Report of Secretary-General (December). In his December report [A/65/612-S/2010/630], the Secretary-General provided a summary of key developments, as well as updates on humanitarian, development and human rights activities carried out by the United Nations. On the transfer of full security responsibilities to Afghan forces by 2014, the framework for the transition to Afghan leadership was endorsed at the 20 November 2010 meeting of ISAF Heads of State and Government on the margins of the NATO summit in Lisbon, Portugal. The process defined a clear path for the transition, on a province-by-province basis, with a concomitant drawdown of international combat forces. The United Nations would support the civilian aspects of the transition, and UNAMA was reviewing the implications and opportunities of the process. President Karzai formally inaugurated the High Peace Council, mandated to promote peace and national unity through confidence-building, at the Council's first meeting, held on 7 October. On 20 October, the Council called for all sides of the conflict to renounce violence and engage in talks. It also made requests for the United Nations to play a role in the process, including strengthening of global support for the peace and stability process, and for the Organization of the Islamic Conference to provide support and facilitation. It was subsequently agreed that UNAMA would establish an internal capacity to respond to technical and practical assistance requests from the Council, and that the Salaam Support Group would provide that capacity.

The Fourth Regional Economic Cooperation Conference on Afghanistan (Istanbul, 2–4 November) resulted in recommendations on priority investment areas. On implementation of the Kabul process, at the 15 November meeting of the Joint Coordination and Monitoring Board, the Government reported that more than 70 per cent of the October 2010 target benchmarks had been met, demonstrating its growing capacity to assume ownership of and responsibility for Afghanistan's transition and development. The Government also presented a monitoring and reporting framework to track progress made in each of its 22 priority programmes.

The number of security incidents was 66 per cent higher than the same period in 2009. Violent activities that peaked on polling day and decreased thereafter were characterized by widespread, low-level security incidents designed to frighten potential voters, such as the launching of rockets and mortars against polling centres. Civilians continued to bear the brunt of intensified armed conflict. UNAMA documented 6,215 conflict-related civilian casualties during the first 10 months of 2010—a 20 per cent increase compared to the same period in 2009. A 23 October 2010 attack targeting the United Nations Multi-Agency Compound at Herat (see p. 78), marked the third suicide attack against the United Nations in three years. Afghan security and law enforcement personnel reacted swiftly to the attack. Although there were no staff casualties and all attackers were killed before they could come near the compound's office and residential buildings, the attack demonstrated the need to remain vigilant and adapt to a dynamic security environment, as well as the importance of security enhancements under way in all the Mission's regional and provincial offices.

In November, the United Nations and the Kuwaiti Government agreed to establish a UNAMA Support Office in Kuwait that would enable UNAMA to ensure the backup of its critical data; maintain vital technical and administrative functions in a secure environment; and serve as a relocation centre in the event of an in extremis situation in Afghanistan. In other efforts, UNAMA had taken on a greater role in generating a coherent approach to donor assistance in support of the Government's anti-corruption agenda. It had assumed the duties of Co-Chair of the International Community Transparency and Accountability Working Group and the Chair of the United Nations Donor Group in Support of the High Office of Oversight and Anti-Corruption.

The Afghanistan return operation remained the single largest such operation for UNHCR. During the year, some 112,542 Afghan refugees had returned with its assistance. Under the mine action programme, emergency response teams were available in all but one of the country's seven regions. Since it became operational in the most recent quarter, the programme had responded to 21 emergency requests for demining. In September, the UNODC annual Afghan Opium Poppy Survey indicated that opium poppy cultivation in 2010 had remained at 2009 levels, while opium production had declined by half. All 20 poppy-free provinces remained poppy-free in 2010, while four additional provinces (Herat, Kunar, Laghman, Zabul) were nearly poppy-free. The fourth ministerial meeting of the Triangular Initiative (Islamabad, Pakistan, 24–25 November) adopted measures to strengthen cooperation between the three countries (Afghanistan, Iran, Pakistan) to address drug trafficking.

Year-end developments. In a later report [A/65/783-S/2011/120], the Secretary-General said that with the certification of the 18 September election results, a number of powerful candidates had not obtained seats in the parliament, either because they had lost the vote according to the tally of the Independent Election Commission or they had been disqualified owing to evidence of fraud. Several unsuccessful candidates complained about fraud and disenfranchisement due to insecurity in the areas of their constituencies, mostly in districts with a predominantly Pashtun population. The Attorney General's Office initiated an investigation that resulted in 14 electoral officials being named by the Attorney General as complicit in fraud, and on 13 December their files were sent to the Supreme Court. On 21 December, the Supreme Court announced the creation of an ad hoc Special Court with the authority to review complaints arising from the elections, including those assembled by the Attorney General. The Independent Election Commission and the Electoral Complaints Commission rejected the Court's authority over the elections, arguing that according to the Constitution and the electoral law, the decisions of those two bodies on electoral matters were final.

In a 22 December press statement [SC/10143], the Security Council welcomed the announcement of the final results and said it was looking forward to all Afghan institutions' continuing to act within their clearly defined areas of competence in accordance with the relevant laws and the Constitution.

In Ashgabat, Turkmenistan, President Karzai attended the 11 December signing of the inter-governmental agreement and gas pipeline framework agreement for the Turkmenistan-Afghanistan-Pakistan-India gas pipeline. With regard to counter-narcotics efforts, an Afghan-to-Afghan training course to raise the awareness and improve detection abilities of law enforcement agencies was convened in December with a focus on impeding the flow of chemicals used in the manufacture of heroin and other narcotics as well as IEDs. In the same month, the UNODC country office for Afghanistan inaugurated the first border liaison office at the Torkham crossing between Afghanistan and Pakistan to support the fight against transnational organized crime.

On 24 December (decision 65/544), the General Assembly decided that the agenda item on the situation in Afghanistan would remain for consideration during its resumed sixty-fifth (2011) session.

UNAMA

The United Nations Assistance Mission in Afghanistan (UNAMA) was established by Security Council resolution 1401(2002) [YUN 2002, p. 264] to promote, among other things, national reconciliation and the responsibilities entrusted to the United Nations under the 2001 Bonn Agreement [YUN 2001, p. 263]. It comprised the Office of the Special Representative, two substantive pillars—one political (Pillar I) and one on relief, recovery and reconstruction (Pillar II)—and an administrative component. UNAMA was headquartered in Kabul, with regional offices in Bamyan, Gardez, Herat, Jalalabad, Kabul, Kandahar, Kunduz and Mazar-e-Sharif and provincial offices in Badakhshan, Badghis, Baghlan, Daikundi, Farah, Faryab, Ghor, Khost, Kunar, Nimroz, Sari Pul, Sheberghan, Taloqan, Uruzgan and Zabul. UNAMA was headed by the Special Representative of the Secretary-General, Kai Eide (Norway), who was succeeded by Staffan de Mistura (Sweden) as at 1 March 2010. By resolution 1917(2010) (see p. 340), the Security Council extended the UNAMA mandate until 23 March 2011.

Financing

In October [A/65/328/Add.4], the Secretary-General submitted proposed resource requirements for UNAMA for 2011 totalling $270,010,400 net ($284,758,400 gross). As the Mission's projected expenditures of $238,595,100 for 2010 would result in an over-expenditure of $11,674,300, the amount being sought totalled $281,684,700 net. In December [A/65/602], the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions (ACABQ) recommended a 5 per cent reduction in the overall operational requirements ($164,271,600) proposed for the Mission.

On 24 December, the General Assembly, in section XIII of resolution 65/259 (see p. 633), approved the budgets for 29 special political missions, including UNAMA, for the 2010–2011 biennium.

International Security Assistance Force

During 2010, the Secretary-General transmitted to the Security Council, in accordance with Council resolutions 1386(2001) [YUN 2001, p. 267] and 1510(2003) [YUN 2003, p. 310], a report from the International Security Assistance Force (ISAF) on its activities for the period from 1 November 2009 to 31 January 2010 [S/2010/353]. Subsequent reports covered ISAF activities from 1 February to 30 April [S/2010/437]; 1 May to 31 July [S/2010/548]; 1 August to 31 October [S/2010/657]; and 1 November to 31 January 2011 [S/2011/124]. Throughout the year, ISAF continued to assist the Afghan Government in accordance with relevant Security Council resolutions.

As at 1 February, ISAF had 87,646 personnel from 28 NATO countries and 15 non-NATO countries. Between 1 November 2009 and 31 January 2010, ISAF suffered 794 casualties—89 killed in action, 696 wounded in action and nine non-battle deaths. The London Conference (see p. 339) agreed on targets for significant increases in the Afghan National Army (171,000) and the Afghan National Police (134,000) by the end of 2011, taking total security force numbers to over 300,000. The NATO decision to develop a plan for phased transition to Afghan security leadership, province by province, possibly beginning at the end of 2010 or early 2011, was welcomed. It was also agreed that the transition should be conditions-based, and that ISAF would move to a supporting role in the provinces as conditions were met.

As at 25 October, ISAF had 130,432 personnel from 28 NATO nations and 20 non-NATO nations. During the quarter ending 31 October, ISAF suffered 2,201 casualties—179 killed in action, 2,007 wounded in action and 15 non-battle-related deaths. As the preparation process for transition continued, ISAF extended its focus on the training and mentorship of entities within the Afghan National Security Forces. Recognizing that vital gaps existed, ISAF expanded its capacity and capabilities to cover its mandate in a more comprehensive manner. NATO/ISAF invited additional UN Member States to support the mission by providing trainers, mentors and enablers for the Afghan National Security Forces as well as for the civilian sectors of governance and development.

Communication. In a 6 October letter to the Secretary-General [S/2010/542], Afghanistan expressed appreciation for the ISAF role in the country and welcomed the proposed extension of its mandate.

Stressing, in this context, the importance of further progress by the Government of Afghanistan in ending impunity and strengthening judicial institutions, in the reconstruction and reform of the prison sector, and the rule of law and respect for human rights within Afghanistan, including for women and girls, and, in particular, women's rights under the Constitution to fully participate in the political, economic and social spheres of Afghan life,

4. Stresses the importance of increasing, within a comprehensive framework, the functionality, professionalism and accountability of the Afghan security sector, encourages the International Security Assistance Force and other partners to sustain their efforts, as resources permit, to train, mentor and empower the Afghan National Security Forces in order to accelerate progress towards the goal of self-sufficient, accountable and ethnically balanced Afghan security forces providing security and ensuring the rule of law throughout the country, welcomes the increasing leadership role played by the Afghan authorities in security responsibilities throughout the country, and stresses the importance of supporting the planned expansion of the Afghan National Army and the Afghan National Police as endorsed by the Joint Coordination and Monitoring Board in January 2010;

5. Calls upon the International Security Assistance Force and the Senior Civilian Representative of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization to continue to work in close consultation with the Government of Afghanistan and the Special Representative of the Secretary-General for Afghanistan in accordance with Security Council resolution 1917(2010) as well as with the Operation Enduring Freedom coalition in the implementation of the mandate of the Force;

Children and armed conflict

In an April report on children and armed conflict [A/64/742-S/2010/181], issued pursuant to presidential statement S/PRST/2009/9 [YUN 2009, p. 737] and covering developments in 2009, the Secretary-General provided information on measures taken by parties to end violations against children; on implementation of the reporting and monitoring mechanism established by Security Council resolution 1612(2005) [YUN 2005, p. 863]; and on grave violations committed against children. The Afghan Government appointed a high-level focal point to interact with the country task force on monitoring and reporting, while four regional task forces on monitoring and reporting were established in the eastern, central, south-eastern and western regions. A number of investigations were conducted into incidents involving the killing and maiming of children by military forces. An investigation led by NATO was ordered into the events surrounding the air strike in Kunduz that killed 40 children. Available information indicated that a number of children were recruited or used by armed opposition groups, including the Taliban, the Haqqani network, Hezbi-Islami, the Tora Bora Front and Jamat Sunat al-Dawa Salafia. Cases were documented of children as young as 13 and 14 years of age who carried out suicide attacks or were used to plant explosives. More than 1,000 children were killed or injured in conflict-related violence, a marked increase from the previous year that was mainly due to the growth and spread of the insurgency, with armed groups being responsible for the vast majority of incidents.

Communication. On 10 June, Afghanistan transmitted to the Secretary-General a memorandum [A/64/836-S/2010/320] regarding his April report and the inclusion of the Afghan National Police in annex I as a party to conflict that recruited or used children in contravention of international law.

Sanctions

UN sanctions-related activities were guided by the measures adopted by Security Council resolution 1904(2009) [YUN 2009, p. 355] and previous resolutions against Osama bin Laden, Al-Qaida, the Taliban, their associates and associated entities, which further refined the financial measures, travel ban and arms embargo imposed on those persons identified in the consolidated list created pursuant to resolution 1267(1999) [YUN 1999, p. 265]. The Al-Qaida and Taliban Sanctions Committee, established pursuant to resolution 1267(1999), oversaw the implementation of those measures. The Committee was assisted by an Analytical Support and Sanctions Monitoring Team. Pursuant to resolution 1904(2009), the Office of the Ombudsman was established to assist the Committee when considering delisting requests and to address the right of a listed individual to a review of the listing by an independent mechanism. On 3 June [S/2010/282], the Secretary-General informed the Council that Kimberley Prost (Canada) had been appointed as Ombudsperson for a period ending 30 June 2011.

Sanctions Committee activities

On 31 December, the Al-Qaida and Taliban Sanctions Committee submitted a report [S/2010/685] covering its activities in 2010. During the year, the Committee held two formal meetings and 32 informal meetings. Following consultations among Security Council members, the Council elected the Bureau of the Committee for 2010, which consisted of Thomas Mayr-Harting (Austria) as Chairman, with Brazil and the Russian Federation providing the two Vice-Chairmen.

The Committee completed the review of 488 names on the consolidated list of individuals and entities subject to sanctions, pursuant to resolution 1822(2008) [YUN 2008, p. 377]; adopted revised guidelines on the conduct of its work; and was assisted in its consideration of delisting requests, for the first time in its history, by an independent and impartial Ombuds-person. The consolidated list was updated 31 times in 2010, and by year's end, 485 individuals and entities were included on it. The Committee decided to add 20 individuals and two entities to the list, while it acceded to the delisting of 23 individuals and 17 entities. The Committee also addressed the issue of deceased persons and entities that had ceased to exist, resulting in eight individuals who were confirmed to be dead and three entities that had ceased to exist being removed from the list. The Committee responded to requests from relevant authorities seeking its assistance in confirming the identity of certain individuals or entities for the purpose of implementing the sanctions measures. It also continued to consider notifications and requests for exemptions submitted pursuant to resolution 1452(2002) [YUN 2002, p. 280], receiving eight such communications from States in 2010.

On 5 March [S/2010/125], the Chairman transmitted to the Security Council a report on the Committee's position on recommendations contained in the tenth report of the Monitoring Team [YUN 2009, p. 354].

On 28 June [S/2010/341], the Chairman transmitted a request to the Council to extend the comprehensive review period by one month, until 31 July, to which the Council agreed on 29 June [S/2010/342]. On 31 December, the Chairman transmitted a letter [S/2010/686] to the Council on the status of the review and the issues covered by it, including 10 requests to add 69 names to the consolidated list; 5 requests to remove 8 names from the list; 2 proposals to amend 4 entries on the list; and 6 notifications submitted pursuant to resolution 1452(2002).

The Sanctions Committee Chairman briefed the Security Council on its work on 11 May [S/PV.6310] and 15 November [S/PV.6424].

Monitoring Team

The Analytical Support and Sanctions Monitoring Team (the Monitoring Team), established by Security Council resolution 1526(2004) [YUN 2004, p. 332] and most recently extended by resolution 1904(2009), had the mandate of collating, assessing, monitoring, reporting on and making recommendations on the implementation of measures imposed by that resolution. The Monitoring Team visited 15 States, while the Chairman used the opportunity of the Council Mission to Afghanistan in June to visit the country. At the request of the Council, the Monitoring Team continued to organize regional meetings with the heads and deputy heads of intelligence and security services to discuss how the sanctions could be adapted to address changes in the threat posed by Al-Qaida-related terrorism. The Monitoring Team also reported on the outcome of the review of the Consolidated List conducted by the Al-Qaida and Taliban Sanctions Committee as described in paragraph 25 of resolution 1822(2008) [YUN 2008, p. 377].

Report on Consolidated List review. In accordance with resolution 1904(2009), the Sanctions Committee Chairman on 28 September transmitted to the Security Council the Monitoring Team's August report on the outcome of the review of the Consolidated List [S/2010/497] conducted by the Committee from 30 June 2008 to 31 July 2010. The review examined 488 names of individuals, groups and entities subject to the Al-Qaida and Taliban sanctions regime in order to update their entries or remove them from the List. The Committee conducted the review in closed meetings and sought information from 89 States: 63 in their capacity as designating States and 58 in their capacity as the State of residence or citizenship for individuals, or as the State of incorporation or location for entities. Of the 488 names reviewed, the Committee found that the listing remained appropriate for 380; of the remaining 108 names, it removed 45 from the List and delayed a final decision on the other 63 pending receipt of further detail. Meanwhile, Member States had submitted information during the review that would lead to 465 proposed amendments to the List.

The review was the first such review conducted by a Security Council sanctions committee. In addition to focusing on the accuracy and relevance of the List, the review had also addressed widespread calls for greater transparency and consultation with regard to the Committee's listing and de-listing procedures. The unprecedented level of engagement between the Committee and Member States during the review suggested that a large group of States continued to share the Council's concern that there should be a coordinated international response to the threat from Al-Qaida and the Taliban. The report contained general recommendations for the conduct of future reviews, including that the Committee encourage States to take a more active part in reviews by appearing before the Committee to discuss cases of particular interest or importance and to appoint a single national focal point for dealing with the Committee's reviews. It also made recommendations pertaining to the triennial review of all names, the six-monthly review of deceased persons and the annual review of entries that lacked identifiers.

On 20 December [S/2010/653], the Sanctions Committee Chairman transmitted to the Council a report containing the Committee's position on the recommendations contained in the report of the Monitoring Team on the outcome of the review of the Consolidated List.

Iraq

In 2010, the United Nations, through the Secretary-General's Special Representative for Iraq and the United Nations Assistance Mission for Iraq (UNAMI), continued to assist the country in its transition to democratic governance and in promoting reconstruction and reconciliation. Parliamentary elections were held in March and a national partnership Government was formed in November. Although Iraq improved its capacity to address security, throughout the year insurgent groups continued to demonstrate the ability to stage violent attacks with a view to undermining the progress achieved. On 5 August, the Security Council extended the UNAMI mandate until 31 July 2011 (see p. 366). On 15 December, the Council extended the arrangements for depositing into the Development Fund for Iraq proceeds from export sales of petroleum, petroleum products and natural gas until 30 June 2011 (see p. 371); terminated the residual activities of the oil-for-food programme (see p. 376); and terminated the measures by which Iraq was requested to destroy all weapons of mass destruction and long-range ballistic missiles and not to acquire any nuclear weapons (see p. 374).

Political and security developments

Report of Secretary-General (February). In his report on United Nations Assistance Mission for Iraq (UNAMI) activities [S/2010/76], submitted in response to resolution 1883(2009) [YUN 2009, p. 367] and summarizing developments since his November 2009 report [ibid., p. 369], the Secretary-General said that preparations for national elections scheduled for 7 March 2010 continued. Following the completion of a nationwide voter registration update exercise in 2009, the Independent High Electoral Commission compiled the voter list and, consequently, some 18.9 million voters had been allocated to around 50,000 polling stations. Candidate nomination had been reopened to accommodate the new amendments to the Election Law [ibid., p. 371] and had closed, with approximately 6,600 candidates nominated from 86 political entities or coalitions. On 7 January, the Accountability and Justice Commission announced that 15 political entities would be excluded from participating in the elections. On 14 January, it informed the Electoral Commission that it had disqualified 496 candidate nominees, a figure that increased to 511 on 19 January. A number of candidates filed appeals and, on 3 February, the Court of Cassation ruled that the review of the appeals would be postponed until after the elections, allowing them to run in the elections. If elected, those candidates would have their privileges and immunities deferred until a final decision was made on their appeals. The Accountability and Justice Commission and a number of political parties rejected the court ruling. Uncertain as to whether the decision was binding, the Electoral Commission sought clarification from the Supreme Federal Court, resulting in the postponement of the campaign period until 12 February. The Speaker of the Council of Representatives called for a meeting on 6 February with the Presidency Council, the Prime Minister, the Speaker and the Chief Justice to discuss the Court of Cassation's decision. On 7 February, the Court of Cassation announced that it would review all appeals filed before the start of the electoral campaign period on or around 12 February.

Political disagreements in the Ninewa Governorate remained a matter of concern. The Deputy Prime Minister continued his efforts to reduce tensions between the Ninewa Brotherhood List, which continued to boycott the Provincial Council, and the Al-Hadba National List led by Governor Atheel Nujafi, making regular visits to both the Ninewa Governorate and the Kurdistan region, meeting with both sides and seeking to create conditions for improved security. Meanwhile, to ease tensions in northern Iraq, the Iraqi Government and the Kurdistan Regional Government (KRG) agreed to set up joint security structures in the Governorates of Diyala, Kirkuk and Ninewa. The new arrangement included joint patrols and checkpoints consisting of personnel from the Iraqi Army, Iraqi Kurdistan Peshmerga and the Iraqi police, under the coordination of the United States Forces in Iraq (USF-I). The security plan had received mixed reactions in the affected communities, but the intention remained to build trust between communities, strengthen security coordination prior to the national elections and create an environment conducive to political dialogue over the disputed territories.

While the number of security incidents continued to decrease after October 2009, insurgent groups continued to mount mass casualty attacks aimed at civilians and governmental structures to destabilize the country. On 25 January 2010, 38 people were killed and 74 injured when car bombs were detonated near three hotels in the centre of Baghdad frequented by foreign journalists and contractors, and a car bomb killed 17 people and wounded 80 at a government forensics centre in Baghdad on 26 January. Following an official letter of protest from the Iraqi Government to the Iranian Government, requesting the withdrawal of Iranian forces that had reportedly deployed in the vicinity of the disputed Al-Fakkah oil field, the two countries agreed on 6 January to activate the work of a previously established joint border technical committee. On 27 January, Iraq confirmed that all Iranian forces had redeployed from the Al-Fakkah area. The Iraqi Foreign Minister also confirmed that an agreement was reached with Iran to normalize the situation on the borders between the two countries. In accordance with the UNAMI mandate to advance cooperation between Iraq and its neighbours, a Mission delegation visited Tehran to prepare the start of a small liaison office in that city.

National elections. General elections for the Council of Representatives were held on 7 March. UNAMI provided support to the Independent High Electoral Commission and the Iraqi Government throughout the process. The Commission had certified 86 political entities and coalitions, which nominated more than 6,000 candidates to contest the 325 seats in the Council of Representatives. An estimated 12 million of the 18.9 million eligible voters turned out to cast their ballots. In the first three hours of polling, there were approximately 40 explosions in Baghdad. Despite those attempts at intimidation by insurgent groups, the overall environment in which the election was conducted was relatively free of violence and without any major security incidents that affected the polling. For the first time, many Iraqi television channels broadcast the counts taking place. From 4 to 8 March, UNAMI deployed “poll-watching” teams in Baghdad, the Kurdish Region, Basra and Kirkuk, which assisted the Electoral Commission to resolve difficulties. UNAMI, the international diplomatic community, international and national observers and monitors welcomed the overall integrity and transparency of the electoral process, which was widely assessed as having been conducted according to international standards. On 26 March, the Electoral Commission released the preliminary election results, which showed that the Al-Iraqiya bloc, headed by former Prime Minister Ayad Allawi, led with 91 seats. Prime Minister Nuri Kamel al-Maliki’s State of Law Coalition ranked second with 89 seats, followed by the Iraqi National Alliance with 71 seats. Kurdish representatives won 57 seats, including 40 for the Kurdish Alliance. On 31 March [SC/9897], the Security Council welcomed the election results and noted that international and independent Iraqi observers had affirmed the overall integrity of the process.

Report of Secretary-General (May). In his May report on UNAMI activities [S/2010/240], the Secretary-General said that following the 26 March announcement of the preliminary election results (see above), 335 appeals had been submitted to the Electoral Judicial Panel. Some political entities called for a manual recount in 4 of 18 provinces, including a request in Baghdad by the State of Law Coalition. On 19 April, the Electoral Judicial Panel ordered a partial recount of all votes cast in Baghdad Province, accounting for 68 seats in Parliament. The recount process began on 3 May and, as at 10 May, over half of the votes had been recounted, with no major discrepancies or evidence of fraud found. On the same day, the Electoral Commission announced that it would shortly submit the names of 244 winners (from the total 325 seats) in 17 governorates to the Supreme Court for certification. Meanwhile, the major political blocs had engaged in talks on forming alliances and on identifying a suitable candidate for Prime Minister. On 4 May, the State of Law Coalition and the Iraqi National Alliance announced that they would form a larger coalition that would give them a total of 160 votes in the new Parliament, three seats short of a majority. The Secretary-General’s Special Representative met with the leaders of the winning blocs in early May, including Mr. Allawi and Mr. al-Maliki, to urge the start of the government-formation process in a cooperative and inclusive manner.

In other political activities, the Special Representative travelled to Erbil and Sulaimaniyah to meet with President Jalal Talabani, KRG President Barzani and Prime Minister Saleh, and other leading political figures in the region. The visit provided a gauge of regional views on the electoral process and facilitated discussions on Ninewa. The Special Representative also travelled to the Kurdistan region and Ninewa Governorate to explore the possibility of restarting the stalled dialogue between the Arabs and Kurds. On 3 April, he hosted talks to end the boycott of the Ninewa Provincial Council by the Kurdish-sponsored Ninewa Brotherhood List. The meeting resulted in the identification of distinct areas to address the situation in Ninewa. UNAMI had worked to facilitate the formation of two committees called for in the draft agreement, including a committee on missing persons and detainees, and a committee for the protection of minorities in Ninewa.

With regard to the security environment, hostile groups remained a concern, carrying out two significant bombing attacks in Baghdad during early April and, in the most serious security development since the March elections, a series of attacks across Iraq on 10 May that killed over 100 people and left more wounded. The targeting of Government officials, senior officers of the security forces, Awakening Council members and prominent citizens continued unabated. On 4 April, several attacks on some embassies and neighbourhoods of Baghdad took place, followed on 23 April by a string of bomb attacks targeting residents in Sadr City. The Al-Qaida group in Iraq claimed responsibility for the attacks against Baghdad embassies and residents in mainly Shia districts of the capital and had reportedly reiterated its intent to continue its campaign of violent activities against the diplomatic corps, embassies and international organizations. Notwithstanding those attacks, the Iraqi security forces had demonstrated their increased capacity to assume greater security responsibilities, evidenced by their successful maintenance of security during the elections. In view of the planned drawdown of USF-I, UNAMI had started actions to ensure that alternative arrangements would be put in place, including the deployment of additional UN air assets. Incidents in the north-central regions continued to revolve around Kirkuk. Tensions were still present, but had taken the back-stage since the elections. Emerging from the elections, there was no clear indicator of how the security situation would unfold in Kirkuk; Arab-Kurdish tensions over the ownership of the city were likely to remain after the new Iraqi Government was named. The high-level task force on Arab-Kurdish issues, a mechanism aimed at fostering dialogue, continued to focus on resolving outstanding issues concerning areas of mutual interest. In its 7 February meeting, the task force agreed to prioritize the issues of property disputes, detainees and language rights in schools.

On development matters, the formulation of the first United Nations Development Assistance Framework for Iraq was successful. Following the 8 April joint strategy meeting, the document was signed in Baghdad on 11 May by Iraq and the United Nations, marking a significant milestone towards longer-term economic and human development planning for Iraq, centring on five national development priorities.

The Secretary-General said that the national elections were a testament of the Iraqi people's determination to exercise their democratic right to vote and elect a Government. He noted that all election complaints that had been filed were being vetted by competent electoral and judicial bodies and the decision to conduct a recount in Baghdad was made via a legitimate legal process. UNAMI had been assisting the Electoral Commission in developing clear protocols and procedures to ensure that the recount was conducted in a transparent and efficient manner. He urged political leaders to move swiftly and work together to build a cohesive and inclusive Government and ensure a peaceful transition. He welcomed the call issued by the Presidential Council of Iraq on 4 May asking all Iraqi parties to accelerate government formation based on the results of the elections and stated that the United Nations stood ready to assist if requested by the parties concerned.

Report of Secretary-General (July). In his July report on UNAMI activities [S/2010/406], the Secretary-General said that on 14 May, the Electoral Commission had completed the ballot recount for the Baghdad Governorate, which reviewed more than 2.5 million votes cast in over 11,000 polling places. The recount revealed no evidence of significant fraud or manipulation of ballots. On 16 May, the Electoral Commission announced that there would be no changes to the allocation of seats: the Al-Iraqiya list would stand, with 91 of 325 parliamentary seats, and the State of Law Coalition would continue to hold 89 seats. The Electoral Judicial Panel and the Court of Cassation ruled on all outstanding appeals and by 2 June, the Federal Supreme Court had certified the names of all 325 winning candidates for the Council of Representatives, thereby concluding the electoral process. UNAMI, which had continued to assist the Commission in addressing questions that arose from the appeals and challenges being handled by the relevant judicial bodies, also assisted the Commission with the planning of several conferences to reflect on the lessons learned during the election process and in identifying ways to improve its operational capacity for future elections and referendums. On 11 June, the State of Law Coalition and the Iraqi National Alliance announced their merger into a new coalition, the National Alliance. Despite claiming the right to form the new Government as the largest parliamentary bloc, the National Alliance had yet to name its candidate to the position of Prime Minister. Meanwhile, Al-Iraqiya maintained its constitutional right to form the next Government on the basis of the election results. After their first meeting on 12 June, Prime Minister al-Maliki and Al-Iraqiya leader Ayad Allawi met on several occasions to discuss the impasse. On 14 June, at the inaugural parliamentary session of the elected Council of Representatives, the newly elected members took their oaths of office. The Acting Speaker of Parliament suspended the session to allow more time for negotiations over key posts, including those of the Speaker, the President of the Republic and the Prime Minister. No date was set for the next meeting.

In a renewed effort to normalize Arab-Kurdish relations in the north, UNAMI supported a government-initiated dialogue aimed at ending the boycott of the Ninewa Provincial Council and facilitated two meetings between the Ninewa Fraternal list and the Hadba list, on 3 April and 15 May, respectively. The discussions focused on security issues and the transfer of detainees from Ninewa (held in the Kurdistan region), as well as power-sharing with regard to senior posts in the Ninewa Provincial Council. A detainee committee established as part of the Ninewa talks conducted several field visits to Asayesh detention facilities in the Kurdistan region. UNAMI also facilitated two further meetings of the newly established

Committee on Ethnic and Religious Communities under the Ninewa dialogue process. Meanwhile, on 24 May, the Kurdistan Regional Parliament passed a law establishing a regional human rights institution, the Independent Board of Human Rights, which would replace the dissolved KRG Ministry of Human Rights. UNAMI would work with the KRG to build the capacity of the new institution.

In other developments, the Iraq National Development Plan, 2010–2014, was launched by the Prime Minister on 4 July. Progress was also made on the integration of the implementing activities of UNAMI and the UN country team in relation to key State and peacebuilding priorities. However, the overall human rights situation remained a concern, notably the high rate of indiscriminate and targeted attacks against the civilian population. In addition, a number of groups in Iraq were still in need of humanitarian support. Ensuring access to essential basic services, such as quality education, health and nutrition, shelter, water and sanitation services, particularly for internally displaced persons (IDPs), remained a priority for the UN country team.

Although the successful conclusion of the national electoral process on 2 June and the convening of the new Council of Representatives on 14 June represented important milestones in Iraq's democratic transition, the Secretary-General expressed concern that continued delays in the government-formation process were contributing to a growing sense of uncertainty. He urged all political bloc leaders to work together through an inclusive and participatory process to end the impasse. Once the government process was completed, it was imperative for the new Government, together with the Council of Representatives and other stakeholders, to make national reconciliation a priority and to address the many outstanding political and constitutional challenges facing the country.

Extension of UNAMI mandate

In a 28 July letter to the Security Council [S/2010/404], Iraqi Foreign Minister Hoshyar Zebari conveyed his Government's wish that UNAMI's mandate be extended for a 12-month period. The Government valued the advice, support and assistance of UNAMI and looked forward to a more positive, effective and constructive role for the Mission with the return to work in Iraq of the UN specialized agencies, funds and programmes and their direct and valuable contribution to its reconstruction.

Further developments

Formation of national Government. After months of political negotiations, leading Iraqi political blocs reached an agreement on forming a national partnership Government from the blocs elected during the national parliamentary elections. As a result, at its 11 November session, the Council of Representatives elected Jalal Talabani as President of the Republic, Osama al-Nujaifi from the Iraqi bloc as Speaker, and Qusai al-Suhail from the Sadrist Trend and Aref Tayfour from the Kurdistan Alliance as Deputy Speakers. The main political blocs also signed an agreement consisting of three elements: the establishment of a National Council for Higher Strategies and an agreement that the necessary legislation would be adopted by the Council of Representatives; the exemption of three prominent Iraqiya Alliance candidates from the process of de-Ba'athification; and the exploration of issues of national reconciliation by the National Council for Higher Strategies. After his re-election for a second term, President Talabani asked Nuri al-Maliki to form the new Government as Prime Minister-designate. The breakthrough in the formation of the Government was welcomed by the international community, including neighbouring countries.

SECURITY COUNCIL ACTION

On 12 November [meeting 6423], following consultations among Security Council members, the President made statement S/PRST/2010/23 on behalf of the Council:

The Security Council welcomes the agreement to form a national partnership government achieved in Iraq on 11 November 2010.

The Council welcomes the inclusive political process and representative outcome and encourages Iraq's leaders to rededicate themselves to the pursuit of national reconciliation.

The Council reaffirms its commitment to the independence, sovereignty, unity and territorial integrity of Iraq, and emphasizes the importance of the stability and security of Iraq for its people, the region and the international community.

Report of Secretary-General (November). In his report on UNAMI activities [S/2010/606], submitted in response to resolution 1936(2010), the Secretary-General said that members of the Iraqiya Alliance who had walked out in protest during the 11 November parliamentary vote to elect the President returned to Parliament on 13 November on the understanding that a committee would be established to ensure the implementation of the three-point agreement signed on 11 November. The members had demanded the release of detainees and rescission of the decision to disqualify three Alliance candidates under the process of de-Ba'athification. Discussions were expected to continue among the leaders of the political blocs on the government agenda, the composition of the Council of Ministers and the reform of State institutions. On 3 October, following the refusal of the Ninewa Governorate authorities to allow the KRG to conduct the census in some of the Ninewa districts, the Council of Ministers postponed the nationwide census scheduled for 24 October to the provisional date of 5 December. An agreement was subsequently reached between the Ninewa Governor and the Central Organization for Statistics and Information Technology of the Ministry of Planning, allowing census preparations to resume in the Governorate. Arab and Turkomen leaders from Kirkuk and Sunni Arab politicians from other governorates had also asked for a postponement, citing an inadequate security environment and concerns of possible links of the census to the future of the disputed territories. On 19 October, the Federal Supreme Court issued a ruling clarifying that the proposed nationwide census was not the same as the one mentioned in article 140 of the Iraqi constitution for the resolution of disputed territories.

UNAMI facilitated efforts to address issues of national reconciliation, particularly on improving Arab-Kurdish relations and resolving disputes over internal boundaries. It also facilitated several rounds of talks among the parties in Ninewa to enhance the security of minority populations, improve access to services and education, and secure political, cultural, religious and administrative rights. UNAMI continued to facilitate meetings of the Committee on Ethnic and Religious Communities, which included representatives of the Ninewa administration, the KRG and the Iraqi Government. In August, the Electoral Commission expressed its readiness to the KRG to organize the governorate council elections in the Kurdistan region. The Commission provided an operational concept, a timeline and an estimated budget for the regional elections. A draft law that would establish an independent Kurdistan regional election commission to conduct and oversee the elections was tabled in the Kurdistan Regional Parliament in July. No date was set for the elections.

While Iraq continued to make progress in improving its capacity to address security within the country, many challenges remained. Armed opposition groups continued to demonstrate the ability to conduct operations such as the series of orchestrated bombings on 3 November in Baghdad that left 91 dead and over 380 injured. Twin bombings on 8 November targeting Shia pilgrims killed at least 13 people in Karbala and Najaf and targeted assassinations persisted across the country. Al-Qaida in Iraq remained active, particularly in the Governorate of Diyala. The withdrawal of USF-I was likely to have a short- to medium-term effect on the security situation as the central Government attempted to assert itself over the security situation. Armed opposition groups had changed tactics, relying more on longer-range weapons that targeted indiscriminately; that would continue to affect the UN presence in locations such as Baghdad, Kirkuk and Mosul. Since 1 October, there had been 24 indirect fire attacks against Forward Operating Base Warrior in Kirkuk, a UNAMI operating location. Due to the frequency of attacks, UNAMI had temporarily downsized its staff until new security mitigation measures were in place.

The Secretary-General welcomed the political gains achieved, yet observed that the prolonged process of government formation had been accompanied by a sense of insecurity. The increasing number of security incidents throughout Iraq, particularly in the north and in Baghdad and attacks against Iraqi security forces and innocent civilians, remained a major concern. The United States drawdown was making it more difficult for the United Nations to carry out its operations. Although there had been progress in making the Organization more self-reliant, certain security and logistical arrangements provided by the United States would need to be replaced. It was also his sincere hope that with the formation of the new Government, the security situation in the country would improve.

High-level Security Council meeting on Iraq. On 15 December [S/PV.6450], the Security Council convened a high-level meeting on the situation concerning Iraq, chaired by Vice-President Joe Biden (United States) as Council President. The Council had before it a concept paper by the United States [S/2010/621]; a letter from Prime Minister al-Maliki on the Development Fund for Iraq (DFI) (see p. 371); the Secretary-General's reports on DFI [ibid.] and UNAMI (see above); notes verbales from Iraq on DFI (see p. 371), disarmament issues (see p. 374) and the oil-for-food programme (see p. 375); and a letter from the Secretary-General on the UN Iraq Account [ibid.].

Prior to hearing statements, the Council adopted resolution 1956(2010) extending the DFI arrangements until 30 June 2011 (see p. 371); resolution 1957(2010) terminating the weapons of mass destruction and other Chapter 7 measures (see p. 374); and resolution 1958(2010) concluding the oil-for-food programme residual activities (see p. 376). The Council President then made statement S/PRST/2010/27 on behalf of the Council.

SECURITY COUNCIL ACTION

On 15 December [meeting 6450], following consultations among Security Council members, the President made statement S/PRST/2010/27 on behalf of the Council:

The Security Council reaffirms its commitment to the independence, sovereignty, unity and territorial integrity of Iraq, and emphasizes the importance of the stability and security of Iraq for its people, the region and the international community.

The Council supports the inclusive political process and power-sharing agreement reached by Iraq's leaders to form a representative national partnership government that reflects the will of the Iraqi people as displayed by the parliamentary elections of 7 March 2010. We encourage its leaders to continue to pursue a federal, democratic, pluralistic and unified Iraq based on the rule of law and respect for human rights.

The Council reaffirms the need to combat all forms of terrorism and that no terrorist act can reverse a path towards peace, democracy and reconstruction in Iraq, which is supported by its people, the Government of Iraq and the international community.

The Council welcomes the positive developments in Iraq and recognizes that the situation now existing in Iraq is significantly different from that which existed at the time of the adoption of resolution 661(1990). Consistent with resolution 1859(2008), the Council also welcomes the important progress Iraq has made in regaining the international standing it held prior to the adoption of resolution 661(1990). In recognition of Iraq's progress in supporting the international non-proliferation regime and complying with disarmament treaties and other relevant international instruments, its commitment to taking additional steps in this regard, and its provisional application of the Additional Protocol to its comprehensive safeguards agreement with the International Atomic Energy Agency, pending its ratification, the Council has adopted resolution 1957(2010), which lifts the restrictions imposed by resolutions 687(1991) and 707(1991) relating to weapons of mass destruction and civilian nuclear activities. In recognition of Iraq's success in closing out remaining contracts in the oil-for-food programme, the Council has also adopted resolution 1958(2010) to terminate the residual activities of the oil-for-food programme. And, in recognition of Iraq's progress towards the establishment of effective and accountable successor arrangements for the transition of the Development Fund for Iraq, the Council has adopted resolution 1956(2010), which terminates arrangements for the Development Fund on 30 June 2011. Welcoming the progress made by the Governments of Iraq and Kuwait towards the resolution of the outstanding issues between both countries, and encouraging their further cooperation, the Council calls upon Iraq to quickly fulfil its remaining obligations under the relevant Chapter VII Council resolutions pertaining to the situation between Iraq and Kuwait.

The Council welcomes Iraq's reintegration into the region and encourages Iraq and all regional States to deepen and broaden their relations and to conduct those relations in a spirit of partnership and cooperation.

The Council reaffirms its full support for the United Nations Assistance Mission for Iraq in advising, supporting and assisting the people and Government of Iraq to strengthen democratic institutions, advance inclusive dialogue and national reconciliation, facilitate regional dialogue, aid vulnerable groups, strengthen gender equality, promote the protection of human rights, including through the establishment of the Independent High Commission for Human Rights, promote the protection of affected civilians, including children, women and members of religious and ethnic minority groups, and promote judicial and legal reform.

The Council commends the Mission, headed by the Special Representative of the Secretary-General for Iraq, for its support throughout the electoral process, consistent with its mandate.

The Council encourages the continued work of the Mission, in coordination with the Government of Iraq, to provide protection and help to create conditions conducive to the voluntary, safe, dignified and, in particular, the sustainable return of Iraqi refugees and internally displaced persons, and stresses the importance of further attention to this issue by all concerned.

The Council underscores the important role of the Mission in supporting the people and Government of Iraq to promote dialogue, ease tension and encourage a negotiated political agreement to the nation's disputed internal boundaries, and calls upon all relevant parties to participate in an inclusive dialogue to this end.

After the presidential statement, Mr. Biden made a further statement in his national capacity. He said that over 100,000 American troops had withdrawn from Iraq since 2008 and the United States mission in the country had transitioned from a military-led to a civilian-led engagement. The 50,000 troops that would remain until the end of 2011 had been given a new mission: advising and assisting their Iraqi counterparts. The United States would continue to reinforce the progress being made in Iraq consistent with the Strategic Framework Agreement with the Iraqis and to forge an enduring partnership across a range of sectors. It would also continue to work with Iraqi leaders on the tasks that lay ahead, such as conducting the census, integrating Kurdish forces into Iraqi security forces, keeping commitments to Sons of Iraq, resolving disputed internal boundaries with regard to Kirkuk, passing critical hydrocarbon legislation and a fiscally responsible budget, and helping stabilize the country's economy. He also recognized the work of UNAMI, Special Representative Melkert and his staff.

The Secretary-General said that the meeting was a milestone for Iraq. He commended Iraq's leaders for ending their political deadlock and urged the country's political blocs to honour their agreements and move swiftly to conclude the process of paving the way for a national partnership Government and for the first peaceful transition between elected Governments under full Iraqi sovereignty. He encouraged Iraq's neighbours to open a new chapter in their relations with Iraq and encouraged Iraq to reaffirm its commitment with respect to its land and maritime boundary with Kuwait and to fulfil all other outstanding obligations, including with regard to missing Kuwaiti persons and property, compensation and the maintenance of boundary markers. UNAMI would continue to promote political dialogue, provide constitutional support, monitor human rights, deliver humanitarian assistance to Iraqi refugees and IDPs, help build the capacity of Iraq's electoral institutions and encourage a negotiated agreement to the disputed internal boundaries.

Year-end developments. In a later report [S/2011/213], the Secretary-General said that on 21 December, a new Government, led by Prime Minister al-Maliki, was endorsed by the Iraqi Council of Representatives. It was hailed as a national partnership Government, consisting of the country's main political blocs, and brought an end to the nine-month political stalemate that had followed the national elections in March. The Council of Representatives had lifted de-Ba'athification charges against three key Iraqiya bloc leaders. One of the leaders, Saleh al-Mutlaq, was appointed as Deputy Prime Minister. Two other Deputy Prime Ministers, Hussein Shahristani and Rowsch Shaways, were appointed from the National Alliance and the Kurdistan Alliance, respectively. Meanwhile, political disagreements over the potential use of census data resulted in further delays in the implementation of the population counting stage. On 5 December, the heads of political parties and blocs met to discuss concerns surrounding the census. They decided to establish three provincial committees, in Diyala, Kirkuk and Ninewa, to explore possible solutions and report back to the Prime Minister by 19 December. In Kirkuk, Arab and Turkomen members boycotted the meetings, with only Kurds submitting their proposals.

With regard to human rights, the security situation continued to affect the civilian population, who faced ongoing acts of violence perpetrated by armed opposition groups and criminal gangs. Mass graves continued to be discovered containing the victims of the former regime or of the violence that had afflicted the country since 2003. On 11 and 20 December 2010, mass graves were discovered in the Basra governorate in the village of al-Dair (al-Qurna district) and in the Mahaweel area in Babil Governorate, respectively. The latter contained the bodies of 13 civilians; both grave sites were believed to date from around 2006 or 2007 and to contain the victims of insurgent groups. Ongoing violence had also caused immeasurable suffering for all Iraqis, Sunnis, Shias, Christians and others. The protection of children in contact with the law continued to be a challenge as the numbers of boys and girls in prison and in pretrial detention remained high. As at 28 November 2010, there were 1,136 children (1,096 boys and 40 girls) in detention, excluding the region of Kurdistan. On strengthening the promotion and protection of women's rights, UNAMI and the UN country team supported the November launching of the "16 days of activism against gender violence" campaign. It was the first time Iraq had launched such a campaign since the ratification of the Convention on the Elimination of Discrimination against Women in 1986. The campaign was also launched jointly by the United Nations and the KRG.

UNAMI security arrangements. On 21 December [S/2010/666], the Secretary-General informed the Council that due to the changing circumstances in Iraq, he intended to implement adjustments to the integrated UN security structure configured in 2004 [YUN 2004, p. 357]. As a result, the coordination mechanism between the United Nations and the Iraqi Government would include police advisers and/or liaison officers. In addition to controlling access to and conducting patrols within the UNAMI premises, the guard force would provide mobile and close protection security for UN personnel outside UN premises. On 23 December [S/2010/667], the Council welcomed the proposed arrangements.

Communication. On 29 July [A/65/195], the Libyan Arab Jamahiriya transmitted a letter to the Secretary-General requesting the inclusion of a supplementary item in the agenda of the General Assembly's sixty-fifth (2010) session, entitled "Investigation into the invasion of Iraq". In an 11 September letter [A/65/363], the Iraqi Foreign Minister said that it considered the Libyan request to be a violation of Security Council resolutions.

UNAMI

The United Nations Assistance Mission for Iraq (UNAMI), established by Security Council resolution 1500(2003) [YUN 2003, p. 346], continued to support the Secretary-General in fulfilling his mandate under Council resolution 1483(2003) [ibid., p. 338], as extended by resolution 1546(2004) [YUN 2004, p. 348]. The Secretary-General's Special Representative and head of UNAMI Ad Melkert (Netherlands) and his substantive, security and administrative support staff were based in Baghdad, with regional offices in Erbil, Basra and Kirkuk.

Financing

On 25 October [A/65/328/Add.5], the Secretary-General submitted the proposed resource requirements for UNAMI for 2011, totalling $207,729,000 net ($219,314,500 gross). After taking into account the anticipated overexpenditure of the 2010 appropriation in the amount of $2,200,600, total requirements for 2011 would amount to $209,929,600 net. The report also contained an update on the construction project related to the planned integrated headquarters compound in Baghdad.

In December [A/65/602], ACABQ recommended that the General Assembly approve the resources requested by the Secretary-General, subject to its observations and recommendations.

On 24 December, in section XIII of resolution 65/259 (see p. 1429), the Assembly approved the budgets for the 29 special political missions, including UNAMI, totalling $631,162,600.

International Advisory and Monitoring Board

The International Advisory and Monitoring Board (IAMB) for Iraq, established by Security Council resolution 1483(2003) [YUN 2003, p. 338] to ensure that the Development Fund for Iraq was used in a transparent manner for the benefit of the Iraqi people and that Iraqi export sales of petroleum products were consistent with international market best practices, continued to oversee the auditing of the Fund. The Iraqi Committee of Financial Experts, established in 2006 by the Council of Ministers [YUN 2007, p. 353] to work alongside the Board and take over its tasks upon the expiration of the Board's mandate, worked closely with the Board in 2010 and attended all its meetings.

On 6 April [S/PV.6293] and 12 July [S/PV.6356], the UN Controller, Jun Yamazaki—the Secretary-General's designated representative on the Board—briefed the Council on the activities of the Fund and the Board.

Reports of Secretary-General. In accordance with Council resolution 1905(2009) [YUN 2009, p. 372], the Secretary-General reported quarterly on the activities of the Fund and the Board, the legal issues and options to be considered with respect to implementing successor arrangements for the Fund and the Iraqi Government's progress in preparing for such arrangements. In April [S/2010/166], he said that the 2009 audit of the Fund was under way; the external auditor, KPMG, was expected to issue a summary and brief the Board later in the month. To enhance the Fund's transparency and accountability, the Committee of Financial Experts had published monthly summaries of the Fund's cash inflows and outflows on its website. The Committee had also finalized a time-bound action plan to implement a comprehensive oil-metering system that would become operational by the end of 2011. The first quarterly report of the Iraqi Government [S/2010/308 & S/2010/153 & Corr.1] provided an action plan and timeline for the transition to successor arrangements for the Fund and the Board by 31 December 2010.

In his July report [S/2010/359], the Secretary-General said that the preliminary results of the 2009 audit of the Fund highlighted issues of concern regarding weaknesses in controls over oil extraction and in the spending ministries. The Board also approved the audit appointment process and concurred with the Government's recommendation to appoint PricewaterhouseCoopers to conduct the 2010 audit of the Fund. The Secretary-General welcomed the second quarterly report of the Iraqi Government [S/2010/365] and noted that as at 15 June, measures had been implemented in accordance with the plan presented in March.

In his November report [S/2010/563], the Secretary-General said that at the IAMB meeting, the Board had been briefed by KPMG on the final results of the 2009 audit and by PricewaterhouseCoopers on the preliminary results of the 2010 audit. The 2009 final reports and a summary of the 2010 results were available on the Board's website. He noted that implementation of the plan for installing a comprehensive oil-metering system was behind schedule and encouraged the Iraqi Government to implement the metering plan on schedule. He also stated that the Government, in its third quarterly report [S/2010/567], had proposed that immunity for the Fund be extended for a further year due to conditions in the country that had affected the ability of Government institutions to meet requirements for the timeline, including the fact that political blocs and entities had yet to reach agreement on the formation of a new Government.

Extension of Fund. In an 8 December letter [S/2010/625] to the Council, Prime Minister al-Maliki requested a final extension of the Fund until 30 June 2011.

SECURITY COUNCIL ACTION

On 15 December [meeting 6450], the Security Council unanimously adopted resolution 1956(2010). The draft [S/2010/632] was submitted by Austria, Bosnia and Herzegovina, China, France, Gabon, Japan, Lebanon, Nigeria, the Russian Federation, Turkey, Uganda, the United Kingdom and the United States.

The Security Council,

Taking note of the letter dated 8 December 2010 from the Prime Minister of Iraq to the President of the Security Council, which is annexed to the present resolution,

Recognizing the positive developments in Iraq and that the situation now existing in Iraq is significantly different from that which existed at the time of the adoption of resolution 661(1990) on 6 August 1990, also recognizing that Iraqi institutions are strengthening, and further recognizing the importance of Iraq achieving international standing equal to that which it held prior to the adoption of resolution 661(1990),

Welcoming the letter from the Prime Minister of Iraq, which reaffirms the commitment by the Government of Iraq not to request any further extensions of the Development Fund for Iraq arrangements, and recognizing that the letter from the Prime Minister also reaffirms the commitment by the Government to ensure that oil revenue would continue to be used fairly and in the interests of the Iraqi people, and that transition arrangements would be in keeping with the Constitution and with international best practices in respect of transparency, accountability and integrity,

Recognizing the significant role of the Development Fund for Iraq and the International Advisory and Monitoring Board and the provisions of paragraphs 20 and 22 of resolution 1483(2003) of 22 May 2003 in helping the Government of Iraq to ensure that Iraq's resources are being used transparently and accountably for the benefit of the Iraqi people, and stressing the need for Iraq to finalize the transition to successor arrangements for the Development Fund and the Board,

Acting under Chapter VII of the Charter of the United Nations,

1. Decides to terminate, on 30 June 2011, the arrangements established in paragraph 20 of resolution 1483(2003) for depositing into the Development Fund for Iraq proceeds from export sales of petroleum, petroleum products and natural gas and the arrangements referred to in paragraph 12 of resolution 1483(2003) and paragraph 24 of resolution 1546(2004) of 8 June 2004 for the monitoring of the Development Fund by the International Advisory and Monitoring Board, and further decides that, subject to the exception provided for in paragraph 27 of resolution 1546(2004), the provisions of paragraph 22 of resolution 1483(2003) shall continue to apply until that date, including with respect to funds and financial assets and economic resources described in paragraph 23 of that resolution;

2. Welcomes and affirms the decision of the Government of Iraq not to request any further extensions of the Development Fund for Iraq arrangements, and further decides that this is the final extension of the Development Fund arrangements;

3. Decides that, after 30 June 2011, the requirement established in paragraph 20 of resolution 1483(2003) that all proceeds from export sales of petroleum, petroleum products and natural gas from Iraq be deposited into the Development Fund for Iraq shall no longer apply, affirms that the requirement established in paragraph 21 of resolution 1483(2003) that 5 per cent of the proceeds from all export sales of petroleum, petroleum products and natural gas shall be deposited into the United Nations Compensation Fund, established in accordance with resolution 687(1991) of 3 April 1991 and subsequent resolutions shall continue to apply, and further decides that 5 per cent of the value of any non-monetary payments of petroleum, petroleum products and natural gas made to service providers shall be deposited into the Compensation Fund and that, unless the Government of Iraq and the Governing Council of the United Nations Compensation Commission, in the exercise of its authority over methods of ensuring that payments are made into the Compensation Fund, decide otherwise, the above requirements shall be binding on the Government of Iraq;

4. Calls upon the Government of Iraq to work closely with the Secretary-General to finalize the full and effective transition to a post-Development Fund for Iraq mechanism by or before 30 June 2011, which takes into account International Monetary Fund Stand-By Arrangement requirements, includes external auditing arrangements and ensures that Iraq will continue to meet its obligations as established in the provisions of paragraph 21 of resolution 1483(2003); and further requests that the Government provide a written report to the Security Council no later than 1 May 2011 on progress towards the transition to a post-Development Fund mechanism;

5. Directs the transfer of the full proceeds from the Development Fund for Iraq to the Government of Iraq's successor arrangements account or accounts and the termination of the Development Fund no later than 30 June 2011, and requests written confirmation to the Council once the transfer and termination are completed;

6. Requests the Secretary-General to provide written reports on an ongoing basis to the Council every six months, with the first report due no later than 1 January 2012, about the United Nations Compensation Fund, evaluating the continued compliance with the provisions of paragraph 21 of resolution 1483(2003);

7. Decides to remain actively seized of the matter.

ANNEX

Letter dated 8 December 2010 from Mr. Nuri Kamel al-Maliki, Prime Minister of Iraq, to the President of the Security Council

I should like to refer to my letter dated 13 December 2009 addressed to the President of the Security Council, in which I explained that in 2010 the Government of Iraq would put in place appropriate arrangements, in keeping with the Constitution, for the Development Fund for Iraq and the International Advisory and Monitoring Board, with a view to ensuring the continued equitable use of oil revenue in the interests of the Iraqi people, in accordance with international best practices with regard to transparency, accountability and integrity.

Pursuant to Security Council resolution 1905(2009), the Government of Iraq submitted in its first quarterly report the requisite action plan and timeline for the transition to the successor arrangements for the Development Fund for Iraq and the International Advisory and Monitoring Board. It subsequently submitted its second and third reports on the progress that had been made. In the third report, details were given of the parts of the action plan that had been completed and those that remained incomplete. Reference was also made to the situation in Iraq and the fact that the delay in the formation of a new Government after the legislative elections that took place on 7 March 2010 had, in one way or another, affected the ability of Government institutions to take rapid and effective action with regard to the comprehensive implementation of the action plan.

On the basis of the foregoing, and in order to make it possible to ensure the comprehensive implementation of the action plan and a smooth transition to the successor arrangements, the Government of Iraq is once more in need of the assistance of the international community. It therefore hopes that the Security Council will extend for a further and final six months, ending on 30 June 2011, immunity for the Development Fund for Iraq, on the basis of the arrangements set forth in paragraph 20 of Security Council resolution 1483(2003).

I should be grateful if you would circulate this letter to the members of the Security Council with the greatest possible expedition and include it as an annex to the resolution currently being drafted on Iraq.

Security Council Committee established pursuant to resolution 1518(2003)

The Chairman of the Security Council Committee established pursuant to resolution 1518(2003) [YUN 2003, p. 362] submitted to the Council the Committee's annual report for 2010 [S/2011/40]. The Committee was established to continue to identify, in accordance with paragraphs 19 and 23 of resolution 1483(2003) [ibid., p. 338], individuals and entities associated with the former Iraqi regime whose funds, other financial assets and economic resources should be frozen and transferred to the Development Fund for Iraq. At year's end, the Committee's list of individuals contained 89 names; its list of entities contained 208 names.

Several issues brought to the Committee's attention in 2007 [YUN 2007, p. 354] remained pending in 2010. The Chairman had undertaken consultations with the relevant Committee members with a view to resolving those outstanding matters promptly. Although the Committee did not hold any meetings in 2010, it continued to consider relevant issues brought to its attention. The assets-freeze and transfer lists of individuals and entities were available on the Committee's website.

Non-proliferation and disarmament obligations

On 19 January [S/2010/37], Iraq transmitted to the Security Council President a letter from its Foreign Affairs Minister, referring to the Secretary-General's July 2009 report [S/2009/385] on the review of resolutions adopted by the Council pertaining to Iraq, starting with resolution 661(1990) [YUN 1990, p. 192]; the actions necessary for Iraq to achieve international standing equal to that which it held prior to the adoption of resolution 661(1990); and outstanding issues related to its disarmament obligations.

Since Iraq had fulfilled its obligations under the relevant Council resolutions, the international community should lift the restrictions imposed by resolutions 661(1990) and 707(1991). He detailed the steps taken by Iraq with regard to disarmament and non-proliferation, reiterated that Iraq supported the international non-proliferation regime and had complied with disarmament treaties and other relevant international instruments, and indicated that Iraq was committed to taking additional steps to comply with non-proliferation and disarmament standards. The Government would inform the Council, the International Atomic Energy Agency (IAEA) and other relevant agencies on progress made towards implementing those measures. He requested that the Council give immediate consideration to the removal of all restrictions on Iraq pertaining to disarmament, weapons of mass destruction and ballistic missiles, including resolutions 687(1991) [YUN 1991, p. 172] and 707(1991) [ibid., p. 188].

SECURITY COUNCIL ACTION

On 26 February [meeting 6279], following consultations among Security Council members, the President made statement S/PRST/2010/5 on behalf of the Council:

The Security Council reaffirms its commitment to the independence, sovereignty, unity and territorial integrity of Iraq, and emphasizes the importance of the stability and security of Iraq for its people, the region and the international community.

The Council welcomes the letter dated 18 January 2010 from the Minister for Foreign Affairs of Iraq, which confirms that the Government of Iraq supports the international non-proliferation regime and complies with disarmament treaties and other relevant international instruments, is committed to taking additional steps to comply with non-proliferation and disarmament standards, and has also committed to inform the Council, the International Atomic Energy Agency and other relevant agencies of progress made towards implementing those measures in accordance with the Government's constitutional and legislative procedures and in compliance with international norms and obligations.

The Council welcomes Iraq's accession to the Convention on the Prohibition of the Development, Production, Stockpiling and Use of Chemical Weapons and on Their Destruction, becoming the 186th State party on 12 February 2009.

The Council also welcomes the intention of the Government of Iraq to sign the Hague Code of Conduct against Ballistic Missile Proliferation.

The Council also welcomes the fact that Iraq signed the Additional Protocol to its comprehensive safeguards agreement with the International Atomic Energy Agency in 2008 and that the Additional Protocol is currently before Parliament for ratification, as is the Comprehensive Nuclear-Test-Ban Treaty. The Council further welcomes the fact that, consistent with Iraqi law, Iraq has agreed to apply the Additional Protocol provisionally, pending its entry into force.

The Council underlines, in particular, the importance of Iraq ratifying the Additional Protocol. The Council also requests that the International Atomic Energy Agency inform the Council as soon as possible regarding the quality of Iraq's safeguards-related cooperation with the Agency, including provisional implementation of the Additional Protocol pending its entry into force.

The Council underlines its readiness, once the necessary steps have been taken, to review, with a view towards lifting, the restrictions in resolutions 687(1991) and 707(1991) related to weapons of mass destruction and civil nuclear activities.

IAEA response. In a letter dated 11 March [S/2010/150], the IAEA Director General reported that the Agency had been receiving excellent cooperation from Iraq in the implementation of its comprehensive safeguards agreement, thus allowing IAEA to effectively conduct its safeguards activities. Iraq's decision to provisionally apply, as from 17 February 2010, the protocol additional to its safeguards agreement pending the protocol's entry into force was an example of Iraq's proactive safeguards-related cooperation with IAEA. Iraq was also in the process, with IAEA assistance, of updating its national legislation relevant to the application of safeguards.

Communications. In a letter dated 25 July [S/2010/403], the Iraqi Foreign Minister informed the Council of action taken by the Government demonstrating its commitment to the principles of disarmament and non-proliferation, including Iraq's submission of its first report to the Organization for the Prohibition of Chemical Weapons (OPCW) on dismantling the chemical weapons programme inherited from the previous regime on 28 June; the Government's decision to accede to the Hague Code of Conduct (HCOC) against Ballistic Missile Proliferation [YUN 2002, p. 504] on 13 July; and Iraq's official submission of its notification to IAEA in accordance with the Comprehensive Safeguards Agreement Additional Protocol, article 17, on 16 July.

On 2 September, Iraq transmitted to the Council a 12 August letter [S/2010/464] from France, the HCOC against Ballistic Missile Proliferation Chair, congratulating Iraq on its announcement on 11 August that it had subscribed to the Code, becoming the 131st State to subscribe to the instrument (see p. 533).

On 8 December [S/2010/618], the Iraqi Foreign Minister informed the Council of further developments with regard to disarmament issues, including among others, its membership on the OPCW Executive Council and the Government's approval of a draft law concerning accession to the Convention on the Physical Protection of Nuclear Material. Having fulfilled all its obligations, Iraq hoped that the Council would lift the outstanding disarmament restrictions imposed by Council resolutions 687(1991) and 707(1991).

SECURITY COUNCIL ACTION

On 15 December [meeting 6450], the Security Council unanimously adopted resolution 1957(2010). The draft [S/2010/633] was submitted by Austria, Bosnia and Herzegovina, China, France, Gabon, Japan, Lebanon, Nigeria, the Russian Federation, Turkey, Uganda, the United Kingdom and the United States.

The Security Council,

Recalling its previous resolutions on the situation in Iraq,

Recalling also the statement by its President of 26 February 2010, which welcomed Iraq's progress on compliance with non-proliferation and disarmament commitments,

Recognizing the importance of Iraq achieving international standing equal to that which it held prior to the adoption of resolution 661(1990) on 6 August 1990,

Welcoming the letter dated 18 January 2010 from the Minister for Foreign Affairs of Iraq to the President of the Security Council, which confirms that the Government of Iraq supports the international non-proliferation regime and complies with disarmament treaties and other relevant international instruments, is committed to taking additional steps in this regard to comply with non-proliferation and disarmament standards, and has also committed to inform the Security Council, the International Atomic Energy Agency and other relevant agencies of progress made towards implementing those measures in accordance with the Government's constitutional and legislative procedures and in compliance with international norms and obligations,

Welcoming also the letter dated 11 March 2010 from the Director General of the International Atomic Energy Agency to the Secretary-General, which notes that the Agency has been receiving excellent cooperation from Iraq in the implementation of its comprehensive safeguards agreement, and proceeding on the basis of the decision by the Government of Iraq to provisionally apply, as of 17 February 2010, the Additional Protocol to its comprehensive safeguards agreement pending the entry into force of the Additional Protocol,

Welcoming further Iraq's accession to the Convention on the Prohibition of the Development, Production, Stockpiling and Use of Chemical Weapons and on Their Destruction, becoming the one hundred and eighty-sixth State party on 12 February 2009,

Welcoming the fact that Iraq has subscribed to the Hague Code of Conduct against Ballistic Missile Proliferation, becoming the one hundred and thirty-first State to do so on 11 August 2010,

Welcoming also the fact that Iraq signed the Additional Protocol to its comprehensive safeguards agreement with the International Atomic Energy Agency in 2008 and that the Additional Protocol is currently before Parliament for approval, as is the Comprehensive Nuclear-Test-Ban Treaty, and welcoming the fact that Iraq has agreed to apply the Additional Protocol provisionally, pending ratification,

Reaffirming the importance of the ratification by Iraq as soon as possible of the Additional Protocol,

Acting under Chapter VII of the Charter of the United Nations,

1. Decides to terminate the weapons of mass destruction, missile and civil nuclear-related measures imposed by paragraphs 8, 9, 10, 12 and 13 of resolution 687(1991) of 3 April 1991 and paragraph 3 (f) of resolution 707(1991) of 15 August 1991 and as reaffirmed in subsequent relevant resolutions;

2. Urges Iraq to ratify the Additional Protocol to its comprehensive safeguards agreement and the Comprehensive Nuclear-Test-Ban Treaty as soon as possible;

3. Decides to review in one year's time progress made by Iraq on its commitment to ratify the Additional Protocol and meet its obligations under the Convention on the Prohibition of the Development, Production, Stockpiling and Use of Chemical Weapons and on Their Destruction, and requests the Secretary-General to report to the Security Council in this regard;

4. Decides also to remain actively seized of the matter.

Oil-for-food programme

Under the oil-for-food programme, established by Security Council resolution 986(1995) [YUN 1995, p. 475], Iraq had been authorized to sell petroleum and petroleum products to finance humanitarian assistance, thereby alleviating the adverse consequences of the sanctions imposed by the Council. The programme was phased out in November 2003 [YUN 2003, p. 362].

On 13 September, by decision 64/569, the Council deferred consideration of the “Follow-up to the recommendations on administrative management and internal oversight of the Independent Inquiry Committee into the UN Oil-for-Food Programme” to its sixty-fifth (2010) session. On 24 December, the Assembly decided the item would remain for consideration during its resumed sixty-fifth (2011) session (decision 65/544).

UN Iraq Account

Following the termination of all activities under the oil-for-food programme [ibid., p. 366], the United Nations retained responsibility for the administration and execution of letters of credit issued under the programme by the bank holding the UN Iraq Account, Banque Nationale de Paris Paribas, for purchasing humanitarian supplies for the south/centre of Iraq, until such letters were executed or expired, in accordance with Security Council resolution 1483(2003) [ibid., p. 338]. At that stage, some 3,009 prioritized contracts, with associated letters of credit valued at approximately $8 billion, were considered essential for the reconstruction and/or humanitarian needs of the Iraqi people.

On 8 December 2010 [S/2010/619], the Secretary-General informed the Council about the status as at 7 December of the remaining activity relating to the letters of credit issued against the UN Iraq Account under resolution 1483(2003). Since May 2009, the number of outstanding letters of credit had been reduced from 92, worth some $313 million, to 43, worth approximately $101 million. Of those 43 letters of credit, all had expired according to their terms, and six could not be paid owing to the advising bank not being able to locate the beneficiaries or the beneficiaries not providing the documentation required by the relevant letter of credit. He noted that the Iraqi Government, in its June 2010 report (see p. 371), had informed the Council that no confirmations of arrival would be issued, to the extent that no record of delivery was available, in relation to the remaining 37 letters of credit with claims of delivery. Subject to the definitive confirmation by the Iraqi Government that no more confirmations of arrival would be issued, the Council might consider declaring all such letters of credit closed for all relevant purposes. All funds associated with those letters of credit contained in the UN Iraq Account would then become available for transfer to the Development Fund for Iraq (DFI). The Secretary-General presented a series of actions the Council might take to ensure the prompt and orderly conclusion of all residual activities under the programme.

Since 2003, a total of $10.4 billion dollars had been transferred from the UN Iraq Account to DFI. As at 7 December 2010, the Account contained $790 million, of which some $101 million was held in the cash collateral portion of the Account to cover the amount of claims of delivery made by suppliers, and $689 million in the non-collateral portion of the Account.

On 8 December, Iraq transmitted a letter dated 6 December [S/2010/620] to the Council regarding the arrangement of the closure of the oil-for-food programme before the end of 2010, and confirming the Government's commitment to the arrangement of suitable funding for indemnity to the United Nations.

By resolution 1958(2010) of 15 December (see p. 376), the Security Council requested the Secretary-General to take actions to terminate all residual activities under the oil-for-food programme, including establishing an escrow account retaining $20 million for the Organization's expenses related to the termination of those activities and $131 million for providing indemnification to the United Nations, its representatives, agents and independent contractors until 31 December 2016. All remaining funds in the UN Iraq Account beyond those retained amounts would be transferred to DFI.

Report of Board of Auditors

On 6 December, the Secretary-General transmitted to the Security Council the report of the Board of Auditors [S/2010/627] on the financial statements of the United Nations escrow (Iraq) accounts for the year ended 31 December 2009, reflecting the transactions covering the sixth year of the phase-down operations following the termination of the oil-for-food programme in November 2003 [YUN 2003, p. 366]. The number of letters of credit had been reduced during 2009 from 95 to 69; however, the liquidation remained hampered by the delay in the issuance of authentication documents by the Iraqi Government, despite the repeated calls of the Security Council and the Secretary-General.

In 2009, total income was $44 million and total expenditure was $21.5 million. Total expenditure for humanitarian activities of $13.6 million included $11.8 million relating to currency exchange adjustments and $1.8 million relating to the purchase of spare parts. From the inception of the oil-for-food programme up to 31 December 2009, total expenditures for the purchase of humanitarian supplies and oil spares amounted to $43.9 billion.

Total cash resources (cash and term deposits and cash pool) at year's end amounted to $955.9 million, an 8 per cent decrease from $1 billion as at the end of 2007. Despite the decline, the cash resources of the "Humanitarian activities in Iraq" account, amounting to $932.4 million, were sufficient to cover the $268 million of current and prior-year unliquidated obligations arising from approved contracts for humanitarian supplies and oil spares. As at 31 December, the total reserves and fund balances of the "Humanitarian activities in Iraq" account and the "Administrative and operational costs" account totalled $686.7 million.

The Board made three recommendations based on its audit: that the Administration settle the outstanding accounts payable and receivable of the United Nations Monitoring, Verification and Inspection Commission and transfer all remaining unencumbered funds to DFI in accordance with Council resolution 1762(2007) [YUN 2007, p. 356]; that it keep the matter of transferring the unencumbered funds to DFI under review; and that it disclose as a separate note to the financial statements the reasons for reclassification and restatement of any comparative.

SECURITY COUNCIL ACTION

On 15 December [meeting 6450], the Security Council adopted resolution 1958(2010) by vote (14-0-1). The draft [S/2010/636] was submitted by Austria, Bosnia and Herzegovina, China, France, Gabon, Japan, Lebanon, Nigeria, the Russian Federation, Turkey, Uganda, the United Kingdom and the United States.

The Security Council,

Recalling its previous resolutions on the situation in Iraq, in particular resolutions 986(1995) of 14 April 1995, 1472(2003) of 28 March 2003, 1476(2003) of 24 April 2003, 1483(2003) of 22 May 2003 and 1546(2004) of 8 June 2004, and the report of the Secretary-General of 27 July 2009 submitted pursuant to paragraph 5 of resolution 1859(2008) of 22 December 2008,

Recalling also the need for the "oil-for-food" programme (hereinafter "the programme") established under resolution 986(1995) as a temporary measure to provide for the humanitarian needs of the Iraqi people,

Recognizing the importance of Iraq achieving international standing equal to that which it held prior to the adoption of resolution 661(1990) on 6 August 1990,

Recognizing also the importance of the activities of the office of the Secretary-General's High-level Coordinator established pursuant to resolution 1284(1999) of 17 December 1999,

Recalling the letter dated 8 December 2010 from the Secretary-General to the President of the Security Council and the note attached thereto, the third report of the Secretary-General, of 1 November 2010, submitted pursuant to paragraph 3 of resolution 1905(2009) of 21 December 2009, and the third quarterly report of the Government of Iraq submitted pursuant to paragraph 5 of resolution 1905(2009),

Taking note of the letter dated 6 December 2010 from the Government of Iraq to the President of the Security Council,

Acting under Chapter VII of the Charter of the United Nations,

1. Requests the Secretary-General to take all actions necessary to terminate all residual activities under the programme, noting that all letters of credit with outstanding claims of delivery listed in annex I to the note by the Secretary-General of 8 December 2010 have expired according to their terms and that no confirmation of arrival will be provided by the Government of Iraq and are closed for all purposes under the programme, including for purposes of transferring the funds associated with such letters of credit from the collateral portion of the United Nations Iraq Account to the non-collateral portion of the Iraq Account, without prejudice to any rights or claims that the suppliers with claims of delivery may have for payment, or otherwise, against the Government of Iraq under their respective commercial contracts with the Government of Iraq;

2. Notes the provision by the Government of Iraq of certificates of arrival on file with the United Nations as of 15 December 2010, for which payment has not been effected either as a result of the advising bank not being able to locate the relevant beneficiaries or as a result of the beneficiary not providing requisite documentation, as referenced in the note by the Secretary-General of 8 December 2010, in paragraphs 11 and 12 and annexes II and III, and calls upon the Government of Iraq to provide without delay direct payment if contacted by the beneficiaries or their representatives;

3. Authorizes the Secretary-General to establish an escrow account for the purposes of paragraphs 4 and 5 of the present resolution, to appoint independent and certified public accountants to audit it, and to keep the Government of Iraq fully informed;

4. Also authorizes the Secretary-General to ensure that 20 million United States dollars of the Iraq Account are retained in the escrow account until 31 December 2016, exclusively for the expenses of the United Nations related to the orderly termination of the residual activities of the programme, including the Organization's support to Member State investigations and Member State proceedings related to the programme, and the expenses of the office of the High-level Coordinator created pursuant to resolution 1284(1999), and further requests that all remaining funds be transferred to the Government of Iraq by 31 December 2016;

5. Further authorizes the Secretary-General to ensure that up to 131 million United States dollars of the Iraq Account are retained in the escrow account for the purpose of providing indemnification to the United Nations, its representatives, agents and independent contractors for a period of six years with regard to all activities in connection with the programme since its inception, and further requests that all remaining funds be transferred to the Government of Iraq by 31 December 2016;

6. Authorizes the Secretary-General to facilitate the transfer as soon as possible of all funds remaining, beyond those retained for the purposes of paragraphs 4 and 5 above, from the Iraq Account created pursuant to paragraph 16 (d) of resolution 1483(2003) to the Development Fund for Iraq;

7. Requests the Secretary-General to take all necessary actions to ensure the effective implementation of the present resolution and to enter into all necessary implementing arrangements or agreements as soon as possible with the Government of Iraq;

(a) To provide appropriate indemnification, as referenced in paragraph 5 above, to the United Nations, its representatives, agents and independent contractors with regard to all activities in connection with the programme since its inception; and

(b) To provide for a waiver of any future claims the Government of Iraq may have against the United Nations, its representatives, agents and independent contractors with regard to all activities in connection with the programme since its inception, as referenced in paragraphs 19, 20 and 21 of the attachment to the note by the Secretary-General of 25 July 2008, and requests him to report to the Council when he has done so;

8. Also requests the Secretary-General to report and provide analysis to the Council on the usage and expenditure of the escrow account referenced in paragraphs 4 and 5 above on an annual basis, with the first report no later than 31 March 2012, and the final report occurring three months after the transfer of any remaining funds retained for the purposes of paragraphs 4 and 5 to the Government of Iraq by 31 December 2016, unless otherwise authorized by the Council;

9. Decides to remain actively seized of the matter.

Iraq–Kuwait

POWs, Kuwaiti property and missing persons

In response to Security Council resolution 1284(1999) [YUN 1999, p. 230], the Secretary-General reported in 2010 on Iraq's compliance with its obligations regarding the issue of missing Kuwaiti and third-country nationals and the repatriation of Kuwaiti property seized by Iraq during its occupation of Kuwait as of August 1990 [YUN 1990, p. 189]. The High-level Coordinator for compliance by Iraq with its obligations regarding the return of Kuwaiti nationals and property, Gennady Tarasov (Russian Federation), briefed the Council in June [SC/9955] and in December [SC/10130].

On 4 February [S/2010/83], Iraq informed the Council that its Ministry of Foreign Affairs had made a public announcement in the official newspaper, Al-Sabah, calling on anyone who possessed Kuwaiti documents or property seized by the former regime during the 1990 occupation of Kuwait to contact the Ministry so that they could be returned to Kuwait.

Reports of Secretary-General. In his June report [S/2010/300] the Secretary-General said that at the January meeting of the Technical Subcommittee of the Tripartite Commission, which was the primary mechanism for dealing with the issue of persons unaccounted for from the 1990–1991 Gulf war, Kuwait presented its plan of action for the search for the remains of Kuwaiti prisoners and missing persons (annex I). The plan, which included among other documents lists of names and sketches of Iraqi security officials active during the occupation of Kuwait, was accepted by the Committee as a non-binding document. Activities by Iraq in the search for missing Kuwaiti and third-country nationals included publishing their pictures and names on the website of the Ministry of Human Rights. Iraq also formed an Inter-Ministerial Committee to deal with the issue, which had met several times since 16 February. The Kuwaiti plan was made available to participants. The Secretary-General observed that the positive results attained to date had been primarily of a preparatory nature. He expressed concern that the Kuwaiti national archives had not been found and no credible information about their whereabouts had emerged. He also reported that no confirmed remains of Kuwaiti or third-country nationals (of the 369 people still on the list of the missing) had been found since his October 2009 report [YUN 2009, p. 375].

In his December report [S/2010/635], the Secretary-General said that by a 26 November note verbale (annexed to the report), Iraq transmitted a letter “regarding the missing Kuwaiti prisoners of war in Iraq”, attached to which was a summary of key measures taken by the Iraqi Government in 2009 and 2010 with respect to the matter. In other activity, Iraqi officials informed the Coordinator that an announcement in Al-Sabah elicited a response from the Iraqi Ministry for Industry and Mines, which claimed it had equipment belonging to Kuwait. The Secretary-General reiterated his concern that no progress had been made in finding the Kuwaiti national archives. In that connection, he urged the Iraqi Government to set up an official body to lead and coordinate efforts to clarify the fate of the Kuwaiti archives and other missing property. He also recommended that the Council extend the financing of the Coordinator's mandate until June 2011.

Year-end developments. In a later report [S/2011/213], the Secretary-General said that from 20 to 22 December, a joint Iraq–Kuwait team conducted an exploratory field assessment to a possible site of Kuwaiti mass graves in Nassiriyah, pursuant to a decision of the Technical Subcommittee at its 28 September session in Kuwait. The field visit took place under the auspices of the International Committee of the Red Cross with logistical support from UNAMI. It was anticipated that there would be further field work at the site in April 2011.

Financing of High-level Coordinator. In response to the Secretary-General's December 2009 letter [YUN 2009, p. 376] on financing the activities of the High-level Coordinator and his staff, the Council, on 4 February 2010 [S/2010/72], informed him that it had decided to earmark $251,400 from the operating reserves and the fund balance of the 2.2 per cent part of the escrow account intended for administration and operational costs to finance the continuation of those activities until 30 June 2010.

On 10 June [S/2010/310], Kuwait advised the Council that its Government supported extending the financing of the Coordinator's mandate for one year, considering the important humanitarian dimensions of the subject and reaffirming the need to comply with the relevant Council resolutions. Kuwait also viewed the extension as necessary to allow more time for the confidence- and cooperation-building period to bear fruit and produce tangible results.

On 7 July [S/2010/377], the Secretary-General said that the mandated activities for the Coordinator and his staff had led to expenditures of $476,301 from 25 April 2008 to 31 May 2010, provided through transfers from the Iraq escrow account. Given the need to intensify those activities, it would be necessary to allocate resources of $233,600 to finance them through 31 December 2010. Should the Council agree, those funds could be earmarked from the operating reserves and fund balance of the 2.2 per cent part of the escrow account and would be transferred and made available to the Department of Political Affairs. On 12 July, the Council informed the Secretary-General of its concurrence with the proposal [S/2010/378].

UN Compensation Commission and Fund

The United Nations Compensation Commission, established in 1991 [YUN 1991, p. 195] for the resolution and payment of claims against Iraq for losses and damages resulting from its 1990 invasion and occupation of Kuwait [YUN 1990, p. 189], continued in 2010 to expedite the settlement of claims through the United Nations Compensation Fund, which was established at the same time as the Commission. Under Council resolution 1483(2003) [YUN 2003, p. 338], the Fund received 5 per cent of the proceeds generated by export sales of Iraqi petroleum, petroleum products and natural gas.

On 28 January, the Commission paid out $647.2 million to Kuwait for distribution to 10 claimants; $590 million on 29 April to Kuwait for distribution to 9 claimants; $650 million on 29 July to Kuwait for distribution to 9 claimants; and $590 million on 28 October to Kuwait for distribution to 9 claimants. That payment brought the overall amount of compensation made available by the Commission for successful claims of individuals, corporations, Governments and international organizations to $30.7 billion, leaving an outstanding balance of approximately $21.7 billion remaining to be paid.

Governing Council. The Commission's Governing Council held two sessions in Geneva during the year—the sixty-ninth (27–29 April) [S/2010/208] and the seventieth (9–11 November) [S/2010/587]—at which it considered reports on the activities of the Commission, the distribution by Governments and international organizations of payments to claimants, the transparency of the distribution process and the return of undistributed funds. The Council also heard briefings from the Secretariat on progress made by participating Governments under the Follow-up Programme for Environmental Awards and possible options for its future. The Programme was established by a 2005 decision [S/AC.26/Dec. 258(2005)] to monitor the implementation of approximately $4.3 billion of environmental remediation and restoration projects being undertaken by the Governments of Iran, Jordan, Kuwait and Saudi Arabia. The Council anticipated that it would take a decision on the issue at its next (2011) session. The Council noted that the final management letter of the Board of Auditors on the review of interim accounts for the period to 31 December 2008 confirmed that the Compensation Commission had no outstanding recommendations. The Council did not adopt any decisions in 2010.

Oversight activities. The Office of Internal Oversight Services (OIOS), in an August report on its activities for the period 1 July 2009–30 June 2010 [A/65/271 (Part I) & Corr.1], stated that in its audit of claims payments from July 2009 to May 2010, the Office found that the Commission had adequate control mechanisms to ensure that award and payment records as well as reports were accurate, properly documented and compliant with Governing Council decisions and UN Financial Regulations and Rules. The Commission secretariat had also implemented the previous audit recommendation issued by OIOS, requiring it to pursue efforts to obtain the outstanding audit certificates and distribution reports. As at 31 May, the Commission had paid $29 billion.

On 24 December, the General Assembly decided that the item on the "Consequences of the Iraqi occupation of and aggression against Kuwait" would remain for consideration during its resumed sixty-fifth (2011) session (decision 65/544).

Timor-Leste

During 2010, the United Nations Integrated Mission in Timor-Leste (UNMIT), established by Security Council resolution 1704(2006) [YUN 2006, p. 422], continued to carry out its mandate to assist the Government in consolidating stability, enhancing democratic governance and facilitating political dialogue. It also provided support to the national police; helped strengthen the country's human rights capacity; and cooperated with UN bodies and their partners in peacebuilding and capacity-building.

Political and security developments

Report of Secretary-General (February). Pursuant to Security Council resolution 1867(2009) [YUN 2009, p. 377], the Secretary-General submitted a February report [S/2010/85] on major developments in Timor-Leste and on the activities of UNMIT since his previous report [YUN 2009, p. 380]. The report presented proposals on the future role of UNMIT during 2010–2012, including possible adjustments in its mandate and strength. It also presented the findings and recommendations of the technical assessment mission to Timor-Leste from 10 to 17 January, led by Ian Martin, former Special Envoy for Timor-Leste and Head of the United Nations Mission in East Timor (UNAMET) [YUN 1999, p. 281].

Political developments were generally indicative of continuing stability. On 19 January, President José Ramos-Horta arranged a meeting with Prime Minister Kay Rala Xanana Gusmão and the Frente Revolucionaria de Timor-Leste Independente (Fretilin) Secretary-General, Mari Alkatiri, during which they agreed to continue discussions on issues of national interest. In a speech to the diplomatic community on the same date, the President said he would continue his engagement with national and local leaders and other stakeholders in forging peace and national unity. The security situation in the country remained stable as reported incidents dropped to an average of 87 per week compared with 97 per week in the previous reporting period. On 20 January, the Polícia Nacional de Timor-Leste (PNTL) had resumed policing in four districts. For those districts and units where PNTL was assessed as not yet ready for resumption, UNMIT police and PNTL had jointly developed and were implementing measures to enhance PNTL institutional capacities.

Limited progress was made towards holding accountable those responsible for criminal acts and human rights violations committed during the 2006 crisis [YUN 2006, p. 418], as recommended by the Independent Special Commission of Inquiry.

As at 20 January, final judgements had been rendered in three cases, which resulted in convictions against nine persons; four trials were ongoing; and 13 cases were under investigation. The UNMIT Serious Crimes Investigation Team continued investigations into cases of serious human rights violations committed in 1999 in 9 out of 13 districts. Out of 396 outstanding cases, investigations had been concluded in 110 and were ongoing in 23 others.

The findings and recommendations of the technical assessment focused on the Mission's four mandated priority areas as reflected in the medium-term strategy: security sector review and reform; strengthening the rule of law; promoting a culture of democratic governance and dialogue; and economic and social development. As UNMIT was an integrated mission that continued to apply a "one UN system" approach within an integrated strategic framework covering all mandated areas, the assessment mission considered UNMIT activities in conjunction with those of the UN agencies, funds and programmes. The assessment mission confirmed the broad desire of the Timorese leadership and other national stakeholders for the United Nations to maintain the integrated support provided through UNMIT in all major areas of its mandate, spearheaded by the continuation of a strong good offices role on the part of the Special Representative. At the same time, there was a clear emphasis on the need for UN support to be delivered with full respect for national sovereignty and growing national capacity, as well as with cultural sensitivity. The Secretary-General said that his Special Representative would establish a team to plan the downsizing of UNMIT during the period through 2012 and the transition of functions to the appropriate entity. He recommended an extension of the UNMIT mandate for one year, with the same composition and number of military liaison officers, while gradually decreasing police personnel from 1,608 to 1,280 by mid-2011; and 19 additional civilian posts in the police component to support PNTL development.

Recalling that, while the manifestations of the current challenges in Timor-Leste are political and institutional in nature, poverty and its associated deprivations also contribute to these challenges, paying tribute to Timor-Leste's bilateral and multilateral partners for their invaluable assistance, particularly with regard to human resources development, institutional capacity-building and social and economic development, and recognizing the progress being made in the development of many aspects of governance in Timor-Leste,

5. Supports the ongoing work on the resumption of policing responsibilities by the National Police of Timor-Leste through a phased approach to ensure that the National Police meets the criteria mutually agreed between the Government of Timor-Leste and the Mission as set

6. Endorses the intention of the Secretary-General to reconfigure the Mission police component, including its drawdown, in accordance with the phased process of resumption of policing responsibilities by the National Police of Timor-Leste, and requests the Secretary-General to include in his next report his review of this process;

19. Decides to remain seized of the matter.

Report on UNMIT concept of operations. On 26 May, pursuant to a request in resolution 1912(2010) (see above), the Secretary-General reported [S/2010/254] to the Council on the status of the UNMIT concept of operations and rules of engagement. Since the roles and tasks of the military liaison group had not changed, no adjustments were required to the military concept of operations. The concept of operations of the police component, which was approved in January 2010, had been carefully reviewed by the Department of Peacekeeping Operations and UNMIT and met the requirements of the mandate as outlined in resolution 1912(2010). In line with the 13 May 2009 policing agreement [YUN 2009, p. 379], joint assessment teams of civilian and police representatives from the Government and UNMIT continued to determine the readiness of the districts and units for the resumption process based on the agreed criteria. The teams also identified any shortcomings that needed to be addressed by PNTL and the Government, both prior to and before resumption, with UNMIT assistance. A revised version of the concept of operations would provide strategic objectives, as well as operational guidance for implementation of the gradual resumption of PNTL policing responsibilities, and set out the change in PNTL and UNMIT police roles and responsibilities.

Report of Secretary-General (October). In an October report [S/2010/522] on major developments in Timor-Leste and on UNMIT activities since 12 February, the Secretary-General said that the overall situation remained calm, providing an enabling environment for the Government to focus attention on addressing the long-term challenges facing the country. The National Strategic Development Plan for 2011–2030 was developed, and Prime Minister Gusmão, who held public consultations in each of the country's 65 subdistricts from 19 April to 11 September, explained the overarching goals of the draft Plan, spoke about how local communities could participate in the country's development and responded to queries and suggestions from the audiences. The Plan would be submitted to the National Parliament for approval. After a prolonged lack of consensus on a candidate for the post of Anti-Corruption Commissioner, the National Parliament held an election to select Adérito De Jesus Soares, who was sworn in on 22 February. The reporting period also saw progress in the resumption of PNTL primary policing responsibilities in four more districts; the promulgation by President Ramos-Horta of a national security legislative package to strengthen the security sector on 21 April; the launch of the Justice Sector Strategic Plan for Timor-Leste on 17 June; and the continued development of critical State institutions.

The Alliance for a Parliamentary Majority (AMP) Government, formed after the 2007 elections [YUN 2007, p. 366] and comprising three political parties/coalitions, marked its third anniversary on 8 August. In a 6 August speech, President Ramos-Horta said that peace efforts over the previous three years had been encouraging and highlighted the importance of dialogue and mutual respect. On 21 and 22 August, the Catholic Church hosted a retreat with prominent national leaders, including the President; the Prime Minister; the two Deputy Prime Ministers; the Commander of the Timorese armed forces, Falintil-Forças de Defesa de Timor-Leste; and the Fretilin Secretary-General. Although Fretilin continued to deny the AMP Government's legitimacy, it did not make any public calls for elections before the end of the term of parliament in 2012. On 20 May 2010, the Fretilin Secretary-General publicly reiterated the commitment of his party to overcoming past challenges. A divergence of views with Prime Minister Gusmão led to the 6 September resignation of the Deputy Prime Minister for the Coordination of Affairs related to the Administration of the State, but the Deputy Prime Minister's Social Democratic Party had indicated that it would not withdraw from the AMP coalition so as to ensure the stability of the Government. The Government postponed the municipal elections until after the presidential and parliamentary elections to allow for the additional human resource and institutional development it deemed necessary at the district level. It also conducted a voter registration update exercise from 1 February to 1 July, targeting the elderly, women in rural areas and new voters.

The security situation remained stable, with no major incidents of public disorder or spikes in reported crime or violence, including in the districts where PNTL had resumed primary policing responsibilities. As at 20 September, joint assessment teams of civilian and police representatives from the Government and UNMIT had assessed all 13 districts and 6 units. Primary policing responsibilities had resumed in four more districts, bringing the total resumed to eight districts and three units. While UNMIT police continued to perform the mandated task of interim law enforcement, they increasingly focused efforts on supporting the training, institutional development and strengthening of PNTL. Meanwhile, human rights violations by members of the security services remained a concern. UNMIT received allegations of 59 cases of violations by the national police and 13 cases of violations by Falintil-Forças de Defesa de Timor-Leste. Despite indications of the strengthening of PNTL internal disciplinary mechanisms, progress was slow in bringing members of the security services responsible for violations to justice through the courts.

On 3 March, the Dili District Court delivered its verdict in the trial of 28 defendants accused of involvement in the 11 February 2008 attacks against the President and the Prime Minister [YUN 2008, p. 400], with 24 defendants convicted and 4 acquitted. On 27 August, a week after President Ramos-Horta granted commutations of the sentences of 23 of the 24 convicted persons, they were released. With regard to the UNMIT Serious Crimes Investigation Team, as at 20 September, the investigations of 163 out of 396 outstanding cases had been concluded, with an additional 29 cases under investigation.

The Secretary-General said that the continued advances in the four mandated UNMIT priority areas were examples of Timor-Leste's increasing focus on the more long-term issues confronting the country, including, among others, further progress in PNTL resumption of primary policing responsibilities and the promulgation of the national security legislative package. In order to facilitate progress towards full reconstitution of the national police, a reinvigorated partnership between UNMIT police and PNTL was required. At a 17 September meeting on transition planning and UNMIT activities through 2012, Special Representative Haq, President Ramos-Horta and senior government officials agreed to establish a jointly owned planning and implementation mechanism to be overseen by a high-level steering group. The Secretary-General also said there were concerns that the President's 20 August granting of commutations could adversely impact efforts to combat impunity, undermine future investigations and trials of cases recommended by the Commission of Inquiry and lead to a public perception that members of the security forces were treated in a favoured manner.

Security Council consideration (October). In a 19 October briefing [S/PV.6405] to the Council, the Special Representative said that the Government had clarified that municipal elections would not take place until after national elections, projected for mid-2012. Since the national elections would be the first significant test of the ability of PNTL to provide security for a large and multifaceted event, it was advisable to maintain a robust presence of UNMIT police and formed police units of about 800 and 490, respectively, through the period of national elections. In the meantime, UNMIT police would focus on capacity development of the PNTL specialized units that would assume the role of UNMIT formed police units.

Year-end developments. In a later report [S/2011/32], the Secretary-General said that the desire for continued peace, stability and unity was reflected in the messages of national leaders. In December, President Ramos-Horta emphasized the importance of fostering national unity and dialogue, while the Fretilin Secretary-General called for the Timorese to unite to defend the Constitution's principles and the democratic rule of law, and to reject the use of violence for obtaining political power. A major government initiative was the organization of a meeting with all 442 suco (village) chiefs in Dili, from 27 to 29 December, providing an opportunity for the Government and chiefs to discuss the Government's development plans for 2011. Although the draft national strategic development plan had yet to be finalized, the Government had submitted the 2011 State budget proposal to the National Parliament for approval on 15 November 2010, taking the draft plan into account.

held a bilateral meeting, and Indonesia expressed its willingness to support Timor-Leste's desire to become a member of the Association of Southeast Asian Nations. On border demarcation, joint technical work was undertaken between 27 November and 8 December to inspect border markers and make improvements to the geodetic network.

In a 15 September letter to the President of the National Parliament, the Prime Minister said that indictments had been filed against the Deputy Prime Minister and the Foreign Affairs Minister for the crimes of illegal enrichment and abuse of authority. On 23 November, the Foreign Affairs Ministry announced that the Dili District Court had rejected all accusations filed against the Foreign Affairs Minister—a decision that was upheld by the Court of Appeal on 13 December. On 25 November, the Prime Minister said on national television that he had received notification from the Dili District Court to suspend the Deputy Prime Minister, yet before making a decision, the Government would wait for a Court of Appeal judgement on the appeal lodged by the defence team. Meanwhile, efforts to move the electoral process forward continued. On 29 September and 24 November, the Council of Ministers approved amendments to the laws on presidential elections, parliamentary elections and the electoral management bodies that would allow for the organization of the 2012 elections. As UNMIT was requested to provide support for the electoral process, a needs assessment mission would be conducted by the Electoral Assistance Division of the UN Department of Political Affairs early in 2011 to determine the scope and kind of support needed.

The national police resumed primary policing responsibilities in two districts as well as for the Border Patrol Unit, the migration service and the national cabinet of INTERPOL in 28 September. The PNTL strategic development plan for 2011–2012 was presented at the meeting of the High-Level Committee on Transition of the Government and UNMIT held on 25 November. On 23 December, the Secretary of State for Security and the PNTL General Commander announced the planned recruitment of an additional 250 officers, to begin in January 2011. On 21 September, Parliament began plenary deliberations on the draft laws on reparations and on the follow-on institution to the Commission for Reception, Truth and Reconciliation and the Commission of Truth and Friendship. On 29 September, Parliament postponed any further debate on the draft laws until February 2011 following a request by 12 Parliament members that the legislation on veterans be discussed prior to further consideration of the draft laws. In other developments, the concluding conference of the national consensus dialogue on truth, justice and reconciliation was held from 21 to 23 October.

The United Nations Mission in East Timor (UNAMET) was established by Security Council resolution 1246(1999) [YUN 1999, p. 283] to conduct the 1999 popular consultation to ascertain the East Timorese people's will on the future status of East Timor [ibid., p. 288]; its mandate ended on 30 November 1999, in accordance with resolution 1262(1999) [ibid., p. 287].

On 13 September, by decision 64/570, the Council deferred consideration of UNAMET financing until its sixty-fifth (2010) session. On 24 December, it decided that the item would remain for consideration during its resumed sixty-fifth (2011) session (decision 65/544).

UNMIT

The United Nations Integrated Mission in Timor-Leste (UNMIT) was established by Security Council resolution 1704(2006) [YUN 2006, p. 422] to support the Government in consolidating stability, enhancing a culture of democratic governance and facilitating political dialogue; ensure the maintenance of public security; assist the Government in reviewing the role and needs of the security sector; strengthen capacity for promoting human rights, justice and reconciliation; and assist in implementing the Secretary-General's recommendations on justice and reconciliation. The mission continued to be headed by Ameerah Haq (Bangladesh), who served as the Secretary-General's Special Representative for Timor-Leste.

Financing

In June, the General Assembly considered the performance report of the UNMIT budget from 1 July 2008 to 30 June 2009 [A/64/617], with expenditures amounting to $172,814,500, compared to an apportionment of $172,842,000, resulting in an unencumbered balance of $27,500. The Assembly also had before it the proposed UNMIT budget for 1 July 2010 to 30 June 2011 [A/64/686] in the amount of $208,838,400, and the related comments and recommendations of ACABQ [A/64/660/Add.11].

Democratic People's Republic of Korea

In 2010, the United Nations continued to address the non-proliferation of nuclear weapons in the Democratic People's Republic of Korea as well as related issues. In July, the Security Council issued a presidential statement regarding the sinking of a Republic of Korea naval ship.

Non-proliferation

On 22 April [S/2010/205], the Democratic People's Republic of Korea (DPRK) transmitted to the Security Council President a memorandum on "The Korean peninsula and nuclear weapons". It discussed the deadlock facing the six-party talks (China, DPRK, Japan, Republic of Korea, Russian Federation, United States) aimed at achieving a nuclear-weapon-free peninsula and a comprehensive settlement of related issues [YUN 2004, p. 382]; DPRK efforts to end the nuclear imbalance in north-east Asia; and the nuclear policy of the DPRK.

Report of Panel of Experts. Pursuant to Security Council resolution 1874(2009) [YUN 2009, p. 384], the Panel of Experts established under that resolution submitted its final report [S/2010/571] on 12 May. The Panel was mandated to gather, examine and analyse information on implementation of the measures imposed by Council resolutions 1718(2006) [YUN, 2006, p. 444] and 1874(2009), particularly incidents of non-compliance; make recommendations on actions that the Council, the Committee or Member States might consider to improve implementation of those measures; and assist the Security Council Committee established pursuant to resolution 1718(2006) in carrying out its functions.

Since the adoption of resolution 1718(2006), no official allegations had been presented to the Committee concerning the provision of proscribed nuclear-related or ballistic missile-related items, technology or know-how to or from the DPRK. Nonetheless, several government assessments, IAEA reports, research papers and media reports had indicated continuing DPRK involvement in nuclear and ballistic missile-related activities in certain countries, including Iran, Myanmar and the Syrian Arab Republic. Since the adoption of resolution 1874(2009), the Committee had been notified of four non-compliance cases involving arms exports. An analysis of those cases indicated that the DPRK continued to engage in exporting such proscribed items. The Panel recommended extra vigilance at the first overseas maritime port handling such the DPRK shipments or trans-shipments with regard to containers carrying cargo originating from the DPRK; and introduction of procedures to ensure that onward trans-shipment ports were aware of the cargo's origin from the DPRK.

The Panel recommended that Member States over whose territory aircraft might fly, stop or transit consider undertaking efforts to closely monitor air traffic to and from Pyongyang International Airport and other the DPRK airports, and that cargoes to and from the DPRK be declared before overflight clearance was provided. As the eight entities and five individuals designated for sanctions by the Committee in 2009 [YUN 2009, pp. 384 & 387] seriously understated the number of those known to be engaged in proscribed activities, the Panel advised that all Member States be invited to provide to the Committee the names of entities and individuals who were believed to be engaged in such activities, especially those that had been implicated in non-compliance cases reported to the Committee. The Panel issued recommendations in monitoring and oversight; interdiction; disposal of goods; luxury goods; financial measures; outreach; and designation of goods, entities and individuals. It also drew attention to the fact that a substantial number of Member States had not filed the national implementation reports called for in the resolutions.

On 7 June [meeting 6333], the Security Council unanimously adopted resolution 1928(2010). The draft [S/2010/285] was submitted by Japan and the United States.

The Security Council,

Recalling its previous relevant resolutions, including resolutions 825(1993) of 11 May 1993, 1540(2004) of 28 April 2004, 1695(2006) of 15 July 2006, 1718(2006) of 14 October 2006, 1874(2009) of 12 June 2009 and 1887(2009) of 24 September 2009, as well as the statements by its President of 6 October 2006 and 13 April 2009,

Recalling also the interim report of 11 November 2009 of the Panel of Experts on the Democratic People's Republic of Korea appointed by the Secretary-General pursuant to paragraph 26 of resolution 1874(2009) and the final report of the Panel of Experts, of 12 May 2010,

Determining that the proliferation of nuclear, chemical and biological weapons, as well as their means of delivery, continues to constitute a threat to international peace and security,

Acting under Article 41 of Chapter VII of the Charter of the United Nations,

1. Decides to extend until 12 June 2011 the mandate of the Panel of Experts on the Democratic People's Republic of Korea, as specified in paragraph 26 of resolution 1874(2009), and requests the Secretary-General to take the necessary administrative measures to this effect;

2. Requests the Panel of Experts to provide to the Security Council no later than 12 November 2010 a mid-term report on its work, and a final report to the Council no later than thirty days prior to the termination of its mandate, with its findings and recommendations;

3. Urges all States, relevant United Nations bodies and other interested parties to cooperate fully with the Security Council Committee established pursuant to resolution

1718(2006) and the Panel of Experts, in particular by supplying any information at their disposal on the implementation of the measures imposed by resolutions 1718(2006) and 1874(2009);

4. Decides to remain actively seized of the matter.

Panel of Experts. Pursuant to Council resolution 1928(2010) that extended the Panel of Experts mandate until 12 June 2011 (see above), the Secretary-General in July 2010 informed the Council [S/2010/376] that he had reappointed seven experts to the Panel. In October [S/2010/527], the Secretary-General informed the Council that he had appointed two new members to replace two experts who had withdrawn from the Panel.

Sanctions Committee report. Reporting to the Security Council on the activities of the Sanctions Committee in 2010 [S/2011/84], the Committee Chairman said that during the reporting period, 14 Member States reported to the Committee on the steps they had taken to implement provisions of resolutions 1718(2006) and 1874(2009), including financial measures set out in resolution 1874(2009). The Committee also received three new reports of alleged violations. In the first of the three reported cases, after letters requesting additional information were sent to six Member States, the Committee received four replies. In the second and third cases, respectively, the Committee replied in a note verbale to the Member State, and the reporting State informed the Committee that relevant entities under its jurisdiction had acted responsibly and cooperated fully with the Committee and the Panel of Experts in preventing the attempted violation and in the subsequent investigation of the case. On 6 December, the Committee discussed the midterm report of the Panel of Experts submitted to the Security Council on 10 November and relevant issues.

Other issues

Republic of Korea naval ship incident and aftermath

In a 4 June letter [S/2010/281] to the Security Council President, the Republic of Korea stated that a 26 March armed attack by the DPRK against a Republic of Korea naval ship, the Cheonan, resulted in the sinking of the vessel and the deaths of 46 Korean servicemen on board. An investigation had been conducted by the Republic of Korea Joint Civilian-Military Investigation Group with the participation of international experts from Australia, Sweden, the United Kingdom and the United States, and the Multinational Combined Intelligence Task Force (Australia, Canada, Republic of Korea, United Kingdom, United States). Based on the evidence obtained, it was determined that the sinking was caused by an underwater explosion of a torpedo made in the DPRK. The Republic of Korea requested the Council to consider the matter and to deter the recurrence of any further provocation.

In an 8 June response [S/2010/294], the DPRK clarified its position that it had nothing to do with the incident and proposed that the inspection group of the DPRK National Defence Commission be dispatched to conduct an evaluation of the investigation result. The DPRK requested that the Council give priority to determining the truth of the incident.

Further letters were transmitted to the Council from the DPRK on 29 June [S/2010/343] and 6 July [S/2010/358] and from the Republic of Korea on 30 June [S/2010/349].

Security Council consideration. On 9 July [S/PV.6355], the Council, in view of the findings of the Joint Civilian-Military Investigation Group, which concluded that the DPRK was responsible for sinking the Cheonan, condemned the attack, called for full adherence to the 1953 Korean Armistice Agreement [YUN 1953, p. 136] and encouraged the settlement of outstanding issues on the Korean Peninsula by peaceful means and resumed direct dialogue.

SECURITY COUNCIL ACTION

On 9 July [meeting 6355], following consultations among Security Council members, the President made statement S/PRST/2010/13 on behalf of the Council:

The Security Council notes the letter dated 4 June 2010 from the Permanent Representative of the Republic of Korea to the United Nations addressed to the President of the Security Council and the letter dated 8 June 2010 from the Permanent Representative of the Democratic People's Republic of Korea to the United Nations addressed to the President of the Security Council.

The Council deplores the attack of 26 March 2010, which led to the sinking of the Republic of Korea naval ship the Cheonan, resulting in the tragic loss of 46 lives.

The Council determines that such an incident endangers peace and security in the region and beyond.

The Council deplores the loss of life and injuries, expresses its deep sympathy and condolences to the victims and their families and to the people and Government of the Republic of Korea, and calls for appropriate and peaceful measures to be taken against those responsible for the incident aimed at the peaceful settlement of the issue in accordance with the Charter of the United Nations and all other relevant provisions of international law.

In view of the findings of the five-nation Joint Civilian-Military Investigation Group led by the Republic of Korea, which concluded that the Democratic People's Republic of Korea was responsible for sinking the Cheonan, the Council expresses its deep concern.

The Council takes note of the responses from other relevant parties, including from the Democratic People's Republic of Korea, which has stated that it had nothing to do with the incident.

Therefore, the Council condemns the attack which led to the sinking of the Cheonan.

The Council underscores the importance of preventing further such attacks or hostilities against the Republic of Korea or in the region.

The Council welcomes the restraint shown by the Republic of Korea and stresses the importance of maintaining peace and stability on the Korean peninsula and in north-east Asia as a whole.

The Council calls for full adherence to the Korean Armistice Agreement and encourages the settlement of outstanding issues on the Korean peninsula by peaceful means to resume direct dialogue and negotiation through appropriate channels as early as possible, with a view to avoiding conflicts and averting escalation.

The Council reaffirms the importance that all Member States uphold the purposes and principles of the Charter.

Further developments. On 23 July [S/2010/398], the United States submitted a special report by the United Nations Command on the special investigation of the sinking of the Cheonan. The DPRK transmitted related letters on 3 August [S/2010/419] and 2 November [S/2010/568]. The latter contained an announcement by the DPRK Inspection Group of the National Defence Commission, to which the Republic of Korea transmitted a reply on 12 November [S/2010/583].

In December [S/2010/648], the United States submitted a report by the United Nations Command on the special investigation into the 23 November 2010 exchange of artillery fire between the DPRK Korean People's Army at Mu-Do and Gaemeori and the Republic of Korea Marine Corps forces at Yeonpyeong-Do. On 18 December [S/2010/646], the Russian Federation requested an emergency Council meeting to consider the escalating tensions on the Korean peninsula; a closed meeting was held the following day [S/PV.6456].

Nepal

In 2010, the United Nations Mission in Nepal (UNMIN) helped build confidence in the peace process, including through its arms monitoring responsibilities. Unarmed UN arms monitors were deployed in the Maoist army cantonment and satellite sites around the country, as well as at the Nepal Army arms storage depot in Kathmandu. In September, the Security Council extended the Mission's mandate until 15 January 2011 (see p. 393).

Report of Secretary-General (January). On 7 January [S/2010/17], the Secretary-General reported on the peace process in Nepal and UNMIN's activities since 26 October 2009 [YUN 2009, p. 392]. He said that the peace process remained largely stalled and that the tensions, deep differences and mistrust among parties highlighted in his last report persisted. While the major political parties maintained some level of dialogue and communication, no agreement had been reached on critical issues, including integration and rehabilitation of Maoist army personnel, democratization of the Nepal Army and the scope of presidential authority. The proposed high-level political mechanism to serve as a dedicated forum for multiparty dialogue on key peace process issues had not been established. Talks among senior leaders of the Nepali Congress, the Communist Party of Nepal-Unified Marxist-Leninist (UML) and the Unified Communist Party of Nepal-Maoist (UCPN-M) had remained inconclusive. President Ram Baran Yadav and UCPN-M Chairman Pushpa Kamal Dahal had held discussions, but without progress. The protracted stalemate also had an impact on the constitution-drafting process. The Constituent Assembly had concluded discussions on concept papers and draft texts submitted by 8 of 10 thematic committees intended to provide the basic tenets and language of the new constitution. Nonetheless, the committees on the determination of forms of governance of the State and on State restructuring and sharing of State power, as well as the Constitutional Committee itself, had yet to present their papers. Owing to those delays, on 23 December, the Constituent Assembly announced an eighth amendment to its workplan for drafting the new constitution, reducing the public consultation period to three weeks and making the 28 May 2010 deadline for promulgation increasingly tight.

The Secretary-General urged the parties to make every effort to return to their tradition of working by consensus and to lead the peace process to a successful conclusion.

Communication. On 14 January [S/2010/25], the Secretary-General transmitted to the Security Council a 9 January letter from Nepal requesting an extension of the UNMIN mandate until 15 May 2010.

SECURITY COUNCIL ACTION

On 21 January [meeting 6262], the Security Council unanimously adopted resolution 1909(2010). The draft [S/2010/32] was submitted by the United Kingdom.

The Security Council,

Recalling its resolutions 1740(2007) of 23 January 2007, 1796(2008) of 23 January 2008, 1825(2008) of 23 July 2008, 1864(2009) of 23 January 2009 and 1879(2009) of 23 July 2009 and the statement by its President of 5 May 2009,

Reaffirming the sovereignty, territorial integrity and political independence of Nepal and its ownership of the implementation of the Comprehensive Peace Agreement and subsequent agreements,

Noting that the deadline for the promulgation of the new democratic constitution of Nepal is 28 May 2010,

Welcoming the recent formation of a high-level political mechanism to focus on the timely promulgation of the new constitution and to bring the ongoing peace process to its logical conclusion,

Echoing the call by the Secretary-General for all parties in Nepal to move forward swiftly in the implementation of the agreements reached, noting the assessment of the Secretary-General that the United Nations Mission in Nepal is well placed to assist in the monitoring of the management of arms and armed personnel in accordance with the agreement of 25 June 2008 between the political parties, and recognizing the ability of the Mission to assist the parties in this, as requested, in order to achieve a durable solution,

Welcoming the report of the Secretary-General of 7 January 2010 on the Mission,

Recalling the completion of the two phases of the verification process, welcoming continuing assistance with the monitoring of the management of arms and armed personnel of both sides in accordance with resolution 1740(2007) and in line with the provisions of the Comprehensive Peace Agreement, noting the importance of a durable long-term solution in helping to create the conditions for the completion of the activities of the Mission, and noting also in this regard the need to address outstanding issues without further delay,

Welcoming the signing on 16 December 2009 by the Government of Nepal, the Unified Communist Party of Nepal (Maoist) and the United Nations of an action plan for the discharge and rehabilitation process for Maoist army personnel disqualified as minors, and calling upon all political parties to implement this process fully and expeditiously, and for continued reporting on this issue as required under resolutions 1612(2005) of 26 July 2005 and 1882(2009) of 4 August 2009,

Recalling that, with the successful holding of the Constituent Assembly elections, some of the elements of the mandate of the Mission as set out in resolution 1740(2007) have already been accomplished,

Taking note of the letter dated 9 January 2010 from the Government of Nepal to the Secretary-General, in which it recognizes the contribution of the Mission and requests an extension of the mandate of the Mission until 15 May 2010,

Recognizing the need to pay special attention to the needs and the role of women, children and traditionally marginalized groups in the peace process, as mentioned in the Comprehensive Peace Agreement and in resolution 1325(2000) of 31 October 2000,

Recognizing also the need to address impunity, to promote and protect human rights and to strengthen the capacity of independent national human rights institutions in accordance with international principles,

Recognizing further that civil society can play an important role in democratic transition and conflict prevention,

Expressing its appreciation for the contribution of the Representative of the Secretary-General in Nepal and the efforts of her team in the Mission, and the United Nations country team, including the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights, which is monitoring human rights at the request of the Government of Nepal, and stressing the need for coordination and complementarity of efforts between the Mission and all the United Nations actors in the Mission area, particularly in order to ensure continuity, as the mandate comes to an end,

1. Decides, in line with the request of the Government of Nepal and the recommendations of the Secretary-General, to renew the mandate of the United Nations Mission in Nepal, as established under resolution 1740(2007), until 15 May 2010, taking into account the completion of some elements of the mandate and the ongoing work on the monitoring of the management of arms and armed personnel in line with the agreement of 25 June 2008 between the political parties, which will support the completion of the peace process;

2. Calls upon all parties to take full advantage of the expertise and readiness of the Mission, within its mandate, to support the peace process to facilitate the completion of outstanding aspects of the mandate of the Mission by 15 May 2010;

3. Decides that, working with the parties, the Mission should make the necessary arrangements with the Government of Nepal for its withdrawal, including handing over any residual monitoring responsibilities by 15 May 2010;

7. Requests the Secretary-General to report to the Security Council by 1 May 2010 on the implementation of the present resolution;

8. Decides to remain seized of the matter.

Report of Secretary-General (April). In his April report [S/2010/214], the Secretary-General said that some progress had been made in the peace process. The discharge of Maoist army personnel disqualified by the 2007 UNMIN-led verification process began on 6 January 2010 and concluded on 8 February. The high-level political mechanism, the forum for senior political leaders to address key peace process issues, was established on 8 January. Despite continuing efforts, no progress had been made on resolving the future of the two armies and completing the drafting of the constitution by the 28 May deadline.

