Report of the Secretary-General

[Original text : English]
[29 September 1950]

I. PROGRESS MADE IN THE REGISTRATION AND PUBLICATION OF TREATIES AND INTERNATIONAL AGREEMENTS

1. In accordance with the precedent set in previous years, the Secretary-General has the honour to communicate the following information on the progress made in the registration and publication of treaties and international agreements.

2. There has been a notable increase, during the period from 1 July 1949 to 30 June 1950, in the number of treaties and international agreements registered or filed and recorded with the Secretary-General. During this period, 479 treaties were registered or filed and recorded with the Secretariat. Of this number, 295 were registered or filed and recorded by twenty-two governments, 120 by four specialized agencies, and 64 ex officio by the Secretariat. In comparison with the figures for the corresponding period of last year, there has been an increase of 133 treaties registered or filed and recorded. This increase may be said to be partly due to the inclusion of a considerable number of agreements which were concluded between the United Nations International Children's Emergency Fund and various Member and non-member States. It may also be noted that a substantially greater number of agreements have been registered by specialized agencies, particularly by the International Civil Aviation Organization and the International Labour Organisation, as a result of special arrangements with these agencies designed to implement article 4 of the regulations to give effect to Article 102 of the Charter.¹

3. From 1 July 1950 to 31 August 1950, 85 new treaties and international agreements were registered or filed and recorded.

4. From 14 December 1946, when the General Assembly adopted the regulations to give effect to Article 102 of the Charter of the United Nations, to 30 August 1950,

1,024 treaties and agreements were registered. Of this number, 106 were registered ex officio, 771 by twenty-eight governments, and 147 by four specialized agencies. During the same period, 259 treaties and agreements were filed and recorded: 219 by twelve governments, 32 by the Secretariat, and 8 by three specialized agencies. This represents a total of 1,283 treaties and agreements registered or filed and recorded up to 30 August 1950.

5. Since his report presented to the General Assembly at its fourth session,² 913 certificates of registration have been issued by the Secretary-General, bringing the number of certificates issued to date to 2,229.

6. During the fourth session of the General Assembly, the Sixth Committee manifested special interest in ensuring the earliest possible publication of treaties registered or filed and recorded. In consequence, a special effort has been made to have registered treaties published with the least possible delay. The thirty-seventh volume of the United Nations Treaty Series appeared on 12 August 1950. Of the thirty-seven volumes, nineteen, or more than half the total, have been published in the course of the last twelve months. Fifteen further volumes have been sent to the printers, and it is expected that the interval between registration and publication will be reduced by the end of this year to about six months. In addition, it should be noted that an index volume, covering the treaties contained in the first fifteen volumes of the Treaty Series has been published, and the second volume, covering a further fifteen volumes, is in an advanced stage of preparation and will soon be in the hands of the printers.

II. ECONOMIES WHICH MAY BE EFFECTED IN THE REGISTRATION AND PUBLICATION OF TREATIES AND INTERNATIONAL AGREEMENTS

7. In its thirteenth report of 1948,³ the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions drew attention to the considerable expenditure involved in the registration and publication of treaties. Further, in its second report of 1949 to the General Assembly,⁴ the Advisory Committee stated that it had "again given consideration to the heavy expenditure involved in the registration, translation and printing of the Treaty Series...". The Committee was of the opinion that:

"A substantial economy in this field is possible of achievement, if the General Assembly could see its way to assent to a modification of the prevailing practice in order to grant discretion to the Secretary-General, in consultation with the contracting parties, to dispense with the publication of voluminous annexes to treaties dealing with commercial or technical matters of an ephemeral character".

³ A/744; see Official Records of the General Assembly, Third Session, Part I, Plenary meetings, Annexes, p. 447, par. 16.

⁴ A/934; see Official Records of the General Assembly, Fourth Session, Supplement No. 7, p. 23, par. 116.

⁵ See Official Records of the General Assembly, Fourth Session, Fifth Committee, summary record of the 202nd meeting, p. 100, par. 9, 17-21.

8. These observations of the Advisory Committee were considered by the Fifth⁵ and Sixth⁶ Committees during the fourth session of the General Assembly. Before both of these Committees, the Assistant Secretary-General in charge of the Legal Department stated that the Legal Department was studying how the regulations to give effect to Article 102 of the Charter worked in practice, and that the Secretary-General intended to submit to the General Assembly, at its fifth session, a report reviewing all the economies which might be effected in the registration and publication of treaties and including proposals to adapt the regulations to circumstances.

9. In pursuance of the above, the Secretary-General submitted to the Advisory Committee on 9 June 1950 a memorandum entitled "Review of economies which may be effected in the registration and publication of treaties" (A/C.N.1/R.24). The Advisory Committee considered this memorandum and recorded its conclusions in its second report of 1950 to the General Assembly.⁷

10. In his memorandum to the Advisory Committee, the Secretary-General set out a concrete list of possible economies under two headings: "Review of economies requiring amendments to the regulations" and "Review of economies not requiring amendments to the regulations".

11. In the former group, an amendment was considered to article 12 of the regulations to the effect that the Treaty Series should be published only in English and French. At the present time this article requires that "the Secretariat shall publish as soon as possible in a single series every treaty or international agreement which is registered, or filed and recorded, in the original language or languages, followed by a translation in English and in French". The use of a variety of languages involves considerable extra editorial, translation and type-setting work, and some inevitable delay in publication. A comparison of the actual cost of publishing the first fourteen volumes and the cost had the French and English languages only been used indicates that a saving of $15,000 would have been effected, representing an economy of about 25 per cent on the total cost of publication. A further study in respect of later volumes indicates similar results.

12. It was observed in the memorandum to the Advisory Committee that such an amendment might involve no more than a reasonable interpretation of Article 102 of the Charter, and that the words "to publish" do not carry the implication "to publish in its original form" but only to make public, to submit to general circulation, in a manner that will fulfil the underlying purpose of Article 102.

⁷ A/1312; see Official Records of the General Assembly, Fifth Session, Supplement No. 7, p. 56, par. 329-332.

13. With reference to this possible amendment, the Advisory Committee remarked in its report that one of the main purposes of Article 102 of the Charter was to ensure that the contents of every international instrument to which a Member of the United Nations is a party should be made known without delay. It further commented as follows :

“ This purpose would be adequately fulfilled by publication in English and French, particularly since those are the languages of the International Court of Justice, the organ before which registered treaties and agreements are most frequently invoked. Publication on this basis would produce an appreciable economy in the budget.

“ The question at issue has already been the subject of consideration by the General Assembly, which had before it a proposal (A/C.6/1) to limit the number of languages in which the Treaty Series should be published. Nevertheless, it was decided to adopt article 12 of the regulations in the following form :

“ ‘The Secretariat shall publish... every treaty or international agreement which is registered... in the original language or languages, followed by a translation in English and in French...’

“ However competently performed, a translation cannot represent the exact equivalent of an original text. Even if certified by the contracting parties, it must necessarily have a validity inferior to that of the original, a consideration implicit in the practice of verifying all translations of instruments, including official translations, not prepared by the Organization.”⁸

In concluding, the Advisory Committee suggested that, instead of amending article 12 of the regulations, Members of the United Nations should be invited to submit, wherever possible, a translation in either English or French.

14. In connexion with this question, it is of interest to note that the International Law Commission, in its report to the General Assembly covering its second session⁹ stated that it “ attaches special importance to the continuance of the present language system of the United Nations Treaty Series, i.e., reproduction of the original text with translations—as essential to the general usefulness of the Series ”.

15. The second possible amendment to the regulations concerned article 7, to the effect that certificates of registration, instead of being issued to the registering party or agency and also to all signatories and parties to the international agreement being registered, might be issued only to the registering party or agency. The present requirement of this article has entailed considerable secretarial work. It may be thought that the issuance of certificates to all other signatories and parties is of little practical value since, under articles 13 and 14 of the regulations, the Secretariat is required in any case to publish and send to all Members every month a statement of all treaties and international agreements registered or filed and recorded during each month.

16. The Advisory Committee has stated in its report that it was in agreement with these considerations and that it understood that savings would ensue if article 7 of the regulations were so amended.¹⁰

17. The third and last instance involving an amendment to the regulations, in this case article 8, would permit the Register to be kept only in English and French. At present, article 8 stipulates that “ The Register shall be kept in the five official languages of the United Nations ”. This necessitates the maintenance of five separate registers, each containing all the particulars of each treaty or international agreement required by the other provisions of article 8. It may be that few practical reasons will be found for continuing, at not inconsiderable expense, these multilingual entries in what its essentially an intra-Secretariat record. On this possible amendment the Advisory Committee reached the conclusion that “ economy would result if the Register were kept in English and French ”.¹¹

18. Reference may now be made to the suggestions as to economies not requiring amendments to the regulations. The first of these noted that the publication of certain annexes to treaties could be dispensed with. There are types of annexes to treaties or international agreements which, being in no way essential to an understanding of the main documents, might well be excluded from publication without any departure from the legal requirements of the regulations themselves. This would be done only after consultation, of course, between the Secretariat and the registering parties, having regard to the importance of the particular annexes in relation to their bulk. An example of a case in which this procedure had been followed was cited to the Advisory Committee which, in its report, stated that it was “ a method which has already produced satisfactory results ”. The Committee also observed that, “ since a condition precedent to registration is that the complete text of the instrument shall be submitted, the omission from the Treaty Series of a part or the whole of an annex to a treaty or agreement could not be construed as affecting the validity of the registration ”.¹²

19. A further and analogous suggestion involved dispensing with the publication in full of virtually identical texts all based on a standard model. It was submitted that much duplication of material in the Treaty Series might be avoided by omitting the repetitive portions of such treaties or agreements, at least when all were published together. The Advisory Committee upheld this view, stating in its report that it believed that “ appreciable savings are possible by dispensing with the publication of model texts, particularly in cases where the duplication of almost identical material is involved".¹³

20. The next economy would derive from printing the Treaty Series abroad. It appeared from inquiries made that a saving of about 30 per cent could be made if the Treaty Series were printed in Europe. The factor presenting the greatest difficulty in this connexion is the necessity of publishing the original languages where these are not English and French. During 1950, as a trial measure, three volumes which represented simple projects in English and French only were assigned for printing in Europe and, under subsequent arrangements, the whole of the printing of the Treaty Series is currently being transferred to Europe. The Advisory Committee had reported that it was "of opinion that, in present circumstances, the resulting saving of more than 30 per cent is a consideration of first importance".¹⁴

21. It is clear from present indications, however, that this will involve a reduction in the speed of production, although it is nevertheless expected, as stated previously, that the gap between the registration and publication of treaties will be reduced to six months by the end of 1950. It may thus be hoped that the special efforts undertaken pursuant to resolution 364 (IV) of the General Assembly will not be too greatly jeopardized, so long as the present language requirements exist, by the distance between Headquarters and the European printing firms and by the loss of day-to-day contact between the printers and the Secretariat.

22. Another possible way of reducing expenses is to reduce to a minimum the free issue of the Treaty Series. It may be noted that, during 1949, out of a total of 2,300 copies printed per volume, the following number per volume were distributed gratis: 198 to delegations; 88 to the Secretariat; and 555 to the free mailing list. The Advisory Committee recommended that "as regards the Treaty Series, every effort be made to reduce the free mailing list and the distribution within the Secretariat". The Committee also referred to the necessity for establishing a criterion for the guidance of the Secretariat in this matter.¹⁵

23. Finally, two minor possibilities were noted concerning the actual printing of the Treaty Series, involving the use of a lower quality of paper and a smaller type. Regarding the latter point it has been ascertained that about $3,000 might be saved in this way per annum. The Advisory Committee, in its report, drew attention to the economies which would be possible by the adoption of these proposals.¹⁶

Financial implications of the draft resolution on agenda item 54 proposed by the Sixth Committee (A/1626) : note by the Secretary-General

[7 December 1950]

1. At its 246th meeting, the Sixth Committee adopted a draft resolution on the registration and publication of treaties and international agreements. In this draft resolution the Secretary-General is requested "when acting under article 12 of the regulations to give effect to Article 102 of the Charter of the United Nations, to continue, as economically as practicable, without undue delay and without sacrifice of uniformity in style and record permanence, to publish all treaties and international agreements in their full and unabridged form, including all annexes, provided however, that in the reproduction of annexes, he may in his discretion employ less expensive methods of reproduction." In section 26, Publications, of the budget estimates for the financial year 1951 (A/1267) funds have been requested for publishing fifteen volumes of the Treaty Series. The estimates contained therein were based on the publication of the text of treaties without the annexes. If all the annexes were to be published, additional funds would be necessary.

2. The original estimates, as contained in section 26 of the budget estimates (A/1267) amounted to $48,000 for fifteen volumes of treaties. The inclusion of all annexes would increase the total number of Treaty Series volumes from fifteen to thirty-five in 1951. The total extra cost involved in this draft resolution would therefore amount to about $55,000 for the additional volumes (at an average price of $2,750 per volume) to be added to section 26, Publications, of the 1951 budget estimates.

Report of the Sixth Committee

[5 December 1950]

1. During the fourth session of the General Assembly, the Fifth and Sixth Committees considered the question of the considerable expenditure involved in the registration and publication of treaties which had been brought to the attention of the General Assembly by the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions in its second report of 1949 (A/934).¹⁷ Both Committees were informed that the Legal Department of the Secretariat was studying how the regulations to give effect to Article 102 of the Charter¹⁸ worked in practice, and that the Secretary-General intended to submit to the General Assembly at its fifth session a report reviewing possible economies in this field and including, if necessary, proposals to adapt the regulations to the circumstances.

2. A memorandum on this question was submitted by the Secretary-General to the Advisory Committee on 9 June 1950 (A/CN.1/R.24). The Advisory Committee considered this memorandum and recorded its conclusions in its second report of 1950 to the General Assembly (A/1312).¹⁹

3. The question of the registration and publication of treaties was consequently placed on the agenda of the fifth session of the General Assembly which, at its 285th plenary meeting on 26 September 1950, referred the item to the Sixth Committee for consideration.

4. The Sixth Committee considered the item at its 246th meeting on 29 November 1950. The Committee had before it three documents bearing on the question : a report of the Secretary-General (A/1408), a draft resolution submitted by the United States of America (A/C.6/L.154) and amendments to the United States resolution proposed by the United Kingdom (A/C.6/L.156).

5. In his report, the Secretary-General informed the General Assembly of the progress made in the registration and publication of treaties and gave a review of the economies which might be effected in this field.

6. The discussion in the Committee centred mainly around paragraph 4 of the United States draft resolution concerning the publication of annexes, and the amendments to this paragraph proposed by the United Kingdom.

7. It was pointed out in this connexion that an annex was normally an integral part of a treaty or agreement and often constituted the most important part of the whole text, that the omission from publication of annexes would defeat the underlying purpose of Article 102 of the Charter, that such procedure, if adopted, might provide a loophole which would enable States to withhold vital details of a treaty from publication, and that it was clear from the provisions both of Article 102 of the Charter and article 5 of the regulations, that what should be published was a " true and complete " copy of the agreement. Attention was also drawn to certain difficulties which might face the Secretary-General should a procedure be adopted whereby, with the consent of a registering party, he could refrain from publishing an annex to a treaty. Similar fears were also expressed in connexion with the amendment which would authorize the Secretary-General to refrain from publishing in its entirety a treaty or agreement, the text of which was almost identical with the text of one which had already been published, especially in view of the imprecise meaning of the words " almost identical ".

8. It was argued on the other hand that the United Kingdom amendment would not in any way enable States to evade the obligation to register the complete text of an agreement including annexes; that its only purpose was to refrain from publishing detailed and unessential annexes in the Treaty Series. The references to such annexes would remain in the text of the treaty and the annexes themselves would be available for inspection by any Government wishing to consult them.

9. In the course of the discussion, the representative of the United Kingdom accepted a Canadian suggestion to revise his first amendment to the effect that a certificate of registration should also be issued, upon request, to any party to the treaty or international agreement registered.

10. The representative of the United Kingdom also revised sub-paragraph (b) of his third amendment by substituting for the word " publishing " the following text : " printing in the United Nations Treaty Series ".

11. The Committee then proceeded to the vote with the following results :

12. The first United Kingdom amendment, as modified, to insert a new paragraph 3 in the United States draft resolution, was adopted by 38 votes to 2, with no abstentions.

13. In this connexion, the representative of the United States of America stated that it was the understanding of his delegation that the words " upon request " in this amendment applied to both individual and standing requests for certificates of registration by States parties to the registered treaties.

¹⁸ See General Assembly resolutions 97 (I) of 14 December 1946 and 364 B (IV) of 1 December 1949.

¹⁹ See Official Records of the General Assembly, Fifth Session, Supplement No. 7, p. 56, par. 329-332.

14. Sub-paragraph (b) of the third United Kingdom amendment was rejected by 21 votes to 13, with 5 abstentions.

15. The representative of Yugoslavia proposed the deletion of the word "almost" in sub-paragraph (c) of the United Kingdom amendment. This proposal was rejected by 17 votes to 3, with 15 abstentions. Sub-paragraph (c) of the United Kingdom amendment was then rejected by 20 votes to 12, with 8 abstentions.

16. In view of the rejection of sub-paragraphs (b) and (c), sub-paragraph (a) of the United Kingdom amendment was not put to the vote.

17. The Committee also did not vote on the second United Kingdom amendment which dealt merely with drafting matters.

18. At the request of the representative of Peru, the Committee took a separate vote on paragraph 4 (formerly paragraph 3) of the draft resolution and adopted it by 23 votes to 8, with 9 abstentions.

19. The amended draft resolution as a whole was adopted by 39 votes to none, with 2 abstentions.

20. The Sixth Committee therefore recommends to the General Assembly for adoption the following draft resolution :

REGISTRATION AND PUBLICATION OF TREATIES AND INTERNATIONAL AGREEMENTS

The General Assembly,

Having considered the report of the Secretary-General on the registration and publication of treaties and international agreements (A/1408), and the observations in this regard of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions (second report of 1950, A/1312),

1. Notes with satisfaction the progress achieved in regard to the registration and publication of treaties;

2. Invites Member and non-member States parties to treaties or international agreements subject to publication under article 12 of the regulations to give effect to Article 102 of the Charter of the United Nations to provide the Secretary-General, where feasible, with translations in English or French or both as may be needed for the purposes of such publication;

3. Amends article 7 of the regulations to give effect to Article 102 of the Charter of the United Nations to read :

A certificate of registration signed by the Secretary-General or his representative shall be issued to the registering party or agency and also, upon request, to any party to the treaty or international agreement registered;

4. Amends the first sentence of paragraph 1 of article 8 of the regulations to give effect to Article 102 of the Charter of the United Nations to read :

1. The register shall be kept in the English and French languages;

5. Requests the Secretary-General, when acting under article 12 of the regulations to give effect to Article 102 of the Charter of the United Nations, to continue, as economically as practicable, without undue delay and without sacrifice of uniformity in style and record permanence, to publish all treaties and international agreements in their full and unabridged form, including all annexes, provided however, that, in the reproduction of annexes, he may in his discretion employ less expensive methods of reproduction;

6. Requests the Secretary-General regularly to review the free mailing list with a view to its possible reduction.

Financial implications of the draft resolution on agenda item 54, proposed by the Sixth Committee (A/1626) : thirty-fifth report of 1950 of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions

[Original text : English]
[9 December 1950]

1. The Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions has considered a report submitted by the Secretary-General (A/C.5/434), on the financial implications of the draft resolution proposed by the Sixth Committee (A/1626).

2. Under paragraph 5 of the proposed resolution, the Secretary-General is requested to publish in full and unabridged form not only all treaties and international agreements which are registered, but all annexes to such instruments. This provision will clearly lead to a considerable expansion in the volume of material for publication, since it has hitherto been the practice to dispense in certain cases²⁰ with the publication in full of virtually identical texts based on a standard model. In other cases also it has been found possible, with the concurrence of the contracting parties, to omit voluminous annexes, which often constitute a larger volume of material than the treaty or agreement to which they are appended.

3. On the basis of the provisions of the proposed resolution, the additional expenditure for 1951 is estimated at $55,000, representing the cost of publishing a further twenty volumes over and above the fifteen volumes for which provision exists under section 26 of the original budget estimates.²¹

4. Discretion is granted to the Secretary-General, under paragraph 5 of the proposed resolution, to employ less expensive methods of reproducing annexes and, accordingly, the Advisory Committee recommends that the estimate of the additional expenditure under section 26 of the 1951 budget should be approved at the figure of $50,000 or a reduction of $5,000 on the figure submitted. The Committee trusts that the Secretary-General will continue to study methods for reducing the heavy additional expenditure to which the publication of the Treaty Series under the terms of this resolution now gives rise.

5. As regards the related expenditure for the translation of the Treaty Series, the Advisory Committee was informed that no additional funds would be required during 1951 in consequence of the provisions of the draft resolution.

DOCUMENT A/1663

Financial implications of the draft resolution on agenda item 54, proposed by the Sixth Committee (A/1626) : report of the Fifth Committee

[Original text : English]

1. In accordance with rule 152 of the rules of procedure of the General Assembly and with the request of the President in his letter dated 1 December 1950 to the Chairman of the Fifth Committee (A/C.5/425), the Fifth Committee, at its 278th meeting held on 11 December 1950, considered the financial implications of the draft resolution adopted by the Sixth Committee on registration and publication of treaties and international agreements (A/1626).

2. The Fifth Committee had before it a note by the Secretary-General (A/C.5/434) pointing out that the estimates for section 26 (Publications) of the budget estimates, as originally submitted, were based on the publication of the text of treaties without the annexes. The inclusion of all annexes, as required under paragraph 5 of the draft resolution, would increase the total number of the Treaty Series volumes to be produced in 1951 from fifteen to thirty-five, and would involve additional funds amounting to approximately $55,000.

3. In its thirty-fifth report of 1950 (A/1652), the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions concurred in the Secretary-General's estimates, but noted that under paragraph 5 of the draft resolution, discretion is granted to the Secretary-General to employ less expensive methods of reproducing annexes. Accordingly, the Advisory Committee recommended that the estimate of the additional expenditure which would be incurred under section 26 of the 1951 budget should be approved at the figure of $50,000. The hope was expressed that the Secretary-General would continue to study methods of reducing the heavy additional expenditure which will be incurred as a result of the publication of the Treaty Series under the terms of the draft resolution of the Sixth Committee.

4. The recommendations of the Advisory Committee were approved by 35 votes to 1, with 3 abstentions.

5. The Fifth Committee therefore decided to inform the General Assembly that adoption of the draft resolution of the Sixth Committee will require the provision of additional funds under section 26 of the 1951 budget in the amount of $50,000.

[29 September 1950]

1. The Headquarters Agreement between the United Nations and the United States of America, under article III on laws applicable and competent authority in the Headquarters district (see Annex), provides that this area shall be under the control and authority of the United Nations as provided in the Agreement. The federal, state and local law of the United States applies within the Headquarters district except as the Headquarters Agreement (or the Convention on the Privileges and Immunities of the United Nations, when acceded to by the United States) may provide otherwise.

2. Section 8 of article III of the Agreement specifically confers upon the United Nations "the power to make regulations, operative within the Headquarters district, for the purpose of establishing therein conditions in all respects necessary for the full execution of its functions. No federal, state or local law or regulation of the United States which is inconsistent with a regulation of the United Nations authorized by this section shall, to the extent of such inconsistency, be applicable within the Headquarters district". Further, section 10 provides that the United Nations may expel or exclude persons from the Headquarters district for violation of its regulations adopted under section 8, but other penalties are left to the appropriate American authorities.

Thus also, under section 7 (d), the federal, state and local courts of the United States, when dealing with cases arising out of or relating to acts done or transactions taking place in the Headquarters district, will take into account the regulations enacted by the United Nations.

3. The General Assembly, in resolution 169 A (II) approving the Headquarters Agreement signed on 26 June 1947, authorized the Secretary-General "to perform on behalf of the United Nations such acts or functions as may be required by that Agreement". This authority, however, is of a general nature. Since the adoption of formal regulations in the name of the United Nations will have important legal consequences, the Secretary General would therefore prefer to receive an express authorization from the General Assembly for the promulgation of such regulations as may prove necessary under the terms of section 8 of the Agreement. The Secretary-General accordingly takes this occasion to acquaint the General Assembly with the following considerations, upon the basis of which he would prepare such regulations.

4. It is clear from the terms of the Headquarters Agreement that the Headquarters regulations are to have effect within the territory comprising the Headquarters district. Being operative within the district, they may thus refer to the territory comprising the Headquarters district, or to acts that might be done within its limits, or to transactions that may be deemed in law or in fact to take place in that district. For the most part, they will concern the administration of the Headquarters itself—the maintenance of the buildings and grounds, the control of traffic within the district, dispositions for supervising the necessary services and concessions, necessary contractual arrangements to be concluded within the district, and like subjects.

5. As it is a serious matter, however, to create an inconsistency affecting the operation of the internal law of a Member State, the regulations should be designed to cause a minimum of legal conflict. To this end, regulations on any given subject should be promulgated only as practical experience in the administration and maintenance of the Headquarters demonstrates them to be in all respects necessary for the full execution of United Nations functions. It would, of course, be undesirable to attempt to set up a priori an entire code, as it were, of legislative matter with the intent of superseding the established laws on all subjects which might in due course require regulation within the Headquarters district. Nevertheless, although a regulation which might conflict with otherwise applicable law should not, on the one hand, be promulgated in advance of necessity; on the other hand a situation in which an American law might undesirably bear upon the Headquarters district ought in every case to be dealt with promptly.

6. It is important that all regulations in the sense of section 8—that is, all regulations which are intended to govern the Headquarters district and which it is reasonably expected may, either at the time of adoption or thereafter, involve some inconsistency with federal, state or local law—should be drafted in such form as to permit their collection and publication as a unified body of rules to which the appropriate American authorities can turn in order to know to what extent their own responsibilities may be affected by the regulations for the Headquarters district.

7. It is accordingly the suggestion of the Secretary-General that he be specifically authorized by the General Assembly to issue regulations for the Headquarters district in accordance with section 8 of the Agreement, when and as necessary. He will thus be in a position to issue regulations on relatively short notice, avoiding the necessity, for example, of waiting from one session of the General Assembly till the next for formal enactment of such regulations as prove requisite. The Secretary-General will then report to each next subsequent session of the General Assembly any such regulations adopted. In this manner, the General Assembly will in all cases be fully apprised of the policy considerations on which any given regulations are based, while at the same time their entry into force for the Headquarters district will not be delayed.

ANNEX

AGREEMENT BETWEEN THE UNITED NATIONS AND THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA REGARDING THE HEADQUARTERS OF THE UNITED NATIONS

Article III

LAWS AND APPLICABLE AND COMPETENT AUTHORITY IN THE HEADQUARTERS DISTRICT

Section 7

(a) The Headquarters district shall be under the control and authority of the United Nations as provided in this agreement.

(b) Except as otherwise provided in this agreement or in the General Convention, the federal, state and local law of the United States shall apply within the Headquarters district.

(c) Except as otherwise provided in this agreement or in the General Convention, the federal, state and local courts of the United States shall have jurisdiction over acts done and transactions taking place in the Headquarters district as provided in applicable federal, state and local laws.

(d) The federal, state and local courts of the United States, when dealing with cases arising out of or relating to acts done or transactions taking place in the Headquarters district, shall take into account the regulations enacted by the United Nations under section 8.

Section 8

The United Nations shall have the power to make regulations, operative within the Headquarters district, for the purpose of establishing therein conditions in all respects necessary for the full execution of its functions. No federal, state or local law or regulation of the United States which is inconsistent with a regulation of the United Nations authorized by this section shall, to the extent of such inconsistency, be applicable within the Headquarters district. Any dispute, between the United Nations and the United States, as to whether a regulation of the United Nations is authorized by this section or as to whether a federal, state or local law or regulation is inconsistent with any regulation of the United Nations authorized by this section, shall be promptly settled as provided in section 21. Pending such settlement, the regulation of the United Nations shall apply, and the federal, state or local law or regulation shall be inapplicable in the Headquarters district to the extent that the United Nations claims it to be inconsistent with the regulation of the United Nations. This section shall not prevent the reasonable application of fire protection regulations of the appropriate American authorities.

Section 9

(a) The Headquarters district shall be inviolable. Federal, state or local officers or officials of the United States, whether administrative, judicial, military or police, shall not enter the Headquarters district to perform any official duties therein except with the consent of and under conditions agreed to by the Secretary-General. The service of legal process, including the seizure of private property, may take place within the Headquarters district only with the consent of and under conditions approved by the Secretary-General.

(b) Without prejudice to the provisions of the General Convention or article IV of this agreement, the United Nations shall prevent the Headquarters district from becoming a refuge either for persons who are avoiding arrest under the federal, state or local law of the United States or are required by the Government of the United States for extradition to another country, or for persons who are endeavouring to avoid service of legal process.

Section 10

The United Nations may expel or exclude persons from the Headquarters district for violation of its regulations adopted under section 8 or for other cause. Persons who violate such regulations shall be subject to other penalties or to detention under arrest only in accordance with the provisions of such laws or regulations as may be adopted by the appropriate American authorities.

Article VIII

Section 21

(a) Any dispute between the United Nations and the United States concerning the interpretation or application of this agreement or of any supplemental agreement, which is not settled by negotiation or other agreed mode of settlement, shall be referred for final decision to a tribunal of three arbitrators, one to be named by the Secretary-General, one to be named by the Secretary of State of the United States, and the third to be chosen by the two, or, if they should fail to agree upon a third, then by the President of the International Court of Justice.

(b) The Secretary-General or the United States may ask the General Assembly to request of the International Court of Justice an advisory opinion on any legal question arising in the course of such proceedings. Pending the receipt of the opinion of the Court, an interim decision of the arbitral tribunal shall be observed by both parties. Thereafter, the arbitral tribunal shall render a final decision, having regard to the opinion of the Court.

Report of the Sixth Committee

[8 December 1950]

1. The question of regulations to give effect to article III, section 8, of the Headquarters Agreement between the United Nations and the United States of America was placed on the agenda of the fifth session of the General Assembly by the Secretary-General. At its 285th plenary meeting on 26 September 1950, the General Assembly referred the item to the Sixth Committee for consideration.

2. In a report of the Secretary-General on the subject (A/1409), he drew attention to the terms of section 8 of the Headquarters Agreement, which confers upon the United Nations the power to make necessary regulations operative within the Headquarters district which, to the extent of their inconsistency with the federal, state or local laws of the United States, would have the effect of superseding the latter within the Headquarters district.

3. The Secretary-General noted that the General Assembly, in resolution 169 A (II) approving the Headquarters Agreement, had authorized him to perform on behalf of the United Nations the functions required by the Agreement. He suggested, however, that it was desirable that there should be a more specific authorization by the General Assembly for the issuance of any regulations which would cause federal, state or local laws, to the extent of their inconsistency, to be inapplicable within the Headquarters district. As any such regulations would be designed to further the good management of the Headquarters district, he noted that their content would be largely administrative in character. The Secretary-General therefore considered that they might appropriately be issued by him, and that he should then report to each subsequent session of the General Assembly any regulations adopted.

4. The Sixth Committee considered the item at its 248th and 249th meetings on 1 and 4 December 1950. During the discussions, it was emphasized that the authority of the United Nations in this respect was a limited one and that inconsistency between the Headquarters regulations and the domestic law were unlikely to be either of frequent occurrence or of any considerable scope. Moreover, it was noted that, because of the essentially administrative nature of the problem, the Secretary-General was in a position to judge what regulations would be necessary for the carrying out of the organizational functions at Headquarters.

5. At the same time it was felt that, in view of the relationship between the regulations and domestic legislation, it was preferable to have a deliberative body with the prestige of the General Assembly take cognizance of all such regulations. It was only necessary that the general principle of approval by the General Assembly should not prevent the Secretary-General from issuing regulations which, in his opinion, were needed for immediate entry into effect.

6. A joint draft resolution to this end (A/C.6/L.163) was accordingly introduced by Canada, Denmark, Syria and the United Kingdom and, after discussion by the Committee and further clarification of the text by its sponsors, was unanimously adopted.

7. In the course of the discussion, the representative of the United States of America referred to the fact that attention had been drawn by some delegations to the closure of the delegates' bar at the interim headquarters during the fourth session of the General Assembly. He offered a proposal by which the Assembly could at once make some appropriate regulation on the matter; but as it was generally recognized that the problem could be adequately handled by regulations which the Secretary-General would in the normal course of events propose concerning all facilities in the Headquarters District, he withdrew his proposal as being unnecessary.

8. The Sixth Committee therefore recommends to the General Assembly for adoption the following draft resolution :

REGULATIONS TO GIVE EFFECT TO ARTICLE III, SECTION 8, OF THE HEADQUARTERS AGREEMENT BETWEEN THE UNITED NATIONS AND THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA

The General Assembly,

Bearing in mind the provisions of article III, section 8, of the Agreement between the United Nations and the United States of America concerning the Headquarters of the United Nations, approved by resolution 169 (II) of the General Assembly,

Having considered the report of the Secretary-General on the regulations to give effect to section 8 of the Headquarters Agreement,

1. Requests the Secretary-General to present to the General Assembly for approval any draft regulation within the provisions of the Headquarters Agreement which may in his opinion be necessary for the full execution of the functions of the United Nations;

2. Decides that, if in the opinion of the Secretary-General it is necessary to give immediate effect to any regulation within the provisions of the Headquarters Agreement, he shall have authority to make such regulation. The Secretary-General shall report any action so taken to the General Assembly as soon as possible.

I. INTRODUCTION

1. The Secretary-General, whilst exercising his functions as the depositary of the conventions which have been adopted or approved by the General Assembly and of the many other multilateral instruments which have been concluded under the auspices of the United Nations, has from time to time been concerned with the procedure to be followed with respect to reservations as to the terms of such conventions which may be made by States as a condition to their accession.

2. While it is universally recognized that the consent of the other governments concerned must be sought before they can be bound by the terms of a reservation, there has not been unanimity either as to the procedure to be followed by a depositary in obtaining the necessary consent or as to the legal effect of a State's objecting to a reservation.

3. The question has acquired a current importance in connexion with the Convention on the Prevention and Punishment of the Crime of Genocide. A number of States have to date made reservations as to specific articles of that Convention at the time of signature, and certain other States have incorporated reservations in their instruments of ratification or accession. Other States having recorded their dissent from some of the terms of these reservations, but without its appearing that all the interested parties necessarily foresee the same legal consequences deriving from these dissents, the Secretary-General has felt it his duty to place clearly before the General Assembly, for its approval and advice, the principles which he has considered necessary to follow in the interests both of an efficient performance of depositary functions and of the maximum usefulness of multilateral conventions in the development of international law.

II. PRACTICE OF THE SECRETARY-GENERAL

4. Normally, the multilateral conventions thus far concluded under the auspices of the United Nations contain no stipulations regarding the making of reservations. Only the Revised General Act for the Pacific Settlement of International Disputes, as adopted by the General Assembly at its third session (resolution 268 (III)), expressly permits, as did the original Act, the making of specified reservations. In pre-existing treaties, however, from the time of the League of Nations, similar clauses have regulated the making of reservations, while other clauses have expressly excluded reservations of any type.

5. In the absence of stipulations in a particular convention regarding the procedure to be followed in the making and accepting of reservations, the Secretary-General, in his capacity as depositary, has held to the broad principle that a reservation may be definitively accepted only after it has been ascertained that there is no objection on the part of any of the other States directly concerned. If the convention is already in force, the consent, express or implied, is thus required of all States which have become parties up to the date on which the reservation is offered. Should the convention not yet have entered into force, an instrument of ratification or accession offered with a reservation can be accepted in definitive deposit only with the consent of all States which have ratified or acceded by the date of entry into force.

6. Thus, the Secretary-General, on receipt of a signature or instrument of ratification or accession, subject to a reservation, to a convention not yet in force, has formally notified the reservation to all States which may become parties to the convention. In so doing, he has also asked those States which have ratified or acceded to the convention to inform him of their attitude towards the reservation, at the same time advising them that, unless they notify him of objections thereto prior to a certain date—normally the date of entry into force of the convention—it would be his understanding that they had accepted the reservation. States ratifying or acceding without express objection, subsequent to notice of a reservation, are advised of the Secretary-General's assumption that they have agreed to the reservation. If the convention were already in force when the reservation was received, the procedure would not differ substantially, except that a reasonable time for the receipt of objections would be allowed before tacit consent could properly be assumed.

III. PRACTICE OF THE LEAGUE OF NATIONS

7. In following the practice referred to above, the Secretary-General has of course done no more than follow the practice already established by the League of Nations. Its Committee of Experts for the Progressive Codification of International Law, for example, reported to the Council of the League that:

"In order that any reservation whatever may be validly made in regard to a clause of the treaty, it is essential that this reservation should be accepted by all the contracting parties, as would have been the case if it had been put forward in the course of the negotiations. If not, the reservation, like the signature to which it is attached, is null and void".¹

8. Judge Hudson in his International Legislation confirms that this was the League policy:

"The Secretariat of the League of Nations has scrupulously observed this principle; when the United States offered for deposit its adhesion to the Slavery Convention of 25 September 1926, subject to a reservation, the instrument was received only subject to the acceptance of the reservation by other States parties to the Convention."²

9. Concurring on this same point, the Harvard Research in International Law says of the League Secretariat "... that it apparently does not regard an accession which is subject to reservations as definitively deposited until those reservations have been communicated to and accepted by the States signatories of or parties to the treaty concerned".³

10. Some other examples of this requirement of unanimous consent have been given by Judge Hudson,⁴ who describes the clause expressly incorporating the rule in the Convention for the Prevention and Punishment of Terrorism (1937) as an invention of the Legal Section of the League Secretariat. Article 23, paragraph 2, of that Convention provided:

"In the event of any objection being received, the Secretary-General of the League of Nations shall inform the Government which desired to make the reservation and request it to inform him whether it is prepared to ratify or accede without the reservation or whether it prefers to abstain from ratification or accession".

This clause, notes Judge Hudson, "establishes that when reservations other than those agreed to at the time of signature are proposed, the alternatives are absence of objection from any State consulted, on the one hand, and abstention from proceeding to the deposit of a ratification or accession, on the other hand. It serves as a needed guide not only to international administrative officials, but also to Governments themselves. Many difficulties may be avoided if this or some provision along similar lines should become a standard article for multipartite conventions."⁵

IV. PREVIOUS INSTANCES OF THE PRACTICE OF THE SECRETARY-GENERAL

11. Although the Secretary-General of the United Nations has not himself heretofore been faced with the necessity of determining the legal consequences of a refusal by one State to accept the reservation proposed by another, there are already precedents in the practice of the Secretariat confirming the principle as enunciated.

12. Thus, on 30 June 1948, the Secretary-General informed the States parties to the Constitution of the World Health Organization that he was not in a position to determine whether the United States of America had become a party to that Constitution by depositing an instrument containing a reservation, but he noted the authority of the World Health Assembly to interpret the Constitution under its article 75. Only after a unanimous acceptance by the Assembly of the ratification as not inconsistent with the Constitution did the Secretary-General proceed with his notification that the United States had become a party.

13. Prior to the entry into force of the Constitution of the International Refugee Organization, the Secretary-General circulated the text of reservations made by several States in accepting that Constitution. Finally, when the last instrument of acceptance necessary to permit the entry into force had been deposited, the Secretary-General so notified the interested States, requesting their observations before a specified date. Only after that date had passed did he declare that the Constitution had entered into force.

14. On 16 February 1949, the Union of South Africa desired to sign the Protocol modifying certain Provisions of the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade with a reservation excepting the application of one of its articles.⁶ A procès-verbal of signature was therefore drawn up to permit the representative of the Union of South Africa to sign the Protocol, "it being understood that such signature would not have any legal effect until the Secretary-General of the United Nations had informed each of the contracting parties of it and of the reservation made thereto and until each contracting party had notified the Secretary-General of its acceptance". A Declaration accepting the reservation was subsequently transmitted to the Secretary-General notifying him "that the reservation of South Africa has been examined at a meeting on 9 May 1949, at which all the contracting parties were represented, and that no contracting party raised any objection to the said reservation".

15. Similarly, the notification by the Government of Southern Rhodesia of its acceptance of the Protocol modifying part I and article XXIX of the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade was accompanied by a statement reserving the position of that government with regard to one article of the General Agreement. All contracting parties were accordingly advised:

"In view of this statement, the Secretary-General, acting as depositary of the Protocol, will not be able to accept the above notification as definitely constituting the instrument of acceptance unless all of the contracting parties consent to the reservation. The Secretary-General has informed the Government of Southern Rhodesia to this effect".

16. Subsequently, at their third session, the contracting parties adopted a Declaration concerning the acceptance by Southern Rhodesia of this Protocol, in which they unanimously declared that the acceptance was valid and effective and instructed that a copy of their Declaration be forwarded to the Secretary-General with reference to his communication quoted above. The Secretary-General thereupon gave notice that the notification by Southern Rhodesia was "considered as a duly deposited instrument of acceptance".

V. VIEWS OF INTERNATIONAL JURISTS AND OF GOVERNMENTS

17. The practice of the Secretary-General has the general support of international jurists; and certainly a similar attitude can be detected in the actions of many governments acting as depositaries, even though express objections to reservations have not been of sufficiently frequent occurrence for governments or inter-governmental conferences to have developed clear rules of procedure on the handling of reservations.

18. The draft Convention on the Law of Treaties developed by the Harvard Research in International Law provides (reading together sections 14 (c) and 15 (c)) as follows:

"If a treaty is open for signature at any time in the future, a State may make a reservation when signing (or ratifying), if it signs (or ratifies) before the treaty has been brought into force, only with the consent of all the States which become signatories before the treaty is brought into force; if it signs (or ratifies) after the treaty has been brought into force, only with the consent of all other States which have become signatories or parties to the treaty prior to the signature (or ratification) by that State."

19. The International Law Commission, after examination of a preliminary report on the Law of Treaties⁷ by its special Rapporteur, Professor Brierly, has brought support to these principles in a comment contained in the report on its second session:

"There was a large measure of agreement on the general principles of this topic [reservations] formulated in the report [of the special Rapporteur] and particularly on the point that a reservation requires the consent at least of all parties to become effective. But the application of these principles in detail to the great variety of situations which may arise in the making of multilateral treaties was felt to require further considerations."⁸

20. A recent Soviet textbook, part of a collective study published by the Institute of Law of the Academy of Sciences of the USSR, also favours unanimous consent:

"Reservations at the time of signature of a treaty that the parties to the treaty become familiar with them prior to signature and agree to them (if only by remaining silent). As a general rule, reservations must be accepted and countersigned by all parties to the treaty (for example, by an exchange of notes, in the protocol of signature, or otherwise)"⁹.

Other expressions of the same Academy also give support to this view.¹⁰

21. A number of government precedents may also be of interest. When in 1899 the United Kingdom Government wished to sign one of The Hague Conventions subject to a reservation, the Netherlands Government refused to accept the signature. As Headquarters Government it "could not accept the reservation without referring it to the other signatories, but they were willing to do so and recommend its acceptance. This

¹⁰ "Reservations at the time of ratification cannot be unilateral: they must receive the agreement of all States who are parties to the international agreement." was done, and all the other signatories agreed; the Convention was accordingly signed subject to this reservation . . ."¹¹

22. In 1905, the British Ambassador at Paris was instructed to deposit with the French Government the British ratification of the International Sanitary Convention, with a declaration of reservations. According to Sir William Malkin:

"The French Minister for Foreign Affairs stated that he was unable to receive the ratification if it were accompanied by reservations of any kind; he could only communicate the reservations to all the signatory Powers and, if they were accepted unanimously by the latter, make special mention of them in the procès-verbal of the deposit of all the ratifications, which must eventually be drawn up. . . . The procès-verbal, therefore, established the consent of the other signatories to the reservations in question. It is interesting, however, to note that the French Government (as the Headquarters Government) insisted on these reservations being communicated to the signatory Powers and agreed to by them before a ratification containing the reservations in question could be accepted."¹²

23. When Germany proposed to sign the Convention of 4 May 1910 for the Suppression of White Slave Traffic subject to a reservation which embodied practically the same provision as an amendment pressed by Germany during the Conference but voted down, objection was made on the ground that a State should not be permitted to write in by reservation a clause specifically rejected by vote of the Conference. Ultimately, therefore, Germany was obliged to abandon that particular reservation.¹³

24. In 1930, when the United States transmitted to Paris for deposit with the French Ministry for Foreign Affairs its instrument of ratification to the Convention for the Revision of the General Act of Berlin and the General Act and Declaration of Brussels, subject to a reservation regarding arbitration of disputes, the "French Government evidently took the view that it could not permit the deposit of a ratification which was subject to reservations unless those reservations were first agreed to by the other signatories of the Convention."¹⁴ Not until 1934 was the deposit treated as completed, because of delays by the other Powers in consenting to the reservations made by the United States.

25. A notably different system, however, has been followed on some occasions in the past by the Pan-American Union, which is now the central organ and General Secretariat of the Organization of American States. By these procedures,¹⁵ the text of a proposed reservation is submitted in advance of the actual ratification to the Union as depositary, in order that it may seek the views of the signatories. But the reserving government is permitted, having taken into account any observations that may thus be made, to deposit its instrument definitively if it still desires, regardless of the nature of the views expressed by the other signatories. For, under this system, a State may become a party to a convention notwithstanding the refusal of one or more States to agree to the reservations proposed.

26. The only juridical consequence of the rejection of a reservation is that the Convention fails to enter into force between the parties immediately concerned, namely, between the reserving and the rejecting Powers. This legal effect was defined by the Governing Board of the Pan American Union (as formerly constituted) in a resolution adopted on 4 May 1932:

"With respect to the juridical status of treaties ratified with reservations, which have not been accepted, the Governing Board of the Pan American Union understands that:

"1. The treaty shall be in force, in the form in which it was signed, as between those countries which ratify it without reservations, in the terms in which it was originally drafted and signed.

"2. It shall be in force as between the governments which ratify it with reservations and the signatory States which accept the reservations in the form in which the treaty may be modified by said reservations.

"3. It shall not be in force between a government which may have ratified with reservations and another which may have already ratified, and which does not accept such reservations."¹⁶

27. Finally, one other important variation in the theory of depositary procedures deserves attention. As indicated above, it has been the policy of the Secretary-General of the United Nations—just as it was the policy of the League of Nations—to treat only the objection of a State which has ratified or acceded to a convention as being of such legal force as to exclude the participation of a reserving State. By contrast, some authorities would permit any State merely signatory to a convention to exclude the participation of another State proffering its ratification subject to a reservation to which the signatory objects.¹⁷ Some authorities, indeed, would seem to incline toward allowing not only signatories to object but all States which took part in the negotiation of the convention—at least until the date of its entry into force.

28. These two major variations in depositary procedures—first, as to whether unanimous consent is necessary to permit accession with a reservation, and second, as to which States must in that event consent—are of sufficient importance, in the opinion of the Secretary-General, to warrant his placing before the General Assembly the considerations which have governed the growth of United Nations procedures.

VI. THE REQUIREMENT OF UNANIMOUS CONSENT TO RESERVATIONS

29. As noted in the introduction, there is no question of a State becoming bound to a treaty text as modified by reservations without its having had an opportunity to object. The present problem concerns only the effect of an objection to a reservation.

30. The method attributed to the Pan American Union has the advantage of permitting a maximum number of States to become parties to a convention, even though some of them undertake to apply only a portion of the text and exchange that undertaking with only a portion of the parties. It has the additional advantage of permitting an instrument of ratification, once it has been cleared for deposit, to be deposited definitively. There is thus less uncertainty as to the status of the reserving party.

31. It may be assumed that this procedure is well adapted to the needs of a regional agency and to the close relations existing between States within a defined geographic area. It may likewise be ideally suited to the conclusion of those multilateral agreements, the essential nature of which is to facilitate the exchange of merely contractual undertakings within a group of States. Such conventions, although multilateral in form, are in operation simply a complex of bilateral agreements. Where performance by one party accrues to the advantage of any one other party at a given moment, it is perfectly logical that the convention should be enabled to come into force between States A and B and B and C, but not between A and C if C rejects the reservation which A proposed and B accepted.

32. On the other hand, it is submitted that this theory is not well fitted to the purposes of multilateral conventions drawn up under the auspices of the United Nations, and for accession by all its Members. Such conventions by their very nature normally have a worldwide character by which States in very diverse circumstances agree to be bound, and presumably agree to be bound in exchange for the similar consent of all other parties. They have a law-making character, not the character of a contract; and they are multilateral not only in form and in manner of adherence but in their purpose and essential juridical effect.¹⁸ To use the example at hand, it does not seem entirely plausible to treat a convention for the suppression of the crime of genocide as a bargain adaptable for entry into force between one pair among the parties thereto, but not between another pair. Rather, the Convention on Genocide would seem to represent the true type of legislative convention having the object of creating rules of law for identical operation in the different States adopting them—establishing, in fact, “a public law transcending in kind and not merely in degree ordinary agreements between States.”¹⁹

¹⁹ Ibid., p. 113. On the essential indivisibility of a multilateral treaty (la règle de l'intégrité du traité) see also, Rousseau,

33. Not all conventions of which the Secretary-General may act as depositary will necessarily be of so broad a character. But such law-making treaties are so much a part of the function of the United Nations in furthering the progressive development of international law as to justify, in the absence of articles in the text to the contrary, general rules concerning the entry into force of all treaties of which the Secretary-General is made the depositary.²⁰

34. Since a choice must be made between requiring on the one hand, that all the States concerned approve a reservation or, on the other hand, treating the convention as a hub through which sets of bilateral agreements may be concluded or not—according to whether or not the parties reach an accord on given reservations—it seems logical to select the former where the depositary is chiefly concerned with conventions which establish general principles of international law or which, however technical, are broadly regulatory of international conduct. In contractual compacts, States may agree or not agree to exchange the quid pro quo. In conventions with a legislative intent, a State willing to become a party must be assumed to wish to enforce at least the core of the agreement. If another State considers, however, that the reservation proposed is so crucial as to remove its real meaning from the text as drafted, then the objection raised against the reservation constitutes not a mere bilateral refusal to deal but rather a declaration that the legislative intent of the convention will not be furthered by an adherence subject to a nullifying reservation. For, of course, the reason for requiring unanimous consent is not that one State should exclude another from participation in a multilateral agreement simply on the grounds of its own theoretical disapproval of the reservation, but only on the serious ground of its deeming that the reservation strikes so directly at the essence of the convention as to impugn its basic purposes.

35. The reasoning supporting the requirement of unanimity is forcefully presented by the Harvard Research in International Law in its General Comment on the Reservations sections of its draft Convention on the Law of Treaties. A State seeking to make a reservation, this authority urges, “... proposes, in effect, to insert in the treaty a provision which will operate to exempt it from certain of the consequences which would otherwise devolve upon it from the treaty, while leaving the other States which are or which become parties to the treaty fully subject to those consequences in their relations inter se and possibly even in their relations vis-à-vis the State making the reservation. It seems clear that a State should be permitted to do this only with the consent of all other States which are parties . . . and this because, as has been said, States are willing in general to assume obligations under a multipartite treaty only

Principes généraux du droit international public (1944), vol. I, pp. 298-299.

²⁰ President Basdevant has shown how the traité collectif, in the process of adoption of conventions by the Assembly of the League, has outgrown the procedures established for the traité-contrat bilatéral. “Des Transformations récentes subies par la technique de la conclusion des traités”, Recueil des cours (1926), pp. 598-600.

'on the understanding that the other participating Powers are prepared to act in the same way and that general benefit will thus result'. A multipartite treaty is 'an agreement in which each party finds a compensation for the obligations contracted in the engagements entered into by the others'. (League of Nations document A.10.1930.V., p. 2). Consequently, were a State permitted to write a reservation into a multipartite treaty over the objection of any State already a party to the treaty . . . the latter State might regard the consideration which prompted it to become a party as so far impaired by the reservation that it would denounce the treaty and withdraw therefrom".

In any case, it continues,

"since a choice must be made, reason and the necessity for preserving multipartite treaties as useful and effective instruments of international co-operation indicate that the preference should be given to the States which find the treaty satisfactory as it stands, and that the inconvenience, if any, of non-participation in the treaty should fall upon the State which seeks to restrict its effectiveness by reservations."²¹

36. In this same connexion, it may be mentioned in passing that there is of course an even stronger case for requiring unanimous approval of a reservation where the convention in question is in the nature of a charter or constitution of an international organization formed under the auspices of the United Nations. It would clearly be neither equitable nor workable to permit States members of a functioning body to vary the terms of their admission (for instance, regarding the financial conditions of membership, as would often be the case) over the objection of one or more members already meeting more onerous terms. It does not appear even theoretically possible to have a State sitting and voting as a member of an international council and bound to certain other States members of that council (because they have accepted its reservation), but not bound under the same constitution to certain other member States which have rejected its reservation.

37. Finally, there is a practical advantage in the uniformity of legal relationships resulting from the unanimity rule. The technical complexity of determining and keeping account of the manifold bilateral relationships which might exist under a variety of conventions, possibly involving a large proportion of the governments of the world, would be very great. Wherever there were objections to reservations, it would be necessary to establish between which of the parties a convention was in force.²² For as large a depositary of major law-making conventions as the Secretariat of the United Nations may be expected to become, the resulting administrative burden would be considerable, while the difficulties for governments—and, in the event of dispute, for the courts—could hardly be less.

VII. OBJECTIONS BY GOVERNMENTS PARTIES OR BY ALL SIGNATORIES

38. Once it is proposed that the States concerned must unanimously approve a reservation on which an ²¹ Harvard Draft Convention, Comment, loc. cit., p. 871.

²² Under the Pan American Union procedure there is also the difficulty as to the date of entry into force of each of the multiple bilateral undertakings. For each pair of States it is adherence is conditioned, it becomes a matter of prime importance to determine on which States should be conferred this significant power to exclude the participation of the reserving State. The answer necessarily depends on a reasonable weighing of the relative degree of interest of the State affected.

39. The Harvard Research in International Law, desiring to favour the State which approves the generally agreed text of a convention over the State which prefers to introduce a special provision of its own, extends the right to object to all States which are likely to become parties, and deems it reasonable to base that likelihood on the interest and intent which is attested by the act of signature. It offers the following explanation:

"It may be presumed that normally the greater number of States eligible to sign a treaty, and certainly those having the greater interest in it, will sign it promptly and before the date when it is brought into force. Such States should certainly have a voice in determining whether or not reservations are to be introduced into the treaty. And, on the other hand, since it may be necessary, in the case of a treaty left open for signature at any time in the future, to deprive some signatories of a voice in that matter, it seems that in the case here envisaged it may properly be those which for one reason or another delay signing the treaty, not only until after the date when the State making the reservation is prepared to sign, but also until after the treaty has actually come into force."²³

40. This procedure naturally has the distinct advantage of not foreclosing the rights of a State having a tangible interest to protect in the future operation of the convention. Where only two ratifications are required to bring a treaty into force, it prevents two reserving States (or at least two like-minded governments) from writing their reservations into the treaty before those with slower constitutional procedures for ratification can qualify to object.

41. On the other hand, under present-day methods of treaty formation, it may no longer be so logical to place so much weight on the protection of the signatory, for the reasons set out below. Moreover, the counterpart of the signatory's interest is the serious disadvantage of empowering a State which may not ratify its signature for some years to come—or in consequence of altered circumstances may not ratify at all—to exclude the participation of a State which, subject to certain conditions, is ready to accept responsibilities under the convention at once.

42. A broader category of States whose interest in a convention might reasonably be protected would embrace not only signatories but all those which took part in the negotiation of the text. This approach seems the least adapted to United Nations procedures. It is the logical outgrowth of the diplomatic conference, where the mere fact of States sending emissaries to participate in the elaboration of a draft was itself an expression of relatively direct interest in the application of the apparently the date of acceptance by any one State of the reservation proposed by another. Cf. Sanders, loc. cit., p. 490, and article 6 of the Convention on Treaties drawn up at the Havana Conference (1928).

²³ Harvard Draft Convention, Comment, loc. cit., pp. 886-887.

treaty. For such treaties, indeed, the conference was likely to terminate with a ceremony of signature and often with a protocol of signature, the right to sign frequently being restricted to a single date or period. The signatories, having a relatively close community of interest, might meet again for the deposit of ratifications, and draw up a procès-verbal of deposit. The technique of leaving a treaty open unconditionally for signature by Powers which had no part in its drafting appears to be a relatively modern development.²⁴

43. By contrast, the majority of conventions of which the Secretary-General acts as depositary are drawn up within the framework of the United Nations or of a specialized agency or related body. The broader and more significant conventions, before being opened for signature, are adopted by the General Assembly, and their texts may have been prepared in a commission or ad hoc committee elected from among the Member States of the United Nations. The degree of interest in, and of probable adherence to, the future convention neither follows necessarily from membership in the General Assembly nor is necessarily restricted to the narrow membership of the drafting commission. In any case, it is hardly sufficient to empower—as the application of this rule to the United Nations would empower—any Member State having voted in the General Assembly at the time of adoption to exclude a reserving State, should the Member State be so inclined, on the grounds of objection as a matter of principle to the content of the reservation. Moreover, signatures then commonly follow adoption by the General Assembly and are not infrequently affixed in the spirit of that event. Not only is it generally conceded that there is no obligation to ratify a signature and so become a party, but United Nations experience already demonstrates that some signatory States ultimately decide not to ratify.²⁵

44. The policy of the Secretary-General, therefore, as also practised by the League Secretariat, has been to ascertain the attitude towards any reservation of all States which have ratified or acceded to a convention, whether or not it is in force. The text of a reservation, however, is circulated to all interested States. Thus, the final authority to exclude the participation of a reserving State is in effect confined to those States which have—or before entry into force will have—established their immediate concern by themselves becoming parties. At the same time, the right of a signatory to make its objection heard would by no means be absolutely excluded. Any objection by a signatory would of course be circulated so that its reasoning could be taken into account not only by the reserving State, which might then decide to withdraw its reservation, but also by the parties, which might then be persuaded to enter an objection on their own behalf.

²⁵ On the diminution in the force of signatures, and in the probability of their ratification, under the League of Nations, see Basdevant, "La Conclusion et la rédaction des traités", Recueil des cours (1926), vol. II, pp. 589-590, 596. Cf. Scelle, Précis de droit des gens (1934), p. 511.

45. This system would seem to represent a fair compromise of the various interests of parties, signatories and reserving States in a manner realistically related to the United Nations machinery for the promulgation of conventional international law. The rule as here described is of course intended to refer to conventions of which the Secretary-General is the depositary, and need not govern the procedures of diplomatic conferences outside the framework of the United Nations.

VIII. CONCLUSION

46. The rule adhered to by the Secretary-General as depositary may accordingly be stated in the following manner:

A State may make a reservation when signing, ratifying or acceding to a convention, prior to its entry into force, only with the consent of all States which have ratified or acceded thereto up to the date of entry into force; and may do so after the date of entry into force only with the consent of all States which have theretofore ratified or acceded.

47. To summarize the discussion above, this rule is based on the following considerations:

(a) It conforms with majority practice to require the assent of all the States most directly concerned to any proposal to alter, by individual reservation, the terms of the agreed text of a convention. Moreover, it is more in harmony with the nature and purposes of conventions adopted under the auspices of the United Nations, which commonly have a law-making character,²⁶ to treat them as establishing integral principles of international law agreed to by all the parties, rather than as nodules of many purely bilateral engagements.

(b) Since the attention of a very large number of States is normally directed at one stage or another to conventions of which the Secretary-General is made depositary, it is in the interests of efficiency to keep to a minimum the number of States required to give unanimous consent to a reservation. This can best be accomplished by confining the power to reject a reservation to the States most directly affected—namely, to actual parties to the convention in question.

(c) It is inevitable that any rule followed by the Secretary-General, in the absence of express provisions in the convention, will not suit the circumstances of every convention or every relationship proposed between given parties. This difficulty can be met by the conscious use, in the drafting of such a convention, of final articles best adapted to any special situation. If, for example, it is desired to forestall certain objections in order to make a convention acceptable to a maximum number of States, it is always possible to include an article expressly approving specified reservations.²⁷ If it is desired in special cases to permit signatories, and not only parties, to reject proposed reservations, the League of Nations formula mentioned above, used in the Convention for the Prevention and Punishment of Terrorism, might be applicable.²⁸

²⁶ Professor Scelle has suggested that the League practice served to protect the competence of the international legislative body. Précis de droit des gens (1934), vol. II, p. 480.

²⁷ Article 39, paragraph 1 of the Revised General Act for the Pacific Settlement of International Disputes reads as follows: "In addition to the power given in the preceding article, a party, in acceding to the present General Act, may make his acceptance conditional upon the reservations exhaustively enumerated in the following paragraph. These reservations must be indicated at the time of accession".

48. Finally, should it be desired to permit a maximum number of States to exchange undertakings through the medium of a multilateral convention, and thus to permit reserving States to become parties even though individual States already parties object to the reservations, the unanimity requirement also can be expressly waived.²⁹

49. All these considerations, it is submitted, support the practice followed by the Secretary-General as to the conventions of which he serves as the depositary.

ANNEX I

STATUS OF SIGNATURES, RATIFICATIONS, ACCESSIONS AND RESERVATIONS WITH REGARD TO THE CONVENTION ON THE PREVENTION AND PUNISHMENT OF THE CRIME OF GENOCIDE

1. In illustration of the practice of the Secretary-General as described in the foregoing report, the proposed reservations as to articles of the Convention for the Prevention and Punishment of the Crime of Genocide are here set out in full for the information of the General Assembly, together with an indication of the actions taken by the Secretary-General as depositary, and the dissent expressed by certain States regarding these proposed reservations.

I. Status of signatures, ratifications and accessions

2. The Convention was signed by the following 43 States:

Australia	Ethiopia
Belgium	France
Bolivia	Greece
Brazil	Guatemala
Burma	Haiti
Byelorussian Soviet Socialist Republic	Honduras
Canada	Iceland
Chile	India
China	Iran
Colombia	Israel
Cuba	Lebanon
Czechoslovakia	Liberia
Denmark	Mexico
Dominican Republic	New Zealand
Ecuador	Norway
Egypt	Pakistan
El Salvador	Panama
	Paraguay

Peru	Union of Soviet Socialist Republics

Sweden	Uruguay
Ukrainian Soviet Socialist Republic	Yugoslavia

The following 11 States have ratified the Convention:

Australia	Liberia
Ecuador	Norway
Ethiopia	Panama
Guatemala	Philippines (subject to reservations)
Iceland	Yugoslavia
Israel

and the following 6 States have acceded to it:

Bulgaria (subject to reservations)	Saudi Arabia
Jordan	Turkey
Monaco	Viet-Nam

II. Reservations made by the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, the Byelorussian Soviet Socialist Republic, the Ukrainian Soviet Socialist Republic and Czechoslovakia

3. The Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, the Byelorussian SSR, the Ukrainian SSR and Czechoslovakia signed the Convention "with the reservations regarding articles IX and XII stated in the special procès-verbal drawn up on signature of the present Convention".

²⁸ In addition to requiring in any case that the consent of all the parties be obtained by appropriate inquiry, article 23 of this Convention provides:

"1. . . . Should the reservation be formulated within three years from the entry into force of the Convention, the same inquiry shall be addressed to members of the League and non-member States whose signature of the convention has not yet been followed by ratification. If, within six months from the date of the Secretary-General's communication, no objection to the reservation has been made, it shall be treated as accepted by the high contracting parties.

"2. In the event of any objection being received, the Secretary-General of the League of Nations shall inform the Government which desired to make the reservation, and request it to inform him whether it is prepared to ratify or accede without the reservation or whether it prefers to abstain from ratification or accession."

²⁹ Article 19 of the Convention on Declaration of Death of Missing Persons, opened for accession at Lake Success on 6 April 1950, reads as follows:

"Any State may subject its accession to the present Convention to reservations which may be formulated only at the time of accession.

"If a Contracting State does not accept the reservations which another State may have thus attached to its accession, the former may, provided it does so within ninety days from the date on which the Secretary-General will have transmitted the reservations to it, notify the Secretary-General that it considers such accession as not having entered into force between the State making the reservation and the State not accepting it. In such case, the Convention shall be considered as not being in force between such two States."

This of course corresponds to the Pan American Union procedure. The clause was considered an exceptional measure in view of the special nature of the convention, especially since it dealt with matters of private international law. See document A/Conf.1/SR.10, pp. 8-10.

4. By way of example,¹ the text of the special procès-verbal drawn up at the signature of the Convention by the delegation of the USSR is reproduced below:

“His Excellency, Mr. A. S. Panyushkin, Ambassador of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics to the United States, prior to signing the Convention on the Prevention and Punishment of the Crime of Genocide, in the office of the Assistant Secretary-General in charge of the Legal Department, at the Interim Headquarters of the United Nations, on Friday, 16 December 1949, made the following statement:

“At the time of signing the present Convention the delegation of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics deems it essential to state the following:

“As regards article IX: The Soviet Union does not consider as binding upon itself the provisions of article IX which provides that disputes between the contracting parties with regard to the interpretation, application and implementation of the present Convention shall be referred for examination to the International Court at the request of any party to the dispute, and declares that, as regards the International Court's jurisdiction in respect of disputes concerning the interpretation, application and implementation of the Convention, the Soviet Union will, as hitherto, maintain the position that in each particular case the agreement of all parties to the dispute is essential for the submission of any particular dispute to the International Court for decision.

“As regards article XII: The Union of Soviet Socialist Republics declares that it is not in agreement with article XII of the Convention and considers that all the provisions of the Convention should extend to Non-Self-Governing Territories, including Trust Territories.’

“In witness whereof the present Procès-verbal was drawn up.

“Done at Lake Success, New York, this 16th day of December 1949.

(Signed) Dr. I. KERNO
Assistant Secretary-General in charge of the Legal Department”

Translation by the Secretariat:

“Ambassador Extraordinary and Plenipotentiary of the USSR to the United States of America

(Signed) A. PANYUSHKIN
16-12-49”

5. The Secretary-General sent notifications of the above reservations, attaching a certified copy of each procès-verbal, to each Member State of the United Nations and to each of the non-member States to which an invitation to sign the Convention had been addressed. In addition, the Secretary-General informed the five Member States which had ratified the Convention at that time, namely Australia, Ecuador, Ethiopia, Iceland and Norway, that he would like to be informed at the earliest possible opportunity of their attitude with regard to the reservations. He further advised them that it would be his understanding that all States which had ratified or acceded to the Convention would have accepted these reservations, unless they had notified him of objections prior to the day on which the first twenty instruments of ratification or accession, necessary to bring the Convention into force, had been deposited.

III. Position taken by Ecuador

6. In reply to this notification, the Minister for External Relations of Ecuador addressed a letter to the Secretary-General, under date of 10 February 1950, to inform him that:

“The Government of Ecuador, in accordance with the position previously maintained regarding reservations, has no objection to make regarding the submission of such reservations but expresses its disagreement with their content.”

7. Acknowledging this communication, the Secretary-General, on 21 March 1950, replied:

“Your letter states that the Government of Ecuador has no objection to make concerning the submission of the reservations by the aforesaid States as contained in the procès-verbaux, copies of which were annexed to my previous letters, and at the same time, expresses disagreement with the content of these reservations.

“As the statement does not seem to indicate clearly the intention of your government, it will be appreciated if Your Excellency would be good enough to inform me whether it may be taken as accepting the aforementioned reservations.”

8. The Minister for External Relations accordingly responded on 31 March 1950 as follows:

“The Government of Ecuador is not in agreement with these reservations and therefore they do not apply to Ecuador, which accepted without any modification the complete text of the Convention in question”.

9. This position was communicated by the Secretary-General on 5 May 1950 to all the governments concerned.

IV. Position taken by Guatemala

10. To the notification referred to in paragraph 5 above, the Under-Secretary for External Relations of Guatemala replied on 16 June 1950 as follows:

“I must inform you that the Government of Guatemala is not in agreement with the reservations made by the Governments of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, the Ukrainian Soviet Socialist Republic and Czechoslovakia to the Convention on Prevention and Punishment of the Crime of Genocide; and that, consequently, it should not be inferred that this government accepts them merely because it did not make any reference to them in depositing its instrument of ratification, since they have no relation to the full acceptance of the Convention by this Republic”.

11. It appeared that the notification of the Secretary-General had in fact not been received by the Government of Guatemala in sufficient time to have affected its ratification. The Secretary-General therefore inquired "whether the statements that the Government of Guatemala is not in agreement with these reservations, and that it should not be inferred that the Government of Guatemala accepts them merely because it did not make any reference to them in depositing its instrument of ratification", are intended to convey the meaning that the Government of Guatemala, having had due notice of these reservations, specifically objects to them". The Secretary-General felt it his duty to advise the Government of Guatemala that the consequence in law of any objection to the reservations would be to make him unable "to accept for deposit instruments of ratification by the Governments of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, the Ukrainian Soviet Socialist Republic and Czechoslovakia, subject to the aforesaid reservations".

12. The Government of Guatemala accordingly clarified the legal assumptions, on which its expression of disagreement was based, in the following manner:

"In reply I have pleasure in repeating the view expressed in my communication No. 7865 of 16 June 1950, in which this Ministry stated that the Government of Guatemala was not in agreement with these reservations and that they had no relation to ratification and full acceptance of the text of the Convention by my Government. I wish to add, in reply to your question, that the Government of Guatemala has always maintained the view that reservations made upon signing or ratifying international conventions are acts inherent in the sovereignty of States and are not open to discussion, acceptance or rejection by other States. In collective conventions reservations made by a State affect only the application of the clause concerned in the relations of other States with the State making the reservation".

13. These interchanges were also circulated by the Secretary-General to all the governments concerned.

V. Attitude expressed by the United Kingdom

14. To the notification by the Secretary-General of the reservations made by the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, the Byelorussian SSR, the Ukrainian SSR and Czechoslovakia, the United Kingdom replied:

"His Majesty's Government regret that they are unable to accept the above-mentioned reservations because in their view the effect of these reservations would be to alter in important respects the Convention as drafted and as adopted at the third session of the General Assembly. His Majesty's Government cannot therefore regard as valid any ratification of the Convention maintaining such reservations".

15. The views of the United Kingdom Government as to the legal considerations governing this matter were submitted in a memorandum which is attached as annex II.

VI. Subsequent reservations by the Philippines and by Bulgaria

16. Since the exchange of communications described above, the Governments of the Philippines and of the People's Republic of Bulgaria have proffered instruments subject to reservations.

17. On 7 July 1950, the Philippines submitted an instrument of ratification containing the following reservations:

"1. With reference to article IV of the Convention, the Philippine Government cannot sanction any situation which would subject its Head of State, who is not a ruler, to conditions less favourable than those accorded other Heads of State, whether constitutionally responsible rulers or not. The Philippine Government does not consider said article, therefore, as overriding the existing immunities from judicial processes guaranteed certain public officials by the Constitution of the Philippines.

"2. With reference to article VII of the Convention, the Philippine Government does not undertake to give effect to said article until the Congress of the Philippines has enacted the necessary legislation defining and punishing the crime of genocide, which legislation, under the Constitution of the Philippines, cannot have any retroactive effect.

"3. With reference to articles VI and IX of the Convention, the Philippine Government takes the position that nothing contained in said articles shall be construed as depriving Philippine courts of jurisdiction over all cases of genocide committed within Philippine territory, save only in those cases where the Philippine Government consents to have the decision of the Philippine courts reviewed by either of the international tribunals referred to in said articles. With further reference to article IX of the Convention, the Philippine Government does not consider said article to extend the concept of State responsibility beyond that recognized by the generally accepted principles of international law."

18. On 21 July 1950, the People's Republic of Bulgaria submitted an instrument of accession embodying reservations in the same terms as those proposed by the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, the Byelorussian SSR, the Ukrainian SSR and Czechoslovakia.

19. Notifications of these reservations were likewise sent to each Member State of the United Nations and to each of the non-member States to which an invitation to sign the Convention had been addressed. In addition, as in the prior instance, the Secretary-General asked to be informed of the attitude of those States which had ratified or acceded to the Convention.

ANNEX II

MEMORANDUM PRESENTED BY THE UNITED KINGDOM

I. Necessity for obtaining consent to reservations

1. A State which, while wishing to become a party to a convention, considers that it can do so only if it can exclude the application to itself of one or more of the particular provisions of the Convention, may seek to achieve this object in one of the following ways:

(i) By obtaining the insertion into the convention of express words excluding the application of that provision to itself (e.g., article 287 of the Treaty of Versailles); or a clause expressly permitting reservations to one or more articles to be made;

(ii) By a reservation attached to the signature of a convention by its representatives and duly recorded in a procès-verbal or protocol of signature;

(iii) By a reservation attached to the ratification and duly recorded;

(iv) In the case of a convention left open for accession by other States, by a reservation attached to its signature and duly recorded.¹

2. It is generally, though not universally, held that, since a State wishing to make a reservation is, in effect, seeking to write into the convention certain terms which will limit its effect, it is essential, in the last three cases mentioned in the preceding paragraph, that all the other parties to the convention should assent to the making of the reservation, and that if they do not, the signature or ratification or accession which the reservation purports to qualify is a nullity. In other words, the non-acceptance of the reservation by a single signatory or party excludes the State formulating the reservation from any participation in the convention.² According to this view,

“A State which wishes to make reservation to a treaty may do so only if all other States which are parties to the treaty, or which as signatories are likely to become parties consent to its so doing; lacking such consent, the State desirous of making the reservation must either abandon that desire and accept the treaty without the reservation or else remain outside the treaty altogether.”³

A number of precedents were examined by Sir William Malkin in an article in the British Year Book of International Law:⁴ He concluded his review of them by saying:

“It will be seen that of all the cases examined above, where an actual reservation was made to any provision of a Convention, there is hardly one as to which it cannot be shown that the consent of the other Contracting Powers was given either expressly or by implication. There is no case among those examined which could be quoted as a precedent in favour of the theory that a State is entitled to make any reservations it likes to a Convention without the assent of the other contracting parties.”⁵

3. There is, however, another view which has not gained general acceptance, but which was expressed in a resolution adopted by the Governing Body of the Pan American Union on 4 May 1932. This is that non-acceptance of a reservation merely affects the party which refuses to accept the reservation and that the State making the reservation is free to participate in the convention with the parties which accept the reservation either expressly or by implication.⁶ This view was given formal expression in the following draft clause which Venezuela proposed, at the Pan American Conference in December 1948, should be added to the Convention on Treaties of the Havana Conference:

“A treaty that is ratified with reservations shall enter into effect only between the parties that accept the reservation.”⁷

II. Method of obtaining consent

4. Whichever view is accepted, it is necessary to consider how the assent of the other parties to the making of a reservation to a multilateral convention can be obtained. Such assent may be obtained in the following ways:

(i) Where the reservation has been previously announced at a sitting of the conference and has been repeated at the time of signature without any objection being taken, assent is implied.

(ii) Where the reserving State has before signature, or after signature and before ratification, expressly enquired of all other parties if they will permit the reservation.

(iii) Where the parties to a multipartite treaty, on being made aware that a signature, ratification or accession qualified by a reservation has been tendered, neither assent nor dissent expressly.⁸

In case (iii) it is probable that after the lapse of a reasonable time, assent would be inferred, and the signature, ratification or accession would therefore become effective. In the opinion of the United States authority, Professor Hyde, the question whether such implied acceptance can be understood depends on whether the reservation made lessens or enlarges the obligations which the State signing is prepared reciprocally to accept:

“If a State be permitted to sign or deposit its ratifications of a treaty under a reservation that lessens rather than enlarges obligations which such State is prepared reciprocally to accept, and at a time before the arrangement has become binding upon any of the other signatories or prospective parties, it is reasonable to conclude that if the latter with knowledge of the fact proceed, without more ado, to make the instrument binding upon themselves, as by deposit of ratifications, their conduct amounts to acceptance of the reservation.”⁹

ment pas égale . . . Pour nous, des réserves à la signature ne sont acceptables que si toutes les Puissances contractantes consentent à y donner, expressément ou tacitement, leur adhésion: il y aura alors finalement un traité nouveau, entièrement distinct de celui qu'on avait primitivement négocié. Si les signataires purs et simples ne consentent pas, ils seront en droit d'obliger leurs contractants qui ont fait des réserves à y renoncer ou à souffrir que la convention ne s'applique pas dans les rapports des Puissances intéressées.”

³ Harvard Draft Convention, Comment, loc. cit., p. 870. The same view has been expressed, though in a somewhat different way, by Fauchille, Droit international public, vol. I.3., para. 823, pp. 312-313:

“Comment admettre, au surplus, qu'une même convention n'entraîne pas les mêmes obligations sans distinction vis-à-vis de ceux qui y participent? Entre un contractant qui signe la convention en bloc, purement et simplement, et un autre qui la signe partiellement, avec des réserves, la situation n'est vrai-

If, however, the reservation purports to enlarge rather than diminish reciprocal burdens sought to be imposed by the convention, inaction by the other parties in relation to such a reservation would (says Hyde) "probably not be deemed to constitute acceptance of it".

III. Reservations made on or appended to signature

5. The position which arises in regard to reservations which are made when a multilateral convention is open to signature for a certain period (e.g., for six months) was examined by Sir William Malkin, who considered it to be most desirable that some procedure should be devised for dealing with reservations made by States which were either not represented at the conference leading up to the convention, or, if represented, did not sign on the date on which the convention was opened for signature.¹⁰ Sir William Malkin considered that it might be argued, on the one hand, that such States "cannot expect any facilities as regards reservations", but that it could also be argued, on the other hand, that the State concerned

"... may have had perfectly good reasons either for not attending or for not signing on the appointed day, and it is undesirable that it should be debarred from becoming a party to the convention on account of a reservation which might well have been accepted if made in time."¹¹

"The position can sometimes be regularized on the deposit of ratifications, but otherwise there is no occasion on which representatives of all the Contracting Powers can meet and can deal with reservations which have been proposed since the Conference separated; but . . . it is essential that the consent of the other signatories should in some manner be obtained in such cases before a reservation can be implied".¹²

6. Suggestions as to the procedure to be adopted in such a case are included in the comment on article 14(b) of the draft Convention on the Law of Treaties prepared by the Harvard Research Institute, which reads as follows:

"If a treaty is open for signature until a certain date, a State may make a reservation when signing only with the consent of all other States which sign before the date fixed".¹³

The comment on article 14(b) includes consideration of the manner in which such consent should be obtained, particularly in the case which a certain State is not among the original signatories, but instead desires to sign the convention with reservations after other States have already signed it.¹⁴

(a) There is, on the one hand, the case in which such a State merely seeks to append to its signature a reservation which (without objection being made thereto) it has previously stated and recorded in the proceedings of a conference in which the prior signatories were likewise participants. Here the consent of the prior signatories may be implied.¹⁵ An interesting example of this situation occurred in connexion with the "Red Cross" Convention of 1906, which (under article 32 thereof) was open for signature for several months. The British representatives signed the Convention subject to a reservation to certain articles containing provisions which could not be enforced without legislation in that country. There is no record of any assent to these reservations by the other signatory Powers, but the attitude of the British delegation had been made clear in the Fourth Committee of the Conference, and it seems to have been tacitly assumed that all the other signatories assented to the reservations in question.¹⁶

(b) On the other hand, there is the case in which a State seeks to subject its signature to a reservation which has not been previously agreed to. Here (to quote the comment on article 14 (b) of the Harvard Research Institute's draft Convention):

"... it seems desirable that the consent of the prior signatories should be given expressly. It is possible that under certain circumstances their consent might be implied from a failure to object after notification of [the] proposed reservation, but ordinarily such consent should and can be expressly given. This might be done, for example, by an exchange of notes between [the reserving State] and the prior signatories either directly or through a Headquarters Government . . . Or it might be done by drawing up and signing a protocol or procès-verbal expressly recording [the] reservation and consent thereto".¹⁷

As regards subsequent signatories, the Harvard Research Commentary considers that if the reserving State has duly obtained the consent of all prior signatories, and then affixes its signature to the convention in question and appends its reservation thereto, the consent of subsequent signatories will be regarded as given by implication if, without protest, they sign the convention (or the convention and a protocol recording the reservation).¹⁸

IV. Reservations made on ratification

7. There is also the question of a State which wishes to make a reservation to a multilateral convention on ratification thereof. Paragraphs (b) and (c) of article 15 of the draft Convention on the Law of Treaties apply to this situation and are as follows:

"(b) If a treaty is open for signature until a certain date, a State may make a reservation when ratifying only with the consent of all other States which become signatories before the date fixed and of all the States which have acceded to the treaty prior to the ratification by that State.

