1. CANADIAN RACE RELATIONS FOUNDATION (CRRF)

Special Consultative Status granted in 2002

PART 1. Introduction

The Canadian Race Relations Foundation (CRRF) is a national organization that is committed to building a national framework for the fight against racism and all forms of racial discrimination in Canadian society.

The organization was established as one part of the 1988 Japanese Canadian Redress Agreement between the Government of Canada and Japanese Canadians, to work at the forefront of efforts to combat racism and all forms of racial discrimination in Canada. Under the terms of the agreement, the CRRF received a one-time endowment of $24 million. The CRRF is a registered charitable organization and operates on income derived from investments and donations.

The CRRF carries out its mandate through five key areas of activities:

1. Contract Research Program which funds and publishes research reports on contemporary issues of racism in Canada;
2. Initiatives Against Racism Program which funds community initiatives to raise awareness and combat racism;
3. Awards of Excellence Program which acknowledges outstanding initiatives in anti-racism work throughout Canada. This program is complemented by a symposium to share information and facilitate networking among organizations and agencies involved in anti-racism work;
4. Publications and Clearinghouse on racism and anti-racism(which includes newsletters, "Facts About Series"; annotated bibliographies in the Critical Reading series and the research journal "Directions", among others)
5. Education and Training - workshops, seminars and conferences convened across the country to enhance education in both public and private institutions, and promote awareness of anti-racism issues.

Since its inception the CRRF has undertaken various roles and leadership in the fight to eliminate racism both in Canada and within the international context in areas such as education, policing, promoting dialogue among communities, contributing to evolving knowledge and understanding on the impact of racism.

While the aims of the CRRF remains the same, in the last 2 years of this reporting period, the Foundation has concretely integrated policy development as one of its core activities.

PART II. Contribution of the CRRF to the work of the United Nations

Through its consultative status, the CRRF has contributed to the work of the United Nations through its participation in various United Nations meetings and domestic meeting related to United Nations work. Its new status has also contributed to enhancing the CRRF's work and impact in the development, promotion and dissemination of knowledge and information, domestically. It has also strengthened the CRRF's role as a catalyst and leader in advancing anti-racism discourse and practice in Canada, and contributing to Canada's voice and leadership in the international context. The following information will provide a description of the activities that the CRRF has undertaken during its first four-year period since obtaining its special consultative status with the United Nations.

i). Participation in the work of the Economic and Social Council and its subsidiary bodies and/or major conference and other United Nations meetings.

Geneva, Switzerland, 5 – 6 August, 2002, 61st Session of Committee on the Elimination of Racial Discrimination (CERD). The CRRF attended and presented its paper, “Brief to the Committee on the Elimination of Racial Discrimination Further to Canada's 13th and 14th Reports to CERD” highlighting some of the critical areas of concerns about racism in Canada. The CRRF reported to its constituencies, on its participation, through its newsletter publication, “Perspectives”. Approximately, five thousand (5000) copies of the newsletter were published and circulated in each of Canada's 10 provinces and 3 territories. The organization's Annual Report for 2002 -2003, was tabled in the House of Commons.

1. New York, United States of America, 1- 12, March, 2004, Forty-Eighth Session, of the Commission on the Status of Women, Representative attended the meetings.
2. Geneva, Switzerland, 60th Session, Commission on Human Rights, 15 March – 23 April, 2004. Representative attended the meetings.

ii). Cooperation with United Nations Bodies and/or specialized agencies in the field and/or at Headquarters Technical Assistance to the United Nations Special Rapporteur on Racism on his Mission to Canada, September, 2003. The CRRF was invited by the Secretariat of the United Nations Commission on Human Rights to act as interlocutor for civil society for the visit to Canada by the United Nations Special Rapporteur on Racism. The CRRF played an integral role in facilitating and coordinating regional meetings between the Special Rapporteur and the Canadian civil society from across the country. Meetings held in the following five cities across Canada: Halifax, Montreal, Ottawa, Toronto and Regina.

Through these meetings, the Special Rapporteur consulted with over 200 organizations/community representatives and individuals reflecting Canada's diverse population and communities. The groups and individuals articulated to the Special Rapporteur the historical and contemporary manifestations of racism in Canada.