The constitution-making process had become politically entwined with the issue of the establishment of a unity Government as well as integration and rehabilitation of Maoist army personnel. While there was broad consensus on the need for a national unity Government, there were serious differences among the major parties on who should lead it. In January, Prime Minister Madhav Kumar Nepal submitted to the Special Committee a 112-day action plan for the integration and rehabilitation of Maoist army personnel, which had yet to be approved. The Special Committee tasked to supervise, integrate and rehabilitate Maoist army personnel had not reached agreement on the proposed action plan and had referred some of the unresolved issues to the high-level political mechanism. The most contentious issues remained the number of Maoist army personnel to be integrated into the security forces, in particular the Nepal Army, and the modalities for such integration. No consensus had been reached in the high-level political mechanism. The Prime Minister tasked the Technical Committee to formulate an expedited action plan for integration and rehabilitation, yet discussions remained inconclusive.

During his visit to Nepal from 10 to 12 March, the Under-Secretary-General for Political Affairs, B. Lynn Pascoe, met with the Prime Minister, senior government officials and political and military leaders. He underscored the need for parties to break the deadlock and overcome their outstanding differences. He also discussed the challenges for UNMIN, which continued to operate under an inadequately narrow mandate, and conveyed the Security Council's concern about repeated extensions of the Mission's mandate without tangible progress. In line with resolution 1909(2010) (see p. 388), UNMIN held consultations with the major political parties and the Government on arrangements for its withdrawal and the transfer of its residual monitoring responsibilities to the Government. Senior party representatives and government officials underlined the need for UNMIN to continue its presence and support the peace progress. Among the priorities proposed was the enhancement of the UNMIN arms monitoring function and support to the Special Committee in assuming its constitutional responsibility for supervision of the Maoist army cantonments and in the planning and implementation of the integration of the Maoist army personnel. UNMIN was also urged to facilitate the resolution of impediments to progress.

The security situation in the Terai region, where numerous armed groups had continued to operate largely with impunity, had become increasingly precarious, with 62 killings reported between January and March. The sometimes violent activities of political party-affiliated youth groups remained a source of concern.

The Secretary-General said that besides the stalemate, other challenges to the process included continuing disaffection among traditionally marginalized groups, the heightened visibility of the opposition to some agreed tenets including federalism, republicanism and secularism, and widespread threats of fresh confrontation. He appealed to the Government and parties to resolve the remaining political impediments and take concrete steps towards the fulfilment of commitments through a structured process of consultation and dialogue.

Communication. On 5 May [S/2010/229], the Secretary-General transmitted to the Council a letter from Nepal requesting an extension of the UNMIN mandate until 15 September 2010.

SECURITY COUNCIL ACTION

On 12 May [meeting 6311], the Security Council unanimously adopted resolution 1921(2010). The draft [S/2010/236] was submitted by the United Kingdom.

The Security Council,

Reaffirming the sovereignty, territorial integrity and political independence of Nepal and its ownership of the implementation of the Comprehensive Peace Agreement and subsequent agreements,

Recalling the signing on 21 November 2006 by the Government of Nepal and the Communist Party of Nepal (Maoist) of the Comprehensive Peace Agreement, and the stated commitment of both parties to find a permanent and sustainable peace,

Acknowledging the strong desire of the Nepalese people for peace and the restoration of democracy and the importance in this respect of the implementation of the Comprehensive Peace Agreement and subsequent agreements by the relevant parties,

Expressing its continued readiness to support the peace process in Nepal in the timely and effective implementation of the Comprehensive Peace Agreement and subsequent agreements, in particular the agreement of 25 June 2008 between the political parties, as requested by the Government of Nepal,

Expressing its concern at the recent tensions in Nepal, and calling upon all sides to resolve their differences through peaceful negotiation,

Echoing the call by the Secretary-General for all parties in Nepal to move forward swiftly in the implementation of the agreements reached, noting the assessment of the Secretary-General that the United Nations Mission in Nepal is well placed to assist in the monitoring of the management of arms and armed personnel in accordance with the agreement of 25 June 2008 between the political parties, and recognizing the ability of the Mission to assist the parties in this, as requested, in order to achieve a durable solution,

Welcoming the report of the Secretary-General of 28 April 2010 on the Mission,

Recalling the completion of the two phases of the verification process, welcoming continuing assistance with the monitoring of the management of arms and armed personnel of both sides in accordance with resolution 1740(2007) and in line with the provisions of the Comprehensive Peace Agreement, noting the importance of a durable long-term solution in helping to create the conditions for the completion of the activities of the Mission, and noting also in this regard the need to address outstanding issues without further delay,

Welcoming the completion of the discharge process for disqualified Maoist army personnel as agreed in the action plan for the discharge and rehabilitation of Maoist army personnel disqualified as minors agreed between the Government of Nepal, the Unified Communist Party of Nepal (Maoist) and the United Nations on 16 December 2009, and calling upon all parties to continue implementing this action plan, with the appropriate monitoring and reporting activities, in accordance with resolutions 1612(2005) of 26 July 2005 and 1882(2009) of 4 August 2009,

Recalling that, with the successful holding of the Constituent Assembly elections, some of the elements of the mandate of the Mission as set out in resolution 1740(2007) have already been accomplished,

Taking note of the letter dated 5 May 2010 from the Government of Nepal to the Secretary-General, in which it recognizes the contribution of the Mission and requests an extension of the mandate of the Mission until 15 September 2010,

Recognizing the need to pay special attention to the needs and the role of women, children and traditionally marginalized groups in the peace process, as mentioned in the Comprehensive Peace Agreement and in resolution 1325(2000) of 31 October 2000,

Recognizing also the need to address impunity, to promote and protect human rights and to strengthen the capacity of independent national human rights institutions in accordance with international principles,

Recognizing further that civil society can play an important role in democratic transition and conflict prevention,

Expressing its appreciation for the contribution of the Representative of the Secretary-General in Nepal and the efforts of her team in the Mission, and the United Nations country team, including the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights, which is monitoring human rights at the request of the Government of Nepal, and stressing the need for coordination and complementarity of efforts between the Mission and all the United Nations actors in the Mission area, particularly in order to ensure continuity, as the mandate comes to an end,

1. Decides, in line with the request of the Government of Nepal and the recommendations of the Secretary-General, to renew the mandate of the United Nations Mission in Nepal, as established under resolution 1740(2007), until 15 September 2010, taking into account the completion of some elements of the mandate and the ongoing work on the monitoring of the management of arms and armed personnel in line with the agreement of 25 June 2008 between the political parties, which will support the completion of the peace process;

2. Calls upon all parties to take full advantage of the expertise and readiness of the Mission, within its mandate, to support the peace process to facilitate the completion of outstanding aspects of the mandate of the Mission by 15 September 2010;

3. Underlines the fact that the current arrangements were conceived as temporary measures, rather than long-term solutions, and decides that, working with the parties, the Mission should immediately begin to make the arrangements necessary for its withdrawal, including handing over any residual monitoring responsibilities by 15 September 2010;

4. Calls upon the Government of Nepal and the Unified Communist Party of Nepal (Maoist) to agree and implement a timetabled action plan with clear benchmarks for the integration and rehabilitation of Maoist army personnel, with the support of the Special Committee for the supervision, integration and rehabilitation of Maoist army personnel and its Technical Committee;

5. Calls upon all political parties in Nepal to expedite the peace process and to work together in a spirit of co-operation, consensus and compromise in order to continue the transition to a durable long-term solution to enable the country to move to a peaceful, democratic and more prosperous future;

6. Requests the parties in Nepal to take the steps necessary to promote the safety, security and freedom of movement of Mission and associated personnel in executing the tasks defined in the mandate;

7. Requests the Secretary-General to report to the Security Council by 1 September 2010 on the implementation of the present resolution;

8. Decides to remain seized of the matter.

Report of Secretary-General (September).

In his September report [S/2010/453], the Secretary-General said that Nepal's peace process remained stalled. The major parties were preoccupied by their political differences related to the extension of the term of the Constituent Assembly and the election of a Prime Minister, both of which became linked to the issue of integration and rehabilitation of Maoist army personnel. A constitutional crisis over the expiry of the term of the Constituent Assembly was averted when UCPN-M, UML and the Nepali Congress concluded a three-point agreement by which they committed themselves to move forward by consensus to complete the remaining peace process tasks; extend the Constituent Assembly's tenure by one year; and pave the way for a consensus Government through the resignation of the Prime Minister.

Although the Prime Minister submitted his resignation on 30 June, the deadline set by President Yadav for inter-party negotiations to form a consensus Government passed without an agreement, and Parliament was convened to elect a Prime Minister by an absolute majority vote. The voting started on 21 July, yet after five rounds neither of the two remaining nominees, Ram Chandra Poudel of the Nepali Congress and Pushpa Kamal Dahal "Prachanda" of UCPN-M, had secured a majority. Following the extension of its term until 28 May 2011, the Constituent Assembly amended its schedule of work and identified 13 April 2011 as the date for the promulgation of the new constitution. The Constitutional Committee would prepare the first draft of the constitution by mid-November 2010. The timeline for the remaining steps would be determined by the Business Advisory Committee of the Constituent Assembly.

The Special Committee to supervise, integrate and rehabilitate Maoist army personnel had not achieved a quorum in its meetings because of the non-attendance of some members. No agreement had been reached on previous proposals, including the 112-day action plan and the establishment of a supervisory mechanism and code of conduct for the Maoist army. Discussions had been held bilaterally between the political parties, the three major parties each tabling a separate proposal. The positions converged on bringing Maoist army personnel under Special Committee supervision as a first step, and on their separation into groups based on their preference for political work, for integration into the security forces or for rehabilitation. Disagreements persisted on the number of Maoist personnel to be integrated into the Nepal Army and other security forces, their eligibility criteria, whether they should be integrated individually or in groups, and the sequencing and time frame for the implementation process. In July, the Supreme Court ruled that the matter of whether recruitment by the Nepal Army violated the peace agreements was not within its jurisdiction and fell under the purview of the Joint Monitoring Coordination Committee. The Nepal Army interpreted the verdict as allowing it to begin fresh recruitment and advertised 3,464 positions. The Maoist army announced that it would also begin to recruit. UNMIN wrote to the Government and UCPN-M and reiterated publicly that recruitment by either army was a breach of the Agreement on the Monitoring of the Management of Arms and Armies.

The security situation in Kathmandu had been generally calm, notwithstanding clashes during the rally called on 1 May by UCPN-M to unseat the Government. Tensions were high and sporadic clashes were observed in several districts during the six subsequent days of the strike. An estimated 200 people were injured due to the activities of UCPN-M or the police or in clashes between parties. The Nepal Police and Armed Police Force were deployed and prevented an escalation of violence. Other challenges to the peace process included persistent insecurity and reports of lawlessness, predominantly in the Terai and the eastern hills, including violent clashes between political party-affiliated organizations, especially their youth wings. Extortion by armed groups and ethnic-based organizations had increased, targeting local government officials, teachers and businessmen, particularly in the eastern hills districts.

The Secretary-General observed that despite UNMIN's sustained efforts, little progress had been made towards the conditions for the Mission's departure. The two four-month extensions of UNMIN since January 2010 carried significant management difficulties for the Mission, while having had no discernible effect in expediting the political decisions required for UNMIN to complete its work. Under those circumstances, he recommended that the UNMIN mandate be rolled over by the Council in order to permit the necessary discussions to take place with a duly formed Government. If those discussions offered neither clarity over the UNMIN role nor any prospect of consensus among the parties on a realistic and time-bound fulfilment of their commitments concerning the armies and the phasing out of UNMIN monitoring, he would propose alternative measures to the Council, including the possible termination of UNMIN.

Communications. On 7 September [S/2010/472], Nepal transmitted to the Secretary-General a letter from Prime Minister Nepal requesting a four-month extension of UNMIN from 15 September. Its mandate should focus on the monitoring of management of the Maoist combatants and their arms until the Special Committee took responsibility of that task. On 9 September [S/2010/473], the Secretary-General forwarded to the Council a letter from UCPN-M Chairman, Pushpa Kamal Dahal, requesting that the UNMIN mandate of monitoring both armies be extended for six months from 15 September.

Government/UCPN-M agreement. On 13 September, Prime Minister Nepal and UCPN-M Chairman Dahal signed a four-point agreement to take the peace process to its logical conclusion by reaching agreement on the documents prepared by the Special Committee for expediting the peace process and implementing them; bringing the Maoist army combatants under the Special Committee and providing all the details about the combatants to the Committee; starting the remaining tasks of the peace process on 17 September and completing them by 14 January 2011; and extending the UNMIN mandate for the last time for a four-month period.

Communication. On 14 September [S/2010/474], the Secretary-General forwarded to the Council two separate letters from the Prime Minister and the UCPN-M Chairman, requesting a four-month extension of the UNMIN mandate from 15 September.

By resolution 1939(2010) of 15 September, the Council noted that the deadline for the promulgation of the new constitution of Nepal had been extended to 28 May 2011; noted the 13 September agreement between the caretaker Government and the political parties; renewed the UNMIN mandate until 15 January 2011; and decided to terminate the mandate on the same date, after which UNMIN would leave Nepal.

Expressing its appreciation for the contribution of the Representative of the Secretary-General in Nepal and the efforts of her team in the Mission, and the United Nations country team, including the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights, which is monitoring human rights at the request of the Government of Nepal, and stressing the need for coordination and complementarity of efforts between the Mission and all the United Nations actors in the Mission area, particularly in order to ensure continuity, as the mandate comes to an end,

1. Decides, in line with the request of the Government of Nepal, to renew the mandate of the United Nations Mission in Nepal as established under resolution 1740(2007), until 15 January 2011, taking into account the completion of some elements of the mandate and the ongoing work on the monitoring of the management of arms and armed personnel in line with the agreement of 25 June 2008 between the political parties, which will support the completion of the peace process;

8. Decides to remain seized of the matter.

Report of Secretary-General (December). In his December report [S/2010/658], the Secretary-General said that despite continued efforts, the parties had achieved only limited progress in advancing Nepal's peace. Central was the unresolved issue of forming a new Government following the 30 June resignation of Prime Minister Nepal. Sixteen rounds of voting in the Legislature-Parliament had failed to produce a new prime minister. Options for power-sharing had been discussed by the parties and proved to be inconclusive.

An agreement by UCPN-M not to block the Government's submission of a basic budget broke down in November when the Government presented a full budget and UCPN-M responded by physically manhandling the Minister of Finance in the Legislature-Parliament. The Legislature-Parliament was subsequently prorogued by the President on the recommendation of the Prime Minister, and the budget was passed by ordinance. The opposition questioned the authority of a caretaker Government to involve the President in that matter. The suspension of the Legislature-Parliament also raised questions about future voting for the premiership and the implementation of the budget. On 12 December, UCPN-M requested the President to summon the House. In public pronouncements, the Prime Minister indicated that the House would be reconvened only after the political deadlock was resolved.

In late September, at the first General Convention of the Nepali Congress since 2005, Sushil Koirala was elected party president, succeeding the late Girija Prasad Koirala. The UCPN-M Central Committee plenum concluded on 26 November with the leadership presenting a united front, but without having settled internal differences. UNMIN sought, but had yet to receive, clarification from the parties on the scope of the unwritten "gentlemen's agreement" that reportedly addressed the issue of the Nepal Army's confinement and the implementation of its responsibilities. UNMIN continued efforts to ensure the Mission's orderly withdrawal on 15 January 2011, intensifying engagement with the relevant parties over the integration and rehabilitation of Maoist army personnel and on alternative monitoring arrangements. It also urged the parties to address the future of the Agreement on the Monitoring of the Management of Arms and Armies and the Joint Monitoring Coordination Committee.

The high-level task force headed by UCPN-M Chairman Dahal had reached agreement on more than half of the 210 unresolved issues related to the new constitution. Some fundamental issues, such as forms of government and the federal structure, remained unresolved. The Constitutional Committee did not meet the 17 November deadline for preparing a first draft of the constitution, contributing to concerns about meeting the 28 May 2011 deadline for its promulgation.

The security situation in the Tarai remained fragile, with continued reports of killings and abductions by criminal and armed groups. The incidents had mostly targeted members of the business community and sometimes young children, primarily for ransom. Altercations between youth organizations affiliated to political parties had also led to serious injuries and a number of deaths. Another concern was a renewed emphasis on identity-based politics that could raise tensions in the lead-up to the promulgation of the new constitution. Madhesh-based parties had long voiced frustration at their exclusion from the dialogue on formation of the Government. They had also resisted Election Commission attempts to update voter lists by using citizenship cards, as that would exclude more than 3 million Madhesi Nepali citizens. No substantial progress was achieved in addressing impunity and ensuring accountability for human rights violations committed during or after the conflict.

The Secretary-General observed that with the peace process still incomplete and arrangements uncertain for supervision, integration and rehabilitation of Maoist army personnel, the optimal conditions for UNMIN's departure had not yet been attained. At the same time, it had become clear that it made no sense to extend the Mission continually without any meaningful progress by the parties on political issues. He urged the parties to do their utmost to preserve the advances made in the peace process, complete the peace process and ensure the country's democratic stability.

UNMIN

The United Nations Mission in Nepal (UNMIN), established in 2007 [YUN 2007, p. 385], continued to assist the country in its transition to peace following a decade of armed conflict. It was headed by Karin Landgren (Sweden), the Secretary-General's Representative in Nepal.

Financing

On 11 October [A/65/328/Add.3], the Secretary-General estimated UNMIN resource requirements for 2011 at $16,830,200. ACABQ recommended [A/65/602] approval of the revised requirements proposed for staffing and resources for UNMIN for 2011. Taking into account the shortfall of $4,190,500 for 2010, the net requirements for 2011 would amount to $9,421,000.

On 24 December, in section XIII of resolution 65/259 (see p. 1429), the Assembly approved budgets for the 29 special political missions, including UNMIN, totalling $631,162,600.

Children and armed conflict

In April, as requested by Security Council resolution 1612(2005) [YUN 2005, p. 863], the Secretary-General submitted a report [S/2010/183] on children and armed conflict in Nepal, covering 2009. The report examined trends in violations of children's rights, provided information on grave violations against children in Nepal and provided an update and follow-up to the recommendations in his 2008 report [YUN 2008, p. 420]. Significant progress was made in the latter part of 2009 in planning for the discharge and rehabilitation of the 4,008 disqualified Maoist army personnel, including 2,973 verified as minors. On 16 December, an Action Plan for that process was signed by the Government, UCPN-M and the United Nations [YUN 2009, p. 393]. The discharge began on 7 January 2010 and was completed on 8 February, resulting in the discharge of 1,843 personnel verified as minors. The remainder of the caseload—1,130 children who did not present themselves—would obtain discharge notifications and would be traced in their home communities for assistance and protection.

Friction between youth wings of the major political parties continued, mainly the Young Communist League affiliated with UCPN-M, the Youth Force affiliated with the Communist Party of Nepal-United Marxist-Leninist (UML) and to a lesser extent the Nepali Congress-affiliated Tarun Dal. Meanwhile, youth groups affiliated with political parties and movements continued to proliferate. While no cases of active recruitment of children into armed forces or armed groups were documented, the continuing use of children in political violence remained a concern. Monitors observed large numbers of children participating in protest rallies and demonstrations. Of the 42 protests and demonstrations where the Task Force documented significant numbers of children, 14 were organized by UCPN-M and its sister organizations.

The Secretary-General called upon the Government and UCPN-M to cooperate to ensure the full implementation of the Action Plan and for UCPN-M to ensure that Maoist army personnel disqualified as minors had unhindered access to the rehabilitation packages offered by the Government and supported by the United Nations. He also called upon the Government to operationalize the National Plan of Action for the Reintegration of Children Affected by Armed Conflict and to ensure resources for its implementation.

In November, the Security Council Working Group on Children and Armed Conflict, established by resolution 1612(2005), submitted its conclusions on children and armed conflict in Nepal [S/AC.51/2010/4], which contained the Group's exchange of views on the Secretary-General's report, the participation of Nepal in the discussion and the Group's agreed actions to be taken. Among other conclusions, the Group agreed to address a message to all stakeholders in the protection of children in Nepal, in particular UCPN-M and youth wings of the major political parties, through a public statement by the Chairman, urging them to refrain from any new recruitment or re-recruitment of children; ensure that children were not exposed to or forced to participate in violent activities; immediately stop the closure and use of schools during strikes; give all necessary support to strengthening the monitoring and reporting of violations against children, in particular those committed in the Terai region; ensure the full implementation of the Action Plan and unhindered access of the Maoist army personnel disqualified as minors to the rehabilitation packages; and stop the use of improvised explosive devices to avoid the killing and maiming of children. The Working Group also stressed its intention to visit Nepal in the coming months to follow up on the progress made in the protection of children.

Communication. On 30 November [S/2010/610], the Security Council President transmitted to the Secretary-General a letter from the Working Group's Chairman, requesting the Secretary-General to ensure that the United Nations continued monitoring UCPN-M compliance with the action plan and relevant Council resolutions, with particular attention to whether discharged minors were forced or otherwise coerced into association with groups that engaged in political violence. It also requested that a child protection capacity be preserved in the phasing out of UNMIN activities, with a view to facilitating the discharge of all children in the containment camps.

Iran

In 2010, the United Nations continued to address Iran's nuclear programme and the sanctions it imposed, reinforced by resolutions 1737(2006) [YUN 2006, p. 436], 1747(2007) [YUN 2007, p. 374], 1803(2008) [YUN 2008, p. 409] and 1835(2008) [ibid., p. 414]. On 9 June, the Security Council, by resolution 1929(2010) (see p. 396), imposed additional sanctions, requiring Iran to comply with relevant Council resolutions and to increase its cooperation with the International Atomic Energy Agency (IAEA). During the year the Agency reported that Iran had not implemented the Additional Protocol to Iran's Safeguards Agreement or the relevant resolutions of the Security Council and the IAEA Board of Governors. It had also failed to provide the necessary cooperation to permit the Agency to confirm that all nuclear material in Iran was being used in peaceful activities. Iran maintained that its nuclear programme was for peaceful purposes.

The Committee established pursuant to resolution 1737(2006) continued overseeing implementation of the sanctions regime.

Non-proliferation

IAEA reports

During 2010, the Council had before it four reports by the IAEA Board of Governors on Iran's implementation of the Non-Proliferation Treaty Safeguards Agreement and relevant Security Council resolutions. Each report stated that the Agency had continued activities to verify the non-diversion of declared nuclear material and elaborated on that process, including cooperation issues and difficulties encountered.

IAEA reports (February and May). IAEA's February report [GOV/2010/10] on developments since 16 November 2009 [YUN 2009, p. 395] stated that, in February, the Agency had carried out a design information verification at the Iran Nuclear Research Reactor (IR-40) and verified that construction of the facility was ongoing. Due to Iran's refusal to permit the Agency access to the Heavy Water Production Plant (HWPP), the Agency had to rely on satellite imagery to monitor the plant's status, which seemed to indicate the HWPP was in operation again. The Agency reiterated its requests for Iran to provide IAEA with access to the HWPP; the heavy water stored at the Uranium Conversion Facility (UCF) at Esfahan to take samples for destructive analysis; and any other location where heavy water-related projects were being carried out. Iran had also continued with the operation of the Fuel Enrichment Plant (FEP) and the Pilot Fuel Enrichment Plant located at Natanz, as well as the construction of a new plant at Fordow, which was contrary to relevant Board of Governors and Security Council resolutions.

The May IAEA report [GOV/2010/28] stated that on 16 May, the Agency carried out a design information verification at the Fuel Manufacturing Plant (FMP), and confirmed that no new process equipment had been installed at the facility and that no new assemblies, rods or pellets had been produced at the FMP since May 2009. The Agency continued to verify the non-diversion of declared nuclear material in Iran, yet Iran had not provided the necessary cooperation for IAEA to confirm that all nuclear material in Iran was being used in peaceful activities. It had not implemented the requirements contained in the relevant Board of Governors and Security Council resolutions, including implementation of the Additional Protocol, which IAEA deemed essential to build confidence in the exclusively peaceful purpose of Iran's nuclear programme and to resolve outstanding questions. Iran needed to cooperate in clarifying outstanding issues that gave rise to concerns about possible military dimensions to its nuclear programme, and to implement the modified Code 3.1 on the early provision of design information. Iran had not suspended enrichment activities; it had also announced that it had selected the venues for new nuclear sites and that construction was under way, but had not provided IAEA with the necessary relevant information and access in accordance with its Safeguards Agreement. Construction of the IR-40 reactor and heavy water-related activities continued. IAEA had not been permitted to take samples of the heavy water stored at the UCF, or provided with access to the HWPP.

SECURITY COUNCIL ACTION

On 9 June [meeting 6335], the Security Council adopted resolution 1929(2010) by vote (12-2-1). The draft [S/2010/283] was submitted by France, Germany, the United Kingdom and the United States.

The Security Council,

Recalling the statement by its President of 29 March 2006 and its resolutions 1696(2006) of 31 July 2006, 1737(2006) of 23 December 2006, 1747(2007) of 24 March 2007, 1803(2008) of 3 March 2008, 1835(2008) of 27 September 2008 and 1887(2009) of 24 September 2009, and reaffirming the provisions thereof,

Reaffirming its commitment to the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons and the need for all States parties to the Treaty to comply fully with all their obligations, and recalling the right of States parties, in conformity with articles I and II of the Treaty, to develop research, production and use of nuclear energy for peaceful purposes without discrimination,

Recalling resolution GOV/2006/14 adopted by the Board of Governors of the International Atomic Energy Agency on 4 February 2006, which states that a solution to the Iranian nuclear issue would contribute to global non-proliferation efforts and to realizing the objective of a Middle East free of weapons of mass destruction, including their means of delivery,

Noting with serious concern that, as confirmed in the reports of the Director General of the International Atomic Energy Agency of 27 February, 8 June, 31 August and 14 November 2006, 22 February, 23 May, 30 August and 15 November 2007, 22 February, 26 May, 15 September and 19 November 2008, 19 February, 5 June, 28 August and 16 November 2009 and 18 February and 31 May 2010, the Islamic Republic of Iran has not established full and sustained suspension of all enrichment-related and reprocessing activities and heavy water-related projects as set out in Security Council resolutions 1696(2006), 1737(2006), 1747(2007) and 1803(2008) nor resumed its cooperation with the Agency under the Additional Protocol, nor cooperated with the Agency in connection with the remaining issues of concern, which need to be clarified to exclude the possibility of military dimensions of the Islamic Republic of Iran's nuclear programme, nor taken the other steps required by the Board of Governors of the Agency, nor complied with the provisions of resolutions 1696(2006), 1737(2006), 1747(2007) and 1803(2008), which are essential to build confidence, and deploring the refusal of the Islamic Republic of Iran to take these steps,

Reaffirming that outstanding issues can be best resolved and confidence built in the exclusively peaceful nature of the Islamic Republic of Iran's nuclear programme by the Islamic Republic of Iran responding positively to all the calls which the Council and the Board of Governors of the Agency have made on the Islamic Republic of Iran,

Noting with serious concern the role of elements of the Islamic Revolutionary Guard Corps (also known as "Army of the Guardians of the Islamic Revolution"), including those specified in sections D and E of the annex to resolution 1737(2006), annex I to resolution 1747(2007) and annex II to the present resolution, in the Islamic Republic of Iran's proliferation-sensitive nuclear activities and the development of nuclear weapon delivery systems,

Noting with serious concern also that the Islamic Republic of Iran has constructed an enrichment facility at Qom in breach of its obligations to suspend all enrichment-related activities, and that the Islamic Republic of Iran failed to notify it to the Agency until September 2009, which is inconsistent with its obligations under the subsidiary arrangements to its safeguards agreement,

Noting resolution GOV/2009/82 adopted by the Board of Governors of the Agency on 27 November 2009, which urges the Islamic Republic of Iran to suspend immediately construction at Qom and to clarify the facility's purpose, and chronology of design and construction, and calls upon the Islamic Republic of Iran to confirm, as requested by the Agency, that it has not taken a decision to construct, or authorize construction of, any other nuclear facility which has as yet not been declared to the Agency,

Noting with serious concern that the Islamic Republic of Iran has enriched uranium to 20 per cent, and did so without notifying the Agency with sufficient time for it to adjust the existing safeguards procedures,

Noting with concern that the Islamic Republic of Iran has taken issue with the right of the Agency to verify design information which had been provided by the Islamic Republic of Iran pursuant to the modified Code 3.1, and emphasizing that, in accordance with article 39 of the Islamic Republic of Iran's safeguards agreement, Code 3.1 cannot be modified nor suspended unilaterally and that the right of the Agency to verify design information provided to it is a continuing right which is not dependent on the stage of construction of, or the presence of nuclear material at, a facility,

Reiterating its determination to reinforce the authority of the Agency, strongly supporting the role of the Board of Governors of the Agency, and commending the Agency for its efforts to resolve outstanding issues relating to the Islamic Republic of Iran's nuclear programme,

Expressing the conviction that the suspension set out in paragraph 2 of resolution 1737(2006) as well as full, verified Iranian compliance with the requirements set out by the Board of Governors of the Agency would contribute to a diplomatic, negotiated solution that guarantees that the Islamic Republic of Iran's nuclear programme is for exclusively peaceful purposes,

Emphasizing the importance of political and diplomatic efforts to find a negotiated solution guaranteeing that the Islamic Republic of Iran's nuclear programme is exclusively for peaceful purposes, and noting in this regard the efforts of Turkey and Brazil towards an agreement with the Islamic Republic of Iran on the Tehran Research Reactor that could serve as a confidence-building measure,

Emphasizing also, however, in the context of these efforts, the importance of the Islamic Republic of Iran addressing the core issues related to its nuclear programme,

Stressing that China, France, Germany, the Russian Federation, the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland and the United States of America are willing to take further concrete measures on exploring an overall strategy of resolving the Iranian nuclear issue through negotiation on the basis of their proposal of June 2006 and their proposal of June 2008, contained in annex IV to the present resolution, and noting the confirmation by those countries that, once the confidence of the international community in the exclusively peaceful nature of the Islamic Republic of Iran's nuclear programme is restored, it will be treated in the same manner as that of any non-nuclear weapon State party to the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons,

Welcoming the guidance issued by the Financial Action Task Force to assist States in implementing their financial obligations under resolutions 1737(2006) and 1803(2008), and recalling, in particular, the need to exercise vigilance over transactions involving Iranian banks, including the Central Bank of Iran, so as to prevent such transactions contributing to proliferation-sensitive nuclear activities or to the development of nuclear weapon delivery systems,

Recognizing that access to diverse, reliable energy is critical for sustainable growth and development, while noting the potential connection between the Islamic Republic of Iran's revenues derived from its energy sector and the funding of the Islamic Republic of Iran's proliferation-sensitive nuclear activities, and further noting that chemical process equipment and materials required for the petrochemical industry have much in common with those required for certain sensitive nuclear fuel cycle activities,

Having regard to the rights and obligations of States relating to international trade,

Recalling that the law of the sea, as reflected in the United Nations Convention on the Law of the Sea of 10 December 1982, sets out the legal framework applicable to ocean activities,

Calling for the ratification of the Comprehensive Nuclear-Test-Ban Treaty by the Islamic Republic of Iran at an early date,

Determined to give effect to its decisions by adopting appropriate measures to persuade the Islamic Republic of Iran to comply with resolutions 1696(2006), 1737(2006), 1747(2007) and 1803(2008) and with the requirements of the Agency, and also to constrain the development by the Islamic Republic of Iran of sensitive technologies in support of its nuclear and missile programmes, until such time as the Council determines that the objectives of those resolutions have been met,

Concerned by the proliferation risks presented by the Iranian nuclear programme, and mindful of its primary responsibility under the Charter of the United Nations for the maintenance of international peace and security,

Stressing that nothing in the present resolution compels States to take measures or actions exceeding the scope of the present resolution, including the use of force or the threat of force,

Acting under Article 41 of Chapter VII of the Charter,

1. Affirms that the Islamic Republic of Iran has so far failed to meet the requirements of the Board of Governors of the International Atomic Energy Agency and to comply with resolutions 1696(2006), 1737(2006), 1747(2007) and 1803(2008);

2. Affirms also that the Islamic Republic of Iran shall without further delay take the steps required by the Board of Governors of the Agency in its resolutions GOV/2006/14 and GOV/2009/82, which are essential to build confidence in the exclusively peaceful purpose of its nuclear programme, to resolve outstanding questions and to address the serious concerns raised by the construction of an enrichment facility at Qom in breach of its obligations to suspend all enrichment-related activities, and in this context further affirms its decision that the Islamic Republic of Iran shall without delay take the steps required in paragraph 2 of resolution 1737(2006);

3. Reaffirms that the Islamic Republic of Iran shall cooperate fully with the Agency on all outstanding issues, particularly those which give rise to concerns about the possible military dimensions of the Iranian nuclear programme, including by providing access without delay to all sites, equipment, persons and documents requested by the Agency, and stresses the importance of ensuring that the Agency has all resources and authority necessary for the fulfilment of its work in the Islamic Republic of Iran;

4. Requests the Director General of the International Atomic Energy Agency to communicate to the Security Council all his reports on the application of safeguards in the Islamic Republic of Iran;

5. Decides that the Islamic Republic of Iran shall without delay comply fully and without qualification with its safeguards agreement, including through the application of the modified Code 3.1 of the subsidiary arrangement to its safeguards agreement, calls upon the Islamic Republic of Iran to act strictly in accordance with the provisions of the Additional Protocol to its safeguards agreement that it signed on 18 December 2003, calls upon the Islamic Republic of Iran to ratify promptly the Additional Protocol, and reaffirms that, in accordance with articles 24 and 39 of the Islamic Republic of Iran's safeguards agreement, the agreement and its subsidiary arrangement, including the modified Code 3.1, cannot be amended or changed unilaterally by the Islamic Republic of Iran, and notes that there is no mechanism in the agreement for the suspension of any of the provisions in the subsidiary arrangement;

6. Reaffirms that, in accordance with the obligations of the Islamic Republic of Iran under previous resolutions to suspend all reprocessing, heavy water-related and enrichment-related activities, the Islamic Republic of Iran shall not begin construction on any new uranium-enrichment, reprocessing or heavy water-related facility and shall discontinue any ongoing construction of any uranium-enrichment, reprocessing or heavy water-related facility;

7. Decides that the Islamic Republic of Iran shall not acquire an interest in any commercial activity in another State involving uranium mining, production or use of nuclear materials and technology as listed in INF/CIRC/254/Rev.9/Part 1, in particular uranium-enrichment and reprocessing activities, all heavy-water activities or technology related to ballistic missiles capable of delivering nuclear weapons, and further decides that all States shall prohibit such investment in territories under their jurisdiction by the Islamic Republic of Iran, its nationals and entities incorporated in the Islamic Republic of Iran or subject to its jurisdiction, or by persons or entities acting on their behalf or at their direction, or by entities owned or controlled by them;

8. Decides also that all States shall prevent the direct or indirect supply, sale or transfer to the Islamic Republic of Iran, from or through their territories or by their nationals or individuals subject to their jurisdiction, or using their flag vessels or aircraft, and whether or not originating in their territories, of any battle tanks, armoured combat vehicles, large-calibre artillery systems, combat aircraft, attack helicopters, warships, missiles or missile systems as defined for the purpose of the United Nations Register of Conventional Arms, or related materiel, including spare parts, or items as determined by the Security Council or the Security Council Committee established pursuant to resolution 1737(2006) ("the Committee"), decides further that all States shall prevent the provision to the Islamic Republic of Iran by their nationals or from or through their territories of technical training, financial resources or services, advice, other services or assistance related to the supply, sale, transfer, provision, manufacture, maintenance or use of such arms and related materiel, and in this context calls upon all States to exercise vigilance and restraint over the supply, sale, transfer, provision, manufacture and use of all other arms and related materiel;

9. Decides further that the Islamic Republic of Iran shall not undertake any activity related to ballistic missiles capable of delivering nuclear weapons, including launches using ballistic missile technology, and that States shall take all measures necessary to prevent the transfer of technology or technical assistance to the Islamic Republic of Iran related to such activities;

10. Decides that all States shall take the measures necessary to prevent the entry into or transit through their territories of individuals designated in the annex to resolution 1737(2006), annex I to resolution 1747(2007), annex I to resolution 1803(2008) and annex I to the present resolution, or by the Council or the Committee pursuant to paragraph 10 of resolution 1737(2006), except where such entry or transit is for activities directly related to the provision to the Islamic Republic of Iran of items listed in paragraphs 3(b) (i) and (ii) of resolution 1737(2006) in accordance with paragraph 3 of resolution 1737(2006), underlines that nothing in the present paragraph shall oblige a State to refuse its own nationals entry into its territory, and decides that the measures imposed in the present paragraph shall not apply when the Committee determines on a case-by-case basis that such travel is justified on the grounds of humanitarian need, including religious obligations, or where the Committee concludes that an exemption would otherwise further the objectives of the present resolution, including where article XV of the statute of the Agency is engaged;

11. Decides also that the measures specified in paragraphs 12 to 15 of resolution 1737(2006) shall apply also to the individuals and entities listed in annex I to the present resolution and to any individuals or entities acting on their behalf or at their direction, and to entities owned or controlled by them, including through illicit means, and to any individuals and entities determined by the Council or the Committee to have assisted designated individuals or entities in evading sanctions of, or in violating the provisions of, resolution 1737(2006), 1747(2007), 1803(2008) or the present resolution;

12. Decides further that the measures specified in paragraphs 12 to 15 of resolution 1737(2006) shall apply also to the Islamic Revolutionary Guard Corps (also known as "Army of the Guardians of the Islamic Revolution") individuals and entities specified in annex II to the present resolution, and to any individuals or entities acting on their behalf or at their direction, and to entities owned or controlled by them, including through illicit means, and calls upon all States to exercise vigilance over those transactions involving the Islamic Revolutionary Guard Corps that could contribute to the Islamic Republic of Iran's proliferation-sensitive nuclear activities or the development of nuclear weapon delivery systems;

13. Decides that, for the purposes of the measures specified in paragraphs 3 to 7 of resolution 1737(2006), the list of items in document S/2006/814 shall be superseded by the list of items in INFCIRC/254/Rev.9/Part 1 and INFCIRC/254/Rev.7/Part 2, and any further items if the State determines that they could contribute to enrichment-related, reprocessing or heavy water-related activities or to the development of nuclear weapon delivery systems, and further decides that, for the purposes of the measures specified in paragraphs 3 to 7 of resolution 1737(2006), the list of items contained in document S/2006/815 shall be superseded by the list of items contained in document S/2010/263;

14. Calls upon all States to inspect, in accordance with their national authorities and legislation and consistent with international law, in particular the law of the sea and relevant international civil aviation agreements, all cargo to and from the Islamic Republic of Iran, in their territory, including seaports and airports, if the State concerned has information that provides reasonable grounds to believe that the cargo contains items, the supply, sale, transfer or export of which is prohibited by paragraph 3, 4 or 7 of resolution 1737(2006), paragraph 5 of resolution 1747(2007), paragraph 8 of resolution 1803(2008) or paragraph 8 or 9 of the present resolution, for the purpose of ensuring strict implementation of those provisions;

15. Notes that States, consistent with international law, in particular the law of the sea, may request inspections of vessels on the high seas with the consent of the flag State, and calls upon all States to cooperate in such inspections if there is information that provides reasonable grounds to believe that the vessel is carrying items, the supply, sale, transfer or export of which is prohibited by paragraph 3, 4 or 7 of resolution 1737(2006), paragraph 5 of resolution 1747(2007), paragraph 8 of resolution 1803(2008) or paragraph 8 or 9 of the present resolution, for the purpose of ensuring strict implementation of those provisions;

16. Decides to authorize all States to, and that all States shall, seize and dispose of (such as through destruction, rendering inoperable, storage or transferring to a State other than the originating or destination State for disposal) items, the supply, sale, transfer or export of which is prohibited by paragraph 3, 4 or 7 of resolution 1737(2006), paragraph 5 of resolution 1747(2007), paragraph 8 of resolution 1803(2008) or paragraph 8 or 9 of the present resolution that are identified in inspections pursuant to paragraph 14 or 15 of the present resolution, in a manner that is not inconsistent with their obligations under applicable Council resolutions, including resolution 1540(2004) of 28 April 2004, as well as any obligations of parties to the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons, and decides further that all States shall cooperate in such efforts;

17. Requires any State, when it undertakes an inspection pursuant to paragraph 14 or 15 of the present resolution, to submit to the Committee within five working days an initial written report containing, in particular, an explanation of the grounds for the inspection, the results of such inspection and whether or not cooperation was provided, and, if items prohibited for transfer are found, further requires such States to submit to the Committee, at a later stage, a subsequent written report containing relevant details on the inspection, seizure and disposal, and relevant details of the transfer, including a description of the items, their origin and intended destination, if that information is not in the initial report;

18. Decides that all States shall prohibit the provision by their nationals or from their territory of bunkering services, such as the provision of fuel or supplies, or other servicing of vessels, to Iranian-owned or -contracted vessels, including chartered vessels, if they have information that provides reasonable grounds to believe that they are carrying items, the supply, sale, transfer or export of which is prohibited by paragraph 3, 4 or 7 of resolution 1737(2006), paragraph 5 of resolution 1747(2007), paragraph 8 of resolution 1803(2008) or paragraph 8 or 9 of the present resolution, unless the provision of such services is necessary for humanitarian purposes or until such time as the cargo has been inspected, and seized and disposed of if necessary, and underlines that the present paragraph is not intended to affect legal economic activities;

19. Decides also that the measures specified in paragraphs 12 to 15 of resolution 1737(2006) shall also apply to the entities of the Islamic Republic of Iran Shipping Lines as specified in annex III to the present resolution and to any person or entity acting on their behalf or at their direction, and to entities owned or controlled by them, including through illicit means, or determined by the Council or the Committee to have assisted them in evading the sanctions of, or in violating the provisions of, resolution 1737(2006), 1747(2007), 1803(2008) or the present resolution;

20. Requests all Member States to communicate to the Committee any information available on transfers to other companies or activity by Iran Air's cargo division or vessels owned or operated by the Islamic Republic of Iran Shipping Lines that may have been undertaken in order to evade the sanctions of, or in violation of the provisions of, resolution 1737(2006), 1747(2007), 1803(2008) or the present resolution, including renaming or re-registering of aircraft, vessels or ships, and requests the Committee to make that information widely available;

21. Calls upon all States, in addition to implementing their obligations pursuant to resolutions 1737(2006), 1747(2007), 1803(2008) and the present resolution, to prevent the provision of financial services, including insurance or reinsurance, or the transfer to, through or from their territory, or to or by their nationals or entities organized under their laws (including branches abroad), or persons or financial institutions in their territory, of any financial or other assets or resources if they have information that provides reasonable grounds to believe that such services, assets or resources could contribute to the Islamic Republic of Iran's proliferation-sensitive nuclear activities or the development of nuclear weapon delivery systems, including by freezing any financial or other assets or resources on their territories or that hereafter come within their territories, or that are subject to their jurisdiction or that hereafter become subject to their jurisdiction, that are related to such programmes or activities and applying enhanced monitoring to prevent all such transactions in accordance with their national authorities and legislation;

22. Decides that all States shall require their nationals, persons subject to their jurisdiction and firms incorporated in their territory or subject to their jurisdiction to exercise vigilance when doing business with entities incorporated in the Islamic Republic of Iran or subject to the Islamic Republic of Iran's jurisdiction, including those of the Islamic Revolutionary Guard Corps and the Islamic Republic of Iran Shipping Lines, and any individuals or entities acting on their behalf or at their direction, and entities owned or controlled by them, including through illicit means, if they have information that provides reasonable grounds to believe that such business could contribute to the Islamic Republic of Iran's proliferation-sensitive nuclear activities or the development of nuclear weapon delivery systems or to violations of resolution 1737(2006), 1747(2007) 1803(2008) or the present resolution;

23. Calls upon States to take appropriate measures that prohibit in their territories the opening of new branches, subsidiaries or representative offices of Iranian banks, and also that prohibit Iranian banks from establishing new joint ventures, taking an ownership interest in or establishing or maintaining correspondent relationships with banks in their jurisdiction to prevent the provision of financial services if they have information that provides reasonable grounds to believe that these activities could contribute to the Islamic Republic of Iran's proliferation-sensitive nuclear activities or the development of nuclear weapon delivery systems;

24. Also calls upon States to take appropriate measures that prohibit financial institutions within their territories or under their jurisdiction from opening representative offices or subsidiaries or banking accounts in the Islamic Republic of Iran if they have information that provides reasonable grounds to believe that such financial services could contribute to the Islamic Republic of Iran's proliferation-sensitive nuclear activities or the development of nuclear weapon delivery systems;

25. Deplores the violations of the prohibitions of paragraph 5 of resolution 1747(2007) that have been reported to the Committee since the adoption of resolution 1747(2007), and commends States that have taken action to respond to these violations and report them to the Committee;

26. Directs the Committee to respond effectively to violations of the measures decided in resolutions 1737(2006), 1747(2007), 1803(2008) and the present resolution, and recalls that the Committee may designate individuals and entities who have assisted designated persons or entities in evading sanctions of, or in violating the provisions of, these resolutions;

27. Decides that the Committee shall intensify its efforts to promote the full implementation of resolutions 1737(2006), 1747(2007), 1803(2008) and the present resolution, including through a work programme covering compliance, investigations, outreach, dialogue, assistance and cooperation, to be submitted to the Council within forty-five days of the adoption of the present resolution;

28. Decides also that the mandate of the Committee as set out in paragraph 18 of resolution 1737(2006), as amended by paragraph 14 of resolution 1803(2008), shall also apply to the measures decided in the present resolution, including to receive reports from States submitted pursuant to paragraph 17 of the present resolution;

29. Requests the Secretary-General to create for an initial period of one year, in consultation with the Committee, a group of up to eight experts ("the Panel of Experts"), under the direction of the Committee, to carry out the following tasks: (a) assist the Committee in carrying out its mandate as specified in paragraph 18 of resolution 1737(2006) and paragraph 28 of the present resolution; (b) gather, examine and analyse information from States, relevant United Nations bodies and other interested parties regarding the implementation of the measures decided in resolutions 1737(2006), 1747(2007), 1803(2008) and the present resolution, in particular incidents of non-compliance; (c) make recommendations on actions the Council, or the Committee or the State, may consider to improve implementation of the relevant measures; and (d) provide to the Council an interim report on its work no later than ninety days after the appointment of the Panel of Experts, and a final report to the Council no later than thirty days prior to the termination of its mandate, with its findings and recommendations;

30. Urges all States, relevant United Nations bodies and other interested parties to cooperate fully with the Committee and the Panel of Experts, in particular by supplying any information at their disposal on the implementation of the measures decided in resolutions 1737(2006), 1747(2007), 1803(2008) and the present resolution, in particular incidents of non-compliance;

31. Calls upon all States to report to the Committee within sixty days of the adoption of the present resolution on the steps they have taken with a view to implementing effectively paragraphs 7 to 19 and 21 to 24 of the present resolution;

32. Stresses the willingness of China, France, Germany, the Russian Federation, the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland and the United States of America to further enhance diplomatic efforts to promote dialogue and consultations, including to resume dialogue with the Islamic Republic of Iran on the nuclear issue without preconditions, most recently in their meeting with the Islamic Republic of Iran, held in Geneva on 1 October 2009, with a view to seeking a comprehensive, long-term and proper solution of this issue on the basis of the proposal made by China, France, Germany, the Russian Federation, the United Kingdom and the United States on 14 June 2008, which would allow for the development of relations and wider cooperation with the Islamic Republic of Iran based on mutual respect and the establishment of international confidence in the exclusively peaceful nature of the Islamic Republic of Iran's nuclear programme and, inter alia, starting formal negotiations with the Islamic Republic of Iran on the basis of the proposal of June 2008, and acknowledges with appreciation that the proposal of June 2008, as contained in annex IV to the present resolution, remains on the table;

33. Encourages the High Representative of the European Union for Foreign Affairs and Security Policy to continue communication with the Islamic Republic of Iran in support of political and diplomatic efforts to find a negotiated solution, including relevant proposals by China, France, Germany, the Russian Federation, the United Kingdom and the United States with a view to creating the conditions necessary for resuming talks, and encourages the Islamic Republic of Iran to respond positively to such proposals;

34. Commends the Director General of the International Atomic Energy Agency for his proposal of 21 October 2009 on a draft Agreement between the International Atomic Energy Agency and the Governments of the Republic of France, the Islamic Republic of Iran and the Russian Federation for Assistance in Securing Nuclear Fuel for a Research Reactor in Iran for the Supply of Nuclear Fuel to the Tehran Research Reactor, regrets that the Islamic Republic of Iran has not responded constructively to the proposal of 21 October 2009, and encourages the Agency to continue exploring such measures to build confidence consistent with and in furtherance of the resolutions of the Council;

35. Emphasizes the importance of all States, including the Islamic Republic of Iran, taking the measures necessary to ensure that no claim shall lie at the instance of the Government of the Islamic Republic of Iran, or of any person or entity in the Islamic Republic of Iran, or of persons or entities designated pursuant to resolution 1737(2006) and related resolutions, or any person claiming through or for the benefit of any such person or entity, in connection with any contract or other transaction where its performance was prevented by reason of the measures imposed by resolutions 1737(2006), 1747(2007), 1803(2008) and the present resolution;

In favour: Austria, Bosnia and Herzegovina, China, France, Gabon, Japan, Mexico, Nigeria, Russian Federation, Uganda, United Kingdom, United States.

Against: Brazil, Turkey.

Abstaining: Lebanon.

IAEA report (September). In its September report [S/2010/465 & GOV/2010/46], IAEA stated that on 2 August, the Agency carried out a design information verification at the IR-40 reactor at Arak and verified that construction of the facility was ongoing. According to Iran, operation of the IR-40 reactor was planned to commence in 2013. Based on satellite imagery, the HWPP appeared to be in operation, but without access, the Agency was unable to verify Iran's statement that it had not suspended work on heavy water-related projects and could not fully report on the matter. Iran had also announced that construction at one of the venues selected for new enrichment facilities would commence around March 2011, but it had not provided IAEA with the necessary design information and access in accordance with Iran's Safeguards Agreement and Subsidiary Arrangements. The Agency said that Iran had objected to the designation of two inspectors who had recently conducted inspections in the country. IAEA rejected the basis upon which Iran sought to justify its objection, and was concerned that the repeated objection to the designation of experienced inspectors hampered the inspection process and detracted from the Agency's ability to implement safeguards in Iran.

Appointment of experts. On 5 November [S/2010/576], the Secretary-General informed the Security Council that he had appointed eight experts to the Panel of Experts, pursuant to paragraph 29 of resolution 1929(2010).

IAEA report (November). IAEA's report of November [GOV/2010/62] on developments since its September report stated that in a 2 November letter to Iran, the Agency reiterated its request that Iran make the necessary arrangements to provide the Agency with access to the HWPP, the heavy water stored at the UCF for taking samples, and any other location where heavy-water projects were being carried out. Iran replied that the Agency's requests had no legal basis since they did not fall within Iran's Safeguards Agreements and went beyond the relevant Security Council resolutions that requested only verification of suspension. Iran also stated that it had not suspended work on heavy water-related projects. As at 23 November, Iran had not provided the requested access.

On 8 November, the Agency carried out a design information verification at the IR-40 reactor at Arak and observed no significant change since the last report. In a 29 October letter, the Agency provided Iran with a list of matters remaining to be addressed, including: project management structure of the alleged studies related to nuclear explosives; nuclear-related safety arrangements for a number of the alleged projects; details of the manufacture of components for high explosives initiation systems; and experiments concerning the generation and detection of neutrons.

The Agency acknowledged Iran's submission of a revised design information questionnaire for the Fordow FEP and its advance notification to the Agency of the loading of fuel at the Bushehr Nuclear Power Plant. Iran had not implemented the requirements contained in the relevant Board of Governors and Security Council resolutions and had not suspended its enrichment-related activities.

Year-end developments. A later IAEA report [GOV/2011/7] covering developments from 23 November to the end of 2010 affirmed that while the Agency continued to verify the non-diversion of declared nuclear material at the nuclear facilities in Iran, the country had not provided the cooperation necessary to enable IAEA to provide credible assurance about the absence of undeclared nuclear material and activities, and to conclude that all nuclear material in Iran was in peaceful activities.

Sanctions

On 31 December, the Chairman of the Sanctions Committee reported [S/2010/682] to the Security Council on its activities in 2010. During the year, the Committee held one informal consultation. By year's end, the Committee had received 92 reports pursuant to resolution 1737(2006), 79 reports pursuant to resolution 1747(2007), 68 reports pursuant to resolution 1803(2008) and 45 reports pursuant to resolution 1929(2010). The list of those reports was appended to the Committee's report.

During the year, the Committee received eight notifications from a Member State of the delivery of items for use in the nuclear power plant in Bushehr, Iran, and received five notifications from a Member State of exemptions to the freeze for transactions made prior to the sanctions. It also received reports of two new violations of paragraph 5 of resolution 1747(2007), which imposed an export ban on arms and related materiel on Iran.

In the first instance, by a letter dated 12 November, a Member State informed the Committee that, at one of its wharfs, its security authority had inspected and seized 13 shipping containers of illegal arms reportedly originating from Iran, and that a report on the results of its investigations would be forthcoming. The Committee recommended that the Member State retain and store the seized containers until the Committee had concluded its consideration of the matter, and encouraged the Member State to invite the Panel of Experts to visit and inspect the seized containers. In the second instance, by a note verbale dated 23 November, a Member State informed the Committee that, at one of its harbours, its customs and border authorities had inspected and seized a container on board a vessel originating from Iran and destined for the Syrian Arab Republic that contained a high-potential explosive. Further investigations were being carried out by the Member State. The Committee dispatched a response with appropriate guidance to that State.

On 10 December, the Panel informed the Committee of its intention to visit the two reporting States, with the agreement of those States, in the near future. The Committee also noted that the apparent pattern of sanctions violations involving prohibited arms transfers from Iran was continuing.

Communications. On 22 April [A/64/757], Iran transmitted to the Secretary-General the conclusion of the Chairman of the Tehran Conference on Disarmament and Non-Proliferation (Tehran, 17–18 April).

During 2010, Iran sent communications to the Security Council on the non-proliferation and sanctions regime and related matters. In communications dated 26 March [S/2010/172], 13 April [A/64/745-S/2010/188] and 10 December [A/65/622-S/2010/634], Iran reiterated the peaceful character of its nuclear programme. Iran submitted related communications on 20 April [A/64/752-S/2010/203] and 4 August [A/64/893-S/2010/431].

Other issues

India–Pakistan

The United Nations Military Observer Group in India and Pakistan (UNMOGIP) continued in 2010 to monitor the situation in Jammu and Kashmir.

By a 15 December letter [S/2010/662], the Secretary-General informed the Security Council of his intention to appoint Major General Raul Gloodtdofsky Fernandez (Uruguay) as Chief Military Observer and Head of UNMOGIP, replacing Major General Kim Moon Hwa (Republic of Korea), who had completed his assignment on 27 November. The Council took note of his intention in a 21 December reply [S/2010/663].

Kyrgyzstan

In a 19 May letter [A/64/786] to the Secretary-General, the Russian Federation transmitted the statement on the situation in Kyrgyzstan by States members of the Collective Security Treaty Organization (CSTO)—Armenia, Belarus, Kazakhstan, Russian Federation, Tajikistan, Uzbekistan—adopted on 8 May. CSTO expressed concern about events in Kyrgyzstan in April that had led to an unconstitutional change of power, and condolences for the extensive loss of life and property damage. CSTO also declared its readiness to provide humanitarian and other assistance in order to stabilize the situation.

In a 25 June letter [A/64/857-S/2010/360] to the Secretary-General and the Security Council President, the Russian Federation transmitted the 14 June CSTO statement concerning recent events in southern Kyrgyzstan that had resulted in numerous human casualties and had been accompanied by large-scale rioting, massacres and atrocities. CSTO called on the Kyrgyzstan interim Government to adopt measures to restore order in the country. CSTO had also prepared a proposal for reducing inter-ethnic tensions, containing the activities of criminal elements and gangs; ending extremist acts; and strengthening security along the frontiers.

In a 5 August press statement [SC/10005], the Council welcomed the briefing by Special Representative Miroslav Jenča on the work of the United Nations Regional Centre for Preventive Diplomacy for Central Asia and expressed appreciation for the Centre's assistance to countries in the region, in particular in the context of recent developments in Kyrgyzstan.

Elections. On 1 November [SG/SM/13218], the Secretary-General took note of the announcement of the results of parliamentary elections in Kyrgyzstan held on 10 October, which were assessed by observers as positive, transparent and well organized. He encouraged the timely formation of an inclusive Government that would ensure peace, stability and prosperity.

Pakistan

UN Commission of Inquiry

Following a request by Pakistan and consultations with Pakistani officials and the Security Council, the Secretary-General in February 2009 [YUN 2009, p. 398] established the United Nations Commission of Inquiry into the facts and circumstances of the assassination of former Prime Minister of Pakistan Benazir Bhutto [YUN 2007, p. 63]. The duty of carrying out a criminal investigation, finding the perpetrators and bringing them to justice remained with the Pakistani authorities. In December 2009, the Commission's mandate was extended to 31 March 2010 [YUN 2009, p. 399].

Commission of Inquiry report. The three-member Commission of Inquiry commenced its activities on 1 July 2009 and provided its report [S/2010/191] to the Secretary-General on 30 March 2010. The Commission conducted more than 250 interviews, meeting with Pakistani officials and private citizens, foreign citizens with knowledge of the events in Pakistan and members of the United Kingdom Metropolitan Police (Scotland Yard) team that had investigated aspects of the assassination. It also reviewed hundreds of documents, videos, photographs and other material provided by Pakistan's federal and provincial authorities and others. The report addressed the political and security context of former Prime Minister Bhutto's return to Pakistan; the security arrangements made for her by the Pakistani authorities as well as by her political party, the Pakistan Peoples Party (PPP); events immediately before and after the assassination; and the criminal investigations and actions of the Pakistani Government and police in the aftermath of the crime.

The main findings of the Commission indicated that Ms. Bhutto returned to Pakistan on 18 October 2007 in the context of a tenuous political agreement with the Pakistani President, General Pervez Musharraf, during an exceptionally violent year marked by sharp increases in violence both by Islamist extremists and by the State. She was murdered when a 15 year-old suicide bomber detonated his explosives near her vehicle as she was leaving a PPP event at Liaquat Bagh. The Government lacked a comprehensive security plan for Ms. Bhutto, and the assassination could have been prevented if the Rawalpindi District Police had taken adequate security measures. The additional PPP security arrangements were inadequate. Rawalpindi district police actions and omissions in the aftermath of the assassination inflicted irreparable damage to the investigation. Although Ms. Bhutto faced serious threats in Pakistan from Al-Qaida, the Taliban and local jihadi groups, the investigation focused on pursuing lower-level operatives. The Commission believed that the failures of the police and other officials to react effectively to the assassination were, in most cases, deliberate.

The Commission recommended that Pakistani authorities consider conducting an independent review to determine responsibilities and hold accountable those individuals who seriously failed in their duties. The Government might also consider a review of its security arrangements for persons requiring the highest level of security and consider measures to assign responsibility to an office at the federal level that would work with local police to implement the standing order and standard operating procedures. As Ms. Bhutto's assassination occurred against the backdrop of a history of political violence carried out with impunity, the Commission recommended that Pakistan establish an independent Truth and Reconciliation Commission to investigate political killings, disappearances and terrorism and to provide victims of political assassinations and terrorism material and moral reparations.

Communication. By a 23 June letter [A/64/845], Pakistan forwarded to the Secretary-General a letter from its Foreign Minister providing comments and observations on the Commission of Inquiry's report, including deficiencies which impaired the credibility of the report.

The Philippines

Children and armed conflict

In April, the Security Council Working Group on Children and Armed Conflict, established by resolution 1612(2005), submitted its conclusions on children and armed conflict in the Philippines [S/AC.51/2010/5], which contained the Group's exchange of views on the Secretary-General's January report [YUN 2009, p. 399], the participation of the Philippines in the discussion and the Group's agreed actions to be taken. The Group agreed to address a message to all parties to armed conflict in the Philippines, through a public statement by the Chairman, urging them to develop and implement action plans in line with Council resolutions 1612(2005) and 1882(2009) [ibid., p. 739] and emphasizing that the Group would continue to monitor progress on eliminating the violations and abuses by all parties to the conflict until there was a complete release and reintegration of children associated with them and full implementation of action plans. The Group emphasized its readiness to adopt further steps against persistent perpetrators if they did not abide by their obligations under international law with respect to children and armed conflicts. The Group also addressed messages to the leadership of the Moro Islamic Liberation Front and of the New People's Army, urging them to take various actions, and made recommendations for action to be taken by the Security Council.

Communication. On 30 December [S/2010/680], the Council President transmitted to the Secretary-General a letter from the Group's Chairman requesting the Secretary-General to enhance the capacity and ability of the task force to monitor and report on violations and abuses committed against children, and to explore strategies to establish monitoring mechanisms in restricted areas, such as in southwestern Mindanao.

Sri Lanka

Children and armed conflict

In June, the Security Council Working Group on Children and Armed Conflict, established by resolution 1612(2005), submitted its conclusions on children and armed conflict in Sri Lanka [S/AC.51/2010/2], which contained the Group's exchange of views on the report of the Special Envoy's mission to Sri Lanka from 5 to 11 December 2009 to assess the situation of children in the aftermath of military operations that led to the defeat of the Liberation Tigers of Tamil Eelam, ending the armed conflict. The document also contained the Group's response to the Secretary-General's 2009 report [YUN 2009, p. 398], the participation of Sri Lanka in the discussion and the Group's agreed actions to be taken. The Group agreed to address a message to all stakeholders who had responsibility to cease and refrain from violations and abuses committed against children in Sri Lanka, through a statement by the Chairman, urging them to establish the whereabouts of all children who had been recruited and whose fate remained unknown. A message to the leaders of Tamil Makkal Viduthalai Pulikal urged it to track and release any children remaining within it and to refrain from any new recruitments or re-recruitment of children.

Communication. On 16 September [S/2010/487], the Council President transmitted to the Secretary-General a letter from the Group's Chairman requesting the Secretary-General to call upon the international community to continue to allocate funding for capacity-building in Sri Lanka for the protection of children, and to request various UN entities, in cooperation with the Government, to address socioeconomic issues that would contribute to addressing the welfare of children and provide further assistance in the implementation of rehabilitation and reintegration programmes.

Thailand–Cambodia

In 8 August letters [A/64/891-S/2010/426] to the Secretary-General and the Security Council President, Cambodia transmitted a letter from Prime Minister Hun Sen concerning the memorandum of understanding signed on 14 June 2000 between the Government of Cambodia and the Government of Thailand for the demarcation of the border, and the alleged threat of the use of military force against Cambodia to settle the border demarcation problem by the Thai Prime Minister during a public meeting with the People's Alliance for Democracy on 7 August.

In a 10 August response [A/64/892-S/2010/427], Thai Prime Minister Abhisit Vejjajiva informed the Secretary-General and the Security Council President that his remarks had been taken out of context and misunderstood, and said that Thailand remained committed to working closely and in good faith with Cambodia to achieve a peaceful resolution of differences between the two countries.

United Arab Emirates–Iran

The Greater Tunb, Lesser Tunb and Abu Musa

On 4 January [S/2010/18], the United Arab Emirates requested that the Security Council retain on its agenda for 2010 the item entitled "Letter dated 3 December 1971 from the Permanent Representatives of Algeria, Iraq, the Libyan Arab Republic and the People's Democratic Republic of Yemen to the United Nations addressed to the President of the Security Council" [YUN 1971, p. 209] concerning Iran's occupation of "the Greater Tunb, the Lesser Tunb and Abu Musa, three islands belonging to the United Arab Emirates", until such time as the dispute was resolved by peaceful means through direct negotiations or through the International Court of Justice.

The League of Arab States (LAS), in letters transmitted on 12 March [S/2010/144], 19 April [S/2010/204] and 5 October [S/2010/516], informed the Security Council of the adoption of two resolutions denouncing and one resolution rejecting the Iranian Government's continued consolidation of its occupation of the three islands. LAS also informed the Secretary-General and the Council President of the importance of the Council's remaining seized of the issue until Iran ended its occupation of the islands and the United Arab Emirates regained its full sovereignty over them.

Europe and the Mediterranean

In 2010, progress towards the restoration of peace and stability in the post-conflict countries in the European and Mediterranean region was slow and difficult, as efforts to re-establish their institutions and social and economic infrastructure continued. A number of issues remained unresolved.

The international community, led by the European Union (EU), continued to assist Bosnia and Herzegovina to move towards full integration into Europe through the EU Stabilization and Association Process. Visa liberalization for Bosnia and Herzegovina citizens holding biometric passports came into effect on 15 December. General elections, held on 3 October, were assessed as being generally free and fair by the international election observation missions. Nevertheless, no further progress was achieved in addressing key reforms required for further EU integration.

The situation in northern Kosovo remained unstable, and tensions grew in the aftermath of the 22 July International Court of Justice (ICJ) advisory opinion on Kosovo's declaration of independence, which concluded that "the adoption of that declaration did not violate any applicable rule of international law". Following the ICJ decision, the General Assembly on 9 September adopted a resolution welcoming the readiness of the EU to facilitate a process of dialogue between Pristina (Kosovo) and Belgrade (Serbia).

Although the United Nations continued to support the negotiation process to find a solution to the dispute between Greece and the former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia regarding the name of the latter country, the issue remained unresolved at year's end.

The Georgian-Abkhaz peace process continued to be affected by the August 2008 war in South Ossetia and its aftermath and by Georgian-Russian relations. International discussions under the co-chairmanship of the EU, the United Nations and the Organization for Security and Cooperation in Europe to address security, stability and humanitarian issues in Georgia continued to be held throughout the year. On 7 September, the Assembly adopted a resolution on the status of internally displaced persons and refugees from Abkhazia, Georgia, and the Tskhinvali region/South Ossetia, Georgia, in which it called on all participants in the international discussions to ensure respect for human rights and create favourable security conditions conducive to the voluntary, safe, dignified and unhindered return of all internally displaced persons and refugees to their places of origin.

No progress was made towards the settlement of the conflict between Armenia and Azerbaijan over the occupied Nagorny Karabakh region of Azerbaijan.

The United Nations continued efforts through the Secretary-General's good offices to help resolve the Cyprus problem. Progress was made in the United Nations-sponsored peace talks, in particular the intensive rounds of early 2010, which generated increasing international focus on reaching a lasting solution in Cyprus. The United Nations Peacekeeping Force in Cyprus continued to cooperate with the two communities, to facilitate projects benefiting Greek and Turkish Cypriots in the buffer zone and to advance the goal of restoring normal conditions and humanitarian functions on the island.

During the year, the Assembly adopted a number of resolutions concerning security in the Mediterranean and on cooperation with European intergovernmental organizations.

Bosnia and Herzegovina

In 2010, the international community continued to assist the two entities composing the Republic of Bosnia and Herzegovina—the Federation of Bosnia and Herzegovina (where mainly Bosnian Muslims (Bosniacs) and Bosnian Croats resided) and the Republika Srpska (where mostly Bosnian Serbs resided)—in implementing the 1995 General Framework Agreement for Peace in Bosnia and Herzegovina and the annexes thereto (the Peace Agreement) [YUN 1995, p. 544]. Since the conclusion and withdrawal of the United Nations Mission in Bosnia and Herzegovina (UNMIBH) in December 2002 [YUN 2002, p. 359], those efforts had been led by the European Union (EU) and accomplished through the activities of: the Office of the High Representative (OHR) for the Implementation of the Peace Agreement on Bosnia and Herzegovina, responsible for the Agreement's civilian aspects [YUN 1996, p. 293]; the European Union Police Mission in Bosnia and Herzegovina (EUPM), responsible for helping develop sustainable policing arrangements, which was launched on 1 January 2003 [YUN 2003, p. 409] to ensure follow-on to UNMIBH; and the European Union Force (EUFOR) mission, responsible for the Agreement's military aspects, which were transferred to it by the North Atlantic Treaty Organization (NATO) in 2004 [YUN 2004, p. 401]. The Peace Implementation Council (PIC) and its Steering Board continued to monitor and facilitate the Agreement's implementation.

The High Representative reported on progress made in the Agreement's implementation process and related political developments during the year in the context of his mission implementation plan, which set out a number of core tasks to be accomplished [YUN 2003, p. 401].

On 15 December, a new visa regime came into effect that allowed Bosnia and Herzegovina citizens who were in possession of a valid Bosnia and Herzegovina biometric passport entry into Europe's borderless Schengen area, Bulgaria and Romania without a visa. The 3 October general elections were held peacefully and assessed to be generally in line with international standards. The regional situation continued to develop positively, with Croatia, Montenegro, Serbia and Turkey all playing increasingly constructive roles vis-à-vis Bosnia and Herzegovina. Progress was made on regional judicial cooperation regarding enforcement of court decisions in criminal matters. After a two-year delay, the Bosnia and Herzegovina House of Peoples, on 24 June, adopted a revised strategy aimed at closing the chapter of displacement by the end of 2014.

Despite those achievements, no progress was achieved in addressing key reforms required for further progress towards EU and NATO integration. Nationalistic and divisive rhetoric disputing the sovereignty and constitutional order of Bosnia and Herzegovina increased substantially within both entities in the run-up to the October general elections and continued afterwards. As a result, there was no concrete progress in delivering the reforms required for the closure of OHR.

The Security Council, by resolution 1948(2010) of 18 November, extended the mandate of EUFOR for a further twelve-month period (see p. 413).

Implementation of Peace Agreement

Civilian aspects

The civilian aspects of the 1995 Peace Agreement entailed a broad range of activities, including humanitarian aid and resources for infrastructure rehabilitation, establishment of political and constitutional institutions, promotion of respect for human rights and the holding of free and fair elections. The High Representative for the Implementation of the Peace Agreement, who chaired the PIC Steering Board and other key implementation bodies, was the final authority with regard to implementing the civilian aspects of the Peace Agreement [YUN 1996, p. 293].

Office of High Representative

Reports of High Representative. The High Representative, Valentin Inzko (Austria), reported to the Council through the Secretary-General on the peace implementation process for the periods 1 November 2009 to 30 April 2010 [S/2010/235], 1 May to 15 October [S/2010/575] and 16 October to 20 April 2011 [S/2011/283] (see below). The Council considered the reports of the High Representative on 24 May [S/PV.6319] and 11 November [S/PV.6421].

OHR-EUSR transition. While some gains were achieved in 2010 in the remaining objectives and conditions [YUN 2009, p. 402] for a transition from OHR to an EU Special Representative (EUSR) presence, progress was limited. The PIC Steering Board thus determined that OHR should remain in place. In working towards transition, the OHR Mostar bureau was closed on 30 June and the staff in the Brcko District bureau was significantly reduced.

Political situation

In 2010, Bosnia and Herzegovina completed the conditions required for visa liberalization with the EU. The European Parliament voted on 7 October to grant visa-free travel to citizens of Bosnia and Herzegovina. On 8 November, the EU member States decided to abolish short-term visa requirements for Bosnia and Herzegovina citizens holding biometric passports. That decision entered into force on 15 December and was widely welcomed and celebrated in the country.

Bosnia and Herzegovina also continued to benefit from improved and constructive relations with its immediate neighbours—Croatia, Montenegro and Serbia—creating perhaps a better regional political environment than at any time since the signing of the Dayton Peace Agreement, according to the High Representative.

Despite progress on the Euro-Atlantic agenda and improved relations in the region, the overall political climate inside Bosnia and Herzegovina continued to be negative. Before the October general elections, divisive anti-Dayton rhetoric disputing the sovereignty and constitutional order of Bosnia and Herzegovina increased markedly. Also, the Republika Srpska adopted a new law governing the holding of referendums in that entity, and other actions threatened earlier achievements in coping with and overcoming the country's legacy of war crimes.

While Republika Srpska leaders focused attacks on the State of Bosnia and Herzegovina and its institutions, the Federation also experienced a number of negative political developments. They included attempts to roll back the reform of the civil service and to politicize it, and steps to shift responsibilities such as education, culture and public administration from the Federation down to the cantons. In the run-up to the October general elections, some Croat political leaders openly called for the creation of a third entity within Bosnia and Herzegovina and expressed dissatisfaction with elements of the electoral system. In that context, relations among members of the governing coalition in the Federation remained strained.

The general elections were held on 3 October and were assessed to be generally free and fair by international election observation missions. The election results were continued on 2 November and the new Bosnia and Herzegovina Presidency was sworn in on 10 November. Government formation, however, was prevented by political disputes between two political blocs and by significant delays by some cantons in appointing their delegates to the Federation House of Peoples. As a result, no State-level Government had been established as at the end of the year and a caretaker Government had been in place at the State level since the elections.

Bosnia and Herzegovina made no progress during the year in meeting the remaining objectives and conditions necessary for the OHR transformation to a reinforced EU presence. In fact, backsliding occurred with regard to State and defence property, and there were also difficulties in implementing the objectives related to fiscal sustainability and the rule of law. On 14 September, the Republika Srpska government took unilateral steps to regulate State property by adopting its own State Property Law which, if implemented, would make the completion of five objectives and two conditions [YUN 2008, p. 429] for the closure of OHR more difficult, specifically in relation to the apportionment of State and defence property. Further, no progress was made on constitutional reform, as the working group established by the Council of Ministers in February to implement the ruling of 22 December 2009 of the Grand Chamber of the European Court of Human Rights in the Sejdic-Finci case—brought by two Bosnians of Roma and Jewish descent to challenge the Constitution's provision that only ethnic Bosnians, Croats and Serbs could be accepted to the Presidency and the House of Peoples—failed to reach agreement.

With regard to cooperation with the International Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia (see p. 1290), OHR continued to support international and national elements in their efforts to arrest fugitive Ratko Mladic and degrade his support network inside Bosnia and Herzegovina.

As to the return of refugees and displaced persons, the Bosnia and Herzegovina House of Peoples, on 24 June after a two-year delay, adopted a revised Strategy for the Implementation of Annex 7 of the General Framework Agreement for Peace, which aimed to close the chapter of displacement in the country by the end of 2014. Due to the absence of a new government, however, no progress had been achieved by the end of the year. The Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees in Bosnia and Herzegovina remained the lead international agency for displaced persons and refugees in the country.

Concerning Brcko District, Republika Srpska complied with the High Representative's 2009 Decisions on the Brcko District's electricity supply [YUN 2009, p. 405]. However, Republika Srpska continued to send signals that raised questions about its commitment to fundamental provisions of the Brcko Final Award [YUN 1999, p. 324].

Other topics covered in the High Representative's reports included Mostar, defence and intelligence reform and decertified police officers.

Judicial reform

In 2010, progress was made in implementing the 2008 National Strategy for War Crimes Processing [YUN 2008, p. 430]. A database of outstanding war crimes cases was established and the categorization of those cases had started. Notably, the number of indictments in war crimes cases in 2010 increased significantly in comparison to previous years. Also, the transfer of cases from the State to the entity level had begun.

Progress was also made on regional judicial cooperation regarding enforcement of court decisions. In February, Bosnia and Herzegovina signed amended agreements on mutual enforcement of court decisions in criminal matters with Croatia and Serbia, and on legal aid in civil and criminal matters with Serbia. The Bosnia and Herzegovina Ministry of Justice also reached agreements on the mutual enforcement of court decisions in criminal matters and on legal aid with Montenegro in July. The agreements were signed to prevent convicted persons from fleeing to neighbouring countries to avoid punishment. By the end of September, the Bosnia and Herzegovina Ministry of Justice had received four requests for enforcement of criminal sanctions from Serbia and 28 from Croatia, and had forwarded 38 to Serbia and 32 to Croatia. Bosnia and Herzegovina had started addressing those requests and confirmed the eight-year sentence rendered in Croatia in the high-profile case against politician Branimir Glavas for war crimes against civilians.

Economic reform

On 24 March, the International Monetary Fund (IMF) Executive Board completed the first review of Bosnia and Herzegovina's economic performance under the standby arrangement [YUN 2009, p. 403] and approved the immediate disbursement of the second and the third tranches of IMF funding, totalling €138.4 million. In May, an IMF mission visited Bosnia and Herzegovina for the second review of the country's performance under the standby arrangement. IMF notified the Bosnia and Herzegovina authorities on 20 September of the latter's completion of the prior actions agreed with the mission. That allowed the IMF Executive Board, on 15 October, to complete the second and the third review of economic performance under the standby arrangement, thus freeing up some €133 million.

Public administration reform

Limited progress was made in public administration reform in 2010, and the civil service continued to be a target for attempts by leaders to allow greater political control over appointments. The 2006 Bosnia and Herzegovina Public Administration Reform Strategy and its various action plans [YUN 2006, p. 456] remained only partially implemented; however, a new Public Administration Reform Coordinator was appointed.

Numerous senior service appointments remained long overdue at the State level. During the year, there was a rollback of crucial reforms in the Federation that were sponsored by the international community, including measures by five cantons towards establishing their own civil service legislation, following a May decision by the Federation Constitutional Court declaring certain provisions of the Federation Civil Service Law unconstitutional. In October, the Federation Constitutional Court adopted another decision that weakened Federation institutions and opened the door to further Constitutional Court challenges to Federation and cantonal legislation. In the ruling, the Court determined that certain articles of the Law on Federation Ministries were not in accordance with provisions of the Federation Constitution, and that education and cultural policy were in the domain of the cantons. As a result, the majority of the cantons took steps towards establishing their own civil service administrations.

Media development

The reform of the public broadcasting system in Bosnia and Herzegovina continued to proceed slowly. Owing to the continuing lack of political support for the creation of a unified system, cooperation among the three public broadcasters remained poor. Many elements of the State-level public broadcasting system law, adopted in 2005 [YUN 2005, p. 462], had not been put into effect. The Public Broadcasting System Board had yet to adopt a statute and to register the Public Broadcasting Corporation (responsible for streamlining the activities of the three broadcasters).

The Communications Regulatory Agency, in charge of regulating the telecommunications and electronic media sectors, remained in a difficult position due to the continuing failure of the authorities to appoint either its Council or its General Director.

In terms of media freedom, 2010 was again characterized by numerous assaults by political parties on that ideal. During the pre-election period, the High Representative once again had to remind political parties that the media should be allowed to report freely, accurately and fairly from all parts of the country. Particularly alarming were efforts by political parties to deny certain media access to information or to try to influence their editorial policies. In the light of direct budgetary funding to public and private media outlets, the Organization for Security and Cooperation in Europe (OSCE) had to call on government institutions to improve their transparency when engaging with the media sector.

Relations with other countries

Bosnia and Herzegovina's relations with other countries in the region continued to develop positively. On 30 March, Serbia's Parliament passed a landmark resolution condemning crimes committed in Srebrenica in July 1995 [YUN 1995, p. 529], which represented an important step towards easing tensions between the two countries. The President of Serbia, Boris Tadic, and the newly elected President of Croatia, Ivo Josipovic, visited Bosnia and Herzegovina in April; they urged moderation, pressed for reconciliation and publicly supported the sovereignty and territorial integrity of Bosnia and Herzegovina. On 11 July, high-level representatives of neighbouring countries, including President Tadic, attended the Srebrenica commemorations. Those visits not only furthered regional cooperation and reconciliation, but also created an opportunity to deliver concrete progress on a wide range of outstanding issues, including increased cooperation in the judicial sector.

Turkey also played an important role by holding trilateral talks with Croatia and Bosnia and Herzegovina, on one hand, and Serbia and Bosnia and Herzegovina, on the other. As a result, Belgrade granted agrément to Bosnia and Herzegovina's Ambassador-designate to Serbia, who was accredited in March. Moreover, the Istanbul Declaration, signed in late April by the Presidents of Bosnia and Herzegovina, Serbia and Turkey, committed the three countries to improving their relations and to supporting the territorial integrity and Euro-Atlantic integration prospects of Bosnia and Herzegovina.

Communication. On 28 January [S/2010/51], Turkey transmitted to the Security Council the Conclusions on developments in Bosnia and Herzegovina of the second meeting of the Political Directors of the South-East European Cooperation Process (Antalya, Turkey, 25 January).

Acting under Chapter VII of the Charter,

1. Reaffirms once again its support for the General Framework Agreement for Peace in Bosnia and Herzegovina and the annexes thereto (collectively the "Peace Agreement"), as well as for the Dayton Agreement on Implementing the Federation of Bosnia and Herzegovina of 10 November 1995, and calls upon the parties to comply strictly with their obligations under those Agreements;

2. Reiterates that the primary responsibility for the further successful implementation of the Peace Agreement lies with the authorities in Bosnia and Herzegovina themselves and that the continued willingness of the international community and major donors to assume the political, military and economic burden of implementation and reconstruction efforts will be determined by the compliance and active participation by all the authorities in Bosnia and Herzegovina in implementing the Peace Agreement and rebuilding a civil society, in particular in full cooperation with the International Tribunal for the Prosecution of Persons Responsible for Serious Violations of International Humanitarian Law Committed in the Territory of the Former Yugoslavia since 1991, in strengthening joint institutions, which foster the building of a fully functioning self-sustaining State able to integrate itself into the European structures, and in facilitating returns of refugees and displaced persons;

3. Reminds the parties once again that, in accordance with the Peace Agreement, they have committed themselves to cooperate fully with all entities involved in the implementation of this peace settlement, as described in the Peace Agreement, or which are otherwise authorized by the Security Council, including the International Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia, as it carries out its responsibilities for dispensing justice impartially, and underlines that full cooperation by States and entities with the Tribunal includes, inter alia, the surrender for trial or apprehension of all persons indicted by the Tribunal and the provision of information to assist in Tribunal investigations;

4. Emphasizes its full support for the continued role of the High Representative for Bosnia and Herzegovina in monitoring the implementation of the Peace Agreement and giving guidance to and coordinating the activities of the civilian organizations and agencies involved in assisting the parties to implement the Peace Agreement, and reaffirms that, under annex 10 of the Peace Agreement, the High Representative is the final authority in theatre regarding the interpretation of civilian implementation of the Peace Agreement and that, in case of dispute, he may give his interpretation and make recommendations, and make binding decisions as he judges necessary on issues as elaborated by the Peace Implementation Council in Bonn, Germany, on 9 and 10 December 1997;

5. Expresses its support for the declarations of the ministerial meetings of the Peace Implementation Council;

6. Reaffirms its intention to keep implementation of the Peace Agreement and the situation in Bosnia and Herzegovina under close review, taking into account the reports submitted pursuant to paragraphs 18 and 21 below, and any recommendations those reports might include, and its readiness to consider the imposition of measures if any party fails significantly to meet its obligations under the Peace Agreement;

7. Recalls the support of the authorities of Bosnia and Herzegovina for the European Union Force and the continued North Atlantic Treaty Organization presence and their confirmation that both are the legal successors to the Stabilization Force for the fulfilment of their missions for the purposes of the Peace Agreement, its annexes and appendices and relevant Security Council resolutions and can take such actions as are required, including the use of force, to ensure compliance with annexes 1-A and 2 of the Peace Agreement and relevant Council resolutions;

8. Pays tribute to those Member States which participated in the multinational stabilization force (the European Union Force), and in the continued North Atlantic Treaty Organization presence, established in accordance with its resolution 1575(2004) and extended by its resolutions 1639(2005), 1722(2006), 1785(2007), 1845(2008) and 1895(2009), and welcomes their willingness to assist the parties to the Peace Agreement by continuing to deploy a multinational stabilization force (the European Union Force) and by maintaining a continued North Atlantic Treaty Organization presence;

9. Welcomes the intention of the European Union to maintain a European Union military operation to Bosnia and Herzegovina from November 2010;

10. Authorizes the Member States acting through or in cooperation with the European Union to establish for a further period of twelve months, starting from the date of the adoption of the present resolution, a multinational stabilization force (the European Union Force) as a legal successor to the Stabilization Force under unified command and control, which will fulfil its missions in relation to the implementation of annexes 1-A and 2 of the Peace Agreement in cooperation with the North Atlantic Treaty Organization Headquarters presence in accordance with the arrangements agreed between the North Atlantic Treaty Organization and the European Union as communicated to the Security Council in their letters of 19 November 2004, which recognize that the European Union Force will have the main peace stabilization role under the military aspects of the Peace Agreement;

11. Welcomes the decision of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization to continue to maintain a presence in Bosnia and Herzegovina in the form of a North Atlantic Treaty Organization Headquarters in order to continue to assist in implementing the Peace Agreement in conjunction with the European Union Force, and authorizes the Member States acting through or in cooperation with the North Atlantic Treaty Organization to continue to maintain a North Atlantic Treaty Organization Headquarters as a legal successor to the Stabilization Force under unified command and control, which will fulfil its missions in relation to the implementation of annexes 1-A and 2 of the Peace Agreement in cooperation with the European Union Force in accordance with the arrangements agreed between the North Atlantic Treaty Organization and the European Union as communicated to the Security Council in their letters of

19 November 2004, which recognize that the European Union Force will have the main peace stabilization role under the military aspects of the Peace Agreement;

12. Reaffirms that the Peace Agreement and the provisions of its previous relevant resolutions shall apply to and in respect of both the European Union Force and the North Atlantic Treaty Organization presence as they have applied to and in respect of the Stabilization Force and that, therefore, references in the Peace Agreement, in particular in annex 1-A and the appendices thereto, and in relevant resolutions to the Implementation Force and/or the Stabilization Force, the North Atlantic Treaty Organization and the North Atlantic Council shall be read as applying, as appropriate, to the North Atlantic Treaty Organization presence, the European Union Force, the European Union and the Political and Security Committee and Council of the European Union respectively;

13. Expresses its intention to consider the terms of further authorization as necessary in the light of developments in the implementation of the Peace Agreement and the situation in Bosnia and Herzegovina;

14. Authorizes the Member States acting under paragraphs 10 and 11 above to take all necessary measures to effect the implementation of and to ensure compliance with annexes 1-A and 2 of the Peace Agreement, and stresses that the parties shall continue to be held equally responsible for the compliance with those annexes and shall be equally subject to such enforcement action by the European Union Force and the North Atlantic Treaty Organization presence as may be necessary to ensure the implementation of those annexes and the protection of the European Union Force and the North Atlantic Treaty Organization presence;

15. Authorizes Member States to take all necessary measures, at the request of either the European Union Force or the North Atlantic Treaty Organization Headquarters, in defence of the European Union Force or the North Atlantic Treaty Organization presence respectively, and to assist both organizations in carrying out their missions, and recognizes the right of both the European Union Force and the North Atlantic Treaty Organization presence to take all necessary measures to defend themselves from attack or threat of attack;

22. Decides to remain seized of the matter.

Military and police aspects

EUFOR

The European Union Force (EUFOR) mission in Bosnia and Herzegovina executed the military aspects of the Peace Agreement as specified in annexes 1-A and 2, which were transferred to it by NATO in 2004 [YUN 2004, p. 401]. Its 2010 activities were described in four reports, covering the periods from 1 December 2009 to 28 February 2010 and 1 March to 31 May 2010 [S/2010/510], 1 June to 31 August [S/2010/656] and 1 September 2010 to 28 February 2011 [S/2012/138], submitted by the EU High Representative for Foreign Affairs and Security Policy in accordance with various Security Council resolutions.

At year's end, the force of some 1,300 EUFOR troops was concentrated in Sarajevo, with liaison and observation teams deployed throughout Bosnia and Herzegovina. EUFOR continued to implement its key military tasks of supporting the country's efforts to maintain a safe and secure environment and providing capacity-building and training support to the armed forces of Bosnia and Herzegovina. It also continued to support the national law enforcement agencies in fighting organized crime, in close cooperation with the European Union Police Mission and the International Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia in the search for persons indicted for war crimes. On 25 January, the EU Council decided to start providing the armed forces of Bosnia and Herzegovina with non-executive capacity-building and training support; full operational capability was achieved on 1 July.

EUPM

The European Union Police Mission (EUPM), which was established as part of a broader rule-of-law approach and welcomed by the Security Council in presidential statement S/PRST/2002/33 [YUN 2002, p. 363], became operational on 1 January 2003. In 2010, EUPM continued to support the development of Bosnia and Herzegovina's law enforcement agencies in the fight against organized crime and corruption. It also aided cooperation between police and prosecutors and between police and the prison structure, and promoted accountability within police bodies. The Mission also continued its work on the harmonization of the legal framework for police officers and police bodies and supported implementation of the police reform laws of April 2008 [YUN 2008, p. 434] through its mentoring of the Directorate for Police Coordination. All bodies and agencies foreseen by the 2008 police reform laws were formally established and possessed the necessary conditions to begin to function.

Kosovo

In 2010, the United Nations Interim Administration Mission in Kosovo (UNMIK) continued to fulfil its mandate based on Security Council resolution 1244(1999) [YUN 1999, p. 353] and in line with the reconfigured functions outlined in the Secretary-General's November 2008 report [YUN 2008, p. 441] and with presidential statement S/PRST/2008/44 [ibid., p. 442]. The Mission's reconfiguration [YUN 2009, p. 409] followed Kosovo's declaration of independence in February 2008 [YUN 2008, p. 437], the entry into force of the Kosovo Constitution on 15 June [ibid., p. 439], and the deployment of the European Union Rule of Law Mission in Kosovo (EULEX) throughout Kosovo in December [ibid., p. 442]. UNMIK activities focused primarily on the promotion of security, stability and respect for human rights. OSCE, the Kosovo Force (KFOR) and EULEX maintained their roles that complemented UNMIK within the framework of resolution 1244(1999). Serbia condemned Kosovo's declaration of independence and maintained that action by Kosovo's Provisional Institutions of Self-Government violated resolution 1244(1999), which reaffirmed Serbia's sovereignty and territorial integrity, including Kosovo and Metohija.

The International Court of Justice (ICJ), in a 22 July advisory opinion, concluded that Kosovo's declaration of independence did not violate any applicable rule of international law. Serbia stated that the main issues arising from Kosovo's unilateral declaration of independence remained unanswered. In September, the General Assembly acknowledged the ICJ advisory opinion and welcomed EU readiness to facilitate dialogue between Belgrade and Pristina.

By the end of 2010, Kosovo had been recognized by 72 States. The United Nations position on Kosovo was of status neutrality.

Political and security developments

Reports of Secretary-General. The Secretary-General reported on the implementation of the mandate of UNMIK, covering the periods from 16 December 2009 to 15 March 2010 [S/2010/169], 16 March to 15 July [S/2010/401], 16 July to 18 October [S/2010/562], and 19 October to 15 January 2011 [S/2011/43].

In 2010, UNMIK continued to engage proactively with all communities, as well as with Belgrade and Pristina and international actors, in furthering peace and stability in Kosovo and the region. The Special Representative continued to cultivate good faith relations with all sides to encourage dialogue and bridge differences. He maintained close cooperation with EULEX, which had been established within the status-neutral framework of the United Nations. UNMIK efforts were complemented by the humanitarian and development activities of the UN agencies, funds and programmes.

Following the 22 July issuance of the ICJ advisory opinion on Kosovo's declaration of independence (see p. 1286), political tensions in northern Kosovo increased. On 7 September, the Assembly of the Union of Serbian Municipalities and Settlements in Kosovo and Metohija declared that the Kosovo Serbs were citizens of Serbia, and that no illegal and violent acts could change that state of affairs. On 15 September, the Assembly met to protest General Assembly resolution 64/298 of 9 September (see p. 1287) on Kosovo and denounced the Serbian President, calling on him to resign. The Secretary-General encouraged the parties to engage in constructive dialogue and urged all sides to avoid any steps that could be seen as provocative and derail the dialogue.

The Secretary-General reaffirmed the readiness of the United Nations to contribute to the dialogue between Belgrade and Pristina, as envisaged in resolution 64/298, in close coordination with the EU. However, the collapse of the governing coalition in Kosovo and the calling of extraordinary elections delayed the start of the dialogue. The political developments in Kosovo, particularly the 12 December elections and their aftermath, slowed the momentum generated by resolution 64/298. By the end of the year, the representatives of Belgrade and Pristina had not met. EU representatives appointed to facilitate the talks, however, had held several preparatory meetings with all sides, including the United Nations.

On 27 September, President Fatmir Sejdiu resigned after the "Constitutional Court" of Kosovo ruled that he had acted in violation of the constitution by simultaneously holding the posts of President of Kosovo and head of a political party. Following Mr. Sejdiu's resignation and the withdrawal of his party from the governing coalition, early elections were held on 12 December—the first Assembly elections organized by the Kosovo authorities since the declaration of independence in February 2008. Although organizations and groups that monitored the elections gave initial positive assessments, they were soon overshadowed by an increasing number of allegations of irregularities and vote manipulation.

The situation in northern Kosovo remained volatile, with simmering interethnic tensions and a wave of attacks against members of the international community and against Kosovo Serbs associated with the Kosovo authorities. Tensions grew in the aftermath of the ICJ advisory opinion. The Secretary-General urged the sides to exercise restraint and adopt a measured, constructive approach in order to avoid further escalations. He stated that sensitive issues related to northern Kosovo could only be addressed peacefully and through continuing consultation and coordination between all relevant actors, taking into account the specific circumstances and concerns of all communities. The continued misrepresentation of UNMIK activities in northern Kosovo by some Pristina-based media, which risked placing UN staff in danger, remained a cause for concern. Other events that triggered tensions included the building by Kosovo Albanians, without UNMIK approval, of a strategically placed house on public land. A variety of unresolved property disputes, plus efforts by institutions in Pristina to exercise their authority north of the Ibër/Ibar River, including through the deployment of Kosovo police regional operations special units without EULEX agreement, continued to generate interethnic tensions. In that difficult environment, UNMIK strove to provide good offices for all the communities in northern Kosovo.

During the year, the overall security situation in Kosovo remained relatively calm despite a number of incidents. On 30 May, Belgrade-organized local elections in northern Mitrovica led to confrontations between Kosovo Serbs and Kosovo Albanians. Prompt reaction by security forces, including the Kosovo police, EULEX and Kosovo Force (KFOR), prevented clashes between the two groups. The number of murders, cases of unauthorized possession of weapons, and shooting incidents remained significant. Organized crime continued to be of concern throughout Kosovo, mainly involving smuggling and narcotics trafficking. Crime affecting minority communities continued to include low-level harassment, intimidation, simple assaults, and property-related crime, mainly committed in the minority-populated areas south of the Ibër/Ibar River. KFOR introduced enhanced security operations on both sides of the river in close cooperation with Kosovo police forces and EULEX. Members of the international community were subject to intimidation, threats, harassment, theft and armed robbery.

The Security Council considered the Secretary-General's reports on 17 May [S/PV.6314], 3 August [S/PV.6367] and 12 November [S/PV.6422], respectively.

Communications. In a 25 January letter [S/2010/43], Croatia commented on the statement made by the President of Serbia at the 22 January Security Council [S/PV.6264] meeting that considered the Secretary-General's report [S/2010/5] on UNMIK activities from 16 September to 15 December 2009 [YUN 2009, p. 411].

In a 2 July letter [S/2010/355], Serbia requested an urgent Security Council meeting to discuss the serious deterioration of the security situation in the northern part of Kosovo, which had resulted in the loss of human life and threatened to provoke further violence. The Council President was asked to allow President Boris Tadic of Serbia to participate in that meeting and to make a statement.

Security Council consideration. In response to that request, the Council met on 6 July [S/PV.6353]. President Tadic stated that, on 2 July, bombs had been thrown into a crowd of Serbs in North Mitrovica. The Secretary-General's Special Representative for Kosovo called on all parties to refrain from provocative statements.

ICJ advisory opinion on declaration of independence of Kosovo

In response to General Assembly resolution 63/3 [YUN 2008, p. 1404], ICJ, on 22 July, rendered its advisory opinion on the question "Is the unilateral declaration of independence by the Provisional Institutions of Self-Government of Kosovo in accordance with international law?". The Court concluded that "the adoption of that declaration did not violate any applicable rule of international law" (see p. 1286).

EULEX

The European Union Rule of Law Mission in Kosovo (EULEX), established to undertake an enhanced operational role in the rule-of-law area, with a focus on policing, justice and customs, became fully operational in April 2009 [YUN 2009, p. 412]. It operated under the overall authority and within the status-neutral framework of the United Nations, and submitted reports to it on a regular basis. The reports of the EU High Representative for Foreign Affairs and Security Policy on EULEX activities in 2010 were annexed to the Secretary-General's reports to the Security Council on UNMIK [S/2010/169, S/2010/401, S/2010/562, S/2011/43].

In 2010, EULEX continued to work with the Kosovo rule of law authorities on planning and implementing targeted monitoring, mentoring and advising activities. Progress was made with trials and the processing of cases, including those handed over by UNMIK. In January, EULEX judges completed the cases received from UNMIK at the Supreme Court level and the number of verdicts issued by EULEX judges or by EULEX-led court panels significantly increased. The EULEX Human Rights Review Panel held its first regular session (9–11 June). The activities and results of monitoring, mentoring and advising actions from mid-2009 to 2010 were made public in the Programme Report 2010.

EULEX also tackled organized crime and corruption throughout Kosovo, and set up a task force to coordinate actions for fighting criminality in the north. On 8 June, the EU Council extended EULEX until 14 June 2012. At the end of the year, EULEX comprised over 2,800 international and local staff.

UNMIK

The United Nations Interim Administration Mission in Kosovo (UNMIK), established in 1999 [YUN 1999, p. 357] to facilitate a political process to determine Kosovo's political future, comprised five components: interim administration; institution-building; economic reconstruction; humanitarian affairs; and police and justice. Following Kosovo's declaration of independence in February 2008 [YUN 2008, p. 437] and the deployment of EULEX throughout Kosovo in 2009 [YUN 2009, p. 412], the profile and size of UNMIK was reconfigured. The Mission's strategic goal remained the promotion of security, stability and respect for human rights in Kosovo and in the region through engagement with all communities in Kosovo, with the leadership in Belgrade and Pristina, and with regional and international actors.

UNMIK was headed by the Special Representative of the Secretary-General, Lamberto Zannier (Italy).

Financing

In June, the General Assembly considered the performance report on the UNMIK budget for the period from 1 July 2008 to 30 June 2009 [A/64/604], the proposed UNMIK budget for 1 July 2010 to 30 June 2011 [A/64/661] and the related report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions (ACABQ) [A/64/660/Add.6].

On 24 December, the Assembly decided that the agenda item on UNMIK financing would remain for consideration at its resumed sixty-fifth (2011) session (decision 65/544).

Kosovo Force

In accordance with resolution 1244(1999) [YUN 1999, p. 353], the Secretary-General transmitted to the Security Council reports on the activities during 2010 of the Kosovo Force (KFOR) covering the periods from 1 January to 31 March [S/2010/381], 1 April to 30 June and 1 July to 30 September [S/2011/21], and 1 October to 31 December [S/2011/105]. As at 31 December, KFOR, which operated under NATO leadership, comprised 8,181 troops, including 1,528 troops from non-NATO countries.

During the year, KFOR transformed its military posture towards the deterrent presence stance, releasing troops from static tasks, while retaining the capability to maintain a safe and secure environment and freedom of movement to support the Kosovo police and EULEX.

Given the positive security situation, KFOR planned to reduce its troops to some 5,000 by early 2011.

The former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia

Relations with Greece

In 2010, the United Nations continued to support the negotiation process to find a solution to the name dispute between Greece and the former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia (FYROM). The 1995 Interim Accord on the normalization of relations between FYROM and Greece [YUN 1995, p. 599] detailed the difference between the two countries on the name issue. The countries exchanged views in the context of article 5 of the Accord, which provided for the continuation of negotiations with a view to reaching agreement on their differences, as described in Security Council resolutions 817(1993) [YUN 1993, p. 208] and 845(1993) [ibid., p. 209]. In February, the Personal Envoy of the Secretary-General for the Greece-FYROM talks, Matthew Nimetz, visited both countries. The Secretary-General also held talks with the Foreign Minister of FYROM in September. The issue remained unresolved at year's end.

Communication. Greece, in a 21 December letter [A/65/667-S/2010/672] to the Secretary-General, stated that FYROM had not reciprocated Greece's positive stance.

Georgia

In 2010, international efforts continued to advance the Georgian-Abkhaz peace process, based on the 2001 Basic Principles for the Distribution of Competences between Tbilisi (Georgia's Government) and Sukhumi (the Abkhaz leadership) [YUN 2001, p. 386]. That document was intended to serve as a framework for negotiations on the status of Abkhazia as a sovereign entity within the State of Georgia.

Discussions also continued on the situation in Georgia following the 2008 hostilities in South Ossetia [YUN 2008, p. 454]. The Russian Federation recognized Abkhazia and South Ossetia as independent States, while Georgia declared them territories occupied by the Russian Federation.

Geneva talks. In accordance with the 12 August 2008 six-point ceasefire plan between Georgia and the Russian Federation [YUN 2008, p. 456] and the 8 September 2008 provisions for implementing the ceasefire plan [ibid., p. 457], international discussions under the co-chairmanship of the EU, the United Nations and OSCE to address security and stability and humanitarian issues in Georgia continued to be held throughout 2010. At the ninth (28 January), tenth (29–30 March), eleventh (7–8 June), twelfth (26–27 July), thirteenth (14 October) and fourteenth (16 December) sessions, participants met in two working groups.

Working Group I discussed the security situation and concerns regarding detentions, procedures for crossings and other developments on the ground, including reports of military-related activities. They also continued discussions on the key issues of non-use of force and international security arrangements. Working Group II addressed humanitarian issues, including the establishment of conditions conducive to the safe and sustainable return of refugees and internally displaced persons (IDPs), and related matters, such as property rights, access for humanitarian activities and proposals related to possible practical measures, including the technical aspects of registration, profiling and "go-and-see" visits. It also discussed possible humanitarian measures to meet the needs of IDPs, including access to gas supply and to potable and irrigation water.

IDPs and refugees. Pursuant to General Assembly resolution 63/307 [YUN 2009, p. 779], the Secretary-General reported in June [A/64/819] on the status of internally displaced persons (IDPs) and refugees from Abkhazia, Georgia, and the Tskhinvali region/South Ossetia, Georgia, covering the period from 16 July 2009 to 30 May 2010. The Secretary-General recalled that significant displacement of civilians followed the armed hostilities between the Georgian and Abkhaz sides in 1992 [YUN 1992, p. 391] and the hostilities which started in 2008 in the Tskhinvali region/South Ossetia [YUN 2008, p. 414].

No major developments took place during the reporting period with regard to the exercise by the refugees and IDPs of their right to return. Minor return movements were observed in the areas adjacent to the Tskhinvali region/South Ossetia, bringing the number of displaced persons returning to those areas to more than 30,000. According to the Ministry for Refugees and Accommodation of Georgia, as at 31 December 2009, there were 249,365 IDPs in Georgia, of whom 233,453 (93.6 per cent) were persons displaced during and following the Georgian-Abkhaz conflict in the 1990s.

According to the Federal Migration Service of the Russian Federation, 4,234 persons from Georgia applied for recognition as refugees in the Russian Federation from 2004 to October 2009, 200 persons were recognized as refugees and 2,160 persons were granted temporary asylum. The actual number of refugees from Georgia to the Russian Federation was considered to be significantly higher, many having acquired Russian citizenship and therefore not reflected in the official statistics. Moreover, it was estimated that some 10,000 persons remained displaced within the Tskhinvali region/South Ossetia.

The international discussions held in Geneva under the co-chairmanship of the EU, the OSCE and the United Nations remained the only forum in which the issues related not only to regional security but also to the problems concerning refugees and IDPs were being addressed. The Secretary-General urged all participants in the discussions to engage constructively, with a genuine will to improve the situation of the local population. The lack of agreement on political issues should not be used as a pretext for not addressing the needs of refugees and IDPs.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 7 September [meeting 115], the General Assembly adopted resolution 64/296 [draft: A/64/L.62] by recorded vote (50-17-86) [agenda item 14].

Status of internally displaced persons and refugees from Abkhazia, Georgia, and the Tskhinvali region/South Ossetia, Georgia

The General Assembly,

Recalling all its relevant resolutions on the protection of and assistance to internally displaced persons, including its resolutions 62/153 of 18 December 2007, 62/249 of 15 May 2008, 63/307 of 9 September 2009 and 64/162 of 18 December 2009,

Recalling also all relevant Security Council resolutions on Georgia relating to the need for all parties to work towards a comprehensive peace and the return of internally displaced persons and refugees to their places of origin, and stressing the importance of their full and timely implementation,

Recognizing the Guiding Principles on Internal Displacement as the key international framework for the protection of internally displaced persons,

Concerned by forced demographic changes resulting from the conflicts in Georgia,

Concerned also by the humanitarian situation caused by armed conflict in August 2008, which resulted in the further forced displacement of civilians,

Mindful of the urgent need to find a solution to the problems related to forced displacement in Georgia,

Underlining the importance of the discussions that commenced in Geneva on 15 October 2008 and of continuing to address the issue of the voluntary, safe, dignified and unhindered return of internally displaced persons and refugees on the basis of internationally recognized principles and conflict-settlement practices,

Taking note of the report of the Secretary-General concerning the implementation of resolution 63/307,

1. Recognizes the right of return of all internally displaced persons and refugees and their descendants, regardless of ethnicity, to their homes throughout Georgia, including in Abkhazia and South Ossetia;

2. Stresses the need to respect the property rights of all internally displaced persons and refugees affected by the conflicts in Georgia and to refrain from obtaining property in violation of those rights;

3. Reaffirms the unacceptability of forced demographic changes;

4. Underlines the urgent need for unimpeded access for humanitarian activities to all internally displaced persons, refugees and other persons residing in all conflict-affected areas throughout Georgia;

5. Calls upon all participants in the Geneva discussions to intensify their efforts to establish a durable peace, to commit to enhanced confidence-building measures and to take immediate steps to ensure respect for human rights and create favourable security conditions conducive to the voluntary, safe, dignified and unhindered return of all internally displaced persons and refugees to their places of origin;

6. Underlines the need for the development of a timetable to ensure the voluntary, safe, dignified and unhindered return of all internally displaced persons and refugees affected by the conflicts in Georgia to their homes;

7. Requests the Secretary-General to submit to the General Assembly at its sixty-fifth session a comprehensive report on the implementation of the present resolution;

8. Decides to include in the draft agenda of its sixty-fifth session the item entitled "Protracted conflicts in the GUAM area and their implications for international peace, security and development".

UNOMIG

The United Nations Observer Mission in Georgia (UNOMIG) was established by Security Council resolution 858(1993) [YUN 1993, p. 509]. It monitored compliance with the 1994 Moscow Agreement [YUN 1994, p. 583] and fulfilled other tasks as mandated by Council resolution 937(1994) [ibid., p. 584] and subsequent resolutions. It later also carried out functions under the 12 August 2008 six-point ceasefire agreement [YUN 2008, p. 456] and 8 September implementing measures [ibid., p. 457]. In June 2009, Council members were unable to agree on the future activities of a UN stabilization mission, and the UNOMIG mandate ended effective 16 June 2009 [YUN 2009, p. 418].

Financing of UNOMIG. On 24 December, the Assembly decided that the agenda item on the financing of UNOMIG would remain for consideration at its resumed sixty-fifth (2011) session (decision 65/544).

Armenia and Azerbaijan

In 2010, Armenia and Azerbaijan maintained their positions with regard to the Nagorny Karabakh region of Azerbaijan. The conflict, which began in 1992 [YUN 1992, p. 388], was followed by a ceasefire agreement in May 1994 [YUN 1994, p. 577]. Both sides addressed communications regarding the conflict to the Secretary-General. The OSCE Minsk Group (France, Russian Federation, United States) continued to mediate the dispute between the two countries.

Communications. In letters dated 4 January [A/64/623-S/2010/19], 3 February [A/64/655-S/2010/71], 1 April [A/64/737-S/2010/171], 30 April [A/64/771-S/2010/228], 1 June [A/64/816-S/2010/312], 2 July [A/64/858-S/2010/362], 3 August [A/64/885-S/2010/420], 13 October [A/65/516-S/2010/532] and 3 December [A/65/601-S/2010/615], Azerbaijan drew the Secretary-General's attention to violations of the ceasefire by the military forces of Armenia between December 2009 and November 2010. A later letter [A/65/723-S/2011/62] detailed ceasefire violations in December.

On 8 February [A/64/658-S/2010/78] and 10 March [A/64/707-S/2010/134], Azerbaijan submitted letters regarding the eighteenth anniversary of the massacre of the Azerbaijani population in the town of Khojaly. In a 24 February response [A/64/680-S/2010/102], Armenia said that Azerbaijan intended to discredit Armenia and Nagorny Karabakh by misleading the international community.

On 27 April [A/64/760-S/2010/211], Azerbaijan stated that Armenia was undertaking measures aimed at consolidation of the occupation of Azerbaijani territories. In letters of 10 May [A/64/782-S/2010/239], 14 May

[A/64/784-S/2010/249], 25 May [A/64/795-S/2010/258] and 12 June [A/64/851-S/2010/345], Azerbaijan drew the Secretary-General's attention to the so-called "parliamentary elections" held in May in occupied Nagorny Karabakh. On 21 May [A/64/794-S/2010/257], Azerbaijan transmitted a press release from its Ministry of Foreign Affairs regarding the European Parliament's 20 May adoption of a resolution entitled "The need for an EU Strategy for the South Caucasus".

In letters of 18 May [A/64/785-S/2010/246], 27 May [A/64/798-S/2010/273] and 18 June [A/64/838-S/2010/326], Armenia said that the parliamentary elections were positively assessed by independent observers and that the European Parliament's resolution was at odds with the spirit of the Nagorny Karabakh peace process. On 25 June [A/64/849-S/2010/339], Armenia transmitted a statement by the Ministry of Foreign Affairs of the Nagorny Karabakh Republic regarding a 19 June ceasefire violation on the line of contact carried out by the Azerbaijani armed forces.

In other letters of 6 August [A/64/889-S/2010/425], 28 September [A/65/398-S/2010/500], 13 October [A/65/515-S/2010/531] and 20 October [A/65/534-S/2010/547], Azerbaijan drew the Secretary-General's attention to military aggression and provocative actions and remarks by Armenia.

In a 9 November letter [A/65/572-S/2010/585], Armenia responded to Azerbaijan's letters of 13 October and 20 October.

Armenia reported on violations of the ceasefire by the armed forces of Azerbaijan from November 2009 to December 2010 in a number of letters [A/64/700-S/2010/123, A/64/738-S/2010/174, A/64/801-S/2010/279, A/64/863-S/2010/373, A/64/898-S/2010/436, A/64/910-S/2010/469, A/65/524-S/2010/544, A/65/677-S/2010/676, A/65/749-S/2011/87].

Communications. On 28 October [A/65/545-S/2010/558], Tajikistan transmitted to the General Assembly and the Security Council the Dushanbe Declaration, adopted at the thirty-seventh session of the Organization of the Islamic Conference Council of Foreign Ministers (Dushanbe, Tajikistan, 18–20 May), in which it called for the resolution of the conflict on the basis of Azerbaijan's internationally recognized boundaries. That same date [A/65/546-S/2010/559], it also transmitted the Final Communiqué of its Annual Coordination Meeting of Ministers for Foreign Affairs (New York, 24 September), in which it condemned Armenia's aggression against Azerbaijan.

By decision 64/562 of 9 September, the General Assembly deferred consideration of the item on the situation in the occupied territories of Azerbaijan and to include it in the draft agenda of its sixty-fifth (2010) session. On 24 December, the Assembly decided that the item would remain for consideration at its resumed sixty-fifth (2011) session (decision 65/544).

Organization for Democracy and Economic Development-GUAM

The Organization for Democracy and Economic Development-GUAM (Azerbaijan, Georgia, Moldova, Ukraine), a regional cooperation organization established by the 2006 Kyiv Declaration [YUN 2006, p. 486], was headquartered in Kyiv, Ukraine. On the issue of conflict settlement, GUAM emphasized respect for sovereignty, territorial integrity and the inviolability of the internationally recognized borders of its member States.

On 24 December, the General Assembly decided that the agenda item on the protracted conflicts in the GUAM area and their implications for international peace, security and development would remain for consideration at its resumed sixty-fifth (2011) session (decision 65/544).

Cyprus

During 2010, the United Nations continued its sponsorship of the peace talks in Cyprus. The Secretary-General's Special Adviser on Cyprus, with support from the Special Representative, assisted the Greek Cypriot and Turkish Cypriot leaders in implementing the 8 July 2006 Set of Principles and Decision [YUN 2006, p. 487], which included commitment to the unification of Cyprus based on a bizonal, bi-communal federation and political equality, and an agreement to meet regularly on issues affecting the day-to-day life of the Cypriot people. Under UN auspices, the leaders of the two sides participated in the second phase of the negotiations initiated following the 21 March 2008 agreement [YUN 2008, p. 464] to find a mutually acceptable solution to the Cypriot problem. Discussions centred on three issues: governance and power-sharing; EU-related matters; and economic matters. The leaders made steady progress on those three areas and reached further convergence on a number of issues. On 14 October, the Limnitis/Yeşilirmak crossing point was officially opened. By the end of the year, the Mine Action Centre completed clearance of all mined areas that had been released to the United Nations Peacekeeping Force in Cyprus (UNFICYP); however, the sides continued to withhold access to the four remaining mined areas in the buffer zone.

UNFICYP continued to assist in the restoration of normal conditions and in humanitarian functions. The Security Council extended the mandate of UNFICYP twice, the second time until 15 June 2011.

Political and security developments

Good offices mission

During the year, the Secretary-General's Special Adviser on Cyprus continued to facilitate the negotiations aimed at reaching a comprehensive settlement that would safeguard the fundamental and legitimate rights and interests of Greek Cypriots and Turkish Cypriots. He was supported by the Secretary-General's Special Representative and Head of UNFICYP, who served as his deputy on issues relating to the good offices of the Secretary-General. The Secretary-General described UN mediation efforts during 2010 in reports to the Security Council of 11 May [S/2010/238] and 24 November [S/2010/603], as well as in a later report [S/2011/112].

The Secretary-General stated that progress was made during the two rounds of intensive negotiations that took place from 11 to 13 and 25 to 27 January. In a visit to Cyprus (31 January–2 February), the Secretary-General showed his support for the talks and stressed the need to strive for their successful conclusion. On 1 February, the Greek and Turkish Cypriot leaders issued a joint statement renewing their commitment to achieve a solution in the shortest possible time.

Between January and March, the Secretary-General also held several meetings with key leaders and senior officials from Greece, Turkey and the European Commission.