"(c) If a treaty is open for signature at any time in the future, a State may make a reservation when ratifying, if it ratifies before the treaty has been brought into force, only with the consent of all other States which become signatories before the treaty is brought into force; if it ratifies after the treaty has been brought into force only with the consent of all other States which have become signatories or have acceded to the treaty prior to ratification by that State".¹⁹

In commenting on this article, the Harvard Research Institute points out that:

“each of the paragraphs . . . is designed to prevent the writing of a reservation into a treaty without the consent of all other States which are likely to be affected by it and which might find the value of the treaty for them destroyed or seriously impaired were the reservations to become a part of the treaty. Those other States are the States which have already become parties to the treaty or which, as signatories, are likely to become parties”.²⁰

If article 15 of the Harvard Research Institute's draft Convention is considered to be a correct statement of existing international law on this matter, the position is that a reservation to a multilateral convention made on ratification thereof must be consented to, not only by such States as have already become parties to the convention by ratifying it, but also by States which are merely signatories and which may not proceed to ratify. This situation would appear to be open to the objection that it makes it possible for a State which may not ultimately become a party to the convention to exclude from participation a State which is prepared to accept the convention subject to a reservation on ratification, even though all the States which actually become bound by the convention, by ratifying it, have consented—or are prepared to consent—to the reservation. However, there seems very little reason to doubt that paragraphs (b) and (c) of the Harvard Research Institute's draft Convention state the correct legal position. Hackworth, for instance, says:

“If reservations are not made at the time of signing a multilateral treaty, ratifications with reservations, in order to be binding, must be brought to the knowledge of the other Contracting Powers and receive their approval, unless otherwise specified in the treaty, since they constitute a modification of the agreement”.²¹

It seems probable that Hackworth is using the term “Contracting Powers” in this passage as equivalent to “signatories”. Hudson appears to hold the same view, although he is a little more cautious in expressing it when he says:

“Any fresh reservation made at the time of ratification or in any separate instrument, must be agreed to by all States which have previously ratified, and it would seem by all signatory States”.²²

8. A recognition of the right of signatories to a convention, as well as those who have ratified it, or acceded to it, to object to reservations made by other States on ratification or accession, is to be found in article 23 of the Convention of 16 November 1937 for the Prevention and Punishment of Terrorism. Whilst recognizing this right, however, the article provides that the period within which States “whose signature of the Convention has not yet been followed by ratification” can object to reservations shall be limited to three years from the entry into force of the Convention. In commenting on this, Hudson says:

“It recognises the possible interest of signatories which have not proceeded to ratification in the reservations offered by other signatories, and thus clarifies a point on which there has been doubt. It also establishes that when reservations other than those agreed to at the time of signature are proposed, the alternatives are absence of objection from any State consulted, on the one hand, and abstention from proceeding to deposit of a ratification or accession on the other hand”.²³

The provisions of article 23 of the Convention of 16 November 1937 also appear to show the fallacy of an argument which has been advanced, but which seems unsupported by any authority, to the effect that if a multilateral convention, in respect of which ratifications containing reservations have been deposited, has entered into force without any objections being raised to such reservations, it is not open to any States which subsequently ratify or accede to the convention to object to any reservations which have already been made. A most serious objection to this argument is that it might enable a limited number of States (in some cases—e.g., the Geneva Conventions of 1949, which enter into force when two ratifications have been deposited—as few as two) to force the other signatories whose ratifications are deposited after the entry into force of the convention to accept a convention containing provisions quite other than those to which they had agreed when signing the convention, and without their having had an adequate opportunity to object to reservations only made simultaneously with the very ratifications which brought the convention into force. The procedure set forth in article 23 of the Convention of 16 November 1937 appears to be a reasonable one, since it allows States which are signatories of the convention, but which have not yet ratified it, a period of three years in which to object to any reservations made on ratification by other States and, at the same time, prevents the possibility that a ratification subject to a reservation may indefinitely be held to be ineffective because it is objected to by a signatory State which has not yet made up its mind to ratify the convention and possibly may never do so.

V. Reservations made on accession

9. The position with regard to reservations made at the time of accession to a multilateral convention appears to be very similar to that regarding reservations on ratification. Article 16 of the Harvard draft Convention provides that:

“A State may make a reservation when acceding to a treaty only with the consent of all the signatories to the treaty and of the States which have previously acceded to the treaty”.²⁴

This corresponds with the view held by Hudson, who says:

“Similarly, an adhesion subject to reservation cannot be received in deposit without the consent of all States which have previously ratified or adhered, and possibly without the consent of all signatory States”.²⁵

VI. Should reservations preferably be made on signature, or on ratification or accession?

10. The balance of opinion is in favour of making reservations on signature rather than on ratification. The United States authority, Professor Hyde, puts the case for making reservations on signature as follows:

²⁰ Ibid., p. 890.

²¹ Hackworth, Digest, vol. V., para. 482, p. 130.

²² Hudson, International Legislation, vol. I., Introduction, p. 1.

²³ Hudson, A.J.I.L., vol. 32 (1938), p. 335.

²⁴ Harvard Draft Convention, Comment, loc. cit., p. 905.

²⁵ Hudson, op. cit., p. 1.

"The Department of State has found occasion to declare that reservations to a multipartite treaty should be made and recorded at the time of signature in order that all parties to the treaty may, previous to and in considering ratification, understand to what extent each signatory is bound by the terms of the agreement".²⁶

Article 14 (d) of the Harvard draft Convention on the Law of Treaties states as follows:

"If a State has made a reservation when signing a treaty, its later ratification will give effect to the reservation in the relations of that State with other States which have become or may become parties to the treaty".²⁷

The Harvard comment on the provisions is as follows:

"Reservations made upon signature are of necessity formally accepted by every Power which subsequently ratifies the treaty. Every Power has had formal knowledge thereof to the same extent as of the text of the treaty itself".²⁸

VII. Position of Headquarters Government or depositary authority regarding attempted reservations

11. Hudson emphasized the duty which rests upon the depositary of ratifications to a multilateral treaty, and says:

"An authority designated as the depositary of ratifications would not be justified in allowing a definitive deposit of a ratification which is subject to a reservation unless the consent of other signatory States were obtained, though the consent may, in some cases, be inferred from a failure to object after adequate opportunity".²⁹

Hudson also points out that agreement to a fresh reservation made at the time of ratification

"... is usually expressed in a procès-verbal of the exchange or deposit of ratifications or by an exchange of notes".³⁰

In saying this he appears, although he does not expressly say so, to mean that this way of expressing agreement to a reservation is that which should be adopted by other States which have already deposited ratification, depositing them at the same time as the State which is ratifying subject to a reservation. The consent of signatories which have not yet ratified can, it seems, be sometimes inferred from failure to object.

12. An interesting example of a case in which no ratifications had been deposited before the deposit of the first ratifications containing reservations is afforded by The Hague Conventions of 1907. The first ratifications to these Conventions were deposited on 27 November 1909, and included several ratifications which contained reservations. The representatives of the States depositing such ratifications verbally called them to the attention of the other Powers depositing ratifications and signing the procès-verbaux. Copies of all instruments of ratification deposited were then sent to all the Powers which had attended The Hague Peace Conference, and States subsequently ratifying The Hague Conventions of 1907 therefore had notice of the reservations contained in the ratifications already deposited, and the failure of any such States to object appears to have been considered as indicating consent to the reservations.³¹

13. Another problem regarding consent to the deposit of ratifications subject to reservations has been raised by the fact that, at the present day, the depositary of a multilateral convention will often be, not the government of a State, but the Secretary-General of the United Nations. A similar problem arose during the existence of the League of Nations, and an attempt to solve it was made by the insertion in multilateral conventions of which the Secretary-General of the League was the depositary, of specific provisions relating to the method of obtaining consent to reservations to the conventions (see, for example, article 23 of the Convention of 16 November 1937 for the Prevention and Punishment of Terrorism, which has already been referred to above).³² An interesting example of the procedure adopted by the Secretary-General of the United Nations in regard to the communication to other parties of a reservation to a multilateral convention arose in connexion with the Constitution of the World Health Organization, in respect of which the United States, in depositing its instrument of accession with the Secretary-General of the United Nations, reserved its right to withdraw from the Organization on giving one year's notice.³³ In this particular instance, the normal procedure of the depositary's communicating the reservation to all the parties and enquiring whether they objected to it, would not have been entirely satisfactory, since, as pointed out by Schachter,

"it was . . . evident that the consent of all the Members could not be obtained within the short time available and that the requirement of unanimity might result in the rejection of the acceptance if the States were to act separately without opportunity for consultation. . . . Moreover, the effect would be that a decision of great importance to an established international organisation would be made not through the competent organs but by the States acting individually and separately, with each entitled to veto the ratification".³⁴

The Secretary-General's method of dealing with the problem avoided this result. He informed the States parties to the Constitution that he was "not in a position to determine whether the United States has become a party to the Constitution" and that he therefore proposed to refer the matter to the World Health Assembly which, under article 75 of the Constitution, was the competent body to settle questions concerning the interpretation or application of the Constitution. The matter was accordingly discussed by the World Health Assembly, and at the conclusion of the discussion it was announced by the President that, since there were no objections, "the United States ratification of the Constitution is unanimously accepted by this Assembly". Thus, in effect, the decision on the question of the reservation has been transferred to the organization; and it would scarcely be possible to find a clearer application of the principle that, to such reservations, general consent is necessary and that they cannot be made unilaterally.³⁵

VIII. Method by which depositary obtains consent

14. Different views have been expressed as to how consent to reservations made on ratification should be obtained by the Headquarters Government or depositary authority. The comment on article 15 (b) of the Harvard draft Convention on the Law of Treaties suggests that, depending on the circumstances of the case, a State which is the depositary of ratifications may either:

(i) Communicate the proposed reservations, both to the other signatories which have not yet ratified and to those signatories which have deposited ratifications, in a note implying that in the absence of express objections their consent to the proposed reservation will be presumed.

(ii) Request from the other States concerned, whether they are signatories which have not yet ratified or signatories which have deposited ratifications, an express indication of consent by vote.³⁶

Hackworth, on the other hand, considers that there is a difference in such circumstances, between signatories whose ratifications have been deposited and signatories which have not yet ratified. The former should signify the acceptance of the proposed reservations by some positive act, but in the case of the latter it is probable that acceptance of the reservations would be implied from failure to object.³⁷

IX. General conclusion

15. The most generally accepted opinion clearly is that a State which wishes to make a reservation to a multilateral convention may do so only if, at the least, all the other States which are signatories to the Convention consent; and, in the case of conventions which are still open for signature, it is arguable that the consent of all those who have a right to sign must be obtained. It is preferable that consent should be given explicitly, but in some cases it can be assumed from silence. If, however, one of the other States possessing a right to object explicitly refuses to accept a reservation, the reservation must either be abandoned or the State making the reservation must remain outside the convention altogether. This would be so even though only one article of the convention were to be affected, for, as Sir William Malkin put it, "If . . . any party is entitled, without the consent of the other signatories, to pick out of the convention any provisions to which it objects and exclude them by means of a reservation from the obligations which it accepts, it is obvious . . . that the object of the convention might be largely defeated".³⁸ Equally, given the fact that the consideration for the acceptance of the contract by any one party is its acceptance by the others, it is also clear that such consideration would be impaired or even destroyed. The argument sometimes advanced that, as no State is obliged to sign any convention unless it wishes to do so, any State is entitled to accept as much or as little of a convention as it may think fit, and is therefore in a position to make any reservations which it considers desirable, irrespective of the views of the other actual or potential parties, is untenable. An international convention is an integral whole and must be accepted or not accepted as a whole. It cannot be accepted in part. Derogations may, exceptionally, be permitted to meet the special circumstances of particular countries, provided they receive the consent of the other interested parties, but no State can claim a right to make such reservations unilaterally, or accept those parts of a convention which suit it while excluding those parts it disagrees with or does not feel it can carry out. The Harvard research commentators endorse this view,³⁹ and quote a memorandum addressed to the Secretary-General of the League of Nations by the British Government for circulation to the members of the Council of the League of Nations regarding the Austrian signature with reservations of the Opium Convention of 19 February 1925:

"If individual States are to be entitled, without consultation with other signatories, to accept an agreement as a whole while declining to adopt those of its provisions which may be unwelcome to them, there is a danger that such a practice would tend to defeat the purposes for which multilateral agreements are entered into".⁴⁰

United Kingdom: amendments to the draft resolution submitted by the United States of America (A/C.6/L.114)

[4 October 1950]

1. Substitute the following paragraph for the second paragraph of the United States draft resolution:

“Decides that pending the receipt of an advisory opinion from the International Court of Justice on the question formulated in the final paragraph of the present resolution, the Secretary-General shall observe the following procedure with respect to ratifications or accessions embodying reservations:”

2. Add the following paragraph at the end of the resolution:

“Requests the International Court of Justice to furnish it with an advisory opinion on the following question:

“Whether the procedure laid down in the preceding paragraph is in conformity with the rules of international law governing the validity of reservations to multilateral conventions and the effect of objections made thereto, with particular reference to the type of convention of which the Secretary-General of the United Nations is normally the depositary.”

3. The following drafting amendments should be made to sub-paragraphs (a) and (b) in the third paragraph of the United States resolution:

For the words “up to the date of entry into force” at the end of sub-paragraph (a), substitute “prior to the date of entry into force”. In the second line of sub-paragraph (b), for the words “all States which have heretofore ratified or acceded” substitute “all States which have ratified or acceded to the convention prior to the date of deposit of the instrument containing the reservation”.

4. In the event of the reference to the International Court of Justice not being accepted, the United Kingdom will propose replacing sub-paragraphs (a) and (b) of the third paragraph of the United States draft resolution by the following paragraphs:

“(a) In regard to a convention which has not yet come into force, only with the consent of all States which become signatories thereto prior to the date of entry into force,

“(b) In regard to a convention which has come into force, only with the consent of all States which have become signatories to the convention prior to the deposit of the instrument containing the reservation.”

The General Assembly,

Having examined the report of the Secretary-General regarding reservations to multilateral conventions (A/1372),

Decides that pending the formulation of a report by the International Law Commission, the Secretary-General shall observe the following rules with respect to ratifications or accessions embodying reservations, to the extent that such procedure is not inconsistent with express provisions in the convention or in any agreement between States directly concerned:

(a) The treaty shall have effect, as signed, in respect of those countries which have ratified it without reservations, in the form in which it was originally drafted and signed;

(b) It shall have effect in respect of the Governments which have ratified it with reservations and the signatory States which have accepted them, as modified by such reservations;

(c) It shall not have effect as between a Government which has ratified it with reservations and a Government which has already ratified the treaty but does not accept the reservations.

Uruguay: memorandum

[5 October 1950]

1. The Uruguayan delegation disagrees in certain important and fundamental respects with the views expounded in the learned report submitted for our consideration by the Secretary-General (A/1372).

2. We are all agreed, and there can be no doubt on this point, that a reservation must be accepted. If a State accedes to a treaty with reservations such accession can have effect only if accepted by the ratifying States.

3. Herein, however, lies the chief difference between the system followed by the Pan American Union and that adopted by the League of Nations. The difference is that under the League of Nations system, where a multilateral treaty is signed and one of the States subsequently ratifies it with reservations, then in order that such later accession subject to reservations may be valid and the State be regarded as a party to the treaty, it is necessary that all those States which have already acceded should accept the reservations. If a single ratifying State refuses to admit them, the accession with reservations will be null and void and the State making them will be outside the treaty and will not be a party to it.

4. On the other hand, under the Pan American Union system the position is different. It can be perfectly illustrated by an example which actually occurred. Let us suppose that a multilateral treaty has been concluded by the twenty-one American Republics. Eighteen of the States accede to and ratify the treaty without reservation; one, however—Uruguay, for example—ratifies it subject to reservations. The accession subject to reservations is then notified to the Pan American Union, the body with whom ratifications are deposited. Let us now suppose that seventeen of the eighteen ratifying States accept the Uruguayan reservation but one—Cuba, for example—signifies that it cannot accept the reservation. In that case, under the Pan American system, although the reservation made by Uruguay has been rejected by one State, Uruguay may become a party to the Treaty and is bound, vis-à-vis the seventeen States which have accepted its reservation, by the terms of the treaty as modified by the reservation; but between Uruguay and the State which has not accepted the reservation—Cuba in this instance—there is deemed to exist no treaty.

5. Now, the Secretary-General of the United Nations has been made the depositary of the ratifications of numerous conventions concluded under the auspices of the United Nations.

6. That Organization is now faced with the problem whether to continue the practice of the League of Nations or to adopt that of the Pan American Union. The Secretary-General, in his report (A/1372), has inclined toward the Geneva system and not toward the Pan American system, and has defended it vigorously. The only criticism that can be levelled against this learned document is that it constitutes an apology for the first system and not an impartial and objective study of the problem such as we might perhaps have been entitled to expect from the Secretary-General.

7. Our delegation agrees with the basic assumption of the Secretary-General's report (A/1372) that it is necessary to give the Secretary-General some standard according to which to act in carrying out his important function as depositary of ratifications. He cannot be left without any guide, to be a mere passive receiver of those instruments and an intermediary between the parties.

8. Our delegation, however, disagrees with the choice of system which the Secretary-General has made.

9. What are the reasons which the Secretary-General has given us for his preference of the Geneva system to the Pan American system?

10. They are certainly weighty reasons: they are supported by the opinions of publicists and institutions of great authority who have stated that the League system has a more juridical character than does the system of the Pan American Union.

11. He advances, however, only very few and very weak arguments of substance to show that the League of Nations system is the better one from the point of view of expediency.

12. Our delegation is prepared to bow to the authority of reason, but not to the reason of authority.

13. In our opinion, the crux of the matter is that the choice between the League system and the Pan American Union system is one of pure expediency and not one to be governed by legal rules. Both systems are perfectly proper and acceptable in international law.

14. The fact that the Pan American Union has succeeded in following for so long, without the least difficulty and with the full consent of the twenty Latin-American States and the United States, the system which it has selected, is the best evidence that there is nothing intrinsically contrary to law or impracticable about that system.

15. When the question is put on the basis of expediency, there can, in our delegation's opinion, be no doubt of the practical superiority and greater efficiency of the Pan American Union system as compared with the League system. The Secretary-General is obliged to admit as much in his own report (para. 30).

16. The Pan American system facilitates the making of reservations, and thus has the effect of increasing the number of ratifications and of widening the use and scope of treaties. It hastens their entry into force; it leaves the parties a much freer hand; in short, it encourages the progressive development of international law by means of multilateral conventions.

17. On the other hand, the League system introduces a dangerous limitation and restriction of the freedom of States to formulate reservations. It makes ratification difficult, it postpones the entry into force of multilateral treaties; it gives States arbitrary power to exclude others from the operation of the treaty without just cause. Under the League system which the Secretary-General is recommending to us, any State can exclude from the operation of a treaty any other State by reason of the slightest disagreement with the most trivial and inoffensive reservation. This means neither more nor less than the extension into this field of the unanimity principle. It is equivalent to extending the veto into the sphere of the General Assembly. It means that the veto, which has already had such serious results in respect of the admission of new Members, would be extended to the acceptance of ratifying States into the system of important multilateral treaties concluded, and to be concluded, under the auspices of the United Nations.

18. For example, certain American countries have traditional objections which they make in most of their treaties—of whatever kind—and which are intended to safeguard territorial rights over areas they consider to be in the illegal possession of other States. Naturally, those other States will not accept such reservations, because that would be to admit the justice of the claims. By the system proposed by the Secretary-General, such non-acceptance would systematically exclude from the operation of a treaty American States which made such traditional reservations. It would have the effect of excluding from the whole system of treaties concluded and to be concluded under the auspices of the United Nations, Member States which have a perfect right to participate in them and whose participation would be most valuable.

19. It is impossible, let us say again, to introduce the veto into a matter such as this. Curiously enough, the Soviet Union has itself opposed this kind of veto. In 1935, the Soviet Union acceded with reservations to the Convention for Facilitating the International Circulation of Films of an Educational Character. Chile was the only ratifying State which would not accept those reservations. The Soviet Union thereupon proposed that the Convention should be deemed to have entered into force in respect of all the other ratifying States but not to exist between Chile and the Soviet Union. The Chilean Government, following the Pan American practice, accepted that proposal.¹

20. It may be said that it is necessary to safeguard the position of a ratifying State which cannot accept a reservation made by another. In our opinion, sufficient protection is afforded by the rule that the treaty shall not enter into force between the State which makes the reservation and the State which does not accept it, but that it may enter into force with respect to those States which do not object to the reservation.

21. The Secretary-General states in his report that this system is suitable for a regional organization such as the Organization of American States, but not for a universal body under whose auspices treaties and laws containing rules of general application are concluded.

22. I should like to point out that the Organization of American States has concluded more treaty statutes embodying general rules than has the United Nations, and that the reservations procedure has never given rise to the slightest difficulty.

23. We cannot, of course, ignore the class of treaties which by their special nature require universal and complete acceptance by all the ratifying States, since a reservation by any one of them would destroy the do ut des relationship for all the others. But this type of treaty is undoubtedly very exceptional indeed. The law must be made for the ordinary case, quod plerumque fit, and not for the exception. Moreover, when treaties of this special nature are negotiated, there is nothing to prevent the insertion in the text of the clause proposed to us in the Secretary-General's report as a general rule (A/1372).

24. Reference is also made in that document to the position with regard to the constitutions of the specialized agencies and other international bodies. In these cases, of course, no party can be admitted which makes its entry conditional on reservations to the obligations imposed by the instruments in question. These cases, however, are governed by a different system: it is the organs of the international organization in question which themselves take decisions of an organic nature on applications for the admission of members, and they must naturally take such reservations into account in refusing to approve the admission of the applicant under those conditions. This argument therefore has no relevance here.

25. The United States delegation has presented a draft resolution (A/C.6/L.114) comprising the following points:

(a) That the definitive study of this question be referred to the International Law Commission;

(b) That the provisions contained in the treaty itself shall apply in every case; and

(c) That until the International Law Commission has given its views, and if the treaty contains no express provisions in the matter, the system proposed by the Secretary-General shall be applied.

26. We agree with the first two points of the United States proposal. This is a question of practical and scientific importance. Our delegation is certain that that distinguished Commission will study the problem conscientiously and not permit itself to be influenced by legal prejudices or preconceptions, but will bear in mind the best interests of the progressive development of international law.

27. Strictly speaking, the system proposed by the United States leaves the problem unsolved. If a State accedes with reservations, it is necessary to decide whether it can be admitted, to have an ad hoc acceptance for each case and for each treaty. But these acceptances will have to be unanimous. That leaves us with the problem of the veto, and in the final analysis it is the system of the League of Nations.

28. The plan which Uruguay proposes and which the Pan American Union follows is that it should be agreed in advance that there would be no power of veto as a general rule.

29. We also agree with the United States proposal that in every case, the provisions contained in the treaty should prevail.

30. In this matter we can do no more than draw up supplementary rules that will apply only if the treaty contains no provision in the matter. We oppose, on the other hand, the transitional or temporary solution proposed in the United States draft. For the reasons already given, our delegation believes that it would be preferable for the time being and until the International Law Commission states its views, to adopt the system of the Pan American Union and not that of Geneva. Consequently, our delegation is moving a partial amendment (A/C.6/L.116) to the United States proposal, moving the adoption of the rules of the Pan American system.

The Secretary-General wishes to indicate, in regard to the list of multilateral agreements of which he is the depositary and which have not yet entered into force (A/C.6/L.122), that the following instruments contain provisions regarding reservations:

III. Convention on Road Traffic, signed at Geneva on 19 September 1949.

Article 2 of the Convention provides:

"1. The annexes to this Convention shall be considered as integral parts of the Convention; it being understood, however, that any State may on signature or ratification of, or accession to, the Convention, or at any time thereafter by declaration exclude annexes 1 and 2 from its application of the Convention.

"2. Any Contracting State may at any time give notice to the Secretary-General of the United Nations that it will be bound, as from the date of the said notification, by annexes 1 and 2 as excluded under the terms of paragraph 1 of this article."

Paragraph 7 (d) of the Final Act of the United Nations Conference on Road and Motor Transport provides:

"7. In the course of its work the Conference reached certain other decisions, which are hereby placed on record:

"(d) That there would be no objection to a reservation by the United Kingdom in respect of article 26 of the Convention on Road Traffic in the following terms:

"That cycles in international traffic admitted to the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland shall, from nightfall and during the night or whenever atmospheric conditions render it necessary, show only a white light to the front, and show to the rear a red light, a red reflex reflector and a white surface in accordance with the domestic legislation of the United Kingdom."

IV. Protocol on Road Signs and Signals, signed at Geneva on 19 September 1949:

Paragraphs 7 (e) and (f) of the Final Act of the United Nations Conference on Road and Motor Transport provide:

"7. In the course of its work the Conference reached certain other decisions, which are hereby placed on record:

* * *

"(e) That there would be no objection to a reservation by Sweden and by Norway in respect of paragraph 5 of article 15 of the Protocol on Road Signs and Signals, to the following effect:

"That the use of the Saint Andrew's Cross at level-crossings with gates shall be permitted in Sweden and in Norway;

"(f) That there would be no objection to a reservation by Austria in respect of paragraph 1 of article 45 of the Protocol on Road Signs and Signals to the following effect:

"That the signs for the special identification of routes in Austria may be either rectangular or circular in shape."

VI. Convention on the Declaration of Death of Missing Persons, Lake Success, New York, 6 April 1950:

Article 19 of the Convention provides:

"Any State may subject its accession to the present Convention to reservations which may be formulated only at the time of accession.

"If a Contracting State does not accept the reservations which another State may have thus attached to its accession, the former may, provided it does so within ninety days from the date on which the Secretary-General will have transmitted the reservations to it, notify the Secretary-General that it considers such accession as not having entered into force between the State making the reservation and the State not accepting it. In such cases, the Convention shall be considered as not being in force between such two States."

VIII. Agreement on the importation of educational, scientific and cultural materials. (Not yet opened for signature.)

Egypt, France, Greece, Iran, United Kingdom: joint draft resolution

[Original text: English]
[13 October 1950]

The General Assembly,

Having examined the report of the Secretary-General regarding reservations to multilateral conventions (A/1372),

Desirous that the depositary practices within the Secretariat of the United Nations should be firmly established in order that all interested States may know what consequences will follow from an objection to a reservation,

Mindful that an objection to a reservation raises difficult questions of substantive law as to the status under the convention of the reserving State,

Recognizing, however, that the rule to be followed within the United Nations should be determined solely in respect of the types of multilateral conventions of which the Secretary-General acts as depositary and should not be deemed to affect the rules followed among themselves by any States or groups of States as to treaties not concluded under the auspices of the United Nations,

Decides to take note of the report,

Requests the International Court of Justice to render an advisory opinion on the following questions:

"In so far as concerns multilateral conventions of which the Secretary-General of the United Nations serves as the depositary, and in the absence of stipulations in a given convention as to the procedure intended to govern any of the following matters:

"I. Can the Secretary-General accept for definitive deposit an instrument of ratification or accession containing a reservation before he has ascertained whether there is any objection to that reservation on the part of any other States concerned?

"II. In the event of an objection by one State, qualified to make the objection, to a reservation submitted by another State, what is the legal effect of that objection on the participation in the convention of the reserving State?

"III. In the event that, by reason of the reply to question II, a State maintaining a reservation to which an objection has been made is in any stated circumstance to be excluded from participation in the convention, which class or classes of States have the power before the coming into force of the convention to enter an objection which will exclude such participation, and which class or classes of States have such power after the coming into force of the convention?"

Instructs the Secretary-General to follow, for the conventions of which he is made the depositary, the procedure which will result from the advisory opinion of the Court, Recommends to Member States of the United Nations, in cases where they deem it advisable to permit reservations, to specify in the text of the convention the reservations to be allowed or the procedure to be followed in respect of reservations.

The General Assembly,

Having examined the report of the Secretary-General regarding reservations to multilateral conventions (A/1372),

Considering that certain reservations to the Convention for the Prevention and Punishment of the Crime of Genocide have been objected to by some States,

Considering that the International Law Commission is studying the whole subject of the law of treaties including the question of reservations,

Considering that different views regarding reservations were expressed in the fifth session of the General Assembly, and particularly in the Sixth Committee,

Requests the International Court of Justice to give an advisory opinion on the following questions:

In so far as concerns the Convention on Genocide, in the event of a State ratifying or acceding to the Convention subject to a reservation made either on ratification or on accession, or on signature followed by ratification:

1. Can the reserving State be regarded as being a party to the Convention while still maintaining its reservation if the reservation is objected to by one or more of the parties to the Convention but not by others;

2. If the answer to the first question is in the affirmative, what is the effect of the reservation as between the reserving State and:

- (a) The parties which object to the reservation,
- (b) Those which accept it.

3. What would be the legal effect as regards the answer to question (1) if an objection to a reservation is made:

- (a) By a signatory which has not yet ratified,
- (b) A State entitled to sign or accede but which has not yet done so.

Invites the International Law Commission:

(a) In the course of their work on the codification of the law of treaties, to study the question of reservations to multilateral conventions both from the point of view of codification and from that of the progressive development of international law; and to give priority to this study and to report thereon, especially as regards multilateral conventions of which the Secretary-General is the depositary, this report to be considered by the General Assembly at its sixth session;

(b) In connexion with this study, to take account of all the views expressed in the fifth session of the General Assembly and particularly in the Sixth Committee.

DOCUMENT A/1494 (incorporating A/1494/Corr.1)

Report of the Sixth Committee

Rapporteur: Mr. A. Kural (Turkey)

[Original text: English]
[10 November 1950]

1. The question of reservations to multilateral conventions proposed by the Secretary-General was placed on the agenda of the fifth session of the General Assembly and was referred by the Assembly, at its 285th meeting on 26 September 1950, to the Sixth Committee for consideration.

2. As depositary of conventions which have been adopted by the General Assembly, as well as of many other multilateral agreements which have been concluded under the auspices of the United Nations, the Secretary-General had desired guidance concerning the procedure which he should follow regarding reservations made by States as conditional to their accession to such conventions.

3. At the time the Secretary-General put this question before the General Assembly, the subject had a certain practical urgency because of the Convention on the Prevention and Punishment of the Crime of Genocide. According to article XIII thereof, that Convention would come into force on the ninetieth day after the date of deposit of the twentieth instrument of ratification or accession. On the day of receiving the twentieth instrument the Secretary-General was to draw up a procès-verbal to that effect, and the receipt of the twentieth instrument was to be expected at any time. A number of States, however, had made reservations as to various articles of the Convention, to the substance of which some States had objected. It had consequently appeared to the Secretary-General that the legal effect of objections to reservations would require an early determination in order to establish whether States making reservations to which objection had been raised were to be counted among those necessary to permit the entry into force of the Convention.

4. The Sixth Committee had before it a report of the Secretary-General on reservations to multilateral conventions (A/1372), in which he gave an account of the practice which the Secretariat of the United Nations had followed up to the time of the report. He showed how this compared with the practice of the League of Nations from which it had been adapted, and reviewed the opinions of numerous international publicists and the actions of Governments in this respect.

5. The practice followed by the Secretary-General in the absence of specific provisions in a convention governing reservation procedures was summarized as follows:

“A State may make a reservation when signing, ratifying or acceding to a convention, prior to its entry into force, only with the consent of all States which have ratified or acceded thereto up to the date of entry into force; and may do so after the date of entry into force only with the consent of all States which have theretofore ratified or acceded” (A/1372, paragraph 46).

6. At the same time, the report of the Secretary-General drew attention to the system followed by the Pan American Union as to multilateral conventions concluded among the American States for which it serves as depositary. The essence of this rule has been established as follows:

“The treaty shall be in force, in the form in which it was signed, as between those countries which ratify it without reservations, in the terms in which it was originally drafted and signed. It shall be in force as between the Governments which ratify it with reservations and the signatory States which accept the reservations in the form in which the treaty may be modified by said reservations. It shall not be in force between a Government which may have ratified with reservations and another which may have already ratified, and which does not accept such reservations”¹ (A/1372, paragraph 26).

7. The Sixth Committee discussed the question of reservations at its 217th to 225th meetings inclusive, from 6 to 20 October 1950. The essential problems dealt with in the course of these debates were, broadly, the competence of the Committee to make any determination governing the larger aspects of the question; to what organ of the United Nations it might be appropriate for the question to be referred; the relative need for interim guidance to be given to the Secretary-General by the General Assembly pending the results of any such referral; what rule it would be preferable for the Secretary-General to follow in the event of such a provisional instruction; and, finally, what general recommendations to States might serve to eliminate the occurrence of the difficulties previously encountered in connexion with reservations.

8. On the question of competence a number of delegations were of the opinion that, since the question before the Committee concerned only the procedure to be followed by the Secretary-General as depositary of multilateral conventions, the General Assembly was competent to give him instructions on the manner in which he should administer that function. A large majority of the Committee, however, believed that it was not appropriate, in the time now available, for the General Assembly to establish, without further examination, rules which would have the effect of determining legal relations among States under United Nations conventions.

9. Accordingly, the Committee gave detailed consideration to the problem of referring the question to a qualified organ. Opinion was divided as to whether the International Law Commission or the International Court of Justice was more suitable in the circumstances. Many delegations favoured the International Law Commission because it already had under preparation a report on the law of treaties, and had in fact, at its second session, briefly discussed the subject of reservations. Moreover, it was considered that the International Law Commission, unlike the Court, would not be restricted to existing principles of international law in a field in which there had been insufficient development of general principles and in which the main legal systems of the world in fact differed. It was felt by many that on the present problem the Court would be confined to an interpretation of the law, whereas what was involved, in part at least, was not strictly a question of law but the development of appropriate procedures for which the Commission was well suited. It was especially felt that, in so far as concerned a general solution broadly applicable to a variety of cases, what the General Assembly required was a study to serve as a basis for future discussion.

10. The contrary position, favouring a request by the General Assembly for an advisory opinion of the International Court of Justice, was based upon the view that it was not the function of the International Law Commission to solve controversial questions; its function was to codify existing law, whereas it was the duty of the International Court of Justice to settle just such conflicts in matters of law and to state the law when it was doubtful. On the level of immediate practical considerations, it was also noted that the Court would be in a position to render an earlier decision, the more so in view of the heavy burden of work, on a variety of major subjects, which already weighed upon the programme of the International Law Commission. In fact, it was suggested by France (A/C.6/L.118) that a prompt submission to the Court of a precisely formulated question might permit the Secretary-General to give effect to the opinion before the end of the ninety-day period which would bring the Convention on Genocide into force. Furthermore, it was noted by other delegations that if a difference were to arise between given States on any of the matters now under debate, these very questions would eventually be referred to the Court in accordance with article IX of the Convention on Genocide—from which it seemed logical to make the submission immediately.

11. In either case, a majority of the representatives considered that the General Assembly would wish to discuss the content of an advisory opinion of the Court, or of the study made by the International Law Commission, before the recommendation of either body could be put into practice by the Secretary-General, in so far as depositary procedures were affected.

12. Because the Convention on Genocide, which had caused the Secretary-General to submit the problem to the General Assembly, was in prospect of entering into force, a substantial number of delegations felt that some instructions to the Secretary-General were warranted pending the outcome of the reference of the matter to the International Law Commission or the International Court of Justice. For this purpose three leading proposals were made. Although a few delegations would have inclined toward the position that the depositary was competent to proceed without interim instructions, the main debate centred upon these three proposals. The United States of America submitted a draft resolution (A/C.6/L.114/Rev.1) designed to avoid delay in the entry into force of a convention by permitting the Secretary-General to follow his previous procedure, for the purposes of entry into force, in any case where reservations were submitted. But this was to be without prejudice to the legal status of the parties, of ratifications or accessions, or of acceptances or rejections of reservations.

13. The United Kingdom, on the other hand, placed before the Committee an amendment (A/C.6/L.115) designed, in its first three paragraphs, to continue the League of Nations rule as applied by the Secretary-General of the United Nations, pending the formulation of a final policy. As noted in paragraph 5 above, this rule would treat an adherence subject to a reservation as valid and acceptable by the depositary only if it first received the consent, tacit or implied, of all the other States concerned.

14. At the same time, Uruguay proposed an amendment (A/C.6/L.116) to the United States draft, instructing the Secretary-General to follow a rule modelled after that of the Pan American Union, pending the final decision. As noted in paragraph 6 above, this rule enables a convention to be in force between a State proposing a reservation and any other party accepting that reservation, while not in force as between the reserving State and any party expressing its disagreement with the reservation.

15. Numerous delegations favoured the United States proposal because it facilitated the entry into force of conventions and still sought not to compromise the question of the legal position of States as parties. Some delegations, however, argued against the United States proposal on the ground that it was preferable to adopt one or the other of the traditional rules.

16. The principal reasons adduced in favour of the United Kingdom amendment were that it maintained a convention in the form of one integral text applicable to the legal relations among all parties, and prevented an alteration by means of a reservation of any of the terms of that text against the will of the States concerned. On the other hand, many of the delegations opposing the League of Nations practice considered that it would now constitute an extension of the rule of unanimity with its corollary, the veto. It would enable one State arbitrarily to exclude the participation of another even though the reservation might be proposed only on some reasonable adjustment of the framework of the convention to the internal legal system of the reserving State. Such a result would derogate from the sovereignty of the reserving State.

17. The practice of the Pan American Union was strongly advocated by many delegations. They argued that by facilitating reservations the system enabled the maximum number of States to accede to conventions, thus speeding their entry into force, and so favouring the progressive development of international law while nevertheless respecting the national sovereignty of each State. Although opposing this system, those delegations which favoured the practice thus far followed by the League of Nations and the Secretary-General of the United Nations acknowledged the advantages of the Pan American method and emphasized its applicability to a regional organization. They also stressed that any rule adopted by the United Nations would not prejudice the right of other organizations to follow a system of their own choosing. Their objection to the Uruguayan proposal, as a provisional measure, was that it would upset the procedures and the relations among States thus far prevailing, for what might prove to be only an interim period. As regards long-term legal considerations, it was objected that this system, although it facilitated adherences to conventions, did so only, in effect, by breaking down a uniform multilateral text into a composite of bilateral agreements between some pairs of adhering States but not between other pairs. To those delegations emphasizing the law-making character of United Nations conventions, it seemed undesirable to turn to a system which would theoretically permit the obligations of States under broad rules of international conduct to obtain between some States adhering to the convention but not between others. It was for this reason that the representative of Chile offered an amendment (A/C.6/L.120) to the Uruguayan proposal in order that it might not apply where the text of the convention had been adopted by the General Assembly. He urged that a minority ought not to be able to make its views, outvoted on the floor of the Assembly, prevail by the device of reservations.

18. A number of subsidiary questions were raised in connexion with the problem of interim instructions. If the League of Nations rule requiring consent to reservations were to be followed, it would be necessary to decide what groups of States should have the power to exclude, by objecting to a reservation, the participa tion of a State ready to take part subject to the conditions presented. One element of the United Kingdom draft (A/C.6/L.115) was that signatory States, having an interest to protect in the text of a convention in the form in which it was signed, should—up to the date of entry into force—be able to prevent reservations from altering that text against their will. Carrying this view one step further, Sweden entered an amendment (A/C.6/L.121) permitting such an objection, by a signatory to a convention which prescribes a time-limit for signature, up to the date of the expiry of that time-limit. The report of the Secretary-General, on the other hand, had presumed that only ratifying or acceding States would be in a position to exercise this power to exclude. Each position received support in the course of the debates. The Netherlands, however, raised the possibility of a compromise system whereby signatories might be permitted to make so important an objection only on declaring their intention to ratify within a specified period of time.

19. So also, Iran submitted a draft, by way of amendment (A/C.6/L.119), which would have recommended to States Members of the United Nations the insertion, in all conventions to be concluded by them in the future, of a clause defining the procedure to be adopted by the depositary when a reservation is entered by a State and the legal effect of an objection to such a reservation put forward by another State. The French draft already referred to (A/C.6/L.118), while making the same point, included a recommendation that Member States dispense as far as possible with the use of reservations to conventions adopted under the auspices of the United Nations.

20. As the debates carried forward the analysis of these various positions on the whole subject of reservations, a general feeling developed that any questions to be referred to another organ would require very exact formulation. With this in mind, Egypt, France, Greece, Iran and the United Kingdom presented a joint draft resolution (A/C.6/L.123) requesting an advisory opinion from the International Court of Justice on precise questions affecting the validity of any adherence subject to a contested reservation, as well as the classes of States having the power to make an effective objection. A joint amendment to this draft, offered by Belgium, Denmark, Netherlands, Norway and Sweden (A/C.6/L.124), proposed that these questions be determined solely in respect of those multilateral conventions which had been listed by the Secretary-General as yet to come into force.

21. Meanwhile, the importance of permitting reservations was stressed by numerous delegations. The representative of Poland traced the origin of the use of reservations to the development of the majority vote in the drafting of conventions, as opposed to the earlier use of unanimity even in the preparation of the text. Since the drafting conference itself no longer required the full agreement of all prospective parties before the final text could be adopted, he noted that reservations were the counterpart device which permitted the minority nevertheless to continue as parties. He therefore urged the Committee not to adopt a rule which would permit the majority not only to impose its will in the choice of the text but also as to the conditions under which the minority might adhere—a possibility which he could not justify by considerations either of theory or of practice.

22. The representatives of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics and the Byelorussian Soviet Socialist Republic stated that the theory of the inability of the Secretary-General to receive an instrument of ratification in definitive deposit if even one of the States parties to a convention objected to a reservation was incompatible with the principle of State sovereignty and contrary to the fundamental principles of international law. In fact, in their view, the recommendations of the Secretary-General would have the effect of prohibiting the submission of reservations, since a State in the minority when the text of a convention was drafted could not hope that there would be no State objecting to a reservation; for a reservation was usually made because corresponding provisions had been rejected during the drafting of the text of the convention. The attitude of the Secretary-General, they contended, was contrary both to the principles of international law and to its practice in the conclusion of multilateral treaties; the indisputable right of a State to make reservations had been recognized during the signing of many treaties. As to the Convention on Genocide, the representative of the USSR was of the opinion that the Secretary-General should be strictly guided by its text, which did not contain any special procedure for the deposit of ratifications with reservations; neither did it contain any limitations of the right to submit reservations. The legal implications of a reservation at the signing of a convention, in the opinion of the USSR representative, would be that those provisions of a convention which were the subject of the reservation would not apply to relations between the State which made the reservation and all other parties to the convention. He believed that the General Assembly was not competent to give instructions to the Secretary-General, which would in effect be complementary to the text of the Convention on Genocide, since it would lead to the creation of new legal relations, not contemplated by the Convention, between States parties to the Convention. Reinforcing this stand, the representative of Czechoslovakia observed that the rule of unanimity would convert the State disagreeing with a reservation into a judge of the State which put it forward.

23. In the view of most delegations, the character of the problem before the Committee altered when, on 16 October 1950, the Assistant Secretary-General in charge of the Legal Department was able to announce that the Convention on the Prevention and Punishment of the Crime of Genocide had received a number of ratifications and accessions on 14 October, so that the twenty instruments necessary for its entry into force were now at hand, irrespective of the theory used in determining the validity of those containing reservations. In the minds of a majority of the representatives in the Committee this fact removed much of the urgency of any answer from the International Law Commission or the International Court of Justice, and significantly affected the formulation of the questions which had thus far been proposed for submission to either body. Moreover, from a list of other multilateral agreements of which the Secretary-General is the depositary, submitted to the Committee by the Secretary-General (A/C.6/L.122), together with their provisions concerning reservations (A/C.6/L.122/Add.1), it appeared that there was no urgency, in so far as these other conventions were concerned, for the Secretary-General to receive particular directives.

24. At this point the thirteen delegations which had previously submitted drafts bearing on any aspect of the problem withdrew all prior drafts and offered in their place a joint proposal, which they submitted to the Committee at its 224th meeting (A/C.6/L.125). This draft formulated specific questions arising under the Convention on Genocide, to be referred to the Court with a request for an advisory opinion. At the same time, it invited the International Law Commission, in the course of its work on the codification of the law of treaties, to study the question of reservations to multilateral conventions, giving priority to the subject in order to report to the General Assembly at its sixth session.

25. It was also pointed out that, as a result of the entry into force of the Convention, it no longer seemed necessary, in view of the little likelihood of a similar situation arising in the near future, for the Sixth Committee to attempt to elaborate any interim procedure for the Secretary-General to follow until the substantive question could be settled. It would be sufficient for the depositary to continue to handle the deposit of instruments in the same manner as heretofore so long as he avoided any legal interpretation being made as to the effect of contested reservations upon the status of the parties, pending the adoption of a final solution. This would also prevent any possible prejudgment of the eventual outcome.

26. Likewise, for the reason that the joint proposal was designed to obtain not only an advisory opinion under a specific convention but also a study which might choose between distinctly different theories as to the effect of reservations, it was generally concluded that it would be premature for the General Assembly at this session to make any recommendations to States on the broader question of eliminating the difficulties which have been encountered in connexion with reservations. It was felt that it would be better to await the taking of a more definitive position at the sixth session of the General Assembly before including recommendations on the over-all subject of reservations and related procedures, since the nature of any recommendation might vary according to the type of system adopted.

27. Although approving the text of the request submitted to the International Law Commission by the joint proposal, a number of delegations were nevertheless still unable to agree to the request for an advisory opinion from the International Court of Justice on a subject of this nature. A number also believed that it was contradictory to submit the problem to two different bodies at once. The Philippine representative felt that it should be left to the contracting parties themselves to submit to the International Court of Justice any dispute as to the interpretation or application of the Convention on Genocide, as provided in its article IX; and that it was not for the General Assembly but for the parties directly involved to formulate the issues to be submitted to the judgment of the Court. For that reason the USSR proposed an amendment (A/C.6/L.127) to the joint proposal, deleting the request to the Court for an advisory opinion. When, however, it was asked that the parts of the joint draft resolution concerning the two submissions should be voted upon separately, it was agreed that it would be unnecessary to vote upon the USSR amendment.

28. At the request of the Philippine representative, a roll-call vote was taken on that part of the draft resolution which requested an advisory opinion from the Court. It was adopted by 28 votes to 13, with 10 abstentions, as follows:

In favour: Afghanistan, Australia, Belgium, Brazil, Burma, Canada, Chile, Denmark, Egypt, France, Greece, India, Iran, Iraq, Israel, Mexico, Netherlands, New Zealand, Norway, Pakistan, Panama, Sweden, Union of South Africa, United Kingdom, United States of America, Uruguay, Yemen, Yugoslavia.

Abstaining: China, Colombia, Dominican Republic, Honduras, Lebanon, Peru, Saudi Arabia, Syria, Thailand, Venezuela.

29. The request for a priority study by the International Law Commission on the question of reservations was then adopted by 46 votes to none, with 7 abstentions.

30. The preamble being adopted by 40 votes to one, with 11 abstentions, the draft resolution (A/C.6/L.125) was accordingly voted on as a whole and adopted by 36 votes to 7, with 9 abstentions.

31. The Sixth Committee therefore recommends to the General Assembly for adoption the following resolution:

RESERVATIONS TO MULTILATERAL CONVENTIONS

The General Assembly,

Having examined the report of the Secretary-General regarding reservations to multilateral conventions,

Considering that certain reservations to the Convention for the Prevention and Punishment of Genocide have been objected to by some States,

Considering that the International Law Commission is studying the whole subject of the law of treaties, including the question of reservations,

Considering that different views regarding reservations have been expressed during the fifth session of the General Assembly, and particularly in the Sixth Committee,

1. Requests the International Court of Justice to give an advisory opinion on the following questions:

“In so far as concerns the Convention on the Prevention and Punishment of the Crime of Genocide in the event of a State ratifying or acceding to the Convention subject to a reservation made either on ratification or on accession, or on signature followed by ratification:

“I. Can the reserving State be regarded as being a party to the Convention while still maintaining its reservation if the reservation is objected to by one or more of the parties to the Convention but not by others?

“II. If the answer to the first question is in the affirmative, what is the effect of the reservation as between the reserving State and:

“(a) The parties which object to the reservation;

“(b) Those which accept it?”

“III. What would be the legal effect as regards the answer to question I if an objection to a reservation is made:

“(a) By a signatory which has not yet ratified;

“(b) By a State entitled to sign or accede but which has not yet done so?”

2. Invites the International Law Commission:

(a) In the course of its work on the codification of the law of treaties to study the question of reservations to multilateral conventions both from the point of view of codification and from that of the progressive development of international law; to give priority to this study and to report thereon, especially as regards multilateral conventions of which the Secretary-General is the depositary, this report to be considered by the General Assembly at its sixth session;

(b) In connexion with this study, to take account of all the views expressed during the fifth session of the General Assembly, and particularly in the Sixth Committee.

DOCUMENT A/1289

Letter dated 10 July 1950 addressed to the Secretary-General by the permanent representative of India to the United Nations

[Original text : English]
[20 July 1950]

The permanent representative of India to the United Nations presents his compliments to the Secretary-General of the United Nations and has the honour to state that, as the Secretary-General is aware, the question of treatment of Indians in South Africa has been before the General Assembly since 1946, and in the last resolution of the General Assembly dated 14 May 1949¹, the Governments of India, Pakistan and South Africa were invited to enter into a discussion of the issue at a round table conference, taking into consideration the purposes and principles of the Charter of the United Nations and the Universal Declaration of Human Rights. In pursuance of this resolution, the Government of India, in July 1949, initiated correspondence asking the Government of the Union of South Africa as to when and where such a round table conference could be held. The Government of the Union of South Africa insisted on preliminary talks with a view to drawing up the agenda for the round table conference. These talks were held in Capetown in February 1950, at which it was agreed " to convene a round table conference to explore all possible ways and means of settling the Indian question in South Africa ". This covered two concrete items of the agenda which the three delegations had agreed to discuss at the round table conference :

1. Reduction of the Indian population in South Africa (proposed by South Africa); and
2. Removal of political, social and economic disabilities of South African nationals of Indo-Pakistan origin and the provision of opportunities for their fullest development (proposed jointly by India and Pakistan).

Even before these preliminary talks, the Government of the Union of South Africa had resorted to new anti-Indian measures in South Africa. This was brought to the notice of the Secretary-General by this delegation in July and September 1949. After these preliminary talks, the severity of action against the Indians was further intensified by the Government of the Union of South Africa, and executive action under the Asiatic Land Tenure Amendment Act of 1949 was vigorously pursued.

The Government of India, on 5 April 1950, requested the Government of the Union of South Africa to postpone executive action under the Asiatic Land Tenure Amendment Act of 1949, refrain from extending this Act to the Cape Province and not to introduce any legislative measure which would add to the disabilities of Indians pending the proposed round table conference. The Government of Pakistan also made a similar request to the Government of the Union of South Africa. In the correspondence that has followed, the Government of the Union of South Africa has refused to accede to the request of the Government of India, and the Group Areas Bill, which the Government of India was most anxious to have postponed, was rushed through the Parliament of the Union of South Africa and had now become law.

This law enables the Government of the Union of South Africa to establish areas for exclusive occupation or ownership of any single racial group. No person from outside that group can occupy land or premises without permit one year after the notification of the group areas. Trade licences would be issued or renewed only on the production of proof that the applicant can lawfully occupy premises in that particular group area. There are substantial reasons to suggest that this enactment is primarily aimed at Indians in the Union of South Africa who, being mainly engaged in trade and business in various parts of the country, would thus be faced with disaster.

The Government of India, in correspondence with the Government of the Union of South Africa, suggested that if the Bill could not be postponed pending the round table conference, then the conference might be held immediately; but even this request was not accepted by the Government of the Union of South Africa.

It was clear from the replies received by the Government of India from the Government of the Union of South Africa that that Government was bent upon proceeding with its policy of Apartheid or segregation, which the Government of India has consistently opposed for over the last half century and which is against the provisions of the Charter of the United Nations and the Universal Declaration of Human Rights. It has, therefore, had to inform the Government of the Union of South Africa that it could not participate in such a conference.

The position of Indians in South Africa, the Government of India would urge, has not improved in any manner since the issue was last discussed at the United Nations, and their treatment continues to be a serious violation of the purposes and principles of the Charter of the United Nations and of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights. The position of the Indian community in South Africa has, if anything, deteriorated as a result of the Group Areas Act and the intensification by the Government of the Union of South Africa of its policy of racial segregation.

The Government of India desires that the United Nations should take note of these facts and take appropriate steps to ensure that the treatment of Indians in South Africa conforms to the principles and purposes of the Charter of the United Nations and the Universal Declaration of Human Rights. It would, therefore, be grateful if the Secretary-General would kindly place this subject on the provisional agenda of the fifth session of the General Assembly.

A memorandum on the developments subsequent to the resolution adopted by the General Assembly on 14 May 1949 will be sent to the Secretary-General as soon as possible.²

Burma, India, Indonesia, Iraq: joint draft resolution

[Original text: English]
[14 November 1950]

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 265 (III) of 14 May 1949, relating to the treatment of people of Indian origin in the Union of South Africa,

Having considered the communication by the permanent representative of India to the Secretary-General of the United Nations dated 10 July 1950,

Having in mind its resolution 103 (I) of 19 November 1946 against racial persecution and discrimination and its resolution 217 (III) dated 10 December 1948 relating to the Universal Declaration of Human Rights,

Is of the opinion that the legislation recently enacted in the Union of South Africa under the title "The Group Areas Act", entails contravention of the purposes and principles of the Charter of the United Nations and the Universal Declaration of Human Rights;

Notes with regret that this enactment and the policy of Apartheid or total segregation on which it is based have prejudiced and rendered infructuous the recommendation contained in its resolution of 14 May 1949 to the effect that the Governments of India, Pakistan and the Union of South Africa should enter into a discussion at a round table conference in the light of the Charter of the United Nations and the Universal Declaration of Human Rights; and

Recommends to the Government of the Union of South Africa to take all steps necessary speedily to bring its treatment of the people of Indian origin in the Union of South Africa into conformity with the purposes and principles of the Charter of the United Nations and the Universal Declaration of Human Rights, bearing in mind the vital importance of these principles to the securing of international peace as well as the strengthening of democratic forces throughout the world.

Report of the Ad Hoc Political Committee

[24 November 1950]

1. In a letter dated 10 July 1950 (A/1289), the permanent representative of India to the United Nations requested the Secretary-General to place the question of the treatment of people of Indian origin in the Union of South Africa on the provisional agenda of the fifth session of the General Assembly, and stated that a memorandum on the developments subsequent to General Assembly resolution 265 (III) of 14 May 1949 would be submitted as soon as possible. The memorandum was subsequently forwarded and circulated (A/1357, A/1357/Corr.1, A/1357/Corr.2).

2. The General Assembly, at its 285th meeting on 26 September 1950, decided to include the item in the agenda of the fifth session and to refer it to the Ad Hoc Political Committee.

3. The Ad Hoc Political Committee considered the item at its 41st to 48th meetings inclusive.

4. At its 41st meeting on 14 November, a joint draft resolution (A/AC.38/L.33) was submitted by Burma, India, Indonesia and Iraq. It expressed the opinion that "The Group Areas Act" of the Union of South Africa entailed contravention of the purposes and principles of the Charter of the United Nations and the Universal Declaration of Human Rights, and noted with regret that this Act and the policy on which it was based had prejudiced and rendered infructuous the recommendation contained in resolution 265 (III) inviting the Governments of India, Pakistan and the Union of South Africa to enter into discussions at a round table conference. The draft resolution also recommended the Government of the Union of South Africa to take all steps necessary speedily to bring its treatment of people of Indian origin into conformity with the purposes and principles of the Charter and the Universal Declaration of Human Rights, bearing in mind the vital importance of those principles to the securing of international peace as well as the strengthening of democratic forces throughout the world.

5. At the same meeting, the representative of the Union of South Africa made a statement raising the question of the competence of the United Nations to deal with the matter. The Chairman ruled that the discussion would proceed on both the question of competence and the substance of the item, and that a vote would be taken on the question of competence prior to voting on any proposals submitted.

6. At its 43rd meeting on 15 November, the Committee decided, by 25 votes to 4, with 20 abstentions, that the text of "The Group Areas Act" of the Union of South Africa should be circulated by the Secretariat. It was circulated as document A/AC.38/L.34.

7. At the 44th meeting on 16 November, a joint draft resolution was submitted by Bolivia, Brazil, Denmark, Norway and Sweden (A/AC.38/L.35). It recommended that the Governments of India, Pakistan and the Union of South Africa should proceed, in accordance with resolution 265 (III), with the holding of a round table conference on the basis of their agreed agenda and, in the event of failure to reach an agreement within a reasonable time, they should agree on an individual to assist them in carrying through appropriate negotiations. The joint draft resolution also called on the Governments concerned to refrain from taking any steps which would prejudice the success of their negotiations.

8. At the 45th meeting on 17 November, an amendment (A/AC.38/L.36) to the four-Power joint draft resolution (A/AC.38/L.33) was submitted by Cuba, providing for the insertion between the third and fourth paragraphs of the preamble, a clause to the effect that the policy of racial segregation (Apartheid) was necessarily based on doctrines of racial discrimination. At the 47th meeting, the representative of Cuba declared that, should the Committee decide to vote first on the five-Power joint draft resolution (A/AC.38/L.35), the Cuban amendment should also be considered as an amendment to that draft resolution.

9. At the 45th meeting, an amendment (A/AC.38/L.38) was submitted by the Philippines to the five-Power joint draft resolution (A/AC.38/L.35) to include a reference in paragraph 1 to the Charter and the Universal Declaration of Human Rights and an addition to paragraph 3 calling for suspension of the enforcement of "The Group Areas Act" pending the conclusion of the negotiations. The amendment was, however, withdrawn at the following meeting in favour of a new joint draft amendment embodying the Philippine amendment.

10. At the 46th meeting on 18 November, an amendment (A/AC.38/L.39) to the five-Power joint draft resolution (A/AC.38/L.35) was submitted jointly by Ecuador, Mexico, Philippines and Uruguay which provided for:

(a) The insertion after the second paragraph of the preamble of an additional paragraph reading "Having in mind its resolution 103 (I) of 19 November 1946 against racial persecution and discrimination, and its resolution 217 (III) dated 10 December 1948 relating to the Universal Declaration of Human Rights";

(b) The addition at the end of paragraph 1 of the words "and bearing in mind the provisions of the Charter of the United Nations and the Universal Declaration of Human Rights";

(c) The insertion in paragraph 2, after the words "of the Governments concerned to" of the words "hold a round table conference within a reasonable time or to reach agreement in the round table conference"; and, at the end of the paragraph, the addition of a clause reading "should the parties fail to agree on this designation, he should be appointed, at the request of any of the parties, by the Secretary-General of the United Nations";

(d) The addition, at the end of paragraph 3, of the words "in particular, the implementation or enforcement of the provisions of 'The Group Areas Act' pending the conclusion of such negotiations";

(e) The addition of a new paragraph reading "Decides to include this item in the agenda of the next regular session of the General Assembly".

11. At the same meeting, after a discussion as to whether the question of competence to be decided was the general question of the Committee's competence to discuss the item at all or only the question of its competence to adopt the specific proposals before it, the following draft resolution (A/AC.38/L.40) was submitted by Syria:

"The Ad Hoc Political Committee,

"In view of the fact that the question of competence regarding the item on the agenda relative to the treatment of people of Indian origin in the Union of South Africa has been considered, and

"In view of the discussions on this subject and the proposals submitted,

"Decides that it is competent to consider and vote on such proposals as have been submitted."

The draft resolution was adopted by the Committee by a roll-call vote of 35 votes to 3, with 17 abstentions, as follows:

In favour: Bolivia, Brazil, Burma, Chile, China, Colombia, Cuba, Denmark, Dominican Republic, Ecuador, Egypt, El Salvador, Guatemala, Haiti, India, Indonesia, Iran, Iraq, Israel, Lebanon, Liberia, Mexico, Nicaragua, Norway, Pakistan, Panama, Paraguay, Philippines, Saudi Arabia, Sweden, Syria, United States of America, Uruguay, Yemen, Yugoslavia.

Against: Australia, Greece, Union of South Africa.

Abstaining: Afghanistan, Argentina, Belgium, Byelorussian Soviet Socialist Republic, Canada, Czechoslovakia, France, Luxembourg, Netherlands, New Zealand, Peru, Poland, Turkey, Ukrainian Soviet Socialist Republic, Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland, Venezuela.

12. At the 47th meeting on 20 November, the representative of Brazil, on behalf of the sponsors of the five-Power joint draft resolution (A/AC.35/L.35), accepted all the amendments (A/AC.38/L.39) proposed by Ecuador, Mexico, Philippines and Uruguay, except the amendment to paragraph 3. At the same meeting, the following amendments were submitted to the amendment (A/AC.38/L.39) of Ecuador, Mexico, Philippines and Uruguay:

(a) By Iraq (A/AC.38/L.41), to substitute, in paragraph 2, after the words "within a reasonable time" the following:

"... there shall be established for the purpose of assisting the parties in carrying through appropriate negotiations a commission of three members, one to be nominated by the Government of the Union of South Africa, another to be nominated by the Governments of India and Pakistan and the third to be nominated by the other two, or in default of agreement between these two in a reasonable time, by the Secretary-General of the United Nations”.

(b) By the Dominican Republic (A/AC.38/L.42), to substitute at the beginning of paragraph 2 the following :

“ 2. Recommends that in the event of failure of the Governments concerned to hold a round table conference before 1 April 1951 or to reach agreement” and to substitute for the last part of paragraph 3, the following :

“ ... in particular, the implementation or enforcement of any provision which may make difficult an understanding.”

During the vote, the amendment relating to paragraph 3 was withdrawn by the representative of the Dominican Republic.

(c) An oral amendment suggested during the voting by the representative of Uruguay, on behalf of Ecuador, Mexico, Philippines and Uruguay, to substitute for paragraph 3 of the joint draft resolution the following :

“ Notes that the agenda of the proposed round table conference provided for above which they have jointly drawn up is so drafted as to permit discussion of ‘ The Group Areas Act ’ during that round table conference and invites the governments concerned to refrain from taking any steps which would prejudice the success of the negotiations”.

After discussion the amendment was withdrawn.

13. The Committee decided by 23 votes to 18 with 10 abstentions to vote first on the five-Power joint draft resolution (A/AC.38/L.35), as amended (A/AC.38/L.39).

15. At the 48th meeting on 20 November, the representative of India, on behalf of the sponsors, withdrew the four-Power joint draft resolution (A/AC.38/L.33), but reserved the sponsors' right to re-submit it.

16. The Ad Hoc Political Committee accordingly recommends that the General Assembly adopt the following draft resolution:

TREATMENT OF PEOPLE OF INDIAN ORIGIN IN THE UNION OF SOUTH AFRICA

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 44 (I) and 265 (III) relating to the treatment of people of Indian origin in the Union of South Africa,

Having considered the communication by the permanent representative of India to the Secretary-General of the United Nations dated 10 July 1950,

Having in mind its resolution 103 (I) of 19 November 1946 against racial persecution and discrimination, and its resolution 217 (III) dated 10 December 1948 relating to the Universal Declaration of Human Rights,

Considering that a policy of "racial segregation" (Apartheid) is necessarily based on doctrines of racial discrimination,

1. Recommends that the Governments of India, Pakistan and the Union of South Africa proceed, in accordance with resolution 265 (III), with the holding of a round table conference on the basis of their agreed agenda and bearing in mind the provisions of the Charter of the United Nations and of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights;

2. Recommends that, in the event of failure of the Governments concerned to hold a Round Table Conference before 1 April 1951 or to reach agreement in the round table conference within a reasonable time, there shall be established for the purpose of assisting the parties in carrying through appropriate negotiations a commission of three members, one member to be nominated by the Government of the Union of South Africa, another to be nominated by the Governments of India and Pakistan and the third to be nominated by the other two members or, in default of agreement between these two in a reasonable time, by the Secretary-General;

3. Calls upon the governments concerned to refrain from taking any steps which would prejudice the success of their negotiations, in particular, the implementation or enforcement of the provisions of "The Group Areas Act", pending the conclusion of such negotiations;

4. Decides to include this item in the agenda of the next regular session of the General Assembly.

Israel : memorandum

[Original text : English]
[30 September 1950]

The delegation of Syria has submitted an item (A/1290) which reads :

“ Permanent invitation to the League of Arab States to attend sessions of the General Assembly. ”

The Syrian delegation has not motivated this request in an explanatory note as required by rule 20 of the rules of procedure of the General Assembly. At a meeting of the General Committee on 21 September 1950, the Syrian representative intimated that this request was based on the assumption that the League of Arab States was a “ regional arrangement ” in the meaning of Article 52 of the Charter.

The Israel delegation considers that the request that a permanent invitation be issued to the League of Arab States should be rejected on the following grounds :

1. The League of Arab States is not a “ regional arrangement ” in the meaning of Chapter VIII of the Charter

The area covered by the States which are members of the League of Arab States does not constitute a “ region ” in any sense recognized by the United Nations. There is a region commonly defined as the Middle East; but this comprises several non-Arab States, including Turkey, Iran, Afghanistan, Israel, Greece and Ethiopia. Regional conferences convened by the specialized agencies of the United Nations have always included some or all of these non-Arab States, as well as those which are members of the League of Arab States. Moreover, it is impossible to conceive of a “ regional arrangement ” which is not accessible to all member States in the area defined. In this respect the League of Arab States is the precise antithesis of the Organization of American States, which bases its composition on the geographical regional principle and not on the principle of racial exclusiveness. Thus the Organization of American States is not limited to the Spanish-speaking Republics on the exclusive basis of Hispanidad; it also includes other States such as the United States of America, Haiti and Brazil. The League of Arab States, on the other hand, is conceived on the principle of exclusive racial and cultural identity which does not accord with the basic ideas of the Charter. Thus in granting any kind of recognition to the League of Arab States, the United Nations would be abandoning the principle of geographic regional organization in favour of racial particularism.

2. The constitution of the League of Arab States and the relations existing between its members do not conform to the criterion of a regional arrangement

The Pact of the League of Arab States was drawn up before the Charter of the United Nations was signed. It contains no reference to the acceptance by the League of Charter obligations. The leaders of the League of Arab States have in recent months attempted to supplement the League's charter by a Pact of regional security in an effort to give the League the character of a regional arrangement. But the new text was also put on a racial, and not a regional, basis. Moreover, this Pact has not yet been ratified by a single State and one member of the League of Arab States, namely, the Hashemite Kingdom of the Jordan, has not even signed it. Thus no "regional arrangement" even on the racial basis, in itself inadmissible, is now in force.

3. The only activities carried out in unison by members of the League of Arab States have been directed against the United Nations and not in support of it

On 15 May 1948 the Secretary-General of the League of Arab States officially informed the Security Council (S/745) that the League had embarked upon "military intervention" in order to prevent the establishment of the State of Israel as envisaged by the resolution of the General Assembly. The use of armed force to eliminate the existence of a State is contrary to Article 2 of the Charter; and indeed, the United States representative in the Security Council declared on 22 May 1948 that the League intervention was an "aggression" of an "international character"¹.

Moreover, on 11 August 1949 the Security Council expressed the hope that Israel and the Arab States would negotiate, either directly or through the Conciliation Commission, for a settlement of all questions outstanding between them. Despite this injunction, the League of Arab States set its face against any peace negotiations. The memorandum of the Palestine Conciliation Commission, dated 29 March 1950, laying down procedures for negotiation, has been unanimously rejected by the League of Arab States. In April 1950, the League of Arab States actually passed a resolution forbidding any of its members, on pain of expulsion, to negotiate for peace with Israel. Thus, both in making war in 1948 and in refusing peace in 1950, the League of Arab States has directed its policy against the fundamental objectives and express injunctions of the United Nations in the Middle East.

4. The League of Arab States is bent on subverting the existing political status in countries outside the League itself.

It is sufficient in this connexion to read annex 2 of the League Pact regarding the co-operation of Arab countries which are not members of the Council of the League, such as the countries of North Africa.

5. The League of Arab States has refused to co-operate with the Security Council for the restoration of international peace

In contrast with the decision taken by the Council of the Organization of American States on 28 June 1950 with respect to Security Council action in Korea, the League of Arab States has given no support to Security Council resolutions for the restoration of international peace and security in the Far East. Indeed, the Arab representative in the Security Council (Egypt) has consistently dissociated himself from the Council's decisions in this respect. It may be noted that the League of Arab States was incapable of reaching any collective decision on this crucial matter.

6. The procedures of the League of Arab States are contrary to those practised and approved by the United Nations

The League of Arab States conducts all its deliberations behind closed doors and most of its decisions are kept secret. No records of meetings, no texts or drafts, and not all resolutions are published. This procedure conflicts sharply with that adopted by the United Nations and by the Organization of American States, which regulates its affairs on the principle of "open covenants openly arrived at".

7. Even on the basis of courtesy it would be improper for the United Nations to issue an invitation to the League of Arab States

The Secretary-General of the United Nations, or his representative, has participated in numerous conferences of the Organization of American States on the special invitation of that Organization. Thus the permanent invitation to the Organization of American States was a courtesy granted by the United Nations in return for a similar facility extended by that Organization to the United Nations. Far from inviting the Secretary-General or his representative to attend its sessions, the League of Arab States as stated above, persistently meets in secret.

Article 1. The League of Arab States shall be composed of the independent Arab States that have signed this Pact.

Every independent Arab State shall have the right to adhere to the League. Should it desire to adhere, it shall present an application to this effect which shall be filed with the permanent General Secretariat and submitted to the Council at its first meeting following the presentation of the application.

Article 2. The purpose of the League is to draw closer the relations between member States and co-ordinate their political activities with the aim of realizing a close collaboration between them, to safeguard their independence and sovereignty, and to consider in a general way the affairs and interests of the Arab countries.

It also has among its purposes a close co-operation of the member States with due regard to the structure of each of these States and the conditions prevailing therein, in the following matters :

(a) Economic and financial matters, including trade, customs, currency, agriculture and industry;

(b) Communications, including railways, roads, aviation, navigation, and posts and telegraphs;

(c) Cultural matters;

(d) Matters connected with nationality, passports, visas, execution of judgments and extradition;

(e) Social welfare matters;

(f) Health matters.

Article 3. The League shall have a Council composed of the representatives of the member States. Each State shall have one vote, regardless of the number of its representatives.

The Council shall be entrusted with the function of realizing the purpose of the League and of supervising the execution of the agreements concluded between the member States on matters referred to in the preceding article or on other matters.

It shall also have the function of determining the means whereby the League will collaborate with the international organizations which may be created in the future to guarantee peace and security and organize economic and social relations.

Article 4. A special Committee shall be formed for each of the categories enumerated in article 2, on which the member States shall be represented. These Committees shall be entrusted with establishing the basis and scope of co-operation in the form of draft agreements which shall be submitted to the Council for its consideration preparatory to their being submitted to the States referred to.

Delegates representing the other Arab countries may participate in these Committees as members. The Council shall determine the circumstances in which the participation of these representatives shall be allowed as well as the basis of the representation.

Article 5. The recourse to force for the settlement of disputes between two or more member States shall not be allowed. Should there arise among them a dispute that does not involve the independence of a State, its sovereignty or its territorial integrity, and should the two contending parties apply to the Council for the settlement of this dispute, the decision of the Council shall then be effective and obligatory.

In this case, the States among whom the dispute has arisen shall not participate in the deliberations and decisions of the Council.

The Council shall mediate in a dispute which may lead to war between two member States or between a member State and another State in order to conciliate them.

The decisions relating to arbitration and mediation shall be taken by a majority vote.

Article 6. In case of aggression or threat of aggression by a State against a member State, the State attacked or threatened with attack may request an immediate meeting of the Council.

The Council shall determine the necessary measures to repel this aggression. Its decision shall be taken unanimously. If the aggression is committed by a member State the vote of that State will not be counted in determining unanimity.

If the aggression is committed in such a way as to render the Government of the State attacked unable to communicate with the Council, the representative of that State in the Council may request the Council to convene for the purpose set forth in the preceding paragraph. If the representative is unable to communicate with the Council, it shall be the right of any member State to request a meeting of the Council.

Article 7. The decisions of the Council taken by a unanimous vote shall be binding on all the member States of the League; those that are reached by a majority vote shall bind only those that accept them.

In both cases the decisions of the Council shall be executed in each State in accordance with the fundamental structure of that State.

Article 8. Every member State of the League shall respect the form of government obtaining in the other States of the League, and shall recognize the form of government obtaining as one of the rights of those States, and shall pledge itself not to take any action tending to change that form.

Article 9. The States of the Arab League that are desirous of establishing among themselves closer collaboration and stronger bonds than those provided for in the present Pact, may conclude among themselves whatever agreements they wish for this purpose.

The treaties and agreements already concluded or that may be concluded in the future between a member State and any other State, shall not be binding on the other members.

Article 11. The Council of the League shall meet in ordinary session twice a year, during the months of March and October. It shall meet in extraordinary session at the request of two member States whenever the need arises.

The Council shall establish an internal organization for the General Secretariat as well as the conditions of service of the officials.

The Secretary-General shall have the rank of Ambassador; and the Assistant Secretaries the rank of Ministers Plenipotentiary.

The first Secretary-General of the League is designated in an annex to the present Pact.

Article 13. The Secretary-General shall prepare the draft of the budget of the League and submit it for approval to the Council before the beginning of each fiscal year.

The Council shall determine the share of each of the States of the League in the expenses. It shall be allowed to revise the share if necessary.

Article 14. The members of the Council of the League, the members of its Committees and such of its officials as shall be designated in the internal organization, shall enjoy, in the exercise of their duties, diplomatic privileges and immunities.

The premises occupied by the institutions of the League shall be inviolable.

Article 15. The Council shall meet the first time at the invitation of the Head of the Egyptian Government. Later meetings shall be convoked by the Secretary-General.

In each ordinary session the representatives of the States of the League shall assume the chairmanship of the Council in rotation.

Article 16. Except for the cases provided for in the present Pact, a majority shall suffice for decisions by the Council effective in the following matters :

- (a) Matters concerning the officials.
- (b) The approval of the budget of the League.
- (c) The internal organization of the Council, the Committees and the General Secretariat.
- (d) The termination of the sessions.

Article 17. The member States of the League shall file with the General Secretariat copies of all treaties and agreements which they have concluded or will conclude with any other State, whether a member of the League or otherwise.

Article 18. If one of the member States intends to withdraw from the League, the Council shall be informed of its intention one year before the withdrawal takes effect.

The Council of the League may consider any State that is not fulfilling the obligations resulting from this Pact as excluded from the League, by a decision taken by a unanimous vote of all the States except the State referred to.

Article 19. The present Pact may be amended with the approval of two-thirds of the members of the League in particular for the purpose of strengthening the ties between them, of creating an Arab Court of Justice, and of regulating the relations of the League with the international organizations that may be created in the future to guarantee security and peace.

No decision shall be taken as regards an amendment except in the session following that in which it is proposed.

Any State that does not approve an amendment may withdraw from the League when the amendment becomes effective, without being bound by the provisions of the preceding article.

Article 20. The present Pact and its annexes shall be ratified in accordance with the fundamental form of government in each of the contracting States.

The instruments of ratification shall be filed with the General Secretariat and the present Pact shall become binding on the States that ratify in fifteen days after the Secretary-General receives instruments of ratification from four States.

The present Pact has been drawn up in the Arabic language in Cairo and dated 8 Rabi al Thani 1364 (March 22, 1945), in a single text which shall be deposited with the General Secretariat.

A certified copy shall be sent to each of the States of the League.

ANNEX ON PALESTINE

At the end of the last Great War, Palestine, together with the other Arab States, was separated from the Ottoman Empire. She became independent, not belonging to any other State.

The Treaty of Lausanne proclaimed that her fate should be decided by the parties concerned in Palestine.

Even though Palestine was not able to control her own destiny, it was on the basis of the recognition of her independence that the Covenant of the League of Nations determined a system of government for her.

Her existence and her independence among the nations can, therefore, no more be questioned de jure than the independence of any of the other Arab States.

Even though the outward signs of this independence have remained veiled as a result of force majeure, it is not fitting that this should be an obstacle to the participation of Palestine in the work of the League.

Therefore, the States signatory to the Pact of the Arab League consider that in view of Palestine's special circumstances, the Council of the League should designate an Arab delegate from Palestine to participate in its work until this country enjoys actual independence.

ANNEX ON CO-OPERATION WITH ARAB COUNTRIES NOT MEMBERS OF THE COUNCIL OF THE LEAGUE

Whereas the member States of the League will have to deal either in the Council or in the Committees with questions affecting the interests of the entire Arab world,

And whereas the Council cannot fail to take into account the aspirations of the Arab countries not members of the Council and to work toward their realization, the States signatory to the Pact of the Arab League strongly urge that the Council of the League should co-operate with them as far as possible in having them participate in the Committees referred to in the Pact, and in other matters should not spare any effort to learn their needs and understand their aspirations and should moreover work for their common weal and the guarantee of their future by whatever political means available.

ANNEX ON THE APPOINTMENT OF SECRETARY-GENERAL OF THE LEAGUE

The States signatory to the present Pact have agreed to appoint Abd Al Rahman Azzam Bey Secretary-General of the League of Arab States.

His appointment shall be for a term of two years. The Council of the League shall later determine the future organization of the General Secretariat.

[2 October 1950]

The General Assembly

Requests the Secretary-General of the United Nations to invite the Secretary-General of the League of Arab States to attend sessions of the General Assembly as an observer.

DOCUMENT A/1442Report of the Sixth Committee

[16 October 1950]

1. By letter dated 12 July 1950, the Chargé d'affaires of the Syrian delegation to the United Nations requested the Secretary-General to place the following item on the agenda of the fifth regular session of the General Assembly: "Permanent invitation to the League of Arab States to attend sessions of the General Assembly" (A/1290).

2. The General Assembly, at its 285th plenary meeting on 26 September 1950, referred this item to the Sixth Committee for consideration.

3. The Sixth Committee had before it three documents bearing on the question: a note by the Secretary-General, including the text of the Pact of the League of Arab States (A/C.6/L.111), a memorandum by Israel (A/C.6/336), and a draft resolution submitted by Syria to the effect that the General Assembly should request the Secretary-General of the United Nations to invite the Secretary-General of the League of Arab States to attend sessions of the General Assembly as an observer (A/C.6/L.113).

4. The Committee considered the question at its 215th, 216th and 217th meetings, inclusive. A complete presentation of the views expressed may be found in the Committee's summary records (A/C.6/SR.215-217).

5. It was understood, by the proponent of the draft resolution, as well as by other delegations supporting the motion, that the invitation to be addressed to the Secretary-General of the League of Arab States did not in any way imply that the Arab League was or was not a regional agency within the meaning of Chapter VIII of the Charter. It was also the sense of the Sixth Committee that such an invitation, being an act of courtesy, could not be construed as establishing a precedent which might bind the General Assembly in the future.

6. At the Committee's 217th meeting held on 5 October 1950, the text of the Syrian draft resolution was adopted by roll-call vote of 42 to 1, with 7 abstentions, as follows:

In favour: Afghanistan, Argentina, Australia, Belgium, Brazil, Burma, Canada, Chile, China, Cuba, Denmark, Dominican Republic, Ecuador, Egypt, France, Greece, India, Indonesia, Iran, Iraq, Lebanon, Liberia, Luxembourg, Mexico, Netherlands, New Zealand, Norway, Pakistan, Peru, Philippines, Saudi Arabia, Sweden, Syria, Thailand, Turkey, Union of South Africa, United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland, United States of America, Uruguay, Venezuela, Yemen, Yugoslavia.

Against: Israel.

Abstaining: Bolivia, Byelorussian Soviet Socialist Republic, Czechoslovakia, Guatemala, Poland, Ukrainian Soviet Socialist Republic, Union of Soviet Socialist Republics.

7. Accordingly, the Sixth Committee submits for the approval of the General Assembly the following draft resolution:

PERMANENT INVITATION TO THE SECRETARY-GENERAL OF THE LEAGUE OF ARAB STATES TO ATTEND SESSIONS OF THE GENERAL ASSEMBLY

The General Assembly

Requests the Secretary-General of the United Nations to invite the Secretary-General of the League of Arab States to attend sessions of the General Assembly as an observer.

[26 July 1950]

1. The Secretary-General has the honour to communicate to the General Assembly a copy of the letter which he addressed to the Members of the United Nations on 6 June 1950, together with a memorandum entitled "Memorandum of points for consideration in the development of a twenty-year programme for achieving peace through the United Nations". The Secretary-General is communicating this letter and memorandum to the General Assembly in connexion with item 61¹ of the provisional agenda of the fifth regular session of the Assembly which was distributed on 21 July 1950 (A/1293 and Corr.1).

Lake Success, 6 June 1950

2. The deterioration of relations between leading Members of the United Nations has created a situation of most serious concern for the United Nations and the future peace of the world. In my capacity as Secretary-General, I have felt it my duty to suggest means by which the principles of the Charter and the resources of the United Nations could be employed to moderate the present conflict and to enable a fresh start to be made towards eventual peaceful solutions of outstanding problems.

