General Assembly and to the Members of the United Nations.

Article 64

1. The Economic and Social Council may take appropriate steps to obtain regular reports from the specialized agencies. It may make arrangements with the Members of the United Nations and with the specialized agencies to obtain reports on the steps taken to give effect to its own recommendations and to recommendations on matters falling within its competence made by the General Assembly.

2. It may communicate its observations on these reports to the General Assembly.

Article 65

The Economic and Social Council may furnish information to the Security Council and shall assist the Security Council upon its request.

Article 66

1. The Economic and Social Council shall perform such functions as fall within its competence in connexion with the carrying out of the recommendations of the General Assembly.
2. It may, with the approval of the General Assembly, perform services at the request of Members of the United Nations and at the request of specialized agencies.
3. It shall perform such other functions as are specified elsewhere in the present Charter or as may be assigned to it by the General Assembly.

Voting

Article 67

1. Each member of the Economic and Social Council shall have one vote.
2. Decisions of the Economic and Social Council shall be made by a majority of the members present and voting.

Procedure

Article 68

The Economic and Social Council shall set up commissions in economic and social fields and for the promotion of human rights, and such other commissions as may be required for the performance of its functions.

Article 69

The Economic and Social Council shall invite any Member of the United Nations to participate, without vote, in its deliberations on any matter of particular concern to that Member.

Article 70

The Economic and Social Council may make arrangements for representatives of the specialized agencies to participate, without vote, in its deliberations and in those of the commissions established by it, and for its representatives to participate in the deliberations of the specialized agencies.

Article 71

The Economic and Social Council may make suitable arrangements for consultation with non-governmental organizations which are concerned with matters within its competence. Such arrangements may be made with international organizations and, where appropriate, with national organizations after consultation with the Member of the United Nations concerned.

Article 72

1. The Economic and Social Council shall adopt its own rules of procedure, including the method of selecting its President.
2. The Economic and Social Council shall meet as required in accordance with its rules, which shall include provision for the convening of meetings on the request of a majority of its members.

Chapter XI

DECLARATION REGARDING NON-SELF-GOVERNING TERRITORIES

Article 73

Members of the United Nations which have or assume responsibilities for the administration of territories whose peoples have not yet attained a full measure of self-government recognize the principle that the interests of the inhabitants of these territories are paramount, and accept as a sacred trust the obligation to promote to the utmost, within the system of international peace and security established by the present Charter, the well-being of the inhabitants of these territories and, to this end:

- a. to ensure, with due respect for the culture of the peoples concerned, their political, economic, social, and educational advancement, their just treatment, and their protection against abuses;
- b. to develop self-government, to take due account of the political aspirations of the peoples, and to assist them in the progressive development of their free political institutions, according to the particular circumstances of each territory and its peoples and their varying stages of advancement;
- c. to further international peace and security;
- d. to promote constructive measures of development, to encourage research, and to co-operate with one another and, when and where appropriate, with specialized international bodies with a view to the practical achievement of the social, economic, and scientific purposes set forth in this Article; and
- e. to transmit regularly to the Secretary-General for information purposes, subject to such limitation as security and constitutional considerations may require, statistical and other information of a technical nature relating to economic, social, and educational conditions in the territories for which they are respectively responsible other than those territories to which Chapters XII and XIII apply.

Article 74

Members of the United Nations also agree that their policy in respect of the territories to which this Chapter applies, no less than in respect of their metropolitan areas, must be based on the general principle of good-neighbourliness, due account being taken of the interests and well-being of the rest of the world, in social, economic, and commercial matters.

Chapter XII

INTERNATIONAL TRUSTEESHIP SYSTEM

Article 75

The United Nations shall establish under its authority an international trusteeship system for the administration and supervision of such territories as may be placed thereunder by subsequent individual agreements. These territories are hereinafter referred to as trust territories.

Article 76

The basic objectives of the trusteeship system, in accordance with the Purposes of the United Nations laid down in Article 1 of the present Charter, shall be:

- a. to further international peace and security;
- b. to promote the political, economic, social, and educational advancement of the inhabitants of the trust territories, and their progressive development towards self-government or independence as may be appropriate to the particular circumstances of each territory and its peoples and the freely expressed wishes of the peoples concerned, and as may be provided by the terms of each trusteeship agreement;
- c. to encourage respect for human rights and for fundamental freedoms for all without distinction as to race, sex, language, or religion, and to encourage recognition of the interdependence of the peoples of the world; and
- d. to ensure equal treatment in social, economic, and commercial matters for all Members of the United Nations and their nationals, and also equal treatment for the latter in the administration of justice, without prejudice to the attainment of the foregoing objectives and subject to the provisions of Article 80.

Article 77

1. The trusteeship system shall apply to such territories in the following categories as may be placed thereunder by means of trusteeship agreements:

- a. territories now held under mandate;
 - b. territories which may be detached from enemy states as a result of the Second World War; and
 - c. territories voluntarily placed under the system by states responsible for their administration.
2. It will be a matter for subsequent agreement as to which territories in the foregoing categories will be brought under the trusteeship system and upon what terms.

Article 78

The trusteeship system shall not apply to territories which have become Members of the United Nations, relationship among which shall be based on respect for the principle of sovereign equality.

