As at 31 December, 139 States and the EU were parties to the 1998 Rotterdam Convention on the Prior Informed Consent Procedure for Certain Hazardous Chemicals and Pesticides in International Trade [YUN 1998, p. 997], which entered into force in 2004 [YUN 2004, p. 1063]. Albania, Antigua and Barbuda, Guatemala, Lao People's Democratic Republic, Mozambique, Somalia, St. Vincent and the Grenadines, the former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia, and Tonga became parties during the year.

The Chemical Review Committee, a subsidiary body of the Conference of the Parties to the Rotterdam Convention, at its sixth meeting (Geneva, 15–19 March) [UNEP/FAO/RC/CRC.6/16], considered its Bureau's preliminary review of notifications and proposed priorities for chemicals [UNEP/FAO/RC/CRC.6/3]; and reviewed notifications of final regulatory actions to ban or severely restrict one chemical for which at least two notifications appeared to meet the criteria in Annex II to the Convention and three chemicals for which only one notification appeared to meet the criteria. It recommended that the Conference of the Parties to the Convention list endosulfan as a pesticide in Annex III to the Convention. The Committee also agreed on the draft text of the decision guidance document on endosulfan and forwarded it to the Conference of the Parties.

International chemicals management

In February [E/CN.17/2010/5], the Secretary-General submitted a report on the review of implementation of Agenda 21 [YUN 1992, p. 672] and the Johannesburg Plan of Implementation [YUN 2002, p. 822] of the 2002 World Summit on Sustainable Development [ibid., p. 821] with regard to chemicals. The report stated that significant progress had been made in attaining the 2020 goal on the sound management of chemicals, but that global progress had not been sufficient, with implications for the health and welfare of millions of people. The increasing production and consumption of chemicals in developing countries and countries with economies in transition strained those countries' capacity for sound management of chemicals. Such management was frequently accorded low priority in development plans and was consequently under-resourced. In many cases, national legislation and policies needed to be updated. A lack of public awareness of potential health and environmental risks and a lack of resources and human capacity to manage and reduce risks were challenges of increasing urgency. More active engagement of multiple stakeholders would be critical to addressing such challenges.

Mercury

The Intergovernmental Negotiating Committee to prepare a global, legally binding instrument on mercury held its first session (Stockholm, Sweden, 7–11 June) [UNEP(DTIE)Hg/INC.1/21], in accordance with Governing Council decision 25/5 III [YUN 2009, p. 1034]. Among the documents before it were secretariat notes presenting options for substantive provisions that might be included in the legally binding instrument on mercury [UNEP(DTIE)Hg/INC.1/5] and setting out draft final provisions for the instrument [UNEP(DTIE)Hg/INC.1/7]. Representatives participating in the session stated that the secretariat proposals could serve as starting points for the negotiations. The final provisions should provide clear and flexible procedures to facilitate implementation and compliance, and avoid creating constraints that would inhibit ratification or impede parties in meeting their obligations. The Committee agreed that the secretariat would prepare for consideration at its next session draft elements of the comprehensive approach to mercury called for by decision 25/5, including both binding and voluntary measures as a means of facilitating the Committee's work.

A December note by the Executive Director [UNEP/GC.26/INF/12] contained a report on the overall progress of the UNEP Global Mercury Partnership from January 2009 to June 2010, developed by the Partnership Advisory Group. As at 30 June, there were 70 official partners, comprising 15 Governments, 4 inter-governmental organizations, 31 NGOs and 20 others. The United States pledged $675,000, and Switzerland $49,936, to support Partnership activities. In 2009, UNEP provided $115,000 from the Environment Fund to support activities, and secured other funding through the establishment of the Mercury Small Grants Programme. Although the partnership donor base had expanded, overall funding had decreased. Additional funding was required to implement UNEP activities under the Partnership in line with priority actions established in the partnership area business plans.

The report assessed the effectiveness of the partnership areas for artisanal and small-scale gold mining, mercury cell chlor-alkali production, mercury air transport and fate research, products containing mercury, mercury releases from coal combustion, mercury waste management, and mercury supply and storage. In order to effectively track partnership area progress in future reports, the Partnership Advisory Group recommended that many of the partnership areas include more targets and specific indicators of progress in their business plans. The report also addressed ways to encourage the advancement of the work of the partnership areas; meeting the overall objective of the Partnership; and responding to Governing Council decision 25/5 III.

UNEP and the Global Mercury Partnership convened the Global Forum on Artisanal and Small-scale Gold Mining in Manila, Philippines from 7 to 9 December.

Harmful products

In response to Economic and Social Council resolution 2008/13 [YUN 2008, p. 1172], the Secretary-General, by a May note [E/2010/79], transmitted the updated chemicals volume of the Consolidated List of Products Whose Consumption and/or Sale have been Banned, Withdrawn, Severely Restricted or Not Approved by Governments, established in 1982 [YUN 1982, p. 1010], as well as the UNEP contribution covering pesticides and industrial chemicals. The 2010 version of the List consolidated information on control actions available from both the 1998 Rotterdam Convention [YUN 1998, p. 997] and the 2001 Stockholm Convention on Persistent Organic Pollutants [YUN 2001, p. 971]. The most up-to-date information on regulatory actions taken to protect human health and the environment from the adverse effects of pesticides and industrial chemicals would continue to be made available on the Convention websites.

The Secretary-General also transmitted in May [E/2010/84], in accordance with resolution 2008/13, the World Health Organization report entitled "Pharmaceuticals: Restrictions in Use and Availability".

ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL ACTION

On 23 July [meeting 46], the Economic and Social Council adopted resolution 2010/32 [draft: E/2010/L.38] without vote [agenda item 13 (e)].

Consolidated List of Products Whose Consumption and/or Sale Have Been Banned, Withdrawn, Severely Restricted or Not Approved by Governments

The Economic and Social Council,

Noting the entry into force in 2004 of the Rotterdam Convention on the Prior Informed Consent Procedure for Certain Hazardous Chemicals and Pesticides in International Trade, and of the Stockholm Convention on Persistent Organic Pollutants,

Noting also that detailed information on products whose consumption and/or sale have been banned, withdrawn, severely restricted or not approved by Governments is readily accessible on the Internet,

1. Takes note of the notes by the Secretary-General transmitting the report of the United Nations Environment Programme on the chemicals volume of the Consolidated List of Products Whose Consumption and/or Sale Have Been Banned, Withdrawn, Severely Restricted or Not Approved by Governments and the report of the World Health Organization on the pharmaceuticals volume of the Consolidated List;

2. Decides to discontinue consideration of the Consolidated List of Products Whose Consumption and/or Sale Have Been Banned, Withdrawn, Severely Restricted or Not Approved by Governments at its future substantive sessions.

Persistent organic pollutants

As at 31 December, 170 States and the EU were parties to the 2001 Stockholm Convention on Persistent Organic Pollutants (POPs) [YUN 2001, p. 971], which entered into force in 2004 [YUN 2004, p. 1066].

Belize, Bosnia and Herzegovina, Ireland and Somalia became parties during the year.

The sixth meeting of the Persistent Organic Pollutants Review Committee (Geneva, 11–15 October) [UNEP/POPS/POPRC.6/13] decided to submit to the Conference of the Parties to the Stockholm Convention recommendations on the elimination of brominated diphenyl ethers from the waste stream, and on risk reduction for perfluorooctane sulfonic acid, its salts and perfluorooctane sulfonyl fluoride. Other decisions dealt with updating the Basel Convention technical guidelines on the environmentally sound management of POPs; unintentional releases of chemicals newly listed in Annexes A and C to the Convention; substitution and alternatives to perfluorooctane sulfonate and its derivatives; toxic interactions; endosulfan; hexabromocyclododecane; chemicals occurring as unintentional trace contaminants in products and articles; climate change and POPs; and other matters.

Hazardous wastes

As at 31 December, 174 States and the EU were parties to the 1989 Basel Convention on the Control of Transboundary Movements of Hazardous Wastes and their Disposal [YUN 1989, p. 420], which entered into force in 1992 [YUN 1992, p. 685]. The Lao People's Democratic Republic, Somalia and Tonga became parties during the year. The 1995 amendment to the Convention [YUN 1995, p. 1333], not yet in force, had been ratified, accepted or approved by 69 parties, with Greece becoming a party in 2010. The number of parties to the 1999 Basel Protocol on Liability and Compensation for Damage resulting from Transboundary Movement of Hazardous Wastes and Their Disposal [YUN 1999, p. 998], not yet in force, remained at 10.

The seventh session of the Open-ended Working Group of the Convention (Geneva, 10–14 May) [UNEP/CHW/OEWG/7/21] adopted decisions on strengthening the Convention's regional and coordinating centres; the Partnership for Action on Computing Equipment; technical guidelines on the transboundary movement of e-waste, and on the sound management of used tyres, mercury wastes and persistent organic pollutants; the co-processing of hazardous waste in cement kilns; the Mobile Phone Partnership Initiative; the environmentally sound dismantling of ships; and other matters.

Waste management

In December [UNEP/GC.26/8], the Executive Director reported on the implementation of the Governing Council's 2009 decision on waste management [YUN 2009, p. 1036], including lessons learned through UNEP activities in that regard. The Executive Director stated that Governments, particularly local governments, often lacked knowledge relating to environmentally sound waste management and were unaware of the potential for recovering resources from waste. Authorities dealing with waste management were not always familiar with the process of stakeholder involvement, and building trust from stakeholders could take time. Lack of local capacity also affected progress and results, and lack of funding limited the implementation of projects. The impact of projects could be enhanced if funds were available in advance to support the implementation of schemes. New approaches like integrated solid-waste management required long-term support to ensure that they were understood. The regional implementation meetings of the Commission on Sustainable Development highlighted the opportunities presented by waste management, especially in terms of the recovery of resources, and identified a number of challenges.

UNEP was developing innovative approaches to waste management, with an emphasis on resource recovery and the environmentally sound disposal of residual waste. Its programmes on the management of specific waste streams (e-waste, waste agricultural biomass, waste plastics) were geared towards maximizing the recovery of resources. Parallel activities included support to countries in strengthening implementation of waste-related multilateral agreements, preventing illegal trade through the training of customs officials and the development of environmentally friendly products through its life cycle initiative. UNEP established the Global Partnership on Waste Management for promoting partnerships for waste-related activities across the UN system, as well as among Governments, the private sector, universities and research institutions, and civil-society organizations. The Partnership would be a clearing house for best practices and regulatory frameworks, provide capacity-building and technical assistance, and promote cooperation with bilateral development agencies and the private sector. The Partnership was launched during the second workshop on waste (Osaka, Japan, 18–19 November), which agreed to focus on waste prevention; the reduce, reuse and recycle—the “three Rs”—approach for waste management; waste agricultural biomass; and integrated solid-waste, e-waste and hazardous waste management. UNEP, in cooperation with the Basel Convention secretariat, would continue to promote resource augmentation through waste recovery, reuse and recycling, in particular for municipal waste at the local level and certain material flows at the global level. It would take the lead in developing and implementing integrated waste-management strategies and action plans for municipalities, particularly in developing countries.

Financing chemicals and waste agenda

The UNEP Governing Council considered a note of the Executive Director on financing the chemicals and waste agenda [YUN 2009, p. 1036] and a note on policy options for such financing [UNEP/GCSS.XI/INF/8/Add.1].

The Governing Council, in a February decision [dec. SS.XI/8], welcomed the establishment of a consultative process on financing options for chemicals and wastes and the work carried out by UNEP, and requested the Executive Director to continue leading the consultative process. The process should consider, among other issues, the financial challenges faced by developing countries and countries with economies in transition to implement effectively their chemicals and wastes agendas. The Council asked the Executive Director to report on progress made and the direction of the consultative process, with the aim of providing a final report; and launch initiatives to raise awareness of the importance of the sound management of chemicals and wastes. Governments and other interested parties, including the private sector, were invited to provide financial and in-kind support to that process and to awareness-raising initiatives. The Executive Director was asked to report to the twenty-sixth (2011) Council session on the implementation of the decision.

In December [UNEP/GC.26/11], the Executive Director, responding to the Council's decision, reported that the policy options presented to the eleventh special session of the Governing Council (see p. 1005) were revised and made available to the participants of the third meeting of the consultative process, which would take place in 2011. That meeting was expected to develop an action plan that contained initial components of the financing package, and set a direction for the consultative process that would enable the International Conference on Chemicals Management at its third (2012) session and the Governing Council at its twenty-seventh (2013) session to adopt resolutions and decisions in line with the provisions of [dec. SS.XI/8]. In addition, it was envisaged that the action plan would include achievable recommendations for action by stakeholders, along with clear responsibilities and specific implementation timelines. It would also pay due attention to the development of new partnerships.

Cooperation and coordination within chemicals and waste cluster

In a December report [UNEP/GC.26/16], the Executive Director reviewed efforts to enhance cooperation and coordination within the chemicals and waste cluster and suggested ways to extend that process within and beyond the multilateral environmental agreements related to chemicals and hazardous wastes. The report also discussed future institutional arrangements for chemicals and hazardous wastes until 2050.

Significant progress had been made under the Strategic Approach to International Chemicals Management [YUN 2006, p. 1246] in improving cooperation and coordination between the chemicals and hazardous wastes-related Basel, Rotterdam and Stockholm Conventions, but more needed to be done. No systematic attempts had been made to link the legal obligations of the chemicals and hazardous wastes instruments. It might not be efficient in the long term to continue to develop separate instruments as new problems were identified, and more comprehensive approaches might need to be considered. The sound management of chemicals and hazardous wastes was likely to become even more important in the global economy as it sought to meet the basic needs of a growing world population and increasing consumer demand. Existing national and global frameworks were struggling to respond to those challenges, and while the consequences of poor chemicals and hazardous wastes management were better understood, such knowledge had not kept pace with the development of the industries in the sector. UNEP was developing a global chemicals outlook to assess the status of health, environmental, economic and institutional factors related to the production, use and disposal of chemicals; examine chemicals management options in the context of the MDGs; and provide information on the economic costs of inaction on chemical hazards, and guidance for achieving sound chemicals management by 2020. Preliminary findings would be presented in 2012, and the outlook would be available at the twenty-seventh (2103) session of the UNEP Governing Council. UNEP was also developing the fifth report in the Global Environmental Outlook series, with a chapter dedicated to chemicals and hazardous wastes.

The report concluded that a more streamlined and efficient process was being sought to develop multilateral environmental agreements. The Governing Council should request the Executive Director to initiate a study of a cross-sectoral and global process leading to a stronger and better-coordinated management of chemicals and hazardous wastes. The Executive Director should also continue the successful cooperation and coordination efforts with the secretariats of the Basel, Rotterdam and Stockholm Conventions, with a view to further enhancing collaborative work on the chemicals and hazardous wastes-related agenda.

Other matters

Environmental law

The Governing Council/Global Ministerial Environment Forum eleventh special session held ministerial consultations on the topic of environmental law. Participants considered reports submitted in 2009 [YUN 2009, p. 1037] on draft guidelines for the development of national legislation on access to information, public participation and access to justice in environmental matters; and for the development of domestic legislation on liability, response action and compensation for damage caused by activities dangerous to the environment. Also considered was a January 2010 note [UNEP/GCSS.XI/INF/6/Add.2] on the results of further consultations between Governments following the 2009 intergovernmental meeting on the draft guidelines [ibid.], including commentary thereon, a sample list of hazardous substances and a list of activities and installations dangerous to the environment.

In a February decision [dec. SS.XI/5 A], the Governing Council adopted the guidelines for the development of national legislation on access to information, public participation and access to justice in environmental matters, noting that the guidelines were voluntary. It decided that the UNEP secretariat would disseminate the guidelines and the commentary thereon to all countries for further comments, and invited countries to take the guidelines into consideration in the development or amendment of their national legislation related to the subject matters covered by them. The Executive Director was asked to assist countries with the development or amendment of relevant national legislation, policies and strategies, and to provide updates on progress through regular reporting on the implementation of the programme of work and budget.

The Council also adopted guidelines [dec. SS.XI/5 B] for the development of domestic legislation on liability, response action and compensation for damage caused by activities dangerous to the environment, affirming that the guidelines were voluntary and did not set a precedent for the development of international law. It requested the Executive Director to disseminate the guidelines to all countries and assist them with the development or amendment of relevant national legislation, policies and strategies. Countries were invited to provide comments on the draft commentary and annexes contained in the Executive Director's January note, and to take the guidelines into consideration in the development or amendment of related national legislation. The Executive Director was asked to report on progress through the regular reporting on the implementation of the work programme and budget.

UN system environmental profile

JIU report. In February, the Executive Director forwarded to the Governing Council the report of the Joint Inspection Unit (JIU) on the environmental profile of UN system organizations [UNEP/GCSS.XI/INF/10]. The objective of the review was to assess the environmental policies and practices of UN system organization secretariats on their sustainable use of resources, including energy consumption, in light of their mission to promote relevant, internationally accepted environmental conventions. It highlighted best practices and identified norms and benchmarks of business policies and measures to be promoted throughout those organizations and their partner entities and organs.

The report revealed that viable means and initiatives existed for improving environmental performance, drawing on technological progress in energy use and environmental protection and sustainability, leading to considerable cost savings. The development of such means, however, was piecemeal, as UN system organizations lacked a formal and systematic framework for an integrated, in-house environmental management system based on legislative mandates and applicable environmental norms and standards. The organizations also lacked senior-level administrative and managerial leadership, and many of their secretariats were not sure how to apply the multilateral environmental agreements (MEAs). Coordination between UN system organizations on the climate-neutral initiative had produced a system-wide accounting framework for carbon dioxide emissions and a critical mass of networked environment managers, representing an asset towards the adoption of broader, in-house environmental management policies.

JIU called on the General Assembly to monitor and support the Secretary-General's efforts to develop and implement in-house sustainable policies, and to increase the accountability of the organizations vis-à-vis Member States. Regular reports on the state of implementation of the climate neutral initiative should be submitted to the Assembly to identify further administrative and budgetary implications of such measures, in particular carbon offsetting, so that it could support their implementation. The Assembly should request the Secretary-General to promote information sharing on experience and best practices for enhancing the environmental management and performance of the organizations through a peer review process among members of the Environment Management Group.

Other findings and recommendations called on the Secretary-General to compile and streamline instruments and guidelines on in-house environmental management; launch an internal carbon-offsetting mechanism to save brokerage and other costs for the purchase of certified emission reductions issued by the Clean Development Mechanism; and issue a CEB statement to promote not only the achievement of climate neutrality, but also the implementation of all MEAs by the secretariats of the organizations. The Secretary-General should inform Member States, staff and the public of the results of the strategies adopted, developed and implemented.

Actions were identified to facilitate the carbon offsets of organizations for air travel; improve the monitoring, accounting and reporting on those actions by using the UN Department of Economic and Social Affairs environmental management accounting guidelines; and promote the greening of UN premises. Host country agreements with UN system organizations could encourage sustainable procurement of goods and services integrated with local supply chains in host countries to avoid adversely affecting the interests of particular stakeholders or country groups. Common norms and standards applicable to in-house environmental management should be identified based on best practices.

By September notes, the Secretary-General transmitted to the Assembly the JIU report [A/65/346], and his comments and those of CEB thereon [A/65/346/Add.1]. UN system entities generally supported the report's main recommendations, including the need for common guidelines for developing environmental management systems adapted to their needs; the need to properly record expenses associated with reducing carbon emissions; and the establishment of common practices for sustainable procurement.

In December [UNEP/GC.26/INF/22], the Executive Director transmitted to the Governing Council the JIU report and the comments of the Secretary-General and CEB thereon.

International Mother Earth Day

By decision 64/556 of 15 April, the General Assembly decided to convene, on 22 April, a special meeting on the occasion of International Mother Earth Day.

The special meeting to mark the Day, designated by the Assembly in resolution 63/278 [YUN 2009, p. 1037], was held during its eighty-third plenary session [A/64/PV.83]. In opening the debate, the Assembly President said that the Day was an occasion for global recognition that humans and nature were part of a system in which their harmonious relationship was essential. In order to live in harmony with nature, solutions to current environmental challenges were needed. The Assembly had to address issues related to water, clean air and food security. In that regard, developed and developing countries had to come together to find ways to improve modes of production and the sustainability of natural resources.

Harmony with nature

In response to General Assembly resolution 64/196 [YUN 2009, p. 1038], the Secretary-General submitted an August report [A/65/314] on harmony with nature, which provided an overview of how twenty-first century consumption and production patterns had severely affected the Earth's carrying capacity. The report placed special emphasis on the social and environmental pillars of sustainable development and their interface. It also addressed educational system trends with regard to sustainable development worldwide.

The report concluded that the current technological age had seen an impoverishment in the historical relationship between human beings and nature. Nature was treated as a commodity that existed largely for the benefit of people, and all environmental problems as solvable through technology. Loss of biodiversity, desertification, climate change and the disruption of a number of natural cycles were among the costs of the disregard for nature and the integrity of its ecosystems and life-supporting processes. The submissions to the report by Member States, major groups and the UN system had revealed a variety of ways in which diverse stakeholders were seeking to promote harmony with nature through sustainable development.

The report recommended, among other measures, that science education be upgraded worldwide and cross-disciplinary science education advanced at all levels with a sustainable development perspective. Relevant UN organizations, institutions, research centres and Nobel laureates should be invited to provide regular briefings for decision makers on the work being carried out in systems thinking; research being undertaken to integrate the three pillars—economic, social, environmental—of sustainable development; and the work being carried out worldwide to reconcile conventional and complementary medicine in a holistic approach to health in the context of sustainable development.

Communication. By a 7 May letter [A/64/777], Bolivia transmitted to the Secretary-General the conclusions adopted at the first Peoples' World Conference on Climate Change and the Rights of Mother Earth (Cochabamba, Bolivia, 20–22 April).

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 20 December [meeting 69], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Second Committee [A/65/436/Add.9], adopted resolution 65/164 without vote [agenda item 20 (i)].

Harmony with Nature

The General Assembly,

Reaffirming the Rio Declaration on Environment and Development, Agenda 21, the Programme for the Further Implementation of Agenda 21, the Johannesburg Declaration on Sustainable Development and the Plan of Implementation of the World Summit on Sustainable Development ("Johannesburg Plan of Implementation"),

Recalling its resolution 64/196 of 21 December 2009 on Harmony with Nature and its resolution 63/278 of 22 April 2009, by which it designated 22 April as International Mother Earth Day,

Recalling also the 1982 World Charter for Nature,

Recalling further its resolution 47/193 of 22 December 1992, by which it declared 22 March the World Day for Water, its resolution 49/114 of 19 December 1994, by which it proclaimed 16 September the International Day for the Preservation of the Ozone Layer, its resolution 55/201 of 20 December 2000, in which it proclaimed 22 May the International Day for Biological Diversity, its resolution 61/193 of 20 December 2006 on the International Year of Forests, 2011, and its resolution 64/253 of 23 February 2010, entitled “International Day of Nowruz”,

Noting the first Peoples’ World Conference on Climate Change and the Rights of Mother Earth, hosted by the Plurinational State of Bolivia in Cochabamba from 20 to 22 April 2010,

Stressing the importance of the United Nations Conference on Sustainable Development, to be held in Brazil in 2012,

Expressing its concern about the documented environmental degradation and the negative impact on nature resulting from human activity,

Recognizing that gross domestic product is not an adequate indicator for measuring environmental degradation resulting from human activity,

Recognizing also that many ancient civilizations and indigenous cultures have a rich history of understanding the symbiotic connection between human beings and nature that fosters a mutually beneficial relationship,

Recognizing further the work undertaken by civil society, academia and scientists in regard to signalling the precariousness of life on Earth, as well as their efforts to devise a more sustainable model for production and consumption,

Considering that sustainable development is a holistic concept that requires the strengthening of interdisciplinary linkages in the different branches of knowledge,

1. Takes note of the first report of the Secretary-General on Harmony with Nature;

2. Requests the Secretary-General to convene, at the sixty-fifth session of the General Assembly, an interactive dialogue, to be held at two plenary meetings to be convened during the commemoration of International Mother Earth Day on 20 April 2011, with the participation of Member States, United Nations organizations, independent experts and other stakeholders, to actively and effectively contribute to and support efforts in the preparatory process of the United Nations Conference on Sustainable Development, to be held in Brazil in 2012, on the following topics:

(a) Ways to promote a holistic approach to sustainable development in harmony with nature;

(b) Sharing national experiences on criteria and indicators for measuring sustainable development in harmony with nature;

3. Also requests the Secretary-General to establish a trust fund for the participation of independent experts in the interactive dialogue to be held at two plenary meetings to be convened during the commemoration of International Mother Earth Day on 20 April 2011, and invites Member States and other relevant stakeholders to consider contributing to this fund;

4. Further requests the Secretary-General to make use of the existing information portals on sustainable development maintained by the secretariat of the United Nations Conference on Sustainable Development and the Division for Sustainable Development of the Department of Economic and Social Affairs of the Secretariat to gather information and contributions on ideas and activities to promote a holistic approach to sustainable development in harmony with nature being undertaken to advance the integration of scientific interdisciplinary work, including success stories on the use of traditional knowledge, and existing national legislation, with a view to making substantive contributions to the preparatory process of the United Nations Conference on Sustainable Development and beyond;

5. Requests the Secretary-General to submit to the General Assembly at its sixty-sixth session a report on the implementation of the present resolution.

By decision 65/544 of 24 December, the Assembly decided that the agenda item on harmony with nature would remain for consideration during the resumed sixty-fifth (2011) session.

Cooperation with UN Scientific Committee on the Effects of Atomic Radiation

The General Assembly, in resolution 65/96 (see p. 618), requested UNEP to continue providing support for the work of the United Nations Scientific Committee on the Effects of Atomic Radiation and for the dissemination of its findings to the Assembly, the scientific community and the public. It urged UNEP to continue to strengthen the Committee’s funding, and encouraged Member States to make voluntary contributions to the UNEP general trust fund for supporting the Committee’s work.

Human settlements

Implementation of Habitat Agenda and strengthening of UN-Habitat

In August [A/65/316], the Secretary-General, in response to General Assembly resolution 64/207 [YUN 2009, p. 1040], reported on the implementation of the Habitat Agenda [YUN 1996, p. 994], adopted by the 1996 United Nations Conference on Human Settlements (Habitat II) [ibid., p. 992] and on the strengthening of the United Nations Human Settlements programme (UN-Habitat). During the reporting period, UN-Habitat focused on improving the monitoring of sustainable urbanization conditions and trends, deepening understanding of the current challenges of urbanization, including urban inequality or the “urban divide”, and assessing how urban policies and planning practices were responding to the challenges. Advocacy work was directed at improving global awareness of sustainable urbanization issues and encouraging Habitat Agenda partners to participate in the formulation and implementation of sustainable urbanization policies. The objective was to assist Governments in promoting the principles and practice of sustainable urbanization. Building on that advocacy work, UN-Habitat was preparing a report on convening a high-level special event of the General Assembly on sustainable urbanization to promote understanding of the challenges of rapid urbanization, including climate change, housing finance systems, urban planning and sustainable land management, as well as a second report on the question of convening, in 2016, a third United Nations conference on housing and sustainable urban development.

The Secretary-General's report identified urbanization challenges facing cities, including demographic, environmental, economic, social and spatial challenges. Issues related to intra-urban inequality, including poverty, environmental degradation, income, marginalization and social and political exclusion, were addressed in the UN-Habitat flagship reports Global Report on Human Settlements 2009: Planning Sustainable Cities, and the State of the World's Cities 2010/2011: Cities for All—Bridging the Urban Divide.

UN-Habitat supported country projects to improve policies, legislation and strategies that encouraged inclusive urban planning, management and governance, including: local area development planning and provincial development strategy formulation for Basra, Iraq; formulation of city development strategies in the Great Lakes region of Africa; preparation of provincial and city development strategies in Quang Nam Province and Ho Chi Minh City, Viet Nam; and development of a gender and security strategy for Kosovo. It also provided support to strengthen the role of local authorities in the implementation of inclusive urban planning, management and governance in a number of countries. In the Lake Victoria region, it supported eight demonstration projects on waste management, sanitation, wetlands management, livelihoods, youth and gender empowerment and infrastructure. With the World Bank and UNEP, UN-Habitat developed an open source, city-level greenhouse gas emission inventory standard, launched at the World Urban Forum, to harmonize greenhouse gas emission inventory practices, and thus contribute to better targeting and monitoring of city mitigation efforts. UN-Habitat supported activities in countries and regions both prone to and recovering from human-made and natural disasters. It also supported the implementation of initiatives to improve the efficiency and effectiveness of basic urban infrastructure service providers in the developing world, especially in water supply and sanitation. In Africa, projects were implemented in Ethiopia, Kenya, Rwanda and the United Republic of Tanzania.

The report concluded that the challenges facing cities would continue to be multifaceted, including rapid and often chaotic urbanization, climate change, globalization, increasing social fragmentation and intra-city inequality, the geographical expansion of cities into megalopolises and the changing scale and complexity of urban governance. Cities in developing countries, where the majority of the population would live after 2025, had to learn how to mitigate greenhouse gas emissions and adapt to climate change while also meeting urban deficits in drinking water supply and sanitation. They would have to focus on strengthening their role as engines of national economic growth and pay greater attention to poverty and exclusion, whose most visible manifestation was the existence of slums. Given that the population balance was tilting towards urban areas, sustainable development was increasingly becoming synonymous with sustainable urbanization. The fundamental questions regarding the role of cities in climate change mitigation and adaptation, as well as access to adequate housing, land and basic urban services such as water and sanitation, should be incorporated into international, national and local responses if sustainable forms of urban development were to be attained in the developing world. Governments and public and private entities were encouraged to contribute to the further capitalization of the United Nations Habitat and Human Settlements Foundation to provide more financial and seed capital support for slum upgrading and prevention, as well as for pro-poor investment in urban water supply and sanitation. Governments should also reassess progress made with regard to adequate shelter for all and sustainable human settlements development.

World Urban Forum. The fifth session of the World Urban Forum (Rio de Janeiro, Brazil, 22–26 March) [HSP/GC/23/INF/2] was held under the theme “The right to the city: bridging the urban divide”. The UN-Habitat Executive Director launched the World Urban Campaign during the Forum to raise global awareness of sustainable urbanization issues towards the goal of smarter, greener and more equitable cities. The 100 Cities Initiative, a key component of the Campaign, would build on the concept of best practices, focusing on the sharing, exchange and transfer of lessons learned. The Forum held a special session on improving the rebuilding initiative in Haiti following the earthquake in January (see p. 320), where UN-Habitat served as the lead coordinator for housing, land and planning.

In December [HSP/GC/23/2/Add.2], the Executive Director submitted a report summarizing the issues discussed at the fifth session of the Forum. During the session, three new opportunities and partnerships were suggested to build communities more sustainably; restore security to housing markets; and incorporate innovative and sustainable approaches into planning for disaster and offsetting climate change. The Forum acknowledged that the notions of sustainability and inclusiveness entailed recognition and positive harnessing of the energy of women, youth and children, key urban stakeholders who constituted the majority and deserved a stronger voice in society. The role of knowledge, education, information and capacity-building was paramount in bridging the urban divide. New tools, insights and techniques would be required to bridge that divide, and universities and professional associations were best positioned to provide them.

The Forum recommended that greater effort be directed towards putting in place legal and institutional frameworks together with the necessary investments to make the right to the city a reality, and that a thorough review and analysis of governance institutions be conducted. New approaches to planning, paradigms for service delivery and business models for urban development were needed, accompanied by policy frameworks and leadership. Bridging the urban divide required an integrated approach that articulated economic, social, political and cultural forms of inclusiveness. The MDGs provided a useful framework for implementing a multidimensional approach to bridging the urban divide and for monitoring progress thereon. The three pillars of sustainability—social, economic and environmental—needed to be strengthened with the cross-cutting dimensions of technology and governance. Better land-use planning, greener and more robust building codes and smart infrastructure and services were needed to make cities more resilient and resistant to the effects of climate change. Such measures could best be achieved by harnessing the full potential of technology to reduce the ecological footprint of cities, while making public infrastructure and services more accessible and more affordable.

Coordinated implementation of Habitat Agenda

In response to Economic and Social Council decision 2009/238 [YUN 2009, p. 1040], the Secretary-General submitted a May report [E/2010/72] on the coordinated implementation of the Habitat Agenda. The report highlighted some of the strategic actions taken by UN-Habitat to become a catalyst in the implementation of the Agenda, which entailed a shift towards enabling, empowering and entrusting partners to partake in decision-making, priority-setting and implementation. The approach was used to establish and launch the World Urban Campaign, which spearheaded UN-Habitat efforts to work with Habitat Agenda partners to elevate the importance of sustainable urbanization in public policy and in public and private investment.

The report described UN-Habitat activities at the global, regional and inter-agency levels, as well as those conducted with private-sector partners. UN-

Habitat supported activities in countries prone to and recovering from natural and human-made disasters, including projects in Colombia, the Democratic Republic of the Congo, Kosovo, Madagascar, Mexico, Mozambique, Nepal, Pakistan, the Sudan and Uganda. It also continued to support the secretariat of the International Strategy for Disaster Reduction and other partners in the global campaign “Making cities resilient”, which assisted partner cities in risk reduction and urban resilience programming. In March, UN-Habitat and the Joint United Nations Programme on HIV/AIDS signed a letter of agreement to compile a body of evidence and information to better support targeted programming on urban slum settlements and HIV. The report also highlighted UN-Habitat efforts to integrate a gender perspective into all of its work, and to empower young people and civil society.

The report concluded that the international and national debate on sustainable development had been divided into the environmental protection or “green agenda”, and the human settlements or “brown agenda”. The accelerating demographic shift to cities made sustainable urbanization synonymous with sustainable development. In a rapidly urbanizing world, social, economic and environmental issues could no longer be addressed independently of the spatial context in which they evolved. That context was the city, where irreversible changes were taking place in the ways land, energy, water and other natural resources were used. The convergence between those two agendas called for major changes in public policy, resource allocation and decision-making, as well as new approaches to development. The report recommended that a third United Nations Conference on housing and sustainable urban development (Habitat III) be convened in 2016, as proposed by the Governing Council in a 2009 resolution [YUN 2009, p. 1042] and by the General Assembly in resolution 64/207 [ibid., p. 1040]. Such a conference would provide an opportunity to define the new paradigms, policy frameworks and mechanisms for international cooperation to guide sustainable development in an urbanizing world. Member States should participate in the World Urban Campaign by organizing national habitat committees, and take advantage of the annual World Habitat Day celebrations to mobilize a wide range of stakeholders to explore policy options to meet the challenges associated with rapid urbanization. As World Habitat Day 2010 (4 October) would coincide with the high-level segment of the Shanghai World Exposition (Shanghai, China, 1 May–31 October), Member States and the UN system should use the opportunity to renew their commitments to the coordinated implementation of the Habitat Agenda.

On 21 July, the Economic and Social Council, by decision 2010/236, took note of the Secretary-General's report, decided to transmit it to the General Assembly for consideration at its sixty-fifth (2010) session, and requested the Secretary-General to report on the coordinated implementation of the Habitat Agenda to the Council in 2011.

In response to the Council's decision, the Secretary-General, by an August note [A/65/302], transmitted the report to the Assembly.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 20 December [meeting 69], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Second Committee [A/65/437], adopted resolution 65/165 without vote [agenda item 21].

Implementation of the outcome of the United Nations Conference on Human Settlements (Habitat II) and strengthening of the United Nations Human Settlements Programme (UN-Habitat)

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 3327(XXIX) of 16 December 1974, 32/162 of 19 December 1977, 34/115 of 14 December 1979, 56/205 and 56/206 of 21 December 2001, 57/275 of 20 December 2002, 58/226 and 58/227 of 23 December 2003, 59/239 of 22 December 2004, 60/203 of 22 December 2005, 61/206 of 20 December 2006, 62/198 of 19 December 2007, 63/221 of 19 December 2008 and 64/207 of 21 December 2009,

Recalling also Economic and Social Council resolutions 2002/38 of 26 July 2002 and 2003/62 of 25 July 2003 and Council decisions 2004/300 of 23 July 2004, 2005/298 of 26 July 2005, 2006/247 of 27 July 2006, 2007/249 of 26 July 2007, 2008/239 of 23 July 2008, 2009/238 of 29 July 2009 and 2010/236 of 21 July 2010,

Recalling further the goal contained in the United Nations Millennium Declaration of achieving a significant improvement in the lives of at least 100 million slum-dwellers by 2020 and the goal contained in the Plan of Implementation of the World Summit on Sustainable Development ("Johannesburg Plan of Implementation") to halve, by 2015, the proportion of people who lack access to safe drinking water and sanitation,

Recalling the Habitat Agenda, the Declaration on Cities and Other Human Settlements in the New Millennium, the Johannesburg Plan of Implementation and the Monterrey Consensus of the International Conference on Financing for Development,

Recalling also the 2005 World Summit Outcome, which calls upon the States Members of the United Nations to achieve a significant improvement in the lives of at least 100 million slum-dwellers by 2020, recognizing the urgent need for the provision of increased resources for affordable housing and housing-related infrastructure, prioritizing slum prevention and slum upgrading, and to encourage support for the United Nations Habitat and Human Settlements Foundation and its Slum Upgrading Facility,

Recalling further the High-level Plenary Meeting of the General Assembly on the Millennium Development Goals and its outcome document,

Expressing its concern about the continuing increase in the number of slum-dwellers in the world, despite the attainment of the Millennium Development Goal target of achieving a significant improvement in the lives of at least 100 million slum-dwellers by 2020,

Recognizing the negative impacts of environmental degradation, including climate change, desertification and loss of biodiversity, on human settlements,

Cognizant of the fact that dust storms and sandstorms have, in the past few years, inflicted substantial damage on the socio-economic situation of the inhabitants of the world's dryland regions, especially in Africa and Asia, and welcoming the efforts and cooperation of Member States at the regional and international levels to control and reduce the negative effects on human settlements in vulnerable regions,

Welcoming with appreciation the important contribution of the United Nations Human Settlements Programme (UN-Habitat), within its mandate, to more cost-effective transitions between emergency relief, recovery and reconstruction and the decision to admit UN-Habitat to the Inter-Agency Standing Committee,

Recognizing the significance of the urban dimension of poverty eradication and the need to integrate water and sanitation and other issues within a comprehensive framework for sustainable development,

Recognizing also the importance of decentralization policies for achieving sustainable human settlements development in line with the Habitat Agenda and the internationally agreed development goals, including the Millennium Development Goals,

Noting the efforts of UN-Habitat, as a non-resident organization, in helping programme countries to mainstream the Habitat Agenda into their respective development frameworks, and reiterating the relevance of the existing network of Habitat Programme Managers in the increased realization of projects and cooperation activities at the national level,

Noting also the efforts of UN-Habitat in strengthening and enhancing its collaboration with international and regional development banks and domestic financial institutions to combine public and private capital with capacity-building and policy reform activities in order to improve access by the poor to water and sanitation and affordable housing finance in support of the attainment of the internationally agreed development goals, including the Millennium Development Goals,

Recognizing that the World Urban Forum is the foremost global arena for interaction among policymakers, local government leaders, non-government stakeholders and expert practitioners in the field of human settlements, expressing its appreciation to the Government of Brazil and the city of Rio de Janeiro for hosting the fifth session of the Forum from 22 to 26 March 2010 and to the Government of Bahrain for its offer to host the sixth session of the Forum in 2012, and welcoming the efforts to improve the planning, organization and effectiveness of future sessions of the Forum as set out in the review of lessons learned mandated by the Governing Council of UN-Habitat at its twenty-second session,

Reaffirming the increased importance of South-South cooperation and triangular cooperation in helping developing countries to develop capacities in order to achieve their national goals, including those related to sustainable human settlements and urban development,

Recalling its invitation to the Governing Council of UN-Habitat to keep developments in housing finance systems under review in view of the current global financial and economic crisis, recalling its decision to explore the possibility of convening a high-level event of the General Assembly on the subject, and acknowledging the efforts of the Council at its twenty-second session in this regard,

Recalling its encouragement to UN-Habitat to continue exploring the possibility of convening a high-level special event of the General Assembly on sustainable urbanization to promote understanding of the challenges of rapid urbanization, including climate change, housing finance systems, urban planning and sustainable land management,

Recalling its request to the Secretary-General to prepare a report on the question of convening in 2016 a third United Nations conference on housing and sustainable urban development (Habitat III), in collaboration with the Governing Council of UN-Habitat, for consideration by the General Assembly at its sixty-sixth session,

Reaffirming its encouragement to the Economic and Social Council to include sustainable urbanization, urban poverty reduction and slum upgrading as a cross-cutting issue in the follow-up to the outcome of relevant summits and major international conferences,

Recognizing the continuing need for adequate and predictable financial contributions to the United Nations Habitat and Human Settlements Foundation to ensure timely, effective and concrete global implementation of the Habitat Agenda, the Declaration on Cities and Other Human Settlements in the New Millennium and the relevant internationally agreed development goals, including those contained in the Millennium Declaration, the Johannesburg Declaration on Sustainable Development and the Johannesburg Plan of Implementation,

1. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General on the coordinated implementation of the Habitat Agenda and the report of the Secretary-General on the implementation of the outcome of the United Nations Conference on Human Settlements (Habitat II) and strengthening of the United Nations Human Settlements Programme (UN-Habitat);

2. Notes the progress made in response to the request of the Governing Council of UN-Habitat in its resolution 22/5 of 3 April 2009 for a joint examination of the governance of UN-Habitat with a view to identifying and implementing ways to improve the transparency, accountability, efficiency and effectiveness of the functioning of the existing governance structure and to identify options for potential relevant changes for consideration by the Council at its twenty-third session;

3. Welcomes the commitment by Heads of State and Government at the High-level Plenary Meeting of the General Assembly on the Millennium Development Goals to work towards cities without slums, beyond current targets, by reducing slum populations and improving the lives of slum-dwellers, with adequate support of the international community, by prioritizing national urban planning strategies with the participation of all stakeholders, by promoting equal access for people living in slums to public services, including health, education, energy, water and sanitation and adequate shelter, and by promoting sustainable urban and rural development, and encourages UN-Habitat to continue providing the necessary technical assistance;

4. Takes note of the outcome document of the High-level Plenary Meeting of the General Assembly on the Millennium Development Goals, in particular paragraph 77 (k), and in this regard invites the Governing Council of UN-Habitat to consider, at its earliest convenience, appropriate global and national strategies and frameworks for future work, in order to achieve a significant improvement in the lives of slum-dwellers beyond the current slum-related targets, in the light of the continuing increase in the number of slum-dwellers in the world;

5. Welcomes the progress being made by UN-Habitat in the implementation of its medium-term strategic and institutional plan for the period 2008–2013, and encourages a timely and effective presentation of the conclusions of the midterm review of the plan to be submitted to the Governing Council of UN-Habitat at its twenty-third session;

6. Supports the dissemination and implementation of the guidelines on decentralization and strengthening of local authorities and the guidelines on access to basic services for all, approved by the Governing Council of UN-Habitat in its resolutions 21/3 of 20 April 2007 and 22/8 of 3 April 2009, respectively;

7. Encourages UN-Habitat, within its mandate and in line with focus area three of the medium-term strategic and institutional plan for the period 2008–2013, to continue its existing cooperation on issues related to cities and climate change and to continue to play a complementary role in matters related to climate change within the United Nations system, in particular in addressing the vulnerability of cities to climate change, including through further normative work and expansion of its technical assistance to towns and cities on local action for the mitigation of urban-based greenhouse gas emissions and adaptation to climate change, with a focus on vulnerable urban populations, slum-dwellers, the urban poor and at-risk populations;

8. Recalls the importance of timely action by UN-Habitat in response to natural and human-made disasters, in particular through its work in addressing post-disaster and post-conflict housing and infrastructure needs through its normative and operational work as part of the continuum from emergency relief to recovery to urban development through effective urban planning;

9. Reiterates its encouragement to the Economic and Social Council to include sustainable urbanization, urban poverty reduction and slum upgrading as a cross-cutting issue in the preparations for and follow-up to the outcome of relevant summits and major international conferences, including the United Nations Conference on Sustainable Development in 2012;

10. Invites UN-Habitat to contribute to the preparatory process of the United Nations Conference on Sustainable Development by providing technical contributions and inputs, as appropriate, to the report of the Secretary-General on the objective and themes of the Conference and to transmit outcomes emanating from its meetings relevant to the themes of the Conference;

11. Recognizes the progress being made by UN-Habitat to accelerate the provision of finance for the mobilization of seed capital through domestic and other financial resources for shelter and related infrastructure, with due priority to be given to the needs of low-income households, as requested in resolutions 56/206 and 61/206, including through the development of the Experimental Reimbursable Seeding Operations Trust Fund of the United Nations Habitat and Human Settlements Foundation, established by the Governing Council of UN-Habitat in its resolution 21/10 of 20 April 2007, and expresses its interest in the recommendations of the independent evaluation to be presented to the Council at its twenty-third session;

12. Calls for continued financial support to UN-Habitat through increased voluntary contributions, and invites Governments in a position to do so and other stakeholders to provide predictable multi-year funding and increased non-earmarked contributions to support the implementation of the medium-term strategic and institutional plan for the period 2008–2013;

13. Invites the international donor community and financial institutions to contribute generously to the United Nations Habitat and Human Settlements Foundation, including the Water and Sanitation Trust Fund, the Slum Upgrading Facility and the technical cooperation trust funds, to enable UN-Habitat to assist developing countries in mobilizing public investment and private capital for slum upgrading, shelter and basic services;

14. Emphasizes the importance of the Nairobi headquarters location of UN-Habitat, and requests the Secretary-General to keep the resource needs of UN-Habitat and the United Nations Office at Nairobi under review so as to permit the delivery, in an effective manner, of necessary services to UN-Habitat and other United Nations organs and organizations in Nairobi;

15. Encourages the Secretary-General, in consultation with the Governing Council of UN-Habitat and in discussion with all the partners of the Habitat Agenda, to consider, in his report to the General Assembly at its sixty-sixth session on the question of convening in 2016 a third United Nations conference on housing and sustainable urban development (Habitat III), the possibility of integrating the two themes of “housing finance systems” and “sustainable urbanization”, previously suggested as topics for separate high-level events of the Assembly, either into the preparatory process of Habitat III or into a combined theme for a single high-level event;

16. Requests the Secretary-General to submit to the General Assembly at its sixty-sixth session a report on the implementation of the present resolution;

17. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its sixty-sixth session the item entitled “Implementation of the outcome of the United Nations Conference on Human Settlements (Habitat II) and strengthening of the United Nations Human Settlements Programme (UN-Habitat)”.