Following the completion of the first phase of the discussions in August 2009 [YUN 2009, p. 423], the second phase focused on three topics: governance and power-sharing; EU-related matters; and economic matters. Discussions on governance and power-sharing concerned the executive branch, the legislature, federal competences and external relations. Discussions on EU matters focused mainly on how the positions of a united Cyprus in EU bodies would be determined, the implementation of the acquis (body of EU law), derogations (partial revocation of laws), and how to accommodate a comprehensive settlement within the EU legal framework. Discussions on economic matters addressed federal competences and functions and the federal budget. The leaders made progress on those issues. Earlier negotiations on property resulted in a joint paper on categories of affected property—the first joint paper on the subject. No meetings were specifically devoted to substantive discussions related to the issues of territory and security and guarantees. Before a mutually agreed pause in the negotiations in light of the elections in the north of Cyprus, the leaders issued a joint statement on 30 March [S/2010/238, annex II] reaffirming their commitment to the process.

Following the election of Derviş Eroğlu as the new Turkish Cypriot leader on 18 April, reunification talks resumed on 26 May with an agreement to focus discussions on property.

In early September, both sides offered comprehensive proposals on property and then worked on “marrying” the two proposals. Discussions focused on the establishment of a property commission, mechanisms for exchange, the extent of restitution and types of compensation. On 21 October, the Secretary-General expressed his concern about the lack of progress in phone calls with the Greek and Turkish Cypriot leaders. On 18 November, he met with the two leaders in New York, reviewed progress on all the areas of the negotiations, identified several core issues and asked the leaders to work on them and report back to him on progress at the end of January 2011. Both leaders agreed to intensify contacts with one another in order to establish a practical plan for overcoming their differences.

Since their establishment in 2008 [YUN 2008, p. 464], three technical committees had made progress in implementing confidence-building measures. The technical committee on crime and criminal matters had launched the distribution of road safety leaflets at crossing points and conducted a seminar on children at risk. The joint contact room for the timely exchange and provision of information on crime and criminal matters had been functioning on a daily basis since its establishment in May 2009, and work was ongoing to provide it with longer-term premises. The technical committee on cultural heritage was implementing measures related to a pilot project on the restoration of two places of worship, the compilation of an inventory of immovable cultural heritage and the development of an educational computer programme, as well as other outreach activities. Moreover, the committee's advisory board for the preservation, physical protection and restoration of the immovable cultural heritage of Cyprus had been carrying out on-site assessment visits throughout the island. The technical committee on the environment had focused on cooperation for the elimination of illegal dumping sites and the rehabilitation of the affected areas within the buffer zone. The passage of ambulances through crossing points in cases of emergency, established by the technical committee on health matters, was functioning. The United Nations Development Programme and UNFICYP continued to support the implementation of some of the key confidence-building measures arising from the activities of the technical committees. On 29 March, work was launched on the seventh crossing point linking the villages of Limnitis/Yeşilirmak in the north and Kato Pyrgos in the south. The Limnitis/Yeşilirmak crossing point was officially opened on 14 October.

The Secretary-General made a number of proposals for consideration by both the leaders and the communities: both leaders were urged to consider carefully interactions with the press and focus messages on convergences and the way ahead; the leaders should step forward individually and jointly to deliver more constructive and harmonized messages; parliamentarians and political actors on both sides should demonstrate more consistently their support for the negotiation process by allowing the two leaders adequate space to negotiate a potential settlement; and the participation and engagement of civil society in the effort to reach a solution and in its implementation should be encouraged. The Secretary-General also expressed his intention to conduct a broader assessment of the United Nations presence in Cyprus, with a view to recommending ways to adjust to ongoing developments.

Communications. Throughout 2010, the Secretary-General received letters from the Government of Cyprus and from Turkish Cypriot authorities containing charges and counter-charges, protests and accusations, and explanations of positions regarding the question of Cyprus. Letters from the “Turkish Republic of Northern Cyprus” were transmitted by Turkey. In communications dated between 17 February and 5 December, Cyprus reported violations of international air traffic regulations and the national airspace of Cyprus by Turkish military aircraft [A/64/671-S/2010/92, A/64/746-S/2010/196, A/64/859-S/2010/363, A/65/480-S/2010/502, A/65/609-S/2010/622]. The “Turkish Republic of Northern Cyprus” refuted the allegations, stating that the flights mentioned took place within the sovereign airspace of the “Turkish Republic of Northern Cyprus” [A/64/689-S/2010/114, A/64/772-S/2010/227, A/65/522-S/2010/540].

On 2 November [A/65/555-S/2010/570], Turkey transmitted a letter from the “Turkish Republic of Northern Cyprus” enclosing a 1 November letter from President Eroğlu, which referred to the speech made by President Demetris Christofias of Cyprus on 24 September during the sixty-fifth session of the General Assembly. On 23 December [A/65/674-S/2010/674], Turkey transmitted a 21 December press release issued by its Ministry of Foreign Affairs regarding the bilateral agreements concluded by the Greek Cypriot Administration with Eastern Mediterranean coastal States related to maritime jurisdiction, stating that such agreements were in disregard of the Turkish Cypriots’ existing and inherent equal rights and interests, and had an adverse effect on the ongoing settlement negotiations.

On 24 December, the General Assembly decided that the agenda item on the question of Cyprus would remain for consideration at its resumed sixty-fifth (2011) session (decision 65/544).

UNFICYP

The United Nations Peacekeeping Force in Cyprus (UNFICYP), established by Security Council resolution 186(1964) in 1964 [YUN 1964, p. 165], continued in 2010 to monitor the ceasefire lines between the Turkish and Turkish Cypriot forces on the northern side and the Cypriot National Guard on the southern side of the island; maintain the military status quo and prevent recurrence of fighting; and undertake humanitarian and economic activities.

On 27 May [S/2010/260], the Secretary-General informed the Council President of his intention to appoint Lisa Bittenheim (United States) as his new Special Representative for Cyprus and head of UNFICYP to replace Tayé-Brook Zerihoun (Ethiopia), who completed his assignment on 30 April. The Council took note of the intention on 28 May [S/2010/261]. During 2010, Alexander Downer (Australia) continued as the Secretary-General’s Special Adviser on Cyprus.

As at 31 October, UNFICYP, under the command of Rear Admiral Mario César Sánchez Debernardi (Peru), comprised 859 troops and 68 civilian police.

The Secretary-General submitted two reports covering UNFICYP activities for the periods from 21 November 2009 to 20 May 2010 [S/2010/264] and from 21 May to 20 November [S/2010/605].

Activities

Report of Secretary-General (May). In his May report [S/2010/264], the Secretary-General stated that the situation in the buffer zone remained stable. The opposing forces continued sporadically to employ low-level tactical measures, which provoked reactions from the other side, mostly in the centre of Nicosia. The Cyprus National Guard had worked with UNFICYP on assessing the military confidence-building measures UNFICYP had proposed, such as the un-manning and/or closing of observation posts in areas where the opposing troops were particularly close to each other. No concrete steps had been taken by the Turkish Forces/Turkish Cypriot Security Forces in that regard.

Demining operations continued to make good progress: by the end of May, 59 of 72 minefields had been cleared, more than 20,000 mines destroyed and more than 9 square kilometres of land cleared of mines. The introduction of mechanical clearance equipment in April had greatly improved overall clearance rates. Early in May, the Turkish Forces committed themselves in writing to releasing 9 of the 10 remaining minefields attributable to them. In addition, the Turkish Forces undertook to release four more minefields located outside the buffer zone.

Cypriots from both sides continued to seek assistance from UNFICYP in addressing day-to-day issues arising from the division of the island, including in relation to economic, social and educational matters, the transfer of the deceased, and commemorative, religious and socio-cultural gatherings. The Force facilitated the implementation of a UNDP-supported joint project for the stabilization of buildings at the Ledra Street/Lokmaçi crossing in the buffer zone. Work on the planned opening of a crossing at Limnitis/Yeşilirmak through the buffer zone was under way. UNFICYP facilitated 118 bicommunal events with the participation of 5,648 people from both communities. It also conducted 59 humanitarian convoys and visits to 361 Greek Cypriots, most of whom were elderly and in need of medical attention, and to 128 Maronites in the north. The technical committee on cultural heritage, supported by UNFICYP and its advisory board, continued to discuss and plan for the preservation, protection and restoration of immovable cultural heritage throughout the island.

As UNFICYP continued to play an essential role on the island, including in support of the good offices mission, the Secretary-General recommended that the Security Council extend the Force's mandate until 15 December 2010.

SECURITY COUNCIL ACTION

On 15 June [meeting 6339], the Security Council adopted resolution 1930(2010) by vote (14-1-0). The draft [S/2010/311] was submitted by China, France, the Russian Federation, the United Kingdom and the United States.

The Security Council,

Welcoming the report of the Secretary-General of 28 May 2010 on the United Nations operation in Cyprus and his report of 11 May 2010 on his mission of good offices in Cyprus,

Noting that the Government of Cyprus has agreed that, in view of the prevailing conditions on the island, it is necessary to keep the United Nations Peacekeeping Force in Cyprus beyond 15 June 2010,

Echoing the Secretary-General's firm belief that the responsibility for finding a solution lies first and foremost with the Cypriots themselves, stressing that there now exists a unique opportunity to make decisive progress in a timely fashion, and reaffirming the primary role of the United Nations in assisting the parties to bring the Cyprus conflict and division of the island to a comprehensive and durable settlement,

Commending the political leadership shown by the Greek Cypriot and Turkish Cypriot leaders, and warmly welcoming the progress made so far in the fully fledged negotiations, and the leaders' joint statements, including those of 23 May and 1 July 2008,

Strongly urging the leaders to increase the momentum of the negotiations to ensure the full exploitation of this opportunity to reach a comprehensive settlement based on a bicommunal, bizonal federation with political equality, as set out in the relevant resolutions,

Emphasizing the importance that the international community attaches to all parties engaging fully, flexibly and constructively in the negotiations, echoing the view of the Secretary-General that a solution is well within reach, and looking forward to decisive progress in the near future, building on the progress made to date, consistent with the hope expressed by the two sides on 21 December 2009 that, if possible, 2010 would be the year of solution,

Welcoming the intention of the Secretary-General to keep the Security Council informed of further developments and progress, and noting the intention of the Secretary-General to submit a report in November 2010 on the state of the process,

Welcoming also the implementation of some of the confidence-building measures announced by the leaders, and calling for a renewed effort to implement the remaining measures and for agreement on and implementation of further steps to build trust between the communities,

Reaffirming the importance of continued crossings of the Green Line by Cypriots, encouraging the opening by mutual agreement of other crossing points, welcoming the continuing construction work towards the opening of the Limnitis/Yeşilirmak crossing point, and urging implementation of the second phase of the restoration of the Ledra Street crossing,

Convinced of the many important benefits for all Cypriots that would flow from a comprehensive and durable Cyprus settlement, and encouraging both sides clearly to explain these benefits, as well as the need for increased flexibility and compromise in order to secure them, to both communities well in advance of any eventual referendums,

Highlighting the supportive role that the international community will continue to play in helping the Greek Cypriot and Turkish Cypriot leaders to exploit fully the current opportunity,

Taking note of the assessment of the Secretary-General that the security situation on the island and along the Green Line remains stable, and urging all sides to avoid any action which could lead to an increase in tension, undermine the good progress achieved so far or damage the goodwill on the island,

Recalling the Secretary-General's firm belief that the situation in the buffer zone would be improved if both sides accepted the 1989 aide-memoire used by the United Nations,

Welcoming the progress made in proceeding with demining activities, and looking forward to the clearance of the remaining minefields,

Welcoming also the progress and continuation of the important activities of the Committee on Missing Persons in Cyprus, and trusting that this process will promote reconciliation between the communities,

Agreeing that the active participation of civil society groups is essential to the political process and can contribute to making any future settlement sustainable, welcoming all efforts to promote bicommunal contacts and events, including on the part of all United Nations bodies on the island, and urging the two sides to promote the active engagement of civil society and the encouragement of cooperation between economic and commercial bodies and to remove all obstacles to such contacts,

Stressing the need for the Council to pursue a rigorous, strategic approach to peacekeeping deployments,

Welcoming the intention of the Secretary-General to keep all peacekeeping operations, including those of the Force, under close review, and noting the importance of contingency planning in relation to the settlement, including recommendations, as appropriate, for further adjustments to the mandate, force levels and concept of operations of the Force, taking into account developments on the ground and the views of the parties,

Welcoming also the continued efforts of Mr. Alexander Downer as the Special Adviser to the Secretary-General on Cyprus, with a mandate to assist the parties in the conduct of fully fledged negotiations aimed at reaching a comprehensive settlement, expressing its appreciation for the work of Mr. Tayé-Brook Zerihoun as the Special Representative of the Secretary-General in Cyprus, and welcoming the appointment of Ms. Lisa Buitenheim as the new Special Representative of the Secretary-General,

Echoing the Secretary-General's gratitude to the Government of Cyprus and the Government of Greece for their voluntary contributions to the funding of the Force, and his request for further voluntary contributions from other countries and organizations, Abstaining: None.

Report of Secretary-General (November). In his November report [S/2010/605], the Secretary-General said that the situation in the buffer zone remained stable and the overall number of military violations committed by the opposing forces had fallen to the lowest level in some years. The relationship between UNFICYP and the opposing forces continued to be good. For the third successive year, both the Cyprus National Guard and the Turkish Forces announced the cancellation of their major annual exercises, which was a welcome development in line with efforts to create a climate conducive to the ongoing negotiation process. Discussions on military confidence-building measures had been initiated by UNFICYP and would need the support and cooperation of both opposing forces. Also, restrictions on the movement of locally employed UN civilian personnel continued. Positions established, in violation of the status quo, by the opposing forces in the Dherinia area had remained unchanged and civilians routinely continued to challenge UNFICYP authority within the buffer zone.

Demining in the buffer zone continued to make good progress: 70 of 73 minefields released to UNFICYP had been cleared, with more than 25,500 mines removed and 9.5 square kilometres cleared of mines. Of the 13 mined areas released to UNFICYP by the Turkish Forces, 10 had been cleared. Clearance of the remaining fields was scheduled to be completed by the end of December. Access to the last four mined areas in the buffer zone had not yet been granted by the Cyprus National Guard or the Turkish Forces. The Secretary-General called on the parties to release those areas so that a mine-free buffer zone could be delivered for all Cypriots within the time frame of the project.

In a major development, the seventh crossing point across the Green Line, which marked the separation of the island, was opened at Limnitis/Yeşilirmak on 14 October. On 1 November, the leaders agreed to establish an ad hoc joint committee to facilitate the opening of other crossing points—a welcome sign of political will to bring the communities closer together. UNFICYP continued to conduct humanitarian convoys and visits to 357 Greek Cypriots and 127 Maronites in the north, many of whom were in need of constant medical or in-home care. Turkish Cypriots living in the south were also assisted in obtaining welfare services, including essential services, medical care and education. In addition, the Force facilitated more than 100 bicomunal events, with the participation of more than 5,000 people. UNFICYP continued to enable access to sites and icons of religious and cultural significance to both communities. The humanitarian work of the Committee on Missing Persons continued and, by November, the remains of nearly 700 individuals had been exhumed on both sides of the buffer zone by the Committee's bicomunal teams of archaeologists. The remains of 263 persons, including those of 36 individuals during the reporting period alone, had been returned to their families. The Secretary-General urged all parties to prevent the work of the Committee from being politicized. Complete access to military areas in the north for the purposes of exhumation remained crucial; the Turkish Forces were urged to adopt a more forthcoming approach, given the humanitarian dimension of the issue.

The Secretary-General recommended that the Council extend the UNFICYP mandate until 15 June 2011.

SECURITY COUNCIL ACTION

On 14 December [meeting 6445], the Security Council adopted resolution 1953(2010) by vote (14-1-0). The draft [S/2010/631] was submitted by China, France, the Russian Federation, the United Kingdom and the United States.

The Security Council,

Welcoming the report of the Secretary-General of 26 November 2010 on the United Nations operation in Cyprus and his report of 24 November 2010 on his mission of good offices in Cyprus,

Welcoming the progress made so far in the fully fledged negotiations, and the leaders' joint statements, including those of 23 May and 1 July 2008,

Expressing concern at the slow pace of progress in recent months, stressing that the status quo is unsustainable and that there now exists a unique opportunity to make decisive progress in a timely fashion, and strongly urging the leaders to increase the momentum of the negotiations to ensure the

Considering that undermining the credibility of the United Nations undermines the peace process itself,

Highlighting the supportive role that the international community will continue to play in helping the Greek Cypriot and Turkish Cypriot leaders to exploit fully the current opportunity,

Taking note of the assessment of the Secretary-General that the security situation on the island and along the Green Line remains stable, and urging all sides to avoid any action which could lead to an increase in tension, undermine the progress achieved so far or damage the goodwill on the island,

Recalling the Secretary-General's firm belief that the situation in the buffer zone would be improved if both sides accepted the 1989 aide-memoire used by the United Nations,

Welcoming the progress made in proceeding with demining activities, looking forward to the clearance of the remaining minefields, and urging agreement on the extension of demining operations to other remaining areas,

Welcoming also the progress and continuation of the important activities of the Committee on Missing Persons in Cyprus, and trusting that this process will promote reconciliation between the communities,

Agreeing that active participation of civil society groups is essential to the political process and can contribute to making any future settlement sustainable, welcoming all efforts to promote bicomunal contacts and events, including on the part of all United Nations bodies on the island, and urging the two sides to promote the active engagement of civil society and the encouragement of cooperation between economic and commercial bodies and to remove all obstacles to such contacts,

Stressing the need for the Council to pursue a rigorous, strategic approach to peacekeeping deployments,

Welcoming the intention of the Secretary-General to keep all peacekeeping operations, including those of the Force, under close review, and noting the importance of contingency planning in relation to the settlement, including recommendations, as appropriate, for further adjustments to the mandate, force levels and concept of operations of the Force, taking into account developments on the ground and the views of the parties,

Welcoming also the continued efforts of Mr. Alexander Downer as the Special Adviser to the Secretary-General on Cyprus with a mandate to assist the parties in the conduct of fully fledged negotiations aimed at reaching a comprehensive settlement, and the efforts of Ms. Lisa Buttenheim as the Special Representative of the Secretary-General in Cyprus,

Welcoming and encouraging efforts by the United Nations to sensitize peacekeeping personnel in the prevention and control of HIV/AIDS and other communicable diseases in all its peacekeeping operations,

1. Welcomes the progress made so far in the fully fledged negotiations and the prospect of further progress in the near future towards a comprehensive and durable settlement that this has created;

2. Takes note of the recommendations contained in the report of the Secretary-General, and calls upon the two leaders:

(a) To intensify the momentum of negotiations and engage in the process in a constructive and open manner, including by developing a practical plan for overcoming the major remaining points of disagreement in preparation for their meeting with the Secretary-General in January 2011;

Cooperation with the Organization for Security and Cooperation in Europe

At a 5 February Security Council meeting [S/PV.6268], the Chairman-in-Office of the Organization for Security and Cooperation in Europe (OSCE), Kanat Saudabayev, described the work of OSCE. He stated that OSCE was determined to promote a balance among its three priority areas—political and military, economic and environmental, and human. He emphasized the importance of close coordination among OSCE, the United Nations and the EU in efforts to promote stability in the conflicts in the southern Caucasus. Another top priority was further OSCE involvement in the stabilization of Afghanistan. In the economic and environmental area, he emphasized the development of the Eurasian region’s transit-transport potential and contimental transport corridors, which would contribute to efforts by participating States to overcome the global crisis. Also, the importance of close cooperation with the United Nations Economic Commission for Europe and the Regional Centre for Preventive Diplomacy for Central Asia in dealing with the environmental situation of the Aral Sea was stressed. In the area of human rights, OSCE expected close cooperation with the UN system on issues pertaining to gender equality and the rule of law. The focus of his chairmanship-in-office was to improve interaction and complementarity between OSCE and the United Nations to meet new global challenges.

By decision 65/544 of 24 December, the General Assembly decided that the agenda item on cooperation between the United Nations and OSCE would remain for consideration at its resumed sixty-fifth (2011) session.

Stability and development in South-Eastern Europe

On 8 December (decision 65/515), the General Assembly decided to include in the provisional agenda of its sixty-sixth (2011) session the item entitled “Maintenance of international security—good-neighbourliness, stability and development in South-Eastern Europe”.

Middle East

In 2010, the Israelis and Palestinians held seven rounds of indirect proximity talks, jumpstarted in May by international diplomatic activity mediated by the United States. The proximity talks led to a bilateral meeting on 2 September in Washington, D.C., between Palestinian President Mahmoud Abbas and Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu. These talks were considered an important step towards the resumption of direct bilateral negotiations, which had not been held since 2008. In late September, however, the Palestinians disengaged from further talks following renewed settlement building by Israel.

The Quartet—a coordinating mechanism for international peace efforts—comprising the Russian Federation, the United States, the European Union and the United Nations, urged a durable resolution to outstanding issues while addressing Israel's legitimate security concerns. The Quartet did not achieve a breakthrough on securing the release of abducted Israeli Staff Sergeant Gilad Shalit, in custody of Hamas for more than four years.

The Security Council held 17 meetings throughout the year on the situation in the Middle East, including the Palestinian question, and on the use of force during the Israeli military operation in international waters against a humanitarian flotilla sailing to Gaza in May. The Council condemned the operation, which had reportedly resulted in the death of 10 civilians and many more wounded, including Israel Defence Forces officers. In presidential statement S/PRST/2010/9, the Council requested the immediate release of the ships and their civilian passengers held by Israel.

In August, the Secretary-General established a Panel of Inquiry on the flotilla incident following intensive consultations with, and the concurrence of, Israel and Turkey. The panel submitted its first progress report in September.

The Special Committee to Investigate Israeli Practices Affecting the Human Rights of the Palestinian People and Other Arabs of the Occupied Territories was concerned about policies of collective punishment of the occupied Palestinian population, whether by means of the blockade on Gaza's 1.5 million inhabitants or by the restrictions on movement, including those resulting from the wall being built by Israel and its gate and permit regime. The Special Committee urged Member States and the Security Council to ensure implementation of the 2004 advisory opinion of the International Court of Justice on the legal consequences of the construction of the barrier in the Occupied Palestinian Territory.

The blockade of Gaza detrimentally affected reconstruction and economic recovery, in addition to worsening humanitarian conditions in Gaza. Per capita gross domestic product in the Occupied Palestinian Territory remained more than 30 per cent lower than its level 10 years earlier, and the long-term prospects for establishing a viable, contiguous Palestinian State appeared bleak given the diminishing access to natural and economic resources, as well as the separation and fragmentation of the Gaza Strip, West Bank and East Jerusalem. The United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East stated that very high unemployment and poverty rates persisted in Gaza and there was little hope of a significant improvement while the blockade remained in force. The situation in the West Bank and East Jerusalem was similar.

In Lebanon, the Prosecutor with the Special Tribunal set up to investigate and prosecute the perpetrators of the 2005 assassination of former Lebanese Prime Minister Rafiq Hariri intensified investigations. The mandate of the United Nations Interim Force in Lebanon (UNIFIL) was extended for 12 more months. UNIFIL continued to work with the Lebanese Armed Forces to consolidate security in southern Lebanon, mediate between the Lebanese and Israeli forces and prevent non-state militias from attacking Israel.

Also during the year, the mandate of the United Nations Disengagement Observer Force (UNDOF) in the Golan Heights was extended twice. The United Nations Truce Supervision Organization continued to assist UNIFIL and UNDOF by providing unarmed military observers to supervise armistice agreements, ceasefires and related tasks.

Peace process

Diplomatic efforts

In 2010, the United Nations worked to create conditions conducive to a resumption of political negotiations between Israelis and Palestinians and consistently advocated a full reopening of the Gaza crossings closed by Israel. The United Nations participated in the meetings of the Quartet (Russian Federation, United States, European Union (EU), United Nations) in March, May, June and August, supporting a broader Middle East settlement and responding to unfolding developments in the region.

In the aftermath of the Israeli attack on and diversion of a humanitarian flotilla bound for Gaza, the Secretary-General engaged in formulating proposals, consistent with Security Council presidential statement S/PRST/2010/9 (see p. 440) on the issue, for a credible, transparent and independent international inquiry into the events.

The Security Council discussed the situation in the Middle East, including the Palestine question, at meetings held on 27 January [S/PV.6265], 18 February [S/PV.6273], 24 March [S/PV.6292], 14 April [S/PV.6298], 18 May [S/PV.6315], 31 May [S/PV.6325], 1 June [S/PV.6326], 15 June [S/PV.6340], 30 June [S/PV.6352], 21 July [S/PV.6363], 17 August [S/PV.6372], 30 August [S/PV.6375], 17 September [S/PV.6388], 18 October [S/PV.6404], 23 November [S/PV.6430], 14 December [S/PV.6448] and 22 December [S/PV.6462]. During the meetings, the Council was briefed by Secretariat officials on the peace process and developments in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, the Gaza humanitarian flotilla, and the precarious situation in the Gaza Strip.

Five communications dealing with Council meeting participation were issued during the year [S/2010/44; S/2010/75; S/2010/182; S/2010/391; S/2010/533].

Occupied Palestinian Territory

Political and security developments

Security Council consideration. On 27 January [S/PV.6265], the Assistant Secretary-General for Political Affairs, Oscar Fernandez-Taranco, briefed the Council on the situation in the Middle East. He warned that if a decisive move towards a final status agreement was not made, there was a risk of reversing progress, with potentially profound and negative implications. He said that a worrying impasse persisted in the efforts to bring about Israeli-Palestinian negotiations amid lack of confidence between the parties, disputes over terms of reference for negotiations, continued developments on the ground, tensions in Jerusalem, uneven developments in the remainder of the West Bank, and unsustainable conditions in Gaza. Intense diplomatic activity continued in an effort to jumpstart negotiations between the two sides, including a visit to the region by the Special Envoy of the United States to the Middle East, George Mitchell. While the parties had indicated that they were reviewing developments, a breakthrough had not been achieved. Turning to Gaza, he said that the failure to address the issues that led to Israel's 2009 military operation there [YUN 2009, p. 434] and its aftermath had created an unsustainable situation and a sense of hopelessness for the population, over half of which was under the age of 18.

On 18 February [S/PV.6273], the Council was briefed by the Under-Secretary-General for Political Affairs, B. Lynn Pascoe, who said that Israel had indicated its readiness to accept indirect talks proposed by the United States Special Envoy, while Palestinian Authority President Mahmoud Abbas had been engaged in intensive consultations and had sought clarifications. The Under-Secretary-General urged Israel to extend its 10-month freeze on the building of settlements in the West Bank to a comprehensive freeze there and in East Jerusalem. He noted that, since the last briefing on 27 January, the Israeli authorities had identified violations of restraint orders on settlement construction in at least 29 settlements, while the Israeli defence ministry had stated that it was issuing demolition and stop-work orders against violators.

Quartet meetings. On 12 March [SG/2157], the Quartet condemned Israel's decision to advance planning for new housing units in East Jerusalem. It agreed to closely monitor developments in Jerusalem and to keep under consideration additional steps that might be required to address the situation on the ground. The Quartet reaffirmed that unilateral actions taken by either party could not prejudice the outcome of negotiations and would not be recognized by the international community. It reiterated that Arab-Israeli peace and the establishment of an independent, contiguous and viable State of Palestine was in the fundamental interests of the parties, of all States in the region, and of the international community. In that regard, the Quartet called on all concerned to support the resumption of dialogue between the parties and to promote an atmosphere that was conducive to successful negotiations to resolve all outstanding issues of the conflict, including the status of Jerusalem.

The Quartet, meeting in Moscow on 19 March [SG/2158], welcomed the readiness to launch proximity talks between the Israelis and the Palestinians and emphasized that the circumstances that made the agreement to launch the talks be respected. The proximity talks were an important step towards the resumption, without preconditions, of direct bilateral negotiations to resolve all final status issues as previously agreed by the parties. The Quartet believed that the negotiations should lead, within 24 months, to a settlement that ended the occupation, which began in 1967, and resulted in the emergence of an independent, democratic and viable Palestinian State existing side-by-side in peace and security with Israel and its other neighbours.

The Quartet urged the Government of Israel to freeze all settlement activity, including natural growth; dismantle outposts erected since March 2001; and refrain from demolitions and evictions in East Jerusalem. The Quartet underscored that the status of Jerusalem was a permanent status issue that must be resolved through negotiations between the parties. It condemned Israel's decision to advance planning for new housing units in East Jerusalem. The Quartet was concerned by the continuing deterioration of conditions in Gaza, including in the humanitarian and human rights situation of the civilian population, and stressed the urgency of finding a durable resolution to the Gaza crisis. It called for a solution that addressed Israel's legitimate security concerns, including an end to weapons smuggling into Gaza; promoted Palestinian unity based on the commitments made by the Palestine Liberation Organization (PLO) and the reunification of Gaza and the West Bank under the legitimate Palestinian Authority (PA); and ensured the opening of the crossings into Gaza to allow for the unimpeded flow of humanitarian aid, commercial goods and persons, consistent with Security Council resolution 1860(2009) [YUN 2009, p. 434].

Security Council consideration. On 14 April [S/PV.6298], the Council was briefed by the Under-Secretary-General for Political Affairs, who said that the situation on the ground remained fragile. He called for all parties to take steps to advance the peace process, as there was no alternative to the resumption of negotiations on all core issues for a two-State solution. The Under-Secretary-General noted that while Israel had begun to ease its blockade of the Gaza Strip, allowing in some goods it had banned, including clothes and shoes, wood, and aluminium, that move fell short of what was required to address Gaza's immense reconstruction and development needs following the crisis caused by Israel's Operation Cast Lead in 2008 [YUN 2008, p. 492] and 2009 [YUN 2009, p. 434]. Beyond the entry of materials into Gaza, other key elements of Council resolution 1860(2009) remained unfulfilled and continued to contribute to instability in the territory.

Communication. On 19 April [S/2010/204], the Syrian Arab Republic transmitted to the Security Council the document issued by the twenty-second ordinary session of the Council of the League of Arab States at the summit level (Sert, Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, 27–28 March), along with the Sert Declaration and resolutions adopted by the session.

Quartet meeting. On 11 May [SG/2159], the Quartet welcomed the first round of proximity talks between the Israelis and the Palestinians, which began on 9 May. The talks were a significant step towards direct, bilateral negotiations and comprehensive peace in the Middle East based on the establishment of an independent and viable Palestinian State. The Quartet called on the parties to pursue the talks in good faith and offered its support for their efforts. It also called on all concerned to promote an atmosphere conducive to the talks and to act on the basis of previous agreements and obligations.

Security Council consideration. On 18 May [S/PV.6315], the Council was briefed by the UN Special Coordinator for the Middle East Peace Process and Personal Representative to the Secretary-General, Robert Serry. He said that the Israeli-Palestinian proximity talks, which had officially commenced under United States mediation, faced powerful elements that sought to derail progress. Progress on core issues could not be allowed to stagnate, as leaders on both sides had displayed political courage in entering negotiations.

Since the Council's April meeting, Palestinian militants had fired 12 rockets towards Israel, causing no injuries, while the Israel Defence Forces conducted 19 incursions and eight air strikes, killing three and injuring nine Palestinians. Seven Palestinians were also killed and 13 injured in incidents that took place in tunnels under the border with Egypt.

Flotilla incident

Communications. On 31 May, Turkey [S/2010/266], Lebanon [S/2010/267] and Palestine [S/2010/268] requested the Security Council President to convene an emergency meeting to discuss the military interception on that day by Israel, in international waters, of a multinational convoy of ships carrying humanitarian assistance to the people of Gaza.

Security Council consideration. The Assistant Secretary-General for Political Affairs, briefing the Council on 31 May [S/PV.6325], said that Israeli naval forces boarded a six-ship convoy that was heading towards Gaza that morning. The stated purpose of the convoy was to deliver humanitarian aid to Gaza and to break the Israeli blockade on Gaza. The convoy was reportedly carrying a range of educational, medical and construction materials and approximately 700 activists, including members of parliament from several countries. In the lead-up to those events, the Israeli authorities had conveyed their intention, both publicly and through diplomatic channels, not to allow the convoy to reach Gaza. They had stated that if the convoy proceeded contrary to those warnings, they would divert it to an Israeli port, inspect the cargo, facilitate the entry of only those goods that were allowed into Gaza in accordance with Israel's blockade, and deport those on board. The organizers of the convoy had indicated their intention to proceed with their convoy, and to attempt to deliver their full consignment of cargo to Gaza and break the blockade; a committee organized by Hamas in Gaza had been formed to receive the convoy.

The Israeli navy reportedly intercepted the convoy 14 nautical miles off the coast of Gaza in international waters. Israeli military personnel boarded the vessels, supported by ships and helicopters, and took control of all six vessels. It was reported that at least 10 people were killed and 30 were injured, and at least six Israeli military personnel were wounded. According to Israeli statements, the seriously injured were evacuated by helicopter to hospitals in Israel. All of the ships arrived under escort at the Israeli port of Ashdod. An Israeli Ministry of Foreign Affairs spokesman stated that all international persons from the vessels would be deported.

Israeli authorities expressed regret about the casualties but blamed the activists for the violence. President Abbas condemned Israel's actions and the killing of the activists. The Secretary-General called for a full investigation and stressed that Israel had to provide a full explanation.

SECURITY COUNCIL ACTION

On 1 June [meeting 6326], following consultations among Security Council members, the President made statement S/PRST/2010/9 on behalf of the Council:

The Security Council deeply regrets the loss of life and injuries resulting from the use of force during the Israeli military operation in international waters against the convoy sailing to Gaza. The Council, in this context, condemns those acts which resulted in the loss of at least ten civilian lives and left many wounded, and expresses its condolences to the families.

The Council requests the immediate release of the ships as well as the civilians held by Israel. The Council urges Israel to permit full consular access, to allow the countries concerned to retrieve their deceased and wounded immediately and to ensure the delivery of humanitarian assistance from the convoy to its destination.

The Council takes note of the statement of the Secretary-General on the need to have a full investigation into the matter and it calls for a prompt, impartial, credible and transparent investigation conforming to international standards.

The Council stresses that the situation in Gaza is not sustainable. The Council re-emphasizes the importance of the full implementation of resolutions 1850(2008) and 1860(2009). In that context, it reiterates its grave concern at the humanitarian situation in Gaza and stresses the need for a sustained and regular flow of goods and people to Gaza as well as the unimpeded provision and distribution of humanitarian assistance throughout Gaza.

The Council underscores that the only viable solution to the Israeli-Palestinian conflict is an agreement negotiated between the parties and re-emphasizes that only a two-State solution, with an independent and viable Palestinian State living side by side in peace and security with Israel and its other neighbours, could bring peace to the region.

The Council expresses support for the proximity talks and voices concern that this incident took place while the proximity talks are under way and urges the parties to act with restraint, avoiding any unilateral and provocative actions, and all international partners to promote an atmosphere of cooperation between the parties and throughout the region.

Communications. In separate letters to the Secretary-General and/or the Presidents of the General Assembly and Security Council, dated 31 May, 2 June and 17 June, Palestine [A/64/799-S/2010/274] as well as Indonesia [A/64/800-S/2010/269], Cuba [A/64/802-S/2010/280] and Malaysia [S/2010/323; A/64/846-S/2010/340; A/ES-10/494] condemned the 31 May Israeli raid on the vessel Mavi Marmara, part of the humanitarian aid flotilla to Gaza. In letters of 4 and 18 June, Syria, in its capacity as Chair of the Organization of the Islamic Conference (oic) Group, transmitted to the Secretary-General the oic 3 June statement [A/64/804-S/2010/287] and the final communiqué adopted by its Expanded Extraordinary Executive Committee Meeting (Jeddah, Saudi Arabia, 6 June) [A/64/840-S/2010/329], both condemning Israel's 31 May actions against the flotilla.

Security Council consideration. Briefing the Council on 15 June [S/PV.6340], the Special Coordinator for the Middle East Peace Process and Personal Representative of the Secretary-General reported that by 2 June, 682 detained civilians had been repatriated. Five Israeli citizens were questioned in Israeli custody and conditionally released between 1 and 3 June. The vessels remained in Israeli ports.

Fact-finding mission

On 2 June, the Human Rights Council established an international fact-finding mission to investigate violations of international law, including international humanitarian law and human rights law, resulting from the interception by Israeli forces of the humanitarian aid flotilla bound for Gaza on 31 May. In its September report [A/HRC/15/21], the mission concluded that a series of violations were committed by Israeli forces during the incident and the detention of passengers in Israel prior to deportation.

(For information on the human rights aspects of the flotilla incident, see PART TWO, Chapter III).

Panel of Inquiry

In letter dated 2 August [S/2010/414], the Secretary-General informed the Security Council President that, in the light of presidential statement S/PRST/2010/9 of 1 June (see p. 440), he had decided to establish a Panel of Inquiry on the 31 May flotilla incident. The Panel would be led by the former Prime Minister of New Zealand, Geoffrey Palmer, as Chair, and the President of Colombia, Álvaro Uribe, as Vice-Chair. They would be joined by two additional members, one each from Israel and Turkey. The Secretary-General anticipated that the Panel would begin its work on 10 August.

On 15 September, the Secretary-General received the initial progress report of the Panel of Inquiry, which had held two meetings (10–11 August and 2–3 September). The report explained the Panel's understanding of the tasks at hand and the working methods it had adopted. The Panel agreed that it would receive and review reports of national investigations into the incident from Israel and Turkey. Should it require further information, clarifications or meetings from Israel or Turkey, the Panel would make such request to the points of contact designated by those States. It might also request information from other affected States through diplomatic channels. The Panel agreed that it would examine and identify the facts, circumstances and context of the incident and make findings and recommendations for the prevention of similar incidents in the future.

Further developments

On 15 June [S/PV.6340], the Special Coordinator for the Middle East Peace Process and Personal Representative of the Secretary-General, briefing the Council, said that the Secretary-General was determined to transform the Gaza crisis into an opportunity for real change on the ground. Special Envoy George Mitchell held a further round of talks with President Abbas on 19 May and with Prime Minister Netanyahu on 20 May, and both sides reaffirmed their commitment to continue the talks in the aftermath of the flotilla incident (see p. 439). The Special Envoy visited the region again on 2 June for a further three days of talks. The Special Coordinator was informed that Israel was conducting a review of its Gaza policy. The basic principle that should guide that policy was that everything should be allowed into Gaza unless there was a specific and legitimate security concern. Israel's partial moratorium settlement would expire in three months, and the Arab League's support to President Abbas for continuing negotiations had a similar time frame. Within that period, sufficient progress had to be made to enable a move to meaningful direct negotiations.

Quartet meeting. On 21 June [SG/2160], the Quartet reaffirmed that the situation in Gaza, including the humanitarian and human rights situation of the civilian population, was unsustainable, unacceptable, and not in the interests of any of those concerned. It reiterated its call for a solution that addressed Israel's legitimate security concerns, including an end to weapons smuggling into Gaza; promoted Palestinian unity based on the PLO commitments and the reunification of Gaza and the West Bank under the legitimate PA; and ensured the unimpeded flow of humanitarian aid, commercial goods and persons to and from Gaza, consistent with Security Council resolution 1860(2009) [YUN 2009, p. 434]. The Quartet declared its readiness to work closely with Israel, the Palestinian Government and international donors to achieve sustainable economic development on the basis of the full implementation of the 2005 Agreement on Movement and Access [YUN 2005, p. 519] and in the broader perspective of the two-State solution.

Consistent with those objectives, the Quartet and the Quartet Representative had worked with Israel and consulted with the PA, Egypt and other concerned parties to effect a fundamental change in policy in Gaza. The new policy towards Gaza announced by Israel was a welcome development. The Quartet recognized that Israel had legitimate security concerns that had to continue to be safeguarded, and believed efforts to maintain security while enabling movement and access for Palestinian people and goods were critical. The Quartet also called for an end to the deplorable detention of Israeli Staff Sergeant Gilad Shalit, who had been taken prisoner in 2006 [YUN 2006, p. 510]. It condemned the violation of Hamas' international obligation to provide Staff Sergeant Shalit access by the International Committee of the Red Cross and demanded that Hamas remedy the situation. The Quartet also reiterated its support for proximity talks.

Communications. On 18 June [S/2010/321], Israel, in identical letters addressed to the Secretary-General and the Council President, drew attention to a small number of ships that were planned to depart from Lebanon and sail to the Gaza Strip. The letter noted that while those who organized the action claimed that they wished to break the blockade of Gaza and to bring humanitarian assistance to the people of Gaza, the true nature of their actions remained dubious. Israel called on Lebanon to demonstrate responsibility and to prevent the boats from departing to the Gaza Strip.

On 22 June [A/64/839-S/2010/334], Lebanon responded with identical letters addressed to the Secretary-General and the Council President explaining that Lebanese law did not permit maritime vessels or craft to sail directly to ports under the control of the Israeli authorities, including the port of Gaza.

On the same date, in joint identical letters addressed to the Secretary-General and the Council President [A/ES-10/492; A/64/842-S/2010/331], Egypt, Libya and Syria, acting in their capacities as Chairs of the Coordinating Bureau of the Non-Aligned Movement, the Arab Group in New York and OIC, respectively, requested the immediate, unconditional and complete lifting of the illegal Israeli blockade imposed on the Gaza Strip; and that a full, impartial, credible, transparent and independent international investigation of the 31 May Israeli attack against the humanitarian convoy sailing to Gaza be conducted without delay under the auspices of the Secretary-General, in accordance with international standards.

On 25 June [A/ES-10/496], Libya, on behalf of the League of Arab States, requested the General Assembly President to resume the tenth emergency special session of the Assembly to consider the agenda item concerning the illegal Israeli actions in East Jerusalem and the rest of the Occupied Palestinian Territory and the situation in the Gaza Strip.

On 9 July [S/2010/370], Israel, in identical letters addressed to the Secretary-General and the Council President, stated that a Moldovan ship, hired and sponsored by a Libyan organization, planned to depart from Greece with the claimed purpose of bringing aid to Gaza. Despite the stated intention of the mission, Israel was concerned that the true nature of its actions were dubious. Israel had repeatedly guaranteed that humanitarian aid would be delivered securely through its established channels. Thus, the mission was completely unwarranted.

On 21 July, Israel [S/2010/395], in identical letters addressed to the Secretary-General and the Council President, stated that two ships, Junia and Julia, planned to depart from Lebanon and sail to the Gaza Strip. The stated intention of the vessels was to violate the naval blockade of Gaza. Israel highlighted that all goods that were not weapons or materiel for war-like purposes were now entering the Gaza Strip through appropriate mechanisms that ensured their delivery as well as their civilian nature.

Security Council consideration. On 21 July [S/PV.6363], the Council was briefed by the Under-Secretary-General for Political Affairs on the proximity talks for Middle East peace. He reported that the United States Special Envoy had facilitated six rounds of proximity talks, and that both President Mahmoud Abbas and Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu had visited Washington, D.C. All three had met with President Hosni Mubarak of Egypt in Cairo on 18 July. The Secretary-General met with Prime Minister Netanyahu on 7 July, and UN Special Coordinator Robert Serry met with President Abbas in Ramallah on 21 July. In order to move the talks forward at a critical juncture, the Special Coordinator called for the extension and expansion of Israel's 10-month moratorium on settlement activity throughout the Occupied Palestinian Territory. He noted an increased flow of goods into Gaza and described the need for further progress towards a full opening of land crossings under the framework of the 2005 Agreement on Movement and Access [YUN 2005, p. 519].

On 17 August [S/PV.6372], the Council was briefed by the Assistant Secretary-General for Political Affairs, who reported that, since May, Israel and the Palestinians had engaged in seven rounds of proximity talks, and were holding internal discussions with a view to deciding whether to enter into direct talks.

On 15 August, the PA issued a report taking stock of the two-year State-building agenda, observing substantial progress in building sound institutions and a stable society. Without significant additional external financing, however, the PA would face a serious liquidity crisis in September, with difficulties paying August salaries. Financing to date of $507 million fell almost $200 million short of the budget. Imports into Gaza were far below the weekly average of truckloads before the closures imposed in 2007 [YUN 2007, p. 462] and could not meet the longer-term rehabilitation needs of the people. The Assistant Secretary-General reported a lack of progress in intra-Palestinian reconciliation within the framework of the proposal mediated by Egypt, despite mediation visits to Gaza by prominent independent Palestinian figures. In Jerusalem, the comparative restraint of previous months was eroding, as announcements of construction, demolitions and evictions had resumed, including the forcible takeover by Israeli settlers on 29 July of a building housing nine Palestinian families. Although the situation in the occupied Syrian Golan remained stable amid ongoing settlement activity, several serious incidents occurred. On 2 August, five rockets were fired towards Eilat, Israel, and Aqaba, Jordan, killing one Jordanian civilian and injuring three others.

Quartet meeting. On 20 August [SG/2161], the Quartet reaffirmed its support for direct negotiations between the Israelis and the Palestinians to resolve all final status issues and reaffirmed its commitment to its previous statements, including those of 26 June 2009 [YUN 2009, p. 437], 24 September 2009 [YUN 2009, p. 438], and 19 March 2010 (see p. 438), which provided that direct, bilateral negotiations should lead to a settlement that ended the occupation which began in 1967 and result in the emergence of an independent, democratic and viable Palestinian State living side-by-side in peace and security with Israel and its other neighbours. The Quartet expressed its determination to support the parties throughout the negotiations, which could be completed within one year, and the implementation of an agreement. The Quartet again called on both sides to observe calm and restraint, and to refrain from provocative actions and inflammatory rhetoric. Welcoming the result of the Arab Peace Initiative Committee meeting (Cairo, 29 July) the Quartet noted that success would require sustained regional and international support for the negotiations, as well as the parallel process of Palestinian state-building and the pursuit of a just, lasting and comprehensive regional peace as envisaged in the Madrid terms of reference [YUN 1991, p. 221], Security Council resolutions and the Arab Peace Initiative [YUN 2002, p. 419]. The Quartet principals intended to meet with their colleagues from the Arab League in September in New York to review the situation. Accordingly, the Quartet called on the Israelis and the Palestinians to join in launching direct negotiations on 2 September in Washington, D.C., to resolve all final status issues and fulfil the aspirations of both parties.

Communications. On 20 August, Israel [S/2010/440], in identical letters addressed to the Secretary-General and the Security Council President, stated that a group of individuals with suspected ties to the Hizbullah terrorist organization had announced that on 22 August, the vessel Miriam would depart from Tripoli, Lebanon, en route to the Gaza Strip via a port in Cyprus. There was also the possibility that the organizers would attempt to sail to the Gaza Strip via Northern Cyprus. The stated intention of the vessel was to violate the naval blockade of Gaza, and some of the organizers had stated that Lebanese authorities offered their approval of that act. Other information indicated that an additional ship, the Naji al-Ali, would also depart from a Lebanese port with the intention of violating the blockade.

On 23 August [A/64/904-S/2010/448], Lebanon responded with identical letters addressed to the Secretary-General and the Council President, explaining that Lebanese law did not permit maritime vessels or craft to sail directly to ports under the control of Israeli authorities, including the port of Gaza.

Security Council consideration. On 17 September [S/PV.6388], the Security Council was briefed by the Special Coordinator for the Middle East Peace Process. He reported that, after months of proximity talks, Prime Minister Netanyahu and President Abbas met on 1 and 2 September in Washington, D.C., under the auspices of United States President Barack Obama and Secretary of State Hillary Clinton to launch direct negotiations. They conducted a second round of talks in Sharm el-Sheikh, Egypt (14 September), and in Jerusalem (15 September). At the opening of the talks, the leaders agreed to seek a solution based on two States for two peoples, and to complete negotiations within one year, with the aim of resolving all core issues, including borders, security, refugees and Jerusalem. They decided to meet every two weeks and to work on a framework agreement on permanent status.

The Special Coordinator reaffirmed the United Nations position that settlements were illegal under international law and the Quartet's call on Israel to freeze all settlement activity, including natural growth. The Secretary-General joined President Obama, Secretary Clinton and the EU foreign ministers in calling for an extension of the moratorium on settlements beyond its scheduled expiry at the end of September.

The Special Coordinator urged a reduction in incursions and the further easing of obstacles to movement, which remained at around 500—70 fewer than at the beginning of the year. In 279 incursions in the West Bank, 22 Palestinians were injured and 162 were arrested; six Israeli soldiers were also injured. On 17 September, a Hamas militant was killed in an operation in the West Bank city of Tulkarem. The Special Coordinator urged Israeli authorities not to implement existing orders for housing demolitions and evictions, and not to issue new ones.

The situation in East Jerusalem was largely quiet during Ramadan. An exception occurred on 26 August, when a reported attempt by Israeli settlers to forcefully enter a mosque in the East Jerusalem neighbourhood of Silwan triggered clashes between Palestinian demonstrators and Israeli police. The Special Coordinator stated that a recent upsurge in violence in Gaza could set back efforts to make progress there. Palestinian militant groups had fired 10 rockets and 22 mortars from Gaza into Israel, injuring two Israelis, while Israeli forces had conducted 10 air strikes and 18 incursions into Gaza, killing seven Palestinians and injuring four. On 12 September, Israeli tank fire killed three Palestinian civilians.

Quartet meeting. On 21 September [SG/2162], the Quartet called on both sides to fulfil their obligations under the road map [YUN 2003, p. 464] to a permanent two-State solution to the Israeli-Palestinian conflict, and underscored its commitment to a just, lasting and comprehensive Middle East peace, including Israeli-Syrian and Israeli-Lebanese agreements. In the spirit of the Arab Peace Initiative, the Quartet called on Arab States to support Israeli-Palestinian negotiations and progress on the other tracks by taking bolder steps to foster positive relations throughout the region and to combat violence and extremism. Recalling that change on the ground was integral to peace, the Quartet reaffirmed its support for the PA's August 2009 plan for building the institutions of a Palestinian State within two years and called for Israel to take further steps to facilitate Palestinian state-building and economic growth. The Quartet reaffirmed that the situation in Gaza was not in the interests of Palestinians nor Israelis and restated its desire to see progress on the implementation of all aspects of Council resolution 1860(2009).

Communications. In identical letters of 12 January [S/2010/21], 18 March [S/2010/137], 30 July [S/2010/411], 14 September [S/2010/477], 16 September [S/2010/483], 19 November [S/2010/590], 9 December [S/2010/623] and 21 December [S/2010/652], Israel informed the Secretary-General and the Security Council President of a number of rocket and mortar attacks on Israel emanating from Gaza during 2010. On 1 September [S/2010/459], Israel informed the Secretary-General and Council President of a 31 August terrorist attack that killed four Israelis near the community of Kiryat Arba.

Security Council consideration. On 18 October [S/PV.6404], the Security Council was briefed by the Assistant Secretary-General for Political Affairs, who reported that the Israelis and Palestinians had not met since 15 September, following the 26 September expiration of Israel's partial settlement moratorium in the West Bank. President Abbas indicated that he would not continue negotiations unless Israel froze settlement activity. The Secretary-General stressed the illegality of settlement activity and was in direct and frequent contact with regional leaders, including President Abbas and Prime Minister Netanyahu, urging them to find a way forward. The Quartet, led by the United States, was also active in that regard. Such efforts, however, were made more difficult by the Israeli approval during the previous week of construction tenders for 238 units in East Jerusalem.

On 23 November [S/PV.6430], the Council was briefed by the Under-Secretary-General for Political Affairs, who stated that there had been significant construction in a number of settlements since the expiry of the moratorium, as well as announcements of plans to construct more than 1,300 settlement units in East Jerusalem and 800 units in the Ariel settlement in the West Bank. Palestinian security forces continued to maintain law and order and to fight extremism, in accordance with road map obligations, and the number of violent incidents in the West Bank had declined. During the reporting period, Israeli security forces conducted 371 operations in the West Bank, in which 87 Palestinians were injured and 211 arrested; four Israelis were injured. Fifteen attacks by Palestinians on Israeli settlers had resulted in injuries to four Israelis. Fourteen Palestinians were injured in 29 attacks by Israeli settlers.

Palestinian militant groups had fired 8 rockets and 41 mortars into Israel from Gaza. Militant groups also fired four phosphorous mortar shells into Israel on 19 November. Israeli security forces conducted 10 air strikes and 23 incursions into the Strip, during which four Palestinian militants were killed, including 3 who died in targeted killings; 20 civilians were injured. Representatives of Fatah and Hamas met in Damascus on 9 November to discuss Palestinian reconciliation, but reports indicated that the meeting was inconclusive. Israel encouraged further settlement activity in the Syrian Golan, announcing, on 2 November, an initiative to give 140 one-dunum plots (1,000 square metres) of land free to Israeli settlers. On 22 November, the Knesset (the Israeli Parliament) passed legislation that required a two-thirds majority or, failing that, a national referendum, to approve return of any occupied territory in East Jerusalem or the Syrian Golan in the context of any political settlement.

On 14 December [S/PV.6448], the Council was briefed by the Special Coordinator for the Middle East Peace Process. He said that although Prime Minister Netanyahu and President Abbas had pledged in September to seek a framework agreement on permanent status within a year, the process had suffered a serious setback. On 8 December, efforts by the United States to create an environment conducive to the resumption of direct talks through a renewed settlement freeze were ended, and President Abbas reaffirmed that he would not return to direct negotiations unless Israel again froze settlement activity. In East Jerusalem, Israeli authorities approved 130 new homes in the settlement of Gilo and the construction of 625 new units was announced in the Pisgat Ze'ev settlement. The Special Coordinator reiterated the stance of the United Nations and the wider international community that Israel should meet its obligations to freeze all settlement activity and dismantle outposts erected since March 2001.

During the reporting period, Israeli security forces conducted 193 incursions into area A in the West Bank, resulting in injuries to 21 Palestinians and 98 arrests, including that of a member of the Palestinian Legislative Council from the Hamas-affiliated Change and Reform bloc. The Special Coordinator noted reports that the number of arrests and interrogations of children had increased significantly. Although the de facto authorities in Gaza repeated their desire to maintain calm, militant groups fired 5 rockets and 20 mortar shells from Gaza into Israel; a mortar wounded an Israeli on 8 December. Israeli security forces conducted 4 air strikes and 12 incursions into Gaza; as a result, four Palestinian militants were killed and one militant and 23 Palestinian civilians were injured.

Follow-up to Board of Inquiry report and Fact-Finding Mission on Gaza Conflict

On 22 January [S/2010/39], the Secretary-General reported that—subsequent to the Board of Inquiry report [YUN 2009, p. 438] on the conflict in Gaza that began in December 2008 [YUN 2008, p. 492] and ended in January 2009 [YUN 2009, p. 434]—Israel agreed to continue a dialogue on ways to improve cooperation on the ground.

In accordance with General Assembly resolution 64/10 [YUN 2009, p. 785] and resolution 64/254 of 26 February (see p. 786), the Secretary-General submitted reports in February [A/64/651] and August [A/64/890], respectively, on the follow-up to the report of the United Nations Fact-Finding Mission on the Gaza Conflict. The Fact-Finding Mission was established by the Human Rights Council in 2009 [YUN 2009, p. 783] to investigate possible violations of international human rights law during the conflict. The Secretary-General's reports contained replies to his notes of 3 December 2009 and 27 May 2010 addressed to Israel, Palestine and Switzerland concerning steps taken or being taken to implement relevant provisions of resolutions 64/10 and 64/254.

(For information on the human rights aspects of the conflict in Gaza, see PART TWO, Chapter III).

Peaceful settlement of the question of Palestine

In a September report and a later addendum [A/65/380-S/2010/484 & Add.1], submitted in accordance with General Assembly resolution 64/19 [YUN 2009, p. 440] and covering the period from September 2009 to August 2010, the Secretary-General provided his observations on the state of the Israeli-Palestinian conflict and on international efforts to move the peace process forward, as well as the views of the Security Council and the concerned parties on the question of Palestine. The Council considered the situation in Palestine every month under the agenda item "The situation in the Middle East, including the question of Palestine".

In a 3 May note, the Secretary-General sought the positions of Egypt, Israel, Jordan, Lebanon and the Syrian Arab Republic, as well as the Palestine Liberation Organization (PLO), regarding any steps they had taken to implement resolution 64/19. Replies were received from Israel and the PLO.

In a 20 July note, Israel stated that it had voted against the resolution, as it had in the past on similar resolutions that it considered one-sided. Despite significant efforts made on the part of Israel in the previous year to renew negotiations with the PA and to foster conditions for economic growth and development, Palestinian terrorism continued. The first half of 2010 witnessed an escalation in terrorist activity against Israeli targets in the West Bank and the Jerusalem area. In the first two months of 2010, 87 attacks were carried out in the West Bank. In February, an Israeli citizen was stabbed to death. In March, 89 attacks were recorded in the West Bank and Jerusalem.

In a 24 June note, Palestine said that despite serious international efforts, the question of Palestine remained unresolved and the situation on the ground remained critical. Since the adoption of resolution 64/19, all international and regional initiatives for peace continued to be undermined by Israel's ongoing violations and grave breaches of international law, including humanitarian and human rights law, as well as its disrespect for UN resolutions and the will of the international community. The situation was most dire in the occupied Gaza Strip, where 1.5 million Palestinians—approximately 70 per cent of whom were refugees and over 50 per cent of whom were children—remained imprisoned by Israel's illegal air, sea and land blockade, which was in its fourth year. In March, Israel announced approval for the construction of another 1,600 settlement units in occupied East Jerusalem, within just days of the confirmation of Palestinian agreement, despite strong reservations, to proceed with United States-mediated proximity talks.

According to the Secretary-General, unilateral actions and human rights violations continued to undermine diplomatic efforts. The situation in Gaza remained unsustainable and the divide between Gaza and the West Bank continued to deepen. In February, Special Envoy George Mitchell, proposed facilitating proximity talks between the parties. Israel accepted the proposal. Affected by internal political challenges, the Palestinian side turned to the League of Arab States for backing, and subsequently agreed to the talks. On 9 March, however, the announcement of additional settlement construction in East Jerusalem, made during a visit to Israel by United States Vice-President Joseph R. Biden, caused a major setback and highlighted the problems created by Israel's continued policy of illegal settlement construction. The Secretary-General expressed his concern at house demolitions and continued settlement construction in East Jerusalem. The period between September 2009 and August 2010 witnessed disturbances in and around the Haram al-Sharif/Temple Mount compound, as well as access restrictions for Muslim and Christian worshippers to holy sites. In June, expulsion orders were issued against four Palestinian legislators who were residents of Jerusalem, but had been members of the Hamas-affiliated Change and Reform bloc and imprisoned in 2006 for failing to meet the minimum loyalty criteria in Israel.

In the West Bank, the PA continued to implement a state-building agenda. Institutional reforms, improved security conditions and the resulting increased private sector confidence contributed to a solid economic recovery, evidenced by real gross domestic product growth of 11.3 per cent in the West Bank in the first quarter of 2010; nevertheless, growth remained constrained by the occupation and settlement activity, which stifled opportunities of the Palestinian people. Contrary to the 9 July 2004 International Court of Justice (ICJ) advisory opinion on the legal consequences of the construction of a wall in the Occupied Palestinian Territory [YUN 2004, p. 452], the barrier continued to deviate significantly from the 1967 Green Line into the Occupied Palestinian Territory in the West Bank and restrict Palestinian access to East Jerusalem, key social services and agricultural land.

The Gaza Strip remained subject to a regime of closures and under the de facto control of Hamas. The Secretary-General consistently urged Israel to lift the blockade of Gaza and welcomed measures announced in June and July to ease it. As efforts were made to relaunch a meaningful political process, the situation in Gaza could not be left to deteriorate further. Israel's legitimate security concerns should also be addressed. During the reporting period, two attempts were made to break the Gaza blockade. The "Viva Palestina–Lifeline 3" convoy entered the Gaza Strip through Egypt in January, amid confrontations between Egyptian authorities, convoy activists, Gaza residents and Hamas militants, in which an Egyptian border guard was killed and dozens of protesters and Egyptian police injured.

The Secretary-General called for humanitarian access to and the immediate and unconditional release of Israeli Staff Sergeant Gilad Shalit, who remained in Hamas captivity. He also noted the deteriorating living conditions of the approximately 9,000 Palestinian prisoners in Israeli jails, down from 11,000 in the previous year.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 30 November [meeting 55], the General Assembly adopted resolution 65/16 [draft: A/65/L.17 & Add.1] by recorded vote (165-7-4) [agenda item 37].

Peaceful settlement of the question of Palestine

The General Assembly,

Recalling its relevant resolutions, including those adopted at its tenth emergency special session,

Recalling also its resolution 58/292 of 6 May 2004,

Recalling further relevant Security Council resolutions, including resolutions 242(1967) of 22 November 1967, 338(1973) of 22 October 1973, 1397(2002) of 12 March 2002, 1515(2003) of 19 November 2003, 1544(2004) of 19 May 2004 and 1850(2008) of 16 December 2008,

Recalling the affirmation by the Security Council of the vision of a region where two States, Israel and Palestine, live side by side within secure and recognized borders,

Noting with concern that it has been more than sixty years since the adoption of its resolution 181(II) of 29 November 1947 and forty-three years since the occupation of Palestinian territory, including East Jerusalem, in 1967,

Having considered the report of the Secretary-General submitted pursuant to the request made in its resolution 64/19 of 2 December 2009,

Reaffirming the permanent responsibility of the United Nations with regard to the question of Palestine until the question is resolved in all its aspects in accordance with international law and relevant resolutions,

Recalling the advisory opinion rendered on 9 July 2004 by the International Court of Justice on the Legal Consequences of the Construction of a Wall in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, and recalling also its resolutions ES-10/15 of 20 July 2004 and ES-10/17 of 15 December 2006,

Convinced that achieving a just, lasting and comprehensive settlement of the question of Palestine, the core of the Arab-Israeli conflict, is imperative for the attainment of comprehensive and lasting peace and stability in the Middle East,

Stressing that the principle of equal rights and self-determination of peoples is among the purposes and principles enshrined in the Charter of the United Nations,

Reaffirming the principle of the inadmissibility of the acquisition of territory by war,

Recalling its resolution 2625(XXV) of 24 October 1970,

Reaffirming the illegality of the Israeli settlements in the Palestinian territory occupied since 1967, including East Jerusalem,

Stressing the extremely detrimental impact of Israeli settlement policies, decisions and activities in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, on efforts to resume and advance the peace process and to achieve peace in the Middle East,

Reaffirming the illegality of Israeli actions aimed at changing the status of Jerusalem, including measures such as the so-called E-1 plan, home demolitions, evictions of Palestinian residents, excavations in and around religious and historic sites, and all other unilateral measures aimed at altering the character, status and demographic composition of the city and of the Territory as a whole,

Reaffirming also that the construction by Israel, the occupying Power, of a wall in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including in and around East Jerusalem, and its associated regime are contrary to international law,

Expressing deep concern about the continuing Israeli policy of closures and severe restrictions on the movement of persons and goods, including medical and humanitarian, via the imposition of prolonged closures and severe economic and movement restrictions that in effect amount to a blockade, as well as of checkpoints and a permit regime throughout the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, and the consequent negative impact on the socio-economic situation of the Palestinian people, which remains that of a humanitarian crisis, and on the efforts aimed at rehabilitating and developing the damaged Palestinian economy and on the contiguity of the Territory, while taking note of recent developments regarding the situation of access to the Gaza Strip,

Recalling the mutual recognition between the Government of the State of Israel and the Palestine Liberation Organization, the representative of the Palestinian people, and the need for full compliance with the agreements concluded between the two sides,

Recalling also the endorsement by the Security Council, in resolution 1515(2003), of the Quartet road map to a permanent two-State solution to the Israeli-Palestinian conflict and the call in Council resolution 1850(2008) for the parties to fulfil their obligations under the road map, as affirmed in the Israeli-Palestinian Joint Understanding reached at the international conference held in Annapolis, United States of America, on 27 November 2007, and to refrain from any steps that could undermine confidence or prejudice the outcome of negotiations,

Noting the Israeli withdrawal in 2005 from the Gaza Strip and parts of the northern West Bank and the dismantlement of the settlements therein as a step towards the implementation of the road map, and recalling in this regard the road map obligation upon Israel to freeze settlement activity, including so-called “natural growth”, and to dismantle all settlement outposts erected since March 2001,

Recalling the Arab Peace Initiative adopted by the Council of the League of Arab States at its fourteenth session, held in Beirut on 27 and 28 March 2002,

Expressing support for the agreed principles for bilateral negotiations, as affirmed by the parties at the Annapolis conference, aimed at concluding a peace treaty resolving all outstanding issues, including all core issues, without exception, for the achievement of a just, lasting and peaceful settlement of the Israeli-Palestinian conflict and ultimately of the Arab-Israeli conflict as a whole for the realization of a comprehensive peace in the Middle East,

Reiterating support for the convening of an international conference in Moscow, as envisioned by the Security Council in resolution 1850(2008), for the advancement and acceleration of a resumed peace process,

Noting the important contribution to the peace process of the United Nations Special Coordinator for the Middle East Peace Process and Personal Representative of the Secretary-General to the Palestine Liberation Organization and the Palestinian Authority, including within the framework of the activities of the Quartet,

Recognizing the efforts being undertaken by the Palestinian Authority, with international support, to rebuild, reform and strengthen its damaged institutions, emphasizing the need to preserve and develop the Palestinian institutions and infrastructure and affirming, in this regard, its support for the Palestinian Authority's August 2009 plan for constructing the institutions of an independent Palestinian State within a twenty-four-month period, and commending the significant progress towards that goal, as confirmed by international institutions, including the World Bank in its Economic Monitoring Report of 13 April 2010 to the Ad Hoc Liaison Committee,

Welcoming the continued efforts and tangible progress made in the security sector by the Palestinian Authority, calling upon the parties to continue cooperation that benefits both Palestinians and Israelis, in particular by promoting security and building confidence, and expressing the hope that such progress will be extended to all major population centres,

Reiterating its concern over the negative developments that have continued to occur in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, including the large number of deaths and injuries, mostly among Palestinian civilians, the construction and expansion of settlements and the wall, acts of violence, vandalism and brutality committed against Palestinian civilians by Israeli settlers in the West Bank, the widespread destruction of public and private Palestinian property and infrastructure, the internal displacement of civilians and the serious deterioration of the socio-economic and humanitarian conditions of the Palestinian people,

Expressing grave concern, in particular, over the crisis in the Gaza Strip as a result of the continuing prolonged Israeli closures and severe economic and movement restrictions that in effect amount to a blockade and the military operations in the Gaza Strip between December 2008 and January 2009, which caused extensive loss of life and injury, particularly among Palestinian civilians, including children and women, widespread damage and destruction to Palestinian homes, properties, vital infrastructure, public institutions, including hospitals and schools, and United Nations facilities, and internal displacement of civilians,

Stressing the need for the full implementation by all parties of Security Council resolution 1860(2009) of 8 January 2009 and General Assembly resolution ES-10/18 of 16 January 2009,

Expressing concern over continuing military actions in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including raids and arrest campaigns, and over the continued imposition of hundreds of checkpoints and obstacles to movement in and around Palestinian population centres by the Israeli occupying forces, and emphasizing in this regard the need for the implementation by both sides of the Sharm el-Sheikh understandings,

Emphasizing the importance of the safety, protection and well-being of all civilians in the whole Middle East region, and condemning all acts of violence and terror against civilians on both sides,

Expressing concern over the unlawful takeover of Palestinian Authority institutions in the Gaza Strip in June 2007, and calling for the restoration of the situation to that which existed prior to June 2007 and for the continuation of the serious efforts being exerted by Egypt, the League of Arab States and other concerned parties for the promotion of dialogue for the achievement of reconciliation and the restoration of Palestinian national unity,

Stressing the urgent need for sustained and active international involvement, including by the Quartet, to support both parties in resuming, advancing and accelerating the peace process negotiations for the achievement of a just, lasting and comprehensive peace settlement, on the basis of United Nations resolutions, the road map and the Arab Peace Initiative,

Noting the Quartet's determination in the recent period to support the parties throughout the negotiations, which can be completed and resolve all final status issues within one year, and in the implementation of an agreement between the two sides that ends the occupation which began in 1967 and results in the emergence of an independent, democratic and viable Palestinian State living side by side in peace and security with Israel and its other neighbours,

Acknowledging the efforts being undertaken by civil society to promote a peaceful settlement of the question of Palestine,

Recalling the findings by the International Court of Justice, in its advisory opinion, including on the urgent necessity for the United Nations as a whole to redouble its efforts to bring the Israeli-Palestinian conflict, which continues to pose a threat to international peace and security, to a speedy conclusion, thereby establishing a just and lasting peace in the region,

Affirming once again the right of all States in the region to live in peace within secure and internationally recognized borders,

15. Calls upon Israel, the occupying Power, to comply strictly with its obligations under international law, including international humanitarian law, and to cease all of its measures that are contrary to international law and unilateral actions in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, that are aimed at altering the character, status and demographic composition of the Territory, including via the de facto annexation of land, and thus at prejudging the final outcome of peace negotiations;

17. Stresses, in this regard, the need for Israel forthwith to abide by its road map obligation to freeze all settlement activity, including so-called "natural growth", and to dismantle settlement outposts erected since March 2001;

18. Calls for the cessation of all provocations, including by Israeli settlers, in East Jerusalem, including in and around religious sites;

20. Reaffirms its commitment, in accordance with international law, to the two-State solution of Israel and Palestine, living side by side in peace and security within recognized borders, based on the pre-1967 borders;

In resolution 65/202 of 21 December (see p. 689), the General Assembly reaffirmed the right of the Palestinian people to self-determination, including the right to their independent State of Palestine. By decision 65/544 of 24 December, the Assembly decided that the agenda items on the situation in the Middle East and on the question of Palestine would remain for consideration during its resumed sixty-fifth (2011) session.

Israeli settlements

The issue of Israeli settlements in the West Bank, including in East Jerusalem, remained central to the question of the Occupied Palestinian Territory and the peace negotiations. The road map [YUN 2003, p. 464] and the Joint Understanding [YUN 2007, p. 446] reached at the 2007 Annapolis Conference [ibid., p. 445] committed Israel to dismantle all settlement outposts erected since 2001 and to freeze, consistent with the 2001 report of the Sharm el-Sheikh Fact-Finding Committee (Mitchell Report) [YUN 2001, p. 409], all settlement activity, including "natural growth".

Communications. Throughout the year, Palestine, in a series of letters [A/ES-10/473-S/2010/1; A/ES-10/474-S/2010/13; A/ES-10/475-S/2010/22; A/ES-10/476-S/2010/80; A/ES-10/477-S/2010/97; A/ES-10/478-S/2010/119; A/ES-10/479-S/2010/122; A/ES-10/480-S/2010/128; A/ES-10/481-S/2010/142; A/ES-10/482-S/2010/148; A/ES-10/483-S/2010/155; A/ES-10/484-S/2010/158; A/ES-10/485-S/2010/163; A/ES-10/486-S/2010/184; A/ES-10/487-S/2010/185; A/ES-10/488-S/2010/190; A/ES-10/489-S/2010/230; A/ES-10/490-S/2010/290; A/ES-10/491-S/2010/317; A/ES-10/493-S/2010/332; A/ES-10/495-S/2010/356; A/ES-10/497-S/2010/379; A/ES-10/499-S/2010/441; A/ES-10/501-S/2010/489; A/ES-10/502-S/2010/505; A/ES-10/503-S/2010/515; A/ES-10/504-S/2010/535; A/ES-10/505-S/2010/578; A/ES-10/506-S/2010/612; A/ES-10/507-S/2010/673; A/64/902-S/2010/445] brought to the attention of the Secretary-General and the Security Council the ongoing construction and expansion of Israeli settlements in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, especially in and around East Jerusalem, as well as other Israeli activities that adversely affected Palestinian civilians living in the Occupied Palestinian Territory. Kuwait, on behalf of the Group of Arab States [A/64/751-S/2010/202; A/64/761-S/2010/218], also brought to the attention of the Secretary-General the Israeli settlement activity in the Territory, especially in and around East Jerusalem; the continued blockade of Gaza; arbitrary detention and deportation of Palestinian civilians; and the desecration of the Ma'man Allah (Mamilla) Cemetery, a Muslim cemetery in Jerusalem. Tajikistan, acting as Chair of the oic Group in New York [A/64/905-S/2010/455], also alerted the Secretary-General to the desecration of the Cemetery.

The Special Rapporteur on the situation of human rights in the Palestinian territory [A/65/331] (see p. 785) also addressed the issue of Israeli settlements and their impact on the enjoyment of human rights by the Palestinians.

Report of Secretary-General. In response to General Assembly resolution 64/93 [YUN 2009, p. 444], the Secretary-General submitted a September report [A/65/365], prepared by the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights (OHCHR), on the implementation of that resolution, covering the period from September 2009 to August 2010 and focusing on the continuation of Israeli settlement activity in the occupied Arab territories and its impact on the human rights of the residents. Under phase I of the road map, Israel had committed to freezing all settlement activity from March 2001. The commitment was consistent with the recommendation contained in the Mitchell Report, which stated that Israel should freeze all settlement activity, including the natural growth of existing settlements, and that the kind of security cooperation desired by Israel could not coexist with settlement activity.

Israel approved a 10-month moratorium on the construction of new settlements in the West Bank on 25 November 2009. The moratorium did not, however, include those settlements for which permits had already been issued and whose foundations had been laid, as well as certain public buildings. Approximately 301,200 settlers lived in 121 official Israeli settlements in the West Bank by the end of 2009. Contrary to its obligations under international law, Israel had constructed 12 settlements in East Jerusalem since its annexation following the 1967 war, and the settler population stood at approximately 195,000. Israel implemented a number of other policies, the purpose of which appeared to be an effort to maintain a certain Jewish-Arab demographic balance in Jerusalem. In particular, policies related to urban planning, the dispensing of building permits and the demolition of homes without permits continued to have discriminatory impacts on the Palestinian residents of East Jerusalem. Since 2008, 56 people had been evicted from their homes in the Sheikh Jarrah neighbourhood of East Jerusalem; the Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs (OCHA) estimated that 475 Palestinians were at risk of forced eviction, dispossession and displacement due to plans for settlement construction in Sheikh Jarrah.

The revocation of residency and social benefits of Palestinian residents who remained abroad for a continuous period of seven years or were unable to prove that they resided in East Jerusalem appeared to be aimed at ensuring that Palestinians left the city. According to information released at the end of 2009 by the Israeli Ministry of Interior and as reported by OCHA, during 2008 the Ministry revoked the residency status of 4,577 Palestinian residents of East Jerusalem, denying them their right to reside or even enter East Jerusalem. That figure constituted more than half the number of revocations recorded between 1967 and 2007.

OCHA reported that settler-related incidents, including violence committed against Palestinians and their property, had increased significantly over recent years. During the reporting period, 283 such incidents were documented. In the first eight months of 2010, 168 incidents of settler violence were recorded.

The separation wall continued to be the greatest obstacle to Palestinian movement within the West Bank, including to and from Jerusalem. As at July, approximately 60 per cent of the wall was complete, and 85 per cent of its route ran inside the West Bank. The total area located between the wall and the 1967 Green Line constituted 9.5 per cent of the West Bank. This area included the "seam zone" located east of the barrier and west of the Green Line, in which Palestinians had to request permits from the Israeli authorities to access their agricultural land and water resources, and where access to health care and education was limited.

The Secretary-General recommended that Israel should abide by its international legal obligations and its pre-existing commitments as stated in the road map, as well as the repeated calls of the international community to cease transferring its civilian population into settlements; freeze all settlement activity, including in occupied East Jerusalem; and dismantle outposts erected since March 2001. Israel should cease demolitions in area C, which comprised 60 per cent of the West Bank, and cease to plan and implement policies that altered the character, status and demographic composition of the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem. It should adopt measures to prevent attacks by Israeli settlers against Palestinian civilians and their property and ensure that Israeli security forces were instructed to protect Palestinian civilians from settler violence; there was no impunity for crimes committed by Israeli settlers against Palestinian civilians, nor redress provided to the victims of such crimes. Israel should fully comply with the ICJ advisory opinion on the legal consequences of the construction of a wall in the Occupied Palestinian Territory [YUN 2004, p. 1273], namely, by ceasing construction of the wall.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 10 December [meeting 62], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fourth (Special Political and Decolonization) Committee [A/65/423], adopted resolution 65/104, by recorded vote (169-6-3) [agenda item 52].

Israeli settlements in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, and the occupied Syrian Golan

The General Assembly,

Guided by the principles of the Charter of the United Nations, and affirming the inadmissibility of the acquisition of territory by force,

Recalling its relevant resolutions, including resolution 64/93 of 10 December 2009 as well as those resolutions adopted at its tenth emergency special session,

Recalling also the relevant resolutions of the Security Council, including resolutions 242(1967) of 22 November 1967, 446(1979) of 22 March 1979, 465(1980) of 1 March 1980, 476(1980) of 30 June 1980, 478(1980) of 20 August 1980, 497(1981) of 17 December 1981 and 904(1994) of 18 March 1994,

Reaffirming the applicability of the Geneva Convention relative to the Protection of Civilian Persons in Time of War, of 12 August 1949, to the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, and to the occupied Syrian Golan,

Affirming that the transfer by the occupying Power of parts of its own civilian population into the territory it occupies constitutes a breach of the Fourth Geneva Convention and relevant provisions of customary law, including those codified in Additional Protocol I to the four Geneva Conventions,

*Recalling the advisory opinion rendered on 9 July 2004 by the International Court of Justice on the Legal Consequences of the Construction of a Wall in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, and recalling also General Assembly resolutions ES-10/15 of 20 July 2004 and ES-10/17 of 15 December 2006,*

Noting that the International Court of Justice concluded that “the Israeli settlements in the Occupied Palestinian Territory (including East Jerusalem) have been established in breach of international law”,

Taking note of the recent report of the Special Rapporteur of the Human Rights Council on the situation of human rights in the Palestinian territories occupied since 1967,

Recalling the Declaration of Principles on Interim Self-Government Arrangements of 13 September 1993 and the subsequent implementation agreements between the Palestinian and Israeli sides,

Recalling also the Quartet road map to a permanent two-State solution to the Israeli-Palestinian conflict, and emphasizing specifically its call for a freeze on all settlement activity, including so-called “natural growth”, and the dismantlement of all settlement outposts erected since March 2001, and the need for Israel to uphold its obligations and commitments in this regard,

Aware that Israeli settlement activities involve, inter alia, the transfer of nationals of the occupying Power into the occupied territories, the confiscation of land, the exploitation of natural resources and other actions against the Palestinian civilian population and the civilian population in the occupied Syrian Golan that are contrary to international law,

Bearing in mind the extremely detrimental impact of Israeli settlement policies, decisions and activities on the efforts to resume and advance the peace process, on the credibility of the peace process, and on the prospects for the achievement of peace in the Middle East,

Expressing grave concern about the continuation by Israel, the occupying Power, of settlement activities in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, in violation of international humanitarian law, relevant United Nations resolutions, the agreements reached between the parties and obligations under the Quartet road map, and in defiance of the calls by the international community to cease all settlement activities,

Expressing grave concern in particular about Israel’s construction and expansion of settlements in and around occupied East Jerusalem, including its so called E-1 plan that aims to connect its illegal settlements around and further isolate occupied East Jerusalem, the continuing demolition of Palestinian homes and eviction of Palestinian families from the city, the revocation of Palestinian residency rights in the city, and ongoing settlement activities in the Jordan Valley,

Expressing grave concern about the continuing unlawful construction by Israel of the wall inside the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including in and around East Jerusalem, and expressing its concern in particular about the route of the wall in departure from the Armistice Line of 1949, which is causing humanitarian hardship and a serious decline of socio-economic conditions for the Palestinian people, is fragmenting the territorial contiguity of the Territory and undermining its viability, and could prejudice future negotiations and make the two-State solution physically impossible to implement,

Deeply concerned that the wall’s route has been traced in such a way as to include the great majority of the Israeli settlements in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem,

Deploping settlement activities in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, and in the occupied Syrian Golan and any activities involving the confiscation of land, the disruption of the livelihood of protected persons and the de facto annexation of land,

Recalling the need to end all acts of violence, including acts of terror, provocation, incitement and destruction,

Gravely concerned about the rising incidents of violence, harassment, provocation and incitement by illegal armed Israeli settlers in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, against Palestinian civilians, including children, and their properties, including historic and religious sites, and agricultural lands,

Noting the Israeli withdrawal from within the Gaza Strip and parts of the northern West Bank and the importance of the dismantlement of the settlements therein as a step towards the implementation of the road map, and stressing, in this regard, the road map obligation upon Israel to freeze settlement activity, including so-called "natural growth", and to dismantle all settlement outposts erected since March 2001,

Taking note of the relevant reports of the Secretary-General,

Taking note also of the special meeting of the Security Council convened on 26 September 2008,

1. Reaffirms that the Israeli settlements in the Palestinian territory, including East Jerusalem, and in the occupied Syrian Golan are illegal and an obstacle to peace and economic and social development;

2. Calls upon Israel to accept the de jure applicability of the Geneva Convention relative to the Protection of Civilian Persons in Time of War, of 12 August 1949, to the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, and to the occupied Syrian Golan and to abide scrupulously by the provisions of the Convention, in particular article 49;

3. Also calls upon Israel, the occupying Power, to comply strictly with its obligations under international law, including international humanitarian law, with respect to the alteration of the character, status and demographic composition of the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem;

4. Reiterates its demand for the immediate and complete cessation of all Israeli settlement activities in all of the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, and in the occupied Syrian Golan, and calls, in this regard, for the full implementation of all the relevant resolutions of the Security Council, including, inter alia, resolutions 446(1979) of 22 March 1979, 452(1979) of 20 July 1979, 465(1980) of 1 March 1980, 476(1980) of 30 June 1980 and 1515(2003) of 19 November 2003;

5. Demands that Israel, the occupying Power, comply with its legal obligations, as mentioned in the advisory opinion rendered on 9 July 2004 by the International Court of Justice;

6. Reiterates its call for the prevention of all acts of violence and harassment by Israeli settlers, especially against Palestinian civilians and their properties, including historic and religious sites, and agricultural lands, and stresses the need for the implementation of Security Council resolution 904(1994), in which the Council called upon Israel, the occupying Power, to continue to take and implement measures, including confiscation of arms, aimed at preventing illegal acts of violence by Israeli settlers, and called for measures to be taken to guarantee the safety and protection of the Palestinian civilians in the occupied territory;

7. Requests the Secretary-General to report to the General Assembly at its sixty-sixth session on the implementation of the present resolution.

Jerusalem

On 17 September [A/65/379], the Secretary-General reported that seven Member States (Argentina, Cuba, Guinea, Jordan, Lebanon, Mexico and the Syrian Arab Republic) had replied to his request for information on steps taken or envisaged to implement General Assembly resolution 64/20 [YUN 2009, p. 446] on Jerusalem. The resolution stressed that a comprehensive, just and lasting solution to the question of Jerusalem should take into account the legitimate concerns of both the Palestinian and Israeli sides and should include internationally guaranteed provisions to ensure the freedom of religion and of conscience of its inhabitants, as well as free and unhindered access to the holy places by the people of all religions and nationalities.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 30 November [meeting 55], the General Assembly adopted resolution 65/17 [draft: A/65/L.18] by recorded vote (166-6-4) [agenda item 36].

Jerusalem

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 181(II) of 29 November 1947, in particular its provisions regarding the City of Jerusalem,

Recalling also its resolution 36/120 E of 10 December 1981 and all its subsequent relevant resolutions, including resolution 56/31 of 3 December 2001, in which it, inter alia, determined that all legislative and administrative measures and actions taken by Israel, the occupying Power, which have altered or purported to alter the character and status of the Holy City of Jerusalem, in particular the so-called “Basic Law” on Jerusalem and the proclamation of Jerusalem as the capital of Israel, were null and void and must be rescinded forthwith,

Recalling further the Security Council resolutions relevant to Jerusalem, including resolution 478(1980) of 20 August 1980, in which the Council, inter alia, decided not to recognize the “Basic Law” on Jerusalem,

Recalling the advisory opinion rendered on 9 July 2004 by the International Court of Justice on the Legal Consequences of the Construction of a Wall in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, and recalling its resolution ES-10/15 of 20 July 2004,

Expressing its grave concern about any action taken by any body, governmental or non-governmental, in violation of the above-mentioned resolutions,

Expressing its grave concern also, in particular, about the continuation by Israel, the occupying Power, of illegal settlement activities, including the so-called E-1 plan, its construction of the wall in and around East Jerusalem, its restrictions on access to and residence in East Jerusalem and the further isolation of the city from the rest of the Occupied Palestinian Territory, which are having a detrimental effect on the lives of Palestinians and could prejudice a final status agreement on Jerusalem,

Expressing its grave concern further about the continuing Israeli demolition of Palestinian homes and the eviction of numerous Palestinian families from East Jerusalem neighbourhoods, as well as other acts of provocation and incitement, including by Israeli settlers, in the city,

Expressing its concern about the Israeli excavations undertaken in the Old City of Jerusalem, including in and around religious sites,

Reaffirming that the international community, through the United Nations, has a legitimate interest in the question of the City of Jerusalem and in the protection of the unique spiritual, religious and cultural dimensions of the city, as foreseen in relevant United Nations resolutions on this matter,

Having considered the report of the Secretary-General on the situation in the Middle East,

1. Reiterates its determination that any actions taken by Israel, the occupying Power, to impose its laws, jurisdiction and administration on the Holy City of Jerusalem are illegal and therefore null and void and have no validity whatsoever, and calls upon Israel to immediately cease all such illegal and unilateral measures;

2. Stresses that a comprehensive, just and lasting solution to the question of the City of Jerusalem should take into account the legitimate concerns of both the Palestinian and Israeli sides and should include internationally guaranteed provisions to ensure the freedom of religion and of conscience of its inhabitants, as well as permanent, free and unhindered access to the holy places by the people of all religions and nationalities;

3. Requests the Secretary-General to report to the General Assembly at its sixty-sixth session on the implementation of the present resolution.

Special Committee to Investigate Israeli Practices Affecting Human Rights

By a 27 August note [A/65/327], the Secretary-General transmitted to the General Assembly the forty-second report of the Special Committee to Investigate Israeli Practices Affecting the Human Rights of the Palestinian People and Other Arabs of the Occupied Territories (Special Committee on Israeli Practices), established by Assembly resolution 2443(XXIII) [YUN 1968, p. 555]. The report, submitted in response to Assembly resolution 64/91 [YUN 2009, p. 451], described the events and human rights situation in the territories considered by the Special Committee to be occupied by Israel: the Syrian Arab Golan and the Occupied Palestinian Territory of the West Bank, East Jerusalem and the Gaza Strip. The report was based on information gathered during the Special Committee's mission to Egypt (8–11 June), Jordan (11–16 June) and the Syrian Arab Republic (16–19 June), where it heard the testimony of 43 witnesses. As in previous years, the Committee was unable to visit the occupied territories, having again received no response from Israel to its request to do so.

The Special Committee found a long-standing pattern of violations of human rights by Israel, which continued to fail to protect the occupied population and to meet its obligations under international human rights and humanitarian law. The Committee concluded that a culture of impunity reigned, allowing the repetition of the violations.

The Special Committee was concerned about efforts by Israel to transfer the occupied population from strategic areas of the Occupied Palestinian Territory in contravention of its obligations under international humanitarian law. Forced evictions, home demolitions, the construction of the wall and revocation of residency rights resulted in forced displacement. Moreover, new legislation opened the door to wide-scale forced transfer or deportation. Women continued to be particularly affected by the occupation and its associated regime. Fear of deportation and subsequent family separation, harassment and violence dominated the lives of many women and their families.

The Special Committee was also concerned about policies of collective punishment of the occupied Palestinian population, whether by means of the blockade on Gaza's 1.5 million inhabitants or by the restrictions on movement, including those resulting from the wall and its gate and permit regime. The overall closure policy, coupled with policies of separation of the West Bank from the Gaza Strip, resulted in a broad range of violations, not only of the right of freedom of movement but also of the rights to health, education and an adequate standard of living. The Committee noted ongoing practices and policies that discriminated against the Palestinian and Syrian populations, in contravention of Israel's international obligations.

Despite the partial and temporary moratorium on settlement in the West Bank brokered by the United States, evidence showing Israel's determination to continue its settlement enterprise in the Occupied Palestinian Territory and the occupied Syrian Golan was of great concern to the Special Committee. Such actions violated international humanitarian law, UN resolutions and political agreements, including the road map [YUN 2003, p. 464]. The Special Committee called on Israel to end the closure and collective punishment of the people of Gaza, and take urgent steps to end the crisis.

The Special Committee urged the Security Council and Member States to ensure implementation of the 2004 ICJ advisory opinion on the legal consequences of the construction of a wall in the Occupied Palestinian Territory [YUN 2004, p. 1273] and Assembly resolution ES-10/15, adopted at the tenth emergency special session on Palestine [ibid., p. 465], which requested Israel to comply with its legal obligation to cease construction of the wall, dismantle the segments already built, and make reparations for the damage arising from its construction.

The Special Committee requested the High Contracting Parties to the Fourth Geneva Convention to take concrete measures in respect of their obligations to ensure Israel's respect for the Convention. It also recommended that the PA should abide by the relevant provisions of human rights law and international humanitarian law.

Report of Secretary-General. On 14 September [A/65/366], the Secretary-General submitted a report on the implementation of General Assembly resolution 64/94 [YUN 2009, p. 449] on Israeli practices affecting the human rights of the Palestinian people in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, covering the period from 1 September 2009 to 19 August 2010, on the basis of material submitted by OHCHR and drawing largely on information made available by OCHA. The report addressed the humanitarian and human rights situation in the Occupied Palestinian Territory.

Reports of the use of excessive force by Israeli authorities against the Palestinian civilian population continued to be received with frequency. Incidents of excessive use of force, including the killing and injury of civilians, typically occurred while Israeli authorities were operating checkpoints, detaining and interrogating Palestinians, and responding to public demonstrations.

Although a range of restrictions on the freedom of movement of Palestinians remained in place throughout the Occupied Palestinian Territory, an improvement in freedom of movement in the West Bank was documented. OCHA reported that the improvement was attributable to measures implemented by Israel that had resulted in the removal of physical obstacles, conversion of permanent checkpoints into "partial" checkpoints, easing of controls at selected checkpoints, lifting of vehicle permit requirements to enter and exit Nablus City, and the opening of three sections of roads to Palestinians. On 20 June, Israel announced a new civilian policy towards the Gaza Strip, which led to a significant increase in the quantity and types of goods allowed entry into Gaza.

The Secretary-General recommended that Israel should take immediate actions to prevent further incidents of excessive use of force against Palestinian civilians, including comprehensive training in international human rights standards relevant to law enforcement for Israeli authorities involved in security operations in the Occupied Palestinian Territory. They should also include efforts to eliminate impunity for violations that resulted from excessive use of force, in particular by carrying out independent and impartial investigations into credible allegations of excessive use of force. Where such allegations were substantiated, perpetrators should be prosecuted.

The Secretary-General stated that the firing of indiscriminate rockets and mortars into southern Israel had to stop. The launching of such weapons was in flagrant violation of international humanitarian law and had resulted in death, injury, damage to infrastructure and general terror among the civilian population. All relevant parties on the Palestinian side should make urgent, vigorous efforts to end the firing of such weapons.

The Secretary-General said that much remained to be done to fulfil the right of Palestinians to freedom of movement. Israel should implement further measures to remove physical restrictions on freedom of movement throughout the West Bank, including East Jerusalem, and ensure that all relevant administrative rules and requirements were consistent with international human rights and humanitarian laws. It should cease construction of the wall and dismantle portions already built in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, in accordance with the 2004 ICJ advisory opinion concerning the wall [YUN 2004, p. 1273]. Israel had to clarify the restrictions it intended to enforce on freedom of movement within Gaza and issue relevant guidelines. Such restrictions should not be enforced by opening live fire, and their parameters should give due consideration to the Gazan agricultural and fishing industries. Israeli authorities should place priority on the full implementation of Security Council resolution 1860(2009) [YUN 2009, p. 434] and on reopening the crossing points in line with the 2005 Agreement on Movement and Access between the PA and Israel [YUN 2005, p. 519].

Report of Special Rapporteur. By a 30 August note [A/65/331], the Secretary-General transmitted the report of the Special Rapporteur, Richard Falk, on the situation of human rights in the Palestinian territories occupied since 1967 (see p. 785).

(For information on the right of the Palestinian people to self-determination, see p. 688, and on the human rights situation in the Territories occupied by Israel, see p. 784).

UN Register of Damage. On 19 April [A/ES-10/498], in accordance with General Assembly resolution ES-10/17 [YUN 2006, p. 529], the Secretary-General transmitted to the Assembly a progress report from the Board of the United Nations Register of Damage Caused by the Construction of the Wall in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, covering the period from 10 April 2009 to 18 June 2010. During that period, the Board held five meetings in Vienna to review 1,284 claim forms that had been translated, processed and reviewed by the office staff, and included in the Register most or all of the losses set out in those forms. As at 18 June, the Board had reviewed 1,554 claim forms; it included most or all of the losses in 1,551 of claim forms in the Registrar.

Israel maintained its position of not cooperating with the Office of the Register and considered that any claims in relation to damage caused by the construction of the wall should be addressed through the existing Israeli mechanism. At the same time, on a practical level, the Office of the Register had not experienced any difficulties in carrying out its activities as outlined in resolution ES-10/17.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 10 December [meeting 62], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fourth Committee [A/65/423], adopted resolution 65/105 by recorded vote (165-9-2) [agenda item 52].

Israeli practices affecting the human rights of the Palestinian people in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem

The General Assembly,

Recalling the Universal Declaration of Human Rights,

Recalling also the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights, the International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights and the Convention on the Rights of the Child, and affirming that these human rights instruments must be respected in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem,

Reaffirming its relevant resolutions, including resolution 64/94 of 10 December 2009 as well as those adopted at its tenth emergency special session,

Recalling the relevant resolutions of the Human Rights Council,

Recalling also the relevant resolutions of the Security Council, and stressing the need for their implementation,

Having considered the report of the Special Committee to Investigate Israeli Practices Affecting the Human Rights of the Palestinian People and Other Arabs of the Occupied Territories and the report of the Secretary-General,

Taking note of the recent reports of the Special Rapporteur of the Human Rights Council on the situation of human rights in the Palestinian territories occupied since 1967, as well as of other relevant recent reports of the Human Rights Council,

Aware of the responsibility of the international community to promote human rights and ensure respect for international law, and recalling, in this regard, its resolution 2625(XXV) of 24 October 1970,

Recalling the advisory opinion rendered on 9 July 2004 by the International Court of Justice, and recalling also General Assembly resolutions ES-10/15 of 20 July 2004 and ES-10/17 of 15 December 2006,

Noting in particular the Court's reply, including that the construction of the wall being built by Israel, the occupying Power, in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including in and around East Jerusalem, and its associated regime are contrary to international law,

Reaffirming the principle of the inadmissibility of the acquisition of territory by force,

Reaffirming also the applicability of the Geneva Convention relative to the Protection of Civilian Persons in Time of War, of 12 August 1949, to the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, and other Arab territories occupied by Israel since 1967,

Reaffirming further the obligation of the States parties to the Fourth Geneva Convention under articles 146, 147 and 148 with regard to penal sanctions, grave breaches and responsibilities of the High Contracting Parties,

Reaffirming that all States have the right and the duty to take actions in conformity with international law and international humanitarian law to counter deadly acts of violence against their civilian population in order to protect the lives of their citizens,

Stressing the need for full compliance with the Israeli-Palestinian agreements reached within the context of the Middle East peace process, including the Sharm el-Sheikh understandings, and the implementation of the Quartet road map to a permanent two-State solution to the Israeli-Palestinian conflict,

Stressing also the need for the full implementation of the Agreement on Movement and Access and the Agreed Principles for the Rafah Crossing, both of 15 November 2005, to allow for the freedom of movement of the Palestinian civilian population within and into and out of the Gaza Strip,

Expressing grave concern about the continuing systematic violation of the human rights of the Palestinian people by Israel, the occupying Power, including that arising from the excessive use of force and military operations causing death and injury to Palestinian civilians, including children, women and nonviolent and peaceful demonstrators; the use of collective punishment; the closure of areas; the confiscation of land; the establishment and expansion of settlements; the construction of a wall in the Occupied Palestinian Territory in departure from the Armistice Line of 1949; the destruction of property and infrastructure; and all other actions by it designed to change the legal status, geographical nature and demographic composition of the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem,

Gravely concerned in particular about the critical humanitarian and security situation in the Gaza Strip, including that resulting from the prolonged closures and severe economic and movement restrictions that in effect amount to a blockade and the military operations between December 2008 and January 2009, which caused extensive loss of life and injury, particularly among Palestinian civilians, including children and women; widespread destruction and damage to Palestinian homes, properties, vital infrastructure and public institutions, including hospitals, schools and United Nations facilities; and the internal displacement of civilians, as well as from the firing of rockets into Israel,

Stressing the need for the full implementation by all parties of Security Council resolution 1860(2009) of 8 January 2009 and General Assembly resolution ES-10/18 of 16 January 2009,

Gravely concerned by reports regarding serious human rights violations and grave breaches of international humanitarian law committed during the military operations in the Gaza Strip between December 2008 and January 2009, including the findings in the summary by the Secretary-General of the report of the Board of Inquiry and in the report of the United Nations Fact-finding Mission on the Gaza Conflict, and reiterating the necessity for serious follow-up by all parties of the recommendations addressed to them towards ensuring accountability and justice,

Expressing deep concern about the short- and long-term detrimental impact of such widespread destruction and the continued impeding of the reconstruction process by Israel, the occupying Power, on the human rights situation and on the socio-economic and humanitarian conditions of the Palestinian civilian population,

Expressing deep concern also about the Israeli policy of closures and the imposition of severe restrictions, checkpoints, several of which have been transformed into structures akin to permanent border crossings, and a permit regime, all of which obstruct the freedom of movement of persons and goods, including medical and humanitarian goods, throughout the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, and about the consequent violation of the human rights of the Palestinian people and the negative impact on their socio-economic situation, which remains that of a humanitarian crisis in the Gaza Strip, while taking note of recent developments with regard to the situation of access there,

Concerned in particular about the continued establishment of Israeli checkpoints in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, and the transformation of several of these checkpoints into structures akin to permanent border crossings inside the Occupied Palestinian Territory, which are severely impairing the territorial contiguity of the Territory and undermining efforts and aid aimed at rehabilitating and developing the Palestinian economy, adversely affecting other aspects of the socio-economic conditions of the Palestinian people,

Expressing deep concern that thousands of Palestinians, including hundreds of children and women, continue to be held in Israeli prisons or detention centres under harsh conditions, including, inter alia, unhygienic conditions, lack of proper medical care, denial of family visits and denial of due process, that impair their well-being, and expressing deep concern also about the ill-treatment and harassment of any Palestinian prisoners and all reports of torture,

Expressing concern about the possible consequences of the enactment by Israel, the occupying Power, of military orders regarding the detention, imprisonment and deportation of Palestinian civilians from the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, and recalling, in this regard, the prohibition under international humanitarian law of the deportation of civilians from occupied territories,

Convinced of the need for an international presence to monitor the situation, to contribute to ending the violence and protecting the Palestinian civilian population and to help the parties implement the agreements reached, and, in this regard, recalling the positive contribution of the Temporary International Presence in Hebron,

Taking note of the continued efforts and tangible progress made in the security sector by the Palestinian Authority, calling upon the parties to continue cooperation that benefits both Palestinians and Israelis, in particular by promoting security and building confidence, and expressing the hope that such progress will be extended to all major population centres,

Emphasizing the right of all people in the region to the enjoyment of human rights as enshrined in the international human rights covenants,

1. Reiterates that all measures and actions taken by Israel, the occupying Power, in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, in violation of the relevant provisions of the Geneva Convention relative to the Protection of Civilian Persons in Time of War, of 12 August 1949, and contrary to the relevant resolutions of the Security Council, are illegal and have no validity;

2. Demands that Israel, the occupying Power, cease all practices and actions that violate the human rights of the Palestinian people, including the killing and injury of civilians, the arbitrary detention and imprisonment of civilians and the destruction and confiscation of civilian property, and that it fully respect human rights law and comply with its legal obligations in this regard;

3. Also demands that Israel, the occupying Power, comply fully with the provisions of the Fourth Geneva Convention of 1949 and cease immediately all measures and actions taken in violation and in breach of the Convention;

4. Further demands that Israel, the occupying Power, cease all of its settlement activities, the construction of the wall and any other measures aimed at altering the character, status and demographic composition of the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including in and around East Jerusalem, all of which, inter alia, gravely and detrimentally impact the human rights of the Palestinian people and the prospects for a peaceful settlement;

5. Condemns all acts of violence, including all acts of terror, provocation, incitement and destruction, especially the excessive use of force by the Israeli occupying forces against Palestinian civilians, particularly in the Gaza Strip, which have caused extensive loss of life and vast numbers of injuries, including among children, massive damage and destruction to homes, properties, vital infrastructure and public institutions, including hospitals, schools and United Nations facilities, and agricultural lands, and internal displacement of civilians;

6. Expresses grave concern at the firing of rockets against Israeli civilian areas resulting in loss of life and injury;

7. Reiterates its demand for the full implementation of Security Council resolution 1860(2009);

8. Demands that Israel, the occupying Power, comply with its legal obligations under international law, as mentioned in the advisory opinion rendered on 9 July 2004 by the International Court of Justice and as demanded in General Assembly resolutions ES-10/15 of 20 July 2004 and ES-10/13 of 21 October 2003, and that it immediately cease the construction of the wall in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including in and around East Jerusalem, dismantle forthwith the structure situated therein, repeal or render ineffective all legislative and regulatory acts relating thereto, and make reparation for all damage caused by the construction of the wall, which has gravely impacted the human rights and the socio-economic living conditions of the Palestinian people;

9. Reiterates the need for respect for the territorial unity, contiguity and integrity of all of the Occupied Palestinian Territory and for guarantees of the freedom of movement of persons and goods within the Palestinian territory, including movement into and from East Jerusalem, into and from the Gaza Strip, between the West Bank and Gaza Strip, and to and from the outside world;

10. Calls upon Israel, the occupying Power, to cease its imposition of prolonged closures and economic and movement restrictions, including those amounting to a blockade on the Gaza Strip, and, in this regard, to fully implement the Agreement on Movement and Access and the Agreed Principles for the Rafah Crossing, both of 15 November 2005, in order to allow for the sustained and regular movement of persons and goods and for the acceleration of long overdue reconstruction in the Gaza Strip;

11. Urges Member States to continue to provide emergency assistance to the Palestinian people to alleviate the financial crisis and the dire socio-economic and humanitarian situation, particularly in the Gaza Strip;

12. Emphasizes the need to preserve and develop the Palestinian institutions and infrastructure for the provision of vital public services to the Palestinian civilian population and the promotion of human rights, including civil, political, economic, social and cultural rights;

13. Requests the Secretary-General to report to the General Assembly at its sixty-sixth session on the implementation of the present resolution.

Work of Special Committee

In response to General Assembly resolution 64/91 [YUN 2009, p. 451], the Secretary-General submitted an August report [A/65/326] on the work of the Special Committee. The Special Committee was supported by various UN agencies in the implementation of its mandate, specifically OHCHR and the United Nations Resident Coordinators in Egypt, Jordan and the Syrian Arab Republic in the organization of its field mission and by offering on-site support.

The UN Department of Public Information (DPI) continued to ensure the widest circulation of the Special Committee's reports, and that information on its work was made available to global audiences in the six official UN languages. The Department's News Services Section posted 12 stories on the Special Committee's activities and findings on the UN News Centre website and e-mailed them to tens of thousands of interested subscribers, including hundreds of journalists. UN Television and Video (UNTV) covered public meetings of the Special Committee and related press briefings in New York. Around 40 news reports were sent to over 500 broadcasters worldwide through UNifeed, the UNTV transmission service. UN Radio produced news and features on a broad range of related subjects, including developments on the ground, humanitarian needs and relief efforts, and political and diplomatic activities. DPI held its annual training programme for 10 young Palestinian journalists (New York, 2 November–11 December 2009).

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 10 December [meeting 62], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fourth Committee [A/65/423], adopted resolution 65/102 by recorded vote (94-9-72) [agenda item 52].

Work of the Special Committee to Investigate Israeli Practices Affecting the Human Rights of the Palestinian People and Other Arabs of the Occupied Territories

The General Assembly,

Guided by the purposes and principles of the Charter of the United Nations,

Guided also by international humanitarian law, in particular the Geneva Convention relative to the Protection of Civilian Persons in Time of War of 12 August 1949, as well as international standards of human rights, in particular the Universal Declaration of Human Rights and the International Covenants on Human Rights,

Recalling its relevant resolutions, including resolutions 2443(XXIII) of 19 December 1968 and 64/91 of 10 December 2009, and the relevant resolutions of the Commission on Human Rights and the Human Rights Council, including resolution S-12/1, adopted by the Council at its twelfth special session on 16 October 2009,

Recalling also the relevant resolutions of the Security Council,

Taking into account the advisory opinion rendered on 9 July 2004 by the International Court of Justice on the Legal Consequences of the Construction of a Wall in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, and recalling, in this regard, General Assembly resolution ES-10/15 of 20 July 2004,

Recalling its resolution 58/292 of 6 May 2004,

Convinced that occupation itself represents a gross and grave violation of human rights,

Gravely concerned about the continuing detrimental impact of ongoing unlawful Israeli practices and measures in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, including the excessive use of force by the Israeli occupying forces against Palestinian civilians, resulting in thousands of deaths and injuries, the widespread destruction of property and vital infrastructure, ongoing settlement activities and construction of the wall, the internal displacement of civilians, the imposition of collective punishment measures, particularly against the civilian population in the Gaza Strip, and the detention and imprisonment of thousands of Palestinians,

Gravely concerned in particular by reports regarding serious human rights violations and grave breaches of international humanitarian law committed during the military operations in the Gaza Strip between December 2008 and January 2009, including the findings in the summary by the Secretary-General of the report of the Board of Inquiry and in the report of the United Nations Fact-Finding Mission on the Gaza Conflict, and stressing the necessity for serious follow-up by all parties to the recommendations addressed to them towards ensuring accountability and justice,

Having considered the report of the Special Committee to Investigate Israeli Practices Affecting the Human Rights of the Palestinian People and Other Arabs of the Occupied Territories and the relevant reports of the Secretary-General,

Recalling the Declaration of Principles on Interim Self-Government Arrangements of 13 September 1993 and the subsequent implementation agreements between the Palestinian and Israeli sides,

Stressing the urgency of bringing a complete end to the Israeli occupation that began in 1967 and thus an end to the violation of the human rights of the Palestinian people, and of allowing for the realization of their inalienable human rights, including their right to self-determination,

Economic and social situation

An April report [A/65/72-E/2010/13] on the economic and social repercussions of the Israeli occupation on the living conditions of the Palestinian people in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, and of the Arab population in the occupied Syrian Golan was prepared by the Economic and Social Commission for Western Asia, in accordance with Economic and Social Council resolution 2009/34 [YUN 2009, p. 453] and General Assembly resolution 64/185 [ibid., p. 455].

The report noted that the Israeli occupation of Palestinian territory, including East Jerusalem, the use of arbitrary detention, disproportionate use of force, property destruction, home demolitions, mobility restrictions, lack of building permits and closure policies continued to intensify the economic and social hardships of the Palestinian residents in the Occupied Palestinian Territory. Despite the constraints posed by the occupation, the Palestinian Authority (PA) continued to make progress in implementing its reform agenda and security plan and in building its institution. Between February 2009 and February 2010, 67 Palestinians were killed and 145 injured by Israeli military operations. At the same time, attacks by Palestinian militants and the launching of rockets into Israel from the Gaza Strip continued, although at a diminished rate over that of previous years. Between February 2009 and February 2010, Israeli authorities demolished 220 Palestinian-owned structures in the West Bank (excluding East Jerusalem), resulting in the displacement of over 400 Palestinians. In occupied East Jerusalem, Israeli authorities demolished approximately 80 Palestinian-owned structures between February 2009 and March 2010, displacing approximately 260 Palestinians. The blockade imposed by Israel on the Gaza Strip following the forceful takeover of Gaza by Hamas in June 2007 [YUN 2007, p. 441] entered its third year as at August 2009. The blockade detrimentally affected reconstruction and economic recovery in Gaza and exacerbated humanitarian conditions. In the West Bank, there had been a general relaxation of the crossing procedures at most checkpoints to the east of the barrier. Since November 2009, however, there had been a steady increase in the number of ad hoc checkpoints erected for short periods. Contrary to its obligations under the road map, Israel continued illegal settlement activity in the West Bank, including East Jerusalem. On 26 November 2009, Israel announced a 10-month settlement freeze order in the West Bank, but it did not apply to the East Jerusalem area. Israel's occupation of the Syrian Golan continued to affect the lives and human rights of the Syrian citizens living there.

ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL ACTION

Reaffirming the principle of the permanent sovereignty of peoples under foreign occupation over their natural resources, and expressing concern in this regard about the exploitation of natural resources by Israel, the occupying Power, in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, and in the occupied Syrian Golan,

Convinced that the Israeli occupation has gravely impeded the efforts to achieve sustainable development and a sound economic environment in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, and in the occupied Syrian Golan, and expressing grave concern about the consequent deterioration of economic and living conditions,

Commending, in this regard, the efforts of the Palestinian Authority to improve the economic and social situation in the Occupied Palestinian Territory,

Gravely concerned, in this regard, about Israel's continuation of settlement activities and other related measures in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, particularly in and around occupied East Jerusalem, as well as in the occupied Syrian Golan, in violation of international humanitarian law and relevant United Nations resolutions,

Gravely concerned also by the serious repercussions on the economic and social conditions of the Palestinian people caused by Israel's construction of the wall and its associated regime inside the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including in and around East Jerusalem, and the resulting violation of their economic and social rights, including the right to work, to health, to education, to property and to an adequate standard of living,

Recalling, in this regard, the advisory opinion rendered on 9 July 2004 by the International Court of Justice on the Legal Consequences of the Construction of a Wall in the Occupied Palestinian Territory and General Assembly resolution ES-10/15, and stressing the need to comply with the obligations mentioned therein,

Expressing grave concern at the extensive destruction by Israel, the occupying Power, of properties, including homes, economic institutions, agricultural lands and orchards, in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, and, in particular, in connection with its construction of the wall, contrary to international law, in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including in and around East Jerusalem,

Expressing grave concern also over the continued policy of home demolitions, evictions, revocation of residency rights and displacement of the population in and around occupied East Jerusalem, as well as measures to further isolate the city from its natural Palestinian environs, including through the accelerated construction of settlements, construction of the wall and imposition of checkpoints, which have seriously exacerbated the already dire socio-economic situation being faced by the Palestinian population,

Expressing grave concern further about Israeli military operations and the continuing Israeli policy of closures and severe restrictions on the movement of persons and goods, including humanitarian personnel as well as food, medical supplies, fuel, construction materials and other essential supplies, via the imposition of crossing closures, checkpoints and a permit regime throughout the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, and the consequent negative impact on the socio-economic situation of the Palestinian people, which remains that of a dire humanitarian crisis,

Taking note of recent developments regarding the situation of access to the Gaza Strip, although grave hardships continue to prevail as a result of the prolonged Israeli closures and severe economic and movement restrictions that in effect amount to a blockade, and calling in this regard for the full implementation of Security Council resolution 1860(2009) of 8 January 2009 with a view to ensuring the full opening of the border crossings for the sustained and regular movement of persons and goods, including humanitarian aid, commercial flows and construction materials,

Deploing the heavy casualties among civilians, including hundreds of children and women, the internal displacement of thousands of civilians and widespread damage to homes, vital civilian infrastructure, hospitals, schools, food supply installations, economic, industrial and agricultural properties and several United Nations facilities in the Gaza Strip, which gravely impact the provision of vital health and social services to Palestinian women and their families and their socio-economic living conditions and were all caused by the military operations carried out between December 2008 and January 2009,

Recalling, in this regard, the relevant United Nations reports, including those of the Economic and Social Council, the Economic and Social Commission for Western Asia and the Human Rights Council,

Expressing deep concern about the short- and long-term detrimental impact of such widespread destruction and the hampering of the reconstruction process by Israel, the occupying Power, on the socio-economic and humanitarian conditions of the Palestinian civilian population in the Gaza Strip, and calling in this regard for the expeditious commencement of the reconstruction process in the Gaza Strip with the assistance of the donor countries, including the disbursement of funds pledged in the International Conference in Support of the Palestinian Economy for the Reconstruction of Gaza, held in Sharm el-Sheikh, Egypt, on 2 March 2009,

Gravely concerned by various reports of the United Nations and specialized agencies regarding the almost total aid dependency caused by prolonged border closures, inordinate rates of unemployment, widespread poverty and severe humanitarian hardships, including food insecurity and rising health-related problems, including high levels of malnutrition, among the Palestinian people, especially children, in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem,

Expressing grave concern at the increasing number of deaths and injuries among civilians, including children and women, and emphasizing that the Palestinian civilian population must be protected in accordance with international humanitarian law,

Emphasizing the importance of the safety and well-being of all civilians, and calling for the cessation of all acts of violence, including all acts of terror, provocation, incitement and destruction, and all firing of rockets,

Conscious of the urgent need for the reconstruction and development of the economic and social infrastructure of the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, as well as the urgent need to address the dire humanitarian crisis facing the Palestinian people, including by ensuring the unimpeded provision of humanitarian assistance and the sustained and regular flow of persons and goods into and out of the Gaza Strip,

Commending the important work being done by the United Nations, the specialized agencies and the donor community in support of the economic and social development of the Palestinian people in line with their national development and State-building plan, as well as the assistance being provided in the humanitarian field,

Recognizing the efforts being undertaken by the Palestinian Authority, with international support, to rebuild, reform and strengthen its damaged institutions and promote good governance, and emphasizing the need to preserve the Palestinian national institutions and infrastructure and to ameliorate economic and social conditions,

Welcoming in this regard and expressing strong support for the plan of the Palestinian Authority entitled "Palestine: Ending the Occupation, Establishing the State", for constructing the institutions of a Palestinian State within a twenty-four month period,

Stressing the importance of national unity among the Palestinian people, and emphasizing the need for the respect and preservation of the territorial integrity and unity of the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem,

Calling upon both parties to fulfil their obligations under the road map in cooperation with the Quartet,

1. Calls for the full opening of the border crossings of the Gaza Strip, in line with Security Council resolution 1860(2009), to ensure humanitarian access as well as the sustained and regular flow of persons and goods and the lifting of all movement restrictions imposed on the Palestinian people, including those restrictions arising from ongoing Israeli military operations and the multilayered closures system, and for other urgent measures to alleviate the desperate humanitarian situation in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, especially in the Gaza Strip, and calls for compliance by Israel, the occupying Power, with all of its legal obligations under international humanitarian law and United Nations resolutions in this regard;

2. Stresses the need to preserve the territorial contiguity, unity and integrity of the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, and to guarantee the freedom of movement of persons and goods throughout the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, as well as to and from the outside world;

4. Demands that Israel comply with the Protocol on Economic Relations between the Government of Israel and the Palestine Liberation Organization signed in Paris on 29 April 1994;

5. Calls upon Israel to restore and replace civilian properties, vital infrastructure, agricultural lands and governmental institutions that have been damaged or destroyed as a result of its military operations in the Occupied Palestinian Territory;

7. Calls upon all parties to respect the rules of international humanitarian law and to refrain from violence against the civilian population in accordance with the Geneva Convention relative to the Protection of Civilian Persons in Time of War, of 12 August 1949;

Geneva Convention relative to the Protection of Civilian Persons in Time of War;

12. Also reaffirms that Israel's ongoing construction of the wall in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including in and around East Jerusalem, is contrary to international law and is isolating East Jerusalem, fragmenting the West Bank and seriously debilitating the economic and social development of the Palestinian people, and calls in this regard for full compliance with the legal obligations mentioned in the advisory opinion rendered on 9 July 2004 by the International Court of Justice, in General Assembly resolution ES-10/15 and in subsequent relevant resolutions;

Fourth Geneva Convention

The applicability of the 1949 Geneva Convention relative to the Protection of Civilian Persons in Time of War (Fourth Geneva Convention) to the Israeli-occupied territories was reaffirmed during the year by the General Assembly and other United Nations bodies, including the Special Committee on Israeli Practices.