Article 79

The terms of trusteeship for each territory to be placed under the trusteeship system, including any alteration or amendment, shall be agreed upon by the states directly concerned, including the mandatory power in the case of territories held under mandate by a Member of the United Nations, and shall be approved as provided for in Articles 83 and 85.

Article 80

1. Except as may be agreed upon in individual trusteeship agreements, made under Articles 77, 79 and 81, placing each territory under the trusteeship system, and until such agreements have been concluded, nothing in this Chapter shall be construed in or of itself to alter in any manner the rights whatsoever of any states or any peoples or the terms of existing international instruments to which Members of the United Nations may respectively be parties.
2. Paragraph 1 of this Article shall not be interpreted as giving grounds for delay or postponement of the negotiation and conclusion of agreements for placing mandated and other territories under the trusteeship system as provided for in Article 77.

Article 81

The trusteeship agreement shall in each case include the terms under which the trust territory will be administered and designate the authority which will exercise the administration of the trust territory. Such authority, hereinafter called the administering authority, may be one or more states or the Organization itself.

Article 82

There may be designated, in any trusteeship agreement, a strategic area or areas which may include part or all of the trust territory to which the agreement applies, without prejudice to any special agreement or agreements made under Article 43.

Article 83

1. All functions of the United Nations relating to strategic areas, including the approval of the terms of the trusteeship agreements and of their alteration or amendment, shall be exercised by the Security Council.
2. The basic objectives set forth in Article 76 shall be applicable to the people of each strategic area.
3. The Security Council shall, subject to the provisions of the trusteeship agreements and without prejudice to security considerations, avail itself of the assistance of the Trusteeship Council to perform those functions of the United Nations under the trusteeship system relating to political, economic, social, and educational matters in the strategic areas.

Article 84

It shall be the duty of the administering authority to ensure that the trust territory shall play its part in the maintenance of international peace and security. To this end the administering authority may make use of volunteer forces, facilities, and assistance from the trust territory in carrying out the obligations towards the Security Council undertaken in this regard by the administering authority, as well as for local defence and the maintenance of law and order within the trust territory.

Article 85

1. The functions of the United Nations with regard to trusteeship agreements for all areas not designated as strategic, including the approval of the terms of the trusteeship agreements and of their alteration or amendment, shall be exercised by the General Assembly.
2. The Trusteeship Council, operating under the authority of the General Assembly, shall assist the General Assembly in carrying out these functions.

Chapter XIII

THE TRUSTEESHIP COUNCIL

Composition

Article 86

1. The Trusteeship Council shall consist of the following Members of the United Nations:
 - a. those Members administering trust territories;
 - b. such of those Members mentioned by name in Article 23 as are not administering trust territories; and
 - c. as many other Members elected for three-year terms by the General Assembly as may be necessary to ensure that the total number of members of the Trusteeship Council is equally divided between those Members of the United Nations which administer trust territories and those which do not.
2. Each member of the Trusteeship Council shall designate one specially qualified person to represent it therein.

Functions and Powers

Article 87

The General Assembly and, under its authority, the Trusteeship Council, in carrying out their functions, may:

- a. consider reports submitted by the administering authority;
- b. accept petitions and examine them in consultation with the administering authority;
- c. provide for periodic visits to the respective trust territories at times agreed upon with the administering authority; and
- d. take these and other actions in conformity with the terms of the trusteeship agreements.

Article 88

The Trusteeship Council shall formulate a questionnaire on the political, economic, social, and educational advancement of the inhabitants of each trust territory, and the administering authority for each trust territory within the competence of the General Assembly shall make an annual report to the General Assembly upon the basis of such questionnaire.

Voting

Article 89

1. Each member of the Trusteeship Council shall have one vote.
2. Decisions of the Trusteeship Council shall be made by a majority of the members present and voting.

Procedure

Article 90

1. The Trusteeship Council shall adopt its own rules of procedure, including the method of selecting its President.

2. The Trusteeship Council shall meet as required in accordance with its rules, which shall include provision for the convening of meetings on the request of a majority of its members.

Article 91

The Trusteeship Council shall, when appropriate, avail itself of the assistance of the Economic and Social Council and of the specialized agencies in regard to matters with which they are respectively concerned.

Chapter XIV

THE INTERNATIONAL COURT OF JUSTICE

Article 92

The International Court of Justice shall be the principal judicial organ of the United Nations. It shall function in accordance with the annexed Statute, which is based upon the Statute of the Permanent Court of International Justice and forms an integral part of the present Charter.

Article 93

1. All Members of the United Nations are ipso facto parties to the Statute of the International Court of Justice.
2. A state which is not a Member of the United Nations may become a party to the Statute of the International Court of Justice on conditions to be determined in each case by the General Assembly upon the recommendation of the Security Council.

Article 94

1. Each Member of the United Nations undertakes to comply with the decision of the International Court of Justice in any case to which it is a party.
2. If any party to a case fails to perform the obligations incumbent upon it under a judgment rendered by the Court, the other party may have recourse to the Security Council, which may, if it deems necessary, make recommendations or decide upon measures to be taken to give effect to the judgment.

Article 95

Nothing in the present Charter shall prevent Members of the United Nations from entrusting the solution of their differences to other tribunals by virtue of agreements already in existence or which may be concluded in the future.

