7. At the 2nd meeting of the Commission, introductory statements were made by the Director of the Division for Policy Analysis and Public Affairs of the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime (UNODC) and the Chief of the Financial Resources Management Service. The Director of the Division for Treaty Affairs also made a statement. The representative of Spain, in his capacity as co-chair of the standing open-ended intergovernmental working group on improving the governance and financial situation of the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime, made an introductory statement. The Special Representative of the Secretary-General on violence against children also made a statement.

8. Statements were made by the representative of Guatemala (on behalf of the Group of Latin American and Caribbean States) and the representatives of the Republic of Korea, Thailand, Norway, the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland, Japan, Iran (Islamic Republic of), the United States of America, the Russian Federation and China. Statements were also made by the observers for Canada and Sweden.

A. Deliberations

9. Several speakers welcomed the work and recommendations of the standing open-ended intergovernmental working group on improving the governance and financial situation of the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime and expressed their appreciation for the work of its co-chairs. Speakers also expressed their support for the extension of the mandate of the working group and highlighted that the group had a crucial role in improving the governance and financial situation of the UNODC.

10. Speakers encouraged UNODC to continue the open dialogue with the working group in order to identify solutions for the governance and financial situation of the Office. One speaker recommended that the scope of the working group be broadened. It was also noted that the working group should continue advising the governing bodies on the governance and financial situation of UNODC.

11. Several speakers expressed concerns that, while the special-purpose contributions for UNODC were increasing, the Office's regular budget funding remained low, its general-purpose funding was declining, and the funding for oversight and programme support functions remained stagnant. Speakers highlighted the importance of continuing to mitigate the projected deficit in the general-purpose fund and to implement the new policies of full direct cost recovery promulgated by the United Nations Controller.

12. Several speakers recognized the need for stable and predictable funding for UNODC. Several speakers reiterated their view that the core functions of UNODC should be funded from the regular budget of the United Nations and that increased regular budget resources were required to cover the wide-ranging core functions of UNODC. Reference was made by one speaker to General Assembly resolution 46/152, by which the Assembly recommended the establishment of a commission on crime prevention and criminal justice and approved the statement that "the programme shall be funded from the regular budget of the United Nations" (see Assembly resolution 46/152, annex).

13. The positive trend of increasing earmarked contributions, as well as cost-sharing by Member States, was noted. Some speakers expressed their readiness to contribute unearmarked funding as well as providing earmarked voluntary contribution funding, and encouraged other Member States to show their commitment to UNODC by also providing general-purpose funding. One speaker expressed disagreement with the proposed options in the funding strategy of assigning a mandatory fixed percentage of voluntary contributions to the general-purpose funds, making a mandatory percentage of voluntary contributions available for soft-earmarking, or establishing a voluntary indicative scale of contributions for UNODC. It was also noted that UNODC should expand its donor base to include more emerging donors, the private sector and multilateral organizations outside the United Nations system.

14. Speakers suggested that donors move from hard-earmarking to soft-earmarking and stressed the importance of UNODC providing regular results-based reporting at the programme level, suggesting that such reporting should be the default reporting method of UNODC, while tailor-made reports requested by donor States should be fully costed. Speakers welcomed the development and implementation of the integrated programming approach of UNODC, through regional and thematic programmes, as an effective strategic tool for the delivery of technical cooperation and capacity-building. One speaker also emphasized the principle of States' ownership of the programmes. Speakers also noted the importance of the work of the Independent Evaluation Unit and its efforts to foster a culture of evaluation in UNODC.

15. Speakers welcomed the proposed creation of an annual programme report, and some speakers also supported the idea of a regular donor appeal process. While mentioning that increased soft-earmarked and general-purpose funding was linked to programme effectiveness and strategic planning and management, speakers noted that the working group on improving the governance and financial situation of the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime should discuss in greater depth the linking of the proposed annual programme report to the implementation of the fundraising strategy, and the issue of full cost recovery.

16. Some speakers welcomed the efforts of UNODC to mainstream human rights and a gender perspective into every aspect of its work, including through the implementation of the UNODC internal guidance note on mainstreaming human rights into the work of the Office. The importance of ensuring that the rule of law, security and justice were taken into account in the post-2015 development agenda was also stressed.

17. Some speakers welcomed the increased attention given by UNODC to emerging forms of crime. Some speakers mentioned that they welcomed the development of the new maritime crime programme and looked forward to receiving more information on that programme.

18. One speaker welcomed the report of the Secretariat on documentation prepared for the Commission on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice (E/CN.15/2013/13) and made a number of proposals, including regarding documentation prepared on the basis of replies submitted by Member States in response to notes verbales sent by the Secretary-General. It was suggested that, if a minimum number of replies from States were not received, oral reports could be made to the Commission instead of written reports. The importance of ensuring the availability of official documentation in the official languages of the United Nations was noted, as was the need to consider further consolidation of reporting obligations.