Report of Secretary-General. In a September report [A/65/355], the Secretary-General informed the General Assembly that Israel had not replied to his request for information on steps taken or envisaged to implement resolution 64/92 [YUN 2009, p. 457], which demanded that Israel accept the de jure applicability of the Fourth Geneva Convention to the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, and other Arab territories occupied since 1967, and that it comply scrupulously with its provisions. The Secretary-General had also drawn the attention of all High Contracting Parties to the Convention to paragraph 3 of resolution 64/92, calling on them to ensure Israel's respect for the Convention's provisions. Five Member States (Cyprus, Mexico, Oman, Sudan, Syrian Arab Republic) had replied to his request for information on steps taken to implement the resolution.

4. Reiterates the need for speedy implementation of the relevant recommendations contained in the resolutions adopted by the General Assembly, including at its tenth emergency special session and including resolution

Issues related to Palestine

General aspects

In 2010, the General Assembly, the Committee on the Exercise of the Inalienable Rights of the Palestinian People and other bodies addressed issues related to Palestine, and several UN programmes and agencies provided assistance to the Palestinian people. The International Day of Solidarity with the Palestinian People, celebrated annually on 29 November in accordance with Assembly resolution 32/40 B [YUN 1977, p. 304], was observed at Headquarters and at the United Nations Offices at Geneva and Vienna.

Committee on Palestinian Rights

As mandated by General Assembly resolution 64/16 [YUN 2009, p. 459], the Committee on the Exercise of the Inalienable Rights of the Palestinian People (Committee on Palestinian Rights) reviewed and reported on the Palestine question and made suggestions to the Assembly, the Security Council and the Secretary-General. It continued to mobilize the international community in support of the Palestinian people, in cooperation with UN bodies, Governments, intergovernmental and civil society organizations and others. The Committee's report [A/65/35] to the Assembly covered the period from 7 October 2009 to 6 October 2010.

The Committee repeatedly expressed its concern about the volatile situation in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including in East Jerusalem, and the stagnation of the political process. It remained firmly opposed to the continued illegal construction of settlements in the West Bank, including in East Jerusalem, accompanied by escalating settler violence. In addition, the construction of the separation wall continued, leaving thousands of Palestinians cut off from access to their lands, families, schools and hospitals, and isolating several communities in walled enclaves. The Committee was particularly alarmed by the situation in occupied East Jerusalem, including the acceleration of settlement construction and expansion, the demolition of houses, the revocation of residency rights, the eviction of Palestinian citizens, settler extremism, and threats to Jerusalem's holy sites and historical heritage. The Committee condemned the Israeli blockade of the Gaza Strip, which constituted a severe form of collective punishment of the entire population of the Gaza Strip. It also denounced the firing of rockets and mortar rounds by Palestinian militants from Gaza and reiterated its call for the release of Israeli Staff Sergeant Gilad Shalit. The Committee urged Israel to open all of the Gaza Strip's border crossings for the flow of humanitarian aid, import and export of commercial goods, and movement of persons, in accordance with international humanitarian law, the 2005 Agreement on Movement and Access [YUN 2005, p. 519] and Security Council resolution 1860(2009) [YUN 2009, p. 434].

The Committee continued to monitor the international investigations and their follow-up of the Israeli military offensive against Gaza of December 2008 [YUN 2008, p. 492] to January 2009 [YUN 2009, p. 434] and the Gaza flotilla incident of May 2010 (see p. 439). The report of the United Nations Fact-Finding Mission on the Gaza Conflict, established by the Human Rights Council in 2009 [YUN 2009, p. 783], represented a comprehensive, balanced and authoritative account of the Israeli incursion into Gaza. Although the Committee recognized the value of Israel's recent examination of some of the report's specific allegations, it called for a comprehensive, credible and independent investigation into the violations of international law committed and demanded follow-up action.

The Committee remained concerned that the divisions among the Palestinian factions profoundly affected the legitimate Palestinian national aspirations for statehood and peace. It called for invigorated efforts by all to help reconcile their positions on the basis of the prevailing consensus on the need to achieve the two-State solution.

Throughout the year, the Committee continued to raise awareness of the question of Palestine and support for the rights of the Palestinian people and the peaceful settlement of the question of Palestine through the following international meetings and conferences: International Meeting in Support of Israeli-Palestinian Peace, co-organized with the Parliamentary Assembly of the Mediterranean (Qawra, Malta, 12–13 February); United Nations Seminar on Assistance to the Palestinian People (Vienna, 24–25 March); United Nations Meeting of Civil Society in Support of the Palestinian People (Vienna, 26 March); United Nations International Meeting in Support of the Israeli-Palestinian Peace Process (Istanbul, Turkey, 25–26 May); United Nations Public Forum in Support of the Palestinian People (Istanbul, 27 May); and the United Nations African Meeting on the Question of Palestine (Rabat, Morocco, 1–2 July).

Communications. In a 23 August letter [A/64/906], the Chair of the Committee on the Exercise of the Inalienable Rights of the Palestinian People informed the General Assembly President that the Committee had approved Venezuela's request for membership on the Committee on 20 August. A 31 August letter from the Chair to the Secretary-General [A/64/909-S/2010/467] contained the statement adopted by the Committee's Bureau on the resumption of permanent status negotiations between Israel and the Palestinians.

Assistance to Palestinians

UN activities

In response to General Assembly resolution 64/125 [YUN 2009, p. 464], the Secretary-General, in May [A/65/77-E/2010/56], reported on United Nations and other assistance to the Palestinian people from May 2009 to April 2010. The report reviewed the work of UN agencies, in cooperation with the PA and donors, to assist the Palestinian people and institutions.

The overall socio-economic and political situation remained challenging, despite notable economic growth in the West Bank prompted by Palestinian efforts and Israel's easing of closure. High levels of unemployment, food insecurity and aid dependency persisted. The 2009 unemployment rate in the West Bank and Gaza was 25 per cent. The West Bank's unemployment rate declined from around 20 per cent to 18 per cent in the second half of 2009. In Gaza, the unemployment rate remained virtually unchanged at around 39 per cent.

In Gaza, key elements of Security Council resolution 1860(2009) [YUN 2009, p. 434] remained unfulfilled, in particular a durable and sustainable ceasefire, intra-Palestinian reconciliation, opening of the crossings on the basis of the 2005 Agreement on Movement and Access between the PA and Israel [YUN 2005, p. 519] and the prevention of illicit trafficking in arms and ammunition. Hamas increased its control over the population and the majority of institutions. An uneasy calm had been maintained between Gaza and Israel since the end of Israel's Operation Cast Lead in January 2009 [YUN 2009, p. 434], but incidents of rocket fire and violence continued. There had been little reconstruction of the destroyed civilian infrastructure and damage caused by the Israeli military owing to the continued Israeli stoppage of a wide range of goods entering Gaza, especially construction materials.

The Israeli authorities continued to adopt measures to ease the movement of Palestinians between most Palestinian urban centres in the West Bank, excluding East Jerusalem. There were approximately 550 closure obstacles inside the West Bank, 80 fewer than at the beginning of the reporting period.

Access and operational space for staff of humanitarian agencies remained restricted. From May 2009 to the end of January 2010, 526 reported incidents of delayed or denied access of UN staff at Israeli checkpoints resulted in the loss of 4,687 staff hours, or 625 days. The majority of those incidents occurred as UN staff crossed the barrier on the Jerusalem periphery. Medical referrals for Gaza's residents for external treatment continued to require permits issued by the Israeli authorities. In 2009, 30 per cent of applications were delayed and 2 per cent were rejected. The Erez crossing point, the only passage for movement of people between Gaza and the West Bank via Israel, remained open to the majority of requests for the transit of humanitarian staff, with approximately 1,300 crossings every month.

Except for bulk items through the Karni crossing conveyor belt, all goods destined for Gaza were transferred through the Kerem Shalom crossing. Problems resulting from the lack of capacity to transfer cooking gas resulted in shortages during the winter months, while a range of operational challenges, including reduced amounts of fuel entering Gaza, resulted in increasing blackouts periods in Gaza City. Persistent closure led to a proliferation of tunnels, 1,000 of which were estimated to be in operation at the end of the reporting period. The increased capacity of the tunnels led to greater amounts of benzene and reconstruction items to be transferred to Gaza. Nahal Oz was closed for the transfer of fuel as at 1 January, except for one shipment in mid-January; all fuel transfers had since occurred at Kerem Shalom.

The United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East (UNRWA) continued to provide free education to over 260,000 pupils in 325 elementary and preparatory schools in the West Bank and Gaza. The United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization contributed to the establishment of the Commission for Developing the Teaching Profession, which played a key role in implementing the teacher education strategy. The United Nations Development Fund for Women and the Palestinian Ministry of Education and Higher Education continued their strategic partnership through the second phase of the women-run school canteen project launched in October 2009.

The United Nations Children's Fund (UNICEF) worked with the Ministry of Education and Higher Education on legislation related to eliminating violence in schools. A draft policy and guidelines were piloted in 93 schools run by the PA, private entities and UNRWA in Gaza and Jerusalem in 2009, with the goal of extending it to all schools in 2010. UNRWA operated 56 health facilities in Gaza and the West Bank, employing over 2,000 staff. The total number of patient consultations in Gaza reached 4,070,360—a 5.4 per cent increase compared with 2008. In the West Bank, consultations rose 5 per cent, to 2,020,442. The United Nations Population Fund (UNFPA) continued to provide technical and financial support to four women's health centres in Hebron, and Jabalia and Al Buraj refugee camps in Gaza. The World Health Organization (WHO) provided a range of capacity-building and training programmes, including in updating of the 2008–2010 National Strategic Health Plan. The United Nations Development Programme (UNDP) started construction projects to enlarge two government hospitals in the West Bank cities of Jenin and Tulkarem and procured three ambulances to service rural communities. In addition, UNDP built three community mental-health centres in Jenin, Nablus and Halhoul, and a documentation centre in El Bireh. UNDP, WHO, the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime, UNFPA, UNRWA and UNICEF continued to implement programmes under the Global Fund to Fight AIDS, Tuberculosis and Malaria. The United Nations Human Settlements Programme began construction of buildings and infrastructure for the first phase of King Abdullah bin Abdulaziz City for Charity Housing in Hebron.

The Humanitarian Response Fund, administered by OCHA, was used to fill urgent funding gaps and respond to unforeseen humanitarian needs in Gaza and the West Bank, especially in area C and the seam zone (the area east of the barrier and west of the 1967 Green Line). The 2010 consolidated appeals process called for $664.4 million for 236 humanitarian and early recovery projects. As at 20 April, funding stood at 19.4 per cent.

UNCTAD assistance to Palestinians

At its fifty-seventh session (Geneva, 15–28 September) [TD/B/57/8 & Corr.1,2], the Trade and Development Board of the United Nations Conference on Trade and Development (UNCTAD) considered an UNCTAD secretariat report [TD/B/57/4] on assistance to the Palestinian people: developments in the economy of the Occupied Palestinian Territory. The report stated that the economy of the Occupied Palestinian Territory continued to perform well below potential in 2009, and the economic and humanitarian situation in Gaza continued to worsen. Despite funds allocated for economic reconstruction, the blockade and closures imposed on the Territory ensured that those funds did not have a tangible economic impact. At the heart of the Palestinian economic development bottleneck was a weakened tradable goods sector suffocated by the use of inappropriate currency, closure, and atrophy of the productive base. Per capita gross domestic product (GDP) remained more than 30 per cent lower than its level 10 years earlier, and the long-term prospects for establishing a viable, contiguous Palestinian State appeared bleak in light of the diminishing access to natural and economic resources, as well as the separation and fragmentation of the Gaza Strip, West Bank and East Jerusalem.

With Gaza under an almost complete blockade, growth in the West Bank was driven mainly by unprecedented aid inflows. The performance of the economy also reflected a very modest relaxation in the Israeli mobility restrictions within, to and from the West Bank. The aid-dependent public sector largely drove up growth, but there were no signs of private-sector recovery. The revival of the private sector was unlikely to occur unless mobility restrictions on labour and goods were lifted and the productivity base was rebuilt.

The prohibitive transaction costs resulting from restrictions on Palestinian access to domestic and global markets—combined with settlement activities and confiscation of lands—had undermined the viability of businesses and forced many investment activities away from agriculture and manufacturing in favour of the non-tradable goods sector. The World Bank estimated that 80 per cent of Gaza's households lived below the poverty line in 2007, with the situation worsening since then. In the West Bank, the poverty rate was estimated at 45 per cent. Food insecurity also remained widespread. With a drop of more than 60 per cent in agricultural output over the previous 10 years and the depletion of households' coping strategies, food insecurity affected 61 per cent of the population in Gaza and 25 per cent in the West Bank.

The Israeli military operation in Gaza, which began in 2008 [YUN 2008, p. 492], and the continuation of the siege led to a serious decline in tax and customs revenues. In 2009, total revenue declined by 1.5 per cent to 24.2 per cent of GDP. Budget and aid resources were also drained by the need to respond to the deteriorating health and humanitarian situation. PA spending in Gaza in 2009, at more than $1.4 billion, was higher than the entire budget support it received from donors. Gaza was expected to consume half of the $3.9 billion budget expenditure planned for 2010. Lifting the siege on Gaza, so that reconstruction could move forward and normal economic activities could resume, was essential for narrowing the high and unsustainable fiscal deficit.

The construction of the separation wall had deprived the Palestinians of more of their land and natural resources. It compounded the problem of agricultural decline by limiting the access of farmers who lived in the seam zone. The Gaza Strip also continued to suffer from the Israeli blockade imposed in June 2007 following the Hamas takeover [YUN 2007, p. 441], which isolated 40 per cent of the population of the Occupied Palestinian Territory from the rest of the world. During the first four months of 2010, imports were much lower than the minimum required to have a tangible impact on reducing poverty. The informal "tunnel economy", which grew in response to the blockade, featured a network of hundreds of tunnels along the borders between Gaza and Egypt. Around two thirds of economic activity was devoted to informally importing goods into Gaza, with the consequence of crowding out the formal economy.

In the context of the "Delivering as one" reform process of the UN system, and in close collaboration with the UN agencies in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, UNCTAD designed a multi-faceted proposal for a work programme to support renewed PA development efforts.

Communication. In a 7 January letter [A/64/622-S/2010/20], Egypt apprised the Secretary-General of developments surrounding the Lifeline 3 convoy carrying humanitarian assistance for the Palestinian people in Gaza, which Egypt allowed to enter Gaza via the Rafah border crossing on 6 January. The letter contained a list of medical and other humanitarian equipment Egypt had permitted to enter Gaza.

UNRWA

The United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East (UNRWA) continued to provide vital education, health, relief and social services, and micro-finance to the growing refugee population in the Gaza Strip, the West Bank, Jordan, Lebanon and the Syrian Arab Republic.

Report of Commissioner-General. The UNRWA Commissioner-General, in his annual report on the work of the Agency [A/66/13], said that the situation in the Gaza Strip remained dire. Very high unemployment and poverty rates persisted, and there was little hope of a significant improvement while the blockade remained in force. The situation in the West Bank and East Jerusalem was no less worrisome. Many Palestinians continued to suffer major restrictions on movement, residence and other fundamental freedoms, and Israeli settlements expanded with each passing month.

In 2010, the political, economic and security conditions varied in each of the five UNRWA areas of operation, with distinct impact on the refugees served by the Agency. The relatively stable conditions in Jordan and Syria allowed UNRWA to pursue its core human development activities. Conflict, violence and political uncertainty in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, and to a lesser degree in Lebanon, increased hardship for the refugees, as well as challenges for the Agency. The refugees had to contend with the impact of the global economic downturn and the persistent gap between their basic needs and the Agency's ability to respond.

The year saw some improvements in conditions in parts of the West Bank, including overall estimated GDP growth of 8 per cent, following a contraction that averaged 2.7 per cent per year between 1999 and 2009. The improvements followed the easing of closures between Palestinian communities on the eastern side of the West Bank barrier and large inflows of aid to the PA. Israel, however, announced plans to transfer supervision of the main crossing points between Jerusalem and the West Bank to a Crossing Points Administration, accompanied by restrictions that would adversely affect UN operations in the West Bank, including through increased operating costs. In Lebanon, progress was made on the issue of Palestine refugees' right to work, when Parliament, in August, adopted amendments to the Labour Code and Social Security Law.

During the year, the Agency continued its emergency operations in the Occupied Palestinian Territory under an emergency appeal for $332 million. By the end of the year, donors had funded $162.6 million, or around 50 per cent, of the appeal.

In the Gaza Strip, around 650,000 refugees received emergency food aid from UNRWA. All of the more than 200,000 pupils in UNRWA's Gaza schools received a meal under the school feeding programme. The Agency also provided temporary job opportunities to 42,685 beneficiaries.

In the West Bank, UNRWA provided emergency food aid to about 27,204 families and supported an estimated 76,634 refugees with temporary employment. Special focus was given to threatened communities in high-risk areas—East Jerusalem, area C, the so-called “seam zone”, and refugee camps—where forced displacement and dispossession remained a concern.

In northern Lebanon, the reconstruction of Nahr el-Bared refugee camp continued, but funding shortfalls and a difficult operating environment posed a challenge to progress in those efforts and prolonged hardship for the 27,000 refugees displaced from the camp since 2007. As at the end of December 2010, pledges amounting to $11.3 million had been received against an appeal for $18.5 million to meet basic needs of the displaced refugees awaiting reconstruction of the camp. The Agency's parallel appeal to reconstruct the camp amounted to $122.5 million received against the $328.4 million appeal.

The security of UNRWA staff remained a concern. The Agency noted that the local UNRWA employees were the only UN staff members in the area who did not receive hazard pay and reiterated its calls for the issue to be addressed.

UNRWA continued to pursue its reform agenda to modernize management systems and improve the quality of services provided to the refugees. Building on the achievements of the three-year organizational development process, which concluded in 2009 [YUN 2009, p. 467], UNRWA prepared its “Sustaining Change” plan in 2010 with a focus on enhancing programme effectiveness over the 2010–2012 period.

Israeli authorities, raising security concerns, continued to restrict the freedom of movement of UNRWA personnel in the Occupied Palestinian Territory in violation of the UN Charter, the 1946 Convention on the Privileges and Immunities of the United Nations [YUN 1946–47, p. 100], relevant UN resolutions and the 1967 Comay-Micheltmore Agreement, by which Israel was obligated to “facilitate the task of UNRWA to the best of its ability, subject only to regulations or arrangements which may be necessitated by considerations of military security”. The Israeli authorities maintained that the restrictions were necessary to protect Israel against terrorist threats. Evidence was not available to the Agency, however, to indicate that measures concerning Agency staff and movement were other than matters of police or administrative policy.

In the West Bank, coordination with the Israeli military liaison officers continued, including 67 meetings. Those officers, however, had limited or no influence over Israeli checkpoints staffed by private contractors, and staff movement continued to be restricted and unpredictable at several checkpoints, notably those controlling access to East Jerusalem or through the West Bank barrier.

As at 30 June, Jordan hosted the largest population of Palestine refugees, numbering two million, and the refugee population in Lebanon stood at 427,057. Field offices in both countries continued to implement reform programmes. In Syria, the registered Palestine refugee population amounted to 477,700. UNRWA made its vocational training activities a priority area in order to address youth unemployment and raise the socio-economic status of Palestinian refugees in Syria.

The registered Palestine refugee population in the West Bank, including East Jerusalem, stood at 788,108 as at 30 June. The UNRWA West Bank education programme initiated a comprehensive education recovery plan to ensure a better quality of education for the refugees. The Palestine refugee population amounted to 1.1 million in the Gaza Strip, where education remained the field office's top priority.

Advisory Commission. In its comments on the Agency's 2010 report, transmitted by its Chairman [A/66/13], the UNRWA Advisory Commission stated that it was concerned about the loss of life in the UNRWA fields of operation. The restrictions on access, notably in the Gaza Strip and the West Bank—together with periods of violence—disproportionately affected the refugees, and led to even greater demand for UNRWA services. The Commission urged that access be permitted for all goods necessary for the Agency to carry out its humanitarian and human development activities. The Commission expressed concern regarding attacks and threats against UNRWA facilities and staff by all parties, and that the separation barrier, closures, curfews and other restrictions on movement imposed by the Israeli authorities in the West Bank and the Gaza Strip had led to further hardship. The restrictions, including those with respect to East Jerusalem, continued to hinder economic development, specifically access to sources of employment and essential goods and services, and the ability of UNRWA to carry out its mandated tasks. The Commission called on all parties to fully respect United Nations resolutions and international law, including international humanitarian law.

The Commission remained concerned about the long-term structural underfunding of the Agency, noting that it had an impact on service delivery. The Agency's emergency appeal for $323 million for the Occupied Palestinian Territory had received only $162.5 million or around 50 per cent. The Commission called for full support for the rebuilding of the Nahr El-Bared camp in Lebanon and for relief assistance to those displaced following its destruction in 2007 [YUN 2007, p. 472].

Report of Conciliation Commission. In response to General Assembly resolution 64/87 [YUN 2009, p. 468], the United Nations Conciliation Commission for Palestine, established by General Assembly resolution 194(III) [YUN 1948–49, p. 203] to facilitate the repatriation, resettlement and economic and social rehabilitation of the refugees and the payment of compensation submitted, in August, its sixty-fourth report [A/65/225], covering the period from 1 September 2009 to 31 August 2010. The Commission stated that it had nothing further to report since the submission of its sixty-third report in 2009 [YUN 2009, p. 467].

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 10 December [meeting 62], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fourth Committee [A/65/422], adopted resolution 65/98 by recorded vote (169-1-6) [agenda item 51].

Having considered the report of the Commissioner-General of the United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East covering the period from 1 January to 31 December 2009,

Taking note of the letter dated 22 June 2010 from the Chairman of the Advisory Commission of the United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East addressed to the Commissioner-General,

Deeply concerned about the critical financial situation of the Agency, caused in part by the structural underfunding of the Agency, as well as its rising expenditures resulting from the deterioration of the socio-economic and humanitarian conditions in the region and their significant negative impact on the provision of necessary Agency services to the Palestine refugees, including its emergency-related and development programmes,

Recalling Articles 100, 104 and 105 of the Charter of the United Nations and the Convention on the Privileges and Immunities of the United Nations,

Recalling also the Convention on the Safety of United Nations and Associated Personnel,

Affirming the applicability of the Geneva Convention relative to the Protection of Civilian Persons in Time of War, of 12 August 1949, to the Palestinian territory occupied since 1967, including East Jerusalem,

Aware of the continuing needs of the Palestine refugees in all fields of operation, namely, Jordan, Lebanon, the Syrian Arab Republic and the Occupied Palestinian Territory,

Gravely concerned about the extremely difficult socio-economic conditions being faced by the Palestine refugees in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, particularly in the refugee camps in the Gaza Strip, as a result of the continuing prolonged Israeli closures, the construction of the wall, the severe economic and movement restrictions that in effect amount to a blockade and the continuing negative repercussions of the military operations in the Gaza Strip between December 2008 and January 2009, which caused extensive loss of life and injury, particularly among Palestinian civilians, including children and women; widespread damage and destruction to Palestinian homes, properties, vital infrastructure and public institutions, including hospitals, schools and United Nations facilities; and internal displacement of civilians,

Commending the extraordinary efforts by the Agency to provide emergency relief, medical, food, shelter and other humanitarian assistance to needy and displaced families in the Gaza Strip,

Recalling, in this regard, its resolution ES-10/18 of 16 January 2009 and Security Council resolution 1860(2009) of 8 January 2009,

Expressing regret over the continued restrictions that impede the Agency's efforts to repair and rebuild thousands of damaged or destroyed refugee shelters and Agency facilities, including schools and health centres, and calling upon Israel to ensure the unimpeded import of essential construction materials into the Gaza Strip, while taking note of recent developments regarding the situation of access there,

Expressing concern about the severe classroom shortage in the Gaza Strip and the consequent negative impact on the right to education of refugee children as a result of the inability of the Agency to construct new schools owing to Israel's ongoing restrictions impeding the entry of necessary construction materials into the Gaza Strip,

Stressing the urgent need for reconstruction to begin in the Gaza Strip, including through the completion of numerous suspended projects managed by the Agency, and for the commencement of other urgent United Nations-led civilian reconstruction activities,

Urging the disbursement of pledges made at the International Conference in Support of the Palestinian Economy for the Reconstruction of Gaza, held in Sharm el-Sheikh, Egypt, on 2 March 2009, to accelerate the reconstruction process,

Commending the Agency's continuing efforts to assist those refugees affected and displaced by the crisis in the Nahr el-Bared refugee camp in northern Lebanon, and welcoming the efforts of the Government of Lebanon and the international community to support the rebuilding by the Agency of the Nahr el-Bared camp,

Aware of the valuable work done by the Agency in providing protection to the Palestinian people, in particular Palestine refugees,

Gravely concerned about the endangerment of the safety of the Agency's staff and about the damage and destruction caused to the facilities of the Agency during the reporting period,

Deploing, in particular, the extensive damage and destruction of Agency facilities in the Gaza Strip caused during the military operations between December 2008 and January 2009, including to schools where civilians were sheltered and the Agency's main compound and warehouse, as reported in the summary by the Secretary-General of the report of the Board of Inquiry and in the report of the United Nations Fact-finding Mission on the Gaza Conflict,

Deploing also, in this regard, the breaches of the inviolability of United Nations premises, the failure to accord the property and assets of the Organization immunity from any form of interference and the failure to protect United Nations personnel, premises and property,

Deploing further the killing and injury of Agency staff members by the Israeli occupying forces in the Occupied Palestinian Territory since September 2000,

Deploing the killing and wounding of refugee children in the Agency schools by the Israeli occupying forces during the military operations between December 2008 and January 2009,

Deeply concerned about the continuing imposition of restrictions on the freedom of movement and access of the Agency's staff, vehicles and goods, and the injury, harassment and intimidation of the Agency's staff, which undermine and obstruct the work of the Agency, including its ability to provide essential basic and emergency services,

Aware of the agreement between the Agency and the Government of Israel,

Taking note of the agreement reached on 24 June 1994, embodied in an exchange of letters between the Agency and the Palestine Liberation Organization,

1. Reaffirms that the effective functioning of the United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East remains essential in all fields of operation;

2. Expresses its appreciation to the Commissioner-General of the United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East, as well as to all of the staff of the Agency, for their tireless efforts and valuable work, particularly in the light of the difficult conditions and unstable circumstances faced during the past year;

3. Expresses special commendation to the Agency for the essential role that it has played for over sixty years since its establishment in providing vital services for the well-being, human development and protection of the Palestine refugees and the amelioration of their plight;

4. Expresses its appreciation for the important support provided by the host Governments to the Agency in the discharge of its duties;

5. Expresses its appreciation to the Advisory Commission of the United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East, and requests it to continue its efforts and to keep the General Assembly informed of its activities;

6. Takes note with appreciation of the report of the Working Group on the Financing of the United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East and the efforts of the Working Group to assist in ensuring the financial security of the Agency, and requests the Secretary-General to provide the necessary services and assistance to the Working Group for the conduct of its work;

7. Commends the Agency's six-year Medium-Term Strategy, which commenced in January 2010, and the continuing efforts of the Commissioner-General to increase the budgetary transparency and efficiency of the Agency, as reflected in the Agency's programme budget for the biennium 2010–2011;

8. Requests the Secretary-General to continue to support the institutional strengthening of the Agency through the provision of sufficient financial resources from the regular budget of the United Nations;

9. Commends the Agency for the successful completion of its three-year reform programme, and urges the Agency to apply maximum efficiency procedures to reduce operational and administrative costs and to maximize the use of resources;

10. Looks forward to the transmittal of the report the Secretary-General on the strengthening of the management capacity of the Agency, as requested by the Working Group and as endorsed by the General Assembly in its resolution 64/89;

11. Endorses the efforts of the Commissioner-General to continue to provide humanitarian assistance, as far as practicable, on an emergency basis, and as a temporary measure, to persons in the area who are internally displaced and in serious need of continued assistance as a result of recent crises in the Occupied Palestinian Territory and Lebanon;

12. Welcomes the progress made so far by the Agency in rebuilding the Nahr el-Bared refugee camp in northern Lebanon, and calls for the expeditious completion of its reconstruction, for the continued provision of relief assistance to those displaced following its destruction in 2007 and for the alleviation of their ongoing suffering through the fulfilment of pledges made at the International Donor Conference for the Recovery and Reconstruction of the Nahr el-Bared Palestine Refugee Camp and Conflict-affected Areas of Northern Lebanon, held in Vienna on 23 June 2008;

13. Encourages the Agency, in close cooperation with other relevant United Nations entities, to continue making progress in addressing the needs and rights of children and women in its operations in accordance with the Convention on the Rights of the Child and the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women, respectively;

14. Commends, in this regard, the Agency's "Summer Games" initiative providing recreational, cultural and educational activities for children in the Gaza Strip and, recognizing its positive contribution, calls for full support of the initiative;

15. Expresses concern about the relocation of the international staff of the Agency from its headquarters in Gaza City and the disruption of operations at the headquarters due to the deterioration and instability of the situation on the ground;

16. Calls upon Israel, the occupying Power, to comply fully with the provisions of the Geneva Convention relative to the Protection of Civilian Persons in Time of War, of 12 August 1949;

17. Also calls upon Israel to abide by Articles 100, 104 and 105 of the Charter of the United Nations and the Convention on the Privileges and Immunities of the United Nations in order to ensure the safety of the personnel of the Agency, the protection of its institutions and the safeguarding of the security of its facilities in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem;

18. Urges the Government of Israel to expeditiously reimburse the Agency for all transit charges incurred and other financial losses sustained as a result of delays and restrictions on movement and access imposed by Israel;

19. Calls upon Israel particularly to cease obstructing the movement and access of the staff, vehicles and supplies of the Agency and to cease the levying of taxes, extra fees and charges, which affect the Agency's operations detrimentally;

20. Also calls upon Israel to fully lift the restrictions impeding the import of necessary construction materials and supplies for the reconstruction and repair of damaged or destroyed Agency facilities, in particular schools, health centres and thousands of refugee shelters, and for the implementation of suspended civilian infrastructure projects in refugee camps in the Gaza Strip;

21. Requests the Commissioner-General to proceed with the issuance of identification cards for Palestine refugees and their descendants in the Occupied Palestinian Territory;

22. Notes with appreciation the progress made by the Agency in the modernization of its archives through the Palestine Refugee Records Project, and encourages the Commissioner-General to finalize the remaining components of the Project as rapidly as possible and to report on the progress made to the General Assembly at its sixty-sixth session;

23. Also notes with appreciation the success of the Agency's microfinance and microenterprise programmes, and calls upon the Agency, in close cooperation with the relevant agencies, to continue to contribute to the development of the economic and social stability of the Palestine refugees in all fields of operation;

24. Reiterates its appeals to all States, the specialized agencies and non-governmental organizations to continue and to augment the special allocations for grants and scholarships for higher education to Palestine refugees in addition to their contributions to the regular budget of the Agency and to contribute to the establishment of vocational training centres for Palestine refugees, and requests the Agency to act as the recipient and trustee for the special allocations for grants and scholarships;

25. Urges all States, the specialized agencies and non-governmental organizations to continue and to increase their contributions to the Agency in order to address the serious financial constraints and underfunding, especially with respect to the Agency's regular budget deficit, noting that financial shortfalls have been exacerbated by the current humanitarian situation on the ground that has resulted in rising expenditures, in particular with regard to emergency services, and to support the Agency's valuable and necessary work in assisting the Palestine refugees in all fields of operation.

UNRWA financing

In 2010, UNRWA expended $895.8 million, against a budget of $1,226.7 million, on its regular budget, projects and emergency appeal activities. The largest component was an expenditure of $545 million under the unrestricted regular budget, accounting for 60.85 per cent of total expenditure. Emergency activities, projects and restricted fund activities accounted for 22.5 per cent, 10.87 per cent and 5.78 per cent, respectively. Education remained the largest programme, accounting for 61.4 per cent of the total regular budget, followed by health (18 per cent), support services (15 per cent), relief and social services (4 per cent), and infrastructure (2 per cent).

Working Group. The Working Group on the Financing of UNRWA held four meetings in 2010, on 15 March, 13 and 28 September and 6 October. It noted with concern the exceptionally large funding gap anticipated for UNRWA's regular budget in 2010 and reiterated that it was the responsibility of the international community to ensure that UNRWA services were maintained at an acceptable level, in quantitative and qualitative terms, and to ensure that funding kept pace with the changing needs of the refugee population. The Working Group reiterated its concern that if adequate resources from the UN regular budget were not provided, the achievements from the comprehensive overhaul of the Agency's work being undertaken could be put at risk. Recognizing the essential humanitarian role played by UNRWA emergency operations in alleviating the hardship of the refugees and in mitigating further declines in their living conditions, the Working Group urged all potential donors to redouble their efforts to fully fund the Agency's emergency appeals for 2010.

The Working Group reiterated its concern about the continued tight restrictions on the movement of UNRWA staff and humanitarian goods into and out of the Occupied Palestinian Territory, and between its parts. It called on Israel to allow the Agency free and unfettered access. The Working Group stated that the services provided by UNRWA had to be viewed as the minimum required to enable the refugees to lead productive lives. Any reduction in those services would not only unfairly deprive them of the minimum level of support to which they were entitled, but could also have a destabilizing effect on the entire region. The Working Group expressed the hope that the international support for UNRWA embodied in the resolutions adopted each year by the General Assembly would be translated into increased support to ensure the continuation of the Agency's work on a sound financial basis.

Displaced persons

In an August report [A/65/283] submitted in compliance with General Assembly resolution 64/88 [YUN 2009, p. 472], which called for the accelerated return of all persons displaced as a result of the June 1967 and subsequent hostilities to their homes in the territories occupied by Israel, the Secretary-General said that, based on information obtained from the UNRWA Commissioner-General for the period from 1 July 2009 to 30 June 2010, 376 refugees registered with the Agency had returned to the West Bank and 272 to the Gaza Strip from places outside the Occupied Palestinian Territory. The number of displaced registered refugees known by the Agency to have returned since June 1967 was about 33,274. The Agency was unable to estimate the total number of displaced inhabitants who had returned. It kept records only of registered refugees and even those records, particularly with respect to the location of registered refugees, might be incomplete.

On 10 May, the Secretary-General sought information from Member States on action taken or envisaged to implement resolution 64/88. In a 28 June note, Israel reaffirmed its intention to continue facilitating the UNRWA extension of humanitarian services to its beneficiaries but remained concerned about the political motivation of resolution 64/88 and similar resolutions, as they did not reflect the reality on the ground. Israel favoured consolidating UNRWA resolutions and removing extraneous political language. It urged the Secretary-General and the Agency to consider ways in which the United Nations could advance the welfare of the Palestinian people.

Palestinian women

In a report to the 2010 session of the Commission on the Status of Women [E/CN.6/2010/4], submitted in accordance with Economic and Social Council resolution 2009/14 [YUN 2009, p. 474], the Secretary-General summarized the situation of Palestinian women and reviewed UN assistance to them between October 2008 and September 2009, with particular reference to education and training; health; employment and entrepreneurship; women's human rights; violence against women; and humanitarian assistance.

According to the Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs, the continuation of the blockade of Gaza that was imposed by Israel following the Hamas takeover in June 2007 [YUN 2007, p. 441] had triggered a protracted crisis with humanitarian consequences. The living conditions of women and men in Gaza deteriorated as a result of the erosion of livelihoods and the gradual decline of infrastructure, including basic services for health, water and sanitation, and education. Although restrictions of movement affected women and men, concerns over possible harassment at checkpoints had curtailed women's movement, reducing their access to education, economic participation and social inclusion. A World Bank study noted that the high transaction and financial costs of transport as a result of unpredictable and often protracted waiting times had a disproportionate impact on women.

House demolitions resulting from the requirement for building permits by Israeli authorities in East Jerusalem, and in some parts of the West Bank, continued. A total of 51,000 people in Gaza were internally displaced and lived in makeshift shelters that provided minimal protection. The negative impacts on displaced families included long-term trauma, family separation, disruption of family life and education, and increased poverty. Women were particularly affected by the displacement and the lack of security.

According to the most recent estimates available, the poverty rate among households headed by women was 61.2 per cent, compared with 56.9 per cent for households headed by men in the Occupied Palestinian Territory in 2007. During the reporting period, the rates of women's participation in the labour force remained low at 15.4 per cent, compared with a participation rate of 66.9 per cent for men. The meagre participation rate for women was attributable to sociocultural restrictions, high fertility rates and a general low level of employment caused by various constraints on the economy imposed by the occupation. The rise in food insecurity and poverty in Gaza had resulted in an increased burden on women. Older women, women with disabilities, female heads of household and displaced women and girls faced continued hardship as a result of the blockade of Gaza.

In the 2008/2009 academic year, 239,188 girls (49.92 per cent of pupils) were enrolled in UNRWA elementary, preparatory and secondary schools. The dropout rate for girls was 0.97 per cent. Girls constituted 66.8 per cent of the students benefiting from UNRWA administered scholarships. In 2007, women constituted 45.2 per cent of those who had completed two years or more of higher education: 54 per cent of students at local universities; 57 per cent of students at university colleges; and 37 per cent at community colleges. Tertiary students had limited postgraduate study options within Gaza and faced great difficulties in arranging to study abroad at the postgraduate level. The situation had hindered progress in improving girls' and women's education, thus limiting their potential to assume leadership positions. Although women accounted for 58 per cent of graduates from local universities, they represented only 16.6 per cent of academic teaching staff at universities.

According to a study by the United Nations Development Fund for Women, domestic violence was the primary safety problem facing women and girls, while public and political violence was the main safety and security problem facing men and boys. The highest reported rise in domestic violence against women was among households displaced by the conflict and in the southern Gaza Strip, which also had the highest reporting of increased domestic violence against children.

Women were rarely present in decision-making positions in peace negotiations, either at the national or international level. As a result of the quota established in 2004, however, women's political participation increased to 12.7 per cent in the Palestinian Legislative Council and to 18 per cent in the local and municipal councils.

The report recommended that incidents of discrimination and violence against women and girls should be strongly condemned. Perpetrators of all forms of violence against women should be prosecuted, and any climate of impunity surrounding such offences should be eliminated. Governments, academic institutions, international organizations and civil society, including non-governmental organizations should be encouraged to collaborate on qualitative and quantitative action-oriented research on the situation of women and girls.

ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL ACTION

On 20 July [meeting 42], the Economic and Social Council, on the recommendation of the Commission on the Status of Women [E/2010/27], adopted resolution 2010/6 by recorded vote (24-3-15) [agenda item 14 (a)].

Situation of and assistance to Palestinian women

The Economic and Social Council,

Having considered with appreciation the report of the Secretary-General,

Recalling the Nairobi Forward-looking Strategies for the Advancement of Women, in particular paragraph 260 concerning Palestinian women and children, the Beijing Platform for Action, adopted at the Fourth World Conference on Women, and the outcomes of the twenty-third special session of the General Assembly entitled "Women 2000: gender equality, development and peace for the twenty-first century",

Recalling also its resolution 2009/14 of 28 July 2009 and other relevant United Nations resolutions, including General Assembly resolution 57/337 of 3 July 2003 on the prevention of armed conflict and Security Council resolution 1325(2000) of 31 October 2000 on women and peace and security,

Recalling further the Declaration on the Elimination of Violence against Women as it concerns the protection of civilian populations,

Recalling the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights, the International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights and the Convention on the Rights of the Child, and reaffirming that these human rights instruments must be respected in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem,

Expressing deep concern about the grave situation of Palestinian women in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, resulting from the severe impact of the ongoing illegal Israeli occupation and all of its manifestations,

Expressing grave concern about the increased difficulties being faced by Palestinian women and girls living under Israeli occupation, including the continuation of home demolitions, the sharp increase in poverty, soaring unemployment, increased food insecurity, incidents of domestic violence, and declining health, education and living standards, including the rising incidence of trauma and the decline in their psychological well-being, and expressing grave concern also about the deepening humanitarian crisis and rising insecurity and instability on the ground in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, in particular in the Gaza Strip,

Deploing the deteriorating economic and social conditions of Palestinian women and girls in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, and the systematic violation of their human rights resulting from the severe impact of ongoing illegal Israeli practices, including the construction and expansion of settlements and the Wall and the continued imposition of closures and restrictions on the movement of persons and goods, which have detrimentally affected their right to health care, including access of pregnant women to health services for antenatal care and safe delivery, education, employment, development and freedom of movement,

Gravely concerned, in particular, about the continuing deterioration of the socio-economic and humanitarian situation in the Gaza Strip, including that resulting from the Israeli military operations and the imposition of a blockade consisting of the prolonged closure of border crossings and severe restrictions on the movement of all persons and goods, which has detrimentally affected every aspect of the lives of the civilian population, especially women and children, in the Gaza Strip,

Stressing the importance of providing assistance, especially emergency assistance, to alleviate the dire socio-economic and humanitarian situation being faced by Palestinian women and their families,

Emphasizing the importance of increasing the role of women in peacebuilding and decision-making with regard to conflict prevention and the peaceful resolution of conflicts as part of efforts to ensure the safety and well-being of all women in the region, and stressing the importance of their equal participation and involvement in all efforts for the achievement, maintenance and promotion of peace and security,

1. Urges the international community to continue to give special attention to the promotion and protection of the human rights of Palestinian women and girls and to intensify its measures to improve the difficult conditions being faced by Palestinian women and their families living under Israeli occupation;

2. Reaffirms that the Israeli occupation remains the major obstacle for Palestinian women with regard to their advancement, self-reliance and integration into the development of their society, and stresses the importance of efforts to increase their role in decision-making with regard to conflict prevention and resolution and to ensure their equal participation and involvement in all efforts for the achievement, maintenance and promotion of peace and security;

3. Demands that Israel, the occupying Power, comply fully with the provisions and principles of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights, the Regulations annexed to the Hague Convention IV of 18 October 1907, the Geneva Convention relative to the Protection of Civilian Persons in Time of War, of 12 August 1949 and all other relevant rules, principles and instruments of international law, including the International Covenants on Human Rights, in order to protect the rights of Palestinian women and their families;

4. Calls upon Israel to facilitate the return of all refugees and displaced Palestinian women and children to their homes and properties, in compliance with the relevant United Nations resolutions;

5. Calls upon the international community to continue to provide urgently needed assistance, especially emergency assistance, and services in an effort to alleviate the dire humanitarian crisis being faced by Palestinian women and their families and to help in the reconstruction of relevant Palestinian institutions, integrating a gender perspective into all international assistance programmes;

6. Requests the Commission on the Status of Women to continue to monitor and take action with regard to the implementation of the Nairobi Forward-looking Strategies for the Advancement of Women, in particular paragraph 260 concerning Palestinian women and children, the Beijing Platform for Action and the outcomes of the twenty-third special session of the General Assembly entitled "Women 2000: gender equality, development and peace for the twenty-first century";

7. Requests the Secretary-General to continue to review the situation, to assist Palestinian women by all available means, including those set out in his report, and to submit to the Commission on the Status of Women at its fifty-fifth session a report, including information provided by the Economic and Social Commission for Western Asia, on the progress made in the implementation of the present resolution.

Property rights

In response to General Assembly resolution 64/90 [YUN 2009, p. 475], the Secretary-General submitted an August report [A/65/311] on Palestine refugees' properties and their revenues. Two Member States (Denmark and Israel) had replied to his note requesting information from Israel and other Member States on action taken or envisaged in relation to the implementation of resolutions 64/87, 64/88, 64/89 and 64/90 [YUN 2009, pp. 468, 472, 469 & 475], respectively.

In an 8 July note, Denmark stated that, with regard to resolutions 64/87, 64/88 and 64/89, it supported UNRWA with a core contribution of 70 million Danish kroner (DKr). The confirmation of an additional DKr 10 million contribution for the implementation of education activities in Gaza represented a concrete investment in the future of Palestine refugees. Regarding resolution 64/90, which urged States to provide the Secretary-General with any pertinent information in their possession concerning Arab property, assets and property rights in Israel, Denmark contributed through the continuous reporting on the overall political and developmental situation in the Occupied Palestinian Territory. Through support to human rights organizations engaged in the field, Denmark also contributed to information and monitoring of the issue.

In a 28 June note, Israel reiterated its support for the humanitarian activities of UNRWA; it would continue to facilitate the Agency's extension of vital humanitarian services to Palestinians, but remained concerned about the political motivation of those resolutions, as they did not reflect the reality on the ground. Israel supported consolidating UNRWA resolutions and removing extraneous political language. Specifically, the UNRWA mandate should be such that entitlement to its services would be defined in a manner consistent with the standard UN policy on refugees. Furthermore, the mandate should include the promotion in the Palestinian context of the UN goals of resettlement and local integration of refugees. Israel urged the Secretary-General and the Agency to consider ways in which the United Nations could enhance the manner in which it advanced the welfare of the Palestinian people.

On 10 December [meeting 62], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fourth Committee [A/65/422], adopted resolution 65/101 by recorded vote (169-6-2) [agenda item 51].

Lebanon

In 2010, progress made in implementing resolution 1559(2004) [YUN 2004, p. 506] included the reconvening of the Lebanese National Dialogue and the improvement of Lebanese-Syrian relations. The presence of paramilitary, however, continued to constitute a challenge to the ability of the Lebanese Government to exercise its full sovereignty and control over its territory. In addition, the development of a national defence strategy faced significant political obstacles. Regarding the implementation of resolution 1701(2009) [YUN 2006, p. 583], the Secretary-General submitted a comprehensive review of UNIFIL towards adapting its operational capacity. During the year, the Special Tribunal for Lebanon—created in 2007 to investigate and prosecute the perpetrators of the terrorist bombing that killed former Lebanese Prime Minister Rafiq Hariri and 22 others [YUN 2007, p. 505]—moved forward towards completing its preparations for trial proceedings. In August, the Security Council extended the mandate of UNIFIL for a further year.

Political and security developments

The Secretary-General reported in October [S/2010/538] that municipal elections were held in Lebanon throughout the month of May in a generally calm and peaceful atmosphere, despite minor security incidents. On 31 July, the Lebanese President, Michel Sleiman, hosted a joint summit in Beirut with the King of Saudi Arabia and the President of Syria. The Emir of Qatar visited Lebanon from 31 July to 2 August, including the southern part of the country. The visits signalled a strong Arab commitment to the maintenance of stability in Lebanon. On 13 and 14 October, the President of Iran visited Lebanon and toured villages in the south, during which he expressed strong support for Hizbullah.

The Secretary-General remained in contact with all parties in Lebanon, as well as with relevant regional and international leaders. He received the Lebanese Prime Minister, Saad Hariri, during his visit to UN Headquarters on 25 May. The Secretary-General met with President Sleiman in New York on 24 September on the margins of the General Assembly, and expressed the full support of the United Nations for the sovereignty, independence and territorial integrity of Lebanon, without foreign interference.

In a later report [S/2011/258], the Secretary-General stated that political tension increased markedly in the latter part of the year, fuelled, inter alia, by speculation and public pronouncements concerning the proceedings of the Special Tribunal for Lebanon (see p. 496). The differences between political camps resulted in the suspension of Cabinet meetings for five weeks, from 10 November until 15 December. On that date, the Cabinet meeting ended in a stalemate, leading to institutional paralysis.

Security Council consideration. The Security Council considered the situation in Lebanon, UNIFIL, and the implementation of Security Council resolutions 1559(2004) [YUN 2004, p. 506] and 1701(2006) [YUN 2006, p. 583] in meetings held throughout the year. The security arrangements put in place by resolution 1701(2006) were tested by a number of incidents. The absence of a government in Lebanon during parts of the year contributed to an already volatile climate. On 3 August, the Council heard briefings by the Under-Secretary-General for Peacekeeping Operations and the UNIFIL Force Commander on the exchange of fire that occurred on the same day between Lebanon and Israel along the Blue Line—the border demarcation established by the United Nations in 2000.

On 24 August, the Council held consultations on the Secretary-General's request for a year-long extension of the UNIFIL mandate. The Council heard a briefing by the Assistant Secretary-General for Peacekeeping Operations, who underlined the need for the full implementation of resolution 1701(2006) and close cooperation between UNIFIL and the Lebanese Armed Forces (LAF). He stressed that the incident on the Blue Line had to remain isolated and asked the parties to respect the demarcation line. The Council, in resolution 1937(2010) of 30 August (see p. 491), extended the UNIFIL mandate for 12 months.

In an open debate on 18 October [S/PV.6404], Council members expressed their support for the independence of the Special Tribunal for Lebanon and reiterated the obligation of the parties to fully implement resolution 1701(2006). On 28 October, the Special Envoy of the Secretary-General for the implementation of resolution 1559(2004), Terje Rød-Larsen, briefed the Council on the implementation of the resolution as reflected in the twelfth semi-annual report of the Secretary-General [S/2010/538]. On 5 November, the Under-Secretary-General for Legal Affairs, also serving as the UN Legal Counsel, briefed the Council on the attacks of 27 October on members of the investigation team from the Office of the Prosecutor of the Special Tribunal.

On 18 November, the Secretary-General's Special Coordinator for Lebanon, Michael Williams, and the Assistant Secretary-General for Peacekeeping Operations briefed the Council on the implementation of resolution 1701(2006). Council members expressed concern over violations of the resolution and the incidents along the Blue Line, and encouraged cooperation with UNIFIL.

In resolution 65/147 of 20 December (see p. 1015), the General Assembly requested Israel to assume responsibility for prompt and adequate compensation to Lebanon and other countries directly affected by the oil slick on Lebanese and Syrian shores caused by Israeli military action in 2006 [YUN 2006, p. 1215].

Communications. In communications received throughout the year, Lebanon reported on Israeli acts of aggression by air, land and sea, and violations of the Blue Line, and consequently, of Lebanese sovereignty and territorial integrity [A/64/628-S/2010/26; A/64/656-S/2010/74; A/64/663-S/2010/81; A/64/668-S/2010/82; A/64/677-S/2010/96; A/64/703-S/2010/120; A/64/736-S/2010/170; A/64/767-S/2010/210; A/64/780-S/2010/233; A/64/790-S/2010/284; A/64/877-S/2010/405; A/65/481-S/2010/503; A/65/482-S/2010/504; A/65/559-S/2010/573; A/65/580-S/2010/589; A/65/590-S/2010/594; A/65/686-S/2010/692].

Implementation of resolution 1559(2004)

The Secretary-General submitted his eleventh and twelfth semi-annual reports on the implementation of Security Council resolution 1559(2004) [YUN 2004, p. 506], which called for strict respect of the sovereignty, territorial integrity, unity and political independence of Lebanon under the sole and exclusive authority of the Government; the withdrawal of all remaining foreign forces from Lebanon; and the disbanding and disarmament of all Lebanese and non-Lebanese militias.

Report of Secretary-General (April). In his eleventh semi-annual report on the implementation of resolution 1559(2004), issued in April [S/2010/193], the Secretary-General stated that progress continued to be made in the implementation of the resolution. The parliamentary endorsement, in December 2009, of the Government of national unity formed in November 2009 [YUN 2009, p. 476] was an important achievement. There was a need to take tangible measures to retain momentum and maintain Lebanon's progress towards full reaffirmation of its sovereignty, territorial integrity, unity and political independence, consistent with the 1989 Taif Agreement [YUN 1989, p. 203] and resolution 1559(2004). The presence of Palestinian armed groups outside the refugee camps continued to pose a threat to stability and challenged Lebanese sovereignty. The existence of armed groups outside Government control stood against the democratic aspirations of Lebanon, threatened domestic peace and was an obstacle to the prosperity and welfare the Lebanese people deserved.

The maintenance of Hizbullah's independent paramilitary capacity posed a key challenge to the safety of Lebanese civilians and government authority. In that regard, the Secretary-General welcomed the reconvening of the National Dialogue by President Sleiman as the best forum to address the disarmament of armed groups in the country, and urged the Government and Dialogue participants to finally implement previously agreed decisions. The Secretary-General called on all Member States to extend their support to the Lebanese Armed Forces, which remained a critical actor in addressing the country's challenges, in particular the effort to extend the Government's reach throughout the country.

Progress in Lebanese-Syrian relations was evident in Lebanese Prime Minister Hariri's visit to Damascus. The Secretary-General welcomed the renewed intention of the Lebanese and Syrian Governments to move forward on the issue of the delineation of the Lebanese-Syrian border, which would allow for enhanced border control. He commended the pledge by Prime Minister Hariri to improve the living conditions of Palestine refugees in Lebanon, without prejudice to an overall resolution of the Palestine refugee question in the framework of a comprehensive peace agreement. The Secretary-General called on the Prime Minister to establish expeditiously the legal and administrative frameworks required to enable Palestine refugees to have access to employment while in Lebanon. Regarding the allegations of major arms transfers to Lebanon through its land borders, the Secretary-General called on all parties and actors to fully abide by resolutions 1559(2004), 1680(2006) [YUN 2006, p. 571] and 1701(2006).

Communication. On 27 April [S/2010/212], Syria, in identical letters to the Secretary-General and the Security Council President, stated that it could not accept that the Secretary-General's reports on the implementation of Council resolution 1559(2004) should continue to refer to Syria because it had fulfilled all obligations incumbent on it under that resolution, as indicated in the Secretary-General's eleventh semi-annual report and the preceding reports. Syria deplored the observations contained in the report regarding the establishment of diplomatic relations between Syria and Lebanon and the delineation of their border, which were strictly bilateral matters that concerned only the two countries. Syria affirmed that it was solicitous of Lebanon's sovereignty, political independence and territorial integrity. It rejected the report's allegations that the arms embargo was being violated, stating that the report itself indicated that the United Nations did not have the means to verify the allegations. The report referred to the fact that the President of Syria had hosted in Damascus the President of Iran and the Secretary-General of Hizbullah. Syria believed that the reference constituted unacceptable interference in Syria's internal affairs and its foreign relations inasmuch as those were sovereign matters that did not concern the United Nations.

Report of Secretary-General (October). In October, the Secretary-General, in his twelfth semi-annual report [S/2010/538] on the implementation of Security Council resolution 1559(2004), stated that over the previous six months, Lebanon had maintained the achievements accomplished towards the implementation of the resolution. However, there had been little further tangible progress, as the remaining issues to be addressed were the most difficult. The existence of militias outside the control of the Government constituted a challenge to the ability of the State to exercise its full sovereignty and control over its territory. The maintenance by Hizbullah of an independent paramilitary capacity remained at the centre of the political debate and the ongoing process of post-civil-war reconciliation. The Secretary-General called on the leaders of Hizbullah to complete the group's transformation into a solely Lebanese political party and to disarm, consistent with the requirements set out in the Taif Accord.

The National Dialogue remained an important tool for maintaining calm and stability and for addressing the critical issues of weapons outside the control of the State. The process of developing a national defence strategy, however, faced significant obstacles of a political, rather than a technical, nature. The Secretary-General emphasized that the main goal of the Dialogue should be to bring all arms under the sole control of the Government.

The Secretary-General expressed concern at the continued presence of paramilitary infrastructure outside refugee camps by the Damascus-headquartered Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine-General Command and Fatah al-Intifada. Mindful that the two militias maintained close regional ties, he renewed his appeal to Syria to assist in the disarmament of the two groups and other Palestinian military outposts outside the refugee camps and address the issue of arms inside the camps.

The Secretary-General deplored the continued Israeli violations of Lebanon's sovereignty and territorial integrity. He called on Israel to adhere to its obligations under relevant Security Council resolutions and withdraw from the northern part of the village of Ghajar and cease its overflights of Lebanese airspace.

Implementation of resolution 1701(2006) and UNIFIL activities

Resolution 1701(2006) [YUN 2006, p. 583], which was approved by both the Lebanese and the Israeli Governments, brought about a ceasefire, effective 14 August 2006, between Israel and Hizbullah after a month-long conflict that caused hundreds of civilian deaths and major infrastructure damage throughout Lebanon. By the same resolution, the Council expanded the mandate of the United Nations Interim Force in Lebanon (UNIFIL) to undertake substantial new tasks, in addition to those mandated under resolutions 425(1978) [YUN 1978, p. 312] and 426(1978)

[ibid.], and authorized an increase in the Force strength from 2,000 to a maximum of 15,000 troops. The Secretary-General updated the Security Council on the implementation of resolution 1701(2006) in three periodic reports during the year.

UNIFIL was established by Council resolution 425(1978), following Israel's invasion of Lebanon [YUN 1978, p. 296]. The Force was originally entrusted with confirming the withdrawal of Israeli forces, restoring international peace and security, and assisting Lebanon in regaining authority in southern Lebanon. Following a second invasion in 1982 [YUN 1982, p. 428], the Council, in resolution 511(1982) [ibid., p. 450], authorized the Force to carry out the additional task of providing protection and humanitarian assistance to the local population. Following the withdrawal of Israeli forces from Lebanon in 2000 [YUN 2000, p. 465], UNIFIL was reinforced in order to monitor those territories previously occupied by Israeli forces, to prevent the recurrence of fighting and to create conditions for the restoration of Lebanese authority in the area.

Comprehensive review. In a 12 February letter to the Security Council President [S/2010/86], the Secretary-General provided information on the comprehensive review of UNIFIL. The review was initiated in 2009 by the United Nations Department of Peacekeeping Operations and UNIFIL to assess the operational effectiveness of UNIFIL, including its force structure, assets and requirements, on land and at sea.

The review proposed certain adjustments to the force structure, assets and requirements of UNIFIL that were intended to strengthen its operational capacity and effectiveness. The review's recommendations reflected the increasing significance of UNIFIL activities along the Blue Line, highlighting the importance of accelerating the visible marking of the Blue Line and completing the project for a technical road running parallel to the Blue Line through the establishment of a task force. The task force would enhance the operational effectiveness of UNIFIL and also serve to build confidence. The review concluded that the Maritime Task Force remained an essential element of UNIFIL. It recommended regular assessment of the relation between maritime resources and the tasks to be accomplished through the establishment of benchmarks reflecting the correlation between the capacities and responsibilities of the Task Force and the capacities and responsibilities of the Lebanese navy.

Communications. In identical letters of 7 January [S/2010/11], Israel informed the Secretary-General and the Security Council President that on 26 December 2009, UNIFIL forces noticed suspicious individuals in the area of Mazra'at Sarda, Lebanon, near Al-Khiyam (south of the Litani River, roughly one kilometre from the Israeli-Lebanese border). A UNIFIL search revealed a number of buried explosive devices totalling roughly 300 kilograms in weight. Israel had reason to believe that the explosives were of an advanced nature and possibly produced industrially in Iran or Syria. Israel further believed that the types of explosives and the manner in which they were deployed demonstrated that Hizbullah operatives had planted them. Israel regarded the Government of Lebanon as fully responsible for all such violations and any resulting implications.

On 1 February [A/64/645-S/2010/61], Lebanon informed the Secretary-General and the Security Council President that on 31 January, an Israeli patrol entered Lebanese territory in the area of Bastra Farms on the outskirts of Kafr Shuba village and kidnapped a Lebanese citizen. The kidnapping constituted not only a blatant breach of resolution 1701(2006), but also a flagrant violation of Lebanon's sovereignty.

On 24 February [A/64/684-S/2010/111], Lebanon, in a position paper prepared in anticipation of the Secretary-General's periodic report on the implementation of resolution 1701(2006), reported that, since the Secretary-General's previous report [YUN 2009, p. 484], Israeli forces had committed 163 air, 22 maritime and 26 land violations of Lebanese sovereignty. Israeli officials continued to threaten Lebanon following the formation of the Lebanese national unity Government and expressed their readiness to destroy Lebanon and impose collective punishment on the Lebanese people. Israel also attempted to undermine resolution 1701(2006) by every means possible.

Lebanon considered the continued Israeli occupation of the Shab'a Farms, the Lebanese Kafr Shuba hills and the Lebanese part of the town of Ghajar to constitute a threat to stability and security along the entire border and a flagrant violation of Security Council resolution 425(1978). Lebanon reminded the international community that Israel had yet to hand over maps showing the locations of unexploded ordnance, including the cluster bombs it indiscriminately dropped on populated civilian areas. The bombs had killed or injured over 357 persons, including 34 children and 70 youths. Lebanon questioned the accuracy of the maps that Israel provided previously, inasmuch as 37 locations known to be contaminated by cluster bombs were not marked. Israel had not yet provided maps marking the location of the mines it laid during its 22-year occupation of Lebanese territory.

The Lebanese army continued to strengthen strategic and tactical cooperation with UNIFIL. Lebanon affirmed that the investigations conducted by its army in cooperation with UNIFIL indicated that the explosives discovered at Mazra'at Sardah, near the town of Khiyam, were buried in an orchard far from any civilian areas. Lebanon affirmed that UNIFIL, in coordination with the Lebanese army, initiated an investigation to determine the precise nature of the explosives and the circumstances under which they were discovered. That investigation was ongoing.

Report of Secretary-General (February). In February [S/2010/105], the Secretary-General issued his twelfth report on the implementation of resolution 1701(2006). He stated that the parties maintained their commitment to the resolution three and a half years after its adoption. The continued respect of the cessation of hostilities by Israel and Lebanon had provided for the most stable period in the relationship between the two countries in decades. Nevertheless, the situation remained fragile. As stated in previous reports, the opportunity that the UNIFIL presence had created could not be maintained indefinitely. It was the responsibility of the parties to focus on all outstanding issues in order to reach a permanent ceasefire and long-term solution.

The Secretary-General was concerned at the continued occupation by Israeli forces of the northern part of the village of Ghajar and an adjacent area north of the Blue Line. He called on Israel, in accordance with its obligations under resolution 1701(2006), to complete its withdrawal from the area. UNIFIL stood ready to facilitate the withdrawal. The Israel Defence Forces (IDF) continued to violate Lebanon's sovereignty and resolution 1701(2006) on an almost daily basis through overflights of Lebanese territory. The Secretary-General called on Israel to cease all such overflights.

The discovery by UNIFIL of weapons in its area of operations was evidence of a clear violation of resolution 1701(2006). It underlined the fact that establishing a zone free of unauthorized weapons and armed personnel between the Litani River and the Blue Line remained a long-term endeavour. Furthermore, the United Nations regularly received reports to the effect that Hizbullah had re-established its arsenal and military capabilities, within and outside the UNIFIL area of operations—a fact not disavowed by Hizbullah with regard to Lebanon north of the Litani River. Regarding the latter assertion, the United Nations did not have the means to independently verify the information, as the area was situated outside the UNIFIL area of operations. Leaders of Hizbullah, however, had stated publicly that their organization possessed significant military capabilities to be used for defensive purposes.

LAF, in partnership with UNIFIL, played a key role in the implementation of resolution 1701(2006). The Secretary-General believed that the marked improvement of relations between Lebanon and Syria created a propitious environment for progress to be made with regard to the management of their common border, and also its delineation and demarcation. He looked forward to concrete steps in that respect to be taken by the Governments of Lebanon and Syria.

The Secretary-General called on Israel and Syria to submit their responses to the provisional definition of the Shab'a Farms area that he had provided on the basis of the best available information.

The presence of armed groups in Lebanon operating outside the control of the State constituted a challenge to Lebanon's ability to exercise its full sovereignty and control over its territory in accordance with resolution 1701(2006), and remained a matter of concern. The new Government in Lebanon had declared its commitment to implementing decisions taken by the National Dialogue in 2006 and 2009 to disarm Palestinian groups outside refugee camps, and to address the issue of arms inside the official refugee camps.

The situation of Palestinian refugees living in Lebanon remained a subject of concern, including with regard to the implementation of resolution 1701(2006). While the Secretary-General commended the cooperation between Lebanese agencies and Palestinian authorities on security matters inside the refugee camps, further progress should be made to improve the living conditions of Palestinian refugees.

Communications. On 5 March [S/2010/124], Syria transmitted to the Secretary-General and the Security Council President a letter setting out its position on the Secretary-General's twelfth report on implementation of resolution 1701(2006) (see above). Syria stated that it had consistently provided support and assistance to the Lebanese Government in securing Lebanon's authority and sovereignty over all parts of its territory. Syria reiterated its position that the issue of the delineation of the Syrian-Lebanese border referred to in the report was a bilateral matter in which no party had the right to interfere.

Syria stated that the Israeli claims included in the Secretary-General's report concerning arms smuggling across the Syrian-Lebanese border were fabrications that had been disproved by statements from senior Lebanese officials and reports of the Lebanon Independent Border Assessment Team. It reiterated that the Palestinian bases on the Syrian-Lebanese border referred to in the report were fully within Lebanese territory.

On 19 April [S/2010/195], Israel, in identical letters to the Secretary-General and the Security Council President, complained that on 16 April, a group of about 20 Lebanese citizens, led by a Lebanese Member of Parliament, engaged in provocative activities near the area of Aabasiya adjacent to Rajar. According to UNIFIL, the group crossed the Blue Line; removed sign posts of a minefield and concertina wire that had been laid by IDF; and placed two Lebanese flags adjacent to the Israeli technical fence.

Between April and June, Lebanon addressed a series of letters to the Secretary-General and the Security Council President on various security-related issues. On 12 April [A/64/744-S/2010/180], Lebanon stated that an Israeli army patrol crossed the Blue Line near the Wazzani River, entering Lebanese territory and heading in the direction of the Wazzani Fort tourist resort, which was under construction near the river. The patrol encroached on the construction site and disabled a bulldozer before withdrawing from Lebanese territory. On 20 April [A/64/755-S/2010/209], Lebanon reported another violation of the Blue Line by an Israeli motorized brigade, which assembled near the Lebanese town of Udaysah and fired a flare shell over a civilian residence. On 22 April [A/64/756-S/2010/222], Lebanon stated that Israeli troops unveiled a memorial that Israel had built on occupied Lebanese territory near Birkat Naqqar, southwest of the Lebanese town of Shab'a. On 30 April [A/64/769-S/2010/226], Lebanon responded to Israeli allegations concerning a Lebanese parliamentarian who removed a barbed wire fence installed inside Lebanese territory by Israeli military forces. On 6 May [A/64/779-S/2010/232], Lebanon complained that, on 5 May, Israeli soldiers entered Lebanese territory and seized some 185 goats from the Shahl area in the environs of Shab'a village and drove them well inside occupied territory. On the same day, two Israeli warplanes violated Lebanese airspace over Kafr Killa flying north. On 17 May [A/64/788-S/2010/244], Lebanon stated that on 16 April, two Israeli patrols crossed the technical fence in the area of Naqqar on the outskirts of Shab'a. The first patrol did not cross the line of withdrawal; the second penetrated some 150 metres into Lebanese territory. On 12 June [A/64/843-S/2010/336], Israeli soldiers entered Lebanese territory on the outskirts of Kafr Shuba, near the Hassan gate, leading to an exchange of fire with Lebanese forces, whose warnings were not heeded by the Israeli soldiers. On 29 June [A/64/853-S/2010/351], Lebanon complained about the abduction of one of its citizens from its territory by Israeli forces on 27 June.

On 28 June [A/64/850-S/2010/344], Lebanon, in a position paper concerning the Secretary-General's periodic report on the implementation of resolution 1701(2006), reported that since the Secretary-General's previous report (see p. 488), Israeli forces had committed 347 air, 23 maritime and 75 land violations of Lebanese sovereignty. Senior Israeli officials, including the Prime Minister and the Defence Minister, escalated the level of threats against Lebanon to the point that Israel threatened to destroy Lebanon's infrastructure. Lebanese security forces uncovered a number of spy networks that were under the direct control of Israeli intelligence agencies; Lebanon considered the networks to be a flagrant violation of resolution 1701(2006). Twelve such networks were discovered in Lebanese territory, both within and outside the UNIFIL area of operations, and 46 persons belonging to the networks were arrested.

Lebanon stated that on 31 January, Israeli forces penetrated Lebanese territory and abducted a Lebanese citizen on the outskirts the town of Kafr Shuba. The Lebanese citizen was taken to an Israeli military post in the occupied Shab'a Farms, where he was interrogated and beaten in violation of international humanitarian law. The citizen was released on 1 February.

Communications. On 29 June [A/64/853-S/2010/351], Lebanon transmitted to the Secretary-General and the Security Council President a letter of complaint concerning the abduction and torture of a Lebanese citizen by Israeli military forces on the outskirts of Saddanah village. The Lebanese citizen was handed over to UNIFIL 24 hours later.

On 7 July [S/2010/364], Syria transmitted a letter presenting its position on the Secretary-General's report and stated that the report continued attempts to interfere in the development of Syrian-Lebanese relations and to make reference to meetings between the leaders and officials of the two countries, as though the countries' bilateral relations fell within the scope of resolution 1701(2006). Syria reiterated that the question of Palestinian positions inside Lebanon was a bilateral issue that concerned the Palestinians and Lebanese alone; Syria had nothing to do with the matter and did not understand why the report called on Syria to help dismantle the positions.

Report of Secretary-General (July). In July [S/2010/352], the Secretary-General submitted his thirteenth report on the implementation of resolution 1701(2006). He noted that the situation in the UNIFIL area of operations remained generally stable during the reporting period. The cessation of hostilities established in August 2006 between Israel and Lebanon [YUN 2006, p. 585] continued to hold, enabling the parties to enjoy the longest period of stability in their recent history. Although the parties remained committed to the full implementation of resolution 1701(2006), a number of violations occurred and no progress was recorded with regard to key obligations under the resolution.

The functioning of the national unity Government in Lebanon over the previous six months had translated into a broadening consensus among the country's leaders regarding the maintenance of domestic stability. Bilateral relations between Lebanon and the Syrian Arab Republic continued to make progress. President Michel Sleiman met with President Bashar Al-Assad in Damascus on 15 June. Prime Minister Saad Hariri also met with President Al-Assad in Damascus on 18 and 30 May.

bases in Lebanon posed a threat to Lebanon's sovereignty. The bases were beyond the control of the State and, with the exception of the base in Naame, near Beirut, straddled the border between Lebanon and Syria, posing an added challenge to Lebanon's control of the border. The Secretary-General called on Lebanon to dismantle the bases and on Syria to cooperate with those efforts. In that regard, the Secretary-General took note of the statement made on 3 March by the Fatah al-Intifada leader, Abu Musa, that his organization's paramilitary bases could be relocated in coordination with the Lebanese authorities and that Palestinian weapons should be considered part of the discussion on Lebanon's national defence strategy in the National Dialogue.

The Secretary-General expressed his conviction that the disarmament of Hizbullah and other militias should be achieved through a Lebanese-led political process, which had taken the form of the Lebanese National Dialogue. In accordance with the Doha Agreement of May 2008 [YUN 2008, p. 532], the National Dialogue was chaired by the President of Lebanon and had on its agenda the adoption of a national defence strategy, which should, inter alia, address the issue of Hizbullah's arms.

Israel had to withdraw its forces from northern Ghajar and an adjacent area north of the Blue Line, in accordance with resolution 1701(2006). The Secretary-General was concerned about the fact that IDF continued to violate resolution 1701(2006) and Lebanese sovereignty on an almost daily basis through overflights of Lebanese territory. Increased support for LAF, which, in partnership with UNIFIL, played a key role in the implementation of resolution 1701(2006), remained critical.

Allegations by Israeli authorities regarding the transfer of Scud missiles from Syria to Hizbullah resulted in increased tension in late April and early May. That tension illustrated the importance of Lebanon's control over its borders and of respect by all Member States for the prohibition against the transfer of arms and related materiel to entities or individuals in Lebanon without the consent of the Lebanese State, which were key elements of resolution 1701(2006). The Secretary-General welcomed the committing of the Presidents of Lebanon and Syria to delineating the common border between their countries and looked forward to concrete steps in that respect.

In a 3 August letter [S/2010/415] to the Secretary-General and the Security Council President, Israel stated that, earlier that day, LAF opened fire on IDF personnel who were conducting routine maintenance work on a road located south of the technical fence, approximately 80 metres south of the Blue Line. An Israeli lieutenant colonel was killed and another soldier critically wounded. Shortly thereafter, LAF launched a secondary attack with rocket-propelled grenades.

Also on 3 August [S/2010/418], Lebanon stated that Israeli forces, despite being informed by UNIFIL that the Lebanese army would conduct the required maintenance referred to in Israel's letter—amounting to cutting down a tree—the Israeli side persisted in its intention to cross the technical fence. The Lebanese forces fired warning shots in the air; the Israeli side responded with targeted fire, leading to an exchange of fire between the two sides. The situation escalated to the bombing of Lebanese army positions, resulting in the death of two corporals and one civilian.

On 4 August [S/2010/422], Israel brought to the attention of the Secretary-General and the Security Council President the confirmation by a UNIFIL spokesperson issued the same day that the trees being cut by the IDF were located south of the Blue Line on the Israeli side, as stated by Israel in its 3 August communication (see above).

Renewal of mandate. On 11 August [S/2010/430 & Corr.1], the Secretary-General requested the Security Council to consider renewing the UNIFIL mandate for one year, as also requested by the Minister for Foreign Affairs and Emigrants of Lebanon in a 20 July letter.

The Secretary-General also expressed his concern at the exchange of fire between LAF and IDF on 3 August (see above) in the vicinity of El Adeisse, where an IDF patrol was attempting to cut a tree located north of the technical fence and south of the Blue Line. UNIFIL had liaised with both parties before IDF commenced the maintenance work. In the incident—the most serious between IDF and LAF since the adoption of resolution 1701(2006)—two Lebanese soldiers were killed and six were injured; one Lebanese journalist was killed and two other Lebanese civilians were wounded. One Israeli officer was killed and another officer was seriously injured. UNIFIL peacekeepers attempted to contain the situation, albeit unsuccessfully. The exchange of fire lasted approximately three hours. UNIFIL established that the trees being cut by IDF were located south of the Blue Line, and that LAF fired the first shot, although UNIFIL had not determined who initiated direct fire.

On 4 August, IDF completed its maintenance work, with LAF and UNIFIL troops monitoring the activity. The UNIFIL Force Commander convened an extraordinary tripartite meeting with senior representatives of LAF and IDF. The United Nations Special Coordinator for Lebanon also attended and addressed the meeting. Both parties renewed their commitment to the cessation of hostilities and undertook to work with UNIFIL to ensure that such incidents were not repeated. The situation on the ground returned to calm. The Secretary-General noted that IDF continued its occupation of part of the village of Ghajar, and an adjacent area, north of the Blue Line, in violation of resolution 1701(2006).

The Secretary-General also reported that on 3 July, a UNIFIL patrol operating near the village of Qabrikha was blocked by a group of civilians who threw stones, damaged patrol vehicles, took some UNIFIL weapons and ammunition, and assaulted the patrol leader. LAF later retrieved the weapons that were taken and returned them to UNIFIL.

At sea, incidents along the line of buoys, which Israel installed unilaterally and which Lebanon did not recognize, continued several times per week. While UNIFIL had no mandate to monitor the line of buoys, the issue was raised in the tripartite forum, and the UNIFIL Force Commander expressed his concern that the incidents served to increase tension between the parties.

As at 26 July, the number of UNIFIL military personnel stood at 11,492. The UNIFIL civilian component numbered 332 international and 654 national staff.

13. Decides to remain actively seized of the matter.

Communications. In identical letters of 1 September [A/64/908-S/2010/460], Lebanon transmitted to the Secretary-General and the Security Council President a complaint regarding spying networks that had been set up in Lebanon by the Israeli intelligence services.

On 7 September [S/2010/468], Israel, in identical letters to the Secretary-General and the Council President, reported that, on 3 September, a series of explosions ripped through a Hizbullah weapons cache in Shehabiyya, a village located 15 kilometres east of the town of Tyre, Lebanon. Five civilians were injured in the explosions. Israel said that Hizbullah operatives sealed off the area and delayed the deployment of UNIFIL, which was to conduct an investigation of the incident. The delay was used by Hizbullah operatives to remove evidence of their illicit activity before UNIFIL was permitted to inspect the area. LAF, although present at the scene, took no action to investigate the incident or prevent the removal of evidence.

On 9 September [A/64/912-S/2010/482], Lebanon transmitted to the Secretary-General and the Security Council President two complaints against Israeli forces concerning violations of Lebanese sovereignty and resolution 1701(2006). Lebanon stated that, on 5 July, an Israeli military patrol crossed the withdrawal line at Saddanah, on the outskirts of Shab'a, and penetrated 40 metres into Lebanese territory; and on 4 August, an Israeli military launch violated Lebanese territorial waters some 500 metres off Naqurah and approached a Lebanese fishing boat north of the line of buoys.

On 1 October [A/65/490-S/2010/506], Lebanon issued a complaint, stating that on 20 September, Israeli forces fired over 12 rounds into Lebanese territory in the direction of soldiers who were fortifying the LAF Tall Ghabain position on the outskirts of Duhaira.

On 29 October [A/65/569-S/2010/581], Lebanon, in a position paper prepared in anticipation of the Secretary-General's periodic report on the implementation of resolution 1701(2006), stated that Israeli forces had committed 297 air, 45 maritime and 59 land violations of the Blue Line and Lebanese sovereignty since the Secretary-General's previous report. It affirmed that some 7,346 air, sea and land violations had been committed since the adoption of resolution 1701(2006). Networks of spies recruited by Israel constituted an attack on Lebanon's sovereignty.

UNIFIL continued to exert every possible effort to ensure that Israeli forces withdrew completely from the area known as 14B, which was the Lebanese part of the village of Ghajar and the uninhabited adjacent area, and Lebanon continued to cooperate with UNIFIL towards that aim. Nevertheless, the Israeli army continued to occupy the area. Lebanon believed that the continued occupation by Israel of the Lebanese Shab'a Farms and Kafr Shuba hills constituted a threat to stability and security along the whole border. It requested the international community to bring pressure to bear on Israel to completely and unconditionally withdraw from all Lebanese territory, and urged the Secretary-General to intensify his efforts to ensure such a withdrawal.

Lebanon reminded the international community that the maps received from Israel relating to cluster bombs were incomplete and imprecise. Israeli forces continued to conduct illegal patrols inside Lebanese territorial waters close to the line of buoys that was positioned unilaterally and illicitly inside those waters. They also continued to fire warning shots and launch grenades at Lebanese fishing boats, and regularly detonated explosive charges close to the aforementioned line, inside Lebanese territorial waters.

Report of Secretary-General (November). In November, the Secretary-General submitted his fourteenth report [S/2010/565] on the implementation of resolution 1701(2006). He stated that for the first time since the cessation of hostilities between Israel and Lebanon in 2006, direct fighting broke out on 3 August 2010 (see p. 490), and the overall situation in Lebanon deteriorated. Political tension in the country increased markedly, fuelled by speculation and public pronouncements concerning potential indictments to be issued by the Special Tribunal for Lebanon (see p. 496). The Secretary-General urged Lebanon and Israel to do their utmost to prevent violations of the Blue Line; to act with maximum restraint; and to refrain from taking any measures close to the Line that could lead to misunderstandings or be perceived by the other side as provocative. He deemed it a priority to resolve the issue of the continued occupation by IDF of the northern part of Ghajar and the adjacent area north of the Blue Line and urged Israel to withdraw its forces in accordance with resolution 1701(2006). IDF continued to violate resolution 1701(2006) and Lebanese sovereignty on an almost daily basis through overflights of Lebanese territory. The Secretary-General called on Israel once again to respect Lebanon's sovereignty.

The presence of armed groups in Lebanon operating outside the control of the State posed a challenge to the ability of the State to exercise its full sovereignty and control over its territory, and violated resolution 1701(2006). While the delineation and demarcation of the border between Lebanon and Syria was a bilateral issue, it was necessary to enable Lebanon to extend its control and to exercise its sovereignty. The situation of Palestinian refugees living in Lebanon remained a subject of concern. Decisive action was required to improve refugee living standards. UNRWA continued to face significant funding shortfalls both for its regular programmes, aimed at delivering basic services to the Palestinian refugees, and for the reconstruction of the Nahr al-Bared camp.

The Secretary-General called on Israel and Lebanon to reach a permanent ceasefire and to achieve what the Council, in resolution 1701(2006), termed a long-term solution governing their relations. The achievement of that solution could not be dissociated from the need to achieve a comprehensive, just and lasting peace in the Middle East, based on all relevant Council resolutions.

Communications. In identical letters dated 11 October [A/65/559-S/2010/573] and 1 November [A/65/590-S/2010/594], Lebanon transmitted to the Secretary-General and the Security Council President statistical summaries of violations of resolution 1701(2006) committed by Israel in July and September, respectively. On 6 December [A/65/614-S/2010/624] and 18 December [A/65/663-S/2010/655], Lebanon complained about electronic devices planted by Israel inside Lebanese territory.

Financing

The General Assembly had before it the Secretary-General's performance report on the UNIFIL budget for the period 1 July 2008 to 30 June 2009 [A/64/542]. Expenditures amounted to $575,536,200, out of an appropriation of $650,755,600, leaving an unencumbered balance of $75,219,400. In February [A/64/641 & Corr.1], the Secretary-General submitted the UNIFIL budget for the period from 1 July 2010 to 30 June 2011, amounting to $564,536,900. The budget provided for the deployment of 15,000 military personnel, 404 international staff and 741 national staff, including temporary positions.

In April [A/64/660/Add.14 & Corr.1], the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions (ACABQ) recommended that the unencumbered balance of $75,219,400, as well as other income and adjustments in the amount of $26,529,500 for the period ending 30 June 2009, be credited to Member States in a manner to be determined by the Assembly. It recommended that the Assembly appropriate $534,489,200 for the maintenance of UNIFIL for the period from 1 July 2010 to 30 June 2011.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 24 June [meeting 101], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth (Administrative and Budgetary) Committee [A/64/830], adopted resolution 64/282 by recorded vote (131-2-1) [agenda item 158 (b)].

Financing of the United Nations

Interim Force in Lebanon

The General Assembly,

Having considered the reports of the Secretary-General on the financing of the United Nations Interim Force in Lebanon, and the related report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions,

Recalling Security Council resolution 425(1978) of 19 March 1978 regarding the establishment of the United Nations Interim Force in Lebanon, and the subsequent resolutions by which the Council extended the mandate of the Force, the latest of which was resolution 1884(2009) of 27 August 2009, by which the Council extended the mandate of the Force until 31 August 2010,

Noting with appreciation that voluntary contributions have been made to the Force,

Mindful of the fact that it is essential to provide the Force with the financial resources necessary to enable it to fulfil its responsibilities under the relevant resolutions of the Security Council,

1. Requests the Secretary-General to entrust the Head of the United Nations Interim Force in Lebanon with the task of formulating future budget proposals in full accordance with the provisions of General Assembly resolutions 59/296 of 22 June 2005, 60/266 of 30 June 2006, 61/276 of 29 June 2007 and 64/269 of 24 June 2010, as well as other relevant resolutions;

Special Tribunal for Lebanon

The mandate of the United Nations International Independent Investigation Commission, established by the Security Council in resolution 1595(2005) [YUN 2005, p. 553] to assist the Lebanese authorities in investigating the terrorist bombing in Beirut on 14 February 2005 that killed former Lebanese Prime Minister Rafiq Hariri and 22 others, ended on 28 February 2009 [YUN 2009, p. 487]. Its successor, the Special Tribunal for Lebanon, created in 2007 to investigate and prosecute the perpetrators of the bombing and related cases [YUN 2007, p. 505], started operations on 1 March 2009 [YUN 2009, p. 488]. The Tribunal consisted of the Chambers, Registry, Office of the Prosecutor, and the Defence Office.

Reports of Special Tribunal. By an 11 March letter [S/2010/159], the Secretary-General transmitted to the Security Council the first annual report of the Special Tribunal for Lebanon, covering the period 1 March 2009 to 28 February 2010. The annual report built on the six-month report issued by the President of the Tribunal in September 2009 [YUN 2009, p. 488].

The report stated that the Tribunal adopted a set of legal provisions carefully tailored to its special features, and which constituted a fully fledged code of criminal procedure exhibiting many novelties compared to other international codes. The Tribunal also adopted the Rules of Detention and the Directive on the Assignment of Counsel; three Practice Directions; and two international agreements, with the International Committee of the Red Cross and INTERPOL.

Lebanon, which had deferred to the Tribunal's competence regarding the case of the attack against Prime Minister Hariri and others, continued to provide unreserved cooperation to the Tribunal. The Tribunal's Office of the Prosecutor sent more than 240 requests for assistance to the Prosecutor General of Lebanon. More than 60 requests for assistance were addressed to 24 other countries, and 62 missions were conducted on their territories. Over 280 witnesses were interviewed.

The Tribunal's Registry prepared for the establishment of the necessary infrastructure, including the setting-up of a courtroom by February 2010, and the opening of the Beirut Field Office and the Liaison Office in New York. The Tribunal had 276 staff representing 59 nationalities. The 2009 budget amounted to $51.4 million and the approved budget for 2010 amounted to $55.4 million.

The report stated that the Tribunal was the first international judicial institution to adjudicate responsibility for terrorism as a distinct crime. Terrorism was a difficult notion to address, in part because there were only a few international treaties and limited case law from which to draw. Through reliance on Lebanese law and relevant international standards, however, the Tribunal should be able to apply a sound and generally acceptable notion of terrorism in a well-balanced manner.

The second annual report of the Tribunal, covering the period 1 March 2010 to 28 February 2011, stated that on 7 March 2010, Jamil El Sayed, who had been detained in Lebanon in connection with the Hariri attack but was released on 29 April 2009 along with three other individuals [YUN 2009, p. 488], filed an application that cited a lack of a sufficient evidentiary basis for his continued detention. Mr. El Sayed (the Applicant) requested access to material related to his detention in Lebanon, allegedly in the possession of the Prosecutor, with the stated intention of using the material to sue individuals who had made statements implicating him in the matter before competent national courts.

On 15 April, the Tribunal's President issued a decision assigning the matter to the Pre-Trial Judge who, in turn, issued a Scheduling Order requesting the views of Mr. El Sayed and the Prosecutor on whether the Tribunal had jurisdiction over the issue and on whether the Applicant had standing to request access to documents. A hearing on the matter took place on 13 July. On 17 September, the Pre-Trial Judge issued a decision, ruling that the Tribunal had inherent jurisdiction over that type of application and that Mr. El Sayed had standing to bring his application before the Tribunal. On 29 September, the Prosecutor appealed both findings, and on 1 October, the Tribunal's President issued a Scheduling Order convening the Appeals Chamber for the first time. After dismissing Mr. El Sayed's motions to disqualify the two Lebanese Judges of the Appeals Chamber, the Chamber proceeded to confirm the Pre-Trial Judge's ruling on 10 November, thus dismissing the appeal. On 16 November, the Pre-Trial Judge proceeded to request submissions on the merits, namely, on whether the Applicant had a right to access those specific materials and, if so, under what restrictions.

On 27 October, during the course of an interview in south Beirut, investigators from the Office of the Prosecutor and a Tribunal interpreter were physically attacked. The Office took immediate steps to ensure the safety and security of its staff and to avoid putting potential witnesses at risk, while making it clear publicly that the investigation would not be deterred. An investigation was launched both internally and by the Prosecutor General of Lebanon.

Appointment of judges. In accordance with Security Council resolution 1757(2007) [YUN 2007, p. 506], the Secretary-General, on 15 April [S/2010/198], informed the Council President of his intention to appoint Judge Mohamed Amin El Mahdi (Egypt) and Judge Erik Møse (Norway) as the two judges on the selection panel who would recommend the appointment of the judges of the Tribunal, as well as Patricia O'Brien, United Nations Under-Secretary-General for Legal Affairs, the Legal Counsel, as the Secretary-General's representative on the panel. The Council took note of that intention on 19 April [S/2010/199].

Syrian Arab Republic

The Golan Heights in the Syrian Arab Republic, occupied since 1967, was effectively annexed when Israel extended its laws, jurisdiction and administration to the territory in 1981 [YUN 1981, p. 309]. In 2010, the General Assembly demanded again that Israel withdraw from all the occupied Syrian Golan to the line of 4 June 1967, in implementation of the relevant Security Council resolutions, and that the two countries resume talks. The United Nations Disengagement Observer Force continued to supervise the ceasefire between Israel and Syria in the Golan Heights and to ensure the separation of militaries. The Mission's mandate was extended twice during the year.

Special Committee on Israeli Practices. The Special Committee to Investigate Israeli Practices Affecting the Human Rights of the Palestinian People and Other Arabs of the Occupied Territories conducted a mission to Syria from 16 to 19 June [A/65/327]. The Committee reported that it visited the Syrian Golan; it was unable to visit the occupied Golan, as it received no response from the Israeli Government to its request for full access to the occupied territories.

The Special Committee heard testimony regarding the planned expansion of Israeli settlements in the Golan, which comprised about 20,000 settlers living in some 40 settlements, among the original Syrian population, now reduced to nearly 20,000 inhabitants of five remaining Syrian villages. Syrian government officials and witnesses raised concerns about the inequitable distribution of water resources among the occupied Syrian population and Israeli settlers. They told the Committee that the daily water needs of Syrian residents for domestic use and for irrigation were not adequately met. Reports further indicated that Israel continued to impose discriminatory water quotas on Syrian farmers and to administer an indirectly discriminatory tariff system, making Syrian citizens pay more than Israeli settlers for water.

The International Labour Organization noted few local employment opportunities, particularly for university graduates and other young people seeking professional posts. It found that agriculture remained the main source of income for most families and cited information received from the Syrian Government on discrimination against Syrian workers and landowners in the occupied Syrian Golan. That included denial of jobs as a result of not having served in the Israeli army and high taxation, as well as restrictions on the use of water, especially for irrigation.

The Special Committee was informed that there were approximately seven prisoners from the Golan detained in Israeli prisons, one of whom had spent some 25 years in detention. Landmines continued to threaten safety, including that of children, and to limit the movement of people and the use of land. In January, the Committee on the Rights of the Child called on Israel to clear all anti-personnel mines in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, southern Lebanon and the occupied Syrian Golan. In February, an 11-year-old Israeli child lost his leg after stepping on a landmine in the occupied Syrian Golan. In May, the Israeli Knesset introduced a bill establishing a mine action authority to manage the clearance of all non-operational minefields in Israel, including in the occupied Syrian Golan.

Reports of Secretary-General. On 17 September [A/65/379], the Secretary-General reported that as at 31 August, Argentina, Cuba, Guinea, Jordan, Lebanon, Mexico and Syria had replied to his request for information on their implementation of Assembly resolutions 64/21 [YUN 2009, p. 489]. The resolution demanded that Israel withdraw from all the occupied Syrian Golan to the line of 4 June 1967 in implementation of the relevant Security Council resolutions.

In response to Assembly resolution 64/95 [YUN 2009, p. 490], which dealt with Israeli policies in the occupied Syrian territory, the Secretary-General submitted, on 16 September, his report on the occupied Syrian Golan [A/65/372]. He stated that, as in previous years, no reply had been received in response to a note addressed to Israel by the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights (OHCHR) on his behalf requesting information on steps taken or to be taken concerning the implementation of the relevant provisions of the resolution. The Secretary-General noted that Algeria, Argentina, Cuba, El Salvador, Lebanon and Syria had replied to a similar OHCHR note requesting information on implementation of the resolution.

Communications. On 5 January [A/64/619-S/2010/4], Syria transmitted to the Secretary-General and the Security Council President identical letters regarding Israel's actions in the occupied Syrian Golan, which threatened to alter the demographic makeup. An example cited by Syria was the solicitation by Israel of competitive bids in relation to the sale of 11 residential buildings in the village of Ain Qunyah. One of the conditions of the bidding, which was open from 16 November to 16 December 2009, was that preference should be given to army veterans recommended by the Israeli Ministry of Defense. On 3 February [A/65/721], Syria wrote to the Secretary-General regarding the campaign by the Israeli authorities to build new settlement units in the occupied Syrian Golan. On 15 October [A/65/520], Syria transmitted a letter to the Secretary-General and the Security Council President concerning Israel's continuing occupation of the Syrian Golan and the adverse impact on its people and natural resources. In a 25 October letter to the Secretary-General and the Assembly President [A/65/542], Syria stated that Israeli authorities were extracting water from the Mas'adah Lake in the occupied Syrian Golan.

(For information on related action by the Human Rights Council, see PART TWO, Chapter III).

The occupied Syrian Golan

The General Assembly,

Having considered the report of the Special Committee to Investigate Israeli Practices Affecting the Human Rights of the Palestinian People and Other Arabs of the Occupied Territories,

Deeply concerned that the Syrian Golan, occupied since 1967, has been under continued Israeli military occupation,

Recalling Security Council resolution 497(1981) of 17 December 1981,

Recalling also its previous relevant resolutions, the most recent of which was resolution 64/95 of 10 December 2009,

Having considered the report of the Secretary-General submitted in pursuance of resolution 64/95,

3. Determines that all legislative and administrative measures and actions taken or to be taken by Israel, the occupying Power, that purport to alter the character and legal status of the occupied Syrian Golan are null and void, constitute a flagrant violation of international law and of the Geneva Convention relative to the Protection of Civilian Persons in Time of War, of 12 August 1949, and have no legal effect;

4. Calls upon Israel to desist from imposing Israeli citizenship and Israeli identity cards on the Syrian citizens in the occupied Syrian Golan, and from its repressive measures against the population of the occupied Syrian Golan;

UNDOF

The mandate of the United Nations Disengagement Observer Force (UNDOF), established by Security Council resolution 350(1974) [YUN 1974, p. 205] to supervise the observance of the ceasefire between Israel and the Syrian Arab Republic in the Golan Heights and ensure the separation of their forces, was renewed twice in 2010, in June and December, each time for a six-month period.

UNDOF maintained an area of separation some 75 kilometres long and varying in width between 12.5 kilometres in the centre to less than 200 metres in the extreme south. The area of separation was inhabited and policed by the Syrian authorities, and no military forces other than UNDOF were permitted within it. As at 10 November, UNDOF comprised 1,042 troops from seven Member States assisted by 77 United Nations Truce Supervision Organization military observers.

On 28 January [S/2010/55], the Secretary-General informed the President of the Security Council of his intention to appoint Major General Natalio C. Ecarma (Philippines) as the Head of Mission and Force Commander of UNDOF. The Council took note of that intention on 1 February [S/2010/56].

Reports of Secretary-General. The Secretary-General reported to the Security Council on UNDOF activities between 1 January and 30 June [S/2010/296] and 1 July and 31 December 2010 [S/2010/607]. Both reports noted that the UNDOF area of operations remained generally quiet. The Force supervised the area of separation by means of fixed positions and patrols, and carried out inspections of equipment and force levels in the areas of limitation. Both sides continued to deny inspection teams' access to some of their positions and imposed restrictions on the Force's freedom of movement. UNDOF continued to adapt its operational posture to the ongoing IDF training activities in the area of limitation on the Alpha side and Syrian civilian settlement growth in proximity to the ceasefire line in the area of separation. Both sides maintained defensive positions in the respective areas of limitations. Israeli customs officials continued to operate periodically at the IDF post at the UNDOF crossing gate between the Israeli-occupied Golan and Syria.

The Force assisted the International Committee of the Red Cross with the passage of persons through the area of separation. Mines, especially those in the area of separation, continued to pose a threat to UNDOF personnel and local inhabitants. UNDOF carried out operational mine clearance, and coordinated with other UN agencies in activities to promote mine awareness among the civilian population, particularly children. The Force maintained close contact with the military authorities of both sides, and both parties generally cooperated with UNDOF in the execution of its tasks.

The Secretary-General observed that the situation in the Middle East was tense and likely to remain so, unless and until a comprehensive settlement could be reached. There had been no negotiations between the parties since the discontinuation, in December 2008, of indirect peace talks initiated by Turkey. The Secretary-General encouraged the parties to resume peace negotiations as soon as possible, aimed at a comprehensive peace in accordance with the Madrid Conference terms of reference [YUN 1991, p. 221].

Stating that he considered the continued presence of UNDOF in the area to be essential, the Secretary-General, with the agreement of both Israel and Syria, recommended, in June, that the Force's mandate be extended until 31 December 2010, and in November, until 30 June 2011.

SECURITY COUNCIL ACTION

On 30 June [meeting 6352], the Security Council unanimously adopted resolution 1934(2010). The draft [S/2010/346] was prepared in consultations among Council members.

The Security Council,

Having considered the report of the Secretary-General of 9 June 2010 on the United Nations Disengagement Observer Force, and reaffirming its resolution 1308(2000) of 17 July 2000,

1. Calls upon the parties concerned to implement immediately its resolution 338(1973) of 22 October 1973;
2. Welcomes the efforts being undertaken by the United Nations Disengagement Observer Force to implement the Secretary-General's zero-tolerance policy on sexual exploitation and abuse and to ensure full compliance of its personnel with the United Nations code of conduct, requests the Secretary-General to continue to take all necessary action in this regard and to keep the Security Council informed, and urges troop-contributing countries to take preventive and disciplinary action to ensure that such acts are properly investigated and punished in cases involving their personnel;
3. Decides to renew the mandate of the Force for a period of six months, that is, until 31 December 2010;
4. Requests the Secretary-General to submit, at the end of this period, a report on developments in the situation and the measures taken to implement resolution 338(1973).

On 22 December [meeting 6462], the Security Council unanimously adopted resolution 1965(2010). The draft [S/2010/650] was submitted by Austria, Japan and the United States.

The Security Council,

Having considered the report of the Secretary-General of 1 December 2010 on the United Nations Disengagement Observer Force, and reaffirming its resolution 1308(2000) of 17 July 2000,

1. Calls upon the parties concerned to implement immediately its resolution 338(1973) of 22 October 1973;
2. Welcomes the efforts being undertaken by the United Nations Disengagement Observer Force to implement the Secretary-General's zero-tolerance policy on sexual exploitation and abuse and to ensure full compliance of its personnel with the United Nations code of conduct, requests the Secretary-General to continue to take all necessary action in this regard and to keep the Security Council informed, and urges troop-contributing countries to take preventive and disciplinary action to ensure that such acts are properly investigated and punished in cases involving their personnel;
3. Decides to renew the mandate of the Force for a period of six months, that is, until 30 June 2011;
4. Requests the Secretary-General to submit, at the end of this period, a report on developments in the situation and the measures taken to implement resolution 338(1973).

After the adoption of each resolution, the President, following consultations among Council members, made identical statements, S/PRST/2010/12 [meeting 6352] on 30 June, and S/PRST/2010/30 [meeting 6462] on 22 December, on behalf of the Council:

In connection with the resolution just adopted on the renewal of the mandate of the United Nations Disengagement Observer Force, I have been authorized to make the following complementary statement on behalf of the Security Council:

As is known, the report of the Secretary-General on the United Nations Disengagement Observer Force states in paragraph 13: "... the situation in the Middle East is tense and is likely to remain so, unless and until a comprehensive settlement covering all aspects of the Middle East problem can be reached". That statement of the Secretary-General reflects the view of the Security Council.

Financing

The General Assembly had before it the performance report of the Secretary-General on the UNDOF budget for the period from 1 July 2008 to 30 June 2009 [A/64/536 & Corr.1], which showed expenditures amounting to $45,711,800 gross ($44,394,900 net) against an appropriation of $45,726,000 gross ($44,478,300 net); and the Secretary-General's report on the UNDOF budget for the period from 1 July 2010 to 30 June 2011 [A/64/630], which amounted to $47,921,100 and provided for the deployment of 1,047 military contingent personnel, as well as 48 international and 108 national staff.

In a March report [A/64/660/Add.4], ACABQ recommended to the Assembly an appropriation of $47,921,100 for the maintenance of UNDOF.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 24 June [meeting 101], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee [A/64/829], adopted resolution 64/281 without vote [agenda item 158 (a)].

Financing of the United Nations Disengagement Observer Force

The General Assembly,

Having considered the reports of the Secretary-General on the financing of the United Nations Disengagement Observer Force and the related report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions,

Recalling Security Council resolution 350(1974) of 31 May 1974 regarding the establishment of the United Nations Disengagement Observer Force and the subsequent resolutions by which the Council extended the mandate of the Force, the latest of which was resolution 1899(2009) of 16 December 2009,

Recalling also its resolution 3211 B (XXIX) of 29 November 1974 on the financing of the United Nations Emergency Force and of the United Nations Disengagement Observer Force and its subsequent resolutions thereon, the latest of which was resolution 63/297 of 30 June 2009,

3. Expresses its appreciation to those Member States which have paid their assessed contributions in full, and urges all other Member States to make every possible effort to ensure payment of their assessed contributions to the Force in full;

4. Expresses concern at the financial situation with regard to peacekeeping activities, in particular as regards the reimbursements to troop contributors that bear additional burdens owing to overdue payments by Member States of their assessments;

5. Also expresses concern at the delay experienced by the Secretary-General in deploying and providing adequate resources to some recent peacekeeping missions, in particular those in Africa;

6. Emphasizes that all future and existing peacekeeping missions shall be given equal and non-discriminatory treatment in respect of financial and administrative arrangements;

7. Also emphasizes that all peacekeeping missions shall be provided with adequate resources for the effective and efficient discharge of their respective mandates;

8. Reiterates its request to the Secretary-General to make the fullest possible use of facilities and equipment at the United Nations Logistics Base at Brindisi, Italy, in order to minimize the costs of procurement for the Force;

9. Requests the Secretary-General to ensure that proposed peacekeeping budgets are based on the relevant legislative mandates;

10. Endorses the conclusions and recommendations contained in the report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions, subject to the provisions of the present resolution, and requests the Secretary-General to ensure their full implementation;

11. Decides to apply a vacancy rate of 11 per cent for international staff and a vacancy rate of 4 per cent for national staff;

12. Requests the Secretary-General to ensure the full implementation of the relevant provisions of resolutions 59/296, 60/266, 61/276 and 64/269;

13. Also requests the Secretary-General to take all action necessary to ensure that the Force is administered with a maximum of efficiency and economy;

14. Further requests the Secretary-General, in order to reduce the cost of employing General Service staff, to continue efforts to recruit local staff for the Force against General Service posts, commensurate with the requirements of the Force;

Financial performance report for the period from 1 July 2008 to 30 June 2009

15. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General on the financial performance of the Force for the period from 1 July 2008 to 30 June 2009;

16. Decides to appropriate to the Special Account for the United Nations Disengagement Observer Force the amount of 50,702,600 dollars for the period from 1 July 2010 to 30 June 2011, inclusive of 47,806,900 dollars for the maintenance of the Force, 2,452,400 dollars for the support account for peacekeeping operations and 443,300 dollars for the United Nations Logistics Base;

Financing of the appropriation

17. Also decides to apportion among Member States the amount of 50,702,600 dollars at a monthly rate of 4,225,217 dollars, in accordance with the levels updated in General Assembly resolution 64/249 of 24 December 2009, taking into account the scale of assessments for 2010 and 2011 as set out in Assembly resolution 64/248 of 24 December 2009, subject to a decision of the Security Council to extend the mandate of the Force;

18. Further decides that, in accordance with the provisions of resolution 973(X) of 15 December 1955, there shall be set off against the apportionment among Member States, as provided for in paragraph 17 above, their respective share in the Tax Equalization Fund in the amount of 1,631,500 dollars, comprising the estimated staff assessment income of 1,393,000 dollars approved for the Force, the prorated share of 203,000 dollars of the estimated staff assessment income approved for the support account and the prorated share of 35,500 dollars of the estimated staff assessment income approved for the United Nations Logistics Base;

19. Decides that, for Member States that have fulfilled their financial obligations to the Force, there shall be set off against their apportionment, as provided for in paragraph 17 above, their respective share of the unencumbered balance and other income in the amount of 1,933,400 dollars in respect of the financial period ended 30 June 2009, in accordance with the levels updated in General Assembly resolution 61/243 of 22 December 2006, and taking into account the scale of assessments for 2009, as set out in Assembly resolution 61/237 of 22 December 2006;

20. Also decides that, for Member States that have not fulfilled their financial obligations to the Force, there shall be set off against their outstanding obligations their respective share of the unencumbered balance and other income in the amount of 1,933,400 dollars in respect of the financial period ended 30 June 2009, in accordance with the scheme set out in paragraph 19 above;

21. Further decides that the increase of 69,200 dollars in the estimated staff assessment income in respect of the financial period ended 30 June 2009 shall be added to the credits from the amount of 1,933,400 dollars referred to in paragraphs 19 and 20 above;

23. Encourages the Secretary-General to continue to take additional measures to ensure the safety and security of all personnel participating in the Force under the auspices of the United Nations, bearing in mind paragraphs 5 and 6 of Security Council resolution 1502(2003) of 26 August 2003;

24. Invites voluntary contributions to the Force in cash and in the form of services and supplies acceptable to the Secretary-General, to be administered, as appropriate, in accordance with the procedure and practices established by the General Assembly;

25. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its sixty-fifth session, under the item entitled “Financing of the United Nations peacekeeping forces in the Middle East”, the sub-item entitled “United Nations Disengagement Observer Force”.

UNTSO

In 2010, the United Nations Truce Supervision Organization (UNTSO), originally set up to monitor the ceasefire called for by Security Council resolution S/801 of 29 May 1948 [YUN 1947–48, p. 427] in the newly partitioned Palestine, continued its work. UNTSO unarmed military observers fulfilled evolving mandates—from supervising the four armistice agreements between Israel and its neighbours (Egypt, Jordan, Lebanon, Syrian Arab Republic) to monitoring other ceasefires, as well as performing additional tasks. During the year, UNTSO personnel worked with two remaining UN peacekeeping forces in the Middle East: the United Nations Disengagement Observer Force in the Golan Heights and the United Nations Interim Force in Lebanon.

UNTSO operated under a UN regular budget appropriation of $60.7 million for the 2010–2011 period.

Disarmament

In the international community's movement towards a world free of nuclear weapons, the highlight of 2010 was the 64-point action plan on nuclear disarmament, non-proliferation and peaceful uses of nuclear energy and a call for a nuclear-weapon-free zone in the Middle East adopted in May by the eighth Review Conference of the Parties to the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons (NPT). The Review Conference recognized that Treaty breaches undermined that momentum, and called on the Democratic People's Republic of Korea to return to the Treaty. The Conference recognized the legitimate interests of non-nuclear-weapon States in constraining the development and qualitative improvement of nuclear weapons and ending the development of advanced new types of such weapons.

In April in Prague, Russian President Dmitry Medvedev and United States President Barack Obama signed the New START Treaty—the Treaty on Measures for the Further Reduction and Limitation of Strategic Offensive Arms. Meanwhile, at the Conference on Disarmament—the sole multilateral disarmament negotiating body—negotiations continued to be stalled despite the agreement on an agenda the previous year. At a high-level meeting on revitalizing the work of the Conference on Disarmament, Member States could not agree on whether the UN disarmament machinery should be reassessed or whether the nature, role and purpose of each part of the machinery should be preserved, including the Conference on Disarmament and the Disarmament Commission.

The Disarmament Commission was unable to reach a consensus on the key issues on its agenda—nuclear disarmament and non-proliferation, the adoption of a draft declaration of the 2010s as the fourth disarmament decade, and practical confidence-building measures in the field of conventional weapons.

Although two more countries ratified the Comprehensive Nuclear-Test-Ban Treaty (CTBT), bringing the total parties to 153, the Treaty could not enter into force. At the Treaty's Fifth Ministerial Meeting, countries committed themselves to making CTBT a focus of attention at the highest political level. Meanwhile, the International Atomic Energy Agency continued its efforts to verify the peaceful nature of Iran's nuclear programme, and was unable to make progress towards resolving allegations regarding a destroyed nuclear reactor in the Syrian Arab Republic.

Regarding the scope of the proposed fissile material cut-off treaty, States debated on whether to include reduction in existing stocks among the treaty's provisions. Marked divergences emerged on whether such treaty should be considered a nuclear disarmament or a non-proliferation measure.

At the NPT Review Conference, States decided to call for a conference in 2012 on the establishment of a nuclear-weapon-free zone in the Middle East, while the three regional centres for peace and disarmament continued to fulfil their mandates under budgetary constraints.

Concerning conventional weapons, the General Assembly made preparations to meet in 2012 to begin work on a treaty to reinforce licit and stamp down illicit trade in small arms. The Convention on Cluster Munitions entered into force in August. The number of States parties to the Chemical Weapons Convention remained the same, and countries expressed concern that the final extended deadline of 29 April 2012 for destruction of all categories of chemical weapons in the world might not be met. The Advisory Board on Disarmament Matters discussed conceptual issues leading up to the 2010 NPT Review Conference and follow-up action on the 2002 UN study on disarmament and non-proliferation education.

UN machinery

Disarmament issues before the United Nations were considered mainly through the Security Council, the General Assembly and its First (Disarmament and International Security) Committee, the Disarmament Commission (a deliberative body) and the Conference on Disarmament (a multilateral negotiating forum which met in Geneva). The Organization also maintained efforts to engage civil society organizations concerned with disarmament issues.

The United Nations Office for Disarmament Affairs provided substantive and organizational support to UN bodies, fostered disarmament measures and disseminated impartial and up-to-date information.

Advancing the disarmament agenda

In his annual report on the work of the Organization [A/65/1], the Secretary-General noted that 2010 proved to be critical for defining the direction that disarmament and non-proliferation efforts would take. Positive developments included the signing, on 8 April, of the Treaty between the United States of America and the Russian Federation on Measures for the Further Reduction and Limitation of Strategic Offensive Arms (the New START Treaty), the declarations by the United States and the United Kingdom of the size of their nuclear-weapon stockpiles and the successful outcome of the 2010 Review Conference of the Parties to NPT (New York, 3–28 May) (see p. 531), where a plan of action was adopted to advance nuclear disarmament, non-proliferation and the peaceful uses of nuclear energy over the next five years. The Secretary-General welcomed the agreement on a process leading to the implementation of the resolution of the 1995 NPT Review Conference on the establishment of a zone free of weapons of mass destruction in the Middle East [YUN 1995, p. 189].

Less positive, however, had been the lack of substantive progress on the part of the Conference on Disarmament; there had been no progress on the denuclearization of the Korean peninsula through the six-party talks (China, Democratic People's Republic of Korea, Japan, Republic of Korea, Russian Federation, United States); and Iran's nuclear programme remained a matter of concern.

There had been some promising developments in conventional arms. The Convention on Cluster Munitions had entered into force in 2010. Negotiations began within the United Nations on an arms trade treaty, to be concluded in 2012. The excessive accumulation and the easy availability of small arms and light weapons in zones of conflict and crime remained an issue of enduring concern. The General Assembly initiative to focus on the broader issue of armed violence, including how it undermined development, was promising. The Secretary-General highlighted the close relationship between disarmament and other global challenges, stressing that "the world is over-armed and development is underfunded".

UN Office for Disarmament Affairs

In its third year of operations [YUN 2007, p. 524], the United Nations Office for Disarmament Affairs (UNODA) continued to provide support for norm-setting in the area of disarmament through the work of the General Assembly and its First Committee, the Disarmament Commission, the Conference on Disarmament and other bodies. It fostered disarmament measures, encouraged regional disarmament efforts and provided information on multilateral disarmament issues and activities. The Office reinforced the advocacy potential of the Organization in the field of disarmament and non-proliferation, for example, through the 2010 Review Conference of the Parties to NPT (New York, 3–28 May). It published the statements by civil society representatives delivered at the Conference [Sales No. E.10.IX.6].

Also in 2010, in the area of small arms, 170 representatives from some 35 non-governmental organizations (NGOs), supported by UNODA, participated in the Fourth Biennial Meeting of States to Consider the Implementation of the Programme of Action to Prevent, Combat and Eradicate the Illicit Trade in Small Arms and Light Weapons in All Its Aspects (New York, 14–18 June).

UNODA carried out activities in support of multilateral efforts on disarmament and the non-proliferation of weapons of mass destruction, in particular nuclear weapons, as well as in support of conventional disarmament, especially with regard to major weapons systems, small arms and light weapons, landmines and cluster munitions. Through its regional centres for Africa, Asia and the Pacific, and Latin America and the Caribbean, the Office contributed to a more active involvement of regional and subregional stakeholders in disarmament and non-proliferation issues.

An important area of UNODA activities involved information dissemination, including raising public awareness of disarmament and non-proliferation issues, and maintaining close liaison with the United Nations Institute for Disarmament Research, other research and educational institutions and NGOs. UNODA issued its flagship publication, The United Nations Disarmament Yearbook [Sales No. E.11.IX.1&2], in hard copy and on the UNODA website, produced its quarterly e-publication, Disarmament Update, and published three Occasional Papers.

Fourth special session devoted to disarmament

As in previous years, no progress was made in 2010 towards the convening of a fourth special session of the General Assembly devoted to disarmament. Previously, the Assembly had held three special sessions devoted to disarmament—in 1978, 1982 and 1988. Only the first special session succeeded in producing a final document. The Assembly had been calling for a fourth special session since 1996 [YUN 1996, p. 447]. In 2002 the Assembly established an Open-ended Working Group [YUN 2002, p. 487] to discuss the agenda and the possibility of establishing a preparatory committee for a fourth session. In 2006 [YUN 2006, p. 611], it established an Open-ended Working Group to consider the session's objectives and agenda, including the possible establishment of a preparatory committee.

By resolution 62/29 [YUN 2007, p. 526], the Assembly mandated the reconvening of the Working Group and requested it to submit a report, including possible recommendations, to the Assembly's sixty-second session. Since the Working Group did not convene its organizational or substantive sessions during the year, however, the Assembly in 2008 decided [YUN 2008, p. 561] to continue work on convening the Working Group as soon as possible. With no related resolution adopted during its sixty-third session, the Assembly in 2009 [YUN 2009, p. 497] included the item on convening the session in the provisional agenda of its sixty-fifth (2010) session.

By resolution 65/66 (see below), the General Assembly expressed concern that the fourth special session was yet to be convened. It decided to convene an Open-ended Working Group to consider the session's objectives and agenda, including the possible establishment of the preparatory committee; and decided that the Working Group should hold its organizational session as soon as possible to set a date for its substantive sessions in 2011 and 2012, and submit a report on its work, including possible recommendations, before the end of the sixty-seventh session of the Assembly.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 8 December [meeting 60], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the First Committee [A/65/410], adopted resolution 65/66 by recorded vote (178-0-5) [agenda item 97 (ee)].