UN Human Settlements Programme

In accordance with General Assembly resolution 56/206 [YUN 2001, p. 987], the Governing Council of UN-Habitat, which met biennially, did not meet in 2010. The twenty-third session of the Council would take place in 2011.

On 25 August, the General Assembly, by decision 64/428, on the proposal of the Secretary-General [A/64/897], elected Joan Clos as Executive Director of UN-Habitat for a four-year term of office beginning on 18 October 2010, and ending on 17 October 2014.

Committee of Permanent Representatives

The Committee of Permanent Representatives, the intersessional body of the UN-Habitat Governing Council, met four times in 2010, on 5 March [HSP/CPR/37/2], 14 June [HSP/CPR/38/2], 15 September [HSP/CPR/39/2] and 16 December [HSP/CPR/40/2/Rev.1]. It considered, among other matters, the UN-Habitat medium-term strategic and institutional plan, UN-Habitat country activities, the Programme’s financial status and the governance review process.

Board of Auditors report

In June [A/65/5/Add.8], the Board of Auditors transmitted to the General Assembly its report on the UN-Habitat financial statements for the biennium ended 31 December 2009. Total income amounted to $311.6 million, an increase of $21.6 million or 7.4 per cent over the previous period. Total expenditure reached $296.4 million, an increase of $46 million or 18.4 per cent compared to the previous financial period. The increase resulted in an excess of income over expenditure of $15.2 million before adjustments. As at 31 December 2009, the level of cash held was $209.6 million, representing a 20.4 per cent increase over the amount of $174.1 million held in the previous period. The cash situation was the result of the increased number of donors providing their funding in advance for multi-year activities and was not an indication of delays in project execution. End-of-service and post-retirement liabilities amounted to $12.8 million.

The Board recommended, among other measures, that UN-Habitat develop a plan for end-of-service liabilities. It should continue to implement the International Public Sector Accounting Standards and specify its needs for the migration of its software to the future enterprise resource planning system. UN-Habitat should include activities funded by the UN regular budget in its financial statements; revise its treatment of education grants; ensure that all indicators of achievement were supported by documentary evidence; and extend the inventory management system to the liaison and outposted offices.

UN-Habitat activities

In 2010, UN-Habitat continued to implement its work programme in line with Governing Council resolutions and the goals of the UN system and the international community. Under the 2008–2013 medium-term strategic plan, approved by the Council in 2007 [YUN 2007, p. 1086], UN-Habitat focused on advocacy, monitoring and partnerships; promotion of participatory planning, management and governance; promotion of pro-poor land and housing; environmentally sound basic infrastructure and services; strengthened human settlements finance systems; and excellence in management.

The Programme's operational work on affordable housing finance was implemented through the experimental reimbursable seeding operations programme and the Slum Upgrading Facility pilot programme, which integrated market-based solutions with community-led efforts and government inputs to tackle inadequate housing, water and sanitation. Through the reimbursable seeding operations programme, five loans, with a total value of $2.75 million, were disbursed in Nepal, Nicaragua, the Occupied Palestinian Territory, Uganda and the United Republic of Tanzania. The Slum Upgrading Facility pilot programme established local finance facilities in Ghana, Indonesia, Sri Lanka and the United Republic of Tanzania. Grant agreements totalling over $6.5 million were concluded under the programme, attracting government commitments of some $1.4 million. Eight projects were implemented, attracting commercial lending of over $500,000. Technical assistance focusing on strengthening business and financial capacity was provided to local finance facilities, NGO networks and local authorities. The pilot programme ended in December.

Normative work in affordable housing focused on informal settlements and finance; community-based finance approaches to affordable housing; social housing and related finance models; housing cooperative approaches; and social investment funds. UN-Habitat produced guides on preparing a housing finance strategy and on municipal finance as tools for Governments and municipalities. It strengthened efforts to promote the economic development of towns and cities, including by producing a report on housing as a tool for poverty reduction in Ghana, and launching the Global Urban Economic Dialogue series to generate debate and solutions on pressing urban economic development and housing issues. The first dialogue in the series was the Global Dialogue on Better Cities, Better Economies, held at the 2010 World Exposition (Shanghai, 1 May–31 October). UN-Habitat, in partnership with the United Nations Economic and Social Commission for Asia and the Pacific and an Indian housing finance institution, facilitated the establishment of an Asia-Pacific housing finance network. In partnership with the African Union for Housing Finance, it also launched its first training programme on affordable housing mechanisms and practices for senior bankers and finance practitioners. UN-Habitat developed a climate change strategy for the 2010–2013 period, highlighting the importance of implementation and action across the Programme. As part of that strategy, it launched a cities and climate change initiative to promote dialogue between the national and local levels, raise awareness on the vulnerability of the urban poor to climate change and develop local government capacity to respond to climate change challenges. The initiative began in four pilot cities: Esmeraldas, Ecuador; Kampala, Uganda; Maputo, Mozambique; and Sorsogon City, the Philippines. An additional five African cities in Burkina Faso, Namibia, Rwanda and Senegal joined the initiative, as well as cities in nine Asian countries, including four small island developing States in the Pacific. UN-Habitat joined with the World Bank, UNEP and the Cities Alliance to achieve a more coordinated and focused response to climate change issues facing cities, particularly in developing countries. The collaborating entities released for public comment an international standard for determining greenhouse-gas emissions for cities at the fifth session of the World Urban Forum (see p. 1045). In partnership with the secretariat of the 1992 Convention on Biological Diversity [YUN 1992, p. 683], UN-Habitat developed and launched a guide on supporting local action for biodiversity, which contained recommendations on how national and local governments could contribute to local-level biodiversity management while tackling climate change concerns. UN-Habitat focused on strengthening the institutional management and operations of the Opportunities Fund for Urban Youth-led Development, engaging its regional offices in processing applications to the Fund. Young people's development issues were reflected in the report State of the World's Cities 2010/2011—Cities for All: Bridging the Urban Divide, in a supplement entitled State of the Urban Youth 2010/2011: Leveling the Playing Field; both documents were launched during the World Urban Forum.

Report of Executive Director. The Executive Director submitted, in December [HSP/GC/23/2/Add.5], a report on the coordinated implementation of the guidelines on access to basic services for all, approved by the Governing Council in 2009 [YUN 2009, p. 1042], and the guidelines on decentralization and strengthening of local authorities, approved in 2007 [YUN 2007, p. 1087]. It highlighted the activities carried out by UN-Habitat in consultation with stakeholders to prepare and operationalize a strategy for the implementation of the guidelines on basic access to services for all in a way that complemented the international guidelines on decentralization and the strengthening of local authorities; described tools to facilitate the implementation process and presented initial findings from assessment surveys carried out in several countries; and provided information on coordination with other international initiatives and on collaboration with United Cities and Local Governments.

Since their approval in 2009, few local, national or international initiatives had made direct reference to the implementation of the international guidelines. More needed to be done to adapt the guidelines to local, national and regional contexts, and thus transform them into a useful tool for improving legislative, regulatory and operational frameworks. In most countries, no specific national institution was in charge of coordinated monitoring. National or sub-national responsibilities for developing basic services were often fragmented and lacked an intersectoral and coordinated approach. Developing and monitoring efforts to improve access to basic services at the national level would require additional instruments for reviewing and coordinating sector policies.

Following up on efforts to formulate a road map for the implementation process, which were supported by France and other partners, UN-Habitat developed a comprehensive programme document highlighting three major components of its strategy for the integrated adaptation of the two sets of guidelines to national and local situations. The main elements of the strategy included policy development and advocacy at the regional and national levels; training and capacity development at the regional, national and local levels; and monitoring and reporting. A special meeting and a technical meeting were both held on 25 March at the fifth session of the World Urban Forum (see p. 1045). At the technical meeting, participants made recommendations related to the establishment of a multi-stakeholder consultative mechanism and the mobilization of the capacity for collecting information on relevant initiatives and tools. At a meeting held in Paris on 27 and 28 October, the strategy and programme for supporting the implementation of the two sets of guidelines were agreed upon, including selection criteria for interested countries to be considered for the implementation programme's pilot phase. A single handbook to guide the coordinated implementation was finalized by UN-Habitat.

The Executive Director recommended, among other measures, that the Governing Council request UN-Habitat to accord special emphasis to enhancing national- and regional-level activities for the implementation of the two sets of guidelines. Within the framework of its medium-term strategic and institutional plan, UN-Habitat should strengthen the human and financial capacities of the Regional and Technical Cooperation Division to facilitate the development and testing of multisectoral and multi-stakeholder instruments for operationalizing the guidelines. It should also assist countries in undertaking the coordinated adaptation and implementation of the guidelines.

Population

In 2010, world population stood at 6.9 billion and life expectancy reached 69 years in all of the world's regions except Africa. Ninety-one per cent of reproductive rights were incorporated into the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Violence against Women, and over 6,000 communities in eight countries rejected the practice of female genital mutilation. The United Nations provided support to countries carrying out the 2010 round of population censuses, to countries implementing programmes aimed at preventing mother-to-child transmission of HIV/AIDS, and to areas in need of emergency obstetric and newborn care, family planning, and neonatal care.

UN-system population activities continued to be guided by the Programme of Action adopted at the 1994 International Conference on Population and Development (ICPD) and the key actions for its implementation adopted at the twenty-first special session of the General Assembly in 1999. The Commission on Population and Development—the body responsible for monitoring, reviewing and assessing implementation of the Programme of Action—extended the Programme and key actions beyond 2014, and considered the special theme “Health, morbidity, mortality and development”. The Population Division analysed and reported on world demographic trends and policies, making its findings available in publications and on the Internet.

The United Nations Population Fund (UNFPA) assisted countries in implementing the ICPD agenda and the Millennium Development Goals through their use of population data to formulate sound policies and programmes. In 2010, UNFPA provided assistance to 155 countries, areas and territories, with emphasis on increasing the availability and quality of reproductive health services, especially among young people; empowering women; eliminating gender-based violence; and formulating effective population policies.

Commission on Population and Development

Commission session

At its forty-third session (New York, 3 April 2009 and 12–16 April 2010) [E/2010/25], the Commission on Population and Development considered the special theme “Health, morbidity, mortality and development” and discussed follow-up actions to the recommendations of the 1994 International Conference on Population and Development (ICPD) [YUN 1994, p. 955].

The Commission considered the report of the Bureau of the Commission on its three intersessional meetings (New York, 28 October and 9 December 2009, and Jerusalem, 11–13 January 2010) [E/CN.9/2010/2], and took note [E/2010/25 (dec. 2010/102)] of reports of the Secretary-General on: health, morbidity, mortality and development [E/CN.9/2010/3] (see below), the monitoring of population programmes [E/CN.9/2010/4] (see p. 1057), the flow of financial resources for assisting in the implementation of the ICPD recommendations [E/CN.9/2010/5], and programme implementation and progress of work in the field of population [E/CN.9/2010/6] [YUN 2009, p. 1054]; and a note by the Secretary-General on the proposed strategic framework for 2012–2013 [E/CN.9/2010/7]. The Commission also had before it a letter from China transmitting the outcome document “Beijing call to action”, adopted at the fifth Asia Pacific Conference on Reproductive and Sexual Health and Rights (Beijing, 17–20 October 2009) [E/CN.9/2010/8], and a statement from the International Planned Parenthood Federation, a non-governmental organization (NGO) in consultative status with the Economic and Social Council [E/CN.9/2010/NGO/1].

Reports of Secretary-General. In a report issued in January [E/CN.9/2010/3] on health, morbidity, mortality and development, the Secretary-General documented the major reductions in mortality achieved since 1950 in all countries, the shifting burden of disease from communicable to non-communicable diseases, and the interrelations between health and development. Life expectancies were at or above 69 years in all world regions, except Africa, due to effective control and treatment of the major communicable diseases. The report recommended combining an intersectoral approach to disease prevention with measures to strengthen health-care delivery, particularly by ensuring that health systems had comprehensive primary health care at their core, and stated that high-income countries should follow responsible recruitment practices to prevent shortages of health workers in low-income countries. A crucial element in the strengthening of health systems was adequate recruitment, training and variety in the health workforce. The most cost-effective strategy to reduce the growing burden of chronic non-communicable disease was to reduce the prevalence of the risk factors associated with tobacco use, unhealthy diets, obesity, physical inactivity, and excessive use of alcohol. Intersectoral action was therefore key in national planning to reduce the burden of non-communicable disease.

In accordance with Assembly resolutions 49/128 [YUN 1994, p. 963] and 50/124 [YUN 1995, p. 1094], the Secretary-General in January submitted a report [E/CN.9/2010/5] on the flow of financial resources for assisting in the implementation of the ICPD Programme of Action [YUN 1994, p. 956]. The report examined expected levels of donor and domestic expenditures for population activities in developing countries for 2008, and provided estimates for population expenditures in 2009 and projections for 2010. It stated that donor assistance had been increasing steadily over the past few years, reaching $8.7 billion in 2007 and an estimated $10 billion in 2008. Given the financial crisis, however, funding levels were expected to increase only slightly, to $10.2 billion in 2009 and $10.6 billion in 2010. A rough estimate of resources mobilized by developing countries as a group yielded a figure of $23.2 billion for 2008. The 2009 and 2010 figures were expected to follow the same pattern, increasing only slightly, to $23.3 billion in 2009 and $25.7 billion in 2010. Funding levels were far below the targets necessary to realize the goals of the Programme of Action and to achieve the Millennium Development Goals (MDGs); the decreasing proportion of funding for family planning services was a concern. Given limited financial resources, it was essential that donor countries, international agencies and recipient countries avoid duplication, identify funding gaps and ensure that resources were used as effectively and efficiently as possible.

Commission action. The Commission adopted and brought to the attention of the Economic and Social Council a resolution on health, morbidity, mortality and development [E/2010/25 (res. 2010/1)]. By the resolution, the Commission reaffirmed its commitment to the full implementation of the ICPD Programme of Action and encouraged Member States and international organizations to accelerate progress on all health-related targets of the MDGs—in particular universal access to reproductive health, immunization and key child survival interventions; HIV prevention, mitigation and treatment; prevention and treatment of neglected tropical diseases; prevention and treatment services for malaria and tuberculosis; and access to affordable, safe water and sanitation. The Commission urged Governments to strengthen health systems, to protect and promote human rights and fundamental freedoms, and to redouble efforts to reduce maternal morbidity, including during the post-natal period. It emphasized the urgency of combating the main causes of child morbidity and mortality; underlined the need of people living with armed conflict and foreign occupation for a functioning public health system; recognized that lack of adequate funding remained a constraint to the implementation of the Programme of Action; and called on donor Governments to assist countries in strengthening national health systems.

The Commission decided that the special theme for its forty-fifth (2012) session would be “Adolescents and youth” [ibid. (dec. 2010/101)], and approved the draft provisional agenda for its forty-fourth (2011) session.

The Economic and Social Council, by decision 2010/238 of 21 July, took note of the report of the Commission on its forty-third (2010) session and approved the provisional agenda for the forty-fourth (2011) session.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 22 December [meeting 72], the General Assembly adopted resolution 65/234 [draft: A/65/L.39/Rev.2 & Add.1] without vote [agenda item 13].

Follow-up to the International Conference on Population and Development beyond 2014

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 50/124 of 20 December 1995, 51/176 of 16 December 1996 and 53/183 of 15 December 1998 on the implementation of the Programme of Action of the International Conference on Population and Development, adopted in Cairo in September 1994, and its resolutions 49/128 of 19 December 1994 and 52/188 of 18 December 1997,

Recalling also the key actions for the further implementation of the Programme of Action, as adopted by the General Assembly at its twenty-first special session, held in New York from 30 June to 2 July 1999,

Recalling further its resolution 57/270 B of 23 June 2003 on the integrated and coordinated implementation of and follow-up to the outcomes of the major conferences and summits,

Noting that the Programme of Action is due to formally come to an end in 2014 but that its goals and objectives remain valid beyond 2014,

Acknowledging that many Governments may not meet all the goals and objectives of the Programme of Action by 2014,

Recognizing the crucial linkages between the implementation of the Programme of Action and the achievement of the internationally agreed development goals, including the Millennium Development Goals,

Noting that, in spite of the progress made towards achieving the goals and objectives of the Programme of Action and the Millennium Development Goals, considerable gaps still exist in the implementation of different areas of the Programme of Action,

Recalling that the Programme of Action requires for its implementation adequate mobilization of resources at the national and international levels, as well as new and additional resources for developing countries from all available funding mechanisms, including multilateral, bilateral and private sources, and that Governments are not expected to meet the goals and objectives of the Programme of Action single-handedly,

Stressing the importance of protecting the achievements of the International Conference, responding to new challenges relevant to population and development and to the changing development environment, and reinforcing the integration of the population and development agenda in global processes related to development,

1. Emphasizes the need for Governments to recommit themselves at the highest political level to achieving the goals and objectives of the Programme of Action of the International Conference on Population and Development;

2. Decides to extend the Programme of Action and the key actions for its further implementation beyond 2014 and ensure its follow-up in order to fully meet its goals and objectives;

3. Also decides to convene a special session during the sixty-ninth session of the General Assembly in order to assess the status of implementation of the Programme of Action and to renew political support for actions required for the full achievement of its goals and objectives, and further decides that the Commission on Population and Development, which is scheduled to hold, at its forty-fourth session, a general debate on the further implementation of the Programme of Action in the light of the twentieth anniversary of the International Conference, should convene an interactive discussion during its forty-seventh session on the assessment of the status of implementation of the Programme of Action;

4. Reaffirms that the special session for the assessment of the status of implementation of the Programme of Action will be undertaken on the basis of and with full respect for the Programme of Action and that there will be no renegotiation of the existing agreements contained therein;

5. Encourages Governments to undertake reviews of the progress achieved and the constraints faced therein in the implementation of the Programme of Action at all levels, particularly at the national level and at the level of international cooperation;

6. Calls upon the United Nations Population Fund, in consultation with Member States and in cooperation with all relevant organizations of the United Nations system and other relevant international organizations, as well as institutions and experts, to undertake an operational review of the implementation of the Programme of Action on the basis of the highest-quality data and analysis of the state of population and development and taking into account the need for a systematic, comprehensive and integrated approach to population and development issues, and requests the Secretary-General to submit a report based on this review to the Commission on Population and Development at its forty-seventh session;

7. Requests the Secretary-General, with the support of the United Nations Population Fund and other relevant United Nations agencies, funds and programmes, to ensure that the relevant issues identified during the sessions of the Commission on Population and Development are compiled and forwarded to Governments at the sixty-ninth session of the General Assembly, with an index report indicating recurrent themes and key elements found therein, along with the findings of the operational review;

8. Invites all other relevant organizations and bodies of the United Nations system to contribute as appropriate to the special session as well as to its preparation;

9. Stresses the need for the effective participation and contribution of relevant actors of civil society, particularly non-governmental organizations, as appropriate, in the special session, as well as in its preparation;

10. Requests the Secretary-General to inform the General Assembly at its sixty-eighth session about the preparations for the special session;

11. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its sixty-ninth session a sub-item entitled "Follow-up to the Programme of Action of the International Conference on Population and Development".

International migration and development

Global Forum Meeting. The fourth Global Forum on Migration and Development (Puerto Vallarta, Mexico, 8–11 November) [A/C.2/66/7] was held on the theme "Partnerships for migration and human development: shared prosperity—shared responsibility". Attended by over 450 delegates representing 131 Member States and 39 international organizations, it included a meeting of civil society (8–9 November) followed by a governmental meeting (10–11 November). Round table discussions addressed partnerships for migration and human development, human mobility and human development, and policy and institutional coherence. The meetings recommended that Governments: promote programmes to provide potential immigrants with relevant information to make well-informed decisions; promote job creation in countries of origin; create joint mechanisms for multilateral, regional and bilateral cooperation; establish one-stop shops for information on migration and return in countries of origin and destination; ratify all relevant UN conventions; and strengthen dialogue on the interconnections of climate change, migration and development.

Report of Secretary-General. Pursuant to General Assembly resolution 63/225 [YUN 2008, p. 1186], the Secretary-General in August submitted a report on international migration and development [A/65/203] that described trends in international migration, and reviewed efforts to increase its positive aspects on countries of origin and to avert or reduce negative consequences. Because of the financial and economic crises, increases in the number of international migrants had fallen from 13 million in 2000–2005 to 11 million in 2005–2010. While unemployment in host countries had risen overall, migrant workers were particularly affected because they were concentrated in the sectors that had borne the brunt of the eco-conomic downturn. Owing to the crisis, remittances to low- and middle-income countries fell from $336 billion in 2008 to an estimated $316 billion in 2009. The report reviewed multilateral funding for activities and projects that promoted the beneficial aspects of international migration and development and focused on the work of the Global Forum on Migration and Development. The report recommended that the UN system maintain activities to ensure that the rights of migrants were safeguarded and that migrants in vulnerable situations were protected, in line with a rights-based approach. Governments were encouraged to act cooperatively and keep the channels of communication open.

Communications. On 8 March [A/64/715], Mexico transmitted the communiqué on cooperation on migration issues adopted at the first Latin American and Caribbean Unity Summit (Mayan Riviera, Mexico, 22–23 February).

On 21 July [A/65/499], Greece transmitted to the Secretary-General the report of the third meeting of the Global Forum on Migration and Development (Athens, Greece, 2–5 November 2009) [YUN 2009, p. 1047].

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 20 December [meeting 69], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Second (Economic and Financial) Committee [A/65/438/Add.3], adopted resolution 65/170 without vote [agenda item 22 (d)].

International migration and development

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 58/208 of 23 December 2003, 59/241 of 22 December 2004, 60/227 of 23 December 2005, 61/208 of 20 December 2006 and 63/225 of 19 December 2008 on international migration and development, as well as its resolution 60/206 of 22 December 2005 on the facilitation and reduction of the cost of transfer of migrant remittances, its resolutions 62/156 of 18 December 2007 and 64/166 of 18 December 2009 on the protection of migrants and its resolution 62/270 of 20 June 2008 on the Global Forum on Migration and Development,

Recalling also the 2005 World Summit Outcome, its resolution 60/265 of 30 June 2006 on the follow-up to the development outcome of the 2005 World Summit, including the Millennium Development Goals and the other internationally agreed development goals, and the Doha Declaration on Financing for Development: outcome document of the Follow-up International Conference on Financing for Development to Review the Implementation of the Monterrey Consensus, adopted on 24 December 2008,

Recalling further its resolution 57/270 B of 23 June 2003 on the integrated and coordinated implementation of and follow-up to the outcomes of the major United Nations conferences and summits in the economic and social fields,

Recalling the Conference on the World Financial and Economic Crisis and Its Impact on Development and its outcome document and follow-up,

Recalling also the High-level Plenary Meeting of the General Assembly on the Millennium Development Goals and its outcome document,

Reaffirming the Universal Declaration of Human Rights, and recalling the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights, the International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights, the International Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Racial Discrimination, the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women and the Convention on the Rights of the Child,

Recalling the International Convention on the Protection of the Rights of All Migrant Workers and Members of Their Families, and reiterating the call to Member States that have not yet done so to consider signing and ratifying or acceding to the Convention as a matter of priority and the request to the Secretary-General to continue his efforts to promote and raise awareness of the Convention, particularly in the context of the twentieth anniversary of its adoption,

Recalling also the importance of the decent work agenda of the International Labour Organization, including for migrant workers, the eight fundamental Conventions of that Organization and the Global Jobs Pact adopted by the International Labour Conference at its ninety-eighth session, as a general framework within which each country can formulate policy packages specific to its situation and national priorities in order to promote a job-intensive recovery and sustainable development,

Recalling further Commission on Population and Development resolution 2006/2 of 10 May 2006,

Bearing in mind the summary by the President of the General Assembly of the 2006 High-level Dialogue on International Migration and Development,

Acknowledging that the 2006 High-level Dialogue provided a useful opportunity to address constructively the issue of international migration and development and heightened awareness of the issue,

Taking note of the United Nations Development Programme Human Development Report 2009: Overcoming Barriers—Human Mobility and Development,

Acknowledging the complexity of migratory flows and that a significant proportion of international migration movements also occurs within the same geographical regions,

Reaffirming the resolve to take measures to ensure respect for and protection of the human rights of migrants, migrant workers and members of their families,

Bearing in mind the obligations of States under international law, as applicable, to exercise due diligence to prevent crimes against migrants, including those perpetrated with racist or xenophobic motivations, to investigate such crimes and to punish the perpetrators and that not doing so violates, and impairs or nullifies the enjoyment of, the human rights and fundamental freedoms of victims, and urging States to reinforce measures in this regard,

Acknowledging the important nexus between international migration and development and the need to deal with the challenges and opportunities that migration presents to countries of origin, transit and destination, recognizing that migration brings benefits and challenges to the global community, and confirming the importance of including the matter in relevant debates and discussions held at the international level, including at the United Nations, in relation to development,

Acknowledging also the important contribution provided by migrants and migration to development, as well as the complex interrelationship between migration and development,

Recognizing the need to further consider the role that environmental factors may play in migration,

Recalling that migrant workers are among the most vulnerable in the context of the financial and economic crisis and that remittances, which are significant private financial sources for households, have been negatively affected by rising unemployment and weak earnings growth among migrant workers in some countries of destination,

Noting with concern that in many countries of destination international migrants are experiencing higher unemployment than non-migrants,

Recognizing the contributions of young migrants to countries of origin and destination, and in that regard encouraging States to consider the specific circumstances and needs of young migrants,

Noting with concern that the financial and economic crisis has increased the risk of misperceiving the economic effects of migration as negative, and noting in this regard that national public planning should take account of the positive effects that migration has in the medium to long term,

Recognizing that remittance flows constitute sources of private capital, complement domestic savings and are instrumental in improving the well-being of recipients,

Recalling its resolution 63/225, in which it decided to hold a high-level dialogue on international migration and development during its sixty-eighth session, in 2013, and to convene at its sixty-fifth session, in 2011, a one-day informal thematic debate on international migration and development,

1. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General;

2. Encourages efforts by Member States and the international community to continue to promote a balanced, coherent and comprehensive approach to international migration and development, in particular by building partnerships and ensuring coordinated action to develop capacities, including for the management of migration;

3. Recognizes the importance of renewing the political will to act cooperatively and constructively in addressing international migration, including regular and irregular migration, to address the challenges and opportunities of international migration in a balanced, coherent and comprehensive manner and to promote respect for and protection of human rights in the development and implementation of policies regarding migration and development;

4. Emphasizes that respect for the human rights and fundamental freedoms of all migrants is essential for reaping the benefits of international migration;

5. Expresses concern about legislation adopted by some States that results in measures and practices that may restrict the human rights and fundamental freedoms of migrants, and reaffirms that, when exercising their sovereign right to enact and implement migratory and border security measures, States have the duty to comply with their obligations under international law, including international human rights law, in order to ensure full respect for the human rights of migrants;

6. Stresses that the penalties and treatment given to irregular migrants should be commensurate with their infraction;

7. Requests all Member States, in accordance with their relevant international obligations and commitments, to promote cooperation at all levels in addressing the challenge of undocumented or irregular migration so as to foster a secure, regular and orderly process of migration;

8. Welcomes the programmes that allow migrants to integrate fully into society, facilitate family reunification in accordance with the laws and specific criteria of each Member State and promote a harmonious, tolerant and respectful environment, and encourages host countries to take appropriate measures aimed at the full integration of long-term migrants staying legally in the country;

9. Encourages the United Nations system and other relevant organizations, including the International Organization for Migration, to continue to support efforts aimed at promoting and protecting the rights of migrants, especially those in vulnerable situations, and to provide them with access to these rights, including rights to legal processes and access to entities, such as national migrant resource centres, that provide advice and assistance;

10. Urges Member States and relevant international organizations to incorporate a gender perspective into all policies and programmes on international migration in order to, inter alia, reinforce the positive contributions that migrant women can make to the economic, social and human development of their countries of origin and their host countries, and to strengthen the protection of women migrants from all forms of violence, discrimination, trafficking, exploitation and abuse by promoting their rights and welfare, while recognizing in this regard the importance of joint and collaborative approaches and strategies at the bilateral, regional, interregional and international levels;

11. Recognizes with appreciation the important contribution made by migrants and migration to development in countries of origin and destination;

12. Encourages all countries, in accordance with domestic legislation, to take appropriate measures to facilitate the contribution of migrants and migrant communities to the development of their countries of origin;

13. Recognizes the importance of enhancing the capacities of low-skilled migrants in order to increase their access to employment opportunities in countries of destination;

14. Also recognizes the need for Member States to continue considering the multidimensional aspects of international migration and development in order to identify appropriate ways and means of maximizing the development benefits and minimizing the negative impacts, including by exploring ways to lower the transfer costs of remittances, garnering the active engagement of expatriates and fostering their involvement in promoting investment in countries of origin and entrepreneurship among non-migrants;

15. Reaffirms that there is a need to further address and promote conditions for cheaper, faster and safer transfers of remittances in both source and recipient countries and, as appropriate, to encourage opportunities for development-oriented investment in recipient countries by beneficiaries that are willing and able to take such action, bearing in mind that remittances cannot be considered a substitute for foreign direct investment, official development assistance, debt relief or other public sources of financing for development;

16. Reiterates the need to consider how the migration of highly skilled persons and those with advanced education affects the development efforts of developing countries in order to address the negative impacts and optimize the potential benefits of such migration;

17. Acknowledges the need to analyse the impact of certain forms of temporary migration, circular migration and return migration on the development of countries of origin, transit and destination, as well as on migrants themselves;

18. Calls upon Member States to address the effects of the financial and economic crisis on international migrants and, in this regard, to renew their commitment to resist unfair and discriminatory treatment of migrants;

19. Calls upon all relevant bodies, agencies, funds and programmes of the United Nations system and other relevant intergovernmental, regional and subregional organizations, including the Global Migration Group, within their respective mandates, to continue to address the issue of international migration and development, with a view to integrating migration issues, including a gender perspective and cultural diversity, in a more coherent way, in the context of the implementation of the internationally agreed development goals, including the Millennium Development Goals, and with respect for human rights;

20. Encourages the United Nations system and other relevant international organizations to support developing countries in their efforts to address migration issues within their respective development strategies in the context of the implementation of the internationally agreed development goals, including the Millennium Development Goals;

21. Calls upon the United Nations system and other relevant international organizations and multilateral institutions to enhance their cooperation in the promotion and development of methodologies for the collection and processing of internationally comparable statistical data on international migration and the situation of migrants in countries of origin, transit and destination, and to assist Member States in their capacity-building efforts in this regard;

22. Notes the Global Forum on Migration and Development, which is an informal, voluntary, open, State-led initiative and which held its first meeting in Belgium in 2007, followed by its meetings in the Philippines in 2008, Greece in 2009 and Mexico in 2010, as a contribution to addressing the multidimensional nature of international migration and a step towards promoting balanced and comprehensive approaches, and also notes the generous offer of the Government of Switzerland to assume the Presidency of the Global Forum for 2011;

23. Notes with appreciation the announcement by the President of the General Assembly that the informal thematic debate on international migration and development will be held during the first half of 2011;

24. Requests the Secretary-General to report to the General Assembly at its sixty-seventh session on the organizational details of the 2013 High-level Dialogue on International Migration and Development, including possible themes;

25. Invites the regional commissions, in collaboration with other relevant entities of the United Nations system as well as the International Organization for Migration, to organize discussions to examine regional aspects of international migration and development and to provide inputs, in accordance with their respective mandates and within existing resources, to the report of the Secretary-General on this item and to the preparatory process of the High-level Dialogue;

26. Invites Member States, through appropriate regional consultative processes and, as appropriate, other major initiatives in the field of international migration, including on international migration and development, to contribute to the High-level Dialogue;

27. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its sixty-seventh session, under the item entitled "Globalization and interdependence", the sub-item entitled "International migration and development";

28. Requests the Secretary-General to submit to the General Assembly at its sixty-seventh session a report on the implementation of the present resolution.

By resolution 65/212 of 21 December (see p. 676), the General Assembly called on States to promote and protect the human rights and fundamental freedoms of all migrants, and to ratify the International Convention on the Protection of the Rights of All Migrant Workers and Members of Their Families [YUN 1990, p. 594].

United Nations Population Fund

Activities

Report of Secretary-General. In January, the Secretary-General submitted to the Commission on Population and Development a report [E/CN.9/2010/4] on the monitoring of population programmes, which reviewed the work of the United Nations Population Fund (UNFPA) to improve maternal health and reduce morbidity and mortality. The report focused on activities related to maternal and newborn care, investing in family planning and midwifery, enhancing reproductive health commodity security, preventing and treating obstetric fistula, abandoning the practice of female genital mutilation/cutting, eliminating gender-based violence, addressing adolescent pregnancy and child marriage, preventing mother-to-child transmission of HIV, carrying out comprehensive condom distribution programmes to prevent unintended pregnancy and HIV infection, and providing reproductive health services in emergency situations. It found that reproductive ill health affected mortality and accounted for a large share of the global burden of disease, particularly among women and children. The most cost-effective interventions to reduce maternal mortality were family planning, skilled birth attendants during delivery and emergency obstetric care. Constraints in health system performance were a major contributing factor to the delays in achieving better health outcomes and the health-related MDG targets. The international health problem of obstetric fistula disproportionately affected impoverished women and girls living in rural communities in the least developed countries. The global Campaign to End Fistula, carried out by UNFPA and partners, was active in more than 45 countries. The UNFPA–United Nations Children’s Fund (UNICEF) Joint Programme on Female Genital Mutilation and Cutting was being implemented in 17 countries. UNFPA was leading the Global Condom Initiative, which was ongoing in 55 countries. By investing in those activities, UNFPA contributed to the reduction of morbidity and mortality.

UNDP/UNFPA Executive Board. The UNFPA Executive Director reported, jointly with the Administrator of the United Nations Development Programme (UNDP), to the Economic and Social Council on the triennial comprehensive policy review of operational activities for development of the UN system [E/2011/5]. UNFPA, along with UNDP and other UN development partners, contributed to national capacity development and development effectiveness. The report focused on global and national MDG initiatives; MDG trust fund mechanisms; national strategies and policies; South-South cooperation; gender equality and women’s empowerment, including the prevention of violence against women; poverty reduction; crisis prevention and recovery; and the environment and sustainable development. UNFPA strengthened the evaluation function at the country and regional levels. Of the 122 UNFPA country offices, 54 had monitoring and evaluation officers, and each of the five regional offices had an evaluation adviser.

On 22 January [E/2010/35 (dec. 2010/8)], the Executive Board took note of the 2009 joint report of the UNDP Administrator and the UNFPA Executive Director on the triennial comprehensive policy review [YUN 2009, p. 1049] and transmitted it to the Economic and Social Council.

By decision 2010/251 of 23 July, the Economic and Social Council took note of that report, as well as of the report of the UNDP/UNFPA Executive Board on its work in 2009 [ibid., p. 854].

On 2 September [dec. 2010/28], the Board expressed its appreciation to retiring Executive Director Thoraya Ahmed Obaid.

On 19 November, following consultations with the Executive Board, the Secretary-General announced the appointment of Babatunde Osotimehin (Nigeria) as the new UNFPA Executive Director for a four-year term.

Reports of Executive Director. A report of the UNFPA Executive Director [DP/FPA/2011/3 (Part I)] analysed progress in implementing the UNFPA strategic plan for 2008–2013, highlighted the key changes in the global context affecting the UNFPA mandate, reviewed progress in the strategic plan development results framework and in the management results framework, and identified pointers for possible strategic shifts. The report focused on population and development; reproductive health and rights; gender equality; and cross-cutting concerns. The report emphasized that UNFPA needed strong political and increased financial support, as well as increased and predictable core funding in order to enhance its assistance to countries, to fully integrate the ICPD agenda into national development strategies and frameworks, and to achieve the internationally agreed development goals.

In an addendum [DP/FPA/2011/3(Part I)/Add.1], the Executive Director provided a statistical and financial review for 2010. The report stated that UNFPA resources surpassed the $500 million level for the seventh sequential year, including $491.2 million in regular resource income, the highest total in the history of UNFPA. Regular resource contribution income increased by $21.8 million, or 4.6 per cent, and total expenditures increased by $1.4 million, or 0.2 per cent, to $801.4 million. The balance of unexpended regular resources for staff benefits and other reserves reached $59.7 million. UNFPA closed the year in robust financial health.

The Executive Director reported on the recommendations of the Joint Inspection Unit (JIU) [DP/FPA/2011/3 (Part II)]. The report summarized the UNFPA management’s responses to key JIU recommendations and drew attention to specific recommendations directed to the legislative organs of UN system organizations. JIU in 2010 issued seven reports relevant to UNFPA, concerning in-house environmental management policies and practices [JIU/REP/2010/1]; travel arrangements within the UN system [JIU/REP/2010/2]; ethics in the UN system [JIU/REP/2010/3]; enterprise risk management in the UN system [JIU/REP/2010/4]; the audit function in the UN system [JIU/REP/2010/5]; preparedness of UN system organizations for the International Public Sector Accounting Standards [JIU/REP/2010/6]; and policies and procedures for the administration of trust funds in UN system organizations [JIU/REP/2010/7]. The 37 recommendations relevant to UNFPA issued by JIU in 2009 had been implemented or were being pursued.

On 25 June [E/2010/35 (dec. 2010/23)], the Executive Board took note of the documents that made up the Executive Director’s report for 2009 [DP/FPA/2010/17 (Part I & Add.1, Part II)]. The Board requested the Executive Director to submit to the Board in 2011 a consolidated annual report for 2010 that included the midterm review of the extended strategic plan for 2008–2013.

State of World Population report. The Fund’s State of World Population 2010 report [Sales No. E.10.III.H.1] was entitled “From conflict and crisis to renewal: generations of change”. It explored how conflicts and protracted humanitarian emergencies affected women and girls as well as men and boys, and showed how many women and young people had overcome seemingly insurmountable obstacles and rebuilt their lives.

General Assembly action. The General Assembly, by resolution 65/176 of 20 December (see p. 868), renamed the Executive Board of the UNDP/UNFPA to include the United Nations

Office for Project Services. The name was changed to “Executive Board of the United Nations Development Programme/United Nations Population Fund/United Nations Office for Project Services”.

Population and development

Between 2000 and 2010, donor assistance for population activities steadily increased from an annual amount of less than $2 billion to over $10 billion. UNFPA advanced the understanding of population dynamics and supported its incorporation in national development strategies. Through country programmes, many countries received direct support for formulating poverty reduction strategies and national development plans.

UNFPA incorporated youth participation and young people’s rights in its policies by providing technical support to countries. UNFPA country offices reported increased inclusion of youth issues in national planning; however, one third of all countries had no emergency preparedness documents in place, which posed a major challenge in ensuring that young people’s needs were promptly addressed in the aftermath of a disaster or a conflict.

Support to the 2010 census operations remained a key priority. Of the 123 programme countries that had planned a population census in 2010, 42 per cent had completed it and 85 per cent were expected to have it completed by the end of 2012. UNFPA provided support to 76 countries for census activities, including 4 experiencing a critical humanitarian crisis (Afghanistan, Democratic Republic of the Congo, Iraq, Sudan). UNFPA would strengthen support to the 2010 census round and other data sources to monitor indicators for ICPD goals and the MDGs, and increase institutional capacities to monitor and evaluate the impact of programmes.

UNFPA contributed to the integration of urbanization into national development and population planning. Advocacy and capacity-building were carried out in Bangladesh, Burundi, China, Iraq and Uzbekistan. In Jamaica, Liberia and Zambia, urbanization was integrated in the national population policies. In Mozambique and Tunisia, urbanization and urban poverty were integrated in poverty reduction strategy papers and in the work of the UN country team. The main challenges were capacity development, reliable and timely data for policymaking, and adequate human and financial resources to effectively address growing demands.

Reproductive health and rights

In 2010, UNFPA supported 34 countries in setting up coordinated approaches for health supply management systems. The year saw a reduction in the number of countries experiencing supply problems for family planning and reproductive health products. UNFPA partnered with the International Health Partnership to advance the health-related MDGs and with the Harmonization for Health in Africa to tackle weak health systems, and was a technical lead in the Secretary-General’s Global Strategy for Women’s and Children’s Health.

Some countries achieved significant declines in the maternal mortality ratio, including Angola, Ethiopia, Guinea, Malawi, Mali, the Niger and Rwanda; however, overall progress was too slow to meet the MDG target. UNFPA contributed to building the international consensus on strategies to reduce maternal and neonatal mortality, providing support to 30 countries in the areas of emergency obstetric and newborn care, family planning, skilled birth attendants at delivery, and obstetric fistula. The UNFPA Maternal Health Thematic Fund represented a useful tool to support countries with the highest rates of maternal mortality and morbidity and those furthest from achieving universal access to reproductive health. UNFPA contributed to the establishment of baseline measures and the scaling up of emergency obstetric and newborn care services in Afghanistan, Benin, Burkina Faso, Burundi, Cambodia, Côte d’Ivoire, Ethiopia, Ghana, Guyana, Haiti, Liberia, Madagascar, Malawi and the Niger. The Campaign to End Fistula sought to address the needs of women incapacitated by fistula: over 6,000 cases had been repaired with UNFPA support, and the Campaign had secured attention, funds and technical assistance.

To expand family planning services, UNFPA worked on a range of activities based on the needs of the countries and the specific context. Technical support was provided to 61 countries to scale up programmes to implement the prevention of mother-to-child transmission of HIV/AIDS and service integration.

UNFPA and its partners worked to reduce new HIV infections in young people through sexuality education in schools and communities and strategic communication for behaviour change, including increasing condom use, HIV counselling and testing. It supported networks of people living with HIV in nearly 80 countries, and continued to be the largest supplier of male condoms to low-income countries and the second-largest supplier of female condoms (14 million in 2009).

UNFPA supported national partners to ensure that legislation, development frameworks, budgets and policies were gender responsive. Over 90 per cent of countries had mechanisms in place to monitor and reduce gender-based violence and there had been progress at country level, with Nepal, Sierra Leone and Uganda being assisted to develop national action plans and to launch South-South cooperation initiatives.