19. Speakers discussed the organization of intergovernmental expert groups that report to the Commission and the related documentation. Some speakers requested further information and clarification with respect to the preparation of reports of the Secretariat on cybercrime and cultural property. Other speakers expressed satisfaction with the reporting by the Secretariat. A representative of the Secretariat made a statement of clarification.

20. At its 2nd meeting, on 22 April, the Commission adopted the draft resolution entitled "Implementation of the budget for the biennium 2012-2013 for the United Nations Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice Fund". (For the text, see chap. I, sect. D, resolution 22/1.)

21. At the same meeting, the Commission decided to transmit the report of the Board of Trustees of the United Nations Interregional Crime and Justice Research Institute for 2012 (see E/CN.15/2013/21) to the Economic and Social Council, in accordance with article IV, paragraph 3(e), of the Statute of the Institute, annexed to Economic and Social Council resolution 1989/56.

(For the text, see chap. I, sect. C, draft decision I.) Prior to the approval of the draft decision, a representative of the Secretariat read out a financial statement. (For the text, see E/CN.15/2013/CRP.10, available on the UNODC website.)

Chapter III

Thematic discussion on the challenge posed by emerging forms of crime that have a significant impact on the environment and ways to deal with it effectively

24. At its 3rd and 4th meetings, on 23 April 2013, the Commission considered agenda item 4, which read as follows:

“Thematic discussion on the challenge posed by emerging forms of crime that have a significant impact on the environment and ways to deal with it effectively”:

“(a) Challenges posed by emerging forms of crime that have a significant impact on the environment;

“(b) Possible responses, programmes and initiatives to deal effectively with forms of crime that have a significant impact on the environment.”

25. For its consideration of agenda item 4, the Commission had before it a note by the Secretariat containing the discussion guide for the thematic discussion on the challenge posed by emerging forms of crime that have a significant impact on the environment and ways to deal with it effectively (E/CN.15/2013/2).

26. At the morning meeting, participants discussed sub-themes related to challenges posed by emerging forms of crime that had a significant impact on the environment:

(a) Emerging trends and challenges, including those linked to data collection and its analysis, criminalization and criminal justice;

(b) Challenges linked to related offences.

27. At the afternoon meeting, participants discussed sub-themes related to the possible responses, programmes and initiatives to deal effectively with forms of crime that had a significant impact on the environment:

(a) Possible ways to increase effectiveness of preventive and responsive measures of criminal justice systems, including using existing international treaties to combat crime, as well as on the basis of strengthening partnerships between public and private sectors and civil society;

(b) International collaboration and partnerships, including the role of the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime in counteracting unlawful conduct that may negatively impact the environment.

28. The thematic discussion on item 4 was presided by the Chair and led by the following panellists: Reuel Kpana Moses (Nigeria), Kanjana Nitaya (Thailand), Petr Litvishko (Russian Federation), Salomé Vacacela (Ecuador), Grant Pink (Australia), Colgar Sikopo (Namibia), Wan Ziming (China), Joel González Moreno (Mexico) and Jessica Graham (United States).

29. The Chair made an introductory statement. An introductory statement was also made by the Director of the Division for Operations. A statement was made by the Secretary-General of the Convention on International Trade in Endangered Species of Wild Fauna and Flora.¹¹⁷ Statements were made by the representatives of Croatia, Algeria, Italy, Kenya, Austria, South Africa, Cuba, Colombia, Indonesia, Brazil, China, the United Kingdom, Ghana, Germany, Thailand, Norway and Mauritius. The observers for France, Guatemala, Egypt, Finland, Israel, Libya, Zimbabwe, the Philippines, Australia, India and Turkey also made statements. A statement was made by the observer for the State of Palestine. A statement was also made by the observer for the European Union. The observers for the United Nations Environment Programme, the Korean Institute of Criminology, the World Wide Fund for Nature International, the Environmental Investigation Agency and the Friends World Committee for Consultation also made statements.

A. Summary by the Chair

30. At the 5th meeting of the Commission, on 24 April 2013, the Chair summarized the salient points of the thematic discussion as follows:

31. The international community was faced with increasingly diverse types of emerging forms of crime that had a significant impact on the environment, ranging from illegal trafficking in wild fauna and flora to illegal logging, illegal fishing, illegal waste management, illegal mining and trafficking in precious metals. Urgent attention by the international community was required to address poaching and trafficking in wildlife, especially in those species on the verge of extinction.

32. The lack of an internationally accepted definition of such “environmental crimes” and the fact that such crimes remained underreported or unreported posed challenges for data collection and analysis.