Convening of the fourth special session of the General Assembly devoted to disarmament

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 49/75 I of 15 December 1994, 50/70 F of 12 December 1995, 51/45 C of 10 December 1996, 52/38 F of 9 December 1997, 53/77 AA of 4 December 1998, 54/54 U of 1 December 1999, 55/33 M of 20 November 2000, 56/24 D of 29 November 2001, 57/61 of 22 November 2002, 59/71 of 3 December 2004, 61/60 of 6 December 2006 and 62/29 of 5 December 2007, as well as its decisions 58/521 of 8 December 2003, 60/518 of 8 December 2005, 60/559 of 6 June 2006, 63/519 of 2 December 2008 and 64/515 of 2 December 2009,

Recalling also that, there being a consensus to do so in each case, three special sessions of the General Assembly devoted to disarmament were held in 1978, 1982 and 1988, respectively,

Bearing in mind the Final Document of the Tenth Special Session of the General Assembly, adopted by consensus at the first special session devoted to disarmament,

Bearing in mind also the ultimate objective of general and complete disarmament under effective international control,

Taking note of the fact that the Heads of State or Government of the Movement of Non-Aligned Countries supported the convening of the fourth special session of the General Assembly devoted to disarmament, which would offer an opportunity to review, from a perspective more in tune with the current international situation, the most critical aspects of the disarmament process and to mobilize the international community and public opinion in favour of the elimination of nuclear and other weapons of mass destruction and of the control and reduction of conventional weapons,

Recalling the United Nations Millennium Declaration, adopted by the Heads of State and Government during the Millennium Summit of the United Nations, held in New York from 6 to 8 September 2000, in which the Heads of State and Government resolved "to strive for the elimination of weapons of mass destruction, particularly nuclear weapons, and to keep all options open for achieving this aim, including the possibility of convening an international conference to identify ways of eliminating nuclear dangers",

Reiterating its conviction that a special session of the General Assembly devoted to disarmament can set the future course of action in the fields of disarmament, arms control, non-proliferation and related international security matters,

Emphasizing the importance of multilateralism in the process of disarmament, arms control, non-proliferation and related international security matters,

Taking note of the paper presented by the Chairman of Working Group II during the 1999 substantive session of the Disarmament Commission, and the written proposals and views submitted by Member States as contained in the working papers presented during the three substantive sessions of the Open-ended Working Group in 2003, as well as the reports of the Secretary-General regarding the views of Member States on the objectives, agenda and timing of the fourth special session of the General Assembly devoted to disarmament,

Taking note also of the reports of the Open-ended Working Group to consider the objectives and agenda, including the possible establishment of the preparatory committee, for the fourth special session of the General Assembly devoted to disarmament,

Expressing deep concern that the fourth special session of the General Assembly devoted to disarmament is yet to be convened, despite efforts made in this regard,

1. Decides to convene an Open-ended Working Group, working on the basis of consensus, to consider the objectives and agenda, including the possible establishment of the preparatory committee, for the fourth special session of the General Assembly devoted to disarmament;

2. Also decides that the Open-ended Working Group shall hold its organizational session as soon as possible for the purpose of setting a date for its substantive sessions in 2011 and 2012, and submit a report on its work, including possible substantive recommendations, before the end of the sixty-seventh session of the General Assembly;

3. Requests the Secretary-General, from within available resources, to provide the Open-ended Working Group with the necessary assistance and services as may be required to discharge its tasks;

4. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its sixty-seventh session the item entitled "Convening of the fourth special session of the General Assembly devoted to disarmament".

RECORDED VOTE ON RESOLUTION 65/66:

Disarmament Commission

The United Nations Disarmament Commission, comprising all UN Member States, in 2010 was unable to reach a consensus on the key issues on its agenda—nuclear disarmament and non-proliferation, the adoption of a draft declaration of the 2010s as the fourth disarmament decade, and practical confidence-building measures in the field of conventional weapons.

The Commission, in its second year of a three-year cycle of deliberations, held six plenary meetings (New York, 29 March–16 April) [A/65/42]. The main agenda items were recommendations for achieving the objectives of nuclear disarmament and non-proliferation of nuclear weapons, addressed by the Commission's Working Group I (see below); elements of a draft declaration of the 2010s as the fourth disarmament decade, addressed by its Working Group II; and practical confidence-building measures in the field of conventional weapons (see p. 563)—to be taken up upon the conclusion of the work of Working Group II on the elements of the draft declaration. Working Group I held 10 meetings from 31 March to 14 April, engaging in extensive discussions. The Non-Aligned Movement submitted a working paper [A/CN.10/2010/WG.I/WP.1] with recommendations for achieving nuclear disarmament and non-proliferation of nuclear weapons. Working Group II held nine meetings between 31 March and 14 April, exchanging views on a non-paper of the Chairman [A/CN.10/2009/WG.II/CRP.1/Rev.2]. Working Group II decided to continue the consideration of the Chairman's non-paper at the 2011 session of the Commission. At its final meeting on 16 April, the Commission adopted its report to the General Assembly.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 8 December [meeting 60], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the First Committee [A/65/412], adopted resolution 65/86 without vote [agenda item 99 (b)].

Report of the Disarmament Commission

The General Assembly,

Having considered the report of the Disarmament Commission,

Recalling its resolutions 47/54 A of 9 December 1992, 47/54 G of 8 April 1993, 48/77 A of 16 December 1993, 49/77 A of 15 December 1994, 50/72 D of 12 December 1995, 51/47 B of 10 December 1996, 52/40 B of 9 December 1997, 53/79 A of 4 December 1998, 54/56 A of 1 December 1999, 55/35 C of 20 November 2000, 56/26 A of 29 November 2001, 57/95 of 22 November 2002, 58/67 of 8 December 2003, 59/105 of 3 December 2004, 60/91 of 8 December 2005, 61/98 of 6 December 2006, 62/54 of 5 December 2007, 63/83 of 2 December 2008 and 64/65 of 2 December 2009,

Considering the role that the Disarmament Commission has been called upon to play and the contribution that it should make in examining and submitting recommendations on various problems in the field of disarmament and in promoting the implementation of the relevant decisions adopted by the General Assembly at its tenth special session,

1. Takes note of the report of the Disarmament Commission;
2. Reaffirms the validity of its decision 52/492 of 8 September 1998 concerning the efficient functioning of the Disarmament Commission;
3. Recalls its resolution 61/98, by which it adopted additional measures for improving the effectiveness of the Disarmament Commission's methods of work;
4. Reaffirms the mandate of the Disarmament Commission as the specialized, deliberative body within the United Nations multilateral disarmament machinery that allows for in-depth deliberations on specific disarmament issues, leading to the submission of concrete recommendations on those issues;

5. Also reaffirms the importance of further enhancing the dialogue and cooperation among the First Committee, the Disarmament Commission and the Conference on Disarmament;

6. Requests the Disarmament Commission to continue its work in accordance with its mandate, as set forth in paragraph 118 of the Final Document of the Tenth Special Session of the General Assembly, and with paragraph 3 of Assembly resolution 37/78 H of 9 December 1982, and to that end to make every effort to achieve specific recommendations on the items on its agenda, taking into account the adopted “Ways and means to enhance the functioning of the Disarmament Commission”;

(c) Practical confidence-building measures in the field of conventional weapons. This item will be taken up upon the conclusion of the preparation of the elements of a draft declaration of the 2010s as the fourth disarmament decade, preferably in 2010 and in any case no later than 2011;

11. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its sixty-sixth session the item entitled “Report of the Disarmament Commission”.

Conference on Disarmament

The Conference on Disarmament (CD), a multilateral negotiating body, held 35 formal and 34 informal plenary meetings in a three-part session (Geneva, 18 January–26 March, 31 May–16 July, 9 August–24 September) [A/65/27]. As in previous years, the Conference’s agenda included the cessation of the nuclear arms race, and nuclear disarmament; prevention of nuclear war (see p. 517); prevention of an arms race in outer space (see p. 566); effective international arrangements to assure non-nuclear-weapon States against the use or threat of use of nuclear weapons (see p. 523); new types of weapons of mass destruction (WMDs) and new systems of such weapons (see p. 534); a comprehensive programme of disarmament (see p. 511); and transparency in armaments (see p. 565); however, the Conference did not reach a consensus on a programme of work.

The Secretary-General addressed the Conference via video at its meeting of 19 January [CD/PV.1163]. He urged the Conference to recognize the importance of achieving progress in disarmament and non-proliferation in 2010, and expressed the hope that the Conference would agree on a programme of work as soon as possible, hopefully during the first part of its session. Many foreign ministers and heads of delegations, who also addressed the meeting, welcomed the adoption by consensus of the programme of work for the 2009 session, but expressed concerns about the continuing stalemate in the Conference, despite the favourable international environment for multilateral disarmament.

High-level meeting. In an effort to break the stalemate and in response to an invitation from the States participating in the 2010 NPT Review Conference, the Secretary-General convened a high-level meeting on revitalizing the work of the CD and taking forward multilateral disarmament negotiations (New York, 24 September). As the convener and Chair of the meeting, the Secretary-General circulated a summary [A/65/496] of the discussion, which reflected his understanding of the views expressed. A total of 68 delegates spoke, including 37 foreign ministers and representatives of three specialized organizations: the International Atomic Energy Agency (IAEA), the Organization for the Prohibition of Chemical Weapons (OPCW) and the Preparatory Commission for the Comprehensive Nuclear-Test-Ban Treaty Organization.

Many Member States commended the Secretary-General’s engagement in advancing nuclear disarmament and non-proliferation and in particular his five-point proposal [YUN 2008, p. 565]. Many States reaffirmed that multilateralism was the core principle in disarmament and non-proliferation negotiations, and that multilaterally agreed solutions, in accordance with the UN Charter, provided the only sustainable method of addressing disarmament and international security issues. Several Member States noted that promoting disarmament could also help to address other challenges facing the international community, including achieving the Millennium Development Goals. Participants reiterated that the only guarantee of avoiding the use or threat of use of nuclear weapons was their elimination. They recognized that the political will to advance disarmament and non-proliferation had been strengthened in recent years. The Security Council summit held in September 2009

[YUN 2009, p. 525], the Nuclear Security Summit held in Washington, D.C., and the signing of the New START Treaty in April 2010 were noted as encouraging developments. Some Member States pointed out that the disarmament machinery dated back to 1978 and needed a comprehensive assessment, with a view to achieving a more effective functioning. In that connection, some States called for a review of the working methods of the CD and the United Nations Disarmament Commission, including their procedures and operational principles, while other States stressed the importance of preserving the nature, role and purpose of each part of the UN disarmament machinery.

Many Member States expressed support for the convening of the fourth special session of the General Assembly. Others noted the absence of consensus on that proposal and stated that the impasse in multilateral disarmament diplomacy was due to the lack of political will and divergent views on priorities, rather than to the mechanisms of the disarmament machinery. It was also noted that a decision on the fourth special session was the prerogative of the Assembly. Some States were concerned that too much emphasis had been placed on issues related to nuclear weapons and other weapons of mass destruction. In that regard, the international community should not lose sight of conventional weapons issues, including small arms and light weapons. Several Members expressed concern that, should the stalemate continue, the relevance of the CD would be called into question and Member States could resort to an alternative multilateral process. It was also noted that important conventions, such as the Mine Ban Convention and the Convention on Cluster Munitions, were negotiated outside the Conference.

The majority of speakers underscored the necessity of negotiating and bringing to a conclusion a treaty banning the production of fissile material for nuclear weapons or other nuclear explosive devices. A number of States urged the CD to establish an ad hoc committee on nuclear disarmament and start negotiations on a phased programme for the elimination of nuclear weapons within a specified time frame, including a nuclear weapons convention. Nuclear-weapon States, on their part, reaffirmed their commitment to nuclear disarmament, in particular their determination to implement the follow-on actions of the 2010 NPT Review Conference, and towards that end announced their intention to convene a meeting in Paris in 2011. Pending the achievement of the elimination of nuclear weapons, some States called for negotiation of an instrument to assure non-nuclear-weapon States against the use or threat of use of nuclear weapons. A number of States said that the legal framework governing the use of outer space needed to be strengthened so as to prevent an arms race in outer space.

Based on the deliberations, the Secretary-General suggested that the CD, at its first plenary meeting in 2011, adopt its 2009 programme of work or any other similar proposal submitted during the 2010 session; that the General Assembly include in the agenda of its sixty-fifth (2011) session an item entitled "Follow-up to the high-level meeting held on 24 September 2010: revitalizing the work of the CD and taking forward multilateral disarmament negotiations"; and that the Secretary-General ask his Advisory Board on Disarmament Matters to undertake a thorough review of the issues raised at the meeting, including the possible establishment of a high-level panel of eminent persons on the functioning of the CD.

On 5 October [A/65/496], the Secretary-General, as the Chair of the high-level meeting, forwarded the meeting's summary to the General Assembly President.

Communication. On 4 October [A/65/231], the Secretary-General requested the President of the General Assembly to include in the agenda of the Assembly's sixty-fifth session an additional item entitled "Follow-up to the high-level meeting held on 24 September 2010: revitalizing the work of the CD and taking forward multilateral disarmament negotiations".

Follow-up to the high-level meeting held on 24 September 2010: revitalizing the work of the Conference on Disarmament and taking forward multilateral disarmament negotiations

The General Assembly,

Reaffirming the importance of disarmament in strengthening global security and promoting international stability,

Recognizing that the political will to advance the disarmament agenda has been strengthened in recent years and that the international political climate is conducive to the promotion of multilateral disarmament and moving towards the goal of a world without nuclear weapons,

Expressing grave concern, nevertheless, about the current status of the disarmament machinery, including the lack of progress in the Conference on Disarmament for more than a decade, and stressing the need for greater efforts to advance multilateral disarmament negotiations,

Welcoming the efforts by Member States to secure progress in multilateral disarmament and the support of the Secretary-General for such efforts, and noting the intention to follow up on the high-level meeting on revitalizing the work of the Conference on Disarmament and taking forward multilateral disarmament negotiations, held in New York on 24 September 2010,

Mindful of the Charter of the United Nations, in particular Article 11 of Chapter IV concerning the functions and powers of the General Assembly in respect of disarmament,

1. Welcomes the opportunity provided by the high-level meeting on revitalizing the work of the Conference on Disarmament and taking forward multilateral disarmament negotiations, convened at the initiative of the Secretary-General in New York on 24 September 2010, to address the need to advance multilateral disarmament efforts;

2. Expresses appreciation for the participation by Ministers for Foreign Affairs and other high-level officials in the high-level meeting, and emphasizes the support voiced for the urgent need to revitalize the work of multilateral disarmament bodies and to advance multilateral disarmament negotiations;

3. Notes with appreciation the suggestions made by Member States and the Secretary-General with regard to revitalizing the multilateral disarmament machinery;

4. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its sixty-sixth session an item entitled "Revitalizing the work of the Conference on Disarmament and taking forward multilateral disarmament negotiations".

The Assembly, on 24 December decided that the agenda item would remain for consideration during its resumed sixty-fifth session (decision 65/544).

Comprehensive programme of disarmament

The CD held four informal meetings on agenda item 6, "Comprehensive Programme of Disarmament" (15 and 24 June, 6 and 15 July) [CD/1899, annex VI]. Delegations exchanged views on the objectives, principles, definitions, scope, obstacles, follow-up mechanism and time frame of a comprehensive programme on disarmament. The Coordinator did not submit any specific recommendations with regard to any possible way forward on the item, and no delegation proposed any specific recommendations.

UN role in disarmament

Disarmament and development

Pursuant to General Assembly resolution 64/32 [YUN 2009, p. 500], the Secretary-General in July [A/65/132 & Add.1] reported on trends to further strengthen within the United Nations the relationship between disarmament and development. The report contained information received from 10 countries (Bosnia and Herzegovina, Brazil, Cuba, Jordan, Lebanon, Mexico, Nicaragua, Panama, Serbia, Ukraine) on measures and efforts to devote part of the resources made available by the implementation of disarmament and arms limitation agreements to economic and social development. The Secretary-General observed that insofar as the issue was discussed as a trade-off between the level of military expenditures and the level of economic development in a country, no consensus had been reached among Member States. Some States were of the view that those issues were directly interrelated, while others perceived that nexus as being more complex.

The UN focus on disarmament and development was exemplified by the United Nations Fourth Biennial Meeting of States to Consider the Implementation of the Programme of Action to Prevent, Combat and Eradicate the Illicit Trade in Small Arms and Light Weapons in All Its Aspects (New York, 14–18 June) [A/CONF.192/BMS/2010/3]. In the meeting's outcome document, an implicit reference was made to the relation between disarmament and development. On the issue of armed violence, 61 States adopted, on 12 May, the Oslo Commitments on Armed Violence. That document committed States to practical measures designed to reduce the incidence and impact of armed violence by 2015. Those included the recognition of the rights of victims; the promotion and integration of armed violence prevention into local, national and international development plans; increased international cooperation and assistance for armed violence prevention; and a call for the General Assembly high-level plenary meeting on the Millennium Development Goals (MDGs) in September 2010 to discuss armed violence in the context of the MDGs.

In the field of mine action, the 2009 Cartagena Summit on a Mine-free World [YUN 2009, p. 554] came to a successful conclusion. Its political declaration underlined the humanitarian accomplishment in the implementation of the Ottawa Anti-Personnel Landmine Convention and its contribution to the achievement of the MDGs, as well as the will to ensure the full participation and inclusion of mine victims in the life of their communities. The Convention on Cluster Munitions (see p. 562) obtained its thirtieth ratification on 16 February 2010 and entered into force on 1 August 2010.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 8 December [meeting 60], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the First Committee [A/65/410], adopted resolution 65/52 without vote [agenda item 97 (n)].

Relationship between disarmament and development

The General Assembly,

Recalling that the Charter of the United Nations envisages the establishment and maintenance of international peace and security with the least diversion for armaments of the world's human and economic resources,

Recalling also the provisions of the Final Document of the Tenth Special Session of the General Assembly concerning the relationship between disarmament and development, as well as the adoption on 11 September 1987 of the Final Document of the International Conference on the Relationship between Disarmament and Development,

Recalling further its resolutions 49/75 J of 15 December 1994, 50/70 G of 12 December 1995, 51/45 D of 10 December 1996, 52/38 D of 9 December 1997, 53/77 K of 4 December 1998, 54/54 T of 1 December 1999, 55/33 L of 20 November 2000, 56/24 E of 29 November 2001, 57/65 of 22 November 2002, 59/78 of 3 December 2004, 60/61 of 8 December 2005, 61/64 of 6 December 2006, 62/48 of 5 December 2007, 63/52 of 2 December 2008 and 64/32 of

2 December 2009, and its decision 58/520 of 8 December 2003,

Bearing in mind the Final Document of the Twelfth Conference of Heads of State or Government of Non-Aligned Countries, held in Durban, South Africa, from 29 August to 3 September 1998, and the Final Document of the Thirteenth Ministerial Conference of the Movement of Non-Aligned Countries, held in Cartagena, Colombia, on 8 and 9 April 2000,

Mindful of the changes in international relations that have taken place since the adoption on 11 September 1987 of the Final Document of the International Conference on the Relationship between Disarmament and Development, including the development agenda that has emerged over the past decade,

Bearing in mind the new challenges for the international community in the fields of development, poverty eradication and the elimination of the diseases that afflict humanity,

Stressing the importance of the symbiotic relationship between disarmament and development and the important role of security in this connection, and concerned at increasing global military expenditure, which could otherwise be spent on development needs,

Recalling the report of the Group of Governmental Experts on the relationship between disarmament and development and its reappraisal of this significant issue in the current international context,

Bearing in mind the importance of following up on the implementation of the action programme adopted at the 1987 International Conference on the Relationship between Disarmament and Development,

1. Stresses the central role of the United Nations in the disarmament-development relationship, and requests the Secretary-General to strengthen further the role of the Organization in this field, in particular the high-level Steering Group on Disarmament and Development, in order to ensure continued and effective coordination and close cooperation between the relevant United Nations departments, agencies and sub-agencies;

2. Requests the Secretary-General to continue to take action, through appropriate organs and within available resources, for the implementation of the action programme adopted at the 1987 International Conference on the Relationship between Disarmament and Development;

3. Urges the international community to devote part of the resources made available by the implementation of disarmament and arms limitation agreements to economic and social development, with a view to reducing the ever-widening gap between developed and developing countries;

4. Encourages the international community to achieve the Millennium Development Goals and to make reference to the contribution that disarmament could provide in meeting them when it reviews its progress towards this purpose in 2011, as well as to make greater efforts to integrate disarmament, humanitarian and development activities;

5. Encourages the relevant regional and subregional organizations and institutions, non-governmental organizations and research institutes to incorporate issues related to the relationship between disarmament and development into their agendas and, in this regard, to take into account the report of the Group of Governmental Experts on the relationship between disarmament and development;

6. Reiterates its invitation to Member States to provide the Secretary-General with information regarding measures and efforts to devote part of the resources made available by the implementation of disarmament and arms limitation agreements to economic and social development, with a view to reducing the ever-widening gap between developed and developing countries;

7. Requests the Secretary-General to report to the General Assembly at its sixty-sixth session on the implementation of the present resolution, including the information provided by Member States pursuant to paragraph 6 above;

8. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its sixty-sixth session the item entitled "Relationship between disarmament and development".

Women and disarmament

On 15 October, the General Assembly First Committee had before it a draft resolution on "Women, disarmament, arms control and non-proliferation" [A/C.1/65/L.39], submitted by Trinidad and Tobago. On 28 October, Trinidad and Tobago, on behalf of 50 other Member States, introduced a revised draft [A/C.1/65/L.39/Rev.1], which was adopted by the Committee as orally revised.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 8 December [meeting 60], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the First Committee [A/65/410], adopted resolution 65/69 without vote [agenda item 97].

Women, disarmament, non-proliferation and arms control

The General Assembly,

Recalling that the Charter of the United Nations reaffirms the equal rights of men and women,

Recognizing that the participation of both men and women is essential for the attainment of sustainable peace and security,

Recognizing also the valuable contribution of women to practical disarmament measures carried out at the local, national, regional and subregional levels in the prevention and reduction of armed violence and armed conflict, and in promoting disarmament, non-proliferation and arms control,

1. Encourages Member States, regional and subregional organizations, the United Nations and specialized agencies to promote the equitable representation of women in all decision-making processes with regard to matters related to disarmament, non-proliferation and arms control;

2. Invites all States to support and strengthen the effective participation of women in organizations in the field of disarmament at the local, national, regional and subregional levels;

3. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its sixty-seventh session an item entitled "Women, disarmament, non-proliferation and arms control".

Advisory Board on Disarmament Matters

The Advisory Board on Disarmament Matters, which advised the Secretary-General and served as the Board of Trustees of the United Nations Institute for Disarmament Research (UNIDIR), held its fifty-third (New York, 24–26 February) and fifty-fourth (Geneva, 7–9 July) sessions, discussing conceptual issues leading up to the 2010 NPT Review Conference (see p. 531); and follow-up action on the 2002 UN study on disarmament and non-proliferation education [YUN 2002, p. 544]. A report of the Secretary-General [A/65/228] summarized the Board's deliberations and recommendations.

On conceptual issues leading up to the 2010 NPT Review Conference, the Board had discussed the agenda item at its fifty-second session in 2009 and presented a set of recommendations to the Secretary-General [YUN 2009, p. 501]. Nonetheless, the Board had agreed to continue its consideration of the item, due to continuing developments in the field of nuclear disarmament and non-proliferation, and to provide the Secretary-General with new recommendations. The Board recommended that the Secretary-General continue to support the political momentum leading up to the NPT Review Conference; encourage States to ensure high-level political commitment to, as well as participation at the Conference; continue to send positive messages prior to the Conference and encourage States to propose concrete steps for a multilateral process in nuclear disarmament, non-proliferation and peaceful uses of nuclear energy and for implementation of existing norms; stress to both nuclear and non-nuclear-weapon States their common responsibility in having zero tolerance for proliferation by either States or non-State actors, as well as in advancing nuclear disarmament; and acknowledge the progress achieved, especially in the establishment of nuclear-weapon-free zones and in States reversing their nuclear status.

With regard to follow-up action on the 2002 UN study on disarmament and non-proliferation education, the Board recommended that the Secretary-General remind States to implement fully the recommendations made in the study; call the attention of international and regional organizations to the importance of disarmament and non-proliferation education; continue his advocacy role and consider making a major statement on disarmament and non-proliferation education; and encourage Governments to establish robust infrastructures to handle disarmament and non-proliferation studies and to regularly submit reports on disarmament education.

At the July session, Board members exchanged opinions on the outcome of the NPT Review Conference, which was seen as the result of an overall positive review process from 2005 to 2010 within the framework of a constructive international climate that had recently been achieved. The 2010 Review Conference was seen as successful when compared with the 2005 Review Conference. Many Board members stressed the need to maintain the positive momentum and suggested that the Secretary-General act as the preserver of the spirit of the 2010 Review Conference and the bridge-builder between nuclear-weapon and non-nuclear weapon States.

In connection with the tasks assigned to the Secretary-General in the follow-on actions in the Final Document of the 2010 Review Conference, the Board stressed his special responsibility in convening the high-level meeting in September 2010 in support of the work of the CD (see p. 508). The Board stated that priority should also be given to the implementation of the 1995 resolution of the Review Conference on the Middle East [YUN 1995, p. 189] and the convening of a conference in 2012, to be attended by all States of the region, on the establishment in the Middle East of a zone free of nuclear weapons and other weapons of mass destruction.

In its capacity as the UNIDIR Board of Trustees, the Advisory Board adopted the Institute's 2010 programme and budget and approved, for submission to the General Assembly, the report of the UNIDIR's Director on its activities from August 2009 to July 2010 [A/65/177], as well as the proposed programme of work and budget for 2010–2011. The Board recommended increasing the subvention for UNIDIR from the UN regular budget.

Nuclear disarmament

In response to General Assembly resolutions 64/37 [YUN 2009, p. 504], 64/53 [ibid., p. 507] and 64/55 [ibid., p. 516], the Secretary-General in July submitted a report with a later addendum on nuclear disarmament [A/65/137 & Add.1]. He observed that there had been some progress related to reducing the total number of deployed nuclear weapons, increased transparency, an endeavour to diminish the role and significance of nuclear weapons in security policies and the building of political support for a process leading to the elimination of nuclear weapons, including by means of a nuclear weapons convention or a framework of separate mutually reinforcing instruments, backed by a strong system of verification. Consensus agreements, however, continued to elude forums for the development of new international law relating to the constraint and elimination of nuclear weapons, potentially limiting the opportunities to consolidate and carry forward the prevailing political momentum for nuclear disarmament.

On 8 April in Prague, Russian President Dmitry Medvedev and United States President Barack Obama signed the Treaty between the Russian Federation and the United States of America on Measures for the Further Reduction and Limitation of Strategic Offensive Arms (the New START Treaty). The Russian Federation in its 2010 Military Doctrine and the United States in its 2010 Nuclear Posture Review announced welcome reductions in the scenarios in which the threat or use of nuclear weapons would be envisaged. The goal of nuclear disarmament and non-proliferation had also been advanced by major international meetings and conferences.

Progress continued to be slow or stagnant, however, on other aspects of nuclear disarmament. The Comprehensive Nuclear-Test-Ban Treaty (CTBT) lacked the ratifications required for it to enter into force. The ratification of the Treaty by additional States as well as the expressions of intent to ratify by two States listed in annex 2 of the Treaty, however, were welcome developments. The Conference on Disarmament had not been able to start work on the basis of an agreed programme of work during its 2010 session. The Disarmament Commission, convening in April, continued its deliberations on two of its agenda items: recommendations for achieving the objective of nuclear disarmament and non-proliferation of nuclear weapons; and elements of a draft declaration of the 2010s as the fourth disarmament decade, as mandated by the Assembly. The Secretary-General and the High Representative for Disarmament Affairs continued to promote nuclear disarmament and non-proliferation globally through interaction with Governments, civil society and parliamentarians.

Included in the report were replies from six Member States on measures they had taken with regard to the implementation of resolution 64/55, concerning the follow-up to the advisory opinion of the International Court of Justice on the Legality of the Threat or Use of Nuclear Weapons (see p. 529).

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 8 December [meeting 60], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the First Committee [A/65/410], adopted resolution 65/60 by recorded vote (121-49-14) [agenda item 97 (g)].

Reducing nuclear danger

The General Assembly,

Bearing in mind that the use of nuclear weapons poses the most serious threat to mankind and to the survival of civilization,

Reaffirming that any use or threat of use of nuclear weapons would constitute a violation of the Charter of the United Nations,

Convinced that the proliferation of nuclear weapons in all its aspects would seriously enhance the danger of nuclear war,

Convinced also that nuclear disarmament and the complete elimination of nuclear weapons are essential to remove the danger of nuclear war,

Considering that, until nuclear weapons cease to exist, it is imperative on the part of the nuclear-weapon States to adopt measures that assure non-nuclear-weapon States against the use or threat of use of nuclear weapons,

Considering also that the hair-trigger alert of nuclear weapons carries unacceptable risks of unintentional or accidental use of nuclear weapons, which would have catastrophic consequences for all mankind,

Emphasizing the need to adopt measures to avoid accidental, unauthorized or unexplained incidents arising from computer anomaly or other technical malfunctions,

Conscious that limited steps relating to de-alerting and de-targeting have been taken by the nuclear-weapon States and that further practical, realistic and mutually reinforcing steps are necessary to contribute to the improvement in the international climate for negotiations leading to the elimination of nuclear weapons,

Mindful that a diminishing role for nuclear weapons in the security policies of nuclear-weapon States would positively impact on international peace and security and improve the conditions for the further reduction and the elimination of nuclear weapons,

Reiterating the highest priority accorded to nuclear disarmament in the Final Document of the Tenth Special Session of the General Assembly and by the international community,

Recalling the advisory opinion of the International Court of Justice on the Legality of the Threat or Use of Nuclear Weapons that there exists an obligation for all States to pursue in good faith and bring to a conclusion negotiations leading to nuclear disarmament in all its aspects under strict and effective international control,

Recalling also the call in the United Nations Millennium Declaration to seek to eliminate the dangers posed by weapons of mass destruction and the resolve to strive for the elimination of weapons of mass destruction, particularly nuclear weapons, including the possibility of convening an international conference to identify ways of eliminating nuclear dangers,

1. Calls for a review of nuclear doctrines and, in this context, immediate and urgent steps to reduce the risks of unintentional and accidental use of nuclear weapons, including through de-alerting and de-targeting nuclear weapons;

2. Requests the five nuclear-weapon States to take measures towards the implementation of paragraph 1 above;

3. Calls upon Member States to take the necessary measures to prevent the proliferation of nuclear weapons in all its aspects and to promote nuclear disarmament, with the objective of eliminating nuclear weapons;

4. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General submitted pursuant to paragraph 5 of resolution 64/37 of 2 December 2009;

5. Requests the Secretary-General to intensify efforts and support initiatives that would contribute towards the full implementation of the seven recommendations identified in the report of the Advisory Board on Disarmament Matters that would significantly reduce the risk of nuclear war, and also to continue to encourage Member States to consider the convening of an international conference, as proposed in the United Nations Millennium Declaration, to identify ways of eliminating nuclear dangers, and to report thereon to the General Assembly at its sixty-sixth session;

6. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its sixty-sixth session the item entitled "Reducing nuclear danger".

The General Assembly,

Referring to its resolution 59/94 of 3 December 2004 and other relevant resolutions,

Noting with satisfaction the establishment of a new strategic relationship between the Russian Federation and the United States of America, based on the principles of indivisible security, trust, openness, predictability and cooperation, and also the desire of the two countries to bring their respective nuclear postures into alignment with this new relationship, and their endeavour to reduce further the role and importance of nuclear weapons,

Welcoming the resolve of the Russian Federation and the United States of America to work together and with other States and international organizations in the interests of fulfilling their obligations under article VI of the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons, which was opened for signature on 1 July 1968,

Taking into consideration the obligation of all States parties to the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons to fulfil their obligations under the Treaty,

Recognizing the importance of the Treaty on the Reduction and Limitation of Strategic Offensive Arms (the START Treaty), which has expired, and welcoming the fulfilment by Belarus, Kazakhstan, the Russian Federation, Ukraine and the United States of America of the obligations they undertook in accordance with the START Treaty,

Stressing the importance of the reaffirmation, in the joint statement of the Russian Federation and the United States of America of 4 December 2009 on the expiration of the START Treaty, of the security assurances for Belarus, Kazakhstan and Ukraine recorded in the Budapest Memorandum of 5 December 1994,

Recognizing the importance of the Treaty on Strategic Offensive Reductions (the SORT Treaty), and welcoming the fulfilment by the Russian Federation and the United States of America of the obligations they undertook in accordance with the SORT Treaty,

Noting the growing cooperation between the Russian Federation and the United States of America with respect to countering serious challenges to international security, which was demonstrated, in particular, by their joint efforts to implement Security Council resolution 1540(2004) of 28 April 2004, to launch and give substance to the Global Initiative to Combat Nuclear Terrorism, and to enhance nuclear security and convert research reactors in third countries,

1. Welcomes the signing of the Treaty between the Russian Federation and the United States of America on Measures for the Further Reduction and Limitation of Strategic Offensive Arms (the New START Treaty) on 8 April 2010;

2. Notes that the Russian Federation and the United States of America are committed to continuing the development of a new strategic relationship based on mutual trust, openness, predictability and cooperation by following up on the successful negotiation of the New START Treaty, and expresses the hope for continuation of a constructive dialogue between the two countries on the basis of fundamental principles stated in the preamble of the New START Treaty;

3. Supports the consistent commitment of the Russian Federation and the United States of America to the continuation of efforts for reducing strategic offensive arms, and recognizes that the New START Treaty will foster the development of more favourable conditions for actively promoting security and cooperation and strengthening international stability;

4. Recognizes the importance of the contributions made by Belarus, Kazakhstan, the Russian Federation, Ukraine and the United States of America, as States parties to the START Treaty, to nuclear disarmament as part of their commitment to fulfilling their obligations under article VI of the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons;

5. Welcomes the fact that the successful implementation of the START Treaty by the parties resulted in the reduction of their deployed strategic nuclear weapons by approximately 30 per cent during the fifteen-year span of the Treaty, thereby promoting security and cooperation and strengthening international stability;

6. Expresses the hope that the Comprehensive Nuclear-Test-Ban Treaty, which opened for signature on 24 September 1996, will enter into force at an early date;

7. Notes with approval that the Russian Federation and the United States of America have stopped the production of fissile materials for use in nuclear weapons or other nuclear explosive devices, expresses support for the early commencement of international negotiations within the framework of an approved programme of work of the Conference on Disarmament in Geneva for the conclusion of a verifiable treaty to end the production of fissile materials for use in nuclear weapons or other nuclear explosive devices, and encourages the nuclear-weapon States to engage the International Atomic Energy Agency to monitor fissile material designated by each of those States as no longer required for military purposes;

8. Deeply appreciates, in this context, the implementation of the 1993 Agreement between the Government of the Russian Federation and the Government of the United States of America concerning the Disposition of Highly Enriched Uranium Extracted from Nuclear Weapons, under which more than 400 tons of Russian highly enriched uranium have been blended down for use as power reactor fuel in the United States of America, and the fact that, in accordance with this Agreement, the quantity of highly enriched uranium blended down will total 500 tons;

Also on 8 December [meeting 60], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the First Committee [A/65/410], adopted resolution 65/71 by recorded vote (157-3-22) [agenda item 97].

Decreasing the operational readiness of nuclear weapons systems

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 62/36 of 5 December 2007 and 63/41 of 2 December 2008,

Recalling also that the maintenance of nuclear weapons on high alert was a feature of cold war nuclear postures, and welcoming the increased confidence and transparency since the cessation of the cold war,

Concerned that, notwithstanding the end of the cold war, several thousand nuclear weapons remain on high alert, ready to be launched within minutes,

Noting the continuing engagement in multilateral disarmament forums in support of further reductions to the operational status of nuclear weapons systems,

Recognizing that the maintenance of nuclear weapons systems at a high level of readiness increases the risk of the unintentional or accidental use of such weapons, which would have catastrophic consequences,

Recognizing also that reductions in deployments and the lowering of operational status contribute to the maintenance of international peace and security, as well as to the process of nuclear disarmament, through the enhancement of confidence-building and transparency measures and a diminishing role for nuclear weapons in security policies,

Welcoming the steps taken by some States to enhance the environment to support further reductions in nuclear weapons, including de-targeting initiatives and increasing the amount of preparation time required for deployment, and in this connection welcoming the commitment made by the United States of America to maximize Presidential decision time and to consider other steps that may diminish further the possibility of nuclear launches resulting from accidents, unauthorized actions or misperceptions,

1. Welcomes the adoption by consensus of the conclusions and recommendations for follow-on actions of the 2010 Review Conference of the Parties to the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons, including the commitments of the nuclear-weapon States to promptly engage with a view to, inter alia, considering the legitimate interest of non-nuclear-weapon States in further reducing the operational status of nuclear weapons systems in ways that promote international stability and security, and looks forward to the report of the nuclear-weapon States, in terms of that undertaking, to the Preparatory Committee for the Review Conference in 2014;

2. Calls for further practical steps to be taken to decrease the operational readiness of nuclear weapons systems, with a view to ensuring that all nuclear weapons are removed from high alert status;

3. Urges States to update the General Assembly on progress made in the implementation of the present resolution;

4. Decides to remain seized of the matter.

Conference on Disarmament

The Conference on Disarmament held four informal sessions (28 June, 29 June (two sessions), 13 July) on agenda item 1, "Cessation of the nuclear arms race and nuclear disarmament", and item 2, "Prevention of nuclear war, including all related matters" [CD/1899, annex I]. Some nuclear-weapon States recalled their unilateral actions in favour of reducing nuclear arsenals. They underscored the importance of the debate that took place on nuclear disarmament during the 2010 NPT Review Conference, and reiterated their preference for an approach based on a framework of agreements whose components were mutually reinforcing rather than on a convention to ban the use of nuclear weapons.

The debate became more focused in the second session, when the question arose on how to address the issue of nuclear disarmament and whether a legal framework was needed. There was no unanimity on a particular option in that regard. Several delegations said that the call for a nuclear-weapons free world would remain valid so long as full nuclear disarmament ment was not achieved. Nuclear disarmament was an international legal obligation under article 6 of the NPT, a treaty that was the only multilateral disarmament instrument; however, the NPT was not a universal treaty. That called for a new framework to include all States, address their legitimate concerns and ensure universal commitment going beyond the scope of the obligation under article 6 of the NPT. According to a second set of views, it was important to create the appropriate conditions, in terms of maturity, for negotiations on a nuclear ban convention. Some proponents of that approach were somewhat cautious as to the practicability of pursuing the goal of a nuclear-weapons free world, arguing that the so-called "Global Zero" option was an academic and theoretical concept that could not be reasonably pursued as a goal by States. During the third session, several delegations supporting the approach of a total and immediate ban on nuclear weapons demanded that the CD be provided with a negotiating mandate, which should be as broad as possible because the negotiations could result in one or more instruments. The Chair noted that views were divided on many fundamental issues, including the legal framework and the CD's mandate. It was encouraging to note that differences and disagreements did not relate in all cases to the fact that some States possessed nuclear weapons and others did not.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 8 December [meeting 60], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the First Committee [A/65/410], adopted resolution 65/72 by recorded vote (173-1-11) [agenda item 97 (x)].

Nuclear disarmament

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 49/75 E of 15 December 1994 on a step-by-step reduction of the nuclear threat, and its resolutions 50/70 P of 12 December 1995, 51/45 O of 10 December 1996, 52/38 L of 9 December 1997, 53/77 X of 4 December 1998, 54/54 P of 1 December 1999, 55/33 T of 20 November 2000, 56/24 R of 29 November 2001, 57/79 of 22 November 2002, 58/56 of 8 December 2003, 59/77 of 3 December 2004, 60/70 of 8 December 2005, 61/78 of 6 December 2006, 62/42 of 5 December 2007, 63/46 of 2 December 2008 and 64/53 of 2 December 2009 on nuclear disarmament,

Reaffirming the commitment of the international community to the goal of the total elimination of nuclear weapons and the establishment of a nuclear-weapon-free world,

Bearing in mind that the Convention on the Prohibition of the Development, Production and Stockpiling of Bacteriological (Biological) and Toxin Weapons and on Their Destruction of 1972 and the Convention on the Prohibition of the Development, Production, Stockpiling and Use of Chemical Weapons and on Their Destruction of 1993 have already established legal regimes on the complete prohibition of biological and chemical weapons, respectively, and determined to achieve a nuclear weapons convention on the prohibition of the development, testing, production, stockpiling, loan, transfer, use and threat of use of nuclear weapons and on their destruction, and to conclude such an international convention at an early date,

Recognizing that there now exist conditions for the establishment of a world free of nuclear weapons, and stressing the need to take concrete practical steps towards achieving this goal,

Bearing in mind paragraph 50 of the Final Document of the Tenth Special Session of the General Assembly, the first special session devoted to disarmament, calling for the urgent negotiation of agreements for the cessation of the qualitative improvement and development of nuclear-weapon systems, and for a comprehensive and phased programme with agreed time frames, wherever feasible, for the progressive and balanced reduction of nuclear weapons and their means of delivery, leading to their ultimate and complete elimination at the earliest possible time,

Reaffirming the conviction of the States parties to the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons that the Treaty is a cornerstone of nuclear non-proliferation and nuclear disarmament, and the importance of the decision on strengthening the review process for the Treaty, the decision on principles and objectives for nuclear non-proliferation and disarmament, the decision on the extension of the Treaty and the resolution on the Middle East, adopted by the 1995 Review and Extension Conference of the Parties to the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons,

Stressing the importance of the thirteen steps for the systematic and progressive efforts to achieve the objective of nuclear disarmament leading to the total elimination of nuclear weapons, as agreed to by the States parties in the Final Document of the 2000 Review Conference of the Parties to the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons,

Recognizing the important work done at the 2010 Review Conference of the Parties to the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons, and considering its action plan as an impetus to intensify work aimed at beginning negotiations for a nuclear weapons convention,

Reiterating the highest priority accorded to nuclear disarmament in the Final Document of the Tenth Special Session of the General Assembly and by the international community,

Reiterating its call for an early entry into force of the Comprehensive Nuclear-Test-Ban Treaty,

Taking note of the signing of the new strategic arms reduction treaty between the Russian Federation and the United States of America, in order to achieve further deep cuts in their strategic and tactical nuclear weapons, and stressing that such cuts should be irreversible, verifiable and transparent,

Recalling the entry into force of the Treaty on Strategic Offensive Reductions ("the Moscow Treaty") between the United States of America and the Russian Federation as a significant step towards reducing their deployed strategic nuclear weapons, while calling for further irreversible deep cuts in their nuclear arsenals,

Noting the positive statements by nuclear-weapon States of their intention to pursue actions to achieve a world free of nuclear weapons, while reaffirming the need for urgent concrete actions by nuclear-weapon States to achieve this goal within a specified framework of time, and urging them to take further measures for progress on nuclear disarmament,

Recognizing the complementarity of bilateral, plurilateral and multilateral negotiations on nuclear disarmament, and that bilateral negotiations can never replace multilateral negotiations in this respect,

Noting the support expressed in the Conference on Disarmament and in the General Assembly for the elaboration of an international convention to assure non-nuclear-weapon States against the use or threat of use of nuclear weapons, and the multilateral efforts in the Conference on Disarmament to reach agreement on such an international convention at an early date,

Recalling the advisory opinion of the International Court of Justice on the Legality of the Threat or Use of Nuclear Weapons, issued on 8 July 1996, and welcoming the unanimous reaffirmation by all Judges of the Court that there exists an obligation for all States to pursue in good faith and bring to a conclusion negotiations leading to nuclear disarmament in all its aspects under strict and effective international control,

Mindful of paragraph 102 of the Final Document of the Coordinating Bureau of the Non-Aligned Movement at its Ministerial Meeting, held in Havana from 27 to 30 April 2009,

Recalling paragraph 112 and other relevant recommendations in the Final Document of the Fifteenth Summit Conference of Heads of State and Government of the Movement of Non-Aligned Countries, held in Sharm el-Sheikh, Egypt, on 15 and 16 July 2009, calling upon the Conference on Disarmament to establish, as soon as possible and as the highest priority, an ad hoc committee on nuclear disarmament and to commence negotiations on a phased programme for the complete elimination of nuclear weapons within a specified framework of time, including a nuclear weapons convention,

Noting the adoption of the programme of work for the 2009 session by the Conference on Disarmament on 29 May 2009, after years of stalemate, while regretting that the Conference has not been able to undertake substantive work on its agenda in 2010,

Reaffirming the importance and validity of the Conference on Disarmament as the sole multilateral negotiating forum on disarmament, and expressing the need to adopt and implement a balanced and comprehensive programme of work on the basis of its agenda and dealing with, inter alia, four core issues, in accordance with the rules of procedure, and by taking into consideration the security concerns of all States,

Reaffirming also the specific mandate conferred upon the Disarmament Commission by the General Assembly, in its decision 52/492 of 8 September 1998, to discuss the subject of nuclear disarmament as one of its main substantive agenda items,

Recalling the United Nations Millennium Declaration, in which Heads of State and Government resolved to strive for the elimination of weapons of mass destruction, in particular nuclear weapons, and to keep all options open for achieving this aim, including the possibility of convening an international conference to identify ways of eliminating nuclear dangers,

Reaffirming that, in accordance with the Charter of the United Nations, States should refrain from the use or threat of use of nuclear weapons in settling their disputes in international relations,

Seized of the danger of the use of weapons of mass destruction, particularly nuclear weapons, in terrorist acts and the urgent need for concerted international efforts to control and overcome it,

1. Recognizes that the time is now opportune for all the nuclear-weapon States to take effective disarmament measures to achieve the total elimination of these weapons at the earliest possible time;

2. Reaffirms that nuclear disarmament and nuclear non-proliferation are substantively interrelated and mutually reinforcing, that the two processes must go hand in hand and that there is a genuine need for a systematic and progressive process of nuclear disarmament;

3. Welcomes and encourages the efforts to establish new nuclear-weapon-free zones in different parts of the world, including the establishment of a Middle East zone free of nuclear weapons, on the basis of agreements or arrangements freely arrived at among the States of the regions concerned, which is an effective measure for limiting the further spread of nuclear weapons geographically and contributes to the cause of nuclear disarmament;

4. Recognizes that there is a genuine need to diminish the role of nuclear weapons in strategic doctrines and security policies to minimize the risk that these weapons will ever be used and to facilitate the process of their total elimination;

5. Urges the nuclear-weapon States to stop immediately the qualitative improvement, development, production and stockpiling of nuclear warheads and their delivery systems;

6. Also urges the nuclear-weapon States, as an interim measure, to de-alert and deactivate immediately their nuclear weapons and to take other concrete measures to reduce further the operational status of their nuclear-weapon systems, while stressing that reductions in deployments and in operational status cannot substitute for irreversible cuts in, and the total elimination of, nuclear weapons;

7. Reiterates its call upon the nuclear-weapon States to undertake the step-by-step reduction of the nuclear threat and to carry out effective nuclear disarmament measures with a view to achieving the total elimination of these weapons within a specified framework of time;

11. Underscores the importance of the unequivocal undertaking by the nuclear-weapon States, in the Final Document of the 2000 Review Conference of the Parties to the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons, to accomplish the total elimination of their nuclear arsenals leading to nuclear disarmament, to which all States parties are committed under article VI of the Treaty, and the reaffirmation by the States parties that the total elimination of nuclear weapons is the only absolute guarantee against the use or threat of use of nuclear weapons;

12. Calls for the full and effective implementation of the thirteen practical steps for nuclear disarmament contained in the Final Document of the 2000 Review Conference;

13. Also calls for the full implementation of the action plan as set out in the conclusions and recommendations for follow-on actions of the Final Document of the 2010 Review Conference of the Parties to the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons, particularly the 22-point action plan on nuclear disarmament;

20. Reiterates its call upon the Conference on Disarmament to establish, as soon as possible and as the highest priority, an ad hoc committee on nuclear disarmament early in 2011 and to commence negotiations on a phased programme of nuclear disarmament leading to the total elimination of nuclear weapons within a specified framework of time;

21. Calls for the convening of an international conference on nuclear disarmament in all its aspects at an early date to identify and deal with concrete measures of nuclear disarmament;

22. Requests the Secretary-General to submit to the General Assembly at its sixty-sixth session a report on the implementation of the present resolution;

23. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its sixty-sixth session the item entitled "Nuclear disarmament".

Fissile material

The Conference on Disarmament held four informal sessions on a fissile material cut-off treaty, on 8 June (two sessions), 22 June and 23 June [CD/1899, annex II]. The discussions focused on: the value of such a treaty; the disarmament and non-proliferation objectives of the treaty; scope of the treaty (new production/existing stocks); definitions (fissile material, production); verification (objectives, scope, legal arrangements, role of the International Atomic Energy Agency); and organizational issues (implementation, decision-making, secretariat, entry into force).

Regarding the scope of the treaty, States debated on whether to include reduction in existing stocks among the treaty's provisions. Marked divergences of views emerged; the majority of non-nuclear-weapon States insisted on the inclusion of such a provision, while some nuclear-weapon States were not in favour. Those positions mirrored the fundamental dichotomy as to whether such a treaty should be considered a nuclear disarmament or a non-proliferation measure. In an attempt to bridge those differences, Brazil proposed a treaty structure similar to the Convention on Certain Conventional Weapons, under which the issue of stocks would be dealt with in a separate protocol to a framework treaty.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 8 December [meeting 60], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the First Committee [A/65/410], adopted resolution 65/65 by recorded vote (179-1-2) [agenda item 97 (f)].

Treaty banning the production of fissile material for nuclear weapons or other nuclear explosive devices

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 48/75 L of 16 December 1993, 53/77 I of 4 December 1998, 55/33 Y of 20 November 2000, 56/24 J of 29 November 2001, 57/80 of 22 November 2002, 58/57 of 8 December 2003, 59/81 of 3 December 2004 and 64/29 of 2 December 2009 on the subject of banning the production of fissile material for nuclear weapons or other nuclear explosive devices, and noting in this regard the support for the Conference on Disarmament expressed by the Security Council summit on nuclear disarmament and nuclear non-proliferation, held on 24 September 2009,

Convinced that a non-discriminatory, multilateral and internationally and effectively verifiable treaty banning the production of fissile material for nuclear weapons or other nuclear explosive devices would be a significant contribution to nuclear disarmament and non-proliferation,

Welcoming, after years of stalemate, the consensus adoption by the Conference on Disarmament of its decision (CD/1864) of 29 May 2009 on the establishment of a programme of work for its 2009 session, by which the Conference, inter alia, and without prejudice to any past, present or future position, established a Working Group to negotiate a treaty banning the production of fissile material for nuclear weapons or other nuclear explosive devices on the basis of document CD/1299 of 24 March 1995 and the mandate contained therein,

1. Urges the Conference on Disarmament to agree early in 2011 on a programme of work that includes the immediate commencement of negotiations on a treaty banning the production of fissile material for nuclear weapons or other nuclear explosive devices;

2. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its sixty-sixth session the item entitled “Treaty banning the production of fissile material for nuclear weapons or other nuclear explosive devices”.

Security assurances

The Conference on Disarmament held four informal meetings (16 and 25 June, 1 and 16 July) on agenda item 4, “Effective international arrangements to assure non-nuclear-weapon States against the use or threat of use of nuclear weapons” (or “negative security assurances”) [CD/1899, annex IV].

Many delegations shared the view that the elimination of nuclear weapons was the only absolute guarantee for negative security assurances. Pending the ultimate goal of a nuclear-weapon-free world, non-nuclear weapon States should have a legitimate right to a legally binding assurance for negative security assurances; however, some delegations supported the decision taken in the 2010 NPT Review Conference outcome concerning negative security assurances. Some delegations identified the unilateral declarations by nuclear-weapon States in the mid-1990s as important steps towards negative security assurances.

Some delegations noted the establishment of nuclear-weapon-free zones as positive steps for guaranteeing negative security assurances, although not all nuclear-weapon States had ratified the protocols of nuclear-weapon-free zones. Conversely, others argued that security assurances should not be granted in the context of nuclear-weapon-free zones because the idea of such zones might not be applicable to specific regions such as the Middle East or South Asia. Therefore, they called for the conclusion of a universal, legally binding instrument on negative security assurances. Nevertheless, delegations welcomed the creation of nuclear-weapon-free zones in Africa, South-East Asia, Central Asia, Latin America and the South Pacific, as well as Mongolia’s nuclear-weapon-free status, and stressed the need to establish more such zones. Some delegations viewed positively the 2010 United States Nuclear Posture Review, stating that it gave added assurance of “no-use” of nuclear weapons against non-nuclear-weapon States and within nuclear-weapon-free zones.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 8 December [meeting 60], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the First Committee [A/65/407], adopted resolution 65/43 by recorded vote (119-0-58) [agenda item 94].

Conclusion of effective international arrangements to assure non-nuclear-weapon States against the use or threat of use of nuclear weapons

The General Assembly,

Bearing in mind the need to allay the legitimate concern of the States of the world with regard to ensuring lasting security for their peoples,

Convinced that nuclear weapons pose the greatest threat to mankind and to the survival of civilization,

Noting that the renewed interest in nuclear disarmament should be translated into concrete actions for the achievement of general and complete disarmament under effective international control,

Convinced that nuclear disarmament and the complete elimination of nuclear weapons are essential to remove the danger of nuclear war,

Determined to abide strictly by the relevant provisions of the Charter of the United Nations on the non-use of force or threat of force,

Recognizing that the independence, territorial integrity and sovereignty of non-nuclear-weapon States need to be safeguarded against the use or threat of use of force, including the use or threat of use of nuclear weapons,

Considering that, until nuclear disarmament is achieved on a universal basis, it is imperative for the international community to develop effective measures and arrangements to ensure the security of non-nuclear-weapon States against the use or threat of use of nuclear weapons from any quarter,

Recognizing that effective measures and arrangements to assure non-nuclear-weapon States against the use or threat of use of nuclear weapons can contribute positively to the prevention of the spread of nuclear weapons,

Bearing in mind paragraph 59 of the Final Document of the Tenth Special Session of the General Assembly, the first special session devoted to disarmament, in which it urged the nuclear-weapon States to pursue efforts to conclude, as appropriate, effective arrangements to assure non-nuclear-weapon States against the use or threat of use of nuclear weapons, and desirous of promoting the implementation of the relevant provisions of the Final Document,

Recalling the relevant parts of the special report of the Committee on Disarmament submitted to the General Assembly at its twelfth special session, the second special session devoted to disarmament, and of the special report of the Conference on Disarmament submitted to the Assembly at its fifteenth special session, the third special session devoted to disarmament, as well as the report of the Conference on its 1992 session,

Recalling also paragraph 12 of the Declaration of the 1980s as the Second Disarmament Decade, contained in the annex to its resolution 35/46 of 3 December 1980, which states, inter alia, that all efforts should be exerted by the Committee on Disarmament urgently to negotiate with a view to reaching agreement on effective international arrangements to assure non-nuclear-weapon States against the use or threat of use of nuclear weapons,

Noting the in-depth negotiations undertaken in the Conference on Disarmament and its Ad Hoc Committee on Effective International Arrangements to Assure Non-Nuclear-Weapon States against the Use or Threat of Use of Nuclear Weapons, with a view to reaching agreement on this question,

Taking note of the proposals submitted under the item in the Conference on Disarmament, including the drafts of an international convention,

Taking note also of the relevant decision of the Thirteenth Conference of Heads of State or Government of Non-Aligned Countries, held at Kuala Lumpur on 24 and 25 February 2003, which was reiterated at the Fourteenth and Fifteenth Conferences of Heads of State or Government of Non-Aligned Countries, held at Havana and Sharm el-Sheik, Egypt, on 15 and 16 September 2006, and 15 and 16 July 2009, respectively, as well as the relevant recommendations of the Organization of the Islamic Conference,

Taking note further of the unilateral declarations made by all the nuclear-weapon States on their policies of non-use or non-threat of use of nuclear weapons against the non-nuclear-weapon States,

Noting the support expressed in the Conference on Disarmament and in the General Assembly for the elaboration of an international convention to assure non-nuclear-weapon States against the use or threat of use of nuclear weapons, as well as the difficulties pointed out in evolving a common approach acceptable to all,

Taking note of Security Council resolution 984(1995) of 11 April 1995 and the views expressed on it,

Recalling its relevant resolutions adopted in previous years, in particular resolutions 45/54 of 4 December 1990, 46/32 of 6 December 1991, 47/50 of 9 December 1992, 48/73 of 16 December 1993, 49/73 of 15 December 1994, 50/68 of 12 December 1995, 51/43 of 10 December 1996, 52/36 of 9 December 1997, 53/75 of 4 December 1998, 54/52 of 1 December 1999, 55/31 of 20 November 2000, 56/22 of 29 November 2001, 57/56 of 22 November 2002, 58/35 of 8 December 2003, 59/64 of 3 December 2004, 60/53 of 8 December 2005, 61/57 of 6 December 2006, 62/19 of 5 December 2007, 63/39 of 2 December 2008, and 64/27 of 2 December 2009,

1. Reaffirms the urgent need to reach an early agreement on effective international arrangements to assure non-nuclear-weapon States against the use or threat of use of nuclear weapons;

2. Notes with satisfaction that in the Conference on Disarmament there is no objection, in principle, to the idea of an international convention to assure non-nuclear-weapon States against the use or threat of use of nuclear weapons, although the difficulties with regard to evolving a common approach acceptable to all have also been pointed out;

3. Appeals to all States, especially the nuclear-weapon States, to work actively towards an early agreement on a common approach and, in particular, on a common formula that could be included in an international instrument of a legally binding character;

4. Recommends that further intensive efforts be devoted to the search for such a common approach or common formula and that the various alternative approaches, including, in particular, those considered in the Conference on Disarmament, be explored further in order to overcome the difficulties;

5. Also recommends that the Conference on Disarmament actively continue intensive negotiations with a view to reaching early agreement and concluding effective international agreements to assure the non-nuclear-weapon States against the use or threat of use of nuclear weapons, taking into account the widespread support for the conclusion of an international convention and giving consideration to any other proposals designed to secure the same objective;

6. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its sixty-sixth session the item entitled "Conclusion of effective international arrangements to assure non-nuclear-weapon States against the use or threat of use of nuclear weapons".

RECORDED VOTE ON RESOLUTION 65/43:

In favour: Afghanistan, Algeria, Angola, Antigua and Barbuda, Azerbaijan, Bahamas, Bahrain, Bangladesh, Barbados, Belarus, Belize, Bhutan, Bolivia, Botswana, Brazil, Brunei Darussalam, Burkina Faso, Cambodia, Cameroon, Cape Verde, Central African Republic, Chile, China, Colombia, Comoros, Congo, Costa Rica, Côte d'Ivoire, Cuba, Democratic People's Republic of Korea, Democratic Republic of the Congo, Djibouti, Dominican Republic, Ecuador, Egypt, El Salvador, Eritrea, Ethiopia, Fiji, Gabon, Gambia, Ghana, Grenada, Guatemala, Guinea, Guinea-Bissau, Guyana, Haiti, Honduras, India, Indonesia, Iran, Iraq, Jamaica, Japan, Jordan, Kazakhstan, Kenya, Kuwait, Kyrgyzstan, Lao People's Democratic Republic, Lebanon, Lesotho, Liberia, Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Madagascar, Malawi, Malaysia, Maldives, Mali, Mauritania, Mauritius, Mexico, Mongolia, Morocco, Myanmar, Nepal, Nicaragua, Niger, Nigeria, Oman, Pakistan, Panama, Papua New Guinea, Paraguay, Peru, Philippines, Qatar, Saint Kitts and Nevis, Saint Lucia, Saint Vincent and the Grenadines, Samoa, Sao Tome and Principe, Saudi Arabia, Senegal, Seychelles, Sierra Leone, Singapore, Solomon Islands, Sri Lanka, Sudan, Suriname, Syrian Arab Republic, Thailand, Timor-Leste, Togo, Tonga, Trinidad and Tobago, Tunisia, Turkmenistan, United Arab Emirates, United Republic of Tanzania, Uruguay, Uzbekistan, Vanuatu, Venezuela, Viet Nam, Yemen, Zambia.

Comprehensive Nuclear-Test-Ban Treaty

Status

As at 31 December, 182 States had signed the 1996 Comprehensive Nuclear-Test-Ban Treaty (CTBT) adopted by General Assembly resolution 50/245 [YUN 1996, p. 454], and 153 had ratified it. During the year, instruments of ratification were deposited by Trinidad and Tobago and the Central African Republic. In accordance with article XIV, CTBT would enter into force 180 days after the 44 States possessing nuclear reactors, listed in annex 2 of the Treaty, had deposited their instruments of ratification. By year's end, 35 of those States had ratified the Treaty.

Report of Secretary General. In July, pursuant to General Assembly resolution 64/69 [YUN 2009, p. 513], the Secretary-General reported [A/65/111 & Add.1,2 & Corr.1], in consultation with the Preparatory Commission for CTBT, on the efforts of States that had ratified the Treaty towards its universalization and possibilities for providing assistance on ratification procedures to States that so requested it, covering the period June 2009–May 2010.

Fifth ministerial meeting to promote entry into force

On the eve of the fourteenth anniversary of the opening for signature of CTBT, foreign ministers of Member States convened a meeting (New York, 24 September) to promote the Treaty's entry into force. The fifth of its kind, the biennial meeting was convened by Australia, Canada, Finland, France, Japan, Morocco and the Netherlands.

In a joint ministerial statement, 74 countries committed themselves to making CTBT a focus of attention at the highest political level and to take measures to facilitate the signature and ratification process, as recommended in the Final Document of the 2010 NPT Review Conference.

On 28 December [A/65/675], Australia, Canada, Finland, France, Japan, Morocco and the Netherlands transmitted the joint ministerial statement to the Secretary-General.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 8 December [meeting 60], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the First Committee [A/65/416], adopted resolution 65/91 by recorded vote (179-1-3) [agenda item 103].

Comprehensive Nuclear-Test-Ban Treaty

The General Assembly,

Reiterating that the cessation of nuclear-weapon test explosions or any other nuclear explosions constitutes an effective nuclear disarmament and non-proliferation measure, and convinced that this is a meaningful step in the realization of a systematic process for achieving nuclear disarmament,

Recalling that the Comprehensive Nuclear-Test-Ban Treaty, adopted by its resolution 50/245 of 10 September 1996, was opened for signature on 24 September 1996,

Stressing that a universal and effectively verifiable Treaty constitutes a fundamental instrument in the field of nuclear disarmament and non-proliferation and that, after more than fourteen years, its entry into force is more urgent than ever before,

Encouraged by the signing of the Treaty by one hundred and eighty-one States, including forty-one of the forty-four whose ratification is needed for its entry into force, and welcoming the ratification of the Treaty by one hundred and fifty-three States, including thirty-five of the forty-four whose ratification is needed for its entry into force, among which there are three nuclear-weapon States,

Recalling its resolution 64/69 of 2 December 2009,

Welcoming the adoption by consensus of the conclusions and recommendations for follow-on actions of the 2010 Review Conference of the Parties to the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons, which, inter alia, reaffirmed the vital importance of the entry into force of the Comprehensive Nuclear-Test-Ban Treaty as a core element of the international nuclear disarmament and non-proliferation regime and included specific actions to be taken in support of the entry into force of the Treaty,

Welcoming also the Joint Ministerial Statement on the Comprehensive Nuclear-Test-Ban Treaty, adopted at the Ministerial Meeting held in New York on 23 September 2010,

Recalling the Final Declaration adopted by the sixth Conference on Facilitating the Entry into Force of the Comprehensive Nuclear-Test-Ban Treaty, held in New York on 24 and 25 September 2009, pursuant to article XIV of the Treaty, and noting the improved prospects for ratification in several Annex 2 countries,

1. Stresses the vital importance and urgency of signature and ratification, without delay and without conditions, in order to achieve the earliest entry into force of the Comprehensive Nuclear-Test-Ban Treaty;

2. Welcomes the contributions by the States signatories to the work of the Preparatory Commission for the Comprehensive Nuclear-Test-Ban Treaty Organization, in particular its efforts to ensure that the verification regime of the Treaty will be capable of meeting the verification requirements of the Treaty upon its entry into force, in accordance with article IV of the Treaty;

3. Underlines the need to maintain momentum towards completion of all elements of the verification regime;

4. Urges all States not to carry out nuclear-weapon test explosions or any other nuclear explosions, to maintain their moratoriums in this regard and to refrain from acts that would defeat the object and purpose of the Treaty, while stressing that these measures do not have the same permanent and legally binding effect as the entry into force of the Treaty;

5. Recalls Security Council resolutions 1718(2006) of 14 October 2006 and 1874(2009) of 12 June 2009, empha-

Preparatory Commission for the CTBT Organization

In advance of the entry into force of the Comprehensive Nuclear-Test-Ban Treaty and the establishment of the Commission for the Comprehensive Nuclear-Test-Ban Treaty Organization (CTBTO), a Preparatory Commission was established by the signatory States in 1996 [YUN 1996, p. 452]. In 2010, the Commission continued to develop the Treaty's verification regime. Momentum was maintained in setting up the International Monitoring System (IMS) [YUN 1999, p. 472], the global network of 337 facilities in 90 countries designed to detect nuclear explosions prohibited by CTBT. By the end of the year, 272 IMS stations, representing 85 per cent of the network, were installed, and 27 noble gas systems were in provisional operation at IMS radionuclide stations. Efforts were made to enhance the capabilities to perform atmospheric transport modelling and to deliver high-quality products to signatory States. Infrasound monitoring, an important verification technology for detecting and locating an atmospheric nuclear explosion, was introduced into operations at the International Data Centre in Vienna in February.

The Preparatory Commission held its thirty-fourth (28–29 June) [CTBT/PC-34/2] and thirty-fifth (8–9 November) [CTBT/PC-35/2] sessions in Vienna to consider the reports of its working groups and to discuss organizational, budgetary and other matters.

Note by Secretary-General. In June [A/65/98], the Secretary-General transmitted to the General Assembly the report of the Executive Secretary of the Preparatory Commission for 2009, pursuant to article IV, paragraph 1, of the Agreement to Regulate the Relationship between the United Nations and the Preparatory Commission for CTBTO, annexed to Assembly resolution 54/280 [YUN 2000, p. 501].

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 13 December [meeting 64], the General Assembly adopted resolution 65/127 [draft: A/65/L.34 & Add.1] without vote [agenda item 122 (u)].

Cooperation between the United Nations and the Preparatory Commission for the Comprehensive Nuclear-Test-Ban Treaty Organization

The General Assembly,

Taking note of the report of the Secretary-General,

Taking note also of the report of the Executive Secretary of the Preparatory Commission for the Comprehensive Nuclear-Test-Ban Treaty Organization, Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its sixty-seventh session the sub-item entitled “Cooperation between the United Nations and the Preparatory Commission for the Comprehensive Nuclear-Test-Ban Treaty Organization”.

Advisory opinion of the International Court of Justice

Pursuant to General Assembly resolution 64/55 [YUN 2009, p. 516], relating to the advisory opinion of the International Court of Justice that the threat or use of nuclear weapons was contrary to the UN Charter [YUN 1999, p. 461], the Secretary-General in July [A/65/137 & Add.1] presented information from six Member States (Burkina Faso, Cuba, Japan, Lebanon, Qatar, Serbia) on measures they had taken to implement resolution 64/55 and towards nuclear disarmament.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 8 December [meeting 60], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the First Committee [A/65/410], adopted resolution 65/76 by recorded vote (133-28-23) [agenda item 97 (c)].

Follow-up to the advisory opinion of the International Court of Justice on the Legality of the Threat or Use of Nuclear Weapons

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 49/75 K of 15 December 1994, 51/45 M of 10 December 1996, 52/38 O of 9 December 1997, 53/77 W of 4 December 1998, 54/54 Q of 1 December 1999, 55/33 X of 20 November 2000, 56/24 S of 29 November 2001, 57/85 of 22 November 2002, 58/46 of 8 December 2003, 59/83 of 3 December 2004, 60/76 of 8 December 2005, 61/83 of 6 December 2006, 62/39 of 5 December 2007, 63/49 of 2 December 2008 and 64/55 of 2 December 2009,

Convinced that the continuing existence of nuclear weapons poses a threat to humanity and all life on Earth, and recognizing that the only defence against a nuclear catastrophe is the total elimination of nuclear weapons and the certainty that they will never be produced again,

Reaffirming the commitment of the international community to the realization of the goal of a nuclear-weapon-free world through the total elimination of nuclear weapons,

Mindful of the solemn obligations of States parties, undertaken in article VI of the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons, particularly to pursue negotiations in good faith on effective measures relating to cessation of the nuclear arms race at an early date and to nuclear disarmament,

Recalling the principles and objectives for nuclear non-proliferation and disarmament adopted at the 1995 Review and Extension Conference of the Parties to the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons, the unequivocal commitment of nuclear-weapon States to accomplish the total elimination of their nuclear arsenals leading to nuclear disarmament, agreed at the 2000 Review Conference of the Parties to the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons, and the action points agreed at the 2010 Review Conference of the Parties to the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation on Nuclear Weapons as part of the conclusions and recommendations for follow-on actions on nuclear disarmament,

Sharing the deep concern at the catastrophic humanitarian consequences of any use of nuclear weapons, and in this context reaffirming the need for all States at all times to comply with applicable international law, including international humanitarian law,

Calling upon all nuclear-weapon States to undertake concrete disarmament efforts, and stressing that all States need to make special efforts to achieve and maintain a world without nuclear weapons,

Noting the five-point proposal for nuclear disarmament of the Secretary-General, in which he proposes, inter alia, the consideration of negotiations on a nuclear weapons convention or agreement on a framework of separate mutually reinforcing instruments, backed by a strong system of verification,

Recalling the adoption of the Comprehensive Nuclear-Test-Ban Treaty in its resolution 50/245 of 10 September 1996, and expressing its satisfaction at the increasing number of States that have signed and ratified the Treaty,

Recognizing with satisfaction that the Antarctic Treaty, the treaties of Tlatelolco, Rarotonga, Bangkok and Pelindaba and the Treaty on a Nuclear-Weapon-Free Zone in Central Asia, as well as Mongolia's nuclear-weapon-free status, are gradually freeing the entire southern hemisphere and adjacent areas covered by those treaties from nuclear weapons,

Recognizing the need for a multilaterally negotiated and legally binding instrument to assure non-nuclear-weapon States against the threat or use of nuclear weapons pending the total elimination of nuclear weapons,

Reaffirming the central role of the Conference on Disarmament as the sole multilateral disarmament negotiating forum,

Emphasizing the need for the Conference on Disarmament to commence negotiations on a phased programme for the complete elimination of nuclear weapons with a specified framework of time,

Stressing the urgent need for the nuclear-weapon States to accelerate concrete progress on the thirteen practical steps to implement article VI of the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons leading to nuclear disarmament, contained in the Final Document of the 2000 Review Conference,

Taking note of the Model Nuclear Weapons Convention that was submitted to the Secretary-General by Costa Rica and Malaysia in 2007 and circulated by the Secretary-General,

Desiring to achieve the objective of a legally binding prohibition of the development, production, testing, deployment, stockpiling, threat or use of nuclear weapons and their destruction under effective international control,

Recalling the advisory opinion of the International Court of Justice on the Legality of the Threat or Use of Nuclear Weapons, issued on 8 July 1996,

1. Underlines once again the unanimous conclusion of the International Court of Justice that there exists an obligation to pursue in good faith and bring to a conclusion negotiations leading to nuclear disarmament in all its aspects under strict and effective international control;

2. Calls once again upon all States immediately to fulfil that obligation by commencing multilateral negotiations leading to an early conclusion of a nuclear weapons convention prohibiting the development, production, testing, deployment, stockpiling, transfer, threat or use of nuclear weapons and providing for their elimination;

3. Requests all States to inform the Secretary-General of the efforts and measures they have taken with respect to the implementation of the present resolution and nuclear disarmament, and requests the Secretary-General to apprise the General Assembly of that information at its sixty-sixth session;

4. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its sixty-sixth session the item entitled "Follow-up to the advisory opinion of the International Court of Justice on the Legality of the Threat or Use of Nuclear Weapons".

Prohibition of the use of nuclear weapons

In 2010, no progress was made on a convention on the prohibition of the use of nuclear weapons, as the Conference on Disarmament was unable to undertake negotiations on the subject as called for in General Assembly resolution 64/59 [YUN 2009, p. 517]. As in previous years, the Assembly reiterated its request to the Conference on Disarmament to commence negotiations.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 8 December [meeting 60], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the First Committee [A/65/411], adopted resolution 65/80 by recorded vote (124-49-11) [agenda item 98 (d)].

Convention on the Prohibition of the Use of Nuclear Weapons

The General Assembly,

Convinced that the use of nuclear weapons poses the most serious threat to the survival of mankind,

Bearing in mind the advisory opinion of the International Court of Justice of 8 July 1996 on the Legality of the Threat or Use of Nuclear Weapons,

Convinced that a multilateral, universal and binding agreement prohibiting the use or threat of use of nuclear weapons would contribute to the elimination of the nuclear threat and to the climate for negotiations leading to the ultimate elimination of nuclear weapons, thereby strengthening international peace and security,

Conscious that some steps taken by the Russian Federation and the United States of America towards a reduction of their nuclear weapons and the improvement in the international climate can contribute towards the goal of the complete elimination of nuclear weapons,

Recalling that paragraph 58 of the Final Document of the Tenth Special Session of the General Assembly states that all States should actively participate in efforts to bring about conditions in international relations among States in which a code of peaceful conduct of nations in international affairs could be agreed upon and which would preclude the use or threat of use of nuclear weapons,

Reaffirming that any use of nuclear weapons would be a violation of the Charter of the United Nations and a crime against humanity, as declared in its resolutions 1653(XVI) of 24 November 1961, 33/71 B of 14 December 1978, 34/83 G of 11 December 1979, 35/152 D of 12 December 1980 and 36/92 I of 9 December 1981,

Determined to achieve an international convention prohibiting the development, production, stockpiling and use of nuclear weapons, leading to their ultimate destruction,

Stressing that an international convention on the prohibition of the use of nuclear weapons would be an important step in a phased programme towards the complete elimination of nuclear weapons, with a specified framework of time,

Noting with regret that the Conference on Disarmament, during its 2010 session, was unable to undertake negotiations on this subject as called for in General Assembly resolution 64/59 of 2 December 2009,

1. Reiterates its request to the Conference on Disarmament to commence negotiations in order to reach agreement on an international convention prohibiting the use or threat of use of nuclear weapons under any circumstances;

2. Requests the Conference on Disarmament to report to the General Assembly on the results of those negotiations.

International Day against Nuclear Tests

August 29 marked the first commemoration of the International Day against Nuclear Tests, established by General Assembly resolution 64/35 [YUN 2009, p. 518]. The resolution was initiated by Kazakhstan, together with a large number of sponsors, to commemorate the closure of the Semipalatinsk Nuclear Test site on 29 August 1991. Ceremonies were held in Astana, New York and Vienna. The Secretary-General issued a message for the Day [SG/SM/13074]. Special events, such as symposia, conferences and exhibits, were held.

Non-proliferation

Non-proliferation treaty

Status

In 2010, the number of States parties to the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons (NPT) remained at 190. Regarded as the cornerstone of the global nuclear non-proliferation regime, the Treaty was adopted by the General Assembly in 1968, by resolution 2373(XXIII) [YUN 1968, p. 16], and entered into force in 1970. It was extended indefinitely in 1995 by Assembly resolution 50/70 [YUN 1995, p. 189].

2010 review conference

Following the entry into force of the NPT, quinquennial review conferences, as called for under article VIII, paragraph 3, of the Treaty, were held beginning in 1975 [YUN 1975, p. 27]; the most recent was held in 2005 [YUN 2005, p. 597].

The 2010 Review Conference (New York, 3–28 May) [NPT/CONF.2010/50 (Vols. I–III)] adopted an outcome document [NPT/CONF.2010/50 (Vol. I)] containing a 64-point action plan on nuclear disarmament, nuclear non-proliferation, peaceful uses of nuclear energy and the Middle East, particularly implementation of the 1995 resolution on the Middle East. The document outlined concrete steps in areas such as nuclear disarmament, security assurances, nuclear testing, fissile materials, and measures in support of nuclear disarmament.

The Conference reaffirmed the need for the nuclear-weapon States to implement the steps leading to nuclear disarmament agreed to in the Final Document of the 2000 Review Conference in a way that promoted international stability, peace and security, and based on the principle of undiminished and increased security for all. The Conference recognized the legitimate interests of non-nuclear-weapon States in the constraining by the nuclear-weapon States of the development and qualitative improvement of nuclear weapons and ending the development of advanced new types of nuclear weapons. It noted the Secretary-General's five-point proposal [YUN 2008, p. 565] for negotiations on a nuclear weapons convention backed by a strong system of verification.

The Conference resolved that the nuclear-weapon States should commit to further efforts to reduce and ultimately eliminate all types of nuclear weapons, deployed and non-deployed, including through unilateral, bilateral, regional and multilateral measures. The Russian Federation and the United States should commit to the early entry into force and full implementation of the Treaty on Measures for the Further Reduction and Limitation of Strategic Offensive Arms (START), and were encouraged to continue discussions on follow-on measures in order to achieve deeper reductions in their nuclear arsenals.

All States agreed that the Conference on Disarmament should immediately establish a subsidiary body to deal with nuclear disarmament within the context of an agreed, comprehensive and balanced programme of work. The Conference reaffirmed that the elimination of nuclear weapons was the only absolute guarantee against the use or threat of use of nuclear weapons and the legitimate interest of non-nuclear-weapon States in receiving unequivocal and legally binding security assurances. All States also agreed that the Conference on Disarmament should immediately begin discussion of effective international arrangements to assure non-nuclear-weapon States against the use or threat of use of nuclear weapons.

In the area of nuclear testing, the Conference resolved that all nuclear-weapon States should undertake to ratify the CTBT; those States had a special responsibility to encourage Annex 2 countries, in particular those which had not acceded to the NPT and continued to operate unsafeguarded nuclear facilities, to ratify and sign it. Pending the CTBT's entry into force, all States should refrain from nuclear-weapon test explosions or any other nuclear explosions, from the use of new nuclear weapons technologies and from any action that would defeat the object and purpose of the CTBT; all moratoriums on nuclear-weapon test explosions should be maintained. On fissile materials, the Conference encouraged States to support the development of legally binding verification arrangements, within the context of IAEA, to ensure the irreversible removal of fissile material designated by each nuclear-weapon State as no longer required for military purposes.

Further, the Conference noted that 18 States parties to the NPT had yet to bring into force comprehensive safeguards agreements and urged them to do so. It encouraged all States parties to conclude and to bring into force additional protocols and to implement them provisionally pending their entry into force. The Conference called upon States parties to respect each country's choices and decisions in the field of peaceful uses of nuclear energy without jeopardizing its policies or international cooperation agreements and arrangements for peaceful uses of nuclear energy and its fuel cycle policies.

Regarding the Middle East, the Conference reaffirmed the importance of the resolution on the Middle East adopted by the 1995 Review and Extension Conference [YUN 1995, p. 189], which concerned the creation of a nuclear-weapon-free zone in that region. The Conference stressed that the 1995 resolution remained valid until its goals and objectives were achieved.

The Conference also recalled the reaffirmation, by the 2000 Review Conference, of the importance of Israel's accession to the NPT and the placement of all its nuclear facilities under comprehensive IAEA safeguards. It urged all States in the region to take steps and confidence-building measures to realize the objectives of the 1995 resolution and to refrain from undertaking any measures that precluded the achievement of that objective. Towards that goal, the Conference endorsed the convening of a conference in 2012, to be attended by all States in the Middle East, on the establishment of a zone free of nuclear weapons and all other weapons of mass destruction in the Middle East. The conference would take as its terms of reference the 1995 resolution on the Middle East.

On other regional issues, the Conference urged the Democratic People's Republic of Korea (DPRK) to fulfil the commitments under the six-party talks, including the complete and verifiable abandonment of all nuclear weapons and nuclear programmes in accordance with the September 2005 Joint Statement [YUN 2005, p. 450]. It also urged the country to return to the NPT and to its adherence with its IAEA safeguards agreement.

Communication. On 29 March, in identical letters [A/64/741-S/2010/178] to the Secretary-General and the Security Council, the Russian Federation transmitted declarations by the Ministers for Foreign Affairs of the States members of the Collective Security Treaty Organization in connection with the 2010 NPT Review Conference and the sixty-fifth anniversary of the victory in the Great Patriotic War of 1941–1945, in which they reaffirmed their support to the NPT and welcomed multilateral efforts to strengthen it.

Missiles

Pursuant to resolution 63/55 [YUN 2008, p. 576], the Secretary-General sought the views of Member States on the issue of missiles in all its aspects. Seven countries submitted their views (Iran, Iraq, Jordan, Lebanon, Mexico, Qatar, Serbia) [A/65/127 & Add.1,2].

Hague Code of Conduct

At the Ninth Regular Meeting of the Hague Code of Conduct against Ballistic Missile Proliferation (Vienna, 31 May–1 June), the 131 subscribing States discussed the strengthening of confidence-building measures, such as pre-launch notifications and annual declarations of ballistic missiles, space-launch vehicles and the importance of outreach activities to foster the universalization of the Code and thereby increase the number of subscribing States. The non-legally binding code of conduct was adopted in 2002 [YUN 2002, p. 504].

The General Assembly (see resolution 65/73 below) noted that 131 States had subscribed to the Hague Code of Conduct, invited States that had not subscribed to it to do so, and encouraged the exploration of further ways and means to deal with the problem of the proliferation of ballistic missiles capable of delivering weapons of mass destruction.

Communication. On 2 September [S/2010/464], Iraq transmitted to the Security Council a letter from the incumbent Chairman of the Hague Code of Conduct, which indicated that Iraq was a good example for countries that had not acceded to the Code.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 8 December [meeting 60], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the First Committee [A/65/410], adopted resolution 65/73 by recorded vote (162-1-17) [agenda item 97].

Confirming its commitment to the Declaration on International Cooperation in the Exploration and Use of Outer Space for the Benefit and in the Interest of All States, Taking into Particular Account the Needs of Developing Countries, as contained in the annex to its resolution 51/122 of 13 December 1996,

Recognizing that States should not be excluded from utilizing the benefits of space for peaceful purposes, but that in reaping such benefits and in conducting related cooperation they must not contribute to the proliferation of ballistic missiles capable of carrying weapons of mass destruction,

Mindful of the need to combat the proliferation of weapons of mass destruction and their means of delivery,

Non-proliferation of weapons of mass destruction

Security Council Committee on WMDs

Pursuant to resolution 1540(2004) [YUN 2004, p. 544], the Security Council in 2004 set up a Committee to report to the Council on the implementation of that resolution, which dealt with the non-proliferation of weapons of mass destruction (WMDs). The Committee’s mandate was extended until 25 April 2011 by resolutions 1673(2006) [YUN 2006, p. 635] and 1810(2008) [YUN 2008, p. 585].

On 29 January, the Committee submitted its final document [S/2010/52] on the 2009 comprehensive review of the status of implementation of resolution 1540(2004). On the same day, the Committee communicated to the Council [S/2010/53] that it could not meet the deadline for submitting its programme of work, which would be adopted by 26 February.

On that date [S/2010/112], the Committee submitted to the Council its programme of work for the period from 1 February 2010 to 31 January 2011, which included: taking forward the recommendations of the comprehensive review of the status of implementation of resolution 1540(2004); examining the information on the status of implementation of the resolution; promoting implementation of the resolution through outreach, dialogue, assistance and co-operation; enhancing cooperation between the Committee and other international organizations, including the Security Council committees established pursuant to resolutions 1267(1999) [YUN 1999, p. 265] and 1373(2001) [YUN 2001, p. 61]; encouraging and taking full advantage of voluntary financial contributions to assist States in addressing their needs for the implementation of resolution 1540(2004); and making funding mechanisms more effective.

The Chairman of the Committee briefed the Security Council on 11 May [S/PV.6310] and 15 November [S/PV.6424]. During the year, reports on implementation of the resolution were submitted by Côte d’Ivoire [S/AC.44/2004/(02)/157], Germany, Ireland [S/AC.44/2007/24], Poland [S/AC.44/2007/26], Portugal, Togo [S/AC.44/2007/15] and Uganda [S/AC.44/2007/25].

New types of WMDs

Conference on Disarmament. The issue of radiological weapons had been on the agenda of the Conference on Disarmament since 1979. Four informal meetings on agenda item 5, entitled “New types of weapons of mass destruction and new systems of such weapons; radiological weapons” (17 and 24 June and 1 and 8 July) [CD/1899, annex V] focused on three issues: prohibition of new WMDs, radiological weapons, and nuclear terrorism. Some delegations emphasized the importance of upholding international humanitarian law norms while developing new weapons and new systems of such weapons. One delegation made reference to Additional Protocol I to the Geneva Conventions of 1949, which obliged States to evaluate the legality of new types of weapons. An appeal was made to strengthen the consensus around the issue in the General Assembly. Several delegations suggested that the agenda item was ripe to start negotiations. Delegations agreed that in order to identify new WMDs and new types of similar destructive weapons, they should have at their disposal a clear definition of WMDs.

Terrorism and WMDs

During the year, the United Nations promoted international action against terrorism through collaborative efforts with Member States and regional and international organizations, and through the work of the Counter-Terrorism Committee (see p. 72) and the Al-Qaida and Taliban Sanctions Committee (see p. 361).

Report of Secretary-General. Pursuant to General Assembly resolution 64/38 [YUN 2009, p. 522], the Secretary-General in July [A/65/99 & Add.1] presented the views of 15 Member States and 15 international organizations, including UN agencies, on measures they had taken to prevent terrorists from acquiring WMDs, their means of delivery, and related materials and technologies.

IAEA report. The IAEA Director General, in a report [GOV/2010/42-GC(54)/9] issued in August in response to resolution GC(53)/RES/11 [YUN 2009, p. 522], presented activities undertaken by the Agency and progress in the area of nuclear security and against nuclear terrorism during the period July 2009–June 2010.

The importance of nuclear security was emphasized by the Nuclear Security Summit (Washington, D.C., 12–13 April), which brought together leaders from 47 States; the Summit's Communiqué recognized "the essential role of the IAEA in the international nuclear security framework". The Final Document of the 2010 NPT Review Conference also recognized the importance of the highest possible standards of nuclear security. The Conference called on States parties to promote the sharing of best practices in the area of nuclear safety and security, including through dialogue with the nuclear industry and the private sector.

IAEA's Illicit Trafficking Database (ITDB) programme continued to expand, with 110 participant States as at 30 June. From 1 July 2009 to 30 June 2010, States reported 222 incidents to ITDB; 120 of those were reported to have occurred during the period under review and the remaining 102 were reports of prior incidents. Twenty-one of the incidents reported involved such activities as unauthorized possession and/or attempts to sell or smuggle nuclear material or radioactive sources. Sixty-one incidents involved the theft or loss of nuclear or other radioactive material; in 58 per cent of those incidents, the material had not been reported as recovered. One hundred and forty incidents involved unauthorized activities without apparent relation to criminal activity; those included the detection of nuclear material or radioactive sources disposed of in unauthorized ways, the detection of radioactively contaminated material, the recovery of orphan sources and the discovery of nuclear material or radioactive sources in unauthorized or undeclared storage.

The Agency's integrated nuclear security support plans helped States consolidate their nuclear security needs into integrated plans for nuclear security improvements and assistance; as at 30 June, 52 such plans had been developed. The Agency's newly developed Nuclear Security Information Portal supported nuclear security efforts worldwide by providing an interactive platform to support cooperation, facilitate implementation of joint activities and share information. The Agency offered services to evaluate and assess nuclear security arrangements in States through its nuclear security missions; 21 evaluation and advisory nuclear security missions were carried out between mid-2009 and mid-2010.

Approximately 1,600 people from more than 100 States received nuclear security training. Since the inauguration in May 2009 of new nuclear security training facilities at the Interdepartmental Special Training Centre in Obninsk, Russian Federation—the Agency's largest project in physical protection capacity-building—the Agency had delivered five training courses. As at June 2010, 48 engineers specializing in nuclear security had graduated from the Agency-supported education programme at the Sevastopol National University of Nuclear Energy and Technology in Ukraine, which was the Agency's earliest partner in establishing nuclear security education. The Agency assisted in the repatriation of high enriched uranium (HEU) research reactor fuel, at the request of States; it was an implementing partner in the repatriation of approximately 30 kilograms (kg) of fresh HEU fuel and nearly 350 kg of spent fuel. Additionally, the Agency was involved, in an auxiliary capacity, in other HEU repatriation shipments from research reactors, involving more than 80 kg of fresh fuel and nearly 60 kg of spent fuel. The Agency also assisted States in border control by providing instruments for radiation detection.

Noting also that the Group of Eight, the European Union, the Regional Forum of the Association of Southeast Asian Nations and others have taken into account in their deliberations the dangers posed by the likely acquisition by terrorists of weapons of mass destruction and the need for international cooperation in combating it, and that the Global Initiative to Combat Nuclear Terrorism has been launched jointly by the Russian Federation and the United States of America,

Noting further the holding of the Nuclear Security Summit on 12 and 13 April 2010 in Washington, D.C.,

Acknowledging the consideration of issues relating to terrorism and weapons of mass destruction by the Advisory Board on Disarmament Matters,

Taking note of the relevant resolutions adopted by the General Conference of the International Atomic Energy Agency at its fifty-fourth regular session,

Taking note also of the 2005 World Summit Outcome adopted at the high-level plenary meeting of the General Assembly in September 2005 and the adoption of the United Nations Global Counter-Terrorism Strategy on 8 September 2006,

Taking note further of the report of the Secretary-General, submitted pursuant to paragraph 5 of resolution 64/38,

Mindful of the urgent need for addressing, within the United Nations framework and through international cooperation, this threat to humanity,

Emphasizing that progress is urgently needed in the area of disarmament and non-proliferation in order to maintain international peace and security and to contribute to global efforts against terrorism,

1. Calls upon all Member States to support international efforts to prevent terrorists from acquiring weapons of mass destruction and their means of delivery;

2. Appeals to all Member States to consider early accession to and ratification of the International Convention for the Suppression of Acts of Nuclear Terrorism;

6. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its sixty-sixth session the item entitled "Measures to prevent terrorists from acquiring weapons of mass destruction".

Also on 8 December [meeting 60], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the First Committee [A/65/410], adopted resolution 65/74 without vote [agenda item 97 (ff)].

Preventing the acquisition by terrorists of radioactive sources

The General Assembly,

Recognizing the essential contribution of radioactive materials and sources to social and economic development, and the benefits drawn from their use for all States,

Recognizing also the determination of the international community to combat terrorism, as evident in relevant General Assembly and Security Council resolutions,

Deeply concerned by the threat of terrorism and the risk that terrorists may acquire, traffic in or use radioactive materials or sources in radiological dispersion devices,

Deeply concerned also by the potential threat to human health and the environment that would result from the use of such devices by terrorists,

Noting that actions of the international community to combat the proliferation of weapons of mass destruction and prevent access by non-State actors to weapons of mass destruction and related material, notably Security Council resolution 1540(2004) of 28 April 2004, constitute contributions to the protection against nuclear and radiological terrorism,

Stressing the importance of the role of the International Atomic Energy Agency in promoting and reinforcing the safety and security of radioactive materials and sources, in particular by supporting the improvement of national legal and regulatory infrastructure and by establishing technical guidance,

Stressing also the contribution of the International Atomic Energy Agency to preventing illicit trafficking in radioactive materials and identifying vulnerabilities in security systems through, inter alia, the Illicit Trafficking Database and its work in the field of nuclear forensics,

Welcoming also the fact that Member States have taken multilateral actions to address this issue, as reflected in General Assembly resolution 61/8 of 30 October 2006,

Noting the various international efforts and partnerships to enhance nuclear security and to implement measures contributing to nuclear material security in relation to the security of radioactive substances, and encouraging the efforts to secure those materials,

Mindful of the responsibilities of every Member State, in accordance with international obligations, to maintain effective nuclear safety and security, asserting that responsibility for nuclear security within a State rests entirely with that State, and noting the important contribution of international cooperation in supporting the efforts of States to fulfil their responsibilities,

Mindful also of the urgent need to address, within the United Nations framework and through international cooperation, the rising concern for international security,

1. Calls upon Member States to support international efforts to prevent the acquisition and use by terrorists of radioactive materials and sources, and, if necessary, suppress such acts, in accordance with their national legal authorities and legislation and consistent with international law;

2. Urges Member States to take and strengthen national measures, as appropriate, to prevent the acquisition and use by terrorists of radioactive materials and sources, as well as terrorist attacks on nuclear plants and facilities which would result in radioactive releases, and, if necessary, to suppress such acts, in particular by taking effective measures to account for, secure and physically protect such facilities, materials and sources in accordance with their international obligations;

Multilateralism in disarmament and non-proliferation

Pursuant to General Assembly resolution 64/34 [YUN 2009, p. 523], the Secretary-General, in July and September [A/65/124 & Add.1], presented replies received from seven Member States (Brazil, Cuba, Georgia, Jordan, Mexico, Qatar, Turkmenistan) regarding their views on the promotion of multilateralism in the area of disarmament and non-proliferation.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 8 December [meeting 60], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the First Committee [A/65/410], adopted resolution 65/54 by recorded vote (129-5-49) [agenda item 97 (p)].

Promotion of multilateralism in the area of disarmament and non-proliferation

The General Assembly,

Determined to foster strict respect for the purposes and principles enshrined in the Charter of the United Nations,

Recalling its resolution 56/24 T of 29 November 2001 on multilateral cooperation in the area of disarmament and non-proliferation and global efforts against terrorism and other relevant resolutions, as well as its resolutions 57/63 of 22 November 2002, 58/44 of 8 December 2003, 59/69 of 3 December 2004, 60/59 of 8 December 2005, 61/62 of 6 December 2006, 62/27 of 5 December 2007, 63/50 of 2 December 2008 and 64/34 of 2 December 2009 on the promotion of multilateralism in the area of disarmament and non-proliferation,

Recalling also the purpose of the United Nations to maintain international peace and security and, to that end, to take effective collective measures for the prevention and removal of threats to the peace and for the suppression of acts of aggression or other breaches of the peace, and to bring about by peaceful means, and in conformity with the principles of justice and international law, adjustment or settlement of international disputes or situations which might lead to a breach of the peace, as enshrined in the Charter,

Recalling further the United Nations Millennium Declaration, which states, inter alia, that the responsibility for managing worldwide economic and social development, as well as threats to international peace and security, must be shared among the nations of the world and should be exercised multilaterally and that, as the most universal and most representative organization in the world, the United Nations must play the central role,

Convinced that, in the globalization era and with the information revolution, arms regulation, non-proliferation and disarmament problems are more than ever the concern of all countries in the world, which are affected in one way or another by these problems and, therefore, should have the possibility to participate in the negotiations that arise to tackle them,

Bearing in mind the existence of a broad structure of disarmament and arms regulation agreements resulting from non-discriminatory and transparent multilateral negotiations with the participation of a large number of countries, regardless of their size and power,

Aware of the need to advance further in the field of arms regulation, non-proliferation and disarmament on the basis of universal, multilateral, non-discriminatory and transparent negotiations with the goal of reaching general and complete disarmament under strict international control,

Recognizing the complementarity of bilateral, plurilateral and multilateral negotiations on disarmament,

Recognizing also that the proliferation and development of weapons of mass destruction, including nuclear weapons, are among the most immediate threats to international peace and security which need to be dealt with, with the highest priority,

Considering that the multilateral disarmament agreements provide the mechanism for States parties to consult one another and to cooperate in solving any problems which may arise in relation to the objective of, or in the application of, the provisions of the agreements and that such consultations and cooperation may also be undertaken through appropriate international procedures within the framework of the United Nations and in accordance with the Charter,

Stressing that international cooperation, the peaceful settlement of disputes, dialogue and confidence-building measures would make an essential contribution to the creation of multilateral and bilateral friendly relations among peoples and nations,

Being concerned at the continuous erosion of multilateralism in the field of arms regulation, non-proliferation and disarmament, and recognizing that a resort to unilateral actions by Member States in resolving their security concerns would jeopardize international peace and security and undermine confidence in the international security system as well as the foundations of the United Nations itself,

Noting that the Fifteenth Summit Conference of Heads of State and Government of the Movement of Non-Aligned Countries, held in Sharm el-Sheikh, Egypt, from 11 to 16 July 2009, welcomed the adoption of resolution 63/50 on the promotion of multilateralism in the area of disarmament and non-proliferation, and underlined the fact that multilateralism and multilaterally agreed solutions, in accordance with the Charter, provide the only sustainable method of addressing disarmament and international security issues,

Reaffirming the absolute validity of multilateral diplomacy in the field of disarmament and non-proliferation, and determined to promote multilateralism as an essential way to develop arms regulation and disarmament negotiations,

1. Reaffirms multilateralism as the core principle in negotiations in the area of disarmament and non-proliferation with a view to maintaining and strengthening universal norms and enlarging their scope;

2. Also reaffirms multilateralism as the core principle in resolving disarmament and non-proliferation concerns;

3. Urges the participation of all interested States in multilateral negotiations on arms regulation, non-proliferation and disarmament in a non-discriminatory and transparent manner;

4. Underlines the importance of preserving the existing agreements on arms regulation and disarmament, which constitute an expression of the results of international cooperation and multilateral negotiations in response to the challenges facing mankind;

5. Calls once again upon all Member States to renew and fulfil their individual and collective commitments to multilateral cooperation as an important means of pursuing and achieving their common objectives in the area of disarmament and non-proliferation;

6. Requests the States parties to the relevant instruments on weapons of mass destruction to consult and cooperate among themselves in resolving their concerns with regard to cases of non-compliance as well as on implementation, in accordance with the procedures defined in those instruments, and to refrain from resorting or threatening to resort to unilateral actions or directing unverified non-compliance accusations against one another to resolve their concerns;

7. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General containing the replies of Member States on the promotion of multilateralism in the area of disarmament and non-proliferation, submitted pursuant to resolution 64/34;

8. Requests the Secretary-General to seek the views of Member States on the issue of the promotion of multilateralism in the area of disarmament and non-proliferation and to submit a report thereon to the General Assembly at its sixty-sixth session;

9. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its sixty-sixth session the item entitled "Promotion of multilateralism in the area of disarmament and non-proliferation".

IAEA safeguards

The verification programme of the International Atomic Energy Agency (IAEA) remained at the core of multilateral efforts to curb the proliferation of nuclear weapons. The Agency had an essential verification role under the NPT as well as other treaties, such as those establishing nuclear weapons-free zones.

Comprehensive safeguards agreements, concluded pursuant to the NPT, and the Model Additional Protocols to those agreements, which granted the Agency complementary verification authority, had been approved by the IAEA Board of Governors in 1997 [YUN 1997, p. 486]; they remained the principal legal instruments strengthening the Agency's safeguards regime.

During the year, safeguards were applied for 175 States with safeguards agreements in force with the Agency. States for which both comprehensive safeguards agreements and additional protocols were in force numbered 99. For 57 of those States, the Agency concluded that all nuclear material remained in peaceful activities. For the remaining 42 States, the Agency was able to conclude only that declared nuclear material remained in peaceful nuclear activities, as it had not completed all the necessary evaluations under those States' respective additional protocols.

For 68 States with a comprehensive safeguards agreement in force but no additional protocol, the Agency was only able to draw the conclusion that declared nuclear material remained in peaceful nuclear activities. Safeguards were also implemented with regard to declared nuclear material in selected facilities in the five nuclear-weapon States with voluntary offer agreements. For those five States, the Agency concluded that nuclear material to which safeguards were applied in selected facilities remained in peaceful activities or had been withdrawn as provided for in the agreements. The Agency could not draw any safeguards conclusions for 17 NPT non-nuclear-weapon States without safeguards agreements in force.

Democratic People's Republic of Korea

The Agency had not implemented safeguards in the DPRK since 2002, and therefore could not draw any safeguards conclusion regarding nuclear material in that country. Since 15 April 2009, the Agency had not implemented any measures under the ad hoc monitoring and verification arrangement agreed between the Agency and the DPRK, and foreseen in the Initial Actions agreed at the six-party talks (China, DPRK, Japan, Republic of Korea, Russian Federation, United States). Although not implementing any verification in the field, the Agency continued to monitor the country's nuclear activities by using open source information, satellite imagery and trade information. In that regard, the Agency learned with regret of the report on the uranium enrichment facility at Yongbyong.

The Agency continued to consolidate its knowledge of the DPRK's nuclear programme with the objective of maintaining operational readiness to resume safeguards implementation in the country, to implement ad hoc monitoring and verification arrangements, and to resolve any issues that might have arisen due to the long absence of Agency safeguards. In 2010, the Agency continued to regard the DPRK nuclear issue and that country's nuclear tests as a serious threat to the international nuclear non-proliferation regime and regional and international peace and stability.

General Conference. In a 24 September resolution [GC(54)/RES/12] on implementation of the NPT safeguards agreement between the Agency and the DPRK, the General Conference stressed its desire for a diplomatic resolution of the DPRK nuclear issue so as to achieve the complete, verifiable and irreversible denuclearization of the Korean peninsula; condemned the DPRK nuclear test on 25 May 2009 in violation of Security Council resolutions; stressed the importance of Member States fully implementing their obligations pursuant to Council resolutions 1718(2006) [YUN 2006, p. 444] and 1874(2009) [YUN 2009, p. 384], including the DPRK's non-proliferation obligations; urged the DPRK not to conduct any further nuclear test and to comply with its obligations under relevant Council resolutions; supported the six-party talks as an effective mechanism for dealing with the DPRK nuclear issue; called upon the DPRK to comply with the NPT and to cooperate with IAEA; deplored the DPRK's actions to cease all cooperation with IAEA; and supported the international community's peaceful efforts to address the challenge posed by the DPRK.

Iran

The IAEA Director General submitted to the Board of Governors four reports [GOV/2010/10; GOV/2010/28; GOV/2010/46; GOV/2010/62] on Iran's implementation of the NPT safeguards agreement and relevant Security Council resolutions—1737(2006) [YUN 2006, p. 436], 1747(2007) [YUN 2007, p. 374], 1803(2008) [YUN 2008, p. 409] and 1835(2008) [ibid., p. 414].

During the year, the Agency continued to verify the non-diversion of declared nuclear material in Iran; however, Iran did not provide the necessary cooperation to permit the Agency to confirm that all the nuclear material in the country was in peaceful activities. Iran had not implemented the requirements contained in the resolutions of the Board of Governors and the Security Council, including implementation of the Additional Protocol, which were essential to building confidence in the exclusively peaceful purpose of Iran's nuclear programme and to resolving outstanding questions. In particular,

Iran needed to cooperate in clarifying outstanding issues which gave rise to concerns about possible military dimensions to its nuclear programme, including by providing access to all sites, equipment, persons and documents requested by the Agency. In addition, contrary to the resolutions of the Board of Governors and the Council, Iran had not suspended its enrichment-related activities, and had continued with the construction of the IR-40 reactor at Arak and with heavy water related activities. The Agency had not been permitted to take samples of the heavy water stored at the uranium conversion facility at Esfahan, and had not been provided with access to the heavy water production plant at Arak. While Iran had stated that it had not suspended those activities, without full access to those two facilities IAEA was unable to verify such statements. The Agency requested Iran to fully implement its safeguards agreement and its other obligations, including implementation of its Additional Protocol.

On 9 June, the Security Council, by resolution 1929(2010) (see p. 396), imposed a fourth round of sanctions against Iran, while demanding that the country suspend its enrichment-related activities and resolve outstanding concerns over the nature of its nuclear programme.

(For information on UN concern with Iran's nuclear programme and related sanctions, see p. 405).

Syrian Arab Republic

The IAEA Director General submitted to the Board of Governors four reports [GOV/2010/11; GOV/2010/29; GOV/2010/47; GOV/2010/63] on Syria's implementation of the NPT safeguards agreement. The reports noted that Syria had not cooperated with the Agency since June 2008 in connection with the unresolved issues related to the Dair Alzour site and the other three locations allegedly functionally related to it. As a consequence, the Agency had not been able to make progress towards resolving the outstanding issues related to those sites. With the passage of time, some of the information concerning the Dair Alzour site was deteriorating or had been lost. It was critical, therefore, that Syria cooperated with the Agency on those unresolved safeguards implementation issues. Concerning the Miniature Neutron Source Reactor (MNSR), Syria's responses under the agreed plan of action did not resolve the inconsistencies identified by the Agency. Conclusions about the source of the uranium particles at MNSR would be possible only once Syria had provided clarification regarding outstanding inconsistencies. The Agency urged Syria to bring into force an Additional Protocol to its safeguards agreement, which would facilitate the Agency's work in verifying the correctness and completeness of Syria's declarations.

Middle East

Report of Director General. In a report issued in August on the application of IAEA safeguards in the Middle East [GOV/2010/48-GC(54)/13], the IAEA Director General noted that all States in the region except Israel were parties to the NPT and had undertaken to accept comprehensive Agency safeguards. There continued to be a long-standing and fundamental difference between Israel and the other States of the region with regard to the application of comprehensive Agency safeguards to all nuclear activities. Israel took the view that Agency safeguards, as well as all other regional security issues, should be addressed in the framework of a regional security and arms control dialogue in the context of a multilateral peace process; whereas the other States emphasized that they were all parties to the NPT and that there was no automatic sequence that linked the application of comprehensive safeguards to all nuclear activities, or the establishment of a nuclear-weapon-free zone, to the prior conclusion of a peace settlement. The Director General stated that he would continue with his consultations regarding the early application of comprehensive safeguards on all nuclear activities in the region.

General Conference. In a resolution of 24 September [GC(54)/RES/13], the IAEA General Conference affirmed the need for all States in the region to accept the application of full-scope Agency safeguards to all their nuclear activities as a confidence-building measure, and to take steps to establish a nuclear-weapon-free zone. It requested the IAEA Director General to continue consultations with the States of the region to facilitate the early application of full-scope Agency safeguards to all nuclear activities.

Report of Secretary-General. Pursuant to General Assembly resolution 64/66 [YUN 2009, p. 531], the Secretary-General in October reported [A/65/121 (Part II)] that apart from the IAEA resolution on the application of Agency safeguards in the Middle East, he had not received any additional information since his 2009 report [YUN 2009, p. 531].

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 8 December [meeting 60], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the First Committee [A/65/413], adopted resolution 65/88 by recorded vote (172-6-8) [agenda item 100].

The risk of nuclear proliferation in the Middle East

The General Assembly,

Bearing in mind its relevant resolutions,

Taking note of the relevant resolutions adopted by the General Conference of the International Atomic Energy Agency, the latest of which is resolution GC(54)/RES/13, adopted on 24 September 2010,

Cognizant that the proliferation of nuclear weapons in the region of the Middle East would pose a serious threat to international peace and security,

Mindful of the immediate need for placing all nuclear facilities in the region of the Middle East under full-scope safeguards of the Agency,

Recalling the decision on principles and objectives for nuclear non-proliferation and disarmament adopted by the 1995 Review and Extension Conference of the Parties to the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons on 11 May 1995, in which the Conference urged universal adherence to the Treaty as an urgent priority and called upon all States not yet parties to the Treaty to accede to it at the earliest date, particularly those States that operate unsafeguarded nuclear facilities,

Recognizing with satisfaction that, in the Final Document of the 2000 Review Conference of the Parties to the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons, the Conference undertook to make determined efforts towards the achievement of the goal of universality of the Treaty, called upon those remaining States not parties to the Treaty to accede to it, thereby accepting an international legally binding commitment not to acquire nuclear weapons or nuclear explosive devices and to accept Agency safeguards on all their nuclear activities, and underlined the necessity of universal adherence to the Treaty and of strict compliance by all parties with their obligations under the Treaty,

Recalling the resolution on the Middle East adopted by the 1995 Review and Extension Conference on 11 May 1995, in which the Conference noted with concern the continued existence in the Middle East of unsafeguarded nuclear facilities, reaffirmed the importance of the early realization of universal adherence to the Treaty and called upon all States in the Middle East that had not yet done so, without exception, to accede to the Treaty as soon as possible and to place all their nuclear facilities under full-scope Agency safeguards,

Noting with satisfaction that, in the Final Document of the 2010 Review Conference of the Parties to the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons, the Conference emphasized the importance of a process leading to full implementation of the 1995 resolution on the Middle East and decided, inter alia, that the Secretary-General of the United Nations and the co-sponsors of the 1995 resolution, in consultation with the States of the region, would convene a conference in 2012, to be attended by all States of the Middle East, on the establishment of a Middle East zone free of nuclear weapons and all other weapons of mass destruction, on the basis of arrangements freely arrived at by the States of the region and with the full support and engagement of the nuclear-weapon States,

Recalling that Israel remains the only State in the Middle East that has not yet become a party to the Treaty,

Concerned about the threats posed by the proliferation of nuclear weapons to the security and stability of the Middle East region,

Stressing the importance of taking confidence-building measures, in particular the establishment of a nuclear-weapon-free zone in the Middle East, in order to enhance peace and security in the region and to consolidate the global non-proliferation regime,

Emphasizing the need for all parties directly concerned to seriously consider taking the practical and urgent steps required for the implementation of the proposal to establish a nuclear-weapon-free zone in the region of the Middle East in accordance with the relevant resolutions of the General Assembly and, as a means of promoting this objective, inviting the countries concerned to adhere to the Treaty and, pending the establishment of the zone, to agree to place all their nuclear activities under Agency safeguards,

Noting that one hundred and eighty-two States have signed the Comprehensive Nuclear-Test-Ban Treaty, including a number of States in the region,

1. Welcomes the conclusions on the Middle East of the 2010 Review Conference of the Parties to the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons;

2. Reaffirms the importance of Israel's accession to the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons and placement of all its nuclear facilities under comprehensive International Atomic Energy Agency safeguards, in realizing the goal of universal adherence to the Treaty in the Middle East;

3. Calls upon that State to accede to the Treaty without further delay, not to develop, produce, test or otherwise acquire nuclear weapons, to renounce possession of nuclear weapons and to place all its unsafeguarded nuclear facilities under full-scope Agency safeguards as an important confidence-building measure among all States of the region and as a step towards enhancing peace and security;

4. Requests the Secretary-General to report to the General Assembly at its sixty-sixth session on the implementation of the present resolution;

5. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its sixty-sixth session the item entitled "The risk of nuclear proliferation in the Middle East".

RECORDED VOTE ON RESOLUTION 65/88:

Radioactive waste

IAEA safety standards provided the global reference for the high safety level required for the use of nuclear power and other applications. In 2010, the Agency established the International Network of Laboratories for Nuclear Waste Characterization (LABONET) to improve the effectiveness of information exchange on good practices in radioactive waste management. Network participants were drawn from States with both advanced and limited nuclear programmes. Steps were taken to improve linkages between LABONET and other Agency networks addressing near surface disposal, deep geological disposal, the decommissioning of nuclear facilities and environmental remediation of contaminated sites.

The Contact Expert Group for International Radwaste Projects in the Russian Federation, established under the auspices of the Agency in 1996 to promote international cooperation and assistance in resolving problems caused by the nuclear legacy of the Cold War, as at 31 December had defuelled and dismantled 191 old Russian nuclear submarines; it was now focusing on the safe removal of submarine spent fuel that had been stockpiled at former navy bases in the north-western and far-eastern regions of the country. The Group had overseen the removal of all radioisotope thermoelectric generators previously used for navigation purposes on the country's north-west and Pacific coasts and was working to establish two regional centres for the conditioning and storage of legacy radioactive waste.

The Agency completed a report, Assessment and Proposals for Uranium Production Legacy Sites in Central Asia: An International Approach, which identified the needs and priorities for environmental impact assessments at legacy uranium production sites in Central Asia. In October, the Agency launched the International Working Forum on Regulatory Supervision of Legacy Sites, which provided support to regulators in addressing legacy site issues.

To assist countries lacking the resources to ensure adequate long-term management and disposal of radioactive waste, the Agency developed the borehole disposal system, a simple and economically viable option. Implementation of that option was begun at a demonstration project in Ghana.

The International Conference on Management of Spent Fuel from Nuclear Power Reactors (Vienna, 31 May–4 June) addressed national policy, safety and licensing, transport, medium- and long-term storage, reprocessing and disposal. It also reviewed technical issues associated with higher burnup fuel and mixed oxide fuel, and dealt with damaged and degraded spent fuel.

Nuclear-weapon-free zones

Second Conference of Nuclear-Weapon-Free Zones and Mongolia

On the occasion of the 2010 NPT Review Conference, the States parties and signatories to the Treaties of Tlatelolco (1967), Rarotonga (1985), Bangkok (1995), Pelindaba (1996) and Central Asia (2006), which had established nuclear-weapon-free zones, as well as Mongolia—a nuclear-weapon-free State—met in New York on 30 April [NWFZM/CONF.2010/1] to strengthen the nuclear-weapon-free zones regimes, contribute to nuclear disarmament and nuclear non-proliferation, and analyse ways of cooperating that could promote the achievement of a nuclear-weapon-free world. The meeting advocated for a denuclearized Korean Peninsula; expressed support for the establishment of nuclear-weapon-free zones in Central Europe and the Middle East; and recognized the importance of multilateralism and the role played by the United Nations in the area of nuclear disarmament and non-proliferation and peaceful uses of nuclear energy. The first meeting of the five nuclear-weapon-free zones and Mongolia was held in Ulaanbaatar in 2009 [YUN, p. 540].

Africa

The African Nuclear-Weapon-Free Zone Treaty (Treaty of Pelindaba) [YUN 1995, p. 203] entered into force in 2009 [YUN 2009, p. 533]. As at 31 December 2010, the Treaty had been ratified by 31 countries; 19 of 50 signatory States had yet to ratify. The African Nuclear-Weapon-Free Zone encompassed more than 30 million square kilometres, making it the largest of the five nuclear-weapon-free zones in the world.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 8 December [meeting 60], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the First Committee [A/65/402], adopted resolution 65/39 without vote [agenda item 89].