In April 2005, the CRRF announced, through its On-line Bulletin, the release of the report of the United Nations Special Rapporteur on the Situation of Human Rights and Fundamental Freedoms of Indigenous People, on his mission to Canada.

iii) Initiatives undertaken by the organization in support of internationally agreed development goals, in particular the Millennium Development Goals, which now form the basis of the global agenda for the 21st Century.

The limited budget of the CRRF makes it difficult for the organization to attend and actively participate at other major conferences and meetings of the Economic and Social Council. As well, the CRRF has focused more heavily on the domestic scene and the implementation of initiatives to broaden public awareness on Global Principles, specifically relating to the Durban Declaration and Program of Action.

iv). Activities in Support of Global Principles

Edmonton, Canada, 24 -27, October, 2002, CRRF Symposium - “Strengthening the Agenda Against Racism in Canada”. The CRRF organized this domestic symposium as a follow-up to the World Conference Against Racism, Racial Discrimination, Xenophobia and Related Intolerance, Durban, South Africa, 31 August – 7 September 2001. The Symposium brought together non-governmental and government representatives to dialogue on the outcomes of the Durban process and to determine a set of “priorities for action” towards establishing a domestic agenda against racism in Canada, based on the Declaration and Program of Action of the World Conference. The recommendation from the Symposium formed the “priorities for action”. This was compiled and submitted to the federal government under the theme of the Symposium, “Strengthening the Agenda Against Racism in Canada”.

Toronto, Canada, 12 July, 2005, “Consultation on Canada’s Action Plan Against Racism”. The CRRF convened a consultation between the Canadian Government and Non-Governmental Organizations (NGOs), on the national action plan against racism developed by the federal government, titled, “A Canada For All”. The process provided an opportunity for the government representatives to dialogue with NGOs on the Plan and the implications for Canadians. As well, NGOs had the opportunity to respond to the Plan and the provisions therein.

2. ICLEI—LOCAL GOVERNMENTS FOR SUSTAINABILITY

ECOSOC Special Consultative Status granted in 2002

Part I. Introduction

ICLEI—Local Governments for Sustainability is an international association of local governments and national and regional local government organisations that have made a commitment to sustainable development.

ICLEI’s mission is to build and serve a worldwide movement of local governments to achieve tangible improvements in global sustainability with special focus on environmental conditions. Through international campaigns and programmes and a variety of thematic and regional networks, ICLEI fosters a movement of local governments to accelerate sustainable development. ICLEI’s performance-based, results-oriented campaigns and programs provide local governments with resources, training and professional support.

ICLEI serves as an advocate for its Members before national and international bodies such as the United Nations to increase understanding of and support for local initiatives. It also builds partnerships with other organisations that support such activities. Moreover, ICLEI fulfils the role of an information clearinghouse and provides policy guidance, training, technical assistance and consultancy services to increase local governments’ capacity to address global challenges.

In 2004, ICLEI, previously the International Council for Local Environmental Initiatives, changed its name to “ICLEI – Local Governments for Sustainability”. The new name reflects ICLEI’s widened scope of activities which pertain to sustainability in a broader sense, and no longer limits the organization to simply environmental protection.

ICLEI Membership

More than 480 cities, towns, counties, and their associations worldwide comprise ICLEI's growing membership. In the period 2002-2005, ICLEI membership increased from 426 to 482 Members. ICLEI's regional presence is now ensured with the World Secretariat in Toronto, Canada, six regional secretariats, four country offices, and an international training centre.

In the period 2002-2005, ICLEI coordinated delegations of local government leaders to numerous United Nations events and conferences, such as the Commission for Sustainable Development (CSD) and United Nations Framework Convention on Climate Change (UNFCCC) annual sessions and UN-HABITAT conferences.