33. Particular challenges derived from the transnational nature of environmental crimes and from the fact that such crimes were highly profitable and posed a low risk for the criminal groups involved. Some Member States stressed that wildlife and forest crime was a form of organized crime. Others identified clear links with other transnational organized crimes, including drug trafficking, firearms trafficking, corruption, money-laundering and trafficking in human beings, as well as highly violent crimes and, in some cases, terrorism.

34. Environmental crimes not only affected the environment by threatening biodiversity and destroying ecosystems but also damaged sites of national heritage and undermined sustainable economic and social development. Such crimes had a negative impact on communities and livelihoods, especially in developing countries. In some cases, serious consequences for human health and threats to national security and stability had been observed.

35. Those challenges required a global solution and had to be addressed at the national, regional and international levels through a comprehensive, balanced and coordinated approach tackling both supply and demand and consisting of measures such as prevention activities, reducing demand, improving legal frameworks, strengthening law enforcement activities, promoting inter-agency cooperation between police, customs and border control authorities, building the capacity of judges and prosecutors in order to better adjudicate crimes, and strengthening data collection and information-sharing.

36. Possible responses, programmes and initiatives had been discussed. Several Member States reported having enhanced their domestic legislative frameworks, including by defining environmental offences as serious crimes and by establishing corporate criminal liability.

37. Good practices included the establishment of a national task force to coordinate the efforts of all relevant agencies at the national level and to strengthen cooperation with international counterparts. Law enforcement responses could be further improved through the use of controlled deliveries and other special investigative techniques, mutual legal assistance, asset forfeiture and the seizure of the proceeds of crime.

38. Member States stressed the importance of the timely sharing of information, intelligence and other relevant data, including best practices and lessons learned. Judges, prosecutors, front-line officers, customs officers and other criminal justice officials required multidisciplinary training regarding “environmental crimes”.

39. The involvement of affected communities had proven crucial in natural resource management and other successful strategies. However, continued political attention and increased financial and human resources were required to address environmental crime more effectively.

40. There was a need to more effectively utilize the existing international framework, including the United Nations Convention against Transnational Organized Crime,¹¹⁸ the United Nations Convention against Corruption¹¹⁹ and the Convention on International Trade in Endangered Species of Wild Fauna and Flora.

41. It was essential to continue improving regional and international cooperation in addressing environmental crime. At the national level, strengthened partnerships were required, including the involvement of local communities, civil society organizations, academic and research institutes, the private sector and international organizations, in order to ensure a consolidated response to that type of crime.

42. The role of UNODC and the Commission in addressing environmental crimes in close cooperation with relevant organizations was highlighted. UNODC was requested to continue providing technical assistance to countries to address challenges posed by environmental crime. UNODC should undertake case studies focusing on endangered species of wild fauna and further collaborate with its partners, including the International Consortium on Combating Wildlife Crime, in designing and promoting the use of appropriate evidence-based interventions and technical assistance tools, such as the Wildlife and Forest Crime Analytic Toolkit.

B. Workshop on emerging forms of crime that have an impact on the environment: lessons learned

43. The first meeting of the Committee of the Whole, on 22 April 2013, was devoted to a workshop on “Emerging forms of crime that have an impact on the environment: lessons learned”, organized by the institutes of the United Nations crime prevention and criminal justice programme network. The workshop was chaired by the First Vice-Chair of the Commission and moderated by the Scientific Coordinator of the European Institute for Crime Prevention and Control, affiliated with the United Nations, a member of the United Nations crime prevention and criminal justice programme network.

¹¹⁸ Ibid., vol. 2225, No 39574.

¹¹⁹ Ibid., vol. 2349, No. 42146.

44. An opening statement was made by a representative of the Secretariat. Presentations were made by panellists from the Naif Arab University for Security Sciences (Saudi Arabia), the European Institute for Crime Prevention and Control, affiliated with the United Nations (Finland), the Korean Institute of Criminology (Republic of Korea), the United Nations Interregional Crime and Justice Research Institute (Italy) and the International Center for Criminal Law Reform and Criminal Justice Policy (Canada). During the discussion, a statement was made by the observer for the International Institute of Higher Studies in Criminal Sciences (Italy). The moderator made a closing statement.

Chapter IV

45. At its 5th, 6th and 7th meetings, on 24 and 25 April 2013, the Commission on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice considered agenda item 5, which reads as follows:

47. Introductory statements were made by the Chief of the Organized Crime and Illicit Trafficking Branch, the Chief of the Corruption and Economic Crime Branch and the Chief of the Terrorism Prevention Branch. The Special Rapporteur on the promotion and protection of human rights and fundamental freedoms while countering terrorism made a statement.