UNFPA and UNICEF were implementing the world's largest programme to accelerate the abandonment of female genital mutilation (FGM), a practice that was decreasing significantly in Burkina Faso, Egypt, Eritrea, Kenya, Nigeria and Senegal. The UNFPA-UNICEF collaboration led to over 6,000 communities rejecting the practice in Egypt, Ethiopia, the Gambia, Guinea, Kenya, Senegal, Somalia and the Sudan. UNFPA and UNICEF worked closely with the World Health Organization in sub-Saharan Africa and in the Arab States to ensure that medical professionals supported the abandonment of FGM. Medical care was provided to over 41,000 women and girls for FGM-related complications.

UNFPA worked on global advocacy with civil society partners to support the constructive engagement of men and boys to help achieve gender equality. An initiative was introduced to integrate reproductive rights into the work of regional human rights systems, including the Inter-American Commission of Human Rights and the African Commission of Human and People's Rights. In Belize, Bolivia, Ecuador, Guatemala, Guyana, Mexico, Nicaragua, Panama and Peru, UNFPA promoted the implementation of culturally sensitive approaches to reproductive health policies and programmes.

UNFPA continued to support the inter-agency joint programme on eliminating violence against women and implementing the five outcomes of the Secretary-General's campaign Unite to End Violence against Women. Strengthening national capacity development and providing technical expertise to national counterparts had proven effective in addressing gender-based violence; however, translating policies into action and effecting change remained major challenges in most countries.

Country and intercountry programmes

UNFPA programme expenditures for country, regional and global activities in 2010 totalled $366.2 million, compared with $347.9 million in 2009, according to the Executive Director's statistical and financial review [DP/FPA/2011/3 (Part I)/Add.1]. The 2010 figure included $285.7 million for country programmes (compared with $269.3 million in 2009) and $80.5 million for regional and global programmes (compared with $78.6 million in 2009).

Sub-Saharan Africa. Provisional data for UNFPA expenditures for programmes totalled $135.9 million in 2010, compared with $136.2 million in 2009. Most of that amount was spent on reproductive health (46.2 per cent), followed by population and development (23.3 per cent), programme coordination and assistance (17.6 per cent) and gender equality and women's empowerment (12.9 per cent).

On 22 January [E/2010/35 (dec. 2010/12)], the UNDP/UNFPA Executive Board approved the UNFPA country programme document on Uganda. On 1 July [dec. 2010/27], the Board took note of the one-year programme extensions for Cape Verde, Chad, Ghana, Mauritania, Somalia and South Africa; took note of the six-month programme extension for the United Republic of Tanzania; approved the two-year programme extensions for Namibia and Sierra Leone; and took note of the draft country programme document for Swaziland. On 2 September [dec. 2010/34], the Board approved UNFPA country programmes for Swaziland, and took note of the draft country programme documents for Burkina Faso and Zambia.

Arab States. Provisional expenditures for UNFPA programmes totalled $27.3 million in 2010, compared with $31.0 million in 2009. Most of that amount was spent on reproductive health (48.7 per cent), followed by programme coordination and assistance (21.6 per cent), population and development (16.1 per cent) and gender equality and women's empowerment (13.6 per cent).

On 1 July [dec. 2010/27], the Executive Board took note of the draft country programme documents for Iraq and the Occupied Palestinian Territory. On 2 September [dec. 2010/34], the Board approved the country programmes for Iraq and the Occupied Palestinian Territory and took note of the draft country programme document for Somalia.

Eastern Europe and Central Asia. Provisional expenditures for UNFPA programmes totalled $16.9 million in 2010, compared with $14.9 million in 2009. Most of that amount was spent on reproductive health (40.2 per cent), followed by programme coordination and assistance (30.2 per cent), population and development (18.9 per cent) and gender equality and women's empowerment (10.7 per cent).

On 1 July [dec. 2010/27], the Executive Board took note of the one-year programme extensions for Albania and Ukraine and of the draft country programme documents for Azerbaijan, Belarus, Georgia and Turkey. On 2 September [dec. 2010/34], the Board approved the country programmes for Azerbaijan, Belarus, Georgia and Turkey.

Asia and the Pacific. Provisional expenditures for UNFPA programmes amounted to $96.0 million in 2010, compared with $87.8 million in 2009. Most of that amount was spent on reproductive health (65.6 per cent), followed by population and development (18.3 per cent), gender equality and women's empowerment (9.1 per cent) and programme coordination and assistance (7.0 per cent).

On 1 July [dec. 2010/27], the Executive Board took note of the one-year programme extensions for Bangladesh, Myanmar and Viet Nam; approved the two-year programme extensions for Nepal and Pakistan; approved the second one-year programme extension for Iran; and took note of the draft country programme documents for Cambodia, China and the Democratic People's Republic of Korea (DPRK). On 2 September [dec. 2010/34], the Board approved the country programmes for Cambodia, China and the DPRK and took note of the draft country programme documents for Indonesia and Maldives.

Latin America and the Caribbean. Provisional expenditures for UNFPA programmes totalled $38.9 million in 2010, compared with $34.1 million in 2009. Most of that amount was spent on reproductive health (42.4 per cent), followed by population and development (26.7 per cent), gender equality and women's empowerment (17.7 per cent) and programme coordination and assistance (13.1 per cent).

On 22 January [dec. 2010/12], the Executive Board approved the UNFPA country programme document on Guatemala. On 2 September [dec. 2010/34], the Board took note of the draft country programme document for Uruguay.

Global programme. Provisional expenditures for the UNFPA global programme totalled $51.2 million in 2010, compared with $43.9 million in 2009. Most of that amount was spent on programme coordination and assistance (49.3 per cent), followed by reproductive health (22.8 per cent), population and development (18.5 per cent) and gender equality and women's empowerment (9.4 per cent).

Financial and management questions

Financing

UNFPA income from all sources totalled $870.0 million in 2010, compared with $783.0 million in 2009 [DP/FPA/2011/3 (Part I)/Add.1], comprising $491.2 million from regular resources, $359.3 million from other resources, interest income of $11.6 million and other income of $7.8 million. Expenditures totalled $801.4 million, up from $800.0 million in 2009, comprising $483.0 million related to regular resources and $318.3 million related to other resources, resulting in a net excess/(deficit) of $68.5 million.

At the January session of the UNDP/UNFPA Executive Board, the UNDP Comptroller presented a joint information note of UNDP, UNFPA and UNICEF on the road map to an integrated budget. Welcoming the note [E/2010/35 (dec. 2010/2)], the Board on 22 January urged UNDP and UNFPA to adhere to the proposed time frames and keep the Board informed of progress.

At its second regular session (30 August–3 September), UNDP, UNFPA and UNICEF submitted a road map to an integrated budget [DP/FPA/2010/1-E/ICEF/2010/AB/L.10]. The report included a proposal on harmonized cost definitions, classification of activities, and associated costs for review and approval.

Another proposal regarded results-based budgeting for the 2012–2013 biennium, also serving as an interim step towards a fully integrated budget submission for the period beginning in 2014.

The Executive Board on 2 September [dec. 2010/32] took note of the analysis contained in the road map; endorsed the proposed cost definitions and classification of activities and associated costs, for application effective in the 2012–2013 biennium; and requested UNDP and UNFPA to present their 2012–2013 budget documents using those cost definitions and classifications. The Board requested UNDP, UNFPA and UNICEF to reflect the new classifications in their financial statements and in their annual financial reviews from 2013 onwards so as to allow for a comparison between actual expenditures and budgets; to work towards the presentation of a single integrated budget for each organization, starting in 2014, and to align the budgets with the results in the strategic plans of the organizations; and to prepare an informal mock-up document to illustrate the format of the 2012–2013 budget for discussion at the first regular session 2011.

Internal audit and oversight

The Executive Director submitted to the Executive Board a report [DP/FPA/2010/15] on the UNFPA follow-up to the recommendations by the Board of Auditors for the 2006–2007 biennium [YUN 2009, p. 1053]. UNFPA reported that 46 of the 59 accepted recommendations of the Board of Auditors had been implemented, with the remaining 13 expected to be completed by March 2012.

The Executive Board took note of the report on 22 January [E/2010/35 (dec. 2010/9)].

The Executive Director reported on the internal audit and oversight activities carried out by the UNFPA Division for Oversight Services in 2009 [DP/FPA/2010/20], including audits of nine country offices—three in Africa, one in Eastern Europe and Central Asia, and five in Asia and the Pacific; the Division also carried out four audits at headquarters and completed two thematic evaluations.

Taking note of the report on 1 July [E/2010/35 (dec. 2010/22)], the Executive Board urged the Executive Director to improve the implementation of an internal control framework in line with internationally recognized best practices and to implement enterprise risk management.

The Board, on 30 June [dec. 2010/17], requested the UNFPA management to provide the necessary resources to support its Ethics Office, and requested the UNFPA Executive Director to appoint the head of the Ethics Office for a five-year term. The Ethics Office was requested to submit a report.

In November [DP/FPA/2011/1], the Executive Director provided an update on the implementation of the recommendations to the Board of Auditors for 2008–2009 [A/65/5/Add.7]. The report indicated the priority accorded to each of the audit recommendations and confirmed that UNFPA had implemented 31 out of the 93 recommendations.

Indirect cost recovery

In January [E/2010/35], the UNDP/UNFPA Executive Board considered a UNFPA review of the implementation of its policy on indirect cost recovery [DP/FPA/2010/16]. The report highlighted that the indirect variable costs recovered for the years 2007 and 2008 totalled $30.7 million, an average recovery rate of 7.1 per cent. UNFPA intended to engage in the discussions on cost recovery in the High-Level Committee on Management, and planned to consider further improvements in the policy for the 2012–2013 biennial support budget.

Taking note of the report on 22 January [E/2010/35 (dec. 2010/10)], the Executive Board emphasized the need to explore cost recovery broadly, including fixed and variable indirect costs.

Evaluation

In April [DP/FPA/2010/19], the Executive Director presented the UNFPA biennial report on evaluation, in response to Executive Board decision 2008/12 [YUN 2008, p. 1193]. The report, guided by General Assembly resolution 62/208 [YUN 2007, p. 877], discussed the role of evaluation within the development environment in which UNFPA worked; reviewed the performance of the UNFPA evaluation function, especially in the context of UN reform; and identified areas for improvement.

Taking note of the report on 25 June [E/2010/35 (dec. 2010/26)], the Executive Board decided to discuss the thematic evaluations of UNFPA, starting with the evaluation of the UNFPA humanitarian response at its second regular session of 2010, and requested the Executive Director to submit a review of the evaluation policy in 2012.

On 2 September [dec. 2010/33], the Executive Board requested UNFPA to revise its 2006–2009 humanitarian response strategy, to be discussed by the Board at the first regular session of 2011, and to include in its revised strategy a humanitarian results framework with clearly defined indicators, including for gender equality.

Other financial and administrative issues

In a report on funding commitments to UNFPA [DP/FPA/2010/18], the Executive Director analysed contributions by States and others and revenue projections for 2010 and future years. UNFPA found that a stable base of regular resources was necessary to enable it to support countries in implementing the ICPD Programme of Action and achieving the MDGs. As underscored in resolution 62/208 [YUN 2007, p. 877], UNFPA recognized that non-core (co-financing) resources represented an important supplement to its regular resource base.

In 2009, total UNFPA income was $762.1 million—$486.4 million in regular resources and $275.7 million in co-financing. Out of the 161 donor countries, 13 belonged to the Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development/Development Assistance Committee, and 36 programme countries increased their contributions. The top five donors were the Netherlands, Sweden, Norway, the United States and Denmark.

As at 1 March 2010, the projected regular contribution from donor countries for 2010 was estimated at $467.0 million, a decrease of $2.4 million (0.5 per cent) from 2009. Seventy-seven pledges for 2010 had been received, 31 of which were multi-year pledges.

Taking note of the report on 25 June [E/2010/35 (dec. 2010/24)], the Executive Board encouraged countries to make contributions early in the year and to make multi-year pledges.

In December [DP/FPA/2011/2], UNFPA provided an overview of its human resources management. The report covered organizational design, recruitment and staffing, promotion of staff well-being, good governance and UN reform. UNFPA restructuring had led to the creation of regional and subregional offices and increased demands on resources to provide more individualized attention. The increased risks at the country level owing to such factors as civil unrest and natural disasters had increased the need for more focused attention and dedicated resources to support country offices in complex settings.

UN Population Award

The 2010 United Nations Population Award was presented to William Henry (Bill) Gates III and Melinda French Gates of the United States in the individual category, and to the Asian Forum of Parliamentarians on Population and Development in the institutional category.

The Award was established by General Assembly resolution 36/201 [YUN 1981, p. 792], to be presented annually to individuals and institutions for outstanding contributions to increasing awareness of population problems and to their solutions. In August, the Secretary-General transmitted to the Assembly the report of the UNFPA Executive Director on the Population Award [A/65/216].

Other population activities

UN Population Division

In a later report on programme implementation and progress of work of the Population Division of the UN Department of Economic and Social Affairs (DESA) in 2010 [E/CN.9/2011/7], the Secretary-General described the Division's activities dealing with the analysis of fertility, mortality and international migration; the preparation of world population estimates and projections; the monitoring of population policies; the analysis of the interrelations between population and development; and the monitoring and dissemination of population information.

In the area of fertility and family planning, the Division organized an Expert Panel on Fertility, Reproductive Health and Development (New York, 7 December) involving four experts from academic and research institutions who presented new evidence on the development impact of fertility decline, improvements in access to family planning and other reproductive health services, and reductions of inequities in reproductive health. To raise awareness about the benefits of fertility decline and family planning and help achieve the internationally agreed development goals, the Division produced two issues of Population Facts, including "Speeding progress on the Millennium Development Goals" and "Accelerating achievement of the MDGs by lowering fertility: Overcoming the challenges of high population growth in the least developed countries". The Division, in collaboration with UNFPA, was responsible for reporting on three indicators of universal access to reproductive health that were part of the revised framework for tracking progress towards the achievement of the MDGs, namely, contraceptive prevalence, the adolescent birth rate and the unmet need for family planning.

In the area of health and mortality, the Division compiled data for the estimation of mortality together with relevant metadata, including that of infant, child and under-five mortality by sex. To raise awareness about the timing of mortality and excess male mortality over the lifespan, the Division published two issues of Population Facts: "The age distribution of deaths" and "Sex differentials in mortality". The Division contributed to the work of the Inter-agency Group for Child Mortality Estimation, led by UNICEF, whose task was to monitor progress towards the achievement of MDG 4, namely, a reduction of infant and child mortality by two thirds between 1990 and 2015. The Division also provided input into the Thematic Papers on MDGs 4, 5 and 6, prepared under the leadership of UNICEF as background information for the General Assembly High-level Plenary Meeting in September, which reviewed progress towards reaching those goals.

The Division prepared the report of the Secretary-General to the General Assembly on international migration and development [A/65/203], which highlighted that 60 per cent of the 214 million international migrants in the world lived in developed countries. As at June, 82 Member States had ratified at least one of the three key international instruments relative to the rights of migrant workers. To highlight the impact of migration on the health-care workforce of developing countries, the Division prepared an issue of Population Facts entitled "Health workers, international migration and development", which documented the shortage of health workers in developing countries and its negative impact on efforts to achieve the health-related MDGs, particularly in sub-Saharan Africa. Another issue of Population Facts focused on "International migrants by age", highlighting that 72 per cent of the 214 million international migrants were aged 20 to 64, the main working ages. With the support of UNICEF and the UNDP Special Unit for South-South Cooperation, the Division updated the web-based United Nations Global Migration Database, which contained the most complete set of statistics on the number of international migrants in each country, classified by country of birth or citizenship, sex and age.

The Division continued to prepare the official UN population estimates and projections for all countries and areas of the world. The results were distributed as part of Internet-accessible databases, including the World Development Indicators database maintained by the World Bank; the data portal of the United Nations, UNDATA, maintained by the Statistics Division of DESA; and FAOSTAT, the statistics database maintained by the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations. In 2010, the Division issued the results of the 2009 Revision of World Urbanization Prospects, which confirmed that over half of the world population lived in urban areas. Between 2009 and 2050, the world population was expected to increase by 2.3 billion, passing from 6.8 billion to 9.1 billion. Over the same time period, the population living in urban areas was projected to gain 2.9 billion, passing from 3.4 billion in 2009 to 6.3 billion in 2050. The urban areas of the world were expected to absorb all the population growth expected over the next four decades, while at the same time drawing in some of the rural population through migration and the reclassification of rural settlements as cities.

The Division issued World Population Policies 2009, covering information on policies related to population growth, fertility, health and mortality, international migration and spatial distribution; and World Population Ageing 2009, which showed that, globally, the number of persons aged 60 or over reached 737 million in 2009 and was projected to nearly triple by 2050, reaching 2 billion. Women constituted more than half of the older population. Older persons were increasingly concentrated in less-developed countries, which accounted for 64 per cent of the population aged 60 or over and would likely account for nearly 80 per cent in 2050.

Regarding monitoring, coordination and dissemination of population information, the Division continued to distribute MORTPAK, the Division's software package for demographic measurement. It maintained the website of the United Nations Population Information Network, a portal to the population information and data available throughout the UN system.

The Division's programme of technical cooperation focused on building and strengthening capacity in developing countries to analyse demographic information needed to guide the formulation and implementation of population policy. The Division organized two regional workshops aimed at strengthening national capacities to improve international migration data. The first workshop (Bishkek, Kyrgyzstan, 15–17 February) brought together more than 30 representatives of national statistical offices and relevant ministries from current and former member countries of the Commonwealth of Independent States. The second workshop (Istanbul, Turkey, 6–8 December) reviewed new initiatives to improve international migration data in the region and discussed ways of building synergies among the various initiatives. The Division collaborated with the French National Committee of the International Union for the Scientific Study of Population in developing and implementing Demopaedia, an interactive, web-based platform providing access to a set of demographic dictionaries available in 14 languages.

Social policy, crime prevention and human resources development

In 2010, the United Nations continued to promote social, cultural and human resources development, and strengthen its crime prevention and criminal justice programme.

The Commission for Social Development, in February, again considered as its priority theme “Social integration” and adopted, for the first time in its history, a draft resolution on that theme, which was endorsed by the Economic and Social Council. The General Assembly considered the implementation of the outcome of the 1995 World Summit for Social Development and of the further initiatives adopted at the Assembly’s twenty-fourth (2000) special session. It also adopted a resolution in December on cooperatives in social development ahead of the launch of the International Year of Cooperatives in 2012. Also in February, the Assembly proclaimed 21 March of each year the International Day of Nowruz.

The Twelfth United Nations Congress on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice, held in Brazil in April, adopted the Salvador Declaration on Comprehensive Strategies for Global Challenges: Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice Systems and Their Development in a Changing World. In May, the Commission on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice held a thematic discussion on protection against illicit trafficking in cultural property and considered, among other subjects, strengthening crime prevention and criminal justice responses to violence against women; the United Nations Rules for the Treatment of Women Prisoners and Non-custodial Measures for Women Offenders; realignment of the functions of the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime (UNODC); and the Twelfth United Nations Congress on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice.

In July, the Assembly adopted the United Nations Global Plan of Action to Combat Trafficking in Persons; and the United Nations Rules for the Treatment of Women Prisoners and Non-custodial Measures for Women Offenders. In October, the Assembly adopted a consensus resolution proclaiming the first week of February of every year as World Interfaith Harmony Week among all faiths and beliefs. It recognized the urgent need for dialogue among different faiths and religions in enhancing mutual understanding, harmony and cooperation among people.

In 2010, the United Nations observed the International Year for the Rapprochement of Cultures. The year also marked the end of the International Decade for a Culture of Peace and Non-Violence for the Children of the World, which began in 2001. In a November resolution, the Assembly reiterated that the objective of the Programme of Action on a Culture of Peace was to strengthen the global movement for a culture of peace, and called upon all concerned to renew their attention to the objective.

In December, the General Assembly adopted resolutions on sport as a means to promote education, health, development and peace, including the Millennium Development Goals (MDGs); culture and development, emphasizing the important contribution of culture for sustainable development; and realizing the MDGs for persons with disabilities. Also in December, the Assembly requested the Secretary-General to devote due attention to the resource requirements for meeting the mandates entrusted to UNODC; urged Member States to develop strategies, in cooperation with the United Nations crime prevention and criminal justice programme, to address transnational organized crime; and urged Member States, non-governmental organizations and the international community to continue adopting concrete practical measures to support the United Nations African Institute for the Prevention of Crime and the Treatment of Offenders. In the same month, the Assembly called upon Member States, their development partners, the international donor community, the private sector and civil society to consider the post-2012 strategy for addressing youth and adult literacy challenges.

Social policy and cultural matters

Social development

Follow-up to 1995 World Summit and General Assembly special session

In response to General Assembly resolution 64/135 [YUN 2009, p. 1058], the Secretary-General submitted a July report [A/65/168] on the implementation of the Copenhagen Declaration on Social Development and the Programme of Action, adopted at the 1995 World Summit for Social Development [YUN 1995, p. 1113], and of the further initiatives for social development, adopted by the Assembly's twenty-fourth (2000) special session [YUN 2000, p. 1012]. The report provided an overview of the discussions held during the forty-eighth session of the Commission for Social Development on the priority theme of social integration (see p. 1072). It also highlighted the Commission's deliberations with regard to the fifteenth anniversary of the World Summit for Social Development and the social consequences of the financial and economic crises and policy responses. The report recommended that at the national level, Governments should increase the participation of citizens and communities, in particular the marginalized or excluded, in the formulation, implementation and evaluation of all national development strategies and policies, which should continue to ensure the protection of core social spending on health and education as the fallout from the financial and economic crises lingered on. Governments that had not yet done so should carve out the fiscal space necessary to develop or extend systems of social protection. At the international level, Member States and the UN system should give priority to the establishment of a social protection floor, an initiative that aimed to ensure access to basic social services and the empowerment and protection of the poor and vulnerable, as an effective tool for social integration, and exchange good policies and practices. Donors and international financial institutions should provide debt relief, concessionary aid and grants to support national efforts to enhance fiscal space, in particular that of the poorer and the least developed countries; and not impose conditions that restricted the policy space of national Governments, in particular in the area of social expenditure and programmes.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 21 December [meeting 71], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Third (Social, Humanitarian and Cultural) Committee [A/65/448], adopted resolution 65/185 without vote [agenda item 27 (a)].

Implementation of the outcome of the World Summit for Social Development and of the twenty-fourth special session of the General Assembly

The General Assembly,

Recalling the World Summit for Social Development, held at Copenhagen from 6 to 12 March 1995, and the twenty-fourth special session of the General Assembly entitled "World Summit for Social Development and beyond: achieving social development for all in a globalizing world", held at Geneva from 26 June to 1 July 2000,

Reaffirming that the Copenhagen Declaration on Social Development and the Programme of Action and the further initiatives for social development adopted by the General Assembly at its twenty-fourth special session, as well as a continued global dialogue on social development issues, constitute the basic framework for the promotion of social development for all at the national and international levels,

Recalling the United Nations Millennium Declaration and the development goals contained therein, as well as the commitments made at major United Nations summits, conferences and special sessions, including the commitments made at the 2005 World Summit and at the High-level Plenary Meeting of the General Assembly on the Millennium Development Goals,

Recalling also its resolution 57/270 B of 23 June 2003 on the integrated and coordinated implementation of and follow-up to the outcomes of the major United Nations conferences and summits in the economic and social fields,

Recalling further its resolution 60/209 of 22 December 2005 on the implementation of the first United Nations Decade for the Eradication of Poverty (1997–2006),

Recalling its resolution 63/303 of 9 July 2009 on the Outcome of the Conference on the World Financial and Economic Crisis and Its Impact on Development,

Reaffirming Economic and Social Council resolution 2008/18 of 24 July 2008 on promoting full employment and decent work for all and Council resolution 2010/12 of 22 July 2010 on promoting social integration, and welcoming the decision of the Commission for Social Development to have "Poverty eradication" as the priority theme for the 2011–2012 review and policy cycle,

Noting with appreciation the ministerial declaration adopted at the high-level segment of the substantive session of 2006 of the Economic and Social Council, entitled "Creating an environment at the national and international levels conducive to generating full and productive employment and decent work for all, and its impact on sustainable development",

Noting that the decent work agenda of the International Labour Organization, with its four strategic objectives, has an important role to play, as reaffirmed in the International Labour Organization Declaration on Social Justice for a Fair Globalization and in the Global Jobs Pact, in achieving the objective of full and productive employment and decent work for all, including its objective of social protection,

Emphasizing the need to enhance the role of the Commission for Social Development in the follow-up to and review of the World Summit for Social Development and the outcome of the twenty-fourth special session of the General Assembly,

Recognizing that a people-centred approach must be at the centre of economic and social development,

Expressing deep concern that attainment of the social development objectives may be hindered by the global financial and economic crisis, as well as challenges brought about by the food and energy crises,

Recognizing the complex character of the current global food crisis and ongoing food insecurity as a combination of several major factors, both structural and conjunctural, which is also negatively affected by, inter alia, environmental degradation, drought and desertification, global climate change, natural disasters and the lack of the necessary technology, and recognizing also that a strong commitment from national Governments and the international community as a whole is required to confront the major threats to food security and to ensure that policies in the area of agriculture do not distort trade and worsen the food crisis,

Affirming its strong support for fair globalization and the need to translate growth into eradication of poverty and commitment to strategies and policies that aim to promote full, freely chosen and productive employment and decent work for all and that these should constitute a fundamental component of relevant national and international policies as well as national development strategies, including poverty reduction strategies, and reaffirming that employment creation and decent work should be incorporated into macroeconomic policies, taking fully into account the impact and social dimension of globalization, the benefits and costs of which are often unevenly shared and distributed,

Recognizing that social inclusion is a means for achieving social integration and is crucial for fostering stable, safe, harmonious, peaceful and just societies and for improving social cohesion so as to create an environment for development and progress,

1. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General;
2. Welcomes the reaffirmation by Governments of their will and commitment to continue implementing the Copenhagen Declaration on Social Development and the Programme of Action, in particular to eradicate poverty, promote full and productive employment and foster social integration to achieve stable, safe and just societies for all;

3. Recognizes that the implementation of the Copenhagen commitments and the attainment of the internationally agreed development goals, including the Millennium Development Goals, are mutually reinforcing and that the Copenhagen commitments are crucial to a coherent people-centred approach to development;

4. Reaffirms that the Commission for Social Development continues to have the primary responsibility for the follow-up to and review of the World Summit for Social Development and the outcome of the twenty-fourth special session of the General Assembly and that it serves as the main United Nations forum for an intensified global dialogue on social development issues, and calls upon Member States, the relevant specialized agencies, funds and programmes of the United Nations system and civil society to enhance their support for its work;

5. Expresses deep concern that the world financial and economic crisis, the world food and energy crises, continuing food insecurity and climate change, as well as the lack of results so far in the multilateral trade negotiations and a loss of confidence in the international economic system, have negative implications for social development, in particular for the achievement of poverty eradication, full and productive employment and decent work for all and social integration;

6. Stresses the importance of the policy space of national Governments, in particular in the areas of social expenditure and social protection programmes, and calls upon international financial institutions and donors to support developing countries in achieving their social development, in line with their national priorities and strategies by, among other things, providing debt relief;

7. Recognizes that poverty eradication, full and productive employment and decent work for all and social integration are interrelated and mutually reinforcing, and that an enabling environment therefore needs to be created so that all three objectives can be pursued simultaneously;

8. Also recognizes that the broad concept of social development affirmed by the World Summit for Social Development and the twenty-fourth special session of the General Assembly has been weakened in national and international policymaking and that, while poverty eradication is a central part of development policy and discourse, further attention should be given to the other commitments agreed to at the Summit, in particular those concerning employment and social integration, which have also suffered from a general disconnect between economic and social policymaking;

9. Acknowledges that the first United Nations Decade for the Eradication of Poverty (1997–2006), launched after the World Summit for Social Development, has provided the long-term vision for sustained and concerted efforts at the national and international levels to eradicate poverty;

10. Recognizes that the implementation of the commitments made by Governments during the first Decade has fallen short of expectations, and welcomes the proclamation of the Second United Nations Decade for the Eradication of Poverty (2008–2017) by the General Assembly in its resolution 62/205 of 19 December 2007 in order to support, in an efficient and coordinated manner, the internationally agreed development goals related to poverty eradication, including the Millennium Development Goals;

11. Emphasizes that the major United Nations conferences and summits, including the Millennium Summit, the 2005 World Summit, the High-level Plenary Meeting of the General Assembly on the Millennium Development Goals and the International Conference on Financing for Development, in its Monterrey Consensus, have reinforced the priority and urgency of poverty eradication within the United Nations development agenda;

12. Also emphasizes that poverty eradication policies should attack poverty by addressing its root and structural causes and manifestations, and that equity and the reduction of inequalities need to be incorporated in those policies;

13. Stresses that an enabling environment is a critical precondition for achieving equity and social development and that, while economic growth is essential, entrenched inequality and marginalization are an obstacle to the broad-based and sustained growth required for sustainable, inclusive and people-centred development, and recognizes the need to balance and ensure complementarity between measures to achieve growth and measures to achieve economic and social equity in order for there to be an impact on overall poverty levels;

14. Also stresses that stability in global financial systems and corporate social responsibility and accountability, as well as national economic policies that have an impact on other stakeholders, are essential in creating an enabling international environment to promote economic growth and social development;

15. Recognizes the need to promote respect for all human rights and fundamental freedoms in order to address the most pressing social needs of people living in poverty, including through the design and development of appropriate mechanisms to strengthen and consolidate democratic institutions and governance;

16. Reaffirms the commitment to the empowerment of women and gender equality, as well as to the mainstreaming of a gender perspective into all development efforts, recognizing that these are critical for achieving sustainable development and for efforts to combat hunger, poverty and disease and to strengthen policies and programmes that improve, ensure and broaden the full participation of women in all spheres of political, economic, social and cultural life, as equal partners, and to improve their access to all resources needed for the full exercise of all their human rights and fundamental freedoms by removing persistent barriers, including ensuring equal access to full and productive employment and decent work, as well as strengthening their economic independence;

17. Stresses, further, that effective participation of people in civic, social, economic and political activities is essential in order to achieve the eradication of poverty and the promotion of social inclusion; in this regard, Governments should increase participation of citizens and communities in the planning and implementation of social integration policies and strategies aimed at achieving poverty eradication, social integration and full employment and decent work for all;

18. Reaffirms the commitment to promote opportunities for full, freely chosen and productive employment, including for the most disadvantaged, as well as decent work for all, in order to deliver social justice combined with economic efficiency, with full respect for fundamental principles and rights at work under conditions of equity, equality, security and dignity, and further reaffirms that macroeconomic policies should, inter alia, support employment creation, taking fully into account the social impact and dimension of globalization;

19. Notes with interest the adoption by the International Labour Conference on 10 June 2008 of the International Labour Organization Declaration on Social Justice for a Fair Globalization, which acknowledges the particular role of the Organization in promoting a fair globalization and its responsibility to assist its members in their efforts, and the adoption by the International Labour Conference on 19 June 2009 of the Global Jobs Pact;

20. Reaffirms that there is an urgent need to create an environment at the national and international levels that is conducive to the attainment of full and productive employment and decent work for all as a foundation for sustainable development and that an environment that supports investment, growth and entrepreneurship is essential to the creation of new job opportunities, and also reaffirms that opportunities for men and women to obtain productive work in conditions of freedom, equity, security and human dignity are essential to ensuring the eradication of hunger and poverty, the improvement of economic and social well-being for all, the achievement of sustained economic growth and sustainable development of all nations and a fully inclusive and equitable globalization;

21. Stresses the importance of removing obstacles to the realization of the right of peoples to self-determination, in particular of peoples living under colonial or other forms of alien domination or foreign occupation, which adversely affect their social and economic development, including their exclusion from labour markets;

22. Reaffirms the need to address all forms of violence in its many manifestations, including domestic violence, particularly against women, children, older persons and persons with disabilities, and discrimination, including xenophobia, recognizing that violence increases challenges to States and societies in the achievement of poverty eradication, full and productive employment and decent work for all and social integration, and further recognizes that terrorism, trafficking in arms, organized crime, trafficking in persons, money-laundering, ethnic and religious conflict, civil war, politically motivated killing and genocide present fundamental threats to societies and pose increasing challenges to States and societies in the attainment of conditions conducive to social development, and that they further present urgent and compelling reasons for action by Governments individually and, as appropriate, jointly to foster social cohesion while recognizing, protecting and valuing diversity;

23. Calls upon the organizations of the United Nations system to commit to mainstreaming the goal of full and productive employment and decent work for all in their policies, programmes and activities;

24. Requests the United Nations funds, programmes and agencies, and invites financial institutions, to support efforts to mainstream the goals of full and productive employment and decent work for all in their policies, programmes and activities;

25. Recognizes that promoting full employment and decent work also requires investing in education, training and skills development for women and men, and girls and boys, strengthening social protection and health systems and applying international labour standards;

26. Also recognizes that full and productive employment and decent work for all, which encompass social protection, fundamental principles and rights at work, tripartism and social dialogue, are key elements of sustainable development for all countries and are therefore a priority objective of international cooperation;

27. Stresses that policies and strategies to achieve full employment and decent work for all should include specific measures to promote gender equality and foster social integration for social groups such as young people, persons with disabilities and older persons, as well as migrants and indigenous peoples, on an equal basis with others;

28. Also stresses the need to allocate adequate resources for the elimination of all forms of discrimination against women in the workplace, including unequal access to labour market participation and wage inequalities, as well as reconciliation of work and private life for both women and men;

29. Reaffirms its resolution 64/134 of 18 December 2009 proclaiming the year commencing on 12 August 2010 the International Year of Youth: Dialogue and Mutual Understanding, and calls upon all Member States and other relevant stakeholders, including civil society, the private sector and international cooperation agencies, to support activities at the national, regional and international levels aimed at promoting the ideals of peace, freedom, progress and solidarity among young people in order to ensure social cohesion and youth development;

30. Encourages States to design and implement strategies and policies for the creation of full and productive employment that is appropriately and adequately remunerated, and for the reduction of unemployment, and further encourages States to promote youth employment by, inter alia, developing and implementing policies and strategies in collaboration with relevant stakeholders;

31. Also encourages States to pursue efforts to promote the concerns of older persons and persons with disabilities and their organizations in the planning, implementation and evaluation of all development programmes and policies;

32. Stresses that policies and programmes designed to achieve poverty eradication, full employment and decent work for all should include specific measures to foster social integration, including by providing marginalized socio-economic sectors and groups with equal access to opportunities and social protection;

33. Acknowledges the important nexus between international migration and social development, and stresses the importance of enforcing labour law effectively with regard to migrant workers' labour relations and working conditions, inter alia, those related to their remuneration and conditions of health, safety at work and the right to freedom of association;

34. Recognizes that, since the convening of the World Summit for Social Development in Copenhagen in 1995, advances have been made in addressing and promoting social integration, including through the adoption of the Madrid International Plan of Action on Ageing, 2002, the World Programme of Action for Youth, the Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities, the United Nations Declaration on the Rights of Indigenous Peoples and the Beijing Declaration and Platform for Action;

35. Stresses that the benefits of economic growth should be distributed more equitably and that, in order to close the gap of inequality and avoid any further deepening of inequality, comprehensive social policies and programmes, including appropriate social transfer and job creation programmes and social protection systems, are needed;

36. Recognizes the importance of providing social protection schemes for the formal and informal economy as instruments to achieve equity, inclusion and stability and cohesion of societies, and emphasizes the importance of supporting national efforts aimed at bringing informal workers into the formal economy;

37. Stresses that poverty eradication policies should, inter alia, ensure that people living in poverty have access to education, health, water and sanitation and other public and social services, as well as access to productive resources, including credit, land, training, technology, knowledge and information, and ensure that citizens and local communities participate in decision-making on social development policies and programmes in this regard;

38. Recognizes that the social integration of people living in poverty should encompass addressing and meeting their basic human needs, including nutrition, health, water, sanitation, housing and access to education and employment, through integrated development strategies;

39. Reaffirms that social integration policies should seek to reduce inequalities, promote access to basic social services, education for all and health care, eliminate discrimination, increase the participation and integration of social groups, particularly young people, older persons and persons with disabilities, and address the challenges posed by globalization and market-driven reforms to social development in order for all people in all countries to benefit from globalization;

40. Urges Governments, with the cooperation of relevant entities, to develop systems of social protection and to extend or broaden, as appropriate, their effectiveness and coverage, including for workers in the informal economy, recognizing the need for social protection systems to provide social security and support labour-market participation, invites the International Labour Organization to strengthen its social protection strategies and policies on extending social security coverage, and also urges Governments, while taking account of national circumstances, to focus on the needs of those living in, or vulnerable to, poverty and to give particular consideration to universal access to basic social security systems;

41. Requests the United Nations system to support national efforts of Member States to achieve inclusive social development, in particular by fostering the eradication of poverty, full and productive employment and decent work for all and social integration, in a coherent and coordinated manner, and to promote exchanges of good practices in this regard;

42. Reaffirms the commitment to promote the rights of indigenous peoples in the areas of education, employment, housing, sanitation, health and social security, and notes the attention paid to those areas in the United Nations Declaration on the Rights of Indigenous Peoples;

43. Recognizes the need to formulate social development policies in an integral, articulated and participative manner, recognizing poverty as a multidimensional phenomenon, calls for interlinked public policies on this matter, and underlines the need for public policies to be included in a comprehensive development and well-being strategy;

44. Acknowledges the important role that the public sector can play as an employer and in developing an environment that enables the effective generation of full and productive employment and decent work for all;

45. Also acknowledges the vital role that the private sector can play in generating new investments, employment and financing for development and in advancing efforts towards full employment and decent work;

46. Recognizes that priority should be given to agricultural and non-farm sectors and that steps should be taken to anticipate and offset the negative social and economic consequences of globalization and to maximize its benefits for poor people living and working in rural areas, while paying special attention to the development of microenterprises and small and medium-sized enterprises, particularly in rural areas, as well as subsistence economies, to secure their safe interaction with larger economies;

47. Also recognizes the need to give priority to investing in and further contributing to sustainable agricultural development and microenterprises, small and medium-sized enterprises and entrepreneurship cooperatives and other forms of social enterprises and the participation and entrepreneurship of women as means to promote full and productive employment and decent work for all;

48. Further recognizes the need to pay necessary attention to the social development of people in urban areas, especially the urban poor;

49. Reaffirms the commitments made in respect of meeting the special needs of Africa at the 2005 World Summit, underlines the call of the Economic and Social

Council for enhanced coordination within the United Nations system and the ongoing efforts to harmonize the current initiatives on Africa, and requests the Commission for Social Development to continue to give due prominence in its work to the social dimensions of the New Partnership for Africa's Development;

50. Also reaffirms that each country has the primary responsibility for its own economic and social development and that the role of national policies and development strategies cannot be overemphasized, and underlines the importance of adopting effective measures, including new financial mechanisms, as appropriate, to support the efforts of developing countries to achieve sustained economic growth, sustainable development, poverty eradication and the strengthening of their democratic systems;

51. Further reaffirms, in this context, that international cooperation has an essential role in assisting developing countries, including the least developed countries, in strengthening their human, institutional and technological capacity;

52. Stresses that the international community shall enhance its efforts to create an enabling environment for social development and poverty eradication through increasing market access for developing countries, technology transfer on mutually agreed terms, financial aid and a comprehensive solution to the external debt problem;

53. Also stresses that international trade and stable financial systems can be effective tools to create favourable conditions for the development of all countries and that trade barriers and some trading practices continue to have negative effects on employment growth, particularly in developing countries;

54. Acknowledges that good governance and the rule of law at the national and international levels are essential for sustained economic growth, sustainable development and the eradication of poverty and hunger;

55. Urges developed countries that have not yet done so in accordance with their commitments to make concrete efforts towards meeting the targets of 0.7 per cent of their gross national product for official development assistance to developing countries and 0.15 to 0.2 per cent of their gross national product to least developed countries, and encourages developing countries to build on the progress achieved in ensuring that official development assistance is used effectively to help to meet development goals and targets;

56. Urges Member States and the international community to fulfil all their commitments to meet the demands for social development, including social services and assistance, that have arisen from the global financial and economic crisis, which particularly affects the poorest and most vulnerable;

57. Welcomes the contribution to the mobilization of resources for social development by the initiatives taken on a voluntary basis by groups of Member States based on innovative financing mechanisms, including those that aim to provide further drug access at affordable prices to developing countries on a sustainable and predictable basis, such as the International Drug Purchase Facility, UNITAID, as well as other initiatives, such as the International Finance Facility for Immunization and the Advance Market Commitments for Vaccines, and notes the New York Declaration of 20 September 2004, which launched the Action against Hunger and Poverty initiative and called for further attention to raise funds urgently needed to help meet the Millennium Development Goals and to complement and ensure the long-term stability and predictability of foreign aid;

58. Reaffirms that social development requires the active involvement of all actors in the development process, including civil society organizations, corporations and small businesses, and that partnerships among all relevant actors are increasingly becoming part of national and international cooperation for social development, and also reaffirms that, within countries, partnerships among the Government, civil society and the private sector can contribute effectively to the achievement of social development goals;

59. Underlines the responsibility of the private sector, at both the national and the international levels, including small and large companies and transnational corporations, regarding not only the economic and financial implications but also the development, social, gender and environmental implications of their activities, their obligations towards their workers and their contributions to achieving sustainable development, including social development, and emphasizes the need to take concrete actions on corporate responsibility and accountability, including through the participation of all relevant stakeholders, inter alia, for the prevention or prosecution of corruption;

60. Stresses the importance of promoting corporate social responsibility and accountability, encourages responsible business practices, such as those promoted by the Global Compact, invites the private sector to take into account not only the economic and financial implications but also the development, social, human rights, gender and environmental implications of its undertakings, and underlines the importance of the International Labour Organization Tripartite Declaration of Principles concerning Multinational Enterprises and Social Policy;

61. Invites the Secretary-General, the Economic and Social Council, the regional commissions, the relevant specialized agencies, funds and programmes of the United Nations system and other intergovernmental forums, within their respective mandates, to continue to integrate into their work programmes and give priority attention to the Copenhagen commitments and the Declaration on the tenth anniversary of the World Summit for Social Development, to continue to be actively involved in their follow-up and to monitor the achievement of those commitments and undertakings;

62. Invites the Secretary-General to submit to the General Assembly at its sixty-sixth session a comprehensive study on the impact of the converging world crises on social development, in particular for the achievement of poverty eradication, mindful of the discussion that will be held during the forty-ninth session of the Commission for Social Development;

63. Invites the Commission for Social Development to emphasize in its review of the implementation of the Copenhagen Declaration on Social Development and the Programme of Action the increased exchange of national, regional and international experiences, the focused and interactive dialogues among experts and practitioners and the sharing of best practices and lessons learned, and to address, inter alia, the impact of the world financial and economic crisis and the world food and energy crises on social development goals;

64. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its sixty-sixth session the sub-item entitled “Implementation of the outcome of the World Summit for Social Development and of the twenty-fourth special session of the General Assembly”, and requests the Secretary-General to submit a report on the question to the Assembly at that session.

Impact of the world crises on social development

In response to General Assembly resolution 64/135 [YUN 2009, p. 1058], the Secretary-General submitted a July report entitled “Comprehensive study on the impact of the converging world crises on social development” [A/65/174], which analysed the impact of the converging food and energy crises and the global financial and economic crisis on social development. It recommended policy measures that focused on people, social protection and sustainable growth with resilience.

On 21 December, the General Assembly took note of the study (decision 65/532).

