"38. (i) A prisoner shall be entitled to receive a visit from his or her legal adviser at any reasonable time for the purposes of consulting in relation to any matter of a legal nature in respect of which the prisoner has a direct interest, and any such visit shall take place within the view of, but out of the hearing of a prison officer.

"(ii) A prisoner may, at the discretion of the Governor receive a visit at any reasonable time from a legal adviser or from any other person approved of by that legal adviser who is assisting in making preparations on behalf of a party to proceedings before the courts whether criminal or civil in nature, and such a visit shall take place,

“Ordinary visit

“35. (6) A prisoner who is entitled under this Rule to receive a visit may request the Governor to notify or cause to be notified those persons from whom the prisoner wishes to receive a visit, and the Governor shall do so, in so far as is practicable, and subject to the maintenance of good order and safe and secure custody.”

Response to request for additional information regarding the Cabinet Sub-Committee on Aspects of International Human Rights

6. The Renewed Programme for Government agreed between the Government parties in October 2009 contains the following commitments under the heading of Ireland’s International Role:

“International Human Rights

- We will further develop systems to ensure that the highest international standards are applied to Ireland’s approach to human rights, working through the Cabinet Sub-Committee on International Human Rights.”

“Renditions

- We will review and change if necessary the legislation affecting civilian aircraft in the context of the existing and ongoing work of the Cabinet Sub Committee on Human Rights and will, as is appropriate, strengthen the powers of inspection of such aircraft and the collection of flight information.”

7. The Cabinet Sub-Committee on Aspects of International Human Rights has met on three occasions since its establishment in 2008 and received reports on the following matters.

8. With regard to the power to enter and search an aircraft, there are statutory provisions governing the exercise of such a power. The Air Navigation and Transport Acts provide a power to enter an aircraft to make an arrest. This power can only be exercised where a Garda officer knows or reasonably suspects that a person has committed an offence. Other legislative provisions containing a power of arrest also require the Garda to have a “reasonable cause” before effecting an arrest. The Criminal Justice (Miscellaneous Provisions) Act 1997 provides authority for the Gardaí to seek a warrant (from a judge of the District Court) to search any place, including an aircraft, where there are “reasonable grounds” for suspecting that evidence of or relating to the commission of an arrestable offence¹ is to be found at that place. There is no legislative basis to permit random or routine entry to or search of civilian aircraft for the purpose of the detection of any offence.

9. Regarding Garda training on aspects of human rights, including the protection and dignity of all persons within or passing through the State, there are a number of modules to student/probationer Garda training which form part of the programme leading to their graduation from the Garda College. Furthermore, all promotion and management development training programmes include specific modules directly related to human rights.

10. Specific human rights training is given to officers working in certain specialist areas, including the Garda National Immigration Bureau and Immigration Officers in Garda stations.

11. Specialist Garda search teams operate in all Garda Divisions. Where a Garda Division includes an airport, the team receives additional training regarding searching of aircraft. These search techniques are regularly reviewed and updated as appropriate.

12. Where complaints have been made to the Gardaí regarding particular flights, including allegations of renditions, investigations have ensued. None of these investigations has disclosed evidence of criminal acts in this jurisdiction. No evidence of rendition of prisoners was disclosed.

13. In relation to official assurances, the assurances Ireland has received in relation to allegations of extraordinary rendition are of a clear and categorical nature, relating to facts and circumstances within the full control of the United States Government and were made at the highest level. If any evidence were to emerge that the assurances are not being complied with, we, the Irish Government, would deal immediately with the situation.

¹ An arrestable offence means an offence for which a person of full capacity and not previously convicted may, under or by virtue of any enactment, be punished by imprisonment for a term of five years or by a more severe penalty and includes an attempt to commit any such offence (Criminal Law Act 1997).