48. Statements were made by the observer for Ireland (on behalf of the European Union and Albania, Bosnia and Herzegovina, Croatia, Georgia, Iceland, the Republic of Moldova, Serbia, the former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia, Montenegro, Turkey and Ukraine, as well as Liechtenstein) and the representatives of Belarus (on behalf of the Group of Friends United Against Human Trafficking), Algeria, Thailand, China, the Republic of Korea, Italy, Norway, Saudi Arabia, Mexico, the United States, Indonesia, Croatia, Iran (Islamic Republic of), the Russian Federation, Cuba, Japan, Kenya, Argentina and Austria (also on behalf of Brazil and Switzerland). The observers for France, Romania, Sri Lanka, the Republic of Moldova, Spain, Libya, Azerbaijan, Guatemala, Kazakhstan, Egypt, India, Qatar and Belgium (also on behalf of the Netherlands and Slovenia) also made statements. The observer for the Sovereign Military Order of Malta also made a statement. Statements were also made by the observers for the International Anti-Corruption Academy, the Asia and Far East Institute for the Prevention of Crime and the Treatment of Offenders and the Raoul Wallenberg Institute of Human Rights and Humanitarian Law on behalf of the institutes of the United Nations crime prevention and criminal justice network.

A. Deliberations

1. Ratification and implementation of the United Nations Convention against Transnational Organized Crime and the Protocols thereto

Work of the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime in facilitating the ratification and implementation of the United Nations Convention against Transnational Organized Crime

49. Discussions under agenda item 5 (a) addressed, inter alia, the importance of universal ratification and implementation of the United Nations Convention against Transnational Organized Crime and the Protocols thereto; the use of the Convention as a basis for international judicial cooperation; and continuing support for the adoption of a review mechanism.

50. Several speakers expressed regret that the Conference of the Parties of the United Nations Convention against Transnational Organized Crime had been unable at its sixth session to adopt a mechanism to review the implementation of the Convention and the Protocols thereto and expressed their willingness to continue the dialogue on that subject.

51. National efforts and initiatives to combat transnational organized crime in all its forms and manifestations, including trafficking in persons, the smuggling of migrants and firearms trafficking, were emphasized. Speakers expressed appreciation for the technical assistance provided and tools developed by UNODC and encouraged donors to provide extrabudgetary contributions to UNODC to enable it to continue its effective work.

2. Ratification and implementation of the United Nations Convention against Corruption

Work of the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime in facilitating the ratification and implementation of the United Nations Convention against Corruption

52. With regard to the United Nations Convention against Corruption, speakers welcomed the role of the Mechanism for the Review of Implementation of the Convention in gathering valuable information on good practices, implementation gaps and technical assistance needs. Some speakers reported on their countries' efforts to implement the Convention. Some speakers also referred to Conference of the States Parties resolution 4/6, entitled "Non-governmental organizations and the Mechanism for the Review of Implementation of the United Nations Convention against Corruption". Speakers called upon States parties to make optimal use of the Convention for international cooperation in criminal matters, including by using it as a legal basis. Many speakers encouraged technical assistance and capacity-building programmes, and some made reference to the work of the Stolen Asset Recovery (StAR) Initiative. Some speakers highlighted the importance of reducing barriers to international cooperation and asset recovery.

3. Ratification and implementation of the international instruments to prevent and combat terrorism

53. Several speakers commended the work of UNODC in assisting States in the implementation of the international legal instruments against terrorism and in providing capacity-building assistance for criminal justice officials, as well as in enhancing criminal justice strategies on preventive aspects. Many speakers referred to the increasing use of modern information technologies by terrorists and highlighted the importance of countering the use of the Internet for terrorist purposes. Some speakers also highlighted the fundamental role that victims of terrorism can play before, during and after criminal justice proceedings and in countering the appeal of terrorism. Delegations emphasized the assistance provided by UNODC in both those thematic areas. Speakers also underlined the importance of upholding the rule of law, respecting human rights and complying with international obligations and standards in countering terrorism and called upon UNODC to continue providing assistance in this regard. Speakers also expressed appreciation for the close cooperation and joint projects carried out by UNODC, the Counter-Terrorism Committee Executive Directorate and the Counter-Terrorism Implementation Task Force.

4. Other crime prevention and criminal justice matters

54. Speakers emphasized the importance of continuing to make efforts to counter criminal and terrorist threats and to respond to the challenges created by those threats, including in the tourism sector, through international cooperation and coordination among relevant international and regional organizations and Member States in the area of mutual legal assistance, as well as through public-private partnerships. Speakers encouraged UNODC to continue its efforts and to coordinate with relevant actors in that regard.

55. Speakers also expressed the necessity of enhancing international cooperation to combat a wide range of crimes more effectively and specifically referred to crimes against journalists, violence against women and children, war crimes, crimes against humanity and genocide.