Recovering from the economic and financial crisis: a Global Jobs Pact

In response to Economic and Social Council resolution 2009/5 [YUN 2009, p. 1062], the Secretary-General submitted a May report [E/2010/64] prepared by the International Labour Organization on recovering from the global economic and financial crisis, which reviewed national and international support to the implementation of the Global Jobs Pact [YUN 2009, p. 1062]. The report underlined how key elements of the policies that countries adopted in response to the economic and financial crisis reflected the approach of the Pact; and highlighted the efforts of the multilateral system to reorient its technical and financial assistance to address the employment and social protection needs of the most vulnerable countries and populations. The report called for stronger national employment and social protection policies and greater international policy coordination to accelerate and sustain recovery, with special attention to middle- and lower-income countries with limited fiscal space. Despite a major policy effort in many countries to counteract the downturn and prompt fast and strong recovery, job creation was lagging and new and old social vulnerabilities had increased. The main challenges were to construct a policy mix appropriate to each country and mobilize national and international support. There was a growing consensus within the development community that providing a set of programmes for minimum economic security, in the form of cash transfers and targeted employment schemes, was a vital component of strategies to reduce structural poverty. The systemic nature of the crisis was also bringing to the fore long-standing unresolved issues with the pattern of globalization. New steps were being taken to address issues of global macroeconomic coordination, regulation of financial markets, the relaunch of trade negotiations and climate change. Examining those issues in the context of employment could contribute to more coherent policymaking.

ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL ACTION

On 23 July [meeting 46], the Economic and Social Council adopted resolution 2010/25 [draft: E/2010/L.9/Rev.1] without vote [agenda item 6 (a)].

Recovering from the world financial and economic crisis: a Global Jobs Pact

The Economic and Social Council,

Concerned about the ongoing negative impacts of the world financial and economic crisis affecting all countries, which has caused employment losses and human hardship, and its impact on global poverty rates, particularly in developing countries,

Recalling the outcomes of the World Summit for Social Development, the twenty-fourth special session of the General Assembly and the 2005 World Summit,

Recalling also the ministerial declaration of the high-level segment of its substantive session of 2006 and its resolutions 2007/2 of 17 July 2007 and 2008/18 of 24 July 2008,

Recalling further General Assembly resolutions 57/270 B of 23 June 2003, 59/57 of 2 December 2004, 60/265 of 30 June 2006, 61/16 of 20 November 2006, 62/208 of 19 December 2007, 63/199 of 19 December 2008 and 63/239 of 24 December 2008,

Recalling the Outcome of the Conference on the World Financial and Economic Crisis and Its Impact on Development, and welcoming the presentation of the Global Jobs Pact by the International Labour Organization to the Economic and Social Council at its substantive session of 2009,

Recalling also that the Global Jobs Pact was adopted by the International Labour Conference on 19 June 2009 and that it is intended to promote a job-intensive recovery from the crisis and to promote sustainable growth,

Recalling further the resolution entitled “Recovering from the crisis: a Global Jobs Pact”, adopted by the Council in 2009,

1. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General entitled “Recovering from the crisis: a Global Jobs Pact”;

2. Welcomes the Global Jobs Pact as a general framework within which each country can formulate policy packages specific to its situation and priorities, and encourages Member States to continue to promote and make full use of the Pact and to implement policy options contained therein;

3. Underlines the fact that countries can harness the Global Jobs Pact to accelerate recovery and place the goals of full and productive employment and decent work for all in national and international policy frameworks, and in this regard recognizes the importance of policy coherence at all levels;

4. Welcomes efforts to integrate the policy contents of the Global Jobs Pact into the activities of international financial institutions and other relevant organizations, and in that regard notes with appreciation the initiatives undertaken by the United Nations development system to promote the Pact;

5. Requests the United Nations funds and programmes and the specialized agencies to take further into account the Global Jobs Pact in their policies and programmes through their appropriate decision-making processes;

6. Reiterates that giving effect to the recommendations and policy options contained in the Global Jobs Pact requires consideration of financing and capacity-building, and that least developed and developing countries and countries with economies in transition that lack the fiscal space to adopt appropriate response and recovery policies require particular support, and invites donor countries, multilateral organizations and other development partners to consider providing funding, including existing crisis resources, for the implementation of those recommendations and policy options;

7. Requests the Secretary-General to report to the Economic and Social Council at its substantive session of 2011 on progress made in implementing the present resolution.

Commission for Social Development

The Commission for Social Development, at its forty-eighth session (New York, 13 February 2009 and 3–12 and 19 February 2010) [E/2010/26], continued its biennial consideration of the priority theme “Social integration”. It adopted, for the first time in its history, a draft resolution entitled “Promoting social integration”, which it recommended to the Economic and Social Council for adoption (see p. 1073). The Commission also made recommendations for action by the Economic and Social Council on mainstreaming disability in the development agenda (see p. 1079); future implementation of the Madrid International Plan of Action on Ageing, 2012 (see p. 1196); and social dimensions of the New Partnership for Africa’s Development (NEPAD) (see p. 913).

The Commission held high-level panel discussions on the fifteenth anniversary of the 1995 World Summit for Social Development [YUN 1995, p. 1113] and on the priority theme “Social integration”. It also discussed policy responses on employment and the social consequences of the financial and economic crisis, including its gender dimension. In accordance with General Assembly resolution 63/153 [YUN 2008, p. 987] on the follow-up to the implementation of the International Year of Volunteers (2001), the Commission heard a presentation by the Executive Coordinator of the United Nations Volunteers on volunteerism and social inclusion. The Commission also heard a presentation by the newly appointed Special Rapporteur on disability, in connection with its review of relevant United Nations plans and programmes of action pertaining to the situation of social groups.

The Commission decided that the priority theme for the 2011–2012 review and policy cycle would be “Poverty eradication”, taking into account its relationship with social integration and full employment and decent work for all. In addition, it recommended that the officers elected to the Bureau of the Commission serve for a term of office of two years, in parallel with the review and policy cycle.

For its consideration of its priority theme, the Commission had before it a November 2009 report of the Secretary-General [E/CN.5/2010/2] on promoting social integration, prepared in response to Council resolution 2008/19 [YUN 2008, p. 1208]. The report stated that, following the World Summit for Social Development, Governments pursued a variety of approaches to fight exclusion and promote social integration. Policies focused on either promoting social and civic participation or improving economic inclusion through better access to labour markets. Such policies often targeted specific groups in an effort to implement commitments enshrined in existing international instruments. Despite those efforts, by and large national comprehensive strategies had yet to be developed and implemented. Regional and national social integration strategies were developed to tackle the most urgent priorities. For most of the developing world, the provision of basic services, including education and health care, was central to advancing social integration. In some countries, priority was given to policies designed to overcome entrenched discrimination; in others, Governments focused on improving the situation of specific, vulnerable groups. Attempts had been made to create evaluation frameworks to monitor policies that aimed to promote inclusion. The report concluded that since the World Summit, several mandates had been established to address the situation of marginalized groups. Normative frameworks, however, would not diminish discrimination, stereotyping, cultural biases, abuse and violence if they were not complemented by explicit policy measures and the strict enforcement of anti-discriminatory laws to remove barriers to social integration. The gap between the establishment of normative instruments and actual implementation had to be closed. The report recommended that, at the national level, social integration policies should be embedded in a human rights framework; emphasis should be given to expanding access to quality secondary education, particularly for girls and young women, since basic education was insufficient for integration into the globalized economy; and Governments should establish basic social protection schemes for both the formal and informal sectors so as to promote equity, inclusion, cohesion and stability in society. At the international level, the UN system should continue to facilitate an exchange of experiences and good practices on social integration; and Member States and the United Nations should continue to support the Social Protection Floor Initiative as an effective tool for social integration.

Under the agenda item entitled “Emerging issues”, the Commission discussed a Secretariat note on policy responses on employment and the social consequences of the financial and economic crisis, including its gender dimension [E/CN.5/2010/8]. The note addressed the impact of the global crisis on employment and social development, reviewed the policy responses to the crisis and initiatives taken at the national and international levels, and concluded with a set of policy recommendations.

On 22 July, the Council took note of the Commission’s report on its forty-eighth session and approved the provisional agenda and documentation for its forty-ninth (2011) session (decision 2010/242).

Other Commission reports. Other documents issued in 2010, to be considered during the Commission’s forty-ninth (2011) session, included reports of the Secretary-General on implementation of the World Programme of Action for Youth: United Nations system coordination and collaboration related to youth [A/66/61-E/2011/3]; follow-up to the tenth anniversary of the International Year of the Family and beyond [A/66/62-E/2011/4]; the provisional annotated agenda and proposed organization of work of the Commission [E/CN.5/2011/1]; implementation of the resolution on promoting social integration [E/CN.5/2011/2]; poverty eradication [E/CN.5/2011/3]; social dimensions of NEPAD [E/CN.5/2011/4]; modalities of the second review and appraisal of the Madrid International Plan of Action on Ageing, 2002 [E/CN.5/2011/7]; emerging issues: social protection [E/CN.5/2011/8]; monitoring of the implementation of the Standard Rules on the Equalization of Opportunities for Persons with Disabilities [E/CN.5/2011/9]; a note on nomination of members of the Board of the United Nations Research Institute for Social Development [E/CN.5/2011/11]; and statements submitted by non-governmental organizations (NGOs) in consultative status with the Economic and Social Council [E/CN.5/2011/NGO/1-24].

On 22 July, the Council adopted resolution 2010/14 on future implementation of the Madrid International Plan of Action on Ageing, 2002 (see p. 1196).

ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL ACTION

On 22 July [meeting 45], the Economic and Social Council, on the recommendation of the Commission for Social Development [E/2010/26], adopted resolution 2010/12 without vote [agenda item 14 (b)].

Promoting social integration

The Economic and Social Council,

Recalling the outcome of the World Summit for Social Development and of the twenty-fourth special session of the General Assembly,

Reaffirming that the Copenhagen Declaration on Social Development and Programme of Action adopted at the World Summit and the further initiatives for social development adopted by the General Assembly at its twenty-fourth special session, as well as a continued global dialogue on social issues, constitute a basic framework for the promotion of social development for all at the national and international levels,

Recalling all resolutions pertaining to social development, including General Assembly resolution 64/135 of 18 December 2009,

Reaffirming the central importance of poverty eradication and full and productive employment and decent work for all to social integration,

Recognizing that a people-centred approach must be at the centre of sustainable development in order to promote social integration and foster social harmony and social cohesion,

Recognizing also that poverty, which should be tackled in a holistic manner, as well as unemployment, and the lack of decent work opportunities, are key obstacles to social integration,

Recognizing further that social inclusion is a means for achieving social integration and is crucial for fostering stable, safe, harmonious, peaceful and just societies and for improving social cohesion so as to create an environment for development and progress,

Recognizing that, in times of economic and financial crisis, social exclusion can be exacerbated and that, therefore, policies and programmes aiming at enhancing social integration, in particular for those most severely affected, are critical,

Recognizing also that social protection is also an investment in people and in long-term social and economic development and that in this regard appropriate social protection systems make a critical contribution to meeting the development goals directed towards poverty eradication and to exerting a positive impact on economic growth, social cohesion and social development,

Recognizing further that the promotion of social and economic development remains the sovereign right and responsibility of each Member State, in a manner consistent with national laws and development priorities, with full respect for the various religious and ethnic values and cultural backgrounds of its people and in conformity with all human rights and fundamental freedoms,

1. Takes note with appreciation of the report of the Secretary-General;

2. Welcomes the reaffirmation by Governments of their will and commitment to continue implementing the Copenhagen Declaration on Social Development and the Programme of Action, in particular to eradicate poverty, promote full and productive employment and foster social integration in order to achieve stable, safe, peaceful, harmonious and just societies for all;

3. Recognizes that poverty eradication, full and productive employment and decent work for all, and social integration are interrelated and mutually reinforcing, that an enabling environment therefore needs to be created so that all three objectives can be pursued simultaneously and that policies to pursue these objectives must promote social justice, social cohesion and economic recovery and growth and must be economically and environmentally sustainable;

4. Reaffirms the importance of promoting social integration with the aim of achieving an inclusive society for all that is stable, safe, peaceful, harmonious and just and that is based on the promotion and protection of all human rights, as well as non-discrimination, tolerance, respect for diversity, equality of opportunity, solidarity, security and participation of all people;

5. Stresses that the benefits of economic growth should be distributed more equitably and that, in order to close the gap of inequality and to avoid any further deepening of inequality, comprehensive social policies and programmes, including appropriate social transfer programmes, job creation and social protection systems, are needed;

6. Recognizes that empowerment of the poor is essential for the effective eradication of poverty and hunger;

7. Also recognizes that the broad concept of social development affirmed by the World Summit for Social Development and the twenty-fourth special session of the General Assembly has not been implemented adequately at the national and international levels and that, while poverty eradication is a central part of development policy and discourse, further attention should be given to the other commitments agreed to at the Summit, in particular those concerning employment and social integration, which have also suffered from a general disconnect between economic and social policymaking;

8. Underlines the importance of adopting a coherent approach to economic and social policy in order to ensure impact, accountability and transparency and of enhancing coordination to promote the mainstreaming of social integration;

9. Recognizes that normative frameworks should be complemented by policy measures and effective enforcement, including through relevant national legislation, in order to eliminate discrimination, stereotyping, cultural biases, abuse and violence so as to remove barriers to social integration;

10. Expresses deep concern that the world financial and economic crisis, the world food crisis and continuing food insecurity, the energy crisis and climate change, as well as the lack of results thus far in the multilateral trade negotiations and a loss of confidence in the international economic system, have negative implications for social development, in particular for the achievement of poverty eradication, full and productive employment and decent work for all, and social integration;

11. Stresses that, since the convening of the World Summit for Social Development in Copenhagen in 1995, advances have been made in addressing and promoting social integration, including through the adoption of the Madrid International Plan of Action on Ageing, 2002, the World Programme of Action for Youth to the Year 2000 and Beyond and the Supplement thereto, the Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities, the United Nations Declaration on the Rights of Indigenous Peoples and the Beijing Declaration and Platform for Action, and encourages Governments to ensure the full implementation of their obligations and commitments;

12. Notes with interest the adoption by the International Labour Conference on 10 June 2008 of the International Labour Organization Declaration on Social Justice for a Fair Globalization, which acknowledges the particular role of the Organization in promoting a fair globalization and its responsibility to assist its members in their efforts, and the adoption by the International Labour Conference of the Global Jobs Pact on 19 June 2009, and in this regard recognizes that the decent work agenda of the International Labour Organization, with its four strategic objectives, has an important role to play in achieving the objective of full and productive employment and decent work for all;

13. Recognizes that sustainable social integration requires creating short- and long-term policies that are comprehensive, consistent, coordinated and complementary, especially when addressing the needs of social groups;

14. Also recognizes the need to implement comprehensive and coherent policies to create social inclusion programmes, bearing in mind that poverty is a form of exclusion that should be tackled in a holistic manner and in this regard special attention should be devoted to addressing its multiple dimensions, including the feminization of poverty, leading to further social exclusion, and the intergenerational transmission of poverty and exclusion;

15. Further recognizes that a people-centred framework for social development is critical to helping to build a culture of cooperation and partnership, and to responding to the global challenges and threats that hinder social integration, social harmony and social cohesion, in order to promote social development throughout the world;

16. Recognizes that social integration policies should be based on respect for human dignity and all human rights and fundamental freedoms, and encourages Governments to implement their social integration policies at the national and local levels, in accordance with their international human rights obligations;

17. Reaffirms the importance of the effective participation of people in civic, social, economic and political activities as an essential part of promoting social integration, and in this regard encourages Governments to increase the participation of citizens and communities in the planning and implementation of social integration policies and strategies aimed at achieving poverty eradication, social integration and full employment and decent work;

18. Recognizes that there is an urgent need to eliminate physical and social barriers with the aim of creating a society accessible for all, with special emphasis on measures to meet the needs and interests of those who face obstacles in participating fully in society;

19. Stresses that policies and strategies designed to achieve poverty eradication, full employment and decent work for all should include specific measures to promote gender equality, empowerment of women and equal access to opportunities and social protection and foster social integration for social groups such as youth, persons with disabilities and older persons, as well as migrants and indigenous peoples;

20. Reaffirms the commitment to the empowerment of women and gender equality, as well as mainstreaming of gender perspectives in all relevant policies and strategies, recognizing that these are critical for achieving sustainable development and for efforts to combat hunger, poverty and disease and to strengthen policies and programmes that improve, ensure and broaden the full participation of women in all spheres of political, economic, social and cultural life, as equal partners, and to improve their access to all resources needed for the full exercise of all their human rights and fundamental freedoms by removing persistent barriers, including ensuring equal access to full and productive employment and decent work, as well as strengthening their economic independence;

21. Recognizes that the social integration of people living in poverty should encompass addressing and meeting their basic human needs, including nutrition, health, water, sanitation, housing and access to education and employment, through integrated development strategies, and reaffirms that the provision of basic social services in these areas should be seen as a means of fighting poverty and exclusion and promoting social integration;

22. Recognizes also that the new information technologies and new approaches to access to and use of technologies by people living in poverty can help in fulfilling social development goals, and therefore recognizes the need to facilitate access to such technologies;

23. Reaffirms that social integration policies should seek to reduce inequalities, promote access to education for all, employment, basic social services and health care, including nutrition, water, sanitation and housing, and address the challenges posed by globalization and market-driven reforms to social development in order for all people in all countries to benefit from globalization;

24. Stresses the importance of eradicating illiteracy and promoting for all equal access to and opportunities for quality education, skills development and quality training as essential means for participation and integration in society;

25. Recognizes the importance of providing effective social protection to achieve equity, equality, inclusion in society and in the labour market, social justice, including solidarity among generations, stability and cohesion of societies;

26. Notes the joint crisis initiatives launched by the United Nations System Chief Executives Board for Coordination in 2009 related to the promotion of employment and social protection which aim at advocating for and advising Member States on the provision of social protection floors, boosting full employment and decent work, and public spending in ways that will support the efforts of Member States to promote more inclusive and sustainable social and economic development;

27. Urges Governments, with the cooperation of relevant entities, to develop systems of social protection and to extend or broaden, as appropriate, their effectiveness and coverage, including for workers in the informal economy, recognizing the need for social protection systems to provide social security and support labour-market participation, invites the International Labour Organization to strengthen its social protection strategies, including assistance to countries in building social protection floors and policies on extending social security coverage, and also urges Governments, while taking account of national circumstances, to focus on the needs of those living in, or vulnerable to, poverty and to give particular consideration to universal access to basic social security systems;

28. Encourages Governments to continue developing socially inclusive policies and incorporating them into national development strategies, including poverty reduction strategies, and to give due consideration to developing national evaluation frameworks for social development, including possible benchmarks and indicators to measure the social integration and well-being of the population;

29. Reaffirms that social development requires the active involvement of all actors in the development process, such as civil society organizations, including workers' and employers' organizations, as well as corporations and small and medium-sized businesses, and that partnerships among all relevant actors are increasingly becoming part of national and international cooperation for social development, also reaffirms that, within countries, partnerships among the Government, civil society and the private sector can contribute effectively to the achievement of social development goals, and in this regard stresses the importance of strong political leadership, adequate financing and technical support;

30. Encourages Governments to enable civil society institutions to participate, on a consultative basis, in the formulation, implementation and evaluation of policies related to the social development of all social groups, in order to take into account their needs;

31. Stresses the importance of a conducive international environment, in particular enhanced international cooperation, to support national efforts towards promoting social integration, including the fulfilment of all commitments on official development assistance, debt relief, market access, financial and technical support and capacity-building;

32. Invites Governments, relevant organizations of the United Nations system, regional organizations and development partners to exchange views and share information on good policies and practices for mainstreaming social inclusion into social and economic policies at the national, regional and international levels aimed at achieving equity, equality, social inclusion, protection and cohesion, and recognizes existing efforts in this regard;

33. Encourages Governments to participate fully in the discussions on social protection at the one hundredth session of the International Labour Conference in 2011 and at its preparatory meetings;

34. Requests the United Nations system to support national efforts to achieve social development, in particular, by fostering social integration at the local, national, sub-regional, regional and international levels in a coherent, coordinated and results-based manner;

35. Requests the Secretary-General to submit a report on the implementation of the present resolution to the Commission for Social Development at its forty-ninth session and to the General Assembly at its sixty-fifth session as part of the report under the agenda item entitled "Implementation of the outcome of the World Summit for Social Development and of the twenty-fourth special session of the General Assembly", and looks forward to the report of the Secretary-General that the Assembly, in its resolution 64/135, requested be submitted to it at its sixty-fifth session, which should include information related to challenges to and prospects for full implementation by Member States of the outcome of the World Summit and the twenty-fourth special session of the Assembly.

Future organization and methods of work of the Commission for Social Development

ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL ACTION

On 22 July [meeting 45], the Economic and Social Council, on the recommendation of the Commission for Social Development [E/2010/26], adopted resolution 2010/10 without vote [agenda item 14 (b)].

Future organization and methods of work of the Commission for Social Development

The Economic and Social Council,

Recalling its resolutions 2005/11 of 21 July 2005 and 2006/18 of 26 July 2006 on the future organization and methods of work of the Commission for Social Development,

Recalling also its resolution 2008/19 of 24 July 2008, in which it noted the usefulness of identifying the theme for the 2011–2012 review and policy cycle during the forty-eighth session of the Commission,

1. Recalls its decision in resolution 2008/19 to maintain the two-year review and policy cycle until the fiftieth session of the Commission for Social Development;

2. Decides that the priority theme for the 2011–2012 review and policy cycle should be poverty eradication, taking into account its relationship with social integration and full employment and decent work for all;

3. Stresses the importance of identifying relevant sub-themes within the priority theme to focus interventions and discussions and of taking into account cross-cutting issues during each session of the Commission;

4. Notes the usefulness of identifying the theme for the 2013–2014 review and policy cycle during the fiftieth session of the Commission;

5. Recommends that, in order to enhance the effectiveness of the work of the Commission, the officers elected to the Bureau of the Commission serve for a term of office of two years, in parallel with the review and policy cycle;

6. Invites all relevant stakeholders to continue to participate in the work of the Commission at an appropriately high level;

7. Decides that the Commission should keep its methods of work under review.

UN Research Institute for Social Development

During 2010, the United Nations Research Institute for Social Development (UNRISD) continued to conduct research into social and economic development, promoting a multidisciplinary approach that emphasized the social effects of development policies and the factors and contexts that shaped decision-making.

A December report by the UNRISD Board [E/CN.5/2011/10] described the Institute's activities in 2009 and 2010. The report discussed the financial situation of the Institute, which deteriorated owing largely to the financial environment. One core donor withdrew and others reduced their contributions. Efforts were made to increase and diversify funding sources, and the Institute hosted a meeting of donors in March. Reductions in staff and activities were made in response to the reduced funding. Nevertheless, activities completed under the 2005–2009 research programme led to a large number of publications and dissemination activities in the areas of social policy; gender and development; civil society and social movements; and markets, business and regulation. In response to the multiple crises confronting the global economy, the Institute convened, in November 2009, an international conference on the theme "Social and political dimensions of the global crisis: implications for developing countries". It also concluded a wide-ranging inquiry into the dynamics of poverty reduction, which culminated in the publication of its flagship report, Combating Poverty and Inequality: Structural Change, Social Policy and Politics. The Institute held extensive consultations with its constituencies in developing a new research agenda and institutional strategy for 2010–2014, which was approved by the Board in June 2010. Research planned for the coming years reflected the changed context and greater uncertainty for social development following the multiple crises in the global economy. In addition, the institutional strategy involved a strengthening of the Institute's communications activities, aimed at enhancing the relevance and impact of its research, and of its strategic resource mobilization activities, aimed at securing the Institute's financial stability through efforts to diversify and increase core and project funding. Fifty-one publications were issued by the Institute in the 2009–2010 period.

Cooperatives in social development

By resolution 64/136 [YUN 2009, p. 1065], the General Assembly proclaimed the year 2012 the International Year of Cooperatives and encouraged Member States, the United Nations and all other stakeholders to take advantage of the Year as a way to promote cooperatives and raise awareness of their contributions to social and economic development.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 21 December [meeting 71], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Third Committee [A/65/448], adopted resolution 65/184 without vote [agenda item 27 (b)].

Cooperatives in social development

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 64/136 of 18 December 2009, by which it proclaimed the year 2012 the International Year of Cooperatives and encouraged all Member States, as well as the United Nations and all other relevant stakeholders, to take advantage of the Year as a way of promoting cooperatives and raising awareness of their contribution to social and economic development,

1. Decides to convene, at its sixty-sixth session, one plenary meeting of the General Assembly devoted to the launch of the International Year of Cooperatives 2012, within existing resources;

2. Also decides to hold, prior to the plenary meeting, an informal, interactive round-table discussion among Member States, observers, organizations of the United Nations system, cooperatives and non-governmental organizations in consultative status with the Economic and Social Council;

3. Further decides that the President of the General Assembly, in consultation with Member States, should decide on the theme of the informal round-table discussion as well as which Member State should chair the discussion;

4. Decides that one representative of cooperatives, nominated by the President of the General Assembly in consultation with Member States and relevant representatives of cooperatives, shall orally present a summary of the informal round-table discussion to the General Assembly at the beginning of the plenary meeting;

5. Invites Member States to consider including representatives of cooperatives in their delegations or, as appropriate, being represented by representatives of cooperatives at the plenary meeting of the General Assembly on this occasion, as well as at the informal round-table discussion, bearing in mind the principle of gender balance;

6. Invites all Member States to consider taking action towards establishing national mechanisms, such as national committees, to prepare for, observe and follow up on the International Year of Cooperatives, in particular for the purpose of planning, stimulating and harmonizing the activities of the governmental and non-governmental agencies and organizations concerned with the preparations for and observance of the Year.

Persons with disabilities

World Programme of Action

In response to General Assembly resolutions 63/150 [YUN 2008, p. 1209] and 64/131 [YUN 2009, p. 1068], the Secretary-General submitted a July report [A/65/173] on realizing the Millennium Development Goals (MDGs) for persons with disabilities, through the implementation of the World Programme of Action concerning Disabled Persons, adopted by the Assembly in resolution 37/52 [YUN 1982, p. 981]; and the Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities, which was adopted by the Assembly in resolution 61/106 [YUN 2006, p. 785] and entered into force in 2008 [YUN 2008, p. 749].

The report stated that the multiple global crises in recent years had rolled back gains and had the potential to create obstacles to achieving development goals, including the MDGs, with serious implications for persons with disabilities. Governments had responded in various ways, taking specific policy measures and pursuing new initiatives. The challenge was to fully take into account the situations of persons with disabilities and to incorporate their needs and concerns into crisis-related adjustments, thus making responses available to everyone.

The Secretary-General stated that the commitment of the United Nations to the rights of persons with disabilities did not automatically result in their inclusion in either general or targeted MDG efforts. In that context, there was a need to ensure that all MDG targets and indicators would identify, monitor and evaluate the impact of related policies and programming on the situation of persons with disabilities. The primary tools and mechanisms for tracking MDGs must ensure that disability was “visible” in the overall framework used for allocating further funding and resources at the local, national, regional and global levels. He warned that the absence of explicit targets for disability in the MDGs represented a missed opportunity to achieve the Goals for all.

As a global monitoring mechanism, the United Nations supported efforts by Governments and civil society in four areas: monitoring; analysis; awareness-raising campaigning and mobilization; and operational activities. The Inter-Agency and Expert Group on MDG Indicators undertook analysis to monitor progress towards realization of the MDGs at the global and regional levels. The Secretary-General, however, underscored that the existing data gaps on disability within the context of MDG evaluation and monitoring continued to be a major challenge.

In addition, the report outlined progress and initiatives in mainstreaming disability into the MDGs and other development strategies by Member States, the UN system and civil society. It also discussed issues relating to the updates of the World Programme of Action, requested by resolution 63/150 [YUN 2008, p. 1209] in order to strengthen the international normative framework in line with the Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities and other internationally agreed development goals for persons with disabilities. Options for updates were detailed in annex I to the report.

The Secretary-General concluded that 2010 marked a critical juncture for ensuring that disability was included in MDG processes in the five years remaining before the 2015 target date for achieving the Goals. He made specific recommendations on improving data and statistics on disability; ensuring accessibility; and equal participation and empowerment of persons with disabilities in all aspects of MDG processes.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 21 December [meeting 71], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Third Committee [A/65/448], adopted resolution 65/186 without vote [agenda item 27 (b)].

Realizing the Millennium Development Goals for persons with disabilities towards 2015 and beyond

The General Assembly,

Recalling the World Programme of Action concerning Disabled Persons, the Standard Rules on the Equalization of Opportunities for Persons with Disabilities and the Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities, in which persons with disabilities are recognized as both development agents and beneficiaries in all aspects of development,

Recalling also its previous resolutions on the internationally agreed development goals, including the Millennium Development Goals, in which it recognized the collective responsibility of Governments to uphold the principles of human dignity, equality and equity at the global level, and stressing the duty of Member States to achieve greater justice and equality for all, in particular persons with disabilities,

Reaffirming its previous resolutions, in particular resolution 64/131 of 18 December 2009 on realizing the Millennium Development Goals for persons with disabilities and resolution 63/150 of 18 December 2008 on realizing the Millennium Development Goals for persons with disabilities through the implementation of the World Programme of Action concerning Disabled Persons and the Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities,

Encouraged by the outcome document of the High-level Plenary Meeting of the General Assembly on the Millennium Development Goals, which calls for enhanced and concrete efforts to realize the Goals for all, including persons with disabilities,

Gravely concerned that persons with disabilities are often subject to multiple or aggravated forms of discrimination and are still largely invisible in the implementation, monitoring and evaluation of the Millennium Development Goals,

Affirming that a role of the Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities, which is both a human rights treaty and a development tool, is to provide an opportunity to strengthen the policies related to the implementation of the Millennium Development Goals, thereby contributing to the realization of a "society for all" in the twenty-first century,

Affirming also that the World Programme of Action and the Standard Rules enhance the policies related to the realization of the Millennium Development Goals,

Noting that persons with disabilities make up an estimated 10 per cent of the world's population, of whom 80 per cent live in developing countries, and recognizing the importance of international cooperation and its promotion in support of national efforts, in particular for developing countries,

Concerned that the lack of data and information on disability and the situation of persons with disabilities at the national level contributes to the invisibility of persons with disabilities in official statistics, presenting an obstacle to achieving development planning and implementation that is inclusive of persons with disabilities,

1. Takes note with appreciation of the report of the Secretary-General entitled "Keeping the promise: realizing the Millennium Development Goals for persons with disabilities towards 2015 and beyond", and of the recommendations contained therein, and notes that the report contains options to update the World Programme of Action concerning Disabled Persons;

2. Notes that the Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities emphasizes the importance of international cooperation for improving the living conditions of persons with disabilities in every country, particularly in developing countries;

3. Also notes that the Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities provides comprehensive coverage of the civil, political, economic, social and cultural rights of persons with disabilities;

4. Welcomes the outcome document of the High-level Plenary Meeting of the General Assembly, entitled "Keeping the promise: united to achieve the Millennium Development Goals", particularly the recognition that policies and actions must also focus on persons with disabilities so that they benefit from progress towards achieving the Millennium Development Goals;

5. Urges Member States, and invites international organizations and regional organizations, regional integration organizations, financial institutions, the private sector and civil society, in particular organizations representing persons with disabilities, as appropriate, to promote the realization of the Millennium Development Goals for persons with disabilities by, inter alia, explicitly including and mainstreaming disability issues and persons with disabilities in national plans and tools designed to contribute to the full realization of the Goals;

6. Urges the United Nations system to make a concerted effort to integrate disability issues into its work, and in this regard encourages the Inter-Agency Support Group on the Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities to continue working to ensure that development programmes, including Millennium Development Goals policies, processes and mechanisms, are inclusive of and accessible to persons with disabilities;

7. Encourages Member States to ensure that their international cooperation, including through international development programmes, is inclusive of and accessible to persons with disabilities;

8. Calls upon Governments and United Nations bodies and agencies to include disability issues and persons with disabilities in reviewing progress towards achieving the Millennium Development Goals and to step up efforts to include in their assessment the extent to which persons with disabilities are able to benefit from efforts to achieve the Goals;

9. Calls upon Governments to enable persons with disabilities to participate as agents and beneficiaries of development, in particular in all efforts aimed at achieving the Millennium Development Goals, by ensuring that programmes and policies, namely on eradicating extreme poverty and hunger, achieving universal primary education, promoting gender equality and the empowerment of women, reducing child mortality, improving maternal health, combating HIV/AIDS, malaria and other diseases, ensuring environmental sustainability and developing a global partnership for development, are inclusive of and accessible to persons with disabilities;

10. Emphasizes the importance of the full participation and inclusion of persons with disabilities, including through information in accessible formats at all levels of policymaking and development, which is critical to informing policymakers on the situation of persons with disabilities, the barriers they may face and ways to overcome obstacles to the full and equal enjoyment of their rights, to the achievement of the Millennium Development Goals for all, including persons with disabilities, and to their socio-economic advancement;

11. Encourages international cooperation in the implementation of the Millennium Development Goals, including through global partnerships for development, which are crucial for the realization of the Goals for all, in particular for persons with disabilities;

12. Encourages Governments to develop and accelerate the exchange of information, guidelines, standards, best practices, legislative measures and government policies regarding the situation of persons with disabilities and disability issues, in particular as they relate to inclusion and accessibility;

13. Calls upon Governments to strengthen the collection and compilation of national data and information about the situation of persons with disabilities following existing guidelines on disability statistics that are disaggregated by sex and age, which could be used by Governments to enable their development policy planning, monitoring, evaluation and implementation to be disability-sensitive, in particular in the realization of the Millennium Development Goals for persons with disabilities, and invites Governments to provide, where available, relevant data and statistics to the appropriate mechanisms within the United Nations system, including the Statistical Commission;

14. Requests the United Nations system to facilitate technical assistance, within existing resources, including the provision of assistance for capacity-building and for the collection and compilation of national and regional data and statistics on disability, in particular to developing countries, and in this regard requests the Secretary-General, in accordance with existing guidelines on disability statistics, to analyse, publish and disseminate disability data and statistics in future periodic reports, as appropriate, on the realization of the Millennium Development Goals for persons with disabilities;

15. Requests the Secretary-General:

(a) To submit information on the implementation of the present resolution to the General Assembly at its sixty-sixth session, with a view to convening, within existing resources, a high-level meeting at the sixty-seventh session of the General Assembly on strengthening efforts to ensure accessibility for and inclusion of persons with disabilities in all aspects of development efforts;

(b) To provide information on best practices at the international, regional, subregional and national levels for including persons with disabilities in all aspects of development efforts;

(c) To submit during the sixty-seventh session of the General Assembly information on the progress made towards the implementation of programmes and policies related to persons with disabilities within the framework of existing Millennium Development Goals, as well as on their impact;

(d) To continue to improve accessibility and full inclusion of persons with disabilities, within existing resources, through, inter alia:

(i) Accessibility of built environments, especially the premises at United Nations Headquarters;

(ii) Accessibility of information and services, including greater accessibility of official United Nations documentation and conferences, through the use of alternative formats, such as sign language interpretation, captioning, Braille and easy-to-use texts;

(iii) Employment of persons with disabilities within the United Nations system, agencies, funds and programmes as well as regional offices;

(e) To facilitate international cooperation in research and access to scientific and technical knowledge and, as appropriate, to facilitate access to and sharing of accessible and assistive technologies, inter alia, through the transfer of technologies.

Mainstreaming disability in the development agenda

In response to Economic and Social Council resolution 2008/21 [YUN 2008, p. 1213], the Secretary-General submitted to the Commission for Social Development a November 2009 report [E/CN.5/2010/6] on mainstreaming disability in the development agenda. The report reviewed the status of disability-inclusive development cooperation within the framework of multilateral, regional and bilateral initiatives. The report stated that while disability-specific development cooperation had been established for several decades, mainstreaming disability in overall development cooperation was relatively new and ongoing, with many agencies starting such work only after the year 2000. Despite the time, energy and resources that many development agencies had invested to develop policies and guidance notes, there was still limited information on, and experience in, the implementation of disability mainstreaming. The achievement of mainstreaming at all levels remained a major challenge; further efforts were required to give meaning to the concept of mainstreaming and its realization in practice.

In order to mainstream disability in the international development agenda, specifically in the area of international development cooperation, the Secretary-General recommended that disability-inclusive policies be adopted at all levels of development cooperation in line with the international normative and operational frameworks for development cooperation, the Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities and other relevant international instruments on disability and development. He also recommended that Member States and development agencies be encouraged to continue efforts to mainstream disability in overall development agendas, to further policy development for disability-inclusive development and to operationalize disability mainstreaming in development programming; and to conduct periodic reviews and assessments, analysing the extent to which disability was effectively mainstreamed in development activities, with a view to identifying best practices and eliminating gaps between stated policy goals and the results of implementation efforts.

ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL ACTION

On 22 July [meeting 45], the Economic and Social Council, on the recommendation of the Commission for Social Development [E/2010/26], adopted resolution 2010/13 without vote [agenda item 14 (b)].

Mainstreaming disability in the development agenda

The Economic and Social Council,

Reaffirming that the Copenhagen Declaration on Social Development and Programme of Action of the World Summit for Social Development and the further initiatives for social development adopted by the General Assembly at its twenty-fourth special session, as well as a continued global dialogue on social development issues, constitute the basic framework for the promotion of social development for all at the national and international levels,

Noting that the entry into force of the Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities, which is both a human rights treaty and a development tool, provides an opportunity to strengthen the policies related to and the implementation of the Millennium Development Goals, thereby contributing to the realization of a “society for all” in the twenty-first century,

Recalling the World Programme of Action concerning Disabled Persons, the Standard Rules on the Equalization of Opportunities for Persons with Disabilities and the Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities, in which persons with disabilities are recognized as both development agents and beneficiaries in all aspects of development,

Recalling also its previous resolutions concerning persons with disabilities and the relevant resolutions adopted by the General Assembly,

Acknowledging the fact that the majority of the 690 million persons with disabilities in the world live in conditions of poverty, and in this regard recognizing the critical need to address the negative impact of poverty on persons with disabilities,

Noting that persons with disabilities make up an estimated 10 per cent of the world’s population, of whom

80 per cent live in developing countries, and recognizing the importance of international cooperation and its promotion in support of national efforts, in particular for developing countries,

Convinced that addressing the profound social, cultural and economic disadvantage experienced by many persons with disabilities, and that promoting the use of universal design, as appropriate, and the progressive removal of barriers to their full and effective participation in all aspects of development, as well as promoting their economic, social and cultural rights, will further the equalization of opportunities and contribute to the realization of a “society for all” in the twenty-first century,

Bearing in mind that the Convention provides a comprehensive normative framework, as well as specific guidance, for mainstreaming disability,

Underlining the importance of mobilizing resources at all levels for the successful implementation of the World Programme of Action and the Convention, and recognizing the importance of international cooperation and its promotion in support of national efforts, in particular in developing countries,

Recognizing that achieving the mainstreaming of disability at all levels remains a major challenge and that, therefore, further efforts are required to give practical meaning to the concept of mainstreaming and its realization in United Nations activities in the development agenda,

Welcoming the fact that, since the opening for signature on 30 March 2007 of the Convention and the Optional Protocol thereto, one hundred and forty-seven States have signed and ninety-two States have ratified the Convention and eighty-nine States have signed and fifty-four States have ratified the Optional Protocol, and one regional integration organization has signed the Convention,

Noting that, in the report of the Secretary-General, it is stated that information on and experience in the implementation of disability mainstreaming in the development agenda is limited, acknowledging that international, regional, subregional and national efforts to mainstream disability in the development agenda are relatively new and ongoing, and urging further progress in this regard,

Noting also the progress made by the Inter-Agency Support Group on the Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities and the United Nations Development Group Task Team on Disability in mainstreaming disability in the development agenda, including in the work of the United Nations agencies, funds and programmes, and urging further progress towards mainstreaming disability in their development agendas,

Recognizing that the forthcoming high-level plenary meeting to review the implementation of the Millennium Development Goals in 2010 is an important opportunity to enhance efforts to realize the Goals for all, including persons with disabilities,

Recognizing also that the annual ministerial review, which is to focus on implementing the internationally agreed goals and commitments in regard to gender equality and the empowerment of women, provides an opportunity to highlight the situation of women and girls with disabilities,

1. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General;

2. Calls upon those States that have not yet done so to consider signing and ratifying the Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities and the Optional Protocol thereto as a matter of priority;

3. Calls upon Member States to enable persons with disabilities to participate as agents and beneficiaries of development, in particular in all efforts aimed at achieving the Millennium Development Goals, by ensuring that programmes and policies, namely those aimed at eradicating extreme poverty and hunger, achieving universal primary education, promoting gender equality and the empowerment of women, reducing child mortality, improving maternal health, combating HIV/AIDS, malaria and other diseases, ensuring environmental sustainability and developing a global partnership for development, are inclusive of and accessible to persons with disabilities;

4. Encourages international cooperation in the implementation of the Millennium Development Goals, including through global partnerships for development, which are crucial for the realization of the Goals for all, including persons with disabilities;

5. Recognizes the need to promote participation, consultation, inclusion and integration of persons with disabilities and their representative organizations in mainstreaming disability in the development agenda;

6. Recognizes also the need to promote accessibility to the physical, social, economic and cultural environment, to health and education and to information and communication, for the inclusion of persons with disabilities in all aspects of development, and to take measures to make, inter alia, the environment and transport accessible to all persons with disabilities, and to provide accessible information and communications technologies;

7. Urges Member States:

(a) To mainstream disability, including the perspective of persons with disabilities, into the design, implementation and monitoring of national development policies, programmes and strategies, and in this regard calls upon the United Nations system to support, upon request, as appropriate, national and regional efforts and plans to develop methodologies and tools and to promote capacity-building and evaluation;

(b) To conduct reviews and assessments, analysing the extent to which disability is mainstreamed effectively in the development agenda, with a view to identifying best practices and eliminating gaps between policy and implementation;

(c) To conduct disability awareness-raising campaigns and education and training activities for all those involved in the development agenda, in order to promote the inclusion of persons with disabilities;

8. Encourages the United Nations system, including relevant agencies, funds and programmes, in accordance with their respective mandates:

(a) To share their best practices, information, tools and methodologies on the mainstreaming of disability in their activities, through appropriate means, and to review them periodically, in order to take a coherent and coordinated approach to disability issues within the United Nations operational framework;

(b) To conduct disability education and awareness-raising campaigns and to step up efforts to recruit persons with disabilities at all levels, including in field positions;

(c) To enhance their accountability, including at the highest levels of decision-making, in the work of mainstreaming disability in the development agenda, including in the assessment of the impact of development efforts on the situation of persons with disabilities;

9. Encourages all Member States, concerned intergovernmental organizations and international and regional organizations, civil society, in particular organizations of persons with disabilities, and the private sector to engage in cooperative arrangements that aim at providing the necessary technical and expert assistance to enhance capacities in mainstreaming disability, including the perspective of persons with disabilities, in the development agenda, and in this regard encourages the Secretariat and other relevant bodies to find improved ways to enhance international technical cooperation;

10. Urges Member States and relevant entities of the United Nations system, including its agencies, funds and programmes, and invites international and regional organizations, including regional integration organizations, as appropriate, and financial institutions to take concrete measures to mainstream disability, including the perspective of persons with disabilities and accessibility requirements, into development cooperation and development finance activities;

11. Stresses the need to enhance accountability in the work of mainstreaming disability in the development agenda, including in the assessment of the impact of development efforts on the situation of persons with disabilities;

12. Welcomes the appointment of a new Special Rapporteur on disability of the Commission for Social Development for the period 2009–2011;

13. Requests the Secretary-General to prepare a report on the implementation of the present resolution, including on the coordination of the United Nations on mainstreaming disability into all policies and activities, for submission to the Commission for Social Development at its fiftieth session.

(For information on the status and implementation of the Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities and the Optional Protocol, see p. 653.)

Follow-up to International Year of the Family

In response to General Assembly resolution 64/133 [YUN 2009, p. 1066], the Secretary-General submitted a November report [A/66/62-E/2011/4] on the follow-up to the tenth anniversary of the International Year of the Family [YUN 1994, p. 1144] and beyond, observed on 6 December 2004. The report focused on four areas: confronting family poverty; promoting intergenerational solidarity; reconciling work and family life; and collecting national and regional data on family well-being. Three major themes proposed to guide the preparations for the observance of the twentieth anniversary of the International Year of the Family in 2014 included confronting family poverty and social exclusion; ensuring work-family balance; and advancing social integration and intergenerational solidarity within families and communities. The report also reviewed family-related provisions from major human rights instruments and outcomes of UN conferences and summits, and put forward a draft framework for the preparations for the observance of the twentieth anniversary of the Year.