3. To this end, I have drawn up a "Memorandum of points for consideration in the development of a twenty-year programme for achieving peace through the United Nations", a copy of which is annexed hereto.

4. I have personally handed this memorandum to the President of the United States of America, Mr. Harry S. Truman, on 20 April 1950, to the Prime Minister of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland, Mr. Clement Attlee, on 28 April, to the Prime Minister of France, Mr. Georges Bidault, on 3 May, and to the Prime Minister of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, Generalissimo Joseph Stalin, on 15 May. I had an opportunity to discuss the points of this memorandum with the foregoing heads of Governments and with other leaders of their Governments, including the Secretary of State of the United States of America, Mr. Dean Acheson, the Foreign Secretary of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland, Mr. Ernest Bevin, the Foreign Minister of France, Mr. Robert Schuman, the Vice-Premier of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, Mr. Viacheslav Molotov, and the Foreign Minister of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, Mr. Andrei Vyshinsky.

5. While it would not be appropriate for me to state the views of any of the Governments on the points of the memorandum, I can say that I have drawn from my conversations the firm conviction that the United Nations remains a primary factor in the foreign policy of each of these Governments and that the reopening of genuine negotiations on certain of the outstanding issues may be possible.

6. It is evident that no significant progress can be made while the Members of the United Nations remain sharply divided on the question of the representation of one of the permanent members of the Security Council, namely, the Republic of China. It is necessary that this question should be settled.

7. Under point 2 of the annexed memorandum, I have made a number of suggestions for resumption of negotiations on the problems of atomic energy. Another suggestion was made in the appeal circulated on 20 April 1950 by the International Committee of the Red Cross to the High Contracting Parties to the Geneva conventions for the protection of victims of war, to do everything in their power to reach agreements on the prohibition of the atomic bomb and "blind" weapons generally.

8. In connexion with point 7, the conversations of the Executive Secretary of the Economic Commission for Europe, Mr. Gunnar Myrdal, with various European governments have emphasized the necessity for further efforts to liberate international trade from the restrictions and discriminatory practices which now hamper the free flow of goods.

9. Further in connexion with point 7, I call your attention to the statement unanimously adopted in Paris on 4 May 1950 by the Administrative Committee on Co-ordination (composed of the Secretary-General and the administrative heads of the following specialized agencies: United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization, International Labour Organisation, Food and Agriculture Organization, World Health Organization, International Civil Aviation Organization, International Bank for Reconstruction and Development, International Monetary Fund, International Refugee Organization, International Telecommunication Union, International Bureau of the Universal Postal Union, Interim Commission for the International Trade Organization). The statement reads:²

"The present division of the world and the increasingly serious conflicts of policy among the great Powers have gravely impaired the prospects for world peace and for raising the standard of living of the peoples of the world. It is of particular concern to the administrative heads of the organizations that these conditions threaten the very basis of their work.

"The United Nations and the specialized agencies are founded upon the principles that lasting world peace can only be achieved and maintained by world organization, and that world problems like disease, hunger, ignorance and poverty, which recognize no frontier, can never be overcome unless all the nations join in universal efforts to these ends.

"We re-affirm the validity of this principle of universality. The United Nations system makes ample room for diversity within a universal framework. We believe it would be a disaster if efforts to realize the principle of universality in practice were to be abandoned now.

"We believe that the greatest efforts should, on the contrary, be directed towards achieving in fact true universality in the membership and programmes of the United Nations and of those of the specialized agencies which are founded on that principle.

"We also believe that it is necessary for all governments to renew their efforts to conciliate and negotiate the political differences that divide them and obstruct economic and social advancement.

"Specifically, we believe that it is essential to the future of both the United Nations and the specialized agencies that the present political deadlock in the United Nations be resolved at the earliest possible moment.

"The peace and well-being of all peoples demand from their governments a great and sustained new effort by the nations of the world to achieve a constructive and durable peace."

10. I have the honour to request the earnest attention of your government to the annexed memorandum. I have in contemplation the possibility of its formal submission to the Security Council at an appropriate time, and I reserve the right to place it on the provisional agenda of the forthcoming regular session of the General Assembly.

(Signed) Trygve LIE
Secretary-General

MEMORANDUM OF POINTS FOR CONSIDERATION IN THE DEVELOPMENT OF A TWENTY-YEAR PROGRAMME FOR ACHIEVING PEACE THROUGH THE UNITED NATIONS

11. As Secretary-General, it is my firm belief that a new and great effort must be attempted to end the so-called "cold war" and to set the world once more on a road that will offer greater hope of lasting peace.

12. The atmosphere of deepening international mistrust can be dissipated and the threat of the universal disaster of another war averted by employing to the full the resources for conciliation and constructive peace building present in the United Nations Charter. The employment of these resources can secure eventual peace if we accept, believe and act upon the possibility of peaceful co-existence among all the great Powers and the different economic and political systems they represent and if the great Powers evidence a readiness to undertake genuine negotiation—not in a spirit of appeasement—but with enlightened self-interest and common sense on all sides.

13. Measures for collective self-defence and regional remedies of other kinds are at best interim measures and cannot alone bring any reliable security from the prospect of war. The one common undertaking and universal instrument of the great majority of the human race is the United Nations. A patient, constructive long-term use of its potentialities can bring a real and secure peace to the world. I am certain that such an effort will have the active interest and support of the smaller Member States, who have much to contribute in the conciliation of differences between the great Powers and in the development of constructive and mutually advantageous political and economic co-operation.

14. I therefore venture to suggest certain points for consideration in the formulation of a twenty-year United Nations Peace Programme. Certain of these points call for urgent action. Others are of a long-range nature, requiring continued effort over the next twenty years. I shall not discuss the problems of the peace settlements for Austria, Germany and Japan, because the founders of the United Nations indicated that the peace settlements should be made separately from the United Nations. But I believe that the progress of a United Nations Peace Programme, such as is here suggested, will help to bring these settlements far closer to attainment.

(1) Inauguration of periodic meetings of the Security Council, attended by Foreign Ministers, or heads or other members of governments, as provided by the United Nations Charter and the rules of procedure; together with further development and use of other United Nations machinery for negotiation, mediation and conciliation of international disputes

15. The periodic meetings of the Security Council provided for in Article 28 of the Charter have never been held. Such periodic meetings should be held semi-annually, beginning with one in 1950. In my opinion, they should be used for a general review at a high level of outstanding issues in the United Nations, particularly those that divide the great Powers. They should not be expected to produce great decisions every time; they should be used for consultation—much of it in private—for efforts to gain ground towards agreement on questions at issue, to clear up misunderstandings, to prepare for new initiatives that may improve the chances for definitive agreement at later meetings. They should be held away from Headquarters as a general rule, in Geneva, in the capitals of the permanent members and in other regions of the world.

16. Further development of the resources of the United Nations for mediation and conciliation should be undertaken, including re-establishment of the regular practice of private consultations by the representatives of the five great Powers on limitations on the use of the veto power in the pacific settlement procedures of the Security Council.

(2) A new attempt to make progress towards establishing an international control system for atomic energy that will be effective in preventing its use for war and promoting its use for peaceful purposes

17. We cannot hope for any quick or easy solution of this most difficult problem of atomic energy control. The only way to find out what is possible is to resume negotiation in line with the directive of the General Assembly last fall "to explore all possible avenues and examine all concrete suggestions with a view to determining whether they might lead to an agreement". Various suggestions for finding a basis for a fresh approach have been put forward. One possibility would be for the Security Council to instruct the Secretary-General to call a conference of scientists whose discussions might provide a reservoir of new ideas on the control of weapons of mass destruction and the promotion of peaceful uses of atomic energy that could thereafter be explored in the United Nations Atomic Energy Commission. Or, it may be that an interim agreement could be worked out that would at least be some improvement on the present situation of an unlimited atomic arms race, even though it did not afford full security. There are other possibilities for providing the basis for a new start; every possibility should be explored.

(3) A new approach to the problem of bringing the armaments race under control, not only in the field of atomic weapons, but in other weapons of mass destruction and in conventional armaments

18. Here is another problem where it is necessary to reopen negotiations and to make new efforts at finding some area of common ground. It must be recognized that up to now there has been virtually a complete failure to reach accord and that the immediate prospects seem poor indeed. Clearly disarmament requires an atmosphere of confidence in which political disputes are brought nearer to solution. But it is also true that any progress at all towards agreement on the regulation of armaments of any kind would help to reduce cold war tensions and thus assist in the adjustment of political disputes. Negotiation on this problem should not be deferred until the other great political problems are solved, but should go hand in hand with any effort to reach political settlements.

(4) A renewal of serious efforts to reach agreement on the armed forces to be made available under the Charter to the Security Council for the enforcement of its decisions

19. A new approach should be made towards resolving existing differences on the size, location and composition of the forces to be pledged to the Security Council under Article 43 of the Charter. Basic political difficulties which may delay a final solution should not be permitted to stand in the way of some sort of an interim accord for a small force sufficient to prevent or stop localized outbreaks threatening international peace. The mere existence of such a force would greatly enhance the ability of the Security Council to bring about peaceful settlements in most of the cases which are likely to come before it.

(5) Acceptance and application of the principle that it is wise and right to proceed as rapidly as possible towards universality of membership

20. Fourteen nations are now awaiting admission to the United Nations. In the interests of the people of these countries and of the United Nations, I believe they should all be admitted, as well as other countries which will attain their independence in the future. It should be made clear that Germany and Japan would also be admitted as soon as the peace treaties have been completed.

(6) A sound and active programme of technical assistance for economic development and encouragement of large-scale capital investment, using all appropriate private, governmental and inter-governmental resources

21. A technical assistance programme is in its beginnings, assisted by the strong support of the President of the United States of America. Its fundamental purpose is to enable the people of the under-developed countries to raise their standard of living peacefully by specific and practicable measures. It should be a continuing and expanding programme for the next twenty years and beyond, carried forward with the co-operation of all Member States, largely through the United Nations and the specialized agencies, with mutual beneficial programmes planned and executed on a basis of equality rather than on a basis of charity. Through this means opportunities can be opened up for capital investment on a large and expanding scale. Here lies one of our best hopes for combating the dangers and costs of the cold war.

(7) More vigorous use by all Member States of the specialized agencies of the United Nations to promote, in the words of the Charter, higher standards of living, full employment and conditions of economic and social progress

22. The great potentialities of the specialized agencies to participate in a long-range programme aimed at drastically reducing the economic and social causes of war can be realized by more active support from all governments, including the membership of the Soviet Union in some or all of the agencies to which it does not now belong. The expansion of world trade, which is vital to any long-range effort for world betterment, requires the early ratification of the Charter of the International Trade Organization.

(8) Vigorous and continued development of the work of the United Nations for wider observance and respect for human rights and fundamental freedoms throughout the world

23. It is becoming evident that the Universal Declaration of Human Rights, adopted by the General Assembly in 1948 without a dissenting vote, is destined to become one of the great documents in history. The United Nations is now engaged in a programme that will extend over the next twenty years—and beyond—to secure the extension and wider observance of the political, economic and social rights there set down. Its success needs the active support of all governments.

(9) Use of the United Nations to promote, by peaceful means instead of by force, the advancement of dependent, colonial or semi-colonial peoples towards a position of equality in the world

24. The great changes which have been taking place since the end of the war among the peoples of Asia and Africa must be kept within peaceful bounds by using the universal framework of the United Nations. The old relationships will have to be replaced with new ones of equality and fraternity. The United Nations is the instrument capable of bringing such a transition to pass without violent upheavals and with the best prospect of bringing long-run economic and political benefits to all nations of the world.

(10) Active and systematic use of all the powers of the Charter and all the machinery of the United Nations to speed up the development of international law towards an eventual enforceable world law for a universal world society

25. The three last points deal with programmes already under way to carry out important principles of the United Nations Charter. They respond to basic human desires and aspirations and the co-ordinated efforts by all governments to further these programmes are indispensable to the eventual peaceful stabilization of international relations. There are many specific steps which need to be taken—for example, under point 10, ratification of the convention on genocide, greater use of the International Court of Justice, and systematic development and codification of international law. More important is that governments should give high priority in their national policies to the continued support and development of these ideals which are at the foundation of all striving of the peoples for a better world.

26. What is here suggested is only an outline of preliminary proposals for a programme; much greater development will be needed. It is self-evident that every step mentioned, every proposal made, will require careful and detailed, even laborious preparation, negotiation and administration. It is equally self-evident that the necessary measure of agreement will be hard to realize most of the time, and even impossible some of the time. Yet the world can never accept the thesis of despair—the thesis of irrevocable and irreconcilable conflict.

I have the honour to confirm our note of 19 July 1950,¹ in which it was requested that the following item should be placed on the provisional agenda of the fifth session of the General Assembly: "Recognition by the United Nations of the representation of a Member State."

In accordance with the provision of rule 20 of the rules of procedure of the General Assembly, amended by resolution 362 (IV) adopted by the General Assembly at its 236th plenary meeting on 22 October 1949, I have the honour to transmit to you, enclosed herewith, an explanatory memorandum on the item which my government has requested should be included in the agenda of the next regular session.

(Signed) Alberto I. ALVAREZ
Permanent Representative of Cuba to the United Nations

MEMORANDUM ON THE QUESTION CONCERNING THE
RECOGNITION BY THE UNITED NATIONS OF THE REPRESENTATION OF A MEMBER STATE

1. In accordance with the provision of rule 20 of the rules of procedure of the General Assembly, an explanation of the item proposed by Cuba for inclusion in the agenda of the fifth session of the General Assembly, concerning the "Recognition by the United Nations of the representation of a Member State", is given hereunder.

2. On 13 January 1950, the representative of India addressed a letter to the President of the Security Council, transmitting the text of two draft amendments to the provisional rules of procedure of the Council (S/1447). In this letter, the representative of India stated:

"The rules of the Security Council on the subject of representation and credentials do not seem to be complete. Thus, there is no provision in the existing rules as to who is to issue credentials. Both in the rules of the General Assembly (rule 23) and of the Trusteeship Council (rule 14) express provision is made for the issue of credentials either by the Head of the State or Government or by the Minister for Foreign Affairs. It seems desirable that there should be a similar provision in the rules of the Security Council.

"None of the rules indicates what is to be done when any question arises as to which is the recognized Government of any particular State. If such a question is to be decided by the Security Council or other organ concerned without any guidance, there is a danger that different organs of the United Nations may decide it by their own majorities in their own different ways. Some uniform procedure, which can be adopted by all the organs, is obviously desirable in order that the chances of conflicting decisions may be minimized.

"I therefore enclose a draft of certain amendments designed to remedy the above defects, which I hope you may see fit to submit for examination by the appropriate authority. I am sending a copy of this letter with its enclosure to the Secretary-General."²

3. At its 462nd meeting on 17 January 1950, the Security Council agreed to refer the Indian representative's proposals to its Committee of Experts for study and report.³ The Committee dealt with the question at its 113th to 115th meetings on 30 January, 3 February and 8 February (S/C.1/SR.113, 114 and 115).

4. In opening the discussion in the Committee of Experts on the Indian proposal, the representative of Cuba stated that, especially when taking into consideration the question of competence, "neither the Security Council, nor any other organ of the United Nations but the General Assembly or a subsidiary organ established by the Assembly, was legally authorized by the Charter to study or promote identical solutions for all organs of the United Nations concerning questions affecting"—as was the case with the proposed rule 17 A—"the functioning of the Organization as a whole" (S/C.1/SR.113). On this point, as stated in the report submitted by Mr. Garcia Amador, the Chairman of the Committee of Experts (S/1457, S/1457/Corr.1) the Committee agreed that, "as suggested by the representative of India in his letter to the President of the Security Council, it would be desirable to establish some uniform procedure which could be adopted by all the organs of the United Nations, in order that the chances of conflicting decisions might be minimized". Nevertheless "it was the opinion of the majority that the question under consideration was of such a nature that the General Assembly should

(a) "In rule 13, before the last sentence, insert the following:
"The credentials shall be issued either by the Head of the State or the government concerned or by its Minister for Foreign Affairs."

(b) "After rule 17, insert the following as rule 17 A:

"Where the right of any person to represent, or to continue to represent, a State on the Security Council, or at a meeting of the Security Council, is called in question on the ground that he does not represent, or has ceased to represent, the recognized government of that State, the President of the Council shall, before submitting the question to the decision of the Council, ascertain (by telegraph, if necessary) and place before the Council, so far as available, the views of the governments of all the other Member States of the United Nations on the matter."

be the organ of the United Nations to initiate the study and to seek uniformity and co-ordination with regard to the procedure governing representation and credentials". At its 468th meeting,⁴ the Security Council approved the conclusions of the Committee of Experts concerning the subject referred to in the proposed rule 17 A.

5. It should be explained that the item proposed for the General Assembly's consideration does not refer only to the formal problem of credentials, but to the problem that arises with regard to the legality of the representation of a Member State; that is, when the United Nations has to decide which government has the right to represent that State in the Organization. The Charter makes no provision for such a situation, nor do the rules of procedure of the main organs give any standards by which it may concretely and specifically be solved. In fact, the said rules merely establish procedure for the submission and approval of the credentials of representatives appointed by Member States to each organ; that is, for the verification of the powers of these representatives. Moreover, three of these rules at present state that "the credentials shall be issued either by the Head of the State or the government concerned or by its Minister for Foreign Affairs". This proves, obviously, that the rules referred to are based on the presumption that in each member State represented on the organ there exists a definite government competent to appoint representatives and issue their credentials. Consequently, the only questions they provide for and solve are, clearly, those that may arise in regard to the validity of the credentials or powers of the representative or delegate of the government of a Member State and not the question that may arise in regard to its representation when the legality of the said representation is for some reason seriously impugned in the United Nations.* It is therefore for the solution of these cases that the General Assembly should provide a uniform procedure for the whole Organization.

* This distinction between credentials and representation is an undeniable legal and political reality. Credentials merely accredit the powers conferred by a government on its representatives; representation, on the other hand, is the right of a government to act on behalf of the State. Consequently, the objections lodged against credentials with those who have to decide on the validity of those credentials do not necessarily affect the legality of the representation of the government that has issued them. Nevertheless, objections made to the representation which a government claims or invokes necessarily and directly affect the competence or right of that government to act and to be represented as such on behalf of the State.

The Secretary-General has the honour to transmit herewith, for the information of the members of the General Assembly, the text of a letter which he has received from the Director-General of the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization :

" Florence, 1 June 1950

" I have the honour to communicate to you below and to ask you to transmit to the competent bodies of the United Nations, the text of a resolution adopted on 30 May 1950 by the fifth session of the General Conference of UNESCO :

" The General Conference of UNESCO,

" Considering that the United Nations as well as the various specialized agencies are called upon, in cases where two or more authorities each claim to be the only regular government of a Member State, to determine which of them shall exercise the rights and fulfil the obligations of membership on behalf of the country in question,

" Considering that this problem has arisen in a particularly urgent and serious form because of the present situation in China, and

" Considering that it is highly desirable that, in order to solve this problem, the United Nations should lay down guiding principles which would allow the various organs of the United Nations and of the specialized agencies, irrespective of differences in the composition of these bodies, to adopt a uniform policy,

" Expresses the wish

" 1. That the United Nations adopt general criteria by which it may be possible to reach a uniform and practical settlement of the problem of the representation on the various organs and organizations of the United Nations of countries of which two or more authorities claim to be the only regular government;

" 2. That this question be considered as soon as possible, in view of the serious difficulties to which the present situation in China is giving rise;

" Instructs the Director-General to communicate the present resolution, together with a copy of the report of the Credentials Committee, to the Secretary-General of the United Nations, for transmission to the competent bodies of the United Nations.'

" I also transmit to you herewith two copies, in English and in French, of the report of the Credentials

Committee mentioned in the resolution I have the honour to communicate to you.

UNITED NATIONS EDUCATIONAL, SCIENTIFIC AND CULTURAL ORGANIZATION GENERAL CONFERENCE

Fifth Session

Florence, 30 May 1950

Report of the Credentials Committee

I

1. The Credentials Committee met on Thursday 25 May at 9.45 a.m. and on Monday 29 May at 4 p.m. It examined the credentials of the delegations of the following Member States :

Afghanistan
 Costa Rica
 Czechoslovakia
 Greece
 Salvador

and found that they conformed to the requirements of rule 22 of the rules of procedure. Consequently, it recommends that these delegations be admitted to the General Conference with the right to vote.

The Committee also examined the credentials of the observer appointed by Chile. It admitted the observers appointed by the Allied High Commission for Germany.

II

2. The Credentials Committee considered the credentials of the Chinese delegation and the objections to these credentials raised by the delegations of Czechoslovakia and Hungary.

3. The credentials in question are issued by the same authority which, in the past, has more than once issued the credentials of Chinese delegations to previous sessions of the General Conference. They are, moreover, in the same form as those previously submitted and accepted as entirely valid.

4. However, by the date at which the credentials of the present Chinese delegation were issued, the situation in China had undergone a radical change. The authority by which these credentials were issued is no longer situated on the Chinese mainland but on one of its island possessions. On the other hand, another authority has been established at Peking and has been recognized as the regular government of the country by a number of States which are members of the Organization. This authority has addressed to the Director-General, for transmission to the General Conference, a communication in which it states that it is “ the only legal government representing the Chinese people ”; and a formal resolution that the Chinese delegation whose credentials have been referred to the Committee be excluded from taking part in the General Conference has been proposed by the delegations of two member States.

5. The problem which the Committee thus had to consider was whether the authorities by which the credentials in question were issued were fully competent to issue credentials in due form. The Committee felt that the question was extremely delicate. It was the subject of a very thorough discussion, in the course of which different points of view were expressed.

6. Some members of the Committee pointed out that membership of UNESCO entailed duties to the Organization as well as to the people of the country concerned, duties which they considered the authority that had issued the credentials to which objection had been raised was no longer in a position to fulfil. In these circumstances, the participation of a Chinese nationalist delegation in the work of the Conference could not promote the aims of the Organization; on the contrary, it might have the effect of paralysing its activities and causing UNESCO to become an organization not fully representative of all parts of the world. It was further remarked that there was a Chinese member of the Executive Board, who might represent Chinese culture within the Organization, even though no Chinese delegation would be taking part in the work of the Conference.

7. Other members of the Committee pointed out that certain countries recognize the government which has issued the credentials in question as the regular Government of China, while certain other countries recognize a different authority. In their opinion, it is not for the General Conference of UNESCO to deal with questions concerning the recognition of governments. UNESCO is a specialized agency of the United Nations and its activities should remain essentially technical. The authority which issued the credentials of the Chinese delegation is that at present represented on the various organs of the United Nations. In these circumstances, the members expressing these views considered that it would be wiser for UNESCO to refrain from taking any step which might conflict with the situation at present existing in the United Nations. Bearing that situation in mind, the Committee should propose that the General Conference recognize the validity of the credentials submitted for its consideration.

8. Other members contested this conclusion, stating that the Committee was fully competent to decide immediately on the exclusion of the delegation whose credentials had been challenged. A formal proposal to this effect was presented by the representative of Yugoslavia, was voted upon and was rejected.

9. In spite of the different views set forth, the Committee unanimously agreed that it was essential that the great Chinese people be represented on the Organization.

III

10. The majority of the Committee held that the General Conference should not at present, with regard to the problem of determining which government should exercise membership rights, take any decision which would conflict with the situation at present existing in the various bodies of the United Nations. The Committee indeed considered that one aim common to the various United Nations organizations is to secure co-ordination in international relations, and that any variation in the action taken by the different organs of the United Nations and the specialized agencies with regard to the problem under consideration could only have unfortunate results contrary to the aims in view.

11. Within the limits of its terms of reference the Committee decided to recommend to the General Conference that, having regard to the foregoing considerations, the credentials of the Chinese delegation be accepted and that this delegation be admitted in the present circumstances to take part in the work of the current session. The Committee reached this decision by 6 votes to 2, with 1 abstention, as follows :

In favour : Brazil, Canada, Cuba, France, Lebanon, United States of America.

Against : India, Yugoslavia.

Abstaining : United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland.

12. The Committee also considered it to be highly desirable that the United Nations should establish guiding principles to be followed so that uniform action may be taken by their various organs and by the specialized agencies (irrespective of their composition), whenever the question arises of determining—in cases where two or more authorities claim to be the regular government of a country—which of these authorities should exercise membership rights and fulfil the corresponding obligations.

13. The Committee was of the opinion that this question should be submitted for immediate attention to the United Nations, so that it may be possible to reach a uniform and expeditious settlement of the serious difficulties which the present situation of China has caused to the various United Nations organizations. The Committee therefore decided to submit for the approval of the General Conference the following draft resolution :

(The text of the draft resolution is set forth above in the letter of 6 September 1950 from the Director-General of UNESCO to the Secretary-General of the United Nations.)

The Committee reached its decision on the foregoing draft resolution by 8 votes to 1, as follows :

In favour : Brazil, Canada, Cuba, France, India, Lebanon, United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland, United States of America.

Against : Yugoslavia.

2. Resolves that when any question arises regarding the right of a government to represent a Member State in the United Nations, the matter shall be referred to the General Assembly for consideration, but without thereby precluding action by any other organ of the United Nations which is called upon to take a decision on the matter during the period before the Assembly meets;

United Kingdom : proposal

[26 October 1950]

1. If the Committee decides to refer this matter to an outside body, the United Kingdom delegation proposes that the body concerned should be the International Court of Justice and that the questions to be put to the Court should be the following :

(a) If, in consequence of internal changes or processes which have taken place in a Member State of the United Nations, there is established in that State a government which exercises effective control and authority over all or nearly all the national territory, and has the obedience of the bulk of its population, in such a manner that this control, authority and obedience appear to be of a permanent character, is there an obligation according to the accepted principles of international law to recognize the government concerned as being entitled to represent that Member State ?

(b) If the answer to the first question is in the negative, what are the circumstances (if any) in which such an obligation can be regarded as existing ?

2. If the Committee decides to refer the matter to the International Law Commission rather than to the Court, these questions would also be suitable as a basis for the reference to the Commission.

Report of Sub-Committee 2 to the Ad Hoc Political Committee

[Original texts : English|French]
[21 November 1950]

1. At its 24th meeting on 26 October 1950 the Ad Hoc Political Committee established a sub-committee of fourteen members to discuss and consider in the light of the debate in the Ad Hoc Political Committee all of the points raised in the proposals, suggestions and amendments which had been submitted to the Committee on the question of the recognition by the United Nations of the representation of a Member State. The Sub-Committee, composed of the representatives of Australia, Belgium, China, Cuba, Denmark, Dominican Republic, Egypt, France, India, Turkey, United Kingdom, United States of America, Uruguay and Venezuela, was instructed to report to the Ad Hoc Political Committee with recommendations.

2. The Sub-Committee held nine meetings between 27 October and 15 November. At its first meeting it elected Mr. F. V. Garcia Amador (Cuba) as Chairman, and Mr. B. C. Ballard (Australia) as Rapporteur.

3. The Sub-Committee had before it three draft resolutions which had been submitted to the Ad Hoc Political Committee: (1) a draft resolution submitted by the delegation of Cuba (A/AC.38/L.6); (2) a draft resolution submitted by the United Kingdom (A/AC.38/L.21/Rev.1); (3) a draft resolution submitted by the delegation of the Dominican Republic (A/AC.38/L.23). In addition the Sub-Committee had before it amendments to the Cuban draft resolution proposed by the delegations of Uruguay (A/AC.38/L.11) and China (A/AC.38/L.22); amendments to the United Kingdom resolution submitted by the delegation of Venezuela (A/AC.38/L.24), and a further United Kingdom suggestion contained in document A/AC.38/L.25.

4. After a general discussion of the proposals before it and a review of the positions taken by various delegations during the debate in the Ad Hoc Political Committee, the Sub-Committee established a Working Group of six members (Belgium, China, Turkey, United Kingdom, Uruguay, United States of America) to formulate a text dealing with principles and factors which could be set forth in a resolution as relevant to the consideration of the recognition of the representation of a Member State. The Working Group held two meetings and agreed to submit a tentative draft formulation to the Sub-Committee. Members of the Working Group reserved their respective positions on the question in the Sub-Committee and the Ad Hoc Political Committee.

5. At its 5th, 6th, and 7th meetings, the Sub-Committee considered the draft text submitted by the Working Group. The discussion indicated some divergence of opinion among the several delegations regarding the paragraphs formulated by the Working Group. It was agreed that before taking a final decision on that section of the projected draft resolution, the Sub-Committee should proceed to consider the wording of the preamble and the question of action by the General Assembly and the scope and effect of any of its decisions concerning the recognition of representation of a Member State.

6. In this connexion the representative of the Dominican Republic submitted a composite working paper composed of certain paragraphs taken from the original Cuban and United Kingdom draft resolutions and from the draft text submitted by the Working Group. The representative of the United States also put forward suggestions relating to the text of the preamble and to the paragraphs concerning the scope and effect of General Assembly decisions. The representative of the Dominican Republic submitted at the same time a second working paper proposing to refer the legal aspects of the question of recognition of representation in the United Nations to the International Law Commission for study by that body.

7. In order to coordinate these proposals the Sub-Committee at its 7th meeting established a second working group composed of the representatives of China, United Kingdom, Uruguay and the United States. This Working Group was instructed to draft a complete resolution embodying a preamble, a section based on the draft text submitted by the previous working group and setting forth principles and factors relevant to the consideration of recognition of representation in the United Nations, and a final section relating to action by the Assembly and the scope and effect of its decisions on any such question.

8. At its eighth meeting on 14 November the Sub-Committee discussed the draft resolution formulated by the second Working Group.

9. At its 9th meeting on 15 November the Sub-Committee adopted the following draft resolution by 8 votes to 4, with 2 abstentions, as follows:

In favour: Australia, Belgium, China, Cuba, Denmark, Egypt, United States of America, Uruguay.

Against: Dominican Republic, France, India, Venezuela.

Abstaining: Turkey, United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland.

" The General Assembly

" Considering :

" That difficulties may arise regarding the representation of a Member State in the United Nations and that there is a risk that conflicting decisions may be reached by its various organs,

" That it is in the interest of the proper functioning of the Organization that there should be uniformity in the procedure applicable whenever more than one authority claims to be the government entitled to represent a Member State in the United Nations, and this question becomes the subject of controversy in the United Nations,

" That, in virtue of its composition, the General Assembly is the organ of the United Nations in which consideration can best be given to the views of all Member States in matters affecting the functioning of the Organization as a whole;

" 1. Recommends :

" (a) That whenever more than one authority claims to be the government entitled to represent a Member State in the United Nations, and this question becomes the subject of controversy in the United Nations, it should be considered in the light of the purposes and principles of the Charter and the circumstances of each case;

" (b) That the following should be among the factors to be taken into consideration in determining any such question :

" (i) The extent to which the new authority exercises effective control over the territory of the Member State concerned and is generally accepted by the population;

" (ii) The willingness of that authority to accept responsibility for the carrying out by the Member State of its obligations under the Charter;

" (iii) The extent to which that authority has been established through internal processes in the Member State.

" 2. Recommends that when any such question arises, it should be considered by the General Assembly, or by the Interim Committee if the Assembly is not in session;

“ 3. Recommends that the decision reached by the General Assembly or its Interim Committee concerning any such question should be taken into account in other organs of the United Nations and in the specialized agencies;

“ 4. Declares that decisions reached by the General Assembly or its Interim Committee concerning any such question shall not of themselves affect the direct relations of individual Member States with the State, the representation of which has been the subject of such decisions;

“ 5. Requests the Secretary-General to transmit the present resolution to the other organs of the United Nations and to the specialized agencies for such action as may be appropriate.”

10. In order to enable the members of the Sub-Committee to record their respective positions on each of the component parts of the draft resolution, it was decided to vote paragraph by paragraph and to include the results of the vote on each paragraph in the report to the Ad Hoc Political Committee.

11. The three paragraphs of the preamble were approved unanimously.

12. Sub-paragraph 1 (a) was approved by 13 votes in favour, with one abstention, as follows :

In favour : Australia, Belgium, China, Cuba, Denmark, Dominican Republic, Egypt, France, Turkey, United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland, United States of America, Uruguay, Venezuela.

Abstaining : India.

13. At the suggestion of the representative of Turkey, it was agreed that each item of sub-paragraph 1 (b) should be voted on separately before the vote was taken on the sub-paragraph as a whole.

14. Item (i) was approved by 9 votes to one, with 4 abstentions, as follows :

In favour : Australia, Belgium, China, Cuba, Denmark, Egypt, United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland, Uruguay, United States of America.

Against : Venezuela.

Abstaining : Dominican Republic, France, India, Turkey.

The representative of China stated that he had voted for this item as part of the whole of paragraph 1, but would not have supported it if it had stood alone.

15. Item (ii) was approved by 7 votes to 2, with 5 abstentions, as follows :

In favour : Australia, Belgium, China, Cuba, Egypt, Uruguay, United States of America.

Against : India, United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland.

Abstaining : Denmark, Dominican Republic, France, Turkey, Venezuela.

16. In connexion with the vote item (ii), it was agreed, in order to express the attitude of some delegations, that the following note should be included in the report : “ In ordinary circumstances the declaration by a new government of its willingness to accept responsibility for carrying out the obligations of the Charter will be sufficient. However, the conduct of the new government may be considered when such conduct refutes the said declaration and reveals that it has not been made in good faith ”.

17. Item (iii) was approved by 8 votes to 4, with 2 abstentions, as follows :

In favour : Australia, Belgium, China, Cuba, Denmark, Egypt, United States of America, Uruguay.

Against : Dominican Republic, France, India, Venezuela.

Abstaining : Turkey, United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland.

18. Sub-paragraph 1 (b) as a whole was approved by 7 votes to 5, with 2 abstentions, as follows :

In favour : Australia, Belgium, China, Cuba, Egypt, Uruguay, United States of America.

Against : Dominican Republic, France, India, Turkey, Venezuela.

Abstaining : Denmark, United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland.

19. The representative of the Dominican Republic proposed to amend paragraph 2 by inserting the words “ on the legitimacy of representation ” after the word “ arises ”. This amendment was rejected by 5 votes to 4, with 5 abstentions.

20. The representative of India moved an amendment to paragraph 2 to delete the reference to the Interim Committee. This amendment was rejected by 9 votes to one, with 4 abstentions.

21. The representative of Belgium moved the deletion of paragraph 2 on the ground that it was superfluous and would be procedurally difficult to apply, but subsequently agreed that the Sub-Committee should express itself on his motion by its separate vote on paragraph 2.

22. Paragraph 2 was approved by a vote of 10 to 3, with one abstention, as follows :

In favour : Australia, China, Cuba, Denmark, Dominican Republic, Egypt, Turkey, Uruguay, United States of America, Venezuela.

Against : Belgium, India, United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland.

Abstaining : France.

23. The representative of Denmark proposed that the word “ decision ” in paragraph 3 be replaced by the word “ conclusion ” in order to avoid misinterpretation. After a discussion of the point he did not press his proposal, on the understanding that the report would include an explanation that the use of the word “ decision ” did not imply that the action of the General Assembly would be binding on all other organs or on the specialized agencies.

24. Paragraph 3 was approved by 10 votes to one, with 3 abstentions, as follows :

In favour : Australia, Belgium, China, Cuba, Denmark, Egypt, Turkey, United States of America, Uruguay, Venezuela.

Against : India.

Abstaining : Dominican Republic, France, United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland.

25. With respect to paragraph 4, the representative of Belgium suggested that the text be amended to read " Declares that this resolution does not affect the direct relations of individual Member States with the State, the representation of which has been subject of such decisions ". This suggestion was not pressed.

26. Paragraph 4 was approved by a vote of 11 votes in favour, with 3 abstentions, as follows :

In favour : Australia, China, Cuba, Denmark, Dominican Republic, Egypt, Turkey, United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland, United States of America, Venezuela, Uruguay.

Abstaining : Belgium, France, India.

27. The representative of Belgium explained that his abstention on paragraph 4 was not due to opposition to the substance of the paragraph but to the drafting, which he felt did not sufficiently safeguard the sovereignty of States in the matter of recognition. The representative of France associated himself with the Belgian representative's statement. The representative of India also associated himself with the Belgian statement, adding that his abstention on the paragraph had also been due to his opposition to including reference to the Interim Committee.

28. Paragraph 5 was approved by 13 votes in favour, with one abstention, as follows :

In favour : Australia, Belgium, China, Cuba, Denmark, Dominican Republic, Egypt, India, Turkey, United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland, Uruguay, United States of America, Venezuela.

Abstaining : France.

29. During the discussion and following the vote on the draft resolution several members of the Sub-Committee made, or submitted to the Rapporteur, statements regarding their vote for inclusion in the report.

30. The representative of Australia stated that his delegation had supported the draft resolution because it believed that its general approach was sound. Effective control of territory and obedience of the population were necessary before recognition should be extended, but above all a government must be willing to observe its international obligations and it was essential that it could be relied upon to do so. For this reason he would have preferred that the standards mentioned in items (i), (ii) and (iii) of sub-paragraph 1 (b) had been referred to more definitely, instead of as " factors to be taken into consideration ". Even so, no enumeration of criteria was exhaustive and each case should be dealt with on its merits.

31. The representative of France said that, while his delegation attached great importance to the attempt to establish standards, that must be a very difficult and lengthy task. The draft resolution had some interesting points, but the standards proposed were not necessarily the only possible ones; and, by the insertion of the words " the extent to which " in items (i) and (iii) of sub-paragraph 1 (b), the rule was almost entirely deprived of its objectivity, which was better preserved in the Cuban draft resolution. Moreover, the wording of several of the paragraphs of the resolution was deficient. In those circumstances the French delegation, while still thinking that the whole question should be referred for study to some such competent body as the International Law Commission, would vote against the present draft, which was rendered more harmful than useful by its defects. The problem of standards seemed less important than that of devising a solution valid for all United Nations bodies.

32. The representative of Belgium reserved the right of his delegation to vote against the resolution in the Ad Hoc Political Committee.

33. The representative of the Dominican Republic made the following statement :

" The delegation of the Dominican Republic wishes to make clear the reasons why it felt obliged, after the adoption of sub-paragraph 1 (b) of the operative part of the draft submitted by Working Group 2, to vote against the text as a whole adopted by Sub-Committee 2 by 8 votes to 4, with 2 abstentions.

" The delegation of the Dominican Republic supported the principles stated in the preamble and sub-paragraph 1 (a) for reasons previously explained, since they were in harmony with the Charter of the United Nations.

" The reasons for our negative vote are clear. We did not consider that the Sub-Committee could solve the problem of representation in the General Assembly by enumerating only a few of the factors involved. The delegation of the Dominican Republic takes this view because it believes this question to be of the utmost importance, and considers that it would be premature to specify any factors, principles or elements without first giving them careful study and taking into consideration other factors which might also be involved, and that during the present session there will not be enough time to undertake such a study. Accordingly, we originally proposed that the factors or elements contained in sub-paragraph 1 (b) should be referred to the International Law Commission for analysis.

" In our view, therefore, this problem involves questions of international law which require more adequate consideration.

" The delegation of the Dominican Republic, convinced that this problem is of such importance as to demand a balanced and realistic attitude on the part of the General Assembly of the United Nations, reserves the right to reintroduce in the Ad Hoc Political Committee the substance of the working document which is submitted to Sub-Committee 2, in which it was proposed that the factors enumerated in sub-paragraph 1 (b) of the draft resolution should be referred to the International Law Commission for study, together with other factors which had been omitted from that sub-paragraph.”

34. The representative of the United Kingdom explained his abstention on the ground that his Government could not agree to the idea contained in item (ii) of sub-paragraph 1 (b) except on the basis that a declaration of willingness would be conclusive, an interpretation which did not appear to commend itself to most other delegations. The United Kingdom also felt that the draft resolution as a whole advanced matters hardly at all, since it was so worded as to leave it open to every country to decide on questions of representation in the light of any considerations which appeared good to it. For instance, with reference to the allusion to the purposes and principles of the Charter in sub-paragraph 1 (a), the United Kingdom would certainly interpret this as meaning that a refusal to recognize the effective government of a Member State would be contrary to the purposes and principles of the Charter, since it would amount, in practice, to denying to that State the representation in the United Nations to which it was entitled by reason of its membership. Other countries, however, would interpret the same phrase as meaning that recognition could be denied to a government, however effectively in control of the State, if the government's actions appeared to be inconsistent with the obligations of the State under the Charter. Therefore, the phrase really achieved nothing in the way of securing uniformity of action on the part of Member States on questions of representation.

35. The representative of India, explaining his vote, said that the reference to the Interim Committee in paragraphs 2 and 3 was not acceptable to him and he had therefore been obliged to vote against these paragraphs. The proposal in item (iii) of sub-paragraph 1 (b) was also not acceptable, and he had voted against that sub-paragraph and also against the whole draft resolution since it included that sub-paragraph. He also reserved the right of his delegation to move amendments to and to vote against the draft resolution in the Ad Hoc Political Committee.

36. The representative of Turkey, in explaining his vote on the text as a whole, declared that although he was in accord with the preamble, as well as with sub-paragraph 1 (a) and all other paragraphs, he was obliged to abstain because he believed that sub-paragraph 1 (b) should be omitted, and that accordingly he wished to reserve the position of his delegation in the discussion of the text in the Ad Hoc Political Committee.

Dominican Republic: draft resolution

[28 November 1950]

The General Assembly,

Considering that the item “ Recognition by the United Nations of the representation of a Member State ” has given rise to interesting debates on legal principles with particular reference to international law;

Having regard to the opinions expressed in the discussions on the subject in the Ad Hoc Political Committee of the General Assembly during its fifth session;

Being of the opinion that a special study of the matter ought to be made by the International Law Commission;

1. Resolves to request the International Law Commission of the United Nations to study the legal aspects of the item “ Recognition by the United Nations of the representation of a Member State ” and, in connexion with the problem of such representation, the following principal factors :

(a) The extent to which the new authority exercises control over the territory of the Member State in question and to which it is generally accepted by the population;

(b) The ability and will to accept and carry out the obligations which the Charter imposes upon it as a Member State; the scope of a declaration made by a new government of its willingness to accept responsibility for carrying out the obligations of the Charter and the implications which would arise in cases where the conduct of the new government is not in conformity with the said declaration or has not been made in good faith;

(c) The consideration of the various internal processes which may contribute to a change in the representation of a Member State in the United Nations, and the extent to which the authority has been established as a result of such processes;

(d) The implications of external processes in the constitution of new authorities which request representation of the government of the Member State in the United Nations;

2. Decides to send to the International Law Commission the records of the meetings of the Ad Hoc Political Committee and those of its Sub-Committee 2, the draft resolutions and amendments submitted on the subject and all other documents which might be useful in the study which has been requested, and to request the Secretary-General to take the necessary action on this resolution;

3. Resolves to keep the item on the agenda of the sixth session of the General Assembly, pending the study which the International Law Commission is requested to undertake.

Report of the Ad Hoc Political Committee

[1 December 1950]

1. By a letter dated 19 July 1950 (A/1292), the alternate representative of Cuba to the United Nations requested the Secretary-General to place the question of the recognition by the United Nations of the representation of a Member State on the provisional agenda of the fifth session of the General Assembly. By a letter dated 26 July 1950, the permanent representative of Cuba transmitted to the Secretary-General for circulation an explanatory memorandum on the item (A/1308).

2. On 6 September 1950, the Secretary-General transmitted to the Members of the General Assembly for their information the text of a letter of 1 June 1950 from the Director-General of the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization enclosing the text of a resolution adopted on 30 May 1950 by the fifth session of the General Conference of UNESCO (A/1344). The resolution expressed the wish that the United Nations should adopt general criteria by which it might be possible to reach a uniform and practical settlement of the problem of representation on the various organs and organizations of the United Nations of countries of which two or more authorities claimed to be the only regular government.

3. The General Assembly, at its 285th meeting on 26 September 1950, decided to include the item in the agenda of the fifth session and to refer it to the Ad Hoc Political Committee.

4. The Ad Hoc Political Committee considered the item at its 18th to 24th meetings inclusive, and again at its 57th to 60th meetings inclusive.

5. At the 18th meeting of the Committee on 20 October 1950, a draft resolution (A/AC.38/L.6) was submitted by Cuba. The preamble expressed the view: (1) that questions regarding the representation of a Member State in the United Nations could not be definitely settled under the present rules and that there was danger that the organs of the United Nations might reach conflicting decisions; (2) that in the interest of the proper functioning of the United Nations there should be uniformity in the procedure applied in the settlement of such questions; and (3) that, in virtue of its composition, the General Assembly was the only organ of the United Nations in a position to express the general opinion of all Member States in matters affecting the functioning of the Organization as a whole. Paragraph 1 of the draft resolution recommended that questions arising in connexion with the representation of a Member State in the United Nations should be decided in the light of the following: (a) effective authority over the national territory; (b) the general consent of the population; (c) ability and willingness to achieve the purposes of the Charter, to observe its principles and to fulfil the international obligations of the State; and (d) respect for human rights and fundamental freedoms. Paragraph 2 provided that when it was necessary to take a decision regarding the legitimacy of the representation of a Member State, the matter was to be referred to the General Assembly for decision. Paragraph 3 declared that such decisions taken by the General Assembly were not to affect the direct relations of individual Member States with the State, the representation of which had been the subject of such decision. Paragraph 4 requested the Secretary-General to transmit the resolution to the organs and specialized agencies of the United Nations for appropriate action.

6. At the same meeting, an amendment (A/AC.38/L.11) to the draft resolution of Cuba was submitted by Uruguay to add to sub-paragraph 1 (a) the words "established without the intervention of any other State" and to delete from paragraph 2 the words "it is necessary to take a decision" and replace them by the words "disputes arise".

7. At the 19th meeting on 21 October 1950, a draft resolution (A/AC.38/L.21) was submitted by the United Kingdom. The preamble stated: (1) that there was no uniformly agreed principle for determining the right of the government of a Member State to represent it and that there was a danger that conflicting decisions on this subject might be reached by the various organs of the United Nations and in the specialized agencies; (2) that in the interest of the proper functioning of the Organization there should be uniformity in the criteria to be applied in determining whether a given Government was entitled to represent a Member State or when the representation of a Member State was challenged in any organ of the United Nations; (3) that, in virtue of its composition, the General Assembly was the only organ of the United Nations in which consideration could be given to the views of all Member States in matters affecting the functioning of the Organization as a whole. Paragraph 1 recommended that where the question of the representation of a Member State arose in consequence of internal processes or changes which had taken place in that State, the right of a government to represent the Member State concerned in the United Nations should be recognized if that government exercised effective control and authority over all or nearly all the national territory, and had the obedience of the bulk of the population of that territory, in such a way that this control, authority and obedience appeared to be of a permanent character. Paragraph 2 provided that when any question arose regarding the right of a government to represent a Member State in the United Nations, the matter was to be referred to the General Assembly for consideration, but without thereby precluding action by any other organ of the United Nations which was called upon to take a decision on the matter during the period before the General Assembly met. Paragraph 3 recommended that the view taken by the General Assembly concerning the right of a government to represent a Member State should be acted upon by Member States in other organs of the United Nations and in the specialized agencies. Paragraph 4 declared that decisions taken by the General Assembly in accordance with the resolution were not of themselves to affect the direct relations of individual Member States with the State, the representation of which had been the subject of such decisions. Paragraph 5 requested the Secretary-General to transmit the resolution to the organs and specialized agencies of the United Nations for appropriate action.

8. At the 20th meeting on 23 October 1950, an amendment (A/AC.38/L.22) to the draft resolution of Cuba was submitted by China: (1) to add, after the third paragraph of the preamble, a paragraph to the effect that the recognition of a new representation of a Member State should not be premature and should be guided strictly by the principles and provisions of the Charter of the United Nations and the Stimson Doctrine of Non-Recognition; and (2) in the operative part to make the following additions: (a) at the end of sub-paragraph 1 (a) the words "established without the intervention of any other State, independent of foreign control and domination, and not as a result of foreign aggression, direct or indirect"; (b) at the end of sub-paragraph 1 (b) the words "expressed through freely conducted or internationally supervised or observed elections"; (c) at the end of sub-paragraph 1 (c) the words "not having been an accomplice of aggression or given aid and sympathy to an aggressor so proclaimed by the United Nations, and not having committed acts of aggression"; (d) at the end of sub-paragraph 1 (d) the words "as defined by the United Nations Universal Declaration of Human Rights"; (e) at the end of paragraph 2 the words "as a question of importance and that the General Assembly shall appoint a commission of investigation to ascertain the facts relating to each one of the items under paragraph 1, and to report to the General Assembly for consideration"; (f) at the end of paragraph 3, after changing the word "not" earlier in that paragraph to "neither", the words "nor the application of regional agreements concerning recognition."

9. At the same meeting a draft resolution (A/AC.38/L.23) was submitted by the Dominican Republic: (1) to request the International Law Commission to study the legal aspects of the item and to submit the results of such study in time for inclusion in the agenda of the sixth session of the General Assembly; and (2) to send to the International Law Commission the records of the meetings of the Committee dealing with the subject, the draft resolutions submitted, and all other documents which might provide the International Law Commission with useful information, and to request the Secretary-General to take the necessary action on this resolution.

10. At the 21st meeting on 25 October 1950, an amendment (A/AC.38/L.24) to the United Kingdom draft resolution was submitted by Venezuela for the deletion of the disjunctive "or" in the second paragraph of the preamble, and for the addition to paragraph 1 of the words "and expressly declares its willingness to fulfil the international obligations of the State."

11. At the 23rd meeting on 26 October 1950, the United Kingdom submitted a proposal (A/AC.38/L.25) to the effect that, if it should be decided to refer the matter to an outside body, the latter should be the International Court of Justice, to which the following questions should be put: "(1) If, in consequence of internal changes or processes which have taken place in a Member State of the United Nations, there is established in that State a government which exercises effective control and authority over all or nearly all the national territory, and has the obedience of the bulk of its population, in such a manner that this control, authority and obedience appear to be of a permanent character, is there an obligation, according to the accepted principles of international law, to recognize the government concerned as being entitled to represent that Member State? (2) If the answer to the first question is in the negative, what are the circumstances (if any) in which such an obligation can be regarded as existing?" The proposal stated that if the decision was reached to submit the matter to the International Law Commission rather than to the Court, the same questions would be suitable.

12. At the 24th meeting on 26 October 1950, the Committee decided, by 29 votes to 6, with 17 abstentions, to establish a Sub-Committee to consider the item in the light of all the proposals, amendments, suggestions and views presented in the course of debate. The Sub-Committee was composed of the representatives of Australia, Belgium, China, Cuba, Denmark, Dominican Republic, Egypt, France, India, Turkey, United Kingdom, United States of America, Uruguay and Venezuela.

13. At the 57th meeting on 27 November 1950, the Rapporteur of the Sub-Committee presented its report (A/AC.38/L.45) and the draft resolution adopted by the Sub-Committee for consideration by the Committee.

14. At the same meeting an amendment (A/AC.38/L.50) to the draft resolution of the Sub-Committee was submitted by Belgium, calling for the deletion of paragraph 2, the substitution of the words "attitude adopted" for the words "decision(s) reached" in paragraphs 3 and 4 and consequential drafting changes in paragraph 4.

15. At the 59th meeting on 28 November 1950, an amendment (A/AC.38/L.53) to the Sub-Committee's draft resolution was submitted by Mexico to add at the end of paragraph 2 the following: "it being understood that nothing in this resolution shall be interpreted to mean that the General Assembly or the Interim Committee is authorized to appoint commissions of investigation or study, to hold hearings, to convene persons or receive evidence or statements, since the factors referred to in items (i), (ii) and (iii) of sub-paragraph 1 (b) should be considered exclusively as criteria which each individual delegation may take into account."

16. At the same meeting an amendment (A/AC.38/L.54) to the Sub-Committee's draft resolution was submitted by Egypt for the deletion of sub-paragraph 1 (b).

17. At the 60th meeting on 28 November 1950, the Dominican Republic submitted a draft resolution (A/AC.38/L.55) to request the International Law Commission to study the legal aspects of the item and, in connexion with the problem of representation, to study specified principal factors.

18. At the same meeting an amendment (A/AC.38/L.56) to the Sub-Committee's draft resolution was submitted by Argentina to substitute the following for paragraph 1 of the operative part: "1. Recommends that when the question of the representation of a Member State arises as the result of internal processes that have occurred in such State, a government shall be recognized as possessing the right to represent the Member State in question in the United Nations if that government effectively exercises its power and authority over all or almost all the national territory and if it is obeyed by the people, account being taken also of the willingness of the said government to accept responsibility for carrying out the obligations which the Charter imposes on Member States." The representative of Argentina withdrew the foregoing amendment before the vote was taken, while reserving his right to re-submit it to the General Assembly.

19. The draft resolution of the Sub-Committee and the amendments thereto were put to the vote with the following results:

(a) The preamble as a whole was adopted by 38 votes to 6, with 10 abstentions.

(b) Sub-paragraph 1 (a) was adopted by 34 votes to 5, with 12 abstentions.

(c) The Egyptian amendment (A/AC.38/L.54) to delete sub-paragraph 1 (b) was adopted by a roll-call vote of 27 votes to 13, with 14 abstentions, as follows:

In favour: Afghanistan, Argentina, Brazil, Burma, Byelorussian Soviet Socialist Republic, Czechoslovakia, Dominican Republic, Ecuador, Egypt, France, India, Indonesia, Israel, Mexico, Norway, Pakistan, Poland, Saudi Arabia, Sweden, Turkey, Ukrainian Soviet Socialist Republic, Union of South Africa, Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland, Venezuela, Yemen, Yugoslavia.

Against: Australia, Belgium, Chile, China, Cuba, Guatemala, Honduras, Iraq, New Zealand, Paraguay, Thailand, United States of America, Uruguay.

Abstaining: Canada, Colombia, Denmark, El Salvador, Ethiopia, Greece, Haiti, Iran, Lebanon, Netherlands, Panama, Peru, Philippines, Syria.

(d) In view of the deletion of sub-paragraph 1 (b) the representative of Mexico withdrew his amendment (A/AC.38/L.53).

(e) The Belgian amendment (A/AC.38/L.50) calling for the deletion of paragraph 2 was adopted by 21 votes to 20, with 14 abstentions.

(f) The Belgian amendment (A/AC.38/L.50) relating to paragraph 3 was adopted by 16 votes to 10, with 27 abstentions.

(g) Paragraph 3 as amended was adopted by 29 votes to 5, with 19 abstentions.

(h) An amendment to delete from paragraph 4 the words "or its Interim Committee", submitted by the representative of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, was rejected by 35 votes to 6, with 11 abstentions.

(i) The Belgian amendment to paragraph 4, with drafting changes consequent on the adoption of paragraph 3, as amended, was adopted by 35 votes to 5, with 13 abstentions.

(j) Paragraph 5 was adopted by 35 votes to 2, with 13 abstentions.

(k) The draft resolution of the Sub-Committee, as amended, was adopted as a whole by 29 votes to 7, with 15 abstentions.

20. At the conclusion of the voting, the representative of the Dominican Republic withdrew his draft resolution (A/AC.38/L.55), while reserving the right to reintroduce it in the General Assembly.

21. The Ad Hoc Political Committee accordingly recommends that the General Assembly adopt the following draft resolution:

RECOGNITION BY THE UNITED NATIONS OF THE REPRESENTATION OF A MEMBER STATE

The General Assembly,

Considering that difficulties may arise regarding the representation of a Member State in the United Nations and that there is a risk that conflicting decisions may be reached by its various organs,

Considering that it is in the interest of the proper functioning of the Organization that there should be uniformity in the procedure applicable whenever more than one authority claims to be the government entitled to represent a Member State in the United Nations, and this question becomes the subject of controversy in the United Nations,

Considering that, in virtue of its composition, the General Assembly is the organ of the United Nations in which consideration can best be given to the views of all Member States in matters affecting the functioning of the Organization as a whole,

1. Recommends that whenever more than one authority claims to be the government entitled to represent a Member State in the United Nations, and this question becomes the subject of controversy in the United Nations, the question should be considered in the light of the purposes and principles of the Charter and the circumstances of each case;

2. Recommends that the attitude adopted by the General Assembly or its Interim Committee concerning any such question should be taken into account in other organs of the United Nations and in the specialized agencies;

3. Declares that the attitude adopted by the General Assembly or its Interim Committee concerning any such question shall not of itself affect the direct relations of individual Member States with the State concerned;

4. Requests the Secretary-General to transmit the present resolution to the other organs of the United Nations and to the specialized agencies for such action as may be appropriate.

In compliance with rule 20 of the rules of procedure of the General Assembly, I have pleasure in communicating to you the attached explanatory memorandum on the request made by this permanent delegation that the agenda of the fifth session of the General Assembly should include the item : " Relations of States Members of the United Nations with Spain ¹ ".

INCLUSION OF THE FOLLOWING ITEM IN THE PROVISIONAL AGENDA OF THE GENERAL ASSEMBLY: "RELATIONS OF STATES MEMBERS OF THE UNITED NATIONS WITH SPAIN"

Explanatory memorandum

The purpose which the Dominican Republic has in mind in proposing the inclusion of the item "Relations of States Members of the United Nations with Spain" in the provisional agenda of the fifth session of the General Assembly may be briefly and concisely explained.

It is simply a matter of reviewing, in the light of experience gained during the time that has elapsed, the situation created by the resolution which the General Assembly adopted on 12 December 1946.² Such a review may be considered from various angles: the Dominican delegation proposes to consider it only from the standpoint of the relations between States

Members and Spain, and believes that such a review is necessary, especially as regards diplomatic relations, which the aforesaid resolution did not intend to suppress but only to limit to a certain extent. Another class of relations which may also be taken into account in a review of the question are those which States Members may entertain with Spain if that nation participates in the technical conferences of the United Nations and in the activities of the specialized agencies.

The delegation of the Dominican Republic is of the opinion that, since nearly four years have elapsed since the resolution of 12 December 1946 was adopted, it is time that the conditions in which these relations are now evolving and the possibility of modifying them should be carefully examined. The delegation of the Dominican Republic hopes that this review and discussion will give rise to a balance of opinion favourable to a suggestion which it is proposed to make in order that these relations may continue in a normal manner in the future.

This explanatory memorandum is submitted in compliance with the provision of rule 20 of the rules of procedure of the General Assembly.

Bolivia, Costa Rica, Dominican Republic, El Salvador, Honduras, Nicaragua, Philippines, Peru: joint draft resolution

[7 October 1950]

The General Assembly,

Considering that:

The General Assembly during the second part of its first session in 1946 adopted several recommendations concerning Spain, one of which provided that Spain be debarred from membership in international agencies established by or brought into relationship with the United Nations, and another that Member States withdraw their Ambassadors and Ministers from Madrid;

The establishment of diplomatic relations and the exchange of Ambassadors and Ministers with a government does not imply any judgment upon the domestic policy of that government;

The specialized agencies of the United Nations are technical and largely non-political in character and have been established in order to benefit the peoples of all nations, and that, therefore, they should be free to decide for themselves whether the participation of Spain in their activities is desirable;

Resolves:

1. To revoke the recommendation for the withdrawal of Ambassadors and Ministers from Madrid, contained in General Assembly resolution 39 (I) of 12 December 1946; and

2. To revoke the recommendation intended to debar Spain from membership in international agencies established by or brought into relationship with the United Nations, which is a part of the same resolution adopted by the General Assembly in 1946 concerning relations of the United Nations with Spain.

[2 November 1950]

1. By notes dated 2 August 1950 (A/1310) and 10 August 1950 (A/1314), addressed to the Secretary-General, the delegation of the Dominican Republic requested that the item "Relations of States Members of the United Nations with Spain" should be included in the agenda of the fifth session of the General Assembly. By a telegram dated 18 August 1950 (A/1328), addressed to the Secretary-General, the delegation of Peru requested that the item "Relations of States Members and specialized agencies with Spain" should be included in the agenda of the fifth session of the General Assembly.

2. The General Assembly, on the recommendation of the General Committee, decided, at its 285th plenary meeting on 26 September 1950, to refer the item in the following form, "Relations of States Members and specialized agencies with Spain" to the Ad Hoc Political Committee for consideration and report.

3. The Ad Hoc Political Committee considered the matter during its 25th to 30th meetings, inclusive.

4. Draft resolutions, submitted by Peru and Bolivia (A/1334), El Salvador (A/1351), the Dominican Republic (A/1363), and a joint draft resolution submitted by Bolivia, Costa Rica, Dominican Republic, El Salvador, Honduras, Nicaragua and Peru (A/AC.38/L.4) were withdrawn at the 25th meeting of the Committee on 27 October 1950.

5. At the same meeting, a joint draft resolution was introduced by Bolivia, Costa Rica, Dominican Republic, El Salvador, Honduras, Nicaragua, Philippines and Peru (A/AC.38/L.7). This draft resolution referred to recommendations concerning Spain adopted by the General Assembly during the second part of its first session in 1946^a considered that the establishment of diplomatic relations with a government does not imply any judgment upon the domestic policy of that government; considered further that the specialized agencies of the United Nations are technical and non-political in character and that they should be free to decide for themselves whether the participation of Spain in their activities is desirable; and proposed

(a) To revoke the recommendation for the withdrawal of Ambassadors and Ministers plenipotentiary from Madrid, contained in General Assembly resolution 39 (I) of 12 December 1946;

(b) To revoke the recommendation intended to debar Spain from membership in international agencies established by or brought into relationship with the United Nations, which recommendation is a part of the same resolution adopted by the General Assembly in 1946, concerning relations of Members of the United Nations with Spain.

6. At the 28th meeting of the Committee on 30 October, the Netherlands introduced an amendment (A/AC.38/L.26) to the joint draft resolution. The amendment, which was accepted by the sponsors of the joint draft resolution, proposed to add to the third paragraph of the preamble, after the word "desirable", the following words: "in the interest of their work".

7. A great majority of the representatives who spoke in favour of the joint draft resolution stressed the point that their affirmative vote did not imply that they approved the domestic policies of the Franco Government in Spain. Indeed, no representative claimed that the present Spanish Government had undergone any change along the lines indicated in the General Assembly resolution of 12 December 1946. Further, a number of the sponsoring delegations and others pointed out that the joint draft resolution, while revoking the recommendations embodied in the 1946 resolution, left intact the condemnation of the Franco régime contained in the 1946 resolution.

8. At the 30th meeting on 31 October, the amended joint draft resolution was put to the vote by roll-call and was adopted by 37 votes to 10, with 12 abstentions, as follows:

In favour: Afghanistan, Argentina, Belgium, Bolivia, Brazil, Canada, Chile, China, Colombia, Costa Rica, Dominican Republic, Ecuador, Egypt, El Salvador, Greece, Haiti, Honduras, Iceland, Iran, Iraq, Lebanon, Liberia, Netherlands, Nicaragua, Pakistan, Panama, Paraguay, Peru, Philippines, Saudi Arabia, Syria, Thailand, Turkey, Union of South Africa, United States of America, Venezuela, Yemen.

Against: Byelorussian Soviet Socialist Republic, Czechoslovakia, Guatemala, Israel, Mexico, Poland, Ukrainian Soviet Socialist Republic, Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, Uruguay, Yugoslavia.

Abstentions: Australia, Burma, Cuba, Denmark, Ethiopia, France, India, Indonesia, New Zealand, Norway, Sweden, United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland.

9. The Ad Hoc Political Committee therefore recommends to the General Assembly the adoption of the following draft resolution:

RELATIONS OF STATES MEMBERS AND SPECIALIZED AGENCIES WITH SPAIN

The General Assembly,

Considering that:

The General Assembly, during the second part of its first session in 1946, adopted several recommendations concerning Spain, one of which provided that Spain be debarred from membership in international agencies established by or brought into relationship with the United Nations, and another that Member States withdraw their Ambassadors and Ministers from Madrid,

The establishment of diplomatic relations and the exchange of Ambassadors and Ministers with a government does not imply any judgment upon the domestic policy of that government,

The specialized agencies of the United Nations are technical and largely non-political in character and have been established in order to benefit the peoples of all nations, and that, therefore, they should be free to decide for themselves whether the participation of Spain in their activities is desirable in the interest of their work,

Resolves :

1. To revoke the recommendation for the withdrawal of Ambassadors and Ministers from Madrid, contained in General Assembly resolution 39 (I) of 12 December 1946;

2. To revoke the recommendation intended to debar Spain from membership in international agencies established by or brought into relationship with the United Nations, which recommendation is a part of the same resolution adopted by the General Assembly in 1946 concerning relations of Members of the United Nations with Spain.

I. INTRODUCTION

1. In its resolution 303 I (XI), the Economic and Social Council submitted the draft first international covenant on human rights (E/1681, annex I), together with relevant documentation and records,¹ to the General Assembly at its fifth session for consideration with a view to reaching policy decisions on a number of questions which in the Council's resolution are arranged under the following headings :

- (a) The general adequacy of the first eighteen articles;
- (b) The desirability of including special articles on the application of the covenant to federal States and to Non-Self-Governing and Trust Territories;
- (c) The desirability of including articles on economic, social and cultural rights; and
- (d) The adequacy of the articles relating to implementation.

2. The Secretary-General submitted to the Economic and Social Council document E/L.68, being a memorandum by the Secretary-General on the draft first international covenant on human rights, in which were compiled comments by members of the Commission on Human Rights and certain observations of the Secretariat. In the light of the decision taken by the Economic and Social Council, in its resolution 303 I (XI), the Secretary-General has the honour to add to his memorandum (E/L.68) the observations which follow.

II. THE GENERAL ADEQUACY OF THE FIRST EIGHTEEN ARTICLES

3. The present note does not deal with those many drafting suggestions which have been made by representatives on the Commission of Human Rights and on the Economic and Social Council, by Sub-Commissions, specialized agencies and the Secretariat itself and which are to be found in the documentation before the General Assembly. These and other drafting questions will no doubt be considered in detail by the Council and the Commission on Human Rights in the course of their future work connected with this instrument.

4. Consideration of the “general adequacy of the first eighteen articles” raises two major questions: first, whether the catalogue of rights contained in the first eighteen articles is adequate, i.e. whether any rights other than those at present dealt with in the first eighteen articles should be made the subject of provisions to be included in parts I and II of the covenant; and secondly, whether the existing eighteen articles as drafted are adequate to protect the rights to which they relate.

5. With regard to the first of these two questions, the Secretary-General assumes that the General Assembly will not examine, under the heading of the “general adequacy of the first eighteen articles”, the question of the desirability of including articles on economic, social and cultural rights, because section IV of this document is devoted to that problem. The General Assembly may wish therefore in considering this aspect of the question of general adequacy to deal only with the problem whether any additional articles other than those which are referred to in resolution 303 C (XI) of the Economic and Social Council as “the fundamental rights of the individual and certain essential civil freedoms” should be added to the list of rights to be defined and included in the covenant. Annex III of the report of the Commission on Human Rights (sixth session) (E/1681) lists, in addition to articles on economic, social and cultural rights, a number of proposals concerning what may be regarded as “fundamental rights of the individual and essential civil freedoms” which were made by the representatives of France, the Philippines, the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, Yugoslavia, and the Sub-Commission on the Prevention of Discrimination and the Protection of Minorities. Certain non-governmental organizations also presented to the Economic and Social Council written statements which the Council considered it appropriate to transmit to the General Assembly. These statements are listed in the note by the Secretary-General (A/1384). Some of them contain suggestions as to additional articles apart from articles on economic, social and cultural rights to be included in the covenant. In this regard, the Secretary-General refers in particular to the statement by the International League for the Rights of Man (E/C.2/254/Add.1) and the statement by the World Jewish Congress (E/C.2/259/Add.1).

6. The General Assembly may, therefore, wish to give to the Economic and Social Council, and through it, to the Commission on Human Rights, directives on the question of including, or not including in the covenant, articles setting forth and defining one or more of the following rights:

(a) The protection of the inviolability of the home (proposal by the Philippines based on article 12 of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights; see also the statement made by the representative of China in the Social Committee of the Economic and Social Council (E/AC.7/SR.149, page 10) and the statement by the International League for the Rights of Man);

(b) The protection of the inviolability or secrecy of correspondence (proposal by the Philippines based on article 12 of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights; see also the statement made by the representative of China in the Social Committee of the Economic and Social Council (E/AC.7/SR.149, page 11) and the statement by the International League for the Rights of Man);

(c) The protection of privacy (proposal by the Philippines based on article 12 of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights);

(d) The protection against attacks on honour and reputation (proposal by the Philippines based on article 12 of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights);

(e) The right to property (proposal by the Philippines based on article 17 of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights); (see also the statement made by the representative of Belgium in the Social Committee of the Council (E/AC.7/SR.148, page 9), and the statement by the International League for the Rights of Man);

(f) The rights of persons deprived of liberty and rights relating to the penitentiary system (proposal of France);

(g) The right to participation in the government of the State (proposal by the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics based on article 21 of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights; see also the statement made by the representatives of Belgium and of the United States of America in the Social Committee of the Economic and Social Council (E/AC.7/SR.148, page 9, and E/AC.7/SR.147, page 16, respectively) and the statement by the International League for the Rights of Man);

(h) The right of national self-determination and the rights of minorities (proposals by the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, by Yugoslavia and by the Sub-Commission on Prevention of Discrimination and Protection of Minorities; see also the statement by the World Jewish Congress);²

(i) The right of asylum (proposal by Yugoslavia based on article 14 of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights; see also the statements made by the representatives of Belgium and China in the Social Committee of the Economic and Social Council (E/AC.7/SR.147, page 9; E/AC.7/SR.148, page 9; and E/AC.7/SR.149, page 10, respectively), and the statement by the International League for the Rights of Man);

(j) The right to equal access to public service (see the statement by the World Jewish Congress based on article 21, paragraph 2, of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights);

(k) Rights relating to marriage and the family (see the statement made by the representative of China in the Social Committee of the Economic and Social Council (A/AC.7/SR.149, page 10), and the statement by the World Jewish Congress based on articles 12 and 16 of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights);

(l) The right to petition national authorities (see General Assembly resolution 217 B (III) and the observation of Cuba at the 224th plenary meeting of the General Assembly.³

² The attention of the General Assembly is drawn to its resolution 217 C III.

³ See Official Records of the General Assembly, Fourth Session, Plenary Meetings.

7. The Secretary-General respectfully draws the attention of the General Assembly to the fact that there are other rights included in the Universal Declaration of Human Rights, such as the right to a nationality (article 15 of the Declaration) which are not included in the draft covenant.

8. With regard to the second aspect of the question of the adequacy of the first eighteen articles, the substantive adequacy of the provisions embodied in the existing eighteen draft articles themselves, the Secretary-General wishes to draw attention to his memorandum (E/L.68), which contains a compilation of the comments of members of the Commission on Human Rights and certain observations by the Secretariat. In the light of the decision of the Economic and Social Council, he wishes to add the following remarks.

9. It has been pointed out by the Canadian representative on the Social Committee of the Economic and Social Council (E/AC.7/SR.148, page 13) and by a non-governmental organization (see the statement by the World Jewish Congress, document E/C.2/259/Add.1, pages 3 to 5, paragraphs 1 and 2) that the draft covenant offers several conflicting solutions to the problem of the relationship between provisions of the Covenant and provisions of national law (articles 3, paragraph 3; 6; 8; 9; 11, paragraphs 1 and 2, 13; 14; 15 and 16). In this connexion, the General Assembly's attention is drawn to the way in which the problem of the relationship between international conventional law and national law has been treated in the Convention of 1948 concerning Freedom of Association and the Protection of the Right to Organize, article 8 of which reads as follows :

" 1. In exercising the rights provided for in this Convention workers and employers and their respective organizations, like other persons or organized collectivities, shall respect the law of the land.

" 2. The law of the land shall not be such as to impair, nor shall it be so applied as to impair, the guarantees provided for in this Convention".

10. The General Assembly may consider the advisability of having the Covenant include a declaratory statement to the effect that the observance of the Covenant " shall be a matter of international concern".

11. The General Assembly may wish to consider whether part of the anti-discriminatory provisions of the covenant at present contained in article 1, paragraph 1, and article 17 should not be enumerated among those provisions of the covenant from which no derogation may be made under article 2, paragraph 2, of the draft. It has been submitted that while a state of emergency or public disaster may make it necessary to make distinctions as to nationality, or political or other opinion, such a situation would not be a reason for distinctions as to race, colour, sex or religion. (See the observation by the representative of Mexico in the Social Committee of the Economic and Social Council (E/AC.7/SR.149, page 9); see also the statement by the World Jewish Congress, section I, paragraph 1.)

12. The General Assembly may wish to consider whether the anti-discriminatory provisions of the covenant (article 1, paragraph 1, and article 17) should not be strengthened by the addition of a provision to the effect that the States parties to the covenant undertake not to lend the assistance of their judicial, executive and administrative organs for the purpose of enforcing or practising discrimination.

13. The question of medical or scientific experimentation is now dealt with in article 4 of the draft covenant. The General Assembly's attention is drawn to the fact that in the course of several trials of alleged war criminals by the United States military tribunals at Nürnberg and by the Supreme National Tribunal of Poland, a relevant body of judicial opinion has been evolved which might usefully be taken into account in connexion with this provision.⁴

14. Articles 6 and 10 of the draft covenant contain comprehensive provisions protecting individuals against arrest and detention and stipulate a number of valuable guarantees for those charged with criminal offences. The General Assembly may wish to consider whether provision should not also be inserted for the protection of persons whose detention is of a merely preventive character and is not based on criminal charges, a situation which the draft covenant permits in a state of emergency (article 2) or in consequence of a general law consistent with the rights recognized in the covenant (article 8). (See also the proposal of the French representative on the Commission on Human Rights set out in annex III of the Report of the Commission on Human Rights (Sixth session) (E/1681).

15. In articles 10, 13, 14, 15 and 16, the draft covenant uses the term " public order " (ordre public). Attention is respectfully drawn to the comments on this term by the representative of the United Kingdom in connexion with article 14 of the draft covenant and to paragraph 83 of the Secretary-General's memorandum (E/L.68). As an illustration of the possible scope of this term, the attention of the General Assembly is respectfully drawn to the fact that the Commission on Human Rights itself has gone on record as interpreting the terms " public order " (ordre public) as covering both the right to license media of information and the right to regulate the importation of information material (E/CN.4/SR.167, paragraphs 52 to 54).

III. THE DESIRABILITY OF INCLUDING SPECIAL ARTICLES ON THE APPLICATION OF THE COVENANT TO FEDERAL STATES AND TO NON-SELF-GOVERNING AND TRUST TERRITORIES

16. The Secretary-General refers the General Assembly to the memorandum on this question (E/1721 and

XV (Digest of Laws and Cases), pp. 114-117, published for the United Nations War Crimes Commission by His Majesty's Stationery Office, London. VII, pp. 14-16 and 24-26 (Trial of Rudolf Hess by the Supreme National Tribunal of Poland), pp. 35-37, 45 and 48-49 (Trial of Erhard Milch by a United States Military Tribunal) and pages 49-53 (Trial of Karl Brandt and others by a United States Military Tribunal).

E/1721/Corr.1) which he presented to the Economic and Social Council at the request of the Commission on Human Rights.

IV. THE DESIRABILITY OF INCLUDING ARTICLES ON ECONOMIC, SOCIAL AND CULTURAL RIGHTS

17. Certain proposals for additional articles made by members of the Commission on Human Rights concerning economic, social and cultural rights will be found in annex III to the report of the sixth session of the Commission on Human Rights (E/1684), and in the comments of the Philippines submitted to the Commission (sixth session).⁵ The General Assembly's attention is also drawn to the report submitted by the Director-General of the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization (E/1752 and E/1752/Add.1) and to statements in the memoranda from non-governmental organizations which have been transmitted to the General Assembly by the Economic and Social Council (paragraph 4, A/1384).

V. THE ADEQUACY OF THE ARTICLES RELATING TO IMPLEMENTATION

18. The comments by members of the Commission on Human Rights on the measures of implementation embodied in the draft covenant, together with certain observations by the Secretary-General, are compiled in paragraphs 100 to 123 inclusive, of the memorandum (E/L.68) presented by the Secretary-General to the Economic and Social Council and transmitted by the Council to the General Assembly. The Secretary-General has the honour to make, in this connexion, the following additional observations :

19. At its third session, the General Assembly adopted resolution 217 B (III), on the right of petition, in which it requested the Economic and Social Council to ask the Commission on Human Rights to give further examination to the problem of petitions when studying the draft covenant on human rights and measures of implementation, in order to enable the General Assembly to consider what further action, if any, should be taken regarding the problem of petitions. The question was on the provisional agenda of the fourth session of the General Assembly. On the recommendation of the Economic and Social Council (Council resolution 236 B (IX)), the General Assembly decided to postpone the consideration of the subject.⁶ The General Assembly may now wish to take a decision on the proposal implied in the draft covenant, that, at the present time, petitions from non-governmental organizations, groups and individuals, should not be receivable by the contemplated human rights committee. In this connexion, attention is respectfully drawn to the comments by members of the Commission on Human Rights mentioned above and to the statements on this question by the International League for the Rights of Man and the World Jewish Congress.

⁶ See Official Records of the General Assembly Fourth Session, Plenary Meetings, 227th meeting.

20. At its sixth session, the Commission on Human Rights was narrowly divided on the question whether only persons who had judicial experience should be eligible to become members of the proposed human rights committee and it decided against this requirement. If the General Assembly decides to retain the provisions of the draft covenant relating to the human rights committee, it might consider a compromise solution : requiring that a certain number of the seven members of the contemplated committee, say three members, must be persons of judicial experience. A solution on these lines would be in accord with traditional arrangements made in many Member States concerning fact-finding commissions, administrative tribunals and similar bodies. It would satisfy the demand of those who insist on having persons with judicial experience sitting on the committee, but would also leave the way open for qualified laymen to serve on the committee.

21. The General Assembly may also wish to discuss the question whether it is appropriate to provide in the covenant (as is provided in draft article 32 thereof) that the offices of chairman and vice-chairman of the committee shall rotate among the members of the proposed committee.

22. The General Assembly may also wish to consider in this connexion whether provision should not be made in the covenant to the effect that the members of the human rights committee should receive remuneration commensurate with the importance and dignity of their office.

23. The General Assembly will note that the link between the covenant and the proposed implementation machinery on the one hand and the United Nations on the other is a very slender one. It is mostly restricted to administrative questions (see articles 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 28, 30, 31, 37 and 42), to the publication by the Secretary-General of reports of the human rights committee (article 41) and to the participation of the General Assembly in the process of amending the covenant (article 45). States parties to the covenant might find it difficult to permit the exercise of influence over matters affecting the covenant by States not parties to it. On the other hand, to retain, in effect, only an administrative and budgetary relationship between the implementation machinery and the United Nations would give too little recognition to the jurisdiction of the United Nations in the field of human rights and its responsibility for their promotion. The General Assembly may, therefore, wish to contemplate the insertion in the covenant of a provision to the effect that the human rights committee should submit annual reports on its activities to the General Assembly itself (or to the Economic and Social Council).

24. With regard to the proposal that the human rights committee might be empowered to obtain advisory opinions from the International Court of Justice on questions of law arising in the course of its work, the Secretary-General wishes to refer to the report which he presented to the Economic and Social Council (E/1732) at the request of the Commission on Human Rights.

Human Rights Day : memorandum by the Secretary-General

[13 November 1950]

1. The Secretary-General has the honour to present to the Third Committee of the General Assembly an outline of the activities of the United Nations and UNESCO, and of individual countries throughout the world, relating to the celebration of 10 December as Human Rights Day. This report is submitted in connexion with the draft resolution concerning United Nations Human Rights Day (document A/C.3/L.102) proposed by the United States of America.

2. Soon after the proclamation of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights, the Director General of UNESCO proposed the designation of 10 December as Human Rights Day. In a letter to member States of UNESCO of 4 February 1949, the Director General suggested that they should set aside "every year, as part of the programme in all schools, the tenth of December, ... for rendering homage to the principles of freedom and of the dignity of man".

3. Consequently, on 10 December 1949, the first anniversary of the proclamation of the Declaration was celebrated throughout the world—in the headquarters of the United Nations and of UNESCO, in the capitals, towns and villages of at least forty-two countries.

4. In New York, members of delegations to the General Assembly and members of the Secretariat of the United Nations solemnly celebrated the first anniversary of the Declaration. The celebration was in the form of a concert at Carnegie Hall, and was broadcast and re-broadcast throughout the world. The Director General of UNESCO issued a message on the anniversary of the Declaration, which was broadcast by many radio stations and printed widely in the world's Press. In Paris, under the auspices of UNESCO, a descriptive and historical exhibition of the Declaration was then being given. The Radio Divisions of the United Nations and UNESCO prepared special programmes and radio scripts emphasizing the importance of the Declaration. The United Nations Information Centres in various parts of the world assisted in the organization of national celebrations. In response to an appeal made through the UNESCO National Commissions, national radio organizations and newspapers in many countries produced special broadcasts and articles.