56. Reference was made to the Arab Initiative for Building National Capacities to Combating Human Trafficking, supported by Qatar.

5. Other activities in support of the work of the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime, in particular activities of the United Nations crime prevention and criminal justice programme network, non-governmental organizations and other bodies

57. Reference was made to the mission and activities of the institutes of the United Nations crime prevention and criminal justice network. Appreciation was expressed for their work. It was noted that challenges existed in conducting research in the international environment where the varied laws and definitions and different cultures involved required that all responses within each study be put into context. The constant need to find new and more effective research methods was also noted.

B. Action taken by the Commission

58. At its 10th meeting, on 26 April 2013, the Commission adopted a revised draft resolution (E/CN.15/2013/L.9/Rev.1) sponsored by Andorra, Austria, Belgium, Chile, Costa Rica, Croatia, France, Guatemala, Honduras, Italy, Mexico, Poland, Portugal, Romania, San Marino, Slovenia and Spain. (For the text, see chap. I, sect. D, resolution 22/3.) Prior to the adoption of the revised draft resolution, a representative of the Secretariat read out a financial statement. (For the text, see E/CN.15/2013/CRP.10, available on the UNODC website.)

59. At the same meeting, the Commission recommended to the Economic and Social Council the approval of a revised draft resolution for adoption by the General Assembly (E/CN.15/2013/L.10/Rev.1) sponsored by Afghanistan, Andorra, Colombia, Croatia, Ireland (on behalf of the States Members of the United Nations that are members of the European Union), Israel, the Republic of Korea, San Marino, Serbia, Switzerland and Turkey. (For the text, see chap. I, sect. A, draft resolution III.) Prior to the recommendation of the revised draft resolution, a representative of the Secretariat read out a financial statement. (For the text, see E/CN.15/2013/CRP.10, available on the UNODC website.)

60. At the same meeting, the Commission adopted a revised draft resolution (E/CN.15/2013/L.15/Rev.1) sponsored by Belarus, the Russian Federation and Turkey. (For the text, see chap. I, sect. D, resolution 22/4.) Prior to the adoption of the revised draft resolution, a representative of the Secretariat read out a financial statement. (For the text, see E/CN.15/2013/CRP.10, available on the UNODC website.)

61. At the same meeting, the Commission recommended to the Economic and Social Council the approval of a revised draft resolution for adoption by the General Assembly (E/CN.15/2013/L.19/Rev.1) sponsored by Croatia, Honduras, Ireland (on behalf of the States Members of the United Nations that are members of the European Union), Japan, Mexico, Philippines, Qatar and Thailand. (For the text, see chap. I, sect. A, draft resolution IV.) Prior to the recommendation of the revised draft resolution, a representative of the Secretariat read out a financial statement. (For the text, see E/CN.15/2013/CRP.10, available on the UNODC website.) Following the recommendation of the revised draft resolution, the representative of Japan stated that additional time would have been required to discuss the relevance of human security to the rule of law and crime prevention and criminal justice, in which Japan firmly believed. The speaker highlighted General Assembly resolution 66/290 with respect to a common understanding of human security and noted that the United Nations Trust Fund for Human Security was an important resource for crime prevention and criminal justice, as well as the rule of law. The speaker underlined that some UNODC projects were funded through the Trust Fund, such as projects on protection of victims and witnesses of trafficking in persons and of violence against women. The representative of Japan noted that his country wished to engage in dialogue with delegations that expressed concerns and views regarding that concept, and that Japan would continue to promote the concept of human security. In his explanation of position, the representative of the United States stated that the revised draft resolution contained language that the Government of the United States could not agree with, specifically, references to “the right to development”, as it had not enjoyed consensus in the bodies competent to speak on that issue, and that the determination of whether such a right was acknowledged by Member States was not within the competence of the Commission. Fostering development continued to be a cornerstone of the United States’ international engagement, and the United States looked forward to continuing to engage constructively with the open-ended working group on the right to development of the Human Rights Council.

62. At the same meeting, the Commission adopted a revised draft resolution (E/CN.15/2013/L.17/Rev.1) sponsored by Belgium, Chile, Costa Rica, France, Norway, the Philippines, the Republic of Korea and the United Kingdom. (For the text, see chap. I, sect. D, resolution 22/6.) Prior to the adoption of the revised draft resolution, a representative of the Secretariat read out a financial statement. (For the text, see E/CN.15/2013/CRP.10, available on the UNODC website.) Following the adoption of the resolution, the observer for the Bolivarian Republic of Venezuela stated that her country was not a party to the United Nations Convention on the Law of the Sea¹²⁰ and thus the provisions did not apply to the Bolivarian Republic of Venezuela, as did not any interpretations deriving therefrom or the norms of that instrument in customary law except for those that the Bolivarian Republic of Venezuela had expressly recognized or would recognize in the future. The speaker also noted that the Convention on the Law of the Sea should not be considered the only source of law pertaining to the sea, as there were other legal instruments regulating that particular matter. Following the adoption of the revised draft resolution, the observer for Turkey stated that his country supported international efforts to combat crimes at sea, and in that sense, was supportive of the resolution. However, Turkey was not a party to the United Nations Convention on the Law of the Sea and, in that regard, certain references made to the Convention in the text of the revised draft resolution did not in any way affect Turkey’s well-known position regarding the Convention.