African Nuclear-Weapon-Free Zone Treaty

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 51/53 of 10 December 1996 and 56/17 of 29 November 2001 and all its other relevant resolutions, as well as those of the Organization of African Unity,

Recalling also the signing of the African Nuclear-Weapon-Free Zone Treaty (Treaty of Pelindaba) in Cairo on 11 April 1996,

Recalling further the Cairo Declaration adopted on that occasion, which emphasized that nuclear-weapon-free zones, especially in regions of tension, such as the Middle East, enhance global and regional peace and security,

Recalling the statement made by the President of the Security Council on behalf of the members of the Council on 12 April 1996, affirming that the signature of the Treaty constituted an important contribution by the African countries to the maintenance of international peace and security,

Considering that the establishment of nuclear-weapon-free zones, especially in the Middle East, would enhance the security of Africa and the viability of the African nuclear-weapon-free zone,

1. Recalls with satisfaction the entry into force of the African Nuclear-Weapon-Free Zone Treaty (Treaty of Pelindaba) on 15 July 2009;

2. Calls upon African States that have not yet done so to sign and ratify the Treaty as soon as possible;

3. Expresses its appreciation to the nuclear-weapon States that have signed the Protocols to the Treaty that concern them, and calls upon those that have not yet ratified the Protocols that concern them to do so as soon as possible;

4. Calls upon the States contemplated in Protocol III to the Treaty that have not yet done so to take all necessary measures to ensure the speedy application of the Treaty to territories for which they are, de jure or de facto, internationally responsible and which lie within the limits of the geographical zone established in the Treaty;

5. Calls upon the African States parties to the Treaty on the Non Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons that have not yet done so to conclude comprehensive safeguards agreements with the International Atomic Energy Agency pursuant to the Treaty, thereby satisfying the requirements of article 9 (b) of and annex II to the Treaty of Pelindaba, and to conclude additional protocols to their safeguards agreements on the basis of the Model Protocol approved by the Board of Governors of the Agency on 15 May 1997;

6. Expresses its gratitude to the Secretary-General, the Chairperson of the African Union Commission and the Director General of the International Atomic Energy Agency for the diligence with which they have rendered effective assistance to the signatories to the Treaty;

7. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its sixty-sixth session the item entitled “African Nuclear-Weapon-Free Zone Treaty”.

Asia

Central Asia

The Central Asian Nuclear-Weapon-Free Zone, comprising Kazakhstan, Kyrgyzstan, Tajikistan, Turkmenistan and Uzbekistan, entered into force in 2009 [YUN 2009, p. 534], just over two years after the signing of the treaty among the five Central Asian States [YUN 2006, p. 644]. Encompassing an area of roughly 4 million square kilometres, the treaty covered the smallest of the nuclear-weapon-free zones, but the only one where nuclear weapons had previously existed. It was the first such treaty to oblige participating countries to accept enhanced IAEA safeguards on their nuclear material and activities.

Communications. In May, the five Central Asian States submitted to the 2010 NPT Review Conference two working papers: on the Treaty on a Nuclear-Weapon-Free Zone in Central Asia [NPT/CONF.2010/WP.54] and on the environmental consequences of uranium mining [NPT/CONF.2010/WP.73].

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 8 December [meeting 60], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the First Committee [A/65/410], adopted resolution 65/49 by recorded vote (144-3-36) [agenda item 97 (i)].

Treaty on a Nuclear-Weapon-Free Zone in Central Asia

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 52/38 S of 9 December 1997, 53/77 A of 4 December 1998, 55/33 W of 20 November 2000, 57/69 of 22 November 2002, 61/88 of 6 December 2006 and 63/63 of 2 December 2008, and its decisions 54/417 of 1 December 1999, 56/412 of 29 November 2001, 58/518 of 8 December 2003, 59/513 of 3 December 2004 and 60/516 of 8 December 2005,

Convinced that the establishment of nuclear-weapon-free zones contributes to the achievement of general and complete disarmament, and emphasizing the importance of internationally recognized treaties on the establishment of such zones in different regions of the world in the strengthening of the non-proliferation regime,

Considering that the Treaty on a Nuclear-Weapon-Free Zone in Central Asia, on the basis of arrangements freely arrived at among the States of the region, constitutes an important step towards strengthening the nuclear non-proliferation regime and ensuring regional and international peace and security,

Considering also that the Treaty on a Nuclear-Weapon-Free Zone in Central Asia is an effective contribution to combating international terrorism and preventing nuclear materials and technologies from falling into the hands of non-State actors, primarily terrorists,

Reaffirming the universally recognized role of the United Nations in the establishment of nuclear-weapon-free zones,

Emphasizing the role of the Treaty on a Nuclear-Weapon-Free Zone in Central Asia in promoting cooperation in the peaceful uses of nuclear energy and in the environmental rehabilitation of territories affected by radioactive contamination, and the importance of stepping up efforts to ensure the safe and reliable storage of radioactive waste in the Central Asian States,

Recognizing the importance of the Treaty on a Nuclear-Weapon-Free Zone in Central Asia, and emphasizing its significance in the attainment of peace and security,

1. Welcomes the entry into force on 21 March 2009 of the Treaty on a Nuclear-Weapon-Free Zone in Central Asia;

2. Notes the readiness of the Central Asian countries to continue consultations with the nuclear-weapon States on a number of provisions of the Treaty on a Nuclear-Weapon-Free Zone in Central Asia;

3. Welcomes the submission at the 2010 Review Conference of the Parties to the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons of two working papers, on the Treaty on a Nuclear-Weapon-Free Zone in Central Asia and on the environmental consequences of uranium mining;

4. Also welcomes the convening in Ashgabat on 15 October 2009 of the first consultative meeting of States parties to the Treaty on a Nuclear-Weapon-Free Zone in Central Asia, which identified joint activities by the Central Asian States to ensure fulfilment of the obligations set out in the Treaty and to develop cooperation on disarmament issues with international bodies;

5. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its sixty-seventh session an item entitled "Treaty on a Nuclear-Weapon-Free Zone in Central Asia".

Mongolia

Report of Secretary-General. Pursuant to General Assembly resolution 63/56 [YUN 2008, p. 600], the Secretary-General in July submitted a report [A/65/136] reviewing new developments and UN assistance to Mongolia to consolidate the country's international security and nuclear-weapon-free status. Mongolia had continued to receive international recognition for its nuclear-weapon-free status and to promote other nuclear disarmament and non-proliferation objectives. The country had continued to seek the institutionalization of its nuclear-weapon-free status, and in that regard it had undertaken discussions with its two immediate neighbours, China and the Russian Federation, towards the conclusion of a legal instrument that would include a separate draft protocol to be signed by the other nuclear-weapon States.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 8 December [meeting 60], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the First Committee [A/65/410], adopted resolution 65/70 without vote [agenda item 97 (f)].

Mongolia's international security and nuclear-weapon-free status

The General Assembly,

South-East Asia

The 10 States parties to the Treaty on the South-East Asia Nuclear-Weapon-Free Zone (Bangkok Treaty), which had opened for signature in 1995 [YUN 1995, p. 207] and entered into force in 1997 [YUN 1997, p. 495], continued their efforts to promote and strengthen implementation of the Treaty.

The forty-third Foreign Ministers Meeting (Hanoi, Viet Nam, 19–20 July) of the Association of Southeast Asian Nations, underscored the importance of preserving South-East Asia as a nuclear-weapon-free zone also free of other weapons of mass destruction. Participants reviewed the implementation of the plan of action to strengthen the Treaty, agreed to ensure that various programmes and activities indicated in the Treaty's plan of action (2007–2012) were carried out, and agreed to continue to engage with the nuclear-weapon States to encourage them to accede to the Treaty's Protocol.

Latin America and the Caribbean

The 33 States parties to the Treaty for the Prohibition of Nuclear Weapons in Latin America and the Caribbean (Treaty of Tlatelolco) [YUN 1967, p. 13] continued to consolidate the Treaty regime. The Treaty's Additional Protocol I was directed at States that were, de jure or de facto, responsible for territories within the Zone of Application of the Treaty. The protocol had been signed and ratified by France, the Netherlands, the United Kingdom and the United States. Additional Protocol II, directed at the nuclear-weapon States officially recognized by the international community, had been signed and ratified by China, France, the United Kingdom, the United States and the Soviet Union (now the Russian Federation).

The General Assembly in resolution 65/40 (see below), encouraged States that had ratified the Protocols to the Treaty to review any reservations in that regard, in accordance with action 9 of the Final Document of the 2010 NPT Review Conference.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 8 December [meeting 60], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the First Committee [A/65/403], adopted resolution 65/40 without vote [agenda item 90].

Consolidation of the regime established by the Treaty for the Prohibition of Nuclear Weapons in Latin America and the Caribbean (Treaty of Tlatelolco)

The General Assembly,

Recalling that the Treaty for the Prohibition of Nuclear Weapons in Latin America and the Caribbean (Treaty of Tlatelolco) was opened for signature at Mexico City on 14 February 1967,

Recalling also that, in its preamble, the Treaty of Tlatelolco states that military denuclearized zones are not an end in themselves but rather a means for achieving general and complete disarmament at a later stage,

Recalling further that, in its resolution 2286(XXII) of 5 December 1967, it welcomed with special satisfaction the Treaty of Tlatelolco as an event of historic significance in the efforts to prevent the proliferation of nuclear weapons and to promote international peace and security,

Recalling that in 1990, 1991 and 1992 the General Conference of the Agency for the Prohibition of Nuclear Weapons in Latin America and the Caribbean approved and opened for signature a set of amendments to the Treaty of Tlatelolco, with the aim of enabling the full entry into force of that instrument,

Highlighting the fact that the Treaty of Tlatelolco, which is in force for thirty-three sovereign States of the region, consolidated the first nuclear-weapon-free zone established in a densely populated region,

Recognizing the important contribution of the treaties of Tlatelolco, Rarotonga, Bangkok and Pelindaba and the Treaty on a Nuclear-Weapon-Free Zone in Central Asia, as well as the Antarctic Treaty and the declaration by Mongolia of its nuclear-weapon-free status, to the achievement of nuclear non-proliferation and nuclear disarmament,

Recalling all relevant United Nations resolutions in support of nuclear-weapon-free zones,

Welcoming the holding of the Second Conference of States Parties and Signatories to Treaties that Establish Nuclear-Weapon-Free Zones and Mongolia, held in New York on 30 April 2010, as an important contribution to achieving a nuclear-weapon-free world,

Noting that the 2010 Review Conference of the Parties to the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons, in its final document, encouraged the establishment of further nuclear-weapon-free zones and the fostering of cooperation and enhanced consultation mechanisms among the existing nuclear-weapon-free zones through the establishment of concrete measures, in order to fully implement the principles and objectives of the relevant nuclear-weapon-free zone treaties, and commending the Agency for the Prohibition of Nuclear Weapons in Latin America and the Caribbean for its leadership in this endeavour,

Reaffirming the importance of the Agency as the appropriate legal and political forum for ensuring full compliance with and implementation of the Treaty of Tlatelolco, as well as cooperation with the entities of other nuclear-weapon-free zones,

2. Urges the countries of the region that have not yet done so to sign or deposit their instruments of ratification of the amendments to the Treaty of Tlatelolco approved by the General Conference of the Agency for the Prohibition of Nuclear Weapons in Latin America and the Caribbean in its resolutions 267(E-V), 268(XII) and 290(VII);

3. Encourages States that have ratified the relevant Protocols to the Treaty of Tlatelolco to review any reservations in this regard, in accordance with action 9 of the Final Document of the 2010 Review Conference of the Parties to the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons;

He noted that the issue remained of considerable importance and had received increased attention at the 2010 NPT Review Conference. The Final Document adopted by the Conference contained practical steps for implementing the 1995 resolution on the Middle East, and the Secretary-General reiterated his readiness to undertake the necessary actions with the co-sponsors of the 1995 resolution and in consultation with the States of the region. He also reaffirmed the need for a just and lasting solution to the Arab-Israeli conflict, and welcomed efforts of the United States to facilitate political progress between Israelis and Palestinians. His report included the views on the matter of 11 Member States—Algeria, Australia, Cuba, Egypt, Iran, Japan, Jordan, Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Mexico, Spain (on behalf of the European Union) and Qatar.

Bacteriological (biological) and chemical weapons

Bacteriological (biological) weapons

Annual meetings of the States parties to the 1972 Convention on the Prohibition of the Development, Production and Stockpiling of Bacteriological (Biological) and Toxin Weapons and on Their Destruction [YUN 1972, p. 5] (Biological Weapons Convention (BWC)) continued in 2010, covering international cooperation and capacity-building. The meeting of experts took place in August and the meeting of States parties in December (see below).

Meeting of States parties

In accordance with a decision of the Sixth Review Conference of the States parties to BWC [YUN 2006, p. 650], a meeting of those States was convened in 2010 (Geneva, 6–10 December) [BWC/MSP/2010/6]. It was attended by 92 States parties, four signatory States, one observer State, the Office for Disarmament Affairs (UNODA), the United Nations Interregional Crime and Justice Research Institute (UNICRI) and 12 NGOs and research institutes. The European Union (EU), the International Committee of the Red Cross (ICRC), the Organization for the Prohibition of Chemical Weapons (OPCW) and WHO, among others, participated as observers.

In the case of alleged use of biological or toxin weapons, participants considered the provision of assistance and the coordination with relevant organizations, including improving national capabilities for disease surveillance, detection and diagnosis and public health systems. One working session was devoted to arrangements for the Seventh Review Conference and its Preparatory Committee in 2011, and another to reports from the Chairman and States parties on universalization activities [BWC/MSP/2010/4] and the report of the UNODA Implementation Support Unit [BWC/MSP/2010/2]. States parties emphasized the value of assisting other States parties by promoting and facilitating the generation, transfer and acquisition of new knowledge and technologies, as well as of materials and equipment; strengthening human resources; identifying opportunities for collaborative research and sharing advances in science and technology; and sharing practices for biorisk standards in laboratories handling biological agents and toxins.

Given their commitments under the Convention, in particular under article VII, States parties recognized that they bore the primary responsibility for providing assistance and coordinating with relevant organizations in the case of alleged use of biological or toxin weapons. States parties recognized the need to develop national laws and regulations, to improve their capacities in disease surveillance and detection for identifying the cause of outbreaks, and to cooperate to build the capacity of other States parties.

Meeting of experts. Eighty-nine States parties, four signatory States and two observer States took part in the annual meeting of experts (Geneva, 23–27 August) [BWC/MSP/2010/MX/3]. Participants—including the EU, ICRC, UNODA, UNICRI, FAO, WHO, OPCW and 16 NGOs and research institutes—considered the provision of assistance and coordination with relevant organizations upon request by any State party in the case of alleged use of biological or toxin weapons, including improving national capabilities for disease surveillance, detection and diagnosis.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 8 December [meeting 60], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the First Committee [A/65/417], adopted resolution 65/92 without vote [agenda item 104].

Chemical weapons

Chemical weapons convention

As at 31 December, 188 States had either ratified or acceded to the Convention on the Prohibition of the Development, Production, Stockpiling and Use of Chemical Weapons and on Their Destruction. The number of signatories remained at 165. The Convention was adopted by the Conference on Disarmament in 1992 [YUN 1992, p. 65] and entered into force in 1997 [YUN 1997, p. 499].

Fifteenth Session of the Conference of States Parties

The fifteenth session of the Conference of States Parties (The Hague, Netherlands, 29 November–3 December) [C-15/5] was attended by 127 States parties, one signatory State attending as observer, 10 international organizations and specialized agencies, and 20 NGOs.

The Conference noted with concern that the final extended destruction deadline of 29 April 2012 for all categories of chemical weapons might not be met. While significant progress had been made, the Conference noted that as at 31 October, 37.17 per cent of chemical weapons stockpiles remained to be destroyed. In that regard, the Conference urged possessor States parties to ensure their compliance with the final extended destruction deadline.

The Conference adopted a decision to extend the intermediate deadline for the destruction of category 1 chemical weapons by the Libyan Arab Jamahiriya to 15 May 2011. It approved the report of OPCW (see below) on the implementation of the Convention in 2009.

Organization for the Prohibition of Chemical Weapons

OPCW, mandated to oversee the implementation of CWC and to provide a forum for consultations and cooperation among States parties, made progress in the three areas of work under the Convention: chemical disarmament; non-proliferation, assistance and protection; and international cooperation, as detailed in a report on its activities during 2010 [C-16/4].

In 2010, OPCW verified the destruction of approximately 4,900 metric tonnes of chemical weapons in three States parties (Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Russian Federation, United States), bringing the total amount destroyed to approximately 45,000 metric tonnes, or 64 per cent of the amount declared by the six possessor States parties since the entry into force of the Convention. As at 31 December, Libya had destroyed 22 per cent, the Russian Federation 49 per cent, and the United States 83 per cent of their declared stocks of category 1 chemical weapons. Iraq had yet to start the destruction of its declared chemical weapons. OPCW carried out inspections at 208 chemical-industry facilities, pursuant to article VI of the Convention, to verify State party declarations.

Forty-eight percent of the 398 inspections/rotations conducted at 49 sites in 40 States parties in 2010 were chemical weapons-related. The remaining 52 per cent concerned chemical-industry inspections under article VI. As in previous years, no challenge inspections or requests from States parties for an investigation of alleged use were received.

The Secretariat conducted long-term national capacity-building projects on development and improvement of protection against chemical weapons for personnel who were involved in emergency response. The Secretariat continued engagement with African Member States to accelerate and strengthen efforts under the Africa Programme in order to meet the needs and requests of those States.

The Secretary-General, in June [A/65/97], transmitted to the General Assembly the 2008 opcw report on the implementation of the Convention and the 2009 draft report, in accordance with the Agreement concerning the Relationship between the United Nations and opcw, signed in 2000 [YUN 2000, p. 516] and annexed to Assembly resolution 55/283 [YUN 2001, p. 495], which entered into force in 2001 [ibid.].

In response to General Assembly resolution 63/53 [YUN 2008, p. 610], the Secretary-General reported in June [A/65/95] that the depositary of the 1925 Geneva Protocol (France) had received no notice of withdrawals of reservations since the Assembly's adoption of the resolution.

Towards an arms trade treaty

By resolution 64/48 [YUN 2009, p. 544], the General Assembly decided to convene a Conference on the Arms Trade Treaty in 2012. By the same resolution, the Open-ended Working Group towards an Arms Trade Treaty was renamed the Preparatory Committee for the United Nations Conference on the Arms Trade Treaty. In 2010, the Preparatory Committee held one session (New York, 12–23 July) to make recommendations to the Conference on the elements that would be needed to attain an effective and balanced legally binding instrument on the highest possible common international standards for the transfer of conventional arms.

Small arms

UN Programme of Action on illicit trade in small arms

In a report issued in July [A/65/153], pursuant to resolution 64/50 [YUN 2009, p. 546], the Secretary-General noted that the Organization's main instrument for addressing illicit trafficking in small arms was the Programme of Action to Prevent, Combat and Eradicate the Illicit Trade in Small Arms and Light Weapons in All Its Aspects, adopted in 2001 [YUN 2001, p. 499]. The Programme of Action set out a comprehensive framework for a coordinated international response to the problems associated with small arms and light weapons. It established international norms and measures to address the issue, and aimed to promote its responsible implementation by States. The implementation of the Programme of Action was reviewed biennially through meetings of States, and would be further reviewed by a meeting of governmental experts in 2011 and a review conference in 2012.

The Fourth Biennial Meeting of States to Consider the Implementation of the Programme of Action

(New York, 14–18 June) [A/CONF.192/BMS/2010/3] considered the national, regional and global implementation of the Programme of Action around four themes: border management, international cooperation and assistance, the International Tracing Instrument [YUN 2005, p. 621] and follow-up mechanisms within the Programme of Action. The “way forward” sections in the outcome document of the meeting highlighted measures that could be undertaken to further implement the Programme of Action. Highlighting the importance of regional approaches to implementation, UNODA organized three regional meetings, in Lima and in Bali (March) and in Kinshasa (April).

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 8 December [meeting 60], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the First Committee [A/65/410], adopted resolution 65/64 without vote [agenda item 97 (z)].

Assistance to States for curbing illicit small arms traffic

Pursuant to General Assembly resolutions 64/30 [YUN 2009, p. 548] and 64/50 [ibid., p. 546], the Secretary-General in July [A/65/153] reviewed activities undertaken by the UN system, intergovernmental organizations and Member States to curb the illicit trade in small arms and light weapons; as well as implementation of the Programme of Action. He noted that the cross-cutting nature of the impact of the illicit trade in small arms and light weapons underscored the importance of coordination on the small arms issue within the UN system. To meet that challenge, the United Nations Coordinating Action on Small Arms (CASA) mechanism [YUN 1998, p. 525] had been established as the Secretary-General's coordination platform within the United Nations. The mechanism brought together 22 UN system partners that dealt with preventing violence and mitigating the impact of small arms and light weapons on societies, communities and individuals. CASA's flagship initiative was the development of International Small Arms Control Standards (ISACS). The aim was to develop a set of internationally accepted technical standards providing guidance to practitioners and policymakers on legal, policy and operational issues surrounding small arms control. Twenty-six ISACS modules had been drafted and opened as public consultation drafts available online. CASA had enhanced its capacity for information sharing since the launch in 2008 of the Programme of Action Implementation Support System [YUN 2008, p. 613], a web-based tool to contribute to the implementation of the Programme of Action.

The Organization remained engaged in efforts to prevent and combat illicit arms brokering, particularly with respect to small arms and light weapons. Preventing and combating illicit brokering activities

The General Assembly,

Noting the threat to international peace and security posed by illicit brokering activities circumventing the international arms control and non-proliferation framework,

Concerned that, if proper measures are not taken, the illicit brokering of arms in all its aspects will adversely affect the maintenance of international peace and security, and prolong conflicts, and could be an obstacle to sustainable economic and social development and result in illicit transfers of conventional arms and the acquisition of weapons of mass destruction by non-State actors,

Recognizing the need for Member States to prevent and combat illicit brokering activities, which covers not only conventional arms but also materials, equipment and technology that could contribute to the proliferation of weapons of mass destruction and their means of delivery,

Reaffirming that efforts to prevent and combat illicit brokering activities should not hamper the legitimate arms trade and international cooperation with respect to materials, equipment and technology for peaceful purposes,

Recalling Security Council resolution 1540(2004) of 28 April 2004, in particular paragraph 3, which determined that all States shall develop and maintain appropriate effective border controls and law enforcement efforts to detect, deter, prevent and combat, including through international cooperation when necessary, illicit trafficking and brokering, in accordance with their national legal authorities and legislation and consistent with international law,

Encouraging Member States in a position to do so to share their experience and practices in relation to the control of illicit brokering and to further enhance international cooperation to this end,

Noting with satisfaction the activities of the United Nations Institute for Disarmament Research in relation to preventing and combating illicit brokering activities,

Acknowledging the constructive role civil society can play in raising awareness and providing practical expertise on the prevention of illicit brokering activities,

Convention on excessively injurious conventional weapons and Protocols

Status

As at 31 December, the accession of Antigua and Barbuda, the Dominican Republic, and Saint Vincent and the Grenadines brought to 114 the number of States parties to the 1980 Convention on Prohibitions or Restrictions on the Use of Certain Conventional Weapons Which May Be Deemed to Be Excessively Injurious or to Have Indiscriminate Effects (ccw) and its annexed Protocols on Non-Detectable Fragments (Protocol I) [YUN 1980, p. 76]; on Prohibitions or Restrictions on the Use of Mines, Booby Traps and Other Devices, as amended on 3 May 1996 (Protocol II) [ibid., p. 77]; and on Prohibitions or Restrictions on the Use of Incendiary Weapons (Protocol III) [ibid., p. 78].

Amended Protocol II, which entered into force in 1998 [YUN 1998, p. 844], had 97 parties. The 1995

Protocol on Blinding Laser Weapons (Protocol IV) [YUN 1995, p. 221], which took effect in 1998 [YUN 1998, p. 530], had 100 parties. The Protocol on Explosive Remnants of War (Protocol V), which was adopted in 2003 [YUN 2003, p. 566] and entered into force in 2006 [YUN 2006, p. 663], had 73 parties. The number of parties to the amendment to article I of the Convention, which entered into force in 2004 [YUN 2004, p. 563], stood at 75.

Group of Governmental Experts

The Group of Governmental Experts, established by the Second Review Conference of the States Parties to the ccw [YUN 2001, p. 504], met in Geneva for two formal sessions (12–16 April, 30 August–3 September) [CCW/GGE/2010-I/7, CCW/GGE/2010-II/1] and an informal session (28 June–1 July). States parties in 2009 [YUN 2009, p. 551] had mandated the Group to continue negotiations on a new protocol to the Convention that would address the humanitarian impact of cluster munitions while striking a balance between military and humanitarian considerations, and to report to the next Meeting of the High Contracting Parties to the Convention.

The Group considered a draft protocol on cluster munitions [CCW/GGE/2010-I/WP.2, CCW/GGE/2010-II/WP.1, CCW/GGE/2010-II/WP.2], referred to as the “Chair’s text”. The draft protocol covered issues such as scope of application, definitions, general prohibitions and restrictions, storage and destruction of cluster munitions, clearance and destruction of cluster munitions remnants, victim assistance, cooperation and assistance, and compliance. The Group also considered the preparation for the 2011 Fourth Review Conference of the High Contracting Parties. The Group did not reach any conclusion and decided to submit the issue to the 2010 Meeting of the High Contracting Parties.

Meeting of High Contracting Parties

The Meeting of the High Contracting Parties to the Convention (Geneva, 25–26 November) [CCW/MSP/2010/5 & Corr.1] decided that the Group of Governmental Experts would hold three sessions in 2011 to continue its negotiations on the draft protocol, with a view to making recommendations to the Fourth Review Conference.

The Meeting took note of the report on the implementation of the plan of action to promote the universality of the Convention [CCW/MSP/2010/4] and emphasized the importance of achieving universal adherence to, and compliance with, the Convention, the amendment to its article 1, and its annexed Protocols. It expressed its satisfaction at the steps undertaken in the implementation of the decisions on compliance, including the establishment and the maintenance by the Secretariat of the compliance database, and decided to keep the issue of mines other than anti-personnel mines under consideration. The Meeting further decided on dates and duration of Convention-related meetings in 2011.

Protocol V on explosive remnants of war

Meeting of Experts

The fourth Protocol V Meeting of Experts (Geneva, 21–23 April) focused on five main topics identified by the First Conference of the High Contracting Parties to Protocol V [YUN 2007, p. 576]: clearance, removal or destruction of explosive remnants of war [CCW/P.V/CONF/2010/2]; cooperation and assistance and requests for assistance [CCW/P.V/CONF/2010/3]; national reporting [CCW/P.V/CONF/2010/4], including article 4 generic electronic template for recording information [CCW/P.V/CONF/2010/5]; generic preventive measures [CCW/P.V/CONF/2010/6 & Add.1]; and victim assistance [CCW/P.V/CONF/2010/7].

Fourth Conference of the High Contracting Parties to Protocol V

States parties met for the Fourth Conference (Geneva, 22–23 November) [CCW/P.V/CONF/2010/11] and recommended that the UN Secretary-General, as depositary of Protocol V, and the President of the Fourth Conference, on behalf of the High Contracting Parties, exercise their authority to achieve the goal of universality of Protocol V. The Conference decided to continue the consideration of clearance, removal or destruction of explosive remnants of war; of assistance to victims; and of cooperation and assistance and of requests for assistance.

The Conference decided that the Meeting of Experts would continue to consider national procedures and experience in the implementation of obligations under article 4. It adopted the “Guide to National Reporting under ccw Protocol V” [CCW/P.V/CONF/2009/4/Add.1 & Corr.1 & Amend.1], a document containing a checklist of questions to be used as a tool by the High Contracting Parties to facilitate the filling-out of national reporting forms. The Conference also adopted the “Guide for the implementation of Part 3 of the Technical Annex” [CCW/P.V/CONF/2010/6/Add.1], took note of the latest version of the Web-based information system for Protocol V and decided to commence the testing phase.

Amended Protocol II on Mines, Booby-traps and Other Devices

Meeting of Experts

The Amended Protocol II Meeting of Experts (Geneva, 19–20 April) reviewed the operation and status of the Protocol; considered matters arising from States parties’ reports and the development of technologies to protect civilians against indiscriminate effects of mines, as coordinated by Abderrazak Laassel (Morocco); and addressed the issue of improvised explosive devices (IEDs). The coordinators presented three discussion papers: on IEDs [CCW/AP.II/GX/2010/1]; on the legal possibility and feasibility of terminating Protocol II [CCW/AP.II/GX/2010/2]; and on national annual reporting [CCW/AP.II/GX/2010/3].

Annual Conference of States Parties

The Twelfth Annual Conference of the High Contracting Parties to Amended Protocol II on Mines, Booby-traps and Other Devices (Geneva, 24 November) [CCW/AP.II/CONF.12/6] recommended that the Secretary-General, as depositary of Amended Protocol II, and the President of the Conference, on behalf of the States parties, exercise their authority to achieve the universality of Amended Protocol II. The Conference decided that the Group of Experts should continue to review the operation and status of the Protocol and consider matters arising from the national annual reports, as well as the development of technologies to protect civilians against indiscriminate effects of mines. It encouraged States parties and the ccw secretariat to intensify their efforts to implement the plan of action to promote the universality of ccw [YUN 2006, p. 664], in particular by organizing more national and regional seminars aimed at promoting and explaining the Convention and its Protocols.

The Conference decided to continue information exchange on IEDs, IED incidents, their prevention, as well as their relevance for the ccw framework, with a view to obtaining a better understanding of how IED incidents occurred and what their short-, mid- and long-term effects were, including discussing best practices in addressing those challenges.

Practical disarmament

Disarmament Commission. The Commission [A/65/42] included in its agenda the item "Practical confidence-building measures in the field of conventional weapons", but noted that the item would be taken up upon the conclusion of the elements of a draft declaration of the 2010s as the fourth disarmament decade, preferably by 2010, and in any case no later than 2011.

Report of Secretary General. Pursuant to General Assembly resolutions 63/62 [YUN 2008, p. 626], the Secretary-General in July [A/65/153] reviewed activities undertaken by States and regional and sub-regional organizations to consolidate peace through practical disarmament measures. The report covered the period from August 2008 to July 2010, during which the Group of Interested States in Practical Disarmament Measures held six meetings (December 2008; January, March and October 2009; February and March 2010). The Group discussed progress towards an arms trade treaty, the Programme of Action to Prevent, Combat and Eradicate the Illicit Trade in Small Arms and Light Weapons, the General Assembly First Committee and the International Small Arms Control Standards. The Secretary-General also reviewed regional and subregional activities undertaken within and outside the UN system.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 8 December [meeting 60], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the First Committee [A/65/410], adopted resolution 65/67 without vote [agenda item 97 (b)].

Consolidation of peace through practical disarmament measures

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 51/45 N of 10 December 1996, 52/38 G of 9 December 1997, 53/77 M of 4 December 1998, 54/54 H of 1 December 1999, 55/33 G of 20 November 2000, 56/24 P of 29 November 2001 and 57/81 of 22 November 2002, its decision 58/519 of 8 December 2003, as well as its resolutions 59/82 of 3 December 2004, and 61/76 of 6 December 2006 and 63/62 of 2 December 2008 entitled "Consolidation of peace through practical disarmament measures",

Convinced that a comprehensive and integrated approach towards certain practical disarmament measures often is a prerequisite to maintaining and consolidating peace and security and thus provides a basis for effective post-conflict peacebuilding; such measures include collection and responsible disposal, preferably through destruction, of weapons obtained through illicit trafficking or illicit manufacture as well as of weapons and ammunition declared by competent national authorities to be surplus to requirements, particularly with regard to small arms and light weapons, unless another form of disposition or use has been officially authorized and provided that such weapons have been duly marked and registered; confidence-building measures; disarmament, demobilization and reintegration of former combatants; demining; and conversion,

Noting with satisfaction that the international community is more than ever aware of the importance of such practical disarmament measures, especially with regard to the growing problems arising from the excessive accumulation and uncontrolled spread of small arms and light weapons, including their ammunition, which pose a threat to peace and security and reduce the prospects for economic development in many regions, particularly in post-conflict situations,

Stressing that further efforts are needed in order to develop and effectively implement programmes of practical disarmament in affected areas as part of disarmament, demobilization and reintegration measures so as to complement, on a case-by-case basis, peacekeeping and peace-building efforts,

Taking note with appreciation of the report of the Secretary-General on prevention of armed conflict, which, inter alia, refers to the role which the proliferation and the illicit transfer of small arms and light weapons play in the context of the build-up and sustaining of conflicts,

Taking note of the statement by the President of the Security Council of 31 August 2001 underlining the importance of practical disarmament measures in the context of armed conflicts, and, with regard to disarmament, demobilization and reintegration programmes, emphasizing the importance of measures to contain the security risks stemming from the use of illicit small arms and light weapons,

Taking note also of the report of the Secretary-General prepared with the assistance of the Group of Governmental Experts on Small Arms and, in particular, the recommendations contained therein, as an important contribution to the consolidation of the peace process through practical disarmament measures,

Welcoming the work of the United Nations Coordinating Action on Small Arms mechanism, which was established by the Secretary-General to bring about a holistic and multidisciplinary approach to this complex and multifaceted global problem,

Welcoming also the establishment, within the United Nations system, of the Programme of Action Implementation Support System, which provides a comprehensive tool to facilitate international cooperation and assistance for the implementation of practical disarmament measures, including the matching of assistance needs with available resources,

Welcoming further the reports of the first, second, third and fourth biennial meetings of States to consider the implementation of the Programme of Action to Prevent, Combat and Eradicate the Illicit Trade in Small Arms and Light Weapons in All Its Aspects, which, inter alia, underlined that States are encouraged to build on existing mechanisms, such as the enhanced Programme of Action Implementation Support System, and to consider other ways in which needs and resources can be matched effectively and assistance and cooperation can be more effectively coordinated,

1. Stresses the particular relevance of the "Guidelines on conventional arms control/limitation and disarmament, with particular emphasis on consolidation of peace in the context of General Assembly resolution 51/45 N";

2. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General on the consolidation of peace through practical disarmament measures, submitted pursuant to resolution 63/62, and encourages Member States as well as regional arrangements and agencies to lend their support to the implementation of recommendations contained therein;

3. Emphasizes the importance of including in United Nations-mandated peacekeeping missions, as appropriate and with the consent of the host State, practical disarmament measures aimed at addressing the problem of the illicit trade in small arms and light weapons in conjunction with disarmament, demobilization and reintegration programmes aimed at former combatants, with a view to promoting an integrated comprehensive and effective weapons management strategy that would contribute to a sustainable peacebuilding process;

4. Welcomes the activities undertaken by the Group of Interested States, and invites the Group to continue to promote, on the basis of lessons learned from previous disarmament and peacebuilding projects, new practical disarmament measures to consolidate peace, especially as undertaken or designed by affected States themselves, regional and subregional organizations as well as United Nations agencies;

5. Encourages, in this regard, the Group of Interested States to continue to function as an informal, open and transparent forum supporting the implementation of the Programme of Action to Prevent, Combat and Eradicate the Illicit Trade in Small Arms and Light Weapons in All Its Aspects, and encourages the Group to facilitate the exchange of views on issues related to the United Nations small arms process as well as to facilitate the effective matching of needs and resources in accordance with the outcome of the fourth biennial meeting of States;

6. Requests the Secretary-General to provide the Office for Disarmament Affairs of the Secretariat with resources adequate for maintaining the Programme of Action Implementation Support System as from 2012, thus securing its important role in identifying and communicating information on needs and resources so as to enhance the implementation of the Programme of Action;

7. Encourages Member States, also in the framework of the Group of Interested States, to continue to lend their support to the Secretary-General, relevant international, regional and subregional organizations, in accordance with Chapter VIII of the Charter of the United Nations, and non-governmental organizations in responding to requests by Member States to collect and destroy small arms and light weapons, including their ammunition, in post-conflict situations;

8. Welcomes the synergies within the multi-stakeholder process, including Governments, the United Nations system, regional and subregional organizations and institutions as well as non-governmental organizations in support of practical disarmament measures and the Programme of Action;

9. Requests the Secretary-General to submit to the General Assembly at its sixty-seventh session a report on the implementation of practical disarmament measures, taking into consideration the activities of the Group of Interested States in this regard;

10. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its sixty-seventh session the item entitled "Consolidation of peace through practical disarmament measures".

Transparency

Concerning transparency, there was a record low in the number of States (72) participating in the United Nations Register of Conventional Arms, yet also a slight improvement in the percentage of reports (almost 60 per cent) on transfers of small arms, light weapons and conventional weapons. With respect to the United Nations Standardized Instrument for Reporting Military Expenditures, the year marked the second-lowest level of reporting since 2001, with 2009 marking the lowest.

Conference on Disarmament. During the general debate of the Conference [A/65/27], delegations reaffirmed or further elaborated their respective positions on the issue. The Conference held four informal meetings (18 and 21 June, 9 and 12 July) on "Transparency in armaments" [CD/1899, annex VII]. While no attempt to define transparency was made, there seemed to be a broadly shared understanding that it should not be equalled to disarmament, even though it often had a clear and supporting role in disarmament negotiations and arrangements. Transparency should not be seen as an attempt to diminish the security of States or to restrict the inherent right of States to self-defence and their right to determine their national security interests, in accordance with the UN Charter. While it was recognized that, since 1991, some 170 countries had contributed information at least once to the United Nations Register of Conventional Arms, there was some concern over the diminished rate of reporting. It would be useful to analyse reasons behind that lack of enthusiasm and identify ways of making the register more relevant; in that connection, the scope of the Register deserved closer attention.

UN Register of Conventional Arms

In response to General Assembly resolution 64/54 [YUN 2009, p. 556], the Secretary-General in July submitted the eighteenth annual report on the United Nations Register of Conventional Arms [A/65/133 & Add.1-5], established in 1992 [YUN 1992, p. 75] to enhance transparency on arms transfers. The report presented information for 2009, provided by 72 countries, on the export and import of conventional arms, military holdings, procurement through national production and the international transfers of small arms and light weapons. The report highlighted numerous activities undertaken by UNODA, in collaboration with Governments and regional organizations, to enhance awareness of the Register and encourage greater participation. UNODA maintained the Register's database and updated the information about its operation.

Transparency of military expenditures

In response to General Assembly resolution 64/22 [YUN 2009, p. 558], the Secretary-General in July [A/65/118 & Corr.1 & Add.1,2] presented reports from 60 States on their national military expenditures for the latest fiscal year for which data were available. As requested by the resolution, UNODA organized regional workshops on transparency in armaments for Latin America and the Caribbean (Lima, Peru, 9–10 March) and for South-East Asia (Bali, Indonesia, 31 March–1 April), which devoted one session to the United Nations Standardized Instrument for Reporting Military Expenditures to enhance family with the Instrument.

On 8 December, the General Assembly took note of the report of the First Committee [A/65/401] on "Reduction of military budgets" (decision 65/514).

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 8 December [meeting 60], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the First Committee [A/65/410], adopted resolution 65/63 without vote [agenda item 97 (g)].

Information on confidence-building measures in the field of conventional arms

The General Assembly,

Guided by the purposes and principles enshrined in the Charter of the United Nations,

Bearing in mind the contribution of confidence-building measures in the field of conventional arms, adopted on the initiative and with the agreement of the States concerned, to the improvement of the overall international peace and security situation,

Convinced that the relationship between the development of confidence-building measures in the field of conventional arms and the international security environment can also be mutually reinforcing,

Considering the important role that confidence-building measures in the field of conventional arms can also play in creating favourable conditions for progress in the field of disarmament,

Recognizing that the exchange of information on confidence-building measures in the field of conventional arms contributes to mutual understanding and confidence among Member States,

Recalling its resolutions 59/92 of 3 December 2004, 60/82 of 8 December 2005, 61/79 of 6 December 2006 and 63/57 of 2 December 2008,

1. Welcomes all confidence-building measures in the field of conventional arms already undertaken by Member States, as well as the information on such measures voluntarily provided;

2. Encourages Member States to continue to adopt confidence-building measures in the field of conventional arms and to provide information in that regard;

3. Also encourages Member States to continue the dialogue on confidence-building measures in the field of conventional arms;

4. Welcomes the establishment of the electronic database containing information provided by Member States, and requests the Secretary-General to keep the database updated and to assist Member States, at their request, in the organization of seminars, courses and workshops aimed at enhancing the knowledge of new developments in this field;

5. Requests the Secretary-General to report to the General Assembly at its sixty-sixth session on the implementation of the present resolution, including the information provided by Member States pursuant to paragraph 4 above;

6. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its sixty-seventh session the item entitled "Information on confidence-building measures in the field of conventional arms".

Other issues

Prevention of an arms race in outer space

Conference on Disarmament. Delegations discussed the prevention of an arms race in outer space in four informal meetings (Geneva, 9, 14 and 30 June, 5 July) [CD/1899, annex III]. They expressed the view that outer space should be used solely for peaceful purposes and for the benefit of all countries and not become an arena for competitive strategic policies. Most States believed that the placement of weapons in outer space could deepen global insecurity. Recent technological advancements could lead to the production of sophisticated space weapons, such as anti-satellites, which could become a threat to the security and safety of outer space. The development of new and unforeseen weapons might require review of current parameters of space security. Current international instruments were seen as insufficient to prevent an arms race in outer space. Many delegations believed that a specific international legal instrument was needed to strengthen or complement existing regimes. The Outer Space Treaty of 1967, for example, addressed only nuclear weapons and weapons of mass destruction. The main goals of such an instrument should be to prohibit the placement of weapons; to prevent military use of outer space; to forbid the destruction or damage of satellites from ground-based platforms; to ensure that space property was protected; and to assure that global satellite services operated without threats or risk of disruption. Delegations pointed out that there should be coordination among international organizations regulating the use of outer space. There were, however, different views on the readiness of the subject in the Conference on Disarmament, with a majority of States supporting the early commencement of negotiations and others maintaining that conditions for negotiating a legally binding instrument were not yet given. Also discussed was the option to adhere voluntarily to other mechanisms, such as the European Union's draft Code of Conduct for Outer Space Activities. The option of an instrument remained under consideration in the Conference on Disarmament.

Report of Secretary-General. Pursuant to resolution 64/49 [YUN 2009, p. 562], the Secretary-General in July submitted a report [A/65/123 & Add.1] containing proposals from eight countries (Argentina, Australia, Cuba, Jordan, Oman, Panama, Qatar, Ukraine) on international outer space transparency and confidence-building measures.

General Assembly action. By resolution 65/68 of 8 December (see p. 568), the General Assembly requested the Secretary-General to establish a group of governmental experts to conduct a study, commencing in 2012, on outer space transparency and confidence-building measures, and to submit the study to the Assembly's sixty-eighth (2013) session.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 8 December [meeting 60], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the First Committee [A/65/408], adopted resolution 65/44 by recorded vote (178-0-2) [agenda item 95].

Prevention of an arms race in outer space

The General Assembly,

Recognizing the common interest of all mankind in the exploration and use of outer space for peaceful purposes,

Reaffirming the will of all States that the exploration and use of outer space, including the Moon and other celestial bodies, shall be for peaceful purposes and shall be carried out for the benefit and in the interest of all countries, irrespective of their degree of economic or scientific development,

Reaffirming also the provisions of articles III and IV of the Treaty on Principles Governing the Activities of States in the Exploration and Use of Outer Space, including the Moon and Other Celestial Bodies,

Recalling the obligation of all States to observe the provisions of the Charter of the United Nations regarding the use or threat of use of force in their international relations, including in their space activities,

Reaffirming paragraph 80 of the Final Document of the Tenth Special Session of the General Assembly, in which it is stated that in order to prevent an arms race in outer space, further measures should be taken and appropriate international negotiations held in accordance with the spirit of the Treaty,

Recalling its previous resolutions on this issue, and taking note of the proposals submitted to the General Assembly at its tenth special session and at its regular sessions, and of the recommendations made to the competent organs of the United Nations and to the Conference on Disarmament,

Recognizing that prevention of an arms race in outer space would avert a grave danger for international peace and security,

Emphasizing the paramount importance of strict compliance with existing arms limitation and disarmament agreements relevant to outer space, including bilateral agreements, and with the existing legal regime concerning the use of outer space,

Considering that wide participation in the legal regime applicable to outer space could contribute to enhancing its effectiveness,

Noting that the Ad Hoc Committee on the Prevention of an Arms Race in Outer Space, taking into account its previous efforts since its establishment in 1985 and seeking to enhance its functioning in qualitative terms, continued the examination and identification of various issues, existing agreements and existing proposals, as well as future initiatives relevant to the prevention of an arms race in outer space, and that this contributed to a better understanding of a number of problems and to a clearer perception of the various positions,

Noting also that there were no objections in principle in the Conference on Disarmament to the re-establishment of the Ad Hoc Committee, subject to re-examination of the mandate contained in the decision of the Conference on Disarmament of 13 February 1992,

Emphasizing the mutually complementary nature of bilateral and multilateral efforts for the prevention of an arms race in outer space, and hoping that concrete results will emerge from those efforts as soon as possible,

Convinced that further measures should be examined in the search for effective and verifiable bilateral and multilateral agreements in order to prevent an arms race in outer space, including the weaponization of outer space,

Stressing that the growing use of outer space increases the need for greater transparency and better information on the part of the international community,

Recalling, in this context, its previous resolutions, in particular resolutions 45/55 B of 4 December 1990, 47/51 of 9 December 1992 and 48/74 A of 16 December 1993, in which, inter alia, it reaffirmed the importance of confidence-building measures as a means conducive to ensuring the attainment of the objective of the prevention of an arms race in outer space,

Conscious of the benefits of confidence- and security-building measures in the military field,

Recognizing that negotiations for the conclusion of an international agreement or agreements to prevent an arms race in outer space remain a priority task of the Conference on Disarmament and that the concrete proposals on confidence-building measures could form an integral part of such agreements,

Noting with satisfaction the constructive, structured and focused debate on the prevention of an arms race in outer space at the Conference on Disarmament in 2009 and 2010,

Taking note of the introduction by China and the Russian Federation at the Conference on Disarmament of the draft treaty on the prevention of the placement of weapons in outer space and of the threat or use of force against outer space objects,

Taking note also of the decision of the Conference on Disarmament to establish for its 2009 session a working group to discuss, substantially, without limitation, all issues related to the prevention of an arms race in outer space,

1. Reaffirms the importance and urgency of preventing an arms race in outer space and the readiness of all States to contribute to that common objective, in conformity with the provisions of the Treaty on Principles Governing the Activities of States in the Exploration and Use of Outer Space, including the Moon and Other Celestial Bodies;

2. Reaffirms its recognition, as stated in the report of the Ad Hoc Committee on the Prevention of an Arms Race in Outer Space, that the legal regime applicable to outer space does not in and of itself guarantee the prevention of an arms race in outer space, that the regime plays a significant role in the prevention of an arms race in that environment, that there is a need to consolidate and reinforce that regime and enhance its effectiveness and that it is important to comply strictly with existing agreements, both bilateral and multilateral;

3. Emphasizes the necessity of further measures with appropriate and effective provisions for verification to prevent an arms race in outer space;

4. Calls upon all States, in particular those with major space capabilities, to contribute actively to the objective of the peaceful use of outer space and of the prevention of an arms race in outer space and to refrain from actions contrary to that objective and to the relevant existing treaties in the interest of maintaining international peace and security and promoting international cooperation;

5. Reiterates that the Conference on Disarmament, as the sole multilateral disarmament negotiating forum, has the primary role in the negotiation of a multilateral agreement or agreements, as appropriate, on the prevention of an arms race in outer space in all its aspects;

6. Invites the Conference on Disarmament to establish a working group under its agenda item entitled "Prevention of an arms race in outer space" as early as possible during its 2011 session;

7. Recognizes, in this respect, the growing convergence of views on the elaboration of measures designed to strengthen transparency, confidence and security in the peaceful uses of outer space;

8. Urges States conducting activities in outer space, as well as States interested in conducting such activities, to keep the Conference on Disarmament informed of the progress of bilateral and multilateral negotiations on the matter, if any, so as to facilitate its work;

9. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its sixty-sixth session the item entitled "Prevention of an arms race in outer space".

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 8 December [meeting 60], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the First Committee [A/65/410], adopted resolution 65/53 without vote [agenda item 97 (o)].

Emphasizing the importance of the observance of environmental norms in the preparation and implementation of disarmament and arms limitation agreements,

Recognizing that it is necessary to take duly into account the agreements adopted at the United Nations Conference on Environment and Development, as well as prior relevant agreements, in the drafting and implementation of agreements on disarmament and arms limitation,

Taking note of the report of the Secretary-General submitted pursuant to resolution 64/33,

Noting that the Fifteenth Summit Conference of Heads of State and Government of the Movement of Non-Aligned Countries, held in Sharm el-Sheikh, Egypt, from 11 to 16 July 2009, welcomed the adoption of resolution 63/51, the first resolution adopted without a vote by the General Assembly on the observance of environmental norms in the drafting and implementation of agreements on disarmament and arms control,

Mindful of the detrimental environmental effects of the use of nuclear weapons,

1. Reaffirms that international disarmament forums should take fully into account the relevant environmental norms in negotiating treaties and agreements on disarmament and arms limitation and that all States, through their actions, should contribute fully to ensuring compliance with the aforementioned norms in the implementation of treaties and conventions to which they are parties;

2. Calls upon States to adopt unilateral, bilateral, regional and multilateral measures so as to contribute to ensuring the application of scientific and technological progress within the framework of international security, disarmament and other related spheres, without detriment to the environment or to its effective contribution to attaining sustainable development;

3. Welcomes the information provided by Member States on the implementation of the measures they have adopted to promote the objectives envisaged in the present resolution;

Effects of depleted uranium

In accordance with General Assembly resolution 63/54 [YUN 2008, p. 637], the Secretary-General, in a report issued in July [A/65/129 & Add.1], transmitted the views of 15 Member States (Belgium, Burundi, Cuba, Czech Republic, Germany, Ireland, Japan, Jordan, Lithuania, Mauritius, Mexico, Netherlands, New Zealand, Norway, Panama) and three international organizations (IAEA, United Nations Environment Programme, WHO) on the effects of the use of armaments and ammunitions containing depleted uranium on human health and the environment.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 8 December [meeting 60], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the First Committee [A/65/410], adopted resolution 65/55 by recorded vote (148-4-30) [agenda item 97 (d)].

Effects of the use of armaments and ammunitions containing depleted uranium

The General Assembly,

Guided by the purposes and principles enshrined in the Charter of the United Nations and the rules of humanitarian international law,

Recalling its resolutions 62/30 of 5 December 2007 and 63/54 of 2 December 2008,

Determined to promote multilateralism as an essential means to carry forward negotiations on arms regulation and disarmament,

Taking note of the opinions expressed by Member States and relevant international organizations on the effects of the use of armaments and ammunitions containing depleted uranium, as reflected in the reports submitted by the Secretary-General pursuant to resolutions 62/30 and 63/54,

Recognizing the importance of implementing, as appropriate, the recommendations of the International Atomic Energy Agency, the United Nations Environment Programme and the World Health Organization to mitigate potential hazards to human beings and the environment from the contamination of territories with depleted uranium residues,

Considering that studies conducted so far by relevant international organizations have not provided a detailed enough account of the magnitude of the potential long-term effects on human beings and the environment of the use of armaments and ammunitions containing depleted uranium,

Convinced that, as humankind becomes more aware of the need to take immediate measures to protect the environment, any event that could jeopardize such efforts requires urgent attention to implement the required measures,

Taking into consideration the potential harmful effects of the use of armaments and ammunitions containing depleted uranium on human health and the environment,

1. Expresses its appreciation to the Member States and international organizations that submitted their views to the Secretary-General pursuant to resolution 63/54;

2. Invites Member States and relevant international organizations, particularly those that have not yet done so, to communicate to the Secretary-General their views on the effects of the use of armaments and ammunitions containing depleted uranium;

3. Requests the Secretary-General to request relevant international organizations to update and complete, as appropriate, their studies and research on the effects of the use of armaments and ammunitions containing depleted uranium on human health and the environment;

4. Encourages Member States, particularly the affected States, as necessary, to facilitate the studies and research referred to in paragraph 3 above;

5. Also encourages Member States to follow closely the development of the studies and research referred to in paragraph 3 above;

6. Invites Member States that have used armaments and ammunitions containing depleted uranium in armed conflicts to provide the relevant authorities of affected States, upon request, with information, as detailed as possible, about the location of the areas of use and the amounts used, with the objective of facilitating the assessment of such areas;

7. Requests the Secretary-General to submit an updated report on this subject to the General Assembly at its sixty-seventh session, reflecting the information submitted by Member States and relevant international organizations, including the information submitted pursuant to paragraphs 2 and 3 above;

8. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its sixty-seventh session the item entitled "Effects of the use of armaments and ammunitions containing depleted uranium".

Studies, research and training

UN Institute for Disarmament Research

The Secretary-General in July transmitted to the General Assembly the report of the Director of the United Nations Institute for Disarmament Research (UNIDIR) [A/65/177], covering activities from August 2009 to July 2010, as well as the proposed programme of work and estimated budget for 2010 and 2011, as approved by the Advisory Board on Disarmament Matters in its capacity as UNIDIR's Board of Trustees. During the reporting period, with UNIDIR celebrating its thirtieth anniversary in 2010 as well as embarking upon institutional reform, the Institute's work centred on five issues: weapons of mass destruction; weapons of societal disruption; security and society; emerging threats; and improving processes and creating synergies. UNIDIR work included research, seminars, advisory services, outreach activities and publications, such as the quarterly journal Disarmament Forum.

The Board of Trustees recommended that the Institute's subvention from the UN regular budget be increased (in addition to being cost-adjusted) in the biennium 2012–2013, in order to meet the costs of the Director and the core staff of the Institute. The Director also reported on the status of voluntary funds received from Governments and philanthropic foundations, which covered about 90 per cent of the Institute's budget and financed all its operational activities. As voluntary funds had, in the past, come from only a few Member States, UNIDIR had been seeking to expand its donor base. The Institute's value to the international community was based on its unique status as an autonomous institution within the UN system.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 8 December [meeting 60], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the First Committee [A/65/412], adopted resolution 65/87 without vote [agenda item 99].

Thirtieth anniversary of the United Nations Institute for Disarmament Research

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 34/83 M of 11 December 1979, in which it requested the Secretary-General to establish the United Nations Institute for Disarmament Research on the basis of the recommendations contained in the report of the Secretary-General,

Reaffirming its resolution 39/148 H of 17 December 1984, in which it approved the statute of the Institute, renewed the invitation to Governments to consider making voluntary contributions to the Institute and requested the Secretary-General to continue to give the Institute administrative and other support,

Recalling its resolutions 45/62 G of 4 December 1990, 55/35 A of 20 November 2000 and 60/89 of 8 December 2005 on the tenth, twentieth and twenty-fifth anniversaries of the Institute,

Considering the continuing need for the international community to have access to independent and in-depth research on security issues and prospects for disarmament and non-proliferation,

Underlining the particularly relevant contribution of the Institute to thinking and analysis on international security issues in the current context,

Recognizing the potential of the Institute, through its research, seminars, networks, outreach activities and publications, such as Disarmament Forum, to assist ongoing negotiations on disarmament and efforts at ensuring greater international security at a progressively lower level of armaments and to contribute to education in this regard,

Noting the lack of implementation to date of the recommendation of the Advisory Board on Disarmament Matters that the costs of the core staff of the Institute, in addition to those of the Director, be funded from the regular budget of the United Nations,

1. Welcomes the thirtieth anniversary of the establishment of the United Nations Institute for Disarmament Research;

2. Recognizes the importance, the timeliness and the high quality of the work of the Institute;

3. Reiterates its conviction that the Institute should continue to conduct independent research on problems relating to disarmament and security and to undertake specialized research requiring a high degree of expertise;

4. Emphasizes the importance of the Institute as a stand-alone, autonomous institution that contributes, through its research, analysis and activities, to progress in disarmament and, ultimately, to a safer world;

5. Underlines the contribution that the Institute makes and should continue to make in the field of disarmament and non-proliferation education in all regions of the world;

6. Appeals to all Member States to continue to make financial contributions to the Institute in order to ensure its viability and the quality of its work over the long term;

7. Recommends that the Secretary-General implement, within existing resources, the relevant recommendations of the Board of Trustees of the Institute on the funding of the Institute.

Disarmament fellowships, training and advisory services

Twenty-five fellows participated in the 2010 UN disarmament fellowship, training and advisory services programme, which began in Geneva on 23 August and concluded in New York on 22 October. The programme was structured in three segments: a study session in Geneva; study visits to disarmament-related intergovernmental organizations and to Member States; and a study session at UN Headquarters in New York.

Report of Secretary-General. Pursuant to General Assembly resolution 63/79 [YUN 2008, p. 642], the Secretary-General reported in July [A/65/151] on the UN disarmament fellowship, training and advisory services programme, which, since being launched in 1979 [YUN 1979, p. 92], had trained 808 officials from 159 States. He noted the contribution of the programme to promoting a greater awareness of the importance of disarmament, non-proliferation and arms control. The programme afforded an important opportunity to facilitate a better understanding of the work of UNODA and of other global institutions active in the area of disarmament, as well as of the security concerns of Member States. The Secretary-General was gratified to note that the number of women nominated fellows had remained high (45 per cent) in 2009–2010.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 8 December [meeting 60], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the First Committee [A/65/411], adopted resolution 65/82 without vote [agenda item 98 (a)].

United Nations disarmament fellowship, training and advisory services

The General Assembly,

Having considered the report of the Secretary-General,

Recalling its decision, contained in paragraph 108 of the Final Document of the Tenth Special Session of the General Assembly, the first special session devoted to disarmament, to establish a programme of fellowships on disarmament, as well as its decisions contained in annex IV to the Concluding Document of the Twelfth Special Session of the General Assembly, the second special session devoted to disarmament, including its decision to continue the programme,

Noting that the programme continues to contribute significantly to developing greater awareness of the importance and benefits of disarmament and a better understanding of the concerns of the international community in the field of disarmament and security, as well as to enhancing the knowledge and skills of fellows, allowing them to participate more effectively in efforts in the field of disarmament at all levels,

Noting with satisfaction that the programme has trained a large number of officials from Member States throughout its thirty-two years of existence, many of whom hold positions of responsibility in the field of disarmament within their own Governments,

Recognizing the need for Member States to take into account gender equality when nominating candidates to the programme,

Recalling all the annual resolutions on the matter since the thirty-seventh session of the General Assembly, in 1982, including resolution 50/71 A of 12 December 1995,

Believing that the forms of assistance available under the programme to Member States, in particular to developing countries, will enhance the capabilities of their officials to follow ongoing deliberations and negotiations on disarmament, both bilateral and multilateral,

1. Reaffirms its decisions contained in annex IV to the Concluding Document of the Twelfth Special Session of the General Assembly and the report of the Secretary-General approved by the Assembly in its resolution 33/71 E of 14 December 1978;

2. Expresses its appreciation to all Member States and organizations that have consistently supported the programme throughout the years, thereby contributing to its success, in particular to the Governments of Germany and Japan for continuing extensive and highly educative study visits for the participants in the programme and to the Governments of China and Switzerland for organizing study visits for the fellows in the area of disarmament in 2009 and 2010;

3. Also expresses its appreciation to the International Atomic Energy Agency, the Organization for the Prohibition of Chemical Weapons, the Preparatory Commission for the Comprehensive Nuclear-Test-Ban Treaty Organization and the James Martin Center for Nonproliferation Studies of the Monterey Institute of International Studies for organizing specific study programmes in the field of disarmament in their respective areas of competence, thereby contributing to the objectives of the programme;

4. Commends the Secretary-General for the diligence with which the programme has continued to be carried out;

5. Requests the Secretary-General to continue to implement annually the Geneva-based programme within existing resources and to report thereon to the General Assembly at its sixty-seventh session;

6. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its sixty-seventh session the item entitled “United Nations disarmament fellowship, training and advisory services”.

Disarmament education

Pursuant to General Assembly resolution 63/70 [YUN 2008, p. 639], the Secretary-General, in a July report [A/65/160 & Add.1], reviewed the results of the implementation of the 34 recommendations of a 2002 study [YUN 2002, p. 544] on disarmament and non-proliferation education and possible new opportunities for promoting such education. Six Member States (Burkina Faso, Japan, Mexico, Spain, Turkmenistan, Ukraine) had submitted information, together with 9 UN entities and international organizations and 20 civil society and non-governmental organizations.

The report was the fourth on disarmament and non-proliferation education since the adoption of the 2002 study. Compared with previous years, there was an overwhelming response from civil society on the implementation of the 34 recommendations of the study. That reflected the renewed interest in disarmament and non-proliferation education worldwide, and was encouraging at a time when the United Nations was promoting such education as an integral part of the education curriculum of the next generation. Some of the most effective efforts in that area were based on partnerships among Governments and international, regional and non-governmental organizations. The United Nations would continue to seek opportunities to promote and participate in such collaborative work.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 8 December [meeting 60], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the First Committee [A/65/410], adopted resolution 65/77 without vote [agenda item 97 (k)].

United Nations study on disarmament and non-proliferation education

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 55/33 E of 20 November 2000, 57/60 of 22 November 2002, 59/93 of 3 December 2004, 61/73 of 6 December 2006 and 63/70 of 2 December 2008,

Welcoming the report of the Secretary-General on disarmament and non-proliferation education, in which the Secretary-General reported on the implementation of the recommendations contained in the United Nations study on disarmament and non-proliferation education,

Recognizing the usefulness of the disarmament and non-proliferation education website, “Disarmament Education: Resources for Learning”, welcoming the launch on the site of the publication Disarmament: A Basic Guide by the Office for Disarmament Affairs of the Secretariat, and encouraging the continuous updating of the educational disarmament and non-proliferation content on the United Nations CyberSchoolBus website, launched by the Department of Public Information of the Secretariat and the Office for Disarmament Affairs,

Emphasizing that the Secretary-General concludes in his report that efforts need to be continued to implement the recommendations of the study and follow the good examples of how they are being implemented to stimulate even further long-term results,

Desirous of stressing the urgency of promoting concerted international efforts at disarmament and non-proliferation, in particular in the field of nuclear disarmament and non-proliferation, with a view to strengthening international security and enhancing sustainable economic and social development,

Conscious of the need to combat the negative effects of cultures of violence and complacency in the face of current dangers in this field through long-term programmes of education and training,

Remaining convinced that the need for disarmament and non-proliferation education has never been greater, not only on the subject of weapons of mass destruction but also in the field of small arms and light weapons, terrorism and other challenges to international security and the process of disarmament, as well as on the relevance of implementing the recommendations contained in the United Nations study,

Recognizing the importance of encouraging civil society, including non-governmental organizations, to play a more active role in the promotion of disarmament and non-proliferation education,

1. Expresses its appreciation to the Member States, the United Nations and other international and regional organizations, civil society and non-governmental organizations, which, within their purview, implemented the recommendations made in the United Nations study, as discussed in the report of the Secretary-General reviewing the implementation of the recommendations, and encourages them once again to continue applying those recommendations and reporting to the Secretary-General on steps taken to implement them;

2. Requests the Secretary-General to prepare a report reviewing the results of the implementation of the recommendations and possible new opportunities for promoting disarmament and non-proliferation education, and to submit it to the General Assembly at its sixty-seventh session;

3. Reiterates the request to the Secretary-General to utilize electronic means to the fullest extent possible in the dissemination, in as many official languages as feasible, of information related to that report and any other information that the Office for Disarmament Affairs gathers on an ongoing basis in regard to the implementation of the recommendations of the United Nations study;

4. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its sixty-seventh session the item entitled “Disarmament and non-proliferation education”.

Disarmament information programme

Pursuant to resolution 63/81 [YUN 2008, p. 640], the Secretary-General in July submitted a report [A/65/159] reviewing the activities of the United Nations Disarmament Information Programme carried out by UNODA. The Programme focused its activities on information in the field of weapons of mass destruction, especially nuclear weapons, and on the illicit trade in small arms and light weapons. Orienting its publications to electronic formats, the Disarmament Yearbook, the Occasional Papers series and the quarterly "Disarmament Update" were available on the UNODA website; specialized websites had been developed for major conferences. With the assistance of the Department of Public Information (DPI), UNODA would continue to improve the website. DPI had highlighted disarmament and arms control issues, especially nuclear weapons and small arms and light weapons, in print, on the Internet and in film, television and radio, using its global network of information centres. DPI use of the celebrity appeal of the Messengers of Peace in respect of arms control issues continued to be effective. UNODA facilitated the participation of civil society organizations in disarmament-related meetings and conferences and worked with coalitions of NGOs that spearheaded such participation.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 8 December [meeting 60], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the First Committee [A/65/411], adopted resolution 65/81 without vote [agenda item 98 (b)].

United Nations Disarmament Information Programme

The General Assembly,

Recalling its decision taken in 1982 at its twelfth special session, the second special session devoted to disarmament, by which the World Disarmament Campaign was launched,

Bearing in mind its resolution 47/53 D of 9 December 1992, in which it decided, inter alia, that the World Disarmament Campaign should be known thereafter as the "United Nations Disarmament Information Programme" and the World Disarmament Campaign Voluntary Trust Fund as the "Voluntary Trust Fund for the United Nations Disarmament Information Programme",

Recalling its resolutions 51/46 A of 10 December 1996, 53/78 E of 4 December 1998, 55/34 A of 20 November 2000, 57/90 of 22 November 2002, 59/103 of 3 December 2004, 61/95 of 6 December 2006 and 63/81 of 2 December 2008,

Welcoming the report of the Secretary-General,

1. Commends the Secretary-General for his efforts to make effective use of the limited resources available to him in disseminating, as widely as possible, information on arms control and disarmament to Governments, the media, non-governmental organizations, educational communities and research institutes and in carrying out a seminar and conference programme;

2. Stresses the importance of the United Nations Disarmament Information Programme as a significant instrument in enabling all Member States to participate fully in the deliberations and negotiations on disarmament in the various United Nations bodies, in assisting them in complying with treaties, as required, and in contributing to agreed mechanisms for transparency;

3. Commends with satisfaction the launch of The United Nations Disarmament Yearbook for 2009, as well as its online edition, by the Office for Disarmament Affairs of the Secretariat;

4. Notes with appreciation the cooperation of the Department of Public Information of the Secretariat and its information centres in pursuit of the objectives of the Programme;

5. Recommends that the Programme continue to inform, educate and generate public understanding of the importance of multilateral action and support for it, including action by the United Nations and the Conference on Disarmament, in the field of arms control and disarmament, in a factual, balanced and objective manner, and that it focus its efforts:

(a) To continue to publish in all official languages The United Nations Disarmament Yearbook, the flagship publication of the Office for Disarmament Affairs;

(b) To continue to update the disarmament website as a part of the United Nations website in as many official languages as feasible;

(c) To encourage the use of the Programme as a means to provide information related to progress on the implementation of nuclear disarmament measures;

(d) To continue to intensify United Nations interaction with the public, principally non-governmental organizations and research institutes, to help further an informed debate on topical issues of arms limitation, disarmament and security;

(e) To continue to organize discussions on topics of interest in the field of arms limitation and disarmament with a view to broadening understanding and facilitating an exchange of views and information among Member States and civil society;

6. Recognizes the importance of all support extended to the Voluntary Trust Fund for the United Nations Disarmament Information Programme, and once again invites all Member States to make further contributions to the Fund with a view to sustaining a strong outreach programme;

7. Takes note of the recommendations contained in the report of the Secretary-General on disarmament and non-proliferation education, which reviews the implementation of the recommendations made in the 2002 study on disarmament and non-proliferation education;

8. Requests the Secretary-General to submit to the General Assembly at its sixty-seventh session a report covering both the implementation of the activities of the Programme by the United Nations system during the previous two years and the activities of the Programme contemplated by the system for the following two years;

9. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its sixty-seventh session the item entitled "United Nations Disarmament Information Programme".

Regional disarmament

Throughout 2010, regional organizations remained engaged with disarmament and non-proliferation issues. Regional and subregional initiatives aimed at preventing the spread of weapons of mass destruction, curbing the illicit trade in small arms and light weapons and promoting confidence- and security-building measures.

The General Assembly in resolution 65/45 (see below) noted that regional disarmament endeavours, taking into account the characteristics of each region and in accordance with the principle of undiminished security at the lowest level of armaments, would enhance the security of all States and thus contribute to international peace and security by reducing the risk of regional conflicts.

Communication. On 2 July [A/64/855], Turkmenistan transmitted the final document of the International Conference on Disarmament in Central Asia and the Caspian Basin (Ashgabat, Turkmenistan, 24 June), held under the aegis of the United Nations.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 8 December [meeting 60], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the First Committee [A/65/410], adopted resolution 65/45 without vote [agenda item 97 (i)].

Regional disarmament

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 45/58 P of 4 December 1990, 46/36 I of 6 December 1991, 47/52 J of 9 December 1992, 48/75 I of 16 December 1993, 49/75 N of 15 December 1994, 50/70 K of 12 December 1995, 51/45 K of 10 December 1996, 52/38 P of 9 December 1997, 53/77 O of 4 December 1998, 54/54 N of 1 December 1999, 55/33 O of 20 November 2000, 56/24 H of 29 November 2001, 57/76 of 22 November 2002, 58/38 of 8 December 2003, 59/89 of 3 December 2004, 60/63 of 8 December 2005, 61/80 of 6 December 2006, 62/38 of 5 December 2007, 63/43 of 2 December 2008 and 64/41 of 2 December 2009 on regional disarmament,

Believing that the efforts of the international community to move towards the ideal of general and complete disarmament are guided by the inherent human desire for genuine peace and security, the elimination of the danger of war and the release of economic, intellectual and other resources for peaceful pursuits,

Affirming the abiding commitment of all States to the purposes and principles enshrined in the Charter of the United Nations in the conduct of their international relations,

Noting that essential guidelines for progress towards general and complete disarmament were adopted at the tenth special session of the General Assembly,

Taking note of the guidelines and recommendations for regional approaches to disarmament within the context of global security adopted by the Disarmament Commission at its 1993 substantive session,

Welcoming the prospects of genuine progress in the field of disarmament engendered in recent years as a result of negotiations between the two super-Powers,

Taking note of the recent proposals for disarmament at the regional and subregional levels,

Recognizing the importance of confidence-building measures for regional and international peace and security,

Convinced that endeavours by countries to promote regional disarmament, taking into account the specific characteristics of each region and in accordance with the principle of undiminished security at the lowest level of armaments, would enhance the security of all States and would thus contribute to international peace and security by reducing the risk of regional conflicts,

1. Stresses that sustained efforts are needed, within the framework of the Conference on Disarmament and under the umbrella of the United Nations, to make progress on the entire range of disarmament issues;

2. Affirms that global and regional approaches to disarmament complement each other and should therefore be pursued simultaneously to promote regional and international peace and security;

3. Calls upon States to conclude agreements, wherever possible, for nuclear non-proliferation, disarmament and confidence-building measures at the regional and subregional levels;

4. Welcomes the initiatives towards disarmament, nuclear non-proliferation and security undertaken by some countries at the regional and subregional levels;

5. Supports and encourages efforts aimed at promoting confidence-building measures at the regional and subregional levels to ease regional tensions and to further disarmament and nuclear non-proliferation measures at the regional and subregional levels;

6. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its sixty-sixth session the item entitled "Regional disarmament".

Conventional arms control at regional and subregional levels

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 8 December [meeting 60], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the First Committee [A/65/410], adopted resolution 65/46 by recorded vote (175-1-2) [agenda item 97 (i)].

Conventional arms control at the regional and subregional levels

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 48/75 J of 16 December 1993, 49/75 O of 15 December 1994, 50/70 L of 12 December

1995, 51/45 Q of 10 December 1996, 52/38 Q of 9 December 1997, 53/77 P of 4 December 1998, 54/54 M of 1 December 1999, 55/33 P of 20 November 2000, 56/24 I of 29 November 2001, 57/77 of 22 November 2002, 58/39 of 8 December 2003, 59/88 of 3 December 2004, 60/75 of 8 December 2005, 61/82 of 6 December 2006, 62/44 of 5 December 2007, 63/44 of 2 December 2008 and 64/42 of 2 December 2009,

Recognizing the crucial role of conventional arms control in promoting regional and international peace and security,

Convinced that conventional arms control needs to be pursued primarily in the regional and subregional contexts since most threats to peace and security in the post-cold-war era arise mainly among States located in the same region or subregion,

Aware that the preservation of a balance in the defence capabilities of States at the lowest level of armaments would contribute to peace and stability and should be a prime objective of conventional arms control,

Desirous of promoting agreements to strengthen regional peace and security at the lowest possible level of armaments and military forces,

Noting with particular interest the initiatives taken in this regard in different regions of the world, in particular the commencement of consultations among a number of Latin American countries and the proposals for conventional arms control made in the context of South Asia, and recognizing, in the context of this subject, the relevance and value of the Treaty on Conventional Armed Forces in Europe, which is a cornerstone of European security,

Believing that militarily significant States and States with larger military capabilities have a special responsibility in promoting such agreements for regional security,

Believing also that an important objective of conventional arms control in regions of tension should be to prevent the possibility of military attack launched by surprise and to avoid aggression,

1. Decides to give urgent consideration to the issues involved in conventional arms control at the regional and subregional levels;

2. Requests the Conference on Disarmament to consider the formulation of principles that can serve as a framework for regional agreements on conventional arms control, and looks forward to a report of the Conference on this subject;

3. Requests the Secretary-General, in the meantime, to seek the views of Member States on the subject and to submit a report to the General Assembly at its sixty-sixth session;

4. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its sixty-sixth session the item entitled "Conventional arms control at the regional and subregional levels".

In July, the Secretary-General, in response to General Assembly resolution 64/43 [YUN 2009, p. 566] on confidence-building measures in the regional and subregional context, submitted a report [A/65/135] containing the views of five Member States (Burkina Faso, Lebanon, Mexico, Spain, Ukraine) on the issue.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 8 December [meeting 60], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the First Committee [A/65/410], adopted resolution 65/47 without vote [agenda item 97 (u)].

Confidence-building measures in the regional and subregional context

The General Assembly,

Guided by the purposes and principles enshrined in the Charter of the United Nations,

Recalling its resolutions 58/43 of 8 December 2003, 59/87 of 3 December 2004, 60/64 of 8 December 2005, 61/81 of 6 December 2006, 62/45 of 5 December 2007, 63/45 of 2 December 2008 and 64/43 of 2 December 2009,

Recalling further the resolutions and guidelines adopted by consensus by the General Assembly and the Disarmament Commission relating to confidence-building measures and their implementation at the global, regional and subregional levels,

Considering the importance and effectiveness of confidence-building measures taken at the initiative and with the agreement of all States concerned, and taking into account the specific characteristics of each region, since such measures can contribute to regional stability,

Convinced that resources released by disarmament, including regional disarmament, can be devoted to economic and social development and to the protection of the environment for the benefit of all peoples, in particular those of the developing countries,

Recognizing the need for meaningful dialogue among States concerned to avert conflict,

Welcoming the peace processes already initiated by States concerned to resolve their disputes through peaceful means bilaterally or through mediation, inter alia, by third parties, regional organizations or the United Nations,

Recognizing that States in some regions have already taken steps towards confidence-building measures at the bilateral, subregional and regional levels in the political and military fields, including arms control and disarmament, and noting that such confidence-building measures have improved peace and security in those regions and contributed to progress in the socio-economic conditions of their people,

Concerned that the continuation of disputes among States, particularly in the absence of an effective mechanism to resolve them through peaceful means, may contribute to the arms race and endanger the maintenance of international peace and security and the efforts of the international community to promote arms control and disarmament,

1. Calls upon Member States to refrain from the use or threat of use of force in accordance with the purposes and principles of the Charter of the United Nations;

2. Reaffirms its commitment to the peaceful settlement of disputes under Chapter VI of the Charter, in particular Article 33, which provides for a solution by negotiation, enquiry, mediation, conciliation, arbitration, judicial settlement, resort to regional agencies or arrangements or other peaceful means chosen by the parties;

3. Reaffirms the ways and means regarding confidence- and security-building measures set out in the report of the Disarmament Commission on its 1993 session;

4. Calls upon Member States to pursue these ways and means through sustained consultations and dialogue, while at the same time avoiding actions that may hinder or impair such a dialogue;

5. Urges States to comply strictly with all bilateral, regional and international agreements, including arms control and disarmament agreements, to which they are party;

6. Emphasizes that the objective of confidence-building measures should be to help to strengthen international peace and security and to be consistent with the principle of undiminished security at the lowest level of armaments;

7. Encourages the promotion of bilateral and regional confidence-building measures, with the consent and participation of the parties concerned, to avoid conflict and prevent the unintended and accidental outbreak of hostilities;

8. Requests the Secretary-General to submit a report to the General Assembly at its sixty-sixth session containing the views of Member States on confidence-building measures in the regional and subregional context;

9. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its sixty-sixth session the item entitled "Confidence-building measures in the regional and subregional context".

Recognizing that the changes that have taken place in the world have created new opportunities and posed new challenges for the pursuit of disarmament, and bearing in mind, in this regard, that the regional centres for peace and disarmament can contribute substantially to understanding and cooperation among States in each particular region in the areas of peace, disarmament and development,

Recalling that, in paragraph 127 of the Final Document of the Fifteenth Summit Conference of Heads of State and Government of the Movement of Non-Aligned Countries, held in Sharm el-Sheikh, Egypt, from 11 to 16 July 2009, the Heads of State and Government emphasized the importance of United Nations activities at the regional level to increase the stability and security of its Member States, which could be promoted in a substantive manner by the maintenance and revitalization of the three regional centres for peace and disarmament,

1. Reiterates the importance of United Nations activities at the regional level to advance disarmament and to increase the stability and security of its Member States, which could be promoted in a substantive manner by the maintenance and revitalization of the three regional centres for peace and disarmament;

2. Reaffirms that, in order to achieve positive results, it is useful for the three regional centres to carry out dissemination and educational programmes that promote regional peace and security and that are aimed at changing basic

The activities of the United Nations Regional Centre for Peace and Disarmament in Africa in 2010 were covered in a later report of the Secretary-General [A/66/159]. The Centre was established in Lomé, Togo, in 1986 [YUN 1986, p. 85]. At the request of the member States of the United Nations Standing Advisory Committee on Security Questions in Central Africa, the Centre assisted in drafting the Central African Convention for the Control of Small Arms and Light Weapons, their Ammunition and all Parts and Components that can be used for their Manufacture, Repair and Assembly (Kinshasa Convention), which was adopted in April (see p. 118). In July, the Centre assisted the national commission of Togo in reviewing its draft legislation on the control of small arms and light weapons and in drafting the national action plan for their management and control. The project on "Regulating small arms brokering in Africa", launched by the Centre in 2009, completed its main activities in 2010: it was implemented in Burundi, Kenya, Rwanda, the United Republic of Tanzania and Uganda to strengthen the capacity of national focal points on small arms and light weapons to better control brokering activities. The Centre co-organized a training session on violence against women for female officers of the Togolese gendarmerie and security forces (Lomé, January); organized a workshop (Accra, Ghana, May) for West African parliamentarians on the international dimension of small arms control; co-organized two interparliamentary conferences (Bamako, February; Monrovia, October) on the development of national legislation on small arms and light weapons and on parliamentary oversight over the security sector; co-hosted a seminar for African States (Pretoria, South Africa, 15–17 March) in preparation for the 2010 NPT Review Conference; and trained members of provincial parliaments in the Democratic Republic of the Congo on oversight of the security sector (August). As at 31 December 2009, the reserves and fund balance of the Centre's trust fund stood at $779,227.

Asia and the Pacific

Pursuant to General Assembly resolution 64/63 [YUN 2009, p. 570], the Secretary-General in July [A/65/120] reported on the work of the United Nations Regional Centre for Peace and Disarmament in Asia and the Pacific between July 2009 and June 2010 on promoting global disarmament and non-proliferation norms; enhancing regional dialogue on disarmament, non-proliferation and security matters; and partnership, outreach and advocacy activities. The Centre, established in 1987 [YUN 1987, p. 89] and located in Kathmandu, Nepal, organized workshops, seminars and two conferences, namely, the twenty-first United Nations Conference on Disarmament Issues (Niigata, Japan, 26–28 August 2009) and the eighth United Nations-Republic of Korea Joint Conference on Disarmament and Non-Proliferation Issues (Jeju Island, Republic of Korea, 16–18 November 2009). The Secretary-General called on Member States, in particular those from the region, to provide political and financial support to the Centre. As at 31 December 2009, the reserves and fund balance of the Centre's trust fund stood at $559,836.

Other political and security questions

In 2010, the United Nations continued to address political and security questions related to its support for democratization worldwide, the promotion of decolonization and the peaceful uses of outer space, as well as the Organization's public information activities.

In a March resolution, the General Assembly recalled that 2010 marked the sixty-fifth anniversary of the end of the Second World War, and underlined the progress made since the War's end towards reconciliation, international cooperation and the promotion of democratic values, human rights and fundamental freedoms, particularly through the United Nations. In May, the Assembly held a special solemn meeting in commemoration of all victims of the Second World War.

The Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples reviewed progress in implementing the 1960 Declaration, particularly as regards the exercise of self-determination by the remaining 16 Non-Self-Governing Territories. It organized a Pacific regional seminar in Nouméa, New Caledonia, to review implementation of the plan of action for the Second International Decade for the Eradication of Colonialism (2001–2010) and to identify priority actions for the remaining year of the Decade. In August, the Secretary-General submitted a report reviewing the achievements of the Decade, but also noting that the task of decolonization was incomplete. In that regard, and on the recommendation of the Special Committee, the Assembly in December declared the period 2011–2020 the Third International Decade for the Eradication of Colonialism.

The Committee on the Peaceful Uses of Outer Space discussed ways and means of maintaining outer space for peaceful purposes; the spin-off benefits of space technology; space and society; space and water; space and climate change; the use of space technology in the UN system; and promoting the use of space-derived geospatial data for sustainable development. It also reviewed the work of its two subcommittees, one dealing with scientific and technical issues and the other with legal issues, and considered the implementation of the recommendations of the Third (1999) United Nations Conference on the Exploration and Peaceful Uses of Outer Space (1999).

There was progress in implementing the United Nations Platform for Space-based Information for Disaster Management and Emergency Response (UN-SPIDER). A host country agreement was signed between China and the Office for Outer Space Affairs for the establishment of the UN-SPIDER office in Beijing. UN-SPIDER took a lead role in the aftermath of major earthquakes in Haiti and Chile by ensuring the immediate activation and delivery of satellite imagery and maps of the affected areas, including through the UN-SPIDER portal.

The United Nations Scientific Committee on the Effects of Atomic Radiation held its fifty-seventh session in Vienna in August. The Committee developed and approved for submission to the Assembly a scientific report summarizing low-dose radiation effects on health. It also approved a strategy to improve data collection, analysis and dissemination.

Addressing developments in information and telecommunications in the context of international security, the Assembly in December called on Member States to promote the consideration of existing and potential threats in the field of information security, as well as strategies to address those threats, consistent with the need to preserve the free flow of information.

The Committee on Information continued to review UN information policies and activities and the management and operation of the UN Department of Public Information (DPI). At its session in May, the Committee considered reports by the Secretary-General on DPI activities in promoting the work of the United Nations to a global audience, and adopted two resolutions for submission to the General Assembly. During the year, DPI provided communications support to the creation of UN-Women; the 2010 Review Conference of the Parties to the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons; International Women's Day; the 15-year review of the implementation of the Beijing Declaration and Platform for Action; and the International Day of United Nations Peacekeepers, among other occasions. The Academic Impact initiative continued to expand, with some 300 universities from 60 countries having joined the programme.

Decolonization

The General Assembly's Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples (Special Committee on decolonization) held its annual session in New York in two parts: 25 February and 18 and 30 March (first part); and 15 and 21–25 June (second part). The Special Committee considered various aspects of the implementation of the 1960 Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples, adopted by the General Assembly in resolution 1514(XV) [YUN 1960, p. 49], including general decolonization issues and the situation in the individual Non-Self-Governing Territories (NSGTs). The Special Committee adopted three resolutions and recommended ten draft resolutions for adoption by the Assembly. In accordance with resolution 64/106 [YUN 2009, p. 577], the Special Committee reported to the Assembly on its 2010 activities [A/65/23 & Corr.1].

By decision 64/554 of 15 April, the General Assembly increased the Special Committee's membership from 28 to 29. On the same date (decision 64/418), the Assembly appointed Nicaragua as a member of the Special Committee.

Commemoration of fiftieth anniversary. In response to the recommendation of the Special Committee contained in its decision of 25 June [A/64/23/Add.1], the Assembly on 29 June decided to acknowledge the fiftieth anniversary of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples by holding a commemorative meeting on 14 December, on the occasion of that milestone (decision 64/560). Fiftieth anniversary of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples

The General Assembly,

Recalling the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples, contained in its resolution 1514(XV) of 14 December 1960,

Recalling also the provisions of the Charter of the United Nations, in which the peoples of the world proclaimed their determination to reaffirm faith in fundamental human rights, in the dignity and worth of the human person and in the equal rights of men and women and of nations large and small, and to promote social progress and better standards of life in larger freedom,

Recalling further the relevant provisions of the Declaration on Principles of International Law concerning Friendly Relations and Cooperation among States in accordance with the Charter of the United Nations,

Bearing in mind its resolution 55/146 of 8 December 2000, by which it declared the period 2001–2010 the Second International Decade for the Eradication of Colonialism, and the need to examine ways to ascertain the wishes of the peoples of the Non-Self-Governing Territories on the basis of resolution 1514(XV) and other relevant resolutions on decolonization,

Recognizing the significant and commendable role played by the United Nations, since its very inception, in the field of decolonization, and noting the emergence, during this period, of more than one hundred States into sovereign existence,

Noting with satisfaction, in particular, that during the past fifty years a large number of former colonial Territories have achieved independence and that many former Trust and Non-Self-Governing Territories have exercised their right to self-determination and independence in accordance with the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples,

Noting also with satisfaction the important contribution made by the Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples in furthering the aims and objectives of the Declaration,

Noting further with satisfaction the active and important role being played by former colonial Territories, as States Members of the United Nations and members of the other organizations of the United Nations system, in the realization of the purposes and principles of the Charter, the preservation of international peace and security, decolonization and the promotion of human progress, as well as the profound impact thereof on contemporary international relations,

Stressing the importance of formal participation of the administering Powers in the work of the Special Committee,

Noting with satisfaction the cooperation and active participation of the administering Powers in the work of the Special Committee with a view to furthering the process of decolonization and self-determination, and encouraging them to continue to do so,

Conscious of the fact that the Declaration has played an important role in assisting the peoples of the Non-Self-Governing Territories and will continue to serve as an inspiration in their efforts to achieve self-determination and independence in accordance with the Charter and in mobilizing world public opinion for the complete elimination of colonialism in all its forms and manifestations,

Noting with satisfaction the work accomplished by the regional seminars held by the Special Committee during the First and Second International Decades for the Eradication of Colonialism,

Deeply concerned about the fact that, fifty years after the adoption of the Declaration, colonialism has not yet been totally eradicated,

Increasingly aware of the importance of economic, social and cultural development and self-reliance of the Non-Self-Governing Territories and their peoples for the attainment and consolidation of genuine self-government and independence,

Noting that the large majority of the remaining Non-Self-Governing Territories are small island Territories,

Determined to take effective measures leading to the complete and unconditional elimination of colonialism in all its forms and manifestations without further delay,

1. Reaffirms the inalienable right of all peoples of the Non-Self-Governing Territories to self-determination, including independence, in accordance with the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples, contained in resolution 1514(XV);

2. Declares that the continuation of colonialism in all its forms and manifestations is incompatible with the Charter of the United Nations, the Declaration and the principles of international law;

3. Urges Member States to do their utmost to promote, in the United Nations and the specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system, effective measures for the full and speedy implementation of the Declaration in all Non-Self-Governing Territories to which the Declaration applies;

4. Urges the administering Powers and other Member States to ensure that the activities of foreign economic and other interests in colonial Territories do not run counter to the interests of the inhabitants of those Territories and do not impede the implementation of the Declaration;

5. Requests Member States, as well as the organizations of the United Nations system, to ensure that the permanent sovereignty of the colonial Territories over their natural resources is fully respected and safeguarded;

6. Reiterates the view that such factors as territorial size, geographical location, size of population and limited natural resources should in no way delay the speedy exercise by the peoples of the Non-Self-Governing Territories of their inalienable right to self-determination, including independence, in accordance with the Declaration, which fully applies to the Non-Self-Governing Territories;

7. Reaffirms that all administering Powers are obliged, under the Charter and in accordance with the Declaration, to create economic, social and other conditions in the Territories under their administration that will enable those Territories to achieve genuine self-government and economic self-reliance;

8. Requests the administering Powers to preserve the cultural identity, as well as the national unity, of the Territories under their administration and to encourage the full development of the indigenous culture, with a view to facilitating the unfettered exercise of the right to self-determination and independence by the peoples of those Territories;

9. Considers it incumbent upon the United Nations to continue to play an active role in the process of decolonization and to intensify its efforts for the widest possible dissemination of information on decolonization, with a view to the further mobilization of international public opinion in support of complete decolonization;

10. Urges Member States to ensure the full and speedy implementation of the Declaration and other relevant resolutions of the United Nations;

11. Invites non-governmental organizations having a special interest in the field of decolonization to intensify their activities in cooperation with the United Nations;

12. Requests the Special Committee to continue to examine the full compliance of all States with resolution 1514(XV) and other relevant resolutions on the question of decolonization, to seek the most suitable ways for the speedy and total application of the Declaration to all Territories to which it applies and to propose to the General Assembly specific measures for the complete implementation of the Declaration in the remaining Non-Self-Governing Territories;

13. Invites all States to cooperate fully with the Special Committee in the complete fulfilment of its mandate.

Decade for the Eradication of Colonialism

Pacific regional seminar

The Special Committee on decolonization organized a Pacific regional seminar (Nouméa, New Caledonia, 18–20 May) [A/65/23] to review implementation of the plan of action for the Second International Decade for the Eradication of Colonialism (2001–2010) [YUN 2001, p. 530] and to identify priority actions for the remaining year of the Decade, as declared by General Assembly resolution 55/146 [YUN 2000, p. 548]. The objective of the seminar was to enable the Special Committee to hear the views of representatives of NSGTs, experts, civil society and other stakeholders in the process of decolonization.

Seminar participants reaffirmed that all peoples had the right to self-determination, and, by virtue thereof, the right to freely determine their political status and pursue their economic, social and cultural development, and that the UN system had a valid ongoing role in the process of decolonization. The seminar underlined the importance for the Special Committee to develop a proactive and focused approach, in fulfilment of the goal of decolonization vis-à-vis the NSGTs on the UN list. Participants advised that the Special Committee, in collaboration with the UN Department of Public Information, engage with the peoples of the NSGTs to foster an understanding of the options for self-determination in accordance with relevant UN resolutions and decisions. Seminar participants suggested that the relevant territorial Governments and administering Powers consider incorporating decolonization issues into the school curriculums of the NSGTs, and that the Special Committee retool its work methods and hone its capacity to conduct the regional seminars in a manner that allowed it to better hear the views of NSGTs. The Special Committee was also advised to develop ways and means through which it could better assess, on a case-by-case basis, the current stage of decolonization and self-determination in each NSGT. The seminar suggested again that the Special Committee consider proposing to the General Assembly the possibility of launching a Third International Decade for the Eradication of Colonialism, and in that context, that the Special Committee conduct a stocktaking of current challenges for the decolonization process and draw up a plan of action for the Third Decade.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 10 December [meeting 62], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fourth Committee [A/65/430], adopted resolution 65/117 by recorded vote (171-3-2) [agenda item 59].

Second International Decade

In response to General Assembly resolution 55/146 [YUN 2000, p. 548], the Secretary-General in August submitted a report [A/65/330 & Add.1] on the achievements of the Second International Decade for the Eradication of Colonialism (2001–2010). The report reviewed the decolonization actions taken by Member States and UN entities and specialized agencies during the previous decade. Notable outcomes included the independence of East Timor as Timor-Leste [YUN 2002, p. 315] and thus its successful decolonization, and considerable progress on the question of Tokelau towards a negotiated decolonization outcome. Successive Assembly resolutions and the work of the Special Committee had kept the issue of decolonization firmly on the Organization's agenda, and numerous activities mandated by the Assembly were accomplished, including the consideration of Assembly reports; the annual preparation of Secretariat working papers on each of the Territories; visiting missions; the organization of annual seminars in the Caribbean and Pacific regions; and the enlisting of global support for the objectives of the Declaration, including through the UN website on decolonization. Some specialized agencies and regional commissions had facilitated the participation of NSGTs in their bodies as observers or associate members, enabling them to become eligible to participate in world conferences on economic and social issues.

Nevertheless, because the task of decolonizing the remaining 16 NSGTs was incomplete, formal and informal dialogue aimed at improving cooperation between the Special Committee and the administering Powers remained an essential part of efforts to advance the decolonization process. The report recalled that the Assembly had requested the Special Committee to continue to seek suitable means for the full implementation of the Declaration and to carry out the actions approved by the Assembly in the context of the First and Second Decades. In addition to the above-mentioned mandated activities, which continued to be requested of the Special Committee, further actions included the formulation of specific proposals to bring about an end to colonialism, and to develop and finalize, in cooperation with the administering Powers and the Territories in question, a constructive programme of work on a case-by-case basis. The Special Committee and the Assembly had reiterated that factors such as the size of territory, population, geographical location and limited natural resources should in no way delay the exercise by the peoples of the NSGTs of their inalienable right to self-determination, including independence. They had also reaffirmed that all administering Powers were obliged to create economic, social and other conditions in the Territories under their administration that would enable those Territories to achieve self-government and economic self-reliance.

Third International Decade

As indicated by the Secretary-General's August report [A/65/330 & Add.1], the Special Committee on decolonization [A/65/23] on 25 June adopted a draft resolution for adoption by the General Assembly, by which it would declare the period 2011–2020 the Third International Decade for the Eradication of Colonialism (see below).

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

Guided by the fundamental and universal principles enshrined in the Charter of the United Nations, the Universal Declaration of Human Rights and the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights,

Implementation by international organizations

In February [A/65/61 & Corr.1], the Secretary-General reported that he had brought General Assembly resolution 64/99 [YUN 2009, p. 581] to the attention of the specialized agencies and other international institutions associated with the United Nations and invited them to submit information regarding their implementation activities in support of NSGTs. Replies received from eight agencies or institutions were summarized in a report of the Economic and Social Council President on his consultations with the Special Committee on decolonization [E/2010/54 & Add.1]. According to the information provided, several organizations continued to provide assistance to the peoples of NSGTs, including through projects funded by the United Nations Development Programme, an important provider of support.

The Economic and Social Council,

Having examined the report of the Secretary-General and the report of the President of the Economic and Social Council containing the information submitted by the specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system on their activities with regard to the implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples,

Having heard the statement by the representative of the Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples,

Recalling General Assembly resolutions 1514(XV) of 14 December 1960 and 1541(XV) of 15 December 1960, the resolutions of the Special Committee and other relevant resolutions and decisions, including, in particular, Economic and Social Council resolution 2009/33 of 31 July 2009,

Bearing in mind the relevant provisions of the final documents of the successive Conferences of Heads of State or Government of Non-Aligned Countries and of the resolutions adopted by the Assembly of Heads of State and Government of the African Union, the Pacific Islands Forum and the Caribbean Community,

Conscious of the need to facilitate the implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples, contained in General Assembly resolution 1514(XV),

Expressing its conviction that closer contacts and consultations between and among the specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system and regional organizations help to facilitate the effective formulation of programmes of assistance for the peoples concerned,

Mindful of the imperative need to keep under continuous review the activities of the specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system in the implementation of the various United Nations decisions relating to decolonization,

Bearing in mind the extremely fragile economies of the small island Non-Self-Governing Territories and their vulnerability to natural disasters, such as hurricanes, cyclones and sea-level rise, and recalling the relevant resolutions of the General Assembly,

Tokelau

At its meeting on 25 June, the Special Committee on decolonization considered the question of Tokelau (the three small atolls of Nukunonu, Fakaofu and Atafu in the South Pacific), administered by New Zealand [A/65/23]. Before it was a Secretariat working paper [A/AC.109/2010/3] covering constitutional and political developments, external relations and economic and social conditions in the Territory, and presenting the positions of New Zealand and Tokelau on the Territory's future status. Statements were made by the Ulu-o-Tokelau (titular head of the Territory, a position rotated annually among the three Faipule, or village representatives) and New Zealand [A/AC.109/2010/SR.10]. Papua New Guinea, also on behalf of Fiji, introduced a draft resolution [A/AC.109/2010/L.16], which the Committee adopted. Noting the wider significance of Tokelau for the United Nations as a case study in successful co-operation for decolonization, the resolution noted that Tokelau and New Zealand remained committed to the development of Tokelau for the long-term benefit of its people. It requested the Committee to examine the question of Tokelau and report thereon to the Assembly at its sixty-sixth (2011) session.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 10 December [meeting 62], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fourth Committee [A/65/430], adopted resolution 65/114 without vote [agenda item 59].

Question of Tokelau

The General Assembly,

Having considered the question of Tokelau,

Having examined the chapter of the report of the Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples for 2010 relating to Tokelau,

Recalling its resolution 1514(XV) of 14 December 1960, containing the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples, and all resolutions and decisions of the United Nations relating to Non-Self-Governing Territories, in particular General Assembly resolution 64/103 of 10 December 2009,

Noting with appreciation the continuing exemplary cooperation of New Zealand as the administering Power with regard to the work of the Special Committee relating to Tokelau and its readiness to permit access by United Nations visiting missions to the Territory,

Noting also with appreciation the collaborative contribution to the development of Tokelau by New Zealand and the specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system, in particular the United Nations Development Programme,

Noting that, as a small island Territory, Tokelau exemplifies the situation of most remaining Non-Self-Governing Territories and that, as a case study pointing to successful cooperation for decolonization, Tokelau has wider significance for the United Nations as it seeks to complete its work in decolonization,

Recalling that New Zealand and Tokelau signed in November 2003 a document entitled "Joint statement of the principles of partnership", which sets out the rights and responsibilities of the two partners,

Bearing in mind the decision of the General Fono at its meeting in November 2003, following extensive consultations undertaken in all three villages, to explore formally with New Zealand the option of self-government in free association and its decision in August 2005 to hold in February 2006 a referendum on self-determination on the basis of a draft constitution for Tokelau and a draft treaty of free association with New Zealand, and its subsequent decision to hold a further referendum in October 2007,

1. Notes that Tokelau and New Zealand remain firmly committed to the ongoing development of Tokelau for the long-term benefit of the people of Tokelau, with particular emphasis on the further development of facilities on each atoll that meet their current requirements;

2. Welcomes the progress made towards the devolution of power to the three taupulega (village councils), in particular the delegation of the Administrator's powers to the three taupulega with effect from 1 July 2004 and the assumption by each taupulega from that date of full responsibility for the management of all its public services;

3. Recalls the decision of the General Fono in November 2003, following extensive consultations in all three villages and a meeting of the Special Committee on the Constitution of Tokelau, to explore formally with New Zealand the option of self-government in free association, and the discussions subsequently held between Tokelau and New Zealand pursuant to the decision of the General Fono;

4. Also recalls the decision of the General Fono in August 2005 to hold a referendum on self-government on the basis of a draft constitution for Tokelau and a draft treaty of free association with New Zealand, and notes the enactment by the General Fono of rules for the referendum;

5. Further recalls that two referendums to determine the status of Tokelau, held in February 2006 and October 2007, did not produce the two-thirds majority of the valid votes cast required by the General Fono to change Tokelau's status from that of a Non-Self-Governing Territory under the administration of New Zealand;

6. Commends the professional and transparent conduct of both the February 2006 and the October 2007 referendums, monitored by the United Nations;

7. Acknowledges the decision of the General Fono that consideration of any future act of self-determination by Tokelau will be deferred and that New Zealand and Tokelau will devote renewed effort and attention to ensuring that essential services and infrastructure on the atolls of Tokelau are enhanced and strengthened, thereby ensuring an enhanced quality of life for the people of Tokelau;

8. Also acknowledges Tokelau's adoption of its National Strategic Plan for 2010–2015;

9. Further acknowledges the ongoing and consistent commitment of New Zealand to meeting the social and economic requirements of the people of Tokelau, as well as the support and cooperation of the United Nations Development Programme;

10. Acknowledges Tokelau's need for continued support from the international community;

11. Recalls with satisfaction the establishment and operation of the Tokelau International Trust Fund to support the ongoing needs of Tokelau, and calls upon Member States and international and regional agencies to contribute to the Fund and thereby lend practical support to Tokelau in overcoming the problems of smallness, isolation and lack of resources;

12. Welcomes the cooperative attitude of the other States and territories in the region towards Tokelau, and their support for its economic and political aspirations and its increasing participation in regional and international affairs;

13. Calls upon the administering Power and United Nations agencies to continue to provide assistance to Tokelau as it further develops;

14. Welcomes the actions taken by the administering Power to transmit information regarding the political, economic and social situation of Tokelau to the Secretary-General;

15. Also welcomes the commitment of both Tokelau and New Zealand to continue to work together in the interests of Tokelau and its people;

16. Requests the Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples to continue to examine the question of the Non-Self-Governing Territory of Tokelau and to report thereon to the General Assembly at its sixty-sixth session.

Western Sahara

The Special Committee on decolonization considered the question of Western Sahara on 22 June [A/65/23]. A Secretariat working paper [A/AC.109/2010/11] described the Secretary-General's good offices with the parties concerned and actions taken by the General Assembly and the Security Council (see p. 308). The Committee granted a request for hearing to a representative of the Frente Popular para la Liberación de Saguía el-Hamra y de Río de Oro (Frente Polisario), who made a statement [A/AC.109/2010/SR.7]. At the same meeting, Bolivia, Chile, Cuba, Nicaragua and Venezuela also made statements [ibid.].

The Special Committee transmitted the relevant documentation to the Assembly's sixty-fifth (2010) session to facilitate the Fourth Committee's consideration of the question. The Secretary-General submitted his report [A/65/306] to the Assembly in July.

By resolution 65/112 of 10 December (see p. 312), the Assembly supported the process of negotiations initiated by the Security Council in 2007, with a view to achieving a political solution that would provide for the self-determination of the people of Western Sahara; commended the efforts by the Secretary-General and his Personal Envoy in that respect; and requested the Special Committee to continue to consider the situation in Western Sahara and report to the Assembly's sixty-sixth (2011) session.

Island Territories

On 22 June, the Special Committee on decolonization [A/65/23] considered working papers on American Samoa [A/AC.109/2010/12], Anguilla [A/AC.109/2010/9], Bermuda [A/AC.109/2010/6], the British Virgin Islands [A/AC.109/2010/2], the Cayman Islands [A/AC.109/2010/5], Guam [A/AC.109/2010/14], Montserrat [A/AC.109/2010/7], Pitcairn [A/AC.109/2010/4], Saint Helena [A/AC.109/2010/8], the Turks and Caicos Islands [A/AC.109/2010/10] and the United States Virgin Islands [A/AC.109/2010/13], describing political developments and economic and social conditions in each of those 11 island Territories. The United Kingdom and the United States, the administering Powers concerned, did not participate in the Special Committee's consideration of the Territories under their administration. Petitioners made statements on Guam, the Turks and Caicos Islands and the United States Virgin Islands [A/AC.109/2010/SR.7]. The Committee on 25 June adopted a consolidated draft resolution [A/AC.109/2010/L.10], which it subsequently recommended for adoption by the General Assembly (see below).

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 10 December [meeting 62], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fourth Committee [A/65/430], adopted resolution 65/115 A and B without vote [agenda item 59].

Questions of American Samoa, Anguilla, Bermuda, the British Virgin Islands, the Cayman Islands, Guam, Montserrat, Pitcairn, Saint Helena, the Turks and Caicos Islands and the United States Virgin Islands

General

The General Assembly,

Having considered the questions of the Non-Self-Governing Territories of American Samoa, Anguilla, Bermuda, the British Virgin Islands, the Cayman Islands, Guam, Montserrat, Pitcairn, Saint Helena, the Turks and Caicos Islands and the United States Virgin Islands, hereinafter referred to as "the Territories",

Having examined the relevant chapter of the report of the Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples for 2010,

Recalling all resolutions and decisions of the United Nations relating to those Territories, including, in particular, the resolutions adopted by the General Assembly at its sixty-fourth session on the individual Territories covered by the present resolutions,

Recognizing that all available options for self-determination of the Territories are valid as long as they are in accordance with the freely expressed wishes of the peoples concerned and in conformity with the clearly defined principles contained in General Assembly resolutions 1514(XV) of 14 December 1960, 1541(XV) of 15 December 1960 and other resolutions of the Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 1541(XV), containing the principles that should guide Member States in determining whether or not an obligation exists to transmit the information called for under Article 73 e of the Charter of the United Nations,

Expressing concern that fifty years after the adoption of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples, there still remain a number of Non-Self-Governing Territories,

Conscious of the importance of continuing effective implementation of the Declaration, taking into account the target set by the United Nations to eradicate colonialism by 2010 and the plan of action for the Second International Decade for the Eradication of Colonialism,

Recognizing that the specific characteristics and the aspirations of the peoples of the Territories require flexible, practical and innovative approaches to the options for self-determination, without any prejudice to territorial size, geographical location, size of population or natural resources,

Noting the stated position of the Government of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland and the stated position of the Government of the United States of America on the Non-Self-Governing Territories under their administration,

Noting also the constitutional developments in some Non-Self-Governing Territories affecting the internal structure of governance about which the Special Committee has received information,

Convinced that the wishes and aspirations of the peoples of the Territories should continue to guide the development of their future political status and that referendums, free and fair elections and other forms of popular consultation play an important role in ascertaining the wishes and aspirations of the people,

Convinced also that any negotiations to determine the status of a Territory must take place with the active involvement and participation of the people of that Territory, under the aegis of the United Nations, on a case-by-case basis, and that the views of the peoples of the Non-Self-Governing Territories in respect of their right to self-determination should be ascertained,

Noting that a number of Non-Self-Governing Territories have expressed concern at the procedure followed by some administering Powers, contrary to the wishes of the Territories themselves, of amending or enacting legislation for application to the Territories, either through orders in council, in order to apply to the Territories the international treaty obligations of the administering Power, or through the unilateral application of laws and regulations,

Aware of the importance of the international financial services and tourism sectors for the economies of some of the Non-Self-Governing Territories,

Noting the continued cooperation of the Non-Self-Governing Territories at the local and regional levels, including participation in the work of regional organizations,

Mindful that United Nations visiting and special missions provide an effective means of ascertaining the situation in the Territories, that some Territories have not received a United Nations visiting mission for a long time and that no visiting missions have been sent to some of the Territories, and considering the possibility of sending further visiting missions to the Territories at an appropriate time, in consultation with the relevant administering Powers and in accordance with the relevant resolutions and decisions of the United Nations on decolonization,

Mindful also that, in order for the Special Committee to enhance its understanding of the political status of the peoples of the Territories and to fulfil its mandate effectively, it is important for it to be apprised by the relevant administering Powers and to receive information from other appropriate sources, including the representatives of the Territories, concerning the wishes and aspirations of the peoples of the Territories,

Acknowledging the regular transmission by the administering Powers to the Secretary-General of information called for under Article 73 e of the Charter,

Aware of the importance both to the Territories and to the Special Committee of the participation of elected and appointed representatives of the Territories in the work of the Committee,

Recognizing the need for the Special Committee to ensure that the appropriate bodies of the United Nations actively pursue a public awareness campaign aimed at assisting the peoples of the Territories in gaining a better understanding of the options for self-determination,

Mindful, in this connection, that the holding of regional seminars in the Caribbean and Pacific regions and at Headquarters, with the active participation of representatives of the Non-Self-Governing Territories, provides a helpful means for the Special Committee to fulfil its mandate, and that the regional nature of the seminars, which alternate between the Caribbean and the Pacific, is a crucial element in the context of a United Nations programme for ascertaining the political status of the Territories,

Noting the stated positions of the representatives of the Non-Self-Governing Territories before the Special Committee and at its regional seminars,

Mindful that the 2010 Pacific regional seminar was held in Nouméa from 18 to 20 May 2010,

Conscious of the particular vulnerability of the Territories to natural disasters and environmental degradation, and, in this connection, bearing in mind the applicability to the Territories of the programmes of action or outcome documents of all United Nations world conferences and special sessions of the General Assembly in the economic and social spheres,

Noting with appreciation the contribution to the development of some Territories by the specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system, in particular the United Nations Development Programme, the Economic Commission for Latin America and the Caribbean and the Economic and Social Commission for Asia and the Pacific, as well as regional institutions such as the Caribbean Development Bank, the Caribbean Community, the Organization of Eastern Caribbean States, the Pacific Islands Forum and the agencies of the Council of Regional Organizations in the Pacific,

Aware that the Human Rights Committee, as part of its mandate under the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights, reviews the status of the self-determination process, including in small island Territories under examination by the Special Committee,

Recalling the ongoing efforts of the Special Committee in carrying out a critical review of its work with the aim of making appropriate and constructive recommendations and decisions to attain its objectives in accordance with its mandate,

Recognizing that the annual working papers prepared by the Secretariat on developments in each of the small Territories, as well as the substantive documentation and information furnished by experts, scholars, non-governmental organizations and other sources, have provided important inputs to update the present resolutions,

Recalling the report of the Secretary-General on the implementation of decolonization resolutions adopted since the declaration of the First and Second International Decades for the Eradication of Colonialism,

1. Reaffirms the inalienable right of the peoples of the Non-Self-Governing Territories to self-determination, in conformity with the Charter of the United Nations and with General Assembly resolution 1514(XV), containing the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples;

2. Also reaffirms that, in the process of decolonization, there is no alternative to the principle of self-determination, which is also a fundamental human right, as recognized under the relevant human rights conventions;

3. Further reaffirms that it is ultimately for the peoples of the Territories themselves to determine freely their future political status in accordance with the relevant provisions of the Charter, the Declaration and the relevant resolutions of the General Assembly, and in that connection reiterates its long-standing call for the administering Powers, in co-operation with the territorial Governments and appropriate bodies of the United Nations system, to develop political education programmes for the Territories in order to foster an awareness among the people of their right to self-determination in conformity with the legitimate political status options, based on the principles clearly defined in Assembly resolution 1541(XV) and other relevant resolutions and decisions;

4. Stresses the importance of the Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples being apprised of the views and wishes of the peoples of the Territories and enhancing its understanding of their conditions, including the nature and scope of the existing political and constitutional arrangements between the Non-Self-Governing Territories and their respective administering Powers;

5. Requests the administering Powers to continue to transmit regularly to the Secretary-General information called for under Article 73 e of the Charter;

6. Calls upon the administering Powers to participate in and cooperate fully with the work of the Special Committee in order to implement the provisions of Article 73 e of the Charter and the Declaration and in order to advise the Special Committee on the implementation of the provisions under Article 73 b of the Charter on efforts to promote self-government in the Territories, and encourages the administering Powers to facilitate visiting and special missions to the Territories;

7. Reaffirms the responsibility of the administering Powers under the Charter to promote the economic and social development and to preserve the cultural identity of the Territories, and, as a priority, to mitigate the effects of the current global financial crisis where possible, in consultation with the territorial Governments concerned, towards the strengthening and diversification of their respective economies;

8. Requests the Territories and the administering Powers to take all measures necessary to protect and conserve the environment of the Territories against any degradation, and once again requests the specialized agencies concerned to continue to monitor environmental conditions in the Territories and to provide assistance to those Territories, consistent with their prevailing rules of procedure;

9. Welcomes the participation of the Non-Self-Governing Territories in regional activities, including the work of regional organizations;

10. Stresses the importance of implementing the plan of action for the Second International Decade for the Eradication of Colonialism, in particular by expediting the application of the work programme for the decolonization of each Non-Self-Governing Territory, on a case-by-case basis, as well as by ensuring that periodic analyses are undertaken of the progress and extent of the implementation of the Declaration in each Territory, and that the working papers prepared by the Secretariat on each Territory should fully reflect developments in those Territories;

11. Urges Member States to contribute to the efforts of the United Nations to usher in a world free of colonialism within the context of the International Decades for the Eradication of Colonialism, and calls upon them to continue to give their full support to the Special Committee in its endeavours towards that noble goal;

12. Stresses the importance of the various constitutional exercises in the respective Territories administered by the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland and the United States of America, and led by the territorial Governments, designed to address internal constitutional structures within the present territorial arrangements, and decides to follow closely the developments concerning the future political status of those Territories;

13. Requests the Secretary-General to continue to report to the General Assembly on a regular basis on the implementation of decolonization resolutions adopted since the declaration of the First and Second International Decades for the Eradication of Colonialism;

14. Reiterates its request that the Human Rights Committee collaborate with the Special Committee, within the framework of its mandate on the right to self-determination as contained in the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights, with the aim of exchanging information, given that the Human Rights Committee is mandated to review the situation, including political and constitutional developments, in many of the Non-Self-Governing Territories that are within the purview of the Special Committee;

15. Requests the Special Committee to continue to collaborate with the Economic and Social Council and its relevant subsidiary intergovernmental bodies, within the framework of their respective mandates, with the aim of exchanging information on developments in those Non-Self-Governing Territories which are reviewed by those bodies;

16. Also requests the Special Committee to continue to examine the question of the Non-Self-Governing Territories and to report thereon to the General Assembly at its sixty-sixth session and on the implementation of the present resolution.

Information on Territories

Communication. On 8 February [A/64/676], Denmark transmitted to the Secretary-General the Act on Greenland Self-Government, which entered into force on 21 June 2009 and opened for transfer of further competences from the Danish authorities to the Greenland authorities. With self-government in place, Naalakkersuisut (the Government of Greenland) had the right to take over responsibility for the administration of justice and the establishment of law courts, the police, and mineral and oil resources. Pursuant to the Act, Naalakkersuisut could also, on Denmark's behalf, negotiate and conclude agreements with foreign States and international organizations that exclusively concerned Greenland and its fields of responsibility. Where international organizations allowed entities other than States and associations of States to attain membership in their own name, Greenland could become a member of such organizations in its own name, in so far as it did not conflict with its constitutional status.

Report of Secretary-General. In response to General Assembly resolution 64/97 [YUN 2009, p. 586], the Secretary-General in March submitted a report [A/65/66] indicating the dates of transmittal of information from the administering Powers on economic, social and educational conditions in NSGTs for 2009, under Article 73 e of the Charter of the United Nations.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 10 December [meeting 62], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fourth Committee [A/65/426], adopted resolution 65/108 by recorded vote (172-0-5) [agenda item 55].

Information from Non-Self-Governing Territories transmitted under Article 73 e of the Charter of the United Nations

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 1970(XVIII) of 16 December 1963, in which it requested the Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples to study the information transmitted to the Secretary-General in accordance with Article 73 e of the Charter of the United Nations and to take such information fully into account in examining the situation with regard to the implementation of the Declaration, contained in General Assembly resolution 1514(XV) of 14 December 1960,

Recalling also its resolution 64/97 of 10 December 2009, in which it requested the Special Committee to continue to discharge the functions entrusted to it under resolution 1970(XVIII),

Stressing the importance of timely transmission by the administering Powers of adequate information under Article 73 e of the Charter, in particular in relation to the preparation by the Secretariat of the working papers on the Territories concerned,

Having examined the report of the Secretary-General,

1. Reaffirms that, in the absence of a decision by the General Assembly itself that a Non-Self-Governing Territory has attained a full measure of self-government in terms of Chapter XI of the Charter of the United Nations, the administering Power concerned should continue to transmit information under Article 73 e of the Charter with respect to that Territory;

2. Requests the administering Powers concerned, in accordance with their Charter obligations, to transmit or continue to transmit regularly to the Secretary-General for information purposes, subject to such limitation as security and constitutional considerations may require, statistical and other information of a technical nature relating to economic, social and educational conditions in the Territories for which they are respectively responsible, as well as the fullest possible information on political and constitutional developments in the Territories concerned, including the constitution, legislative act or executive order providing for the government of the Territory and the constitutional relationship of the Territory to the administering Power, within a maximum period of six months following the expiration of the administrative year in those Territories;

3. Requests the Secretary-General to continue to ensure that adequate information is drawn from all available published sources in connection with the preparation of the working papers relating to the Territories concerned;

4. Requests the Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples to continue to discharge the functions entrusted to it under General Assembly resolution 1970(XVIII), in accordance with established procedures.