The report recommended that the Commission for Social Development consider supporting the themes of poverty eradication, full employment and decent work and social integration to guide the preparations for the twentieth anniversary of the International Year of the Family; and requesting Governments to report on their national activities in support of the event. Governments, the United Nations, civil society and academic institutions should share good practices and data regarding family-oriented policy development, implementation and monitoring, and family well-being; and, along with the private sector, play a supportive role in promoting the objectives of the twentieth anniversary.

Cultural development

Culture of peace

Implementation of Declaration and Programme of Action on a Culture of Peace

In response to General Assembly resolution 64/80 [YUN 2009, p. 1070], the Secretary-General transmitted an August report [A/65/299] by the Director-General of the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization (UNESCO) on the International Decade for a Culture of Peace and Non-Violence for the Children of the World, 2001–2010, proclaimed in Assembly resolution 53/25 [YUN 1998, p. 639]. The report summarized the activities carried out during the International Decade by UNESCO and other UN entities, Member States and civil society, including NGOs, to promote and implement the Programme of Action on a Culture of Peace [YUN 1999, p. 594]. In addition, it provided an assessment of the progress achieved in implementing the objectives of the Decade, as well as recommendations for future action.

The report outlined UNESCO activities in implementing the Programme of Action during the Decade in the eight action areas: education; sustainable development; human rights; equality between men and women; democratic participation; understanding, tolerance and solidarity; communication and information; and international peace and security. Other areas of action included science and natural resources management; youth; sport; and country programming. The report also reviewed the activities of the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations, the United Nations Children's Fund (UNICEF), the United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East, and the Peacebuilding Support Office of the United Nations Secretariat. At the national level, eighteen Member States, representing all regions, provided contributions to the report covering the eight action areas. Ten international NGOs in operational relations with UNESCO provided contributions in the areas of sharing information and best practices on a culture of peace, particularly education on peace and non-violence; promoting sustainable economic development; and promoting respect for human rights.

The Director-General stated that the International Decade for a Culture of Peace and Non-Violence for the Children of the World, 2001–2010 was successful in bringing the concept of a "culture of peace" to all levels and segments of society and in stimulating concrete action, as demonstrated by the numerous activities that contributed to the implementation of the Programme of Action over the course of the Decade. More than 75 million people worldwide signed the "Manifesto 2000 for a Culture of Peace and Non-Violence", pledging to promote those principles in their everyday lives. A website was also created by UNESCO to serve as a rallying point for Decade activities and as a resource centre. Furthermore, UNESCO coordinated and implemented activities to promote the objectives of the Decade at the national, regional and global levels. Apart from the relatively low level of response by Member States about their action in pursuit of a culture of peace, one of the main challenges encountered was measuring the progress of the various stakeholders in implementing action over the course of the Decade. To address that issue, the Director-General recommended that future multilateral action focus on developing specific goals, targets and measurable expected results, and on determining key implementing partners and beneficiaries; and more attention be paid to harmonizing the various international years and decades so as to reduce overlap and streamline efforts. UN country teams should also be more proactive and involved in the pursuit of the objectives of the Decade, as they were well placed to translate internationally agreed commitments into country-level action. As a result of the evolution and scope of the processes of globalization, the challenges and opportunities for peacebuilding had also changed greatly since the Programme of Action was endorsed by the General Assembly in 1998. A better understanding of those processes and their implications for peacebuilding was needed in order to develop a more effective multilateral approach to peacebuilding.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 23 November [meeting 52], the General Assembly adopted resolution 65/11 [draft: A/65/L.8 & Add.1] without vote [agenda item 15].

Implementation of the Declaration and Programme of Action on a Culture of Peace

The General Assembly,

Bearing in mind the Charter of the United Nations, including the purposes and principles contained therein, and especially the dedication to saving succeeding generations from the scourge of war,

Recalling the Constitution of the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization, which states that, “since wars begin in the minds of men, it is in the minds of men that the defences of peace must be constructed”,

Recalling also its previous resolutions on a culture of peace, in particular resolution 52/15 of 20 November 1997 proclaiming 2000 the International Year for the Culture of Peace, resolution 53/25 of 10 November 1998 proclaiming the period 2001–2010 the International Decade for a Culture of Peace and Non-Violence for the Children of the World, and resolutions 56/5 of 5 November 2001, 57/6 of 4 November 2002, 58/11 of 10 November 2003, 59/143 of 15 December 2004, 60/3 of 20 October 2005, 61/45 of 4 December 2006, 62/89 of 17 December 2007, 63/113 of 5 December 2008 and 64/80 of 7 December 2009, adopted under its agenda item entitled “Culture of peace”,

Reaffirming the Declaration and Programme of Action on a Culture of Peace, recognizing that they serve as the universal mandate for the international community, particularly the United Nations system, for the promotion of a culture of peace and non-violence that benefits humanity, in particular future generations,

Reaffirming also the United Nations Millennium Declaration which calls for the active promotion of a culture of peace,

Taking note of the 2005 World Summit Outcome adopted at the high-level plenary meeting of the General Assembly,

Welcoming the observance of 2 October as the International Day of Non-Violence, as proclaimed by the United Nations,

Recognizing that all efforts made by the United Nations system in general and the international community at large for peacekeeping, peacebuilding, the prevention of conflicts, disarmament, sustainable development, the promotion of human dignity and human rights, democracy, the rule of law, good governance and gender equality at the national and international levels contribute greatly to the culture of peace,

Noting that its resolution 57/337 of 3 July 2003 on the prevention of armed conflict could contribute to the further promotion of a culture of peace,

Taking into account the “Manifesto 2000” initiative of the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization promoting a culture of peace, which has received over seventy-five million signatures of endorsement throughout the world,

Recognizing the importance of respect and understanding for religious and cultural diversity throughout the world, of choosing negotiations over confrontation and of working together and not against each other,

Welcoming the report of the Director-General of the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization on the implementation of resolution 64/80, as transmitted by the Secretary-General,

Recalling the proclamation by the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization of 21 February as the International Mother Language Day, which aims at protecting, promoting and preserving linguistic and cultural diversity, and multilingualism, in order to foster and enrich a culture of peace, social harmony, cross-cultural dialogue and mutual understanding,

Welcoming the summary report of the meeting of the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization High Panel on Peace and Dialogue among Cultures convened by the Director-General of the Organization on 18 February 2010,

Appreciating the increased ongoing efforts of the United Nations Alliance of Civilizations in promoting a culture of peace through a number of practical projects in the areas of youth, education, media and migrations, in collaboration with Governments, international organizations, foundations and civil society groups, as well as media and corporate leaders,

Appreciating also the increased ongoing efforts of the Tripartite Forum on Interfaith Cooperation for Peace in promoting a culture of peace,

Encouraging the continued and increasing efforts and activities on the part of civil society organizations throughout the world in advancing the culture of peace as envisaged in the Programme of Action,

1. Reiterates that the objective of the effective implementation of the Programme of Action on a Culture of Peace is to strengthen further the global movement for a culture of peace following the observance of the International Decade for a Culture of Peace and Non-violence for the Children of the World, 2001–2010, and calls upon all concerned to renew their attention to this objective;

2. Invites Member States to continue to place greater emphasis on and expand their activities promoting a culture of peace at the national, regional and international levels and to ensure that peace and non-violence are fostered at all levels;

3. Encourages the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization, for which the promotion of a culture of peace is the expression of its fundamental mandate, to strengthen further the activities it has undertaken for promoting a culture of peace, including the promotion of peace education and the dissemination of the Declaration on a Culture of Peace and the Programme of Action and related materials in various languages across the world;

4. Invites the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization to consider the feasibility of creating a special fund under the Organization to cater to the country-specific projects for the effective promotion of a culture of peace;

5. Commends the relevant United Nations bodies, in particular the United Nations Children’s Fund, the United Nations Development Fund for Women and the University for Peace, for their activities in further promoting a culture of peace and non-violence, including the promotion of peace education and activities related to specific areas identified in the Programme of Action, and encourages them to continue and further strengthen and expand their efforts;

6. Encourages the Peacebuilding Commission to continue to promote peacebuilding activities and advance a culture of peace and non-violence in post-conflict peacebuilding efforts at the country level;

7. Urges the appropriate authorities to provide age-appropriate education, in children's schools, that includes lessons in mutual understanding, tolerance, active citizenship, human rights and the promotion of a culture of peace;

8. Encourages the involvement of media, especially the mass media, in promoting a culture of peace and non-violence, with particular regard to children and young people;

9. Commends civil society, non-governmental organizations and young people for their activities in further promoting a culture of peace and non-violence, including through their campaign to raise awareness on a culture of peace, and takes note that one thousand and fifty-four organizations from the civil societies of more than one hundred countries have observed the International Decade, as called for in paragraph 13 of resolution 64/80;

10. Encourages civil society and non-governmental organizations to further strengthen their efforts to promote a culture of peace, inter alia, by adopting their own programme of activities to complement the initiatives of Member States, the organizations of the United Nations system and other international and regional organizations, in line with the Declaration and Programme of Action;

11. Welcomes the efforts made by the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization to continue to enhance communication and outreach, including through the culture of peace website, along with its efforts to coordinate and implement its activities to promote the objectives of the International Decade at the regional and global levels;

12. Invites Member States, all parts of the United Nations system and civil society organizations, including the International Day of Peace Non-Governmental-Organization Committee at the United Nations, to accord increasing attention to their observance of the International Day of Peace on 21 September each year as a day of global ceasefire and non-violence, in accordance with resolution 55/282 of 7 September 2001;

13. Requests the Secretary-General to explore enhancing mechanisms for the implementation of the Declaration and Programme of Action;

14. Invites relevant United Nations bodies to continue their efforts in increasing awareness of the Programme of Action and its eight areas of action aimed at their implementation;

15. Requests the Secretary-General to submit to the General Assembly at its sixty-sixth session a report on actions undertaken to implement the present resolution and on heightened activities by the United Nations and its affiliated agencies to implement the Programme of Action and to promote a culture of peace and non-violence;

16. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its sixty-sixth session the item entitled "Culture of peace".

On 24 December, the Assembly decided that the agenda item on a culture of peace would remain for consideration at its resumed sixty-fifth (2011) session (decision 65/544).

Interreligious and intercultural understanding

In response to General Assembly resolutions 60/4 [YUN 2005, p. 1202] and 64/81 [YUN 2009, p. 1072], the Secretary-General submitted an August report [A/65/269] on intercultural, interreligious and intercivilizational dialogue, in which he highlighted the activities carried out by the main UN entities to promote dialogue among civilizations, cultures and religions. The report complemented the annual progress report of the UNESCO Director-General on the International Decade for a Culture of Peace and Non-Violence for the Children of the World, 2001–2010 (see p. 1082).

In 2010, the United Nations observed the International Year for the Rapprochement of Cultures as proclaimed by the General Assembly in 2007 in resolution 62/90 [YUN 2007, p. 1122]. UNESCO, the lead agency designated by the General Assembly, launched the Year at its Paris headquarters on 18 February. On that occasion, the Director-General of UNESCO convened a High Panel on Peace and Dialogue among Cultures, comprised of prominent political, intellectual and religious personalities from all regions of the world. The UN system carried out various activities to support the dialogue among cultures, religions and civilizations. Renewed interest in the Year was shown by Member States, who sponsored most of the activities. A special event was organized on 21 April at UN Headquarters, attended by the President of the General Assembly and the Secretary-General.

The Third Forum of the Alliance of Civilizations (Rio de Janeiro, Brazil, 27–29 May) brought together a network of several thousand political and corporate leaders, mayors, civil society activists, young people, journalists, foundations, international organizations and religious leaders. Apart from holding several plenary meetings, thematic sessions and workshops, the Forum explored cutting-edge initiatives that used imagination and creativity to build cooperation among cultures through a "Marketplace of ideas" competition, which was won by nine grass-roots projects that would be scaled up and replicated. The Rio Forum also featured a strong youth component, with 140 young participants from over 60 countries, and several significant outcomes and announcements, including the inauguration of the first two Dialogue Cafés in Lisbon and Rio de Janeiro and the negotiation, conclusion or renewal of agreements with international bodies. The Forum further established the Alliance of Civilizations as the premier global platform, anchored in the United Nations, for addressing the good governance of cultural diversity. The Rio Forum was also an opportunity for broadening cooperation between UNESCO and the Alliance through the renewal of the cooperation agreement between the two entities.

The report also summarized a wide range of educational and communication activities that continued to be undertaken by UNESCO and the UN Department of Public Information, aimed at promoting dialogue among cultures and civilizations. Another contribution of the UN system to promoting interreligious dialogue was engaging with faith-based organizations and involving them in its policy and advocacy work.

The United Nations Population Fund continued to support interreligious capacity-building and to undertake knowledge management and advocacy through its unique Global Interfaith Network on Population and Development. In March, the Joint United Nations Programme on HIV/AIDS, in partnership with the Ecumenical Advocacy Alliance, Cordaid and the International Network of Religious Leaders Living with and Affected by HIV, hosted a Summit of High-level Religious Leaders on the Response to HIV in the Netherlands. UNICEF and Religions for Peace, a global multi-religious coalition promoting common action among the world's religious communities for peace, embarked on a multi-year project to strengthen the capacity of religious communities, particularly interreligious mechanisms, to protect children affected by conflict. Projects were identified for implementation at the country level in Kenya, Liberia and the Philippines. The report also discussed the rights-based approach to the issue and the promotion of United Nations objectives through outreach and collaboration with faith-based organizations, as well as communication, awareness-raising and educational activities in that field.

Communications. On 19 May [S/2010/248], Lebanon transmitted a concept paper for the Security Council meeting [S/PV.6322] on the theme "Intercultural Dialogue for Peace and Security", to be held on 26 May in connection with the item entitled "Maintenance of international peace and security" (see p. 48).

On 21 December [A/65/664], Qatar transmitted the outcome Declaration of the Eighth Doha Conference on Interfaith Dialogue (Doha, Qatar, 19–21 October).

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 16 December [meeting 68], the General Assembly adopted resolution 65/138 [draft: A/65/L.44/Rev.1 & Add.1, as orally revised] without vote [agenda item 15].

Promotion of interreligious and intercultural dialogue, understanding and cooperation for peace

The General Assembly,

Reaffirming the purposes and principles enshrined in the Charter of the United Nations and the Universal Declaration of Human Rights, in particular the right to freedom of thought, conscience and religion,

Recalling its resolutions 36/55 of 25 November 1981, by which it proclaimed the Declaration on the Elimination of All Forms of Intolerance and of Discrimination Based on Religion or Belief, 56/6 of 9 November 2001, on the Global Agenda for Dialogue among Civilizations, 57/6 of 4 November 2002, on the International Decade for a Culture of Peace and Non-Violence for the Children of the World, 2001–2010, 57/337 of 3 July 2003, on the prevention of armed conflict, 58/128 of 19 December 2003, on the promotion of religious and cultural understanding, harmony and cooperation, 59/23 of 11 November 2004, on the promotion of interreligious dialogue, 61/17 of 20 November 2006, on the International Year of Reconciliation, 2009, 62/155 of 18 December 2007, on human rights and cultural diversity, 63/113 of 5 December 2008, on the International Decade for a Culture of Peace and Non-Violence for the Children of the World, 2001–2010, 63/181 of 18 December 2008, on the elimination of all forms of intolerance and of discrimination based on religion or belief, 64/81 of 7 December 2009, on the promotion of interreligious and intercultural dialogue, understanding and cooperation for peace, and 65/5 of 20 October 2010, on World Interfaith Harmony Week,

Recalling also its resolution 63/22 of 13 November 2008, on the promotion of interreligious and intercultural dialogue, understanding and cooperation for peace, and the leading role played by the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization in the celebration of the International Year for the Rapprochement of Cultures in 2010,

Recalling further its resolution 64/14 of 10 November 2009, on the Alliance of Civilizations, in which it welcomed efforts to promote greater understanding and respect among people from different civilizations, cultures and religions,

Bearing in mind the valuable contribution that dialogue among civilizations can make to an improved awareness and understanding of the common values shared by all humankind,

Noting that interreligious and intercultural dialogue has made significant contributions to mutual understanding, the promotion of a culture of peace and tolerance and an improvement of overall relations among people from different cultural and religious backgrounds and among nations,

Recognizing that cultural diversity and the pursuit of cultural development by all peoples and nations are sources of mutual enrichment for the cultural life of humankind,

Emphasizing the importance of culture for development in achieving the Millennium Development Goals, as stated in the outcome document of the high-level plenary meeting of the sixty-fifth session of the General Assembly,

Noting the various initiatives at the national, regional and international levels for enhancing dialogue, understanding and cooperation among religions, cultures and civilizations, which are mutually reinforcing and interrelated,

Noting also the commemoration of the International Year for the Rapprochement of Cultures in 2010,

Encouraging activities aimed at promoting interreligious and intercultural dialogue in order to enhance social stability, respect for diversity and mutual respect in diverse communities and to create, at the global level, and also at the regional, national and local levels, an environment conducive to peace and mutual understanding,

Affirming the importance of sustaining the process of engaging all stakeholders, including, in particular women and youth, in the interreligious and intercultural dialogue within the appropriate initiatives at the various levels,

Recognizing the commitment of all religions to peace,

1. Affirms that mutual understanding and interreligious and intercultural dialogue constitute important dimensions of the dialogue among civilizations and of the culture of peace;

2. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General on intercultural, interreligious and intercivilizational dialogue;

3. Notes the continuing work of the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization on interreligious dialogue in the context of its efforts to promote dialogue among civilizations, cultures and peoples, as well as activities related to a culture of peace, and welcomes its focus on concrete action at the global, regional and sub-regional levels;

4. Reaffirms the solemn commitment of all States to fulfil their obligations to promote universal respect for, and observance and protection of, all human rights and fundamental freedoms for all in accordance with the Charter of the United Nations, the Universal Declaration of Human Rights and other instruments relating to human rights and international law, the universal nature of these rights and freedoms being beyond question;

5. Welcomes the efforts made by the media to promote interreligious and intercultural dialogue, encourages the further promotion of dialogue among the media from all cultures and civilizations and emphasizes that everyone has the right to freedom of expression, and reaffirms that the exercise of this right carries with it special duties and responsibilities and may therefore be subject to certain restrictions, but these shall be only such as are provided by law and necessary for respect of the rights or reputations of others, protection of national security or of public order, or of public health or morals;

6. Encourages Member States to consider, as and where appropriate, initiatives that identify areas for practical action in all sectors and levels of society for the promotion of interreligious and intercultural dialogue, tolerance, understanding and cooperation, inter alia, the ideas suggested during the High-level Dialogue on Interreligious and Intercultural Understanding and Cooperation for Peace, held in New York on 4 and 5 October 2007, including the idea of an enhanced process of dialogue among world religions;

7. Acknowledges the holding of the Special Non-Aligned Movement Ministerial Meeting on Interfaith Dialogue and Cooperation for Peace and Development in Manila, from 16 to 18 March 2010, and notes, inter alia, the Manila Declaration and Program of Action on Interfaith Dialogue and Cooperation for Peace and Development, which highlights the importance of enhancing efforts to promote respect for the diversity of religions, beliefs, cultures and societies;

8. Calls upon Member States to consider, as appropriate and where applicable, interreligious and intercultural dialogue as an important tool in efforts aimed at achieving peace and the full realization of the Millennium Development Goals;

9. Welcomes the celebration of the International Year for the Rapprochement of Cultures marked by, inter alia, a special event held on 21 April 2010 at United Nations Headquarters, with the participation of the President of the General Assembly and the Secretary-General;

10. Takes note with appreciation of the efforts of the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization, as the lead agency for the International Year for the Rapprochement of Cultures, to promote the action plan for the celebration of the Year, and of the support of Member States and all organizations and institutions, including civil society organizations, demonstrating their firm commitment to intercultural dialogue, including interreligious dialogue, in the celebration of the Year;

11. Invites Member States, following the celebration of the International Year for the Rapprochement of Cultures in 2010, to further promote reconciliation to help to ensure durable peace and sustained development, including through reconciliatory measures and acts of service and by encouraging forgiveness and compassion among individuals;

12. Recognizes that the Office for Economic and Social Council Support and Coordination in the Department of Economic and Social Affairs of the Secretariat plays a valuable role as focal point within the Secretariat on the issue, and encourages it to continue to interact and coordinate with the relevant entities of the United Nations system and coordinate their contribution to the intergovernmental process;

13. Requests the Secretary-General to report to the General Assembly at its sixty-sixth session on the implementation of the present resolution and, in coordination with the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization, to further solicit views of Member States on the possibility of proclaiming a United Nations decade for interreligious and intercultural dialogue and co-operation for peace, building on the information contained in the reports of the Secretary-General submitted under the agenda item entitled "Culture of peace" at the sixty-fourth and sixty-fifth sessions and the relevant initiatives taken in the course of 2011.

On 21 December, by resolution 65/224 on combating defamation of religions (see p. 684), the General Assembly, among other things, urged States to take all possible measures to promote tolerance and respect for all religions and beliefs and the understanding of their value systems; and called upon the international community to foster a global dialogue to promote a culture of tolerance and peace at all levels, based on respect for human rights and diversity of religion and belief.

International Day of Nowruz

On 23 February [A/64/PV.71], the General Assembly took action on a draft resolution entitled “International Day of Nowruz”. Azerbaijan, which introduced the draft to the Assembly, stated that for over 3,000 years Nowruz had been celebrated on 21 March as the beginning of the new year by more than 300 million people around the world.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 23 February [meeting 71], the General Assembly adopted resolution 64/253 [draft: A/64/L.30/Rev.2 & Add.1] without vote [agenda item 49].

International Day of Nowruz

The General Assembly,

Reaffirming the purposes and principles of the Charter of the United Nations, in particular the achievement of international cooperation in the economic, social and cultural fields,

Recalling its resolution 56/6 of 9 November 2001 on the Global Agenda for Dialogue among Civilizations,

Recalling also the Declaration of the Principles of International Cultural Cooperation, adopted on 4 November 1966 by the General Conference of the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization,

Affirming the Universal Declaration on Cultural Diversity, adopted on 2 November 2001 by the General Conference of the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization, including its appeal for greater solidarity on the basis of recognition of cultural diversity, of awareness of the unity of humankind and of the development of intercultural exchanges,

Taking into consideration the Convention for the Safeguarding of the Intangible Cultural Heritage, adopted on 17 October 2003 by the General Conference of the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization, and recognizing the importance of safeguarding the intangible cultural heritage, inter alia, social practices, rituals and festive events, at both the national and international levels,

Considering the interdependence between the intangible cultural heritage and the tangible cultural and natural heritage,

Welcoming the inclusion of Nowruz in the Representative List of the Intangible Cultural Heritage of Humanity by the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization on 30 September 2009,

Recalling the 2005 World Summit Outcome, adopted at the high-level plenary meeting of the General Assembly on 16 September 2005, which recognizes, inter alia, that all cultures and civilizations contribute to the enrichment of humankind,

Stressing the importance of raising public awareness through education, media and cultural activities in order to foster knowledge of national cultures, world cultural heritage and cultural diversity, which are essential for strengthening global peace and implementing international cooperation,

Reaffirming that civilizational achievements constitute the collective heritage of mankind, providing a source of inspiration and progress for humanity at large,

Emphasizing the need to achieve an objective understanding of all civilizations and to enhance constructive interaction and cooperative engagement among civilizations,

Noting that Nowruz, the day of vernal equinox, is celebrated as the beginning of the new year by more than 300 million people all around the world and has been celebrated for over 3,000 years in the Balkans, the Black Sea Basin, the Caucasus, Central Asia, the Middle East and other regions,

Stressing the importance of processes of mutual cultural enrichment and the necessity of promoting civilizational exchanges, which facilitate the development of international cooperation,

Mindful of the ever-increasing significance and relevance of a culture of living in harmony with nature, which is inherent in all civilizations in today's world,

Mindful also that Nowruz, as the embodiment of the unity of cultural heritage and centuries-long traditions, plays a significant role in strengthening the ties among peoples based on mutual respect and the ideals of peace and good-neighbourliness,

Bearing in mind that the foundations of the traditions and rituals of Nowruz reflect features of the cultural and ancient customs of the civilizations of East and West, which influenced those civilizations through the interchange of human values,

Noting the orientation of Nowruz towards the affirmation of life in harmony with nature, the awareness of the inseparable link between constructive labour and natural cycles of renewal and the solicitous and respectful attitude towards natural sources of life,

1. Recognizes 21 March as the International Day of Nowruz;

2. Welcomes the efforts of Member States where Nowruz is celebrated to preserve and develop the culture and traditions related to Nowruz;

3. Encourages Member States to make efforts to raise awareness about Nowruz and to organize annual events in commemoration of this festivity, as appropriate;

4. Calls upon Member States where Nowruz is celebrated to study the origins and traditions of this festivity with a view to disseminating knowledge about the Nowruz heritage among the international community;

5. Invites interested Member States, the United Nations, in particular its relevant specialized agencies, funds and programmes, mainly the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization, and interested international and regional organizations, as well as non-governmental organizations, to participate in events organized by States where Nowruz is celebrated.

World Interfaith Harmony Week

On 20 October [A/65/PV.34], Jordan introduced to the Assembly on behalf of itself and 27 other sponsors a draft resolution [A/65/L.5] entitled “World Interfaith Harmony Week”. It was asserted that the draft resolution sought to turn the tide against the rise of religious tensions by coordinating and uniting the efforts of all the interfaith groups doing positive work through establishing one focused annual theme.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 20 October [meeting 34], the General Assembly adopted resolution 65/5 [draft: A/65/L.5 & Add.1] without vote [agenda item 15].

World Interfaith Harmony Week

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 53/243 A and B of 13 September 1999 on the Declaration and Programme of Action on a Culture of Peace, 57/6 of 4 November 2002 concerning the promotion of a culture of peace and non-violence, 58/128 of 19 December 2003 on the promotion of religious and cultural understanding, harmony and cooperation, 60/4 of 20 October 2005 on the Global Agenda for Dialogue among Civilizations, 64/14 of 10 November 2009 on the Alliance of Civilizations, 64/81 of 7 December 2009 on the promotion of interreligious and intercultural dialogue, understanding and cooperation for peace, and 64/164 of 18 December 2009 on the elimination of all forms of intolerance and discrimination based on religion or belief,

Recognizing the imperative need for dialogue among different faiths and religions to enhance mutual understanding, harmony and cooperation among people,

Recalling with appreciation various global, regional and subregional initiatives on mutual understanding and interfaith harmony, including the Tripartite Forum on Interfaith Cooperation for Peace, and the initiative “A Common Word”,

Recognizing that the moral imperatives of all religions, convictions and beliefs call for peace, tolerance and mutual understanding,

1. Reaffirms that mutual understanding and interreligious dialogue constitute important dimensions of a culture of peace;

2. Proclaims the first week of February every year the World Interfaith Harmony Week between all religions, faiths and beliefs;

3. Encourages all States to support, on a voluntary basis, the spread of the message of interfaith harmony and goodwill in the world’s churches, mosques, synagogues, temples and other places of worship during that week, based on love of God and love of one’s neighbour or on love of the good and love of one’s neighbour, each according to their own religious traditions or convictions;

4. Requests the Secretary-General to keep the General Assembly informed of the implementation of the present resolution.

Sport for development and peace

In response to General Assembly resolution 63/135 [YUN 2008, p. 1219], the Secretary-General submitted an August report [A/65/270] on sport for development and peace: strengthening the partnerships. The report reviewed the programmes and initiatives implemented by Member States and the UN system during the final year of the three-year United Nations Action Plan on Sport for Development and Peace [YUN 2006, p. 1283], in particular those implemented within the framework of the 2010 Fédération Internationale de Football Association (FIFA) World Cup in South Africa. The report presented a revised Action Plan and updates on the Sport for Development and Peace International Working Group and on the functioning of the United Nations Office of Sport for Development and Peace (UNOSDP) and its Trust Fund.

The 2010 FIFA World Cup was held from 11 June to 11 July in South Africa, marking the first time in history that the major global sport event took place on African soil and was hosted by a developing country. Recognizing a monumental moment for the sport for development and peace movement, the Secretary-General, joined by his Special Adviser on Sport for Development and Peace, represented the United Nations at the opening match, festivities and meetings of the tournament. Furthermore, the Special Adviser returned to South Africa towards the end of the tournament to continue important dialogue and key field visits.

Echoing the call by the General Assembly in its resolution 64/4 [YUN 2009, p. 1075] for the observance of the Olympic Truce during the XXI Winter Olympic Games (Vancouver, Canada, 12–28 February) and the X Paralympic Winter Games (Vancouver, Canada, 12–21 March), the President of the General Assembly on 8 February [A/64/646] appealed to Member States “to demonstrate their commitment to the Olympic Truce for the 2010 Vancouver Olympic and Paralympic Winter Games, and to undertake concrete actions at the local, national, regional and world levels to promote and strengthen a culture of peace and harmony based on the spirit of the Truce”. The Secretary-General promoted the observance of the Olympic Truce through various means, including his 8 February message [SG/SM/12737].

The inaugural plenary session of the Sport for Development and Peace International Working Group, which included the Sport and Child and Youth Development Thematic Working Group meeting, was held in Geneva on 5 May, where the Strategic Plan on Sport and Child and Youth Development was presented.

The report reviewed programmes and initiatives implemented by Member States along the four main lines of action from the Action Plan on Sport for Development and Peace: a global framework for sport for development and peace; policy development; resource mobilization; and evidence of impact. The report also outlined the activities of the UN system, including regarding the 2010 FIFA World Cup and UNOSDP. Of particular note was the first joint forum, “The Importance of Partnership”, between the United Nations and the International Olympic Committee (IOC), held in May in Lausanne, Switzerland. The report concluded with a proposed revised action plan building on the previous one, lessons learned, and challenges and opportunities identified, with the goal of understanding the ways in which sport could contribute to the achievement of the MDGs and peace-building objectives.

On 8 February, the Assembly took note of the solemn appeal made by the General Assembly President in connection with the observance of the Olympic Truce (decision 64/550).

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 18 October [meeting 32], the General Assembly adopted resolution 65/4 [draft: A/65/L.4 & Add.1] without vote [agenda item 11].

Sport as a means to promote education, health, development and peace

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 58/5 of 3 November 2003, 59/10 of 27 October 2004, its decision to proclaim 2005 the International Year for Sport and Physical Education, to strengthen sport as a means to promote education, health, development and peace, and its resolutions 60/1 of 16 September 2005, 60/9 of 3 November 2005, 61/10 of 3 November 2006, 62/271 of 23 July 2008 and 63/135 of 11 December 2008,

Taking note with appreciation of the report of the Secretary-General entitled “Sport for development and peace: strengthening the partnerships”, which reviews the programmes and initiatives implemented by States Members of the United Nations, United Nations funds, programmes and specialized agencies and other partners, using sport as a tool for development and peace,

Acknowledging the major role of Member States and the United Nations system in promoting human development through sport and physical education, through its country programmes,

Recognizing the potential of sport to contribute to the achievement of the Millennium Development Goals, noting that sport has the potential, as declared in the 2005 World Summit Outcome, to foster peace and development and to contribute to an atmosphere of tolerance and understanding, and reaffirming that sport is a tool for education that can promote cooperation, solidarity, social inclusion and health at the local, national and international levels, as declared in the outcome document of the High-level Plenary Meeting of the General Assembly on the Millennium Development Goals,

Recognizing also the need to strengthen and further coordinate efforts, including multi-stakeholder partnerships, at all levels to maximize the potential of sport for contributing to the achievement of internationally agreed development goals and national peacebuilding priorities,

Recalling its resolution 64/3 of 19 October 2009, in which the International Olympic Committee was invited to participate in the sessions and work of the General Assembly in the capacity of observer,

Acknowledging the opportunities provided by the XXI Olympic Winter Games and the X Paralympic Winter

Games, held in Vancouver, Canada, for education, understanding, peace, harmony and tolerance among and between peoples and civilizations, and the opportunities provided by the inaugural 2010 Youth Olympic Games, held in Singapore, to inspire the youth of the world to embrace, embody and express the Olympic values, as reflected in resolution 64/4 of 19 October 2009 relating to the Olympic Truce,

Acknowledging also the opportunities for development and social cohesion provided by the 2010 International Federation of Association Football World Cup in South Africa, as reflected in resolution 64/5 of 19 October 2009,

Recalling article 31 of the Convention on the Rights of the Child, outlining a child’s right to play and leisure, and the outcome document of the twenty-seventh special session of the General Assembly on children, entitled “A world fit for children”, stressing the promotion of physical, mental and emotional health through play and sports,

Recalling also article 30 of the Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities, outlining the right of persons with disabilities to take part on an equal basis with others in cultural life, recreation, leisure and sport,

Recognizing the important role played by the International Convention against Doping in Sport in harmonizing the actions taken by Governments in the fight against doping in sport, which are complementary to those undertaken by the sporting movement under the World Anti-Doping Code,

Acknowledging the recommendations contained in the final report of the Sport for Development and Peace International Working Group entitled “Harnessing the power of sport for development and peace: recommendations to Governments”, and encouraging Member States to implement the recommendations,

Recognizing the need for indicators and benchmarks based on commonly agreed standards to assist Governments to enable the consolidation of sport in cross-cutting development strategies and the incorporation of sport and physical education in international, regional and national development policies and programmes, as laid out in the final report of the Sport for Development and Peace International Working Group,

Welcoming resolution 64/289 of 2 July 2010, by which the General Assembly established the United Nations Entity for Gender Equality and the Empowerment of Women, to be known as UN-Women, and the opportunities it provides for the realization of gender equality and the empowerment of women, including in and through sport,

1. Appreciates the leadership of the Special Adviser to the Secretary-General on Sport for Development and Peace, supported by the United Nations Office on Sport for Development and Peace, on issues relating to sport for development and peace within the United Nations system and beyond;

2. Welcomes the ongoing efforts undertaken by the newly mandated Sport for Development and Peace International Working Group, which gathered for its inaugural plenary session on 5 May 2010 and the commencement of the substantive work of the first thematic working group on sport and child and youth development;

3. Invites Member States, the organizations of the United Nations system, including its peacekeeping missions and integrated peacebuilding missions, sport-related organizations, federations and associations, athletes, the media, civil society and the private sector to collaborate with the United Nations Office on Sport for Development and Peace to promote greater awareness and action to foster peace and accelerate the attainment of the Millennium Development Goals through sport-based initiatives and promote the integration of sport for development and peace in the development agenda, by working along the following principles, adapted from the United Nations Action Plan on Sport for Development and Peace, contained in the report of the Secretary-General to the General Assembly at its sixty-first session, and reaffirmed in the report of the Secretary-General to the Assembly at its sixty-fifth session:

(a) Global framework for sport for development and peace: further develop a framework to strengthen a common vision, define priorities and further raise awareness to promote and mainstream policies on sport for development and peace that are easily replicable;

(b) Policy development: promote and support the integration and mainstreaming of sport for development and peace in development programmes and policies;

(c) Resource mobilization: promote innovative funding mechanisms and multi-stakeholder arrangements at all levels, including the engagement of sport organizations, civil society, athletes and the private sector;

(d) Evidence of impact: promote and facilitate common evaluation and monitoring tools, indicators and benchmarks based on commonly agreed standards;

4. Encourages Member States that have not yet done so to designate a focal point for sport for development and peace within their governments;

5. Encourages Member States to provide institutional structures, appropriate quality standards, policies and competencies and promote academic research and expertise in the field to enable ongoing training, capacity-building and education of physical education teachers, coaches and community leaders in sport for development and peace programmes;

6. Emphasizes and encourages the use of sport as a vehicle to foster development and strengthen education for children and young persons; prevent disease and promote health, including the prevention of drug abuse; empower girls and women; foster the inclusion and well-being of persons with disabilities; and facilitate social inclusion, conflict prevention and peacebuilding;

7. Encourages the stakeholders referred to in paragraph 3 above, and in particular the organizers of mass sport events, to use and leverage such events to promote and support sport for development and peace initiatives and to strengthen existing and build new partnerships, coordinate common strategies, policies and programmes and increase coherence and synergies, while raising awareness at the local, national, regional and global levels;

8. Invites Member States and international sport organizations to assist developing countries, in particular the least developed countries, in their capacity-building efforts in sport and physical education, by providing national experiences and best practices, as well as financial, technical and logistic resources for the development of sport programmes;

9. Urges Member States that have not yet done so to consider signing, ratifying and acceding to the Convention on the Rights of the Child, the Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities and the International Convention against Doping in Sport;

10. Invites the international community to provide voluntary contributions to and to enter into innovative partnerships with the United Nations Office on Sport for Development and Peace and the Sport for Development and Peace International Working Group;

11. Invites Member States to join and support the Sport for Development and Peace International Working Group, so as to enable it to continue its work on all envisaged themes, including sport and gender, sport and persons with disabilities, sport and health, and sport and peace;

12. Requests the Secretary-General to report to the General Assembly at its sixty-seventh session on the implementation of the present resolution, including progress made by Member States towards implementation of the Sport for Development and Peace International Working Group policy recommendations and on the functioning of the United Nations Office on Sport for Development and Peace and the Trust Fund for Sport for Development and Peace, and to present an updated action plan on sport for development and peace.

Culture and development

On 20 December [A/65/PV.69], the General Assembly considered and took action on a draft resolution on the issue of culture and development.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 20 December [meeting 69], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Second (Economic and Financial) Committee, adopted resolution 65/166 [A/65/438] without vote [agenda item 22].

Culture and development

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 41/187 of 8 December 1986, 46/158 of 19 December 1991, 51/179 of 16 December 1996, 52/197 of 18 December 1997, 53/184 of 15 December 1998, 55/192 of 20 December 2000 and 57/249 of 20 December 2002 concerning culture and development,

Recalling also the adoption by the General Conference of the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization of the Universal Declaration on Cultural Diversity and the Action Plan for its implementation, on 2 November 2001, and the Convention on the Protection and Promotion of the Diversity of Cultural Expressions, as well as other international conventions of that Organization that acknowledge the important role of cultural diversity for social and economic development,

Recognizing that culture is an essential component of human development, represents a source of identity, innovation and creativity for the individual and the community and is an important factor in the fight against poverty, providing for economic growth and ownership of development processes,

Acknowledging that culture is a source of enrichment and an important contributor to the sustainable development of local communities, peoples and nations, empowering them to play an active and unique role in development initiatives,

Acknowledging also the diversity of the world, recognizing that all cultures and civilizations contribute to the enrichment of humankind, and emphasizing the importance of culture for development and its contribution to the achievement of the Millennium Development Goals,

Recognizing the linkages between cultural and biological diversity and the positive contribution of local and indigenous traditional knowledge in addressing environmental challenges in a sustainable manner,

Noting with satisfaction that, in its resolution 65/1 of 22 September 2010, entitled “Keeping the promise: united to achieve the Millennium Development Goals”, the General Assembly emphasized the importance of culture for development and its contribution to the achievement of the Millennium Development Goals and, in that respect, encouraged international cooperation in the cultural field aimed at achieving development objectives,

1. Emphasizes the important contribution of culture for sustainable development and the achievement of national development objectives and internationally agreed development goals, including the Millennium Development Goals;

2. Invites all Member States, intergovernmental bodies, organizations of the United Nations system and relevant non-governmental organizations:

(a) To raise public awareness of the importance of cultural diversity for sustainable development, promoting its positive value through education and media tools;

(b) To ensure a more visible and effective integration and mainstreaming of culture into development policies and strategies at all levels;

(c) To promote capacity-building, where appropriate, at all levels for the development of a dynamic cultural and creative sector, in particular by encouraging creativity, innovation and entrepreneurship, supporting the development of sustainable cultural institutions and cultural industries, providing technical and vocational training for culture professionals and increasing employment opportunities in the cultural and creative sector for sustained, inclusive and equitable economic growth and development;

(d) To actively support the emergence of local markets for cultural goods and services and to facilitate the effective and licit access of such goods and services to international markets, taking into account the expanding range of cultural consumption and, for States parties to it, the provisions of the Convention on the Protection and Promotion of the Diversity of Cultural Expressions;

(e) To preserve and maintain local and indigenous traditional knowledge and community practices of environmental management, which are valuable examples of culture as a vehicle for environmental sustainability and sustainable development, and to foster synergies between modern science and local and indigenous knowledge;

(f) To support national legal frameworks and policies for the protection and preservation of cultural heritage and cultural property, the fight against illicit trafficking in cultural property and the return of cultural property, in accordance with national legislation and applicable international legal frameworks, including by promoting international cooperation to prevent the misappropriation of cultural heritage and products, recognizing the importance of intellectual property rights in sustaining those involved in cultural creativity;

3. Encourages all Member States, intergovernmental bodies, organizations of the United Nations system, relevant non-governmental organizations and all relevant stakeholders to enhance international cooperation in supporting the efforts of developing countries for the development and consolidation of cultural industries, cultural tourism and culture-related microenterprises and to assist those countries in developing the necessary infrastructure and skills, as well as in mastering information and communications technologies and gaining access to new technologies on mutually agreed terms;

4. Invites the organizations of the United Nations system, in particular the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization, to assist Member States, upon their request, in developing their national capacities to assess how best to optimize the contribution of culture to development, including through information-sharing, exchange of best practices, data collection, research and study, and the use of appropriate evaluation indicators, in accordance with their national priorities and taking into account relevant General Assembly resolutions;

5. Encourages the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization, in conjunction, as appropriate, with other relevant United Nations bodies and multilateral development institutions, to continue to provide support and to facilitate financing, as appropriate, upon request, to developing countries, in particular with regard to national capacity-building for the implementation of applicable international cultural conventions, taking into account the relevant General Assembly resolutions and the Millennium Development Goals;

6. Requests the Secretary-General to ensure that United Nations country teams further integrate and mainstream culture into their programming exercises, in particular United Nations Development Assistance Frameworks, in consultation with relevant national authorities, when assisting countries in the pursuit of their development objectives;

7. Also requests the Secretary-General, in consultation with the Director-General of the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization and relevant United Nations bodies and multilateral development institutions, to submit to the General Assembly at its sixty-sixth session a progress report on the implementation of the present resolution and to include therein an assessment of the value and desirability of organizing a United Nations conference on culture and development, including its aim, level, format and timing, as well as budgetary implications.

Cultural property

Trafficking in cultural property

Pursuant to Economic and Social Council resolution 2008/23 [YUN 2008, p. 1221], the Commission on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice had before it a February report by the Secretary-General on protection against trafficking in cultural property [E/CN.15/2010/4]. The report analysed replies received from 16 Member States on their efforts to implement that resolution; reviewed information provided by Austria, Bolivia and Egypt on national measures taken to prevent trafficking in cultural property, in the context of the meeting of the expert group on protection against trafficking in cultural property (Vienna, 24–26 November 2009) (see below); and reviewed UNODC technical assistance and data collection activities. Member States provided information on activities undertaken with regard to legislation and procedures to protect cultural property and prevent its trafficking; measures to facilitate the identification of cultural property, prevent the transfer of illicitly acquired or illegally obtained cultural property; national coordination; and international cooperation and instruments.

The Secretary-General concluded that, since only 16 Member States had responded to his request for information, it was not possible to determine the level of implementation of Council resolution 2008/23. Several measures were necessary to increase the protection of cultural property and the prevention of its trafficking, and the Commission invited States to consider establishing inventories, lists of cultural property, databases and/or passports to develop a sound basis for the identification of cultural property and claims for restitution and return; imposing licensing requirements for cultural property intended for export; convening joint training seminars involving police officers, border police officers, museum staff, members of the media and other relevant actors to promote greater understanding and cooperation; increasing security and monitoring of vulnerable sites; promoting cooperation between States at the bilateral, regional and international levels; strengthening international mechanisms for return and restitution, and the conclusion of bilateral and regional agreements on exchange of information and return and restitution of cultural property; and promoting data exchange and information-sharing to increase the information available with respect to trafficking in cultural property at the global level.

Expert group meeting. The Commission on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice had before it a December 2009 Secretariat note [E/CN.15/2010/5], which outlined the recommendations of the meeting of the expert group on protection against trafficking in cultural property (Vienna, 24–26 November 2009) with regard to international instruments; prevention; criminalization; cooperation; awareness-raising, capacity-building and technical assistance; and the use of new technologies.

Commission action. At its May session [E/2010/30], the Commission on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice recommended a draft resolution for adoption by the Economic and Social Council on crime prevention and criminal justice responses to protect cultural property, especially with regard to its trafficking (see below).

ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL ACTION

On 22 July [meeting 45], the Economic and Social Council, on the recommendation of the Commission on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice [E/2010/30], adopted resolution 2010/19 without vote [agenda item 14 (d)].

Crime prevention and criminal justice responses to protect cultural property, especially with regard to its trafficking

Reaffirming its resolution 2003/29 of 22 July 2003 entitled “Prevention of crimes that infringe on the cultural heritage of peoples in the form of movable property” and its resolutions 2004/34 of 21 July 2004 and 2008/23 of 24 July 2008 entitled “Protection against trafficking in cultural property”,

Recalling General Assembly resolutions 58/17 of 3 December 2003, 61/52 of 4 December 2006 and 64/78 of 7 December 2009 on the return or restitution of cultural property to the countries of origin, as well as other relevant United Nations resolutions,

Recalling also the role of the Commission on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice in crime prevention and criminal justice responses to trafficking in cultural property, as well as the role of the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization in the field of cultural property,

Recalling further the need for continued technical cooperation between the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime and the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization within their respective mandates,

Recalling the Convention on the Means of Prohibiting and Preventing the Illicit Import, Export and Transfer of Ownership of Cultural Property, adopted by the General Conference of the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization on 14 November 1970, the Convention on Stolen or Illegally Exported Cultural Objects, adopted by the International Institute for the Unification of Private Law on 24 June 1995, and the Convention for the Protection of Cultural Property in the Event of Armed Conflict, adopted on 14 May 1954, and the two Protocols thereto, adopted on 14 May 1954 and 26 March 1999, as well as regional instruments such as the Convention on the Protection of the Archeological, Historical, and Artistic Heritage of the American Nations, adopted by the General Assembly of the Organization of American States on 16 June 1976, and the revised European Convention on the Protection of the Archaeological Heritage, signed on 16 January 1992, where applicable, and emphasizing the importance for States of protecting and preserving their cultural heritage in accordance with such relevant international instruments,

Reiterating the significance of cultural property as part of the common heritage of humankind and as unique and important testimony of the culture and identity of peoples and the necessity of protecting it, and reaffirming in that regard the need to strengthen international cooperation in preventing, prosecuting and punishing all aspects of trafficking in cultural property,

Expressing concern that, notwithstanding its significance as part of the cultural heritage of humankind, cultural property is too often considered as mere merchandise, which not only deprives it of its cultural, historical and symbolic essence but also encourages activities that lead to its loss, destruction, removal, theft and trafficking,

Observing that cultural property is increasingly being sold through markets, including in auctions, in particular over the Internet, which gives rise to the need for effective measures, including, where appropriate, regulations in accordance with national and applicable international laws, to prevent the transfer of ownership of cultural property acquired illicitly,

Conscious of the importance of promoting public-private partnerships to address trafficking in cultural property, while bearing in mind the role of technical assistance,

Recalling the deliberations of the Twelfth United Nations Congress on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice, held in Salvador, Brazil, from 12 to 19 April 2010, and the Salvador Declaration on Comprehensive Strategies for Global Challenges: Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice Systems and Their Development in a Changing World, in which the Congress welcomed the decision of the Commission on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice to engage in a thematic debate on protection against trafficking in cultural property, as well as the recommendations made by the open-ended intergovernmental expert group on protection against trafficking in cultural property at its meeting, held in Vienna from 24 to 26 November 2009, and invited the Commission to conduct appropriate follow-up, including exploring the need for guidelines for crime prevention with respect to trafficking in cultural property,

Recalling also that in the Salvador Declaration the Twelfth Congress urged States that had not yet done so to develop effective legislation to prevent, prosecute and punish trafficking in cultural property in any of its forms and to strengthen international cooperation and technical assistance in this area, including the recovery and return of cultural property, bearing in mind the existing relevant international instruments, including the United Nations Convention against Transnational Organized Crime, where appropriate,

Taking note with appreciation of the report of the Secretary-General on protection against trafficking in cultural property,

Alarmed at the growing involvement of organized criminal groups in all aspects of trafficking in cultural property, and underscoring in that regard the potential utility of the United Nations Convention against Transnational Organized Crime in reinforcing international cooperation in the fight against trafficking in cultural property, including its illicit removal from the countries of origin, through, inter alia, mutual legal assistance, extradition and the recovery of the proceeds of crime,

Desiring to raise awareness among all States concerning the frequent difficulty of demonstrating the circumstances, place, time and manner of the theft and pillage of cultural property, and recognizing the importance of providing the most extensive international cooperation consistent with applicable international instruments and mechanisms,

Recognizing the need to strengthen and fully implement mechanisms for the recovery and return of cultural property that has been stolen or trafficked, as well as those for its protection and preservation, where appropriate,

1. Welcomes the report of the meeting of the expert group on protection against trafficking in cultural property, held in Vienna from 24 to 26 November 2009 in accordance with resolution 2008/23, and invites Member States to provide adequate follow-up to the recommendations of the expert group on prevention, criminalization, cooperation and awareness-raising, capacity-building and technical assistance, as well as the use of new technologies;

2. Requests the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime, in accordance with its mandate, as a complement to existing work and in close cooperation with the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization and other competent international organizations, to provide appropriate follow-up to the recommendations of the expert group and to convene at least one additional open-ended intergovernmental expert group meeting to submit to the Commission on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice, at its twenty-second session, practical proposals for implementing, where appropriate, those recommendations, giving due attention to aspects of criminalization, international cooperation and mutual legal assistance;

3. Invites Member States to take appropriate measures to prevent cultural property from being trafficked, and notes in that regard the need for adequate technical assistance;

4. Urges Member States and relevant institutions, as appropriate, to reinforce and fully implement mechanisms to strengthen international cooperation, including mutual legal assistance, in order to combat all forms and aspects of trafficking in cultural property, as well as to facilitate the recovery and return of such property;

5. Urges Member States to take effective measures to prevent illicitly acquired cultural property from being transferred, especially through auctions, including over the Internet, and to effect its recovery and return to its rightful owners;

6. Also urges Member States to protect cultural property and prevent trafficking in such property by introducing appropriate legislation, including, in particular, procedures for its seizure, recovery and return, as well as by promoting education, launching awareness-raising campaigns, locating and inventorying such property, adopting adequate security measures, developing the capacities and human resources of monitoring institutions such as the police, customs services and the tourism sector, involving the media and disseminating information on the theft and pillaging of cultural property;

7. Takes note of the model treaty for the prevention of crimes that infringe on the cultural heritage of peoples in the form of movable property, adopted by the Eighth United Nations Congress on the Prevention of Crime and the Treatment of Offenders and welcomed by the General Assembly in its resolution 45/121 of 14 December 1990, and invites Member States to continue to submit in writing their views on the model treaty, including on its potential utility and whether any improvements to it should be considered;

8. Invites Member States to consider reviewing their legal frameworks, as appropriate, with a view to providing the most extensive international cooperation possible to fully address the situation of cultural property being trafficked through clandestine activities;

9. Encourages Member States to take all appropriate measures aimed at maximizing transparency in the activities of traders in cultural property;

10. Urges Member States to continue to strengthen cooperation and mutual legal assistance for the prevention, prosecution and punishment of crimes against cultural property that is part of the cultural heritage of peoples, and in that regard invites them to consider ratifying and implementing the relevant international instruments, including, as appropriate, the United Nations Convention against Transnational Organized Crime;

11. Urges all States that have not yet ratified or acceded to the Convention for the Protection of Cultural Property in the Event of Armed Conflict to consider doing so, and urges States parties to the Convention to fully implement its provisions, in particular articles 4 and 5, whereby States parties undertake to respect cultural property situated within their own territory or within the territory of other parties, including territories occupied in whole or in part by them;

12. Considers that the United Nations Convention against Transnational Organized Crime and the United Nations Convention against Corruption should be fully used for the purpose of strengthening the fight against trafficking in cultural property, including by exploring other possible normative developments, when appropriate;

13. Requests the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime to join the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization and other relevant international organizations in promoting and organizing meetings, seminars and similar events to which the Office can contribute as regards the crime prevention and criminal justice aspects of protection against trafficking in cultural property;

14. Invites Member States to hold regional and sub-regional meetings in all regions on the subject of protection against trafficking in cultural property;

15. Also invites Member States to consider trafficking in cultural property a serious crime;

16. Requests the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime, in accordance with its mandate and in close cooperation with the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization and other competent international organizations, to further explore the development of specific guidelines for crime prevention with respect to trafficking in cultural property;

17. Encourages the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime to continue to contribute to the cooperative network established among the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization, the International Council of Museums, the International Criminal Police Organization (INTERPOL), the International Institute for the Unification of Private Law and the World Customs Organization in the areas of trafficking in cultural property and its recovery and return;

18. Requests the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime, in consultation with Member States and in accordance with its mandate and in close cooperation with the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization and other competent international organizations, to explore possibilities for the collection, analysis and dissemination of relevant data, specifically addressing the relevant aspects of trafficking in cultural property;

19. Invites Member States and other donors to provide extrabudgetary resources, where necessary and in accordance with the rules and procedures of the United Nations, for the implementation of the relevant paragraphs of the present resolution;

20. Requests the Secretary-General to report to the Commission on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice at its twenty-first session on the implementation of the present resolution.

Crime prevention and criminal justice

Twelfth United Nations Crime Congress

The Twelfth United Nations Congress on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice (Salvador, Brazil, 12–19 April) [A/CONF.213/18] adopted the Salvador Declaration on Comprehensive Strategies for Global Challenges: Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice Systems and their Development in a Changing World. The Declaration expressed concern over the rise of new and emerging forms of transnational crime; the negative impact of organized crime on human rights, the rule of law, security and development; and the sophistication, diversity and transnational aspects of organized crime and its links with other criminal and, in some cases, terrorist activities. It called for the need to strengthen international, regional and subregional cooperation to effectively prevent, prosecute and punish crime, in particular by enhancing the national capacity of States through the provision of technical assistance.

The Congress—attended by 189 participants, including representatives of Member States, observers, intergovernmental organizations and NGOs, as well as over 190 experts—was oriented on the theme “Comprehensive strategies for global challenges: crime prevention and criminal justice systems and their development in a changing world”. It considered ten major topics, with corresponding working papers prepared by the secretariat on children, youth and crime [A/CONF.213/4]; provision of technical assistance to facilitate the ratification and implementation of the international instruments related to the prevention and suppression of terrorism [A/CONF.213/5]; making the United Nations guidelines on crime prevention work [A/CONF.213/6]; criminal justice responses to the smuggling of migrants and trafficking in persons, and links to transnational organized crime [A/CONF.213/7]; international cooperation to address money-laundering based on relevant United Nations and other instruments [A/CONF.213/8]; recent developments in the use of science and technology by offenders and by competent authorities in fighting crime, including cybercrime [A/CONF.213/9]; practical approaches to strengthening international cooperation in fighting crime-related problems [A/CONF.213/10]; and crime prevention and criminal justice responses to violence against migrants, migrant workers and their families [A/CONF.213/11]. During the Congress, five workshops were convened on international criminal justice education for the rule of law [A/CONF.213/12]; the survey of United Nations and other best practices in the treatment of prisoners in the criminal justice system [A/CONF.213/13]; practical approaches to preventing urban crime [A/CONF.213/14]; links between drug trafficking and other forms of organized crime [A/CONF.213/15]; and strategies and best practices against overcrowding in correctional facilities [A/CONF.213/16]. The Congress also had before it a report on the state of crime and criminal justice worldwide [A/CONF.213/3], prepared by the Secretary-General in response to resolution 64/180 [YUN 2009, p. 1080]. The report described crime trends and developments since the Eleventh United Nations Congress on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice [YUN 2005, p. 1208].

The Twelfth Congress elected Luiz Paulo Teles Ferreira Barreto (Brazil) as its President. The high-level segment was held in plenary from 17 to 19 April, with statements made by 58 high-level officials. The Secretary-General, in a statement read by the Executive Secretary of the Twelfth Congress, appealed to States to be innovative and stay one step ahead of criminals, particularly with regard to action against emerging crimes such as cybercrime, environmental crime and counterfeiting. He also stressed the need to bring crime prevention into the mainstream of the work of the United Nations, particularly in conflict prevention, peacekeeping and peacebuilding, and underlined the importance of placing human rights at the forefront of efforts to prevent and punish crime.

Follow-up to the Twelfth Congress

In May, the Commission on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice considered a note by the Secretariat on the Twelfth United Nations Congress on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice [E/CN.15/2010/11] and recommended a draft resolution on the subject for the Economic and Social Council to recommend to the General Assembly for adoption.

The Secretary-General submitted to the Assembly, in June, the report on the Twelfth Congress [A/65/92], highlighting the high-level segment, discussions on the substantive items on its agenda and the outcome of the workshops held within the framework of the Congress.

On 21 December, the Assembly took note of the Secretary-General's report on the Twelfth Congress (decision 65/538).

ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL ACTION

On 22 July [meeting 45], the Economic and Social Council, on the recommendation of the Commission on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice [E/2010/30], adopted resolution 2010/18 without vote [agenda item 14 (e)].

Twelfth United Nations Congress on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice

Recommends to the General Assembly the adoption of the following draft resolution:

[For text, see General Assembly resolution 65/230 below.]

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 21 December [meeting 71], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Third (Social, Humanitarian and Cultural) Committee [A/65/457], adopted resolution 65/230 without vote [agenda item 105].

Twelfth United Nations Congress on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice

The General Assembly,

Emphasizing the responsibility assumed by the United Nations in the field of crime prevention and criminal justice in pursuance of Economic and Social Council resolution 155 C(VII) of 13 August 1948 and General Assembly resolution 415(V) of 1 December 1950,

Acknowledging that the United Nations congresses on crime prevention and criminal justice, as major intergovernmental forums, have influenced national policies and practices and promoted international cooperation in this field by facilitating the exchange of views and experience, mobilizing public opinion and recommending policy options at the national, regional and international levels,

Recalling its resolution 46/152 of 18 December 1991, in the annex to which Member States affirmed that the United Nations congresses on crime prevention and criminal justice should be held every five years and should provide a forum for, inter alia, the exchange of views between States, intergovernmental and non-governmental organizations and individual experts representing various professions and disciplines, the exchange of experiences in research, law and policy development, and the identification of emerging trends and issues in crime prevention and criminal justice,

Recalling also its resolution 57/270 B of 23 June 2003 on the integrated and coordinated implementation of and follow-up to the outcomes of the major United Nations conferences and summits in the economic and social fields, in which it stressed that all countries should promote policies consistent and coherent with the commitments of the major United Nations conferences and summits, emphasized that the United Nations system had an important responsibility to assist Governments to stay fully engaged in the follow-up to and implementation of agreements and commitments reached at the major United Nations conferences and summits and invited its intergovernmental bodies to further promote the implementation of the outcomes of the major United Nations conferences and summits,

Recalling further its resolution 64/180 of 18 December 2009, in which it called upon the Twelfth United Nations Congress on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice to formulate concrete proposals for further follow-up and action, paying particular attention to practical arrangements relating to the effective implementation of the international legal instruments pertaining to transnational organized crime, terrorism and corruption and technical assistance activities relating thereto, and requested the Commission on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice at its nineteenth session to give high priority to considering the conclusions and recommendations of the Twelfth Congress, with a view to recommending, through the Economic and Social Council, appropriate follow-up by the General Assembly at its sixty-fifth session,

Bearing in mind the United Nations Millennium Declaration, adopted by the Heads of State and Government at the Millennium Summit of the United Nations on 8 September 2000, in which Heads of State and Government resolved, inter alia, to strengthen respect for the rule of law in international as well as in national affairs, to take concerted action against international terrorism and accede as soon as possible to all the relevant international conventions, to redouble their efforts to implement their commitment to counter the world drug problem, and to intensify their efforts to fight transnational crime in all its dimensions, including trafficking as well as smuggling in human beings and money-laundering,

Having considered the report of the Twelfth Congress and the related recommendations made by the Commission at its nineteenth session,

1. Expresses its satisfaction with the results achieved by the Twelfth United Nations Congress on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice, held in Salvador, Brazil, from 12 to 19 April 2010, including the Salvador Declaration on Comprehensive Strategies for Global Challenges: Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice Systems and Their Development in a Changing World, adopted at the high-level segment of the Twelfth Congress;

2. Expresses its appreciation to the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime for the work done in the preparations for and follow-up to the Twelfth Congress, and thanks the institutes of the United Nations crime prevention and criminal justice programme network for their contribution to the Congress, in particular with regard to the workshops held within the framework of the Congress;

3. Takes note with appreciation of the report of the Twelfth Congress, which contains the results of the Congress, including the conclusions and recommendations made at the workshops and at the high-level segment held during the Congress;

4. Endorses the Salvador Declaration adopted by the Twelfth Congress, as approved by the Commission on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice and annexed to the present resolution;

5. Invites Governments to take into consideration the Salvador Declaration and the recommendations adopted by the Twelfth Congress when formulating legislation and policy directives and to make all efforts, where appropriate, to implement the principles contained therein, taking into account the economic, social, legal and cultural specificities of their respective States;

6. Invites Member States to identify areas covered in the Salvador Declaration where further tools and training manuals based on international standards and best practices are needed, and to submit that information to the Commission on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice so that it may take that information into account when considering potential areas of future activity of the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime;

7. Welcomes the decision of the Government of Brazil to contribute a percentage of the value of confiscated assets to the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime, pursuant to article 30 of the United Nations Convention against Transnational Organized Crime and article 62 of the United Nations Convention against Corruption, as well as paragraph 9 of General Assembly resolution 55/25 of 15 November 2000 and paragraph 4 of Assembly resolution 58/4 of 31 October 2003, and looks forward to expeditious implementation of that decision;

8. Also welcomes the prompt consideration and action by the Commission on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice on a number of issues addressed in the Salvador Declaration, including those addressed in separate resolutions approved by the Commission at its nineteenth session, such as violence against migrants, migrant workers and their families, emerging forms of crime that have a significant impact on the environment and international cooperation in criminal matters;

9. Requests the Commission on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice to establish, in line with paragraph 42 of the Salvador Declaration, an open-ended intergovernmental expert group, to be convened prior to the twentieth session of the Commission, to conduct a comprehensive study of the problem of cybercrime and responses to it by Member States, the international community and the private sector, including the exchange of information on national legislation, best practices, technical assistance and international cooperation, with a view to examining options to strengthen existing and to propose new national and international legal or other responses to cybercrime;

10. Also requests the Commission on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice to establish, in line with paragraph 49 of the Salvador Declaration, an open-ended intergovernmental expert group, to be convened between the twentieth and twenty-first sessions of the Commission, to exchange information on best practices, as well as national legislation and existing international law, and on the revision of existing United Nations standard minimum rules for the treatment of prisoners so that they reflect recent advances in correctional science and best practices, with a view to making recommendations to the Commission on possible next steps;

11. Requests the open-ended intergovernmental expert groups established pursuant to paragraphs 9 and 10 above to report to the Commission on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice on progress in their work;

12. Requests the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime, in the development and implementation of its technical assistance programmes, to aim for sustainable and long-lasting results in the prevention, prosecution and punishment of crime, in particular by building, modernizing and strengthening criminal justice systems, as well as promoting the rule of law, and to design such programmes to achieve those aims for all components of the criminal justice system, in an integrated way and with a long-term perspective, increasing the capacity of requesting States to prevent and suppress the various types of crime affecting societies, including organized crime and cybercrime;

13. Also requests the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime to continue to provide technical assistance to facilitate the ratification and implementation of the United Nations Convention against Corruption, the United Nations Convention against Transnational Organized Crime and the international instruments related to the prevention and suppression of terrorism;

14. Requests the Commission on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice to consider at its twentieth session options to improve the efficiency of the process involved in the United Nations congresses on crime prevention and criminal justice, taking into account the recommendations made by the Intergovernmental Group of Experts on Lessons Learned from United Nations Congresses on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice at its meeting, held in Bangkok from 15 to 18 August 2006;

15. Requests the Secretary-General to distribute the report of the Twelfth Congress, including the Salvador Declaration, to Member States, intergovernmental organizations and non-governmental organizations, so as to ensure that the recommendations of the Congress are disseminated as widely as possible, and to seek proposals by Member States for ways and means of ensuring appropriate follow-up to the Salvador Declaration for consideration and action by the Commission on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice at its twentieth session;

16. Welcomes with appreciation the offer of the Government of Qatar to act as host to the Thirteenth United Nations Congress on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice, in 2015;

17. Expresses its profound gratitude to the people and Government of Brazil for the warm and generous hospitality extended to the participants in the Twelfth Congress and for the excellent facilities provided for the Congress;

18. Requests the Secretary-General to submit to the General Assembly at its sixty-sixth session a report on the implementation of the present resolution.

ANNEX

Salvador Declaration on Comprehensive Strategies for Global Challenges: Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice Systems and Their Development in a Changing World

We, the States Members of the United Nations,

Having assembled at the Twelfth United Nations Congress on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice in Salvador, Brazil, from 12 to 19 April 2010, to take more effective concerted action, in a spirit of cooperation, to prevent, prosecute and punish crime and seek justice,

Recalling the work of the eleven previous United Nations congresses on crime prevention and criminal justice, the conclusions and recommendations of the regional preparatory meetings for the Twelfth Congress and the documents prepared by the relevant working groups established by the Commission on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice,

Reaffirming the necessity of respecting and protecting human rights and fundamental freedoms in the prevention of crime and the administration of, and access to, justice, including criminal justice,

Recognizing the centrality of crime prevention and the criminal justice system to the rule of law and that long-term sustainable economic and social development and the establishment of a functioning, efficient, effective and humane criminal justice system have a positive influence on each other,

Noting with concern the rise of new and emerging forms of transnational crime,

Greatly concerned by the negative impact of organized crime on human rights, the rule of law, security and development, as well as by the sophistication, diversity and transnational aspects of organized crime and its links with other criminal and, in some cases, terrorist activities,

Stressing the need to strengthen international, regional and subregional cooperation to effectively prevent, prosecute and punish crime, in particular by enhancing the national capacity of States through the provision of technical assistance,

Greatly concerned by criminal acts against migrants, migrant workers and their families and other groups in vulnerable situations, particularly those acts motivated by discrimination and other forms of intolerance,

Declare as follows:

1. We recognize that an effective, fair and humane criminal justice system is based on the commitment to uphold the protection of human rights in the administration of justice and the prevention and control of crime.

2. We also recognize that it is the responsibility of each Member State to update, where appropriate, and maintain an effective, fair, accountable and humane crime prevention and criminal justice system.

3. We acknowledge the value and impact of the United Nations standards and norms in crime prevention and criminal justice and endeavour to use those standards and norms as guiding principles in designing and implementing our national crime prevention and criminal justice policies, laws, procedures and programmes.

4. Bearing in mind the universal character of the United Nations standards and norms in crime prevention and criminal justice, we invite the Commission on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice to consider reviewing and, if necessary, updating and supplementing them. In order to render them effective, we recommend that appropriate efforts be made to promote the widest application of those standards and norms and to raise awareness of them among authorities and entities responsible for their application at the national level.

5. We acknowledge the need for Member States to ensure effective gender equality in crime prevention, access to justice and the protection offered by the criminal justice system.

6. We express deep concern about the pervasiveness of violence against women in all its different forms and manifestations worldwide, and urge States to enhance efforts to prevent, prosecute and punish violence against women. In this regard, we note with appreciation the draft updated Model Strategies and Practical Measures on the Elimination of Violence against Women in the Field of Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice, as finalized by the intergovernmental expert group at its meeting held in Bangkok from 23 to 25 March 2009, and look forward to their consideration by the Commission on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice.

7. We recognize the importance of adopting appropriate legislation and policies to prevent victimization, including revictimization, and to provide protection and assistance to victims.

8. We consider that international cooperation and technical assistance can play an important role in achieving sustainable and long-lasting results in the prevention, prosecution and punishment of crime, in particular by building, modernizing and strengthening our criminal justice systems and promoting the rule of law. Specific technical assistance programmes should thus be designed to achieve these aims, for all the components of the criminal justice system, in an integrated way and with a long-term perspective, enabling the capacity of requesting States to prevent and suppress the various types of crime affecting their societies, including organized crime. In that regard, the experience and expertise accumulated over the years by the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime constitute a valuable asset.

9. We strongly recommend the allocation of sufficient human and financial resources to develop and implement effective policies, programmes and training dealing with crime prevention, criminal justice and the prevention of terrorism. In this regard, we stress the serious need to provide the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime with a level of resources commensurate with its mandate. We call upon Member States and other international donors to support, and coordinate with, the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime, including its regional and country offices, the institutes of the United Nations crime prevention and criminal justice programme network and requesting States in the provision of technical assistance to strengthen their capacity to prevent crime.

10. We acknowledge the leading role of the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime in providing technical assistance to facilitate the ratification and implementation of the international instruments related to the prevention and suppression of terrorism.

11. We invite the Commission on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice to consider strengthening the capacity of the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime to collect, analyse and disseminate accurate, reliable and comparable data on world crime and victimization trends and patterns, and we call upon Member States to support the gathering and analysis of information and to consider designating focal points and provide information when requested to do so by the Commission.

12. We welcome the decision of the Commission on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice to engage in a thematic debate on protection against trafficking in cultural property and the recommendations made by the open-ended intergovernmental expert group on protection against trafficking in cultural property at its meeting, held in Vienna from 24 to 26 November 2009, and invite the Commission to conduct appropriate follow-up, including exploring the need for guidelines for crime prevention with respect to trafficking in cultural property. Furthermore, we urge States that have not yet done so to develop effective legislation to prevent, prosecute and punish this crime in any of its forms and to strengthen international cooperation and technical assistance in this area, including the recovery and return of cultural property, bearing in mind the existing relevant international instruments, including the United Nations Convention against Transnational Organized Crime, where appropriate.

13. We recognize the increasing risk of the convergence of transnational organized crime and illicit networks, many of which are new or evolving. We call upon Member States to cooperate, including through information-sharing, in an effort to address these evolving transnational criminal threats.

14. We acknowledge the challenge posed by emerging forms of crime that have a significant impact on the environment. We encourage Member States to strengthen their national crime prevention and criminal justice legislation, policies and practices in this area. We invite Member States to enhance international cooperation, technical assistance and the sharing of best practices in this area. We invite the Commission on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice, in coordination with the relevant United Nations bodies, to study the nature of the challenge and ways to deal with it effectively.

15. We express our serious concerns about the challenge posed by economic fraud and identity-related crime and their links to other criminal and, in some cases, terrorist activities. We therefore invite Member States to take appropriate legal measures to prevent, prosecute and punish economic fraud and identity-related crime and to continue to support the work of the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime in this area. Furthermore, Member States are encouraged to enhance international cooperation in this area, including through the exchange of relevant information and best practices, as well as through technical and legal assistance.

16. We recognize that international cooperation in criminal matters in accordance with international obligations and national laws is a cornerstone of the efforts of States to prevent, prosecute and punish crime, in particular in its transnational forms, and we encourage the continuation and reinforcement of such activities at all levels.

17. We call upon those States that have not yet done so to consider ratifying or acceding to the United Nations Convention against Corruption, welcome the establishment of its mechanism for the review of implementation, look forward to its effective implementation and acknowledge the work of the intergovernmental working groups on asset recovery and technical assistance.

18. We also call upon those States that have not yet done so to consider ratifying or acceding to the United Nations Convention against Transnational Organized Crime and the Protocols thereto, and note with appreciation the decision of the General Assembly, in its resolution 64/179 of 18 December 2009, to hold in 2010 high-level meetings and a special treaty event. We also take note of ongoing initiatives aimed at exploring options regarding an appropriate and effective mechanism to assist the Conference of the Parties to the United Nations Convention against Transnational Organized Crime in the review of the implementation of the Convention.

19. We call upon Member States that have not yet done so to consider ratifying or acceding to the international instruments against terrorism, including its financing.

We also call upon all States parties to use those instruments and the relevant United Nations resolutions to enhance international cooperation in countering terrorism in all its forms and manifestations and its financing, including evolving features of the latter.

20. We call upon Member States, consistent with their international obligations, to establish or strengthen, as appropriate, central authorities fully empowered and equipped to deal with requests for international cooperation in criminal matters. In this perspective, regional legal cooperation networks could be supported.

21. Aware that gaps may exist in relation to international cooperation in criminal matters, we invite the Commission on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice to consider reviewing this issue and explore the need for various means of addressing gaps that are identified.

22. We emphasize the need for the adoption of effective measures to implement the provisions on preventing, prosecuting and punishing money-laundering contained in the United Nations Convention against Transnational Organized Crime and the United Nations Convention against Corruption. We encourage Member States to develop strategies to combat money-laundering based on the provisions of these two Conventions.

23. We encourage Member States to consider developing strategies or policies to combat illicit capital flows and to curb the harmful effects of jurisdictions and territories uncooperative in tax matters.

24. We recognize the need to deny criminals and criminal organizations the proceeds of their crimes. We call upon all Member States, within their national legal systems, to adopt effective mechanisms for the seizure, restraint and confiscation of proceeds of crime and to strengthen international cooperation to ensure effective and prompt asset recovery. We also call upon States to preserve the value of seized and confiscated assets, including through disposal, where appropriate and possible, where there is a risk of their value diminishing.

25. Bearing in mind the need to reinforce criminal justice systems of developing countries and countries with economies in transition, we urge States parties to the United Nations Convention against Transnational Organized Crime and the United Nations Convention against Corruption to fully implement the technical assistance provisions of each Convention, including by giving special consideration to contributing, in accordance with their national law and the provisions of those Conventions, a percentage of the proceeds of crime confiscated under each Convention to fund technical assistance through the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime.

26. We are convinced of the importance of preventing youth crime, supporting the rehabilitation of young offenders and their reintegration into society, protecting child victims and witnesses, including efforts to prevent their revictimization, and addressing the needs of children of prisoners. We stress that such responses should take into account the human rights and best interests of children and youth, as called for in the Convention on the Rights of the Child and the Optional Protocols thereto, where applicable, and in other relevant United Nations standards and norms in juvenile justice, where appropriate.

27. We support the principle that the deprivation of liberty of children should be used only as a measure of last resort and for the shortest appropriate period of time. We recommend the broader application, as appropriate, of alternatives to imprisonment, restorative justice and other relevant measures that foster the diversion of young offenders from the criminal justice system.

28. We call upon States to develop and strengthen, where appropriate, legislation, policies and practices to punish all forms of crime that target children and youth, as well as for the protection of child victims and witnesses.

29. We encourage States to provide tailored training in an interdisciplinary approach to those involved in the administration of juvenile justice.

30. We invite the Commission on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice to consider requesting the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime to design and provide to States specific technical assistance programmes to achieve these aims.

31. We call upon civil society, including the media, to support the efforts to protect children and youth from exposure to content that may exacerbate violence and crime, particularly content depicting and glorifying acts of violence against women and children.

32. We are convinced of the need to accelerate efforts to fully implement the United Nations guidelines on crime prevention and the prevention components of existing conventions and other relevant international standards and norms.

33. We recognize that the development and adoption of crime prevention policies and their monitoring and evaluation are the responsibility of States. We believe that such efforts should be based on a participatory, collaborative and integrated approach that includes all relevant stakeholders, including those from civil society.

34. We recognize the importance of strengthening public-private partnerships in preventing and countering crime in all its forms and manifestations. We are convinced that, through the mutual and effective sharing of information, knowledge and experience and through joint and coordinated actions, Governments and businesses can develop, improve and implement measures to prevent, prosecute and punish crime, including emerging and changing challenges.

35. We stress the need for all States to have national and local action plans for crime prevention that take into account, inter alia, factors that place certain populations and places at higher risk of victimization and/or offending in a comprehensive, integrated and participatory manner, and for such plans to be based on the best available evidence and good practices. We stress that crime prevention should be considered an integral element of strategies to foster social and economic development in all States.

36. We urge Member States to consider adopting legislation, strategies and policies for the prevention of trafficking in persons, the prosecution of offenders and the protection of victims of trafficking, consistent with the Protocol to Prevent, Suppress and Punish Trafficking in Persons, Especially Women and Children, supplementing the United Nations Convention against Transnational Organized Crime. We call upon Member States, where applicable, in cooperation with civil society and non-governmental organizations, to follow a victim-centred approach with full respect for the human rights of the victims of trafficking, and to make better use of the tools developed by the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime.

37. We urge Member States to consider adopting and implementing effective measures to prevent, prosecute and punish the smuggling of migrants and to ensure the rights of smuggled migrants, consistent with the Protocol against the Smuggling of Migrants by Land, Sea and Air, supplementing the United Nations Convention against Transnational Organized Crime. In this context, we recommend that Member States, inter alia, undertake awareness-raising campaigns, in cooperation with civil society and non-governmental organizations.

38. We affirm our determination to eliminate violence against migrants, migrant workers and their families, and we call upon Member States to adopt measures for preventing and addressing effectively cases of such violence and to ensure that those individuals receive humane and respectful treatment from States, regardless of their status. We also invite Member States to take immediate steps to incorporate into international crime prevention strategies and norms measures to prevent, prosecute and punish crimes involving violence against migrants, as well as violence associated with racism, xenophobia and related forms of intolerance. We invite the Commission on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice to consider this issue further in a comprehensive manner.

39. We note that the development of information and communications technologies and the increasing use of the Internet create new opportunities for offenders and facilitate the growth of crime.

40. We realize the vulnerability of children, and we call upon the private sector to promote and support efforts to prevent child sexual abuse and exploitation through the Internet.

41. We recommend that the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime, upon request, provide, in cooperation with Member States, relevant international organizations and the private sector, technical assistance and training to States to improve national legislation and build the capacity of national authorities in order to deal with cybercrime, including the prevention, detection, investigation and prosecution of such crime in all its forms, and to enhance the security of computer networks.

42. We invite the Commission on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice to consider convening an open-ended intergovernmental expert group to conduct a comprehensive study of the problem of cybercrime and responses to it by Member States, the international community and the private sector, including the exchange of information on national legislation, best practices, technical assistance and international cooperation, with a view to examining options to strengthen existing and to propose new national and international legal or other responses to cybercrime.

43. We endeavour to take measures to promote wider education and awareness of the United Nations standards and norms in crime prevention and criminal justice to ensure a culture of respect for the rule of law. In this regard, we recognize the role of civil society and the media in cooperating with States in these efforts. We invite the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime to continue to play a key role in the development and implementation of measures to promote and develop such a culture, in close coordination with other relevant United Nations entities.

44. We undertake to promote appropriate training of officials entrusted with upholding the rule of law, including correctional facility officers, law enforcement officials and the judiciary, as well as prosecutors and defence lawyers, in the use and application of those standards and norms.

45. We are concerned by urban crime and its impact on specific populations and places. We therefore recommend stronger coordination between security and social policies, with a view to addressing some of the root causes of urban violence.

46. We recognize that specific groups are particularly vulnerable to situations of urban crime, and we therefore recommend the adoption and implementation of civic intercultural programmes, where appropriate, aimed at combating racism and xenophobia, reducing the exclusion of minorities and migrants and thus promoting community cohesion.

47. We acknowledge the increasing links between transnational organized crime and drug trafficking in the context of the world drug problem. In this regard, we stress the urgent need for all States to enhance bilateral, regional and international cooperation to effectively counter the challenges posed by these links.

48. We recognize that the penitentiary system is one of the key components of the criminal justice system. We endeavour to use the United Nations standards and norms for the treatment of prisoners as a source of guidance in the development or updating of our national codes of penitentiary administration.

49. We invite the Commission on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice to consider convening an open-ended intergovernmental expert group to exchange information on best practices, as well as national legislation and existing international law, and on the revision of existing United Nations standard minimum rules for the treatment of prisoners so that they reflect recent advances in correctional science and best practices, with a view to making recommendations to the Commission on possible next steps.

50. We welcome the draft United Nations Rules for the Treatment of Women Prisoners and Non-custodial Measures for Women Offenders. Taking note of the outcome and the recommendations of the meeting of the expert group to develop supplementary rules specific to the treatment of women in detention and in custodial and non-custodial settings, we recommend that the Commission on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice consider them as a matter of priority for appropriate action.

51. We stress the need to reinforce alternatives to imprisonment, which may include community service, restorative justice and electronic monitoring, and support rehabilitation and reintegration programmes, including those to correct offending behaviour, and educational and vocational programmes for prisoners.

52. We recommend that Member States endeavour to reduce pretrial detention, where appropriate, and promote increased access to justice and legal defence mechanisms.

53. We support effective and efficient follow-up of the outcomes of the United Nations congresses on crime prevention and criminal justice. We welcome the inclusion of a standing item on the agenda of the Commission on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice at its annual sessions on this matter and on preparations for future congresses on crime prevention and criminal justice.

54. We welcome with appreciation the offer of the Government of Qatar to act as host to the Thirteenth United Nations Congress on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice, in 2015.

55. We express our profound gratitude to the people and Government of Brazil for their warm and generous hospitality and for the excellent facilities provided for the Twelfth Congress.

Commission on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice

The Commission on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice held its nineteenth session in Vienna (4 December 2009, 17–21 May and 3 December) [E/2010/30 & Add.1]. In May 2010, it recommended to the Economic and Social Council four draft resolutions for adoption by the General Assembly related to strengthening crime prevention and criminal justice responses to violence against women (see p. 1150); United Nations Rules for the Treatment of Women Prisoners and Non-custodial Measures for Women Offenders (see p. 1120); realignment of the functions of the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime (UNODC) (see p. 1243); and the Twelfth United Nations Congress on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice (see p. 1095). It also recommended for adoption by the Council two draft resolutions, one on the protection of cultural property (see p. 1092) and the other on programme development at UNODC (see p. 1242), and one draft decision on the report of the Commission's 2010 session and the agenda of its 2011 session. It adopted seven resolutions and one decision, which it brought to the attention of the Council, related to public-private partnerships; crime-related data; the Fourth World Summit of Attorneys General, Prosecutors General and Chief Prosecutors; trafficking in persons; international cooperation in the forensic field; maritime piracy; regional networks for international cooperation; and counterfeiting and piracy. In addition to a thematic discussion on protection against illicit trafficking in cultural property, the Commission also considered management, budgetary and administrative questions (see p. 1242) and the provisional agenda for its 2011 session. In December, the Commission recommended one draft decision for adoption by the Council on the Commission's reconvened nineteenth session.

On 22 July (decision 2010/243), the Economic and Social Council took note of the Commission's report on its nineteenth session and decided that the prominent themes for the Commission's twentieth, twenty-first, twenty-second and twenty-third (2011–2014) sessions, respectively, would be: "Protecting children in a digital age: the misuse of technology in the abuse and exploitation of children"; "Violence against migrants, migrant workers and their families"; "The challenge posed by emerging forms of crime that have a significant impact on the environment and ways to deal with it effectively"; and "International cooperation in criminal matters". The Council called on Member States wishing to identify new or emerging crime issues to provide information to UNODC in a timely manner, so that such information could be considered in the preparation of the report of the Secretary-General on the agenda item relating to world crime trends and emerging issues and responses in the field of crime prevention and criminal justice. The Council decided that the Commission, at its next intersessional meeting, should consider ways of improving its working methods, including with regard to the submission and consideration of draft resolutions and decisions. The Council also approved the provisional agenda and documentation for the Commission's twentieth session (2011).

On 23 July, by decision 2010/258, the Economic and Social Council took note of the report of the Commission on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice on its reconvened eighteenth session, held in 2009 [YUN 2009, p. 1081].

Administrative and budgetary questions

In response to Commission on Narcotic Drugs resolution 52/14 [YUN 2009, p. 1253] and Commission on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice resolution 18/6 [ibid., p. 1083], the Executive Director of UNODC submitted a January report [E/CN.7/2010/13-E/CN.15/2010/13] on the implications for UNODC of the adoption of a thematic and regional programme approach and on the implementation of the measures requested with regard to the re-establishment of an independent evaluation unit and the sustainability of the Strategic Planning Unit.

On 21 May [E/2010/30], the Commission on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice approved a draft resolution to be recommended for approval by the Economic and Social Council for adoption by the General Assembly on the realignment of the functions of UNODC and changes to the strategic framework (see below); and a draft resolution for adoption by the Council on support for the development and implementation of an integrated approach to programme development at UNODC (see p. 1242).

At its reconvened nineteenth session (Vienna, 3 December) [E/2010/30/Add.1-E/CN.15/2010/20/Add.1], the Commission took note of the statement made by the co-chairs of the standing open-ended intergovernmental working group on improving the governance and financial situation of UNODC, which was annexed to the report.

ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL ACTION

On 22 July [meeting 45] the Economic and Social Council, on the recommendation of the Commission on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice [E/2010/30], adopted resolution 2010/17 without vote [agenda item 14 (c)].

Realignment of the functions of the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime and changes to the strategic framework

The Economic and Social Council

Recommends to the General Assembly the adoption of the following draft resolution:

“The General Assembly,

“Recalling section XI, paragraph 1, of its resolution 61/252 of 22 December 2006, in which it entrusted certain administrative and financial functions to the Commission on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice,

“Recalling also Commission on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice resolution 18/6 of 3 December 2009,

“Recalling further the report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions on the consolidated budget for the biennium 2010–2011 for the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime, “Bearing in mind the report of the Executive Director of the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime on the changes required to the strategic framework and their implications for the Office and for the allocation of resources to the subprogrammes of the programme of work, and on the establishment of an independent evaluation unit and the sustainability of the Strategic Planning Unit of the Office,

“Recalling its resolution 64/243 of 24 December 2009 entitled ‘Questions relating to the proposed programme budget for the biennium 2010–2011’, in paragraph 85 of which it expressed concern regarding the overall financial situation of the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime and requested the Secretary-General to submit proposals in his proposed programme budget for the biennium 2012–2013 to ensure that the Office has sufficient resources to carry out its mandate,

“1. Takes note of the report of the Executive Director of the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime on the changes required to the strategic framework and their implications for the Office and for the allocation of resources to the subprogrammes of the programme of work, and on the establishment of an independent evaluation unit and the sustainability of the Strategic Planning Unit of the Office, and welcomes the measures taken to develop a thematic and regional programme approach to the programme of work of the Office;

“2. Notes the efficiency gains anticipated as a result of the proposed realignment, which responds, in particular, to recommendations made by the Office of Internal Oversight Services of the Secretariat, and looks forward to seeing those efficiency gains reflected in the budget for the biennium 2012–2013 for the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime;

“3. Also notes that the realignment will not require any change to the strategic framework for the period 2010–2011 and that the thematic and regional programme approach will be reflected in the proposed strategic framework for the period 2012–2013;

“4. Further notes that the proposed realignment will contribute to the improvement of the technical assistance programmes and activities of the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime;

“5. Notes that the proposed realignment will not diminish the current status of any of the activities promoted by the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime;

“6. Recalls that, in Commission on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice resolution 18/6, the Commission decided that the consolidated budget for the biennium 2010–2011 for the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime should contain adequate provisions for the establishment of a sustainable, effective and operationally independent evaluation unit, and urges the Secretariat to swiftly implement that decision and commence with the re-establishment of the independent evaluation unit without further delay;

“7. Requests the Executive Director of the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime to ensure the sustainability of the Strategic Planning Unit, consistent with the importance of its functions;

“8. Notes that the reinstatement of the post of Chief of the Policy Analysis and Research Branch at the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime, at the D-1 level, should be considered only after sufficient funding has been made available for the independent evaluation unit and the Strategic Planning Unit;

“9. Also notes, in the preceding context, the realignment of the Division for Treaty Affairs and the Division for Operations of the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime, and welcomes it as an important step in the process of continuous improvement of the Office;

“10. Highlights the importance of providing legal assistance for drug control and crime prevention and the need to link the provision of such assistance to the work of the Integrated Programme and Oversight Branch of the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime;

“12. Urges the Executive Director of the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime to ensure that the Office submits to the Secretary-General a proposed programme budget for the biennium 2012–2013 that appropriately reflects the financial needs of the Office;

“13. Requests the Secretary-General, in his proposed programme budget for the biennium 2012–2013, to devote due attention to the resource requirements for meeting the mandates entrusted to the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime, taking into account the relevant crime prevention and criminal justice mandates and the Political Declaration and Plan of Action on International Cooperation towards an Integrated and Balanced Strategy to Counter the World Drug Problem, with particular focus on under-resourced areas;

“14. Requests the Executive Director of the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime to report to the Commission on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice at its twentieth session on the implementation of the realignment of the Division for Treaty Affairs and the Division for Operations.”