- United Nations World Summit on Sustainable Development (WSSD), 26 August - 4 September 2002, Johannesburg, South Africa

In 2002, ICLEI played a major role in the UN World Summit on Sustainable Development (WSSD) by facilitating the involvement of local government in the planning and implementation of this event. In parallel to the WSSD, ICLEI organised the World Summit Local Government Session (27-30 August, 2002). The event allowed municipalities to convey their expectations and positions to the Summit delegates. The event was organized by ICLEI in conjunction with 39 partner organizations including local government associations and United Nations agencies. It assembled more than 900 participants from 69 countries. In a statement entitled "The Johannesburg Call", local governments called for a shift from agenda to action. They endorsed Local Action 21, the new action-oriented phase of Local Agenda 21 (LA21), as a motto, mandate, and movement for advancing sustainability at the local level.

- Goal 3 – Promote Gender Equality

In 2005 IIC implemented project “Women Leadership” – cycle of seminars in rural areas of Russia to help local women (100 participants) to take part in the upcoming elections to the local councils. Special training manuals (150 copies) with the special chapter, devoted to the activities of the United Nations Commission on the Status of Women were published and distributed among activists, mass-media, administration, and sent to local libraries. Project was implemented with the financial support of the Royal Netherlands Embassy in Moscow.

- Goal 7 – Ensure Environmental Sustainability

In 2003, 2004 and 2005 IIC organized Children's Art Competition in the regions of the Russian Federation and engaged participation of more than 300 children in connection with the UNICEF-supported International Children's Art Competition in Environmental Protection, held in Tokyo, Japan. During the reporting period, 2002-2005, more than 100 magazines, guidelines, compendiums, newsletters, and brochures were distributed on business and education related issues.

4. THE INTERNATIONAL WOMEN'S WRITING GUILD – IWWGSpecial Consultative Status granted in 1998

Part I-i. Aims and purposes of the organization. Founded in 1976, the IWWG is a network for the personal and professional empowerment of women through writing and is open to all regardless of portfolio. Since its inception, the IWWG has advocated the practice of personal writing as a generic process through which women can access their human potential as an individual and participate in advancements made by the women's movement without becoming politicized. The IWWG has established a remarkable record of achievement in the publishing world, as well as in circles where lifelong learning and personal transformation are valued for their own sake.

Outwardly, the IWWG addresses the business of writing—its craft, styles and genres; and its marketplace. Yet from the start, the IWWG proposed writing from personal experience as beginning a transformational process for each individual. Everyone in the IWWG begins with personal writing such as the journal, the memoir and the autobiography; a practice that develops writers but more importantly furthers personal growth, transformation and an authentic voice. The act of writing brings structure to each individual's process of development. The basic functional units of the IWWG process are Kitchen Tables (local writing groups) and nearly 150 Regional Representatives (the primary resources for contact who facilitate events in their region [list on request]). In local Kitchen Tables, women gather to share their journal writing and, through listening, support one another's right to speak. This creates bonding and community based on shared experience where writing is a tool of growth, not a goal-driven end product.

The implementation of the IWWG's main course of action—individual writing witnessed by others who support the process of bringing forth one's developing voice—is flexible and diverse. The organization expresses this course of action in local gatherings as well as at least eight regional events throughout the United States, which are open to the public as well as to the organization's membership. The gatherings called, "Meet the Agents"- open houses held twice yearly in New York City - have fostered partnerships leading to the publication of hundreds of books. The IWWG's annual, weeklong summer writing conference, attended by some 500 women, is held at Skidmore College in Saratoga Springs, New York. All members receive IWWG's bimonthly 32-page Network Journal, which covers environmental and health-related issues; includes information on events, local writing groups, publications by members; and hundreds of contests, awards and publication opportunities, as well a listing of literary agents and independent small printing presses. Special projects include the Prison Project, in which members correspond with female inmates and/or conduct writing workshops in prisons. The IWWG's archival home is the Sophia Smith Collection, the foremost women's history collection at Smith College in Northampton, Massachusetts.

ii. Change leading to significant impact on IWWG. In 2005, a significant geographic expansion of the organization's membership occurred when the IWWG co-sponsored the IWWG/Geneva Conference with the Geneva Writer's Group (1-2 October, 2005, Geneva, Switzerland). While the IWWG's broad aims and objectives as well as the nature of its activities have remained the same, the Geneva conference resulted in 45 new and renewed international members for the organization and this has expanded its membership to a total of 33 countries [list on request]. In 10 countries, members have become IWWG regional representatives [list on request]. This expansion provides the IWWG with increased opportunity to cooperate synergistically with Non-governmental Organizations based outside of the United States, supporting the personal and professional development of those who work within Non-governmental Organizations as well as members of the populations they serve.