¹²⁰ Ibid., vol. 1833, No. 31363.

63. At the same meeting, the Commission approved for adoption by the Economic and Social Council a draft resolution (E/CN.15/2013/L.23), as revised, sponsored by Armenia, Belarus, Bolivia (Plurinational State of), Colombia, Ecuador, El Salvador, Guatemala, India, Kazakhstan, Nicaragua, the Philippines, the Russian Federation, South Africa, Turkey, Uruguay and Venezuela (Bolivarian Republic of). (For the text, see chap. I, sect. B, draft resolution V.) Prior to the approval of the draft resolution, a representative of the Secretariat read out a financial statement. (For the text, see E/CN.15/2013/CRP.10, available on the UNODC website.) Prior to the approval of the draft resolution, the representative of Belarus stated that the draft resolution took into account all the actions connected to the implementation of the United Nations Global Plan of Action to Combat Trafficking in Persons and that, in that connection, the importance of trafficking in persons for the purpose of extracting organs, tissues and cells should be noted. The speaker noted that, in view of concerns raised by some delegations, Belarus supported the consensus, while reserving its right to continue to refer to the problem of modern forms of trafficking in persons, including for purposes of extraction of organs, tissues and cells, both in the Commission and in other international bodies.

64. At the same meeting, the draft resolution E/CN.15/2013/L.5 was withdrawn by the Netherlands, also on behalf of other co-sponsors: Andorra, Argentina, Austria, Belgium, Chile, Cyprus, Estonia, Georgia, Hungary, Latvia, Liechtenstein, Lithuania, Luxembourg, Macedonia, Mongolia, Norway, Peru, Poland, Romania, Slovakia, Slovenia and Sweden. Before the withdrawal of the draft resolution, the representative of Colombia, as the chair of the Committee of the Whole explained that ample time had been dedicated to the draft resolution in the Committee of the Whole, and serious concerns raised by several delegations regarding the competence of the Commission on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice impeded entering into consideration of the substance of the draft resolution.

65. Upon the withdrawal of draft resolution E/CN.15/2013/L.5, the representative of the Netherlands stated that the Crime Commission was the one United Nations body where practical cooperation between countries in combating all forms of crime could be discussed and that existing international legal instruments addressing crimes considered by the international community to be among the most heinous did not address cooperation among prosecutors to secure evidence, protect witnesses and extradite suspects. The speaker noted that the aim of the draft resolution had been to invite all Member States to put forward, at the next session of the Commission, proposals to address the issue of strengthening the international legal framework for mutual legal assistance and extradition in the fight against the crime of genocide, crimes against humanity and war crimes. The speaker expressed regret that a constructive dialogue on that matter was blocked by some delegations. The speaker noted that the co-sponsors of the draft resolution did not agree that those crimes were too political and did not fall within the mandate of the Commission, as the mandate covered all types of crime and it was the prerogative of Member States to specify them. In view of the fact that the topic of the thematic discussion at the twenty-third session of the Commission was "International cooperation in criminal matters", the representative of the Netherlands invited Member States to analyse the obstacles that their national judiciaries encountered in terms of mutual legal assistance and extradition with regard to such crimes.

66. Following the withdrawal of the draft resolution E/CN.15/2013/L.5, the representative of Pakistan stated that his country was committed to upholding the rule of international law, in accordance with the principles of the Charter of the United Nations. Pakistan also fully supported the need to provide justice for victims of crimes against humanity, genocide and other serious violations of international humanitarian law and believed that where such crimes were committed, especially in situations of foreign occupation or alien domination and where State terrorism was utilized to suppress legitimate struggles of people for freedom, the perpetrators should be punished. Pakistan's concerns over the draft resolution were due to certain procedural and technical complications, including the fact that the nature of the crime of genocide, crimes against humanity and war crimes went far beyond the mandate of the Commission, as it was a functional commission of the Economic and Social Council. Economic and Social Council resolution 1992/1 on the establishment of the Commission on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice, along with the statement of principles and programme of action of the United Nations crime prevention and criminal justice programme,¹²¹ which were the foundational documents of the Commission, did not envision such crimes. Pakistan believed that discussions on the above-mentioned issues should take place in the relevant forums.