5. The observances of the first Human Rights Day in different parts of the world were sponsored by governments, educational institutions, non-governmental organizations, newspapers, radio stations, and other agencies. Such observances were reported to the United Nations and UNESCO from forty-two countries, and undoubtedly there were others which were not reported. The following sub-paragraphs contain brief reports of such observances :

6. The second anniversary of the Declaration is now approaching. On 20 October 1950, the Secretary-General sent a circular letter to Member States, appealing to them to set aside 10 December as Human Rights Day. The text of the letter reads as follows:

"The second anniversary of the adoption of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights falls on 10 December 1950. This day provides a fitting opportunity to recall that important event which took place in Paris two years ago and to remind ourselves of our continuing responsibility and firm resolve to promote human rights and fundamental freedoms wherever, throughout the world, the influence of the United Nations is felt.

"At the time of the adoption of the Universal Declaration the General Assembly by resolution 217 D (III) recommended 'Governments of Member States to show their adherence to Article 56 of the Charter by using every means within their power solemnly to publicize the text of the Declaration and to cause it to be disseminated, displayed, read and expounded principally in schools and other educational institutions, without distinction based on the political status of countries or territories'.

"During the past two years the response from Member Nations has been most gratifying. The text of the Declaration has been translated into many languages and distributed far and wide. It has found its way into the teaching of the schools. Moreover, collectively through various United Nations organs, and individually in acts of national legislation, Member Nations have taken concrete actions based on the Universal Declaration of Human Rights.

"Last year in many countries 10 December was celebrated as Human Rights Day. The grave developments in international relations since then would seem to make it more rather than less imperative that Human Rights Day be fittingly observed this year and that in all Member Nations the great human rights objectives of the United Nations be stressed.

"In a recent memorandum which is now before the General Assembly, I suggested that the World Organization should consecrate itself to a twenty-year programme for peace. The programme contained ten points. One of them was: 'Vigorous and continued development of the work of the United Nations for wider observance and respect for human rights and fundamental freedoms throughout the world.' I went on to say: 'It is becoming evident that the Universal Declaration of Human Rights adopted by the General Assembly in 1948 without a dissenting vote is destined to become one of the great documents of history. The United Nations is now engaged on a programme that will extend over the next twenty years and beyond to secure the extension and wider observance of the political, economic and social rights there set down. Its success needs the active support of all governments.'

"I would appeal to you therefore to set aside this 10 December 1950 as Human Rights Day, to be marked by solemn celebrations in the schools and colleges of your nation and by appropriate public ceremonies, recalling, in the words of the Universal Declaration that 'recognition of the inherent dignity and of the equal and inalienable rights of all members of the human family is the foundation of freedom, justice and peace in the world.'"

I. INTRODUCTION

1. On 10 December 1948, the General Assembly, by resolution 217 A (III), adopted and proclaimed the Universal Declaration of Human Rights. At the same time, the General Assembly, in resolution 217 E (III), "considering that the plan of work of the Commission on Human Rights provides for an International Bill of Human Rights, to include a Declaration, a Covenant and measures of implementation", requested "the Economic and Social Council to ask the Commission on Human Rights to continue to give priority in its work to the preparation of a draft covenant on human rights and draft measures of implementation". By resolution 191 (VIII) of 9 February 1949, the Economic and Social Council transmitted General Assembly resolution 217 E (III) to the Commission on Human Rights for the action contemplated therein.

2. The Commission on Human Rights accordingly continued to prepare and to draft the international covenant on human rights and measures of implementation, and devoted most of its fifth and sixth sessions to that task. At its sixth session, the Commission prepared a draft first covenant and draft measures of implementation and took a number of decisions connected therewith.

3. The following are the main features of the draft first covenant on human rights as prepared by the Commission at its sixth session :

(a) Part I (articles 1 and 2) and article 18 of part II provide for certain general obligations which the States parties to the covenant undertake; for the derogation of certain of the rights set forth in the covenant in the event of the official proclamation of a state of emergency; there are also provisions deferring the relationship between the draft covenant and other instruments of both national and international law.

(b) Part II (articles 3 to 17) defines the following rights together with the limitations thereto :

Article 3. Right to life;

Article 4. Prohibition of torture and cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment and punishment;

Article 5. Prohibition of slavery, slave-trade, servitude and forced labour;

Article 6. Freedom of the person from arbitrary arrest or detention;

Article 7. Prohibition of imprisonment for the non-performance of contractual obligations;

Article 8. Freedom of movement;

Article 9. Prohibition of expulsion of aliens;

Article 10. Fair trial in criminal and civil cases;

Article 11. Prohibition of retroactive penal laws;

Article 12. Recognition as a person before the law;

Article 13. Freedom of thought, conscience and religion;

Article 14. Freedom of opinion, expression and information;

Article 15. Right of assembly;

Article 16. Right of association;

Article 17. Equality before the law and equal protection of the law.

(c) Part III (articles 19 to 41) contains measures of implementation which are based on the following principles : the establishment of a human rights committee composed of seven members elected by the States parties to the covenant; only States parties to the covenant would have access to the committee; in cases of dispute, the committee would ascertain the facts and make available its good offices to the States concerned with a view to a friendly solution of the matter on the basis of respect for human rights as recognized in the covenant; the committee would normally deal with a matter referred to it only if available domestic remedies had been invoked and exhausted in the case; the committee would draw up a report to be sent to the States concerned and communicated to the Secretary-General of the United Nations for publication; if a solution were reached, the committee would confine its report to a brief statement of the facts and the solution reached; if such a solution were not reached, the committee should state in the report its conclusions on the facts.

(d) Part IV of the draft covenant provides in article 42 for signature, ratification and accession, and in article 45 for amendments to the covenant. The Commission decided, however, not to discuss the drafts for articles 43 and 44 on the application of the covenant to federal States and to Non-Self-Governing or Trust Territories, but to transmit to the Economic and Social Council for its consideration the draft texts of those articles proposed at previous sessions, together with comments and suggestions relating thereto.

4. As far as proposals for the inclusion of additional articles in the draft covenant were concerned, that is, both articles referring to economic, social and cultural rights and articles not coming within that category, the Commission decided that the covenant should be the first of a series of covenants and measures of implementation to be adopted in order to cover the whole of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights. It decided to proceed, at its seventh session, in 1951, with the consideration of additional covenants and measures dealing with economic, social, cultural, political and other categories of human rights, and requested the Economic and Social Council to confirm that decision. It also recommended to the Economic and Social Council to take steps to secure the co-operation in this field of other United Nations organs and of specialized agencies.

5. As far as access to the contemplated organ for the implementation of the covenant (the human rights committee) is concerned, the Commission on Human Rights rejected, by 7 votes to 4, with 3 abstentions, the inclusion of a provision under which the committee could consider complaints from selected non-governmental organizations; it also rejected, by 8 votes to 3, with 3 abstentions, the inclusion in the covenant of provisions for petitions from individuals. The Commission further expressed the opinion that it was desirable that the human rights committee should be able to obtain from the International Court of Justice advisory opinions on questions of law arising in the course of its work.

6. At its eleventh session, the Economic and Social Council considered the draft covenant on human rights in its broad aspects¹¹. It gave consideration to the following questions :

- (a) The general adequacy of the first eighteen articles;
- (b) The desirability of including special articles on the application of the covenant to federal States and to Non-Self-Governing and Trust Territories;

(c) The desirability of including articles on economic, social and cultural rights; and

(d) The adequacy of the articles relating to implementation.

The Council concluded that further progress on the covenant could not be made without basic policy decision on the above matters being taken by the General Assembly. It therefore transmitted the draft covenant on human rights, together with relevant documentation and records of the discussion in the Council, to the General Assembly at its fifth session for consideration with a view to reaching policy decisions on the four points (a), (b), (c) and (d). The Council also requested the Commission on Human Rights to consider the draft covenant further, bearing in mind the policy decisions of the General Assembly and the views expressed in the Council at its eleventh session, and to submit a revised draft covenant to the Council at its thirteenth session (in the summer of 1951). At the same time, the Council requested the Secretary-General to transmit the resolution, together with the records of the debate in the Council, to Member States with a view to obtaining their observations after the fifth session of the General Assembly for transmission to the Commission on Human Rights. In resolutions 303 C (XI) and 303 D (XI), the Council approved, with certain modifications, the suggested work programme of the Commission in the fields of economic, social, cultural, political and other categories of human rights.

7. The General Assembly, at its 285th plenary meeting, held on 26 September 1950, referred to the Third Committee item 63 of the agenda : " Draft first international covenant on human rights and measures of implementation. "

8. Pursuant to the decisions taken by the Economic and Social Council at its eleventh session, the General Assembly and the Third Committee respectively had before them the documentation referred to the Assembly by the Economic and Social Council, including the draft first international covenant on human rights contained in the report of the sixth session of the Commission on Human Rights (E/1681) and other documents listed in a note by the Secretary-General (A/1384, paragraph 4). The Third Committee had before it also an additional note by the Secretary-General (A/C.3/534) and a subject analysis of the documentation and records (A/C.3/535).

II. GENERAL OUTLINE OF THE WORK OF THE THIRD COMMITTEE

9. The Third Committee devoted thirty-one meetings—its 278th to 316th and 318th meetings—to the consideration of the draft covenant and related subjects mentioned below. The Committee began its work with an examination of each of the four questions referred to the General Assembly by the Economic and Social Council in its resolution 303 I (XI) and took up proposals concerning them at the end of the general discussion on the last of these points. The Committee considered separately a draft resolution proposed by the Philippines, and Syria (A/C.3/L.71/Rev.1) on the question of the territorial clause and also two additional questions which arose in the course of the proceedings of the Committee, namely, the question of the self-determination of nations and peoples introduced by a joint proposal of Afghanistan and Saudi Arabia (A/C.3/L.88) (see paragraph 46 below) and the question of a Human Rights Day, introduced by the United States of America (A/C.3/L.102) (see paragraph 64 below). As a result of these discussions, the Committee adopted three draft resolutions for submission to the General Assembly (see section X of the present report) :

- (a) A draft resolution on the future work of the Commission on Human Rights (draft resolution I);
- (b) A draft resolution on the territorial application of the covenant (draft resolution II);
- (c) A draft resolution on Human Rights Day (draft resolution III).

10. The three draft resolutions cover those replies which the Third Committee recommends should be given to the four questions placed before the General Assembly by the Economic and Social Council as well as decisions on the two additional questions referred to in paragraph 9.

11. The arrangement of the resolutions is as follows :

A. General decisions on action to be taken by the Economic and Social Council, the Commission on Human Rights and the Secretary-General.

The preamble and sections A, G and H of the draft resolution entitled " Future work of the Commission on Human Rights ".

B. General adequacy of the first eighteen articles of the draft first covenant.

Section B of the draft resolution entitled " Future work of the Commission on Human Rights ".

C. The desirability of including special articles on the application of the covenant :

(i) To federal States :

Section C of the draft resolution entitled " Future work of the Commission on Human Rights ".

(ii) To Non-Self-Governing and Trust Territories.

Draft resolution entitled " Territorial application of the International Covenant on Human Rights ".

D. The question of self-determination of peoples and nations.

Section D of the draft resolution entitled " Future work of the Commission on Human Rights ".

E. The desirability of including articles on economic, social and cultural rights.

Section E of the draft resolution entitled " Future work of the Commission on Human Rights ".

F. The adequacy of the articles relating to implementation.

Section F of the draft resolution entitled " Future work of the Commission on Human Rights ".

The question of a Human Rights Day is treated in a separate draft resolution (draft resolution III).

III. DISCUSSION OF THE FOUR QUESTIONS REFERRED TO THE GENERAL ASSEMBLY BY THE ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL

12. At the 288th to 291st meetings, held on 18 to 20 October 1950, the Third Committee examined the first of the four questions referred to the General Assembly by the Council, namely, the general adequacy of the first eighteen articles and, in particular, the two major questions raised thereby : (a) whether the catalogue of rights contained in the first eighteen articles was adequate (i. e., whether any rights other than those dealt with in those articles should be made the subject of provisions to be included in parts I and II of the covenant); and (b) whether the existing eighteen articles as drafted were adequate to protect the rights to which they related (A/C.3/534, paragraph 4). In the course of the debates, some delegations expressed the view that the list of rights as contained in the draft was generally adequate for inclusion in the first covenant, while others maintained that a number of rights which, in their opinion, were very important should be added to the list. Differing points of view were also expressed as regards the adequacy of the definitions and limitations contained in the draft articles. Several delegations also referred to particular provisions which, in their view, should either be deleted, added to, or changed.

13. The Committee decided to deal separately with the question of the application of the covenant to federal States, on the one hand, and to Non-Self-Governing and Trust Territories, on the other. It discussed the question of the federal State clause at its 292nd to 294th meetings, held on 25 and 26 October 1950. Some delegations pointed out that in certain federal States either all or some matters relating to human rights were not within the jurisdiction of the federal Power, but were matters of concern to state, provincial or cantonal authorities. It was explained that it was the purpose of the federal State clause to enable federal governments to accept obligations concerning those matters which were within their jurisdiction and to recommend favourably to the state, provincial or cantonal authorities those which fell within their jurisdiction. Other delegations, however, declared that a federal State clause would be tantamount to a reservation and an escape clause and that, if a federal State clause were adopted, it would mean that different States parties to the covenant would undertake different obligations.

14. The Committee discussed the question of the territorial application clause at its 294th to 296th meetings, held on 26 and 27 October 1950. Some delegations pointed out, in support of including a territorial application clause, that some Non-Self-Governing Territories under their administration had reached a stage in their development towards self-government which placed them in a position to enact, through their own autonomous organs, the laws covering matters dealt with in the covenant, and that the metropolitan Powers could not therefore automatically adhere to the covenant on behalf of such territories without consulting their legislative organs. The majority of the Committee, however, favoured the principle of the universal application of the covenant (see paragraph 18 below).

15. The Committee then took up the question of the desirability of including in the covenant articles on economic, social and cultural rights. It considered the matter at its 297th to 299th meetings, held on 30 and 31 October 1950. Almost all participants in the debate were in favour of international instruments to be adopted under the auspices of the United Nations defining and guaranteeing economic, social and cultural rights. A number of speakers doubted, however, the feasibility of including articles on those rights in the covenant under discussion. Most speakers also emphasized the fact that the United Nations should be assisted in that task by the specialized agencies. As is stated below, the Committee eventually decided in favour of including articles on economic, social and cultural rights in the covenant (see paragraph 51 of the present report). When examining the question of economic, social and cultural rights and the assistance to be given in connexion therewith by specialized agencies, the Committee heard statements by the representatives of the International Labour Organisation and the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization, at its 298th, 299th and 315th meetings.

16. The discussions on the question of the adequacy of the articles relating to implementation took place at the 300th and 301st meetings, held on 1 November 1950. Some delegations were of the opinion that the articles on implementation were generally adequate, although drafting changes might be necessary. Others feared that an implementation system restricted to State-to-State complaints was not satisfactory, and that provisions for the admission of petitions from selected non-governmental organizations or from individuals should be included. It was suggested by some delegations that provisions on the admissibility and handling of petitions should be included in a separate protocol. Observations were made concerning the composition, emoluments and competence of the proposed human rights committee and the relationship of the implementation machinery with the organs of the United Nations, including the General Assembly, the Trusteeship Council and the International Court of Justice. It was suggested, for example, that the proposed human rights committee should submit annual reports on its work to the General Assembly and that provision should be made for the Committee to have recourse to the International Court of Justice for advisory opinions. Doubts were expressed concerning the wording of the article of the draft covenant which dealt with the exhaustion of domestic remedies. The Committee rejected a proposal for the deletion of the articles on implementation from the draft covenant.

IV. DRAFT RESOLUTIONS SUBMITTED TO THE COMMITTEE

17. At the conclusion of the debates on the above four questions, the Third Committee had before it the following draft resolutions and proposals :

A/C.3/L.71/Rev.1: Philippines and Syria. Draft resolution according to which the provisions of the covenant would extend or be applicable to a signatory metropolitan State as well as to all the Territories, whether Non-Self-Governing, Trust or colonial Territories, which are being administered or governed by such metropolitan State.

A/C.3/L.74 and Add.1: Uruguay. Draft resolution according to which it would be recommended that the Commission on Human Rights, in revising the draft articles on implementation, should take into account the proposal for the creation of a permanent agency of the United Nations, to be known as an Attorney-General or High Commissioner for Human Rights, who would initiate proceedings before a standing committee upon receipt of such complaints from States parties to the covenant, individuals or groups of individuals, and would act as official plaintiff in those proceedings; who would be responsible for the general supervision of the observance of the covenant by signatory States; who would have power to make investigations ex officio; and who would attempt to secure an amicable settlement before referring the case to the implementation body.

A/C.3/L.75/Rev.1: Egypt. Draft resolution in which a recommendation would be made to the Commission on Human Rights to add to the safeguards expressed in article 14, paragraph 3, of the draft international covenant on human rights, that of the maintenance of peace and friendly relations between States and to delete from article 13, paragraph 1, of the draft covenant the implication concerning freedom to change one's religion or belief.

A/C.3/L.76: Brazil, Turkey and the United States of America. Joint draft resolution mapping out the future work of the Commission on Human Rights concerning the covenant. It was eventually decided to accept this draft resolution as the basis for the Third Committee's work (see below paragraph 19).

A/C.3/L.77/Rev.1: Union of Soviet Socialist Republics. Draft resolution on the preamble of which it is stated that the general character of the first eighteen articles did not correspond to the aims envisaged either in regard to the rights enumerated in those articles or in regard to the guaranteeing of the rights to which they referred; in which it is noted that the covenant omitted a number of essential provisions concerning human rights and fundamental freedoms; in which it was considered essential that the covenant should include provisions rendering it obligatory for States to promote the implementation of the rights concerned and to take the necessary steps, including legislation, to guarantee to everyone a real opportunity of enjoying those rights and freedoms. It was also suggested that the General Assembly would recognize that the implementation of the provisions of the covenant on human rights fell entirely within the domestic jurisdiction of States. It was further recommended to the Economic and Social Council to instruct the Commission on Human Rights to provide for the inclusion in the covenant of a number of additional provisions dealing with the right to participate in the government of one's country, with the right to national self-determination, the protection of minorities, the right to freedom of expression, the prohibition of propaganda on behalf of fascist or nazi views, the prohibition of incitement of hatred among the peoples, racial discrimination and the dissemination of slanderous rumours. The proposal also contained a comprehensive list of defined rights coming within the category of economic, social and cultural rights.

A/C.3/L.78: Ethiopia and France. Amendment calling for the insertion, in the draft resolution of Brazil, Turkey and the United States of America (A/C.3/L.76), of provisions to the effect that preparation should be made for the establishment of an implementation body which, by its very composition, would offer all possible guarantees of independence and competence and be responsible, in accordance with precise terms of reference, for examining all charges of violations of the covenant.

A/C.3/L.79: Yugoslavia. Draft resolution on the general adequacy of the first eighteen articles stating that certain basic rights had been omitted from those articles and that in their existing form, they were not adequate to protect the rights to which they referred and proposing that the rights to universal and equal suffrage, the right of everyone to participate in the administration of his country, the right of every member of a minority to use his own language and develop his culture, and the right of asylum should be added to those rights to be defined in the covenant. It would also be stated in the draft resolution that the purposes and principles of the United Nations Charter should be logically implemented and properly protected against the abuse of certain rights, and that fundamental human rights and freedoms should be based on the general principles of the rights acquired by mankind in its efforts to promote human welfare and democratic relations between human beings.

A/C.3/L.80: Yugoslavia. Draft resolution by which the General Assembly would decide to include economic, social and cultural rights in the covenant and to invite the Commission on Human Rights to incorporate in the covenant, in the spirit of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights, a clearly worded provision for economic, social and cultural rights corresponding to the provision guaranteeing civic and political freedoms.

A/C.3/L.81: Chile. Draft resolution by which it would be recommended to the Economic and Social Council to give consideration to the inclusion in the covenant of a new article or paragraph to the effect that access to the contemplated human rights committee should not be limited to a State party to the covenant, but that the right of access to that Committee might also be exercised by non-governmental organizations duly recognized by the United Nations.

A/C.3/L.82: France. Proposal to insert in the joint draft resolution submitted by Brazil, Turkey and the United States of America (A/C.3/L.76) a request to the Economic and Social Council to give consideration, at its twelfth session, to the methods by which the specialized agencies might assist the work of the Commission on Human Rights with regard to economic, social and cultural rights.

A/C.3/L.83/Rev.1: Greece and New Zealand. Amendment to the joint draft resolution of Brazil, Turkey and the United States of America (A/C.3/L.76) according to which the Commission on Human Rights would be requested to proceed with the consideration of additional instruments and measures dealing with economic, social, cultural and other human rights not included in the first international covenant on human rights, only after the completion of the work on the first international covenant.

A/C.3/L.84: Israel. Draft resolution by which it would be recommended to the Commission on Human Rights to insert in the provisions dealing with implementation additional provisions to the effect (a) that the right to bring cases of non-compliance with the provisions of the covenant to the attention of the human rights committee would be granted also to such non-governmental organizations enjoying consultative status with the Economic and Social Council as would be included in a list to be drawn up for that purpose by the Secretary-General in conjunction with the chairman of the human rights committee; (b) that the human rights committee might (by a decision of the majority of the members present) be seized of cases of non-compliance with the provisions of the covenant by parties thereto on its own motion when the facts before the committee appeared in its view to warrant such consideration; (c) that in urgent cases, the human rights committee might deviate from the provisions of articles 39 and 41 and recommend to the State or States concerned the adoption of measures designed to give immediate effect to the provisions of the covenant. It was also contemplated in the draft resolution proposed by Israel that the human rights committee should have the right to suggest to the States concerned such remedies as it deemed advisable.

V. DECISION ON THE DRAFT RESOLUTION CONCERNING THE TERRITORIAL APPLICATION OF THE COVENANT

18. At its 302nd meeting, held on 2 November 1950, the Third Committee decided to take up first the draft resolution submitted by the Philippines and Syria concerning the territorial application of the covenant (A/C.3/L.74/Rev.1). After the sponsors of the draft resolution had accepted a number of minor oral amendments, the resolution, as amended, was adopted by 30 votes to 11, with 8 abstentions. The voting was as follows :

In favour: Afghanistan, Burma, Byelorussian Soviet Socialist Republic, Chile, China, Cuba, Czechoslovakia, Egypt, Ethiopia, Guatemala, Haiti, India, Indonesia, Iran, Iraq, Israel, Lebanon, Liberia, Mexico, Pakistan, Philippines, Poland, Saudi Arabia, Syria, Ukrainian Soviet Socialist Republic, Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, Uruguay, Venezuela, Yemen, Yugoslavia.

The text of the resolution is to be found in section X of the present report (draft resolution II).

VI. ADOPTION OF THE JOINT DRAFT RESOLUTION SUBMITTED BY BRAZIL, TURKEY AND UNITED STATES OF AMERICA (A/C.3/L.76) AS THE BASIC TEXT

19. At its 303rd meeting, held on 3 November 1950, the Third Committee found that among the resolutions presented to it there were two that could be described as general resolutions purporting to cover the whole range of the problems submitted to the General Assembly by the Economic and Social Council for policy decisions, namely, the joint draft resolution submitted by Brazil, Turkey and the United States of America (A/C.3/L.76) and the draft resolution submitted by the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics (A/C.3/L.77/Rev.1). The Committee decided, by 28 votes to 13, with 4 abstentions, to adopt as the basic text for its further work one of these two general draft resolutions. Subsequently, the Committee decided, by 31 votes to 8, with 10 abstentions, to adopt as the basic text the joint draft resolution submitted by Brazil, Turkey and the United States of America (A/C.3/L.76). At the same meeting, delegations which had submitted draft resolutions and proposals to the Committee were requested to redraft them in the form of amendments to the basic text. The delegations which had submitted proposals complied with that request, so that the Committee, when examining the joint draft resolution, had eventually before it the following amendments and sub-amendments :

A/C.3/L.78 : Ethiopia and France. To insert a new sub-paragraph between paragraphs 2 (f) and 2 (g).

A/C.3/L.82/Rev.1 : France. To insert a new paragraph between paragraphs 2 and 3.

An amendment to insert a new sub-paragraph in paragraph 2 of the joint draft resolution (A/C.3/L.76), presented by Egypt on 14 November 1950 (A/C.3/L.108), was ruled out of order by the Chairman, as it had been submitted after the expiry of the time limit agreed on at the 313th meeting. The substance of the amendments enumerated above is described in section VII of the present report.

VII. VOTING ON THE VARIOUS PROPOSALS EMBODIED IN THE DRAFT RESOLUTION ON THE FUTURE WORK OF THE COMMISSION ON HUMAN RIGHTS

20. The following paragraphs describe the voting on the different parts of the joint draft resolution which was accepted by the Committee as the basic text, and on the amendments and sub-amendments submitted thereto. The present report does not show the chronological order in which the individual parts of what is now the draft resolution on the future work of the Commission on Human Rights adopted by the Committee were taken up, but is arranged according to the substance of the decisions taken as reflected in that draft resolution.

21. At the 309th meeting of the Committee, on 9 November 1950, the representatives of Brazil, Turkey and the United States of America withdrew paragraph 2 (d) of their draft resolution (A/C.3/L.76) as it would conflict with the Philippine and Syrian resolution (A/C.3/L.71/Rev.1) adopted by the Committee at its 302nd meeting, on 2 November (A/C.3/541) (see paragraph 18 above).

Preamble to the draft resolution

22. The Committee, having agreed at its 304th meeting, held on 6 November 1950, to consider the preamble of the joint draft resolution (A/C.3/L.76) and the amendments to it after action had been taken on the operative part, decided, at its 315th meeting, on 16 November 1950, to vote on the three paragraphs of the preamble to the joint draft resolution and the amendments submitted thereto by the Soviet Union (A/C.3/L.96, point 1).

23. The first paragraph of the preamble of the joint draft resolution was adopted by 37 votes to none, with 2 abstentions. It read as follows :

“ Appreciating the priority which, in accordance with General Assembly resolution 217 E (III), the Commission on Human Rights during its 1949 and 1950 sessions gave to the preparation of a draft international covenant on human rights and measures for its implementation ”.

24. The second paragraph of the preamble to the joint draft resolution was adopted by 38 votes to none, with 2 abstentions. It read as follows :

25. The Committee then voted on the U.S.S.R. amendment for the insertion of three additional paragraphs in the preamble (A/C.3/L.96, point I). The first paragraph of the amendment, which read :

“ Noting that the articles of the draft covenant referred to omit a number of essential provisions concerning human rights and fundamental freedoms; in particular, the right to participate in the administration of the State, the right of peoples and nations to national self-determination, and the right to employment, social security, leisure and education and other rights in the social, economic and cultural fields ”, was rejected by 20 votes to 8, with 11 abstentions.

26. The second paragraph of the U.S.S.R. amendment was adopted by 16 votes to 15, with 12 abstentions. It read as follows :

“ Considering it essential that the covenant should include provisions rendering it obligatory for States to promote the implementation of human rights and fundamental freedoms proclaimed in the covenant and to take the necessary steps, including legislation, to guarantee to everyone the real opportunity of enjoying those rights and freedoms ”.

27. The third paragraph of the U.S.S.R. amendment, which read : “ Recognizing that the implementation of the provisions of the covenant on human rights falls entirely within the domestic jurisdiction of States ”, was rejected by 32 votes to 5, with 14 abstentions : The vote was as follows :

In favour : Byelorussian Soviet Socialist Republic, Czechoslovakia, Poland, Ukrainian Soviet Socialist Republic, Union of Soviet Socialist Republics.

28. The third paragraph of the preamble of the joint draft resolution was adopted by 49 votes to none, with 2 abstentions. It read as follows :

“ Having considered the draft covenant prepared by the Commission on Human Rights, particularly with reference to certain basic policies ”.

Section A of the draft resolution

29. At the 304th meeting, on 6 November 1950, the Committee considered paragraph 1 and paragraph 2 (a) of the joint draft resolution (A/C.3/L.76). It adopted unanimously (by 39 votes) paragraph 1 of the operative part of the joint draft resolution, which read as follows :

“ Commends the Commission on Human Rights for the important work it has thus far accomplished ”.

30. At the same meeting, the Committee decided, by 18 votes to 16, with 15 abstentions, to vote on paragraph 2 (a) in two parts, the first part consisting of the request “ to continue to give priority in its (the Commission’s) work to the completion of the draft international covenant on human rights and measures for its implementation ”, and the second part consisting of the clause “ in order that the General Assembly may at its sixth session have before it the revised draft of this covenant ”. The first part was adopted unanimously (by 52 votes), and the second part by 41 votes to 3, with 6 abstentions.

31. The introductory phrase to paragraph 2 and paragraph 2 (a) as a whole were adopted in the following form by 48 votes to none, with 2 abstentions :

Section B of the draft resolution (general adequacy of the first eighteen articles)

32. At its 305th meeting, held on 6 November 1950, the Committee decided, by 22 votes to 15, with 10 abstentions, to vote first on the paragraph of the Yugoslav amendment (A/C.3/L.92, point 1) to paragraph 2 of the joint draft resolution beginning with the words “ Decides that the following rights should be added to the list of rights to be defined in the covenant ”, with the understanding that the two introductory paragraphs of the Yugoslav amendment beginning with the word “ Considering ” (subsequently changed by an oral amendment to “ Considers ”) would be voted upon later. The Committee voted separately on the words : “ Decides that the following rights should be added to the list of the rights to be defined in the covenant ” and rejected them by 24 votes to 18, with 5 abstentions. In view of this vote, it was found unnecessary to put the remainder of this part of the Yugoslav amendment (sub-paragraphs (a) (b), (c) and (d)) to the vote.

33. The Committee thereupon proceeded to vote on the U.S.S.R. amendment to paragraph 2 (b) (A/C.3/L.96, section II). The Committee decided, by 20 votes to 18, with 18 abstentions, to take a separate vote on the clause of the U.S.S.R. amendment reading as follows: "In drafting the covenant, to have in mind the inclusion therein of the following provisions". 34. The representatives of Egypt and of the United States of America having withdrawn their amendments (A/C.3/L.85 and A/C.3/L.97/Rev.1, and A/C.3/L.98 respectively) in favour of the joint amendment submitted by Egypt, the United Kingdom and the United States of America (A/C.3/L.99), the Committee proceeded to vote on this joint amendment. The amendment was to add after the words "To take into consideration in its work of revision of the draft covenant, the views expressed during the discussion of the draft covenant at the fifth session of the General Assembly and at the eleventh session of the Economic and Social Council" the following words:

"including those relating to articles 13 and 14 of the draft covenant and, with a view to the addition, in this first covenant or in other instruments, of other rights, those relating to the rights set forth by the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics in document A/C.3/L.96 and Yugoslavia in document A/C.3/L.92."

The Committee first voted on a Mexican amendment to delete the words "first" and "or in other instruments" from the joint amendment (A/C.3/L.99). The Mexican amendment was adopted by 28 votes to 18, with 3 abstentions. The vote was as follows:

"(b) To take into consideration in its work of revision of the draft covenant the views expressed during the discussion of the draft covenant at the fifth session of the General Assembly and at the eleventh session of the Economic and Social Council, including those relating to articles 13 and 14 of the draft covenant and, with a view to the addition in this covenant of other rights, those relating to the rights set forth by the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics in document A/C.3/L.96 and Yugoslavia in document A/C.3/L.92".

36. At the 307th meeting, on 8 November 1950, the Committee adopted, by 25 votes to 16, with 9 abstentions, the following first paragraph of the Yugoslav amendment (A/C.3/L.92, point 1):

"Considers that the list of rights in the first eighteen articles of the draft covenant on human rights does not contain certain of the most elementary rights".

37. Thereupon, the Committee adopted, by 48 votes to none, with 2 abstentions, the following revised text of the second paragraph of the Yugoslav amendment (A/C.3/L.92, point 1):

"Considers that the present wording of some of the first eighteen articles of the draft covenant on human rights should be improved in order to protect more effectively the rights to which they refer".

38. The delegations of the United States of America and Yugoslavia presented a joint amendment (A/C.3/L.101) to replace the fourth paragraph of the Yugoslav amendment (A/C.3/L.92, point 1), beginning with the words "Considers that in the drafting" and ending with the words "among men" by the following text:

"Considers that in the drafting of the covenant on human rights account should be taken of the principles and purposes of the Charter of the United Nations and that these principles and purposes of the Charter of the United Nations should be consistently applied and assiduously protected."

This joint amendment was adopted, at the 309th meeting, on 9 November, by 43 votes to none, with 2 abstentions.

39. At the 307th meeting, on 8 November 1950, the Committee adopted, by 39 votes to none, with 10 abstentions, the following amendment submitted by Lebanon and the United Kingdom (A/C.3/L.94/Rev.1) to add a new sub-paragraph to paragraph 2 of the joint draft resolution:

"To take into consideration in its work of revision of the draft covenant, the view, expressed during the discussion of the draft covenant at the fifth session of the General Assembly and at the eleventh session of the Economic and Social Council, that it is desirable to define the rights set forth in the covenant and the limitations thereto with the greatest possible precision".

52. At its 314th meeting, held on 15 November 1950, the Committee adopted unanimously (by 43 votes) paragraph 2 (f) of the joint draft resolution (A/C.3/L.76) calling upon the Economic and Social Council to request the Commission on Human Rights

He therefore proposed that the following amendment should be added at the end of paragraph 2 (g) of the joint draft resolution :

“ ... and to take into consideration in their studies of questions relative to petitions and implementation the proposals presented by the delegations of Chile, Ethiopia and France, Israel, Uruguay, in documents A/C.3/L.81, A/C.3/L.78, A/C.3/L.91/Rev.1, A/C.3/L.91/Rev.1/Corr.1 and A/C.3/L.93 ”.

58. A vote by parts on the amended paragraph as a whole having been requested, the Committee voted on the first part of the amended text consisting of the joint amendment, without the Mexican amendment, reading as follows :

The whole of paragraph 2 (g), as amended, was put to the vote as a whole, and was adopted in the following form by 24 votes to 11, with 11 abstentions :

“ To proceed with the consideration of provisions to be inserted in the draft covenant or in separate protocols for the receipt and examination of petitions from individuals and organizations with respect to alleged violations of the International Covenant on Human Rights; and to take into consideration in their studies of questions relative to petitions and implementation, the proposals presented by the delegations of Chile, Ethiopia and France, Israel, Uruguay, in documents A/C.3/L.81, A/C.3/L.78, A/C.3/L.91/Rev.1, A/C.3/L.91/Corr.1 and A/C.3/L.93 ”.

60. At its 314th meeting, held on 15 November 1950, the Committee also considered the amendment proposed by the U.S.S.R. (A/C.3/L.96, point VI) to the effect that the articles on implementation (articles 19 to 41) should be deleted from the draft international covenant on human rights since their inclusion would constitute an attempt at intervention in the domestic affairs of States and would encroach on their sovereignty. The officers of the Third Committee presented to the Committee at its 318th meeting, held on 17 November 1950, a proposal for a consolidated text of the draft resolution (A/C.3/L.111). The text of the draft resolution as a whole, as contained in that proposal was adopted at that meeting by 29 votes to 5, with 13 abstentions. Noting the decision of the Economic and Social Council at its eleventh session to transmit the draft Covenant together with the relevant documentation and records of the discussion in the Council to the General Assembly at its fifth session for consideration with a view to reaching policy decisions on the points listed in Economic and Social Council resolution 303 I (XI).

Considering it essential that the Covenant should include provisions rendering it obligatory for States to promote the implementation of the human rights and fundamental freedoms proclaimed in the Covenant and to take the necessary steps, including legislation, to guarantee to everyone the real opportunity of enjoying those rights and freedoms,

B

Considers

(a) That the list of rights in the first eighteen articles of the draft Covenant does not contain certain of the most elementary rights;

(b) That the present wording of some of the first eighteen articles of the draft Covenant should be improved in order to protect more effectively the rights to which they refer;

(c) That in the drafting of the Covenant account should be taken of the purposes and principles of the Charter of the United Nations and that these purposes and principles should be consistently applied and assiduously protected;

Calls upon the Economic and Social Council to request the Commission on Human Rights to take into consideration in its work of revision of the draft Covenant :

(i) The views expressed during the discussion of the draft Covenant at the fifth session of the General Assembly and at the eleventh session of the Economic and Social Council, including those relating to articles 13 and 14 of the draft Covenant and, with a view to the addition in the draft Covenant of other rights, those relating to the rights set forth by the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics in document A/C.3/L.96 and Yugoslavia in document A/C.3/L.92;

(ii) The view, expressed during the discussion of the draft Covenant at the fifth session of the General Assembly and at the eleventh session of the Economic and Social Council, that it is desirable to define the rights set forth in the Covenant and the limitations thereto with the greatest possible precision;

C

Calls upon the Economic and Social Council to request the Commission on Human Rights to study a federal State article and to prepare, for the consideration of the General Assembly at its sixth session, recommendations which will have as their purpose the securing of the maximum extension of the Covenant to the constituent units of federal States, and the meeting of the constitutional problems of federal States;

D

Calls upon the Economic and Social Council to request the Commission on Human Rights to study ways and means which would ensure the right of peoples and nations to self-determination, and to prepare recommendations for consideration by the General Assembly at its sixth session;

E

Whereas the Covenant should be drawn up in the spirit and based on the principles of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights,

Whereas the Universal Declaration regards man as a person, to whom civic and political freedoms as well as economic, social and cultural rights indubitably belong,

Whereas the enjoyment of civic and political freedoms and of economic, social and cultural rights are interconnected and interdependent,

Whereas, when deprived of economic, social and cultural rights, man does not represent the human person whom the Universal Declaration regards as the ideal of the free man;

(a) Decides to include in the Covenant economic, social and cultural rights and an explicit recognition of equality of men and women on related rights, as set forth in the Charter of the United Nations;

(b) Calls upon the Economic and Social Council to request the Commission on Human Rights, in accordance with the spirit of the Universal Declaration to include in the draft Covenant a clear expression of economic, social and cultural rights in a manner which relates them to the civic and political freedoms proclaimed by the draft Covenant;

other organs of the United Nations and of the specialized agencies in the consideration of such rights;

(d) Requests the Economic and Social Council to consider, at its twelfth session, the methods by which the specialized agencies might co-operate with the Commission on Human Rights with regard to economic, social and cultural rights;

F

Calls upon the Economic and Social Council to request the Commission on Human Rights to proceed with the consideration of provisions, to be inserted in the draft Covenant or in separate protocols, for the receipt and examination of petitions from individuals and organizations with respect to alleged violations of the Covenant; and to take into consideration in their studies of questions relating to petitions and implementation the proposals presented by Chile (A/C.3/L.81), Ethiopia and France (A/C.3/L.78), Israel (A/C.3/L.91/Rev.1) and Uruguay (A/C.3/L.93);

G

Calls upon the Economic and Social Council to request the Commission on Human Rights to report to the Economic and Social Council at its thirteenth session concerning the above matters;

H

Requests the Secretary-General to invite Member States to submit, by 15 February 1951, their views concerning the draft Covenant as revised by the Commission on Human Rights at its sixth session, in order that the Commission may have such views before it in its further consideration of the draft Covenant at its seventh session.

Draft resolution prepared by the Secretary-General

[29 September 1950]

I. INTRODUCTORY NOTE

1. The question of appropriate international action to meet the continuing needs of children, and of co-ordination of international resources to this end, has engaged the attention of the United Nations and of the specialized agencies for a considerable time.

2. Resolutions on the subject were adopted by the Social Commission in May 1949,¹ by the Executive Board of the United Nations International Children's Emergency Fund in July 1949,² and by the Executive Board of the World Health Organization in the same month.³ A Working Party of the Administrative Committee on Co-ordination, set up as a result of these resolutions, laid a report (E/CN.5/177 and E/CN.5/177/Add.1) before the Social Commission (fifth session), which requested a further report from the Secretary-General. The report by the Secretary General (E/CN.5/201) was considered by the Social Commission at its sixth session in May 1950. The report and the resolution then adopted by the Social Commission (E/1678)⁴ were placed before Economic and Social Council at its eleventh session, together with resolutions on the subject adopted by the Food and Agriculture Organization (E/1745), the World Health Organization (E/1730) and the International Labour Organisation (E/1731), relevant sections of a report by the Administrative Committee on Co-ordination (E/1682),⁵ a report of the Executive Board of UNICEF (E/1738) and two reports from the Secretary-General (E/1741,⁵ part A, and E/1725), the latter of which included statements by the specialized agencies having permanent responsibilities in the matter and by the Department of Social Affairs of the Secretariat of the United Nations on their programmes relating to activities for children.

3. Resolution 310 (XI), concerning long-range activities for children, was adopted by the Economic and Social Council on 11 August 1950.

II. DRAFT RESOLUTION SUBMITTED BY THE SECRETARY-GENERAL

4. In the penultimate paragraph of Council resolution 310 (XI) it is recommended that the General Assembly should "amend resolution 57 (I) to incorporate the proposals contained" in the Council resolution. Accordingly, the Secretary-General, as requested in the resolution, has prepared a draft which combines in a single resolution the provisions of Council resolution 310 (XI) and those provisions of General Assembly resolution 57 (I) which, in his opinion, would remain in effect as not inconsistent with the Council resolution. The Secretary-General has adhered as closely as possible to the texts of these resolutions except for consequential drafting changes and other changes which are necessary or useful for legal reasons. For purposes of convenience the proposed modifications to the Council's resolution have been italicized, and marginal references have been made to indicate the provisions taken from General Assembly resolution 57 (I). The reasons for the modifications (other than the purely formal changes) suggested by the Secretary-General are indicated in the footnotes.

5. The following draft resolution is, therefore, submitted for the consideration of the General Assembly:

"The General Assembly,

"Having considered, in the light of General Assembly resolutions 57 (I) and 318 (IV), resolution 310 (XI) of the Economic and Social Council,

"Considering that the International Children's Emergency Fund has been one of the most promising achievements of the United Nations, and that it has extended the influence of the Organization by contributing effectively to the betterment of the situation of children in the world,

"Considering that the principal needs of children throughout the world which offer scope for effective international action consist of:

"(a) Those of long-term character which may best be met by the provision of appropriate assistance to governments designed to aid them in creating or expanding their permanent programmes for the benefit of children,⁶ and

"(b) Those arising from serious emergencies which may best be alleviated by the provision of relief supplies,

"Considering that the most effective long-term method of ensuring the welfare of children is by promoting the social welfare services of the community within the framework of the economic development of the resources of the community and that the United Nations and the specialized agencies are already engaged in a variety of activities to this end,

"Considering that the International Children's Emergency Fund already tends towards the type of activity mentioned in sub-paragraph (a) above, and that future activities should, progressively and with due regard to all circumstances and available resources, shift emphasis from immediate to long-term objectives, “ Considering it desirable to amend its resolution 57 (I) to incorporate the proposals contained in Economic and Social Council resolution 310 (XI),

“ A. Resolves that, with a view to ensuring the uninterrupted continuation and development of the activities of the International Children’s Emergency Fund in accordance with Article 55 of the Charter, there shall be continued a separate and distinct United Nations fund for children, which shall be known as the United Nations International Children’s Endowment Fund (UNICEF) and which shall be utilized and administered exclusively ⁷ for the purpose of :

(a) Providing supplies, training services and advisory assistance in support of the recipient countries’ permanent programmes for children,

“ (b) Meeting relief needs in cases of serious emergencies; ⁸

“ B. Concludes that :

“ (1) There shall be established for these purposes a United Nations Children’s Board composed of the governments represented on the Social Commission and of other governments, not necessarily Members of the United Nations, designated by the Economic and Social Council;

“ (2) In accordance with such principles as may be laid down by the Economic and Social Council and its Social Commission, the United Nations Children’s Board, with the advice of a programme committee of members of the Board, which shall meet as often as necessary, shall formulate the policies, including the determination of programmes, and allocations of funds, under which the Fund shall be administered;

“ (3) The United Nations Children’s Board shall take all necessary steps to assure the close collaboration of the Fund with the specialized agencies, pursuant to the agreements between the United Nations and the specialized agencies, and as appropriate with non-governmental organizations having a special interest in child and family welfare, and to obtain from them the advice and technical assistance which it may require for the implementation of its programmes; the specialized agency or agencies concerned and the Secretary-

General ⁹ should each in its respective sphere of responsibility, in collaboration with the Fund, develop and give technical approval to all programmes of assistance to governments to be presented to the programme committee of the Board and should provide technical personnel required in the implementation of such programmes; the Administration of the Fund shall be assisted by an advisory committee composed of representatives of the Secretary-General ⁹ and the specialized agencies concerned, in order to co-ordinate the procedures of co-operation with these organizations and to exchange information with a view to promoting the most effective action on behalf of children;

“ (4) The Board may designate from among its members such committees as it deems advisable in the interest of effective administration. The Board shall elect its own Chairman and its Vice-Chairman, and shall meet whenever convened by the Chairman, or upon the request of any three of its members. The first meeting of the Board shall be convened by the Secretary-General of the United Nations, at the earliest date feasible after the effective date of this resolution. Each member of the Board shall have one vote. A majority of the Board shall constitute a quorum and it shall vote by a majority of the members present and voting. Subject to the foregoing, the Board may establish its own rules of procedure. [General Assembly resolution 57 (I), para. 3 (d)]

“ (5) The Board shall make periodic reports of its operations at such times and in such form as the Economic and Social Council shall provide. [General Assembly resolution 57 (I), para. 7]

“ (6) During its review of the technical assistance programme to under-developed countries the Economic and Social Council should examine the activities of the Fund with a view to ensuring proper co-ordination;

“ (7) The Executive Director of the Fund shall be appointed by the Secretary-General, after consultation with the United Nations Children’s Board, and shall be responsible to him; the staff and facilities required for the administration of the Fund shall be provided by the Secretary-General;

“ (8) The United Nations shall make no charge to the Fund on account of staff and facilities, so long as these can be provided from the established services of the Secretariat and within the limits of the United Nations budget. If additional funds are necessary, money for such purposes shall be provided by the Fund. [General Assembly resolution 57 (I), para. 4 (b)]

“ To the maximum extent feasible, the utilization of the staff and technical assistance of specialized agencies, in particular the World Health Organization, shall be requested, with a view to reducing to a minimum the separate personnel requirements of the Fund. [General Assembly resolution 57 (I), para. 4 (c)]

⁷ The words “ separate and distinct”, and “ which shall be utilized and administered exclusively” have been added to the corresponding paragraph in Economic and Social Council resolution 310 (XI) in order to make it entirely clear that the fund is to be used exclusively for the humanitarian purposes stated and that it is separate and distinct from the other assets of the United Nations. In addition to clarifying the nature of the fund, this point has significance with respect to tax exemptions applicable to voluntary contributions made by individuals to the Fund.

⁸ The purposes stated in this paragraph are limited to those included in the Council resolution. This is based on the assumption that the Council intended these purposes to supersede the purposes stated in paragraph 1 of resolution 57 (I). However, the Council discussion was not entirely clear on this point and there may be some question as to whether the provision regarding priorities for children of countries victims of aggression was intended to be superseded by the new paragraph. The Secretary-General, therefore, draws the attention of the General Assembly to this matter.

“ (9) The central administrative expenses of the Fund shall be covered by appropriations in the regular budget of the United Nations;

“ (10) The operational activities of the Fund, including the costs of its field missions, shall be financed from the resources of the Fund,¹⁰ the Secretary-General shall not pay from the funds received to finance the United Nations budget any claims arising from the operational activities of the Fund, but the Board is authorized to pay from the Fund claims arising from its operation; [General Assembly resolution 57 (I), para. 5]

“ (11) The Secretary-General shall submit to the General Assembly an annual audit of the accounts of the Fund; [General Assembly resolution 57 (I), para. 6]

“ (12) The governments of recipient countries shall be expected to contribute to the largest possible extent to the local expenses of projects assisted by the Fund, as has been done during the operation of the International Children's Emergency Fund, due regard being given to the financial ability of under-developed countries;

“ (13) The United Nations International Children's Endowment Fund shall consist of the assets, *rights, title and interest*¹¹ of the International Children's Emergency Fund on the effective date of this resolution and of further voluntary contributions made available by governments, voluntary agencies, individual or other sources; as from the effective date of this resolution the United Nations International Children's Endowment Fund shall be bound by the legal obligations of the International Children's Emergency Fund, and the agreements entered into by the International Children's Emergency Fund shall be applicable to the United Nations International Children's Endowment Fund;¹²

“ (14) As from the effective date of this resolution the resolutions adopted by the General Assembly, the Economic and Social Council and other organs of the United Nations which apply to the International Children's Emergency Fund shall be applicable to the United Nations International Children's Endowment Fund in so far as

¹⁰ The words “ should be financed from a special account to which shall be credited all voluntary contributions from public or private sources ” which were contained in paragraph (7) of the Economic and Social Council resolution were changed to “ shall be financed solely from the resources of the Fund ”. The proposed formulation is intended to include all the resources of the Fund, such as claims and other non-monetary assets which, although they may not be deposited in a special account, could be used to finance the operational activities of the Fund.

¹¹ The words “ rights, title and interest ” were inserted after “ assets ” in order to ensure that the Endowment Fund would be entitled to all the resources of the Emergency Fund, including for example, non-liquidated claims and beneficial interests. This formulation would also cover the UNRRA claims assigned to the United Nations for the account of the Emergency Fund.

Since the Endowment Fund is a continuation of the Emergency Fund and both are part of the United Nations, it would not appear to be necessary to effect a formal transfer or assignment of assets. This resolution of the General Assembly, if adopted, would be sufficient to invest the Endowment Fund with legal title to all the resources of the Emergency Fund.

¹² The proposed clause is a corollary to the principle that the Endowment Fund is a continuation of the Emergency Fund. The assumption of legal obligations by the Endowment Fund would make it unnecessary to have a formal liquidation and termination of the Emergency Fund.

they are consistent with the provisions of this resolution; ¹³

“ (15) The Fund shall be authorized to receive funds, contributions or other assistance from governments, voluntary agencies, individual or other sources; to make expenditures and to finance or arrange for the provision of supplies, material, services and technical assistance for the furtherance of its purposes; to facilitate and co-ordinate activities relating thereto; and, generally, to acquire, hold or transfer property, and to take any other legal action necessary or useful in the performance of its objects and purposes; [Substantially taken from General Assembly resolution 57 (I), para. 2 (a)]

“ (16) The Fund, in agreement with the governments concerned, shall take such measures as are deemed appropriate to ensure the proper utilization and distribution of supplies or other assistance which it provides. Supplies or other assistance shall be made available to governments upon the approval by the Fund of the plans of operation drawn up by the governments concerned. Provision shall be made for :

“ (i) The submission to the Fund of such reports on the use of supplies and other assistance as the Fund may from time to time require;

“ (ii) Equitable and efficient dispensation or distribution of all supplies or other assistance, on the basis of need, without discrimination because of race, creed, nationality status or political belief; [General Assembly resolution 57 (I), para. 2 (b)]

“ (17) The Fund shall not engage in activity in any country except in consultation with, and with the consent of, the government concerned; [General Assembly resolution 57 (I), para. 2 (c)]

“ (18) The Fund shall appeal to all voluntary relief agencies to continue and intensify their activities and shall take the necessary measures in order to co-operate with these agencies; [General Assembly resolution 57 (I), para. 2 (d)]

“ (19) In order to assure the continuity of a long range programme for children, the General Assembly will review at its regular sessions the financial situation of the Fund and consider the advisability of increasing the amount of money available from voluntary contributions;

“ (20) This resolution shall become effective 1 January 1951.¹⁴

¹³ In addition to resolution 57 (I), the resolutions applicable to the Emergency Fund include among others, General Assembly resolutions : 138 (II), 157 (II), 212 (III), 214 (III), 215 (III), 229 (III), 241 (III), 302 (IV), 318 (IV), 340 (IV); Economic and Social Council resolutions 44 (IV), 79 (V), 126 (VI), 161 (VII), 206 (VIII), 207 (VIII), 254 (IX), 257 (IX), 280 (X), 281 (X), 311 (XI), 323 (XI).

¹⁴ This paragraph retains the provision of the Economic and Social Council resolution that the effective date of the new resolution is to be 1 January 1951. However, a problem is raised by this date since the Board is to be composed of some governments designated by the Economic and Social Council, and the Council might not have an opportunity to designate these additional members by 1 January. The General Assembly may therefore wish to fix the effective date as the date of the first meeting of the Board.

" Being aware that the effective operation of the Fund is dependent upon the financial resources which are put at its disposal;

" Therefore,

" The General Assembly expresses the earnest hope that governments, voluntary agencies and private individuals will give the Fund their generous support."
[Substantially taken from General Assembly resolution 57 (I), part II]

Report of Sub-Committee 6

[12 October 1950]

The Third Committee, at its 281st meeting, held on 9 October 1950, resolved to set up a sub-committee, whose terms of reference would be :

“ To clarify to the greatest possible extent the different points of view expressed in the amendments submitted, to reduce these amendments to the smallest number necessary to express the differences still outstanding, and to report to the Committee as quickly as possible. ”

It decided also that the Sub-Committee should be composed of representatives of Burma, France, India, Indonesia, Iraq, Pakistan, Poland, the United Kingdom, the United States of America, Venezuela and Yugoslavia, these being delegations which had put forward amendments to the draft resolution prepared by the Secretary-General.

The Sub-Committee held two meetings, on 11 and 12 October respectively, at which the Chairman of the Third Committee presided.

I

The different points of view expressed in the amendments maintained were clarified as follows :

Title

The purpose of the amendment submitted by Burma, India, Indonesia, Iraq and Pakistan (A/C.3/L.49) was to restore reference to “ continuing needs of children ”.

Second paragraph of the preamble

The amendment submitted by Burma, India, Indonesia, Iraq and Pakistan (A/C.3/L.49) was said to be a statement of historical fact based on the wording of General Assembly resolution 318 (IV) of 2 December 1949, giving a different emphasis from that proposed in the Secretary-General's draft.

Third paragraph of the preamble

The amendment submitted by Burma, India, Indonesia, Iraq and Pakistan (A/C.3/L.49) added a third category of international action, reintroduced a reference to “ needs of a continuing character ”, and distinguished between continuing and long-term needs.

The amendment submitted by the United Kingdom (A/C.3/L.56) was to prevent neglect of emergency relief; in that connexion, mention was made of the narrowness of the majority with which the Executive Board of UNICEF had approved emergency aid to Palestine refugees in 1948.

Fourth paragraph of the preamble

The amendment submitted by Burma, India, Indonesia, Iraq and Pakistan (A/C.3/L.49) was aimed at greater concision by removal of what could be regarded as self-evident generalities.

Fifth paragraph of the preamble

The amendment submitted by Burma, India, Indonesia, Iraq and Pakistan (A/C.3/L.49) was a consequence of the amendment to the third paragraph.

The amendment submitted by the United Kingdom (A/C.3/L.56) was a consequence of the reference to long-term activities.

New paragraph

The amendment submitted by Uruguay (A/C.3/L.57) constituted a recommendation to the governments of Member States.

Operative part, section A

The amendment submitted by the United Kingdom (A/C.3/L.56) was to ensure continuation of the Emergency Fund, so as, inter alia, to prevent loss of allocations already made, but not yet programmed, e.g. for Asian countries.

The amendments submitted by Burma, India, Indonesia, Iraq and Pakistan (A/C.3/L.49) were intended to avoid the possible limiting effects of two qualifying adjectives.

The first part of the United States amendment to section A (A/C.3/L.48) was intended to ensure the integration of the staff of UNICEF in the Secretariat of the United Nations. The second amendment submitted by the United States was consequent on the shift of emphasis from immediate to long-term objectives.

In the course of the discussion, the representative of Venezuela expressed a desire to make it clear that the terms “ separate and distinct ” meant “ separate and distinct from the general funds of the United Nations ”.

Operative part, section BParagraph (1)

The amendment submitted by France (A/C.3/L.52) retained the Secretary-General's draft, but fixed the number of members of the Board.

The amendment submitted by the United Kingdom (A/C.3/L.56, point 4) modified the Secretary-General's draft in consequence of the amendment to section A of the operative part.

The amendments submitted by the Dominican Republic (A/C.3/L.53) and by Venezuela (A/C.3/L.50) provided in detail for a different composition of the Children's Board from that proposed in the Secretary-General's draft and fixed the number of members.

Paragraph (2)

The amendment submitted by the United Kingdom (A/C.3/L.56, point 5) was aimed at eliminating the impractical distinction between "principles" and "policies", and at preventing the proliferation of policy-making bodies.

Paragraph (3)

The amendment submitted by the United Kingdom (A/C.3/L.56, point 6) was intended to clarify relations with specialized agencies and to ensure technical consideration of programmes before they would be decided upon.

The amendment submitted by Yugoslavia (A/C.3/L.51) was designed to remove the need for approval of programmes by specialized agencies, and to remove the obligation to establish an advisory committee.

The amendment submitted by the United States (A/C.3/L.48, footnote) to this and a number of other paragraphs would make clear the distinction between the administrative integration of UNICEF in the United Nations and the separate and distinct nature of the Fund with regard to finances.

The intention of the Secretary-General's draft was to guarantee to specialized agencies that their technical competence would be utilized, and was based on agreements with them.

Paragraph (8)

The amendment submitted by the United States (A/C.3/L.48) called for the deletion of this paragraph since it would be redundant if the United States amendments to section A and to section B, paragraph (3) were adopted.

Paragraph (9)

The amendment submitted by Poland (A/C.3/L.55) had, as its purpose, to meet central administrative costs out of the general United Nations budget, provided that the total budget of the United Nations were not thereby increased.

The amendment submitted by the United States (A/C.3/L.48) included in the general United Nations budget the administrative costs of field missions of the Fund as well as of those of its headquarters.

The amendment submitted by Yugoslavia (A/C.3/L.51) provided for the administrative as well as the operating expenses of UNICEF to be met out of the budget of UNICEF.

Paragraph (10)

The amendment submitted by the United States (A/C.3/L.48) was consequent on the United States amendment to paragraph (9).

Paragraph (18)

The amendment submitted by the United States (A/C.3/L.48) was a proposal to delete this paragraph as being redundant if provision for co-operation with non-governmental organizations were made in paragraph (3).

Paragraph (19)

The amendment submitted by Burma, India, Indonesia, Iraq and Pakistan (A/C.3/L.49) would avoid raising a contentious point in a procedural paragraph, and would permit General Assembly review instead of requiring it.

The amendment submitted by the United States (A/C.3/L.48) came closer to the wording of Economic and Social Council resolution 310 (XI) of 11 August 1950.

Penultimate paragraph

The amendment submitted by the United Kingdom (A/C.3/L.56, point 7) was consequent on priority to emergency needs.

Proposed additional paragraph

The amendment submitted by the United Kingdom (A/C.3/L.56, point 8) was consequent on a distinction being made between UNICEF, as an organ concerned primarily with emergency needs, and the various technical assistance programmes, as means of aiding governments in their permanent programmes.

II

Amendments were reduced in number as follows:

Burma, India, Indonesia, Iraq and Pakistan (A/C.3/L.49) dropped their amendment to the concluding clause of the draft resolution submitted by the Secretary-General.

The United Kingdom (A/C.3/L.56, point 1) applied its amendment to the third paragraph of the preamble both to the joint amendment proposed by Burma and other delegations (A/C.3/L.49) and to the draft submitted by the Secretary-General, and indicated its willingness to accept the joint amendment if it were amended in the manner proposed by the United Kingdom. It also agreed (A/C.3/L.56, point 6) to modify section B, paragraph (3), last sentence, by inserting the words "inter-governmental and" before "non-governmental" and also the words "the Administration of" before "the Fund".

The United States of America (A/C.3/L.48) dropped its amendment to section A, sub-paragraph (b), and modified its amendment to sub-paragraph (a) so that the last words would read: "accompanied, as appropriate, by needed supplies".

Yugoslavia (A/C.3/L.51) dropped its amendments to the second, third, fourth and fifth paragraphs of the preamble, to section A, and to section B, paragraphs (19) and (20).

III

Differences still outstanding are embodied in the following amendments:

United States of America (A/C.3/L.48): amendments to section A; section B, paragraphs (8), (9), (10), (18) and (19).

Burma, India, Indonesia, Iraq and Pakistan (A/C.3/L.49) : amendments to the title and to the second, third, fourth and fifth paragraphs of the preamble, to section A, and to section B, paragraph (19).

Venezuela (A/C.3/L.50) : amendment to section B, paragraph (1).

Yugoslavia (A/C.3/L.51) : amendments to section B, paragraphs (3) and (9).

France (A/C.3/L.52) : amendment to section B, paragraph (1).

Dominican Republic (A/C.3/L.53) : amendment to section B, paragraph (1).

Poland (A/C.3/L.55) : amendment to section B, paragraph (9).

United Kingdom (A/C.3/L.56) : amendments to the third paragraph of the preamble (or to the joint amendment to that paragraph); fifth paragraph of the preamble; section A; section B; paragraphs (1), (2) and (3); the second last paragraph and the proposed additional paragraph.

Uruguay (A/C.3/L.57) : new paragraph to be inserted after the last paragraph of the preamble.

In addition to these amendments, Australia has submitted a draft resolution (A/C.3/L.54).

Report of the Third Committee

[23 October 1950]

1. The General Assembly, acting under Article 55 of the Charter, established the United Nations International Children's Emergency Fund by resolution 57 (I) of 11 December 1946. By resolution 318 (IV) of 2 December 1949, the Assembly noted with concern the existence of children's emergency needs arising out of war and other calamities as well as the great needs which the Fund's experience had demonstrated as existing in under-developed countries; it also noted with approval the decisions of the Executive Board of the Fund to devote henceforth a greater share of the Fund's resources to the development of programmes outside Europe.

2. The Economic and Social Council, at its eleventh session, considered reports submitted by its Social Commission (E/1678) and by the Executive Board of UNICEF (E/1738) and adopted, by 8 votes to none, with 5 abstentions, resolution 310 (XI), by which it resolved that there should be continued a United Nations fund for children to be known as the United Nations International Children's Endowment Fund (UNICEF); enumerated the purposes of such a fund; recommended to the General Assembly at its fifth session that it amend resolution 57 (I) to incorporate the proposals contained in Council resolution 310 (XI); and requested the Secretary-General to prepare a draft resolution embodying the Council's proposals, for presentation to the General Assembly. Accordingly, the Secretary-General submitted to the General Assembly at its fifth session a draft resolution (A/1411) consolidating the provisions of Council resolution 310 (XI) with those of General Assembly resolution 57 (I). The General Assembly, at its 285th plenary meeting, on 26 September 1950, decided to refer this item to the Third Committee.

3. The Third Committee devoted ten meetings—its 278th to 287th meeting inclusive—to this item. Forty-one delegations participated in the debate. Amendments to the draft resolution prepared by the Secretary-General were presented by the United States of America (A/C.3/L.48), Burma, India, Indonesia, Iraq and Pakistan (A/C.3/L.49), Venezuela (A/C.3/L.50), Yugoslavia (A/C.3/L.51), France (A/C.3/L.52), the Dominican Republic (A/C.3/L.53), Poland (A/C.3/L.55), the United Kingdom (A/C.3/L.56) and Uruguay (A/C.3/L.57).

4. The Committee, at its 281st meeting, referred the amendments to a Sub-Committee, with instructions to clarify the different points of view expressed therein, and to reduce the amendments to the smallest number necessary to express the differences still outstanding. Sub-Committee 6, which met twice, clarified the different points of view expressed in the amendments, made a small reduction in their number, and noted that irreconcilable differences remained (A/C.3/L.58).

5. The Third Committee, on receiving this report, decided to consider a draft resolution presented by Australia (A/C.3/L.54) before considering the Secretary-General's draft and the amendments thereto. Amendments to the draft resolution submitted by Australia were submitted by Uruguay (A/C.3/L.57/Rev.2), France (A/C.3/L.59), Ecuador (A/C.3/L.60), India (A/C.3/L.61 and A/C.3/L.70), Peru (A/C.3/L.62), Lebanon (A/C.3/L.63), Yugoslavia (A/C.3/L.64), the United States of America (A/C.3/L.65) and the United Kingdom (A/C.3/L.66). Of these amendments, those adopted by the Committee renewed the General Assembly's appeal for the continuance of contributions (A/C.3/L.63); recommended Member States to develop their national child welfare services (A/C.3/L.62); requested the Economic and Social Council to give greater emphasis to the support of national children's programmes within the framework of existing United Nations activities for promoting the economic and social development of under-developed areas, and to explore the means of providing and financing supplies incidental to such programmes, especially those needed for demonstration purposes (A/C.3/L.66); decided that the Executive Board should be reconstituted to consist of governments represented on the Social Commission and other governments, not necessarily Members of the United Nations, to be designated by the Economic and Social Council, the number of these others being fixed at eight (A/C.3/L.60); and recommended that, in 1953, the General Assembly should consider the future of the Fund with the object of continuing it on a permanent basis (A/C.3/L.64).

6. The representative of Australia stated (287th meeting) his understanding that consideration of the future of the Fund by the General Assembly would be "upon the basis of a special report from the Economic and Social Council", as provided in paragraph 9 of General Assembly resolution 57 (I). It was also understood that the General Assembly might be able to request the Economic and Social Council, during its current eleventh session, to designate eight members of the Executive Board. The delegation of Venezuela, moreover, pointed out (286th meeting) that the Council, in designating major contributing countries, could construe this expression in terms either of per caput contributions or of largest absolute contributions. Many delegations which voted in favour of the draft resolution as amended made observations concerning their original point of view on the matter. Some representatives made reservations (287th meeting) concerning the power of the General Assembly to consider the future of the Fund at any time, the liberty of their governments to decide at a later date the question of considering the Fund on a permanent basis, and the composition of the Executive Board.

7. The Australian draft resolution, as amended, was approved by the Committee by 43 votes to 8, with 1 abstention.

8. After the adoption of the draft resolution, the Third Committee decided to recommend to the General Assembly that, should it adopt the resolution, the Economic and Social Council, which was still in session, should be immediately notified of the Assembly's decision so that the Council might, during its current session, designate the eight members of the Executive Board which were not members of the Social Commission.

9. The Third Committee therefore recommends to the General Assembly the adoption of the following draft resolution :

CONTINUING NEEDS OF CHILDREN : UNITED NATIONS
INTERNATIONAL CHILDREN'S EMERGENCY FUND

The General Assembly,

Having considered resolution 310 (XI) of the Economic and Social Council in the light of resolutions 57 (I) and 318 (IV) of the General Assembly,

Recognizing the necessity for continued action to relieve the sufferings of children, particularly in under-developed countries and countries that have been subjected to the devastation of war and to other calamities,

1. Reaffirms its approval of the policy of the Executive Board of the United Nations International Children's Emergency Fund to devote a greater share of the Fund's resources to the development of programmes outside Europe;

2. Expresses again its gratitude to governments and individuals for their generous contributions enabling the Fund to carry out its tasks;

3. Renews its appeal to governments and private persons to continue their contributions to the Fund, and to the various official and private international organizations interested in child welfare to collaborate with the Fund in every possible way;

4. Recommends to Member States that they develop and improve their national child welfare services, providing, if possible, the necessary funds for that important purpose under their respective budgets;

5. Requests the Economic and Social Council, in consultation with the appropriate specialized agencies :

(a) To give greater emphasis to support of national programmes designed to aid children within the framework of existing United Nations activities for promoting the economic and social development of under-developed areas;

(b) To explore the means of procuring and financing supplies incidental to such programmes, especially those needed for demonstration purposes;

6. Decides :

(a) That the Executive Board of the Fund shall be reconstituted as from 1 January 1951 to consist of the governments of the States represented on the Social Commission and the governments of eight other States, not necessarily Members of the United Nations, to be designated by the Economic and Social Council with due regard to geographical distribution and to the representation of the major contributing and recipient countries;

(b) That the Executive Board shall take all necessary steps to ensure close collaboration between the Administration of the Fund and the specialized agencies, pursuant to the agreements between the United Nations and the specialized agencies;

(c) That the Administration of the Fund shall, as appropriate, obtain from inter-governmental and non-governmental organizations having a special interest in child and family welfare the advice and technical assistance which it may require for the implementation of its programmes;

(d) That the General Assembly will again consider the future of the Fund at the expiration of three years, with the object of continuing the Fund on a permanent basis.

Note by the Secretary-General

[28 September 1950]

1. In accordance with resolutions 266 (III) and 289 (IV) of the General Assembly, the Economic and Social Council, at its eleventh session, considered the problems of economic development and social progress of the former Italian colonies. The Council had before it a note on this subject by the Secretary-General dated 22 March 1950¹ and a further note dated 12 August 1950² transmitting a communication from the United Nations Commissioner in Libya.

2. In his note of 22 March 1950 the Secretary-General, in dealing with the eligibility of Libya for technical assistance, pointed out, inter alia, that the United Kingdom and France, as Members of the United Nations, were entitled to make requests to the United Nations for technical assistance under the relevant resolutions of the Economic and Social Council and the General Assembly in respect of territories administered by them.

3. In his communication, included in the Secretary-General's note of 12 August 1950, the United Nations Commissioner in Libya asked the Secretary-General to give urgent consideration to Libyan needs for technical assistance, and emphasized that assistance should be envisaged both for the transitional period before achievement of independence and for the long-range needs of Libya after the achievement of independence. In particular, he proposed that special provision should be made to avoid the danger that the Secretary-General might have to cease rendering technical assistance to Libya during a period between the date on which Libya became independent and the date on which it became a Member of the United Nations or of one of the specialized agencies participating in the Expanded Programme of Technical Assistance outlined in Economic and Social Council resolution 222 A (IX) and approved by the General Assembly under its resolution 304 (IV) of 16 November 1949.

4. The Council considered the matter during its eleventh session at its 413th meeting on 15 August 1950³ and at the conclusion of the debate adopted resolution 322 B (XI). In the final paragraph of this resolution the Council requested “the Secretary-General to present to the fifth regular session of the General Assembly specific proposals as to the procedure which would enable Libya to continue to receive technical assistance after its independence has been achieved and before it has become a Member of the United Nations or of a specialized agency participating in the expanded programme”.

5. The Secretary-General has considered the most appropriate procedure that might be followed, and believes that the objective sought by the Economic and Social Council could best be achieved by a decision of the General Assembly requesting the Council and the specialized agencies to consider Libya as eligible for technical assistance without regard to its membership in any of the United Nations organizations. Accordingly, the Secretary-General presents for the consider-

Report of the Second Committee

Rapporteur : Mr. J. VILFAN (Yugoslavia).

[Original text : English]
[16 November 1950]

1. The Second Committee herewith submits for the General Assembly's consideration a draft resolution which was unanimously adopted by the Committee.

2. In accordance with General Assembly resolutions 266 (III) and 289 (IV) the Economic and Social Council, at its eleventh session, considered the problems of economic development and social progress of the former Italian colonies including the question of Libya's needs for technical assistance. In its resolution 322 B (XI), the Council requested the Secretary-General to present to the fifth session of the General Assembly specific proposals as to the procedure which would enable Libya to continue to receive technical assistance after achievement of independence and before becoming a Member of the United Nations or of a specialized agency participating in the programme.

3. The Secretary-General incorporated his proposals in a draft resolution presented for the consideration of the General Assembly and contained in document A/1404.

4. The General Assembly, at its 285th plenary meeting held on 26 September 1950, placed on the agenda of its fifth session the item “ Technical assistance for Libya after achievement of independence ” and allocated it to the Second Committee for consideration and report.

5. The Second Committee devoted three meetings to the consideration of this item; ⁵ seventeen delegations and the United Nations Commissioner for Libya participated in the general debate. At its 135th meeting, following a request of the Italian Observer to the United Nations (A/C.2/L.50), the Committee decided, without objection, to invite the representative of Italy to take part in the discussion, and, accordingly, he also participated in the general debate.

6. After having considered the draft resolution contained in A/1404, together with the following amendments: (a) an amendment by Pakistan (A/C.2/L.65/Rev.1);⁶ (b) a joint amendment by Egypt, Iraq, Lebanon, Saudi Arabia, Syria and Yemen (A/C.2/L.66);⁶ (c) an amendment by Uruguay (A/C.2/L.67/Rev.1),⁶ the Committee received a joint draft resolution submitted by Chile, Egypt, Iraq, Lebanon, Pakistan, Saudi Arabia, Syria, Uruguay and Yemen (A/C.2/L.68) incorporating the substance of all the proposals put forward; an amendment to the joint resolution was proposed by Uruguay (A/C.2/L.69) and accepted by the Committee.

7. In the course of the discussion, the Secretary of the Committee stated, in reply to a question by the representative of the United States that, on the adoption of the resolution, the Secretary-General would communicate with those non-member governments which were represented on the Technical Assistance Conference, regarding the subject of the resolution. The United Nations Commissioner for Libya stated, in reply to a question by the representative of Canada, that, in his opinion, the adoption of the joint draft resolution would completely remove the danger that technical assistance might be interrupted upon the achievement of Libya's independence.

8. After discussion, the joint draft resolution, as amended, was unanimously adopted by the Committee. The Second Committee therefore recommends to the General Assembly the adoption of the following draft resolution:

TECHNICAL ASSISTANCE FOR LIBYA AFTER ACHIEVEMENT OF INDEPENDENCE

Considering the special responsibility of the United Nations for the future of Libya,

Recognizing the need for continuing technical assistance to Libya without interruption, even after the attainment of its independence, for the development of its economy, its social progress and the improvement of its public administration,

Recognizing further the need for immediate study of a complete plan for the economic, social and cultural development of Libya,

1. Requests the Economic and Social Council and the specialized agencies concerned to consider Libya, as soon as it shall be constituted an independent State in accordance with General Assembly resolution 289 A (IV), as eligible to continue to receive technical assistance, in such form as the Government of Libya may request, from the expanded programme of the United Nations and in accordance with the fundamental principles and other provisions of Economic and Social Council resolution 222 A (IX);

EXPLANATORY MEMORANDUM ON THE SUPPLEMENTARY ITEM PROPOSED BY CHILE FOR INCLUSION IN THE AGENDA FOR THE FIFTH SESSION OF THE GENERAL ASSEMBLY OF THE UNITED NATIONS, ENTITLED : " STRENGTHENING OF DEMOCRATIC PRINCIPLES AS A MEANS OF CONTRIBUTING TO THE MAINTENANCE OF UNIVERSAL PEACE "

1. The present international situation shows convincingly that the spirit of co-operation between the peoples and Governments mentioned in the Charter of the United Nations has been losing the meaning that was attributed to it by the States assembled at the historic Conference of San Francisco.
2. The various organs of the United Nations, and in particular the General Assembly, have been engaged in seeking a procedure to make international co-operation and peaceful co-existence possible. The Security Council, which according to the Charter of the United Nations has " primary responsibility for the maintenance of international peace and security ", has been constantly hindered in its work by the excessive use of the privilege of the veto.
3. As a result of this situation the General Assembly, which is the most representative and democratic organ of the United Nations, has adopted resolutions based on its essential obligation to preserve peace and good understanding among nations. Outstanding among these agreements are resolution 190 (III), which bears the suggestive title " Appeal to the Great Powers to renew their efforts to compose their differences and establish a lasting peace ", and resolution 290 (IV), headed " Essentials of peace ".
4. In the first of those resolutions the General Assembly restated some of the purposes and principles of the Charter and reminded the Great Powers of the existence of other international agreements such as the Atlantic Charter and the Moscow Agreements of 1945.
5. In resolution 290 the States Members of the United Nations reaffirmed their faith in the fundamental principles of the Charter as " necessary for an enduring peace ", seeing " that disregard of these principles is primarily responsible for the continuance of international tension; and that it is urgently necessary for all Members to act in accordance with these principles in the spirit of co-operation on which the United Nations was founded ".
6. Notwithstanding the resolutions approved by the General Assembly, the international tension continued to increase until it culminated in an act of armed aggression in Korea which put the very existence of the United Nations to the proof and clearly endangered the sovereignty of the States Members and respect for the human rights enshrined in the Charter.
7. Before the Korean crisis arose, the Secretary-General of the United Nations had, in exercise of the powers conferred upon him by the Charter, put forward
- principles upon which an understanding between the Great Powers might be based. The points of this potential agreement have been submitted by the Secretary-General as part of the agenda for the fifth session of the General Assembly; but the Korean crisis intervened between the announcement of these points and the approaches which the Secretary-General was to have made to the Governments of the Great Powers. This would apparently indicate that the bases proposed by the Secretary-General either do not have the support of all the Great Powers or are insufficient in themselves to create an atmosphere of mutual understanding such as would guarantee international peace and security.
8. Concerned at the gravity of the present international crisis, the President of Chile, in a public speech made during his official visit to the United States, suggested eight main points that might serve as a basis of understanding. Some of those points, which were announced last April, were identical with those expressed later by the Secretary-General of the United Nations and included in the agenda for the fifth session of the General Assembly. On that occasion the President of Chile added that, in view of the experience of recent years, he must express his doubts whether those bases would be accepted by a certain Great Power; and he said that if they were not accepted no other course would be left but to unite the forces really devoted to peace in accordance with the purposes and principles expressed in the Charter of the United Nations.
9. Within the United Nations practices and attitudes have been adopted which impede the operation of the machinery created by the Charter to make collaboration between nations real and effective and to seek solutions for problems that might endanger the independence and sovereignty of States. Such attitudes and practices are not confined to the Security Council or to the excessive use of the veto, but are also to be found in other organs the deliberations and agreement of which have suffered from the obstruction or abstention of certain members.
10. In view of these events, which constantly recur in international affairs, each time with greater significance, and which seriously endanger the prestige and capacity for effective action of the highest international organization and help to weaken the system of collective security for which the Charter of the United Nations was established, the Government of Chile is of the opinion that the time has come when it is absolutely necessary to unite the efforts of all countries that practise respect for human rights and are naturally peace-loving, to the end that, within the powers and means authorized by the Charter of the United Nations, they may :

(1) watch over the fulfilment of the principles, aims and purposes of the United Nations; and

(2) establish efficient machinery enabling its Members to act jointly and rapidly in any emergency.

11. The Government of Chile is convinced that the Charter of the United Nations would permit the adoption of measures enabling countries to live peacefully together with ample scope for international collaboration. It is indispensable that these measures should be adopted and applied practically in international relations and in the conduct of each one of the Members of the United Nations.

12. By their own internal organization, by their judicial forms and by the permanent contact with public opinion from which their powers are derived, the democratic countries are eminently peace-loving.

13. Only the totalitarian countries, which do not require to submit their actions to the verdict of the people, are in a position to practise armed aggression.

14. There is therefore an evidently inseparable connexion between democracy and peace, and a dangerous affinity between totalitarianism and war.

15. The Charter of the United Nations is imbued with the spirit of respect for human rights and fundamental freedoms, which are the basis of all democratic organization.

16. Conscious of this mandate implicit in the Charter, the General Assembly adopted the Universal Declaration of Human Rights in 1948 and is now about to bring the covenant on human rights into being.

17. Both the Declaration and the covenant are cornerstones on which the democratic life of the peoples and their international relations must rest.

18. It is therefore indispensable that all peace-loving countries should act together for the purpose of solemnizing by means of a pact, and within the limits laid down by the Charter, their firm resolve to fulfil and to secure the fulfilment of these fundamental rights and freedoms.

19. In these times it is not enough to ensure regard for individual rights and freedoms : it is indispensable also to guarantee the rights and freedoms of nations in their sovereignty and independence as such.

20. The pact should also include such guarantees.

21. Such an international democratic pact is that which the Government of Chile proposes for the consideration of the Members of the General Assembly.

22. This would meet the requirements of the first item of which we made mention, when we noted the need to " watch over the fulfilment of the principles, aims and purposes of the United Nations ".

23. It is clear, however, that the solemn undertaking to be assumed by the democratically-minded countries would require the existence of appropriate legal machinery to enable the United Nations to act in any emergency that might endanger the sovereignty and independence of nations. The States Members are aware that in present conditions it is extremely difficult to localize situations that endanger peace and to restrict the scope of a disturbance of the peace.

24. Any threat against any country, any disturbance of the peace, should be countered by immediate United Nations support and assistance to the nation in danger or by effective action on the part of the international organization to restrict the scope of an act of war.

25. Without prejudice to or derogation from the " primary responsibility for the maintenance of international peace and security " which the Members of the United Nations have conferred upon the Security Council, it is within the powers of the General Assembly also to " discuss any questions relating to the maintenance of international peace and security brought before it by any Member of the United Nations ... and ... make recommendations with regard to any such questions to the State or States concerned or to the Security Council or to both " (Article 11, paragraph 2).

