The resolution provides for the Council to examine before February 2007 two reports which will contain recommendations on measures to address the illegal exploitation of national resources and the humanitarian impact that the application of such measures may have. Resolution 1698 (2006) also authorizes the sanctions committee to impose the personal sanctions referred to in resolution 1596 (2005) on individuals in the Democratic Republic of the Congo who recruit or employ children in situations of armed conflict in violation of applicable international law and who commit serious violations of international law involving the targeting of children in situations of armed conflict.