¹²¹ General Assembly resolution 46/152, annex.

68. The Director of the Division for Operations and the Chief of the Justice Section of UNODC made introductory statements. Statements were made by the representatives of Germany, the Republic of Korea, Thailand, the United Arab Emirates, Algeria, China, Switzerland and Indonesia. Statements were also made by the observers for Australia, Libya, Finland, Canada and the Dominican Republic.

A. Deliberations

69. Several speakers expressed appreciation for the work of UNODC carried out through its broad and diversified project portfolio in the area of crime prevention and criminal justice. Several speakers informed the Commission about criminal justice reform initiatives supported by UNODC in their countries.

70. Several speakers underlined the continued importance of the Standard Minimum Rules for the Treatment of Prisoners as the main international reference for prison systems worldwide and stressed that any amendments to the Rules should not lower current standards. Several speakers commended the progress made by the open-ended intergovernmental Expert Group on the Standard Minimum Rules for the Treatment of Prisoners and encouraged it to continue its work so that the revised Rules could incorporate recent developments, including outcomes of the work of relevant United Nations human rights bodies, as well as good practices, such as the mainstreaming of gender sensitivity. One speaker stated that the revision of the Rules should be completed as expeditiously and economically as possible and that Member States should step up efforts to implement the Rules.

71. UNODC was commended for its current work in East Africa under its counter-piracy programme, and several speakers expressed support for its plan to build on the expertise gained through that programme and broaden its scope into a maritime crime programme covering new regions, such as the Gulf of Guinea, and building the capabilities of Member States to respond to maritime crime.

72. Speakers stressed the importance of implementing effective crime prevention strategies and programmes in order to better address risk factors leading to criminality and contribute to the protection and promotion of human rights. It was noted that the standards and norms in crime prevention provided an important framework to guide such efforts. UNODC was asked to further mainstream prevention in its work, including in its data collection efforts and in its work on justice for children. A call was made for further examination of the Abu Dhabi draft preliminary recommendations on the oversight and regulation of civilian private security services and on their contribution to crime prevention and community safety, as well as for their use in the development of technical assistance tools by UNODC.

B. Action taken by the Commission

73. At its 10th meeting, on 26 April 2013, the Commission recommended to the Economic and Social Council the approval of a revised draft resolution for adoption by the General Assembly (E/CN.15/2013/L.21/Rev.1) sponsored by Andorra, Argentina, Austria, Canada, Chile, Costa Rica, Croatia, Ecuador, El Salvador, Finland, Guatemala, Honduras, Indonesia, Mexico, the Philippines, Portugal, the Republic of Korea, Slovenia, Sweden, Thailand, Turkey and Uruguay. (For the text, see chap. I, sect. A, draft resolution V.) Prior to the recommendation of the revised draft resolution, a representative of the Secretariat read out a financial statement. (For the text, see E/CN.15/2013/CRP.10, available on the UNODC website.) In the explanation of position, the representative of the United States stated that the United States objected to the inclusion of the formulation “full implementation” of the United Nations standards and norms as this would undermine their flexibility. He noted that the United Nations had been active in the development and promotion of internationally recognized principles in crime prevention and criminal justice, covering a variety of issues such as juvenile justice, the treatment of offenders, international cooperation, good governance, victim protection and violence against women. Despite differences in criminal justice systems among States and the “soft law” nature of the United Nations standards and norms, the standards and norms had made a significant contribution to promoting more effective and fair criminal justice structures.

74. At the same meeting, the Commission recommended to the Economic and Social Council the approval of a revised draft resolution for adoption by the General Assembly (E/CN.15/2013/L.22/Rev.1) sponsored by Argentina, Austria, Brazil, Chile, Costa Rica, Croatia, Ecuador, El Salvador, Finland, Germany, Italy, Latvia, Lebanon, Mexico, the Philippines, South Africa, Switzerland, Thailand and Uruguay. (For the text, see chap. I, sect. A, draft resolution VI.) Prior to the recommendation of the revised draft resolution, a representative of the Secretariat read out a financial statement. (For the text, see E/CN.15/2013/CRP.10, available on the UNODC website.) In expressing support for the revised draft resolution, the representative of the United States reaffirmed his Government's commitment to continue working with Member States and civil society in improving and updating the Standard Minimum Rules for the Treatment of Prisoners and acknowledged the work of the United Nations in advancing the goals of human rights for all people, including women, lesbians, gay, bisexual, and transgender individuals and persons with disabilities.

A statement was also made by the International Federation of Pharmaceutical Manufacturers and Associations.