Study and training

In response to General Assembly resolution 64/100 [YUN 2009, p. 587], the Secretary-General in March submitted a report [A/65/67] on offers of study scholarships and training facilities for inhabitants of NSGTs during the period from 24 March 2009 to 17 March 2010 by the following Member States: Algeria, Australia, South Africa and the United Kingdom. Over the years, 60 Member States and one non-Member State—the Holy See—had made such offers.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 10 December [meeting 62], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fourth Committee [A/65/429], adopted resolution 65/111 without vote [agenda item 58].

Offers by Member States of study and training facilities for inhabitants of Non-Self-Governing Territories

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 64/100 of 10 December 2009,

Having examined the report of the Secretary-General on offers by Member States of study and training facilities for inhabitants of Non-Self-Governing Territories, prepared pursuant to its resolution 845(IX) of 22 November 1954,

Conscious of the importance of promoting the educational advancement of the inhabitants of Non-Self-Governing Territories,

Strongly convinced that the continuation and expansion of offers of scholarships is essential in order to meet the increasing need of students from Non-Self-Governing Territories for educational and training assistance, and considering that students in those Territories should be encouraged to avail themselves of such offers,

1. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General;
2. Expresses its appreciation to those Member States that have made scholarships available to the inhabitants of Non-Self-Governing Territories;
3. Invites all States to make or continue to make generous offers of study and training facilities to the inhabitants of those Territories that have not yet attained self-government or independence and, wherever possible, to provide travel funds to prospective students;
4. Urges the administering Powers to take effective measures to ensure the widespread and continuous dissemination in the Territories under their administration of information relating to offers of study and training facilities made by States and to provide all the necessary facilities to enable students to avail themselves of such offers;
5. Requests the Secretary-General to report to the General Assembly at its sixty-sixth session on the implementation of the present resolution;
6. Draws the attention of the Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples to the present resolution.

Visiting missions

In June [A/65/23], the Special Committee on decolonization considered the question of sending visiting missions to NSGTs. It adopted a resolution in which it stressed the need to dispatch periodic visiting missions to facilitate the full implementation of the 1960 Declaration on decolonization, and called upon the administering Powers to facilitate those missions in the Territories under their administration. It also requested the administering Powers to cooperate with the Special Committee in exploring the possibility of undertaking visiting or special missions in furtherance of the decolonization mandate of the General Assembly. The Committee Chair was asked to consult with the administering Powers concerned and report on the results.

The Special Committee recommended to the Assembly for adoption draft resolutions on 11 small NSGTs (see p. 597) and on Tokelau (see p. 595), endorsing a number of conclusions and recommendations concerning the sending of visiting and special missions to those Territories.

Peaceful uses of outer space

The Committee on the Peaceful Uses of Outer Space (Committee on Outer Space), at its fifty-third session (Vienna, 9–18 June) [A/65/20], discussed ways and means of maintaining outer space for peaceful purposes; the spin-off benefits of space technology; space and society; space and water; space and climate change; the use of space technology in the UN system; and international cooperation in promoting the use of space-derived geospatial data for sustainable development. It also considered the implementation of the recommendations of the Third (1999) United Nations Conference on the Exploration and Peaceful Uses of Outer Space (UNISPACE III) [YUN 1999, p. 556] and reviewed the work of its two subcommittees, one dealing with scientific and technical issues (see p. 610) and the other with legal questions (see p. 613).

Pursuant to resolution 64/86 [YUN 2009, p. 599], the Chair of the Committee for the period 2008–2009 submitted a working paper [A/AC.105/L.278] entitled “Towards a United Nations space policy”, which explained the need for more effective governance on outer space matters and provided guiding principles and recommendations for a UN space policy. The Committee took note with appreciation of the working paper and agreed to include a new item entitled “Future role of the Committee” on the agenda of its fifty-fourth (2011) session, for one year only, in order to consider the paper further.

Implementation of UNISPACE III recommendations

In accordance with General Assembly resolution 64/86, the Committee on Outer Space [A/65/20] considered the implementation of the recommendations of UNISPACE III [YUN 1999, p. 556]. It noted that Member States contributed to the implementation through national and regional activities and by supporting and participating in the programmes established in response to the recommendations. Some States had established policies aimed at maximizing and harmonizing the use of various types of space-based services, such as navigation, meteorology and remote sensing, to respond to societal needs. The Committee noted with appreciation that the Action Team on Public Health, co-chaired by Canada and India, had included in its workplan the use of telecommunications in the context of tele-health and Earth observation applications in the context of tele-epidemiology, with an emphasis on improving public health and infectious-disease management. The Team was pursuing the objectives contained in its workplan for 2010–2011 and would present a report at the forty-eighth (2011) session of the Scientific and Technical Subcommittee.

The Committee on Outer Space had before it the report on its contribution to the work of the Commission on Sustainable Development for the thematic cluster 2010–2011 [YUN 2009, p. 602]. The Committee agreed that, in the preparation of its forthcoming contribution to the work of the Commission on Sustainable Development, it should focus on the thematic clusters in which space technology and its applications played an important role; pay attention to the cross-cutting issues identified by the Commission; identify areas where space-based systems could complement terrestrial systems to promote integrated solutions; and include, in addition to examples of regional and international cooperation, national success stories that might provide useful examples for the overall contribution of the Committee. The Committee requested the Secretariat to provide, for consideration by the Working Group of the Whole at the forty-eighth (2011) session of the Scientific and Technical Subcommittee, a draft on the contribution of the Committee to the work of the Commission for the next thematic cluster, together with contributions of Member States.

Scientific and Technical Subcommittee

The Scientific and Technical Subcommittee of the Committee on Outer Space, at its forty-seventh session (Vienna, 8–19 February) [A/AC.105/958], considered the United Nations Programme on Space Applications and the implementation of the UNISPACE III recommendations. It also dealt with matters relating to remote sensing of the Earth by satellite, including applications for developing countries and monitoring of the Earth's environment; space debris; space-system-based disaster-management support; developments in global navigation satellite systems (GNSS); the use of nuclear power sources in outer space; near-Earth objects; the International Space Weather Initiative [YUN 2009, p. 606]; the long-term sustainability of outer space activities; and the examination of the physical nature and technical attributes of the geostationary orbit and its utilization and applications, including in the field of space communications.

UN Programme on Space Applications

As mandated by General Assembly resolution 37/90 [YUN 1982, p. 163], the United Nations Programme on Space Applications continued to promote greater cooperation in space science and technology between developed and developing countries, as well as among developing countries, by providing long-term fellowships, training programmes and seminars, and by supporting pilot projects and offering technical advisory services in capacity-building and regional cooperation. The Programme increased the awareness of knowledge-based themes in space science, law and exploration through multi-year workplans and projects, and by convening outreach events and workshops.

The United Nations Expert on Space Applications [A/AC.105/980] reported that the Programme continued to support training for capacity-building in developing countries through the regional centres for space science and technology education affiliated with the United Nations Office for Outer Space Affairs. The goal of the regional centres—located in Morocco and Nigeria for the African region, India for Asia and the Pacific, and Brazil and Mexico for Latin America and the Caribbean—was to develop an indigenous capability for research and applications in remote sensing and geographic information systems; satellite communications; satellite meteorology and global climate; and space and atmospheric science. Education curricula for those disciplines had been developed through expert meetings held under the Programme, and two further model curricula were being developed in the areas of GNSS and space law. At its fifth meeting (Turin, Italy, 18–22 October), the International Committee on Global Navigation Satellite Systems (ICG) developed the concept that the regional centres would act as ICG information centres.

One symposium, one training course and seven workshops were conducted within the framework of the Programme. The United Nations/Turkey/European Space Agency Workshop on Space Technology Applications for Socio-Economic Benefits (Istanbul, Turkey, 14–17 September) increased awareness of the socio-economic benefits of applying space technology at the national, regional and international levels, focusing on satellite remote sensing, satellite communications, GNSS, capacity-building and regional and international cooperation. The United Nations/Bolivia/European Space Agency Workshop on Integrated Space Technology Applications in the Mountain Regions of the Andean Countries (Cochabamba, Bolivia, 25–29 October) advanced a project on satellite information for sustainable development in the mountain areas of Andean countries. The second in a series of three United Nations/Austria/European Space Agency symposiums on small satellite programmes for sustainable development (Graz, Austria, 21–24 September) took place as part of the United Nations Basic Space Technology Initiative, a new initiative in the framework of the United Nations Programme on Space Applications aiming to support capacity-building in basic space technology and promote its use for sustainable development. At the United Nations/International Astronautical Federation Workshop on GNSS Applications for Human Benefit and Development (Prague, Czech Republic, 24–25 September), participants discussed GNSS technologies, applications and services contributing to sustainable economic and social development programmes, primarily in developing countries. At the Eleventh United Nations/International Academy of Astronautics Workshop on Small Satellites in the Service of Developing Countries (Prague, 28 September), the main objectives were to review the benefits of small satellite programmes for developing countries; demonstrate the effectiveness of small satellites; and encourage educational and training activities at universities in developing countries. Further activities included the United Nations/Republic of Moldova/United States of America Workshop on Applications of GNSS (Chisinau, Moldova, 17–21 May); the first United Nations/National Aeronautics and Space Administration/Japan Aerospace Exploration Agency Workshop on the International Space Weather Initiative (Cairo, Egypt, 6–10 November); the seventh United Nations/Thailand Workshop on Space Law (Bangkok, Thailand, 16–19 November); and a training course on GNSS and location-based services (Ile-Ife, Nigeria, 4–29 October), conducted at the African Regional Centre for Space Science and Technology Education.

Following its consideration of the report of the United Nations Expert on Space Applications [A/AC.105/969] describing 2009 activities, those scheduled for 2010 and the activities of the UN-affiliated regional centres for space science and technology education for the period for 2008–2011, the Subcommittee expressed concern over the Programme's limited financial resources and appealed to Member States for voluntary contributions [A/AC.105/958].

The General Assembly, in resolution 65/97 (see p. 614), endorsed the Programme on Space Applications for 2011, as proposed by the Expert.

Cooperation

The Inter-Agency Meeting on Outer Space Activities, at its thirtieth session (Geneva, 10–12 March) [A/AC.105/960], discussed the coordination of plans and programmes and current activities in the practical application of space technology and related areas; implementation of the UNISPACE III recommendations; use of spatial data and activities related to the United Nations Geographic Information Working Group and the United Nations Spatial Data Infrastructure; participation in the process of the Group on Earth Observations; operational framework and good practices in the use of space-based technologies for disaster risk reduction and emergency response; and public outreach and information exchange to promote inter-agency cooperation.

Representatives of participating UN entities reported on their activities and plans for 2010 and 2011, the details of which were included in the Secretary-General's draft report on the coordination of space-related activities within the UN system: directions and anticipated results for the period 2010–2011 [A/AC.105/961]. The Meeting reviewed, revised and endorsed the report. It also agreed that future reports should be restructured to address the thematic clusters of the Commission on Sustainable Development in the periods 2012–2013, 2014–2015 and 2016–2017. The reports should be issued on a biennial basis, starting with the period 2012–2013, and a review of the reporting structure should take place in 2017. Overall reporting on policies and strategies pertaining to the coordination of space-related activities, on human security and welfare and on humanitarian assistance should be retained, and the reports should also identify challenges faced in space-related activities of the UN system and monitor progress in addressing those challenges.

The Meeting agreed that a special report addressing climate change and the use of space technology within the UN system should be prepared under the leadership of the World Meteorological Organization, with contributions from the secretariat of the United Nations Framework Convention on Climate Change and other UN entities, for endorsement by the Meeting at its thirty-first (2011) session, and for submission to the Committee on the Peaceful Uses of Outer Space at its fifty-fourth (2011) session.

The Meeting noted with concern the continued absence of representatives from a number of major UN entities and programmes and encouraged the secretariat of the Inter-Agency Meeting to continue its efforts to involve those entities in the Meeting. In that regard, the Meeting recommended that its thirty-first session be held in conjunction with the annual meeting of the United Nations Geographic Information Working Group during the first half of 2011.

The Office for Outer Space Affairs, as the secretariat of the Inter-Agency Meeting, reported on the decisions of the Scientific and Technical Subcommittee at its forty-seventh (2010) session [A/AC.105/958] regarding the way forward in considering the implementation of the UNISPACE III recommendations and the need to focus efforts on the contribution by the Committee on the Peaceful Uses of Outer Space to the thematic cluster of work of the Commission on Sustainable Development. The Office also informed the Meeting about developments in the UN-SPIDER programme (see below), including activities planned for 2010–2011.

Scientific and technical issues

In 2010, the Scientific and Technical Subcommittee [A/AC.105/958] continued to consider matters relating to remote sensing of the Earth by satellite, including applications for developing countries and monitoring of the Earth's environment. It noted with satisfaction that a growing number of developing countries were creating and deploying their own remote-sensing satellite systems and utilizing space-based data to advance socio-economic development.

The Subcommittee reviewed cooperative programmes in the use of remote-sensing technology and recognized the importance of international organizations in promoting such activities. It noted that the increased convergence and availability of space-based data, geographic information systems and GNSS technologies was generating valuable information for policy- and decision-making.

For its consideration of space debris, the Subcommittee had before it a Secretariat note [A/AC.105/951 & Add.1] containing replies from nine Member States on national research on space debris, safety of space objects with nuclear power sources (NPS) on board and problems relating to their collision with space debris. The Subcommittee noted that some States were implementing space debris mitigation measures consistent with the Space Debris Mitigation Guidelines of the Committee on the Peaceful Uses of Outer Space [YUN 2007, p. 640] and/or the Inter-Agency Space Debris Coordination Committee Space Debris Mitigation Guidelines, or that they had developed their own mitigation standards based on those guidelines. The Subcommittee agreed that Member States, in particular space-faring nations, should pay greater attention to the problem of collisions of space objects, including those with NPS on board, with space debris and to other aspects of space debris, including its re-entry into the atmosphere. It further agreed that research on space debris should continue and that Member States should make available to all interested parties the results of that research, including information on practices that had proved effective in minimizing the creation of space debris.

The Subcommittee continued its consideration of the use of NPS in outer space. It welcomed the agreement on the Safety Framework for Nuclear Power Source Applications in Outer Space [YUN 2009, p. 605] and encouraged Member States to implement the Framework. The Subcommittee endorsed the report of the reconvened Working Group on the Use of Nuclear Power Sources in Outer Space, which was annexed to the Subcommittee's report and included the Working Group's workplan for the period 2010–2015.

The Subcommittee agreed that national and international efforts to detect and track near-Earth objects should be continued and expanded. It reconvened its Working Group on Near-Earth Objects and endorsed the Working Group's report, which was annexed to the Subcommittee's report and previewed the goals and activities of the Working Group for the period 2010–2011.

Pursuant to General Assembly resolution 64/86 [ibid., p. 599], the Subcommittee considered the long-term sustainability of outer space activities. It had before it a working paper [A/AC.105/C.1/L.303] and a conference room paper [A/AC.105/C.1/2010/CRP.3] on the issue. The Subcommittee established the Working Group on the Long-term Sustainability of Outer Space Activities and recommended to the Committee on Outer Space that the Working Group hold a meeting during the Committee's fifty-third (2010) session (see p. 609) to develop its terms of reference and work method. The Subcommittee agreed that the Working Group should examine the long-term sustainability of outer space activities in all its aspects, including its contribution to the achievements of the Millennium Development Goals, taking into account the concerns of all countries, in particular those of developing countries. The Working Group should support the preparation of a report on the long-term sustainability of outer space activities and measures that could enhance such sustainability, as well as the preparation of a set of best-practice guidelines.

Also submitted to the Subcommittee were Secretariat notes on international cooperation in the peaceful uses of outer space [A/AC.105/953/Add.1,2 & A/AC.105/977 & Add.1], containing replies from 21 Member States on their space activities.

Space-based disaster management and emergency response

The Scientific and Technical Subcommittee, at its forty-seventh session in February [A/AC.105/958], had before it a report on the activities carried out in 2009 in the framework of the United Nations Platform for Space-based Information for Disaster Management and Emergency Response (UN-SPIDER) [A/AC.105/955], established by General Assembly resolution 61/110 [YUN 2006, p. 748]; a report of the Secretariat on outreach activities carried out in 2009 in the framework of UN-SPIDER [A/AC.105/952]; and a document containing the capacity-building strategy of UN-SPIDER [A/AC.105/947]. The Subcommittee heard a statement by the UN-SPIDER Programme Coordinator on the 2009 activities and on the implementation of activities planned for 2010. It took note of the progress made with regard to UN-SPIDER activities in 2009, such as the provision of space-based information to support emergency relief efforts in response to major disasters. It also welcomed the signature of cooperation agreements for the establishment of regional support offices in Pakistan and Ukraine. The Subcommittee reconvened its Working Group of the Whole and endorsed its report, which was annexed to the Subcommittee's report.

Two December reports, which were to be considered at the Subcommittee's forty-eighth (2011) session, dealt with the implementation of UN-SPIDER activities in 2010 [A/AC.105/981] and technical advisory support activities carried out in 2010 in the UN-SPIDER framework [A/AC.105/985]. The report on 2010 activities highlighted several accomplishments, including the formalization of cooperation agreements for the establishment of regional support offices; the provision of support for the response to 29 disasters; the improvement of the UN-SPIDER knowledge portal; the organization and provision of support to international and regional workshops and expert meetings; and the provision of technical advisory support to 17 Member States. On 17 June, a host country agreement was signed between China and the Office for Outer Space Affairs for the establishment of the UN-SPIDER office in Beijing. The office was inaugurated on 10 November. The report on the provision of UN-SPIDER technical advisory support described such activities as were carried out on a regional basis—namely, in Africa, Asia and the Pacific, Latin America and the Caribbean, and West Asia. It summarized UN-SPIDER emergency response activities to assist Member States, particularly in the framework of the mechanisms and initiatives available to help countries access space-based technologies in support of relief efforts. In the aftermath of major earthquakes in Haiti and Chile, UN-SPIDER ensured the immediate delivery of satellite imagery and maps of the areas affected. For each emergency situation, a web page with vital information was created in the UN-SPIDER knowledge portal to facilitate information-sharing.

International Space Weather Initiative

In accordance with resolution 64/86, the Scientific and Technical Subcommittee [A/AC.105/958] considered the International Space Weather Initiative, which would be carried out under a three-year workplan (2010–2012) and build upon the success of the International Heliophysical Year 2007, a multi-year campaign that concluded in 2009 [YUN 2009, p. 606]. The Subcommittee had before it notes by the Secretariat containing replies from six Member States and two international organizations on national and regional activities related to the International Space Weather Initiative [A/AC.105/967 & Add.1 & A/AC.105/C.1/2010/CRP.8]. It noted that the Initiative would contribute to the observation of space weather through the deployment of instrument arrays and the sharing of observed data among researchers around the world. In particular, the Initiative would explore the solar corona; deepen understanding of the function of the Sun and the effects that the variability of the Sun could have on the Earth's magnetosphere, environment and climate; explore the ionized environments of planets; and determine the limits of the heliosphere and deepen understanding of its interaction with interstellar space. Participation was open to scientists from all countries, as instrument hosts or instrument providers. The Initiative offered Member States the opportunity to coordinate global monitoring of space weather using space- and ground-based assets, assist in consolidating common knowledge and develop essential forecast capabilities to improve the safety of space-based assets.

Legal Subcommittee

The Legal Subcommittee, at its forty-ninth session (Vienna, 22 March–1 April) [A/AC.105/942], considered the status and application of the five UN treaties on outer space; information on the activities of international organizations relating to space law; matters related to the definition and delimitation of outer space and the character and utilization of the geostationary orbit; the review and possible revision of the Principles Relevant to the Use of Nuclear Power Sources in Outer Space; the examination and review of developments concerning the draft protocol on matters specific to space assets to the Convention on International Interests in Mobile Equipment; capacity-building in space law; exchange of information on national mechanisms relating to space debris mitigation measures; and exchange of information on national legislation relevant to the peaceful exploration and use of outer space.

The Subcommittee expressed appreciation for the distribution by the Secretariat of an updated document containing information, as at 1 January, on States parties and additional signatories to the UN treaties and other international agreements relating to activities in outer space [ST/SPACE/11/Rev.2/Add.3].

The Subcommittee reconvened its Working Group on the Status and Application of the Five United Nations Treaties on Outer Space [YUN 2001, p. 570], which considered the possible evolution of the scope of its work and recognized that its discussions should continue to include but not be limited to issues related to the Agreement Governing the Activities of States on the Moon and Other Celestial Bodies [YUN 1979, p. 111], and should reflect the actual needs of States vis-à-vis the provisions of the relevant UN treaties. The Working Group also discussed the relationship and consistency between some of the principles enshrined in the five UN treaties on outer space, and agreed upon a series of issues that it would consider at its fiftieth (2011) session. The Subcommittee endorsed the report of the Working Group, annexed to the Subcommittee's report, and the recommendation that its mandate be extended for an additional year.

For its consideration of the activities of international intergovernmental and non-governmental organizations relating to space law, the Subcommittee had before it a Secretariat note [A/AC.105/C.2/L.278 & Add.1] with information received from the European Centre for Space Law, the International Institute of Space Law, the International Law Association, the International Organization of Space Communications, the International Mobile Satellite Organization (IMSO) and the International Telecommunications Satellite Organization (ITSO); as well as conference room papers with additional information on IMSO and ITSO [A/AC.105/C.2/2010/CRP.3,15]. It welcomed the information provided by international inter-governmental and non-governmental organizations (NGOs) relating to space law and noted that such organizations had contributed significantly to space law development.

For its consideration of capacity-building in space law, the Subcommittee had before it: a report [A/AC.105/956] on and the proceedings [ST/SPACE/47] of the United Nations/Islamic Republic of Iran Workshop on Space Law [YUN 2009, p. 604], the theme of which was the “Role of international space law in the development and strengthening of international and regional cooperation in the peaceful exploration and use of outer space”; a report [A/AC.105/972] on the second (2009) United Nations Expert Meeting on Promoting Education in Space Law; and a Secretariat report [A/AC.105/954] on the implementation of recommendations to build capacity in space law. Also before it were conference room papers containing: a directory of education opportunities in space law [A/AC.105/C.2/2010/CRP.4]; and information submitted by nine Member States on actions and initiatives to build capacity in space law [A/AC.105/C.2/2010/CRP.8 & Add.1]. The Subcommittee agreed that capacity-building, training and education in space law were of paramount importance to efforts to develop space science and technology and increase knowledge about their legal framework. It acknowledged the space law capacity-building efforts conducted by governmental organizations and NGOs and highlighted the role of the Office for Outer Space Affairs in providing legal advisory services and participating in initiatives to build capacity in space law.

The Subcommittee reconvened its Working Group on the Definition and Delimitation of Outer Space, which considered two Secretariat notes—one containing replies from Member States on questions on the definition and delimitation of outer space [A/AC.105/889/Add.5,6] and the other on national legislation and practice relating to the definition and delimitation of outer space [A/AC.105/865 & Add.6,7]. It also had before it three conference room papers: two contained replies from the Netherlands [A/AC.105/C.2/2010/CRP.10] and Tunisia [A/AC.105/C.2/2010/CRP.13] on matters relating to the definition and delimitation of outer space, while a third [A/AC.105/C.2/2010/CRP.9] presented information from the International Civil Aviation Organization on the concept of suborbital flights. The Subcommittee endorsed the report of the Working Group, which was annexed to the Subcommittee’s report.

For its discussion on exchange of information on national legislation relevant to the peaceful exploration and use of outer space, the Subcommittee considered a Secretariat note [A/AC.105/957] and two conference room papers [A/AC.105/C.2/2010/CRP.11,14] containing information received from 10 Member States on national legislation governing their space activities. A further conference room paper [A/AC.105/C.2/2010/CRP.12] contained an overview of national regulatory frameworks for space activities. The Subcommittee reconvened its Working Group on National Legislation Relevant to the Peaceful Exploration and Use of Outer Space [YUN 2009, p. 607] and noted that the Working Group’s discussions, which included information-sharing about the development of national space legislation, allowed States to gain an understanding of national regulatory frameworks. In the light of the increasing number of space-related international cooperation programmes and projects, the Subcommittee noted the importance of the development of space legislation, which played a significant role in regulating and promoting such cooperation. The Subcommittee endorsed the report of the Working Group, which was annexed to the Subcommittee’s report.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 10 December [meeting 62], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fourth Committee [A/65/421], adopted resolution 65/97 without vote [agenda item 50].

Effects of atomic radiation

On 18 May [A/64/796], the Chair of the United Nations Scientific Committee on the Effects of Atomic Radiation informed the President of the General Assembly that due to the volcanic eruptions in Iceland in April, which caused flight disruptions preventing most of the meeting's attendees from reaching Vienna for the scheduled session [YUN 2009, p. 607], the Committee's fifty-seventh session had been postponed to 16–20 August. As a result, the Committee would report its conclusions in response to paragraph 13 of resolution 64/85 [ibid., p. 608] after the rescheduled session (see below).

On 29 June, the General Assembly deferred consideration of the report of the fifty-seventh session of the Committee until the main part of its sixty-fifth (2010) session (decision 64/559).

Report of Scientific Committee. At its fifty-seventh session (Vienna, 16–20 August) [A/65/46], the 21-member United Nations Scientific Committee on the Effects of Atomic Radiation discussed the progress in publishing the report with scientific annexes it had approved in 2008 [YUN 2008, p. 694], entitled Sources, effects and risks of ionizing radiation. Expressing disappointment that volume I was not published until July and that volume II had not been published, the Committee noted that delays were traceable in part to inadequate staffing and lack of funding. The Committee developed and approved for submission to the General Assembly a scientific report summarizing low-dose radiation effects on health, including a synthesis of the Committee's findings on the mechanisms of radiation actions at low doses. It also approved a strategy to improve data collection, analysis and dissemination, which was based on the development of electronic solutions, targeted specific countries, and entailed close collaboration with other networks, in particular those of the International Atomic Energy Agency (IAEA) and the World Health Organization (WHO). The Committee suggested that the Assembly encourage Member States, UN system entities and other organizations to provide further data about doses, effects and risks from various radiation sources, which would help in the preparation of future reports to the Assembly; and encourage IAEA, WHO and other organizations to collaborate with the Committee secretariat to establish and coordinate arrangements for the periodic collection and exchange of data on radiation exposures of the general public, workers and, in particular, medical patients. The Committee reviewed plans for conducting work on medical radiation exposures, the biological effects of selected internal emitters, enhanced exposures to natural sources of radiation due to human activities, and the development of a knowledge base on radiation levels and effects.

In response to paragraph 13 of resolution 64/85, the Committee discussed and reported [A/65/46/Add.1] on how its current, as well as a potentially revised, membership could best support its work. The Committee noted that it considered the current membership to be of an appropriate size, but also that the participation of scientists of some of the six countries expressing interest in becoming members [YUN 2007, p. 645], especially in targeted subject areas, would be beneficial to its work. Concerns were raised about a potentially large membership increase, including the possibility of compromised working arrangements and decreased efficiency; restrictions that would become necessary to limit the size of delegations and therefore limit the depth and breadth of expertise; increased workload for the secretariat; and increased financial requirements for operations. The Committee had developed ideas for mechanisms to improve its ability to access expertise in non-member countries. Those included engaging experts to assist in developing session documents; inviting experts as observers for specific agenda items; and establishing bilateral arrangements between members of the Committee and partners in other countries.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 10 December [meeting 62], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fourth Committee [A/65/420], adopted resolution 65/96 without vote [agenda item 49].

Effects of atomic radiation

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 913(X) of 3 December 1955, by which it established the United Nations Scientific Committee on the Effects of Atomic Radiation, and its subsequent resolutions on the subject, in which, inter alia, it requested the Scientific Committee to continue its work,

Concerned about the potentially harmful effects on present and future generations resulting from the levels of radiation to which mankind and the environment are exposed,

Conscious of the continuing need to examine and compile information about atomic and ionizing radiation and to analyse its effects on mankind and the environment, and conscious also of the increased volume, complexity and diversity of that information,

Taking note with appreciation of the work of the Scientific Committee, and noting the letters from its Chair to the President of the General Assembly as well as the report on its fifty-seventh session,

Reaffirming the desirability of the Scientific Committee continuing its work, and welcoming the increased commitment of States members of the Scientific Committee,

Emphasizing the vital need for sufficient, assured and predictable funding, as well as efficient management, of the work of the secretariat of the Scientific Committee to arrange the annual sessions and coordinate the development of documents based on scientific reviews from Member States of the sources of ionizing radiation and its effects on human health and the environment,

Acknowledging that Belarus, Finland, Pakistan, the Republic of Korea, Spain and Ukraine had informed the President of the General Assembly before 28 February 2007, in accordance with paragraph 14 of Assembly resolution 61/109 of 14 December 2006, of their desire to become members of the Scientific Committee,

Welcoming the attendance of Belarus, Finland, Pakistan, the Republic of Korea, Spain and Ukraine as observers at the fifty-sixth and fifty-seventh sessions of the Scientific Committee,

Recalling the comprehensive report of the Secretary-General on the financial and administrative implications of increased membership of the Scientific Committee, staffing of its professional secretariat, and methods to ensure sufficient, assured and predictable funding,

Welcoming the establishment of a new P-4 post for the secretariat of the Scientific Committee, noting that staffing was one of the points that had to be addressed in anticipation of a possible increase in membership, and noting also that such resources were necessary to support the work of the Scientific Committee,

Noting that the fifty-seventh session of the Scientific Committee had to be unavoidably postponed, inter alia, as a result of the worldwide flight disruptions following volcanic eruptions in Iceland in April 2010, and recognizing the important work done by the secretariat to regain the lost time by preparing additional detailed documentation of a high scientific quality for the rescheduled fifty-seventh session,

Recalling its direction, most recently in paragraph 13 of its resolution 64/85 of 10 December 2009, that the Scientific Committee, together with the observer countries, continue its reflection on how its current, as well as potentially revised, membership could best support its work,

1. Commends the United Nations Scientific Committee on the Effects of Atomic Radiation for the valuable contribution it has been making since its inception to wider knowledge and understanding of the levels, effects and risks of ionizing radiation, and for fulfilling its original mandate with scientific authority and independence of judgement;

2. Reaffirms the decision to maintain the present functions and independent role of the Scientific Committee;

3. Requests the Scientific Committee to continue its work, including its important activities to increase knowledge of the levels, effects and risks of ionizing radiation from all sources and to report thereon to the General Assembly at its sixty-sixth session;

4. Endorses the intentions and plans of the Scientific Committee for conducting its present programme of work of scientific review and assessment on behalf of the General Assembly, encourages the Scientific Committee at its earliest convenience to submit the related reports, including on assessments of levels of ionizing radiation from electrical energy production, as well as on the effects on human health and the environment, which shall include the submission of the report requested by the Assembly on the attribution of health effects due to radiation exposure, and requests the Scientific Committee to submit plans for its ongoing programme of work to the Assembly at its sixty-sixth session;

5. Calls upon the Secretariat to facilitate the timely publication of the reports of the Scientific Committee, inter alia, by streamlining internal procedures as necessary;

6. Re-emphasizes the need for the Scientific Committee to hold regular sessions on an annual basis so that its report can reflect the latest developments and findings in the field of ionizing radiation and thereby provide updated information for dissemination among all States;

7. Invites the Scientific Committee to continue its consultations with scientists and experts from interested Member States in the process of preparing its future scientific reports, and requests the Secretariat to facilitate such consultations;

8. Welcomes, in this context, the readiness of Member States to provide the Scientific Committee with relevant information on the effects of ionizing radiation in affected areas, and invites the Scientific Committee to analyse and give due consideration to such information, particularly in the light of its own findings;

9. Also welcomes the Scientific Committee's new strategy to improve data collection, encourages in this regard Member States, the organizations of the United Nations system and non-governmental organizations concerned to provide further relevant data about doses, effects and risks from various sources of radiation, which would greatly help in the preparation of future reports of the Scientific Committee to the General Assembly, and further encourages the International Atomic Energy Agency, the World Health Organization and other relevant organizations to establish and coordinate with the secretariat the arrangements for periodic collection and exchange of data on radiation exposures of workers, the general public, and, in particular, medical patients;

10. Requests the United Nations Environment Programme to continue providing support for the effective conduct of the work of the Scientific Committee and for the dissemination of its findings to the General Assembly, the scientific community and the public;

11. Urges the United Nations Environment Programme to continue to strengthen the funding of the Scientific Committee, pursuant to paragraph 13 of General Assembly resolution 63/89 of 5 December 2008 and paragraph 12

of Assembly resolution 64/85 of 10 December 2009, and encourages Member States to consider making voluntary contributions to the general trust fund established by the Executive Director of the United Nations Environment Programme to support the work of the Scientific Committee;

12. Expresses its satisfaction at the prompt reaction of the secretariat of the Scientific Committee in overcoming the unexpected and unavoidable postponement of the fifty-seventh session of the Scientific Committee, inter alia, by preparing detailed documentation of a high scientific quality;

13. Invites Belarus, Finland, Pakistan, the Republic of Korea, Spain and Ukraine to continue the practice, started in 2007, by designating one scientist to attend, as an observer, the fifty-eighth session of the Scientific Committee, and requests the Secretary-General to prepare a report to be submitted to the General Assembly at its sixty-sixth session on the objective criteria and indicators to be equitably applied, taking into account all previous resolutions of the General Assembly on the Scientific Committee, to determine membership that would best support the essential work of the Scientific Committee, and also requests the Secretary-General to consider the financial implications of increased membership, taking into account documents A/64/6 (Sect. 14) and A/64/6/Add.1;

14. Requests the Secretary-General to report to the General Assembly, within existing resources, at its sixty-sixth session, regarding the effects of atomic radiation in the Republic of the Marshall Islands, taking into account analysis by recognized experts, including the Scientific Committee, and previously published studies on the topic.

Information security

In response to General Assembly resolution 64/25 [YUN 2009, p. 609], the Secretary-General in July issued a report [A/65/154] transmitting the views of seven Members States on their general appreciation of issues of information security; national efforts to strengthen information security and promote international cooperation in that field; the content of international concepts aimed at strengthening the security of global information and telecommunications systems; and possible measures the international community could take to strengthen global information security.

Group of Governmental Experts. The Group of Governmental Experts on Developments in the Field of Information and Telecommunications in the Context of International Security, established by the Secretary-General in 2009 pursuant to General Assembly resolution 60/45 [YUN 2005, p. 695], held its second (New York, 11–15 January), third (Geneva, 21–25 June) and fourth (New York, 12–16 July) sessions. The Secretary-General reported on the Group's activities in July [A/65/201]. The Group studied existing and potential threats in the sphere of information security and possible cooperative measures to address them, as well as strengthening the security of global information and telecommunications systems. It took into account replies from Member States in response to Assembly resolution 63/37 [YUN 2008, p. 696] and earlier resolutions on the topic, as well as contributions and background papers submitted by its members. The Group recommended dialogue among States to discuss norms pertaining to State use of information and communications technologies (ICTs); confidence-building and risk reduction measures to address the implications of State use of ICTs, including exchanges of national views on the use of ICTs in conflict; information exchanges on national legislation and national ICT security strategies, technologies, policies and best practices; the identification of measures to support capacity-building in less developed countries; and finding possibilities to elaborate common terms and definitions relevant to Assembly resolution 64/25 [YUN 2009, p. 609].

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 53/70 of 4 December 1998, 54/49 of 1 December 1999, 55/28 of 20 November 2000, 56/19 of 29 November 2001, 57/53 of 22 November 2002, 58/32 of 8 December 2003, 59/61 of 3 December 2004, 60/45 of 8 December 2005, 61/54 of 6 December 2006, 62/17 of 5 December 2007, 63/37 of 2 December 2008 and 64/25 of 2 December 2009,

Recalling also its resolutions on the role of science and technology in the context of international security, in which, inter alia, it recognized that scientific and technological developments could have both civilian and military applications and that progress in science and technology for civilian applications needed to be maintained and encouraged,

Noting that considerable progress has been achieved in developing and applying the latest information technologies and means of telecommunication,

Affirming that it sees in this process the broadest positive opportunities for the further development of civilization, the expansion of opportunities for cooperation for the common good of all States, the enhancement of the creative potential of humankind and additional improvements in the circulation of information in the global community,

Recalling, in this connection, the approaches and principles outlined at the Information Society and Development Conference, held in Midrand, South Africa, from 13 to 15 May 1996,

Bearing in mind the results of the Ministerial Conference on Terrorism, held in Paris on 30 July 1996, and the recommendations that it made,

Bearing in mind also the results of the World Summit on the Information Society, held in Geneva from 10 to 12 December 2003 (first phase) and in Tunis from 16 to 18 November 2005 (second phase),

Noting that the dissemination and use of information technologies and means affect the interests of the entire international community and that optimum effectiveness is enhanced by broad international cooperation,

Expressing concern that these technologies and means can potentially be used for purposes that are inconsistent with the objectives of maintaining international stability and security and may adversely affect the integrity of the infrastructure of States to the detriment of their security in both civil and military fields,

Considering that it is necessary to prevent the use of information resources or technologies for criminal or terrorist purposes,

Noting the contribution of those Member States that have submitted their assessments on issues of information security to the Secretary-General pursuant to paragraphs 1 to 3 of resolutions 53/70, 54/49, 55/28, 56/19, 57/53, 58/32, 59/61, 60/45, 61/54, 62/17, 63/37 and 64/25,

Taking note of the reports of the Secretary-General containing those assessments,

Welcoming the initiative taken by the Secretariat and the United Nations Institute for Disarmament Research in convening international meetings of experts in Geneva in August 1999 and April 2008 on developments in the field of information and telecommunications in the context of international security, as well as the results of those meetings,

Considering that the assessments of the Member States contained in the reports of the Secretary-General and the international meetings of experts have contributed to a better understanding of the substance of issues of international information security and related notions,

Bearing in mind that the Secretary-General, in fulfilment of resolution 60/45, established in 2009, on the basis of equitable geographical distribution, a group of governmental experts, which, in accordance with its mandate, considered existing and potential threats in the sphere of information security and possible cooperative measures to address them and conducted a study on relevant international concepts aimed at strengthening the security of global information and telecommunications systems,

Information

UN public information

The General Assembly's Committee on Information, at its thirty-second session (New York, 26 April–7 May) [A/65/21], continued to consider UN information policies and activities, and to evaluate and follow up on efforts made and progress achieved in information and communications.

The Committee had before it three reports of the Secretary-General issued in February on activities of the Department of Public Information (DPI) from July 2009 to February 2010, which addressed the following areas: strategic communications services [A/AC.198/2010/2], with a review of communication campaigns and UN information centre activities; news services [A/AC.198/2010/3], with a summary of news products, activities and services; and outreach services [A/AC.198/2010/4], with a presentation of the Department's work with civil society groups, Member States, young people and the general public.

The Committee held a general debate (26–28 April), and on 7 May adopted two draft resolutions, which were submitted to the General Assembly.

DPI activities

In response to General Assembly resolution 64/96 B [YUN 2009, p. 611], the Secretary-General in August submitted a report [A/65/277 & Corr.1] on questions relating to information, covering DPI activities since his February reports to the Committee on Information.

DPI strategic communications services built awareness for the High-level Plenary Meeting on the Millennium Development Goals (MDGs) (see p. 813) by coordinating a system-wide campaign that produced information materials and developed a website in six languages featuring success stories and encouraging citizens to get involved in attaining the Goals. Additionally, UN system partners took advantage of the MDG communications opportunities presented by the 2010 FIFA World Cup in South Africa. Working with the UN country team in South Africa and the United Nations Information Centre (UNIC) Pretoria, DPI promoted a song and music video, 8 Goals for Africa, featuring 10 top African singers and musicians. The music video was screened at fan parks across South Africa during the World Cup and the song was played at the closing concert. Campaigns and activities promoting the MDGs were also led by UNICs in Beirut, Brussels, Cairo, Jakarta, Moscow, Rabat and Tehran. By producing press and information materials and/or developing and launching websites, DPI provided communications support to the Assembly's creation of UN-Women; the 2010 Review Conference of the Parties to the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons (New York, 3–28 May); International Women's Day; and the 15-year review of the implementation of the Beijing Declaration and Platform for Action, undertaken by the Commission on the Status of Women. Women's issues were further promoted by UNICs in Azerbaijan, Burundi, Egypt and Sri Lanka through the organization of meetings and forums on themes addressing gender equality. For the first observance of Nelson Mandela International Day (18 July), DPI organized activities at UN Headquarters, including a film screening, the production of a poster and booklet, and the display of commemorative audiovisual products as part of an informal plenary meeting of the Assembly. Social media were incorporated into the campaign, and the official website featured interactive elements, including a quiz on apartheid and the United Nations. UNICs in 15 countries organized events such as film screenings, exhibitions, dance, theatre and readings. The annual UN Headquarters observance of the International Day of United Nations Peacekeepers (29 May) honoured the 96 peacekeeping personnel who lost their lives in Haiti during the 12 January earthquake (see p. 320) and paid tribute to those continuing to serve in Haiti. DPI partnered with the Department of Peacekeeping Operations to create the “Haiti Standing” multimedia exhibit and website archiving project, which highlighted not only the 12 January tragedy, but also the recovery efforts by Haitians and the United Nations. DPI continued raising global support for the New Partnership for Africa’s Development Planning and Coordinating Agency through the quarterly magazine and online edition of Africa Renewal/Afrique renouveau. Twenty-six short feature articles on the Agency were published in 41 countries—323 times in English, French and Swahili media between February and June.

DPI outreach services and programmes included the sixty-third annual United Nations Department of Public Information/Non-Governmental Organizations (NGOs) Conference (Melbourne, Australia, 30 August–1 September). Entitled “Advance global health: achieve the Millennium Development Goals (MDGs)”, the Conference welcomed an unprecedented number of NGOs from Asia and the Pacific. The Department also organized the second annual Global Model United Nations conference for university students (Kuala Lumpur, Malaysia, 14–18 August) on the theme “Towards an alliance of civilizations: building bridges to achieve peace and development”. In partnership with the United States Holocaust Memorial Museum, DPI held a student video conference in Spanish with UNICs in Latin America on 21 April. UNICs in Asunción, Bogotá, Buenos Aires, La Paz, Lima, Mexico City and Panama City brought together 250 students for a briefing on the Holocaust and to hear the personal testimony of a Holocaust survivor. In March, the Holocaust Programme partnered with the Anne Frank Center USA to launch the “Messages to Anne Frank” Twitter campaign. The Academic Impact initiative [YUN 2009, p. 618] continued to expand, with some 300 universities from 60 countries having joined the programme. For greater efficiency in sales and marketing, DPI focused on digital initiatives, including the June launch of iPhone applications for popular UN publications. Such publications were also made available for mainstream eBook devices.

Communication. On 16 September [A/65/525], Australia transmitted the declaration “Advance global health: achieve the Millennium Development Goals”, adopted on 1 September at the sixty-third annual DPI/NGO Conference in Melbourne.

UN website, multilingualism and accessibility

In the context of the 2009 redesign of the UN website’s architecture to address the challenges posed by the multilingual nature of its content, DPI focused on improving its ability to measure and analyse the website’s user behaviour. The use of Google Analytics on top-layer pages within the website’s new language directories enabled more efficient tracking of site usage, as well as better analysis of usage by language. Between January and May, the Google Analytics code was inserted in over 500,000 pages across the site. The production of both new and updated web pages was helped by pro bono translation partnerships with academic institutions in Belarus, China and Spain. DPI continued efforts to enlist the support of an institution of higher learning for pro bono translations into Arabic. A similar arrangement with the United Nations Volunteers programme had increased the volume of high-quality translations into French, an experience the Department planned to build upon.

Providing assistance to offices in posting web pages accessible by persons with disabilities remained a key priority for DPI, as it worked to ensure that its recently updated web accessibility guidelines were made widely available to promote compliance. The guidelines received positive feedback from the participants of an experience-sharing workshop (Geneva, 2–5 February) organized by the International Telecommunication Union and the World Intellectual Property Organization that brought together 180 representatives from 32 organizations.

Radio, television, video and photo services

UN Radio launched two special series on topics of global interest: Project 15, which looked at gender equality 15 years after the Beijing World Conference on Women [YUN 1995, p. 1168] by producing stories through the eyes of 15-year-old girls around the world, and The Census, which highlighted the 2010 round of censuses and the role of the United Nations in collecting and analysing data and determining progress in meeting the MDGs. Materials for the two series were produced in the six official UN languages, in addition to Kiswahili and Portuguese for Project 15. To expand the reach of its programming in other languages (Bahasa Indonesia, Bangla, French-Creole, Hindi, Urdu), UN Radio started revamping the production of its weekly features to include local materials on UN activities in the field. The effort, which began with Bahasa Indonesia, would result in a production arrangement of closer partnership among UNICs, UN field offices and UN Radio in New York. As a result of efforts to expand the range of broadcast and web-based outlets receiving UN Radio programmes, 37 new partner stations came on board.

Among new ventures, UN Television’s partnership with the Economic and Social Council, the United Nations Population Fund (UNFPA) and the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization (UNESCO) led to the production of Face to Face, a television debate on the topic “Women’s empowerment, development cooperation and culture”. The Web-based UNifeed television news service broke all records of “pickups” by international broadcasters during the aftermath of the earthquake in Haiti. Following the disaster, UNifeed distributed 155 stories, including 27 web-only reports. DPI monitoring of UNifeed pickups showed that the stories were broadcast in part or in whole at least 10,538 times, with the heaviest usage in the United States. The Department took steps to improve access to UN Television’s video material via YouTube, in part by paying greater attention to the selection of videos for posting and making their format and presentation more appealing. As at June, the more than 1,335 videos featured on YouTube’s UN Channel had received nearly 1.7 million views.

Use of the UN photo website remained high, with 37,199 downloads of high-resolution images from February to June. To expand the use of its products, UN Photo took advantage of the opportunities presented by new media sites such as Flickr, Facebook and Twitter. As at 31 July, the UN Flickr page had recorded over 462,000 views.

Library and knowledge services

The Dag Hammarskjöld Library continued to digitize major General Assembly documents in English, French and Spanish, from the forty-second (1987) to forty-seventh (1992) sessions. Collaboration was ongoing with the Library of the United Nations Office at Geneva, which had been digitizing Arabic, Chinese and Russian documents. DPI further strengthened its depository library programme, focusing on information outreach and the roles for libraries as UN partners. In April, a workshop entitled “Creating partnerships with libraries in China” was co-organized by the Dag Hammarskjöld Library and the National Library of China. Some 50 participants from 26 libraries in China took part.

UN information centres

The UNIC network, comprising 63 information centres, services and information components around the world, served as the DPI field presence. In addition to traditional partners such as academic institutions, NGOs, media and government offices, several UNICS engaged new partners in their activities, including museums. In Argentina, UNIC Buenos Aires carried out a communications campaign with the Buenos Aires Shoah Museum (Museo del Holocausto Buenos Aires) to mark the 2010 International Day of Commemoration in Memory of the Victims of Holocaust. In Austria, the United Nations Information Service Vienna assisted the Museum of Military History in Vienna with a major exhibit (June–November) to mark 50 years of Austrian participation in UN peacekeeping, as well as a joint special exhibit entitled “Women in Peacekeeping” that opened in October. An increasing number of UNICS were using new media platforms to disseminate information on the work of the Organization, including in local languages. Sixteen UNICS had Facebook accounts, 11 had Twitter accounts and 6 had YouTube accounts. UNICS produced information in more than 40 languages and maintained websites in 29 local languages. Thirty-four UNICS produced their own newsletters and bulletins in 17 local languages. To assist UNIC staff in improving their web-writing skills, DPI and the Office of Human Resources Management organized a long-distance learning course entitled “Writing for the Web”.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 10 December [meeting 62], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fourth Committee [A/65/425], adopted resolution 65/107 A and B without vote [agenda item 54].

Urges all countries, organizations of the United Nations system as a whole and all others concerned, reaffirming their commitment to the principles of the Charter of the United Nations and to the principles of freedom of the press and freedom of information, as well as to those of the independence, pluralism and diversity of the media, deeply concerned by the disparities existing between developed and developing countries and the consequences of every kind arising from those disparities that affect the capability of the public, private or other media and individuals in developing countries to disseminate information and communicate their views and their cultural and ethical values through endogenous cultural production, as well as to ensure the diversity of sources and their free access to information, and recognizing the call in this context for what in the United Nations and at various international forums has been termed “a new world information and communication order, seen as an evolving and continuous process”:

(a) To cooperate and interact with a view to reducing existing disparities in information flows at all levels by increasing assistance for the development of communications infrastructures and capabilities in developing countries, with due regard for their needs and the priorities attached to such areas by those countries, and in order to enable them and the public, private or other media in developing countries to develop their own information and communications policies freely and independently and increase the participation of media and individuals in the communication process, and to ensure a free flow of information at all levels;

(b) To ensure for journalists the free and effective performance of their professional tasks and condemn resolutely all attacks against them;

(c) To provide support for the continuation and strengthening of practical training programmes for broadcasters and journalists from public, private and other media in developing countries;

(d) To enhance regional efforts and cooperation among developing countries, as well as cooperation between developed and developing countries, to strengthen communications capacities and to improve the media infrastructure and communications technology in the developing countries, especially in the areas of training and dissemination of information;

(e) To aim at, in addition to bilateral cooperation, providing all possible support and assistance to the developing countries and their media, public, private or other, with due regard to their interests and needs in the field of information and to action already adopted within the United Nations system, including:

(i) The development of the human and technical resources that are indispensable for the improvement of information and communications systems in developing countries and support for the continuation and strengthening of practical training programmes, such as those already operating under both public and private auspices throughout the developing world;

(ii) The creation of conditions that will enable developing countries and their media, public, private or other, to have, by using their national and regional resources, the communications technology suited to their national needs, as well as the necessary programme material, especially for radio and television broadcasting;

(iii) Assistance in establishing and promoting telecommunication links at the subregional, regional and interregional levels, especially among developing countries;

(iv) The facilitation, as appropriate, of access by the developing countries to advanced communications technology available on the open market;

B

United Nations public information policies and activities

The General Assembly,

Emphasizing that the Committee on Information is its main subsidiary body mandated to make recommendations to it relating to the work of the Department of Public Information of the Secretariat,

Emphasizing also that the contents of public information and communications should be placed at the heart of the strategic management of the United Nations and that a culture of communications and transparency should permeate all levels of the Organization, as a means of fully informing the peoples of the world of the aims and activities of the United Nations, in accordance with the purposes and principles enshrined in the Charter of the United Nations, in order to create broad-based global support for the United Nations,

Stressing that the primary mission of the Department of Public Information is to provide, through its outreach activities, accurate, impartial, comprehensive, balanced, timely and relevant information to the public on the tasks and responsibilities of the United Nations in order to strengthen international support for the activities of the Organization with the greatest transparency,

Recalling the comprehensive review of the work of the Department of Public Information, requested by the General Assembly in its resolution 56/253 of 24 December 2001, as well as the report of the Secretary-General entitled "Strengthening of the United Nations: an agenda for further change" and Assembly resolutions 57/300 of 20 December 2002 and 60/109 B of 8 December 2005, which provided an opportunity to take due steps to enhance the efficiency and effectiveness of the Department and to maximize the use of its resources,

Expressing concern that the gap in information and communications technology between the developed and the developing countries has continued to widen and that vast segments of the population in developing countries are not benefiting from the present information and communications technologies, and, in this regard, underlining the necessity of rectifying the imbalances in the present development of information and communications technologies in order to make it more just, equitable and effective,

Recognizing that developments in information and communications technologies open vast new opportunities for economic growth and social development and can play an important role in the eradication of poverty in developing countries, and, at the same time, emphasizing that the development of these technologies poses challenges and risks and could lead to the further widening of disparities between and within countries,

Recalling its resolution 63/306 of 9 September 2009 on multilingualism, and emphasizing the importance of making appropriate use of the official languages of the United Nations in the activities of the Department of Public Information, with the aim of eliminating the disparity between the use of English and the five other official languages,

PART TWO

Human rights

Promotion of human rights

Efforts to promote human rights continued to build incrementally in 2010. The Human Rights Council examined the human rights record of 48 Member States through the universal periodic review mechanism, designed to assess the human rights record of all States every four years. A variety of recommendations were made during the reviews, ranging from calls for ratification of human rights treaties, enactment of national legislation and deepened cooperation with human rights mechanisms to specific action and measures at the national level.

The Human Rights Council Advisory Committee, which provided expertise to the Council, held its fourth and fifth sessions and submitted 10 recommendations, while the Council's complaint procedure, which consisted of the Working Group on Communications and the Working Group on Situations, addressed consistent patterns of gross and reliably attested human rights violations throughout the world.

During the year, the Council held three regular sessions (thirteenth, fourteenth and fifteenth), as well as two special sessions (thirteenth and fourteenth) that focused on a human rights approach to the earthquake recovery in Haiti and on the human rights situation in Côte d'Ivoire. Human rights were also promoted through the work of the treaty bodies—committees of experts monitoring States parties' compliance with the legally binding human rights treaties.

The Office of the High Commissioner for Human Rights provided support to the work of the Council and its mechanisms, including the treaty bodies and the special procedures. The Office strengthened its country engagement and expanded its presence at the country and regional levels.

The Council in March established an open-ended intergovernmental working group with the mandate of negotiating, finalizing and submitting to the Council the draft UN declaration on human rights education and training. In September, the Council adopted the plan of action for the second phase (2010–2014) of the World Programme for Human Rights Education.

The General Assembly in December took note of the draft programme of activities for the International Year for People of African Descent, 2011, and invited Member States to support the activities for the Year.

The International Convention for the Protection of All Persons from Enforced Disappearance entered into force in December. The General Assembly declared 30 August the International Day of the Victims of Enforced Disappearances.

Reports of High Commissioner. In her annual report [A/65/36], the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights, Navanethem Pillay, noted that following their review, several Governments amended legislation or practices and adopted new policies, programmes and measures aimed at improving the human rights situation. In a further report [A/HRC/16/20], she noted that as at 31 December, 143 out of 192 States had been reviewed under the UPR process, with all States under review participating and their peers being fully engaged at the various stages of the process. The 100 per cent participation rate should be commended.

Human Rights Council Advisory Committee

The Human Rights Council Advisory Committee, a think-tank for the Council composed of 18 experts serving in their personal capacity, held its fourth (25–29 January) [A/HRC/AC/4/4] and fifth (2–6 August) [A/HRC/AC/5/3] sessions in Geneva. At its fourth session, the Committee adopted six recommendations to be submitted to the Council on: the draft set of principles and guidelines for the elimination of discrimination against persons affected by leprosy and their family members; the draft UN declaration on human rights education and training; a preliminary study on discrimination in the context of the right to food; human rights of older persons; missing persons; and the protection of the human rights of civilians in armed conflict. The Committee endorsed the draft declaration on human rights education and training [rec. 4/2]. Pursuant to a Council request [YUN 2008, p. 796], the Committee decided [rec. 4/5] to submit to the Council a progress report [A/HRC/14/42] on best practices on the issue of missing persons.

At its fifth session, the Advisory Committee adopted four recommendations on: the draft set of principles and guidelines for the elimination of discrimination against persons affected by leprosy and their family members; the study on discrimination in the context of the right to food; the drafting group on the promotion of the right of peoples to peace; and the drafting group on the enhancement of international cooperation in the field of human rights. The Committee endorsed the set of principles and guidelines for the elimination of discrimination against persons affected by leprosy and their family members [rec. 5/3].

On 26 March [A/65/53 (PRST/13/1)], the Council took note of the reports of the Committee on its third [YUN 2009, p. 626] and fourth sessions.

Human Rights Council action. On 24 March [A/65/53 (res. 13/4)], the Council requested the Advisory Committee to continue to work on the issue of discrimination in the context of the right to food and, in that regard, to undertake a preliminary study on ways and means to advance the rights of people working in rural areas, in particular smallholders engaged in the production of food and other agricultural products, and to report to the Council's sixteenth (2011) session.

On 17 June [dec. 14/118], the Council requested the Committee to finalize the study on best practices in the matter of missing persons and to submit it to the Council at its sixteenth session.

Complaint procedure

The complaint procedure of the Human Rights Council comprised the Working Group on Communications, which examined communications of alleged violations and assessed their merits, and the Working Group on Situations, which, on the recommendation of the Working Group on Communications, reported to the Council on consistent patterns of gross violations and recommended a course of action.

Working Group on Communications. The five-member Working Group on Communications held its sixth (12–16 April) [A/HRC/WG.5/6/R.2] and seventh (30 August–3 September) [A/HRC/WG.5/7/R.2] sessions in Geneva.

At its sixth session, the Working Group considered 40 files of communications concerning 25 countries. That included 24 new files containing communications and Government replies thereto in relation to 16 countries. A total of 18 replies to 16 files were received from Governments in relation to the communications. The Working Group also examined 16 files related to communications concerning 11 countries which, at its fifth session [YUN 2009, p. 627], it had decided to keep under review. A total of 27 replies were received from concerned Governments in relation to those communications.

The Working Group adopted 40 decisions. Decisions were taken on all the 24 new files registered under the complaint procedure between May and December 2009, as well as on 16 files of communications that had been kept under review from the fifth session. The Working Group decided to transmit files relating to three countries (Colombia, Nepal, Somalia) to the Working Group on Situations. It decided to keep under review until its next session 13 files relating to 10 countries (Bangladesh, Germany, India, Iraq, Lao People's Democratic Republic, Syrian Arab Republic, Turkmenistan, United States, Viet Nam, Zimbabwe), and requested further information from the Governments concerned. The Working Group postponed consideration of communications relating to two countries (Kyrgyzstan, Mexico). The consideration of 20 files relating to 13 countries (Austria, Canada, China, Czech Republic, India, Iran, Nepal, Republic of Korea, Russian Federation, Sudan, Switzerland, Ukraine, United States) was discontinued. The Working Group received Government replies to 31 of the 40 files before it.

At its seventh session, the Working Group considered 25 files of communications concerning 18 countries. That included 10 new files containing communications and Government replies thereto in relation to eight countries. A total of 10 replies relating to nine files were received from Governments in relation to the communications. The Working Group examined 13 files related to communications concerning 10 countries which it had decided to keep under review from the sixth session. In relation to those communications, the Group had received 22 replies from Governments. The Working Group also had before it two files related to communications on two countries, the consideration of which, at its previous session, the Group had postponed. Five replies had been received from concerned Governments in relation to those communications.

The Working Group adopted 25 decisions. Decisions were taken on all 10 new files registered between January and May 2010, as well as on all 13 files of communications that had been kept under review and the two files of postponed communications. The Working Group transmitted two files relating to two countries (Iraq, Zimbabwe) to the Working Group on Situations. It kept under review until its next session 10 files relating to nine countries (Bangladesh, Egypt, Iraq, Kyrgyzstan, Lao People's Democratic Republic, Mexico, Nigeria, Syrian Arab Republic, Turkmenistan) and requested further information from the Governments concerned. Consideration was postponed on three files relating to two countries (Colombia, United States). Consideration of 10 files relating to seven countries was discontinued (Cuba, Germany, India, Iran, Ukraine, United States, Viet Nam). The Working Group received Government replies to 22 of the 25 files before it.

Working Group on Situations. The five-member Working Group on Situations held its fifth (25–28 January) [A/HRC/13/R.1] and sixth (22–24 June) [A/HRC/15/R.1] sessions in Geneva.

At its fifth session, the Working Group had before it dossiers relating to the human rights situation in Cambodia, the Democratic Republic of the Congo, the Gambia, Iraq, Nigeria, the Philippines and Tajikistan. The material consisted of communications, Government replies and observations thereon. The Working Group decided to keep under review cases concerning the Gambia, Iraq, Nigeria, the Philippines and Tajikistan, and dismissed cases concerning Cambodia and Nigeria. The Group postponed the consideration of cases relating to the Democratic Republic of the Congo, regretting that no reply had been received from the Government.

At its sixth session, the Working Group had before it dossiers relating to the human rights situation in Colombia, the Democratic Republic of the Congo, the Gambia, Iraq, Nepal, Nigeria, the Philippines, Somalia and Tajikistan. The Working Group decided to keep under review cases concerning Colombia, the Gambia, Iraq, Nepal, Nigeria, Somalia and Tajikistan, and dismissed cases related to Colombia and the Philippines. It postponed consideration of cases concerning the Democratic Republic of the Congo, regretting that no reply had been received from the Government.

Human Rights Council action. In March [A/HRC/13/56], the Council held two closed meetings of the complaint procedure. It examined the human rights situation in Guinea and decided to discontinue considering the situation in the country.

Working group on Council review

The open-ended intergovernmental working group on the review of the work and functioning of the Human Rights Council held its first session (Geneva, 25–29 October) [A/HRC/WG.8/2/1], which marked the formal launch of the review process in Geneva. The Council had established the working group in 2009 [A/HRC/12/50 (res. 12/1)] with the mandate to review the Council's work and functioning. The Council had also decided that the working group should hold two sessions in Geneva; requested the Council President to chair the working group; and requested the working group to report to the Council's seventeenth (2011) session.

The Council President in 2010 convened three rounds of informal consultations to delineate the process and modalities of the review. In September, during the Council's fifteenth session [A/HRC/15/60], the President presented an oral progress report and informed the membership of the joint understanding reached with the President of the General Assembly on the coordination of the review processes of the Council and the Assembly.

At the end of the first session, the President circulated a compilation of States' proposals and a list of non-State observer contributions, annexed to the report of the session. The President, on 29 October, appointed five facilitators to carry forward the review, addressing issues relating to the UPR; the special procedures; the Human Rights Council Advisory Committee, the complaint procedure and other subsidiary bodies; the agenda and the framework for a programme of work; and the methods of work and rules of procedure.

Work of the Council

Report of Secretary-General. In a September report [A/HRC/15/17] submitted pursuant to a Council resolution [YUN 2009, p. 624] on improving conference and secretariat services for the Council, the Secretary-General noted that the Council required significantly more support than its predecessor, the Commission on Human Rights. As a result, the level of Council staffing would be revisited in the context of the budget preparation for the biennium 2012–2013 to ensure that the Council would benefit from the level of staffing actually required.

Office of the High Commissioner for Human Rights

Reports of High Commissioner. In her annual report to the General Assembly [A/65/36] covering activities since the previous report [YUN 2009, p. 627], the High Commissioner said that in the last 12 months, the OHCHR rapid-response capacity provided support to a number of ad hoc independent fact-finding bodies. The United Nations Fact-Finding Mission on the Gaza Conflict [YUN 2009, p. 783], established pursuant to Human Rights Council resolution S-9/1, ended its work in October 2009 and submitted a report to the Council [ibid., p. 783]. The Commission of Inquiry for Guinea, established in October 2009 by the Secretary-General, submitted its report, which was transmitted to the Security Council [ibid., p. 230]. In June 2010, a committee of three independent experts established by Human Rights Council resolution 13/9 (see p. 787) began its work to monitor Israeli and Palestinian investigations into the serious violations of international humanitarian and human rights law reported by the Fact-Finding Mission on the Gaza Conflict. In accordance with Council resolution 14/1 (see p. 786), the Council President, on 23 July, appointed an independent international fact-finding mission to investigate violations of international law resulting from the attacks by Israeli forces against a humanitarian boat convoy.

In addition, the Office fielded rapid-response missions or mobilized surge capacity in support of its own field presences and/or UN country teams: in Honduras following the coup d'état of June 2009; in Madagascar to provide technical assistance in the wake of the political crisis of the summer of 2009; in Gabon to monitor the human rights situation during the presidential elections of September 2009; in Iraq to temporarily assist the human rights component of the United Nations Assistance Mission for Iraq; in Haiti to assume the lead of the protection cluster dealing with the aftermath of the earthquake of January 2010 (see p. 320) and to support the work of the Human Rights Section of the United Nations Stabilization Mission in Haiti (MINUSTAH); in Togo in February 2010 and in Guinea in June 2010 to monitor the human rights situation during the elections; and in Kyrgyzstan in the context of the violence in the southern provinces in June 2010.

The Office provided advice to Member States on the establishment and responsibilities of national human rights institutions and consolidated partnerships to maximize support for those institutions. It developed synergies with regional and intergovernmental organizations in addressing critical human rights issues.

The Office continued to work under the six thematic priorities of the strategic management plan for 2010–2011, namely: countering discrimination; combating impunity and strengthening accountability, the rule of law and democratic societies; pursuing economic, social and cultural rights and combating inequalities and poverty, including in the context of the economic, food and climate crises; protecting human rights in the context of migration; protecting human rights in situations of armed conflict, violence and insecurity; and strengthening human rights mechanisms and the development of international human rights law.

The General Assembly took note of the report on 21 December (decision 65/536).

In her annual report to the Human Rights Council [A/HRC/16/20] on the activities of OHCHR in 2010, the High Commissioner focused on the implementation of the six thematic priorities for 2010–2011. As at December, OHCHR had 56 field presences: 12 regional presences, of which 5 had gender advisers, 12 country offices, 15 human rights components in UN peace missions, and 17 human rights advisers in UN country teams. An OHCHR country office was inaugurated in Guinea in August, and the country office in Mauritania started functioning in December. OHCHR staff undertook over 20 missions to offer assistance and support to Governments, parliaments, UN country teams, field presences and civil society on rights such as the right to the highest attainable standard of physical and mental health, adequate housing, adequate food, education, social security and cultural rights, and on the legal protection and justiciability of economic, social and cultural rights.

OHCHR developed a comprehensive strategy to support the Human Rights Section of MINUSTAH to respond to the protection crisis that erupted as a result of the earthquake in Haiti. Fifteen staff members were deployed over a period of six months to monitor the human rights situation in camps for internally displaced persons and to lead MINUSTAH's Protection Cluster.

The High Commissioner noted that human rights work was a collective effort in a historic movement, and strategic priorities were long-term. OHCHR would continue its work against the background of an untenable financial situation stemming from the gap between increased requests for mandated activities, zero growth of the regular budget and shrinking extrabudgetary resources.

Composition of staff

Report of High Commissioner. As requested by the Human Rights Council [YUN 2009, p. 629], the High Commissioner reported in January [A/HRC/13/18] on the composition of OHCHR staff and efforts to correct the imbalance in the geographical composition of the staff. According to the report, as at 31 December 2009, OHCHR had 471 staff members in the Professional category and above: 253 from Western Europe and other States, 65 from Africa, 64 from Asia, 62 from Latin America and the Caribbean and 27 from Eastern Europe. Noticeable and sustained progress had been achieved towards increasing geographical diversity; however, OHCHR remained attentive to the need to maintain the emphasis on the broadest possible geographical diversity of its staff, and would continue its efforts.

Human Rights Council action. On 24 March [A/65/53 (res. 13/1)], by a recorded vote of 31 to 12, with 3 abstentions, the Council expressed its concern at the fact that, despite the measures taken by OHCHR, the imbalance in the geographical representation of its composition continued to be prominent, and that a single region occupied more posts in both the professional and technical categories, as well as the permanent and temporary categories, than the other four regions combined. The Council also welcomed the efforts made towards achieving a gender balance in the composition of the staff, and encouraged the General Assembly to consider further measures for promoting desirable ranges of geographical balance in OHCHR. The High Commissioner was requested to report to the Council's sixteenth (2011) session.

Joint workplan

A report of the Secretary-General issued in November [A/HRC/16/33] reviewed the cooperation between OHCHR and the Division for the Advancement of Women, part of the newly established United Nations Entity for Gender Equality and the Empowerment of Women (UN-Women). It also indicated a commitment to strengthen cooperation between OHCHR and UN-Women.

Other aspects

Role of prevention

Human Rights Council action. On 17 June [A/65/53 (res. 14/5)], the Council stressed the importance of effective preventive measures as part of overall strategies for human rights promotion and protection; requested OHCHR to consult States, national human rights institutions, civil society and other stakeholders on the conceptual and practical dimensions of prevention with regard to human rights promotion and protection, and to publish the responses on the OHCHR website; and requested OHCHR to convene a workshop, based on those consultations, on the role of prevention in human rights promotion and protection and to present a summary of the workshop proceedings to the Council's eighteenth (2011) session.

Human rights instruments

In 2010, eight UN human rights instruments were in force with expert bodies monitoring their implementation. Those instruments and their treaty bodies were: the 1965 International Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Racial Discrimination [YUN 1965, p. 440, GA res. 2106 A (XX)] (Committee on the Elimination of Racial Discrimination); the 1966 International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights and the Optional Protocol thereto [YUN 1966, p. 423, GA res. 2200 A (XXI)] and the Second Optional Protocol aiming at the abolition of the death penalty [YUN 1989, p. 484, GA res. 44/128] (Human Rights Committee); the 1966 International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights [YUN 1966, p. 419, GA res. 2200 A (XXI)] and the Optional Protocol thereto [YUN 2008, p. 729, GA res. 63/117] (Committee on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights); the 1979 Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women [YUN 1979, p. 895, GA res. 34/180] and Optional Protocol thereto [YUN 1999, p. 1100, GA res. 54/4] (Committee on the Elimination of Discrimination against Women); the 1984 Convention against Torture and Other Cruel, Inhuman or Degrading Treatment or Punishment [YUN 1984, p. 813, GA res. 39/46] and the 2002 Optional Protocol thereto [YUN 2002, p. 631, GA res. 57/199] (Committee against Torture and Subcommittee on Prevention of Torture); the 1989 Convention on the Rights of the Child [YUN 1989, p. 560, GA res. 44/25] and the Optional Protocols on the involvement of children in armed conflict and on the sale of children, child prostitution and child pornography [YUN 2000, pp. 616 & 618, GA res. 54/263] (Committee on the Rights of the Child); the 1990 International Convention on the Protection of the Rights of All Migrant Workers and Members of Their Families [YUN 1990, p. 594, GA res. 45/158] (Committee on the Protection of the Rights of All Migrant Workers and Members of Their Families); and the 2006 Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities and its Optional Protocol [YUN 2006, p. 785, GA res. 61/106] (Committee on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities).

The 2006 International Convention for the Protection of All Persons from Enforced Disappearance [ibid., p. 800, GA res. 61/177] provided for the establishment of a Committee on Enforced Disappearances, which would monitor the implementation of the Convention upon its entry into force. The 1948 Convention on the Prevention and Punishment of the Crime of Genocide [YUN 1948–49, p. 959, GA res. 260 A (III)] did not establish a treaty body, but the mandate of the Office of the Special Adviser on the Prevention of Genocide [YUN 2004, p. 730] included collecting information on situations where there might be a risk of genocide, war crimes, ethnic cleansing and crimes against humanity; alerting relevant actors where such a risk existed; and advocating and mobilizing for appropriate action.

The General Assembly addressed revised estimates resulting from the increase in the membership of three human rights committees in sections VIII, X and XI of resolution 65/259 of 24 December (see p. 1432).

Effective implementation of international human rights instruments

Report of Secretary-General. Pursuant to Human Rights Council resolution 9/8 [YUN 2008, p. 725], the Secretary-General submitted a report [A/HRC/16/32] which reviewed developments in the effective implementation of international human rights instruments, including recommendations for improving, harmonizing and reforming the treaty body system. In 2010, human rights treaty bodies held 21 sessions amounting to 68 weeks in Geneva and New York, during which 138 State party reports were reviewed in plenary sessions. The Committee on the Elimination of Discrimination against Women held one additional session in October, the Committee on the Rights of the Child held its three sessions in parallel chambers and the Committee on the Elimination of Racial Discrimination extended its sessions by one week to address the backlog of reports awaiting review. Treaty bodies during 2010 received 147 State party reports, including 13 common core documents.

The treaty bodies continued their work on finalizing treaty-specific reporting guidelines to complement the guidelines for the common core document. The Committee on the Rights of the Child and the Human Rights Committee adopted their treaty-specific reporting guidelines. The Committee on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities adopted its rules of procedures and the Committee against Torture adopted its amended rules of procedure. Treaty bodies continued to develop and implement new working methods.

The Secretariat and the treaty bodies examined some 11,600 items of correspondence, and registered over 150 new individual complaints received by the treaty bodies. The Human Rights Committee, the Committee against Torture, the Committee on the Elimination of Racial Discrimination and the Committee on the Elimination of Discrimination against Women examined and adopted final decisions on some 110 communications. They issued over 55 requests for interim measures of protection in cases where lack of such protection might lead to irreparable harm for the petitioners. They also followed up on over 60 decisions in which violations of the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights, the Convention against Torture or the Convention on the Elimination of Discrimination against Women had been found.

Note by Secretary-General. Pursuant to General Assembly resolutions 63/243 [YUN 2008, p. 734] and 63/244 [ibid., p. 738], the Secretary-General transmitted to the Assembly an August report [A/65/317] by OHCHR which contained an evaluation of the use of additional meeting time by the human rights treaty bodies, taking into account a more comprehensive approach to the backlog of those bodies and the increasing number of reports of States parties.

The General Assembly took note of that note on 21 December (decision 65/536).

Convention against racial discrimination

Accessions and ratifications

As at 31 December, the number of parties to the International Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Racial Discrimination, adopted by the General Assembly in resolution 2106 A (XX) [YUN 1965, p. 440], stood at 174, with Guinea-Bissau becoming a party during the year.

The amendment to article 8 of the Convention, regarding the financing of the Committee on the Elimination of Racial Discrimination [YUN 1992, p. 714], had been accepted by 43 States parties as at 31 December. The amendment would enter into force when accepted by a two-thirds majority of States parties, comprising approximately 116 of the 174 States parties to the Convention. The Secretary-General reported on the status of the Convention as at 15 August [A/65/292].

In August [A/65/312], the Secretary-General reported that outstanding States parties' arrears to the Committee as at 30 June totalled $121,216.13. A number of States parties were in arrears as a result of the non-payment of previous assessments. Financing for the annual sessions of the Committee in 2009 and 2010 was provided from the regular budget, in accordance with General Assembly resolution 47/111 [YUN 1992, p. 769].

Implementation

Monitoring body. The Committee on the Elimination of Racial Discrimination, established under article 8 of the Convention, held its seventy-sixth (15 February–12 March) and seventy-seventh (2–27 August) sessions in Geneva [A/65/18]. It considered reports submitted by 22 countries (Argentina, Australia, Bosnia and Herzegovina, Cambodia, Cameroon, Denmark, El Salvador, Estonia, France, Guatemala, Iceland, Iran, Japan, Kazakhstan, Monaco, Morocco, Netherlands, Panama, Romania, Slovakia, Slovenia, Uzbekistan) and adopted concluding observations on them.

With regard to the Convention's implementation by States parties whose reports were seriously overdue, the Committee noted that 23 States were at least 10 years late in submitting their reports, and 24 were at least 5 years late. At its seventy-sixth session, the Committee decided to postpone the scheduled review of the Convention's implementation in Uruguay as the State party had submitted its report prior to that session. The Committee also decided to postpone the review scheduled in respect to Jordan, Malta and the Niger in the light of a commitment received from them to finalize their report. The report of Malta was submitted prior to the seventy-seventh session.

Under article 14 of the Convention, the Committee considered communications from individuals or groups claiming violation by a State party of their rights as enumerated in the Convention. Fifty-four States parties had recognized the Committee's competence to do so.

Pursuant to article 15 of the Convention, which empowered the Committee to consider petitions, reports and other information relating to Trust and Non-Self-Governing Territories, the Committee noted, as it had in the past, the difficulty in fulfilling its functions in that regard, owing to the scant information relating to the Convention's principles and objectives in the reports received.

The Committee considered a number of situations under its early warning and urgent action procedure, including situations in Australia, Botswana, Brazil, Cameroon, Colombia, Costa Rica, India, the Lao People's Democratic Republic, Kyrgyzstan, the Niger, Nigeria, Paraguay, Peru, the Philippines, Slovakia and the United Kingdom. The Committee adopted decisions on Kyrgyzstan and Nigeria. It also decided to send letters to the Council of Europe and the European Union expressing its concern regarding the resurgence of racism against Roma in several European States, in particular mass expulsions and limitations on their right to free movement.

Complementary standards

Human Rights Council actions. On 25 March [A/65/53 (res. 13/18)], the Council took note of the report of the Chairperson-Rapporteur of the Ad Hoc Committee on the Elaboration of Complementary Standards and noted the views expressed during the second session of the Ad Hoc Committee [YUN 2009, p. 632]. It decided the Ad Hoc Committee's third session would be held from 29 November to 10 December. The Ad Hoc Committee was established by the Council in 2006 [YUN 2006, p. 774] to elaborate complementary standards to the Convention in the form of a convention or additional protocol(s), fill gaps in the treaty, and provide new normative standards for combating racism, racial discrimination, xenophobia and related intolerance.

Committee session. The Secretary-General subsequently informed the Human Rights Council [A/HRC/16/65] that the Ad Hoc Committee, during its second meeting on 22 November, decided to adjourn its third session, and would resume its work from 11 to 21 April 2011.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 21 December [meeting 71], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Third Committee [A/65/454 & Corr.1], adopted resolution 65/200 without vote [agenda item 66 (a)].

International Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Racial Discrimination

The General Assembly,

Recalling its previous resolutions on the International Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Racial Discrimination, most recently resolution 63/243 of 24 December 2008,

Bearing in mind the Vienna Declaration and Programme of Action adopted by the World Conference on Human Rights on 25 June 1993, in particular section II.B of the Declaration, relating to equality, dignity and tolerance,

Reiterating the need to intensify the struggle to eliminate all forms of racism, racial discrimination, xenophobia and related intolerance throughout the world,

Reiterating also the importance of the Convention, which is one of the most widely accepted human rights instruments adopted under the auspices of the United Nations,

Reaffirming that universal adherence to and full implementation of the Convention are of paramount importance for promoting equality and non-discrimination in the world, as stated in the Durban Declaration and Programme of Action, adopted by the World Conference against Racism, Racial Discrimination, Xenophobia and Related Intolerance on 8 September 2001,

Mindful of the importance of the contributions of the Committee on the Elimination of Racial Discrimination to the effective implementation of the Convention and to the efforts of the United Nations to combat racism, racial discrimination, xenophobia and related intolerance,

Emphasizing the obligation of all States parties to the Convention to take legislative, judicial and other measures to secure full implementation of the provisions of the Convention,

Recalling its resolution 47/111 of 16 December 1992, in which it welcomed the decision, taken on 15 January 1992 by the Fourteenth Meeting of States Parties to the International Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Racial Discrimination, to amend paragraph 6 of article 8 of the Convention and to add a new paragraph, as paragraph 7 of article 8, with a view to providing for the financing of the Committee from the regular budget of the United Nations, and reiterating its deep concern that the amendment to the Convention has not yet entered into force,

Stressing the importance of enabling the Committee to function smoothly and to have all necessary facilities for the effective performance of its functions under the Convention,

Recalling its resolution 63/243, in which the General Assembly decided to authorize the Committee to meet for an additional week per session, as a temporary measure, with effect from August 2009, until 2011, and noting that the additional meeting time has allowed the Committee to reduce the backlog of reports pending consideration,

Taking note of the note by the Secretary-General on the evaluation of the use of additional meeting time by the human rights treaty bodies, the increasing workload of the treaty bodies and the increasing number of requests from them for more meeting time,

I

Covenant on civil and political rights and optional protocols

Accessions and ratifications

As at 31 December, parties to the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights and the Optional Protocol thereto, adopted by the General Assembly in resolution 2200 A (XXI) [YUN 1966, p. 423], numbered 167 and 113, respectively. During the year, Guinea-Bissau and Pakistan became parties to the Covenant.

The Second Optional Protocol, aimed at the abolition of the death penalty and adopted by the Assembly in resolution 44/128 [YUN 1989, p. 484], was acceded to by Kyrgyzstan during the year, bringing the number of States parties to that Protocol to 73 as at 31 December.

Implementation

Monitoring body. The Human Rights Committee, established under article 28 of the Covenant, held three sessions in 2010: its ninety-eighth (New York, 8–26 March); ninety-ninth (Geneva, 12–30 July) [A/65/40, Vol. I]; and 100th (Geneva, 11–29 October) [A/66/40, Vol. I]. It considered reports submitted under article 40 from 13 States (Argentina, Belgium, Cameroon, Colombia, El Salvador, Estonia, Hungary, Israel, Jordan, Mexico, New Zealand, Poland, Uzbekistan) and adopted concluding observations on them.

The Committee adopted views on communications from individuals alleging violations of their rights under the Covenant, and decided that other such communications were inadmissible. Those views and decisions were annexed to the Committee's reports [A/65/40, Vol. II; A/66/40, Vol. II].

The Committee continued work on draft General Comment No. 34 on article 19 of the Covenant (freedom of opinion and expression), which would replace General Comment No. 10 (1983). The Committee completed the first reading of the draft general comment during the 100th session, following which it posted the draft general comment on the OHCHR website and requested comments from stakeholders. Several comments were received from States parties, national human rights institutions, international and national human rights NGOs and academics.

Pursuant to article 4 of the Covenant, certain States parties notified other States parties, through the intermediary of the Secretary-General, of derogations of certain obligations under the Covenant due to public emergency. Peru, on 6 January, 9 April, 6 and 21 May, 11 and 30 August, 16 September and 1 November, notified the other States parties that it had extended or declared a state of emergency in different provinces and parts of the country, during which certain rights covered by the Covenant would be suspended. On 8 February, 30 March, 2 August and 27 December, Guatemala notified the other States parties that it had extended or declared a state of emergency in different parts of the country. Chile, on 23 March, notified the other States parties that it had declared a state of emergency in different parts of the country affected by the earthquake. Thailand, on 14 April, and Paraguay, on 27 April, notified the other States parties that they had declared a state of emergency in different parts of the respective country; Thailand terminated those measures on 22 December. Jamaica, on 1 June, notified the other States parties that it had declared a state of emergency on the island; on 30 June, it gave notice that the state of emergency had been extended for 28 days. Sri Lanka, on 23 June, notified the other States parties of the termination of derogations under the Covenant following the repeal of emergency regulations promulgated in August 2005. Colombia, on 24 August, notified the other States parties that it had partially amended previous decrees declaring a state of emergency.

The General Assembly, on 21 December, took note of the Committee's report on its ninety-seventh [YUN 2009, p. 632] to ninety-ninth sessions (decision 65/536).

(For information on the Organization's efforts to protect civil and political rights, see p. 664.)

Covenant on economic, social and cultural rights and optional protocol

Accessions and ratifications

As at 31 December, there were 160 parties to the International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights, adopted by the General Assembly in resolution 2200 A (XXI) [YUN 1966, p. 419].

The Optional Protocol to the Covenant, adopted by the Assembly in resolution 63/117 [YUN 2008, p. 729], established a procedure of individual communications for cases of alleged violations of economic, social and cultural rights. The Protocol would enter into force when ratified by 10 States. Three Member States (Ecuador, Mongolia, Spain) were the first to ratify the treaty in 2010.

Implementation

Monitoring body. The Committee on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights held its forty-fourth (3–21 May) and forty-fifth (1–19 November) sessions in Geneva [E/2011/22]. Its pre-sessional working group met in Geneva from 25 to 28 May and from 22 to 26 November to identify issues to be discussed with reporting States. The Committee examined reports submitted under articles 16 and 17 of the Covenant by Afghanistan, Algeria, Colombia, the Dominican Republic, Kazakhstan, Mauritius, the Netherlands, Sri Lanka, Switzerland and Uruguay, and adopted concluding observations on them. On 19 November, the Committee adopted a statement on the right to sanitation.

The Economic and Social Council, on 22 July, deferred its consideration of the draft decision contained in the report of the Committee on its forty-second and forty-third sessions [YUN 2009, p. 633] until a later date (decision 2010/247).

In August, the Secretary-General submitted a note [A/65/317] on the evaluation of the use of additional meeting time by the human rights treaty bodies, the increasing workload of those bodies and the increasing number of requests from them for more meeting time.

ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL ACTION

On 14 December [meeting 51], the Economic and Social Council adopted resolution 2010/37 [draft: E/2010/L.43] without vote [agenda item 14 (g)].

Report of the Committee on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights on its forty-second and forty-third sessions

The Economic and Social Council,

Having considered the report of the Committee on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights on its forty-second and forty-third sessions, and the request contained therein for an additional session of the Committee, followed by pre-sessional working groups of one week's duration, in Geneva, in both 2011 and 2012,

Concerned at the persistent backlog of reports of State parties awaiting consideration, and that the existing working methods and meeting arrangements for the Committee no longer permit it to fully discharge its responsibilities under the International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights and Economic and Social Council resolution 1985/17 of 28 May 1985 in an efficient and timely manner, and recognizing that the entry into force of the Optional Protocol to the International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights would increase the workload of the Committee,

Taking note of the note submitted by the Secretary-General to the General Assembly at its sixty-fifth session on the evaluation of the use of additional meeting time by the human rights treaty bodies, the increasing workload of the treaty bodies and the increasing number of requests from them for more meeting time,

1. Requests the Committee on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights to improve the efficiency of its working methods, including with a view to further harmonizing its working methods with the other treaty bodies, and, in the light of its activities in this regard, requests the Chair of the Committee to report to the Economic and Social Council at its substantive session in July 2011 on the steps taken by the Committee to improve its efficiency, to allow the Council to make a decision on means to address the Committee's backlog of State party reports, including, if necessary, through the granting of additional time as a temporary measure;

2. Requests the Secretary-General to include in the report to be submitted to the General Assembly at its sixty-sixth session concrete and tailored proposals on the human rights treaty bodies, including the Committee on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights, building on the work of the Secretary-General pursuant to Human Rights Council resolution 9/8 of 24 September 2008 and of the treaty bodies in this regard, to improve their effectiveness and to identify efficiencies in their working methods and resource requirements in order to better manage their workloads, bearing in mind budgetary constraints and taking account of the varying burdens on each treaty body.

Convention on elimination of discrimination against women and optional protocol

(On the status of the Convention and Optional Protocol, see p. 1176. On the Special Rapporteur on violence against women, its causes and consequences, see p. 751.)

Convention against torture

Accessions and ratifications

As at 31 December, 147 States were parties to the 1984 Convention against Torture and Other Cruel, Inhuman or Degrading Treatment or Punishment, adopted by the General Assembly in resolution 39/46 [YUN 1984, p. 813]. Pakistan ratified the Convention during the year.

States parties to the Optional Protocol to the Convention establishing an international inspection system for places of detention, adopted by the Assembly in resolution 57/199 [YUN 2002, p. 631] and entering into force in 2006 [YUN 2006, p. 776], rose to 57, with Burkina Faso, the Democratic Republic of the Congo, Ecuador, Gabon, Luxembourg, the Netherlands and Togo becoming parties during the year.

As at 14 May, 56 parties had made the required declarations under articles 21 and 22, which recognized the competence of the Committee against Torture to receive and consider communications by which a State party claimed that another party was not fulfilling its obligations under the Convention, and from or on behalf of individuals who claimed to be victims of a violation of the Convention's provisions by a State party. Four parties had made the declaration under article 21, concerning inter-State communications, bringing the number of declarations under that article to 60, while eight had done so under article 22, concerning individual communications, bringing the total under that article to 64.

Amendments to articles 17 and 18, adopted in 1992 [YUN 1992, p. 735], had been accepted by 28 States parties as at year's end.

Implementation

Monitoring body. During the year, the Committee against Torture, established as a monitoring body under the Convention, held its forty-fourth (26 April–14 May) [A/65/44] and forty-fifth (1–19 November) [A/66/44] sessions in Geneva. Under article 19 of the Convention, it considered reports submitted by 14 countries (Austria, Bosnia and Herzegovina, Cambodia, Cameroon, Ecuador, Ethiopia, France, Jordan, Liechtenstein, Mongolia, Switzerland, Syrian Arab Republic, Turkey, Yemen) and adopted concluding observations on them.

The Committee continued, in accordance with article 20, to study reliable information that appeared to contain well-founded indications that torture was systematically practiced in a State party. The Rapporteur on article 20 encouraged States parties on which enquiries had been conducted to implement the Committee's related recommendations. Under article 22, the Committee considered communications submitted by individuals claiming that their rights under the Convention had been violated by a State party and who had exhausted all available domestic remedies.

On 21 December, the General Assembly took note of the Committee's report on its forty-third [YUN 2009, p. 635] and forty-fourth sessions (decision 65/536).

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 21 December [meeting 71], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Third Committee [A/65/456/Add.1], adopted resolution 65/204 without vote [agenda item 68 (a)].

Committee against Torture

The General Assembly,

Recalling the Convention against Torture and Other Cruel, Inhuman or Degrading Treatment or Punishment,

Welcoming the work of the Committee against Torture,

Regretting the persistent backlog of reports of States parties and individual communications awaiting consideration, which prevents the Committee from considering reports and communications in a timely manner and without undue delay,

Noting the request of the Committee that the General Assembly authorize an extension of its meeting time,

Noting also that the Committee has only ten members and currently only meets for two sessions of three weeks a year,

Noting further that the estimated budgetary requirements of the requested extension of meeting time will be met within the programme budget approved for the biennium 2010–2011 and will be further dealt with in the context of the proposed programme budget for the biennium 2012–2013, while bearing in mind the need to make the best possible use of resources,

Taking note of the note by the Secretary-General on the evaluation of the use of additional meeting time by the human rights treaty bodies, the increasing workload of the treaty bodies and the increasing number of requests from them for more meeting time,

1. Expresses its appreciation for the efforts made so far by the Committee against Torture to improve the efficiency of its working methods, including with a view to further harmonizing the working methods of the treaty bodies, and encourages the Committee to continue its activities in this regard;

2. Decides to authorize the Committee to meet for an additional week per session as a temporary measure, with effect from May 2011 until the end of November 2012, in order to address the backlog of reports of States parties and individual complaints awaiting consideration;

3. Requests the Secretary-General to submit to the General Assembly at its sixty-sixth session concrete and tailored proposals on the human rights treaty bodies, including the Committee against Torture, building on the work of the Secretary-General pursuant to Human Rights Council resolution 9/8 of 24 September 2008 and of the treaty bodies in this regard, to improve their effectiveness and to identify efficiencies in their working methods and resource requirements in order to better manage their workloads, bearing in mind budgetary constraints and taking account of the varying burdens on each treaty body.

Subcommittee on Prevention. The Subcommittee on Prevention of Torture and Other Cruel, Inhuman or Degrading Treatment or Punishment (Subcommittee on Prevention), established in 2006 [YUN 2006, p. 776] to carry out the functions laid down in the Optional Protocol adopted by resolution 57/199 [YUN 2002, p. 631], held its tenth (22–26 February) [CAT/C/44/2], eleventh (21–25 June) and twelfth (15–19 November) [CAT/C/46/2] plenary sessions in Geneva. The mandate of the Subcommittee was to visit places where persons were or might be deprived of liberty and make recommendations to States parties on their protection; assist States parties in establishing national preventive mechanisms; provide support to such mechanisms; and co-operate with UN and other bodies in preventing ill-treatment.

In 2010, the Subcommittee visited Lebanon (24 May–3 June), Bolivia (30 August–8 September), Paraguay (13–15 September) [CAT/OP/PRY/2] and Liberia (6–13 December). The visits were followed by the submission of a confidential report to the Governments in question, which included recommendations. Paraguay, in June [CAT/OP/PRY/1/Add.1], submitted its comment relating to the Subcommittee's visit in 2009 [YUN 2009, p. 636].

The fourth annual report of the Subcommittee [CAT/C/46/2] covered its activities from April to December 2010.

Special Fund. In August [A/65/381], the Secretary-General reported on the Special Fund established pursuant to article 26 of the Optional Protocol to the Convention against Torture. The Fund was established to help finance the implementation of the recommendations made by the Subcommittee on Prevention following a visit to a State party to the Optional Protocol, as well as education programmes of national preventive mechanisms. In 2008–2009, contributions had been received from the Czech Republic ($10,000), the Maldives ($5,000) and Spain ($55,492.54). The General Assembly took note of the report on 21 December (decision 65/536).

Convention on the Rights of the Child

Accessions and ratifications

As at 31 December, the number of States parties to the 1989 Convention on the Rights of the Child, adopted by the General Assembly in resolution 44/25 [YUN 1989, p. 560], stood at 193. States parties to the Optional Protocol to the Convention on the involvement of children in armed conflict, adopted by Assembly resolution 54/263 [YUN 2000, p. 615], rose to 139, with the Congo, Cyprus, Gabon, Georgia, Guyana, Hungary, Malawi and Seychelles becoming parties during the year.

The Optional Protocol to the Convention on the sale of children, child prostitution and child pornography, also adopted by resolution 54/263, had 142 States parties, with the Gambia, Guinea-Bissau, Guyana, Hungary, Malta, Nigeria and Saudi Arabia becoming parties in 2010.

The Secretary-General reported on the status of the Convention and its Optional Protocols as at 1 July [A/65/206].

On 30 July, by resolution 64/293, the General Assembly adopted the United Nations Global Plan of Action to Combat Trafficking in Persons (see p. 1111).

Implementation

Monitoring body. In 2010, the Committee on the Rights of the Child held its fifty-third (11–29 January) [A/65/41], fifty-fourth (25 May–11 June) and fifty-fifth (13 September–1 October) [A/67/41] sessions, all in Geneva.

Under article 44 of the Convention, the Committee considered initial or periodic reports submitted by 26 countries (Angola, Argentina, Belgium, Burkina Faso, Burundi, Cameroon, Ecuador, El Salvador, Estonia, Grenada, Guatemala, Israel, Japan, Liechtenstein, the former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia, Mongolia, Montenegro, Nicaragua, Nigeria, Norway, Paraguay, Spain, Sri Lanka, Sudan, Tajikistan, Tunisia) and adopted concluding observations on them.

As decided at its fifty-second session [YUN 2009, p. 636], the Committee did not hold a day of general discussion in 2010 due to the increasing backlog of reports pending consideration.

The Economic and Social Council, on 23 July, took note of the report of the Committee on its fifty-third session (decision 2010/258). The General Assembly took note of that report on 21 December (decision 65/534).

Optional protocol on communications. On 24 March [A/65/53 (res. 13/3)], the Council extended the mandate of the Open-ended Working Group it established in 2009 [YUN 2009, p. 637] until the seventeenth (2011) session of the Council. It mandated the Working Group to elaborate an optional protocol to the Convention on the Rights of the Child to provide a communications procedure, and requested the Chairperson of the Working Group to prepare a proposal for a draft optional protocol, taking into account the views expressed and inputs provided during the first session of the Working Group in December 2009 [ibid.].

(For information on the Organization's efforts to protect the rights of the child, see p. 754.)

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 21 December [meeting 71], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Third Committee [A/65/452], adopted resolution 65/197 without vote [agenda item 64 (a)].

Rights of the child

The General Assembly,

Reaffirming all its previous resolutions on the rights of the child in their entirety, the most recent of which is resolution 64/146 of 18 December 2009,

Emphasizing that the Convention on the Rights of the Child constitutes the standard in the promotion and protection of the rights of the child, and bearing in mind the importance of the Optional Protocols to the Convention, calling for their universal ratification, as well as that of other human rights instruments,

Recalling the Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities, the International Convention for the Protection of All Persons from Enforced Disappearance and the International Convention on the Protection of the Rights of All Migrant Workers and Members of Their Families,

Reaffirming that the general principles of, inter alia, the best interests of the child, non-discrimination, participation and survival and development provide the framework for all actions concerning children, including adolescents,

Reaffirming also the Vienna Declaration and Programme of Action, the United Nations Millennium Declaration and the outcome document of the twenty-seventh special session of the General Assembly on children, entitled "A world fit for children", and recalling the Copenhagen Declaration on Social Development and the Programme of Action, the Dakar Framework for Action adopted at the World Education Forum, the Declaration on Social Progress and Development, the Universal Declaration on the Eradication of Hunger and Malnutrition, the Declaration on the Right to Development and the Declaration of the commemorative high-level plenary meeting devoted to the follow-up to the outcome of the special session on children, held in New York from 11 to 13 December 2007, as well as the outcome document of the High-level Plenary Meeting of the General Assembly on the Millennium Development Goals, held in New York from 20 to 22 September 2010,

Taking note with appreciation of the reports of the Secretary-General on progress made towards achieving the commitments set out in the outcome document of the twenty-seventh special session of the General Assembly and on the status of the Convention on the Rights of the Child and the issues addressed in Assembly resolution 64/146, as well as the report of the Special Representative of the Secretary-General on Violence against Children and the report of the Special Representative of the Secretary-General for Children and Armed Conflict, whose recommendations should be carefully studied, taking fully into account the views of Member States, and taking note of the report of the Secretary-General on children and armed conflict,

Acknowledging the important role played by national governmental structures for children, including, where they exist, ministries and institutions in charge of child, family and youth issues and independent ombudspersons for children or other national institutions for the promotion and protection of the rights of the child,

Recognizing the positive contribution of early childhood care and education programmes to the outcomes of schooling and to children's development to their fullest potential,

Taking note with appreciation of the work to promote and protect the rights of the child carried out by all relevant organs, bodies, entities and organizations of the United Nations system, within their respective mandates, and relevant mandate holders and special procedures of the United Nations, as well as relevant regional organizations, where appropriate, and intergovernmental organizations, and recognizing the valuable role of civil society, including non-governmental organizations, challenge facing the world today, recognizing its impact beyond the socio-economic context,

Profoundly concerned also that the situation of children in many parts of the world remains critical, in an increasingly globalized environment, as a result of the persistence of poverty, social inequality, inadequate social and economic conditions, pandemics, in particular HIV/AIDS, malaria and tuberculosis, lack of access to safe drinking water and sanitation, environmental damage, natural disasters, armed conflict, foreign occupation, displacement, violence, terrorism, abuse, trafficking in children and their organs, all forms of exploitation, commercial sexual exploitation of children, child prostitution, child pornography and child sex tourism, neglect, illiteracy, hunger, intolerance, discrimination, racism, xenophobia, gender inequality, disability and inadequate legal protection, and convinced that urgent and effective national and international action is called for,

Deeply concerned that, globally, 8.1 million children under five years of age died from preventable causes in 2009, and that in developing countries more than a third of the children under five years of age suffer from stunting and a quarter suffer from underweight and severe malnutrition before they enter primary school, with, in some cases, irreparable damage to their cognitive development and long-term impacts on their physical health and development,

Taking note of the Global Strategy for Women's and Children's Health, launched by the Secretary-General on 22 September 2010,

Gravely concerned about the devastating impact of some of the recent natural disasters, including on children, reaffirming the importance of providing speedy, sustainable and adequate humanitarian assistance in support of relief, early recovery, rehabilitation, reconstruction and development efforts of the affected countries, and reaffirming also the importance of ensuring that human rights in general, and child rights in particular, are mainstreamed into these efforts,

Recalling its resolution 64/290 of 9 July 2010 on the right to education in emergency situations,

Welcoming the adoption of the United Nations Global Plan of Action to Combat Trafficking in Persons, stressing the need for its full and effective implementation, and expressing the view that it will, inter alia, contribute to the promotion and protection of the rights of children, enhance cooperation and better coordination of efforts in fighting trafficking in persons and promote increased ratification and full implementation of the United Nations Convention against Transnational Organized Crime and the Protocol to Prevent, Suppress and Punish Trafficking in Persons, Especially Women and Children, supplementing the United Nations Convention against Transnational Organized Crime,

Convention on migrant workers

Accessions and ratifications

As at 31 December, the number of States parties to the International Convention on the Protection of the Rights of All Migrant Workers and Members of Their Families, adopted by the General Assembly in resolution 45/158 [YUN 1990, p. 594] and entering into force in 2003 [YUN 2003, p. 676], rose to 44, with Guyana and Saint Vincent and the Grenadines becoming parties in 2010.

Implementation

Monitoring body. The Committee on the Protection of the Rights of All Migrant Workers and Members of Their Families held its twelfth (26–30 April) [A/65/48] and thirteenth (22 November–3 December) [A/66/48] sessions in Geneva. Under article 74 of the Convention, the Committee considered the reports of Albania, Algeria, Ecuador and Senegal and adopted concluding observations on them. The Committee noted with concern that many initial reports from States parties under article 73 of the Convention, which required them to report on measures taken to give effect to the provisions of the Convention, had not been received. Committee members met informally with representatives of States parties and encouraged them to present their reports.

Pursuant to resolution 64/166 [YUN 2009, p. 670], the Secretary-General in July [A/65/156] provided information on the status of the Convention and on the activities of the Committee.

(For information on the protection of migrants, see p. 675.)

Convention on rights of persons with disabilities

At its third session, the Committee established a working group to follow up on natural disasters and other events that might impact on the situation of persons with disabilities; a working group on article 12, dealing with recognition before the law; and a working group on article 9, dealing with accessibility. At its fourth session, the Committee established a working group on accessibility to public transportation and on airline policies. In view of an expected dramatic increase in the number of State party reports submitted to it, the Committee requested the General Assembly to approve the holding of two annual sessions of two weeks' duration each to enable it to examine up to four State party reports per session.

Human Rights Council action. On 25 March [A/65/53 (res. 13/11)], the Council encouraged States to maintain or establish domestic frameworks and mechanisms to protect and promote the rights of persons with disabilities; and reaffirmed that civil society, in particular persons with disabilities and their representative organizations, should be involved and participate fully in the monitoring of the Convention. OHCHR was requested to prepare a study to enhance awareness of the role played by international cooperation in support of national efforts for realizing the purpose and objectives of the Convention.

OHCHR study. In December, OHCHR submitted a study [A/HRC/16/38] in response to Human Rights Council resolution 13/11 (see above). The study analysed international cooperation under the Convention, set out examples of international cooperation involving States, international and regional organizations and civil society organizations, and identified challenges to international cooperation.

General Assembly action. On 21 December, by resolution 65/186 (see p. 1078), the General Assembly urged Member States to promote the realization of the Millennium Development Goals for persons with disabilities by including disability issues and persons with disabilities in national plans and tools designed to contribute to the realization of the Goals.

As at 31 December, the Convention had 21 parties; Brazil, Iraq and Paraguay became parties during the year.

Pursuant to resolution 64/167 [YUN 2009, p. 643], the Secretary-General, in August, submitted a report [A/65/257] summarizing information on the implementation of the Convention received from 11 Governments (Argentina, Colombia, Cuba, Finland, Georgia, Guatemala, Japan, Mexico, Paraguay, Slovakia, Switzerland). The report also included information on the activities of OHCHR, the Working Group on Enforced or Involuntary Disappearances (see p. 700), UN bodies and intergovernmental and non-governmental organizations in disseminating information on the Convention and promoting its ratification.

Human Rights Council action. On 18 June [A/65/53 (res. 14/10)], the Council called upon States to consider signing and ratifying the Convention as a matter of priority. It called upon Governments to prevent the occurrence of enforced disappearances, including by ensuring that secret places of detention and interrogation were abolished.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 21 December [meeting 71], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Third Committee [A/65/456/Add.2 (Part II)], adopted resolution 65/209 without vote [agenda item 68 (b)].

International Convention for the Protection of All Persons from Enforced Disappearance

The General Assembly,

Reaffirming its resolution 61/177 of 20 December 2006, by which it adopted and opened for signature, ratification and accession the International Convention for the Protection of All Persons from Enforced Disappearance,

Recalling its resolution 47/133 of 18 December 1992, by which it adopted the Declaration on the Protection of All Persons from Enforced Disappearances as a body of principles for all States,

Recalling also its resolution 64/167 of 18 December 2009, as well as relevant resolutions adopted by the Human Rights Council, including resolution 14/10 of 18 June 2010, in which the Council took note of the report of the Working Group on Enforced or Involuntary Disappearances and the recommendations contained therein,

Deeply concerned, in particular, by the increase in enforced or involuntary disappearances in various regions of the world, including arrest, detention and abduction, when these are part of or amount to enforced disappearances, and by the growing number of reports concerning harassment, ill-treatment and intimidation of witnesses of disappearances or relatives of persons who have disappeared,

Recalling that the Convention sets out the right of victims to know the truth regarding the circumstances of the enforced disappearance, the progress and results of the investigation and the fate of the disappeared person and sets forth State party obligations to take appropriate measures in this regard,

Acknowledging that acts of enforced disappearance are recognized in the Convention as crimes against humanity, in certain circumstances,

Acknowledging also the valuable work of the International Committee of the Red Cross in promoting compliance with international humanitarian law in this field,

Recognizing that the entry into force of the Convention and its implementation will be a significant contribution to ending impunity and promoting and protecting all human rights for all,

Welcoming the fact that, in recent years, 30 August has been observed in many countries around the world as the International Day of the Victims of Enforced Disappearances,

1. Welcomes the adoption of the International Convention for the Protection of All Persons from Enforced Disappearance;

2. Also welcomes the fact that eighty-seven States have signed the Convention and twenty-one have ratified or acceded to it, enabling it to enter into force on 23 December 2010, and calls upon States that have not yet done so to consider signing and ratifying or acceding to the Convention as a matter of priority, as well as to consider the option provided for in articles 31 and 32 of the Convention regarding the Committee on Enforced Disappearances;

3. Further welcomes the report of the Secretary-General;

4. Decides to declare 30 August the International Day of the Victims of Enforced Disappearances, to be observed beginning in 2011, and calls upon Member States, the United Nations system and other international and regional organizations, as well as civil society, to observe this Day;

5. Requests the Secretary-General and the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights to continue their intensive efforts to assist States in becoming parties to the Convention, with a view to achieving universal adherence;

6. Requests United Nations agencies and organizations, and invites intergovernmental and non-governmental organizations and the Working Group on Enforced or Involuntary Disappearances, to continue making efforts to disseminate information on the Convention, to promote understanding of it, to prepare for its entry into force and to assist States parties in implementing their obligations under this instrument;

7. Requests the Secretary-General to submit to the General Assembly at its sixty-sixth session a report on the status of the Convention and the implementation of the present resolution.

Convention on genocide

As at 31 December, 141 States were parties to the 1948 Convention on the Prevention and Punishment of the Crime of Genocide, adopted by the General Assembly in resolution 260 A (III) [YUN 1948–49, p. 959].

Genocide prevention

Report of Secretary-General. The Secretary-General, in July [A/64/864], updated Member States on certain aspects of the responsibility to protect, pursuant to General Assembly resolution 63/308 [YUN 2009, p. 50], in which the Assembly confirmed its intention “to continue its consideration of the responsibility to protect” as called for in the 2005 World Summit Outcome [YUN 2005, p. 62]. The Secretary-General noted that further development of the concept of responsibility to protect was needed; and that the political dialogue on how best to implement the responsibility to protect was off to a good start, although a number of critical implementation issues would require a continuing conversation among Member States, the UN system and civil society organizations. His Special Adviser on the Prevention of Genocide and his Special Adviser responsible for the conceptual, political and institutional development of the responsibility to protect had distinct but closely related responsibilities. It was essential both to maintain the distinct elements of those two sets of responsibilities and to ensure the close working relationship of the two Special Advisers on the common elements of their activities. In order to save resources, eliminate redundancy and maximize synergies and effectiveness, the Secretary-General suggested considering ways to institutionalize the collaboration between the two Special Advisers, including options for a joint office. When the Special Advisers, based largely on information provided by, and in consultation with, other UN entities, concluded that a situation could result in genocide, war crimes, ethnic cleansing or crimes against humanity, they would provide early warning to the Secretary-General and, through him, to the Security Council and other intergovernmental organs. If the situation persisted, and if national authorities were manifestly failing to protect their populations from those crimes, the Secretary-General would ask the Special Advisers to convene an urgent meeting of key Under-Secretaries-General to identify a range of multilateral policy options, whether by the United Nations or by Chapter VIII of the Charter of the United Nations on regional arrangements, for preventing such mass crimes and for protecting populations.

Human rights treaty body system

Meeting of chairpersons. Pursuant to General Assembly resolution 57/202 [YUN 2002, p. 623], the Secretary-General in August submitted to the Assembly the report [A/65/190] on the twenty-second meeting of chairpersons of human rights treaty bodies (Brussels, Belgium, 1–2 July), which considered the follow-up to the recommendations of the twenty-first meeting of chairpersons [YUN 2009, p. 645] and reviewed developments related to the work of the treaty bodies. The chairs also met with institutions of the European Union (EU), the Council of Europe and representatives of civil society organizations and academia to discuss the applicability of the UN human rights treaties to EU actions, and the role of the EU in promoting implementation of and follow-up to the recommendations of UN treaty bodies.

Participants at the eleventh inter-committee meeting of human rights treaty bodies (Geneva, 28–30 June) [A/65/190, annex II] considered how to improve and harmonize the working methods of the treaty bodies and held informal consultations with representatives of 50 States parties. The meeting decided on points of agreement to be transmitted to the twenty-second meeting of chairpersons (see p. 655).

The General Assembly took note of the report on 21 December (decision 65/536).

Meeting of special rapporteurs, independent experts and chairpersons. In July [A/HRC/15/44], the High Commissioner transmitted to the Human Rights Council the report of the seventeenth meeting of special rapporteurs/representatives, independent experts and chairpersons of working groups of the Council's special procedures (Geneva, 28 June–2 July). Mandate holders exchanged views with the Deputy High Commissioner, the Council President, the former Council President and members of the Bureau. They held discussions with participants in the eleventh inter-committee meeting of human rights treaty bodies (see above), as well as with representatives of UN entities, OHCHR field presences, NGOs and national human rights institutions. Discussions focused on the independence and effectiveness of the special procedures, the harmonization of the working methods of mandate holders and the approach of the system of special procedures to the Council review (see p. 637). Participants stressed the importance of strengthening the special procedures system through the review and emphasized the importance of according them the possibility to participate in the process as equal partners. They agreed on a proactive role to be assumed by the Coordination Committee and mandate holders in the review process. They also discussed the role of special procedures in early warning and natural disasters, and coordinated follow-up to the work of human rights mechanisms, including special procedures, treaty bodies and the universal periodic review.

Advisory services and technical cooperation

Report of Secretary-General. A report of the Secretary-General [A/HRC/16/66] reviewed human rights advisory services and technical cooperation in 2010. Activities in Africa were carried out by the OHCHR country offices in Guinea and Togo; the human rights components of UN peace missions in Côte d'Ivoire, Liberia, Sierra Leone, Somalia and the Sudan; and human rights advisers in the International Conference on the Great Lakes Region (Burundi), Guinea, Kenya, Madagascar, the Niger and Rwanda. Successful cooperation was carried out with regional mechanisms, in particular the African Union, the Southern African Development Community, the Economic Community of West African States and the Intergovernmental Authority on Development.

In the Middle East and North Africa, OHCHR had a field presence in the Occupied Palestinian Territories, where the extent and complexity of the human rights challenges had required a high degree of adaptability on the part of the field presence. An OHCHR office was established in Mauritania in 2010. The deployment of a human rights adviser within the UN country team in Yemen was planned and negotiations were ongoing.

Activities in Asia and the Pacific were carried out by the human rights components of UN peace missions in Afghanistan and Timor-Leste and by human rights advisers in Papua New Guinea and Sri Lanka.

In the Americas, OHCHR helped to review legislation in Bolivia by addressing the anti-discrimination law and provided support to the Government on a human rights-based approach in policy planning. It assisted Ecuador and Nicaragua in developing human rights plans of action. OHCHR also worked in support of administration of justice in Colombia, Guatemala, Mexico, Nicaragua and Panama. The Human Rights Section of the United Nations Stabilization Mission in Haiti suffered fatalities in the January earthquake, which placed enormous stress on the implementation of technical cooperation activities.

In Europe and Central Asia, the field presence in Kosovo was supplemented by human rights advisers in Georgia, Moldova and the Russian Federation. In Kosovo OHCHR had been working with the Organization for Security and Cooperation in Europe, the Council of Europe and the European Union, and had established its reputation as a coordinator of human rights work. In the South Caucasus, OHCHR carried out activities to strengthen national human rights institutions in order to increase local capacity to translate international obligations with regard to human rights protection. In the Russian Federation, steady progress was noted in the first cycle of the OHCHR-facilitated human rights master's programme at leading universities and the OHCHR fellowship programme for indigenous peoples. The second cycle was under way. OHCHR was also instrumental in building the capacity of Moldova's Centre for Human Rights. Following the violence in Kyrgyzstan in June, human rights staff had been deployed to southern Kyrgyzstan for a period of one year. The Regional Office for Europe in Brussels was working on the issue of discrimination and migration as a priority.

Voluntary Fund

During the year, the Board of Trustees of the United Nations Voluntary Fund for Technical Cooperation in the Field of Human Rights held its thirty-second (22 February–2 March) and thirty-third (4–10 October) sessions in Geneva [A/HRC/16/66]. The Board examined various components of the UN human rights technical cooperation programme supported by the Voluntary Fund and received thematic and regional updates on the implementation of the OHCHR strategic management plan 2010–2011 in the context of the mid-year review, the strategic framework 2012–2013 and the performance monitoring system. As at 23 September, the estimated balance of the Fund was $17,288,342; total income was $14,488,580 and total expenditure $14,384,110.

Regional arrangements

Report of Secretary-General. Pursuant to General Assembly resolution 63/170 [YUN 2008, p. 756], the Secretary-General in September reported [A/65/369] on regional arrangements for the promotion and protection of human rights. He focused on the international workshop (Geneva, 3–4 May) on enhancing cooperation between international and regional human rights mechanisms, organized by OHCHR in compliance with Human Rights Council resolution 12/15 [YUN 2009, p. 650]. Participants included representatives of regional human rights mechanisms in Africa, the Americas and Europe, as well as representatives of subregional mechanisms in Africa and of the Association of Southeast Asian Nations (ASEAN) Intergovernmental Commission on Human Rights. Independent experts from UN treaty bodies and special procedures, as well as representatives of Member States, national human rights institutions, NGOs and academics, also participated in the workshop. The Secretary-General also focused on specific activities undertaken by OHCHR field presences with regional and subregional organizations and their respective human rights mechanisms in Africa, the Arab region, Asia and the Pacific, Europe, and Latin America and the Caribbean.

Asia and the Pacific

As requested by the Human Rights Council on 17 June [A/65/53 (res. 14/8)], the High Commissioner in August reported on the Fifteenth Workshop on Regional Cooperation for the Promotion and Protection of Human Rights in the Asia-Pacific Region (Bangkok, 21–23 April) [A/HRC/15/39], hosted by Thailand and jointly organized with OHCHR. The event was attended by Government representatives from across the region, regional NGOs, national human rights institutions and UN agencies.