26. In addition, Article 10 establishes the General Assembly's ample powers to " discuss any questions or any matters within the scope of the present Charter or relating to the powers and functions of any organs provided for in the present Charter, and ... make recommendations to the Members of the United Nations or to the Security Council or to both on any such questions or matters ".

27. Article 14 adds that " the General Assembly may recommend measures for the peaceful adjustment of any situation, regardless origin... including situations resulting from a violation of the provisions of the present Charter setting forth the Purposes and Principles of the United Nations ".

28. It is now clearly established that, with the sole reservation expressed in Article 12 to the effect that recommendations should not be made with regard to disputes or situations before the Security Council, the General Assembly is empowered to discuss and make recommendations on all matters or questions which fall within the scope of the Charter.

29. It has been shown that the General Assembly may meet to study and make recommendations with regard to any such matters, and that they may be dealt with at regular or special sessions and submitted by any of the Members, by the Secretary-General or by non-member countries.

30. Grave emergencies may, however, occur at a time when the General Assembly is not in session. It is therefore necessary to facilitate procedure for enabling the Interim Committee of the General Assembly to fill this gap.

31. This subsidiary organ was established in 1947 by the General Assembly and its purposes explicitly include the effective performance of the duties specifically conferred upon the General Assembly by the Charter in relation to matters concerning the maintenance of international peace and security (Articles 11 and 35), the promotion of international co-operation in the political field (Article 13) and the peaceful adjustment of any situations likely to impair the general welfare or friendly relations among nations (Article 14).

32. Unfortunately, the duties since then assigned to the Interim Committee do not fulfil the above-mentioned purposes and are confined on the whole to the making of studies and the submission of reports on them to the General Assembly. It is therefore necessary to enable the Interim Committee to fulfil these purposes, by widening its powers and reforming its methods of procedure so that it may act rapidly and effectively in any emergency and make independent decisions until such time as the General Assembly meets.

33. To enable these purposes to be carried out, the Delegation of Chile will submit a resolution modifying the relevant parts both of the rules of procedure of the General Assembly and of resolution 295 (IV) establishing the powers of the Interim Committee.

34. This draft and the international democratic pact are complementary and will constitute the proposal to be submitted by Chile for the consideration of the fifth session of the General Assembly.

DOCUMENT A/1339

Letter dated 25 August 1950 from the delegations of Australia, the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland and the United States of America, addressed to the Secretary-General

[28 August 1950]

We have the honour to refer to our telegram of 20 August 1950 (A/1327), submitting the item "Failure of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics to repatriate or otherwise account for prisoners of war detained in Soviet territory" to be placed on the provisional agenda of the fifth session of the General Assembly.

The explanatory memorandum, referred to in the above-mentioned telegram, follows :

At the end of hostilities in Europe and in the Far East in 1945, large numbers of military personnel of various nationalities were in the hands of the Allied Powers. The prompt repatriation of these prisoners was demanded by accepted international practice and no less by the elementary principles of humanity.

The Allied Powers clearly recognized at the outset this responsibility and entered into agreements to repatriate prisoners of war (see paragraph 9 of the Potsdam Proclamation of 26 July 1945; the Foreign Ministers Agreement in Moscow of 23 April 1947; the Agreement between the U.S.S.R. and the Supreme Commander for the Allied Powers in Japan of 19 December 1946, which are reproduced in annexes I, II and III).

The Soviet Union has not complied fully with these agreements. Moreover, the other governments concerned have on various occasions requested the U.S.S.R. to furnish information concerning its repatriation programmes and have even in certain cases offered transportation facilities for repatriation. However, on 22 April 1950 and 5 May 1950, TASS announced that the U.S.S.R. had completed the repatriation of all Japanese and German prisoners of war from its territories except for persons detained in connexion with war crimes or on account of illness (see annexes IV and V).

Evidence exists to show that these statements are not true. Moreover, the Japanese Diet on 2 May 1950 and the Bundestag of the Federal German Government on 5 May 1950 adopted resolutions protesting these announcements and appealing for every possible assistance to bring about an early settlement of the problem (see annexes VI and VII).

On the basis of the evidence of Soviet non-compliance, governments having control responsibility in Germany and Japan have on various occasions stated to the Soviet Government their inability to give credence to the TASS announcements, and have requested it to agree to the designation of an international humanitarian body or organization which should make a thorough examination of the repatriation programme at first hand (see annexes VIII, IX and X).

Since all these efforts have been without avail, the Governments of Australia, the United Kingdom and the United States now consider it essential to place the matter before the General Assembly under Articles 10, 14 and 1, paragraph 3, of the Charter. The three Governments hope that the General Assembly will consider means whereby full information on all these persons may be obtained and the repatriation of all those now living may be secured.

Further documents will be supplied later.

ANNEX IV

TASS ANNOUNCEMENTS CONCERNING REPATRIATION OF JAPANESE PRISONERS OF WAR FROM THE U.S.S.R.

A. Announcement of 22 April 1950

It was communicated in the statement of the representative of the Council of Ministers of the U.S.S.R. on

Repatriation Affairs on 20 May 1949 that by May 1949 the overwhelming majority of the Japanese war prisoners had been repatriated from the Soviet Union to Japan and that the remaining war prisoners, numbering 95,000 men, were subject to repatriation during the year 1949, with the exception of persons who are under investigation in connexion with war crimes committed by them.

TASS has been authorized to communicate that at present the Soviet agencies have completed the repatriation of the remaining Japanese war prisoners mentioned in the statement of the representative of the Council of Ministers of the U.S.S.R. on Repatriation Affairs dated 20 May 1949. There have not been repatriated 1,487 Japanese war prisoners sentenced or under investigation for war crimes committed by them, 9 Japanese war prisoners who are subject to repatriation after the completion of their medical treatment and 971 men, Japanese war prisoners, who committed serious crimes against the Chinese people and who are placed at the disposal of the Central People's Government of the Chinese People's Republic.

Since Japan's capitulation, there have been repatriated from the Soviet Union to Japan 510,409 Japanese prisoners of war in all, besides 70,880 men, prisoners of war, who were immediately released in 1945 in the zone of combat operations.

B. Announcement of 9 June 1950

In connexion with the repeated statements of official American and Japanese circles and the spreading of all kinds of false communications in the reactionary Press abroad concerning the number of Japanese war prisoners who are in the U.S.S.R., TASS has been authorized to state the following.

It was communicated in the statement of the Administration of the representative of the Council of Ministers of the U.S.S.R. on Repatriation Affairs dated 20 May 1949 that of the total number of 594,000 soldiers and officers of the Japanese Army taken prisoners by 1 May 1949, there were repatriated to Japan 418,166 men, not counting 70,880 men released immediately in the zone of combat operations, and that on 1 May 1949 there remained in the Soviet Union, unrepatriated, 95,000 men.

In the communication of TASS dated 22 April 1950 "concerning the completion of repatriation of Japanese war prisoners from the Soviet Union" it was officially stated that the repatriation of the 95,000 Japanese war prisoners who remained by May 1949 in the territory of the Soviet Union has been completed, with the exception of 1,487 war prisoners sentenced or under investigation for war crimes committed by them, as well as 9 war prisoners who are subject to repatriation after the completion of their medical treatment and 971 men, war prisoners, who committed serious crimes against the Chinese people and who are placed at the disposal of the Central People's Government of the Chinese People's Republic. It was indicated in the communication of TASS in this connexion that the repatriation of Japanese war prisoners from the U.S.S.R. has been completed in full.

In spite of the exhaustive facts quoted in these official statements, there are spread in the United States of America and in Japan invented communications concerning a large number of Japanese war prisoners who have allegedly remained in the territory of the U.S.S.R.

TASS has been authorized to declare that the said communications of foreign circles are of a maliciously slandering nature with respect to the Soviet Union and that they aim to distract the attention of the Japanese people from the policy of the U.S.A. directed towards the economic and political enslavement of Japan.

ANNEX V

TASS ANNOUNCEMENT OF 5 MAY 1950 REGARDING REPATRIATION OF GERMAN PRISONERS OF WAR FROM THE U.S.S.R.

Thus repatriation German prisoners of war from Soviet Union to Germany now completely finished. Since Germany's capitulation there have been repatriated from Soviet Union to Germany 1,939,063 German prisoners of war, including 58,103 turned up during 1947-49 among prisoners of war of other nationalities found in Soviet Union.

RESOLUTION ADOPTED BY THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES AND THE HOUSE OF COUNCILLORS OF THE JAPANESE DIET ON 2 MAY 1950

(Resolution for request for acceleration of repatriation of unrepatriated Japanese and investigation into their actual situation through the United Nations)

Since the termination of the war, the people of Japan have to this day faithfully carried out the provisions of the Potsdam Declaration.

Yet today, after the lapse of almost five years since the end of the war, there still remain in the Soviet Union and in the areas under Soviet influence (including Siberia, Saghalien, Northern Korea, Dairen and Chinese Communist areas) more than 300,000 Japanese whose fate is unknown.

Notwithstanding the repeated request made to the Soviet Union through the Allied General Headquarters for an official report, the Soviet Union has made no official response, and the whole people of Japan have been deeply pained in heart and mind. Representing this feeling of our people, by means of this resolution taken by this House, this House is resolved to request the Supreme Commander for the Allied Powers to appeal to the justice and public opinion of the world through the United Nations Organization and to afford every possible assistance for bringing about the early settlement of this question and especially for his highest consideration with regard to the realization of the following :

1. That all of our nationals still remaining in the Soviet Union and in the areas under Soviet influence (including Siberia, Saghalien, Northern Korea, Dairen and Chinese Communist areas) be repatriated as early as possible.

2. That it be arranged to announce the names of those among the internees in the Soviet Union and in the areas under Soviet influence who have died, who have been associated with war crimes, who are serving sentence and who are detained for illness.

3. That it be arranged for an investigation team of the United Nations or neutral or humanitarian body to investigate in the Soviet Union and in the areas under Soviet control the situation of life and death of our interned nationals.

ANNEX VII

RESOLUTION ADOPTED BY THE BUNDESTAG OF THE FEDERAL REPUBLIC OF GERMANY ON 5 MAY 1950

In the name of the German people, the Bundestag rejects the assertion disseminated yesterday by the Soviet radio that the repatriation of German prisoners of war from the Soviet Union has been completed. It is just as untrue as the long-since disproved statement of the Soviet news agency TASS which asserted in early 1947 that there were at that time only 890,000 prisoners of war in the Soviet Union.

The Soviet Union has repeatedly broken all its promises to release German prisoners of war by a given time. Even today, five years after the end of the war, hundreds of thousands of German prisoners of war in the Soviet Union await return to their homes. Moreover, thousands of deportees, men and women, who never were soldiers, are held in the Soviet Union and are damned to slave labour there. Even in very recent days the number of these unfortunates has been again increased by mass shipments from the allegedly de-activated concentration camps of the Soviet occupation zone.

The Bundestag requests the Federal Government immediately to take the necessary steps with the Allied High Commission to bring about the following results :

(1) The publication of the names, crimes and whereabouts of the detained prisoners of war and deported civilians.

(2) The naming of those who have died in prisoner-of-war camps under Soviet control.

(3) A search for the missing.

In our distress we call upon the world and appeal to the conscience of every individual : help free these unfortunate people.

The freely elected representatives of the German people, the Bundestag, protest most solemnly against this injustice, and expect that the solidarity of all democratic peoples, especially the United Nations, will lead them to endorse this protest and co-operate, so that the hour of liberation may soon strike for the last prisoner of war of all nations.

ANNEX VIII

NOTES ADDRESSED BY THE AUSTRALIAN GOVERNMENT TO THE SOVIET EMBASSY IN CANBERRA CONCERNING THE REPATRIATION OF JAPANESE PRISONERS OF WAR ¹

A. Note of 5 January 1950

The Department of External Affairs presents its compliments to the Embassy of the U.S.S.R. and has the honour to inform the Embassy that the Australian Government is concerned at the large number of Japanese prisoners of war who appear to be still detained by the U.S.S.R.

The Embassy will remember that paragraph 9 of the Potsdam Proclamation of 26 July 1945 states : "The Japanese military forces, after being completely disarmed, shall be permitted to return to their homes with the opportunity to lead peaceful and productive lives." The Embassy will also be aware that the repatriation of Japanese prisoners of war held by Allied Powers other than the U.S.S.R. was virtually completed in 1947.

TASS news agency reported on 20 May 1949 that 95,000 Japanese prisoners of war were still held by the U.S.S.R. According to figures carefully compiled by the Japanese Government and checked from every available source, this large figure given by TASS does not account for the additional 376,929 prisoners still in areas under Soviet control. The Australian Government is forced to conclude that if the TASS figure is correct, the discrepancy between that and the Japanese Government estimate can only be accounted for by an abnormally high death rate among Japanese prisoners awaiting repatriation by the U.S.S.R. In this connexion, the Australian Government has observed that the U.S.S.R. has continually refused to furnish notifications of the deaths of Japanese prisoners and feels bound to point out to the Government of the U.S.S.R. that failure to provide such information, as well as the prolonged detention of prisoners after the cessation of hostilities, is contrary to the accepted international concepts of fundamental human rights and the humanitarian principles contained in the Geneva Convention of 1949 which has been signed by the U.S.S.R.

The Australian Government expresses the hope that the Government of the U.S.S.R. will accept the principle that an international humanitarian organization should be designated as protecting power to conduct full and impartial investigations into the position of those Japanese detained in areas under the control of the U.S.S.R. since the end of the war. The representative of the British Commonwealth countries on the Allied Council for Japan put forward such a proposal at the Council's meeting on 21 December, and its acceptance by the U.S.S.R. would undoubtedly greatly assist in clarifying the present unsatisfactory position.

B. Note of 10 February 1950

The Department of External Affairs presents its compliments to the Embassy of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics and has the honour to refer to the Department's Note of 5 January 1950 regarding the Australian Government's concern at the large number of Japanese prisoners of war who are apparently still detained by the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics.

The Australian Government hopes that the Government of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics will soon be in a position to reply to the suggestion contained in the Department's Note of 5 January that an international humanitarian organization should be designated as protecting Power to conduct a full and impartial investigation into the position of the remaining Japanese prisoners of war now estimated at 376,929.

¹ No reply to these Notes had been received at the time of presentation of this memorandum.

ANNEX IX

NOTE ADDRESSED BY THE UNITED STATES GOVERNMENT TO THE SOVIET EMBASSY IN WASHINGTON AND REPLY OF THE SOVIET EMBASSY CONCERNING THE REPATRIATION OF JAPANESE PRISONERS OF WAR

A. United States Note of 9 June 1950

The Secretary of State presents his compliments to the Chargé d'Affaires ad interim of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics and refers to the Secretary's Note of 30 December 1949, requesting the co-operation of the Soviet Union in the matter of repatriating or otherwise accounting for over 370,000 Japanese nationals who, according to figures considered reliable, are in areas under Soviet control, dead or alive.

The Note under reference alluded to the repatriation obligations of the Soviet Union under the Potsdam Declaration of 26 July 1945, and pointed out that the prolonged detention of prisoners after the cessation of hostilities is in patent conflict with accepted international concepts of fundamental human rights and freedoms and with humanitarian principles as set forth in the Geneva Convention of 1949 relative to the treatment of prisoners of war which was signed by some sixty Powers, including the Soviet Union. In the interests of resolving a problem of long-standing concern to the Allied Powers and Japan, the Note specifically requested that the Soviet Government agree to the designation of an international humanitarian body or organization charged with making a complete first-hand survey of the situation with a view to obtaining exact information on Japanese held in Soviet areas since the cessation of hostilities.

The Embassy is reminded that the Note under reference has not been answered or acknowledged, directly or indirectly, since its delivery over five months ago and that an early indication of the reaction of the Soviet Government to the United States Government's proposal would be appreciated.

B. Soviet Note of 16 July 1950

The Embassy of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics presents its compliments to the Department of State of the United States of America and, referring to the Note of the Department of State dated 9 June and received by the Embassy on 12 June, has the honour to communicate that the question raised in the Note has been fully exhausted by the published communication of 22 April and the statement of 9 June by the Telegraph Agency of the Soviet Union (TASS), the texts of which are enclosed.

[For texts of these statements, see annex IV above.]

NOTE ADDRESSED BY THE EMBASSY OF THE UNITED KINGDOM IN MOSCOW TO THE SOVIET GOVERNMENT OF 14 JULY 1950 CONCERNING THE REPATRIATION OF GERMAN PRISONERS OF WAR ²

1. His Majesty's Embassy present their compliments to the Ministry of Foreign Affairs for the U.S.S.R. and under instructions from His Majesty's Principal Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs in the United Kingdom have the honour to invite reference to a Soviet Press announcement of 5 May 1950 stating that repatriation of German prisoners of war from the Soviet Union had been completed with the exception of 9,717 persons convicted of grave war crimes, 3,815 persons whose alleged war crimes are under investigation and 14 persons detained owing to illness.

2. The claim that only 13,546 German prisoners remain in Soviet custody has been received with shock and grave concern in Germany and throughout the civilized world since it stands in manifest contradiction to the fact that large numbers of German prisoners of war known to have been held by the Soviet Government have not yet returned to their homes. In this connexion His Majesty's Government in the United Kingdom wish to draw to the attention of the Soviet Government a recent census carried out in the German Federal Republic which has shown that several tens of thousands of Germans have not yet returned from the Soviet Union although their relatives have information that they were in Soviet custody.

3. In failing to complete the repatriation of German prisoners of war and to furnish information regarding them, the Soviet Government has demonstrated complete disregard for the principles of common humanity. It has, moreover, failed to honour the following explicit undertakings :

(A) At a meeting of the Council of Foreign Ministers at Moscow in April 1947 the four Occupying Powers undertook to repatriate, by 31 December 1948 at the latest, all German prisoners of war in their custody. The Governments of the United Kingdom, United States and France have respected this undertaking.

(B) No satisfactory reply has yet been received to enquiries by His Majesty's Government regarding Soviet action in respect of this agreement. In acknowledging one of these enquiries, the Soviet Government, while admitting in a Note of the 24 January 1949 that an unspecified number of German prisoners, about whom no information was furnished, was still held in the Soviet Union, gave a clear undertaking that their repatriation would be completed by or during 1949.

4. The Soviet Government alone bear the heavy responsibility for the suffering and distress which their conduct in this matter has brought to the many Germans still in Soviet custody and to their relatives and friends at home. In the earnest desire that this suffering might be mitigated, His Majesty's Government now urge the Soviet Government to take the following measures :

(A) To furnish detailed information regarding the identity of 9,717 persons allegedly convicted of war crimes, the 3,815 persons whose alleged war crimes are under investigation, and the 14 persons said to be under treatment for illness. Such information should include the places of imprisonment, charges preferred against, and sentences imposed on, those who have been convicted, the present state of the investigations being undertaken, and the whereabouts and treatment of those who are sick.

(B) To guarantee to prisoners accused of or condemned for war crimes the right accorded by all countries to correspond with their families.

(C) To give full details of any persons whom the Soviet Government, by classification as civilian workers or in any other way, have deprived of prisoner-of-war status and have thereby excluded from their prisoner-of-war statistics.

(D) To supply information on the number, identity, date of death and place of burial of Germans who have died in captivity in the U.S.S.R. or in transit.

(E) To agree to the establishment of an impartial international body which would undertake an investigation in the Soviet Union designed to determine the position of prisoners of war known to have been in Soviet custody, in accordance with the Geneva Convention of 27 July 1929, to which the Soviet Government is a party. This body might take the form of an ad hoc commission designated by the United Nations, or of a group composed of the representatives of the four Occupying Powers in Germany, or of representatives of neutral Powers, or of any other group mutually acceptable. It should be noted in this connexion that the United Kingdom, United States and France, at the time when they still had German prisoners of war in their custody, furnished full information concerning them and permitted full and impartial access to prisoners of war by international agencies.

5. Although confining themselves at present to the question of German prisoners of war, His Majesty's Government cannot disregard, and are likewise disturbed by, the failure of the Soviet Government to repatriate or to account for numerous nationals of former German occupied countries taken prisoner or brought to the Soviet Union as civilian internees during the war.

6. His Majesty's Government request that the Soviet Government will inform them of the action they are prepared to take in this matter. His Majesty's Government are, for their part, prepared to lend their co-operation to the Soviet Government in any appropriate way in order to bring to an end the present unsatisfactory state of affairs.

Letter dated 27 October 1950 addressed to the Secretary-General by the Permanent Representative of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland to the United Nations, on behalf of the delegations of Australia, the United Kingdom and the United States of America

I have the honour to refer to the letter of 25 August 1950 (A/1339), from the representatives of Australia, the United Kingdom and the United States enclosing an explanatory memorandum on the item " Failure of the U.S.S.R. to repatriate or otherwise account for prisoners of war detained in Soviet territory " which these three delegations had proposed for inclusion on the agenda of the fifth session of the General Assembly.

Annex X to that letter contained the text of a Note addressed by the British Embassy in Moscow to the Soviet Government on 14 July 1950 concerning the repatriation of German prisoners of war. I enclose with this letter a copy in translation of a Note addressed by the Soviet Ministry of Foreign Affairs to the British Embassy in Moscow in reply to the Embassy's Note of 14 July, and I have the honour to request, on behalf of the three delegations who proposed the inclusion of this item on the agenda, that this Note from the Government of the U.S.S.R. may be added to the explanatory memorandum already submitted and that it may be given a similar circulation.

NOTE ADDRESSED BY THE SOVIET UNION GOVERNMENT TO THE EMBASSY OF THE UNITED KINGDOM IN MOSCOW
ON 30 SEPTEMBER 1950

The Ministry of Foreign Affairs of the U.S.S.R., acknowledging receipt of the British Government's Note of 14 July 1950, considers it necessary to make the following statement.

The assertion contained in the above-mentioned Note of the British Government that a large number of German prisoners of war still remain in the Soviet Union is devoid of all foundation and does not correspond with reality. As is known from the TASS communiqué of 5 May of this year, the repatriation of German prisoners of war from the Soviet Union was completed at the beginning of 1950. All German prisoners of war in the Soviet Union were repatriated to Germany with the exception of 9,717 convicted of serious war crimes, 3,815 the question of whose war crimes is being investigated, and 14 temporarily detained owing to illness.

In view of the exhaustive facts adduced above concerning the repatriation of German prisoners of war from the Soviet Union, the Soviet Government is unable to regard the British Government's renewed communications to the Soviet Government concerning this question other than as a desire to exploit the question of German prisoners of war for propaganda purposes.

The Soviet Government is sending similar Notes to the Governments of the United States and France.

Communications from the International Committee of the Red Cross and the League of Red Cross Societies

[11 December 1950]

In accordance with the request submitted by the representative of Syria at the 344th meeting of the Third Committee, the Secretariat is distributing to the members of the Committee for their information the following communications from the International Committee of the Red Cross and the League of Red Cross Societies :

CABLEGRAM DATED 10 DECEMBER 1950 FROM THE INTERNATIONAL COMMITTEE OF THE RED CROSS TO THE SECRETARIAT OF THE UNITED NATIONS

With reference to your telegram of 9 December, which we immediately communicated to the League

1) Since article 75 of 1929 Prisoners of War Convention provides for repatriation of prisoners after conclusion of peace and not at end of hostilities, the Committee as early as 1945 and on several subsequent occasions reminded principal powers holding prisoners and their national Red Cross Societies that in accordance with spirit of humanitarian conventions repatriation should be arranged as soon as possible.

2) In revising humanitarian conventions the Committee was concerned to clarify repatriation provisions. These were embodied in article 118 of Geneva Conventions of 1949 signed by 61 and ratified by 5 States and providing that "prisoners of war shall be released and repatriated without delay after the cessation of active hostilities".

3) The Committee recalls its memorandum to all governments and national Red Cross Societies of 12 September 1939 defining its position which remains unchanged. According to that memorandum the International Committee of the Red Cross, which is a specifically neutral organ of the International Red Cross, which may act only with the consent and support of the authorities in all the countries concerned, could not proceed to appoint the suggested commission unless all governments concerned consented individually or by ad hoc conventions. That means that prima facie Committee could not act on instructions from General Assembly of United Nations for the Purpose described in your telegram above mentioned unless all governments concerned gave their agreement to the draft resolution drawn up by the Third Committee.

CABLEGRAM DATED 11 DECEMBER FROM THE LEAGUE OF RED CROSS SOCIETIES TO THE SECRETARIAT OF THE UNITED NATIONS

Your cablegram of 9 December relating to draft resolution on prisoners of war and particularly the amendment submitted by India and Iraq. We agree that request should be addressed to International Red Cross but emphasize that question of prisoners of war is one essential prerogatives of International Committee of the Red Cross which is replying to you separately.

[7 December 1950]

The General Assembly,

Believing that all prisoners having originally come within the control of Allied Powers as a consequence of the Second World War should either have been repatriated long since or have been otherwise accounted for, conventions of 1949 for the protection of war victims and by specific agreements between the Allied Powers,

Mindful that one of the principal purposes of the United Nations is to achieve international co-operation in solving international problems of a humanitarian character and to promote and encourage respect for human rights and fundamental freedoms for all, and

Considering that the General Assembly may recommend measures for the peaceful adjustment of any situation, regardless of origin, which it deems likely to impair the general welfare of friendly relations among nations,

1. Expresses its concern at the evidence presented to it that large numbers of prisoners taken in the course of the Second World War have neither been repatriated nor otherwise accounted for;

2. Calls upon all governments still having control of such persons to act in conformity with the recognized standards of international conduct, and the above-mentioned international agreements and conventions which require that, upon the cessation of active hostilities, all prisoners should with the least possible delay be given an unrestricted opportunity of repatriation;

3. Establishes a United Nations Commission on Prisoners of War composed of three qualified and impartial individuals to be appointed by the Secretary-General, and

(a) Requests the Commission to seek from the governments or authorities concerned full information regarding prisoners coming within the custody or control of any foreign government as a consequence of military operations of the Second World War and not repatriated or otherwise accounted for;

(b) Requests the Commission to assist all governments and authorities which so desire in arranging for and facilitating the repatriation of all such persons as are nationals of their countries or in the furnishing of full information regarding them;

(c) Authorizes the Commission to use the good offices of any person or organization if it considers that this might contribute to the repatriation of or accounting for prisoners;

(d) Directs the Commission to report the results of its efforts to the Secretary-General for transmission to the Members of the United Nations;

4. Urges all governments and authorities concerned to co-operate fully with the Commission, to supply all necessary information, and to grant right of access to their respective countries and to areas in which the persons referred to in paragraph 3 (a) above may be held; and

5. Requests the Secretary-General to furnish the Commission with the staff and assistance necessary for the effective accomplishment of its task, and authorizes the Secretary-General to incur the necessary expenditure.

Report of the Third Committee

[12 December 1950]

1. By a telegram dated 20 August 1950, the delegations of Australia, the United Kingdom and the United States of America requested the Secretary-General to include in the provisional agenda of the fifth session of the General Assembly the following item : “ Failure of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics to repatriate or otherwise account for prisoners of war detained in Soviet territory ” (A/1327). On 25 August 1950, the delegations of the above countries addressed to the Secretary-General an explanatory memorandum, to which were attached ten annexes (A/1339).

2. The General Assembly, at its 284th and 285th plenary meetings, held on 26 September 1950, placed the item on its agenda, and on the recommendation of the General Committee (A/1386), decided to allocate it to the Third Committee for consideration.

3. On 27 October 1950 the representative of the United Kingdom, on behalf of the delegations of Australia, the United Kingdom and the United States of America, addressed a letter to the Secretary-General enclosing a copy of a note addressed by the Government of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics to the Embassy of the United Kingdom in Moscow on 30 September 1950 (A/1339/Add.1).

4. At its 271st, 316th and 338th meetings, held on 27 September, 16 November and 6 December 1950, respectively, the Third Committee discussed the priority which this item should be accorded on its agenda. It began consideration of the item at its 339th meeting, held on 7 December 1950, and devoted six meetings to it. The views of the representatives on the Third Committee are contained in the summary records of the 339th, 340th, and 342nd to 345th meetings inclusive.

5. At the 340th meeting, held on 7 December 1950, the Chairman of the Committee announced that the President of the General Assembly and the Secretary-General had transmitted to him the texts of communications received from the Governments of Germany, Italy and Japan concerning the question of prisoners of war. The Committee debated the procedure to be followed in dealing with the communications. The representative of Chile, supported by the representative of Uruguay, formally moved that they should be distributed. The proposal was adopted by 26 votes to 5, with 8 abstentions. At the request of the representative of Chile, the vote was taken by roll-call, with the following result :

In favour : Ecuador, France, Greece, Guatemala, India, Iran, Iraq, Lebanon, Luxembourg, Mexico, Netherlands,

New Zealand, Norway, Peru, Philippines, Sweden, Thailand, Turkey, Uruguay, Brazil, Burma, Canada, Chile, China, Colombia, Denmark.

Against: Ukrainian Soviet Socialist Republic, Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, Byelorussian Soviet Socialist Republic, Poland, Czechoslovakia.

Abstaining: Syria, Union of South Africa, United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland, United States of America, Venezuela, Yugoslavia, Afghanistan, Australia.

The communications from the Government of the Federal Republic of Germany, the Japanese Government and the Italian Government were accordingly distributed as documents A/C.3/552, A/C.3/553 and A/C.3/554.

6. When the Committee began consideration of the item at its 339th meeting, it had before it a proposal submitted jointly by Australia, the United Kingdom and the United States of America (A/C.3/L.145) whereby the General Assembly would express its concern that prisoners of war had been neither repatriated nor otherwise accounted for; would call upon governments still having control over such persons to give them an unrestricted opportunity of repatriation; and would establish a United Nations commission on prisoners of war, composed of three qualified and impartial persons to be appointed by the Secretary-General, which would collect information regarding prisoners and assist in their repatriation.

7. The following amendments to the joint draft resolution were submitted:

(a) By Lebanon and Syria (A/C.3/L.146). The amendment included four points, two of which (the first and third) concerned changes of wording or additions. The second point concerned a request to governments to furnish additional detailed information on prisoners of war. The fourth proposal was for the deletion of the paragraphs relating to the establishment of a United Nations commission on prisoners of war. A sub-amendment to the above amendment was submitted by the Philippines (A/C.3/L.147), consisting of a request for additional information from governments still having control of prisoners of war.

(b) By Afghanistan (A/C.3/L.148). The amendment included five points. Point 1 related to the title of the resolution which, it was suggested, should read: "Measures for the peaceful solution of the problem of prisoners of war". Point 5 was a proposal to submit for the approval of the General Assembly the names of the members of the commission on prisoners of war appointed by the Secretary-General. The other proposals were matters of drafting.

(c) By India and Iraq (A/C.3/L.149). The amendment included four points. Point 3 concerned paragraph 3 of the operative part of the joint draft resolution, and proposed that the International Red Cross should be requested to establish a Commission composed of qualified impartial observers, with a view to settling amicably the problem of prisoners of war. The other points concerned the deletion or addition of certain words.

8. The representatives of Australia, the United Kingdom and the United States of America revised their draft resolution incorporating some of the amendments proposed by Lebanon and Syria, the Philippines and Afghanistan, as follows (A/C.3/L.145/Rev.1):

- (i) The title suggested by Afghanistan was adopted;
- (ii) In paragraph 1 of the operative part, the words "evidence presented to it" were replaced by the words "information presented to it tending to show";
- (iii) In paragraph 3 (c) the words "qualified and impartial" were inserted before the word "persons";
- (iv) In paragraph 4, the additional information suggested in the Philippines sub-amendment was included;
- (v) In paragraph 5, the following words were deleted, as suggested by Afghanistan, "and authorizes the Secretary-General to incur the necessary expenditure".

9. An amendment to the revised joint draft resolution was submitted by Ethiopia (A/C.3/L.150). It suggested a specific reference to prisoners of war captured during the Second World War and added the words "ad hoc" to the title of the commission to be established.

10. In the light of the discussion, the representatives of Australia, the United Kingdom and the United States of America drew up a second revision of their draft resolution (A/C.3/L.145/Rev.2). This draft retained those amendments incorporated in the first revision and also adopted the Ethiopian amendment to the effect that the commission should be an ad hoc body. The proposal thus revised provided for two successive steps: (a) a request for information from the governments concerned; and (b) the establishment of an ad hoc commission on prisoners of war to examine and evaluate this information, and to take certain specified action if the commission considered the information inadequate.

11. The following amendments were submitted to this second revision:

(a) By France (A/C.3/L.152). This amendment had two parts:

- (i) A request that the Secretary-General should establish a commission composed of qualified and impartial persons appointed by the International Red Cross or, failing that, by the Secretary-General himself; and
- (ii) A request to insert an additional paragraph urgently requesting all governments to make the greatest possible efforts, based in particular on the documentation to be provided, to search for prisoners of war whose absence has been reported and who might be in their territories.

An oral sub-amendment to the first French amendment was proposed by the representative of Greece, and accepted by the representative of France, to replace the word "appointed" by the word "chosen" in the text of paragraph 3 submitted by France.

(b) By Lebanon. An oral amendment was proposed to paragraph 3 of the operative part which would provide that the commission would not function before 30 April 1951.

12. At the 344th meeting, held on 11 December 1950, the representative of the Secretary-General read to the Third Committee two cables from the League of Red Cross Societies and from the International Committee of the Red Cross. The International Committee of the Red Cross stated that it could only accept a mandate from the General Assembly if all the interested governments agreed to the draft resolution drawn up by the Third Committee. The League of Red Cross Societies stated that the question of prisoners of war was one of the essential prerogatives of the International Committee of the Red Cross. At the request of the representative of Syria, copies of these cables were distributed (A/C.3/555). As a consequence, the representative of India withdrew the amendment concerning the establishment of the commission by the International Red Cross, which her delegation had proposed jointly with the delegation of Iraq.

13. At the same meeting the representative of the Secretary-General pointed out the practical difficulties which would arise if the approval of the General Assembly were to be necessary for the appointment of the members to the proposed commission on prisoners of war, as suggested by the representative of Afghanistan. In view of this statement, the amendment was withdrawn.

14. At its 345th meeting, the Committee proceeded to vote on the amendments which had been maintained by their sponsors. Several had been withdrawn in view of the second revision of the joint draft resolution of Australia, the United Kingdom and the United States of America and of the French amendment thereto. This latter amendment was accepted by the sponsors of the joint draft resolution with slight changes in wording. The representative of Afghanistan pointed out that he understood that the title which he had proposed, and which had been accepted by the sponsors of the joint draft resolution, would be retained as the title of the resolution.

15. The draft resolution and the amendments to it were voted on in the following order :

(i) The amendment submitted by India and Iraq (A/C.3/L.149, point 1), to delete from the fourth paragraph of the preamble the words " and by specific agreement between the Allied Powers " was rejected by 24 votes to 11, with 15 abstentions.

(ii) The preamble as a whole was adopted by 42 votes to 5, with 7 abstentions;

(iii) The Iraqi amendment to the last phrase of paragraph 1 of the operative part was rejected by 19 votes to 13, with 19 abstentions;

(iv) The Iraqi amendment to substitute the word " five " for the word " three " in the French amendment as the number of members of the Commission was rejected by 18 votes to 14, with 21 abstentions;

(v) The Iraqi amendment to delete the phrase " or, failing that, by the Secretary-General himself " was rejected by 31 votes to 12, with 7 abstentions;

(vi) The last phrase of sub-paragraph (d) of paragraph 3, beginning with the words " and to grant right... " which was voted on separately at the request of the representative of Argentina, was adopted by 38 votes to 6, with 9 abstentions.

(vii) Paragraph 3 of the operative part as a whole, as amended, was adopted by 37 votes to 5, with 13 abstentions. The vote, which was taken by roll-call at the request of the representative of Syria, was as follows :

In favour : Argentina, Australia, Bolivia, Brazil, Burma, Canada, Chile, China, Colombia, Costa Rica, Cuba, Denmark, Dominican Republic, Ecuador, Egypt, El Salvador, Ethiopia, France, Greece, Honduras, Iran, New Zealand, Nicaragua, Norway, Pakistan, Panama, Paraguay, Peru, Philippines, Sweden, Thailand, Turkey, Union of South Africa, United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland, United States of America, Uruguay, Yemen.

Against : Byelorussian Soviet Socialist Republic, Czechoslovakia, Poland, Ukrainian Soviet Socialist Republic, Union of Soviet Socialist Republics.

Abstentions : Afghanistan, Belgium, Guatemala, India, Iraq, Lebanon, Luxembourg, Mexico, Netherlands, Saudi Arabia, Syria, Venezuela, Yugoslavia.

(viii) Point 2 of the French amendment (A/C.3/L.152) which was a proposal for the insertion of an additional paragraph, as amended by France, was adopted by 45 votes to 5, with 4 abstentions.

16. The draft resolution as a whole, as amended, was adopted by 43 votes to 5, with 8 abstentions.

17. The Third Committee therefore recommends to the General Assembly the adoption of the following resolution :

MEASURES FOR THE PEACEFUL SOLUTION OF THE PROBLEM OF PRISONERS OF WAR

The General Assembly,

Mindful that one of the principal purposes of the United Nations is to achieve international co-operation in solving international problems of a humanitarian character and in promoting and encouraging respect for human rights and fundamental freedoms for all,

Considering that the General Assembly may recommend measures for the peaceful adjustment of any situation, regardless of origin, which it deems likely to impair the general welfare or friendly relations among nations,

Believing that all prisoners having originally come within the control of the Allied Powers as a consequence of the Second World War should either have been repatriated long since or have been otherwise accounted for,

Recalling that this is required both by recognized standards of international conduct and the Geneva Convention of 1949 for the protection of war victims, and by specific agreements between the Allied Powers,

1. Expresses its concern at the information presented to it tending to show that large numbers of prisoners taken in the course of the Second World War have neither been repatriated nor otherwise accounted for;

2. Calls upon all governments still having control of such persons to act in conformity with the recognized standards of international conduct and with the above-mentioned international agreements and conventions which require that, upon the cessation of active hostilities, all prisoners should, with the least possible delay, be given an unrestricted opportunity of repatriation and,

to that end, to publish and transmit to the Secretary-General of the United Nations before 30 April 1951 :

(a) The names of such prisoners still held by them, the reasons for which they are still detained and the places in which they are detained;

(b) The names of prisoners who have died while under their control as well as the date and cause of death, and the manner and place of burial in each case;

3. Requests the Secretary-General to establish an Ad Hoc Commission composed of three qualified and impartial persons chosen by the International Red Cross or, failing that, by the Secretary-General himself, with a view to settling the question of the prisoners of war in a purely humanitarian spirit and on terms acceptable to all the governments concerned. The Commission shall convene at a suitable date after 30 April 1951 to examine and evaluate, in the light of the information made available to the fifth session of the General Assembly, the information furnished by governments in accordance with the terms of the preceding paragraph. In the event that the Commission considers that this information is inadequate or affords reasonable ground for believing that prisoners coming within the custody or control of any foreign government as a consequence of military operations of the Second World War have not been repatriated or otherwise accounted for, the General Assembly :

(a) Requests the Commission to seek from the governments or authorities concerned full information regarding such prisoners;

(b) Requests the Commission to assist all governments and authorities who so desire in arranging for and facilitating the repatriation of such prisoners;

(c) Authorizes the Commission to use the good offices of any qualified and impartial person or organization whom it considers might contribute to the repatriation or accounting for of such prisoners;

(d) Urges all governments and authorities concerned to co-operate fully with the Commission, to supply all necessary information and to grant right of access to their respective countries and to areas in which such prisoners are detained;

(e) Requests the Secretary-General to furnish the Commission with the staff and facilities necessary for the effective accomplishment of its task;

4. Urgently requests all the governments to make the greatest possible efforts, based in particular on the documentation to be provided, to search for prisoners of war whose absence has been reported and who might be in their territories;

5. Directs the Commission to report as soon as practicable the results of its work to the Secretary-General for transmission to the Members of the United Nations.

Financial implications of the draft resolution proposed by the Third Committee (A/1690) : fortieth report of 1950 of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions

[13 December 1950]

1. The Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions has considered a report by the Secretary-General (A/C.5/444) on the financial implications of the draft resolution proposed by the Third Committee (A/1690).

2. Under the terms of paragraph 3 of the proposed resolution, the Secretary-General is requested "to establish an Ad Hoc Commission composed of three qualified and impartial persons chosen by the International Red Cross or, failing that, by the Secretary-General himself, with a view to settling the question of the prisoners of war in a purely humanitarian spirit and on terms acceptable to all the governments concerned".

3. The estimate submitted by the Secretary-General in respect of the year 1951 includes provision for the payment of fees in addition to travelling and subsistence expenses. The Advisory Committee considers, however, that the principles originally laid down in General Assembly resolution 231 I (III) of 8 October 1948, and reaffirmed in resolution 459 V concerning subsistence allowances for members of commissions, committees and other subsidiary bodies which was adopted by the General Assembly on 1 December 1950, preclude the payment of fees to the members of such a commission. The Committee also considers that the proposal, if adopted, would establish a further undesirable precedent for the United Nations and a situation likely to create difficulties for the International Red Cross; and that, in any case, no difficulty need be anticipated in securing the services of qualified and impartial persons willing to serve, as a matter of honour and obligation, on the Ad Hoc Commission on the normal terms approved by the General Assembly for expert bodies of the United Nations.

4. On this basis, the Advisory Committee recommends that the proposed provision for fees should be deleted and that, instead, the rate of daily subsistence allowance should be raised from $ US 12.50 to $ US 25.00 at headquarters and $ US 20.00 in the field. The total of the remaining items can, in the nature of the case, only be a rough estimate, and the Committee recommends therefore an appropriation of $ US 35,000 under section 1 of the 1951 budget estimates. This represents a reduction of $ US 10,000 on the figure submitted.

Financial implications of the draft resolution proposed by the Third Committee (A/1690) : report of the Fifth Committee

[13 December 1950]

1. In accordance with rule 152 of the rules of procedure of the General Assembly, the Fifth Committee, at its 282nd meeting, held on 13 December 1950, considered the financial implications of the draft resolution proposed by the Third Committee regarding the complaint of failure on the part of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics to repatriate or otherwise account for prisoners of war detained in Soviet territory. The Fifth Committee noted that, under the terms of the draft resolution, the Secretary-General was requested to establish an ad hoc commission composed of three qualified and impartial individuals chosen by the International Red Cross or, failing that, by the Secretary-General himself, to perform the functions enumerated in paragraph 3 of the draft resolution.

2. The Committee had before it estimates submitted by the Secretary-General (A/C.5/444) together with the observations thereon by the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions as set forth in its fortieth report of 1950 (A/1686).

3. The Secretary-General pointed out that no basis existed for an accurate estimation of costs. He believed, however, that expenditure would amount to approximately $ US 45,000, which sum included provision for the payment of fees in addition to travelling and subsistence expenses of the members of the ad hoc commission. The view was expressed by the Advisory Committee that the principles originally laid down in General Assembly resolution 231 I (III) of 8 October 1948 and reaffirmed in resolution 459 (V) adopted by the General Assembly on 1 December 1950 precluded the payment of fees to members of such a commission. The Advisory Committee further considered that such payment would create an undesirable precedent and that, in any case, no difficulty need be anticipated in securing the services of qualified and impartial persons willing to serve as a matter of honour and obligation on the terms approved by the General Assembly for expert bodies of the United Nations. On this basis, it recommended that no provision should be made for payment of fees and that, instead, the rate of daily subsistence allowance should be raised from $ US 12.50 to $ US 25.00 at headquarters and $ US 20.00 in the field. Accordingly, the Advisory Committee recommended that provision should be made under section 1 of the 1951 budget estimates in the amount of $ US 35,000, representing a reduction of $ US 10,000 on the estimate submitted by the Secretary-General.

4. In the course of discussion of the Advisory Committee's recommendations, several delegations felt obliged to support, in principle, the payment of fees in the case of the proposed ad hoc commission, having regard to decisions taken by the General Assembly and by the Fifth Committee with respect to certain other expert bodies. Other delegations, however, agreed with the Advisory Committee and suggested that persons appointed to the ad hoc commission should not be regarded as experts within the meaning of General Assembly resolution 231 I (III). Still other delegations felt that the policy regarding remuneration of experts required re-examination. The representative of France requested that, in future, the Secretary-General should furnish an annex to the budget document giving full details of payments made to members of various expert bodies.

5. The representative of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics explained that his delegation had clearly stated its position in the Third Committee, maintaining that the proposal was submitted only for purposes of propaganda. He was therefore opposed to the appropriation of funds for carrying out the draft resolution of the Third Committee. A proposal in that regard was rejected by 25 votes to 4, with 4 abstentions.

6. The Fifth Committee thereupon approved the recommendation of the Advisory Committee by 24 votes to 4, with 5 abstentions.

7. The Fifth Committee therefore decided to inform the General Assembly that adoption of the draft resolution of the Third Committee would require budgetary provision to be made in 1951 in the amount of $ US 35,000 ($ US 30,000 under section 1 and $ US 5,000, for printing, under section 25).

Note, dated 20 September 1950, from the head of the United States delegation to the Secretary-General transmitting an explanatory memorandum on the item “ United action for peace ” submitted by the United States for inclusion in the agenda of the fifth session of the General Assembly

[20 September 1950]

The head of the United States delegation to the fifth session of the General Assembly of the United Nations presents his compliments to the Secretary-General of the United Nations and has the honour to refer to the item entitled “ United action for peace ” submitted by the United States for inclusion in the agenda of the fifth session of the United Nations General Assembly. In accordance with rule 20 of the rules of procedure, copies of an explanatory memorandum on this item are attached.

EXPLANATORY MEMORANDUM

1. The Charter gives the General Assembly important functions to perform in the field of international peace and security, including the right to discuss any question relating to this field and the right to make recommendations. The experience of the United Nations in the five years since the Charter came into force has demonstrated the value of the Assembly's role. In the view of the United States, the Assembly's contribution can be enhanced both with respect to the avoidance of conflicts and with respect to the restoration of peace if need arises.

2. The General Assembly should be enabled to meet on very short notice, in case of any breach of international peace or act of aggression, if the Security Council, because of lack of unanimity of the permanent members, is unable to discharge its primary responsibility for the maintenance of peace and security. To this end, the United States proposes that the Assembly should make provision for emergency special sessions to be convoked in twenty-four hours at the request of either a majority of United Nations Members or any seven members of the Security Council.

3. The United Nations found it most helpful to have in Korea a commission which could and did report authoritatively on the events of June 1950 in that country. The United States believes that the Assembly should now establish and maintain in being a commission of observers available to travel and to observe in any area in which international tension develops; the reports from such a commission would provide reliable information to the United Nations as a basis for the consideration of problems by the Security Council or the General Assembly.

4. United Nations military forces, pursuant to Article 43 of the Charter, have not yet been established. In this important respect the structure and machinery of the United Nations are incomplete. To fill the gap, pending the conclusion of agreements in accordance with Article 43, the United States believes that the General Assembly should recommend to the Members of the United Nations that they designate within their national armed forces United Nations units so trained, equipped and maintained, that they can be made available for prompt service on behalf of the United Nations upon either a determination by the Security Council or a recommendation of the General Assembly. The United States favours also the appointment of a United Nations military adviser to consult with Members wishing to designate United Nations units in regard to the organization, training and equipping of such forces. The United States believes that each Member should be invited by the Assembly to survey its resources in order to determine what assistance it could render in accordance with any United Nations action to restore international peace and security.

5. To assist in making these planning measures effective, the General Assembly should establish an ad hoc committee to study the means which the United Nations might employ through collective action to suppress breaches of the peace and repel acts of aggression.

6. In conclusion, it should be emphasized that these proposals have the primary aim of preventing breaches of the peace and deterring acts of aggression and thereby minimizing the necessity of resorting to measures for the restoration of international peace and security. The purpose of the United States proposals is to give maximum effectiveness to United Nations efforts in keeping the peace.

Chile : draft resolution

[5 October 1950]

The General Assembly,

Considering that the Preamble of the Charter of the United Nations affirms that the peoples of the United Nations are determined "to unite their strength to maintain international peace and security, and to ensure, by the acceptance of principles and the institution of methods, that armed force shall not be used, save in the common interest",

Considering that the events of recent years and the abusive use which has been made of the rule of unanimity established by Article 27 of the Charter in respect of decisions of the Security Council make it essential to take steps to enable the United Nations to fulfil its primary purpose of ensuring the maintenance of international peace or re-establishing international peace when any act of aggression has occurred,

Considering that it is therefore necessary to unite all efforts which may contribute to the strengthening of the system of collective security created by the Charter, by means of improved and closer collaboration between all peace-loving nations,

Considering that democracy and peace are obviously indivisible and that a democracy is based essentially on the representative character of its government, respect for human rights and fundamental freedoms, and on the principles which each people freely adopts for its own organization,

Considering that in the words of the Charter the creation of conditions of stability and well-being are necessary for peaceful and friendly relations among nations, that these can only be achieved by higher standards of living, full employment for all, and conditions of economic and social progress and development; and that the economic and social conditions at present prevailing in most of the nations and regions of the world, particularly in the under-developed areas, are a factor making for the internal instability of the nations, prejudice the existence of democratic governments and create a suitable atmosphere for direct or indirect aggression,

Considering that in consequence a grave responsibility lies upon all Members to secure the rapid establishment of these conditions of stability and well-being which can only be achieved by urgent and effective collective action,

Considering that it is the duty of the United Nations and of its most representative and democratic organ, the General Assembly, to secure faithful observance of the principles, objectives and purposes of the United Nations,

Considering that under Articles 10, 11, 13 and 14 of the Charter, the General Assembly has broad powers to consider, discuss and make recommendations on any questions or matters within the scope of the Charter, most of which relate to the maintenance of international peace and security, as the fundamental purpose of the United Nations,

Considering that in order to accomplish the purposes laid down in the Charter in these matters, and in all matters relating to the development of friendly relations between the nations and the co-ordination of their efforts to this end, it is essential that the United Nations should be equipped with instruments enabling it to fulfil the functions laid down in the Charter,

1. Invites Member States to give consideration to the adoption of a solemn pact in which they would undertake inter alia :

(a) To co-ordinate and unify their efforts and resources, including their armed forces, in order to ensure that organs of the United Nations are able to react effectively and rapidly to any threat to the peace, act of direct or indirect aggression or other breach of the peace;

(b) To observe and give assistance in the observance of all important Security Council and General Assembly resolutions concerning the maintenance of peace and security;

(c) To respect and cause to be respected, within the framework of the United Nations, the individual liberties and fundamental human rights;

(d) To co-ordinate their material, human and technical efforts and resources with a view to carrying out a comprehensive programme for the achievement of economic stability throughout the world, primarily by means of the economic development of the under-developed countries and regions; and with this purpose in view to carry out and assist in carrying out all important recommendations of the General Assembly and the Economic and Social Council directed towards these ends;

2. Authorizes the Interim Committee :

(a) To investigate any matter relating to the maintenance of international peace and security submitted for its consideration by a Member of the United Nations, or, in conformity with Article 35, paragraph 2, of the Charter, by a State which is not a member, provided the Committee has decided that the matter is important. If after study and investigation the Committee concludes that the General Assembly should be convened, the Secretary-General will be notified forthwith. If the matter brought to its attention is such as to require measures of the greatest possible urgency, the Committee may, in addition to notifying the Secretary-General, recommend the State or States concerned to take any provisional steps considered essential. All decisions of the Interim Committee in this respect shall require a two-thirds majority of the Members present and voting;

(b) To give consideration to the co-ordination of the resources, including the armed forces, of the Members of the United Nations in such a way as to enable the United Nations in any case arising to take whatever collective action consistent with the principles of the Charter is necessary to give effect to the decisions or recommendations of United Nations organs, in particular those relating to the maintenance of international peace and security. Decisions in this respect shall require a two-thirds majority of the Members present and voting. For the purposes of this paragraph the Interim Committee may, by a simple majority of its members present and voting, appoint any working committees which it may deem expedient for the discharge of these duties;

3. Resolves that if the Security Council fails to exercise effectively its duty to take action in any case of direct or indirect aggression or any other breach of international peace, the General Assembly may give immediate consideration to the case and recommend all such measures as it may deem appropriate for the purpose of putting an end to the situation;

For this purpose the General Assembly may be convened, subject to only twenty-four hours notice to States Members, at the request of the Interim Committee of the General Assembly or of seven members of the Security Council, no distinction being made between permanent and non-permanent members.

[7 October 1950]

The General Assembly,

Recognizing that the first Purpose of the United Nations is : " To maintain international peace and security, and to that end : to take effective collective measures for the prevention and removal of threats to the peace, and for the suppression of acts of aggression or other breaches of the peace, and to bring about by peaceful means, and in conformity with the principles of justice and international law, adjustment or settlement of international disputes or situations which might lead to a breach of the peace ",

Finding that international tension exists on a dangerous scale,

Recalling its resolution 290 (IV) entitled " Essentials of peace ", and desiring to contribute further to the objectives of that resolution,

Reaffirming the importance of the exercise by the Security Council of its primary responsibility for the maintenance of international peace and security, and the duty of the permanent members to seek unanimity and to exercise restraint in the use of the veto,

Conscious that failure of the Security Council to discharge its responsibilities on behalf of all the Member States, particularly those referred to in the two preceding paragraphs, does not relieve Member States of their obligations or the United Nations of its responsibility under the Charter to maintain international peace and security,

Recognizing in particular that such failure does not deprive the General Assembly of its rights or relieve it of its responsibilities under the Charter in regard to the maintenance of international peace and security,

Recognizing that discharge by the General Assembly of its responsibilities in these respects calls for possibilities of observation which would ascertain the facts and expose aggressors; for the existence of armed forces which could be used collectively; and for the possibility of timely recommendation by the General Assembly to United Nations Members for collective action which, to be effective, should be prompt,

1. Resolves that if the Security Council, because of lack of unanimity of the permanent members, fails to exercise its primary responsibility for the maintenance of international peace and security in any case where there appears to be a threat to the peace, breach of the peace, or act of aggression, the General Assembly shall consider the matter immediately with a view to making appropriate recommendations to Members for collective measures, including when necessary the use of armed force, to maintain or restore international peace and security. If not in session at the time, the General Assembly may meet in emergency special session within twenty-four hours of the request therefor. Such emergency special session shall be called if requested by seven members of the Security Council;

2. Adopts for this purpose the revisions in its rules of procedure set forth in the annex to this resolution;

3. Establishes a Peace Observation Commission, which for the calendar years 1951 and 1952 shall be composed of representatives of (9-14 Members), and which could observe and report on the situation in any area where there exists international tension the continuance of which is likely to endanger the maintenance of international peace and security. Upon the invitation or with the consent of the State into whose territory the Commission would go, the General Assembly, or the Interim Committee when the Assembly is not in session, may utilize the Commission if the Security Council is not exercising the functions assigned to it by the Charter with respect to the matter in question. Decisions to utilize the Commission shall be made upon the affirmative vote of two-thirds of the members present and voting. The Security Council may also utilize the Commission in accordance with its authority under the Charter;

4. The Commission shall have authority in its discretion to appoint sub-commissions and to utilize the services of observers to assist it in the performance of its functions;

5. Recommends to all governments and authorities that they cooperate with the Commission and assist it in the performance of its functions;

6. Requests the Secretary-General to provide the necessary staff and facilities, utilizing where directed by the Commission the United Nations panel of field observers envisaged in resolution 297 B (IV);

7. Invites each Member of the United Nations to survey its resources in order to determine the nature and scope of the assistance it may be in a position to render in support of any recommendations of the Security Council or the General Assembly for the restoration of international peace and security;

8. Recommends to the Members of the United Nations that each Member maintain within its national armed forces elements so trained and organized that they could promptly be made available for service as a United Nations unit or units, upon recommendation by the Security Council or General Assembly, without prejudice to the use of such elements in exercise of the right of individual or collective self-defence recognized in Article 51 of the Charter;

9. Requests the Secretary-General to appoint, with the approval of the Committee provided for in paragraph 10, a panel of military experts who could be made available upon request of Member States which wish to obtain technical advice regarding the organization, training, and equipment for prompt service as United Nations units of the elements referred to in paragraph 8,

D

10. Establishes a Collective Measures Committee consisting of representatives of (10-14 Members) and directs the Committee, in consultation with the Secretary-General, to study and make a report to the Security Council and the General Assembly, not later than 1 September 1951, on methods which might be used and resources, including armed force, which are or might be made available to the United Nations in order to maintain international peace and security in accordance with the Purposes and Principles of the Charter, taking account of collective self-defence and regional arrangements (Articles 51 and 52 of the Charter),

11. Requests the Secretary-General to furnish the staff and facilities necessary for the effective accomplishment of the purposes set forth in parts C and D of this resolution.

Financial implication of the draft resolution proposed by the First Committee (A/C.1/592) : report by the Secretary-General

[24 October 1950]

1. At its 369th meeting on 19 October 1950, the First Committee recommended that the General Assembly should approve a resolution concerning united action for peace (A/C.1/592). This resolution provides for the discharge by the General Assembly of responsibilities under the Charter in regard to the maintenance of international peace and security in, among others, the following ways :

(a) Subject to the terms of paragraph 1, the General Assembly could meet in emergency special session within twenty-four hours of the request therefor, to consider and make recommendations for collective measures in any case where there appeared to be a threat to the peace, breach of the peace, or act of aggression;

(b) A Peace Observation Commission would be established which, for the calendar years 1951 and 1952, would consist of fourteen members and which, subject to the provisions in paragraph 3 of the resolution, would observe and report on the situation in any area where there existed international tension, the continuance of which was likely to endanger the maintenance of international peace and security. The Commission would have authority to appoint sub-commissions and to utilize the services of observers. The Secretary-General would provide necessary staff and facilities, utilizing, where directed by the Commission, the United Nations Panel of Field Observers envisaged in resolution 297 B (IV);

(c) A Collective Measures Committee would be established consisting of fourteen members. This Committee, in consultation with the Secretary-General and with Member States as the Committee found appropriate, would study and make a report to the Security Council and the General Assembly, not later than 1 September 1951, on methods, including those referred to in (d) below, which might be used to maintain and strengthen international peace and security, in accordance with the Charter.

(d) In connexion with the maintenance within national armed forces of elements which could be used collectively, the Secretary-General would appoint, with the approval of the Collective Measures Committee, a panel of military experts who could be made available upon request of Member States which wished to obtain technical advice regarding the organization, training and equipment of those elements for prompt service as United Nations units;

(e) The Secretary-General would furnish the staff and facilities necessary for the effective accomplishment of the purposes mentioned in (c) and (d) above.

The following preliminary estimates of the budgetary consequences of these proposals are submitted to the Fifth Committee for its use in accordance with rule 152 of the rules of procedure of the General Assembly.

A. ESTIMATE OF EXPENDITURES

I. Emergency special sessions of the General Assembly

2. If the General Assembly were to meet in emergency special session in 1951, additional expenses would be incurred in respect of travel of representatives, staff and technical servicing, and possibly local transportation. Expenses in the neighbourhood of $225,000 would be incurred if such a session were held at Flushing Meadow for a period of three weeks.

II. Activities of Peace Observation Commission

3. Additional costs in connexion with the activities of the Commission would relate to : (a) expenses of representatives of the Commission and of sub-commissions, subject to the qualifications made below; (b) contractual printing; (c) in the case of meetings held at Headquarters, possible provision for local transportation; (d) provision of field administrative staff and services for sub-commissions; (e) travel, salaries and allowances for field observers.

4. It is hoped that substantive staff required to service the Commission or sub-commissions will be found from the normal establishment of the Secretariat and that it will be possible to provide for servicing of meetings held in the New York area within the normal budget.

5. The draft resolution in A/C.1/592 contains no authorization for payment of expenses and per diem of representatives of the Commission, nor does it authorize payment of expenses of alternates on the Commission or sub-commissions. For purposes of financial estimate, it is assumed that :

(a) The sub-commissions can be construed as " commissions of inquiry " whose representatives would be entitled to payment of travelling and subsistence expenses under paragraph 2 of resolution 231 (III);

(b) The Commission itself, when meeting away from Headquarters, can also be considered a " commission of inquiry ", since it would meet at the call of the General Assembly, the Interim Committee or the Security Council, in order to " observe and report on the situation in any area " (A/C.1/592, paragraph 3);

(c) In the absence of specific authorization in the resolution, the travelling and subsistence expenses of alternates on the Commission or sub-commissions would not be paid by the United Nations.

6. On the basis of the assumptions stated, any meeting of the Commission for a single week at Headquarters would require expenditures for local transportation (if required) of about $1,200 and about $5,000 for contractual printing. A meeting held away from Headquarters would entail expenditures for travel and subsistence of representatives as well as administrative servicing and other miscellaneous costs.

7. The appointment of any sub-commissions in 1951 would entail expenses in connexion with temporary assistance, travel and subsistence of representatives, travel and subsistence of staff, communications, contractual printing and other miscellaneous requirements, including equipment.

8. With respect to the use of field observers, it is assumed that the financial provisions for such observers would be those specified in the report of the Special Committee on a United Nations Guard, which states : " When called into service, the Panel members would receive a daily subsistence allowance, and their Governments would be reimbursed for salaries and family allowances " (A/959¹, annex I).

III. Technical advice for United Nations military elements

9. No provision is made in the draft resolution for the payment by United Nations of expenses in connexion with the services of members of the proposed panel of military experts.

10. Extra costs of an indeterminate amount might have to be incurred for staff and related expenses in connexion with central administration of such a technical advice programme.

IV. Collective Measures Committee

11. The Committee, consisting of fourteen Member States, would be required to report to the Security Council and the General Assembly by not later than 1 September 1951. No payments by United Nations of expenses of representatives would be required, since the Committee would be composed of Governments. It may be calculated that, if the Committee met at Headquarters for periods approximating fifteen weeks in all, substantive and technical services could be supplied within the normal budget and only the following items would require special financial provisions :

	US dollars
Local transportation (if required)	2,100
Contractual printing (annual estimate)	10,000
TOTAL	12,100

B. METHODS OF FINANCING

12. The Secretary-General would propose that provision be made for the possible financing of any costs arising in 1951 with respect to emergency special sessions of the General Assembly, activities of the Peace Observation Commission, and technical advice for United Nations military elements, under the provisions with respect to unforeseen and extraordinary expenses related to the maintenance of peace and security.

13. With respect to the expenses which can be anticipated in connexion with the establishment of a Collective Measures Committee, the Secretary-General believes that the amounts of $2,100 and $10,000, respectively, to cover the costs for local transportation and contractual printing referred to in part IV above, can be met from the normal appropriations for 1951.

Report of the First Committee

Rapporteur : Mr. Thor THORS (Iceland)

[25 October 1950]

1. By a note dated 20 September 1950, addressed to the Secretary-General (A/1373), the United States delegation requested that the item "United action for peace" should be included in the agenda of the fifth session of the General Assembly. An explanatory memorandum (A/1377) outlined four proposals.

2. The General Assembly, at its 285th meeting on 26 September 1950, decided to include this item in its agenda and to refer it to the First Committee for consideration and report.

3. The First Committee considered the question at its 354th to 370th meetings inclusive.

4. The following draft resolutions were submitted :

(a) A draft resolution submitted at the 354th meeting by Chile (A/C.1/575) which, considering the inability of the Security Council to discharge its responsibilities due to the abusive use of the unanimity rule, and the desirability of strengthening the system of collective security, invited the Member States to adopt a pact in which they would undertake inter alia : to co-ordinate their resources, including armed forces, in order to ensure that the United Nations organs were able to react effectively and rapidly to any threat to the peace or act of aggression; to observe the resolutions of the Security Council and the General Assembly concerning the maintenance of peace and security; to respect individual liberties and fundamental human rights; and to co-ordinate their economic resources with a view to carrying out a comprehensive programme for the achievement of economic stability throughout the world. To these ends, the General Assembly would authorize the Interim Committee to investigate all questions relating to the maintenance of international peace and security and, in urgent cases, to recommend provisional measures to the States concerned; and to give consideration to the co-ordination of the resources, including armed forces, of the Member States, in order to give effect to the decisions or recommendations of the United Nations organs. It was further stipulated that if the Security Council failed to exercise effectively its duty to take action in any case of aggression, or any other breach of international peace, the General Assembly might consider the case and recommend appropriate measures to put an end to the situation. The General Assembly could be convened, with twenty-four hours' notice, at the request of the Interim Committee or any seven members of the Security Council;

(b) A joint draft resolution submitted at the 354th meeting by Canada, France, Philippines, Turkey, United Kingdom, United States and Uruguay (A/C.1/576), which provided (section A) that, if the Security Council, because of lack of unanimity among the permanent members, failed to exercise its primary responsibility regarding the maintenance of international peace and security in the case of a threat to the peace, breach of the peace or act of aggression, the General Assembly should immediately consider the matter, in regular or emergency session, and make appropriate recommendations to Members for collective measures, including when necessary the use of armed force. The General Assembly was authorized to meet in emergency special session within twenty-four hours at the request of any seven members of the Security Council. Section B provided for the establishment of a Peace Observation Commission which could observe and report on the situation in any area where there was international tension likely to endanger international peace and security. Upon the invitation or with the consent of the State into whose territory the Commission would go, the General Assembly or the Interim Committee could utilize the Peace Observation Commission if the Security Council was not exercising its functions under the Charter with respect to the matter in question. The Commission was authorized to appoint sub-commissions and to utilize the services of observers. Section C invited Member States to survey their resources in order to determine what assistance they could render in support of any recommendations of the Security Council or the General Assembly for the restoration of international peace and security. It was further recommended that each Member should maintain within its national armed forces elements which could promptly be made available to the United Nations on the recommendation of the Security Council or the General Assembly, without prejudice to the use of such elements for self-defence. It requested the Secretary-General to appoint a panel of military experts which could be placed at the disposal of Member States which desired their technical advice. Section D provided for the establishment of a Collective Measures Committee to study and report to the Security Council and the General Assembly, not later than 1 September 1951, on methods which could be used and resources, including armed forces, which could be made available to the United Nations by Member States for the maintenance of international peace and security;

(c) A draft resolution submitted at the 358th meeting by the Soviet Union (A/C.1/579), which recommended to the Security Council that it should take the necessary steps to ensure that the action provided for under the Charter was taken with respect to threats to the peace or acts of aggression and the peaceful settlement of disputes or situations likely to endanger the maintenance of international peace and security; and that the Council should devise measures for the earliest application of Articles 43, 45, 46 and 47 of the Charter regarding the placing of armed forces at the disposal of the Council by the Members of the United Nations and the effective functioning of the Military Staff Committee;

(d) A draft resolution presented at the 358th meeting by the Soviet Union (A/C.1/580), which recommended that, before armed forces were placed at the disposal of the Security Council under appropriate agreements concluded in accordance with Article 43 of the Charter, the permanent members of the Security Council should take steps to ensure the necessary implementation of Article 106 of the Charter;

(e) A joint draft resolution submitted by Iraq and Syria at the 363rd meeting (A/C.1/585), which recommended to the Governments of France, the United Kingdom, the United States and the Soviet Union that they should meet during the fifth session of the General Assembly and discuss afresh the outstanding problems threatening world peace and crippling the United Nations, with a view to resolving fundamental differences and reaching agreement in accordance with the spirit of the Charter, and report the results of their discussions to the General Assembly not later than 15 November 1950.

5. The following amendments were presented to the joint seven-Power draft resolution of Canada, France, Philippines, Turkey, United Kingdom, United States and Uruguay (A/C.1/576) :

(a) An amendment by Greece (A/C.1/577), submitted at the 354th meeting, to invite the Members of the United Nations to inform the Secretary-General as soon as possible of measures taken to maintain elements within their armed forces to be made available to the United Nations;

(b) Amendments submitted by Lebanon (A/C.1/578) at the 358th meeting to amend the preamble so as to include the second stated purpose of the United Nations (Article 1, paragraph 2, of the Charter); to recall the text of resolution 290 (IV) (Essentials of peace) relating to the principles of the Charter and to affirm the duty of Member States to implement resolutions adopted by the Security Council and the General Assembly with a view to the maintenance of peace and security; to insert in section A, regarding the recommendation of collective measures by the General Assembly, a safeguard regarding Articles 51 and 52 of the Charter; and to reformulate the statement of objectives in section D;

(c) Amendments submitted by Egypt (A/C.1/581) at the same meeting, to include in section B a recommendation to governments and authorities to co-operate with the Peace Observation Commission and the Collective Measures Committee; to add to section C a stipulation regarding equipment; to provide in section D for consultation by the Collective Measures Committee with States directly concerned; and to provide, also in section D, that the Collective Measures Committee should give priority to the equipment of national forces situated in sensitive areas, and which are comparatively under-equipped;

(d) Amendments submitted by Yugoslavia (A/C.1/582) at the 362nd meeting, to insert in the preamble a reference to Article 2, paragraph 7, of the Charter and to the principle of equal rights and self-determination of peoples; to limit the use of armed force as a collective measure under section A to cases of acts of aggression; and to confine additional items of an emergency special session to the matters dealt with in the draft resolution;

(e) Amendments submitted by the Soviet Union (A/C.1/583) at the same meeting, to delete from the preamble the third, sixth, seventh and eighth paragraphs, together with the reference to the veto in the fourth paragraph, and to invoke Article 106 of the Charter in place of the second part of the fifth paragraph of the preamble. In section A, paragraph 1, the U.S.S.R. amendments proposed to replace the provision for recommendations for collective measures by a provision for reference to the Security Council in accordance with Article 11 of the Charter; to extend the length of notice for the calling of an emergency special session from twenty-four hours to two weeks; and to authorize the calling of such sessions at the request of the majority of the Members of the United Nations or at the request of the Security Council instead of at the request of seven members of the Council. In section B, paragraph 3, the U.S.S.R. amendments proposed to insert a stipulation that the composition of the Peace Observation Commission should be of a representative character and should include the permanent members of the Security Council, and to delete the authorization to the Interim Committee to make use of the Peace Observation Commission. In section B, paragraph 6, it was proposed to delete the provision for the utilization of the United Nations Panel of Field Observers. It was proposed to delete sections C and D. Lastly, the U.S.S.R. amendment proposed consequential amendments to the rules of procedure contained in the annex to the joint draft resolution.

(f) Amendments submitted by Israel (A/C.1/584) at the same meeting, to insert in the preamble as a second paragraph a reaffirmation of the primary duty of Members to seek settlement of international disputes by peaceful means through the procedures of Chapter VI of the Charter, and to insert in the fifth paragraph a qualification indicating the primacy of Article 106 of the Charter; to stipulate in section A, as the condition of the contemplated recommendations by the General Assembly, that the Security Council should have failed to determine the existence of a breach of the peace or act of aggression or to adopt a cease-fire resolution and to secure its implementation; to delete the third sentence of paragraph 1 of section A; and, in section B, to delete the authorization to the Interim Committee to utilize the Peace Observation Commission.

6. At the 361st meeting, the United States representative, on behalf of the seven sponsors of the joint draft resolution, stated that certain provisions of the Chilean draft resolution and certain of the amendments which had been submitted were acceptable to the sponsors, and that the latter were prepared to submit a revised draft resolution incorporating the changes acceptable to them. At the 363rd meeting a seven-Power revised draft resolution (A/C.1/576/Rev.1) was submitted which incorporated certain parts of the amendments proposed by the delegations of Egypt (A/C.1/581), Greece (A/C.1/577), Lebanon (A/C.1/578) and Yugoslavia (A/C.1/582), and contained a new section (E) which embodied the principles set forth in the Chilean draft (A/C.1/575) concerning the dependence of genuine peace upon respect for and observance of human rights and fundamental freedoms and the establishment of economic and social well-being for all, particularly through the development of under-developed countries and areas.

7. The following amendments were submitted in respect of the revised joint draft resolution (A/C.1/576/Rev.1) :

(a) Amendments submitted by the Soviet Union (A/C.1/586) at the 363rd meeting, which superseded the previous amendments presented by that delegation (A/C.1/583). These revised amendments proposed, in addition to the proposals described in paragraph 5 (e) above, to delete the new paragraphs 9 and 12 of the revised joint draft resolution. A new text of the U.S.S.R. amendments was presented at the 368th meeting (A/C.1/586/Rev.1) containing, in addition to the earlier amendments, a re-draft of the U.S.S.R. amendment to paragraph 1 of section A to provide for recommendations by the General Assembly to maintain or restore international peace and security, subject to the last sentence of Article 11, paragraph 2, of the Charter. It further provided that emergency sessions of the General Assembly might be convened within ten days, and that the Peace Observation Commission should include Czechoslovakia, France, the People's Republic of China, the Soviet Union, the United Kingdom and the United States among its fourteen members;

(b) An amendment submitted by Egypt (A/C.1/587) at the 365th meeting, to add a new paragraph to section D to provide that the Collective Measures Committee should give particular attention to the degree of preparedness of national armed forces and their various requirements. The earlier amendment by Egypt to the same section (A/C.1/581), point 2 (b) was withdrawn;

(c) An amendment submitted by Lebanon (A/C.1/589) at the 368th meeting, to include among the statement of the conditions of lasting peace in section E, paragraph 14, the implementation of the resolutions of the Security Council and the General Assembly relating to the maintenance of international peace and security.

8. In respect of the U.S.S.R. draft resolution (A/C.1/579) (paragraph 4 (c) above), the representative of France submitted an amendment (A/C.1/591) at the 369th meeting, in order that the provisions of this draft resolution should not in any way prevent the General Assembly from fulfilling its functions under the draft resolution submitted by the seven sponsoring Powers. The representative of the U.S.S.R. accepted an oral Uruguayan amendment adding the words "breaches of the peace" after the words "threats to the peace".

9. In respect of the joint draft resolution of Iraq and Syria (A/C.1/585) (paragraph 4 (e) above), the representative of the U.S.S.R. submitted an amendment (A/C.1/588) at the 367th meeting to include the Government of the People's Republic of China among those governments which were asked to consult among themselves with a view to reaching agreement on the outstanding problems which threaten world peace.

10. At its 363rd meeting, the Committee began its consideration of the revised joint draft resolution section by section, beginning with the operative part. At the 365th meeting, on the proposal of the representative of Iraq, the Committee decided, by 25 votes to 19, with 13 abstentions, to postpone the vote on section A of the joint draft resolution pending consideration of the other sections. At the 366th meeting, the Committee decided, by 23 votes to 22, with 9 abstentions, to postpone voting until the conclusion of the debate on each section.

11. In the light of the revised joint draft resolution, a number of amendments were withdrawn, at the 363rd to 368th meetings inclusive, by the representatives of Egypt, Greece, Israel, Lebanon and Yugoslavia.

13. At the 369th meeting, the representative of the United Kingdom, on behalf of the sponsors of the seven-Power draft resolution (A/C.1/576/Rev.1), proposed that the Peace Observation Commission should be composed of representatives of China, Colombia, Czechoslovakia, France, India, Iraq, Israel, New Zealand, Pakistan, Sweden, Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, United Kingdom, United States of America and Uruguay, and that the Collective Measures Committee should be composed of representatives of Australia, Belgium, Brazil, Burma, Canada, Egypt, France, Mexico, Philippines, Turkey, United Kingdom, United States of America, Venezuela and Yugoslavia.

14. The representative of the U.S.S.R. orally proposed that the list of members of the Peace Observation Commission should be amended by substituting "the Chinese People's Republic" for "China".

15. After discussion, the Committee, by 40 votes to 7, with 10 abstentions, approved a French proposal that the U.S.S.R. amendment should be declared inadmissible.

The proposal of the sponsors of the seven-Power draft resolution concerning the membership of the Peace Observation Commission was approved by 50 votes to none, with 8 abstentions.

The proposal of the sponsors of the seven-Power draft resolution concerning the membership of the Collective Measures Committee was approved by 50 votes to none, with 5 abstentions.

The seven-Power draft resolution (A/C.1/576/Rev.1) as a whole, as amended, was put to the vote by roll-call and was approved by 50 votes to 5, with 3 abstentions.

The voting was as follows :

In favour : Afghanistan, Australia, Belgium, Bolivia, Brazil, Burma, Canada, Chile, China, Colombia, Costa Rica, Cuba, Denmark, Dominican Republic, Ecuador, Egypt, El Salvador, Ethiopia, France, Greece, Guatemala, Haiti, Honduras, Indonesia, Iran, Iraq, Israel, Lebanon, Liberia, Luxembourg, Mexico, Netherlands, New Zealand, Nicaragua, Norway, Pakistan, Panama, Paraguay, Peru, Philippines, Saudi Arabia, Sweden, Thailand, Turkey, Union of South Africa, United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland, United States of America, Uruguay, Venezuela, Yugoslavia.

16. The Committee then proceeded to vote on the U.S.S.R. draft resolutions (A/C.1/579 and A/C.1/580) and amendments thereto.

The first part of the amended U.S.S.R. draft resolution (A/C.1/579), as amended orally also by Uruguay, was approved by 54 votes to none, with 5 abstentions. (The second part of the amended U.S.S.R. draft resolution, in the form of the French proposal, was not put to the vote, as it was considered unnecessary to do so.)

The U.S.S.R. draft resolution (A/C.1/579) as a whole, as amended, was approved by 49 votes to none, with 9 abstentions.

The second U.S.S.R. draft resolution (A/C.1/580) was rejected by 34 votes to 6, with 18 abstentions.

17. The Committee then began consideration of the joint draft resolution of Iraq and Syria (A/C.1/585) and the U.S.S.R. amendment thereto (A/C.1/588).

18. At the 370th meeting, the representatives of Iraq and Syria submitted a revision (A/C.1/585/Rev.1) of their joint resolution which, instead of recommending that the Governments of France, the United Kingdom, the United States of America and the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics should meet in order to solve fundamental differences, recommended "to the permanent members of the Security Council that they meet and discuss individually or collectively and with other nations concerned, the outstanding problems which threaten world peace...". It was requested that they should report to the General Assembly during the fifth session on any prospective progress.

19. During the discussion which followed, various oral and one written amendment and some suggestions were submitted by the delegations of El Salvador (A/C.1/594), Brazil, Netherlands, Israel, Mexico, the United States of America and Yugoslavia. These amendments were all withdrawn in view of a new revision of the Iraqi-Syrian resolution (A/C.1/585/Rev.2) which was submitted at the next meeting and which incorporated most of the amendments.

20. After having recognized in the preamble, inter alia, that the Charter charges the Security Council with the primary responsibility for maintaining international peace and security, and having reaffirmed the importance of unanimity among the permanent members of the Security Council, this revised draft resolution recommended "to the permanent members of the Security Council that: (a) they meet and discuss, collectively or otherwise, and, if necessary, with other States concerned, all problems which are likely to threaten international peace and hamper the activities of the United Nations, with a view to their resolving fundamental differences and reaching agreement in accordance with the spirit and letter of the Charter; (b) they advise the General Assembly and, when it is not in session, the Members of the United Nations, as soon as appropriate, of the results of their consultations."

21. A U.S.S.R. proposal that the phrase "the permanent members of the Security Council" should be replaced by "the Governments of France, the United Kingdom, the United States of America, the People's Republic of China and the U.S.S.R." was, on the proposal of the Chinese representative, declared inadmissible by 26 votes to 13, with 16 abstentions.

22. Another U.S.S.R. proposal that the words "these being taken to include the People's Republic of China" should be inserted after the phrase "the permanent members of the Security Council" was, on the proposal of the United States, likewise declared inadmissible by 35 votes to 12, with 11 abstentions.

23. The Committee then proceeded to a vote on the revised draft resolution of Iraq and Syria (A/C.1/585/Rev.2).

The revised draft resolution of Iraq and Syria (A/C.1/585/Rev.2) was approved by 59 votes to none.

