I. Situation analysis

1. Colombia, a middle-income country, has made significant progress in recent years in terms of public safety, social investment and economic stability. Its achievements are reflected in greater State control of the national territory, the individual and collective demobilization of 43,000 members of illegal armed groups, increased funding for social investment and a strong economic recovery process with a growth rate of 6.87 per cent in 2006.

2. These results still offer significant challenges. Forms of inequity and exclusion permeate national life. Overall, it will be possible to reach the Millennium Development Goals, one reason being that they are included in the commitments of the national development plan for 2006-2010. The challenge, however, lies in bridging the gaps between social groups, regions, ethnicities and genders, as well as between rural and urban areas. For example, according to Colombia's report on the Millennium Development Goals,¹ 7 per cent of the population of Bogotá lived below the poverty line in 2004, while the figure for Chocó was 42 per cent.

3. Particular mention should be made of the Government's commitment to achieving the Millennium Development Goals earlier than 2015, if possible, and to implementing the proposals of the Poverty Mission, which was supported by UNDP. Between 2000 and 2006 poverty indicators were reduced from 56 per cent to 45.1 per cent, and the goal was to reach 39 per cent by the end of the current presidential term (2010). The Government plans to lift 1.6 million families out of extreme poverty in four years, a strategy that is benefiting the poorest of the poor, those displaced by the violence caused by the conflict with illegal armed groups. The free trade agreements with Central American countries, Chile and the United States that are in the process of being approved offer challenges in view of the need to strengthen productive capacities and adapt them to the new conditions for international integration.

4. As for democratic governance, the priority is still to balance the varying situations in the national territory, which are apparent in the contrast between the advanced institutional framework in some cities and the very fragile institutions in regions that are strongly affected by the violence, which makes local governments vulnerable to take-over by illegal groups.

5. Colombia will have to overcome the internal violence generated by the conflict with illegal armed groups and its consequences, including violations of human rights and international humanitarian law. Drug trafficking, terrorist activities and organized crime are a hindrance to democratic institutions and an obstacle to socio-economic development. There is concern about the reinsertion process and about the need for sustainable national reconciliation. Drug trafficking weakens the entire democratic system by undermining confidence in the State, the justice system, culture, citizen participation, administrative transparency and the exercise of politics.

II. Past cooperation and lessons learned

6. During the 2002-2006 period, UNDP cooperation covered three areas: democratic governance, social development and poverty reduction/environment; and reduction in the incidence of complex emergencies. In order to give value added to its projects, and in order to complement governmental and territorial measures, the UNDP Office collaborated with authorities, civil society entities and international cooperation agencies in national capacity-building. The goal was to promote policies and projects that would help to consolidate human development, support coexistence and ensure the protection of human rights.

7. The Assessment of Development Results conducted between July and August 2006, which is reflected in the report submitted in January 2007, was essentially used to guide and clarify the new Programme. The analysis suggests that support be given to national- and local-government initiatives to achieve the Millennium Development Goals, proposals for public policies based on the Human Development Reports, enhanced coordination of international cooperation and establishment of links between the Government, international cooperation agencies and civil-society organizations, especially through the Intergovernmental Group of Twenty-four on International Monetary Affairs and Development. Support was provided for initiatives to disseminate knowledge and policy impact strategies by establishing alliances with the media. Initiatives such as the Reconciliation and Development Programme (REDES) contributed methodologies to encourage local reconciliation and development processes in collaboration with donors and national entities. Efforts were made to develop strategies for local and regional intervention to contribute to achieving the Millennium Development Goals, local development, democratic governance and the reconciliation debate.

8. The Assessment pointed to a number of problems, including the need to adopt a risk assessment culture and practice, carry out impact assessment and clarify the value added. On the basis of the lessons learned, the UNDP Office will focus its attention for the 2008-2012 cycle on projects and programmes that benefit the most vulnerable and disadvantaged groups in Colombia, such as displaced, indigenous and Afro-Colombian populations, and women. The new programming process will take the Millennium Development Goals as the strategic axes for cooperation in order to achieve substantive inputs and will be coordinated with the Government's strategic programme and with agencies of the United Nations system.