A. Deliberations

78. The importance of accurate, timely and reliable crime statistics in guiding policymaking was emphasized. Appreciation was expressed for the work of UNODC in the collection and dissemination of crime and criminal justice data. Speakers encouraged UNODC to continue its role as the global repository for such data and urged States to support UNODC in strengthening the capacities of States to improve the quality and availability of crime data and the quality and comparability of international crime statistics, particularly for crimes that were underreported in official statistics. Speakers welcomed the actions proposed in the road map for the improvement of crime statistics (see E/CN.3/2013/11) and emphasized the need to further develop the international classification of crime for statistical purposes.

79. Some speakers expressed their support for the role of UNODC in the fight against trafficking in cultural property, in collaboration with other relevant intergovernmental organizations, including, in particular, the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization. They called for the finalization of the draft specific guidelines on crime prevention and criminal justice responses with respect to trafficking in cultural property, and stressed the importance of achieving full consensus on the text prior to their adoption. UNODC was called upon to continue working on the model treaty for the prevention of crimes that infringe on the cultural heritage of peoples in the form of movable property, with particular attention to aspects of international cooperation and recognizing the priority of the Organized Crime Convention as the basis for such international cooperation.

80. Several speakers noted the links between illicit financial flows and transnational organized crime, stressing the importance of continuing and strengthening efforts to combat money-laundering and to confiscate and recover the proceeds of crime. The work of the Global Programme against Money-Laundering, Proceeds of Crime and the Financing of Terrorism was acknowledged.

81. Further reference was made to the report of the Executive Director on countering fraudulent medicines, in particular their trafficking, which included an account of the outcome of the technical conference on trafficking in fraudulent medicines, held in Vienna on 14 and 15 February 2013.

82. A number of speakers expressed concern about emerging forms of crime facilitated by modern technology, such as cybercrime. Speakers emphasized, in particular, the impact of cybercrime on developing countries. Some speakers noted the work of the open-ended intergovernmental expert group to conduct a comprehensive study of the problem of cybercrime. In addition to efforts to further examine the problem of cybercrime, some speakers highlighted the importance of establishing mechanisms to foster international cooperation in matters relating to cybercrime through technical assistance, capacity-building and the sharing of good practices.

83. Some speakers referred to the increasingly sophisticated nature of economic fraud and identity-related crime and the related challenges encountered by criminal justice and law enforcement personnel. They further highlighted that the advancement of information technology contributed to the growing links between these forms of crime and other criminal activities, including cybercrime.

84. A number of speakers referred to emerging crimes against the environment, which had a significant impact on the common global existence. Reference was made to the need to increase the availability of statistical information. Other speakers encouraged UNODC to continue to address the challenges posed by crimes committed at sea.

85. Some speakers expressed serious concern about the growing trend of considering matters relating to transnational organized crime in the context of threats to international peace and security within the work of the Commission.

The speaker noted that, although Belarus had not been able to take a position of support for the revised draft resolution, given the importance of those issues and in order to support consensus, Belarus had agreed to the language proposed by the co-sponsors. The representative of Belarus noted that that situation should not create a precedent and that Belarus reserved its right, in the course of the proceedings of the Commission and other international bodies, to demand a very clear and concise implementation of international treaties and instruments and a clear and concise interpretation and understanding of related terms and concepts.

94. At the same meeting, the Commission adopted a draft resolution (E/CN.15/2013/L.14), as revised, sponsored by Algeria, Belarus, Brazil, China, Ecuador, Ghana, India, Indonesia, Iran (Islamic Republic of), Kenya, Namibia, the Russian Federation, Saudi Arabia, South Africa, Sri Lanka, Venezuela (Bolivarian Republic of) and Zimbabwe. 101. The observer for Qatar, the country hosting the Thirteenth Congress, informed the Commission about the preparations in the country for the organization of the event, including the establishment of a preparatory committee to achieve better coordination among the ministries involved. It was envisaged that a youth forum would take place concurrently with the Congress.

102. One speaker referred to the preparations pertaining to the conduct, structure and outcome of the Thirteenth Congress and noted, in particular, the advantages of holding the high-level segment of the Congress within the first two days. However, he also drew the attention of the Commission to the length of time between the high-level segment and the adoption of a single declaration as the outcome of the Congress. In that regard, he proposed that the declaration be “clustered” in different parts, with the first part being negotiated in advance and adopted during the high-level segment, followed by two more parts related to the conclusions and recommendations arising from the deliberations during the Congress and its workshops.

One speaker also emphasized the importance of the principle of multilingualism. A proposal was made to include an additional sub-item entitled “Working methods of the Commission” in the provisional agenda for the twenty-third session. In that context, the Secretariat was requested to seek the views of Member States on the report of the Secretariat on documentation prepared for the Commission on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice (E/CN.15/2013/13) and related documentation, as well as on the Commission’s methods of work in general, and to report on the views received at the twenty-third session of the Commission for appropriate follow-up under agenda item 3.