Part II-i. Contribution of the IWWG to the work of the United Nations. The credo of the Millennium Campaign, "Only With Your Voice," states the need for all individuals to raise their voices on behalf of those without the opportunity or freedom to speak. Strengthening the public voices of those already in societies allowing the freedom of speech is a direct function of the IWWG. In addition, the organization's unique capacity as a grassroots organization to support the first steps of expression for women whose homes, communities or nations may have limited their voices is of incalculable value in the global landscape.

Thus, the organization has one of all-inclusive, humanitarian focus that supports the work of the United Nations as stated in Article 55 of its Charter: ". . . the United Nations shall promote: . . . universal respect for, and observance of, human rights and fundamental freedoms for all without distinction as to race, sex, language, or religion"; and in Article 62 of the Charter: "The Economic and Social Council may . . . make recommendations for the purpose of promoting respect for, and observance of, human rights and fundamental freedoms for all."

The IWWG is funded entirely through members' modest dues, and its events are staffed by volunteers. Prior to 2005, the organization did not have a representative committed to consistently attending conferences and special events at United Nations Headquarters in New York City or in Geneva. During the years 2002-2005, the organization continued to expand its membership base through its main action of supporting the personal and professional empowerment of women through the structure of writing and by hosting local and regional events throughout the United States.

Participating in the work of the Economic and Social Council and its subsidiary bodies in 2005, the organization gained a volunteer representative in New York City who attended the following conferences and events, all at United Nations Headquarters, New York:

The Beijing +10 Conference: Forty-ninth session of the Commission on the Status of Women (28 February-11 March); ceremony to launch the “Water for Life” Decade (22 March); the 4th Session of the Permanent Forum on Indigenous Issues (16-27 May); the International Day of the World's Indigenous People (9 August) and the 58th Annual DPI/NGO Conference (7-9 September). The organization’s representative is a member of the Working Group for the Second Decade of Indigenous Peoples, a Non-governmental Organizations Committee that meets monthly.

For the 4th Session of the Permanent Forum on Indigenous Issues (New York, United Nations Headquarters, 16-27 May 2005), the IWWG’s representative was a key facilitator for the participation of the Hopi Nation delegation from Arizona. Among Native Americans and indigenous peoples worldwide, the Hopi spiritual tradition is respected for its prayers for the well-being of all mankind; and for its primary goal—the attainment of peace among all peoples. A spiritual leader of the Hopi Nation and member of the 2005 Hopi delegation offered the prayer that opened the 4th Session of the Permanent Forum on Indigenous Issues on 16 May 2005.

The organization’s representative summarized the 2005 United Nations conferences she attended in the final issue for 2005 of Network Journal, the organization’s membership magazine, and the full-length report was posted on the IWWG’s website: www.iwwg.org.

The special nature of the organization’s structure and its main course of action, which supports the personal and professional empowerment of women through writing, do not foster direct participation in intergovernmental work. Rather, the humanitarian focus of the IWWG nourishes the development of each individual’s voice. Within the United Nations and NGOs, work is accomplished through the written and the spoken word, and the development of each voice supports a fuller contribution and greater professional efficacy. Ongoing implementation of the Beijing Declaration and Platform for Action and the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women is indivisible from the necessity to strengthen women’s voices individually and collectively. Increased participation of women in all sectors is inherent for the achievement of the Millennium Development Goals. Women’s participation in any development process is limited or enhanced in direct proportion to their expression. This requires an internal strengthening of their voice prior to external communication and contribution. Through the recent international expansion of the IWWG membership, the organization anticipates greater opportunities for exposure of its strength as a resource of support and development for United Nations and NGO personnel, and through increased activity within the United Nations system, for reaching women in the populations served by NGOs and United Nations programs.