III. Proposed programme

9. The Programme for the new cycle takes the national development plan as its starting point and is part of the Government's international cooperation strategy for 2007-2010. The general guidelines for the work of the UNDP Office and the extent of the cooperation programme will depend on the legal framework, which is currently being considered and which will determine whether multilateral organizations can cover the costs of State-funded projects and programmes.

10. The UNDP Office follows the criteria of the Paris Declaration on Aid Effectiveness in its cooperation efforts and supports the following basic principles: coordination and alignment of cooperation, South-South cooperation, national capacity-building and country ownership of projects and programmes. It places its convening authority at the disposal of the country in order to promote initiatives and mobilize resources, as well as to design and implement inclusive public policies, and to provide coordination between the local and national levels.

11. As development can only be the result of joint action spearheaded by the Government, the UNDP Office will work in a coordinated manner with the agencies of the United Nations system, especially on issues such as the Millennium Development Goals, the strengthening of territorial institutions and actions relating to electoral matters. It will also channel emergency response work towards sustainable development solutions.

12. The main criteria for intervention are: (a) a human-rights perspective that strengthens national and territorial capacities for applying the relevant principles and practices. Efforts will be made to foster gender equity and special attention will be given to vulnerable and disadvantaged groups, by applying cross-cutting strategies and including them in territorial programmes, especially those related to the Millennium Development Goals, work with victims and economic development; (b) a local perspective, to generate participatory processes, social inclusion and mechanisms for territorial development which are coordinated with national public policies in the context of their legal purviews. In this connection, the UNDP Office will provide technical cooperation in the thematic areas indicated below.

A. Poverty reduction, the Millennium Development Goals and sustainable development

13. The UNDP Office will operate at two levels in order to contribute to poverty reduction and to address sectoral gaps. The first level consists of support for disadvantaged social groups and development of national capacities to achieve the Millennium Development Goals, giving special attention to cooperation with the Government in its poverty reduction programmes.

14. The second level includes support for an inclusive process of economic development that strengthens competitiveness and expands opportunities for disadvantaged groups. The Office will support, inter alia, efforts to find ways of creating employment; strengthening of productive and public benefit organizations; economies of scale for competitiveness; and policies that benefit women, Afro-Colombians, indigenous peoples and rural communities, especially those situated in the most vulnerable areas. Together with other agencies of the United Nations system, it will give special attention to the transition from emergency response for displaced populations to sustainable solutions for generating income and social services.

15. The Office will continue to provide technical assistance for national capacity-building in maintaining environmental sustainability, as this is a fundamental component of poverty reduction. It includes strengthening of the agencies responsible for reducing the negative impact of climate change and support for policies to reduce ozone-depleting emissions and to encourage the sound management of all kinds of polluting wastes. The Office will cooperate in the conservation of strategic ecosystems that guarantee environmental sustainability in Colombia through both the National Protected Areas System and integrated water resources management. Again with a view to preserving the environment, it will support alternative development projects that seek to reduce areas sown with illicit crops and to mitigate poverty through innovative initiatives such as ecotourism.

16. The UNDP Office will continue to cooperate in preparation for disasters and complex emergencies (which are aggravated by social factors such as poverty and environmental degradation) and development of the relevant capacities, adopting an integrated risk management perspective.

B. Democratic governance

17. In relation to the country's problems with democratic governance, the UNDP Office will support capacity-building in public management at the local, regional and national levels in the context of the full exercise of political citizenship. Accordingly, it will support the capacities of public institutions to perform better in terms of administrative and financial efficiency, transparency, planning and management.

18. In order to encourage new leadership, the Office will support the formulation of participatory strategic goals for land-use planning and regulation, giving special attention to rural areas, and will strengthen the use of participatory mechanisms in policymaking, in particular to ensure the participation of vulnerable groups.

19. In view of its capacity to facilitate the strengthening of democratic governance by means of public policy analysis and proposals, the Office will support the preparation of human development reports, in addition to the completion of current regional reports and the beginning of work on new ones, at both the national and regional level.

20. The Office will support the strengthening and autonomy of the justice system especially in its capacity to provide care for victims of violence and ensure the effective defence of human rights. It will also support mechanisms for transitional justice.

21. The Office will support reform of the political and electoral systems through mechanisms for dialogue and technical assistance. In order to promote democratic governance, there will be support for alliances with media agencies which have received prior training.