Article 96

1. The General Assembly or the Security Council may request the International Court of Justice to give an advisory opinion on any legal question.
2. Other organs of the United Nations and specialized agencies, which may at any time be so authorized by the General Assembly, may also request advisory opinions of the Court on legal questions arising within the scope of their activities.

Chapter XV

THE SECRETARIAT

Article 97

The Secretariat shall comprise a Secretary-General and such staff as the Organization may require. The Secretary-General shall be appointed by the General Assembly upon the recommendation of the Security Council. He shall be the chief administrative officer of the Organization.

Article 98

The Secretary-General shall act in that capacity in all meetings of the General Assembly, of the Security Council, of the Economic and Social Council, and of the Trusteeship Council, and shall perform such other functions as are entrusted to him by these organs. The Secretary-General shall make an annual report to the General Assembly on the work of the Organization.

Article 99

The Secretary-General may bring to the attention of the Security Council any matter which in his opinion may threaten the maintenance of international peace and security.

Article 100

1. In the performance of their duties the Secretary-General and the staff shall not seek or receive instructions from any government or from any other authority external to the Organization. They shall refrain from any action which might reflect on their position as international officials responsible only to the Organization.
2. Each Member of the United Nations undertakes to respect the exclusively international character of the responsibilities of the Secretary-General and the staff and not to seek to influence them in the discharge of their responsibilities.

Article 101

1. The staff shall be appointed by the Secretary-General under regulations established by the General Assembly.
2. Appropriate staffs shall be permanently assigned to the Economic and Social Council, the Trusteeship Council, and, as required, to other organs of the United Nations. These staffs shall form a part of the Secretariat.
3. The paramount consideration in the employment of the staff and in the determination of the conditions of service shall be the necessity of securing the highest standards of efficiency, competence, and integrity. Due regard shall be paid to the importance of recruiting the staff on as wide a geographical basis as possible.

Chapter XVI

MISCELLANEOUS PROVISIONS

Article 102

1. Every treaty and every international agreement entered into by any Member of the United Nations after the present Charter comes into force shall as soon as possible be registered with the Secretariat and published by it.
2. No party to any such treaty or international agreement which has not been registered in accordance with the provisions of paragraph 1 of this Article may invoke that treaty or agreement before any organ of the United Nations.

Article 103

In the event of a conflict between the obligations of the Members of the United Nations under the present Charter and their obligations under any other international agreement, their obligations under the present Charter shall prevail.

Article 104

The Organization shall enjoy in the territory of each of its Members such legal capacity as may be necessary for the exercise of its functions and the fulfilment of its purposes.

Article 105

1. The Organization shall enjoy in the territory of each of its Members such privileges and immunities as are necessary for the fulfilment of its purposes.
2. Representatives of the Members of the United Nations and officials of the Organization shall similarly enjoy such privileges and immunities as are necessary for the independent exercise of their functions in connexion with the Organization.
3. The General Assembly may make recommendations with a view to determining the details of the application of paragraphs 1 and 2 of this Article or may propose conventions to the Members of the United Nations for this purpose.

Chapter XVII

TRANSITIONAL SECURITY ARRANGEMENTS

Article 106

Pending the coming into force of such special agreements referred to in Article 43 as in the opinion of the Security Council enable it to begin the exercise of its responsibilities under Article 42, the parties to the Four-Nation Declaration, signed at Moscow, 30 October 1943, and France, shall, in accordance with the provisions of paragraph 5 of that Declaration, consult with one another and as occasion requires with other Members of the United Nations with a view to such joint action on behalf of the Organization as may be necessary for the purpose of maintaining international peace and security.

Article 107

Nothing in the present Charter shall invalidate or preclude action, in relation to any state which during the Second World War has been an enemy of any signatory to the present Charter, taken or authorized as a result of that war by the Governments having responsibility for such action.

Chapter XVIII

AMENDMENTS

Article 108

Amendments to the present Charter shall come into force for all Members of the United Nations when they have been adopted by a vote of two thirds of the members of the General Assembly and ratified in accordance with their respective constitutional processes by two thirds of the Members of the United Nations, including all the permanent members of the Security Council.

Article 109¹

1. A General Conference of the Members of the United Nations for the purpose of reviewing the present Charter may be held at a date and place to be fixed by a two-thirds vote of the members of the General Assembly and by a vote of any nine members of the Security Council. Each Member of the United Nations shall have one vote in the conference.

2. Any alteration of the present Charter recommended by a two-thirds vote of the conference shall take effect when ratified in accordance with their respective constitutional processes by two thirds of the Members of the United Nations including all the permanent members of the Security Council.

3. If such a conference has not been held before the tenth annual session of the General Assembly following the coming into force of the present Charter, the proposal to call such a conference shall be placed on the agenda of that session of the General Assembly, and the conference shall be held if so decided by a majority vote of the members of the General Assembly and by a vote of any seven members of the Security Council.

Chapter XIX

RATIFICATION AND SIGNATURE

Article 110

1. The present Charter shall be ratified by the signatory states in accordance with their respective constitutional processes.

2. The ratifications shall be deposited with the Government of the United States of America, which shall notify all the signatory states of each deposit as well as the Secretary-General of the Organization when he has been appointed.

3. The present Charter shall come into force upon the deposit of ratifications by the Republic of China, France, the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland and the United States of America, and by a majority of the other signatory states. A protocol of the ratifications deposited shall thereupon be drawn up by the Government of the United States of America which shall communicate copies thereof to all the signatory states.