The workshop reviewed progress achieved since the Fourteenth Workshop in Bali, Indonesia [YUN 2008, p. 758] in the four areas under the Tehran Framework of Regional Technical Cooperation Programme for Asia and the Pacific, namely: national human rights action plans; national human rights institutions; human rights education; and the right to development and economic, social and cultural rights. Discussions were held on the theme of "Strengthening regional human rights mechanisms by sharing good practices and experiences". Participants reviewed regional and subregional human rights initiatives in the region which opened new possibilities for cooperation. The workshop concluded with the adoption of the Bangkok Action Points, which were annexed to the report.

National institutions

Reports of Secretary-General. In a January report [A/HRC/13/44] on national institutions for the promotion and protection of human rights, the Secretary-General reviewed the activities of OHCHR in 2009 to establish and strengthen national human rights institutions, measures taken by Governments and those institutions in that regard, and cooperation between those institutions and international human rights mechanisms. The report discussed the activities of national human rights institutions on issues such as peace and justice, human rights defenders, migration, business and human rights, rights of persons with disabilities and climate change.

In a subsequent report [A/HRC/16/76], the Secretary-General provided information on the activities undertaken by OHCHR in 2010 to establish and strengthen national human rights institutions, cooperation between those institutions and international human rights mechanisms, as well as OHCHR support to the International Coordinating Committee of National Institutions for the Promotion and Protection of Human Rights. The report discussed the activities of national human rights institutions on issues such as business and human rights, torture prevention, the rights of migrants and persons in mobility, and the rights of indigenous peoples.

The Secretary-General in January reported [A/HRC/13/45] on the process utilized by the International Coordinating Committee of National Institutions for the Promotion and Protection of Human Rights to accredit national institutions in compliance with the Paris Principles, adopted by the General Assembly in 1993 [YUN 1993, p. 898]. The report reviewed the activities carried out by the International Coordinating Committee's Subcommittee on Accreditation, including the improved accreditation process and the adoption of general observations. In 2009, the Subcommittee reviewed the accreditation status of institutions from Bosnia and Herzegovina, Chad and the Occupied Palestinian Territory. It considered new applications from the institutions of Mauritania, Moldova, Qatar, Sri Lanka, Switzerland, Tunisia and Ukraine, as well as from the Scottish Human Rights Commission, and conducted special reviews of the institutions of Algeria, Ecuador, Greece, Luxembourg, Malaysia and Nepal. As at January 2010, there were 65 national human rights institutions accredited with A status by the International Coordinating Committee, that is, in full compliance with the Paris Principles. Sixteen institutions had a B status (not fully in compliance with the Paris Principles or insufficient information provided); nine institutions had a C status (non-compliance); and two were suspended.

A further report of the Secretary-General [A/HRC/16/77] provided information on the activities carried out by the Subcommittee on Accreditation in 2010 in considering and reviewing applications for accreditation and in carrying out re-accreditation and accreditation reviews of national human rights institutions. It also contained information on the development of the general observations of the Subcommittee, aimed at a more rigorous but at the same time fairer and more transparent accreditation and review process. An annex to the report listed 67 national institutions that were in compliance with the Paris Principles; 15 institutions not fully in compliance or which had provided insufficient information; 10 institutions that were non-compliant; and 3 institutions that had been suspended.

Role of the Ombudsman and other national institutions

Report of Secretary-General. Pursuant to General Assembly resolution 63/169 [YUN 2008, p. 755], the Secretary-General in September submitted a report [A/65/340] reviewing the activities undertaken by OHCHR from December 2008 to September 2010 to establish and strengthen the independent and autonomous Ombudsman, mediator and other national human rights institutions, and measures taken by Governments in that regard; international and regional support provided to those institutions; technical assistance provided to and on the Ombudsman, mediator and other national human rights institutions; and cooperation between those institutions and regional and international human rights mechanisms. The report reviewed the work of the Ombudsman, mediator and other national human rights institutions in respect of specific thematic issues. The Secretary-General encouraged any association of the Ombudsman, mediator and other national human rights institutions to foster a broad understanding and observance of the Paris Principles among their members; and urged Member States to ensure the implementation of the recommendations emanating from the Ombudsman, mediator and other national human rights institutions.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

Human rights education

Declaration on human rights education and training

At its fourth session (Geneva, 25–29 January), the Human Rights Council Advisory Committee submitted to the Council a draft declaration on human rights education and training [A/HRC/AC/4/4 (rec. 4/2)] for its consideration at its thirteenth session, as requested by Council resolutions 6/10 [YUN 2007, p. 697] and 10/28 [YUN 2009, p. 653].

Human Rights Council action. Welcoming the submission of the draft declaration, the Council on 25 March [A/65/53 (res. 13/15)] established an open-ended intergovernmental working group with the mandate of negotiating, finalizing and submitting to the Council the draft UN declaration on human rights education and training on the basis of the draft submitted by the Advisory Committee.

World Programme for Human Rights Education

Report of High Commissioner. As requested by the Human Rights Council [YUN 2009, p. 653], the High Commissioner in July submitted to the Council a draft plan of action [A/HRC/15/28] for the second phase (2010–2014) of the World Programme for Human Rights Education [YUN 2004, p. 678], focusing on human rights education for higher education and on human rights training for teachers and educators, civil servants, law enforcement officials and military personnel. OHCHR prepared a draft plan of action in the first quarter of 2010, in consultation with the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization (UNESCO). In April, the draft plan was submitted for review to relevant intergovernmental organizations, in particular UNESCO, and non-governmental actors, including experts and practitioners from accredited national human rights institutions, academic institutions and civil society organizations. OHCHR received 22 replies with comments, which were taken into consideration in the further elaboration of the draft. In May, OHCHR addressed a note to all Governments, inviting them to comment on the draft. The Office reviewed and finalized the draft in light of the replies received as at 28 June from Canada, Italy, Japan, Spain and Switzerland.

Inter-Agency Coordinating Committee on Human Rights Education. Pursuant to Council resolution 12/4 [YUN 2009, p. 653], OHCHR in August transmitted the final evaluation report [A/65/322] of the United Nations Inter-Agency Coordinating Committee on Human Rights Education in the School System on the implementation of the first phase (2005–2009) of the World Programme for Human Rights Education. The report found that the 76 Member States which provided national evaluation reports were taking some measures to integrate human rights education into their school systems. There was notable progress in making human rights education a part of national curricula. There were also a number of national initiatives in terms of policy and action to foster a culture of respect for human rights in daily school life. Gaps in implementation remained, which suggested the need for a more comprehensive and systematic approach at the national level. Accordingly, Member States were encouraged to consolidate progress by continuing implementation of the World Programme.

The General Assembly took note of the report on 21 December (decision 65/536).

Human Rights Council action. On 30 September [A/65/53/Add.1 (res. 15/11)], the Council adopted the plan of action for the second phase (2010–2014) of the World Programme for Human Rights Education; called upon national human rights institutions to assist in the implementation of human rights education programmes consistent with the plan of action; and requested OHCHR to prepare a progress report on the implementation of the World Programme and to submit it to the Council at its last session of 2012.

International Year for People of African Descent

Working Group of Experts on People of African Descent. At its ninth session (Geneva, 12–16 April) [A/HRC/14/18], the Working Group of Experts on People of African Descent discussed possible activities in the context of the International Year for People of African Descent, 2011, proclaimed by the General Assembly in its resolution 64/169 [YUN 2009, p. 655].

Pursuant to General Assembly resolution 64/169, the Secretary-General in August reported [A/65/227 & Add.1] on the draft programme of activities to mark the International Year. Views and recommendations were submitted by eight States (Algeria, Brazil, Colombia, Ecuador, Guatemala, Mexico, United States, Venezuela), as well as by OHCHR, the Committee on the Elimination of Racial Discrimination, the Special Rapporteur on contemporary forms of racism, racial discrimination, xenophobia and related intolerance, the Working Group of Experts on People of African Descent and the UN Department of Public Information.

Follow-up to 1993 World Conference

Report of Third Committee. On 1 December, the Third Committee of the General Assembly reported [A/65/456/Add.4] on the implementation of and follow-up to the Vienna Declaration and Programme of Action, adopted at the 1993 World Conference on Human Rights [YUN 1993, p. 908]. It noted that on 17 September, the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the General Committee, decided to include in the agenda of its sixty-fifth session, under the item entitled "Promotion and protection of human rights", the sub-item entitled "Comprehensive implementation of and follow-up to the Vienna Declaration and Programme of Action" and to allocate it to the Third Committee. The Third Committee considered the sub-item on 19 October [A/C.3/65/SR.20 & 21]. No proposals were submitted under that sub-item.

The General Assembly took note of the report of the Third Committee on 21 December (decision 65/537).

Protection of human rights

In 2010, the United Nations continued to protect human rights worldwide through several mechanisms. Its main organs—the General Assembly, the Security Council and the Economic and Social Council—remained engaged in protecting those rights. The Human Rights Council carried out its task as the central United Nations intergovernmental body responsible for promoting and protecting human rights and fundamental freedoms worldwide. The Council addressed violations, worked to prevent abuses, provided overall policy guidance, monitored the observance of human rights around the world and assisted States in fulfilling their human rights obligations.

Central to human rights protection were the special procedures of the Human Rights Council—independent experts with mandates to investigate, report and advise on human rights from a thematic or country-specific perspective. At the end of 2010, there were 41 special procedures (33 thematic mandates and eight mandates relating to countries or territories) with 61 mandate-holders. Those special rapporteurs, independent experts, working groups and representatives of the Secretary-General served in their personal capacity, were not UN staff members and did not receive financial remuneration.

During the year, special procedures submitted 156 reports to the Human Rights Council, including 58 country visit reports, and 26 reports to the General Assembly. They sent 604 communications to 110 States; 66 per cent of all communications were sent jointly by more than one mandate. Communications covered at least 1,407 individuals, 19 per cent of whom were women. Governments replied to 35 per cent of communications sent in 2010, and 18 per cent of communications were followed up on by mandate-holders. Special procedures issued 232 news releases and public statements on situations of concern, including 24 statements issued jointly by two or more mandate-holders.

Special procedures conducted 67 country visits to 48 States and territories. Seventy-eight countries had extended a standing invitation to special procedures as at 31 December.

The Council in 2010 established two thematic mandates: the Working Group on the issue of discrimination against women in law and in practice, and the Special Rapporteur on the rights to freedom of peaceful assembly and of association.

Human rights were also protected through the network of human rights defenders in individual countries, operating within the framework of the 1998 Declaration on Human Rights Defenders.

Economic, social and cultural rights continued to be a major focus of activity. The General Assembly in July recognized the human right to safe and clean drinking water and sanitation. Also in July, the Assembly adopted a resolution on the right to education in emergency situations.

In December, the General Assembly proclaimed 24 March as the International Day for the Right to the Truth concerning Gross Human Rights Violations and for the Dignity of Victims, and 30 August as the International Day of the Victims of Enforced Disappearances.

Special procedures

Report of High Commissioner. In her annual report to the Human Rights Council [A/HRC/16/20], the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights noted the widely acknowledged contribution of the special procedures mandate holders to the Council's work. Interactive dialogues at the Council and General Assembly had allowed mandate holders to highlight human rights concerns requiring follow-up and to provide early warning on situations and emerging trends requiring urgent international attention. She welcomed States issuing standing invitations and the increase of those to 78 during 2010. A hallmark of special procedures mandate holders was their direct access to victims and human rights defenders. In all, there were 41 mandates—including two new mandates on the elimination of discrimination of women in law and in practice, and on the right to freedom of peaceful assembly and association—with 61 mandate holders. One third of mandate holders were women.

Reports of Secretary-General. In response to a Commission on Human Rights request [YUN 2004, p. 648] and a Human Rights Council decision [YUN 2006, p. 760], the Secretary-General submitted reports in February [A/HRC/13/74] and December [A/HRC/16/30] listing special procedures' conclusions and recommendations contained, respectively, in their 2009 reports to the Council's eleventh and twelfth sessions and in their 2010 reports to the Council's thirteenth, fourteenth and fifteenth sessions.

Civil and political rights

Racism and racial discrimination

Follow-up to 2001 World Conference

During the year, efforts continued to implement the Durban Declaration and Programme of Action (DDPA) adopted by the 2001 World Conference against Racism, Racial Discrimination, Xenophobia and Related Intolerance [YUN 2001, p. 615].

Intergovernmental Working Group. The Intergovernmental Working Group on the effective implementation of DDPA, established in 2002 [YUN 2002, p. 661] to make recommendations for its implementation and to prepare complementary standards, held its eighth session (Geneva, 11–22 October) [A/HRC/16/64]. The Working Group discussed draft conclusions and recommendations on the protection of children, migration and employment; reviewed progress on the implementation of recommendations adopted at its previous session; and shared experiences, including on good practices, implementation of the International Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Racial Discrimination, DDPA and the Outcome Document of the 2009 Durban Review Conference [YUN 2009, p. 657]. The tenth anniversary of the adoption of DDPA (2011) was discussed and a discussion on structural discrimination was held. Presentations by experts were followed by interactive discussions. The Working Group adopted conclusions and recommendations on the aforementioned themes.

Working Group on people of African descent. At its ninth session (Geneva, 12–16 April) [A/HRC/14/18], the Working Group of Experts on People of African Descent, established in 2002 [YUN 2002, p. 661] to consider problems of racial discrimination affecting people of African descent, in accordance with DDPA, engaged in a discussion on structural discrimination against people of African descent. It also addressed activities in the context of the International Year for People of African Descent (2011), which was declared by the General Assembly in resolution 64/169 [YUN 2009, p. 655].

Following its mission to the United States (25–29 January) [A/HRC/15/18], the Group issued recommendations on improving the situation of people of African descent in the country. Those included the adoption of an anti-discrimination act; the continuation and enhancement of education initiatives such as magnet and charter schools; the adoption of an employment quota system in the private sector; the use of statistics in court proceedings to demonstrate a prima facie presumption of discrimination; measures to address the disproportionate incarceration rates of people of African descent; greater consultation with African-American communities concerning urban development projects that affected them; the establishment of a human rights commission with a dependency that would deal specifically with people of African descent; and efforts to ensure to children of African descent all the rights contained within the Convention on the Rights of the Child [YUN 1989, p. 560].

Human Rights Council action. On 18 June [A/65/53 (res. 14/16)], the Council took note of the report of the Working Group of Experts on People of African Descent, including its recommendations, in particular, the theme “People of African descent: recognition, justice and development”, in the context of the International Year. It also decided to dedicate two working days of the Intergovernmental Working Group’s eighth session to prepare for the commemoration of the tenth anniversary of DDPA in 2011 (see above).

On 1 October [A/65/53/Add.1 (dec. 15/117)], the Council decided to hold at its eighteenth (2011) session a panel discussion on the promotion and protection of human rights through tolerance and reconciliation, drawing inspiration from the example of Nelson Mandela for promoting human rights without distinction as to race, colour or national or ethnic origin.

Report of Secretary-General. In response to General Assembly resolution 64/148 [YUN 2009, p. 660], the Secretary-General in September [A/65/377] reported on global efforts for the total elimination of racism, racial discrimination, xenophobia and related intolerance, and the comprehensive implementation of and follow-up to DDPA. The report summarized contributions on the topic received from 17 countries and four UN entities, and reviewed activities undertaken by UN bodies since the submission of the last report [YUN 2009, p. 658]. It concluded that progress had been made in combating racism and related phenomena, yet measures were needed to reverse the worrisome trends of increasingly hostile racist attitudes and violence.

The General Assembly took note of that report on 21 December (decision 65/535).

Combating racism in sports

The General Assembly, in resolution 64/5 [YUN 2009, p. 1076] on the 2010 Fédération Internationale de Football Association (FIFA) World Cup, welcomed the readiness of South Africa to host the event, which would be held for the first time on the African continent, and encouraged Member States to support the World Cup in June 2010, including through stimulating popular attendance.

Human Rights Council action. On 26 March [A/65/53 (res. 13/27)], the Council recognized the shared commitment to a world of sports free from racism, racial discrimination, xenophobia and related intolerance, and called on States to take measures to that end; invited the President of South Africa, the FIFA President and the UN Secretary-General to reinforce the visible theme on non-racism in football at the 2010 World Cup; called on States, the United Nations and sport-related institutions to help initiate and assist in implementing grass-roots initiatives to combat racism and related phenomena in sports; and invited the United Nations Office of Sport for Development and Peace to coordinate and facilitate the engagement of stakeholders.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 24 December [meeting 73], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Third (Social, Humanitarian and Cultural) Committee [A/65/454 & Corr.1], adopted resolution 65/240 by recorded vote (104-22-33) [agenda item 66 (b)].

Global efforts for the total elimination of racism, racial discrimination, xenophobia and related intolerance and the comprehensive implementation of and follow-up to the Durban Declaration and Programme of Action

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 52/111 of 12 December 1997, in which it decided to convene the World Conference against Racism, Racial Discrimination, Xenophobia and Related Intolerance, and its resolutions 56/266 of 27 March 2002, 57/195 of 18 December 2002, 58/160 of 22 December 2003, 59/177 of 20 December 2004 and 60/144 of 16 December 2005, which guided the comprehensive follow-up to and effective implementation of the World Conference, and in this regard underlining the importance of their full and effective implementation,

Recalling also its resolution 64/148 of 18 December 2009, in which it, inter alia, called for the commemoration of the tenth anniversary of the Durban Declaration and Programme of Action adopted by the World Conference against Racism, Racial Discrimination, Xenophobia and Related Intolerance, which represents an important opportunity for the international community to reaffirm its commitment to the eradication of racism, racial discrimination, xenophobia and related intolerance, including by mobilizing political will at the national, regional and international levels, with a view to achieving concrete results,

Taking note of Human Rights Council decision 3/103 of 8 December 2006, by which, heeding the decision and instruction of the World Conference, the Council established the Ad Hoc Committee of the Human Rights Council on the Elaboration of Complementary Standards, and encouraging the Committee to continue making progress in the discharge of its mandate,

Bearing in mind the responsibility and obligations of the Human Rights Council emanating from the outcome of the Durban Review Conference,

Reiterating that all human beings are born free and equal in dignity and rights and have the potential to contribute constructively to the development and well-being of their societies, and that any doctrine of racial superiority is scientifically false, morally condemnable, socially unjust and dangerous and must be rejected, together with theories that attempt to determine the existence of separate human races,

Convinced that racism, racial discrimination, xenophobia and related intolerance manifest themselves in a differentiated manner for women and girls and may be among the factors leading to a deterioration in their living conditions, poverty, violence, multiple forms of discrimination and the limitation or denial of their human rights, and recognizing the need to integrate a gender perspective into relevant policies, strategies and programmes of action against racism, racial discrimination, xenophobia and related intolerance in order to address multiple forms of discrimination,

Underlining the primacy of political will, international cooperation and adequate funding at the national, regional and international levels needed to address all forms and manifestations of racism, racial discrimination, xenophobia and related intolerance,

Alarmed at the increase in racist violence and xenophobic ideas in many parts of the world, in political circles, in the sphere of public opinion and in society at large as a result, inter alia, of the resurgent activities of associations established on the basis of racist and xenophobic platforms and charters, and the persistent use of those platforms and charters to promote or incite racist ideologies,

Underlining the importance of urgently eliminating continuing and violent trends involving racism and racial discrimination, and conscious that any form of impunity for crimes motivated by racist and xenophobic attitudes plays a role in weakening the rule of law and democracy, tends to encourage the recurrence of such crimes and requires resolute action and cooperation for its eradication,

Acknowledging the centrality of resource mobilization, effective global partnership and international cooperation in the context of paragraphs 157 and 158 of the Durban Programme of Action for the successful realization of commitments undertaken at the World Conference,

Expressing grave concern at the lack of progress made in the implementation of the Durban Declaration and Programme of Action, in particular key paragraphs 157 to 159 of the Programme of Action,

Welcoming the continued commitment of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights to profiling and increasing the visibility of the struggle against racism, racial discrimination, xenophobia and related intolerance, and recognizing the need for the High Commissioner to make this a cross-cutting issue in the activities and programmes of her Office,

Welcoming also the work of the Intergovernmental Working Group on the Effective Implementation of the Durban Declaration and Programme of Action at its seventh and eighth sessions, held from 5 to 16 October 2009 and from 11 to 22 October 2010, respectively, in particular the recommendation on the commemoration of the tenth anniversary of the adoption of the Durban Declaration and Programme of Action, and looking forward to the consideration by the Human Rights Council of the conclusions and recommendations of the Working Group,

Recognizing the potential of sport as a universal language contributing to the education of people on the values of diversity, tolerance and fairness and as a means to combat racism, racial discrimination, xenophobia and related intolerance,

Welcoming the hosting of the 2010 and 2014 International Federation of Association Football World Cups in South Africa and Brazil, respectively, and stressing the importance of making continuing use of those events to promote understanding, tolerance and peace and to promote and strengthen efforts in the fight against racism, racial discrimination, xenophobia and related intolerance,

Contemporary forms of racism

Reports of Special Rapporteur. Pursuant to a Human Rights Council request [YUN 2008, p. 770], the Special Rapporteur on contemporary forms of racism, racial discrimination, xenophobia and related intolerance, Githu Muigai (Kenya), in March issued a report [A/HRC/14/43] that analysed how racism, racial discrimination and conflict interrelate, and examined three situations, namely, before, during and after a conflict. The report focused on issues such as the debates surrounding the concept of national identity; socio-economic discrimination against members of specific groups; political manipulation of racist or nationalist ideology in ethnic conflicts; and how hate speech based on racist ideology might exacerbate violence perpetrated against certain individuals or groups. The Rapporteur said that ensuring sustainable peace required relevant stakeholders to acknowledge the ethnic or racial dimension of a given conflict; recognize and address human rights violations, including racial discrimination, committed during a conflict; maintain vigilance vis-à-vis renewed incitement to hatred and violence; and ensure participation of and genuine dialogue among all components of the society. His recommendations were aimed at providing those stakeholders with tools for detecting early warning signs of racism and related phenomena and reacting accordingly.

An addendum [A/HRC/14/43/Add.1] summarized 14 communications sent by the Rapporteur to 12 Governments between 1 January 2009 and 28 February 2010, 8 replies received from 8 Governments until 14 May 2010, as well as observations of the Rapporteur.

As requested by the Human Rights Council (see p. 684) the Rapporteur in July [A/HRC/15/53] reported on the manifestations of defamation of religions, in particular on the implications of Islamophobia, for the enjoyment of all rights by their followers. The Rapporteur recommended that the report be read in conjunction with his 2009 report [YUN 2009, p. 659], which focused on the legal and conceptual questions of the debate on "defamation of religions" and incitement to religious hatred. The 2010 report referred to cases pertaining to Council resolution 13/16, covering a wide range of issues falling under five themes: acts of violence or discrimination, or incitement thereto, against individuals on the basis of their religion or belief; attacks on religious sites; religious and ethnic profiling; religious symbols; and negative stereotyping of religions, their followers and sacred persons. In his conclusions, the Rapporteur expressed concern about reports of incidents negatively affecting the human rights of Muslim individuals and that the phenomena remained a serious issue in a variety of countries. He called on States to move away from the notion of defamation of religions towards the legal concept of advocacy of racial or religious hatred that constituted incitement to discrimination, hostility or violence; to find the most effective ways to protect individuals from advocacy of hatred and violence by others and bring about real changes in mindsets, perceptions and discourse; and to adopt preventive measures aimed at fostering a peaceful society where freedom of expression, religion or belief could be exercised by all individuals.

Also in July, pursuant to General Assembly resolutions 63/162 [YUN 2008, p. 770] and 64/147 [YUN 2009, p. 663], the Rapporteur submitted a report [A/HRC/15/45] on the implementation of those resolutions. The report addressed the human rights and democratic challenges posed by extremist political parties, movements and groups, including neo-Nazis, skinhead groups, and extremist ideological movements. In his recommendations, the Rapporteur called on States to be more vigilant, which might include the adoption or more robust enforcement of legislative measures; to hold public figures politically accountable for bigoted words that encouraged discrimination and violence; to guarantee the right to life and to security of person; to design mandatory human rights training for law enforcement bodies and members of the judiciary; and to increase efforts to reach out to community groups, in particular vulnerable groups at risk of racist and xenophobic crimes.

In August, the Secretary-General transmitted the Rapporteur's report [A/65/323] on implementation of General Assembly resolution 64/147 on the inadmissibility of practices that contributed to fuelling contemporary forms of racism and related phenomena, which summarized contributions from 13 States, as well as views sent by six non-governmental organizations (NGOs), and put forward a number of recommendations.

Also in August, pursuant to General Assembly resolution 64/148 [YUN 2009, p. 660], the Secretary-General transmitted the Special Rapporteur's interim report [A/65/295] describing his activities, including country visits, and presenting issues addressed by the Rapporteur in annual reports, conferences, seminars and other meetings. The Rapporteur called on States to take measures to implement DDPA and the Review Conference outcome document; to adopt specific legislation on racism, racial discrimination, xenophobia and related intolerance; and to combat negative stereotypes of, and discrimination against, individuals and groups, and to promote diversity. In that regard, he emphasized the role of education and awareness-raising measures that contributed to creating tolerant societies. The Rapporteur also made recommendations relating to racism and conflict; incitement to racial or religious hatred; human rights challenges faced by migrants, refugees and asylum-seekers; the collection of ethnically disaggregated data; and racism and sports.

The General Assembly took note of that report on 21 December (decision 65/535).

Mission report. Following his visit to Singapore (21–28 April) [A/HRC/17/40/Add.2], the Rapporteur recommended that the Government remove legislative provisions that unduly restricted the rights to freedom of expression and assembly and prevented individuals from holding public debate on ethnicity matters; remove the indication of one's ethnic background on identification documents so as not to perpetuate ethnic categorization of Singaporeans; establish a national body to coordinate efforts and provide people living in Singapore with complementary social services in an equal manner; adjust the public educational system to allow Malay students to catch up with their Chinese counterparts; review guidelines, policies and practices that might prevent members of ethnic minorities from being employed in institutions such as the armed forces, the police and the judiciary; and to ensure the protection of migrant workers' human rights. In that connection, he recommended enhancement of the Employment Act to cover domestic workers; the expeditious resolution of labour disputes; and the introduction of a minimum wage for migrant workers particularly vulnerable to exploitation.

Communications. On 28 October [A/65/546-S/2010/559], Tajikistan, on behalf of the Organization of the Islamic Conference (oic) Group in New York, transmitted the Declaration on Countering Islamophobia and the Final Communiqué of the oic Annual Coordination Meeting of Ministers of Foreign Affairs (New York, 24 September).

On 6 December [A/65/606-S/2010/617], the Russian Federation transmitted to the Secretary-General declarations by the State Duma on the occasion of the sixty-fifth anniversary of the opening of the Nuremberg trials of the major Nazi war criminals and by the Federation Council of the Federal Assembly of the Russian Federation on the occasion of the sixty-fifth anniversary of the trials.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 21 December [meeting 71], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Third Committee [A/65/454 & Corr.1], adopted resolution 65/199 by recorded vote (129-3-52) [agenda item 66 (a)].

Inadmissibility of certain practices that contribute to fuelling contemporary forms of racism, racial discrimination, xenophobia and related intolerance

The General Assembly,

Guided by the Charter of the United Nations, the Universal Declaration of Human Rights, the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights, the International Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Racial Discrimination and other relevant human rights instruments,

Recalling the provisions of Commission on Human Rights resolutions 2004/16 of 16 April 2004 and 2005/5 of 14 April 2005 and relevant Human Rights Council resolutions, in particular resolution 7/34 of 28 March 2008, as well as General Assembly resolutions 60/143 of 16 December 2005, 61/147 of 19 December 2006, 62/142 of 18 December 2007, 63/162 of 18 December 2008 and 64/147 of 18 December 2009 on this issue and resolutions 61/149 of 19 December 2006, 62/220 of 22 December 2007, 63/242 of 24 December 2008 and 64/148 of 18 December 2009, entitled "Global efforts for the total elimination of racism, racial discrimination, xenophobia and related intolerance and the comprehensive implementation of and follow-up to the Durban Declaration and Programme of Action",

Recalling also the Charter of the Nuremberg Tribunal and the Judgement of the Tribunal, which recognized, inter alia, the SS organization and all its integral parts, including the Waffen SS, as criminal and declared it responsible for many war crimes and crimes against humanity,

Recalling further the relevant provisions of the Durban Declaration and Programme of Action adopted by the World Conference against Racism, Racial Discrimination, Xenophobia and Related Intolerance on 8 September 2001, in particular paragraph 2 of the Declaration and paragraph 86 of the Programme of Action, as well as the relevant provisions of the outcome document of the Durban Review Conference, of 24 April 2009, in particular paragraphs 11 and 54,

Alarmed, in this regard, at the spread in many parts of the world of various extremist political parties, movements and groups, including neo-Nazis and skinhead groups, as well as similar extremist ideological movements,

Recalling that in 2010 the international community celebrated the sixty-fifth anniversary of victory in the Second World War, and welcoming in this regard the special solemn meeting of the sixty-fourth session of the General Assembly, held on 6 May 2010,

Recalling also that the sixty-fifth session of the General Assembly coincides with the sixty-fifth anniversary of the establishment of the Nuremberg Tribunal and the adoption of its Charter,

1. Reaffirms the relevant provisions of the Durban Declaration and of the outcome document of the Durban Review Conference, in which States condemned the persistence and resurgence of neo-Nazism, neo-Fascism and violent nationalist ideologies based on racial and national prejudice and stated that those phenomena could never be justified in any instance or in any circumstances;

2. Takes note with appreciation of the report of the Special Rapporteur on contemporary forms of racism, racial discrimination, xenophobia and related intolerance, prepared in accordance with the request contained in General Assembly resolution 64/147;

3. Expresses its appreciation to the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights for her commitment to maintaining the fight against racism as one of the priority activities of her Office;

4. Expresses deep concern about the glorification of the Nazi movement and former members of the Waffen SS organization, including by erecting monuments and memorials and holding public demonstrations in the name of the glorification of the Nazi past, the Nazi movement and neo-Nazism, as well as by declaring or attempting to declare such members and those who fought against the anti-Hitler coalition and collaborated with the Nazi movement participants in national liberation movements;

5. Expresses concern at recurring attempts to desecrate or demolish monuments erected in remembrance of those who fought against Nazism during the Second World War, as well as to unlawfully exhume or remove the remains of such persons, and in this regard urges States to fully comply with their relevant obligations, inter alia, under article 34 of Additional Protocol I to the Geneva Conventions of 1949;

6. Notes with concern the increase in the number of racist incidents in several countries and the rise of skinhead groups, which have been responsible for many of these incidents, as well as the resurgence of racist and xenophobic violence targeting members of ethnic, religious or cultural communities and national minorities, as observed by the Special Rapporteur in his latest report to the General Assembly;

7. Reaffirms that such acts may be qualified to fall within the scope of activities described in article 4 of the International Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Racial Discrimination and that they may represent a clear and manifest abuse of the rights to freedom of peaceful assembly and of association as well as the rights to freedom of opinion and expression within the meaning of those rights as guaranteed by the Universal Declaration of Human Rights, the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights and the International Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Racial Discrimination;

8. Stresses that the practices described above do injustice to the memory of the countless victims of crimes against humanity committed in the Second World War, in particular those committed by the SS organization and those who fought against the anti-Hitler coalition and collaborated with the Nazi movement, and poison the minds of young people, and that failure by States to effectively address such practices is incompatible with the obligations of States Members of the United Nations under its Charter and is incompatible with the goals and principles of the Organization;

9. Also stresses that such practices fuel contemporary forms of racism, racial discrimination, xenophobia and related intolerance and contribute to the spread and multiplication of various extremist political parties, movements and groups, including neo-Nazis and skinhead groups, and in this regard calls for increased political and legal vigilance;

10. Emphasizes the need to take the measures necessary to put an end to the practices described above, and calls upon States to take more effective measures in accordance with international human rights law to combat those phenomena and the extremist movements, which pose a real threat to democratic values;

11. Recalls the recommendation of the Special Rapporteur, made in his latest report to the General Assembly, to introduce into domestic criminal law a provision according to which committing an offence with racist or xenophobic motivations or aims constitutes an aggravating circumstance allowing for enhanced penalties, and encourages those States whose legislation does not contain such provisions to consider that recommendation;

12. Reaffirms, in this regard, the particular importance of all forms of education, including human rights education, as a complement to legislative measures, as outlined by the Special Rapporteur;

13. Emphasizes the recommendation of the Special Rapporteur regarding the importance of history classes in teaching the dramatic events and human suffering that resulted from the ideologies of Nazism and Fascism;

14. Stresses the importance of other positive measures and initiatives aimed at bringing communities together and providing them with space for genuine dialogue, such as round tables, working groups and seminars, including training seminars for State agents and media professionals, as well as awareness-raising activities, especially those initiated by civil society representatives which require continued State support;

15. Underlines the potentially positive role that relevant United Nations entities and programmes, in particular the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization, can play in the aforementioned areas;

16. Reaffirms that, according to article 4 of the International Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Racial Discrimination, States parties to that instrument are, inter alia, under the obligation:

(a) To condemn all propaganda and all organizations that are based on ideas of racial superiority or that attempt to justify or promote racial hatred and discrimination in any form;

(b) To undertake to adopt immediate and positive measures designed to eradicate all incitement to, or acts of, such discrimination, with due regard to the principles embodied in the Universal Declaration of Human Rights and the rights expressly set forth in article 5 of the Convention;

(c) To declare as an offence punishable by law all dissemination of ideas based on racial superiority or hatred, and incitement to racial discrimination, as well as all acts of violence or incitement to such acts against any race or group of persons of another colour or ethnic origin, and also the provision of any assistance to racist activities, including the financing thereof;

(d) To declare illegal and prohibit organizations and organized and all other propaganda activities that promote and incite racial discrimination, and to recognize participation in such organizations or activities as an offence punishable by law;

(e) To prohibit public authorities or public institutions, national or local, from promoting or inciting racial discrimination;

17. Also reaffirms that, as underlined in paragraph 13 of the outcome document of the Durban Review Conference, any advocacy of national, racial or religious hatred that constitutes incitement to discrimination, hostility or violence should be prohibited by law, as should the dissemination of ideas based on racial superiority, hatred, acts of violence or incitement to such acts, and that these prohibitions are consistent with freedom of opinion and expression;

18. Expresses concern about the use of the Internet to propagate racism, racial hatred, xenophobia, racial discrimination and related intolerance, as outlined in the latest report of the Special Rapporteur to the General Assembly;

19. Underlines, at the same time, the positive role that the exercise of the right to freedom of opinion and expression, as well as full respect for the freedom to seek, receive and impart information, including through the Internet, can play in combating racism, racial discrimination, xenophobia and related intolerance;

20. Encourages those States that have made reservations to article 4 of the International Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Racial Discrimination to give serious consideration to withdrawing such reservations as a matter of priority, as stressed by the Special Rapporteur in his latest report to the General Assembly;

21. Encourages States parties to the International Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Racial Discrimination to ensure that their legislation incorporates the provisions of the Convention, including those of article 4;

22. Recalls the request of the Commission on Human Rights, in its resolution 2005/5, that the Special Rapporteur continue to reflect on this issue, make relevant recommendations in his future reports and seek and take into account in this regard the views of Governments and non-governmental organizations;

23. Requests the Special Rapporteur to prepare, for submission to the General Assembly at its sixty-sixth session and to the Human Rights Council, reports on the implementation of the present resolution based on the views collected in accordance with the request of the Commission on Human Rights, as recalled by the Assembly in paragraph 22 above;

24. Expresses its appreciation to those Governments that have provided information to the Special Rapporteur in the course of the preparation of his report to the General Assembly;

25. Also expresses its appreciation to representatives of civil society for their contribution to the fight against racism, racial discrimination, xenophobia and related intolerance;

26. Stresses that such information is important for the sharing of experiences and best practices in the fight against extremist political parties, movements and groups, including neo-Nazis and skinhead groups, as well as extremist ideological movements;

27. Encourages Governments and non-governmental organizations to cooperate fully with the Special Rapporteur in the exercise of the tasks outlined in paragraph 22 above;

28. Encourages Governments, non-governmental organizations and relevant actors to disseminate, as widely as possible, information regarding the contents of and the principles outlined in the present resolution, including through the media, but not limited to it;

29. Decides to remain seized of the issue.

Human rights defenders

Reports of Special Rapporteur. The Special Rapporteur on the situation of human rights defenders, Margaret Sekaggya (Uganda), described her activities in her second report [A/HRC/13/22] to the Human Rights Council, submitted pursuant to a Council request [YUN 2008, p. 721]. She drew the attention of Member States to the 266 communications that were sent under the mandate during 2009. Focusing on the security and protection of human rights defenders, the Rapporteur made recommendations to States on minimum guidelines regarding protection programmes for human rights defenders, and to donor States, European Union States, NGOs and human rights institutions on other issues related to the security and protection of defenders.

An addendum [A/HRC/13/22/Add.1 & Corr.1] summarized communications sent to 76 Governments from 10 December 2008 to 15 December 2009 and replies received until 10 February 2010. A further addendum [A/HRC/13/22/Add.4] presented the questionnaire on the security and protection of human rights defenders sent by the Rapporteur in October 2009, and the responses received from 76 Governments, NGOs and human rights defenders.

In August, in response to General Assembly resolution 62/152 [YUN 2007, p. 670], the Secretary-General transmitted to the Assembly the report [A/65/223] of the Special Rapporteur, which focused on responsibility for human rights violations against defenders by non-State actors, including the corporate responsibility to respect human rights, and States' obligations under international law with respect to violations against defenders by non-State actors. The report identified armed groups, private corporations, individuals and the media as the categories of non-State actors addressed in the report; examined the types of violations they committed; addressed the scope of their responsibility for violations of the rights of defenders; and surveyed States' obligations with respect to violations against defenders by non-State actors. The Special Rapporteur argued that a State's duties to respect and protect human rights included a duty to protect defenders against human rights violations by third parties. A State's obligation to provide victims of violations with an effective remedy was reaffirmed. The report's recommendations to States and non-State actors sought to ensure that they fulfilled their obligations and responsibilities.

The General Assembly took note of that report on 21 December (decision 65/536).

Human Rights Council action. On 25 March [A/65/53 (res. 13/13)], the Council called on States to ensure that those involved in the protection of human rights defenders and their relatives were trained in human rights and the protection-related needs of human rights defenders at risk; to allocate resources for protection measures; and to investigate complaints and allegations regarding threats or human rights violations perpetrated against human rights defenders or their relatives; and to initiate proceedings against the perpetrators.

Mission report. Following her visit to Armenia (12–18 June) [A/HRC/16/44/Add.2], the Rapporteur highlighted the increasingly politicized environment that human rights defenders faced in the wake of the March 2008 events [YUN 2008, p. 718]; the legal and institutional framework for the promotion and protection of human rights in the country, including newly adopted and proposed amendments to the legislative framework that might obstruct human rights defenders' activities; reports of violence against defenders; and other challenges faced by defenders. The Rapporteur recommended that the Government publicly acknowledge the role and importance of human rights defenders; ensure the right to have effective access, on a non-discriminatory basis, to participation in the conduct of public affairs; incorporate the views of civil society and human rights defenders in decision-making processes; fully implement the recommendations of the Working Group on the Universal Periodic Review (UPR) of the Human Rights Council (see p. 634) and amend the legislation pursuant to the UPR recommendations approved by Armenia; address the specific needs of human rights defenders; and investigate all human rights violations, in particular attacks against journalists.

Reprisals for cooperation with human rights bodies

Report of Secretary-General. Pursuant to Human Rights Council resolution 12/2 [YUN 2009, p. 668], in a May report [A/HRC/14/19], the Secretary-General submitted a compilation and analysis of information on alleged reprisals against individuals or groups who had cooperated or sought to cooperate with representatives of UN human rights bodies, as well as recommendations on how to address the issues of intimidation and reprisals. The report included communications sent to States by representatives of human rights mechanisms, and the replies to such communications received as at 19 March. The report reviewed cases in Algeria, Colombia, the Democratic Republic of the Congo, Guatemala, India, Iran, Israel, Kenya, Mauritania, Myanmar, Sri Lanka, Uzbekistan, Venezuela and Yemen. The Secretary-General made recommendations for States to prevent intimidation and reprisals by publicly supporting activities in defence of human rights and cooperation with the United Nations, informing the population about the different ways to cooperate with the United Nations, and ensuring that those who ordered or undertook acts of intimidation or reprisal were subject to prosecution. Denouncing such acts publicly and reporting them to the appropriate human rights mechanisms would also contribute to combating related impunity.

Protection of migrants

Reports of Special Rapporteur. In response to a request by the Human Rights Council [YUN 2008, p. 773], the Special Rapporteur on the human rights of migrants, Jorge Bustamante (Mexico), in April [A/HRC/14/30] reported on his activities in 2009. He also focused on the enjoyment of the rights to health and adequate housing in the context of migration, recalling the applicable international legal framework, and discussed the main challenges encountered by migrants in the enjoyment of those rights, with particular attention to the situations of migrant women and girls and children. The Rapporteur recommended that States fulfil the minimum core obligation to ensure essential levels of primary health care as well as basic shelter and housing for all individuals within their jurisdiction; recognize in laws the rights to health and adequate housing of all individuals regardless of their nationality or immigration status; and provide free information on relevant laws, policies and regulations, as well as language training for migrants who did not speak the language of the host State.

An addendum [A/HRC/14/30/Add.1] summarized 26 communications—urgent appeals and letters of allegations—addressed to 19 Governments between 7 March 2009 and 31 March 2010, as well as 17 replies received until 10 May 2010.

In response to General Assembly resolution 64/166 [YUN 2009, p. 670] and Human Rights Council resolution 8/10 [YUN 2008, p. 773], the Secretary-General in August transmitted to the Assembly the report [A/65/222] of the Special Rapporteur, which summarized activities carried out between June 2009 and July 2010. The report focused on the impact of the criminalization of migration on the protection and enjoyment of human rights, highlighting the detrimental consequences of such policies on groups that should not be considered aprioristically as irregular migrants, including victims of human trafficking, asylum-seekers and children. The report also provided examples of good practices in integrating a rights-based approach into migration and managing irregular migration without criminalizing it. The Rapporteur concluded that migrants could play an active role in the social and economic development of the host countries and contribute to the development of countries of origin and transit. He recommended that human rights, together with gender and age-sensitive strategies, feature systematically in the overall strategy to achieve development in the context of migration. Human rights should be incorporated in all migration-related processes, and a rights-based approach to migration should feature prominently in related policies and decisions.

The General Assembly took note of that report on 21 December (decision 65/536).

Mission report. Following his visit to Japan (23–31 March) [A/HRC/17/33/Add.3], the Rapporteur noted that a wide range of challenges remained. The integration of migrants into society was not part of Government policy, which essentially focused on border control. The Rapporteur recommended that the Government address the persistence of racial discrimination and xenophobia and the lack of legislation that prohibited those conducts; the exploitation of migrants in the labour sector; the lack of interventions by the judiciary and police to protect migrants' rights; the strict policy of detention and deportation of irregular migrants; the difficulties for migrant children to access education; and the lack of a comprehensive immigration policy that respected the human rights of migrants and ensured their integration into society.

Report of Secretary-General. In accordance with General Assembly resolution 64/166 [YUN 2009, p. 670], the Secretary-General in July submitted a report [A/65/156] summarizing information submitted by Governments on the implementation of that resolution as well as of resolution 63/184 [YUN 2008, p. 773], both dealing with the rights of migrants. The report also provided information on the status of the International Convention on the Protection of the Rights of All Migrant Workers and Members of Their Families [YUN 1990, p. 593]; and on the activities of the Committee on the Protection of the Rights of All Migrant Workers and Members of Their Families, of the Special Rapporteur on the human rights of migrants, of the universal periodic review of the Human Rights Council, and of the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights (OHCHR), with particular reference to activities and partnerships for promoting the rights of migrant children.

The General Assembly took note of that report on 21 December (decision 65/536).

Report of High Commissioner. Pursuant to General Assembly resolution 48/141 [YUN 1993, p. 906], the High Commissioner in June submitted a report [E/2010/89] that focused on the economic, social and cultural rights of migrants in host countries and State obligations in that context. The analysis drew from international instruments, the work of treaty bodies and special procedures mandate holders, as well as international and regional case law to highlight general State obligations and specific obligations regarding various economic, social and cultural rights of migrants.

The Economic and Social Council took note of that report on 23 July (decision 2010/258).

OHCHR study. Pursuant to a Human Rights Council request [YUN 2009, p. 669], OHCHR in July submitted a study [A/HRC/15/29] on challenges and best practices in the implementation of the international framework for the protection of the rights of the child in the context of migration. The report concluded that while children had particular vulnerabilities and needs, the situation of children should not be artificially separated from that of their adult parents and families. The best way to protect the rights of the child in the context of migration was to ensure that migration policies did not criminalize migrants; were non-discriminatory in purpose and effect; addressed the entire process of migration from a child and gender perspective; were premised on and respectful of human rights norms and standards; and were evidence-based and coordinated between all stakeholders. The report concluded with a series of recommendations for consideration by States.

Human Rights Council action. On 30 September [A/65/53/Add.1 (res. 15/16)], the Council took note of the OHCHR study and invited States to take its conclusions and recommendations into account when designing and implementing their migration policies; called on States to put an end to arbitrary arrest and detention; and requested States to prevent violations of the human rights of migrants while in transit, including in ports and airports and at borders and migration checkpoints, and to prosecute any act of violation of the human rights of migrants and their families.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 21 December [meeting 71], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Third Committee [A/65/456/Add.2], adopted resolution 65/212 without vote [agenda item 68 (b)].

Protection of migrants

The General Assembly,

Recalling all its previous resolutions on the protection of migrants, the most recent of which is resolution 64/166 of 18 December 2009, and recalling also Human Rights Council resolution 15/16 of 30 September 2010,

Reaffirming the Universal Declaration of Human Rights, which proclaims that all human beings are born free and equal in dignity and rights and that everyone is entitled to all the rights and freedoms set out therein, without distinction of any kind, in particular as to race, colour or national origin,

Reaffirming also that everyone has the right to freedom of movement and residence within the borders of each State and the right to leave any country, including his or her own, and to return to his or her country,

Recalling the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights and the International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights, the Convention against Torture and Other Cruel, Inhuman or Degrading Treatment or Punishment, the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women, the Convention on the Rights of the Child, the International Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Racial Discrimination, the Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities, the Vienna Convention on Consular Relations and the International Convention on the Protection of the Rights of All Migrant Workers and Members of Their Families,

Recalling also the provisions concerning migrants contained in the outcome documents of all major United Nations conferences and summits, including the Outcome of the Conference on the World Financial and Economic Crisis and Its Impact on Development, which recognizes that migrant workers are among the most affected and vulnerable in the context of financial and economic crises,

Recalling further Commission on Population and Development resolutions 2006/2 of 10 May 2006 and 2009/1 of 3 April 2009,

Taking note with appreciation of the United Nations Development Programme Human Development Report 2009: Overcoming Barriers—Human Mobility and Development,

Taking note of advisory opinion OC-16/99 of 1 October 1999 on the Right to Information on Consular Assistance in the Framework of the Guarantees of the Due Process of Law and advisory opinion OC-18/03 of 17 September 2003 on the Juridical Condition and Rights of Undocumented Migrants, issued by the Inter-American Court of Human Rights,

Taking note also of the Judgment of the International Court of Justice of 31 March 2004 in the case concerning Avena and Other Mexican Nationals and the Judgment of the Court of 19 January 2009 regarding the Request for interpretation of the Avena Judgment, and recalling the obligations of States reaffirmed in both decisions,

Underlining the importance of the Human Rights Council in promoting respect for the protection of the human rights and fundamental freedoms of all, including migrants,

Recognizing the increasing participation of women in international migration movements,

Recalling the High-level Dialogue on International Migration and Development, held in New York on 14 and 15 September 2006 for the purpose of discussing the multidimensional aspects of international migration and development, which, inter alia, recognized the relationship between international migration, development and human rights,

Noting the fourth meeting of the Global Forum on Migration and Development, held in Puerto Vallarta, Mexico, from 8 to 11 November 2010, recognizing the discussion on its central theme “Partnerships for migration and human development: shared prosperity—shared responsibility” as a contribution to addressing the multidimensional nature of international migration as well as a step to promote a debate on possible synergies among countries of origin, transit and destination and, where appropriate, other relevant stakeholders, in support of comprehensive and balanced policies, and taking note with appreciation of the generous offer of the Government of Switzerland to assume the presidency of the Global Forum for 2011,

Recognizing the cultural and economic contributions made by migrants to receiving societies and their communities of origin, as well as the need to identify appropriate means of maximizing development benefits and responding to the challenges which migration poses to countries of origin, transit and destination, especially in the light of the impact of the financial and economic crisis, and committing to ensuring dignified, humane treatment with applicable protections and to strengthening mechanisms for international cooperation,

Emphasizing the global character of the migratory phenomenon, the importance of international, regional and bilateral cooperation and dialogue in this regard, as appropriate, and the need to protect the human rights of migrants, particularly at a time in which migration flows have increased in the globalized economy and take place in a context of new security concerns,

Bearing in mind the obligations of States under international law, as applicable, to exercise due diligence to prevent crimes against migrants and to investigate and punish perpetrators and that not doing so violates and impairs or nullifies the enjoyment of the human rights and fundamental freedoms of victims,

Affirming that crimes against migrants, including trafficking in persons, continue to pose a serious challenge and require a concerted international assessment and response and genuine multilateral cooperation among countries of origin, transit and destination for their eradication,

Bearing in mind that policies and initiatives on the issue of migration, including those that refer to the orderly management of migration, should promote holistic approaches that take into account the causes and consequences of the phenomenon, as well as full respect for the human rights and fundamental freedoms of migrants,

Stressing the importance of regulations and laws regarding irregular migration being in accordance with the obligations of States under international law, including international human rights law,

Stressing also the obligation of States to protect the human rights of migrants regardless of their migration status, and expressing its concern at measures which, including in the context of policies aimed at reducing irregular migration, treat irregular migration as a criminal rather than an administrative offence where the effect of doing so is to deny migrants full enjoyment of their human rights and fundamental freedoms,

Aware that, as criminals take advantage of migratory flows and attempt to circumvent restrictive immigration policies, migrants become more vulnerable to, inter alia, kidnapping, extortion, forced labour, sexual exploitation, physical assault, debt servitude and abandonment,

Recognizing the contributions of young migrants to countries of origin and destination, and in that regard encouraging States to consider the specific circumstances and needs of young migrants,

Concerned about the large and growing number of migrants, especially women and children, who place themselves in a vulnerable situation by attempting to cross international borders without the required travel documents, and recognizing the obligation of States to respect the human rights of those migrants,

Stressing that penalties and the treatment given to irregular migrants should be commensurate with their infraction,

Recognizing the importance of having a comprehensive and balanced approach to international migration, and bearing in mind that migration enriches the economic, political, social and cultural fabric of States and the historical and cultural ties that exist among some regions,

Recognizing also the obligations of countries of origin, transit and destination under international human rights law,

Underlining the importance for States, in cooperation with non-governmental organizations and other relevant stakeholders, to undertake information campaigns aimed at clarifying opportunities, limitations, risks and rights in the event of migration, so as to enable everyone to make informed decisions and to prevent anyone from utilizing dangerous means to cross international borders,

1. Calls upon States to promote and protect effectively the human rights and fundamental freedoms of all migrants, regardless of their migration status, especially those of women and children, and to address international migration through international, regional or bilateral cooperation and dialogue and through a comprehensive and balanced approach, recognizing the roles and responsibilities of countries of origin, transit and destination in promoting and protecting the human rights of all migrants, and avoiding approaches that might aggravate their vulnerability;

2. Expresses its concern about the impact of financial and economic crises on international migration and migrants, and in that regard urges Governments to combat unfair and discriminatory treatment of migrants, particularly migrant workers and their families;

3. Reaffirms the rights set forth in the Universal Declaration of Human Rights and the obligations of States under the International Covenants on Human Rights, and in this regard:

(a) Strongly condemns the manifestations and acts of racism, racial discrimination, xenophobia and related intolerance against migrants and the stereotypes often applied to them, including on the basis of religion or belief, and urges States to apply and, where needed, reinforce the existing laws when xenophobic or intolerant acts, manifestations or expressions against migrants occur, in order to eradicate impunity for those who commit xenophobic and racist acts;

(b) Expresses concern about legislation adopted by some States that results in measures and practices that may restrict the human rights and fundamental freedoms of migrants, and reaffirms that, when exercising their sovereign right to enact and implement migratory and border security measures, States have the duty to comply with their obligations under international law, including international human rights law, in order to ensure full respect for the human rights of migrants;

(c) Calls upon States to ensure that their laws and policies, including in the areas of counter-terrorism and combating transnational organized crime, such as trafficking in persons and smuggling of migrants, fully respect the human rights of migrants;

(d) Calls upon States that have not done so to consider signing and ratifying or acceding to the International Convention on the Protection of the Rights of All Migrant Workers and Members of Their Families as a matter of priority, and requests the Secretary-General to continue his efforts to promote and raise awareness of the Convention;

(e) Takes note of the report of the Committee on the Protection of the Rights of All Migrant Workers and Members of Their Families on its eleventh and twelfth sessions;

4. Also reaffirms the duty of States to effectively promote and protect the human rights and fundamental freedoms of all migrants, especially those of women and children, regardless of their immigration status, in conformity with the Universal Declaration of Human Rights and the international instruments to which they are party, and therefore:

(a) Calls upon all States to respect the human rights and the inherent dignity of migrants and to put an end to arbitrary arrest and detention and, where necessary, to review detention periods in order to avoid excessive detention of irregular migrants, and to adopt, where applicable, alternative measures to detention;

(b) Urges all States to adopt effective measures to prevent and punish any form of illegal deprivation of liberty of migrants by individuals or groups;

(c) Notes with appreciation the measures adopted by some States to reduce detention periods in cases of undocumented migration, in the application of domestic regulations and laws regarding irregular migration;

(d) Also notes with appreciation the successful implementation by some States of alternative measures to detention in cases of undocumented migration as a practice that deserves consideration by all States;

(e) Requests States to adopt concrete measures to prevent the violation of the human rights of migrants while in transit, including in ports and airports and at borders and migration checkpoints, to train public officials who work in those facilities and in border areas to treat migrants respectfully and in accordance with the law, and to prosecute, in conformity with applicable law, any act of violation of the human rights of migrants, inter alia, arbitrary detention, torture and violations of the right to life, including extrajudicial executions, during their transit from their country of origin to the country of destination and vice versa, including their transit through national borders;

(f) Underlines the right of migrants to return to their country of citizenship, and recalls that States must ensure that their returning nationals are duly received;

(g) Reaffirms emphatically the duty of States parties to ensure full respect for and observance of the Vienna Convention on Consular Relations, in particular with regard to the right of all foreign nationals, regardless of their immigration status, to communicate with a consular official of the sending State in case of arrest, imprisonment, custody or detention, and the obligation of the receiving State to inform the foreign national without delay of his or her rights under the Convention;

(h) Requests all States, in conformity with national legislation and applicable international legal instruments to which they are party, to enforce labour law effectively, including by addressing violations of such law, with regard to migrant workers' labour relations and working conditions, inter alia, those related to their remuneration and conditions of health, safety at work and the right to freedom of association;

(i) Encourages all States to remove unlawful obstacles, where they exist, that may prevent the safe, transparent, unrestricted and expeditious transfer of remittances, earnings, assets and pensions of migrants to their country of origin or to any other countries, in conformity with applicable legislation and agreements, and to consider, as appropriate, measures to solve other problems that may impede such transfers;

(j) Recalls that the Universal Declaration of Human Rights recognizes that everyone has the right to an effective remedy by the competent national tribunals for acts violating the fundamental rights granted to him or her;

5. Emphasizes the importance of protecting persons in vulnerable situations, and in this regard:

(a) Expresses its concern about the increase in the activities of transnational and national organized crime entities and others who profit from crimes against migrants, especially women and children, without regard for dangerous and inhumane conditions and in flagrant violation of domestic laws and international law and contrary to international standards;

(b) Also expresses its concern about the high level of impunity enjoyed by traffickers and their accomplices as well as other members of organized crime entities and, in this context, the denial of rights and justice to migrants who have suffered from abuse;

(c) Welcomes immigration programmes, adopted by some countries, that allow migrants to integrate fully into the host countries, facilitate family reunification and promote a harmonious, tolerant and respectful environment, and encourages States to consider the possibility of adopting these types of programmes;

(d) Encourages all States to develop international migration policies and programmes that include a gender perspective, in order to adopt the measures necessary to better protect women and girls against dangers and abuse during migration;

(e) Calls upon States to protect the human rights of migrant children, given their vulnerability, particularly unaccompanied migrant children, ensuring that the best interests of the child are a primary consideration in their policies of integration, return and family reunification;

(f) Encourages all States to prevent and eliminate discriminatory policies that deny migrant children access to education;

(g) Urges States to ensure that repatriation mechanisms allow for the identification and special protection of persons in vulnerable situations, including persons with disabilities, and take into account, in conformity with their international obligations and commitments, the principle of the best interests of the child and family reunification;

(h) Urges States parties to the United Nations Convention against Transnational Organized Crime and supplementing protocols thereto, namely, the Protocol against the Smuggling of Migrants by Land, Sea and Air and the Protocol to Prevent, Suppress and Punish Trafficking in Persons, Especially Women and Children, to implement them fully, and calls upon States that have not done so to consider ratifying or acceding to them as a matter of priority;

6. Takes note with appreciation of the study of the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights on challenges and best practices in the implementation of the international framework for the protection of the rights of the child in the context of migration, and invites States to take into account the conclusions and recommendations of the study when designing and implementing their migration policies;

7. Encourages States to protect victims of national and transnational organized crime, including kidnapping, trafficking and, in some instances, smuggling, through, where applicable, the implementation of programmes and policies that guarantee protection and access to medical, psychosocial and legal assistance;

8. Encourages Member States that have not already done so to enact domestic legislation and to take further effective measures to combat international trafficking in persons and smuggling of migrants, recognizing that these crimes may endanger the lives of migrants or subject them to harm, servitude or exploitation, which may also include debt bondage, slavery, sexual exploitation or forced labour, and also encourages Member States to strengthen international cooperation to combat such trafficking and smuggling;

9. Stresses the importance of international, regional and bilateral cooperation in the protection of the human rights of migrants, and therefore:

(a) Requests all States, international organizations and relevant stakeholders to take into account in their policies and initiatives on migration issues the global character of the migratory phenomenon and to give due consideration to international, regional and bilateral cooperation in this field, including by undertaking dialogues on migration that include countries of origin, transit and destination, as well as civil society, including migrants, with a view to addressing, in a comprehensive manner, inter alia, its causes and consequences and the challenge of undocumented or irregular migration, granting priority to the protection of the human rights of migrants;

(b) Encourages States to take the measures necessary to achieve policy coherence on migration at the national, regional and international levels, including by ensuring coordinated child protection policies and systems across borders that are in full compliance with international human rights law;

(c) Also encourages States to further strengthen their cooperation in protecting witnesses in cases of smuggling of migrants and trafficking in persons;

(d) Calls upon the United Nations system and other relevant international organizations and multilateral institutions to enhance their cooperation in the development of methodologies for the collection and processing of statistical data on international migration and the situation of migrants in countries of origin, transit and destination and to assist Member States in their capacity-building efforts in this regard;

(e) Requests Member States, the United Nations system, international organizations, civil society and all relevant stakeholders, especially the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights and the Special Rapporteur of the Human Rights Council on the human rights of migrants, to ensure that the perspective of the human rights of migrants is included among the priority issues in the ongoing discussions on international migration and development within the United Nations system, and in this regard underlines the importance of adequately taking into account the human rights perspective as one of the priorities of the informal thematic debate on international migration and development, to be held in 2011, as well as in the High-level Dialogue on International Migration and Development, which will take place during the sixty-eighth session of the General Assembly, in 2013, as decided by the Assembly in its resolution 63/225 of 19 December 2008;

(f) Invites the Chair of the Committee to address the General Assembly at its sixty-sixth session under the item entitled “Promotion and protection of human rights”;

(g) Invites the Special Rapporteur to submit his report to the General Assembly at its sixty-sixth session under the item entitled “Promotion and protection of human rights”;

10. Requests the Secretary-General to submit to the General Assembly at its sixty-sixth session a report on the implementation of the present resolution and to include in that report an analysis of the ways and means to promote the human rights of migrants, in particular how the International Convention on the Protection of the Rights of All Migrant Workers and Members of Their Families has influenced policy and practice, where applicable, to strengthen the protection of migrants, in the context of its twentieth anniversary, and decides to examine the question further under the item entitled “Promotion and protection of human rights”.

Discrimination against minorities

Forum on Minority Issues. The Forum on Minority Issues, at its third session (Geneva, 14–15 December), focused on minorities and effective participation in economic life. The more than 500 participants included representatives of Governments, treaty bodies, UN specialized agencies, regional inter-governmental bodies and civil society. The Forum had before it a note [HRC/FMI/2010/2] by the independent expert on minority issues, Gay McDougall (United States), on minorities and their effective participation in economic life and an OHCHR note providing draft recommendations on that topic [HRC/FMI/2010/3].

The Forum issued recommendations [A/HRC/16/46] that sought to enable stakeholders to make informed choices when designing legislation and policies aimed at combating the economic exclusion of minority communities. The recommendations were directed to Governments, national human rights institutions, civil society, trade unions, the private business sector, UN human rights mechanisms, international financial institutions and UN agencies and other development agencies.

Reports of independent expert. Pursuant to a Human Rights Council request [YUN 2008, p. 778], the independent expert on minority issues, in her fifth annual report to the Council [A/HRC/13/23], provided an overview of her 2009 activities, a background paper on “Minorities and Effective Political Participation”, and details on follow-up to the first [YUN 2008, p. 776] and second [YUN 2009, p. 672] sessions of the Forum on Minority Issues.

Pursuant to General Assembly resolution 63/174 [YUN 2008, p. 778], the Secretary-General in August transmitted to the Assembly the report [A/65/287] by the independent expert on the effective promotion of the Declaration on the Rights of Persons Belonging to National or Ethnic, Religious and Linguistic Minorities [YUN 1992, p. 722], which focused on the role of the protection of minority rights in conflict prevention. The expert emphasized that attention to minority rights at an early stage—before grievances led to tensions and violence—would contribute to the culture of prevention within the United Nations, save countless lives and promote stability and development.

The Assembly took note of that report on 21 December (decision 65/536).

Mission reports. Following her visit to Colombia (1–12 February) [A/HRC/16/45/Add.1], the independent expert pointed out that despite a plethora of Government legislation and programme initiatives to address racial discrimination, promote equality and recognize the country's ethnic diversity, the reality was poor implementation, inadequate resources and outputs that fell short of the needs of Afro-Colombians. While the country as a whole enjoyed a reduction in hostilities and armed conflict, many Afro-Colombian communities and their leaders suffered violent attacks. Among her recommendations, the expert urged the Government to enact anti-discrimination legislation providing for effective enforcement mechanisms; establish appropriate penalties for acts of discrimination committed by public and private actors; ensure that implementation was rigorously enforced by the courts; and take steps to protect the safety of Afro-Colombian leaders, their organizations and the NGOs that championed their rights, particularly with respect to members of Community Councils and others advocating for land restitution.

In Viet Nam (5–15 July) [A/HRC/16/45/Add.2], the independent expert found that the poverty rate remained high among ethnic minorities. Minority women isolated in remote mountainous areas faced particular challenges. Government plans for economic growth, particularly in areas populated by minority groups, should be implemented in consultation with those groups. Access to quality education was a gateway to development and poverty reduction, yet minorities lacked sufficient opportunities to be taught in their own languages and struggled with being taught in Vietnamese only. The introduction of bilingual education in regions where minorities lived would help minority children to make better early progress and provide strong foundations for their schooling. Freedom of religion, freedom of expression and the right of peaceful assembly must be respected. The expert made recommendations pertaining to poverty alleviation and development; language and education; religious minorities; political participation; and further engagement with UN human rights mechanisms.

Human Rights Council action. On 25 March [A/65/53 (res. 13/12)], the Council requested the High Commissioner to present an annual report on developments of UN human rights entities that contributed to the promotion of and respect for the provisions of the Declaration on the Rights of Persons Belonging to National or Ethnic, Religious and Linguistic Minorities; and requested the High Commissioner to present a compilation of UN manuals, guides and other tools dealing with minority issues to the Council's sixteenth (2011) session.

Reports of High Commissioner. Pursuant to that request, the High Commissioner in July submitted a report [A/HRC/15/42] covering 2009 and the first part of 2010 that summarized efforts by her Office and the UN human rights machinery to strengthen implementation of the Declaration on the Rights of Persons Belonging to National or Ethnic, Religious and Linguistic Minorities; capacity-building activities to facilitate the ability of minorities to draw on UN human rights bodies and mechanisms for the protection of their rights; and observations on minorities' rights made by treaty bodies in considering initial and periodic reports of States parties. The report also provided an update on the work of special procedures mechanisms with regard to the rights of minorities.

In December, the High Commissioner submitted a complementary report [A/HRC/16/39] covering activities conducted during the remaining part of 2010 and revealing shortcomings with regard to measures that could be taken by States to achieve the rights listed in the Declaration. The report concluded that while international actors could play an important role, the responsibility for the protection of the human rights of minorities rested primarily with Governments, which should ensure that mechanisms were in place to provide such protection.

Also in December, the High Commissioner submitted a compilation [A/HRC/16/29] of UN manuals, guides, training material and other tools dealing with minority issues.

Leprosy victims

Draft principles and guidelines. In response to Human Rights Council requests in 2008 [YUN 2008, p. 780] and 2009 [YUN 2009, p. 673], the Human Rights Council Advisory Committee in August 2010 submitted a revised draft set of principles and guidelines for the elimination of discrimination against persons affected by leprosy and their family members [A/HRC/15/30] to the Council's fifteenth (2010) session. The Advisory Committee had endorsed the revised draft [A/HRC/AC/5/2] at its fifth session (see p. 636).

Human Rights Council action. On 30 September [A/65/53/Add.1 (res. 15/10)], the Council took note of the principles and guidelines and requested OHCHR to disseminate them as appropriate. The Council encouraged Governments, UN bodies, intergovernmental organizations and national human rights institutions to consider the principles and guidelines in formulating and implementing related policies and measures.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 21 December [meeting 71], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Third Committee [A/65/456/Add.2], adopted resolution 65/215 without vote [agenda item 68 (b)].

Elimination of discrimination against persons affected by leprosy and their family members

The General Assembly,

Recalling the provisions of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights, including article 1, which states that all human beings are born free and equal in dignity and rights and that they are endowed with reason and conscience and should act towards one another in a spirit of brotherhood,

Recalling also Human Rights Council resolutions 8/13 of 18 June 2008, 12/7 of 1 October 2009 and 15/10 of 30 September 2010,

Reaffirming that persons affected by leprosy and their family members should be treated as individuals with dignity and are entitled to all human rights and fundamental freedoms under customary international law, relevant conventions and national constitutions and laws,

1. Welcomes the work of the Human Rights Council, and takes note with appreciation of the work of the Human Rights Council Advisory Committee on the elimination of discrimination against persons affected by leprosy and their family members;

2. Takes note with appreciation of the principles and guidelines for the elimination of discrimination against persons affected by leprosy and their family members;

3. Encourages Governments, relevant United Nations bodies, specialized agencies, funds and programmes, other intergovernmental organizations and national human rights institutions to give due consideration to the principles and guidelines in the formulation and implementation of their policies and measures concerning persons affected by leprosy and their family members;

4. Encourages all relevant actors in society, including hospitals, schools, universities, religious groups and organizations, business enterprises, newspapers, broadcasting networks and other non-governmental organizations, to give due consideration, as appropriate, to the principles and guidelines in the course of their activities.

Freedom of religion or belief

Reports of Special Rapporteur. Pursuant to a Human Rights Council request [YUN 2007, p. 726], the Special Rapporteur on freedom of religion or belief, Asma Jahangir (Pakistan), submitted a report [A/HRC/13/40] presenting an overview of her activities, discussing early warning signs of discrimination and violence on the grounds or in the name of religion or belief, and reviewing issues of concern related to her mandate. The Rapporteur concluded that religious intolerance was not a natural outcome of diverse societies, but was all too often manipulated by a few groups or individuals for various reasons. Prevention was therefore key to creating an atmosphere of religious tolerance. While States had the primary responsibility for implementing human rights standards, religious leaders, civil society, the international community and human rights mechanisms could play an important role in supporting religious tolerance. In that regard, she made recommendations for those stakeholders.

An addendum [A/HRC/13/40/Add.1] summarized cases transmitted to 25 Governments between 1 December 2008 and 30 November 2009 and replies received by 8 February 2010.

In response to General Assembly resolution 64/164 [YUN 2009, p. 678], the Secretary-General in July [A/65/207] transmitted to the Assembly the Rapporteur's interim report, which reviewed activities carried out since her previous report [YUN 2009, p. 674] and focused on the 13 areas identified in that resolution where efforts should be intensified. The Rapporteur concluded that religious issues were particularly sensitive and that States played a delicate role in promoting freedom of religion or belief, as well as in protecting people from abuse in the name of religion or belief. She stressed that all human rights violations must be addressed, regardless of the religious affiliation of the perpetrator or the victim, and that the mandate should continue to highlight discriminatory practices that women had to suffer—sometimes in the name of religion or belief.

Human Rights Council action. On 18 June [A/65/53 (res. 14/11)], the Council called on States to adopt measures and policies to promote respect for places of worship and religious sites; extended the Special Rapporteur's mandate for a further three-year period; and requested the Rapporteur to report to the Council in 2011.

Appointment of Special Rapporteur. On 18 June, the Human Rights Council appointed Heiner Bielefeldt (Germany) as Special Rapporteur.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 21 December [meeting 71], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Third Committee [A/65/456/Add.2], adopted resolution 65/211 without vote [agenda item 68 (b)].

Elimination of all forms of intolerance and of discrimination based on religion or belief

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 36/55 of 25 November 1981, by which it proclaimed the Declaration on the Elimination of All Forms of Intolerance and of Discrimination Based on Religion or Belief,

Recalling also article 18 of the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights, article 18 of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights and other relevant human rights provisions,

Recalling further its previous resolutions on the elimination of all forms of intolerance and of discrimination based on religion or belief, including resolution 64/164 of 18 December 2009, as well as Human Rights Council resolution 14/11 of 18 June 2010,

Recognizing the important work carried out by the Human Rights Committee in providing guidance with respect to the scope of freedom of religion or belief,

Considering that religion or belief, for those who profess either, is one of the fundamental elements in their conception of life and that freedom of religion or belief should be fully respected and guaranteed,

Reaffirming that everyone has the right to freedom of thought, conscience and religion or belief, which includes the freedom to have or not to have, or to adopt, a religion or belief of one's own choice and the freedom, either alone or in community with others and in public or private, to manifest one's religion or belief in teaching, practice, worship and observance,

Deeply concerned about continuing acts of intolerance and violence based on religion or belief against individuals and members of religious communities and religious minorities around the world and about the limited progress that has been made in the elimination of all forms of intolerance and of discrimination based on religion or belief, and believing that further intensified efforts are therefore required to promote and protect the right to freedom of thought, conscience and religion or belief and to eliminate all forms of hatred, intolerance and discrimination based on religion or belief, as also noted at the World Conference against Racism, Racial Discrimination, Xenophobia and Related Intolerance, held in Durban, South Africa, from 31 August to 8 September 2001, as well as at the Durban Review Conference, held in Geneva from 20 to 24 April 2009,

Concerned that acts of violence, or credible threats of violence, against persons belonging to religious communities and religious minorities are sometimes tolerated or encouraged by official authorities,

Concerned also about the increasing number of laws and regulations that limit the freedom of thought, conscience and religion or belief and about the implementation of existing laws in a discriminatory manner,

Convinced of the need to address the rise in various parts of the world of religious extremism that affects the rights of individuals, the situations of violence and discrimination that affect many women and other individuals on the grounds or in the name of religion or belief or in accordance with cultural and traditional practices and the misuse of religion or belief for ends inconsistent with the Charter of the United Nations and other relevant instruments of the United Nations,

Seriously concerned about all attacks on religious places, sites and shrines in violation of international law, in particular human rights and humanitarian law, including any deliberate destruction of relics and monuments,

Emphasizing that States, regional organizations, non-governmental organizations, religious bodies and the media have an important role to play in promoting tolerance and respect for religious and cultural diversity and in the universal promotion and protection of human rights, including freedom of religion or belief,

Underlining the importance of education in the promotion of tolerance, which involves the acceptance by the public of, and its respect for, diversity, including with regard to religious expression, and underlining also the fact that education, in particular at school, should contribute in a meaningful way to promoting tolerance and the elimination of discrimination based on religion or belief,

1. Condemns all forms of intolerance and of discrimination based on religion or belief, as well as violations of freedom of thought, conscience and religion or belief;

2. Stresses that the right to freedom of thought, conscience and religion or belief applies equally to all persons, regardless of their religion or belief and without any discrimination as to their equal protection by the law;

3. Emphasizes that, as underlined by the Human Rights Committee, restrictions on the freedom to manifest one's religion or belief are permitted only if limitations are prescribed by law, are necessary to protect public safety, order, health or morals or the fundamental rights and freedoms of others, are non-discriminatory and are applied in a manner that does not vitiate the right to freedom of thought, conscience and religion or belief;

4. Also emphasizes that freedom of religion or belief and freedom of expression are interdependent, interrelated and mutually reinforcing, and stresses further the role that these rights can play in the fight against all forms of intolerance and of discrimination based on religion or belief;

5. Recognizes with deep concern the overall rise in instances of intolerance and violence, regardless of the actors, directed against members of many religious and other communities in various parts of the world, including cases motivated by Islamophobia, anti-Semitism and Christianophobia;

6. Condemns any advocacy of religious hatred that constitutes incitement to discrimination, hostility or violence, whether it involves the use of print, audio-visual or electronic media or any other means;

7. Expresses concern about the persistence of institutionalized social intolerance and discrimination practised against many on the grounds of religion or belief, and emphasizes that legal procedures pertaining to religious or belief-based groups and places of worship are not a prerequisite for the exercise of the right to manifest one's religion or belief and that such procedures, when legally required at the national or local level, should be non-discriminatory in order to contribute to the effective protection of the right of all persons to practice their religion or belief, either individually or in community with others and in public or private;

8. Recognizes with concern the situation of persons in vulnerable situations, including persons deprived of their liberty, refugees, asylum-seekers and internally displaced persons, children, persons belonging to national or ethnic, religious and linguistic minorities and migrants, as regards their ability to freely exercise their right to freedom of religion or belief;

9. Emphasizes that States have an obligation to exercise due diligence to prevent, investigate and punish acts of violence against persons belonging to religious minorities, regardless of the perpetrator, and that failure to do so may constitute a human rights violation;

10. Also emphasizes that no religion should be equated with terrorism, as this may have adverse consequences on the enjoyment of the right to freedom of religion or belief of all members of the religious communities concerned;

11. Expresses concern about the continued existence of instances of religious intolerance, as well as about emerging obstacles to the enjoyment of the right to freedom of religion or belief, inter alia:

(a) Instances of intolerance and violence directed against members of many religious minorities and other communities in various parts of the world;

(b) Incidents of religious hatred, discrimination, intolerance and violence, which may be manifested by the derogatory stereotyping, negative profiling and stigmatization of persons based on their religion or belief;

(c) Attacks on religious places, sites and shrines in violation of international law, in particular human rights and humanitarian law, as they have more than material significance for the dignity and lives of members of communities holding spiritual or religious beliefs;

(d) Instances, both in law and practice, that constitute violations of the fundamental right to freedom of religion or belief, including of the individual right to publicly express one's spiritual and religious beliefs, taking into account the relevant articles of the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights, as well as other international instruments;

(e) Constitutional and legislative systems that fail to provide adequate and effective guarantees of freedom of thought, conscience and religion or belief to all without distinction;

12. Urges States to step up their efforts to protect and promote freedom of thought, conscience and religion or belief and to this end:

(a) To ensure that their constitutional and legislative systems provide adequate and effective guarantees of freedom of thought, conscience and religion or belief to all without distinction, inter alia, by providing access to justice and effective remedies in cases where the right to freedom of thought, conscience and religion or belief or the right to freely practice one's religion, including the right to change one's religion or belief, is violated;

(b) To ensure that existing legislation is not implemented in a discriminatory manner or does not result in discrimination based on religion or belief, that no one within their jurisdiction is deprived of the right to life, liberty or security of person because of religion or belief and that no one is subjected to torture or other cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment, or arbitrary arrest or detention on that account and to bring to justice all perpetrators of violations of these rights;

(c) To end violations of the human rights of women and to devote particular attention to abolishing practices and legislation that discriminate against women, including in the exercise of their right to freedom of thought, conscience and religion or belief;

(d) To ensure that no one is discriminated against on the basis of his or her religion or belief when accessing, inter alia, education, medical care, employment, humanitarian assistance or social benefits and to ensure that everyone has the right and the opportunity to have access, on general terms of equality, to public services in their country, without any discrimination on the basis of religion or belief;

(e) To review, whenever relevant, existing registration practices in order to ensure that such practices do not limit the right of all persons to manifest their religion or belief, either alone or in community with others and in public or private;

(f) To ensure that no official documents are withheld from the individual on the grounds of religion or belief and that everyone has the right to refrain from disclosing information concerning their religious affiliation in such documents against their will;

(g) To ensure, in particular, the right of all persons to worship, assemble or teach in connection with a religion or belief and their right to establish and maintain places for these purposes, and the right of all persons to seek, receive and impart information and ideas in these areas;

(h) To ensure that, in accordance with appropriate national legislation and in conformity with international human rights law, the freedom of all persons and members of groups to establish and maintain religious, charitable or humanitarian institutions is fully respected and protected;

(i) To ensure that all public officials and civil servants, including members of law enforcement bodies, and personnel of detention facilities, the military and educators, in the course of fulfilling their official duties, respect freedom of religion or belief and do not discriminate for reasons based on religion or belief and that all necessary and appropriate awareness-raising, education or training is provided;

(j) To take all necessary and appropriate action, in conformity with international standards of human rights, to combat hatred, discrimination, intolerance and acts of violence, intimidation and coercion motivated by intolerance based on religion or belief, as well as incitement to hostility and violence, with particular regard to members of religious minorities in all parts of the world;

(k) To promote, through the education system and other means, mutual understanding, tolerance, non-discrimination and respect in all matters relating to freedom of religion or belief by encouraging, in the society at large, a wider knowledge of different religions and beliefs and of the history, traditions, languages and cultures of the various religious minorities existing within their jurisdiction;

(l) To prevent any distinction, exclusion, restriction or preference based on religion or belief that impairs the recognition, enjoyment or exercise of human rights and fundamental freedoms on an equal basis and to detect signs of intolerance that may lead to discrimination based on religion or belief;

13. Welcomes initiatives by the media to promote tolerance and respect for religious and cultural diversity and the universal promotion and protection of human rights, including freedom of religion or belief;

14. Stresses the importance of a continued and strengthened dialogue in all its forms, including among and within religions or beliefs, and with broader participation, including of women, to promote greater tolerance, respect and mutual understanding, and welcomes different initiatives in this regard, including the Alliance of Civilizations initiative and the programmes led by the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization;

15. Welcomes and encourages the continuing efforts of all actors in society, including non-governmental organizations and bodies and groups based on religion or belief, to promote the implementation of the Declaration on the Elimination of All Forms of Intolerance and of Discrimination Based on Religion or Belief, and further encourages their work in promoting freedom of religion or belief, highlighting cases of religious intolerance, discrimination and persecution and promoting religious tolerance;

16. Recommends that States, the United Nations and other actors, including non-governmental organizations and bodies and groups based on religion or belief, in their efforts to promote freedom of religion or belief, ensure the widest possible dissemination of the text of the Declaration, in as many different languages as possible, and promote its implementation;

17. Welcomes the work and the interim report of the Special Rapporteur of the Human Rights Council on freedom of religion or belief;

18. Urges all Governments to cooperate fully with the Special Rapporteur, to respond favourably to his requests to visit their countries and to provide all information and follow-up necessary for the effective fulfilment of his mandate;

19. Requests the Secretary-General to ensure that the Special Rapporteur receives the resources necessary to fully discharge his mandate;

20. Requests the Special Rapporteur to submit an interim report to the General Assembly at its sixty-sixth session;

21. Decides to consider the question of the elimination of all forms of religious intolerance at its sixty-sixth session under the item entitled "Promotion and protection of human rights".

Combating defamation of religions

Report of High Commissioner. Pursuant to Human Rights Council resolution 10/22 [YUN 2009, p. 659] on combating defamation of religions, the High Commissioner in January submitted a report [A/HRC/13/57] on its implementation, which provided information on measures taken to address discriminatory practices, acts of violence, profiling, stigmatization, derogatory stereotyping based on religion or belief, the desecration of places of worship or spirituality, the targeting of religious symbols, incitement to religious hatred and instances of religious intolerance. Initiatives included constitutional and legislative measures, law enforcement and judicial measures, policy measures, prejudice-reduction programmes for key professionals, intercultural dialogue and awareness-raising initiatives, as well as the creation of national specialized bodies or the establishment of focal points within national human rights institutions to monitor trends and assist victims. In addition to information from 11 Member States, three regional organizations, UN entities, human rights treaty bodies and special procedures, the report provided an update to the Secretary-General's 2009 report [YUN 2009, p. 674] on the subject.

Report of Secretary-General. In response to General Assembly resolution 64/156 [YUN 2009, p. 674], the Secretary-General in August [A/65/263] submitted a report on combating defamation of religions, which focused on implementation of the resolution, including the correlation between defamation of religions and the intersection of religion and race, the upsurge in incitement, intolerance and hatred in many parts of the world, and steps taken by States to combat that phenomenon. The report contained information received from 14 States, OHCHR, UN human rights treaty bodies and special procedures of the Human Rights Council. In respect of religious defamation, some States had adopted blasphemy laws while others firmly opposed such laws, considering them to be incompatible with international human rights laws. At the same time, treaty body findings and special procedures' reports expressed alarm over discrimination and incitement to hatred against Muslim communities, while also highlighting restrictions, discrimination and incitement affecting other religious minorities worldwide.

Communication. In a December 2009 letter [A/HRC/13/G/3] to the High Commissioner, the Organization of the Islamic Conference (oic) transmitted the second report of the oic Observatory on Islamophobia as a contribution to the implementation of resolution 64/156.

Human Rights Council action. On 25 March [A/65/53 (res. 13/16)], by a recorded vote of 20 to 17, with 8 abstentions, the Council urged States to provide adequate protection against acts of hatred, discrimination, intimidation and coercion resulting from defamation of religions and incitement to religious hatred; called on States to ensure that religious places, sites, shrines and symbols were fully respected and protected; and welcomed the OHCHR plan to hold a series of expert workshops to examine legislation, judicial practices and national policies in different regions. It requested the Rapporteur on contemporary forms of racism, discrimination, xenophobia and related intolerance to report on all manifestations of defamation of religions, in particular on the implications of Islamophobia, for the enjoyment of all rights by their followers, to the Council's fifteenth (2010) session (see p. 670).

On 30 September [A/HRC/15/60], the members of the Human Rights Council, by a statement of its President, condemned instances of religious intolerance, prejudice and related discrimination and violence, which continued to occur in all parts of the world.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 21 December [meeting 71], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Third Committee [A/65/456/Add.2], adopted resolution 65/224 by recorded vote (79-67-40) [agenda item 68 (b)].

Combating defamation of religions

The General Assembly,

Reaffirming the pledge made by all States, under the Charter of the United Nations, to promote and encourage universal respect for and observance of all human rights and fundamental freedoms without distinction as to race, sex, language or religion,

Recalling the relevant international instruments on the elimination of discrimination, in particular the International Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Racial Discrimination, the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights, the Declaration on the Elimination of All Forms of Intolerance and of Discrimination Based on Religion or Belief, the Declaration on the Human Rights of Individuals Who are not Nationals of the Country in which They Live and the Declaration on the Rights of Persons Belonging to National or Ethnic, Religious and Linguistic Minorities,

Reaffirming that all human rights are universal, indivisible, interdependent and interrelated,

Recalling the relevant resolutions of the Commission on Human Rights and the Human Rights Council in this regard,

Welcoming the resolve expressed in the United Nations Millennium Declaration, adopted by the General Assembly on 8 September 2000, to take measures to eliminate the increasing acts of racism and xenophobia in many societies and to promote greater harmony and tolerance in all societies, and looking forward to its effective implementation at all levels,

Underlining, in this regard, the importance of the Durban Declaration and Programme of Action adopted by the World Conference against Racism, Racial Discrimination, Xenophobia and Related Intolerance, held in Durban, South Africa, from 31 August to 8 September 2001, and the outcome document of the Durban Review Conference, held in Geneva from 20 to 24 April 2009,

Expressing serious concern at the increase in racist violence and xenophobic ideas in many parts of the world, in political circles, in the sphere of public opinion and in society at large, as a result, inter alia, of the resurgence of activities of political parties and associations established on the basis of racist, xenophobic and ideological superiority platforms and charters, and the persistent use of those platforms and charters to promote or incite racist ideologies,

Deeply alarmed at the rising trends towards discrimination based on religion or belief, including in some national policies, laws and administrative measures that stigmatize groups of people belonging to certain religions and beliefs under a variety of pretexts relating to security and irregular immigration, thereby legitimizing discrimination against them and consequently impairing their enjoyment of the right to freedom of thought, conscience and religion and impeding their ability to observe, practise and manifest their religion freely and without fear of coercion, violence or reprisal, and, in this context, emphasizing the importance of article 27 of the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights,

Noting with deep concern the serious instances of intolerance, discrimination and acts of violence based on religion or belief, intimidation and coercion motivated by extremism, religious or otherwise, occurring in many parts of the world, including cases motivated by Islamophobia, Judeophobia and Christianophobia, in addition to the negative projection of certain religions in the media and the introduction and enforcement of laws and administrative measures that specifically discriminate against and target persons with certain ethnic and religious backgrounds, particularly Muslim minorities, and that threaten to impede their full enjoyment of human rights and fundamental freedoms,

Stressing that vilification of religions is a serious affront to human dignity leading to the illicit restriction of the freedom of religion of their adherents and incitement to religious hatred and violence,

Stressing also the need to effectively combat vilification of religions, and incitement to religious hatred in general,

Reaffirming that discrimination on the grounds of religion or belief constitutes a violation of human rights and a disavowal of the principles of the Charter,

Noting with concern that vilification of religions, and incitement to religious hatred in general, could lead to social disharmony and violations of human rights, and alarmed at the inaction of some States to combat this burgeoning trend and the resulting discriminatory practices against adherents of certain religions,

Taking note of the reports of the Special Rapporteur on contemporary forms of racism, racial discrimination, xenophobia and related intolerance submitted to the Human Rights Council at its fourth, sixth, ninth and twelfth sessions, in which the Special Rapporteur highlighted the serious nature of the defamation of all religions and the need to complement legal strategies, and reiterating the call of the Special Rapporteur to all States to wage a systematic campaign against incitement to racial and religious hatred by maintaining a careful balance between the defence of secularism and respect for freedom of religion and by acknowledging and respecting the complementarity of all the freedoms embodied in internationally agreed human rights instruments, including the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights,

Recalling the proclamation of the Global Agenda for Dialogue among Civilizations, and inviting States, the organizations and bodies of the United Nations system, within existing resources, other international and regional organizations and civil society to contribute to the implementation of the Programme of Action contained in the Global Agenda,

Welcoming the efforts of the United Nations Alliance of Civilizations initiative in promoting mutual respect and understanding among different cultures and societies, including its first forum, held in Spain in 2008, its second forum, held in Turkey in 2009, its third forum, held in Brazil in 2010, and its fourth forum, to be held in Qatar in 2011,

Convinced that respect for cultural, ethnic, religious and linguistic diversity, as well as dialogue among and within civilizations, is essential for global peace and understanding, while manifestations of cultural and ethnic prejudice, religious intolerance and xenophobia generate hatred and violence among peoples and nations,

Noting the various regional and national initiatives to combat religious and racial intolerance against specific groups and communities, and emphasizing, in this context, the need to adopt a comprehensive and non-discriminatory approach to ensure respect for all races and religions, as well as various regional and national initiatives,

Underlining the important role of education in the promotion of tolerance, which involves acceptance by the public of, and its respect for, diversity, including with regard to religious expression, and underlining also the fact that education should contribute in a meaningful way to promoting tolerance and the elimination of discrimination based on religion or belief,

Emphasizing that States, regional organizations, non-governmental organizations, religious bodies and the media have an important role to play in promoting tolerance and respect for and freedom of religion and belief,

Welcoming, in this regard, all international and regional initiatives aimed at promoting cross-cultural and interfaith harmony, including the international dialogue on interfaith cooperation, the World Conference on Dialogue, held in Madrid from 16 to 18 July 2008, and the high-level meeting of the General Assembly on the culture of peace, held on 12 and 13 November 2008, and their valuable efforts towards the promotion of a culture of peace and dialogue at all levels, and taking note with appreciation of the programmes led by the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization in this regard,

Underlining the importance of increasing contacts at all levels in order to deepen dialogue and reinforce understanding among different cultures, religions, beliefs and civilizations, and in this regard taking note with appreciation of the Declaration and Programme of Action adopted by the Ministerial Meeting on Human Rights and Cultural Diversity of the Movement of Non-Aligned Countries, held in Tehran on 3 and 4 September 2007,

Recognizing the importance of the intersection of religion and race and that instances can arise of multiple or aggravated forms of discrimination on the basis of religion and other grounds, such as race, colour, descent or national or ethnic origin,

Recalling its resolution 64/156 of 18 December 2009 and Human Rights Council resolution 13/16 of 25 March 2010,

1. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General;
2. Expresses deep concern at the negative stereotyping of religions and manifestations of intolerance and discrimination in matters of religion or belief still evident in the world;
3. Strongly deplores all acts of psychological and physical violence and assaults, and incitement thereto, against persons on the basis of their religion or belief, and such acts directed against their businesses, properties, cultural centres and places of worship, as well as the targeting and desecration of holy books, holy sites and religious symbols of all religions;
4. Expresses deep concern at the programmes and agendas pursued by extremist organizations and groups aimed at creating and perpetuating stereotypes about certain religions, in particular when condoned by Governments;
5. Notes with deep concern the intensification of the overall campaign of vilification of religions, and incitement to religious hatred in general, including the ethnic and religious profiling of religious minorities;
6. Recognizes that, in the context of the fight against terrorism, vilification of religions, and incitement to religious hatred in general, become aggravating factors that contribute to the denial of fundamental rights and freedoms of members of target groups, as well as to their economic and social exclusion;
7. Expresses deep concern, in this respect, that Islam is frequently and wrongly associated with human rights violations and terrorism;
8. Reiterates the commitment of all States to the implementation, in an integrated manner, of the United Nations Global Counter-Terrorism Strategy, which was adopted without a vote by the General Assembly on 8 September 2006, and reaffirmed by the Assembly in its resolutions 62/272 of 5 September 2008 and 64/297 of 8 September 2010, which clearly confirms, inter alia, that terrorism cannot and should not be associated with any religion, nationality, civilization or ethnic group, stressing the need to reinforce the commitment of the international community to promote a culture of peace, justice and human development, ethnic, national and religious tolerance and respect for all religions, religious values, beliefs or cultures and prevent the vilification of religions;

9. Deplores the use of the print, audio-visual and electronic media, including the Internet, and any other means to incite acts of violence, xenophobia or related intolerance and discrimination against any religion, as well as the targeting and desecration of holy books, holy sites, places of worship and religious symbols of all religions;

10. Emphasizes that, as stipulated in international human rights law, everyone has the right to hold opinions without interference and has the right to freedom of expression, the exercise of which carries with it special duties and responsibilities and may therefore be subject to limitations as are provided for by law and are necessary for respect of the rights or reputations of others, protection of national security or of public order, public health or morals;

11. Reaffirms that general recommendation XV(42) of the Committee on the Elimination of Racial Discrimination, in which the Committee stipulated that the prohibition of the dissemination of all ideas based upon racial superiority or hatred is compatible with freedom of opinion and expression, is equally applicable to the question of incitement to religious hatred;

12. Notes the work undertaken by the Special Rapporteur on contemporary forms of racism, racial discrimination, xenophobia and related intolerance and the Special Rapporteur on the promotion and protection of the right to freedom of opinion and expression in accordance with their mandates as defined by the Human Rights Council in its resolutions 7/34 and 7/36 of 28 March 2008;

13. Strongly condemns all manifestations and acts of racism, racial discrimination, xenophobia and related intolerance against national or ethnic, religious and linguistic minorities and migrants and the stereotypes often applied to them, including on the basis of religion or belief, and urges all States to apply and, where applicable, reinforce existing laws when such xenophobic or intolerant acts, manifestations or expressions occur in order to eradicate impunity for those who commit xenophobic and racist acts;

14. Calls upon all States to adopt necessary measures, including by adopting legislation, according to their international obligations, to prohibit the advocacy of national, racial or religious hatred that constitutes incitement to discrimination, hostility or violence, and encourages States, in their follow-up to the World Conference against Racism, Racial Discrimination, Xenophobia and Related Intolerance, to include aspects relating to national or ethnic, religious and linguistic minorities in their national plans of action and in this context to take forms of multiple discrimination against minorities fully into account;

15. Invites all States to put into practice the provisions of the Declaration on the Elimination of All Forms of Intolerance and of Discrimination Based on Religion or Belief;

16. Urges all States to provide, within their respective legal and constitutional systems, adequate protection against acts of hatred, discrimination, intimidation and coercion resulting from vilification of religions, and incitement to religious hatred in general;

17. Also urges all States to take all possible measures to promote tolerance and respect for all religions and beliefs and the understanding of their value systems and to complement legal systems with intellectual and moral strategies to combat religious hatred and intolerance;

18. Recognizes that the open, constructive and respectful debate of ideas, as well as interfaith and intercultural dialogue at the local, national and international levels, can play a positive role in combating religious hatred, incitement and violence;

19. Welcomes the recent steps taken by Member States to protect freedom of religion through the enactment or strengthening of domestic frameworks and legislation to prevent the vilification of religions and the negative stereotyping of religious groups;

20. Urges all States to ensure that all public officials, including members of law enforcement bodies, the military, civil servants and educators, in the course of their official duties, respect people regardless of their different religions and beliefs and do not discriminate against persons on the grounds of their religion or belief, and that any necessary and appropriate education or training is provided;

21. Underlines the need to combat vilification of religions, and incitement to religious hatred in general, by strategizing and harmonizing actions at the local, national, regional and international levels through education and awareness-raising, and urges all States to ensure equal access to education for all, in law and in practice, including access to free primary education for all children, both girls and boys, and access for adults to lifelong learning and education based on respect for human rights, diversity and tolerance, without discrimination of any kind, and to refrain from any legal or other measures leading to racial segregation in access to schooling;

22. Calls upon all States to exert the utmost efforts, in accordance with their national legislation and in conformity with international human rights and humanitarian law, to ensure that places of worship, religious places, sites and shrines and religious symbols are fully respected and protected, and to take additional measures in cases where they are vulnerable to desecration or destruction;

23. Calls upon the international community to foster a global dialogue to promote a culture of tolerance and peace at all levels, based on respect for human rights and diversity of religion and belief, and urges States, non-governmental organizations, religious leaders and bodies and the print and electronic media to support and foster such a dialogue;

24. Affirms that the Human Rights Council shall promote universal respect for all religious and cultural values and address instances of intolerance, discrimination and incitement of hatred against members of any community or adherents of any religion, as well as the means to consolidate international efforts in order to combat impunity for such deplorable acts;

25. Welcomes the statement made by the President of the Human Rights Council of 30 September 2010 on behalf of all the members of the Council condemning the recent instances of religious intolerance, prejudice and related discrimination and violence, which continue to occur in all parts of the world;

26. Also welcomes the initiative of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights on the expert seminar on freedom of expression and advocacy of religious hatred that constitutes incitement to discrimination, hostility or violence, held on 2 and 3 October 2008, and requests the High Commissioner to continue to build on this initiative, with a view to concretely contributing to the prevention and elimination of all such forms of incitement and the consequences of negative stereotyping of religions or beliefs, and their adherents, on the human rights of those individuals and their communities;

28. Requests the Secretary-General to submit a report to the General Assembly at its sixty-sixth session on the implementation of the present resolution, including the correlation between defamation of religions and the intersection of religion and race, the upsurge in incitement, intolerance and hatred in many parts of the world and steps taken by States to combat this phenomenon.

Right to self-determination

Report of Secretary-General. In response to General Assembly resolution 64/149 [YUN 2009, p. 680], the Secretary-General in August submitted a report [A/65/286] on the question of the universal realization of the right of peoples to self-determination. The report summarized developments relating to the consideration of that subject by the Human Rights Council and outlined the jurisprudence of the Human Rights Committee and the Committee on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights on the treaty-based human rights norms relating to the realization of that right. A reference to the International Court of Justice advisory opinion on the legality of Kosovo's unilateral declaration of independence, adopted on 17 February 2008, was also included (see p. 1286).

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 21 December [meeting 71], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Third Committee [A/65/455], adopted resolution 65/201 without vote [agenda item 67].

Universal realization of the right of peoples to self-determination

The General Assembly,

Reaffirming the importance, for the effective guarantee and observance of human rights, of the universal realization of the right of peoples to self-determination enshrined in the Charter of the United Nations and embodied in the International Covenants on Human Rights, as well as in the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples contained in General Assembly resolution 1514(XV) of 14 December 1960,

Welcoming the progressive exercise of the right to self-determination by peoples under colonial, foreign or alien occupation and their emergence into sovereign statehood and independence,

Deeply concerned at the continuation of acts or threats of foreign military intervention and occupation that are threatening to suppress, or have already suppressed, the right to self-determination of peoples and nations,

Expressing grave concern that, as a consequence of the persistence of such actions, millions of people have been and are being uprooted from their homes as refugees and displaced persons, and emphasizing the urgent need for concerted international action to alleviate their condition,

Recalling the relevant resolutions regarding the violation of the right of peoples to self-determination and other human rights as a result of foreign military intervention, aggression and occupation, adopted by the Commission on Human Rights at its sixty-first and previous sessions,

Reaffirming its previous resolutions on the universal realization of the right of peoples to self-determination, including resolution 64/149 of 18 December 2009,

Reaffirming also its resolution 55/2 of 8 September 2000, containing the United Nations Millennium Declaration, and recalling its resolution 60/1 of 16 September 2005, containing the 2005 World Summit Outcome, which, inter alia, upheld the right to self-determination of peoples under colonial domination and foreign occupation,

Taking note of the report of the Secretary-General on the right of peoples to self-determination,

1. Reaffirms that the universal realization of the right of all peoples, including those under colonial, foreign and alien domination, to self-determination is a fundamental condition for the effective guarantee and observance of human rights and for the preservation and promotion of such rights;

2. Declares its firm opposition to acts of foreign military intervention, aggression and occupation, since these have resulted in the suppression of the right of peoples to self-determination and other human rights in certain parts of the world;

3. Calls upon those States responsible to cease immediately their military intervention in and occupation of foreign countries and territories and all acts of repression, discrimination, exploitation and maltreatment, in particular the brutal and inhuman methods reportedly employed for the execution of those acts against the peoples concerned;

4. Deplores the plight of millions of refugees and displaced persons who have been uprooted as a result of the aforementioned acts, and reaffirms their right to return to their homes voluntarily in safety and with honour;

5. Requests the Human Rights Council to continue to give special attention to violations of human rights, especially the right to self-determination, resulting from foreign military intervention, aggression or occupation;

6. Requests the Secretary-General to report on the question to the General Assembly at its sixty-sixth session under the item entitled "Right of peoples to self-determination".

Right of Palestinians

During the year, the General Assembly reaffirmed the right of the Palestinian people to self-determination, including the right to their independent State of Palestine, as well as the right of all States in the region to live in peace within secure and internationally recognized borders. States and UN system bodies were urged to assist Palestinians in the early realization of the right.

Human Rights Council action. On 24 March [A/65/53 (res. 13/6)], by a recorded vote of 45 to 1, with no abstentions, the Council urged Member States and UN system bodies to support and assist the Palestinian people in the early realization of their right to self-determination.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

Recalling the conclusion of the Court, in its advisory opinion of 9 July 2004, that the construction of the wall by Israel, the occupying Power, in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, along with measures previously taken, severely impedes the right of the Palestinian people to self-determination,

Expressing the urgent need for the resumption and accelerated advancement of negotiations within the Middle East peace process, based on the relevant United Nations resolutions, the Madrid terms of reference, including the principle of land for peace, the Arab Peace Initiative and the Quartet road map to a permanent two-State solution to the Israeli-Palestinian conflict, and for the speedy achievement of a just, lasting and comprehensive peace settlement between the Palestinian and Israeli sides,

Stressing the need for respect for and preservation of the territorial unity, contiguity and integrity of all of the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, and recalling in this regard its resolution 58/292 of 6 May 2004,

Recalling its resolution 64/150 of 18 December 2009,

Mercenaries

Reports of Working Group. In a July report [A/HRC/15/25], the five-member Working Group on the use of mercenaries as a means of violating human rights and impeding the exercise of the right of peoples to self-determination described activities undertaken since its last report [YUN 2009, p. 682] and progress achieved in elaborating a possible draft convention on private military and security companies (PMSCs). The report summarized the rationale for the Working Group's proposals on a new legal instrument on PMSCs, its scope of application and its content. The Working Group recommended that Member States consider the draft proposal annexed to the report, and that the Human Rights Council establish an inter-governmental open-ended working group to develop a new convention. It also pointed out that the aim of a new legal instrument was not the outright banning of PMSCs, but the establishment of minimum international standards for States parties to regulate the activities of PMSCs and their personnel.

An addendum [A/HRC/15/25/Add.1] summarized 19 communications sent to 15 Governments between 16 December 2008 and 25 July 2010 and 9 Government replies received between 1 February 2009 and 25 August 2010.

The Working Group also reported on the regional consultation for Africa (Addis Ababa, Ethiopia, 3–4 March) [A/HRC/15/25/Add.5] and for Western Europe and Others Group (Geneva, 14 April) [A/HRC/15/25/Add.6]. Through those consultations, the Working Group sought to gain a regional perspective on practices related to mercenaries and PMSCs registered, operating or recruiting personnel in those regions.

In response to a Human Rights Commission request [YUN 2005, p. 788], the Secretary-General in August [A/65/325] transmitted the Working Group's report, which addressed the challenges stemming from the use of PMSCs and their impact on the enjoyment of human rights. The report discussed the trend towards increasing privatization of security and its underlying consequences and a growing dependency of some States on PMSCs. The report also reviewed the UN policy vis-à-vis the use of private security contractors and progress achieved in elaborating a possible draft convention on PMSCs. The main elements of a draft were contained in the annex for consideration by Member States. The Working Group recommended that all Member States contribute to the Council's open-ended working group tasked with elaborating the new convention (see below), if such a mechanism was established.

Mission reports. After its visit to Equatorial Guinea (16–20 August) [A/HRC/18/32/Add.2], the Working Group recommended that the Government provide full information regarding the armed attack on the presidential palace by alleged mercenaries in 2009 and make available to the public all judgements in the criminal cases relating to the attack; consider developing legislation to criminalize mercenarism and mercenary-related acts; ensure that anyone accused of involvement in a mercenary-related incident be tried by a competent, independent and impartial tribunal; evaluate the need for PMSCs for army or police training; and adopt legislation to regulate the activities of PMSCs.

After its mission to South Africa (10–19 November) [A/HRC/18/32/Add.3], the Working Group recommended that the Government publicly release more information on the activities of the National Conventional Arms Control Committee (NCACC)—the State authority responsible for authorizing the provision of foreign military assistance, in particular on the applications submitted by PMSCs to NCACC, their processing and the decisions taken; allocate resources to investigate and prosecute companies operating abroad without the required authorizations; ensure the effective implementation of the Regulation of Foreign Military Assistance Act of 1998 and establish a mechanism for regular monitoring; consider the establishment of accountability mechanisms for PMSCs; and ensure that potential victims of human rights violations involving PMSCs be given access to effective remedies.

Human Rights Council action. On 30 September [A/65/53/Add.1 (res. 15/12)], the Council, by a recorded vote of 31 to 13, with 2 abstentions, requested States to exercise vigilance against any kind of recruitment, training, hiring or financing of mercenaries by private companies offering international military consultancy and security services; requested OHCHR to publicize the adverse effects of the activities of mercenaries and private companies offering such services; renewed the mandate of the Working Group for three years; and requested the Working Group to report on implementation of the resolution at the sixty-sixth (2011) session of the General Assembly and at the eighteenth (2011) session of the Human Rights Council.

On 1 October [res. 15/26], the Council, by a recorded vote of 32 to 12, with 3 abstentions, took note of the principles and main elements of the proposed draft convention on PMSCs; established an open-ended intergovernmental working group to consider the possibility of elaborating an international regulatory framework, including the option of elaborating a legally binding instrument; and decided that the working group would hold a session of five working days a year for a period of two years, with the first session taking place by May 2011, and would present its recommendations at the Council's twenty-first (2012) session.

International Convention

The number of States parties to the 1989 International Convention against the Recruitment, Use, Financing and Training of Mercenaries remained at 32 as at 31 December. The Convention was adopted by the General Assembly in resolution 44/34 [YUN 1989, p. 825], and entered into force in 2001 [YUN 2001, p. 632].

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 21 December [meeting 71], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Third Committee [A/65/455], adopted resolution 65/203 by recorded vote (127-52-5) [agenda item 67].

Use of mercenaries as a means of violating human rights and impeding the exercise of the right of peoples to self-determination

The General Assembly,

Recalling all of its previous resolutions on the subject, including resolution 64/151 of 18 December 2009, and Human Rights Council resolutions 15/12 of 30 September 2010 and 15/26 of 1 October 2010, as well as all resolutions adopted by the Commission on Human Rights in this regard,

Recalling also all of its relevant resolutions in which, inter alia, it condemned any State that permitted or tolerated the recruitment, financing, training, assembly, transit or use of mercenaries with the objective of overthrowing the Governments of States Members of the United Nations, especially those of developing countries, or of fighting against national liberation movements, and recalling further the relevant resolutions and international instruments adopted by the General Assembly, the Security Council, the Economic and Social Council and the Organization of African Unity, inter alia, the Organization of African Unity Convention for the elimination of mercenarism in Africa, as well as by the African Union,

Reaffirming the purposes and principles enshrined in the Charter of the United Nations concerning the strict observance of the principles of sovereign equality, political independence, the territorial integrity of States, the self-determination of peoples, the non-use of force or of the threat of use of force in international relations and non-interference in affairs within the domestic jurisdiction of States,

Reaffirming also that, by virtue of the principle of self-determination, all peoples have the right freely to determine their political status and to pursue their economic, social and cultural development and that every State has the duty to respect this right in accordance with the provisions of the Charter,

Reaffirming further the Declaration on Principles of International Law concerning Friendly Relations and Cooperation among States in accordance with the Charter of the United Nations,

Welcoming the establishment of the open-ended intergovernmental Working Group of the Human Rights Council with the mandate of considering the possibility of elaborating an international regulatory framework, including the option of elaborating a legally binding instrument on the regulation, monitoring and oversight of the activities of private military and security companies,

Alarmed and concerned at the danger that the activities of mercenaries constitute to peace and security in developing countries, in particular in Africa and in small States,

Deeply concerned at the loss of life, the substantial damage to property and the negative effects on the policy and economies of affected countries resulting from criminal mercenary activities,

Extremely alarmed and concerned about recent mercenary activities in some developing countries in various parts of the world, including in areas of armed conflict, and the threat they pose to the integrity of and respect for the constitutional order of the affected countries,

Convinced that, notwithstanding the way in which they are used or the form that they take to acquire some semblance of legitimacy, mercenaries or mercenary-related activities are a threat to peace, security and the self-determination of peoples and an obstacle to the enjoyment of all human rights by peoples,

1. Takes note with appreciation of the report of the Working Group on the use of mercenaries as a means of violating human rights and impeding the exercise of the right of peoples to self-determination, and expresses its appreciation for the work of the experts of the Working Group;

2. Reaffirms that the use of mercenaries and their recruitment, financing and training are causes for grave concern to all States and violate the purposes and principles enshrined in the Charter of the United Nations;

3. Recognizes that armed conflict, terrorism, arms trafficking and covert operations by third Powers, inter alia, encourage the demand for mercenaries on the global market;

4. Urges once again all States to take the steps necessary and to exercise the utmost vigilance against the menace posed by the activities of mercenaries and to take legislative measures to ensure that their territories and other territories under their control, as well as their nationals, are not used for the recruitment, assembly, financing, training, protection or transit of mercenaries for the planning of activities designed to impede the right of peoples to self-determination, to destabilize or overthrow the Government of any State or to dismember or impair, totally or in part, the territorial integrity or political unity of sovereign and independent States conducting themselves in compliance with the right of peoples to self-determination;

5. Requests all States to exercise the utmost vigilance against any kind of recruitment, training, hiring or financing of mercenaries by private companies offering international military consultancy and security services, as well as to impose a specific ban on such companies intervening in armed conflicts or actions to destabilize constitutional regimes;

6. Encourages States that import the military assistance, consultancy and security services provided by private companies to establish regulatory national mechanisms for the registering and licensing of those companies in order to ensure that imported services provided by those private companies neither impede the enjoyment of human rights nor violate human rights in the recipient country;

7. Emphasizes its utmost concern about the impact of the activities of private military and security companies on the enjoyment of human rights, in particular when operating in armed conflicts, and notes that private military and security companies and their personnel are rarely held accountable for violations of human rights;

8. Calls upon all States that have not yet done so to consider taking the action necessary to accede to or ratify the International Convention against the Recruitment, Use, Financing and Training of Mercenaries;

9. Welcomes the cooperation extended by those countries that received a visit by the Working Group and the adoption by some States of national legislation that restricts the recruitment, assembly, financing, training and transit of mercenaries;

10. Condemns recent mercenary activities in developing countries in various parts of the world, in particular in areas of conflict, and the threat they pose to the integrity of and respect for the constitutional order of those countries and the exercise of the right of their peoples to self-determination, and stresses the importance for the Working Group of looking into sources and root causes, as well as the political motivations of mercenaries and for mercenary-related activities;

11. Calls upon States to investigate the possibility of mercenary involvement whenever and wherever criminal acts of a terrorist nature occur and to bring to trial those found responsible or to consider their extradition, if so requested, in accordance with domestic law and applicable bilateral or international treaties;

12. Condemns any form of impunity granted to perpetrators of mercenary activities and to those responsible for the use, recruitment, financing and training of mercenaries, and urges all States, in accordance with their obligations under international law, to bring them, without distinction, to justice;

13. Calls upon Member States, in accordance with their obligations under international law, to cooperate with and assist the judicial prosecution of those accused of mercenary activities in transparent, open and fair trials;

14. Requests the Working Group to continue the work already done by the previous Special Rapporteurs on the strengthening of the international legal framework for the prevention and sanction of the recruitment, use, financing and training of mercenaries, taking into account the proposal for a new legal definition of a mercenary drafted by the Special Rapporteur in his report to the Commission on Human Rights at its sixtieth session, including the elaboration and presentation of concrete proposals on possible complementary and new standards aimed at filling existing gaps, as well as general guidelines or basic principles encouraging the further protection of human rights, in particular the right of peoples to self-determination, while facing current and emergent threats posed by mercenaries or mercenary-related activities;

15. Requests the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights, as a matter of priority, to publicize the adverse effects of the activities of mercenaries on the right of peoples to self-determination and, when requested and where necessary, to render advisory services to States that are affected by those activities;

16. Expresses its appreciation to the Office of the High Commissioner for its support for the holding of the five regional governmental consultations on traditional and new forms of mercenary activities as a means of violating human rights and impeding the exercise of the right of peoples to self-determination, in particular regarding the effects of the activities of private military and security companies on the enjoyment of human rights;

17. Notes with appreciation the work of the Working Group on the elaboration of concrete principles on the regulation of private companies offering military assistance, consultancy and other military security-related services on the international market, which it carried out after country visits and through the process of regional consultations, and in consultation with academics and intergovernmental and non-governmental organizations, and also notes its work on the draft convention on the regulation, monitoring and oversight of private military and security companies for consideration by Member States;

18. Encourages Member States to carefully consider the proposal of the Working Group for a possible new international legal instrument regulating private military and security companies, and recommends to all Member States, including those confronted with the phenomenon of private military and security companies, as contracting States, States of operations, home States or States whose nationals are employed to work for a private military and security company, to contribute to the work of the open-ended intergovernmental Working Group of the Human Rights Council with the mandate of considering the possibility of elaborating an international regulatory framework, including the option of elaborating a legally binding instrument on the regulation, monitoring and oversight of the activities of private military and security companies, taking into account the initial work done by the Working Group on the use of mercenaries;

19. Urges all States to cooperate fully with the Working Group in the fulfilment of its mandate;

20. Requests the Secretary-General and the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights to provide the Working Group with all the assistance and support necessary for the fulfilment of its mandate, both professional and financial, including through the promotion of cooperation between the Working Group and other components of the United Nations system that deal with countering mercenary-related activities, in order to meet the demands of its current and future activities;

21. Requests the Working Group to consult States and intergovernmental and non-governmental organizations in the implementation of the present resolution and to report, with specific recommendations, to the General Assembly at its sixty-sixth session its findings on the use of mercenaries to undermine the enjoyment of all human rights and to impede the exercise of the right of peoples to self-determination;

22. Decides to consider at its sixty-sixth session the question of the use of mercenaries as a means of violating human rights and impeding the exercise of the right of peoples to self-determination under the item entitled "Right of peoples to self-determination".

Rule of law, democracy and human rights

Administration of justice

Report of Secretary-General. Pursuant to a request by the Human Rights Council [YUN 2009, p. 685], the Secretary-General in April submitted a report [A/HRC/14/34] on human rights in the administration of justice, highlighting the crucial role that human rights protection played in ensuring a fair and efficient administration of justice system and that justice mechanisms played in ensuring respect for human rights. Implementation of existing standards remained one of the greatest concerns. The work of the treaty bodies and special procedures also underscored ongoing lack of implementation of State obligations to ensure the independence of the judiciary, the prohibition on torture, the right to legal representation in criminal matters and the presumption of bail over the use of pretrial detention.

Report of High Commissioner. Pursuant to a Council request [YUN 2009, p. 685], the High Commissioner in April [A/HRC/14/35] submitted a report on human rights in the administration of justice, including juvenile justice, based on information provided by Member States. The report identified common approaches reported by Member States, including the grounding of national administration of justice regimes in human rights standards, the detention of children only as an approach of last resort, the possibility of diversion of juvenile cases from the regular court system, a focus on building a comprehensive national approach to juvenile justice, and the importance of a functioning legal aid system.

An addendum issued in June [A/HRC/14/35/Add.1] provided additional information from 21 Member States.