On 22 July, the Economic and Social Council adopted resolution 2010/21 (see p. 1243) on the realignment of UNODC functions and changes to its strategic framework. On 21 December, the General Assembly adopted resolution 65/227 on realignment of UNODC functions and changes to its strategic framework (see p. 1244).

Crime prevention programme

At its nineteenth session, the Commission on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice considered the UNODC Executive Director's report on the Office's 2009 activities in the areas of drug control, criminal justice, crime prevention, corruption, organized crime, terrorism prevention and the rule of law [E/CN.7/2010/3-E/CN.15/2010/3]. The report stated that UNODC supported Member States in their efforts to achieve a world safe from crime, drugs and terrorism through research to expand the evidence base for policy and operational decisions; normative work to assist States in the ratification and implementation of international treaties, the development of domestic legislation on drugs, crime and terrorism and the provision of substantive and secretariat services for treaty bodies and governing bodies; and field-based technical cooperation and the development and implementation of regional and thematic programmes.

With respect to supply reduction of illicit drugs, the illicit crop surveys carried out by UNODC had set a high standard for information on illicit crops, and UNODC provided advice and support for crop eradication while fostering growth and security through alternative livelihoods. UNODC had been working closely with Member States and regional organizations to develop and implement regional programmes to promote the rule of law and human security in Africa, Asia, the Americas and Europe, in line with Economic and Social Council resolution 2009/23 [YUN 2009, p. 1251]. In addition, UNODC had assisted States in improving their legal regimes and establishing modern judicial systems, as well as developing policies to deal with the links between drugs, crime and terrorism. While UNODC had the capacity to assess the threat posed by drugs and crime and had deepened its capacity to tackle the complex and interlinked challenges involved, a significant mismatch between mandates and low funding had made it difficult to implement multi-year programmes.

The report also provided information on the implementation of Commission on Narcotic Drugs resolution 51/12 [YUN 2008, p. 1353] on strengthening cooperation between UNODC and other UN entities for the promotion of human rights in the implementation of the international drug control treaties.

The report recommended that the Commission on Narcotic Drugs, the Commission on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice, and Member States consider continuing to strengthen drug and crime data collection activities and reporting to the United Nations through periodic questionnaires and individual seizure reports, as well as support for the dissemination of drug and crime statistics to Member States and the international community through the Internet and reports, including the publishing of the World Drug Report; encouraging Member States to commit resources to help developing countries design and improve systems for the generation, management, analysis, reporting and use of information on illicit drugs that was necessary for policy and programme development; encouraging the participation of forensic laboratories in proficiency testing schemes as a commitment to quality and continuous improvement, and providing the necessary support, including import authorizations for controlled substances used in those testing schemes; providing further guidance and support to strengthen the work of UNODC in the area of counter-terrorism, in particular, capacity-building technical assistance for domestic criminal justice practitioners involved in the investigation, prosecution and adjudication of terrorism cases; inviting Member States and relevant subregional, regional and international organizations to work closely with UNODC in combating terrorism and encouraging Member States to increase the level of resources provided to enable UNODC to respond to requests for technical assistance in terrorism prevention; and emphasizing the importance of providing regular and adequate core resources to enable UNODC to fully implement its mandates and providing support in accordance with the increasing demand for technical assistance by Member States.

Strengthening technical cooperation

In response to General Assembly resolution 64/179 [YUN 2009, p. 1084], the Secretary-General submitted a July report [A/65/116] on implementation of the United Nations crime prevention and criminal justice programme mandate, with particular reference to UNODC technical cooperation activities. The report summarized UNODC work in supporting Member States to counter transnational organized crime, corruption and terrorism, and in preventing crime and reinforcing criminal justice systems. Information was provided on efforts to strengthen the UN crime prevention and criminal justice programme, emerging policy issues and responses thereto, and recommendations aimed at further enhancing the Programme's activities on transnational organized crime; data collection, research and trend analysis; corruption; terrorism; crime prevention and criminal justice reform in developing, transitional and post-conflict societies; and follow-up to the Twelfth UN Congress on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 21 December [meeting 71], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Third Committee [A/65/457], adopted resolution 65/232 without vote [agenda item 105].

Strengthening the United Nations crime prevention and criminal justice programme, in particular its technical cooperation capacity

The General Assembly,

Reaffirming its resolutions 46/152 of 18 December 1991, 60/1 of 16 September 2005, 60/177 of 16 December 2005, 61/252 of 22 December 2006, 64/178 and 64/179 of 18 December 2009 and 64/237 of 24 December 2009,

Noting with appreciation the adoption by the Economic and Social Council of the strategy for the period 2008–2011 for the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime, which aims, inter alia, to enhance its effectiveness and flexibility in providing technical assistance and policy services,

Reaffirming its resolutions relating to the urgent need to strengthen international cooperation and technical assistance in promoting and facilitating the ratification and implementation of the United Nations Convention against Transnational Organized Crime and the Protocols thereto, the United Nations Convention against Corruption and all the international conventions and protocols against terrorism, including those that recently entered into force,

Reaffirming also the commitments undertaken by Member States in the United Nations Global Counter-Terrorism Strategy adopted on 8 September 2006 and its successive reviews of 4 and 5 September 2008 and of 8 September 2010,

Emphasizing that its resolution 64/137 of 18 December 2009 on the intensification of efforts to eliminate all forms of violence against women has considerable implications for the United Nations crime prevention and criminal justice programme and its activities,

Taking into consideration all relevant Economic and Social Council resolutions, in particular resolutions 2008/23, 2008/24 and 2008/25 of 24 July 2008, and all those relating to the strengthening of international cooperation as well as the technical assistance and advisory services of the United Nations crime prevention and criminal justice programme of the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime in the fields of crime prevention and criminal justice, promotion and reinforcement of the rule of law and reform of criminal justice institutions, including with regard to the implementation of technical assistance,

Recalling its resolutions 55/25 of 15 November 2000, 58/17 of 3 December 2003, 61/52 of 4 December 2006 and 64/78 of 7 December 2009 on transnational organized crime and on the return or restitution of cultural property to the countries of origin, and taking note with appreciation of the report of the Secretary-General on protection against trafficking in cultural property, the outcome of the thematic discussion on protection against illicit trafficking in cultural property held by the Commission on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice at its nineteenth session and the work of the expert group on protection against trafficking in cultural property at its meeting convened pursuant to Economic and Social Council resolution 2008/23, and its recommendations,

Recalling also the high-level meeting of the General Assembly on transnational organized crime and the special treaty event convened on the tenth anniversary of the adoption of the United Nations Convention against Transnational Organized Crime pursuant to resolution 64/179, which reaffirm the political commitment of the international community to tackle transnational organized crime and promote the Convention,

Welcoming the adoption of the United Nations Global Plan of Action to Combat Trafficking in Persons, stressing the need for its full and effective implementation, and expressing its view that it will, inter alia, enhance cooperation and a better coordination of efforts in fighting trafficking in persons and promote increased ratification and full implementation of the United Nations Convention against Transnational Organized Crime and the Protocol to Prevent, Suppress and Punish Trafficking in Persons, Especially Women and Children, supplementing the United Nations Convention against Transnational Organized Crime,

Welcoming also the outcome of the fifth session of the Conference of the Parties to the Convention against Transnational Organized Crime, held in Vienna from 18 to 22 October 2010,

Taking note of the report of the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime entitled The Globalization of Crime: A Transnational Organized Crime Threat Assessment, which provides an overview of different forms of emerging crimes and their negative impact on the sustainable development of societies,

Expressing its grave concern at the negative effects of transnational organized crime, including smuggling of and trafficking in human beings, narcotic drugs and small arms and light weapons, on development, peace and security and human rights, and at the increasing vulnerability of States to such crime,

Convinced of the importance of preventing youth crime, supporting the rehabilitation of young offenders and their reintegration into society, protecting child victims and witnesses, including efforts to prevent their revictimization, and addressing the needs of children of prisoners, and stressing that such responses should take into account the human rights and best interests of children and young people, as called for in the Convention on the Rights of the Child and the Optional Protocols thereto, where applicable, and in other relevant United Nations standards and norms in juvenile justice, where appropriate,

Concerned by the serious challenges and threats posed by the illicit trafficking in firearms, their parts and components and ammunition, and concerned about its links with other forms of transnational organized crime, including drug trafficking and other criminal activities, including terrorism,

Deeply concerned about the connections, in some cases, between some forms of transnational organized crime and terrorism, and emphasizing the need to enhance cooperation at the national, subregional, regional and international levels in order to strengthen responses to this evolving challenge,

Concerned about the growing degree of penetration of criminal organizations and their proceeds into the economy,

Recognizing that actions against transnational organized crime and terrorism are a common and shared responsibility, and stressing the need to work collectively to prevent and combat transnational organized crime, corruption and terrorism in all its forms and manifestations,

Emphasizing that transnational organized crime must be addressed in full respect for the principle of the sovereignty of States and in accordance with the rule of law as part of a comprehensive response to promote durable solutions through the promotion of human rights and more equitable socio-economic conditions,

Recognizing the need to maintain a balance in the technical cooperation capacity of the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime between all relevant priorities identified by the General Assembly and the Economic and Social Council,

Recognizing also that, thanks to its broad membership and wide scope of application, the United Nations Convention against Transnational Organized Crime offers an important basis for international cooperation, inter alia for extradition, mutual legal assistance and confiscation and represents in this regard a useful tool that should be further utilized,

Mindful of the need to ensure universal adherence to and full implementation of the United Nations Convention against Transnational Organized Crime and the Protocols thereto, and urging States parties to make full and effective use of these instruments,

Welcoming the adoption by the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime of a regional approach to programming, based on continuing consultations and partnerships at the national and regional levels, particularly on its implementation, and focused on ensuring that the Office responds in a sustainable and coherent manner to the priorities of Member States,

Recognizing the general progress made by the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime in the delivery of advisory services and assistance to requesting Member States in the areas of corruption, organized crime, money-laundering, terrorism, kidnapping and trafficking in persons, including the support and protection, as appropriate, of victims, their families and witnesses, as well as drug trafficking and international cooperation, with special emphasis on extradition and mutual legal assistance,

Expressing concern regarding the overall financial situation of the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime, and reaffirming the request to the Secretary-General to submit proposals in his proposed programme budget for the biennium 2012–2013 to ensure that the Office has sufficient resources to carry out its mandate,

1. Takes note with appreciation of the report of the Secretary-General prepared pursuant to resolution 64/179;

2. Welcomes the high-level meeting of the General Assembly on transnational organized crime, held in New York on 17 and 21 June 2010, and notes the presentation of the presidential summary of the meeting;

3. Also welcomes the Salvador Declaration on Comprehensive Strategies for Global Challenges: Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice Systems and Their Development in a Changing World, adopted at the Twelfth United Nations Congress on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice, held in Salvador, Brazil, from 12 to 19 April 2010;

4. Notes with appreciation the convening of an open-ended intergovernmental expert group to conduct a comprehensive study of the problem of cybercrime and responses to it by Member States, the international community and the private sector, including the exchange of information on national legislation, best practices, technical assistance and international cooperation, with a view to examining options to strengthen existing and to propose new national and international, legal or other responses to cybercrime;

5. Welcomes with appreciation the offer of the Government of Qatar to act as host to the Thirteenth United Nations Congress on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice, in 2015;

6. Reaffirms the importance of the United Nations Convention against Transnational Organized Crime and the Protocols thereto as the main tools of the international community to fight transnational organized crime;

7. Notes the progress report on the voluntary pilot programme to review the implementation of the United Nations Convention against Transnational Organized Crime and the Protocols thereto;

8. Takes note with appreciation of the decision of the Conference of the Parties to the United Nations Convention against Transnational Organized Crime at its fifth session to establish an open-ended intergovernmental working group consider and explore options with regard to, and propose the establishment of, a mechanism or mechanisms to assist the Conference in reviewing implementation of the Convention and the Protocols thereto, and to prepare the terms of reference for such a review mechanism or mechanisms, guidelines for governmental experts and a blueprint for country review reports for consideration and possible adoption at the sixth session of the Conference;

9. Reaffirms the importance of the United Nations crime prevention and criminal justice programme in promoting effective action to strengthen international cooperation in crime prevention and criminal justice, as well as of the work of the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime in the fulfilment of its mandate in crime prevention and criminal justice, including providing to Member States, upon request and as a matter of high priority, technical cooperation, advisory services and other forms of assistance, and coordinating with and complementing the work of all relevant and competent United Nations bodies and offices;

10. Encourages all States to have national and local action plans for crime prevention in order to take into account, in a comprehensive, integrated and participatory manner, inter alia, factors that place certain populations and places at higher risk of victimization and/or of offending and to ensure that such plans are based on the best available evidence and good practices, and stresses that crime prevention should be considered an integral element of strategies to foster social and economic development in all States;

11. Calls upon Member States to strengthen their efforts to cooperate, as appropriate, at the bilateral, subregional, regional and international levels to counter effectively transnational organized crime;

12. Requests the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime to enhance its efforts, within existing resources and within its mandate, in providing technical assistance and advisory services for the implementation of its regional and subregional programmes in a coordinated manner with relevant Member States and regional and subregional organizations;

13. Also requests the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime to continue to provide, within its mandate, technical assistance to Member States, upon their request, in the areas of crime prevention and criminal justice, with a view to strengthening the capacity of national criminal justice systems to investigate and prosecute all forms of crime;

14. Urges the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime to continue to provide technical assistance to Member States to combat money-laundering and the financing of terrorism through the Global Programme against Money-Laundering, in accordance with United Nations-related instruments and internationally accepted standards, including, where applicable, recommendations of relevant intergovernmental bodies, inter alia, the Financial Action Task Force on Money Laundering, and relevant initiatives of regional, interregional and multilateral organizations against money-laundering;

15. Recognizes the efforts made by the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime to assist Member States in developing abilities and strengthening their capacity to prevent and combat kidnapping, and requests the Office to continue to provide technical assistance with a view to fostering international cooperation, in particular mutual legal assistance, aimed at countering effectively this growing serious crime;

16. Urges the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime to increase collaboration with intergovernmental, international and regional organizations that have transnational organized crime mandates, as appropriate, in order to share best practices and to take advantage of their unique and comparative advantage;

17. Draws attention to the emerging policy issues identified in the report of the Secretary-General on the implementation of the mandates of the United Nations crime prevention and criminal justice programme, with particular reference to the technical cooperation activities of the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime, namely, piracy, cybercrime, sexual exploitation of children and urban crime, and invites the Office to explore, within its mandate, ways and means of addressing those issues, bearing in mind Economic and Social Council resolutions 2007/12 of 25 July 2007 and 2007/19 of 26 July 2007 on the strategy for the period 2008–2011 for the Office;

18. Requests the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime, within its existing mandate, to strengthen the collection, analysis and dissemination of accurate, reliable and comparable data and information to enhance knowledge on crime trends and support Member States in designing appropriate responses in specific areas of crime, in particular in their transnational dimension, taking into account the need to make the best possible use of existing resources;

19. Urges Member States and relevant international organizations to develop national and regional strategies, as appropriate, and other necessary measures, in cooperation with the United Nations crime prevention and criminal justice programme, to address effectively transnational organized crime, including trafficking in persons, the smuggling of migrants and illicit manufacturing of and trafficking in firearms, as well as corruption and terrorism;

20. Urges States parties to use the United Nations Convention against Transnational Organized Crime for broad cooperation in preventing and combating criminal offences against cultural property, especially in returning such proceeds of crime or property to their legitimate owners, in accordance with article 14, paragraph 2, of the Convention, and invites States parties to exchange information on all aspects of criminal offences against cultural property, in accordance with their national laws, and to coordinate administrative and other measures taken, as appropriate, for the prevention, early detection and punishment of such offences;

21. Urges the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime to continue to assist Member States, upon request, in combating the illicit trafficking in firearms, their parts and components and ammunition, and to support them in their efforts to address its links with other forms of transnational organized crime, through, inter alia, technical assistance;

22. Reaffirms the importance of the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime and its regional offices in building capacity at the local level in the fight against transnational organized crime and drug trafficking, and urges the Office to consider regional vulnerabilities, projects and impact in the fight against transnational organized crime, in particular in developing countries, when deciding to close and allocate offices, with a view to maintaining an effective level of support to national and regional efforts in those areas;

23. Encourages Member States to support the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime in continuing to provide targeted technical assistance, within its existing mandate, to enhance the capacity of affected States, upon their request, to combat piracy by sea, including by assisting Member States in creating an effective law enforcement response and strengthening their judicial capacity;

24. Notes with appreciation that the number of States parties to the United Nations Convention against Transnational Organized Crime has reached one hundred and fifty-eight, which is a good indication of the commitment shown by the international community to combat this phenomenon;

25. Urges Member States that have not yet done so to consider ratifying or acceding to the United Nations Convention against Transnational Organized Crime and the Protocols thereto, the United Nations Convention against Corruption and the international conventions and protocols related to terrorism;

26. Encourages States parties to continue to provide full support to the Conference of the Parties to the United Nations Convention against Transnational Organized Crime and the Conference of the States Parties to the United Nations Convention against Corruption, including providing information to the conferences regarding compliance with the treaties;

27. Requests the Secretary-General to continue to provide the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime with adequate resources to promote, in an effective manner, the implementation of the United Nations Convention against Transnational Organized Crime and the United Nations Convention against Corruption and to discharge its functions as the secretariat of the conferences of the parties to the conventions, in accordance with its mandate;

28. Welcomes the progress achieved by the Conference of the Parties to the United Nations Convention against Transnational Organized Crime and the Conference of the States Parties to the United Nations Convention against Corruption in the implementation of their respective mandates;

29. Notes with appreciation the recent establishment of a mechanism to review the implementation of the United Nations Convention against Corruption and the adoption of its terms of reference;

30. Reiterates its request to the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime to enhance its technical assistance to Member States, upon request, to strengthen international cooperation in preventing and combating terrorism through the facilitation of the ratification and implementation of the universal conventions and protocols related to terrorism, in close consultation with the Counter-Terrorism Committee and its Executive Directorate, as well as to continue to contribute to the work of the Counter-Terrorism Implementation Task Force, and invites Member States to provide the Office with appropriate resources for its mandate;

31. Requests that the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime continue to provide technical assistance to Member States, upon request, to strengthen the rule of law, taking also into account the work undertaken by the Rule of Law Coordination and Resource Group of the Secretariat and other relevant United Nations bodies;

32. Takes note of the report of the intergovernmental expert group to review and update the Model Strategies and Practical Measures on the Elimination of Violence against Women in the Field of Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice on its meeting convened in Bangkok from 23 to 25 March 2009, in accordance with Commission on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice decision 17/1 of 18 April 2008 on strengthening crime prevention and criminal justice responses to violence against women and girls;

33. Takes note with appreciation of the work of the expert group to develop supplementary rules specific to the treatment of women in detention and in custodial and non-custodial settings at its meeting held in Bangkok from 23 to 26 November 2009, and of the outcome of the meeting, as mandated by the Commission on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice in its resolution 18/1 of 24 April 2009 on supplementary rules specific to the treatment of women in detention and in custodial and non-custodial settings;

34. Encourages Member States to take relevant measures, as appropriate to their national contexts, to ensure the diffusion, use and application of the United Nations standards and norms in crime prevention and criminal justice, including the consideration and, where they deem it necessary, dissemination of existing manuals and handbooks developed and published by the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime;

35. Reiterates the importance of providing the United Nations crime prevention and criminal justice programme with sufficient, stable and predictable funding for the full implementation of its mandates, in conformity with the high priority accorded to it and in accordance with the increasing demand for its services, in particular with regard to the provision of increased assistance to developing countries, countries with economies in transition and countries emerging from conflict, in the area of crime prevention and criminal justice reform;

36. Requests the Secretary-General to submit a report to the General Assembly at its sixty-sixth session on the implementation of the mandates of the United Nations crime prevention and criminal justice programme, reflecting also emerging policy issues and possible responses;

37. Also requests the Secretary-General to include in the report referred to in paragraph 36 above information on the status of ratifications or accessions to the United Nations Convention against Transnational Organized Crime and the Protocols thereto.

Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice Programme network

In a March report [E/CN.15/2010/10] to the Commission on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice, the Secretary-General summarized the 2009 and early 2010 activities carried out by the institutes making up the United Nations crime prevention and criminal justice programme network, which included the United Nations Interregional Crime and Justice Research Institute (UNICRI); 14 regional and affiliated institutes; and the International Scientific and Professional Advisory Council of the United Nations crime prevention and criminal justice programme.

United Nations Interregional Crime and Justice Research Institute

In an April report [E/CN.15/2010/15], the UNICRI Board of Trustees described its 2009 activities relating to the applied research programme, external relations and management services.

United Nations African crime prevention institute

In a June report [A/65/114], submitted in response to General Assembly resolution 64/181 [YUN 2009, p. 1088], the Secretary-General highlighted the responses of African countries to calls for collective and coordinated initiatives aimed at enhancing their crime prevention and criminal justice systems through the use of existing national and regional legal frameworks; statutory and international instruments, such as conventions and resolutions; and geopolitical mechanisms such as regional political blocks. The report on the United Nations African Institute for the Prevention of Crime and the Treatment of Offenders (UNAFRI) assessed the value of integrating relevant aspects of local and traditional criminal justice systems—which tended to rely on restorative justice and on conciliatory and community-based alternatives and were widely practiced in rural Africa—into the penal and criminal justice reform required at the international level. It also outlined the Institute's programme activities designed to provide African countries with technical assistance for effective crime prevention and criminal justice systems, and discussed measures for making UNAFRI a suitable and sustainable tool for meeting Africa's needs in the area of crime prevention and criminal justice mobilizing funds, improving the visibility, management and governance of UNAFRI and increasing collaborative partnerships. UNAFRI income in 2009 totalled $585,130, a slight increase over the $578,424 received in 2008. That increase was attributed to the increased collections from member States in 2009 ($383,271) over those in 2008 ($189,249). For the period January–May 2010, resources stood at $332,647.

The report concluded that transnational organized crime throughout Africa was becoming more sophisticated and, to the detriment of Africa, more entrenched. An effective crime prevention and criminal justice reform agenda required a pragmatic assessment of the existing challenges and the formulation of a set of evidence-based policies and activities that were tailored to priority issues. The nations of Africa had to have the capacity to protect their populations and sustain development and progress. UNAFRI was a major player in accomplishing this task through action-oriented research and innovative approaches based on data, expertise and the realities of African crime and criminal justice. UNAFRI would continue to grow into its role as coordinator of those efforts, and be a focal point for all professional efforts aimed at promoting the active cooperation and collaboration of Governments, academics, institutions, scientific and professional organizations, and relevant experts.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 21 December [meeting 71], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Third Committee [A/65/457], adopted resolution 65/231 without vote [agenda item 105].

United Nations African Institute for the Prevention of Crime and the Treatment of Offenders

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 64/181 of 18 December 2009 and all other relevant resolutions,

Taking note of the report of the Secretary-General,

Bearing in mind that weaknesses in crime prevention lead to subsequent difficulties at the level of crime control mechanisms, and bearing in mind also the urgent need to establish effective crime prevention strategies for Africa, as well as the importance of law enforcement agencies and the judiciary at the regional and subregional levels,

Aware of the devastating impact of new and more dynamic crime trends on the national economies of African States and of the fact that crime is a major obstacle to harmonious and sustainable development in Africa,

Noting with concern that in most African countries the existing criminal justice system does not have sufficiently skilled personnel and adequate infrastructure and is therefore ill-equipped to manage the emergence of new crime trends, and acknowledging that weak laws and existing justice systems undermine efforts to facilitate the prosecution of these new crime trends,

Bearing in mind the Revised African Union Plan of Action on Drug Control and Crime Prevention (2007–2012), aimed at encouraging Member States to participate in and own the regional initiatives for effective crime prevention and good governance and strengthened justice administration,

Emphasizing the need to create necessary coalitions with all partners in the process of achieving effective crime prevention policies,

Recognizing that the United Nations African Institute for the Prevention of Crime and the Treatment of Offenders is a focal point for all professional efforts aimed at promoting the active cooperation and collaboration of Governments, academics, institutions and scientific and professional organizations and experts in crime prevention and criminal justice,

Noting that the financial situation of the Institute has greatly affected its capacity to deliver its services to African Member States in an effective and comprehensive manner,

1. Commends the United Nations African Institute for the Prevention of Crime and the Treatment of Offenders for its efforts to promote and coordinate regional technical cooperation activities related to crime prevention and criminal justice systems in Africa;

2. Also commends the initiative of the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime in strengthening its working relationship with the Institute by supporting and involving the Institute in the implementation of a number of activities, including those contained in the Revised African Union Plan of Action on Drug Control and Crime Prevention (2007–2012), on strengthening the rule of law and criminal justice systems in Africa;

3. Reiterates the need to strengthen further the capacity of the Institute to support national mechanisms for crime prevention and criminal justice in African countries;

4. Notes the efforts of the Institute to establish contacts with organizations in those countries which are promoting crime prevention programmes and its maintenance of close links with regional and subregional political entities, such as the African Union Commission, the East African Community, the Commission of the Economic Community of West African States, the Intergovernmental Authority on Development and the Southern African Development Community;

5. Urges the States members of the Institute to continue to make every possible effort to meet their obligations to the Institute;

6. Welcomes the decision of the Governing Board of the Institute, at its fourth extraordinary session, held in Nairobi on 2 March 2009, to convene a conference of African ministers in November 2009 to discuss measures for improving the flow of resources to the Institute;

7. Also welcomes the introduction by the Institute of a cost-sharing initiative in its execution of various programmes with Member States, partners and United Nations entities;

8. Urges all Member States and non-governmental organizations and the international community to continue adopting concrete practical measures to support the Institute in the development of the requisite capacity and in the implementation of its programmes and activities aimed at strengthening crime prevention and criminal justice systems in Africa;

9. Urges all States that have not already done so to consider ratifying or acceding to the United Nations Convention against Transnational Organized Crime and the Protocols thereto, as well as the United Nations Convention against Corruption;

10. Requests the Secretary-General to intensify efforts to mobilize all relevant entities of the United Nations system to provide the necessary financial and technical support to the Institute to enable it to fulfil its mandate;

11. Also requests the Secretary-General to continue his efforts to mobilize the financial resources necessary to maintain the Institute with the core professional staff required to enable it to function effectively in the fulfilment of its mandated obligations;

12. Encourages the Institute to consider focusing on specific and general vulnerabilities of each programme country and to maximize the use of available initiatives to address crime problems with existing funds, as well as available capacity, by creating useful coalitions with regional and local institutions;

13. Calls upon the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime to continue to work closely with the Institute;

14. Requests the Secretary-General to enhance the promotion of regional cooperation, coordination and collaboration in the fight against crime, especially in its transnational dimension, which cannot be dealt with adequately by national action alone;

15. Also requests the Secretary-General to continue making concrete proposals, including for the provision of additional core professional staff, to strengthen the programmes and activities of the Institute and to report to the General Assembly at its sixty-sixth session on the implementation of the present resolution.

Crime data collection

In response to Economic and Social Council resolution 2009/25 [YUN 2009, p. 1090], the Executive Director of UNODC reported in March [E/CN.15/2010/14] on the activities of the expert group on improving the collection, reporting and analysis of crime data. At its meeting (Buenos Aires, Argentina, 8–10 February), the expert group recommended, among other things, that UNODC, in consultation with Member States and relevant regional bodies, develop a protocol for the identification of agencies responsible for responding to the questionnaire for the Eleventh United Nations Survey of Crime Trends and Operations of Criminal Justice Systems; results from the Survey be disseminated regularly in an electronic format conducive to data analysis; and UNODC continue to strengthen links with relevant international and regional organizations, institutes of the United Nations Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice Programme network and individual Member States with regard to Survey follow-up and data verification. The expert group further called on Member States to provide the necessary extrabudgetary resources to create a sustainable approach to data collection.

Integration and coordination

Transnational organized crime

UN Convention against Transnational Organized Crime

In response to Economic and Social Council resolutions 2005/17 [YUN 2005, p. 1224] and 2006/24 [YUN 2006, p. 1301] and General Assembly resolution 64/179 [YUN 2009, p. 1084], the UNODC Executive Director submitted to the Commission on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice a March report [E/CN.15/2010/8] on international cooperation in combating transnational organized crime and corruption (see p. 1117). The report provided an overview of UNODC activities and complemented the report of the Conference of the Parties to the United Nations Convention against Transnational Organized Crime at its fourth session [YUN 2008, p. 1234], and also reviewed implementation of Council resolution 2009/24 [YUN 2009, p. 1095] on international protection to prevent, combat and eliminate kidnapping and to provide assistance to victims of kidnapping.

The United Nations Convention against Transnational Organized Crime, adopted by Assembly resolution 55/25 [YUN 2000, p. 1048], and its three supplementary Protocols (the Protocol to Prevent, Suppress and Punish Trafficking in Persons, Especially Women and Children [ibid., p. 1063]; the Protocol against the Smuggling of Migrants by Land, Sea and Air [ibid., p. 1067]; the Protocol against the Illicit Manufacturing of and Trafficking in Firearms, Their Parts and Components and Ammunition, adopted by the Assembly in resolution 55/255 [YUN 2001, p. 1036]) continued to attract adherence. As at 31 December, 158 States were parties to the Convention, 142 were parties to the trafficking in persons Protocol, 126 were parties to the migrants Protocol and 83 were parties to the firearms Protocol.

The UNODC Executive Director recommended that the Commission continue to support the work of the Conference of the Parties to the United Nations Convention against Transnational Organized Crime, in particular by reiterating its call upon States to make financial contributions in support of the Conference and related technical assistance activities; explore ways to maintain and strengthen the political momentum necessary for the Conference and working groups to perform their mandated functions; and urge Member States to ratify or accede to the Convention and its Protocols and to take every step to ensure their effective implementation.

High-level meeting on transnational organized crime. On the occasion of the tenth anniversary of the Convention against Transnational Organized Crime and pursuant to General Assembly resolution 64/179 [YUN 2009, p. 1084], a special high-level meeting was held in New York (17 and 21 June) to foster universal adherence to the Convention and its Protocols and to strengthen international cooperation. A Secretariat note of 9 September [CTOC/COP/2010/14] informed the Conference of Parties to the Convention against Transnational Organized Crime, at its fifth session (see p. 1110), of the high-level meeting.

Security Council action. On 24 February, the President of the Security Council, in his statement S/PRST/2010/4 (see p. 1251), noted with concern the serious threats posed in some cases by drug trafficking and transnational organized crime to international security.

Conference of Parties to the Convention

The Conference of the Parties to the United Nations Convention against Transnational Organized Crime, at its fifth session (Vienna, 18–22 October) [CTOC/COP/2010/17], adopted eight resolutions on ensuring effective implementation of the Convention and the Protocols thereto; implementation of the Protocol to Prevent, Suppress and Punish Trafficking in Persons, Especially Women and Children, supplementing the Convention; implementation of the Protocol against the Smuggling of Migrants by Land, Sea and Air, supplementing the Convention; illicit manufacturing of and trafficking in firearms, their parts and components and ammunition; review of the implementation of the Convention and the Protocols thereto; implementation of the provisions on technical assistance of the Convention; combating transnational organized crime against cultural property; and implementation of the provisions on international cooperation of the Convention. The Conference also adopted two decisions on the provisional agenda for the sixth session of the Conference and the establishment of a committee of the whole. The high-level segment of the Conference, held pursuant to General Assembly resolution 64/179 [YUN 2009, p. 1084], discussed new and emerging forms of crime, as well as ways and means of enhancing implementation of the Convention and the Protocols thereto.

The Open-ended Interim Working Group of Government Experts on Technical Assistance, established by the second (2005) session of the Conference of the Parties to the Convention [YUN 2005, p. 1224], held its fifth session (Vienna, 19–20 October) [CTOC/COP/WG.2/2010/1], submitting recommendations for adoption during the fifth session of the Conference.

The Working Group on International Cooperation, established by the third (2006) session of the Conference of the Parties to the Convention [YUN 2007, p. 1134] to hold substantive discussions on practical issues pertaining to extradition, mutual legal assistance and international cooperation for the purpose of confiscation, held its third session (Vienna, 20–21 October) [CTOC/COP/WG.3/2010/1] during the fifth session of the Conference. The Chair of the Working Group presented to the Conference a meeting summary and the Group's recommendations aimed at strengthening international cooperation.

Trafficking in persons

In response to General Assembly resolution 64/178 [YUN 2009, p. 1093], the Secretary-General submitted a July report [A/65/113] summarizing UNODC work in implementing that resolution and containing proposals on strengthening UNODC coordination capacities against trafficking in persons. The report reviewed the work and recommendations of the Inter-Agency Coordination Group against Trafficking in Persons, established pursuant to Assembly resolution 61/180 [YUN 2006, p. 1299]; negotiations for a global plan of action on preventing trafficking in persons, prosecuting traffickers and protecting and assisting victims of trafficking (see below) [YUN 2009, p. 1092]; and input from regional organizations on challenges experienced and best practices in coordinating efforts to prevent and combat trafficking in persons. UNODC expressed its gratitude to donors for the voluntary contributions made available for strengthening its coordinating capacities, and invited Member States to strongly consider increasing the level of regular budget resources to allow the Office to implement its mandates on combating trafficking in persons.

A July report by the Secretariat [CTOC/COP/2010/11] to the fifth (2010) session of the Conference of the Parties to the United Nations Convention against Transnational Organized Crime summarized the activities of the Global Initiative to Fight Human Trafficking (UN.GIFT), launched in 2007 [YUN 2007, p. 1141]. The report reviewed global and collective advocacy efforts to raise awareness of human trafficking; evidence-based knowledge on human trafficking to contribute to global, regional and national policy development; coordination and cooperation among international organizations and innovative public-private partnerships; capacity-building of stakeholders through the delivery of technical assistance; and an independent evaluation of UN.GIFT, to be conducted in 2010 and 2011. The report concluded that UN.GIFT represented an innovative concept in the work of the United Nations on preventing and combating human trafficking. The initiative had carried out consultations with Member States in order to ensure ownership in the implementation of its activities, and was directly supporting Member States through multi-agency joint programmes and targeted technical assistance activities. It was working closely with international and regional organizations that had complementary mandates relating to trafficking in persons, and had involved and partnered with civil society organizations and engaged the private sector in various prevention activities. The report noted that the UN.GIFT work programme had been extended until the end of 2010 so that foreseen activities could be completed. The project's strategy for that year had been revised in order to streamline UN.GIFT activities and better respond to the capacity-building needs of stakeholders with the core areas of that strategy, including awareness-raising, multi-stakeholder coordination and cooperation, civil society and private sector partnerships, multi-agency research and a UN.GIFT virtual knowledge hub.

The Working Group on Trafficking in Persons, established by the fourth (2008) session of the Conference of Parties to the United Nations Convention against Transnational Organized Crime [YUN 2008, p. 1234] held its second meeting (Vienna, 27–29 January). An August report by the Chair of the Working Group [CTOC/COP/2010/6] provided an overview of the Group's activities, particularly the recommendations adopted at its 2009 and 2010 meetings.

Communications. In a 24 February letter [A/64/691] to the Secretary-General and the President of the General Assembly, Bahrain, Bangladesh, Belarus, Bolivia, Ecuador, Egypt, India, Kazakhstan, Kyrgyzstan, Nicaragua, Nigeria, the Philippines, Qatar, the Russian Federation, Tajikistan, Turkmenistan, the United Arab Emirates, Uzbekistan and Venezuela drew attention to the establishment of the Group of Friends United against Human Trafficking, and submitted a non-paper by the Group containing arguments in favour of the elaboration of a global plan of action against trafficking in persons and possible substantive elements of the future document. In a further letter of 1 October [A/65/497], Belarus, on behalf of the Group of Friends, transmitted to the President of the General Assembly the Declaration on the Global Efforts to Combat Trafficking in Persons, adopted at the Group's ministerial meeting on 22 September. By a 10 June letter [A/64/817], Qatar transmitted to the Secretary-General the outcome of the Arab Initiative for Building National Capacities to Combat Human Trafficking: Doha Founding Forum (Doha, Qatar, 22–23 March).

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 30 July [meeting 109], the General Assembly adopted resolution 64/293 [draft: A/64/L.64] without vote [agenda item 104].

United Nations Global Plan of Action to Combat Trafficking in Persons

The General Assembly,

Guided by the purposes and principles of the Charter of the United Nations, and reaffirming its role under the Charter, including on issues related to development, peace and security and human rights,

Reiterating its strong condemnation of trafficking in persons, especially women and children, which constitutes a serious threat to human dignity, human rights and development,

Recognizing that poverty, unemployment, lack of socioeconomic opportunities, gender-based violence, discrimination and marginalization are some of the contributing factors that make persons vulnerable to trafficking in persons,

Recalling the United Nations Millennium Declaration adopted on 8 September 2000, in which Member States resolved to intensify efforts to fight transnational crime in all its dimensions, including trafficking in human beings,

Recalling also the 2005 World Summit Outcome adopted by the General Assembly on 16 September 2005, noting that trafficking in persons continues to pose a serious challenge to humanity and requires a concerted international response, and urging all States to devise, enforce and strengthen effective measures to combat and eliminate all forms of trafficking in persons in order to counter the demand for trafficked victims and to protect them,

Reaffirming its resolution 55/25 of 15 November 2000, by which it adopted the United Nations Convention against Transnational Organized Crime and the Protocol to Prevent, Suppress and Punish Trafficking in Persons, Especially Women and Children, supplementing the United Nations Convention against Transnational Organized Crime, and recalling other related conventions and instruments, such as the Forced Labour Convention, 1930 (No. 29) and the Worst Forms of Child Labour Convention, 1999 (No. 182) of the International Labour Organization, the Supplementary Convention on the Abolition of Slavery, the Slave Trade, and Institutions and Practices Similar to Slavery, the Convention on the Rights of the Child and the Optional Protocols thereto on the sale of children, child prostitution and child pornography and on the involvement of children in armed conflict, and the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women,

Recognizing the crucial importance of the Protocol to Prevent, Suppress and Punish Trafficking in Persons, Especially Women and Children, which entered into force on 25 December 2003 and provided for the first time an internationally agreed definition of the crime of trafficking in persons, aimed at the prevention of trafficking in persons, protection of its victims and prosecution of its perpetrators,

Recalling all General Assembly resolutions on measures to eliminate trafficking in persons, including resolutions 61/180 of 20 December 2006, 63/194 of 18 December 2008 and 64/178 of 18 December 2009 on improving the coordination of efforts against trafficking in persons, resolution 61/144 of 19 December 2006 on trafficking in women and girls, and resolution 58/137 of 22 December 2003 on strengthening international cooperation in preventing and combating trafficking in persons and protecting victims of such trafficking,

Reaffirming Commission on Human Rights decision 2004/110 of 19 April 2004, by which the Commission appointed the Special Rapporteur on trafficking in persons, especially women and children, to highlight the importance of a victim-centred, rights-based approach to combating trafficking in persons, especially women and children, Human Rights Council resolution 6/14 of 28 September 2007, by which the Council appointed the Special Rapporteur on contemporary forms of slavery, including its causes and consequences, Commission on Human Rights resolution 1990/68 of 7 March 1990, by which the Commission appointed the Special Rapporteur on the sale of children, child prostitution and child pornography, and General Assembly resolution 62/141 of 18 December 2007, in which the Assembly requested the Secretary-General to appoint a Special Representative on violence against children, and noting the appointment of the Special Representative of the Secretary-General on sexual violence in conflict,

Recalling that, pursuant to the request of the Economic and Social Council in resolution 2006/27 of 27 July 2006

on strengthening international cooperation in preventing and combating trafficking in persons and protecting victims of such trafficking, reinforced by the General Assembly in resolution 61/180, on improving the coordination of efforts against trafficking in persons, the Inter-Agency Coordination Group against Trafficking in Persons was established to foster coordination and cooperation among relevant United Nations agencies and other international organizations involved in combating human trafficking,

Recognizing that the launching in March 2007 of the United Nations Global Initiative to Fight Human Trafficking by the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime, in partnership with the International Labour Organization, the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights, the United Nations Children's Fund, the Organization for Security and Cooperation in Europe and the International Organization for Migration, and the Vienna Forum to Fight Human Trafficking, held from 13 to 15 February 2008, provided all anti-trafficking actors, including the United Nations, Governments and civil society organizations, with a global forum to share their respective experiences and further highlighted the need collectively to address human trafficking in a multifaceted and holistic manner,

Recalling the thematic debate on human trafficking held by the General Assembly on 3 June 2008, which gave Member States a forum for discussion concentrating on the three Ps, prevention, protection and prosecution, and the interactive thematic dialogue on the theme "Taking collective action to end human trafficking", held by the Assembly on 13 May 2009, which underlined the importance of strengthening collective action by Member States and other stakeholders, including regional and international organizations, non-governmental organizations, the private sector and the media,

Recognizing the importance of the Conference of the Parties to the United Nations Convention against Transnational Organized Crime, which was established to improve the capacity of States parties to combat transnational organized crime and to promote and review the implementation of the Convention and the Protocol to Prevent, Suppress and Punish Trafficking in Persons, Especially Women and Children,

Recognizing also decisions 1/5 of 7 July 2004, 2/3 of 20 October 2005, 3/3 of 18 October 2006 and 4/4 of 17 October 2008 concerning the implementation of the Protocol to Prevent, Suppress and Punish Trafficking in Persons, Especially Women and Children, adopted by the Conference of the Parties to the Convention,

Recalling relevant subregional, regional and cross-regional mechanisms and initiatives, such as the Arab Initiative for Building National Capacities to Combat Human Trafficking; the Doha Founding Forum; the Asia-Europe Meeting Action Plan to Combat Trafficking in Persons, Especially Women and Children; the Association of South-east Asian Nations Declaration against Trafficking in Persons, Particularly Women and Children; the Bali Process on People Smuggling, Trafficking in Persons and Related Transnational Crime; the Black Sea Economic Cooperation Organization Action Plan on Cooperation in Combating Crime, in particular in Its Organized Forms; the Council of the Baltic Sea States Task Force against Trafficking in Human Beings; the Commonwealth of Independent States Agreement on Cooperation in Combating Trafficking in Persons, Human Organs and Tissues; the Central American Coalition against Trafficking in Persons; the Co-ordinated Mekong Ministerial Initiative against Trafficking; the Council of Europe Convention on Action against Trafficking in Human Beings; the Declaration on the Fight against Trafficking in Persons of the Economic Community of West African States; the Joint Plan of Action to Combat Trafficking in Persons, Especially Women and Children, of the Economic Community of West African States and the Economic Community of Central African States; the Manama International Conference on Human Trafficking at the Crossroads: the Private-Public Partnership to Fight Human Trafficking; the Southern Common Market (MERCOSUR) Plan of Action to Combat Trafficking in Persons; the Organization of American States Work Plan to Combat Trafficking in Persons in the Western Hemisphere; the Ouagadougou Action Plan to Combat Trafficking in Human Beings, Especially Women and Children; the Organization for Security and Cooperation in Europe Action Plan to Combat Trafficking in Human Beings; the Plan of Action of the Regional Conference on Migration; the South Asian Association for Regional Cooperation Convention on Preventing and Combating Trafficking in Women and Children for Prostitution; the Stability Pact for South-Eastern Europe Task Force on Trafficking in Human Beings, of the Organization for Security and Cooperation in Europe; and the Stockholm Programme for 2010–2014 of the European Union and its Action Plan setting up priorities in the field of justice and home affairs and establishing an anti-trafficking coordinator,

Recognizing the need to develop a global plan of action against trafficking in persons that will:

(a) Promote universal ratification of the United Nations Convention against Transnational Organized Crime and the Protocol to Prevent, Suppress and Punish Trafficking in Persons, Especially Women and Children, as well as other relevant international instruments that address trafficking in persons, and reinforce the implementation of existing instruments against trafficking in persons,

(b) Help Member States to reinforce their political commitments and legal obligations to prevent and combat trafficking in persons,

(c) Promote comprehensive, coordinated and consistent responses, at the national, regional and international levels, to counter trafficking in persons,

(d) Promote a human rights-based, gender- and age-sensitive approach in addressing all factors that make people vulnerable to trafficking in persons and strengthening the criminal justice response, which are necessary to prevent trafficking in persons, protect its victims and prosecute its perpetrators,

(e) Raise awareness within the United Nations system and also among States and other stakeholders, such as the private sector, civil society and the international and national mass media, and the public at large,

(f) Foster cooperation and coordination among all relevant stakeholders, including Member States, international organizations, civil society organizations and the private sector, and within various entities of the United Nations system, taking into account existing best practices and lessons learned,

1. Adopts the present resolution and its annex as the United Nations Global Plan of Action to Combat Trafficking in Persons;

2. Decides to formally launch the Plan of Action at a one-day, high-level meeting of the General Assembly, and urges Member States, the United Nations and other international, regional and subregional organizations as well as civil society, including non-governmental organizations, the private sector and the media, to fully and effectively implement the relevant provisions of the Plan of Action and the activities outlined therein;

3. Urges Member States that have not yet done so to consider ratifying or acceding to, as a matter of priority, the United Nations Convention against Transnational Organized Crime and the Protocol to Prevent, Suppress and Punish Trafficking in Persons, Especially Women and Children, supplementing the United Nations Convention against Transnational Organized Crime, taking into consideration the central role of those instruments in the fight against trafficking in persons, and also urges States parties to those instruments to implement them fully and effectively;

4. Decides to establish, in accordance with paragraph 38 of the annex to the present resolution, the United Nations Voluntary Trust Fund for Victims of Trafficking in Persons, Especially Women and Children, and requests the Secretary-General to take all necessary measures for its effective operation, and acknowledges previous and ongoing contributions to other funding sources that support efforts to combat trafficking in persons;

5. Requests the Secretary-General to include a section on the implementation by the United Nations system of the Plan of Action, within already existing reporting obligations to the General Assembly under the item on crime prevention and criminal justice;

6. Decides to appraise in 2013 the progress achieved in the implementation of the Plan of Action, and requests the Secretary-General to take all necessary measures in that regard;

7. Requests the Secretary-General to present proposals to finance the staffing and programmatic requirements of the Secretariat necessary to strengthen the capacity of the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime as described in the Plan of Action through a reallocation of resources in the context of the proposed programme budget for the biennium 2012–2013.