4. The states signatory to the present Charter which ratify it after it has come into force will become original Members of the United Nations on the date of the deposit of their respective ratifications.

Article 111

The present Charter, of which the Chinese, French, Russian, English, and Spanish texts are equally authentic, shall remain deposited in the archives of the Government of the United States of America. Duly certified copies thereof shall be transmitted by that Government to the Governments of the other signatory states.

IN FAITH WHEREOF the representatives of the Governments of the United Nations have signed the present Charter.

DONE at the city of San Francisco the twenty-sixth day of June, one thousand nine hundred and forty-five.

[1] Amended text of Article 23, which came into force on 31 August 1965.

(The text of Article 23 before it was amended read as follows:

1. The Security Council shall consist of eleven Members of the United Nations. The Republic of China, France, the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland and the United States of America shall be permanent members of the Security Council. The General Assembly shall elect six other Members of the United Nations to be non-permanent members of the Security Council, due regard being specially paid in the first instance to the contributions of Members of the United Nations to the maintenance of international peace and security and to the other purposes of the Organization, and also to equitable geographical distribution.

2. The non-permanent members of the Security Council shall be elected for a term of two years. In the first election of the non-permanent members, however, three shall be chosen for a term of one year. A retiring member shall not be eligible for immediate re-election.

3. Each member of the Security Council shall have one representative.)

[2] Amended text of Article 27, which came into force on 31 August 1965.

(The text of Article 27 before it was amended read as follows:

1. Each member of the Security Council shall have one vote.

2. Decisions of the Security Council on procedural matters shall be made by an affirmative vote of seven members.

3. Decisions of the Security Council on all other matters shall be made by an affirmative vote of seven members including the concurring votes of the permanent members; provided that, in decisions under Chapter VI, and under paragraph 3 of Article 52, a party to a dispute shall abstain from voting.)

[3] Amended text of Article 61, which came into force on 24 September 1973.

(The text of Article 61 as previously amended on 31 August 1965 read as follows:

1. The Economic and Social Council shall consist of twenty-seven Members of the United Nations elected by the General Assembly.

2. Subject to the provisions of paragraph 3, nine members of the Economic and Social Council shall be elected each year for a term of three years. A retiring member shall be eligible for immediate re-election.

3. At the first election after the increase in the membership of the Economic and Social Council from eighteen to twenty-seven members, in addition to the members elected in place of the six members whose term of office expires at the end of that year, nine additional members shall be elected. Of these nine additional members, the term of office of three members so elected shall expire at the end of one year, and of three other members at the end of two years, in accordance with arrangements made by the General Assembly.

4. Each member of the Economic and Social Council shall have one representative.)

[4] Amended text of Article 109, which came into force on 12 June 1968.

(The text of Article 109 before it was amended read as follows:

1. A General Conference of the Members of the United Nations for the purpose of reviewing the present Charter may be held at a date and place to be fixed by a two-thirds vote of the members of the General Assembly and by a vote of any seven members of the Security Council. Each Member of the United Nations shall have one vote in the conference.

2. Any alteration of the present Charter recommended by a two-thirds vote of the conference shall take effect when ratified in accordance with their respective constitutional processes by two thirds of the Members of the United Nations including all the permanent members of the Security Council.

3. If such a conference has not been held before the tenth annual session of the General Assembly following the coming into force of the present Charter, the proposal to call such a conference shall be placed on the agenda of that session of the General Assembly, and the conference shall be held if so decided by a majority vote of the members of the General Assembly and by a vote of any seven members of the Security Council.)

Statute of the International Court of Justice

Article 1

The International Court of Justice established by the Charter of the United Nations as the principal judicial organ of the United Nations shall be constituted and shall function in accordance with the provisions of the present Statute.

Chapter I

ORGANIZATION OF THE COURT

Article 2

The Court shall be composed of a body of independent judges, elected regardless of their nationality from among persons of high moral character, who possess the qualifications required in their respective countries for appointment to the highest judicial offices, or are jurisconsults of recognized competence in international law.

Article 3

1. The Court shall consist of fifteen members, no two of whom may be nationals of the same state.

2. A person who for the purposes of membership in the Court could be regarded as a national of more than one state shall be deemed to be a national of the one in which he ordinarily exercises civil and political rights.

Article 4

1. The members of the Court shall be elected by the General Assembly and by the Security Council from a list of persons nominated by the national groups in the Permanent Court of Arbitration, in accordance with the following provisions.

2. In the case of Members of the United Nations not represented in the Permanent Court of Arbitration, candidates shall be nominated by national groups appointed for this purpose by their governments under the same conditions as those prescribed for members of the Permanent Court of Arbitration by Article 44 of the Convention of The Hague of 1907 for the pacific settlement of international disputes.

3. The conditions under which a state which is a party to the present Statute but is not a Member of the United Nations may participate in electing the members of the Court shall, in the absence of a special agreement, be laid down by the General Assembly upon recommendation of the Security Council.

Article 5

1. At least three months before the date of the election, the Secretary-General of the United Nations shall address a written request to the members of the Permanent Court of Arbitration belonging to the states which are parties to the present Statute, and to the members of the national groups appointed under Article 4, paragraph 2, inviting them to undertake, within a given time, by national groups, the nomination of persons in a position to accept the duties of a member of the Court.

