Management response to the evaluation of the regional programme for Asia and the Pacific, 2008-2013

Context, background and findings

1. The regional programme for Asia and the Pacific, 2008-2013, was approved by the Executive Board in decision 2008/8 at its first regular session 2008. The regional programme document is framed around four broad themes: (a) poverty reduction and achievement of the Millennium Development Goals (MDGs); (b) democratic governance; (c) crisis prevention and recovery; and (d) environment and sustainable development. The overarching goal is to promote regional initiatives for achieving the MDGs.

2. The evaluation of the regional programme for Asia and the Pacific (DP/2013/xx) examined the results achieved through the 14 thematic programmes under the regional programme for Asia and the Pacific, and the complementary technical support services provided to country offices and other national or regional partners, as defined in the regional programme document (DP/RPD/RAP/1). The evaluation further took into account changes made over time by the Regional Bureau for Asia and the Pacific (RBAP), including the institutional reform of its regional centres undertaken in 2010.

3. The contribution of the programme to the development outcomes was assessed according to a standard set of evaluation criteria used in all regional programme evaluations (relevance, effectiveness, efficiency and sustainability), as well as criteria to examine not just what was delivered but also how it was implemented. The evaluation used a combination of desk reviews of material, field visits to nine selected countries and interviews with various stakeholders, including extensive use of online interviews and a cyber-metric analysis commissioned by the UNDP Evaluation Office to gauge the use of the regional programme's knowledge products on the Internet.

4. The evaluation concluded that, despite the constraints of operating in an extremely diverse region, the RBAP regional programme was highly relevant, had addressed critical regional development challenges and operated efficiently, ensuring programme delivery consistent with RBAP-defined 'regionality' principles, which are unique to the region. The evaluation also assessed that "the regional programme has made important strides to incorporate gender mainstreaming into its policy, programming and implementation. Across focus areas, the regional programme mainstreamed a gender dimension well in both the design and implementation of its projects, as well as in its support to country offices". Lessons from this experience will be carried into the next programme cycle, 2014-2017.

5. The evaluation also concluded that the RBAP Asia-Pacific Regional Centre in Bangkok and the Pacific Centre in Suva have implemented and made important contributions to the achievement of regional programme results and have provided highly valued technical and advisory services, especially by the UNDP country offices. The evaluation also concluded that the development of a parallel programme for the Pacific provided more efficiency gains than losses.

Annex. Key recommendations and management response

Evaluation recommendation 1

RBAP should reconceptualize the regional programme as the instrument playing an important leveraging role within the overall architecture of the UNDP delivery mechanism of development results.

Management response

Relevant and acceptable; response already initiated. The ongoing regional programme for Asia and the Pacific, 2008-2013, was aligned with the current UNDP strategic plan, 2008-2013, towards achieving thematic practice-based outcomes. The new regional programme, 2014-2017, will also be aligned to the new UNDP strategic plan, 2014-2017, but more specifically from a regional context. The new regional programme will be issues-based, focusing on a limited number of strategic areas in order to address priority regional challenges, and to support and bring added value to country programme results.

RBAP should seriously explore ways in which to use an issues-based approach region, and to further encourage cross-practice work within the regional centres				opment challeng	es in the

Management response

Relevant and acceptable; response already initiated. The recommendation for an issues-based approach is strongly supported as it strengthens cross-practice approaches and draws together opportunities for better integrating tools, such as Solutions Exchange and South-South cooperation, into the mode in which the regional programme is delivered. The new regional programme, 2014-2017, will be issues-based, focusing on a limited number of strategic areas in order to address priority regional challenges. An issues-based approach also provides the opportunity for greater flexibility when responding to emerging issues and evolving development challenges, in particular the potential new directions that may emerge from the conclusion of consultations on the MDG post-2015 agenda.

DP/2013/24

Ongoing cross-practice work in APRC and the Pacific Centre, which the evaluation concluded was a 'thriving practice', will be continued and further strengthened through feasible and relevant institutionalization in order to continue supporting coherent, effective interventions at the regional and country levels.

Evaluation recommendation 4

The regional centres should continue to seek appropriate regional or national partners to enhance the effectiveness and sustainability of the regional programme contribution.

Management response

Relevant and acceptable. RBAP recognizes that such partnerships will be at the foundation of the design of interventions and that in all cases it will be vital that the UNDP niche and involvement is defined early in the process. APRC and the Pacific Centre will continue to focus on initiating new and strengthening ongoing regional and national partnerships to ensure the effectiveness and the sustainability of regional programme contributions and results.

4.1 Formulate partnership building strategy for the new regional programme document, with a strong focus on identifying strategic sub-regional and national level partners.	2014	RBAP, APRC, Pacific Centre
4.2 Reflect evaluation recommendations in developing regional programme regional projects.	2014-2017	RBAP, APRC, Pacific Centre

Evaluation recommendation 5

The regional centres should introduce, in the engagement policy with country offices, regular monitoring of progress made and results achieved by the regional programme initiatives and technical support rendered to the country offices.

Management response

Relevant and acceptable; response initiated. This recommendation is in line with the RBAP focus on ensuring that regional programmes complement country programmes, that country programmes are designed in a way to provide space for follow-up on advocacy and policy support initiatives supported initially through the regional programme, and that there is mutual accountability of results between regional and country programmes in relevant programme areas.