C. Development, peace and reconciliation

22. In view of the complexity of the internal violence generated by the conflict with illegal armed groups, the Office will support processes for strengthening democratic institutions, peacebuilding and the promotion of coexistence that facilitate the transition to human development, mitigation of the effects of the violence and comprehensive care for the victims, in a perspective of reconciliation.

23. An essential requirement for this cooperation programme is coordination with the national Government, the institutions involved and other multilateral and bilateral cooperation agencies. The Office will collaborate very closely with the agencies of the United Nations system in the areas of intervention.

24. The Office will foster processes for strengthening democratic institutions, peacebuilding and the promotion of coexistence. It will encourage human development strategies and social and institutional processes for the non-violent resolution of social conflicts: it will support capacity-building in national and regional public institutions for public policymaking and programme implementation. It will help to create the conditions for capacity-building in civil-society entities for promoting coexistence and peace. It will promote forums for cooperation and dialogue between entities of the State, civil society and the international community on issues of development, coexistence and reconciliation. It will support processes of analysis, debate and consensus-seeking, communication and creation of a culture of peace, as well as recognition and dissemination of good practices in social peacebuilding, promotion of a culture of coexistence and strengthening of democratic values.

25. In order to reduce the risks and mitigate the impact of the violence, the Office will support the social, political and economic empowerment of the population groups that are the most vulnerable, excluded and affected by the internal violence generated by the conflict with illegal armed groups. In this connection, it will cooperate in capacity-building for the State and civil society to alleviate situations of vulnerability; it will promote, together with the Government, agencies of the United Nations system and other partner entities, strategies for comprehensive services in relation to landmines and prevention of the displacement and recruitment of minors; it will support the creation of opportunities, initiatives and strategies for labour integration and processes for the restitution of earning assets in order to facilitate economic recovery for the most vulnerable groups; and it will promote rehabilitation and community development initiatives in order to facilitate the reintegration and reconciliation of communities in the areas affected.

26. In order to preserve the memory and dignity of the victims, the Office will support capacity-building for the State in order to preserve their rights to truth, justice and reparation, through processes of reconciliation in line with international standards and the commitments made by Colombia. It will support the identification and organization of victims in order to guarantee protection of their rights and will increase their visibility to public policymakers.

27. These actions will take into account the differential effects of the violence on women and will therefore promote their active participation in building initiatives for coexistence and reconciliation in institutional and social forums.

28. UNDP will support REDES and other projects that share its philosophy, including the Peace Laboratories and the Development and Peace Programmes and other similar territorial initiatives for peace and development.

IV. Programme management, monitoring and evaluation

29. Management by the UNDP Office will be results-based and will pursue the following goals:

- In their design and implementation, the interventions of the Office should actively promote local capacity-building and ensure the best possible impact of cooperation efforts;
- There should be systematic monitoring and evaluation of the interventions and the results obtained by the Programme; the UNDAF framework for monitoring and evaluation will serve as a guide;

- Coordination should be ensured with the agencies of the United Nations system and other partners, in accordance with the Paris Declaration.

In conjunction with the Ministry of Foreign Affairs and the Presidential Agency for Social Action, the Office will conduct annual evaluations of the progress of the Programme. There will be periodic and regular visits to the programmes and projects being implemented and written reports will be provided on the findings of such visits.

30. New opportunities will be sought for joint programming in the areas covered by UNDAF. The interventions will have a clear territorial approach as a vital link between the different levels of State management (national, departmental and municipal) and as a forum for coordination with agencies of the United Nations system.

31. In accordance with the Paris Declaration, the UNDP office will support enhanced coordination and harmonization to increase efficiency, reduce transaction costs and make the best possible use of resources. Collaboration with other partners will be maximized to ensure synergies, especially with the agencies of the United Nations system, and also with other international cooperation bodies, the private sector and government entities, in order to multiply the effects of the interventions. Resources will be mobilized in the context of UNDAF and the present document, in order to consolidate efforts on issues of concern to the multilateral institutions, bilateral cooperation agencies and international financial institutions.

32. The Office will evaluate the results and will periodically send the evaluations to the other partners, including counterpart government entities.

33. For the 2008-2012 period, an allocation of $6,123,000 from UNDP regular resources is planned. The UNDP Office, in collaboration with the Government, will also make the necessary arrangements to mobilize additional resources.