2. No group may nominate more than four persons, not more than two of whom shall be of their own nationality. In no case may the number of candidates nominated by a group be more than double the number of seats to be filled.

Article 6

Before making these nominations, each national group is recommended to consult its highest court of justice, its legal faculties and schools of law, and its national academies and national sections of international academies devoted to the study of law.

Article 7

1. The Secretary-General shall prepare a list in alphabetical order of all the persons thus nominated. Save as provided in Article 12, paragraph 2, these shall be the only persons eligible.

2. The Secretary-General shall submit this list to the General Assembly and to the Security Council.

Article 8

The General Assembly and the Security Council shall proceed independently of one another to elect the members of the Court.

Article 9

At every election, the electors shall bear in mind not only that the persons to be elected should individually possess the qualifications required, but also that in the body as a whole the representation of the main forms of civilization and of the principal legal systems of the world should be assured.

Article 10

1. Those candidates who obtain an absolute majority of votes in the General Assembly and in the Security Council shall be considered as elected.

2. Any vote of the Security Council, whether for the election of judges or for the appointment of members of the conference envisaged in Article 12, shall be taken without any distinction between permanent and non-permanent members of the Security Council.

3. In the event of more than one national of the same state obtaining an absolute majority of the votes both of the General Assembly and of the Security Council, the eldest of these only shall be considered as elected.

Article 11

If, after the first meeting held for the purpose of the election, one or more seats remain to be filled, a second and, if necessary, a third meeting shall take place.

Article 12

1. If, after the third meeting, one or more seats still remain unfilled, a joint conference consisting of six members, three appointed by the General Assembly and three by the Security Council, may be formed at any time at the request of either the General Assembly or the Security Council, for the purpose of choosing by the vote of an absolute majority one name for each seat still vacant, to submit to the General Assembly and the Security Council for their respective acceptance.

2. If the joint conference is unanimously agreed upon any person who fulfils the required conditions, he may be included in its list, even though he was not included in the list of nominations referred to in Article 7.

3. If the joint conference is satisfied that it will not be successful in procuring an election, those members of the Court who have already been elected shall, within a period to be fixed by the Security Council, proceed to fill the vacant seats by selection from among those candidates who have obtained votes either in the General Assembly or in the Security Council.

4. In the event of an equality of votes among the judges, the eldest judge shall have a casting vote.

Article 13

1. The members of the Court shall be elected for nine years and may be re-elected; provided, however, that of the judges elected at the first election, the terms of five judges shall expire at the end of three years and the terms of five more judges shall expire at the end of six years.

2. The judges whose terms are to expire at the end of the above-mentioned initial periods of three and six years shall be chosen by lot to be drawn by the Secretary-General immediately after the first election has been completed.

3. The members of the Court shall continue to discharge their duties until their places have been filled. Though replaced, they shall finish any cases which they may have begun.

4. In the case of the resignation of a member of the Court, the resignation shall be addressed to the President of the Court for transmission to the Secretary-General. This last notification makes the place vacant.

Article 14

Vacancies shall be filled by the same method as that laid down for the first election, subject to the following provision: the Secretary-General shall, within one month of the occurrence of the vacancy, proceed to issue the invitations provided for in Article 5, and the date of the election shall be fixed by the Security Council.

Article 15

A member of the Court elected to replace a member whose term of office has not expired shall hold office for the remainder of his predecessor's term.

Article 16

1. No member of the Court may exercise any political or administrative function, or engage in any other occupation of a professional nature.

2. Any doubt on this point shall be settled by the decision of the Court.

Article 17

1. No member of the Court may act as agent, counsel, or advocate in any case.

2. No member may participate in the decision of any case in which he has previously taken part as agent, counsel, or advocate for one of the parties, or as a member of a national or international court, or of a commission of enquiry, or in any other capacity.

3. Any doubt on this point shall be settled by the decision of the Court.

Article 18

1. No member of the Court can be dismissed unless, in the unanimous opinion of the other members, he has ceased to fulfil the required conditions.

2. Formal notification thereof shall be made to the Secretary-General by the Registrar.

3. This notification makes the place vacant.

Article 19

The members of the Court, when engaged on the business of the Court, shall enjoy diplomatic privileges and immunities.

Article 20

Every member of the Court shall, before taking up his duties, make a solemn declaration in open court that he will exercise his powers impartially and conscientiously.

Article 21

1. The Court shall elect its President and Vice-President for three years; they may be re-elected.

2. The Court shall appoint its Registrar and may provide for the appointment of such other officers as may be necessary.

Article 22

1. The seat of the Court shall be established at The Hague. This, however, shall not prevent the Court from sitting and exercising its functions elsewhere whenever the Court considers it desirable.

2. The President and the Registrar shall reside at the seat of the Court.

Article 23

1. The Court shall remain permanently in session, except during the judicial vacations, the dates and duration of which shall be fixed by the Court.

2. Members of the Court are entitled to periodic leave, the dates and duration of which shall be fixed by the Court, having in mind the distance between The Hague and the home of each judge.

3. Members of the Court shall be bound, unless they are on leave or prevented from attending by illness or other serious reasons duly explained to the President, to hold themselves permanently at the disposal of the Court.