24. The First Committee recommends to the General Assembly the adoption of the following three resolutions:

RESOLUTION A

UNITING FOR PEACE

The General Assembly,

Recognizing that the first two stated Purposes of the United Nations are:

"To maintain international peace and security, and to that end: to take effective collective measures for the prevention and removal of threats to the peace, and for the suppression of acts of aggression or other breaches of the peace, and to bring about by peaceful means, and in conformity with the principles of justice and international law, adjustment or settlement of international disputes or situations which might lead to a breach of the peace", and

"To develop friendly relations among nations based on respect for the principle of equal rights and self-determination of peoples, and to take other appropriate measures to strengthen universal peace",

Reaffirming that it remains the primary duty of all Members of the United Nations, when involved in an international dispute, to seek settlement of such a dispute by peaceful means through the procedures laid down in Chapter VI of the Charter, and recalling the successful achievements of the United Nations in this regard on a number of previous occasions,

Finding that international tension exists on a dangerous scale,

Recalling its resolution 290 (IV) entitled "Essentials of peace", which states that disregard of the Principles of the Charter of the United Nations is primarily responsible for the continuance of international tension, and desiring to contribute further to the objectives of that resolution,

Reaffirming the importance of the exercise by the Security Council of its primary responsibility for the maintenance of international peace and security, and the duty of the permanent members to seek unanimity and to exercise restraint in the use of the veto,

Reaffirming that the initiative in negotiating the agreements for armed forces provided for in Article 43 of the Charter belongs to the Security Council and desiring to ensure that, pending the conclusion of such agreements, the United Nations has at its disposal means for maintaining international peace and security,

Conscious that failure of the Security Council to discharge its responsibilities on behalf of all the Member States, particularly those referred to in the two preceding paragraphs, does not relieve Member States of their obligations or the United Nations of its responsibility under the Charter to maintain international peace and security,

Recognizing in particular that such failure does not deprive the General Assembly of its rights or relieve it of its responsibilities under the Charter in regard to the maintenance of international peace and security,

Recognizing that discharge by the General Assembly of its responsibilities in these respects calls for possibilities of observation which would ascertain the facts and expose aggressors; for the existence of armed forces which could be used collectively; and for the possibility of timely recommendations by the General Assembly to Members of the United Nations for collective action which, to be effective, should be prompt,

1. Resolves that if the Security Council, because of lack of unanimity of the permanent members, fails to exercise its primary responsibility for the maintenance of international peace and security in any case where there appears to be a threat to the peace, breach of the peace, or act of aggression, the General Assembly shall consider the matter immediately with a view to making appropriate recommendations to Members for collective measures, including in the case of a breach of the peace or act of aggression the use of armed force when necessary, to maintain or restore international peace and security. If not in session at the time, the General Assembly may meet in emergency special session within twenty-four hours of the request therefor. Such emergency special session shall be called if requested by the Security Council on the vote of any seven members, or by a majority of the Members of the United Nations;

2. Adopts for this purpose the revisions in its rules of procedure set forth in the annex to this resolution;

B

3. Establishes a Peace Observation Commission, which for the calendar years 1951 and 1952 shall be composed of fourteen Members, namely : China, Colombia, Czechoslovakia, France, India, Iraq, Israel, New Zealand, Pakistan, Sweden, Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, United Kingdom, United States of America and Uruguay, and which could observe and report on the situation in any area where there exists international tension the continuance of which is likely to endanger the maintenance of international peace and security. Upon the invitation or with the consent of the State into whose territory the Commission would go, the General Assembly, or the Interim Committee when the Assembly is not in session, may utilize the Commission if the Security Council is not exercising the functions assigned to it by the Charter with respect to the matter in question. Decisions to utilize the Commission shall be made upon the affirmative vote of two-thirds of the members present and voting. The Security Council may also utilize the Commission in accordance with its authority under the Charter;

4. The Commission shall have authority in its discretion to appoint sub-commissions and to utilize the services of observers to assist it in the performance of its functions;

5. Recommends to all governments and authorities that they co-operate with the Commission and assist it in the performance of its functions;

6. Requests the Secretary-General to provide the necessary staff and facilities, utilizing where directed by the Commission the United Nations Panel of Field Observers envisaged in resolution 297 B (IV);

7. Invites each Member of the United Nations to survey its resources in order to determine the nature and scope of the assistance it may be in a position to render in support of any recommendations of the Security Council or the General Assembly for the restoration of international peace and security;

8. Recommends to the Members of the United Nations that each Member maintain within its national armed forces elements so trained, organized and equipped that they could promptly be made available, in accordance with their respective constitutional processes, for service as a United Nations unit or units, upon recommendation by the Security Council or General Assembly, without prejudice to the use of such elements in exercise of the right of individual or collective self-defence recognized in Article 51 of the Charter;

9. Invites the Members of the United Nations to inform the Collective Measures Committee as soon as possible of the measures taken in implementation of the preceding paragraph;

10. Requests the Secretary-General to appoint, with the approval of the Committee provided for in paragraph 11, a panel of military experts who could be made available upon request of Member States which wish to obtain technical advice regarding the organization, training, and equipment for prompt service as United Nations units of the elements referred to in paragraph 8;

D

11. Establishes a Collective Measures Committee consisting of fourteen Members, namely : Australia, Belgium, Brazil, Burma, Canada, Egypt, France, Mexico, Philippines, Turkey, United Kingdom, United States of America, Venezuela and Yugoslavia, and directs the Committee, in consultation with the Secretary-General and with Member States as the Committee finds appropriate, to study and make a report to the Security Council and the General Assembly, not later than 1 September 1951, on methods, including those of part C of this resolution, which might be used to maintain and strengthen international peace and security in accordance with the Purposes and Principles of the Charter, taking account of collective self-defence and regional arrangements (Articles 51 and 52 of the Charter);

12. Recommends to all Member States that they co-operate with the Committee and assist it in the performance of its functions;

13. Requests the Secretary-General to furnish the staff and facilities necessary for the effective accomplishment of the purposes set forth in parts C and D of this resolution;

14. The General Assembly, in adopting the proposals set forth above, is fully conscious that enduring peace will not be secured solely by collective security arrangements against breaches of international peace and acts of aggression, but that a genuine and lasting peace depends also upon the observance of all the Principles and Purposes established in the Charter of the United Nations, upon the implementation of the resolutions of the Security Council, the General Assembly and other principal organs of the United Nations intended to achieve the maintenance of international peace and security, and especially upon respect for and observance of human rights and fundamental freedoms for all and on the establishment and maintenance of conditions of economic and social well-being in all countries; and accordingly;

15. Urges Member States to respect fully, and to intensify joint action, in co-operation with the United Nations, to develop and stimulate universal respect for and observance of human rights and fundamental freedoms, and to intensify individual and collective efforts to achieve conditions of economic stability and social progress, particularly through the development of underdeveloped countries and areas.

ANNEX

The rules of procedure of the General Assembly are amended in the following respects :

1. The present text of rule 8 shall become paragraph (a) of that rule, and a new paragraph (b) shall be added to read as follows :

“Emergency special sessions pursuant to resolution 377 A (V) shall be convened within twenty-four hours of the receipt by the Secretary-General of a request for such a session from the Security Council, on the vote of any seven members thereof, or of a request from a majority of the Members of the United Nations expressed by vote in the Interim Committee or otherwise, or of the concurrence of a majority of Members as provided in rule 9.”

2. The present text of rule 9 shall become paragraph (a) of that rule and a new paragraph (b) shall be added to read as follows :

“This rule shall apply also to a request by any Member for an emergency special session pursuant to resolution 377 A (V). In such a case the Secretary-General shall communicate with other Members by the most expeditious means of communication available.”

3. Rule 10 is amended by adding at the end thereof the following :

“In the case of an emergency special session convened pursuant to rule 8 (b), the Secretary-General shall notify

RESOLUTION B

For the purpose of maintaining international peace and security, in accordance with the Charter of the United Nations, and, in particular with Chapters V, VI and VII of the Charter,

The General Assembly

Recommends to the Security Council :

That it should take the necessary steps to ensure that the action provided for under the Charter is taken with respect to threats to the peace, breaches of the peace or acts of aggression and the peaceful settlement of disputes or situations likely to endanger the maintenance of international peace and security;

That it should devise measures for the earliest application of Articles 43, 45, 46 and 47 of the Charter of the United Nations regarding the placing of armed forces at the disposal of the Security Council by the States Members of the United Nations and the effective functioning of the Military Staff Committee.

4. Rule 16 is amended by adding at the end thereof the following :

“The provisional agenda of an emergency special session shall be communicated to the Members of the United Nations simultaneously with the communication summoning the session.”

5. Rule 19 is amended by adding at the end thereof the following :

“During an emergency special session additional items concerning the matters dealt with in resolution 377 A (V) may be added to the agenda by a two-thirds majority of the Members present and voting.”

6. There is added a new rule to precede rule 65 to read as follows :

“Notwithstanding the provisions of any other rule and unless the General Assembly decides otherwise, in case of an emergency special session, the Assembly shall convene in plenary session only and proceed directly to consider the item proposed for consideration in the request for the holding of the session, without previous reference to the General Committee or to any other committee; the President and Vice-Presidents for such emergency special session shall be, respectively, the heads of those delegations from which were elected the President and Vice-Presidents of the previous session.”

tion of Articles 43, 45, 46 and 47 of the Charter of the United Nations regarding the placing of armed forces at the disposal of the Security Council by the States Members of the United Nations and the effective functioning of the Military Staff Committee.

The above dispositions should in no manner prevent the General Assembly from fulfilling its functions under resolution 377 A (V).

RESOLUTION C

The General Assembly,

Recognizing that the primary function of the United Nations is to maintain and promote peace, security and justice among all nations,

Recognizing the responsibility of all Member States in promoting the cause of international peace in accordance with their obligations as provided in the Charter,

Recognizing that the Charter charges the Security Council with the primary responsibility for maintaining international peace and security,

Reaffirming the importance of unanimity among the permanent members of the Security Council on all problems which are likely to threaten world peace,

Recalling its resolution 190 (III) entitled "Appeal to the Great Powers to renew their efforts to compose their differences and establish a lasting peace",

Recommends to the permanent members of the Security Council that :

(a) They meet and discuss, collectively or otherwise, and, if necessary, with other States concerned, all problems which are likely to threaten international peace and hamper the activities of the United Nations, with a view to their resolving fundamental differences and reaching agreement in accordance with the spirit and letter of the Charter;

(b) They advise the General Assembly and, when it is not in session, the Members of the United Nations, as soon as appropriate, of the results of their consultations.

STRENGTHENING OF DEMOCRATIC PRINCIPLES AS A MEANS OF CONTRIBUTING TO THE MAINTENANCE OF UNIVERSAL PEACE

1. At the 571st meeting of the First Committee, the representative of Chile declared that, in view of the approval by the Committee of the revised seven-Power draft resolution,² his delegation would have no resolution to propose under item 66 of the General Assembly agenda entitled "Strengthening of democratic principles as a means of contributing to the maintenance of universal peace". Consequently, he suggested that the item should be withdrawn.

2. The Committee adopted this suggestion, without objection.

3. The First Committee recommends to the General Assembly that item 66 should be withdrawn from its agenda.

DOCUMENT A/1462

Financial implications of the draft resolution proposed by the First Committee (A/C.1/592) : tenth report of 1950 of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions

[27 October 1950]

1. In accordance with a decision taken by the Fifth Committee at its 252nd meeting on 20 October 1950, the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions has considered a report submitted by the Secretary-General (A/C.5/388) on the financial implications of the draft resolution entitled "Uniting for peace" proposed by the First Committee (A/C.1/592).

2. The Secretary-General has proposed that any expenditure during 1951 under parts A, B and C of the draft resolution (A/C.1/592), which relate respectively to emergency special sessions of the General Assembly, activities of the Peace Observation Commission, and technical advice for United Nations military elements, should be financed from the Working Capital Fund under the provisions for unforeseen and extraordinary expenses relating to the maintenance of peace and security. The Advisory Committee concurs in this method of financing.

3. The Advisory Committee takes note that, as regards the Collective Measures Committee (A/C.1/592, part D), additional expenses, on the basis of meetings at Headquarters aggregating fifteen weeks in duration, would amount during 1951 to $12,400, comprising $2,400 for local transportation and $10,000 for contractual printing. This amount would, it is anticipated, be met from the normal appropriations for 1951.

4. As regards the payment of travel expenses and subsistence allowances, the Advisory Committee concurs in the assumptions, in respect of these items, on which the estimates are based, both in the case of the Peace Observation Commission (including sub-commissions and observers) and in the case of the Collective Measures Committee.

5. Attention is also drawn to the interpretation given in paragraphs 9 and 10 of the report by the Secretary-General (A/C.5/388) to the status of the panel of military experts. The Advisory Committee was informed, and it agrees, that it is possible to interpret paragraphs 10 and 13 of the draft resolution (A/C.1/592) in several ways, and accordingly it suggests that the estimate of expenditure for 1951 submitted by the Secretary-General may understate the expenditure for this technical service. The exact figure will depend upon the number of military experts to be appointed by the Secretary-General with the concurrence of the Collective Measures Committee, and upon the terms and conditions of their service. It is therefore not possible at this stage to arrive at a precise estimate.

DOCUMENT A/1463

Financial implications of the draft resolution proposed by the First Committee (A/1456) : report of the Fifth Committee

Rapporteur : Mr. B. G. FOURIE (Union of South Africa)

[28 October 1950]

1. In accordance with rule 152 of the rules of procedure of the General Assembly and with the request of the President in his letter dated 23 October 1950 (A/C.5/387), the Fifth Committee, at its 256th meeting held on 27 October 1950, considered the effect on the budget estimates for 1951 of the draft resolution adopted on 19 October 1950 by the First Committee entitled "Uniting for peace".

2. As a basis for its consideration of the financial implications of the draft resolution, the Fifth Committee had before it estimates submitted by the Secretary-General (A/C.5/388) and a report thereon by the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions (A/1462).

3. The Committee took note that, as regards the Collective Measures Committee (A/1456, resolution A, part D), additional expenses, on the basis of meetings at Headquarters aggregating fifteen weeks in duration, would amount during 1951 to $12,100, comprising $2,100 for local transportation and $10,000 for contractual printing. This amount would, it is anticipated, be met from the normal appropriations for 1951. The foregoing estimates are based on the assumption that, as the Collective Measures Committee is to be composed of Governments, no payment by the United Nations of expenses of representatives would be required.

4. As regards the activities of the Peace Observation Commission (resolution A, part B), the Fifth Committee considered and concurred in the assumptions on which the estimates for travel expenses and subsistence allowance had been based, namely :

(a) The sub-commissions can be construed as "commissions of inquiry" the members of which would be entitled to payment of travelling and subsistence expenses under paragraph 2 of General Assembly resolution 231 (III);

(b) The Commission itself, when meeting away from Headquarters, can also be considered a "commission of inquiry", since it would meet at the call of the General Assembly, the Interim Committee, or the Security Council, in order to "observe and report on the situation in any area";

(c) In the absence of specific authorization in the resolution, the travelling and subsistence expenses of alternates on the Commission or sub-commissions would not be paid by the United Nations.

5. The Committee was informed, and it agreed, that it was possible to interpret paragraphs 10 and 13 of the draft resolution in several ways; accordingly, it considered that the estimate for expenditure for 1951 submitted by the Secretary-General may understate expenditure likely to be incurred in connexion with the panel of military experts. It believed that the exact figure would depend upon the number of military experts to be appointed by the Secretary-General with the concurrence of the Collective Measures Committee, and upon the terms and conditions of their service. It was therefore not found possible to arrive at a precise estimate at the present time.

6. The Committee further took note of the Secretary-General's proposal that any expenditure incurred during 1951 under parts A, B and C of the draft resolution, relating respectively to emergency special sessions of the General Assembly, activities of the Peace Observation Commission, and technical advice for United Nations military elements, should be financed from the Working Capital Fund under the provisions for unforeseen and extraordinary expenses relating to the maintenance of peace and security.

7. In the course of the discussion, the representative of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics stated that, since the resolution violated provisions of the Charter, his delegation was opposed to the approval of the estimates relating to the financial implications of the resolution.

8. The representative of Colombia raised a question in regard to the payment of travelling expenses and per diem of members of the two proposed bodies and of any sub-commissions. The Chairman of the Fifth Committee and the Chairman of the Advisory Committee clarified the position to the satisfaction of the Colombian representative. Their explanations will be found in the summary records of the 256th meeting of the Fifth Committee (paras. 74 to 78).

9. The recommendations of the Advisory Committee concerning the effect on the budget estimates for 1951 of the draft resolution proposed by the First Committee were then approved by 33 votes to 5, with no abstentions.

10. The Fifth Committee, therefore, decided to recommend to the General Assembly that note should be taken of the foregoing financial implications of the draft resolution proposed by the First Committee.

Union of Soviet Socialist Republics: draft resolution (revision of draft resolution in document A/1376)

[23 October 1950]

The General Assembly,

Considering that the most important task of the United Nations is to maintain international peace and security, and to strengthen and develop friendly relations among nations and co-operation between them in solving international problems,

Expressing its firm determination to avert the threat of a new war and sharing the nations' inflexible will to peace as expressed by the hundreds of millions of signatures appended to the Stockholm Appeal,

Regarding the use of the atomic weapon and other means of the mass destruction of human beings as a most heinous international crime against humanity and basing this attitude on the unanimously adopted General Assembly resolution (1 (I)) of 1946 on the need for prohibiting the use of atomic energy for military purposes,

Noting that the events at present taking place in Korea and other areas of the Pacific Ocean emphasize with added force the extreme importance and urgency, from the point of view of international peace and security, of unifying for this purpose the efforts of the five Powers which are permanent members of the Security Council and bear special responsibility for the maintenance of international peace,

Decides to adopt the following declaration:

1. The General Assembly condemns the propaganda in favour of a new war now being conducted in a number of countries and urges all States to prohibit such propaganda in their countries and call those responsible to account.

2. The General Assembly, recognizing that the use of the atomic weapon as a weapon of aggression and the mass destruction of human beings is contradictory to international conscience and honour and incompatible with membership in the United Nations, declares that the use of the atomic weapon shall be unconditionally prohibited and that a strict system of international control shall be instituted to ensure the exact and unconditional observance of this prohibition.

The General Assembly also declares that the first government to use the atomic weapon or any other means for the mass destruction of human beings against any country will thereby commit a crime against humanity and be regarded as a war criminal.

3. The General Assembly, acting in recognition of the need for strengthening peace, and taking into account the special responsibilities of the permanent members of the Security Council for ensuring peace, unanimously expresses the desire:

(a) That the United States of America, the United Kingdom, France, China and the Soviet Union should combine their efforts for peace and conclude among themselves a pact for the strengthening of peace;

(b) That these great Powers should reduce their present armed forces (land forces, military air forces of all kinds, naval forces) by one-third during 1950-1951 and that the question of a further reduction of armed forces should be brought up for consideration at one of the forthcoming sessions of the General Assembly.

Bolivia: draft resolution

[25 October 1950]

The General Assembly,

Considering that the main task of the United Nations is to maintain international peace and security and develop friendly relations among its Members,

Believing that the use of atomic weapons as instruments of aggression would be contrary to the principles of the Charter of the United Nations,

Realizing that a new threat to peace has arisen in the form of intervention by one State in the domestic affairs of another for the purpose of forcibly changing its government,

Noting that the lack of agreement among the permanent members of the Security Council, who bear special responsibility for the maintenance of international peace, has developed into a dangerous armaments race,

Decides to adopt the following declaration:

1. The General Assembly condemns all propaganda in favour of a new war.

2. The General Assembly condemns the use of atomic weapons as instruments of aggression and urges the early adoption of a strict system of international control to prevent their being so used.

3. The General Assembly condemns the intervention of a State in the internal affairs of another for the purpose of forcibly changing its legally established government.

4. The General Assembly views with concern the lack of agreement prevailing among the permanent members of the Security Council, and urges them to seek new ways of understanding and accord, so that once their present differences have been eliminated, their gradual disarmament may begin under an effective system of international supervision, through the United Nations.

[25 October 1950]

The General Assembly,

Recognizing the profound desire of all mankind to live in enduring peace and security,

Confident that, if all governments faithfully reflect this desire and observe their obligations under the Charter, such lasting peace and security can be established,

Solemnly reaffirming that, whatever the weapons used, any aggression, whether committed openly or by fomenting civil strife, is the gravest of all crimes against peace and security throughout the world,

Determines that for the realization of lasting peace and security it is indispensable:

1. That prompt united action be taken against aggression;

2. That every nation agree

(a) To accept effective international control of atomic energy under the United Nations on the basis already approved by the General Assembly in order to make effective the prohibition of atomic weapons; and

(b) To regulate all armaments and armed forces under a United Nations system of control and inspection, with a view to their gradual reduction;

Declares that these goals can be attained if all the Members of the United Nations demonstrate by their deeds their will to achieve peace.

PEACE THROUGH DEEDS

The General Assembly,

Recognizing the profound desire of all mankind to live in enduring peace and security,

Confident that, if all governments faithfully reflect this desire and observe their obligations under the Charter, such lasting peace and security can be established,

Condemning the intervention of a State in the internal affairs of another State for the purpose of forcibly changing its legally established government,

Solemnly reaffirms that, whatever the weapons used, any aggression, whether committed openly or by fomenting civil strife in the interest of a foreign Power, is the gravest of all crimes against peace and security throughout the world.

The remainder of the text of this draft resolution, beginning with the words, "Determines that . . ." is identical with that of the preceding document, the six-Power draft resolution (A/C.1/597). [26 October 1950]

The General Assembly,

Considering that the prevalence of hunger, disease and want in large areas of the world creates discontent, fosters disorder, and is therefore a danger to world peace, and stability,

Considering that the existence of large armaments and their unchecked growth, besides being a threat to international peace and security, lead to the diversion of human and economic resources which would otherwise be available for raising the standard of life in the under-developed areas of the world,

Considering further that immediate steps should be taken to carry out the recommendation contained in paragraph 15 of resolution . . . [377 (V)] on "Uniting for peace", Recommends the creation of a United Nations peace fund for the development of under-developed areas; and

Further recommends that each Member of the United Nations prepare and send to the Secretary-General before March 1951, a scheme setting forth the principles and the scale on which it would be prepared

(a) Progressively to reduce its armaments, and

(b) To contribute to the above-mentioned fund.

[27 October 1950]

The General Assembly,

Recognizing the desire of all mankind for enduring peace and security,

Considering that it is the task of the United Nations to maintain international peace and security, to develop friendly relations among nations and to promote social progress and better standards of life in larger freedom,

Convinced that the purposes of the United Nations cannot easily be attained without the observance and the universal application of the principles of democracy and social justice,

Noting that the distress of the masses is a powerful factor making for the instability of peace,

Considering that propaganda against peace tends to take the form of propaganda to intimidate the peoples by distorting the real significance of genuine peace and democracy and by claiming a monopoly of peace and democracy for certain countries the institutions of which differ from those of the great majority of the United Nations,

Confident, nevertheless, that if all governments faithfully reflect this desire and observe their obligations under the Charter, such lasting peace and security can be established,

Solemnly reaffirming that, whatever the weapons used, any aggression whether committed openly or by fomenting civil strife is the gravest of all crimes against peace and security throughout the world,

Declares that to achieve lasting peace and security it is essential that joint and rapid action should be taken against aggression:

Reaffirms its resolutions 110 (II) and 290 (IV), paragraph 8, which condemn all propaganda against peace and recommend the free exchange of information and ideas as an essential condition of good neighbourly relations between the peoples, and notes that such propaganda likewise includes:

(1) Incitement to conflicts or acts of aggression;

(2) Measures tending to isolate the peoples from any contact with the outside world, preventing the Press, radio and other media of communication from reporting international events, and hindering mutual comprehension and understanding between peoples; and

(3) Measures tending to silence or distort the activities of the United Nations in favour of peace or preventing the people of one country from having knowledge of the views of other States Members;

Recommends the creation of a United Nations peace fund to assist in the struggle against distress and promote the development of under-developed areas;

Establishes a special commission of eighteen members to study the details of the establishment of such a fund;

Considers that it is necessary that every nation agree

(a) To accept effective international control of atomic energy under the United Nations on the basis already approved by the General Assembly in order to make effective the prohibition of atomic weapons; and

(b) To regulate all armaments and armed forces under a United Nations system of control and inspection, with a view to their gradual reduction;

Declares that these goals can be attained if all the Members of the United Nations demonstrate by their deeds their will to achieve peace.

DOCUMENT A/1490Report of the First Committee

[8 November 1950]

1. By a letter dated 20 September 1950 addressed to the President of the General Assembly (A/1376), the delegation of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics requested that the item "Declaration on the removal of the threat of a new war and the strengthening of peace and security among the nations" should be included in the agenda of the fifth session of the General Assembly.

2. The General Assembly, at its 286th meeting on 26 September 1950 on the recommendation of the General Committee, decided to include this question in its agenda and to refer it to the First Committee for consideration and report.

3. The First Committee considered the question at its 372nd to 383rd meetings inclusive.

4. The following draft resolutions were submitted:

(a) A draft resolution submitted by the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics (A/C.1/595) at the 372nd meeting, condemning propaganda in favour of a new war, and urging all States to prohibit such propaganda and call those responsible to account; declaring that the use of the atomic weapon shall be unconditionally prohibited and that a strict system of international control shall be instituted to ensure the observance of this prohibition; declaring that the first government to use the atomic weapon or any other means of mass destruction against any country would be committing a crime against humanity and be regarded as a war criminal; expressing the desire that the permanent members of the Security Council should conclude among themselves a pact for the strengthening of peace, and that they should reduce their armed forces of all kinds by one-third during 1950-1951 and that the question of further reduction should be considered at one of the forthcoming sessions of the General Assembly.

(b) A draft resolution presented at the 375th meeting by Bolivia (A/C.1/596), condemning all propaganda in favour of a new war; condemning the use of atomic weapons as instruments of aggression; urging early adoption of a strict system of international atomic control; and further condemning intervention of a State in the internal affairs of another State for the purpose of forcibly changing its legally established government. The draft resolution also urged the permanent members of the Security Council to seek new ways of achieving understanding so that, once their differences had been eliminated, their gradual disarmament might begin under an effective system of international supervision.

(c) A joint draft resolution submitted at the 375th meeting by France, Lebanon, Mexico, Netherlands, the United Kingdom and the United States of America (A/C.1/597), proposing that the General Assembly determine that for the realization of lasting peace and security it was indispensable that prompt united action be taken against aggression; and that every nation agree (i) to accept effective international control of atomic energy on the basis already approved by the General Assembly to make effective the prohibition of atomic weapons, and (ii) to regulate all armaments and armed forces under a United Nations system of control and inspection, with a view to their gradual reduction. The draft resolution finally declared that these goals could be attained if all the Members demonstrated by their deeds their will to achieve peace.

(d) A draft resolution submitted by India (A/C.1/598) at the 377th meeting, recommending the creation of a United Nations peace fund for the development of under-developed areas, and further recommending that each Member of the United Nations, before March 1951, send to the Secretary-General a scheme setting forth the principles and the scale on which it would be prepared progressively to reduce its armaments, and to contribute to a United Nations peace fund.

(e) A draft resolution submitted at the 381st meeting by Chile (A/C.1/603) which had originally been submitted as an amendment (A/C.1/601) to the joint draft resolution (A/C.1/597). After having reaffirmed General Assembly resolutions 110 (II) and 290 (IV), paragraph 8, condemning all propaganda against peace and recommending the free exchange of information and ideas, this draft resolution declared that such propaganda likewise included the following: (i) incitement to conflicts or acts of aggression; (ii) measures tending to isolate the peoples of one country from contact with the outside world; and (iii) measures tending to silence or distort the peace activities of the United Nations or preventing the peoples from knowing the views of other Member States.

(f) A draft resolution submitted at the 379th meeting by Greece (A/C.1/602) which incorporated the Chilean proposal (A/C.1/603) and also took up the Indian proposal regarding a United Nations peace fund which was to be studied by a special commission of eighteen members, established for that purpose. This draft resolution further incorporated the sub-paragraphs of the joint draft resolution (A/C.1/597) regarding the necessity for agreement among all nations as to the effective international control of atomic energy and the regulation of armaments and armed forces.

5. At the 380th meeting, the six sponsors of the joint draft resolution, joined by Bolivia, submitted a revised draft resolution (A/C.1/597/Rev.1) incorporating certain provisions of the Bolivian draft resolution (A/C.1/596), which was subsequently withdrawn. The revised text amended the original six-Power draft resolution, inter alia, by introducing the heading "Peace through deeds" and by inserting in the preamble a new paragraph condemning the intervention of a State in the internal affairs of another State for the purpose of forcibly changing its legally established government.

6. At the 382nd meeting, two amendments (A/C.1/605) submitted by Egypt to the revised joint draft resolution (A/C.1/597/Rev.1) substituted, in the fourth paragraph, the word "otherwise" for the words "by fomenting civil strife in the interest of a foreign Power"; and, at the end of sub-paragraph (2) (a) of the fifth paragraph, added the words "all other weapons adaptable to mass destruction".

7. At the 383rd meeting, the seven sponsors of the revised draft resolution, together with India, submitted a second revised joint draft resolution (A/C.1/597/Rev.2) containing certain amendments to meet the points raised in the above-mentioned Egyptian amendments and the Indian draft resolution (A/C.1/598). It was proposed, inter alia, that the words "or otherwise" be inserted after the words "or by fomenting civil strife in the interest of a foreign Power". Furthermore, two new sub-paragraphs were added to the second paragraph of the operative part, regarding control and elimination of all weapons of mass destruction, the reduction of armament expenses to a minimum and the development of human and economic resources for the general welfare, with due regard to the needs of under-developed areas.

8. At the 380th meeting, India and Greece withdrew their draft resolutions (A/C.1/598 and A/C.1/602), while Egypt withdrew its second amendment (A/C.1/605).

9. At the 382nd meeting, the Byelorussian SSR, Czechoslovakia, Poland, the Ukrainian SSR and the USSR submitted amendments (A/C.1/607 and Corr.1) to the revised joint draft resolution (A/C.1/597/Rev.1). These five-Power amendments proposed, inter alia, the insertion of a new paragraph recognizing that the use of the atomic weapon is contrary to conscience and incompatible with membership in the United Nations. It was further proposed to replace two sub-paragraphs (2) (a) and (c) under paragraph 2 of the operative part by new text to the effect that all nations should agree on the unconditional prohibition of atomic weapons and the establishment of strict international control under United Nations supervision, and that all armaments and armed forces should be regulated in such a way as to initiate the reduction in the year 1950-1951. Lastly, the five Powers proposed the insertion of three new sub-paragraphs under paragraph 2, declaring, inter alia, that the government which first uses the atomic weapons or other means of mass destruction would be regarded as committing a crime against humanity, and condemning any form of propaganda for a new war.

10. At the 382nd meeting, the USSR draft resolution (A/C.1/595) was put to the vote with the following results:

The first paragraph of the preamble was rejected by 25 votes to 13, with 15 abstentions.

A Chilean proposal that the second paragraph of the preamble be put to the vote in two parts was adopted by 14 votes to 8, with 30 abstentions.

(b) The remainder of the paragraph was rejected by 43 votes to 5, with 7 abstentions.

The third paragraph of the preamble was rejected by 29 votes to 6, with 21 abstentions.

The fourth paragraph was rejected by 35 votes to 12, with 9 abstentions.

Paragraph 1 of the operative part was rejected by 38 votes to 7, with 12 abstentions.

11. At the 383rd meeting, the revised joint draft resolution (A/C.1/597/Rev.2) and the amendments thereto were put to the vote with the following results:

The three paragraphs of the preamble were approved unanimously, by 53 votes.

The five-Power amendment (A/C.1/607 and Corr.1, amendment 1) to the fourth paragraph¹ was rejected by 37 votes to 5, with 10 abstentions.

The Egyptian amendment (A/C.1/605, amendment 1) to the fourth paragraph was rejected by 24 votes to 8, with 21 abstentions.

The fourth paragraph of the revised joint draft resolution was approved by 48 votes to none, with 5 abstentions.

Sub-paragraph (2) (d) was approved unanimously, by 53 votes.

The three parts of the five-Power amendment (A/C.1607 and Corr.1, amendment 6) to add three new sub-paragraphs were voted on separately.

2. Between paragraphs 1 and 2, insert the following new paragraph:

"Recognizes that the use of the atomic weapon as a weapon of aggression and mass destruction is contrary to international conscience and honour and incompatible with membership of the United Nations,"

3. In paragraph 2 (1), after the words "be taken", insert the words "in conformity with the provisions of Chapter VII of the Charter of the United Nations";

4. Amend paragraph 2, sub-paragraph (2) (a), to read as follows:

"On the unconditional prohibition of atomic weapons and the establishment of strict international control, under United Nations supervision, over the scrupulous and unconditional implementation of this ban, in order to make effective the prohibition of atomic weapons;"

5. Amend paragraph 2, sub-paragraph (2) (c) to read as follows:

"To regulate all armaments and armed forces in such a way as to proceed, beginning in the year 1950-1951, to the reduction of armaments and armed forces;"

6. In paragraph 2, after sub-paragraph (2) (d), add three new paragraphs as follows:

“Declares that the Government which first uses against any country the atomic weapon or any other means of mass destruction of human beings will thereby commit a crime against humanity and will be regarded as a war criminal;

“Condemns any form of propaganda for a new war;

“Notes that the reduction of armaments and armed forces and the condemnation of propaganda for a new war are of great importance for the strengthening of peace and security among the nations;”

DOCUMENT A/1382

Communication dated 21 September 1950 addressed to the Secretary-General by the delegation of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics

Flushing Meadow, 21 September 1950

The Chairman of the delegation of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics to the fifth session of the General Assembly of the United Nations presents his compliments to the Secretary-General of the United Nations and in connexion with the question of " United States aggression against China ", proposed by the delegation of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics for inclusion in the agenda of the fifth session of the General Assembly, has the honour to enclose, in accordance with rule 20 of the General Assembly's rules of procedure, an explanatory note on that question.

EXPLANATORY NOTE ON THE QUESTION OF UNITED STATES AGGRESSION AGAINST CHINA PROPOSED BY THE U.S.S.R. DELEGATION FOR INCLUSION IN THE AGENDA OF THE FIFTH SESSION OF THE GENERAL ASSEMBLY

Under rule 15 of the rules of procedure of the General Assembly, the U.S.S.R. delegation proposes that the question of United States aggression against China should be included in the agenda of the fifth session of the General Assembly as a matter of importance and urgency. This question is of exceptional importance in view of the fact on 27 June 1950 the President of the United States officially stated that he had issued orders to the United States armed forces concerning operations in connexion with the Chinese island of Taiwan.

This order was immediately followed by the blockade of the island of Taiwan by the United States navy and the invasion of the island by United States armed forces. These actions by the United States Government against Taiwan, which is an integral part of Chinese territory, not only represent gross interference by the United States Government in the internal affairs of China, which in itself is a flagrant violation of the United Nations Charter but also constitute a direct encroachment upon the territorial integrity of China and a direct act of aggression against the People's Republic of China. As is known, this aggression against China by the United States was followed by other acts of American aggression consisting in the bombing and machine-gunning of Chinese territory in the area of the Manchurian-Korean frontier by the United States air force, causing loss of life and damage to buildings and installations.

These hostile acts by the United States Government against China represent a gross violation of important principles of the United Nations Charter, including the principles of territorial inviolability and the political independence of States, constitute a serious threat to international peace and security and call for immediate action by the United Nations.

Telegram dated 17 October 1950 from the Minister for Foreign Affairs of the Central People's Government of the People's Republic of China addressed to the President of the General Assembly and to the Secretary-General

[19 October 1950]

On 26 September 1950 the fifth session of the United Nations General Assembly adopted on its agenda the complaint of United States aggression against China submitted by the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics representative, and on 7 October 1950 the fifth session of the United Nations General Assembly adopted on its agenda the complaint against United States invasion of Chinese territorial air, strafing and bombing Chinese territory and shelling a Chinese ship. The Central People's Government of the People's Republic of China, being the sole legal Government representing the Chinese people, has the right and necessity to send its delegation to attend and join the fifth session of the United Nations General Assembly. In the name of the Central People's Government of the People's Republic of China, I hereby firmly demand from the fifth session of the United Nations General Assembly, that when the General Assembly and its related Committees proceed with the above-mentioned two items, there must be present the representative of the People's Republic of China to state the case and participate in the discussion. This is the inalienable right of the Central People's Government of the People's Republic of China and a just demand in complete accordance with the spirit of the United Nations Charter, which could not be obliterated. Should the fifth session of the United Nations General Assembly proceed with the above-mentioned items without the attendance and participation in the discussion of the representative of the People's Republic of China, all the resolutions adopted by it would be illegal, and consequently null and void.

On 7 October 1950 the fifth session of the United Nations General Assembly adopted without any justification on its agenda the so-called "Question of Formosa" submitted by the United States. In submitting this item, the United States obviously attempted to arrogate the name of the United Nations in its interference with the internal affairs of China and its violation of Chinese territory and sovereignty. Taiwan is an inseparable part of the territory of China. This is not only a fact based on history, confirmed by the situation since the surrender of Japan, but also corroborated by the Cairo Declaration of 1943 and the Potsdam Declaration of 1945. In connexion with Taiwan, there exists today only the fact of United States aggression on Taiwan, the territory of China; there is no such so-called "Question of Formosa" concerning the status or future of Taiwan. The adoption on its agenda of the so-called "Question of Formosa" by the United Nations General Assembly, under the manipulation of the United States, is an unjustified decision in violation of the United Nations Charter and of international law. In the name of the Central People's Government of the People's Republic of China and of the 475 million Chinese people, I hereby raise a strong protest before the United Nations General Assembly, and firmly oppose the inclusion in the agenda of the United Nations General Assembly or any other meetings of the so-called "Question of Formosa" submitted by the United States in transgression of the sovereignty and independence of China. I also firmly demand that the United Nations General Assembly cancel this illegal decision.

Statement by General Wu Hsiu-chuan, representative of the People's Republic of China, in support of the charge of United States aggression against China made by the representative of the Soviet Union, Mr. Vyshinsky, in the Committee on Political and Security Questions of the United Nations General Assembly¹

[6 February 1951]

I have listened to the speech on November 27² by the representative of the Soviet Union, Mr. Vyshinky, charging the United States with aggression against China. In the name of the Central People's Government of the People's Republic of China, I hereby support and uphold completely the entire speech by the representative of the Soviet Union, Mr. Vyshinky, on the charge of United States aggression against China. The Soviet Union has always been in history the great friend of the Chinese people. Shortly after the victory of the great Socialist October Revolution of the Soviet Union, it renounced the unequal treaties concluded with China by Czarist Russia and adopted a policy of real equality with China. After the establishment of the Central People's Government of the People's Republic of China, the Soviet Union concluded with China the truly friendly Sino-Soviet Treaty of Friendship, Alliance and Mutual Assistance, which solidified in the form of a treaty the profound friendship between the people of China and the people of the Soviet Union.

Mr. Vyshinsky's speech once again demonstrates that the Soviet Union is the most reliable friend and ally of the Chinese people in their resistance to imperialist aggression and their construction of a people's China. All the imperialist aggressors, especially the United States imperialist aggressors, are afraid of the unity between the people's China and the Soviet Union. They are afraid of the Sino-Soviet Treaty of Friendship, Alliance and Mutual Assistance which opposes imperialist aggression and defends the mutual interests of China and the Soviet Union. As China and the Soviet Union are united, it becomes difficult for the imperialists to carry out their aggressive plots. The strength of the firmly united 700 million people of China and the Soviet Union is the greatest obstacle to the course of imperialist aggression. Hence, in their despair, the imperialist aggressors have devised various measures in their attempt to wedge a cleavage in the relationship between the two great allies of China and the Soviet Union. But I must tell these imperialist aggressors: the great unity between China and the Soviet Union is unshakable. All your conspiracies of wedging a cleavage are futile, doomed to failure and have already failed.

² See Official Records of the General Assembly, Fifth Session, First Committee, 407th meeting.

I have also listened to the reply to Mr. Vyshinsky's speech by the United States representative, Mr. Dulles, on the same date³. However, Mr. Dulles' reply to Mr. Vyshinsky, Mr. Austin's speech⁴ on this same question and his reply to my speech in the Security Council, and the arguments of the representative of the United Kingdom, Sir Gladwyn Jebb⁵ supporting the United States representative—all such speeches, replies and arguments are a distortion of the facts and a perversion of the truth, unable to withstand any examination. They have talked much. But whatever they have talked, whether it be history or philosophy, politics or economics, they could never succeed in making their argument consistent. This is because they are determined to support aggression and argue for aggression. They wish to call aggression as defence, to call resistance to aggression as aggression, to call war as peace, to call truth as falsehood and to call black as white. But regardless of how eloquent they are, this is impossible after all.

With regard to the problem under our present discussion, is it possible for them to talk out of existence the massive object stationed at Taiwan Strait—the United States Seventh Fleet invading and occupying China's territory, Taiwan? Is it possible for them to talk about the violations of China's territorial air, bombing, strafing and reconnoitering of thousands of United States aeroplanes for hundreds of times, as if such events had not occurred at all? No, this is not possible. But to do the impossible—this is exactly the mission here of Mr. Dulles, Mr. Austin and other representatives of the Anglo-American bloc.

With the pose of kind heart, Mr. Dulles started his speech with a discussion of the friendship between the people of China and the people of the United States. Let us then take up the discussion of the friendship between the Chinese people and the American people. Is there a profound friendship between the Chinese people and the American people? Yes. At the time of my arrival at New York, I pointed out: there has always been a profound friendship between the Chinese people and the American people. I would like to emphasize again: not only has there been in the past a profound friendship between the Chinese people and the American people, not only is there a profound friendship at present, but this friendship will also continue to exist in the future. But the friendship between the Chinese people and the American people has no similarity whatsoever with the so-called friendship, which Messrs. Dulles, Austin, Acheson and Truman have spoken of, between the United States imperialist aggressors and the Chinese people who suffer such aggression. Mr. Dulles and Mr. Austin made much effort in their speeches to prove the existence of the friendship of the United States imperialist aggressors towards the Chinese people. According to Mr. Dulles, this friendship was not based primarily upon American commercial interests in China, but upon cultural and humanitarian motives. It is claimed that this has always been the case in the relationship between the United States imperialists and China for the past 150 years.

What is actually this so-called friendship of the United States imperialists for the Chinese people in history? What is the actual content of their cultural and humanitarian endeavours in China? Who are actually their friends in China?

The United States imperialists, just as those of the United Kingdom, are the first ones among the opium peddlars who transported opium to China. A very large part of the opium confiscated in 1839 at Canton was taken from American opium sellers. During the Opium War, United States Naval Commander Kearny personally led a squadron of naval vessels to the China Sea to render moral support to the British armed forces. In July 1844, the Manchu Government of China was forced to sign the Treaty of Wanghia with the United States, which created for the first time such provisions as "extraterritorial rights" and "equal opportunity". The Treaty of Wanghia is one of the first unequal treaties concluded by the Manchu Government with foreign governments.

During the period from 1857 to 1860, when Great Britain and France jointly invaded China, occupying Tientsin and Peking, the United States naval vessels also participated in the action. The United States Government further took advantage of the situation to force the Manchu Government into signing the Sino-American Treaty of Tientsin (1858) and obtained thereby the special rights of restrictions on China's customs and privileges in China's inland navigation.

In 1862, the United States Consul in Shanghai directed Ward and other Americans to organize troops together with British nationals for helping the Manchu Government to suppress the Taiping Revolutionary Movement of the Chinese people.

In 1872, the United States troops invaded Korea. In 1873, in addition to the invasion of Korea, the United States invaded Taiwan jointly with Japan. In 1874, the United States again invaded Korea jointly with Japan.

In 1900, the United States participated in the eight nation invasion of China and obtained with other imperialist Powers in the Treaty of Peking the special rights of stationing troops in Peking and other Chinese cities.

In September 1917, the Secretary of State of the United States, Mr. Lansing, concluded an agreement with the Japanese Foreign Minister, Ishii, which recognized the special rights of Japan in China. In 1919, the United States further recognized in the Paris Peace Conference the Japanese succession to the special rights of Germany in the Shantung Province.

⁴ Ibid., 439th meeting.

⁵ See Official Records of the Security Council, Fifth Year, Nos. 69, 70 and 72.

From 1922 to 1924, the United States Government supplied military and financial support to the Chinese warlords of the Chihli clique, Tsao Kun and Wu Pei-fu to carry out the civil war.

In the massacre of 30 May 1925, the United States imperialists participated in the slaughtering of the Chinese people.

In April 1927, in order to suppress the Great Revolution of China and to promote, in particular, the surrender of Chiang Kai-shek to imperialism, the United States Government together with the United Kingdom bombarded Nanking, creating the "Massacre of Hsiakuan".

From 1931 to 1933, the United States supplied the Chiang Kai-shek reactionary government with loans (one of which amounted to 50 million U.S. dollars), aeroplanes, and military advisers, to attack the Red Army of the Chinese workers and peasants led by the Communist Party of China.

During the period of Japanese invasion of China, the United States Government supplied Japan with a vast amount of war materials. According to Japanese official publications, war materials imported from the United States accounted for 33.5 per cent of the total Japanese imports of war materials in 1937. In March 1940, the percentage further increased to 38.7. As late as the end of 1944, imports of scrap iron from the United States to Japan accounted for 70 per cent of the total Japanese imports of scrap iron.

After the surrender of Japan, the United States Government became even more active in its aggression against China in an attempt to replace the Japanese rule over China and to reduce China to a colony of the United States. On 4 November 1946, the United States Government concluded with Chiang Kai-shek the notorious aggressive treaty, the Sino-American Treaty of Friendship, Commerce and Navigation, which deprived China of the sovereignty over its economy, its customs, and its coastal and inland navigation. Even a member of the British Parliament called it "the most savage economic aggression against China in history".

After the surrender of Japan, the United States Government helped Chiang Kai-shek with money, ammunition, military equipment, war materials and military advisers, to launch a large-scale civil war against the Chinese people. From the time around the Japanese surrender to June 1948, according to published accounts, the various kinds of United States Government aid to Chiang Kai-shek amounted to more than 6,000 million U.S. dollars. Such is the huge investment of the United States Government in Chiang Kai-shek's civil war against the people.

Thus, the history of the past 150 years proves that the United States imperialists have consistently been the aggressor against China. Their so-called friendship to the Chinese people is but another name for aggression. Their so-called cultural and humanitarian endeavours in China are actually but means to realize such aggression. Their friends in China, from the Manchu Emperor, Tseng Kuo-fan, Li Hung-chang, Yuan Shih-kai, Wu Pei-fu and Tsao Kun down to Chiang Kai-shek, who has been forsaken by all the Chinese people, have all been their lackeys in their aggression.

As is well known, the best friend of the United States Government in China now is Chiang Kai-shek. Chiang Kai-shek is the best friend of the United States imperialists, yet he is the most deadly enemy of the Chinese people. Does not this prove that the American imperialists have always been the friends of the enemies of the Chinese people and that they themselves are the enemies of the Chinese people?

Mr. Dulles and Mr. Austin have attempted to glorify here the United States "open door" policy towards China in history. They consider this policy as the highest manifestation of the friendship of the American ruling circle towards the Chinese people. But what is actually the meaning of the "open door" policy? "Open door" policy means that China's door must be kept open to the American imperialists as well as to other imperialist countries. It means the opposition of the American imperialists to the monopolization of China by other imperialist countries. It means "sharing the spoils" by the American imperialists from the aggression against China by other imperialist countries. It means "equal opportunity" to the American imperialists in the exploitation of China with other imperialist countries. Is that not crystally clear?

The United States ruling circles did undertake many so-called cultural, religious and humanitarian projects in China. There have indeed been many good-hearted American people who believed in the deceitful propaganda of the United States ruling circles and participated in these projects. But the actual aim and the objective effect of the initiation of such projects are to paralyse the mind of the Chinese people so that they would not resist aggression by the United States imperialists.

The best explanation of the so-called "friendship" of the American imperialists for the Chinese people is the so-called aid to China from the United States Government, which Mr. Dulles and Mr. Austin have also attempted to glorify. Was there any aid from the United States Government to China? Yes, there was indeed. But those who were aided by the United States Government are the enemies of the Chinese people. They were aided to suppress the Chinese people and to slaughter the Chinese people. Mr. Austin asserted that in the past thirteen years, the so-called aid to China from the United States Government amounted to a yearly average of more than 100 million U.S. dollars. Mr. Austin also pointed out that the actual amount was even greater than this figure. In the period after the war, the United States Government has supplied a vast amount of arms, guns, bombs, ammunition, aeroplanes and naval vessels to the Chiang Kai-shek government to wage the civil war. But what is the result of such so-called "aid" from the United States Government? Chiang Kai-shek slaughtered several million Chinese people with American arms. I have here a copy of photographs of part of the United States military equipment captured by the Chinese People's Liberation Army from the Kuomintang reactionary troops. I shall ask the members of this Committee to pass around this copy. This is iron-clad proof of the fact that the American imperialists slaughtered Chinese people through the hands of Chiang Kai-shek. This is the manifestation of the so-called friendship of the United States Government towards the Chinese people.

There has always been a profound friendship between the Chinese people and the American people. But there is only aggression by the American imperialists against China and the Chinese people. There has never been any friendship of the Chinese people towards the American imperialists and the American ruling circles. What there is is only hatred. Such hatred is the inevitable result of the United States imperialist policy of aggression against China. As the American imperialist policy of aggression has already reached the stage of armed aggression against China, the friendship between the Chinese people and the American people is indeed faced with the danger of being impaired. But I would like to ask Mr. Dulles with his benevolent pose: who are the ones that are impairing the friendship between the people of China and the people of the United States? They are none other than the United States Government, the ruling circles of the United States, the United States imperialist aggressors, the United States Government policy and actions of armed aggression against China. It is the American imperialists who send the sons and daughters of the United States to the Taiwan Strait and to China's territorial air to fight the Chinese people. Could it possibly be said that there had been a Chinese fleet which sailed to the coast of the United States in a preparation of fighting against the American people? Could it possibly be said that there had been Chinese aeroplanes which flew into the territorial air of the United States and bombed American women and children? Could it be said that the one who announced consideration of using the criminal weapon, the atomic bomb, to destroy the Chinese people and the Korean people, was not the President of the United States, Mr. Truman?

The United States imperialist aggression against China has now been changed from its covered and roundabout form in the past to the form of outright and naked aggression.

Taiwan is undisputably an inalienable part of China's territory. The liberation of Taiwan by the Central People's Government of the People's Republic of China is the exercise of sovereign rights over its own territory. This is strictly a domestic issue which allows no interference from any foreign Power. Yet President Truman openly dispatched American armed forces to Taiwan to prevent the Chinese Liberation Army from liberating Taiwan. This is clearly an outright and naked aggression against China's territory on the part of the United States imperialists.

The United States representatives and their followers have chanted the line that "Taiwan is one of the territories formerly belonging to Japan, and its disposal, like that of other territories belonging to Japan, still remains a matter of international concern". These representatives of the Anglo-American bloc have forgotten that Taiwan has always been in history an integral part of China's territory. The residents of Taiwan are people of China, under the jurisdiction of the Chinese Government. It was only stolen by Japan in 1895. The status of Taiwan was not only decided upon in the Cairo Declaration and the Potsdam Declaration, but has also been realized for five years ever since the end of the war. The representative of the United States, Mr. Austin, asserted that the United States invasion of Taiwan was for the military neutralization of that island. Yet, according to the United Nations Charter and according to international law, there is no justification whatsoever which may be used to justify interference in the domestic affairs of other countries or aggression against the territory of other countries. To argue that the invasion of Taiwan by the United States armed forces is for the military neutralization of Taiwan is precisely an unwitting proof of United States aggression against Taiwan.

Mr. Dulles asserted that the Government of the United States had not invaded Taiwan, because according to him the United States military personnel on Taiwan amounted only to forty-four persons⁶. Mr. Dulles thought that this would prove that the Government of the United States had not invaded Taiwan. But Mr. Dulles failed to tell us: how many military personnel are there on the Seventh Fleet and where is that Seventh Fleet stationed? Mr. Dulles used the trick of talking things into non-existence to defend the United States aggression on Taiwan. But no amount of Mr. Dulles' sophistry could make the Seventh Fleet which has invaded Taiwan vanish into thin air.

Mr. Austin, on the other hand, used another set of tricks. He did not deny the fact that the United States Seventh Fleet had invaded the Taiwan Strait, but he attempted to deny the indisputable fact and the international agreements which stipulate that Taiwan is China's territory. He had the audacity to raise the question: what are the intentions of the Central People's Government of the People's Republic of China towards Taiwan? The Chinese people are determined to recover Taiwan from the clutches of the shameless United States aggressors. We are determined to do so and we have the strength to do it. The Government of the United States must bear the full responsibility for all consequences that may arise. Mr. Austin has attempted to steal the name of the United Nations to legalize the act of United States aggression on Taiwan and to enlist more accomplices to invade Taiwan. But I must tell Mr. Austin: all illegal resolutions of the United Nations under the manipulation of the United States Government have not the least binding force over the Chinese people. The Chinese people are not only determined to defeat the major aggressors confronting China, but are also determined to defeat all the aggressors who dare to invade China's territory.

Mr. Dulles dare not deny the aggressive acts of aggression in Korea committed by the United States air force—their violations of China's territorial air and their bombing and strafing and reconnoitering activities. But Mr. Dulles asserted that of the 83 violations of China's territorial air charged by the Soviet delegation on 15 November 1950, 61 were merely of a reconnaissance character. I would like to ask Mr. Dulles: assume that they were violations of China's territorial air of a reconnaissance character, would that mean that they were not acts of aggression? What if Chinese aeroplanes should fly into the air of New York? What would be Mr. Dulles' reaction then? The United States representative asserted also that if facts should prove that the United States military aircraft did invade China's territorial air, bomb Chinese cities and kill Chinese people, the Government of the United States was willing to pay appropriate compensation for the damages. How lightly the United States representative speaks! But I would like to call to the attention of the United States representative, that the sovereignty of the People's Republic of China cannot be bought by your dollars. I would also like to tell the United States representative: you have encountered many difficulties in this world of today. One of the sources of these difficulties is that you think you can buy the sovereign rights of any country by your dollars. But you forget that China is now a country where the people are in power. The sovereignty of that country cannot be bought by your filthy dollars. What sovereignty you could buy is only such as that of the old China under Chiang Kai-shek's rule. But unfortunately for you, the ruling clique of old China, in spite of the billions of dollars that it has received from you, has been driven out at the end from China's mainland by the Chinese people. Mr. Dulles, this is the reason for your animosity towards the Chinese people.

Mr. Austin asserted: "The United States Government's actions since the establishment of the Peiping regime have not been aggressive towards China or towards Korea or in Korea". But it is not an easy job for a robber loaded with loot to disguise as an angel entering the Gate of Heaven.

I shall now present to the Committee the following facts. By these facts, I accuse the United States Government of intervention, aggression and hostility against China.

1. The Government of the United States has actively supported and is still actively supporting the Chiang Kai-shek reactionary remnant clique in Taiwan to carry out its desperate struggle and has directed Chiang Kai-shek to blockade China's coast and to bomb Chinese cities. The United States Government has continuously been shipping ammunition, arms and other war materials to Taiwan. According to incomplete statistics, from January to October of this year, the Governments of the United States and Canada sent several hundred aeroplanes and over 700 tanks to the Chiang Kai-shek reactionary remnant clique, while United States military officers trained Chiang Kai-shek's troops to fight against the Chinese people. The American war-monger Claire Chennault, former Commander of the United States Fourteenth Air Force, said openly: "To strangle the communists by starvation, blockade is necessary". As is well known to the whole world, the Chiang Kai-shek reactionary remnant clique has been using American aircraft to bomb Chinese coastal cities. On February 6 of this year, Chiang Kai-shek used American aircraft for barbaric bombing of Shanghai, killed and wounded more than 1,000 Chinese people and damaged a vast number of houses and properties. This the Chinese people shall never forget.

In addition to the open and active support to the Chiang Kai-shek reactionary remnant clique in its desperate struggle, the Government of the United States is also trying to sabotage the People's Republic of China from within. The secret service agencies of the United States Government together with those of the Kuomintang are jointly directing secret agents and bandits to engage in various kinds of disruptive activities. According to the statistical report of the Southwest Military and Political Council of China, 60 per cent of the important bandit leaders in the southwest provinces have had United States and Chiang Kai-shek secret service training. The same Chennault stated openly in the issue of 18 November of Collier's magazine: "A program of military aid to anti-communist Chinese guerrillas is practicable. It would not cost very many American dollars. It would cost no American lives".

2. The United States Government has employed every measure to prevent the representatives of the Central People's Government of the People's Republic of China from participating in the United Nations and the Allied Council for Japan, while insisting that the representatives of the public enemy of the Chinese people, the Taiwan Kuomintang reactionary clique, usurp the seat of China.

Ever since 15 November 1949, our Foreign Minister Chou En-lai has repeatedly demanded that the United Nations expel the illegal representatives of the Kuomintang reactionary remnant clique. The representatives of the Soviet Union, India and other countries have also repeatedly made similar proposals at the General Assembly and at the Security Council of the United Nations. But all those just demand and proposals have been rejected by the United States and its satellites. Thus, up to now, the United States Government has not only kept the representatives of the Kuomintang reactionary remnant clique in the United Nations, but has also directed those running dogs to attack the justified charge levelled by the lawful representative of the People's Republic of China.

3. The Government of the United States is actively rearming the fascist forces in Japan. The Japanese fascist forces are being revived. Disregarding protests and warnings from our Government, General MacArthur has illegally released a large number of the Japanese war criminals who had invaded China. The Japanese army is being rebuilt by the United States authorities in Japan under the name of "Police Reserve". The Japanese police force has already reached 125,000 men. The Japanese navy is also being revived. The so-called "Marine Security Board" of Japan has already 300 vessels under its command. The Government of the United States is contriving to conclude a separate peace with Japan without the Soviet Union and China, in order to obtain an exclusive domination over Japan. In the recent aide mémoire of the United States Department of State to the Far Eastern Commission, it is even openly proposed that the status of the Chinese territory, Taiwan, should be determined by joint consultation of the United States of America, the United Kingdom, China and the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics. From these, one can see what kind of a peace treaty with Japan the United States Government has in mind. In adopting such a policy towards Japan, the Government of the United States is unquestionably aiming to convert Japan into a military base for the American imperialists to wage aggressive war in Asia. In fact, the United States Government has already made use of this military base, Japan, and Japanese fascist war-lords to launch the armed aggression against China's territory, Taiwan, and against China's neighbour, Korea.

4. The United States Government has built up a vast network of military bases in the Pacific. This network runs from the United States military base in Alaska, through the Aleutian islands, Japan, the Ryukyu Islands, Korea, Taiwan, the Philippines, Vietnam, and Thailand. Everyone can see that this network of bases forms an encirclement of the new China. In fact, General MacArthur has openly admitted that this network of bases is aimed at China and the Soviet Union as its objects for encirclement and targets for attack. The simultaneous armed aggression against China's territory, Taiwan and China's neighbour, Korea, is not only the inevitable consequence of the consistent American imperialist aggression against China, but also a premeditated step for a further total attack against the People's Republic of China. The aim of the United States Government in its aggression on Taiwan is to convert Taiwan into a spring-board for the American imperialists to attack the Chinese mainland. Similarly, the armed aggression against Korea is also aimed at converting Korea into another spring-board for the American imperialists to attack China's mainland.

From the very outset, the aggression against Korea by the United States Government threatened China's security. Since then, the United States Government has disregarded the repeated warnings of the Government of China and directed its armed forces of aggression in Korea to extend the flames of war persistently towards the northeastern border of China. There can be no other aim for the United States Government to take such a course of action except that of a further invasion of China after the occupation of Korea is completed.

Facts in history have shown that the end of a first aggression is the beginning of a second new aggression. In fact, even before the achievement of a total occupation of Korea, the American imperialist aggressors and their puppets have already formulated their next step. In 1949, Syngman Rhee submitted to the United States Government a draft of the "Korean-American Treaty of Alliance". Article 7 of the draft Treaty stated:

"It is recognized and understood by the high contracting parties that if the war of liberation (i. e., the United States war of aggression) must be continued on the territory of Manchuria in reply to an attack of the Chinese Communist Party on Korea, His Excellency the President of the United States of America helps His Excellency the President of the Korean Republic to bring the war of liberation to a victorious conclusion. In his turn, the President of the Korean Republic, apart from the rehabilitation of Northern Korea, which will be of main interest for the Korean Republic, undertakes to hand over the development of the natural resources of Manchuria and other parts of Eastern China to the joint administration of the United States and Korea".

The American war-mongers have continuously been clamouring for the crossing of the North Korean border by the United States armed forces to invade northeastern China. The popular American magazine, U. S. News and World Report, in its issue of 13 October, published a bombing chart of the United States aggressive forces in Korea, in which cities of northeastern China are clearly marked as targets of the United States air forces of aggression in Korea. Two days after my arrival in New York, on 26 November, The New York Times published a letter from Mr. Henry de Young, the former South Korean Minister to MacArthur's Headquarters in Japan, suggesting the establishment of a buffer State in China's territory north of the Yalu river. It cannot be accidental that The New York Times should publish such a letter. All this demonstrates that the United States armed forces of aggression in Korea are systematically plotting to invade China's northeastern area.

The intention of the United States Government to extend the aggressive war in Korea is even more clearly manifested in the actions of the United States armed forces of aggression in Korea. As early as 27 August, the aircraft and naval vessels of the United States armed forces of aggression in Korea started persistent provocations against China. From August 27 to November 24, the United States air force of aggression in Korea, employing more than 1,000 aeroplanes, violated China's territorial air for more than 200 times and penetrated far into China's territory to bomb, strafe and reconnoitre, causing heavy casualties among the Chinese people and serious damage in Chinese property. Furthermore, naval craft of the United States aggressive forces against Taiwan and Korea unlawfully inspected Chinese peaceful merchant shipping on the high seas. The long series of aggressive actions of the United States proves that the United States Government is determined to extend the aggression to China and that the aggressive, war-like actions of the American imperialists against the People's Republic of China have already begun. I have here a list of tables which I shall ask the Chairman to pass around among the members of the Committee. This list of tables records the course of events from August 27 to 9.20 a.m., November 10, of violations of China's territorial air by the United States military aeroplanes and their bombing, strafing and reconnoitering, damaging Chinese property and killing Chinese people.

The American imperialists have long been committing aggressive actions against China. The American imperialists have been hostile to the Chinese people on every issue. The American imperialists have launched simultaneously aggression against Taiwan and Korea. They are determined to extend the aggressive war against Korea. They have persistently been making provocations against China. Under such unbearable circumstances, the Chinese people, in order to protect their homeland, are volunteering in great numbers to go to the aid of the Korean people to resist the American imperialists. This is completely natural, reasonable and honourable. There is nothing to cause the alarm of the war-mongers.

In accordance with to a premeditated plan, the United States ruling circles directed their puppet, Syngman Rhee, to launch an attack on the People's Democratic Republic of Korea, thus unleashing the civil war in Korea. Under the pretext of intervening in the civil war in Korea, the United States ruling circles further launched simultaneously the aggression against Taiwan and Korea. While its aggression upon China's territory, Taiwan, is an act of outright and naked aggression which is completely unjustified, its aggression on Korea is equally inexcusable. The arguments put forward by the United States Government to justify its aggression against Korea will not bear examination. The United States Government has attempted to cover up its armed intervention in Korea under the mantle of the United Nations, but its efforts are in vain.

If the Syngman Rhee reactionary clique had not only unleashed the civil war in Korea but also gained an upper hand in the civil war and pushed the war to the interior of the Korean People's Democratic Republic from the very outset, we may be sure that the United States Government would never consider this as an aggression by South Korea against North Korea. Nor would they call upon the United Nations to undertake the so-called measure of "anti-aggression". But unfortunately for the ruling circles of the United States, the Korean People's Democratic Republic repelled the provocative attack of the reactionary clique of Syngman Rhee. Moreover, it immediately switched to a counter-offensive and swiftly pushed the war into the area ruled by Syngman Rhee's reactionary clique. The United States Government started to scream then the absolutely absurd charge of so-called aggression of South Korea by North Korea. It dispatched at once its armed forces, according to its premeditated plan to carry out armed intervention in the internal affairs of Korea and armed aggression against the Korean people.

To brand as aggression the counter-offensive of the people's armed forces of North Korea in the civil war against the reactionary clique of South Korea, is the biggest lie in history. But it is on this big lie that the United States Government relies to cover up its armed aggression against Korea. We would like to ask the United States representative the following question. During the American Civil War in the 1860's, President Lincoln led the armed forces of the northern states in an attack into the southern states. Does the United States representative maintain that this was an aggression by the northern states against the south? Does he maintain that President Lincoln was the greatest aggressor heading this aggression? Not long ago, the Chinese people had the same experience. In 1946, the Chiang Kai-shek Kuomintang reactionary clique violated peace in China and launched a civil war against the liberated areas which were under the leadership of the Communist Party of China. In 1948, after having repelled the offensive of Chiang Kai-shek, the armed forces of the Chinese people counter-attacked and pushed the war into the areas under the Kuomintang rule. Does the United States representative consider that as an aggression of the Chinese People's Liberation Army against the Chinese Kuomintang reactionary clique?

The United States ruling circle may deny its own history, but the peace-loving peoples of the whole world know clearly the facts. The counter-offensive of the armed forces of the North Korean people in the civil war against the Syngman Rhee reactionary clique of South Korea is in no sense an aggression. The real aggressors are the United States Government, the ruling circles of the United States and the American imperialists, who dispatched their armed forces to Korea to attack the Korean people under the pretext of opposing the so-called "aggression" of North Korea against South Korea. People the world over are posing the following question to the ruling circles of the United States: how could the Korean people commit aggression against the Korean people? Why are the armed forces of the United States dispatched to Korea, 5,000 miles away from America, to attack the Korean people, who have never committed any aggression against the United States? This is a very pertinent question. The Korean people could no more commit aggression against the Korean people than the American people could commit aggression against the American people. The Korean people have never been the aggressor against the United States and the people of the United States. It is the ruling circles of the United States that have intervened in the internal affairs of Korea and committed armed aggression against Korea.

The ruling circles of the United States have usurped the name of the United Nations in an attempt to cover up their intervention in the internal affairs of Korea. However, such manoeuvre cannot deceive anyone either. The United States representatives have repeatedly cited the resolutions of the United Nations Security Council of 25 June, 27 June and 7 July 1950⁷, which requested the Members of the United Nations to render armed support to the so-called Republic of Korea in opposing the Korean People's Democratic Republic for its alleged aggression. It is said that these are the legal bases upon which the United Nations troops are opposing North Korea for its aggression. However, all these legal bases are illegal themselves. They are in violation of the United Nations Charter, both in their form and in their substance. The Charter of the United Nations clearly stipulates that the United Nations is not authorized to intervene in matters which are essentially within the domestic jurisdiction of any State. However, all the above-mentioned resolutions of the United Nations Security Council on the Korean issue are in gross violation of the principle of non-intervention in the domestic affairs of any State, and hence illegal. As a matter of procedure, the adoption of these resolutions in the Security Council is also illegal. The Charter of the United Nations clearly stipulates that decisions of the Security Council on all matters other than procedural ones shall be made by an affirmative vote of seven members including the concurring votes of the permanent members. But all these resolutions were adopted without the participation and the concurring votes of the two great permanent members, the Soviet Union and China. Therefore, they are in violation of the United Nations Charter, and illegal. The Central People's Government of the People's Republic of China has long since expressed its stand, that is, it firmly opposes the reactionary resolutions adopted in the United Nations Security Council under the manipulation of the United States Government

⁷ See Official Records of the Security Council, Fifth Year, Nos. 15, 16 and 18.

As a matter of fact, it is superfluous to study and to analyse the illegal nature of these resolutions. This is because of the fact that it was only after the United States Government had already decided on 27 June to commit armed intervention in the domestic affairs of Korea and had made a statement to the whole world to this effect, that Mr. Austin was ordered to present the draft resolution to the Security Council asking that it should be approved.

Mr. Austin has repeatedly argued that the so-called anti-aggressive war in Korea is being waged by the United Nations troops. But who would be deceived by such arguments? Those who are fighting against the Korean people today are not United Nations troops but mainly United States troops and a small number of troops of other countries which are helping the United States. The one who is directing the war is not a United Nations commander-in-chief either, but the Commander-in-Chief of the United States Armed Forces in the Far East, General MacArthur, who is bitterly hated by the people of Asia. The purpose of these troops, which are fighting against the Korean people, is not to oppose aggression as it is alleged, because the Korean people could not possibly commit aggression against the Korean people. Nor is the purpose the achievement of independence and unity of Korea, because there could never be such an absurdity that the independence and unity of a country had to be achieved by the armed forces of a foreign country or several foreign countries. The purpose of the United States troops, which are fighting the Korean people, is to conquer the whole of Korea and to use Korea as a spring-board to attack the mainland of China. As I have stated, the attack on the mainland of China has already begun.

These United States troops and Syngman Rhee's troops which are fighting against the Korean people have violated all international rules and precedents. They have slaughtered en masse the innocent and peace-loving residents of Korea, including women and children. They have savagely destroyed the peaceful towns and villages of Korea. Their barbarism and cruelty have surpassed those of the Hitlerite troops in Europe. The anger among the peoples of Korea and China and the peace-loving nations of the world that has been aroused by these barbaric, cruel and inhuman acts is immeasurable. I must point out here that as from 5 August to 27 November 1950 the Foreign Minister of the Korean People's Democratic Republic, Pak Hen-en, has repeatedly protested to the United Nations, demanding that the United Nations bring to an end such inhuman cruelties of the United States and Rhee's troops. However, the United Nations has purposely disregarded these protests and has purposely covered up these bloody records. Despite the fact that the People's Army of Korea has treated with magnanimity the war prisoners who have laid down their arms—as is well-known to the American people, the People's Army of Korea has set free large groups of these war prisoners—news reports of the United States ruling circles have been purposely exaggerating news of United States troops being killed at the battle-front to fool the American people and to incite a spirit of revenge, so as to prepare more pretexts for still greater massacre and destruction in Korea by the United States and Rhee's troops. This is a shameful act. Against this we cannot but lodge a protest with anger. The reactionary view that only the lives of the Anglo-Saxons are precious while the lives of the Asian people are worthless no longer works. The Chinese people will fight resolutely without regard to sacrifices against such unprecedented barbaric, cruel and inhuman acts of the United States and Rhee's troops.

Members of the Committee: the true substance of the Korean issue is that the United States Government has committed armed intervention in Korea and slaughtered Korean people. Its aim is to conquer the whole of Korea and to attack the mainland of China. In the name of the Central People's Government of the People's Republic of China, I hereby submit to the United Nations General Assembly the charge against the United States Government of unlawful, criminal and aggressive acts of armed aggression in Korea, of slaughtering the Korean people, of extending the Korean war, and of threatening China's mainland.

The armed aggression against Taiwan on the part of the United States Government is completely unjustified, outright and naked aggression. The armed aggression against Korea on the part of the United States Government is in substance equally unjustified and inexcusable. The fact that the United States Government has carried out simultaneous armed aggression against Taiwan and Korea is in fact the realization of a premeditated plan of large-scale aggression. Therefore, it is this aggression which threatens simultaneously the Chinese people and the Korean people that is a brazen aggression. President Truman of the United States, Secretary of State Mr. Acheson, and representative of the United States, Mr. Austin, have persistently argued that the aggression against Taiwan by the United States Government is necessary due to its armed intervention in Korea. Even the President of the Security Council in November, Mr. Bebler, has argued in the same way. Mr. Bebler asserted⁸ that the question of aggression against Taiwan by the United States Government was only of secondary importance. In so arguing, he has supported those who advocate that the charge brought by my Government against the United States of armed aggression against Taiwan should not be discussed at all or that the solution of the question of the United States armed aggression on Taiwan must await the solution of the Korean question. I would like to point out that all these arguments are absurd and biased in favour of the United States aggressors. The Charter of the United Nations clearly stipulates that no justification whatsoever may be used as an excuse for aggression. On what ground could the armed intervention in Korea by the United States Government be used as an excuse for its armed aggression on Taiwan? The attempt of the United States representative to justify the United States armed aggression on Taiwan by its armed intervention in Korea, is ridiculous. It cannot deceive anyone, nor will it bear examination.

There is indeed a close relationship between the United States aggression on Taiwan and its aggression on Korea. But the relationship is not such that the armed intervention in Korea by the United States Government may be used as a justification of its aggression against Taiwan. The relationship is instead that both the aggression against Taiwan and the aggression against Korea by the United States Government are part of its overall design of attack against the mainland of China. To the Chinese people, those who are waging an aggressive war against the Korean people in Korea are the same aggressors who are committing aggression against Taiwan. As the United States Government has simultaneously launched the aggression against the territory of China, Taiwan, and against its close neighbour, Korea, there is no reason why the Chinese people could not support the Korean people on a voluntary basis against the United States armed aggression on Korea, at the same time as they are resisting the United States armed aggression on Taiwan.

I have heard much empty talk in the Security Council to the effect that the troops fighting in Korea at present have no intention to commit aggression against the north-eastern territory of China. Moreover, it is said that the majority of the members of the Security Council are ready to put such assurances into a resolution. It seems that the Chinese people should now rest assured. This is taking the Chinese people for idiots.

It is to be noted that those countries which wish to assure us that the United States troops in Korea would not violate the territory of China are precisely those which maintain that the United States Seventh Fleet should stay at the Taiwan Strait and continue its aggression against China. Suppose a detachment of the armed forces of a country hostile to the United States had occupied Hawaii, while another detachment of this same country was attacking the neighbour of the United States, Mexico. Now the aggressor comes to assure the American people: "You have nothing to fear. Our troops in Mexico will not commit any aggression against the United States". Is it conceivable that the American people would believe in the assurances given by such an aggressor and its accomplices? The United States Government has invaded the territory of China, Taiwan, while its armed forces threaten to approach the border of China from another direction. But the United States Government and its accomplices are demanding that the Chinese people believe in their assurances that the armed forces which are approaching China's border would not invade China's territory. The Chinese people have had too much experience in struggle to pay any attention to such empty words. The United States Seventh Fleet is invading the Strait of Taiwan and the United States air force of aggression in Korea has violated the territorial air of China more than 200 times. Such actions refute any assurances that may be given by Mr. Austin or Sir Gladwyn Jebb. The words of the United States Seventh Fleet are much more powerful and eloquent than those of Mr. Austin.

The Chinese people understand fully and correctly the whole implication of the constant provocations against China by the United States armed forces which are committing armed aggression simultaneously against Taiwan and Korea. The aggressor who has invaded Korea is exactly the aggressor who is invading Taiwan. They understand that once the aggressor in Korea completes its aggression against Korea, its next step will be inevitably a further aggression against the mainland of China. China is the only country which has a common border of 500 kilometres with Korea. The people of China and the people of Korea have always in history relied upon each other. The aggressor who invades Korea today invariably invades China tomorrow. This is what imperialist Japan did fifty-five years ago. This is what the American imperialists are doing now, only proceeding with greater speed. Hence, the Chinese people, in their resistance against the United States aggression on Taiwan, are rendering help on a voluntary basis to the Korean people to resist the aggressive actions of the United States. Such actions are not only irreproachable, but wholly rightful. Such actions are not only a help rendered to their neighbour, but also an act of defence of their own homeland. It is the American imperialist aggressors and their accomplices who have committed armed aggression against Taiwan and Korea. The actions of the Chinese people of rendering voluntary support to the Korean people in their resistance to the aggression of the United States Government, are rightful deeds aimed at opposing intervention and aggression. So long as the criminal acts of intervention and aggression on the part of the United States aggressors and their accomplices continue, the rightful struggle of the Chinese people and the Korean people against intervention and aggression will never cease, no matter how the United States aggressors and their accomplices try to pervert the truth, to cheat and to deceive. The American imperialists have come 5,000 miles across the Pacific to invade Korea and Taiwan. To argue that the Chinese people must not render any voluntary support to the Korean people to oppose the intervention and aggression by the American imperialists against both China and Korea, is absurd and inconceivable. The lance of the American aggressors has extended too far. It has stabbed across 5,000 miles of the Pacific into the territory of China and that of Korea. The Chinese people and the Korean people resolutely demand that the United States aggressors and their accomplices draw back their aggressive long lance by withdrawing simultaneously all their armed forces from Taiwan and Korea.

Recently, owing to the bankruptcy of the so-called "end the war" offensive launched by General MacArthur of the United States, President Truman of the United States, Secretary of State, Mr. Acheson, and the United States representative, Mr. Austin, have uttered screams of the so-called "new aggression" or "intervention" of China against Korea. They have threatened once more to use illegally the name of the United Nations to extend the war further into the mainland of China, not hesitating at all to stir up a third war. Members of the Committee, these are barbaric threats. The people of China and the people of Korea, determined to resist the United States aggression, shall never bow their heads to any threat whatsoever. The ruling circles of the United States are attempting once more to steal the name of the United Nations to extend its aggressive war against Korea into the mainland of China. We firmly oppose the United Nations for being used once again by the United States; for it would be a thorough violation of the United Nations Charter. At the same time, I must call the attention of the representatives of those countries which are prepared to support such a manoeuvre of the United States. If you do so, it would mean that you are taking a further step in supporting the United States aggression. It would mean that you are making enemies of the 475 million people of China and of the people of the whole world who love peace and oppose war. The people of China and the people of the whole world would not lightly forgive you. You must bear the full responsibility for the inevitable consequences of your actions.

President Truman of the United States and Secretary of State, Mr. Acheson, have constantly referred to the "crisis" in the present international situation. But we would like to ask: what is the origin of this "crisis"? The origin of this crisis is the aggressive and war policy of the American imperialists. A handful of American imperialist aggressors are determined to extend aggression and to demand world war, thus creating the so-called "crisis" in the present international situation. People of the whole world are opposed to war. Nevertheless, peace cannot be obtained by making concessions to aggressors. The only way to avert the so-called "war crisis" and improve the present international situation is for the peace-loving people of the whole world to strengthen their resistance to the United States imperialist aggression and to strengthen their struggle to end the United States imperialist aggression. Mr. Austin, in a complete distortion of facts, asserted that the question of world peace or world war was to be decided by the Chinese people, as if the Chinese people wanted to bomb America and to drop atomic bombs on the United States. No, Mr. Austin, the judgment of the whole world is not to be distorted. The situation that confronts the whole world today is that a few American imperialist aggressors are determined, against the will of the American people and of the people of the whole world, to extend aggression and to demand war, even threatening to use the atomic bomb. The Chinese people have learnt from their bitter experience of long struggles that only by resisting the aggression of the United States Government without the minutest concession, can a world war be averted and peace of the world maintained. The Chinese people are determined to do so. All threats and deceit will be of no use.

The Chinese people have full confidence and determination to recover Taiwan from the grip of the United States aggressors and to put to an end all the direct and indirect aggressive actions of the United States Government against the People's Republic of China. But to safeguard international peace and security and to uphold the sanctity of the United Nations Charter, the United Nations has the inalienable duty to apply sanctions against the United States Government for its criminal acts of armed aggression on China's territory, Taiwan, and armed intervention in China's neighbour, Korea. I, therefore, in the name of the Central People's Government of the People's Republic of China, request that the General Assembly should adopt the following resolution:

"The General Assembly,

"Recognizing that the invasion and occupation of Taiwan by the armed forces of the United States of America constitute open and direct aggression on China's territory,

"Recognizing that the armed aggression on China's territory and the armed intervention in Korea by the armed forces of the Government of the United States of America have shattered peace and security in Asia and violated the United Nations Charter and international agreements,

"Requests the Security Council

"(1) To condemn and to take concrete steps to apply severe sanctions against the Government of the United States of America for its criminal acts of armed aggression against the territory of China, Taiwan and armed intervention in Korea;

"(2) To adopt immediately effective measures to bring about the complete withdrawal by the Government of the United States of America of its forces of armed aggression from Taiwan, in order that peace and security in the Pacific and in Asia may be ensured; and

"(3) To adopt immediately effective measures to bring about the withdrawal from Korea of the armed forces of the United States of America and all other countries and to leave the people of North and South Korea to settle the domestic affairs of Korea themselves, so that a peaceful solution of the Korean question may be achieved".

DOCUMENT A/1773

Report of the First Committee

[9 February 1951]*

1. By a letter dated 20 September 1950 addressed to the President of the General Assembly (A/1375), the delegation of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics proposed that the question of United States aggression against China should be included in the agenda of the fifth session of the General Assembly. An explanatory note dated 21 September 1950 (A/1382) followed this request.

2. The General Committee decided at its 70th meeting to recommend the inclusion of this item in the agenda under the heading "Complaint by the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics regarding aggression against China by the United States of America". The General Assembly approved this recommendation at its 285th meeting on 26 September 1950, and included the item as item 70 on its agenda, referring it to the First Committee.

3. At the 399th meeting of the First Committee, during a discussion on the priority to be assigned to the consideration of items that still remained on its agenda, the U.S.S.R. delegation introduced a draft resolution (A/C.1/630) proposing that the First Committee should invite the representative of the Central People's Government of the People's Republic of China to participate in the discussion of this item.

4. The First Committee considered the item at its 405th to 409th and 439th to 441st meetings, inclusive.

5. At the 405th meeting, an amendment was submitted by Chile (A/C.1/635) to replace the operative part of the U.S.S.R. draft resolution (A/C.1/630). The Chilean amendment proposed that the representative of the People's Republic of China should be invited to present his views and provide such information as the Committee might request during its discussion of the item, and stated that the invitation in no way prejudged the merits of the question under discussion or affected the present status of Chinese representation in the United Nations.

