2009 年 4 月 20 日世界野生动植物基金会全球及区域政策主任给国际海底管理局秘书长的信*

The present letter seeks to obtain observer status for WWF International with the International Seabed Authority. WWF is in general consultative status with the Economic and Social Council.

WWF is one of the world's largest and most experienced independent conservation organizations, with almost 5 million supporters and a global network active in more than 100 countries. The mission of WWF is to stop the degradation of the planet's natural environment and to build a future in which humans live in harmony with nature.

As such, we are working through international policy forums to ensure that relevant laws and regulations are in place for activities that may be harmful to the environment, and advocate for the precautionary principle as the guiding factor at all stages in exploration and exploitation of natural resources.

The International Seabed Authority is the international body in charge of activities pertaining to the seabed, which is coming increasingly to the attention of mining and prospecting companies as a source of precious raw materials. But the seabed also hosts distinct habitats and ecosystems, many of these central to ocean biodiversity. It is therefore of great interest to WWF to participate in the deliberations at the International Seabed Authority, to which we hope to contribute our conservation expertise.

WWF runs a global programme of work dedicated to ensuring the responsibility of flag States for all activities taking place under their jurisdiction, working with both Governments and with business and industry to ensure responsible use of resources.

Currently, WWF is working to ensure that all potential activities at the Charlie Gibbs Fracture Zone (on the Mid-Atlantic Ridge), recently proposed as a high-seas marine protected area under the Convention for the Protection of the Marine Environment of the North-East Atlantic, are regulated through relevant international bodies.

It would be an honour for WWF to be granted the status of official observer in the International Seabed Authority. I look forward to hearing from you.

(Signed) Gordon Shepherd
Director, Global and Regional Policy, WWF International