Article 24

1. If, for some special reason, a member of the Court considers that he should not take part in the decision of a particular case, he shall so inform the President.

2. If the President considers that for some special reason one of the members of the Court should not sit in a particular case, he shall give him notice accordingly.

3. If in any such case the member of the Court and the President disagree, the matter shall be settled by the decision of the Court.

Article 25

1. The full Court shall sit except when it is expressly provided otherwise in the present Statute.

2. Subject to the condition that the number of judges available to constitute the Court is not thereby reduced below eleven, the Rules of the Court may provide for allowing one or more judges, according to circumstances and in rotation, to be dispensed from sitting.

3. A quorum of nine judges shall suffice to constitute the Court.

Article 26

1. The Court may from time to time form one or more chambers, composed of three or more judges as the Court may determine, for dealing with particular categories of cases; for example, labour cases and cases relating to transit and communications.

2. The Court may at any time form a chamber for dealing with a particular case. The number of judges to constitute such a chamber shall be determined by the Court with the approval of the parties.

3. Cases shall be heard and determined by the chambers provided for in this Article if the parties so request.

Article 27

A judgment given by any of the chambers provided for in Articles 26 and 29 shall be considered as rendered by the Court.

Article 28

The chambers provided for in Articles 26 and 29 may, with the consent of the parties, sit and exercise their functions elsewhere than at The Hague.

Article 29

With a view to the speedy dispatch of business, the Court shall form annually a chamber composed of five judges which, at the request of the parties, may hear and determine cases by summary procedure. In addition, two judges shall be selected for the purpose of replacing judges who find it impossible to sit.

Article 30

1. The Court shall frame rules for carrying out its functions. In particular, it shall lay down rules of procedure.

2. The Rules of the Court may provide for assessors to sit with the Court or with any of its chambers, without the right to vote.

Article 31

1. Judges of the nationality of each of the parties shall retain their right to sit in the case before the Court.

2. If the Court includes upon the Bench a judge of the nationality of one of the parties, any other party may choose a person to sit as judge. Such person shall be chosen preferably from among those persons who have been nominated as candidates as provided in Articles 4 and 5.

3. If the Court includes upon the Bench no judge of the nationality of the parties, each of these parties may proceed to choose a judge as provided in paragraph 2 of this Article.

4. The provisions of this Article shall apply to the case of Articles 26 and 29. In such cases, the President shall request one or, if necessary, two of the members of the Court forming the chamber to give place to the members of the Court of the nationality of the parties concerned, and, failing such, or if they are unable to be present, to the judges specially chosen by the parties.

5. Should there be several parties in the same interest, they shall, for the purpose of the preceding provisions, be reckoned as one party only. Any doubt upon this point shall be settled by the decision of the Court.

6. Judges chosen as laid down in paragraphs 2, 3 and 4 of this Article shall fulfil the conditions required by Articles 2, 17 (paragraph 2), 20, and 24 of the present Statute. They shall take part in the decision on terms of complete equality with their colleagues.

Article 32

1. Each member of the Court shall receive an annual salary.
2. The President shall receive a special annual allowance.
3. The Vice-President shall receive a special allowance for every day on which he acts as President.

4. The judges chosen under Article 31, other than members of the Court, shall receive compensation for each day on which they exercise their functions.

5. These salaries, allowances, and compensation shall be fixed by the General Assembly. They may not be decreased during the term of office.

6. The salary of the Registrar shall be fixed by the General Assembly on the proposal of the Court.

7. Regulations made by the General Assembly shall fix the conditions under which retirement pensions may be given to members of the Court and to the Registrar, and the conditions under which members of the Court and the Registrar shall have their travelling expenses refunded.

8. The above salaries, allowances, and compensation shall be free of all taxation.

Article 33

The expenses of the Court shall be borne by the United Nations in such a manner as shall be decided by the General Assembly.

Chapter II

COMPETENCE OF THE COURT

Article 34

1. Only states may be parties in cases before the Court.
2. The Court, subject to and in conformity with its Rules, may request of public international organizations information relevant to cases before it, and shall receive such information presented by such organizations on their own initiative.

3. Whenever the construction of the constituent instrument of a public international organization or of an international convention adopted thereunder is in question in a case before the Court, the Registrar shall so notify the public international organization concerned and shall communicate to it copies of all the written proceedings.

Article 35

1. The Court shall be open to the states parties to the present Statute.

2. The conditions under which the Court shall be open to other states shall, subject to the special provisions contained in treaties in force, be laid down by the Security Council, but in no case shall such conditions place the parties in a position of inequality before the Court.

3. When a state which is not a Member of the United Nations is a party to a case, the Court shall fix the amount which that party is to contribute towards the expenses of the Court. This provision shall not apply if such state is bearing a share of the expenses of the Court.

Article 36

1. The jurisdiction of the Court comprises all cases which the parties refer to it and all matters specially provided for in the Charter of the United Nations or in treaties and conventions in force.

2. The states parties to the present Statute may at any time declare that they recognize as compulsory ipso facto and without special agreement, in relation to any other state accepting the same obligation, the jurisdiction of the Court in all legal disputes concerning:

- a. the interpretation of a treaty;
- b. any question of international law;
- c. the existence of any fact which, if established, would constitute a breach of an international obligation;
- d. the nature or extent of the reparation to be made for the breach of an international obligation.