6. At the 406th meeting, upon further clarification by the U.S.S.R., the Chilean delegation agreed to withdraw the amendment if the U.S.S.R. was agreeable to the addition of the following sentence to its draft resolution: "This invitation in no way prejudges the merits of the question under discussion or affects the present status of Chinese representation in the United Nations". The proposed addition was not accepted by the U.S.S.R. and the Chilean amendment was therefore put to the vote and rejected by 17 votes to 9, with 33 abstentions.

7. The U.S.S.R. draft resolution (A/C.1/630) was put to the vote by roll-call and was adopted by 30 votes to 8, with 22 abstentions. The vote was as follows:

In favour: Afghanistan, Australia, Burma, Byelorussian Soviet Socialist Republic, Canada, Colombia, Czechoslovakia, Denmark, Ecuador, El Salvador, Ethiopia, France, Haiti, Iceland, India, Indonesia, Israel, Lebanon, Netherlands, Norway, Pakistan, Poland, Sweden, Syria, Ukrainian Soviet Socialist Republic, Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland, Uruguay, Yemen, Yugoslavia.

Against: Bolivia, China, Costa Rica, Cuba, Dominican Republic, Nicaragua, Paraguay, Turkey.

Abstaining: Argentina, Belgium, Brazil, Chile, Egypt, Greece, Guatemala, Honduras, Iran, Iraq, Liberia, Luxembourg, Mexico, New Zealand, Panama, Peru, Philippines, Saudi Arabia, Thailand, Union of South Africa, United States of America, Venezuela.

8. Further discussion of the item was then postponed for two days to enable the Secretary-General to communicate to the Government of the People's Republic of China the text of the resolution adopted by the Committee. The Government of the People's Republic of China replied by telegram (A/C.1/636) appointing its representative to participate in the discussion of the item in the First Committee. At the 407th meeting, the representative of the Government of the People's Republic of China, at the invitation of the Chairman, took a place at the Committee table.

9. At its 408th and 409th meetings the First Committee considered a proposal by France that the Committee should give priority to the consideration of item 76 of the agenda, of the General Assembly, namely, "Intervention of the Central People's Government of the People's Republic of China in Korea". The French proposal was adopted by 42 votes to 5, with 4 abstentions, at the 409th meeting held on 7 December 1950.

10. The First Committee resumed consideration of item 70 at its 439th meeting held on 2 February 1951. At the 440th meeting, held on 6 February, the Chairman informed the Committee that he had, on 2 February, informed the Government of the People's Republic of China by telegram that the Committee had resumed on that date discussion of item 70 of the agenda, and had also indicated the date of the Committee's next meeting. The reply to this telegram was read to the Committee. The Chairman ruled at the same meeting that the text of the statement of the representative of the Government of the People's Republic of China, alluded to in the telegram from the Minister for Foreign Affairs of the Government of the People's Republic of China, which had been read out to the Committee, would be circulated as a Committee document instead of being both read out to the Committee and circulated as a document. The Committee sustained the Chairman's ruling and the statement of the representative of the Government of the People's Republic of China was circulated as a Committee document (A/C.1/661).

11. During the consideration of the item, the following draft resolution (A/C.1/637) was submitted by the U.S.S.R. at the 407th meeting:

"The General Assembly,

"Having considered the question of the aggression against China by the United States of America,

"Having heard the statement on this question by the delegation of the People's Republic of China and the explanation given by the delegation of the United States of America,

"Having considered the facts of the infringement of China's territorial integrity and the inviolability of its frontiers by naval and air units of the United States of America, as witnessed by:

"(a) the invasion by United States armed forces of the island of Taiwan, which, as recognized in the three-Power Cairo Agreement of 1 December 1943 between the United States of America, the United Kingdom and China, is an inalienable part of Chinese territory, and the consequent intervention by the Government of the United States of America in the domestic affairs of China,

"(b) the blockade of the coast of the island of Taiwan by the United States Seventh Fleet for the hostile purpose of barring the island to the armed forces and authorities of the People's Republic of China, “ Requests the Security Council to take necessary steps to ensure the immediate cessation of aggression against China by the United States of America ”.

12. The U.S.S.R. draft resolution, which was the only draft resolution submitted on the item, was put to the vote at the 441st meeting of the Committee and was rejected by 49 votes to 5, with 3 abstentions. Consequently, as regards this item, the First Committee has no recommendation to submit to the General Assembly.

In accordance with rule 20 of the rules of procedure of the General Assembly, the delegation of the United States offers the following observations in connexion with and in support of its request that the "Question of Formosa" should be placed on the agenda of the fifth session of the General Assembly as an additional item of an important and urgent character within the meaning of rule 15.

In the joint Declaration at Cairo of 1 December 1943 the President of the United States, the Prime Minister of the United Kingdom, and the President of China stated " it is their purpose that ... Manchuria, Formosa and the Pescadores shall be restored to the Republic of China ... The aforesaid three great Powers, mindful of the enslavement of the people of Korea, are determined that in due course Korea shall become free and independent ". In the Potsdam Declaration of July 1945, defining the terms for a Japanese surrender, the three Allied leaders declared that the terms of the Cairo Declaration should be carried out. The provisions of this Declaration were accepted by Japan at the time of its surrender. General Order No. 1 of the Japanese Imperial Headquarters issued pursuant to the terms of surrender, provided for the surrender of the Japanese forces in China (excluding Manchuria) and Formosa to Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek. Formal transfer of Formosa to China was to await the conclusion of peace with Japan or some other appropriate formal act. For the past five years, Chinese authority has been exercised over the island.

On 25 June 1950, a breach of the peace occurred in the Pacific area in the form of an armed attack against the Republic of Korea. In the resolution adopted on that day, the Security Council took the first step towards restoring the peace¹. On 27 June, the President of the United States stated that the North Korean forces had " defied the orders of the Security Council of the United Nations issued to preserve international peace and security. In these circumstances the occupation of Formosa by communist forces would be a direct threat to the security of the Pacific area and to United States forces performing their lawful and necessary functions in that area. Accordingly, I have ordered the Seventh Fleet to prevent any attack on Formosa. As a corollary of this action I am calling upon the Chinese Government on Formosa to cease all air and sea operation against the mainland. The Seventh Fleet will see that this is done. The determination of the future status of Formosa must await the restoration of security in the Pacific, a peace settlement with Japan, or consideration by the United Nations... "

The Government of the United States has made it abundantly clear that the measures it has taken with respect to Formosa were without prejudice to the long-term political status of Formosa, and that the United States has no territorial ambitions and seeks no special position or privilege with respect to Formosa. The United States believes further that the future of

Formosa and of its nearly 8 million inhabitants should be settled by peaceful means in accordance with the Charter of the United Nations.

The limited question, that of charges by the Peiping régime against the United States, as set forth in document S/1715, remains before the Security Council. The United States considers that the General Assembly could make an important contribution towards carrying out the purposes and principles of the United Nations in the Pacific area if it should study the general situation with respect to Formosa with a view to formulating appropriate recommendations.

Letter dated 26 September 1950 from the Vice-President of the Government and Minister of Foreign Affairs of the Federal People's Republic of Yugoslavia addressed to the Secretary-General

[Original text : English]
[27 September 1950]

EXPLANATORY MEMORANDUM AND DRAFT RESOLUTION

On behalf of the Government of the Federal People's Republic of Yugoslavia, I have the honour to request that the necessary steps be taken so that the following item be included in the agenda of the fifth session of the General Assembly of the United Nations : " Duties of States in the event of the outbreak of hostilities " .

An explanatory memorandum is enclosed in accordance with rule 20 of the rules of procedure of the General Assembly.

(Signed) Edvard KARDELJ
Vice-President of the Government and Minister of Foreign Affairs of the Federal People's Republic of Yugoslavia

1. Between the two great world wars, the international community laid down a new fundamental rule about the right of war. In place of the limitless right of a State to declare war as it thought appropriate came the prohibition against waging an aggressive war. Aggressive war was outlawed. This principle was formulated not only in the Kellogg-Briand Pact, but also in the Convention for the definition of the aggressor (London, 1933).

2. The question of the compulsory character of the rule on the outlawing of aggressive war and the question of sanctions for the violation of this legal rule, received twofold confirmation on the part of the United Nations after the Second World War. On the one hand, the Charter of the United Nations (Article 2, paragraph 4) established the principle that all States are bound to refrain from the use of force in their actions against other States, the use of force being permitted only in the case of legitimate defence and only until the Security Council (Article 51) has taken the necessary measures. On the other hand, the charter of the International Military Tribunal (London, 1945), commonly known as the Nürnberg Charter, laid down that the planning of and resorting to aggressive war constitute crimes against the peace and security of mankind.

3. The International Law Commission has proposed in this sense a formulation of the principles of the Nürnberg Charter which lays down that resorting to a war of aggression, its planning, preparation, etc., constitute international crimes.

4. It is, however, insufficient that the United Nations should merely outlaw war legally and thereby fulfil its duty for the safeguarding of international peace and security. The duty of the United Nations is not only to take sanctions against an aggressor after the aggression has occurred; it is especially the duty of the United Nations to take preventive steps before force is used.

5. Considering the structure of the United Nations, the Yugoslav delegation has come to the conclusion that the Charter (Chapters V, VI and VII) has entrusted the Security Council with the task of eliminating an imminent menace against international peace and security when it has already appeared, while all the other questions pertaining to this matter are within the competence of the General Assembly (Articles 11, 12 and 13 of the Charter). Thus, the general question of regulating the use of the right of States to legitimate defence is also within the competence of the General Assembly.

6. The Security Council pursues the policy of finding concrete solutions for every situation or dispute which has already arisen: The Council is not competent to regulate the question of the manner in which the States, which themselves determine whether the possibility of applying legitimate defence exists, shall actually demonstrate that they wish to remain within the limits of legitimate defence and to end the conflict if the opposite side shows a readiness to accept a pacific solution.

7. Experience has shown that each State which has resorted to the use of force as an instrument of its national policy has pretended to have been attacked and has accused the other State of having been the aggressor. Thus, the parties involved have mutually accused one another of aggressive practices. The accusations themselves, once started, have constituted a serious obstacle to the localization of hostilities already begun, as well as to the possibility of withdrawal from a conflict without loss of political prestige.

8. In order to eliminate, or at least lessen, the possibility of such situations arising, the Yugoslav delegation is submitting its draft resolution, which lays down:

(i) That every State which finds itself involved in hostilities shall make a public statement of its readiness to cease hostilities and withdraw its armed forces from beyond the frontiers or demarcation lines or from the territorial waters of the opposite side, if it has crossed the said borders or entered the said territorial waters;

(ii) That at midnight on the day when the opposite side makes its statement, a cease-fire order shall be put into effect and the withdrawal of armed forces begin, this withdrawal to be completed not later than forty-eight hours from the moment of the cease-fire.

9. This procedure would enable both parties, if they show a similar desire, to absolve themselves from the charge of being aggressors, and to cease hostilities without endangering their political prestige, which is often essential for the political attitude of States in conflict.

10. Simultaneously, however, in the opposite case, this procedure would completely unmask the actual aggressor. By combining the statement, the obligation to cease hostilities, and the withdrawal from beyond the boundaries of the menaced territories, a clear picture of the aggressor would be obtained. A State which would ignore such procedure, and would not itself submit to these laws and duties, would place itself in the position of aggressor and, as such, would have to bear the responsibility before the international community for the breach of the peace.

11. The Yugoslav delegation is convinced that the laying down of this legal rule would prove very useful and would prevent, both before world opinion and the public opinion of the respective States, the misuse of armed force under the pretence of exercising the right of self-defence.

12. Regarding this proposal as a new contribution to peace, as a means of localizing and preventing wars, as a method of struggle against the false use of the right to legitimate defence, and as an easy means of exposing an aggressor, the delegation of the Federal People's Republic of Yugoslavia considers that this proposal is especially useful and urgent at present, when it is the duty of every Member of the United Nations to contribute its part in the struggle against aggressive war.

13. The delegation of the Federal People's Republic of Yugoslavia requests that this item be placed on the agenda of the fifth session of the General Assembly and be sent to the First Committee as a question concerning methods of preventing the danger of war.

Yugoslavia: draft resolution

The General Assembly,

Reaffirming the principle of the Charter that war must not serve as an instrument of national policy,

Reaffirming the principle of the Charter that war shall be resorted to only in defence of the national independence and territorial integrity of the State which has been the victim of attack,

Desiring to create a further obstacle to the outbreak of war and facilitate the cessation of hostilities in cases where they have started, by the action of the parties themselves, and thus contribute to the peaceful settlement of disputes,

Considers :

That every State having become engaged in hostilities with another State or with other States shall, at their very outset, and in any case not later than twenty-four hours thereafter, make a public statement whereby it will proclaim its readiness to issue a cease-fire order and withdraw its armed forces beyond the frontier or demarcation line or from the territorial waters of the opposing party, in so far as it has crossed the said boundary or entered the said territorial waters, and

That each of these States shall, at midnight on the day on which the said statements are made, put the cease-fire order into effect and begin the withdrawal of its armed forces beyond the frontier or demarcation line or from the territorial waters of the opposing party, this withdrawal to be completed not later than within forty-eight hours from the moment of the cease-fire;

Determines that every State which, having become engaged in hostilities with another State or with other States, does not make the above statement, or, which, having made it, fails to act in accordance with the provisions of the previous paragraph, shall be considered an aggressor and shall be held responsible before the international community for the breach of the peace.

Reaffirming the principle of the Charter that war shall be resorted to only in defence of the national independence and territorial integrity of the State which has been the victim of aggression,

Desiring to create a further obstacle to the outbreak of war, even after hostilities have started, and facilitate the cessation of the hostilities by the action of the parties themselves, and thus contribute to the peaceful settlement of disputes,

Recommends :

That every State having become engaged in hostilities with another State or with other States shall, at their very outset, and in any case not later than twenty-four hours thereafter, make a public statement whereby it will proclaim its readiness to issue a cease-fire order, prohibit the violation of air space and withdraw its armed forces beyond the frontier or demarcation line or from the territorial waters of the other party, in so far as it has crossed the said boundary or entered the said territorial waters; and

That each of these States shall, at midnight of the day on which the said statements are made, put the cease-fire order into effect, cease the violation of air space and begin the withdrawal of its armed forces beyond the frontier or demarcation line or from the territorial waters of the other party, this withdrawal to be completed not later than within forty-eight hours from the moment of the cease-fire;

Determines that every State which, having become engaged in hostilities with another State or with other States, does not make the above statement, or, which, having made it, fails to act in accordance with the provisions of the two preceding paragraphs, shall be considered an aggressor and shall be held responsible before the international community for the breach of the peace;

Determines that provisions of the present resolution in no way impair the general obligations of States under the Charter of the United Nations or such obligations as derive from the decisions or recommendations of the Security Council, General Assembly or any other competent organ of the United Nations;

Determines that the present resolution shall not apply to enforcement measures taken by the United Nations. Nor shall it apply in the case of a State coming, in compliance with the obligation of collective self-defence, to the assistance of a State against which aggression has been committed.

Report of the First Committee

[13 November 1950]

1. By a letter dated 26 September 1950 (A/1399) the Vice-President and Minister of Foreign Affairs of the Federal People's Republic of Yugoslavia requested that the item, "Duties of States in the event of the outbreak of hostilities", be included in the agenda of the fifth session of the General Assembly. The accompanying explanatory memorandum included the text of a draft resolution which provided that, should a State become engaged in hostilities with another State, it should within twenty-four hours publicly proclaim its readiness to order a cease-fire and to withdraw its armed forces from the territory or territorial waters of the opposing State. The draft resolution provided, further, that the State should at midnight of the same day put the cease-fire order into effect and begin the withdrawal of its armed forces, the withdrawal to be completed within forty eight hours after the cease-fire. Any State failing to make the required public statement or to effect the cease-fire and withdrawal as required should be considered an aggressor and should be held responsible for the breach of the peace.

2. The General Committee decided at its 71st meeting to recommend the inclusion of the item in the agenda. The General Assembly approved this recommendation at its 294th meeting and referred the item to the First Committee for consideration and report.

3. The First Committee considered the item at its 384th to 390th meetings inclusive.

4. In the course of the general debate, three draft resolutions were submitted :

(a) A revised draft resolution by Yugoslavia (A/C.1/604), submitted at the 384th meeting, which proposed certain additions to the original draft resolution. It added the prohibition of the violation of air space to the commitments to be comprised in the public statement. Also added were provisions to the effect that any State engaged in hostilities should immediately inform the Secretary-General so that, if need be, measures falling within the competence of the United Nations might be taken; that the resolution in no way impaired the general obligations of States under the Charter, nor obligations deriving from the decisions or recommendations of competent organs of the United Nations; and that the resolution should not apply to enforcement measures by the United Nations or in the case of a State assisting a victim of aggression in compliance with the obligation of collective self-defence.

(b) A draft resolution by the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics (A/C.1/608), submitted at the 385th meeting, which provided, inter alia, that, in an international conflict, that State should be declared the attacker which first committed one of the following acts : declaration of war; invasion by its armed forces, even without a declaration of war, of the territory of another State; bombardment of the territory of another State or deliberate attack on the ships or aircraft of the latter; the landing or leading of its forces inside the boundaries of another State without the permission of the latter's government, or the violation of the conditions of such permission; or naval blockade. The draft resolution further provided that attacks such as those specified might not be justified by any arguments of a political, strategic or economic nature, or by the desire to exploit natural riches in the territory of the State attacked, or to derive any other kind of advantages or privileges, or by reference to the amount of capital invested in the State attacked or to any other particular interest in its territory, or by the affirmation that the State attacked lacked the distinguishing marks of statehood, or by the other considerations listed in the draft resolution. Finally, the draft resolution provided that, a State threatened by the concentration near its frontier of considerable armed forces of another State should have the right of recourse to diplomatic and other means of securing a peaceful settlement of international disputes. The former State might also adopt requisite measures of a military nature, without, however, crossing the frontier.

(c) A draft resolution by Syria (A/C.1/610), submitted at the 387th meeting, which provided that the definition of aggression should be referred to the International Law Commission for study and report.

5. An amendment to the Yugoslav draft resolution was submitted by Cuba (A/C.1/609), at the 385th meeting, to delete the second operative paragraph, which related to the cease-fire and the withdrawal of forces, and to replace it by the provision that the State attacked should communicate with the Secretary-General informing him of the situation and asking him to arrange for the Peace Observation Commission to proceed immediately to the place; that the Commission should determine the hour for the cease-fire, for the cessation of the violation of air space, and for the commencement of the withdrawal of armed forces, such withdrawal to be completed within the stipulated forty-eight hours; and that this obligation should be incumbent on a State exercising the right of legitimate self-defence within its territory only after the aggressor State had withdrawn its land forces and ceased to violate air space and territorial waters. The Cuban amendment proposed further to delete the third and fourth paragraphs of the operative part of the Yugoslav draft resolution, replacing the fourth paragraph with a provision that the Peace Observation Commission should ascertain compliance with these recommendations and, in case of failure to comply, should determine the aggressor and so inform the competent organs of the United Nations.

6. A revised text of the draft resolution by Yugoslavia (A/C.1/604/Rev.1) was submitted at the 388th meeting, and certain changes were introduced orally. The revised draft contained, inter alia, a new first operative paragraph to the effect that, if a State became engaged in armed conflict, it should take all practicable steps compatible with the right of self-defence to bring the armed conflict to an end at the earliest possible moment. The revised draft modified the content of the required public statement to provide for the discontinuance of military operations and withdrawal of forces on terms or conditions agreed to by the parties or indicated by the appropriate organs of the United Nations. The text relating to notification to the Secretary-General was modified, and the recommendation added thereto that the notification should contain an invitation for the dispatch of the Peace Observation Commission. The provision regarding the determination of the aggressor was modified to the effect that the conduct of States regarding these recommendations should be taken into account in the determination of responsibility for the breach of the peace or act of aggression.

7. The representative of Cuba announced at the 387th meeting that, in view of the modifications which were to be made in the Yugoslav draft resolution (A/C.1/604), he would not press his amendments (A/C.1/609).

8. An amendment by the United Kingdom (A/C.1/614) to the revised Yugoslav draft resolution (A/C.1/604/Rev.1) was submitted at the 388th meeting. The amendment provided for further modification of the content of the required public statement to make provision for mutuality in the acceptance of commitments by parties to the conflict. This amendment was accepted by the representative of Yugoslavia.

9. A draft resolution submitted by Egypt (A/C.1/613) at the 388th meeting was based on the revised Yugoslav draft resolution (A/C.1/604/Rev.1). It varied from the revised Yugoslav draft resolution notably in the phrasing of the first paragraph of the preamble and the last paragraph of the operative part.

10. A further revised text of the Yugoslav draft resolution (A/C.1/604/Rev.2) was submitted at the 389th meeting. It incorporated, with one modification, the text of the first paragraph of the preamble of the Egyptian draft resolution (A/C.1/613) and also the United Kingdom amendment to the second operative paragraph (A/C.1/614), and deleted from the last paragraph the reference to rights and obligations deriving from recommendations of competent organs of the United Nations.

11. At the 389th meeting, the representative of Egypt withdrew his draft resolution (A/C.1/613) in view of the revised text of the Yugoslav draft resolution (A/C.1/604/Rev.2).

12. The following amendments were submitted at the 387th meeting to the Syrian draft resolution (A/C.1/610) :

(a) An amendment by Sweden (A/C.1/611) which provided for the transmittal to the International Law Commission of the draft resolutions submitted by the USSR (A/C.1/608) and Yugoslavia (A/C.1/604) and the amendments thereto, together with the minutes of the discussion in the First Committee.

(b) Two amendments by Bolivia (A/C.1/612). The first provided for an addition to the preamble and the second for replacing the operative paragraph of the Syrian draft resolution by a proposal to refer the USSR draft resolution (A/C.1/608), together with the records of the First Committee on the question, to the International Law Commission. A revised text of the Bolivian amendment (A/C.1/612/Rev.1), submitted at the 388th meeting, expressly indicated that these records should be taken into consideration by the International Law Commission in formulating its conclusions.

13. The representative of Sweden withdrew his amendment (A/C.1/611) to the Syrian draft resolution at the 388th meeting.

14. A revised text of the Syrian draft resolution (A/C.1/610/Rev.1) was submitted at the 389th meeting.

15. At the same meeting, the Committee proceeded to vote on the Yugoslav draft resolution with the following results :

The draft resolution of Yugoslavia (A/C.1/604/Rev.2) was approved by 51 votes to 5, with 2 abstentions.

16. At the 390th meeting two additional draft resolutions were submitted in connexion with the remaining proposals before the Committee :

(a) A joint draft resolution by Bolivia and Syria (A/C.1/615), which replaced the revised Syrian draft resolution (A/C.1/610/Rev.1) and the amendment of Bolivia (A/C.1/612/Rev.1).

(b) A draft resolution by the United Kingdom (A/C.1/618) which proposed requesting the Interim Committee to consider whether it was practicable and desirable to formulate rules and standards for determining the existence of an act of aggression, taking into account all relevant proposals submitted to the fifth session of the General Assembly or to the Interim Committee; and to initiate such further action as the Committee might think appropriate. The representative of France submitted an amendment (A/C.1/619) to add a provision to refer points of law to the International Law Commission.

17. At the same meeting the Committee proceeded to a vote, with the following results :

A motion by the representative of Turkey to put the United Kingdom draft resolution to the vote before the joint draft resolution of Bolivia and Syria was rejected by 41 votes to 11, with 7 abstentions.

The joint draft resolution by Bolivia and Syria (A/C.1/615) was approved by 39 votes to 12, with 7 abstentions.

The Chairman ruled that a vote on the other proposals was accordingly unnecessary.

18. The First Committee therefore recommends to the General Assembly the adoption of the following two draft resolutions :

DUTIES OF STATES IN THE EVENT OF THE OUTBREAK OF HOSTILITIES

A

The General Assembly,

Reaffirming the principles embodied in the Charter, which require that the force of arms shall not be resorted to except in the common interest, and not against the territorial integrity or political independence of any State,

Desiring to create a further obstacle to the outbreak of war, even after hostilities have started, and to facilitate the cessation of the hostilities by the action of the parties themselves, and thus contribute to the peaceful settlement of disputes,

1. Recommends

(a) That if a State becomes engaged in armed conflict with another State or States, it take all steps practicable in the circumstances and compatible with the right of self-defence to bring the armed conflict to an end at the earliest possible moment;

(b) In particular, that such State shall immediately and in any case not later than twenty-four hours after the outbreak of the hostilities, make a public statement wherein it will proclaim its readiness, provided that the States with which it is in conflict will do the same, to discontinue all military operations and withdraw all its military forces which have invaded the territory or territorial waters of another State or crossed a demarcation line, either on terms agreed by the parties to the conflict or under conditions to be indicated to the parties by the appropriate organs of the United Nations;

(c) That such State immediately notify the Secretary-General, for communication to the Security Council and to the Members of the United Nations, of the statement made in accordance with the preceding subparagraph and of the circumstances in which the conflict has arisen;

(d) That such State, in its notification to the Secretary-General, invite the appropriate organs of the United Nations to dispatch the Peace Observation Commission to the area in which the conflict has arisen, if the Commission is not already functioning there;

(e) That the conduct of the States concerned in relation to the matters covered by the foregoing recommendations be taken into account in any determination of responsibility for the breach of the peace or act of aggression in the case under consideration and in all other relevant proceedings before the appropriate organs of the United Nations;

2. Determines that the provisions of the present resolution in no way impair the rights and obligations of States under the Charter of the United Nations nor the decisions or recommendations of the Security Council, the General Assembly or any other competent organ of the United Nations.

B

The General Assembly,

Considering that the question raised by the proposal of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics (A/C.1/608) can better be examined in conjunction with matters under consideration by the International Law Commission, a subsidiary organ of the United Nations, Decides to refer the proposal of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics and all the records of the First Committee dealing with this question to the International Law Commission, so that the latter may take them into consideration in formulating its conclusions as soon as possible.

Letter dated 26 September 1950 from the Vice-President of the Government and Minister of Foreign Affairs of the Federal People's Republic of Yugoslavia addressed to the Secretary-General

[Original text : English]
[27 September 1950]

New York, 26 September 1950

On behalf of the Government of the Federal People's Republic of Yugoslavia, I have the honour to request that the necessary steps be taken so that the following item be included in the agenda of the fifth session of the General Assembly :

“ Establishment of a permanent Commission of Good Offices ”

An explanatory memorandum is enclosed in accordance with rule 20 of the rules of procedure of the General Assembly.

(Signed) Edward KARDELJ
Vice-President of the Government and Minister of Foreign Affairs of the Federal People's Republic of Yugoslavia

YUGOSLAVIA : DRAFT RESOLUTION

Considering that it is the purpose of the United Nations to be a centre for harmonizing the actions of nations in order to maintain good-neighbour relations among them (part 2 of the Preamble and paragraph 4 of Article 1 of the Charter), this being a precondition of international peace and security,

Bearing in mind the responsibility of the General Assembly for promoting international co-operation in the political field (paragraph 1 of Article 13 of the Charter),

Considering that the international tension prevailing in the world today makes it imperative, on the one hand, for States to make a further effort in order to ensure the peaceful settlement of the largest possible number of disputes and litigious questions, but that, on the other hand, this tension makes it more difficult to open negotiations and set about the solution of international disputes and litigious questions,

Taking into account that it is the primary duty of parties to a dispute to seek by their own efforts, and especially through negotiations, to settle their disputes (paragraph 1 of Article 33 of the Charter) and that it is the imperative duty of Members of the United Nations to find agreed solutions to litigious questions, so as to “develop friendly relations among nations based on respect for the principle of equal rights and self-determination of peoples, and to take other appropriate measures to strengthen universal peace” (paragraph 2 of Article 1 of the Charter),

Taking into account that there does not exist a United Nations organ designed to facilitate the opening of direct negotiations between parties for the settlement of their disputes, as well as direct negotiations between States for an agreed solution to litigious questions,

The General Assembly

A. Recommends to all States, whether they are Members of the United Nations or not, to exert a further effort and develop in future the greatest measure of initiative in order to employ direct negotiations and other means for the peaceful settlement of disputes, in accordance with the terms of paragraph 1 of Article 33 of the Charter, and to enter into direct conversations for the solution of litigious questions pending between them, and recommends particularly that States should, in the course of such negotiations or conversations, display, to the greatest possible extent, mutual understanding, tolerance and respect, as well as a persistent desire to seek such solutions to disputes and litigious questions as would be acceptable to both parties, or to all parties concerned, and would be in conformity with the principles of the United Nations Charter :

B. Resolves to establish, as its subsidiary organ, a permanent commission of good offices, for the purpose of facilitating the opening of direct negotiations or conversations, and of applying other means for the peaceful settlement of international disputes;

C. Instructs the permanent commission to exercise its terms of reference in the following manner :

1. The permanent commission shall consider all international disputes and litigious questions on the agenda of the General Assembly and of the Security Council with a view to applying means appropriate for achieving agreed solutions. The permanent commission shall, in each particular case, ascertain whether the dispute or the litigious question is susceptible of settlement through direct negotiations or conversations of the States concerned. Should the permanent commission find that such means are applicable, but have not yet been fully resorted to, it shall, if it deems it appropriate, advise the parties to the dispute or the States mainly concerned with the litigious question to open, or resume, direct negotiations or conversations. The permanent commission may, at the request of one or more of the parties to a dispute, or of the State mainly concerned with the litigious question, on its own initiative or on that of any Member of the United Nations, consider, in accordance with the above, international disputes and litigious questions which are not on the agenda of the General Assembly or of the Security Council, but which the permanent commission considers to be definitely of a nature to affect adversely general international relations;

2. Should the permanent commission find that an international dispute in the technical sense of the word is susceptible of settlement, either through the mediation of the commission itself or of a State or of an individual, the commission will advise the parties to the dispute to accept such mediation and will make its services available both in the negotiations concerning the acceptance of the mediation procedure or in the course of this procedure itself. Should one of the parties to the dispute suggest some other means for the settlement of the dispute (conciliation, inquiry, arbitration or judicial settlement), the permanent commission may offer its good offices to the parties for the purpose of facilitating negotiations regarding the acceptance and application of the proposed means for the peaceful settlement of the dispute. The permanent commission will make its services available for the application of the means of peaceful settlement thus accepted, if both parties to the dispute so desire and to the extent to which both parties agree;

3. The commission shall take note of, examine and communicate to the parties concerned all suggestions relating to the peaceful settlement of the substance of the dispute or of the litigious questions on its agenda; it shall not, however, pass judgment upon such suggestions;

D. Resolves that the commission should be composed of the representatives of twelve Members of the United Nations. Six of the twelve States represented will be the non-permanent members of the Security Council, while the remaining six will be specially elected by the General Assembly from among Member States other than the permanent members of the Security Council. These States will be elected for a term of two years. Three seats on the commission will be renewed every year. Those members of the commission elected at the time of the establishment of the Commission, whose term will be limited to one year, will be drawn by lot;

The States thus elected which, during their term, become non-permanent members of the Security Council, will cease to be members of the commission by virtue of their election on the day when their term in the Security Council begins, and will become members of the commission by virtue of their membership in the Security Council. The seats thus left vacant will be filled by the election of other Member States for terms lasting as long as the terms of States in whose stead they have been elected;

The commission shall elect its own officers and adopt its rules of procedure. The commission shall, both in establishing its rules of procedure and in its further activities, take the necessary steps in order to avoid all unnecessary publicity. It shall, therefore, as a general rule, hold closed meetings;

The commission shall submit annual reports on its activities to the General Assembly at its regular sessions;

E. Requests the Secretary-General to make available to the commission the necessary staff and to provide it with the other facilities necessary for the carrying out of its terms of reference.

EXPLANATORY MEMORANDUM

1. Considering the present structure of the United Nations, one comes to the conclusion that, in the field of safeguarding international peace and security, practices up to the present have not made our Organization a centre for harmonizing the actions of nations in the sphere of promoting good-neighbour relations, although it is the task of our Organization to be such a centre.

2. The reason for this is that the two main organs of our Organization, which are competent in the matter of international peace and security, have in practice such divided functions that the concrete duty of promoting good-neighbour relations is neither within the competence of the Security Council nor within the competence of the General Assembly.

3. On the one hand is the competence of the Security Council. It bears the chief responsibility concerning questions of international peace and security. But, in order to set the machinery of the Security Council into motion, it is necessary that a special situation or conflict should arise menacing peace or international security. On the other hand, the General Assembly, as the supreme organ of the United Nations, deals with the general problems of the world policy of peace and security and, on account of its large membership and non-permanent character, it has not the possibility to examine the particular situations in which relations between neighbouring States are disturbed, although good-neighbour relations are a precondition for international peace.

4. Therefore, it is the task of the General Assembly of the United Nations, which is responsible for the promotion of international co-operation in the political field, to examine and lay down methods for the purpose of improving these relations and forming a permanent subsidiary organ which would enable the parties to improve the disturbed relations of neighbouring States.

5. The delegation of the Federal People's Republic of Yugoslavia has come to the conclusion that, among the causes disturbing good-neighbour relations and preventing the clearing in time of the obstacles standing in the way of a return to normal conditions, is the failure on the part of the States to carry out their obligations and solve their disputes by direct negotiations as laid down in the Charter, and also to use other means for a peaceful solution of international conflicts.

6. Although the Charter has laid down this obligation, and although the General Assembly has adopted the Revised General Act for the Pacific Settlement of International Disputes (resolution 268 A (III)), the United Nations has so far had no organ which would take upon itself the initiative to use all the means at its disposal to make adequate use of direct talks as a method for the peaceful solution of conflicts, an organ which would mediate between the parties in conflict before the conflict assumes a character of danger for international peace and security.

7. The delegation of the Federal People's Republic of Yugoslavia considers that the creation of such an organ would contribute to the parties in conflict manifesting a spirit of compromise and to the maintenance of a peaceful atmosphere, which would in itself facilitate contact between States in conflict and would render possible fuller co-operation in this field, which is so important for world peace and security.

8. For this reason the delegation of the Federal People's Republic of Yugoslavia, in its draft resolution, proposes the establishment of a permanent commission of good offices. This commission would be a subsidiary organ of the General Assembly and would be composed of twelve Member States of the United Nations six of which would be the non-permanent members of the Security Council and none of which would be chosen from its permanent members. This would enable the States which do not possess the right of veto in the Security Council to contribute to the cause of peace and, with their mutual influence based on friendship and equality, to draw the attention of the States in conflict to their duty not to disturb general international relations. While one cannot deny the decisive role of the permanent members of the Security Council in questions of responsibility for international peace and security, the democratic character of the Organization demands that the other Member States should also make their contribution in matters pertaining to international peace and thus demonstrate the collective responsibility of all Member States for the maintenance of good-neighbour relations.

9. On the other hand, practice has shown that the great Powers are, as a rule, owing to their specific position in international relations, interested in every international conflict which may arise. Consequently, we may assume that this interest may prove to be an obstacle to the impartial carrying out of the role of mediator. Their participation in the work of the commission would not facilitate the finding of the best ways and means for an agreed solution of conflicts. However, the very non-participation of the great Powers in the commission would enable the permanent members of the Security Council to find solutions to conflicts in the Security Council, if the intervention of the latter became necessary, without prejudicing their political prestige.

10. The organ proposed by the draft resolution is new, both with regard to its composition and its competence. At the same time, this organ would not appropriate any of the prerogatives which the Charter gives to other organs. It would not make decisions about conflicts, or prevent the Security Council from considering conflicts within its competence (Chapters VI and VII of the Charter), because the rules of procedure of the Security Council do not prevent the parties from making their contributions towards the solution of problems. The proposed organ would not infringe the competence of the General Assembly, because the former would be a subsidiary organ of the Assembly and would submit reports to it on the commission's activities. The proposed organ would not infringe the competence of the International Court of Justice because the former would not pass judgments, but would only facilitate the appearance of the parties before the Court. In the same way the commission would not infringe the mandate of the Interim Committee, because the competence of the Committee, also only a subsidiary organ of the General Assembly, would not extend to matters that the General Assembly has expressis verbis entrusted to another organ.

11. For these reasons, believing in the usefulness of the creation of such an organ, and the urgent necessity that this organ should begin to function immediately, and thus remove a practical vacuum for the accomplishment of those tasks which are theoretically within the competence of the General Assembly, the delegation of the Federal People's Republic of Yugoslavia requests that the accompanying draft resolution be put on the agenda of the fifth session of the General Assembly of the United Nations and sent—as a contribution towards the strengthening of international co-operation and peace—to the First Committee of the Assembly.

Uruguay : draft resolution

[9 November 1950]

The General Assembly,

Mindful of the provision in Article 33 of the Charter that the parties to any dispute, the continuance of which is likely to endanger the maintenance of international peace and security, shall first of all seek a solution by negotiation, inquiry, mediation, conciliation, arbitration, judicial settlement, resort to regional agencies or arrangements, or other peaceful means of their own choice,

Recalling that in resolution 295 (IV) the Interim Committee of the General Assembly is charged to consider systematically the further implementation of Article 11 (paragraph 1) relating to the general principles of co-operation in the maintenance of international peace and security, and of that part of Article 13 (paragraph 1 a) which deals with the promotion of international co-operation in the political field, Decides to refer item 73 of the agenda of the present session to the Interim Committee and recommends that the Committee, in continuing its systematic study of machinery for the pacific settlement of disputes, give careful attention to the proposals introduced pursuant to item 73 and to the discussions on that item.

The General Assembly,

Considering that the Interim Committee of the General Assembly has already begun to study the question of the establishment of a permanent conciliation organ like that proposed by Yugoslavia (A/1401),

Considering that the study of that question is important and urgent,

Decides to refer to the Interim Committee of the General Assembly the draft resolution submitted by Yugoslavia proposing the establishment of a permanent commission of good offices, for study in connexion with the question of the establishment of a permanent organ of conciliation;

Requests the Interim Committee of the General Assembly to give the consideration of this question priority in its programme of work.

Report of the First Committee

[13 November 1950]

1. By a letter dated 26 September 1950 (A/1401), the Vice-President and Minister of Foreign Affairs of the Federal People's Republic of Yugoslavia requested that the item, "Establishment of a permanent commission of good offices" should be included in the agenda of the fifth session of the General Assembly. A draft resolution was attached, together with an explanatory memorandum. The draft resolution recommended all States to develop the greatest measure of initiative in view of direct negotiations and other means for peaceful settlement in accordance with Article 33 of the Charter, and provided for the establishment of a permanent commission of good offices for the purpose of facilitating the opening of direct negotiations and of applying other means of peaceful settlement of disputes. Provisions were included setting out the terms of reference of the Commission, which was to be composed of the six non-permanent members of the Security Council and of six Member States, other than the permanent members of the Security Council, elected by the General Assembly.

2. The General Committee decided, at its 71st meeting, to recommend the inclusion of the item in the agenda, and the recommendation was approved at the 294th meeting of the General Assembly. The item was referred to the First Committee for consideration and report, and was considered at the 390th and 391st meetings of the Committee.

3. In the course of the general debate two additional draft resolutions were submitted :

(a) A draft resolution by Uruguay (A/C.1/616), submitted at the 390th meeting, which, after calling attention to the provisions of Article 33 of the Charter and to the terms of reference of the Interim Committee, proposed to refer the item to the Interim Committee for consideration, together with the relevant proposals and records of the discussions on the item, in connexion with its systematic study of machinery for the peaceful settlement of disputes.

(b) A draft resolution by Lebanon (A/C.1/617), submitted at the same meeting, which called attention to the study by the Interim Committee on the question of the establishment of a permanent organ of conciliation; proposed to refer to the Interim Committee the Yugoslav draft resolution for study in connexion therewith; and requested the Interim Committee to give priority to the consideration of the question in its programme of work.

4. The representatives of Lebanon and Uruguay presented, at the 391st meeting, a joint draft resolution (A/C.1/621) which combined the provisions of the draft resolutions of Lebanon (A/C.1/617) and Uruguay (A/C.1/616), with the omission of the final provision of the Lebanese draft resolution by which the Interim Committee was requested to give priority to its consideration of the question.

5. The First Committee proceeded at the same meeting to a vote, with the following result :

The joint draft resolution of Lebanon and Uruguay (A/C.1/621) was approved by 46 votes to 5, with 5 abstentions.

6. The Chairman ruled that a vote on the Yugoslav draft resolution was accordingly unnecessary.

7. The First Committee recommends to the General Assembly the adoption of the following draft resolution :

ESTABLISHMENT OF A PERMANENT COMMISSION OF GOOD OFFICES

The General Assembly,

Mindful of the provision in Article 33 of the Charter that the parties to any dispute, the continuance of which is likely to endanger the maintenance of international peace and security, shall, first of all, seek a solution by negotiation, inquiry, mediation, conciliation, arbitration, judicial settlement, resort to regional agencies or arrangements, or other peaceful means of their own choice,

Recalling that in General Assembly resolution 295 (IV) the Interim Committee of the General Assembly is charged to consider systematically the further implementation of Article 11 (paragraph 1) relating to the general principles of co-operation in the maintenance of international peace and security and of that part of Article 13 (paragraph 1 a) which deals with the promotion of international co-operation in the political field,

Considering that the Interim Committee of the General Assembly has already begun to study the question of the establishment of a permanent conciliation organ like that proposed by Yugoslavia (A/1401),

Considering that the study of this question is important and urgent,

1. Decides to refer to the Interim Committee item 73 of the agenda of the present session (Establishment of a permanent commission of good offices);

2. Recommends to the Interim Committee, in continuing its systematic examination of machinery for the pacific settlement of disputes, to study this item in connexion with the question of the establishment of a permanent organ of conciliation and taking into account the proposal introduced by Yugoslavia pursuant to item 73 and the discussions of the fifth session of the General Assembly on that item.

Financial implications of the draft resolution on agenda item 74, proposed by the Sixth Committee : note by the Secretary-General

[7 December 1950]

1. At its 247th meeting on 30 November 1950, the Sixth Committee adopted a draft resolution (A/1631) concerning a United Nations distinguishing ribbon or other insignia for personnel which has participated in Korea in the defence of the principles of the Charter of the United Nations. The Secretary-General is to make arrangements with the Unified Command, established pursuant to the Security Council resolution of 7 July 1950, for the design and award of the ribbons or other insignia, under such regulations as the Secretary-General shall prescribe.

2. It is the intention of the Secretary-General, when discussing the arrangements with the Unified Command, to take the position that it will be the responsibility of the Unified Command to make the awards of such ribbons or other insignia. If the Unified Command and the Member Governments concerned agree with this view, there would be no financial implications for the United Nations.

Report of the Sixth Committee

[6 December 1950]

1. In a letter dated 2 October 1950 (A/1421), the Secretary of Foreign Affairs of the Philippines, on behalf of his Government, requested the Secretary-General to take steps to have the following item included in the agenda of the fifth session of the General Assembly :

“ Provision of a United Nations distinguishing ribbon or other insignia for personnel participating in Korea in the defence of the principles of the Charter of the United Nations. ”

2. At its 71st meeting (A/BUR/SR.71) on 5 October 1950, the General Committee decided by 12 votes to 2, to recommend the General Assembly to include the above item in its agenda and unanimously decided to refer it to the Sixth Committee.

3. The General Assembly, at its 294th meeting on 7 October 1950 (A/PV.294), adopted the recommendation of the General Committee by 45 votes to 5, with 6 abstentions.

4. The Sixth Committee considered the question at its 247th meeting on 30 November (A/C.6/SR.247).

5. The representative of the Philippines presented his Government's proposal, the purpose of which was to express by the symbol of a distinguishing ribbon or other insignia the gratitude of the United Nations to those who were serving and making sacrifices in Korea for the collective defence of the principles of the Charter. He pointed out that the institution of such a decoration was within the competence of the United Nations in the same way as the decision it had already taken to have an official seal and a flag. The details could be left to the Secretary-General.

6. Several representatives supported the proposal of the Philippines and some expressed the view that, in addition to the military action in Korea, any persons who, in any circumstances, manifested exceptional heroism in the cause of the United Nations or rendered outstanding service to it, deserved such a decoration.

7. Other representatives opposed the Philippines proposal, on the grounds that it was illegal and beyond the competence of the General Assembly. A discussion took place on that point and the majority of the Committee agreed that the Philippines proposal could not be considered illegal and that the General Assembly was competent to adopt the Philippine draft resolution.

8. The Polish representative having invoked rule 120 of the rules of procedure, the Sixth Committee first decided the question of its competence and, by 32 votes to 5, with 3 abstentions, pronounced itself competent to adopt the proposal of the Philippines.

9. At the request of the representative of the Philippines, the Committee took a vote by roll-call on the draft resolution before it. The resolution was adopted by 32 votes to 5, with 4 abstentions.

In favour: Argentina, Australia, Belgium, Brazil, Burma, Canada, Chile, China, Colombia, Cuba, Denmark, Ecuador, France, Greece, Guatemala, India, Iraq, Iran, Lebanon, Mexico, Netherlands, Norway, Pakistan, Peru, Philippines, Sweden, Turkey, Union of South Africa, United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland, United States of America, Uruguay, Venezuela.

Against: Byelorussian Soviet Socialist Republic, Czechoslovakia, Poland, Ukrainian Soviet Socialist Republic, Union of Soviet Socialist Republics.

Abstaining: Saudi Arabia, Syria, Yemen, Yugoslavia.

10. The Sixth Committee therefore recommends to the General Assembly adoption of the following draft resolution:

PROVISION OF A UNITED NATIONS DISTINGUISHING RIBBON OR OTHER INSIGNIA FOR PERSONNEL PARTICIPATING IN KOREA IN THE DEFENCE OF THE PRINCIPLES OF THE CHARTER OF THE UNITED NATIONS

The General Assembly,

1. Desiring to symbolize the valour and sacrifices of the men and women who have served on behalf of the United Nations in repelling aggression in Korea,

2. Recalling its resolution 92 (I) on the official seal and emblem of the United Nations, its resolution 167 (II) on the United Nations flag, and the resolution of the Security Council of 7 July 1950 authorizing the Unified Command to use the United Nations flag,

3. Resolves that the Secretary-General be requested to make arrangements with the Unified Command, established pursuant to the Security Council resolution of 7 July 1950, for the design and award, under such regulations as the Secretary-General shall prescribe, of a distinguishing ribbon or other insignia for personnel which has participated in Korea in the defence of the principles of the Charter of the United Nations.

Financial implications of the draft resolution on agenda item 74, proposed by the Sixth Committee (A/1631): thirty-third report of 1950 of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions

[9 December 1950]

1. The Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions has carefully considered the text of the draft resolution proposed by the Sixth Committee in document A/1631, as well as a note submitted by the Secretary-General in document A/C.5/436.

2. The Advisory Committee expresses some doubt regarding the position taken by the Secretary-General to the effect that no financial implications will result from the proposed resolution.

3. Until, however, the Advisory Committee can be informed of the result of the arrangements between the Secretary-General and the Unified Command required under paragraph 3 of the proposed resolution, the Committee is unable to indicate the extent of the financial consequences involved.

DOCUMENT A/1664

Financial implications of the draft resolution on agenda item 74, proposed by the Sixth Committee (A/1631) : report of the Fifth Committee

[11 December 1950]

1. In accordance with rule 152 of the rules of procedure of the General Assembly and with the request of the President in his letter of 1 December 1950 to the Chairman of the Fifth Committee (A/C.5/426), the Fifth Committee, at its 278th meeting on 11 December 1950, considered the financial implications of the draft resolution adopted by the Sixth Committee concerning the provision of a United Nations distinguishing ribbon or other insignia for personnel participating in Korea in the defence of the principles of the Charter of the United Nations (A/1631).

2. The Committee had before it a note by the Secretary-General (A/C.5/436) and the thirty-third report, of 1950 of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions (A/1650). The Secretary-General stated that it was his intention, when discussing the arrangements with the Unified Command, to take the position that it would be the responsibility of the Unified Command to make the award of such ribbons or other insignia, and that, in the event of the Unified Command and the Member Governments concerned agreeing with this view, no financial implications would be involved for the United Nations. Doubt was expressed by the Advisory Committee regarding the view of the Secretary-General that no financial implications would result from the proposed resolution. The Advisory Committee reported, however, that until it could be informed of the result of the arrangements between the Secretary-General and the Unified Command referred to in paragraph 3 of the draft resolution, it was unable to indicate the extent of the financial consequences involved.

3. In the course of discussion in the Fifth Committee, the representative of the United States of America proposed that the Secretary-General should be authorized to draw on the Working Capital Fund in the event of expenditure by the United Nations being found necessary following negotiations with the authorities concerned. The representative of France suggested that a specific provision in the resolution relating to the Working Capital Fund for 1951 was unnecessary, and that the situation would be adequately met if appropriate reference to the Secretary-General's authority to use the Working Capital Fund for the purposes in question were included in the report submitted by the Fifth Committee on the budget estimates for 1951. After elucidation by the representative of the Secretary-General, the representative of the United States of America accepted the proposal of France on the understanding that any withdrawals necessary from the Working Capital Fund for the purposes of the draft resolution would be made in accordance with the provision under which the Secretary-General is authorized to incur commitments up to an agreed amount, provided they relate to the maintenance of peace and security.

4. The representative of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, however, stated that the creation of a United Nations distinguishing ribbon or other insignia for personnel participating in Korea was in contradiction with the principles and purposes of the Charter and that the proposal was an attempt to help the United States aggression in Korea. He would therefore vote against the estimate of the financial implications involved, as well as the French proposal.

5. Thereupon the Fifth Committee, by a vote of 35 to 4, with 1 abstention, decided to approve the Advisory Committee's report, together with the French proposal, and to inform the General Assembly accordingly

Communication dated 27 September 1950 addressed to the Secretary-General by the Minister for Foreign Affairs of the Central People's Government of the People's Republic of China

[Original text : English]
[29 September 1950]

Peking, 27 September 1950

For transmission to Mr. Nasrollah Entezam, President of the fifth session of the General Assembly and Sir Gladwyn Jebb, President of the Security Council.

According to a report of the People's Government of northeast China, the Chinese merchant ship Anhai 21, belonging to the Antung Harbour Administrative Bureau, sailed on 20 September from Shin-tao on the southeastern tip of the Chiao-tung Peninsula of China towards Antung, carrying passengers and freight. At 22.45 Peking time on 21 September, when the ship came to a point off Chen-shan-chiao, at 38°11'30" N. latitude and 123°6' E. long., it was suddenly fired at by a United States destroyer marked D-29 from behind, in the direction of southwest, for twenty-five minutes and forced to stop. At 23.10, the Chinese ship was approached by the destroyer, spotted with searchlight, and forcibly inspected. All the passengers were ordered to line up on the deck and interrogated. This lasted for more than twenty minutes, until the destroyer finally sailed away. There was also a United States aeroplane circling overhead while the United States destroyer fired its guns at the Chinese merchant ship.

This was one more provocative act on the part of the United States Government towards the People's Republic of China following the repeated crimes committed by the United States Government with the military aeroplanes of the United States aggression forces in Korea, of invading China's territorial air, carrying out wanton strafing and bombing, killing and wounding Chinese people and damaging Chinese properties. The United States Government, in the course of the aggressive war being waged by it against Korea, and for the purpose of extending the flames of war, has now become so reckless as to employ the navy of the United States aggression forces in Korea, to impose inspection on the merchant ship of the People's Republic of China on the high seas, and to infringe upon the right of maritime navigation of the People's Republic of China.

In the name of the Central People's Government of the People's Republic of China, I hereby raise accusation before the United Nations against this fresh aggressive atrocity committed by the United States Government in violating the right of maritime navigation of China, and demand that the United Nations General Assembly immediately include in its agenda the case of "The Bombardment and illegal inspection of a merchant ship of the People's Republic of China by a military vessel of the United States aggression forces against Korea", together with the accusations of the People's Republic of China against the invasion of China's territorial air by the military aeroplanes of the United States aggression forces in Korea, and their wanton strafing and bombing, killing and wounding of Chinese people and damaging of Chinese properties. I demand also that the United Nations General Assembly immediately accept the representatives of the People's Republic of China to state the case and participate in the discussion. The United Nations General Assembly should immediately recommend the United Nations Security Council to take effective measures to condemn the aggressive crimes of the United States and bring about promptly the withdrawal of the United States aggression forces in Korea, including air and naval forces, so that peace in the Far East and throughout the world may be restored.

Communication dated 24 September 1950 addressed to the Secretary-General by the Minister for Foreign Affairs of the Central People's Government of the People's Republic of China

[30 September 1950]

Peking, 24 September 1950

For transmission to Mr. Nasrollah Entezam, President of the fifth session of the General Assembly and Sir Gladwyn Jebb, President of the Security Council.

According to a report of the People's Government of north-east China, on 22 September 1950, military aeroplanes of the United States aggression forces in Korea invaded against the territorial air of the People's Republic of China; they first made reconnoitring from the air above La-ku-shao of the K'uan-tien county in Liaotung province of China, then dropped twelve bombs on the municipal areas of the city of Antung in the same province, causing damage to Chinese municipal areas and wounding Chinese inhabitants; the case is even more serious than the strafings by the United States aeroplanes which occurred formerly.

The details of the fact are as follows: at 22.01 Peking time on 22 September, an aeroplane of the United States aggression forces in Korea invaded, to make reconnoitering, the air above La-ku-shao of the K'uan-tien county in Liaotung province of China; being warned by our garrison on the spot, it fled southward. At 20.15 Peking time the same day, a B-29 bomber of the United States aggression forces in Korea invaded the air of Antung city from the direction of northeast and dropped twelve heavy bombs on the area southeast to Chen-an road in Antung city, wounding two persons, destroying by direct hit 28 buildings and by reverberation the roofs and windows of more than 300 buildings, and damaging more than five more of vegetable plots. After dropping the bombs, the said bomber of the United States aggression forces in Korea crossed over Antung city and fled southward at 22.19 Peking time.

This one more criminal act of the aeroplanes of the United States aggression forces in Korea proves that the provocative action of invading China's territorial air committed by the United States aggression forces in Korea is continually increasing, and exposes more clearly than ever the determination of the United States of America to extend the aggressive war against Korea, to carry out armed aggression on Taiwan, and to extend further her aggression against China.

On August 27, August 30, and September 10 of the current year, I have thrice made protest and lodged accusation before the United Nations Security Council against the crimes committed by the military aeroplanes of the United States aggression forces in Korea, of invading China's territorial air, and by strafing, killing and wounding Chinese people and damaging Chinese properties; I have also demanded that the Central People's Government of the People's Republic of China should send its delegation to attend and join the United Nations Security Council. The majority in the Security Council, being controlled by the United States, although agreed apparently to include in the agenda the accusation raised by the People's Republic of China, actually refused to have the representative of China present in the Security Council to state the case and participate in the discussion. This action on the part of the United States shows that, on the one hand, she attempts to cover up her aggressive atrocities by making use of the majority she controls in the United Nations; on the other hand, she is afraid of the attendance of the representative of China, lest he should disclose her infamous crimes.

Further, the United Nations General Assembly, owing to the illegal discussions made by the majority under the control of the United States, has hitherto been indifferent to the rightful demand of the 475 million people of China, refused the participation of the legitimate representatives of the People's Republic of China, and kept Tsiang Ting-fu, the illegal "delegate" of the corpse-like Kuomintang reactionary remnant clique in the United Nations as a running-dog of the United States. This has in effect rendered the United Nations into an instrument for covering up the American aggression against China and the American action of extending the war.

The above-mentioned fresh atrocities committed by the military aeroplanes of the United States aggression forces in Korea, of invading China's territorial air and bombing and wounding Chinese people, testify to the fact that the flames of the war being extended by the United States in the east are burning more fiercely.

Under such circumstances, if the representatives of the majority States attending the United Nations General Assembly should still be pliant to the manipulation of the United States and continue to play deaf and dumb to these aggressive crimes of the United States, they shall not escape a share in the responsibility for lighting up the war flames in the East. The peaceloving peoples all over the world definitely will not stand in face of this with folded arms.

In the name of the Central People's Government of the People's Republic of China I hereby raise once more before the United Nations the accusation against the aggressive atrocities of the United States, and demand that the United Nations General Assembly should immediately include in its agenda the accusation of the People's Republic of China against the invasion of China's territorial air by the military aeroplanes of the United States aggression forces in Korea, and their extravagant strafing and bombing which caused casualties to Chinese people and damage to Chinese properties, and that it should immediately accept the representatives of the People's Republic of China to state the case and participate in the discussion. The United Nations General Assembly should immediately recommend the Security Council to take effective measures to condemn the aggressive crimes of the United States and bring about promptly the withdrawal of the United States aggressive forces in Korea, so that peace in the Far East and the world may be restored.

New York, 29 September 1950

I have the honour to inform you that the delegation of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics supports the request of the Central People's Government of the People's Republic of China, contained in the telegram of 24 September 1950 (A/1415) addressed by the Minister for Foreign Affairs of the Central People's Government, Mr. Chou En-lai, to the Secretary-General of the United Nations, for the inclusion in the agenda of the General Assembly fifth session of the protest of the Central People's Government of the People's Republic of China against the violation of Chinese air space by the air force of the United States of America and against the machine-gunning and bombing of Chinese territory by that air force.

The delegation of the U.S.S.R. requests that a meeting of the General Committee should be convened to consider the question of the inclusion in the agenda of the fifth session of the General Assembly of the above-mentioned proposal of the Central People's Government of the People's Republic of China.

New York, 1 October 1950

In presenting my respects to the Secretary-General of the United Nations, I have the honour, in connexion with the request of the Central People's Government of the People's Republic of China, supported by the delegation of the U.S.S.R. for the inclusion in the agenda of the fifth session of the General Assembly of the item "Protest of the Central People's Government of the People's Republic of China against the violation of Chinese air space by the air force of the United States of America and against the machine-gunning and bombing of Chinese territory by that air force", to transmit an explanatory note on this item in accordance with rule 20 of the rules of procedure of the General Assembly.

(Signed) A. VYSHINSKY
Head of the delegation of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics

EXPLANATORY NOTE

In accordance with rule 15 of the rules of procedure of the General Assembly, the delegation of the U.S.S.R. supports the request of the Central People's Government of the People's Republic of China for the inclusion in the agenda of the fifth session of the General Assembly of the item "Protest of the Central People's Government of the People's Republic of China against the violation of Chinese air space by the air force of the United States of America and against the machine-gunning and bombing of Chinese territory by that air force".

This question is an extremely important one and was raised by the Central People's Government of China in a telegram dated 24 September 1950 from Mr. Chou En-lai to the Secretary-General of the United Nations, for transmission to the President of the fifth session of the General Assembly, Mr. Entezam, and the President of the Security Council, Sir Gladwyn Jebb.

The telegram states that, on 22 September 1950, military aircraft of the United States again violated the air space of the People's Republic of China; first, they carried out air reconnaissance over La-ku-shao in the K'uantien county of the Liaotung province of China, and then dropped twelve bombs in the area of the town of Antung in the same province, causing damage in the municipal districts and wounding Chinese civilians. The note points out that this incident is even more serious than the machine-gunning of Chinese territory previously carried out by American aircraft and that this new act of aggression by the United States air force is evidence that the number of cases of provocative acts in the form of violation of Chinese air space by the United States air force is constantly increasing and shows the determination of the United States to extend the scale of its aggression against China.

In informing the United Nations of the above-mentioned aggressive acts of the United States air force, Mr. Chou En-lai, on behalf of the Central People's Government of the People's Republic of China, requests the General Assembly of the United Nations immediately to include this question in its agenda and to invite representatives of the People's Republic of China to its session, in order that they may state the views of the Central People's Government of the People's Republic of China on this question and take part in the discussion of the question in the Assembly and its Committees.

The Central People's Government of the People's Republic of China appeals to the General Assembly of the United Nations to recommend immediately that the Security Council should take effective measures concerning the question mentioned in Mr. Chou En-lai's telegram.

The communication of the Central People's Government of China concerning the aggressive acts of the United States air force in regard to Chinese territory has also received confirmation on the part of the United States Government, which informed the Secretary-General of the United Nations on 26 September 1950¹, through the United States representative to the Security Council, that it was possible that the air force of the United States had violated the Chinese frontier and had dropped bombs in the area of Antung on the night of 22 September.

The above mentioned continuous hostile acts of the United States air force against China constitute a flagrant violation of such important principles of the Charter of the United Nations as the principle of territorial integrity and the principle of the political independence of States, constitute a serious threat to international peace and security, and call for action to be taken by the United Nations.

[9 February 1951]

1. By a letter dated 29 September 1950, addressed to the President of the General Assembly (A/1416), the delegation of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics expressed its support for the request of the Central People's Government of the People's Republic of China, contained in a telegram of 24 September (A/1415), that the General Assembly should include in the agenda of its fifth session the protest of the Central People's Government of the People's Republic of China against the violation of Chinese air space by the air force of the United States of America and against the machine-gunning and bombing of Chinese territory by that air force. An explanatory note submitted by the U.S.S.R. delegation (A/1419) followed this request.

2. A further communication from the Central People's Government of the People's Republic of China dated 27 September (A/1410) requested that, together with this item, there should be included an additional item entitled "The bombardment and illegal inspection of a merchant ship of the People's Republic of China by a military vessel of the United States aggression forces against Korea".

3. At the 71st meeting of the General Committee on 5 October, the U.S.S.R. delegation agreed that it would itself propose the inclusion of an item based on the requests contained in the telegrams referred to above (A/1415 and A/1410). It was decided at that meeting to recommend the inclusion of an item in the agenda under the heading "Complaint by the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics regarding the violation of Chinese air space by the air force of the United States of America and the machine-gunning and bombing of Chinese territory by that air force, and against the bombardment and illegal inspection of a merchant ship of the People's Republic of China by a military vessel of the United States".

4. The General Assembly approved this recommendation at its 294th meeting on 7 October 1950 and included the question as item 75 on its agenda, referring it to the Ad Hoc Political Committee. At its 313th meeting on 1 December, the General Assembly decided to transfer the item from the Ad Hoc Political Committee to the First Committee.

5. At the 439th meeting of the First Committee, held on 2 February 1951, the Committee accepted a suggestion made by the Chairman that item 75 should be placed immediately next to item 70 and that discussion should proceed on both items, with the understanding that votes would be taken separately on the two items. The item was considered at the 439th, 440th and 441st meetings of the Committee.

6. The following draft resolution (A/C.1/660) was submitted by the U.S.S.R. at the 440th meeting, held on 6 February 1951 :

" The General Assembly,

" Having considered the complaint by the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics regarding the violation of Chinese air space by the air force of the United States of America and the machine-gunning and bombing of Chinese territory by that air force, and against the bombardment and illegal inspection of a merchant ship of the People's Republic of China by a military vessel of the United States,

" Noting the communications of the Central People's Government of the People's Republic of China to the United Nations :

" (a) Concerning the infringement of the inviolability of Chinese air space in the region of the Korean-Manchurian frontier by the United States air force and the bombing and machine-gunning of Chinese territory by United States military aircraft, causing loss of life and material damage to the People's Republic of China,

" (b) Concerning the bombardment, detention and inspection of a Chinese merchant ship by a military vessel of the United States,

" Having heard the statement on these questions by the delegation of the People's Republic of China and the explanation given by the delegation of the United States of America,

" Condemns these illegal acts by the Government of the United States and places on the said Government full responsibility for them and for all damages caused to the People's Republic of China and for any consequences which may ensue from such acts;

" Recommends the Security Council to take immediately, in conformity with Article 11, paragraph 2 of the Charter, the necessary action to prevent illegal acts by the United States Government, violating the sovereignty of China and causing damage to the People's Republic of China and the peaceful population of China".

7. The U.S.S.R. draft resolution, which was the only draft resolution submitted on the item, was put to the vote at the 441st meeting on 7 February 1951 and was rejected by 50 votes to 5, with 2 abstentions. Consequently, as regards this item, the First Committee has no recommendation to submit to the General Assembly.

New York, 5 December 1950

The delegations of Cuba, Ecuador, France, Norway, the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland and the United States of America to the fifth session of the General Assembly of the United Nations present their compliments to the Secretary-General of the United Nations and have the honour to refer to their request of 4 December 1950 (A/1618) that there be included in the agenda of the present session of the Assembly, as an important and urgent question, an item entitled "Intervention of the Central People's Government of the People's Republic of China in Korea".

In connexion with the above-mentioned request, the following explanatory memorandum is submitted.

EXPLANATORY MEMORANDUM

Armed forces of the Central People's Government of the People's Republic of China are conducting military operations against the United Nations forces in Korea.

During November this question was considered by the Security Council. The delegations of Cuba, Ecuador, France, Norway, the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland and the United States of America in the Security Council sponsored a draft resolution designed to deal with this question (S/1894). The Security Council voted on that resolution on 30 November 1950.¹ The resolution was not adopted because of the negative vote of one of the permanent members, the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics.

Under these circumstances, the delegations of Cuba, Ecuador, France, Norway, the United Kingdom and the United States of America believe that the General Assembly should now consider immediately, as an important and urgent question, the intervention of the Central

New York, 16 December 1950

I am sending you herewith a statement by Mr. Pak Hen En, Minister for Foreign Affairs of the People's Democratic Republic of Korea, delivered by him on 12 December 1950 to the heads of foreign embassies and legations, relating to the brutal slaughter of the Korean population and the barbarous destruction of towns and villages in Korea by the American and Syngman Rhee forces.

I shall be grateful if the above-mentioned statement can be distributed as an official General Assembly document.

(Signed) J. MALIK

STATEMENT BY MR. PAK HEN EN, MINISTER FOR FOREIGN AFFAIRS OF THE PEOPLE'S DEMOCRATIC REPUBLIC OF KOREA, TO THE DIPLOMATIC CORPS IN CONNEXION WITH THE BRUTAL SLAUGHTER OF THE KOREAN POPULATION AND THE BARBAROUS DESTRUCTION OF TOWNS AND VILLAGES IN KOREA BY THE AMERICAN AND SYNGMAN RHEE FORCES

12 December 1950

1. Retreating to the south under the blows of the People's Army of Korea, the American and British interventionists and their hirelings, the mercenary clique of Syngman Rhee, are engaging in deliberate mass slaughter of the peaceful civilian population, burning and destroying towns and villages and blowing up buildings and installations.

2. The Ministry of Foreign Affairs of the People's Democratic Republic of Korea has facts at its disposal and can affirm that on the orders of his overseas masters, Shing Sin Mo, Minister for Defence of Syngman Rhee's puppet government, has ordered the retreating forces to shoot without regard to sex or age all the peaceful inhabitants who support and sympathize with the People's Democratic Government. This order is being carried out by all the Syngman Rhee and American military units. The People's Democratic Government of Korea is daily receiving information about the bestial slaughter of members of the Workers' Party, the families of men serving with the People's army and all sympathizers with the People's Democratic Government. The American and Syngman Rhee forces are carrying out this order without sparing pregnant women, children or old people.

3. Information which is far from complete shows that in the province of Kangwon alone, more than 15,000 peaceful citizens have already been shot; and in the small village of Oktonri, in the Pyonggang district of that same province, the families of thirty-two men serving in the People's Army have been shot, including pregnant women and young children. On the roads along which the American interventionists and the Syngman Rhee forces have been hastily withdrawing lie the corpses of thousands of peaceful unarmed citizens who were guilty of no offence—women, children and old people, brutally slain and tortured by a band of enraged maniacs.

The withdrawing forces of the American interventionists, which conceal their acts of brigandage in Korea beneath the banner and authority of the United Nations, are leaving behind them a desert, setting fire to towns and villages, blowing up and destroying all large houses, public buildings and installations. On 5 December 1950, the Commander of the American First Corps cynically described on the radio the activities of the special destruction squads which form part of the so-called United Nations forces, and spoke eulogistically of their "success" in the annihilation of towns and bridges and the destruction of schools, hospitals, kindergartens and theatres.

These brutal methods were used by the Hitlerite fascist monsters with their fantastic plans for the establishment of a world hegemony, when they attempted to destroy whole nations. History knows how that Hitlerite adventure ended. The bosses of Wall Street and their puppets in the White House should be reminded of that example. A nation which is defending its independence from interventionists, and is filled with the determination to carry on that struggle to the end, cannot be destroyed. The time will come when those who are guilty of these unheard of crimes against the Korean people will stand before the judgment of history and answer for their misdeeds.

I beg you to inform the governments of all countries and the world at large of these acts of monstrous violence and of barbarous slaughter committed against the peaceful population of Korea.

I am confident that world public opinion will share our indignation at the above-mentioned fascist methods of exterminating an unarmed peaceful population, whose only offence is that it wants to live in its own free and independent country. I hope your Governments will submit to the United Nations the question of the immediate cessation of such acts, which have already been condemned by all progressive humanity, as well as the question of bringing to account those who have been guilty of these capital crimes.

Cuba, Ecuador, France, Norway, United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland and United States of America : joint draft resolution

[6 December 1950]

The General Assembly,

Recalling the resolution adopted by the Security Council on 25 June 1950, ² determining that the North Korean forces had committed a breach of the peace, and calling upon all Members of the United Nations to refrain from giving assistance to the North Korean authorities,

Recalling the resolution [376 (V)] adopted by the General Assembly on 7 October 1950, which sets forth the policies of the United Nations in respect to Korea,

Noting that armed forces of the Central People's Government of the People's Republic of China are conducting military operations against the United Nations forces in Korea,

Reaffirming that United Nations forces should not remain in any part of Korea otherwise than so far as necessary for achieving the objectives of stability throughout Korea and the establishment of a unified, independent and democratic government in the sovereign State of Korea, as set forth in the resolution of the General Assembly dated 7 October 1950, ² See Official Records of the Security Council, Fifth Year, No. 15.

Insistent that no action should be taken which might lead to the spread of the Korean conflict to other areas and thereby further endanger international peace and security,

Calls upon all States and authorities, and in particular those responsible for the action noted above, to refrain from assisting or encouraging the North Korean authorities, to prevent their nationals or individuals or units of their armed forces from giving assistance to North Korean forces and to cause the immediate withdrawal of any such nationals, individuals, or units which may presently be in Korea;

Affirms that it is the policy of the United Nations to hold the Chinese frontier with Korea inviolate and fully to protect legitimate Chinese and Korean interests in the frontier zone;

Calls attention to the grave danger which continued intervention by Chinese forces in Korea would entail for the maintenance of such a policy;

Requests the United Nations Commission for the Unification and Rehabilitation of Korea to consider urgently and to assist in the settlement of any problems relating to conditions on the Korean frontier in which States or authorities on the other side of the frontier have an interest.

Telegram, dated 7 December 1950, from the United Nations Commission for the Unification and Rehabilitation of Korea to the Secretary-General transmitting a report dated 7 December 1950

[8 December 1950]

Pursuant to clause 2 (c) of General Assembly resolution of 7 October 1950, the Commission submits the following interim report to the Secretary-General for transmission to the Members of the United Nations. This report was adopted unanimously at the 21st meeting of the Commission on 7 December 1950.

" The Commission has examined the Chinese communist intervention in Korea. As instructed by the Commission its military observers have consulted with Eighth Army commanders and have also visited units in the field. A special observation group consisting of members of Australian and Thailand delegations, Australian and El Salvador military observers and members of the Secretariat has interrogated a number of Chinese prisoners of war. The Netherlands and Turkish representatives have visited troops in the field.

" Main items of evidence considered by the Commission are as follows :

" 1. Chinese units were first identified in Korea on 25 October.

" 2. 48,000 Chinese troops are identified as having been in the Eighth Army area by 25 November. These troops belonged to the 12th, 13th, and 16th army groups of the Chinese Fourth Field Army. By 30 November the total number identified had increased to 165,000.

" 3. Thus Chinese forces definitely identified total 231,000 men drawn from eight armies and comprising twenty-six divisions.

" 4. It is probable that many more Chinese troops are present in Korea. One responsible estimate places the total number of Chinese troops in Korea as high as 400,000 men.

" 5. At present the troops fighting the forces of the United Nations consist almost entirely of Chinese. Very few North Korean troops are in action.

" 6. Prisoners' statements in the report of the special observation group show that " (a) Details of prisoners' movements from bases in Manchuria indicate that Chinese incursion into Korea was the result of a prepared plan which first collected large forces along the Yalu River and at the appropriate moment organized the crossing into Korea;

" (b) The prisoners concerned had no prior warning of the intention to use them in Korea. They understood they were defending the Chinese frontier against attack. On entry into Korea, some believed that they were to be used against South Korean troops in defence of North Korea, others that they were to attack Chinese Nationalist forces in Korea. No prisoner had the slightest idea that he was being sent to fight United Nations forces;

" (c) The prisoners interrogated were all members of regular army units acting under normal military discipline and were not volunteers in any possible meaning of the term.

" On the basis of existing evidence the Commission has come to the conclusion that Chinese forces in great strength are attacking the United Nations forces in North Korea and that these Chinese forces form part of the armed forces of the People's Republic of China.

" The Commission would also invite attention to a large-scale exodus now taking place from North Korea of refugees fleeing southwards. Whereas these villagers stood their ground when the United Nations forces entered their territory, the recent withdrawal of the latter has filled the road to the south with columns of refugees. The Commission's military observer reports that on 6 December signs of an exodus began about eighty miles south of the defence line of the United Nations forces and rapidly increased as he proceeded northwards. An estimate of the numbers is difficult but one estimate puts the figure already as high as 500,000 in the west-coast areas alone. The Commission believes that this number will increase as additional territory is threatened by invading forces from the north."

[24 January 1951]

The General Assembly,

Viewing with grave concern the situation in the Far East,

Considering that the continuance of this situation is likely to endanger the maintenance of world peace and security,

Noting the reply [A/C.1/653] of the Central People's Government of the People's Republic of China to the resolution of the First Committee dated 13 January 1951, Desiring to continue its efforts to secure a cessation of hostilities in Korea and a peaceful settlement of the Korean and other Far Eastern problems in accordance with the principles and purposes of the United Nations,

Recommends that representatives of the Governments of France, the United Kingdom, the United States of America, the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, Egypt and India and of the Central People's Government of the People's Republic of China meet as soon as possible for the purpose of securing all necessary elucidations and amplifications of the above-mentioned reply and of making any incidental or consequential arrangements towards a peaceful settlement of the Korean and other Far Eastern problems;

The first meeting of the above representatives will be held on a date and at a place to be fixed by the President of the General Assembly; the date and place of each subsequent meeting will be fixed by the representatives themselves. They will hold their meetings in private and will frame their own rules of procedure. They will advise the General Assembly of the result of their consultations as early as possible.

Report of the Group on Cease-Fire in Korea

[Original text : English]
[2 January 1951]

1. On 14 December 1950 the General Assembly adopted the following resolution [384 (V)] which had been sponsored by thirteen Asian Powers :

" The General Assembly,

" Viewing with grave concern the situation in the Far East,

" Anxious that immediate steps should be taken to prevent the conflict in Korea spreading to other areas and to put an end to the fighting in Korea itself, and that further steps should then be taken for a peaceful settlement of existing issues in accordance with the Purposes and Principles of the United Nations,

" Requests the President of the General Assembly to constitute a group of three persons, including himself, to determine the basis on which a satisfactory cease-fire in Korea can be arranged and to make recommendations to the General Assembly as soon as possible."

2. In pursuance of the resolution, the President forthwith constituted a group consisting of Mr. L. B. Pearson of Canada, Sir Benegal N. Rau of India and himself, and announced this fact to the General Assembly. The Group met almost immediately afterwards and decided to associate the Secretary-General of the United Nations with its work.

3. A copy of the resolution was sent on 15 December to General Wu, the representative of the Central People's Government of the People's Republic of China, who was then in New York.

4. On 15 December, as a first step in carrying out its task, the Group consulted the representatives of the Unified Command as to what they considered to be a satisfactory basis for a cease-fire. The suggestions which emerged from this consultation, and which in the circumstances the Group felt constituted a reasonable basis for discussion, are summarized below :

(a) All governments and authorities concerned, including the Central People's Government of the People's Republic of China and the North Korean authorities, shall order and enforce a cessation of all acts of armed force in Korea. This cease-fire shall apply to all of Korea.

(b) There shall be established a demilitarized area across Korea of approximately twenty miles in depth with the southern limit following generally the line of the 38th parallel.

(c) All ground forces shall remain in position or be withdrawn to the rear; forces, including guerrillas, within or in advance of the demilitarized area, must be moved to the rear of the demilitarized area; opposing air forces shall respect the demilitarized zone and the areas beyond the zone; opposing naval forces shall respect the waters contiguous to the land areas occupied by the opposing armed forces to the limit of three miles from shore.

(d) Supervision of the cease-fire shall be by a United Nations commission whose members and designated observers shall ensure full compliance with the terms of the cease-fire. They shall have free and unlimited access to the whole of Korea. All governments and authorities shall co-operate with the cease-fire commission and its designated observers in the performance of their duties.

(e) All governments and authorities shall cease promptly the introduction into Korea of any reinforcing or replacement units or personnel, including volunteers, and the introduction of additional war equipment and material. Such equipment and material will not include supplies required for the maintenance of health and welfare and such other supplies as may be authorized by the cease-fire commission.

(f) Prisoners of war shall be exchanged on a one-for-one basis, pending final settlement of the Korean question.

(g) Appropriate provision shall be made in the cease-fire arrangements in regard to steps to ensure (i) the security of the forces; (ii) the movement of refugees, and (iii) the handling of other specific problems arising out of the cease-fire, including civil government and police power in the demilitarized zone.

(h) The General Assembly should be asked to confirm the cease-fire arrangements, which should continue in effect until superseded by further steps approved by the United Nations.

5. The Group then attempted to consult the Central People's Government of the People's Republic of China and, for this purpose, sent a message by hand to General Wu and repeated it by cable to the Minister for Foreign Affairs in Peking. The text of this message is reproduced below :

" 16 December 1950

" As you have already been informed by resolution 384 (V) a copy of which was sent to you yesterday, a Committee was set up by the General Assembly of the United Nations on the previous day, 14 December, consisting of myself and my two colleagues, Sir Benegal Rau of India and Mr. L. B. Pearson of Canada, charged with the duty of determining whether it is possible to arrange appropriate and satisfactory conditions for a cease-fire in Korea. The purpose of this cease-fire in Korea will be to prevent the conflict from spreading to other areas, to put an end to the fighting in Korea, and to provide an opportunity for considering what further steps should be taken for a peaceful settlement of existing issues, in accordance with the purposes and principles of the United Nations.

" The above Committee has now met representatives of the Unified Command in Korea, and has discussed with them, in an exploratory manner, possible conditions upon which a cease-fire might be established. Since the Government of the Communist People's Republic of China has expressed strong views on the future of Korea and about the present state of warfare in that country, and since Chinese are participating in that warfare, the Committee wishes also to discuss with your Government or its representatives, and with the military authorities in command of the forces operating in North Korea, possible conditions upon which a cease-fire might be established. For this purpose, we desire to see you at your earliest convenience, and we should be grateful to know when a meeting can be arranged.

" We realize that your Government which sent you here with other objects in mind, may prefer other arrangements by which a cease-fire can be discussed with them. We wish your Government to know that, in the interest of stopping the fighting in Korea and of facilitating a just settlement of the issues there in accordance with the principles of the United Nations Charter, we are prepared to discuss cease-fire arrangements with your Government or its representatives either here or elsewhere, as would be mutually convenient. We urge only that arrangements for these discussions should be made with the least possible delay. With this in mind, we are sending the text of this communication directly to your Government by telegram.

(Signed) " Nasrollah ENTEZAM "

6. On 18 December, Mr. Pearson, on behalf of the Group, submitted a brief preliminary account of its activities to the First Committee, hoping that a fuller report would be made in the near future.

7. On 16 December, the President, acting on behalf of the Group, had availed himself of the good offices of the Swedish delegation to transmit, through the Swedish Embassy in Peking, a request to the Central People's Government that General Wu should be instructed to stay on in New York and discuss with the Group the possibility of arranging a cease-fire. The reply to the request, communicated to the President on 21 December through the same channel, was as follows :

" The Central People's Government acknowledges receipt of a message dated 18 December 1950 from Mr. Entezam, President of the General Assembly, transmitted via the Swedish Government and asks the Swedish Government to transmit the following reply to Mr. Entezam, President of the General Assembly :

" The representative of the People's Republic of China neither participated in nor agreed to the adoption of the resolution concerning the so-called three-man Committee for Cease-Fire in Korea by United Nations General Assembly. The Central People's Government has repeatedly declared that the Central People's Government would regard as illegal and null and void all major resolutions, especially those concerning Asia, which might be adopted by the United Nations without the participation and approval of the duly appointed representatives of the People's Republic of China. Therefore, the Central People's Government cannot instruct its representative General Wu to continue to remain in Lake Success for negotiations with the above-mentioned three-man illegal Committee. After the Security Council³ unreasonably voted against the complaint against the United States armed aggression against Taiwan raised by the People's Republic of China, General Wu was instructed by the Central People's Government to continue to stay at Lake Success for participation in the discussion of the complaint of United States aggression against China submitted by the U.S.S.R. representative; although he has waited for a long time and until the United Nations General Assembly was declared adjourned, he was still not given the opportunity to speak. Under such circumstances, the Central People's Government deems that there is no more necessity for General Wu and his staff to remain at Lake Success and has therefore instructed him to start their homeward journey on 19 December.