3. The declarations referred to above may be made unconditionally or on condition of reciprocity on the part of several or certain states, or for a certain time.

4. Such declarations shall be deposited with the Secretary-General of the United Nations, who shall transmit copies thereof to the parties to the Statute and to the Registrar of the Court.

5. Declarations made under Article 36 of the Statute of the Permanent Court of International Justice and which are still in force shall be deemed, as between the parties to the present Statute, to be acceptances of the compulsory jurisdiction of the International Court of Justice for the period which they still have to run and in accordance with their terms.

6. In the event of a dispute as to whether the Court has jurisdiction, the matter shall be settled by the decision of the Court.

Article 37

Whenever a treaty or convention in force provides for reference of a matter to a tribunal to have been instituted by the League of Nations, or to the Permanent Court of International Justice, the matter shall, as between the parties to the present Statute, be referred to the International Court of Justice.

Article 38

1. The Court, whose function is to decide in accordance with international law such disputes as are submitted to it, shall apply:

- a. international conventions, whether general or particular, establishing rules expressly recognized by the contesting states;
- b. international custom, as evidence of a general practice accepted as law;
- c. the general principles of law recognized by civilized nations;
- d. subject to the provisions of Article 59, judicial decisions and the teachings of the most highly qualified publicists of the various nations, as subsidiary means for the determination of rules of law.

2. This provision shall not prejudice the power of the Court to decide a case ex aequo et bono, if the parties agree thereto.

Chapter III
PROCEDURE

Article 39

1. The official languages of the Court shall be French and English. If the parties agree that the case shall be conducted in French, the judgment shall be delivered in French. If the parties agree that the case shall be conducted in English, the judgment shall be delivered in English.

2. In the absence of an agreement as to which language shall be employed, each party may, in the pleadings, use the language which it prefers; the decision of the Court shall be given in French and English. In this case the Court shall at the same time determine which of the two texts shall be considered as authoritative.

3. The Court shall, at the request of any party, authorize a language other than French or English to be used by that party.

Article 40

1. Cases are brought before the Court, as the case may be, either by the notification of the special agreement or by a written application addressed to the Registrar. In either case the subject of the dispute and the parties shall be indicated.

2. The Registrar shall forthwith communicate the application to all concerned.

3. He shall also notify the Members of the United Nations through the Secretary-General, and also any other states entitled to appear before the Court.

Article 41

1. The Court shall have the power to indicate, if it considers that circumstances so require, any provisional measures which ought to be taken to preserve the respective rights of either party.

2. Pending the final decision, notice of the measures suggested shall forthwith be given to the parties and to the Security Council.

Article 42

1. The parties shall be represented by agents.
2. They may have the assistance of counsel or advocates before the Court.
3. The agents, counsel, and advocates of parties before the Court shall enjoy the privileges and immunities necessary to the independent exercise of their duties.

Article 43

1. The procedure shall consist of two parts: written and oral.

2. The written proceedings shall consist of the communication to the Court and to the parties of memorials, counter-memorials and, if necessary, replies; also all papers and documents in support.

3. These communications shall be made through the Registrar, in the order and within the time fixed by the Court.

4. A certified copy of every document produced by one party shall be communicated to the other party.

5. The oral proceedings shall consist of the hearing by the Court of witnesses, experts, agents, counsel, and advocates.

Article 44

1. For the service of all notices upon persons other than the agents, counsel, and advocates, the Court shall apply direct to the government of the state upon whose territory the notice has to be served.

2. The same provision shall apply whenever steps are to be taken to procure evidence on the spot.

Article 45

The hearing shall be under the control of the President or, if he is unable to preside, of the Vice-President; if neither is able to preside, the senior judge present shall preside.

Article 46

The hearing in Court shall be public, unless the Court shall decide otherwise, or unless the parties demand that the public be not admitted.

Article 47

1. Minutes shall be made at each hearing and signed by the Registrar and the President.

2. These minutes alone shall be authentic.

Article 48

The Court shall make orders for the conduct of the case, shall decide the form and time in which each party must conclude its arguments, and make all arrangements connected with the taking of evidence.

Article 49

The Court may, even before the hearing begins, call upon the agents to produce any document or to supply any explanations. Formal note shall be taken of any refusal.

Article 50

The Court may, at any time, entrust any individual, body, bureau, commission, or other organization that it may select, with the task of carrying out an enquiry or giving an expert opinion.

Article 51

During the hearing any relevant questions are to be put to the witnesses and experts under the conditions laid down by the Court in the rules of procedure referred to in Article 30.

Article 52

After the Court has received the proofs and evidence within the time specified for the purpose, it may refuse to accept any further oral or written evidence that one party may desire to present unless the other side consents.

Article 53

1. Whenever one of the parties does not appear before the Court, or fails to defend its case, the other party may call upon the Court to decide in favour of its claim.

2. The Court must, before doing so, satisfy itself, not only that it has jurisdiction in accordance with Articles 36 and 37, but also that the claim is well founded in fact and law.

Article 54

1. When, subject to the control of the Court, the agents, counsel, and advocates have completed their presentation of the case, the President shall declare the hearing closed.

2. The Court shall withdraw to consider the judgment.
3. The deliberations of the Court shall take place in private and remain secret.