"As to the question of how the United Nations may get in touch with the Korean Democratic People's Republic, the Central People's Government is of the opinion that the United Nations should address direct inquiry to the Government of the Korean Democratic People's Republic."

8. On 19 December, acting on a recommendation from the sponsors of the twelve-Power draft resolution (A/C.1/642) introduced in the First Committee on 12 December, the Group sent another message to the Foreign Minister of the Central People's Government. This was intended to remove any possible misunderstandings which may have arisen out of the separation of the twelve-Power resolution from the thirteen-Power resolution [384 (V)] adopted by the General Assembly on 14 December. The text of the message is given below :

"In the consideration which you are giving to our earlier message, we are anxious that there should be no misunderstanding as to the relationship between the United Nations resolution establishing a cease-fire group and the resolution proposed by twelve Asian governments recommending appointment of a committee to meet as soon as possible and make recommendations for a peaceful settlement of existing issues in Far East. It is our clear understanding and also that of the twelve Asian sponsors, that once a cease-fire arrangement had been achieved, the negotiations visualized in the second resolution should be proceeded with at once. Indeed, the preamble to the cease-fire resolution states specifically that steps should be taken for a peaceful settlement when fighting in Korea is ended. It is also our view, as well as that of the twelve Asian governments sponsoring the second resolution, that the Government of the People's Republic of China should be included in the negotiating committee referred to in that resolution. We feel that this committee could become an effective channel for seeking peaceful solution of existing issues in the Far East between the United States, the United Kingdom, the Soviet Union and China. For that purpose, in our opinion, it should be set up with a minimum of delay, but to make that possible a "cease-fire" arrangement must be put into effect. This point of view has been communicated to your delegation which left New York today, and we express the hope that you will give full weight to it.

9. On 23 December, the President of the General Assembly, in his capacity as such, received from the Foreign Minister of the Central People's Government of the People's Republic of China the text of a statement issued by the latter in Peking on 22 December explaining the attitude of the Central People's Government on the resolution constituting the Group on Cease-Fire in Korea and on the peaceful settlement of the Korean question. This document is reproduced as an Annex. It appears to be in the nature of an answer to the Group's message of 16 December.

10. In these circumstances, and in spite of its best efforts, the Group regrets that it has been unable to pursue discussion of a satisfactory cease-fire arrangement. It therefore feels that no recommendation in regard to a cease-fire can usefully be made by it at this time.

TELEGRAM, DATED 23 DECEMBER 1950, FROM THE MINISTER FOR FOREIGN AFFAIRS OF THE CENTRAL PEOPLE'S GOVERNMENT OF THE PEOPLE'S REPUBLIC OF CHINA ADDRESSED TO THE PRESIDENT OF THE GENERAL ASSEMBLY

Peking, 23 December 1950

The attitude of the Central People's Government of the People's Republic of China on the so-called three-man committee for cease-fire in Korea and the peaceful settlement of the Korean question is to be found in my statement issued on 22 December. Besides being broadcast by the Hsiu Hua News Agency on the same date, the said statement is hereby transmitted by cable for your information.

(Signed) CHOU EN-LAI,
Minister for Foreign Affairs of the Central People's Government of the People's Republic of China

Statement by Mr. Chou En-lai, Minister for Foreign Affairs of the Central People's Government of the People's Republic of China on the resolution concerning the three-man committee for cease-fire in Korea illegally adopted by the United Nations General Assembly on 14 December 1950

Peking, 22 December 1950

The General Assembly of the United Nations illegally adopted a resolution submitted by thirteen nations concerning also-called cease-fire in Korea. This resolution provided for the establishment of a three-man committee, consisting of the President of the current session of the United Nations General Assembly, Mr. N. Entezam, the Indian representative, Sir Benegal N. Rau, and the Canadian representative, Mr. L. B. Pearson, both appointed by him, to conduct talks to determine whether it is possible to arrange appropriate and satisfactory conditions for a cease-fire in Korea, and then to make recommendations to the United Nations General Assembly. With reference to this resolution, Mr. Chou En-lai, Minister for Foreign Affairs of the Central People's Government of the People's Republic of China, issues the following statement :

1. The representative of the People's Republic of China neither participated in nor agreed to the adoption of the resolution concerning the so-called three-man committee for cease-fire in Korea by the United Nations General Assembly. Prior to this, the Central People's Government of the People's Republic of China had repeatedly declared that the Central People's Government of the People's Republic of China would regard as illegal and null and void all resolutions on major problems, especially those concerning the major problems of Asia, which might be adopted by the United Nations without the participation and concurrence of the duly appointed representatives of the People's Republic of China. Therefore, the Government of the People's Republic of China and its representatives are not prepared to make any contact with the above-mentioned illegal three-man committee.

2. The Central People's Government of the People's Republic of China has always held and still holds that the hostilities in Korea should be speedily brought to an end. In order to end the hostilities in Korea, genuine peace must be restored in Korea and the Korean people must have genuine freedom to settle their own problems. The reason why the hostilities in Korea have not yet been put to an end is precisely because of the fact that the United States Government has dispatched troops to invade Korea and is continuing and extending its policies of aggression and war. As far back as the beginning of the hostilities in Korea, we here stood for the peaceful settlement and localization of the Korean problem. For this reason, the Government of the People's Republic of China and that of the U.S.S.R. have repeatedly proposed that all foreign troops should be withdrawn from Korea, and that the Korean people be left alone to settle the Korean problem themselves. However, the United States Government not only rejected such a proposal but also rejected negotiations for the peaceful settlement of the Korean problem. When the invading troops of the United States arrogantly crossed the 38th parallel, at the beginning of the month of October, the United States Government, recklessly ignoring warnings from all quarters and following the provocative crossing of the border by Syngman Rhee in June, thoroughly destroyed and hence obliterated forever, this demarcation line of political geography. In the latter part of November, when the representative of the People's Republic of China was invited to take part in the discussion by the Security Council on the charge against United States aggression in Taiwan, he again submitted the proposal that the United States and other foreign troops should all be withdrawn from Korea, and that the People of South and North Korea should be left alone to settle their domestic affairs. But the United Nations Security Council, under the domination of the United States, rejected this reasonable peace proposal from the Government of the People's Republic of China. From this it is evident that since the United States Government has, from the very beginning, refused to withdraw its troops, it has absolutely no sincerity in ending the hostilities in Korea, still less in letting the Korean people have genuine peace and freedom.

3. This being the case, why does the United States representative, Mr. Austin, now favour an immediate cease-fire in Korea, and why does President Truman also express willingness to conduct negotiations to settle the hostilities in Korea? It is not difficult to understand that, when the American invading troops were landing at Inchon, crossing the 38th parallel or pressing towards the Yalu River, they did not favour an immediate cease-fire and were not willing to conduct negotiations. It is only today when the American invading troops have sustained defeat, that they favour an immediate cease-fire and the conducting of negotiations after the cease-fire. Very obviously, they opposed peace yesterday, so that the United States might continue to extend its aggression and they favour a cease-fire today, so that the United States may gain a breathing space and prepare to attack again, or at least hold its present aggressive position in preparation for further advance. What they care about is not the interests of the Korean people and the Asian peoples, nor those of the American people. They are only interested in how American imperialists can maintain their invading troops and aggressive activities in Korea, how they can continue to invade and occupy China's Taiwan and how they can intensify the preparation for war in the capitalist world. Therefore, the representative of MacArthur's Headquarters said bluntly that they could accept a cease-fire only on a military basis and without any political conditions. This means that all the status of aggression will remain the same after the cease-fire, so that they can fight again when they are prepared. Further, they could take this opportunity to declare the existence of a state of emergency and to prepare mobilization in the United States, in Western Europe and Japan, thus driving the peoples of the United States, Western Europe and Japan down into the abyss of war. Is this not what Messrs. Truman, Acheson, Marshall and MacArthur are doing now? With reference to the so-called proposal for cease-fire first and negotiations afterwards, irrespective of the fact that the proposal by the twelve nations had neither been adopted by the Security Council nor by the United Nations General Assembly, and irrespective of what countries are to be included in the negotiating conference, and even if all these had been agreed upon, the agenda and contents of the negotiation could still be discussed endlessly after the cease-fire. If the conference is not a conference of the legal Security Council or of the legal Five-Power conferences, or is not affiliated to them, the United States Government in the last resort can still manipulate its voting machine.

Thus, to discuss the cease-fire and start negotiations not on the basis of the withdrawal of all foreign troops from Korea and the settling of Korean domestic affairs by the Korean people themselves, is to act hypocritically and would therefore suit the designs of the United States Government, and hence cannot satisfy the sincere desire of the peace-loving peoples of the world. The three-man committee, a cease-fire on the spot, peace negotiations, launching of a huge offensive : this Marshall formula is not in the least unfamiliar to the Chinese people, because in 1946, General Marshall assisted Chiang Kai-shek in this way repeatedly for a whole year, and in the end had to admit failure and leave. Will the people of China, who had learned this lesson in 1946 and later gained victory, fall into such a trap today? No, the old trick of General Marshall will not work again in the United Nations.

4. Moreover, the present issues are definitely not confined to the Korean problem. While the United States Government was engineering the hostilities in Korea, it dispatched the Seventh Fleet to invade China's Taiwan and then bombed north-east China, fired on Chinese merchant vessels and extended its aggression in East Asia. Against all this, the Central People's Government of the People's Republic of China has repeatedly lodged charges with the United Nations. But under United States domination, the majority in the United Nations has not only upheld American aggression against Korea and supported United States invasion and occupation of Taiwan, the bombing of north-east China, but also rejected the three proposals submitted by our representative on the charge against the United States for armed aggression against Taiwan, and shelved the charge of United States aggression against China made by the representative of the Soviet Union. Our representative was kept waiting for a long time, until the First Committee of the United Nations General Assembly was indefinitely adjourned, and was not given a chance to speak.

This attitude which was taken by the majority of the United Nations under the domination of the Anglo-American bloc, obviously violates the United Nations Charter and its purposes. They are furthering rather than checking United States aggression. They are undermining rather than defending world peace.

What particularly arouses the world's indignation is that in spite of the fact that during the past several months the United Nations held innumerable discussions on China or on important questions concerning China, the representatives of the People's Republic of China, who are the only representatives of the 475 million people of China, are still being kept out of the doors of the United Nations, whereas the representatives of a handful of the Chiang Kai-shek reactionary remnants are still being allowed to usurp the seats of the Chinese delegation in the United Nations. To such an extent the Chinese people have been slighted and insulted!

Therefore, the Chinese people, who, impelled by righteous indignation, have risen to volunteer in resisting the United States and helping Korea, and thus protecting their homes and defending their country, are absolutely reasonable and justified in so doing. The Chinese people's volunteers, who have been forced to take up arms side by side with the Korean People's Army to resist the American aggressors, under the Unified Command of the Government of the Korean Democratic People's Republic, are fighting for their own existence, fighting to aid Korea and fighting for the peace of East Asia as well as the peace of the whole world.

5. It must be pointed out that the proposal for a peaceful settlement of the Korean problem submitted by the majority of the representatives of the thirteen Asian and Arab nations was originally based on their desire for peace, and this is understandable. But they have failed to see through the whole intrigue of the United States Government in supporting the proposal for a cease-fire first and negotiations afterwards, and therefore they have not seriously considered the basic proposals of the Chinese Government concerning the peaceful settlement of the Korean problem.

The original thirteen-nation draft resolution was not wholly palatable to the United States Government, so it was separated into two resolutions. The first resolution, or the resolution providing for the so-called three-man committee for cease-fire in Korea, which is satisfactory to the United States, was, under pressure, given priority for discussion and was consequently adopted by the United Nations General Assembly. But the second resolution, or the resolution providing for a so-called "negotiating conference" or "negotiating commission", with which the United States was either not satisfied or not quite satisfied, was therefore shelved for the time being.

The difference between these two resolutions was remarkably demonstrated by the attitude of the Philippine representative. The Philippine representative, who always follows in the footsteps of the United States, only agreed to the first resolution but withdrew from the second resolution. This trick of close co-operation displayed by the Philippines in the role of demanding a cease-fire, and by the United States in the role supporting it, has thus been exposed.

From this fact itself, the lesson can be drawn that if the Asian and Arab nations wish to gain genuine peace, they must free themselves from United States pressure and must abandon the "three-man committee for cease-fire in Korea", and give up the idea of cease-fire first and negotiations afterwards.

6. The Central People's Government of the People's Republic of China solemnly declares that the Chinese people eagerly hope that the hostilities in Korea can be settled peacefully. We firmly insist that, as a basis for negotiating for a peaceful settlement of the Korean problem, all foreign troops must be withdrawn from Korea and Korea's domestic affairs must be settled by the Korean people themselves. The United States aggression forces must be withdrawn from Taiwan. And the representatives of the People's Republic of China must obtain a legitimate status in the United Nations. These points are not only the justified demands of the Chinese people and the Korean people; they are also the urgent desire of all progressive public opinion throughout the world. To put aside these points would make it impossible to settle peacefully the Korean problem and the important problems of Asia.

I wish to draw your attention to "Communiqué No. 3 from the Commission of the Central Committee of the United Democratic National Front of Korea for the investigation of the atrocities of American interventionists and Syngman Rhee's troops in Korea", received by the United Nations Secretariat on 29 December and containing information regarding the brutal extermination of the population, the looting, rape, violence and barbarous destruction committed by American and Syngman Rhee troops in Pyongyang. I have the honour to request you to publish the above-mentioned communiqué as an official document of the General Assembly.

COMMUNIQUÉ No. 3 FROM THE COMMISSION OF THE CENTRAL COMMITTEE OF THE UNITED DEMOCRATIC NATIONAL FRONT OF KOREA FOR THE INVESTIGATION OF THE ATROCITIES OF AMERICAN INTERVENTIONISTS AND SYNGMAN RHEE'S TROOPS IN KOREA

26 December 1950

I have the honour to transmit to you, with the request that it should be circulated to all Members of the United Nations, Communiqué No. 3 from the Commission of the Central Committee of the United Democratic National Front of Korea for the investigation of the atrocities of American interventionists and Syngman Rhee's troops in Korea.

(Signed) KIM DU BON
Chairman of the Commission of the Central Committee of the United Democratic National Front of Korea

COMMUNIQUÉ

1. As a result of a preliminary investigation of atrocities committed by American and Syngman Rhee's troops in Pyongyang, the Commission of the United Democratic National Front has established the following.

2. During approximately a month and a half of the occupation of Pyongyang, the American interventionists and Syngman Rhee's men committed unheard-of atrocities, brazenly flouting the elementary rules of international law and human ethics. They behaved like barbarians in the dark ages in a conquered country. They massacred the peaceful population, raped and abused women, looted private property, and destroyed industrial equipment, municipal enterprises, cultural institutions and dwellings, striving in their savage hatred of the Korean people to reduce to a heap of ruins our ancient capital, that citadel of the democratic movement in Korea—the city of Pyongyang.

1. Terror against the population, raping of women and other atrocities

3. During their temporary occupation of the city of Pyongyang, the American interventionists and the troops of Syngman Rhee's puppet government killed many innocent peaceful members of the city's population. They flung into prison, beat up, shot and hanged officials of the People's Government, members of democratic parties and public organizations, and first and foremost members of the Labour Party; they also arrested, put in jail, tortured and killed members of these people's families, women, children and old men. The number of dead resulting from these atrocities committed in Pyongyang during its occupation by American and Syngman Rhee's troops is over 15,000. American interventionists and Syngman Rhee's warriors and policemen arrested and put in jail in Pyongyang over 4,000 patriots and democrats, of whom more than 2,000 were shot in the prison yard. Their corpses filled 21 bombshelters, 3 wells and 3 water reservoirs. In addition, when detachments of the People's Army entered Pyongyang, 86 corpses which their executioners apparently did not have time to clear away, were discovered in the prison yard. On 4 December, when they fled from Pyongyang in panic, Americans and Syngman Rhee's men shot many prisoners with machine guns through the (? walls) in the prison cells. Before abandoning Pyongyang, they tried to spread panic among the population by circulating absurd rumours to the effect that Chinese communist troops were coming who would massacre everyone, that atom bombs would be dropped on Pyongyang, etc. By means of threats and blackmail they forced the local population to move south from the river Taedong, announcing that anyone who did not leave the city would be considered a red and would be summarily dealt with. The frightened inhabitants of the city, both men and women, began to cross the river Taedong in great numbers on 3 and 4 December; some walked across the bridge, others made their way across by means of boats, barrels, and boards. As the Americans and Syngman Rhee's men retreated, they blew up the bridge while a crowd of people was crossing it; American jet planes machine-gunned another crowd on the shore of the river and persons crossing the river. On 3 and 4 December approximately 4,000 innocent inhabitants of the city were slaughtered in this way by Americans and Syngman Rhee's men. Eye-witnesses report that on 4 December the river Taedong was full of corpses and its water ran red with the blood of the victims. On the pretext that the patriots were using bomb shelters as bases for operations against United States and Syngman Rhee troops, the Americans and Syngman Rhee's men forced the population to fill up the bomb shelters with earth and shot the people found in the shelters. In eight bomb shelters of the western part of Pyongyang the bodies of 328 inhabitants of the city, killed in this fashion, were discovered. Citizens accused of communist sympathies were shot daily without investigation or trial. Among those shot were citizen Lim, living at 56 Soljsuri, Pyongyang; Te Son Gon, elementary school teacher, living at 10 Soljsuri, Pyongyang; citizen Han Ho Sem, living in Sonaenri, Pyongyang; Mun San Re, teacher at the Pyongyang Institute, and many others.

4. During the occupation of Pyongyang the Americans and Syngman Rhee's men raped many women and girls. Here are merely a few examples. On 25 October they raped Pak Chun Ok, aged 18, living in Sansuri Street, Pyongyang, having threatened her that she would be shot. In the office of the Tehan Youth Organization in Kanhyonri Street, the Americans raped two housewives and one girl, as well as the wife of citizen Pak Men Ho. The wife of Li Don Om, aged 32, living in Tonchanri, Pyongyang, was raped by five Americans. The wife of Cho Hyn Sek was raped by two Americans. The wife of Li Syn Gon, aged 54, was raped by two Americans. Citizen Cho Syn Nok, living at 4 Sanhyonri, was arrested. Three days later three Americans came to his wife and raped her. The Americans arrested many wives of patriots, kept them imprisoned at No. 2 Vonchonri, and subjected them to barbarous atrocities day and night.

5. The American imperialists and Syngman Rhee's men are committing crass violations of the Geneva conventions on the treatment of prisoners of war and wounded, killing war prisoners from the Korean People's Army and imposing intolerable living conditions upon them. Thus, for example, American troops shot some 70 prisoners of war from the Korean People's Army in Chiljulli, the eastern part of Pyongyang, and 50 men at Yulli. In the prisoner of war camp situated on the grounds of the Pyongyang textile factory, prisoners of war slept out in the open on frosty November nights; no medical aid was given to the sick and wounded, with the result that many of them lost their lives.

II. Destruction of industrial equipment, buildings and cultural institutions

6. During the retreat after the temporary occupation of Pyongyang special detachments of American and Syngman Rhee engineers blew up and set fire to industrial enterprises, buildings and installations in Pyongyang. Before withdrawing from Pyongyang the Americans and Syngman Rhee's men destroyed the entire equipment of the Pyongyang chemical factory and set fire to the factory building and the community centre of the factory. Completely destroyed were the equipment and buildings of the Pyongyang textile factory, which had survived the air bombings, as well as those of the engineering works in the eastern part of Pyongyang, the Sadon briquette factory, the electric plant of that factory, the Pyongyang towel factory, the Pyongyang sugar refinery, the Pyongyang electric bulb factory, the gramophone record factory, the hosiery factory, needle factory, Pyongyang tobacco factory, Rensan chemical plant and the Pyongyang central department store. The Americans and Syngman Rhee's men completely destroyed the Kim Il Sung University, built by the efforts of the inhabitants of the northern part of the Republic, as well as the buildings of the Russian Language Institute, the Teachers' Institute, the Technical Communications Institute, the Polytechnic Institute, the Central School of the Central Committee of the Labour Party, the 1st and 2nd secondary schools, the 2nd, 3rd, 4th, 5th and 10th junior secondary schools, the 2nd girls' secondary school, 5th junior girls' secondary school, and 14th, 19th, 38th and 39th elementary schools. Text books and furniture were soaked in petrol and burnt or used as fuel. They also broke into and burned the buildings of the Central Hospital, the National Arts Theatre, the Pyongyang Nursery School, the offices of the newspaper Nodon Shinmun and other cultural establishments. The Americans and the Syngman Rhee troops burned hundreds of thousands of books in the Central State Library, the library of the Kim Il Sung University, the libraries of various institutions, bookshops and private libraries. They destroyed the Pyongyang museums, looted the exhibits, destroyed many historical monuments, such as a sepulchre of the Nan Nan era and the Pu Bek Nu pavillon, one of the eight historical monuments of Korea, and stole a gold image of Buddha from the En Men Ze Temple. The American interventionists blew up and destroyed the hydraulic installations and reservoirs, which provided drinking water for the 400,000 inhabitants of the city of Pyongyang, destroyed the electrical sub-station, which supplied the city with electricity, and completely destroyed railway and foot bridges across the river Taedong and the city tramway system. The American and Syngman Rhee troops destroyed the buildings of the Presidium of the Supreme People's Assembly of the People's Democratic Republic of Korea, the cabinet office, the Ministry of the Interior, the Ministry of Justice, the Department of the Interior of the Pyongyang Municipal People's Committee, the Pyongyang telegraph and telephone station, the Central Bank, the headquarters of the Labour Party of Korea, the headquarters of the Union of Democratic Youth of North Korea and many other large buildings in the city.

III. Pillage of personal property

7. During the occupation of Pyongyang, the Americans and the puppet troops of Syngman Rhee not only looted goods from State organizations, State enterprises, State stores and trade union stores, but also looted goods from private warehouses, private enterprises, and people's houses. The families of persons arrested by the Americans and Syngman Rhee followers were usually driven out of their houses and all their property was seized by the Americans and Syngman Rhee followers. Drunken American soldiers often broke into the houses of the inhabitants and seized the most valuable property. Thus, an American soldier broke into the house of Kim Gyn Nen in Tonchanri, in the city of Pyongyang, and snatched two gold rings from his wife's hand. Another American soldier broke into the house of Kim Dok Sam in Kamhynri and grabbed a watch. American soldiers broke into the house of Sim En Gu in Sanhynri and carried away 40 sacks of rice, a pig, a sewing machine, 3 blankets, 100 heads of lettuce and other articles. Syngman Rhee soldiers took from the apartment of Chan Gi Sen, Choi Si Min, Kim Man Tszyun, Kim Len Dek, O En Ik, and Pak Ki Sen a total of 158 sacks of rice, 6 pigs, 2 oxen and over 200 pkhen of vegetables. American soldiers broke into the house of Chen Pon Un, in the southern district of Chenpenri, beat the owner of the house and seized gold and other valuables worth half a million won. In the village of Chilvulli, American and Syngman Rhee troops seized 6 oxen, 70 pigs, and 200 chickens.

8. The crimes of the American and Syngman Rhee troops are arousing the bitter hatred of the Korean people against the invaders and their Korean accomplices, the Syngman Rhee clique.

9. In informing the Korean people and world public opinion of the above facts, the Commission of the Central Committee of the United Democratic National Front of Korea is firmly convinced that all the peace-loving peoples of the world will censure the crimes which are being committed by the foreign invaders and Korean reactionaries under the flag of the United Nations.

[11 January 1951]

The objective shall be the achievement, by stages, of the programme outlined below for a cease-fire in Korea, for the establishment of a free and united Korea, and for a peaceful settlement of Far Eastern problems.

1. In order to prevent needless destruction of life and property, and while other steps are being taken to restore peace, a cease-fire should be immediately arranged. Such an arrangement should contain adequate safeguards for ensuring that it will not be used as a screen for mounting a new offensive.

2. If and when a cease-fire occurs in Korea, either as a result of a formal arrangement or, indeed, as a result of a lull in hostilities pending some such arrangement, advantage should be taken of it to pursue consideration of further steps to be taken for the restoration of peace.

3. To permit the carrying out of General Assembly resolution [376 (V)] that Korea should be a unified, independent, democratic, sovereign State with a constitution and a government based on free popular elections, all non-Korean armed forces will be withdrawn, by appropriate stages, from Korea, and appropriate arrangements, in accordance with United Nations principles, will be made for the Korean people to express their own free will in respect of their future government.

4. Pending the completion of the steps referred to in the preceding paragraph, appropriate interim arrangements, in accordance with United Nations principles, will be made for the administration of Korea and the maintenance of peace and security there.

5. As soon as agreement has been reached on a cease-fire, the General Assembly shall set up an appropriate body which shall include representatives of the Governments of the United Kingdom, the United States of America, the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics and the People's Republic of China, with a view to the achievement of a settlement, in conformity with existing international obligations and the provisions of the United Nations Charter, of Far Eastern problems, including, among others, those of Formosa (Taiwan) and of the representation of China in the United Nations.

Telegram, dated 17 January 1951, from the Minister for Foreign Affairs of the Central People's Government of the People's Republic of China addressed to the Acting Secretary-General for transmission to the Chairman of the First Committee of the General Assembly

[Original text : Chinese]
[17 January 1951]

Peking, 17 January 1951

I have the honour to acknowledge receipt of the cablegram dated 13 January 1951, transmitted by Mr. Owen at the request of the First Committee of the General Assembly, on the principles concerning the Korean and other Far Eastern problems. In the name of the Central People's Government of the People's Republic of China I wish to reply as follows :

1. The Central People's Government of the People's Republic of China has always maintained and still maintains that a rapid termination of the hostilities in Korea should be sought by negotiations among the various countries concerned with a view to the peaceful settlement of the Korean question on the basis of the withdrawal of all foreign troops from Korea and the settlement of Korean domestic affairs by the Koreans themselves; that United States armed forces must be withdrawn from Taiwan (Formosa); and that the representatives of the People's Republic of China must assume their rightful place in the United Nations. These principles were also mentioned in my statement of 22 December 1950; transmitted by cable to Mr. Entezam, President of the General Assembly, on the same day, and are now well known to the whole world.

2. On 13 January 1951, the First Committee of the United Nations General Assembly adopted, without the participation of the representative of the People's Republic of China, various principles concerning the Korean and other Far Eastern problems, the basic points of which are still the arrangement of a cease-fire in Korea first, and the conducting of negotiations among the various countries concerned, afterwards. The purpose of arranging a cease-fire first is merely to give the United States troops a breathing space. Therefore, regardless of what the agenda and subject-matter of the negotiations may be, if a cease-fire comes into effect without first conducting negotiations to fix the conditions therefor, negotiations after the cease-fire may entail endless discussions without solving any problems. Besides this fundamental point, the other principles are also not clearly defined. It is not clearly stated whether the so-called existing international obligations refer to the Cairo and Potsdam Declarations, and this may easily be utilized to defend the position of aggression maintained by the United States in Korea, Taiwan and other parts of the Far East. We understand that many countries in the First Committee agreed to the principles adopted on 13 January 1951 because of their desire for peace. It must be pointed out, however, that the principle of a cease-fire first and negotiations afterwards would only help the United States to maintain and extend its aggression, and could never lead to genuine peace. Therefore, the Central People's Government of the People's Republic of China cannot agree to this principle.

3. With a view to a genuine and peaceful solution of the Korean problem and other important Asian problems, I hereby submit, in the name of the Central People's Government of the People's Republic of China, the following proposals to the United Nations :

(a) Negotiations should be held among the countries concerned on the basis of agreement to the withdrawal of all foreign troops from Korea and the settlement of Korean domestic affairs by the Korean people themselves, in order to put an end to the hostilities in Korea at an early date.

(b) The subject-matter of the negotiations must include the withdrawal of United States armed forces from Taiwan and the Taiwan Straits and Far Eastern related problems;

(c) The countries to participate in the negotiations should be the following seven countries : the People's Republic of China, the Soviet Union, the United Kingdom, the United States of America, France, India and Egypt, and the rightful place of the Central People's Government of the People's Republic of China in the United Nations should be established as from the beginning of the seven-nation conference;

(d) The seven-nation conference should be held in China, at a place to be selected.

4. If the above-mentioned proposals are agreed to by the countries concerned and by the United Nations, we believe that it will be conducive to the prompt termination of the hostilities in Korea and to the peaceful settlement of Asian problems to hold negotiations as soon as possible.

Minister for Foreign Affairs of the Central People's Government of the People's Republic of China

United States of America : draft resolution

[Original text : English]
[20 January 1951]

The General Assembly,

Noting that the Security Council, because of lack of unanimity of the permanent members, has failed to exercise its primary responsibility for the maintenance of international peace and security in regard to Chinese communist intervention in Korea,

Noting that the Central People's Government of the People's Republic of China has rejected all United Nations proposals to bring about a cessation of hostilities in Korea with a view to peaceful settlement, and that its armed forces continue their invasion of Korea and their large-scale attacks upon United Nations forces there,

Finds that the Central People's Government of the People's Republic of China, by giving direct aid and assistance to those who were already committing aggression in Korea and by engaging in hostilities against United Nations forces there, has itself engaged in aggression in Korea;

Calls upon the Central People's Government of the People's Republic of China to cause its forces and nationals in Korea to cease hostilities against the United Nations forces and to withdraw from Korea;

Affirms the determination of the United Nations to continue its action in Korea to meet the aggression;

Calls upon all States and authorities to continue to lend every assistance to the United Nations actions in Korea;

Calls upon all States and authorities to refrain from giving any assistance to the aggressors in Korea;

Requests a committee composed of the members of the Collective Measures Committee, as a matter of urgency to consider additional measures to be employed to meet this aggression and to report thereon to the General Assembly;

Affirms that it continues to be the policy of the United Nations to bring about a cessation of hostilities in Korea and the achievement of United Nations objectives in Korea by peaceful means, and requests the President of the General Assembly to designate forthwith two persons who would meet with him at any suitable opportunity to use their good offices to this end.

Interim report of the First Committee

Rapporteur : Mr. Thor THORS (Iceland)

[13 December 1950]

1. By a telegram dated 4 December 1950 (A/1618), addressed to the Secretary-General, the delegations of Cuba, Ecuador, France, Norway, the United Kingdom and the United States of America requested that the item " Intervention of the Central People's Government of the People's Republic of China in Korea " should be included in the agenda of the fifth session of the General Assembly. An explanatory memorandum (A/1621) was submitted on 5 December 1950.

2. The General Assembly, at its 319th plenary meeting on 6 December 1950, decided, on the recommendation of the General Committee, to include this item in its agenda to refer it to the First Committee for consideration and report. The First Committee, at its 409th meeting on 7 December, by 42 votes to 5, with 4 abstentions, adopted a French motion that priority should be given to the consideration of the item.

3. The Committee has so far considered the question at its 409th to 417th meetings.

4. At the first of these meetings, the Committee, by 48 votes to 5, with 4 abstentions, adopted a motion presented by the United States that the representative of the Republic of Korea should be invited to participate in the discussions.

5. The following draft resolutions have so far been submitted :

(a) A joint draft resolution, submitted at the 409th meeting, by Cuba, Ecuador, France, Norway, the United Kingdom and the United States of America (A/C.1/638) which, after recalling the Security Council resolution of 25 June 1950 and the General Assembly resolution of 7 October 1950, and noting that armed forces of the Central People's Government of the People's Republic of China are conducting military operations against the United Nations forces in Korea, calls upon all States and authorities, inter alia, to prevent their nationals or individuals or units of their armed forces from giving assistance to the North Korean forces and to cause immediate withdrawal of such nationals or units; affirms that it is the policy of the United Nations to hold the Chinese frontier with Korea inviolate and fully to protect legitimate Chinese and Korean interests in the frontier zone; and requests the United Nations Commission for the Unification and Rehabilitation of Korea to assist in the settlement of any problems relating to conditions on the Korean frontier.

(b) A draft resolution (A/C.1/640) submitted by the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics at the 412th meeting, which recommends that all foreign troops should be withdrawn immediately from Korea and that the decision on the Korean question should be entrusted to the Korean people themselves.

(c) A joint draft resolution (A/C.1/641), submitted at the 415th meeting by Afghanistan, Burma, Egypt, India, Indonesia, Iran, Iraq, Lebanon, Pakistan, Philippines, Saudi Arabia, Syria and Yemen requesting the President of the General Assembly to constitute a group of three persons, including himself, to determine the basis on which a satisfactory cease-fire in Korea can be arranged and to make recommendations to the General Assembly as soon as possible.

(d) A joint draft resolution (A/C.1/642), submitted at the 415th meeting by the same countries with the exception of the Philippines, which, considering that the situation in the Far East is likely to endanger the maintenance of world peace and security, recommends the establishment of a committee to meet as soon as possible and make recommendations for the peaceful settlement of existing issues.

6. At the 415th meeting, the Committee, by 48 votes to 5, with 4 abstentions, adopted an Indian motion that priority should be given to the thirteen-Power draft resolution (A/C.1/641).

7. The thirteen-Power draft resolution was put to the vote at the 417th meeting and was adopted by 51 votes to 5, with 1 abstention.

8. The Committee will submit its final report when it has concluded the consideration of the other draft resolutions. At the present stage, however, the Committee recommends that the General Assembly should adopt the following resolution:

INTERVENTION OF THE CENTRAL PEOPLE'S GOVERNMENT OF THE PEOPLE'S REPUBLIC OF CHINA IN KOREA

The General Assembly,

Viewing with grave concern the situation in the Far East,

Anxious that immediate steps should be taken to prevent the conflict in Korea from spreading to other areas and to put an end to the fighting in Korea itself, and that further steps should then be taken for a peaceful settlement of existing issues in accordance with the Purposes and Principles of the United Nations,

Requests the President of the General Assembly to constitute a group of three persons, including himself, to determine the basis on which a satisfactory cease-fire in Korea can be arranged and to make recommendations to the General Assembly as soon as possible.

Report of the First Committee

Rapporteur: Mr. Thor THORS (Iceland)

[31 January 1951]

1. At the 419th meeting of the First Committee on 3 January 1951, the representative of India presented the report of the Group on Cease-Fire in Korea (A/C.1/643) appointed by the General Assembly on 14 December 1950 [resolution 384 (V)], regretting that the Group, in spite of its best efforts, had been unable to pursue discussion of a satisfactory cease-fire arrangement so that no recommendation could usefully be made by it at that time.

2. At the 422nd meeting on 11 January, the representative of Canada, on behalf of the Group on Cease-Fire in Korea, presented a supplementary report (A/C.1/645) containing five principles concerning a cease-fire in Korea, the establishment of a free and united Korea, and a peaceful settlement of Far Eastern problems.

3. The First Committee considered the reports of the Group on Cease-Fire in Korea from its 419th to 425th meetings, at the last of which the question of the approval of the supplementary report was put to the vote.

4. The Committee upheld, by 42 votes to 4, with 9 abstentions, a ruling by the Chairman that the five principles contained in the supplementary report should be put to the vote as a whole.

5. The Committee then approved, by 50 votes to 7, with one abstention, the five principles in the supplementary report of the Group on Cease-Fire in Korea.

6. At the 423rd meeting, Israel submitted a draft resolution (A/C.1/647) which requested the Secretary-General to transmit the principles to the Central People's Government of the People's Republic of China and invite that Government to send its observations as soon as possible.

7. Amendments to the draft resolution proposed by Israel were submitted at the 424th meeting by China (A/C.1/648) and El Salvador (A/C.1/649). However, at the 425th meeting, Israel withdrew its draft resolution in favour of a draft resolution submitted by Norway (A/C.1/650) at the same meeting. This draft resolution, with oral amendments suggested by Lebanon and accepted by Norway, invited the Chairman of the First Committee, through the Secretary-General, to transmit the approved principles to the Central People's Government of the People's Republic of China, and invite that Government to inform him as soon as possible whether it accepted these principles as a basis for the peaceful settlement of the Korean problem and other Far Eastern problems.

8. The Norwegian draft resolution, including the Lebanese amendments (A/C.1/651) was put to the vote at the 425th meeting on 13 January, and was adopted by 45 votes to 5, with 8 abstentions.

9. At its 426th meeting on 18 January, the Committee began consideration of the reply dated 17 January 1951 (A/C.1/653) received from the Central People's Government of the People's Republic of China. At the 429th meeting, the representative of India read the text of a communication which the Indian Ambassador in Peiping had received from the Ministry of Foreign Affairs of the People's Republic of China in reply to a request for clarification of certain points contained in its reply of 17 January to the United Nations.

10. The following two draft resolutions were submitted during the consideration of the reply from the People's Republic of China :

(a) A draft resolution (A/C.1/654) submitted by the United States of America at the 428th meeting which, inter alia, provided that the General Assembly should

(1) Find that the People's Republic of China has engaged in aggression in Korea;

(2) Call upon the People's Republic of China to cause its forces and nationals in Korea to withdraw from Korea;

(3) Affirm the determination of the United Nations to continue its action in Korea;

(4) Call upon all States and authorities to continue to lend every assistance to this action;

(5) Call upon all States and authorities to refrain from giving any assistance to the aggressors;

(6) Request a committee composed of the members of the Collective Measures Committee to consider additional measures to meet the aggression and to report thereon to the General Assembly; and

(7) Affirm that it continues to be the policy of the United Nations to bring about a cessation of hostilities and the achievement of its objectives in Korea by peaceful means, and request the President of the General Assembly to designate two persons who would meet with him to use their good offices to this end.

(b) A joint revised draft resolution submitted at the 430th meeting by Afghanistan, Burma, Egypt, India, Indonesia, Iran, Iraq, Lebanon, Pakistan, Saudi Arabia, Syria and Yemen (A/C.1/642/Rev.1) providing, inter alia, that representatives of France, the United Kingdom, the United States of America, the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, Egypt and India and of the Central People's Government of the People's Republic of China should meet as soon as possible for the purpose of securing all necessary elucidations and amplifications of the reply of the People's Republic of China and for the purpose of making any incidental or consequential arrangements towards a peaceful settlement of the Korean and other Far Eastern problems. The first meeting of the above representatives would be held on a date and at a place to be fixed by the President of the General Assembly.

11. The following amendments were submitted to the above two draft resolutions :

(a) An amendment submitted by Lebanon at the 434th meeting (A/C.1/656) to the United States draft resolution (A/C.1/654), proposing a modification to the effect that the Peking Government had " not accepted " instead of had " rejected all " United Nations proposals, and adding a paragraph to the effect that the ad hoc committee on collective measures contemplated in the draft resolution should be authorized to defer its report if the good offices committee reported satisfactory progress. The Lebanese amendments were accepted by the United States.

(b) Amendments submitted by the U.S.S.R. at the 431st meeting (A/C.1/655) to the revised twelve-Power draft resolution (A/C.1/642/Rev.1) proposing (1) deletion of the heading " Intervention of the Central People's Government of the People's Republic of China in Korea " and (2) that the President of the General Assembly should call the proposed meeting " in agreement with the participants in the meeting ".

12. A second revision of the joint twelve-Power draft resolution was submitted at the 434th meeting (A/C.1/642/Rev.2) which added to the penultimate paragraph a phrase to the effect that the seven Powers participating in the proposed conference should, at the first meeting, agree upon an appropriate cease-fire arrangement and that they would proceed with their further deliberations only after this had been put into effect.

13. An amendment to this second revision of the joint twelve-Power draft resolution was submitted by the U.S.S.R. at the 437th meeting (A/C.1/657) according to which the representatives of the seven countries, after the cease-fire arrangement had been put into effect, would proceed to the consideration (1) of appropriate arrangements for the withdrawal of all foreign forces from Korea; (2) of ways and means to be recommended to the Korean people for the free settlement of Korean affairs by the Korean people themselves; (3) of the question of withdrawal of United States forces from Taiwan and the Taiwan Straits, and (4) of questions relating to the Far East.

14. At the same meeting the Committee, by 36 votes to 17, with 5 abstentions, adopted a motion proposed by Turkey for the closure of the debate.

15. The U.S.S.R. representative stated that he would not insist on a vote on the U.S.S.R. draft resolution (A/C.1/640)⁵ at the present stage.

16. The joint six-Power draft resolution (A/C.1/638)⁶ was withdrawn.

17. The Committee then proceeded to vote on the second revision of the twelve-Power draft resolution (A/C.1/642/Rev.2) with the following results :

The U.S.S.R. amendment (A/C.1/657) was rejected by 38 votes to 5, with 6 abstentions.

A U.S.S.R. amendment, submitted orally, to insert the word "provisional" in the fifth paragraph, after the word "appropriate" and before the words "cease-fire arrangement", was rejected by 33 votes to 5, with 8 abstentions.

The U.S.S.R. amendment (A/C.1/655), first part, was rejected by 42 votes to 5, with 12 abstentions.

The U.S.S.R. amendment, second part, was rejected by 35 votes to 5, with 18 abstentions.

The first part of the fifth paragraph of the draft resolution was rejected by 27 votes to 18, with 14 abstentions.

The last sentence of the same paragraph was rejected by 32 votes to 14, with 14 abstentions.

The first four paragraphs of the draft resolution were rejected by 28 votes to 17, with 13 abstentions.

The twelve-Power draft resolution as a whole was not put to the vote since no part of it had been approved.

18. The United States draft resolution (A/C.1/654), with the Lebanese amendments (A/C.1/656), was then put to the vote with the following results :

The first to the seventh paragraphs inclusive, were approved by 44 votes to 7, with 7 abstentions.

The Lebanese amendment to the eighth paragraph was adopted by 42 votes to 7, with 9 abstentions.

The eighth paragraph, as amended, was approved by 42 votes to 7, with 10 abstentions.

The ninth paragraph (first half) was approved by 46 votes to 5, with 7 abstentions.

The ninth paragraph (second half) was approved by 43 votes to 5, with 11 abstentions.

The United States draft resolution (A/C.1/654), as a whole and as amended, was then, at the request of the representative of Bolivia, put to the vote by roll-call and was approved by 44 votes to 7, with 8 abstentions. The voting was as follows :

In favour : Argentina, Australia, Belgium, Bolivia, Brazil, Canada, Chile, China, Colombia, Costa Rica, Cuba, Denmark, Dominican Republic, Ecuador, El Salvador, Ethiopia, France, Greece, Guatemala, Haiti, Honduras, Iceland, Iran, Iraq, Israel, Lebanon, Liberia, Luxembourg, Mexico, Netherlands, New Zealand, Nicaragua, Norway, Panama, Paraguay, Peru, Philippines, Thailand, Turkey, Union of South Africa, United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland, United States of America, Uruguay, Venezuela.

Against : Burma, Byelorussian Soviet Socialist Republic, Czechoslovakia, India, Poland, Ukrainian Soviet Socialist Republic, Union of Soviet Socialist Republics.

Abstentions : Afghanistan, Egypt, Indonesia, Pakistan, Sweden, Syria, Yemen, Yugoslavia.

19. The First Committee therefore recommends to the General Assembly the adoption of the following resolution :

" The General Assembly,

" Noting that the Security Council, because of lack of unanimity of the permanent members, has failed to exercise its primary responsibility for the maintenance of international peace and security in regard to Chinese communist intervention in Korea,

" Noting that the Central People's Government of the People's Republic of China has not accepted United Nations proposals to bring about a cessation of hostilities in Korea with a view to peaceful settlement, and that its armed forces continue their invasion of Korea and their large-scale attacks upon United Nations forces there,

" Finds that the Central People's Government of the People's Republic of China, by giving direct aid and assistance to those who were already committing aggression in Korea and by engaging in hostilities against United Nations forces there, has itself engaged in aggression in Korea;

" Calls upon the Central People's Government of the People's Republic of China to cause its forces and nationals in Korea to cease hostilities against the United Nations forces and to withdraw from Korea;

" Affirms the determination of the United Nations to continue its action in Korea to meet the aggression;

" Calls upon all States and authorities to continue to lend every assistance to the United Nations action in Korea;

" Calls upon all States and authorities to refrain from giving any assistance to the aggressors in Korea;

" Requests a committee composed of the members of the Collective Measures Committee, as a matter of urgency to consider additional measures to be employed to meet this aggression and to report thereon to the General Assembly; it being understood that the Committee is authorized to defer its report if the good offices committee, referred to in the following paragraph, reports satisfactory progress in its efforts;

" Affirms that it continues to be the policy of the United Nations to bring about a cessation of hostilities in Korea and the achievement of United Nations objectives in Korea by peaceful means, and requests the President of the General Assembly to designate forthwith two persons who would meet with him at any suitable opportunity to use their good offices to this end.

DOCUMENT A/1799

Report of the Additional Measures Committee

Rapporteur : Mr. K. C. O. SHANN (Australia)

[Original text : English]
[14 May 1951]

1. The Additional Measures Committee, established by General Assembly resolution 498 (V) of 1 February 1951, has been requested to consider additional measures to be employed to meet aggression in Korea and to report thereon to the General Assembly.

2. The General Assembly decided that the Additional Measures Committee would be composed of the members of the Collective Measures Committee,⁷ viz. Australia, Belgium, Brazil, Burma, Canada, Egypt, France, Mexico, Philippines, Turkey, United Kingdom, United States of America, Venezuela and Yugoslavia. At its first meeting held on 16 February 1951, the Additional Measures Committee was informed that Burma and Yugoslavia would be unable to participate in its work. The Committee expressed the wish that at some future date they might find it possible to join in its work.

3. The Bureau of the Committee was constituted at the first meeting by the election of Mr. Sarper (Turkey) as Chairman, Mr. Nisot (Belgium) as Vice-Chairman, and Mr. Shann (Australia) as Rapporteur. At the same meeting, following an exchange of views among the members of the Committee, the Bureau was requested to draft proposals for a programme of work.

4. The Bureau drew up a list of possible questions for consideration by the Committee and suggested the appointment of a sub-committee of five members, which would consider practical measures and study priorities.

5. The recommendation of the Bureau was considered and approved by the Committee at its second meeting, held on 8 March 1951. The proposed sub-committee was composed as follows : Australia, France, United Kingdom, United States of America and Venezuela.

6. On 19 April 1951, following numerous consultations and exchanges of views on the general approach which the Additional Measures Committee might use in its studies, the Sub-Committee unanimously recommended that when the Committee pursued the examination of additional measures against the Central People's Government of the People's Republic of China it should give priority to the study of economic measures.

7. The proposal of the Sub-Committee was adopted at the third meeting of the Committee held on 3 May 1951. At the fourth meeting, on 7 May, the United States delegation submitted a draft resolution which was discussed, amended, and on 14 May finally approved for submission to the General Assembly as follows :

" The General Assembly,

" Noting the report of the Additional Measures Committee dated 14 May 1951,

" Recalling its resolution 498 (V) of 1 February 1951,

" Noting that

" (a) The Additional Measures Committee established by that resolution has considered additional measures to be employed to meet the aggression in Korea,

" (b) The Additional Measures Committee has reported that a number of States have already taken measures designed to deny contributions to the military strength of the forces opposing the United Nations in Korea,

" (c) The Additional Measures Committee has also reported that certain economic measures designed further to deny such contributions would support and supplement the military action of the United Nations in Korea and would assist in putting an end to the aggression,

" 1. Recommends that every State :

" (a) Apply an embargo on the shipment to areas under the control of the Central People's Government of the People's Republic of China and of the North Korean authorities of arms, ammunition and implements of war, atomic energy materials, petroleum, and items useful in the production of arms, ammunition and implements of war;

" (b) Determine which commodities exported from its territory fall within the embargo, and apply controls to give effect to the embargo;

" (c) Prevent by all means within its jurisdiction the circumvention of controls on shipments applied by other States pursuant to the present resolution;

" (d) Co-operate with other States in carrying out the purposes of this embargo;

" (e) Report to the Additional Measures Committee, within thirty days and thereafter at the request of the Committee, on the measures taken in accordance with the present resolution;

" 2. Requests the Additional Measures Committee :

" (a) To report to the General Assembly, with recommendations as appropriate, on the general effectiveness of the embargo and the desirability of continuing, extending or relaxing it;

" (b) To continue its consideration of additional measures to be employed to meet the aggression in

⁷ See section D of resolution 377 A (V).

Korea, and to report thereon further to the General Assembly, it being understood that the Committee is authorized to defer its report if the Good Offices Committee reports satisfactory progress in its efforts;

" 3. Reaffirms that it continues to be the policy of the United Nations to bring about a cessation of hostilities in Korea, and the achievement of United Nations objectives in Korea by peaceful means, and requests the Good Offices Committee to continue its good offices.

* * *

The following comments aim at clarifying recommendations (c), (d) and (e) of operative paragraph 1 of the draft resolution :

Recommendation (c) : Circumvention of controls may take place mainly through trans-shipment or re-export.

As regards trans-shipment, the practical difficulties of instituting trans-shipment licensing in each State over all items controlled by every other State in pursuance of this resolution are recognized, and it is therefore agreed that the primary responsibility for guarding against such circumvention must lie with the States in which the goods originate, and that this responsibility could best be discharged by obtaining assurances about end-use prior to shipment. Other States will be expected to give every assistance to the country of origin in obtaining and checking such assurances. The Additional Measures Committee should, in the exercise of its review function, recognize that the extent to which the movement of goods can be controlled once they have left the country of origin depends in present circumstances on the statutory powers possessed and exercised by the Governments of the States through which they pass, and that such powers differ.

Similarly in the case of re-exports it is recognized that the institution of export licensing in each State to cover items embargoed by every other State in pursuance of this resolution may not be practicable, and it is agreed, therefore, that the primary responsibility for taking preventive measures must likewise rest with the country of origin.

Recommendation (d) : In addition to the measures described under recommendation (c) above, the co-operation required of each State by recommendation (d) would include the avoidance of any such expansion of its trade with China and North Korea in items embargoed by other States in pursuance of this resolution as would nullify or impair the effect of the controls applied by the latter to those items.

Recommendation (e) : Measures to be reported will include measures already applied as well as those which will be taken after the adoption of the resolution by the General Assembly.

Report of the First Committee ⁸

Rapporteur : Mr. Thor THORS (Iceland)

[Original text : English]
[17 May 1951]

1. The President of the General Assembly on 16 May 1951 transmitted to the Chairman of the First Committee the report of the Additional Measures Committee (A/1799) established by General Assembly resolution 498 (V) of 1 February 1951.

2. In accordance with the request of the President, the report was considered by the First Committee at its 443rd and 444th meetings on 17 May 1951, under item 76 of the agenda of the fifth session of the Assembly.

3. The recommendations of the Additional Measures Committee were embodied in the report in the form of a draft resolution recommending the application by " every State " of an embargo on shipments of arms, ammunition and implements of war, atomic energy materials, petroleum, and items useful in the production of arms, ammunition, and implements of war to areas under the control of the Central People's Government of the People's Republic of China and of the North Korean authorities.

4. At the outset of the debate, the representatives of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, Poland, the Byelorussian S.S.R. the Ukrainian S.S.R. and Czechoslovakia stated that the question of applying an embargo was exclusively within the competence of the Security Council and outside the competence of the First Committee or the General Assembly; and that in view of that they would not participate in the discussion of the report.

5. After the debate the Committee approved, by a vote of 43 to none, with 11 abstentions, the preamble of the draft resolution submitted by the Additional Measures Committee.

6. An amendment (A/C.1/662/Rev.1), submitted jointly by Australia, France, the United Kingdom, the United States of America and Venezuela, to add " transportation materials of strategic value " to the proposed list of embargoed categories was adopted by a vote of 45 to none, with 9 abstentions.

⁸ For previous reports of the First Committee on this item, see A/1717 and A/1770.

7. The draft resolution as a whole was then approved by a roll-call vote of 45 to none, with 9 abstentions, as follows :

In favour : Argentina, Australia, Belgium, Bolivia, Brazil, Canada, Chile, China, Colombia, Costa Rica, Cuba, Denmark, Dominican Republic, El Salvador, Ethiopia, France, Greece, Guatemala, Haiti, Honduras, Iceland, Iran, Iraq, Israel, Lebanon, Liberia, Mexico, Netherlands, New Zealand, Nicaragua, Norway, Panama, Paraguay, Peru, Philippines, Saudi Arabia, Thailand, Turkey, Union of South Africa, United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland, United States of America, Uruguay, Venezuela, Yemen, Yugoslavia.

Against : None.

Abstentions : Afghanistan, Burma, Ecuador, Egypt, India, Indonesia, Pakistan, Sweden, Syria.

8. The representatives of the Byelorussian S.S.R., Czechoslovakia, Poland, the Ukrainian S.S.R. and the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics did not participate in the vote.

9. The First Committee, therefore, recommends the following resolution for consideration by the General Assembly :

" The General Assembly,

" Noting the report of the Additional Measures Committee dated 14 May 1951,

" Recalling its resolution 498 (V) of 1 February 1951,

" Noting that

" (a) The Additional Measures Committee established by that resolution has considered additional measures to be employed to meet the aggression in Korea,

" (b) The Additional Measures Committee has reported that a number of States have already taken measures designed to deny contributions to the military strength of the forces opposing the United Nations in Korea,

" (c) The Additional Measures Committee has also reported that certain economic measures designed further to deny such contributions would support and supplement the military action of the United Nations in Korea and would assist in putting an end to the aggression,

" 1. Recommends that every State :

" (a) Apply an embargo on the shipment to areas under the control of the Central People's Government of the People's Republic of China and of the North Korean authorities of arms, ammunition and implements of war, atomic energy materials, petroleum, transportation materials of strategic value, and items useful in the production of arms, ammunition and implements of war;

" (b) Determine which commodities exported from its territory fall within the embargo, and apply controls to give effect to the embargo;

" (c) Prevent by all means within its jurisdiction the circumvention of controls on shipments applied by other States pursuant to the present resolution;

" (d) Co-operate with other States in carrying out the purposes of this embargo;

" (e) Report to the Additional Measures Committee, within thirty days and thereafter at the request of the Committee, on the measures taken in accordance with the present resolution;

" 2. Requests the Additional Measures Committee :

" (a) To report to the General Assembly, with recommendations as appropriate, on the general effectiveness of the embargo and the desirability of continuing, extending or relaxing it;

" (b) To continue its consideration of additional measures to be employed to meet the aggression in Korea, and to report thereon further to the General Assembly, it being understood that the Committee is authorized to defer its report if the Good Offices Committee reports satisfactory progress in its efforts;

" 3. Reaffirms that it continues to be the policy of the United Nations to bring about a cessation of hostilities in Korea, and the achievement of United Nations objectives in Korea by peaceful means, and requests the Good Offices Committee to continue its good offices.

Exchange of telegrams between the Minister for Foreign Affairs of the Central People's Government of the People's Republic of China and the Secretary-General

[14 September 1950]*

A. TELEGRAM DATED 26 AUGUST 1950 FROM THE MINISTER FOR FOREIGN AFFAIRS OF THE CENTRAL PEOPLE'S GOVERNMENT OF THE PEOPLE'S REPUBLIC OF CHINA TO THE SECRETARY-GENERAL

Peking, 26 August 1950

The Central People's Government of the People's Republic of China is the sole legal government representing the Chinese people. The so-called "delegates" of the Chinese Kuomintang reactionary remnant clique have no qualification whatsoever for participating in any of the meetings and organs of the United Nations, and must therefore be driven out from all the meetings and organs of the United Nations. Accordingly, on 15 November 1949, I sent on behalf of the Central People's Government of the People's Republic of China a note to you and to Mr. Carlos P. Romulo, President of the fourth session of the United Nations General Assembly, that the so-called "delegation of the Chinese National Government" headed by Tsiang Ting-fu had absolutely no right to represent China. On 8 January, 19 January, 2 February and 30 May 1950, I have repeatedly sent further notes to you and to Mr. Romulo, demanding that the United Nations immediately expel the illegitimate delegates of the Chinese Kuomintang reactionary remnant clique from the United Nations and its Security Council, Economic and Social Council and Trusteeship Council, and notifying that the Central People's Government of the People's Republic of China has appointed Chang Wen-tien chief representative of the People's Republic of China to attend the meetings of the United Nations, including those of the Security Council, Chi Chao-ting representative on the Economic and Social Council, and Meng Yung-chien representative on the Trusteeship Council. Yet until this day the illegitimate delegates of the Chinese Kuomintang reactionary remnant clique are still tolerated by the United Nations in its various organs, but not expelled therefrom immediately. I consider this not only a violation of the United Nations Charter but also a disregard of the rightful claim of the 475 million people of the People's Republic of China. Now that the fifth session of the United Nations General Assembly is due to meet on 19 September, I hereby inform you formally on behalf of the Central People's Government of the People's Republic of China, that the Central People's Government of the People's Republic of China has appointed Chang Wen-tien the chairman of the delegation, and Li Yi-mang, Chou Shih-ti, Chi Chao-ting and Meng Yung-chien the representatives of the People's Republic of China to attend the fifth session of the United Nations General Assembly. Please communicate the same to the parties concerned and make the arrangements necessary for the delegation of the People's Republic of China to attend the fifth session of the United Nations General Assembly. Please reply promptly by cable.

A. TELEGRAM DATED 18 SEPTEMBER 1950 FROM THE MINISTER FOR FOREIGN AFFAIRS OF THE CENTRAL PEOPLE'S GOVERNMENT OF THE PEOPLE'S REPUBLIC OF CHINA TO THE SECRETARY-GENERAL

Peking, 18 September 1950

During the ten months since 15 November 1949, I have stated many times to the various organizations of the United Nations that the Central People's Government of the People's Republic of China is the sole legal government representing the Chinese people, that the Chinese Kuomintang reactionary remnant clique has forfeited all legal and factual basis for representing the Chinese people, and that the United Nations must drive out the illegal "delegates" of the Chinese Kuomintang reactionary remnant clique from all the meetings and organs of the United Nations, and accept the legal delegates of the Central People's Government of the People's Republic of China. Yet at the present time, the illegal "delegates" of the Chinese Kuomintang reactionary remnant clique still remain in all the organs of the United Nations except the Universal Postal Union; this is completely unjustified and constitutes a gross violation of the United Nations Charter.

Now that the fifth session of the United Nations General Assembly is due to meet soon, the so-called "delegation of the Chinese National Government" of the Chinese Kuomintang reactionary remnant clique is going again to New York to participate in the United Nations General Assembly, and to submit to the United Nations General Assembly the item of the so-called "Threats to the political independence and territorial integrity of China and to the peace of the Far East, resulting from Soviet violations of the Sino-Soviet Treaty of Friendship and Alliance of 14 August 1945, and from Soviet violations of the Charter of the United Nations". This is an illegal act of assuming the name of the delegates of the Chinese people, usurping the rights of the Chinese people and insulting the United Nations, an illegal act which the Chinese people firmly oppose and cannot tolerate.

On behalf of the Central People's Government of the People's Republic of China, I hereby solemnly inform you that the so-called "delegation of the Chinese National Government" of the Chinese Kuomintang reactionary remnant clique absolutely cannot represent the Chinese people; they have no qualifications whatsoever for participating in this session of the United Nations General Assembly, let alone any right to make proposals to the United Nations General Assembly. Should the United Nations General Assembly accept the illegal "delegation" of the Chinese Kuomintang reactionary remnant clique, or accept and consider the above-mentioned item or any other items proposed by it, the Chinese People's Government of the People's Republic of China would consider this a most unfriendly action towards the Chinese people on the part of the United Nations, and that, as a result of such action, the United Nations General Assembly would degenerate into an instrument in the service of a handful of fugitive elements, the Chinese Kuomintang reactionary remnant clique, for slandering and provoking the 475 million people of China. Apart from resolutely opposing, on behalf of the Chinese people, such action, the Central People's Government of the People's Republic of China reserves the right to take action on this question.

I hereby inform you once more that the fifth session of the United Nations General Assembly must immediately drive out the illegal "delegates" of the Chinese reactionary remnant clique. At the same time, please make immediately all the arrangements necessary for the delegation of the People's Republic of China to attend this session of the United Nations General Assembly. Should the fifth session of the United Nations General Assembly be held without the participation of the delegation of the People's Republic of China, or, worse still, with the illegal "delegates" of the Chinese Kuomintang reactionary remnant clique tolerated therein, all the resolutions adopted by it concerning China would be illegal and, consequently, null and void.

I have the honour to acknowledge receipt of your telegram of the 18th September and to advise you that it will be circulated to the Members of the United Nations and placed before the General Assembly.

Question of the representation of China in the United Nations (continued)¹

Report of the Special Committee on the representation of China

[18 October 1951]

The Special Committee on the representation of China, established by General Assembly resolution 490 (V), of 19 September 1950, met on 15 December 1950 and elected Sir Benegal Rau, the permanent representative of India, as Chairman. It decided at that time to leave it to the Chairman's discretion as to when to call a further meeting in the light of the discussions which were then in progress relating to a cease-fire in Korea.

¹ This question was discussed at the final meeting of the General Assembly, held in Paris on 5 November 1951. The present document is therefore issued as a supplement to the fascicule containing earlier documents relevant to that question.

The Special Committee met again on 16 October 1951 in order to prepare its report to the fifth session of the General Assembly. It rejected, by 5 votes to 2, a Polish draft resolution calling upon the fifth session of the General Assembly to exclude the representatives of the National Government of China and to invite the representatives of the Central People's Government of the People's Republic of China. The Special Committee then authorized the Chairman, by 5 votes to 1, with 1 abstention, to inform the General Assembly that, in the present circumstances, it had been unable to make any recommendation on the question of the representation of China.

Estimated cost of holding the sixth session of the General Assembly in Europe : report of the Secretary-General

[6 December 1950]*

1. On 2 December 1950, the General Assembly considered a draft resolution submitted by the delegations of Bolivia, Colombia and Peru (A/1593), proposing that the sixth session of the General Assembly should be held in Europe, and instructing the President of the Assembly and the Secretary-General to select the city most suitable. In view of its financial implications, this resolution was referred to the Fifth Committee for its consideration of comparative costs as against a session in New York.

2. In the brief time available, it has not been possible to prepare detailed cost figures, particularly since the site is not yet known, but general estimates of costs have been prepared on the following assumptions :

(a) That the 1948 experience in Paris is, in the main, a useful basis for formulating estimates in this connexion, but that account must be taken of a number of new factors;

(b) That the host government will provide, without charge to the United Nations, a General Assembly hall, conference and office space, buildings, maintenance services, utilities, telephonic and telecommunications installations, external and internal security services, ushers and telephone operators, and office furniture and furnishings, and that maximum co-operation will be offered in connexion with necessary procurement of supplies and services;

(c) That the duration of the 1951 General Assembly session will be ten weeks, regardless of its location;

(d) That certain extra costs not encountered in 1948, which arise mainly from the adoption of Spanish as a working language, from the fact that considerably fewer members of the staff will be entitled to home leave in 1951 than in 1948, with a resulting reduction in savings on General Assembly travel costs, and from general price increases of commodities and services which have taken place since 1948, can be partially absorbed because of greater experience in the holding of conferences abroad and the changes which have occurred in official exchange rates;

(e) That the General Assembly building at Flushing Meadow will be retained until the end of June 1951.

This will permit use of the building in the event of an extension of the fifth session.

3. The following table shows the actual costs to the United Nations of holding the third session of the General Assembly in Paris, the 1951 budget estimates for a General Assembly session in New York, and estimated costs of holding the sixth session in Europe.

	Europe 1948 (Actual cost)	New York 1951 (Estimated cost)^a In US dollars	Europe 1951 (Estimated cost)
Travel of representatives	127,613	160,000	150,000
Local transportation	29,233	55,000	40,000
Temporary assistance	308,475	180,000	500,000
Travel and subsistence of staff	1,158,206	12,800	1,250,000
Overtime and night differential	20,035	42,000	25,000
Rental and maintenance of office and other equipment	40,481	16,500	40,000
Radio services	110,000	10,600	130,000
Telephone services	31,399	10,500	35,000
Postal services	13,069	—	15,000
Telegraph and cable services	51,453	—	52,000
Freight, cartage and express	53,765	—	55,000
Contractual services for maintenance of premises	333	14,400	—
Supplies for maintenance of premises	—	6,950	—
Utilities	16,291	30,000	10,000
Supplies for internal reproduction	85,545	—	40,000
Simultaneous interpretation equipment	32,652	—	35,000
Loss on cafeteria operations	—	10,000	—
Miscellaneous supplies and contractual services	45,171	1,650	45,000
TOTALS	2,123,721	550,400	2,422,000

^a As revised by the Fifth Committee during the first reading of the 1951 budget.

4. The following information is submitted on certain of the items :

(a) Under "Travel of representatives", the increase over the 1948 figure is to provide for the travel of five representatives from each of the Member States admitted to the United Nations since 1948;

(b) Under "Local transportation", the comparative increase over the 1948 figure is due to the anticipated higher prices prevailing in 1951 and the necessity for providing the delegations of new Members with cars.

(c) Under "Temporary assistance", the estimate has been increased by approximately $190,000 over the 1948 cost because of additional local staff requirements resulting from the adoption of Spanish as a working language, and the possibility of using more local staff rather than taking personnel from Headquarters and Geneva.

(d) Under "Travel and subsistence of staff", the increase is due to the fact that fewer staff members will be travelling to Europe on home leave in 1951 than was the case in 1948. The assumption is that daily subsistence allowances paid to staff in 1951 will be the same as in 1948.

(e) Under "Radio services", the amount expended in 1948 has been increased by $20,000 in order to provide for contractual services in connexion with television, which was not a factor in 1948.

(f) The increases shown in all other items, except for supplies for internal reproduction, are due mainly to general price increases.

5. With respect to contractual printing, it should also be noted that certain savings will be achieved under the heading of section 25 (Official Records) if the General Assembly is held in Europe. These savings stem from the fact that the summary records of the sixth session will be printed in fascicule form during the session, and therefore will be printed on the spot. Provision was made in the budget estimates for 1951 to cover such printing on the basis that it would be done in Canada and New York. However, should the session be held in Europe, the cost could be reduced by 25 to 40 per cent depending on the locality chosen. Therefore, an estimated saving of $50,000 should be forthcoming if the session is held in Europe.

6. To sum up, it will be seen from the above table that the total estimated cost for holding the 1951 session in Europe is $2,422,000, or $1,871,600 more than the estimate approved by the Fifth Committee for the 1951 General Assembly session (section 1, chapter I). The saving of $50,000 under contractual printing will reduce the net additional cost to $1,821,600.

DOCUMENT A/1644

Financial implications of the draft resolution submitted by Bolivia, Colombia and Peru (A/1593) : thirtieth report of 1950 of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions

[Original text : English]
[9 December 1950]

1. The Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions has considered a report by the Secretary-General (A/C.5/433) on the financial implications of the draft resolution (A/1593) concerning the place of meeting of the sixth session of the General Assembly.

2. The estimated cost of holding the session in Europe is based on several assumptions set forth in document A/C.5/433. Precise or detailed figures cannot obviously be presented at this stage, and the Advisory Committee has therefore confined itself to an examination of a general character.

3. The actual cost of the first part of the third session (held) in Paris in 1948 exceeded the amount estimated for the holding of that session at Headquarters by $1,413,000, and, having regard to the various new factors of cost to which the Secretary-General has drawn attention, the Advisory Committee believes that a figure in the neighbourhood of $1,750,000 would, in the circumstances, represent a reasonably accurate estimate for the year 1951. This figure is, however, dependent upon the place of meeting and the facilities offered. The probable saving through holding the session in Geneva rather than elsewhere in Europe was estimated in 1948 at $146,000, and it appears to the Committee that this difference would at least be maintained in 1951.

4. The draft resolution (A/1593) contains a consideration to the effect that "there may arise [at Headquarters during 1951] technical difficulties liable to impede the normal functioning of the General Assembly and the convenience of its deliberations". The Advisory Committee believes, on the information available to it, that such difficulties would not be insurmountable.

5. For the purpose of the general estimate of costs, the Secretary-General has assumed, among other things, that the General Assembly building at Flushing Meadow will be retained only until the end of June 1951. In the opinion of the Advisory Committee, however, it may be necessary in any case to retain that building until the completion of the General Assembly hall at Headquarters.

6. It would, in the view of the Advisory Committee, be advantageous, if Europe is decided upon, to provide that the selection of a locality shall not be automatic, but rather be subject to conditions deemed necessary for the purposes of the session.

7. Therefore, the Advisory Committee's view is that the cost of holding the sixth session of the General Assembly in Europe, at a locality other than Geneva, would amount to approximately $1,750,000, and if it were held in Geneva, the figure would be about $1,600,000

Whereas the budget estimates for 1951 have already shown an increase of about $1,400,000 over the original net estimate of $39,443,000 submitted by the Secretary-General,

Whereas the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions has estimated (A/1644) that the holding of the sixth session of the General Assembly in Europe would entail an additional expenditure of $1,600,000 if held in Geneva, or $1,750,000 if held elsewhere in Europe,

Whereas this additional expenditure will be substantially increased and possibly doubled if the United Nations itself has to provide the following facilities in Europe : conference and office space, buildings, maintenance services, utilities, telephonic and telecommunications installations, external and internal security services, ushers and telephone operators, and office furniture and furnishings,

Whereas approximately 700 staff members would have to travel from New York to Europe if the sixth session were held there,

Whereas the Secretary-General has stated in his foreword to the budget estimates for 1950 (A/903) that the Secretariat cannot be held responsible for economy and administrative efficiency if the General Assembly appropriates moneys for rotating meeting places in the face of its own recommendations,

Whereas attention has been drawn on occasions in the past by the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions to the serious consequences, both budgetary and administrative, arising from the holding of sessions of United Nations bodies away from Headquarters,

Whereas facilities will exist for the holding of the sixth session of the General Assembly at Headquarters no less adequate than those available for the holding of the fifth session, and

Whereas heavy demands are being made upon governments for relief and for the maintenance of peace and security,

The Fifth Committee

Urges the General Assembly to consider most carefully the costs and administrative disturbances to the United Nations involved in deciding whether a departure from the general principle embodied in rule 3 of its rules of procedure should be made.

Report of the Fifth Committee

[13 December 1950]

1. In accordance with rule 152 of the rules of procedure of the General Assembly and with the request of the President in his letter of 4 December 1950 to the Chairman of the Fifth Committee (A/C.5/429), the Committee, at its 278th and 279th meetings, held on 11 December 1950, considered the effect which the adoption of the draft resolution submitted by the delegations of Bolivia, Colombia and Peru regarding the place of meeting of the sixth session of the General Assembly (A/1593) would have on the budget estimates of the United Nations for 1951.

2. The Committee had before it a report of the Secretary-General (A/C.5/433), together with the thirtieth report of 1950 of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions (A/1644).

3. It was estimated by the Secretary-General that the total cost of holding the 1951 session in Europe would amount to $2,422,000, or $1,871,600 more than the estimate which the Fifth Committee had approved under chapter I of section 1 of the budget for 1951 on the assumption that the session would take place in New York. An estimated saving of $50,000 with respect to contractual printing would, however, reduce the net additional cost of the proposed European session to $1,821,600. The Secretary-General in his report drew attention to the assumptions on which his estimates had been prepared, including, in particular, the assumption that the host government would provide, without charge to the United Nations, a General Assembly hall, conference and office space, buildings, maintenance services, utilities, telephonic and telecommunications installations, external and internal security services, ushers and telephone operators, and office furniture and furnishings, and that maximum co-operation would be offered in connexion with the necessary procurement of supplies and services. The Committee was informed in the course of its discussion of the Secretary-General's estimates that, in the event of the above facilities not being furnished by the host government, it would cost the United Nations approximately a further $3 million. The Secretary-General indicated, furthermore, that his estimates were necessarily of a very provisional character, and had been largely based on 1948 expenditures in Paris, with appropriate adjustments for a number of new factors, including the general increase in the cost of commodities and services which had since occurred, and the fact that considerably fewer staff members would be entitled to home leave in 1951 than in 1948.

4. The Advisory Committee considered that, having regard to the actual cost of the first part of the third session held in Paris, and to the other factors to which the Secretary-General had drawn attention, an estimate of approximately $1,750,000 would be reasonably accurate. This figure, however, was dependent upon the place of meeting and the facilities offered. The Advisory Committee was also of the opinion that the probable saving through holding the session in Geneva rather than elsewhere in Europe, which had been estimated at $146,000 in 1948, would at least be maintained in 1951. On the information available to it, the Advisory Committee did not consider that technical difficulties which might arise at Headquarters during 1951 would prove insurmountable. It also held the view that, regardless of the decision taken as to the place of the sixth session, it might be necessary to retain the General Assembly building at Flushing Meadows until the completion of the General Assembly hall at Headquarters. It was suggested that, if Europe were decided upon, the selection of a locality should not be automatic but should be subject to conditions deemed necessary for the purposes of the session. Several delegations, basing their opinions on the President's letter, considered that the Fifth Committee had been asked by the General Assembly merely to state the financial implications of a decision to hold the next session of the General Assembly away from Headquarters and was, therefore, not called upon to discuss the substance of the proposal, which was based on political considerations. Other delegations felt that it was fully within the Committee's competence to consider all relevant administrative and financial aspects of the matter.

5. At the suggestion of the United Kingdom representative, the Committee decided, by 25 votes to 4, with 15 abstentions, to close the discussion on the general aspects of the question and to continue with the consideration of the purely budgetary and administrative implications.

6. The representative of the United States of America explained that his delegation, representing the host country, would abstain from voting on all proposals in regard to this matter, both in the Fifth Committee and in the plenary session.

7. After a full discussion, the Fifth Committee, at its 279th meeting, concurred in the estimates and views contained in the Advisory Committee's report by a vote of 40 to none, with 2 abstentions.

8. In view of this decision, a draft resolution (A/C.5/L.102), which the representative of Australia had introduced at the previous meeting, was modified to read as follows :

" Whereas the budget estimates for 1951 have already shown an increase of about $1,400,000 over the original net estimate of $39,433,000 submitted by the Secretary-General,

" Whereas approximately 600 staff members would have to travel from New York to Europe if the sixth session were held there, of whom about 200 would be substantive staff,

" Whereas the Secretary-General has stated in his foreword to the budget estimates for 1950 (A/903)¹ that the Secretariat cannot be held responsible for economy and administrative efficiency if the General Assembly appropriates moneys for rotating meeting places in the face of its own recommendations,

" Whereas attention has been drawn on occasions in the past by the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions to the serious consequences, both budgetary and administrative, arising from the holding of sessions of United Nations bodies away from Headquarters,

" Whereas facilities will exist for the holding of the sixth session of the General Assembly at Headquarters no less adequate than those available for the holding of the fifth session, and

" Whereas heavy demands are being made upon governments for relief and for the maintenance of peace and security,

" The Fifth Committee

" Draws the attention of the General Assembly to the administrative and financial consequences of a departure from the general principle embodied in rule 3 of its rules of procedure."

9. On being put to the vote, the preamble of the Australian draft resolution was rejected by 17 votes to 17, with 8 abstentions. The operative paragraph was also rejected by 22 votes to 16, with 5 abstentions. Certain delegations stated that, while not necessarily disagreeing with the preamble, which was based on factual information, nevertheless they could not support the operative part since it contained a recommendation which they believed the Fifth Committee was not competent to make to the General Assembly.

10. Bearing in mind the views of the Advisory Committee contained in paragraph 4 above, the Fifth Committee decided to inform the General Assembly that, on the basis of the various assumptions referred to, adoption of the draft resolution proposed by Bolivia, Colombia and Peru would require additional budgetary provision for 1951 amounting to approximately $1,600,000 should Geneva be selected, and to approximately $1,750,000 should the locality be other than Geneva.

Report of the Secretary-General

[9 February 1951]

1. At its 324th meeting held on 14 December 1950, the General Assembly decided to convene its sixth regular session in Europe. The President of the General Assembly and the Secretary-General were instructed to select the most suitable city for this purpose and to make the necessary arrangements.

2. After consultation with the President of the General Assembly, the Secretary-General, accompanied by the Assistant Secretary-General in charge of the Department of Administrative and Financial Services, the Assistant Secretary-General in charge of the Department of Conference and General Services, his Executive Assistant and the Director of the Bureau of Documents, personally conducted a survey of facilities in Geneva, Paris and London and engaged in detailed consultations with the Swiss, French and United Kingdom Governments. In addition, members of the Secretary-General's party proceeded to Blackpool and inspected the facilities offered there by the Mayor of that city. An invitation having been received from the Mayor of Cannes, information was collected concerning facilities in that city and given careful consideration. At the close of the fourth session, the United Kingdom Government had informed the Secretary-General of its wish that consideration should be given to Edinburgh if it were decided to hold the sixth session outside New York. Before the opening of the fifth session, therefore, the Secretary-General had sent the Principal Director of the Department of Conference and General Services to Edinburgh to obtain information regarding the facilities that might be available there should the Assembly decide to convene its sixth session in Europe.

3. The Secretary-General has studied the situation with regard to each of the above-mentioned cities and his conclusions are set forth below.

Geneva

A detailed survey on the spot shows that Geneva, at the present time, can be considered only as a conference service centre and not as a possible site for a session of the General Assembly. The Assembly hall and conference rooms are small and could not be easily adapted to the requirements of the United Nations General Assembly. Office space in the Palais des Nations and the existing furniture and equipment are limited to the requirements of conferences and are below the requirements for a session of the Assembly. To expand these facilities and to install additional telecommunications, reproduction, radio and recording equipment would necessitate the expenditure of amounts considerably greater than previously foreseen. Furthermore, it would be necessary to lodge many members of delegations and Secretariat in towns as far as 38 miles distant from Geneva. The inconvenience and the additional costs involved in attempting to hold a session of the Assembly in the Palais des Nations makes Geneva unsuitable as a site for the sixth session.

Paris

Recalling the eminently satisfactory experience during the first part of the third session held in Paris, special consideration was given to that city as a possible site for the sixth session and the Secretary-General engaged in detailed consultations with the French Government to this end. However, on 25 January 1951, he received a letter from the Permanent Representative of France to the United Nations which informed him of " the decision taken by the French Government to decline the offer which might be made to it to hold the next session of the General Assembly in Paris ".

London, Edinburgh and Blackpool

Consultations were held with the United Kingdom Government regarding London as a possible site and, with the assistance of the Foreign Office, a detailed survey was made of the facilities available at Blackpool. While it was concluded that it might be possible to hold the session in Blackpool, certain difficulties would have to be overcome, principally with regard to adequate hotel accommodation. Further consideration of these possible sites was suspended, however, when the Secretary-General was informed on 3 February 1951 through the United Kingdom delegation to the United Nations " that after careful consideration [the United Kingdom Government] have reluctantly come to the conclusion that it is not possible to offer London or any other town in the United Kingdom for the 1951 session of the General Assembly... ".

Other cities

Invitations were received directly by the Secretary-General from Cannes, Aix-les-Bains and other European cities and towns, but no detailed studies of the facilities were attempted in view of the fact that formal proposals by the governments concerned were not made. However, information received regarding these places shows that their facilities are inadequate and they cannot be recommended as possible sites for a session of the Assembly.

4. In view of the above conclusions, the President of the General Assembly and the Secretary-General recommend that the General Assembly should reconsider the decision which was made at its 324th plenary meeting and should decide to hold its sixth session at the Headquarters of the United Nations, as provided in rule 3 of the rules of procedure of the General Assembly.

Note by the Secretary-General

[Original text : English-French]
[17 March 1951]

The Secretary-General has the honour to communicate to the members of the General Assembly the text of the following letter which he has received from the acting representative of France to the United Nations :

" New York, 17 March 1951

" The French Government has just instructed me to inform you that, being desirous of responding to the wish that has been expressed to it on several occasions, it has decided to welcome the General Assembly of the United Nations to Paris for the duration of its sixth session.

" Nevertheless, for reasons that I have already had the honour of communicating to you on its behalf, the French Government will be unable to receive the Assembly before Tuesday, 6 November. It expects, however, that if the Assembly has not completed its work before the end of 1951 the session will be continued in Paris until its termination in January or in February, if necessary.

“ Finally, the French Government feels constrained, owing to other exceptionally heavy financial obligations imposed upon it at the present time, to count upon the co-operation and understanding of the Organization in order that the obligations to be borne by it may be lightened substantially when agreements concerning the place of meeting are drawn up.

“ (Signed) Francis LACOSTE Minister Plenipotentiary, Acting representative of France to the United Nations ”

The President of the General Assembly has, therefore, requested the Secretary-General to convene a plenary meeting of the Assembly for Tuesday, 20 March 1951, at 3 p. m., in Conference Room No. 2, at Lake Success.