Article 55

1. All questions shall be decided by a majority of the judges present.
2. In the event of an equality of votes, the President or the judge who acts in his place shall have a casting vote.

Article 56

1. The judgment shall state the reasons on which it is based.
2. It shall contain the names of the judges who have taken part in the decision.

Article 57

If the judgment does not represent in whole or in part the unanimous opinion of the judges, any judge shall be entitled to deliver a separate opinion.

Article 58

The judgment shall be signed by the President and by the Registrar. It shall be read in open court, due notice having been given to the agents.

Article 59

The decision of the Court has no binding force except between the parties and in respect of that particular case.

Article 60

The judgment is final and without appeal. In the event of dispute as to the meaning or scope of the judgment, the Court shall construe it upon the request of any party.

Article 61

1. An application for revision of a judgment may be made only when it is based upon the discovery of some fact of such a nature as to be a decisive factor, which fact was, when the judgment was given, unknown to the Court and also the party claiming revision, always provided that such ignorance was not due to negligence.
2. The proceedings for revision shall be opened by a judgment of the Court expressly recording the existence of the new fact, recognizing that it has such a character as to lay the case open to revision, and declaring the application admissible on this ground.
3. The Court may require previous compliance with the terms of the judgment before it admits proceedings in revision.
4. The application for revision must be made at latest within six months of the discovery of the new fact.
5. No application for revision may be made after the lapse of ten years from the date of the judgment.

Article 62

1. Should a state consider that it has an interest of a legal nature which may be affected by the decision in the case, it may submit a request to the Court to be permitted to intervene.
2. It shall be for the Court to decide upon this request.

Article 63

1. Whenever the construction of a convention to which states other than those concerned in the case are parties is in question, the Registrar shall notify all such states forthwith.
2. Every state so notified has the right to intervene in the proceedings; but if it uses this right, the construction given by the judgment will be equally binding upon it.

Article 64

Unless otherwise decided by the Court, each party shall bear its own costs.

Chapter IV

ADVISORY OPINIONS

Article 65

1. The Court may give an advisory opinion on any legal question at the request of whatever body may be authorized by or in accordance with the Charter of the United Nations to make such a request.
2. Questions upon which the advisory opinion of the Court is asked shall be laid before the Court by means of a written request containing an exact statement of the question upon which an opinion is required, and accompanied by all documents likely to throw light upon the question.

Article 66

1. The Registrar shall forthwith give notice of the request for an advisory opinion to all states entitled to appear before the Court.
2. The Registrar shall also, by means of a special and direct communication, notify any state entitled to appear before the Court or international organization considered by the Court, or, should it not be sitting, by the President, as likely to be able to furnish information on the question, that the Court will be prepared to receive, within a time limit to be fixed by the President, written statements, or to hear, at a public sitting to be held for the purpose, oral statements relating to the question.
3. Should any such state entitled to appear before the Court have failed to receive the special communication referred to in paragraph 2 of this Article, such state may express a desire to submit a written statement or to be heard; and the Court will decide.
4. States and organizations having presented written or oral statements or both shall be permitted to comment on the statements made by other states or organizations in the form, to the extent, and within the time limits which the Court, or, should it not be sitting, the President, shall decide in each particular case. Accordingly, the Registrar shall in due time communicate any such written statements to states and organizations having submitted similar statements.

Article 67

The Court shall deliver its advisory opinions in open court, notice having been given to the Secretary-General and to the representatives of Members of the United Nations, of other states and of international organizations immediately concerned.

Article 68

In the exercise of its advisory functions the Court shall further be guided by the provisions of the present Statute which apply in contentious cases to the extent to which it recognizes them to be applicable.

Chapter V

AMENDMENT

Article 69

Amendments to the present Statute shall be effected by the same procedure as is provided by the Charter of the United Nations for amendments to that Charter, subject however to any provisions which the General Assembly upon recommendation of the Security Council may adopt concerning the participation of states which are parties to the present Statute but are not Members of the United Nations.

Article 70

The Court shall have power to propose such amendments to the present Statute as it may deem necessary, through written communications to the Secretary-General, for consideration in conformity with the provisions of Article 69.

Indexes

USING THE SUBJECT INDEX

To assist the researcher in reading and searching the Yearbook index, three typefaces have been employed.

ALL BOLD CAPITAL LETTERS are used for major subject entries, including chapter topics (e.g., DEVELOPMENT, DISARMAMENT), as well as country names (e.g., TAJIKISTAN), region names (e.g., AFRICA) and principal UN organs (e.g., GENERAL ASSEMBLY).

CAPITAL LETTERS are used to highlight major sub-topics (e.g., POVERTY), territories (e.g., MONTSERRAT), subregions (e.g., CENTRAL AMERICA) and official names of specialized agencies (e.g., UNIVERSAL POSTAL UNION) and regional commissions (e.g., ECONOMIC COMMISSION FOR EUROPE).

Regular body text is used for single entries and cross-reference entries, e.g., armed conflict, mercenaries, terrorism.

1—An asterisk (*) next to a page number indicates the presence of a text (reproduced in full) of General Assembly, Security Council or Economic and Social Council resolutions and decisions, or Security Council presidential statements.

2—Entries, which are heavily cross-referenced, appear under key substantive words, as well as under the first word of official titles.

3—United Nations bodies are listed under major subject entries and alphabetically.