ANNEX

United Nations Global Plan of Action to Combat Trafficking in Persons

We, the States Members of the United Nations, reaffirm our commitments to end the heinous crime of trafficking in persons, especially women and children, express our determination to prevent and combat trafficking in persons, protect and assist victims of trafficking in persons, prosecute crimes of trafficking in persons and promote partnerships to strengthen coordination and cooperation, and resolve to translate our political will into concrete actions by adopting an action plan to:

1. Consistently and strongly condemn trafficking in persons, which constitutes a criminal activity violating human dignity and has negative effects on development, peace and security and human rights;

2. Recognize that “trafficking in persons” shall mean the recruitment, transportation, transfer, harbouring or receipt of persons, by means of the threat or use of force or other forms of coercion, of abduction, of fraud, of deception, of the abuse of power or of a position of vulnerability or of the giving or receiving of payments or benefits to achieve the consent of a person having control over another person, for the purpose of exploitation, which includes, at a minimum, the exploitation of the prostitution of others or other forms of sexual exploitation, forced labour or services, slavery or practices similar to slavery, servitude or the removal of organs, as set forth in the Protocol to Prevent, Suppress and Punish Trafficking in Persons, Especially Women and Children, supplementing the United Nations Convention against Transnational Organized Crime (hereinafter referred to as “the Trafficking Protocol”);

3. Ensure that the promotion and protection of the human rights of victims of trafficking in persons, the prevention of trafficking in persons by addressing the social, economic, cultural, political and other contributing factors and the strengthening of the criminal justice response are at the centre of all efforts to prevent and combat trafficking in persons and to protect, assist and provide redress to victims;

4. Take urgent action to prevent trafficking in persons, protect its victims and prosecute its perpetrators and strengthen partnerships to these ends by promoting and considering, as a priority, ratifying or acceding to the United Nations Convention against Transnational Organized Crime and the Trafficking Protocol, as well as other relevant international instruments, including the Forced Labour Convention, 1930 (No. 29) and the Worst Forms of Child Labour Convention, 1999 (No. 182) of the International Labour Organization, the Supplementary Convention on the Abolition of Slavery, the Slave Trade, and Institutions and Practices Similar to Slavery, the Convention on the Rights of the Child and the Optional Protocols thereto on the sale of children, child prostitution and child pornography and on the involvement of children in armed conflict, and the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women;

5. Recognize that, in accordance with article 32 of the United Nations Convention against Transnational Organized Crime, the Conference of the Parties to the Convention is established to improve the capacity of States parties to promote and review the implementation of the Convention, including the Trafficking Protocol, and take note of ongoing initiatives aimed at exploring options regarding an appropriate and effective mechanism to assist the Conference of the Parties in the review of the implementation of the Convention;

6. Take into account the activities and recommendations of the open-ended interim Working Group on Trafficking in Persons established by the Conference of the Parties to the Convention;

7. Support the Human Rights Council and contribute to its work on the question of the promotion and protection of human rights for all in the fight against trafficking in persons;

8. Support the role and mandates of the Special Rapporteurs on trafficking in persons, especially women and children, on contemporary forms of slavery, including its causes and consequences, on violence against women, its causes and consequences, and on the sale of children, child prostitution and child pornography, the Special Representatives of the Secretary-General on violence against children and on sexual violence in conflict, and other relevant special rapporteurs and representatives. The mandate holders should assist States by offering concrete advice, liaising with the United Nations and regional organizations and reporting on these issues;

9. Reaffirm the central role of the work of the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime in the global fight against trafficking in persons, particularly in providing technical assistance to implement the Convention and the Trafficking Protocol, by making use of existing capacity-building tools, lessons learned and expertise available in international organizations, including the International Framework for Action to Implement the Trafficking in Persons Protocol;

10. Reaffirm the important work of the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights, the United Nations Children's Fund, the International Labour Organization and the International Organization for Migration in the global fight against trafficking in persons;

11. Strongly urge all responsible United Nations entities to coordinate their efforts to fight trafficking in persons effectively and to protect the human rights of its victims, including by means of the Inter-Agency Coordination Group against Trafficking in Persons and the United Nations Global Initiative to Fight Human Trafficking;

I. Prevention of trafficking in persons

12. Address the social, economic, cultural, political and other factors that make people vulnerable to trafficking in persons, such as poverty, unemployment, inequality, humanitarian emergencies, including armed conflicts and natural disasters, sexual violence, gender discrimination, social exclusion and marginalization, as well as a culture of tolerance towards violence against women, youth and children;

13. Make a commitment to address all forms of trafficking in persons wherever they occur;

14. Mainstream the issue of trafficking in persons into the broader policies and programmes of the United Nations aimed at addressing economic and social development, human rights, the rule of law, good governance, education and natural disaster and post-conflict reconstruction;

15. Adopt and implement comprehensive policies and programmes at the national level and, as appropriate, at the subregional and regional levels to prevent all forms of trafficking in persons that are in line with relevant policies and programmes on migration, education, employment, gender equality, empowerment of women and crime prevention, in accordance with relevant international human rights instruments;

16. Conduct research and collect suitably disaggregated data that would enable proper analysis of the nature and extent of trafficking in persons;

17. Develop or strengthen processes for the identification of victims, such as those developed, inter alia, by the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime and other organizations, including appropriate and non-discriminatory measures that help to identify victims of trafficking in persons among vulnerable populations;

18. Promote awareness-raising campaigns aimed at persons at risk of being trafficked and at the general public through education and the effective involvement of the mass media, non-governmental organizations, the private sector and community leaders with a view to discouraging the demand that fosters the exploitation of persons, especially women and children, and that leads to trafficking, and collect and disseminate best practices on the implementation of those campaigns;

19. Stress the role of education in raising awareness about the prevention of trafficking in persons, and promote education, in particular human rights education, and human rights learning as a sustainable way of preventing trafficking in persons;

20. Reinforce efforts regarding the provision of identity documents, such as the registration of births, in order to lower the risk of being trafficked and to help to identify victims of trafficking in persons;

21. Increase and support prevention efforts in countries of origin, transit and destination by focusing on the demand that fosters all forms of trafficking and the goods and services produced as a result of trafficking in persons;

22. Adopt and implement specific measures at the national level to combat trafficking for labour exploitation and strive to educate consumers on those measures;

23. Strengthen or continue to strengthen the capacity of law enforcement, immigration, education, social welfare, labour and other relevant officials in the prevention of trafficking in persons, taking into account the need to respect human rights and child- and gender-sensitive issues, and encourage cooperation, where appropriate, with civil society, non-governmental organizations and other relevant organizations;

24. Encourage the United Nations to intensify its work with Member States and relevant international, regional and subregional organizations to identify and share best practices to prevent trafficking in persons;

II. Protection of and assistance to victims of trafficking in persons

25. Reaffirm that the promotion and protection of human rights for all and effective measures to respond to trafficking in persons are complementary and mutually reinforcing;

26. Stress the need to promote and protect the rights of victims of trafficking in persons and to reintegrate victims into the community by taking into account the Recommended Principles and Guidelines on Human Rights and Human Trafficking developed by the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights and the Guidelines on the Protection of Child Victims of Trafficking developed by the United Nations Children's Fund;

27. Ensure that victims of trafficking in persons are treated as victims of crime and that national legislation effectively criminalizes all forms of trafficking;

28. Review existing national services available to victims of trafficking in persons, consistent with the Convention and the Trafficking Protocol, strengthen those services where needed, and support the establishment or strengthening of appropriate referral mechanisms;

29. Strengthen or continue to strengthen the capacity of relevant officials likely to encounter and identify possible victims of trafficking in persons, such as law enforcement personnel, border control officers, labour inspectors, consular or embassy officials, judges and prosecutors and peacekeepers, and ensure the availability of needed resources to the relevant sectors and institutions, including those of civil society;

30. Urge Governments to take all appropriate measures to ensure that identified victims of trafficking in persons are not penalized for having been trafficked and that they do not suffer from victimization as a result of actions taken by Government authorities;

31. Protect the privacy and identity and ensure the safety of victims of trafficking in persons before, during and after criminal proceedings and protect immediate family members and witnesses, as appropriate, from retaliation by traffickers by ensuring their safety in accordance with articles 24 and 25 of the Convention;

32. Provide assistance and services for the physical, psychological and social recovery and rehabilitation of trafficked persons, in cooperation with non-governmental organizations and other relevant organizations and sectors of civil society;

33. Urge States parties to consider adopting legislative or other appropriate measures that permit victims of trafficking in persons to remain in their territory, temporarily or permanently, in appropriate cases, consistent with the Convention and the Trafficking Protocol;

34. Ensure that countries of origin accept back their nationals who are victims of trafficking in persons and guarantee that such return is conducted with due regard for safety and shall preferably be voluntary, consistent with the Convention and the Trafficking Protocol;

35. Adopt labour laws in countries of origin, transit and destination which provide legal rights and protections for workers that would limit their risk of being trafficked;

36. Provide specialized services to identified victims of trafficking in persons, consistent with the Convention and the Trafficking Protocol and other relevant instruments, including access to health services, such as access to prevention, treatment, care and support services for HIV and AIDS and other blood-borne and communicable diseases for those victims of trafficking in persons that have been sexually exploited, taking into account the fact that human trafficking for the purposes of sexual exploitation has serious, immediate and long-term implications for health, including sexual and reproductive health;

37. Provide appropriate assistance and protection in the best interest of the child to child victims of trafficking in persons or to those at risk of being trafficked, including through appropriate services and measures for the physical and psychological well-being of child victims of trafficking in persons and for their education, rehabilitation and reintegration, in coordination with existing child protection systems;

38. Establish the United Nations Voluntary Trust Fund for Victims of Trafficking in Persons, Especially Women and Children, to provide humanitarian, legal and financial aid to victims of trafficking in persons through established channels of assistance, such as governmental, intergovernmental and non-governmental organizations, which shall operate as a subsidiary fund of the United Nations Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice Fund managed by the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime, and shall be administered in accordance with the Financial Regulations and Rules of the United Nations and other relevant provisions, with the advice of a board of trustees composed of five persons with relevant experience in the field of trafficking in persons who shall be appointed with due regard to equitable geographical distribution by the Secretary-General in consultation with Member States and with the Executive Director of the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime;

39. Adopt measures to ensure that victims of trafficking in persons can seek compensation for the damage suffered, consistent with the Convention and the Trafficking Protocol;

40. Acknowledge the important role of civil society organizations in providing assistance and empowerment to victims of trafficking in persons, helping them to seek redress and facilitating the care of and provision of appropriate services to victims, including close cooperation and coordination with law enforcement officials;

41. Ensure that domestic legal or administrative systems include measures to provide information to victims of trafficking in persons, in a language they understand, regarding their legal rights and the relevant court and administrative proceedings and facilitate their access to assistance in order to enable their views and concerns to be presented and considered at appropriate stages of such proceedings against offenders in a manner not prejudicial to the rights of the defence, consistent with the Convention and the Trafficking Protocol;

42. Provide victims of trafficking in persons with an adequate period of time to recover and the opportunity to consult with appropriate advisers to assist in decision-making regarding cooperation with law enforcement and their participation in judicial proceedings;

III. Prosecution of crimes of trafficking in persons

43. Implement all relevant legal instruments that criminalize trafficking in persons, including by:

(a) Prosecuting crimes of trafficking in persons that encompass all forms of exploitation and enacting, enforcing and strengthening legislation that criminalizes all trafficking in persons, especially women and children;

(b) Adopting legislation and other measures, as necessary, to establish as criminal offences attempting to commit an offence, participating as an accomplice in an offence and organizing or directing other persons to commit an offence, as set out in the Trafficking Protocol, the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women, the Convention on the Rights of the Child and the Optional Protocols thereto and other relevant instruments, as applicable;

(c) Combating and prosecuting organized criminal groups engaged in trafficking in persons;

44. Ensure the liability of all categories of perpetrators of trafficking in persons, including the liability of legal persons and entities, as appropriate, in line with relevant international instruments;

45. Enhance efforts to investigate alleged cases of trafficking, strengthen means to combat trafficking, prosecute perpetrators, including through more systematic use of freezing assets for the purpose of eventual confiscation, in accordance with the provisions of article 12 of the United Nations Convention against Transnational Organized Crime, and ensure that penalties are proportionate to the gravity of the crime;

46. Make use of the available technical assistance provided to strengthen the criminal justice response to trafficking in persons, including by the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime;

47. Investigate, prosecute and punish corrupt public officials who engage in or facilitate trafficking in persons and promote a zero-tolerance policy against those corrupt officials, consistent with the United Nations Convention against Corruption and the United Nations Convention against Transnational Organized Crime;

48. Strengthen or continue to strengthen coordination and cooperation among States in combating crimes that might be connected with trafficking in persons, including money-laundering, corruption, smuggling of migrants and all forms of organized crime;

49. Encourage the law enforcement, immigration, border patrol or other relevant authorities of concerned States to cooperate with one another by exchanging information with full respect for domestic laws, such as data protection laws, and continue to promote cooperation among countries of origin, transit and destination in order to enhance investigations, prosecutions and detection of trafficking networks;

IV. Strengthening of partnerships against trafficking in persons

50. Recognize that capacity-building is a very important component in combating trafficking in persons and encourage and enhance coordination and coherence within the United Nations system;

51. Encourage effective cooperation and coordination of efforts at the national, bilateral, subregional, regional and international levels, especially among countries of origin, transit and destination, and take advantage of the networks provided by relevant organizations to share best practices in capacity-building for responding to and combating trafficking in persons, while stressing the importance of mutual legal assistance efforts and the exchange of information with full respect for domestic laws, such as data protection laws, including operational information, programmes and best practices in supplementing the Convention and the work done by the Conference of the Parties to the Convention;

52. Conclude and implement mutual legal assistance and extradition agreements, where appropriate, to apprehend and prosecute perpetrators of trafficking in persons, in accordance with the relevant provisions of national and international law, including the Convention;

53. Promote cooperation and coordination among governmental institutions, civil society and the private sector, including the media, as well as workers' and employers' organizations, to strengthen prevention and protection policies and programmes;

54. Strengthen cooperation among law enforcement agencies, regionally and internationally;

55. Intensify international, regional and subregional cooperation to combat trafficking in persons, as well as technical assistance for countries of origin, transit and destination aimed at strengthening their ability to prevent all forms of trafficking in persons;

56. Strengthen and support the Inter-Agency Coordination Group against Trafficking in Persons in order to improve coordination and cooperation among relevant United Nations bodies, including the human rights treaty bodies and mechanisms, and other international organizations;

57. Encourage the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime, other agencies, funds and programmes of the United Nations system and international and regional organizations to continue to assist Member States, upon request, to strengthen policymaking, legislative arrangements, border control and law enforcement cooperation, public awareness campaigns and capacity-building and to exchange and build upon best practices in assisting victims of trafficking in persons;

58. Further encourage agencies, funds and programmes of the United Nations system to continue to improve the coherence and efficiency of technical assistance delivery in the field of trafficking in persons, in accordance with the recommendations of the Open-ended Intergovernmental Working Group of Governmental Experts on Technical Assistance established by the Conference of the Parties to the Convention;

59. Urge the Secretary-General to expedite the strengthening of the Inter-Agency Coordination Group against Trafficking in Persons under the coordination of the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime in order to ensure overall organization and coherence in the efforts of the United Nations system to respond to trafficking in persons;

60. Request the Secretary-General, as a matter of priority, to strengthen the capacity of the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime to collect information and report biennially, starting in 2012, on patterns and flows of trafficking in persons at the national, regional and international levels in a balanced, reliable and comprehensive manner, in close cooperation and collaboration with Member States, and share best practices and lessons learned from various initiatives and mechanisms;

61. Encourage Member States to consider making voluntary contributions to the work of the United Nations in combating human trafficking, and to explore additional sources of funding in this regard, including reaching out to the private sector for contributions.

On 13 December, by resolution 65/130 on cooperation between the United Nations and the Council of Europe, the General Assembly encouraged the Council to continue cooperation with the United Nations in the fight against trafficking in persons and welcomed the adoption of the UN Global Plan of Action to Combat Trafficking in Persons.

On 31 December, the Assembly adopted resolution 65/190 on trafficking in women and girls, in which it urged Member States to consider ratifying or acceding to the Convention against Transnational Organized Crime and its supplementary Protocol to Prevent, Suppress and Punish Trafficking in Persons, Especially Women and Children; and urged Member States, the United Nations, and international, regional and subregional organizations and civil society to implement the relevant provisions of the UN Global Plan of Action to Combat Trafficking in Persons and the activities outlined therein.

Corruption

United Nations Convention against Corruption

In response to Economic and Social Council resolutions 2005/17 [YUN 2005, p. 1224] and 2006/24 [YUN 2006, p. 1301], and General Assembly resolution 64/179 [YUN 2009, p. 1084], the UNODC Executive Director submitted to the Commission on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice a March report [E/CN.15/2010/8] on international cooperation in combating transnational organized crime and corruption, which provided an overview of UNODC activities and complemented the report of the Conference of the States Parties to the United Nations Convention against Corruption at its third session [YUN 2009, p. 1096]. The report reviewed the work of the Conference, particularly the outcome of its third session [YUN 2009, p. 1096] and implementation of Conference resolutions, and UNODC activities in promoting the Convention's ratification and implementation.

The UNODC Executive Director recommended that the Commission continue to support the work of the Conference; reiterate its call upon States to make financial contributions in support of the Conference, related technical assistance activities and the newly established review mechanism of the Convention against Corruption; explore ways to maintain and strengthen the political momentum necessary for the Conference and working groups to perform their mandated functions; and urge Member States to ratify or accede to the Convention against Corruption and to take every step to ensure its effective implementation.

As at 31 December, 148 States were parties to the Convention.

Conference of States Parties to the Convention

The Conference of States Parties to the United Nations Convention against Corruption, at its third (2009) session [YUN 2009, p. 1096], established the Mechanism for the Review and Implementation of the Convention, designed as an intergovernmental process to assist States in implementing the Convention. The Implementation Review Group, established pursuant to the terms of reference of the Review Mechanism to oversee the review process, held its first session (28 June–2 July) [CAC/COSP/IRG/2010/7] and the resumed first session (29 November–1 December) [CAC/COSP/IRG/2010/7 & Add.1], as well as an intersessional meeting (23 August) [CAC/COSP/IRG/2010/10], all in Vienna.

The Working Group on Asset Recovery, established by the first (2006) session of the Conference of the States Parties [YUN 2006, p. 1303], held its fourth intersessional meeting (16–17 December) in Vienna [CAC/COSP/WG.2/2010/4].

The Open-ended Intergovernmental Working Group on the Prevention of Corruption, established by the third (2009) session of the Conference of the States Parties [YUN 2009, p. 1092], held its first intersessional meeting (13–15 December), also in Vienna [CAC/COSP/WG.4/2010/7].

Assets of illicit origin

In response to General Assembly resolution 64/237 [YUN 2009, p. 1097], the Secretary-General submitted a June report [A/65/90] on preventing and combating corrupt practices and transfer of assets of illicit origin and returning such assets, in particular to the countries of origin, consistent with the United Nations Convention against Corruption. The report contained information on the outcome of the third session of the Conference of the States Parties to the United Nations Convention against Corruption [YUN 2009, p. 1096], particularly the establishment of the Mechanism for the Review of Implementation of the Convention (see above); initiatives to accumulate knowledge on the measures taken by States to prevent and combat corruption; anti-corruption and asset recovery initiatives, namely the joint UNODC/World Bank Stolen Asset Recovery Initiative, the International Anti-Corruption Academy, cooperation with the private sector and technical assistance for the implementation of the Convention; and matters related to resources.

The Secretary-General concluded that the continuing increase in the number of parties to the Convention was evidence that it was becoming a truly global, fully operational instrument, and that every effort should be made to increase the number of ratifications and to implement the provisions of the Convention. He noted that the establishment of the Mechanism for the Review of Implementation of the Convention was a historic step towards the full implementation of the Convention and the adoption of a transparent, knowledge-based approach to technical assistance. Its success depended on the full commitment and constructive engagement of all States parties. The Secretary-General recommended that the General Assembly encourage Member States to support the work of the Review Mechanism and encourage donors to provide voluntary contributions where relevant; make use of the comprehensive self-assessment tool approved by the Conference of States Parties at its third session, which was developed by UNODC as the main tool for gathering information on measures taken to implement the Convention and on technical assistance needs and ongoing activities; invest time, energy and resources in implementing the asset recovery provisions of the Convention; and designate central authorities for mutual legal assistance in order to facilitate asset recovery and asset recovery focal points with a view to establishing a global asset recovery focal point network, and authorities to assist other States parties in developing and implementing specific measures for the prevention of corruption.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 20 December [meeting 69], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Second Committee [A/65/438/Add.2], adopted resolution 65/169 without vote [agenda item 22 (b)].

Preventing and combating corrupt practices and transfer of assets of illicit origin and returning such assets, in particular to the countries of origin, consistent with the United Nations Convention against Corruption

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 54/205 of 22 December 1999, 55/61 of 4 December 2000, 55/188 of 20 December 2000, 56/186 of 21 December 2001 and 57/244 of 20 December 2002, and recalling also its resolutions 58/205 of 23 December 2003, 59/242 of 22 December 2004, 60/207 of 22 December 2005, 61/209 of 20 December 2006, 62/202 of 19 December 2007, 63/226 of 19 December 2008 and 64/237 of 24 December 2009,

1. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General;
2. Requests the Secretary-General to submit to the General Assembly at its sixty-seventh session, under the item entitled "Crime prevention and criminal justice", a report on preventing and combating corrupt practices and recovering and returning assets of illicit origin, in particular to the countries of origin, consistent with the United Nations Convention against Corruption, and also to transmit to the Assembly a report on the fourth session of the Conference of the States Parties to the Convention;
3. Decides to continue the consideration of this issue at its sixty-seventh session under the item entitled "Crime prevention and criminal justice".

Terrorism

In a March report [E/CN.15/2010/9] to the Commission on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice and a June report [A/65/91] prepared pursuant to General Assembly resolution 64/177 [YUN 2009, p. 1100], the Secretary-General reviewed UNODC activities from January 2009 to April 2010, particularly those of its Terrorism Prevention Branch in delivering assistance to Member States on legal and related capacity-building in the area of counter-terrorism. The report identified the challenges of adequately responding to Member States' evolving needs with respect to the criminal justice aspects of countering terrorism, and emphasized the need for enhanced governmental support to meet those challenges. Since 2003, the Terrorism Prevention Branch had supported 168 countries in ratifying and implementing the international legal instruments against terrorism and in strengthening the capacity of their criminal justice systems to implement the provisions of those instruments in conformity with the rule of law. The Branch pursued a multi-pronged approach for strengthening the international legal regime against terrorism, based on tailored national-level assistance; regional and subregional activities to support and complement national activities; and the development of technical assistance tools and specialized substantive publications. During the period under review, assistance was provided to 81 countries; delegations from Afghanistan, Algeria, Azerbaijan, Costa Rica, Pakistan and Yemen were brought to Vienna for working sessions with the Branch and other UNODC entities; and 25 thematically focused regional and subregional workshops were held. In cooperation with other partners, the Branch organized and participated in specialized activities addressing international cooperation in criminal matters related to counter-terrorism; maritime security; suppressing the financing of terrorism; preventing nuclear, chemical, biological and radiological terrorism; and enhancing procedural aspects of countering terrorism related to the rule of law. The delivery of technical assistance was fostered through partnerships and coordination with other entities and organizations, including cooperation with the Counter-Terrorism Committee of the Security Council and its Executive Directorate; participation by UNODC in the Counter-Terrorism Implementation Task Force; numerous international partnerships; and cooperation with recipient and donor countries.

With regard to evaluating delivery and assessing impact, the Branch had taken action to implement the recommendations made by the comprehensive 2007 evaluation of the Global Project on Strengthening the Legal Regime against Terrorism, including by developing a comprehensive strategy that laid out its vision, focus and approach regarding capacity development. Since 2003, the Branch had assisted Member States in completing some 529 ratifications of the international legal instruments, and at least 69 States assisted by the Branch had taken steps to incorporate the provisions of the international legal instruments into national legislation.

The Secretary-General noted that much work remained to be done to achieve universal adherence and full implementation of the international instruments. Challenges included enhancing the delivery of assistance for the ratification and legislative implementation of the international instruments in line with the evolving needs of Member States and mobilizing increased financial support from them. It was imperative to sustain support for efforts to strengthen the legal regime against terrorism and the delivery of assistance for enhancing related national capacities. Establishing a criminal justice response to terrorism based on the rule of law was key to global counter-terrorism efforts and the backbone and prerequisite for other initiatives. There was a need for more sustained capacity-building, particularly assistance for criminal justice practitioners involved in the investigation and adjudication of concrete cases. The Branch should also provide capacity-building assistance with regard to criminal justice aspects of providing support for victims of terrorism and make increased use of online and computer-based courses to implement its global mandate. The Secretary-General recommended that the General Assembly invite the bodies of the Security Council dealing with counter-terrorism, the office of the Counter-Terrorism Implementation Task Force and relevant international, regional and subregional organizations to enhance their cooperation with UNODC on counter-terrorism issues, as well as provide guidance on how UNODC and other UN entities working on such issues could maximize the complementarity of their mandated work. Member States should provide sufficient resources to ensure the sustainability of the Branch's counter-terrorism technical assistance work.

On 6 December, the General Assembly adopted resolution 65/34 on measures to eliminate international terrorism (see p. 1331).

UN standards and norms

The Commission on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice had before it a February report [E/CN.15/2010/12] by the Secretary-General on the use and application of UN standards and norms in crime prevention and criminal justice, which included an overview of the main activities carried out by UNODC over the previous year to assist countries in using and applying relevant standards and norms and to facilitate the negotiation and adoption of new ones. UNODC activities were based on the three pillars of normative work, operational work, and research and analytical work. The Office's normative work focused on the development and negotiation of new standards regarding the prevention of violence against women; the treatment of women prisoners and non-custodial measures for women offenders; and access to legal aid in the criminal justice system. Operationally, UNODC assisted developing countries, countries emerging from conflict and countries with economies in transition to prevent crime and reform their criminal justice systems through a project portfolio of 45 ongoing local and global projects in 39 countries. Regarding research and analytical work, the Office focused on expanding the quality and extent of information available to Member States on global crime trends and on strengthening the capacity of States to conduct diagnostic surveys related to crime, and was finalizing the thematic programme for trends monitoring and analysis covering the period 2010–2011. The Office also produced or was developing various tools, handbooks and guidance notes relating to prison reform and prisoners with special needs; crime prevention assessment and knowledge; criminal justice standards for UN police; effective police responses to violence against women; the assessment of gender in the criminal justice system; and justice involving child victims and witnesses of crime.

The report noted that despite the central role played by UN standards and norms, they were developed at different times and in different contexts. The world continued to change at an unprecedented pace, and the emergence of new and sophisticated forms of crime required more effective criminal justice responses. A constantly evolving social, cultural and economic environment created novel challenges for criminal justice and law enforcement authorities, and the spread of modern information and communication technologies, as well as the growing transnationality of related criminal activities, created new opportunities for the commission of crime. A new approach was therefore needed to the role of the criminal justice system as a crucial pillar of a successful effort to curb crime. The Commission on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice should consider relevant recommendations emanating from the Twelfth United Nations Congress on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice (see p. 1094) on ensuring that the standards and norms responded adequately to the contemporary needs of all Member States and to new and emerging criminal threats. It should also consider inviting Governments to include in their national development plans crime prevention and criminal justice as an integral part of the development process; requesting donor States and relevant intergovernmental and non-governmental institutions to support criminal justice reforms, in accordance with UN standards and norms, in countries requesting assistance; recommending to Member States that they publish and disseminate, in their local languages, the UN standards and norms in crime prevention and criminal justice; requesting UNODC to continue to assist countries, upon request, to develop and implement crime prevention and criminal justice reform strategies, policies and plans based on existing standards and norms, and to conduct its assistance work in an integrated and multidisciplinary manner; assisting countries in the development of new standards and norms or in updating and supplementing existing ones; and developing and producing handbooks, manuals, modules and tools to be used in training on UN standards and norms in crime prevention and criminal justice. The Commission was encouraged to invite Member States to take into account the measures contained in the Updated Model Strategies and Practical Measures on the Elimination of Violence against Women in the Field of Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice, as well as the draft UN rules for the treatment of women prisoners and non-custodial measures for women offenders, and to consider their respective endorsement.

The Commission on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice [E/2010/30] also had before it other documents for its consideration of the use and application of United Nations standards and norms, including those related to capital punishment [E/2010/10] (see p. 699); measures to eliminate violence against women [E/CN.15/2010/2]; the treatment of women in detention and in custodial and non-custodial settings [E/CN.15/2010/18] (see below); and trafficking in cultural property [E/CN.15/2010/4 & E/CN.15/2010/17] (see p. 1091).

Women in detention and in custodial and non-custodial settings

In a February note to the Commission on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice [E/CN.15/2010/18], the Secretary-General transmitted the outcome of the meeting of the expert group (Bangkok, Thailand, 23–26 November 2009) [A/CONF.213/17] to develop supplementary rules specific to the treatment of women in detention and in custodial and non-custodial settings, held pursuant to Commission resolution 18/1 [YUN 2009, p. 1106]. Experts from 25 Member States attended the meeting, which reviewed, amended and made additions to the draft rules produced by the expert round-table meeting on the development of rules for the treatment of women prisoners and non-custodial measures for women offenders [YUN 2009, p. 1106].

In May, the Commission adopted a draft resolution to be recommended by the Economic and Social Council for adoption by the General Assembly (see below), which took note of the work of the expert group and the outcome of its meeting; adopted the United Nations Rules for the Treatment of Women Prisoners and Non-custodial Measures for Women Offenders; and approved the recommendation of the Twelfth United Nations Congress on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice (see p. 1094) that the Rules should be known as “the Bangkok Rules”. It requested UNODC to provide technical assistance and advisory services to Member States, upon request, in order to develop or strengthen legislation, procedures, policies and practices for women in prison and on alternatives to imprisonment for women offenders; ensure broad dissemination of the Rules; and increase its cooperation with other relevant UN entities, inter-governmental and regional organizations and NGOs in the provision of relevant assistance to countries and to identify needs and capacities of countries in order to increase country-to-country and South-South cooperation.

On 22 July [meeting 45], the Economic and Social Council, on the recommendation of the Commission on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice [E/CN.15/2010/30], adopted resolution 2010/16 without vote [agenda item 14 (c)].

United Nations Rules for the Treatment of Women Prisoners and Non-custodial Measures for Women Offenders (the Bangkok Rules)

The Economic and Social Council

Recommends to the General Assembly the adoption of the following draft resolution:

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 21 December [meeting 71], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Third Committee [A/65/457], adopted resolution 65/229 without vote [agenda item 105].

United Nations Rules for the Treatment of Women Prisoners and Non-custodial Measures for Women Offenders (the Bangkok Rules)

The General Assembly,

Recalling the United Nations standards and norms in crime prevention and criminal justice primarily related to the treatment of prisoners, in particular the Standard Minimum Rules for the Treatment of Prisoners, the procedures for the effective implementation of the Standard Minimum Rules for the Treatment of Prisoners, the Body of Principles for the Protection of All Persons under Any Form of Detention or Imprisonment and the Basic Principles for the Treatment of Prisoners,

Recalling also the United Nations standards and norms in crime prevention and criminal justice primarily related to alternatives to imprisonment, in particular the United Nations Standard Minimum Rules for Non-custodial Measures (the Tokyo Rules) and the basic principles on the use of restorative justice programmes in criminal matters,

Recalling further its resolution 58/183 of 22 December 2003, in which it invited Governments, relevant international and regional bodies, national human rights institutions and non-governmental organizations to devote increased attention to the issue of women in prison, including the children of women in prison, with a view to identifying the key problems and the ways in which they can be addressed,

Considering the alternatives to imprisonment as provided for in the Tokyo Rules, and taking into consideration the gender specificities of, and the consequent need to give priority to applying non-custodial measures to, women who have come into contact with the criminal justice system,

Mindful of its resolution 61/143 of 19 December 2006, in which it urged States to, inter alia, take positive measures to address structural causes of violence against women and to strengthen prevention efforts that address discriminatory practices and social norms, including with regard to women who need special attention in the development of policies to address violence, such as women in institutions or in detention,

Mindful also of its resolution 63/241 of 24 December 2008, in which it called upon all States to give attention to the impact of parental detention and imprisonment on children and, in particular, to identify and promote good practices in relation to the needs and physical, emotional, social and psychological development of babies and children affected by parental detention and imprisonment,

Taking into consideration the Vienna Declaration on Crime and Justice: Meeting the Challenges of the Twenty-first Century, in which Member States committed themselves, inter alia, to the development of action-oriented policy recommendations based on the special needs of women as prisoners and offenders, and the plans of action for the implementation of the Declaration,

Calling attention to the Bangkok Declaration on Synergies and Responses: Strategic Alliances in Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice, as it relates specifically to women in detention and in custodial and non-custodial settings,

Recalling that, in the Bangkok Declaration, Member States recommended to the Commission on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice that it give consideration to reviewing the adequacy of standards and norms in relation to prison management and prisoners,

Having taken note of the initiative of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights to designate the week from 6 to 12 October 2008 as Dignity and Justice for Detainees Week, which placed particular emphasis on the human rights of women and girls,

Considering that women prisoners are one of the vulnerable groups that have specific needs and requirements,

Aware of the fact that many existing prison facilities worldwide were designed primarily for male prisoners, whereas the number of female prisoners has significantly increased over the years,

Recognizing that a number of female offenders do not pose a risk to society and, as with all offenders, their imprisonment may render their social reintegration more difficult,

Welcoming the development by the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime of the Handbook for Prison Managers and Policymakers on Women and Imprisonment,

Welcoming also the invitation, contained in Human Rights Council resolution 10/2 of 25 March 2009, to Governments, relevant international and regional bodies, national human rights institutions and non-governmental organizations to devote greater attention to the issue of women and girls in prison, including issues relating to the children of women in prison, with a view to identifying and addressing the gender-specific aspects and challenges related to this problem,

Welcoming further the collaboration between the World Health Organization Regional Office for Europe and the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime, and taking note of the Kyiv Declaration on Women's Health in Prison,

Taking note of the Guidelines for the Alternative Care of Children,

Recalling Commission on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice resolution 18/1 of 24 April 2009, in which the Commission requested the Executive Director of the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime to convene in 2009 an open-ended intergovernmental expert group meeting to develop, consistent with the Standard Minimum Rules for the Treatment of Prisoners and the Tokyo Rules, supplementary rules specific to the treatment of women in detention and in custodial and non-custodial settings, welcomed the offer by the Government of Thailand to act as host to the expert group meeting, and requested the expert group meeting to submit the outcome of its work to the Twelfth United Nations Congress on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice, subsequently held in Salvador, Brazil, from 12 to 19 April 2010,

Recalling also that the four regional preparatory meetings for the Twelfth Congress welcomed the development of a set of supplementary rules specific to the treatment of women in detention and in custodial and non-custodial settings,

Recalling further the Salvador Declaration on Comprehensive Strategies for Global Challenges: Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice Systems and Their Development in a Changing World, in which Member States recommended that the Commission on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice consider the draft United Nations Rules for the Treatment of Women Prisoners and Non-custodial Measures for Women Offenders as a matter of priority for appropriate action,

1. Takes note with appreciation of the work of the expert group to develop supplementary rules specific to the treatment of women in detention and in custodial and non-custodial settings at its meeting, held in Bangkok from 23 to 26 November 2009, and of the outcome of the meeting;

2. Expresses its gratitude to the Government of Thailand for having acted as host to the meeting of the expert group and for the financial support provided for the organization of the meeting;

3. Adopts the United Nations Rules for the Treatment of Women Prisoners and Non-custodial Measures for Women Offenders, annexed to the present resolution, and approves the recommendation of the Twelfth United Nations Congress on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice that the rules should be known as "the Bangkok Rules";

4. Recognizes that, in view of the great variety of legal, social, economic and geographical conditions in the world, not all of the rules can be applied equally in all places and at all times; and that they should, however, serve to stimulate a constant endeavour to overcome practical difficulties in their application, in the knowledge that they represent, as a whole, global aspirations amenable to the common goal of improving outcomes for women prisoners, their children and their communities;

5. Encourages Member States to adopt legislation to establish alternatives to imprisonment and to give priority to the financing of such systems, as well as to the development of the mechanisms needed for their implementation;

6. Encourages Member States having developed legislation, procedures, policies or practices for women in prison or on alternatives to imprisonment for women offenders to make information available to other States and relevant international, regional and intergovernmental organizations, as well as non-governmental organizations, and to assist them in developing and implementing training or other activities in relation to such legislation, procedures, policies or practices;

7. Invites Member States to take into consideration the specific needs and realities of women as prisoners when developing relevant legislation, procedures, policies and action plans and to draw, as appropriate, on the Bangkok Rules;

8. Also invites Member States to collect, maintain, analyse and publish, as appropriate, specific data on women in prison and women offenders;

9. Emphasizes that, when sentencing or deciding on pre-trial measures for a pregnant woman or a child's sole or primary caretaker, non-custodial measures should be preferred where possible and appropriate, with custodial sentences being considered when the offence is serious or violent;

10. Requests the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime to provide technical assistance and advisory services to Member States, upon request, in order to develop or strengthen, as appropriate, legislation, procedures, policies and practices for women in prison and on alternatives to imprisonment for women offenders;

11. Also requests the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime to take steps, as appropriate, to ensure broad dissemination of the Bangkok Rules, as a supplement to the Standard Minimum Rules for the Treatment of Prisoners and the United Nations Standard Minimum Rules for Non-custodial Measures (the Tokyo Rules), and to ensure the intensification of information activities in this area;

12. Further requests the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime to increase its cooperation with other relevant United Nations entities, intergovernmental and regional organizations and non-governmental organizations in the provision of relevant assistance to countries and to identify needs and capacities of countries in order to increase country-to-country and South-South cooperation;

13. Invites specialized agencies of the United Nations system and relevant regional and international intergovernmental and non-governmental organizations to engage in the implementation of the Bangkok Rules;

14. Invites Member States and other donors to provide extrabudgetary contributions for such purposes, in accordance with the rules and procedures of the United Nations.

ANNEX

United Nations Rules for the Treatment of Women Prisoners and Non-custodial Measures for Women Offenders (the Bangkok Rules)

Preliminary observations

1. The Standard Minimum Rules for the Treatment of Prisoners apply to all prisoners without discrimination; therefore, the specific needs and realities of all prisoners, including of women prisoners, should be taken into account in their application. The Rules, adopted more than 50 years ago, did not, however, draw sufficient attention to women's particular needs. With the increase in the number of women prisoners worldwide, the need to bring more clarity to considerations that should apply to the treatment of women prisoners has acquired importance and urgency.

2. Recognizing the need to provide global standards with regard to the distinct considerations that should apply to women prisoners and offenders and taking into account a number of relevant resolutions adopted by different United Nations bodies, in which Member States were called upon to respond appropriately to the needs of women offenders and prisoners, the present rules have been developed to complement and supplement, as appropriate, the Standard Minimum Rules for the Treatment of Prisoners and the United Nations Standard Minimum Rules for Non-custodial Measures (the Tokyo Rules) in connection with the treatment of women prisoners and alternatives to imprisonment for women offenders.

3. The present rules do not in any way replace the Standard Minimum Rules for the Treatment of Prisoners or the Tokyo Rules and, therefore, all relevant provisions contained in those two sets of rules continue to apply to all prisoners and offenders without discrimination. While some of the present rules bring further clarity to existing provisions in the Standard Minimum Rules for the Treatment of Prisoners and in the Tokyo Rules in their application to women prisoners and offenders, others cover new areas.

4. These rules are inspired by principles contained in various United Nations conventions and declarations and are therefore consistent with the provisions of existing international law. They are addressed to prison authorities and criminal justice agencies (including policymakers, legislators, the prosecution service, the judiciary and the probation service) involved in the administration of non-custodial sanctions and community-based measures.

5. The specific requirements for addressing the situation of women offenders have been emphasized at the United Nations in various contexts. For example, in 1980, the Sixth United Nations Congress on the Prevention of Crime and the Treatment of Offenders adopted a resolution on the specific needs of women prisoners, in which it recommended that, in the implementation of the resolutions adopted by the Sixth Congress directly or indirectly relevant to the treatment of offenders, recognition should be given to the specific problems of women prisoners and the need to provide the means for their solution; that, in countries where it was not yet done, programmes and services used as alternatives to imprisonment should be made available to women offenders on an equal basis with male offenders; and that the United Nations, the governmental and non-governmental organizations in consultative status with it and all other international organizations should make continuing efforts to ensure that the woman offender was treated fairly and equally during arrest, trial, sentence and imprisonment, particular attention being paid to the special problems which women offenders encounter, such as pregnancy and child care.

6. The Seventh Congress, the Eighth Congress and the Ninth Congress also made specific recommendations concerning women prisoners.

7. In the Vienna Declaration on Crime and Justice: Meeting the Challenges of the Twenty-first Century, adopted by the Tenth Congress, Member States committed themselves to taking into account and addressing, within the United Nations crime prevention and criminal justice programme, as well as within national crime prevention and criminal justice strategies, any disparate impact of programmes and policies on women and men (para. 11); and to the development of action-oriented policy recommendations based on the special needs of women as prisoners and offenders (para. 12). The plans of action for the implementation of the Vienna Declaration contain a separate section (sect. XIII) devoted to specific recommended measures to follow up on the commitments undertaken in paragraphs 11 and 12 of the Declaration, including that of States reviewing, evaluating and, if necessary, modifying their legislation, policies, procedures and practices relating to criminal matters, in a manner consistent with their legal systems, in order to ensure that women are treated fairly by the criminal justice system.

8. The General Assembly, in its resolution 58/183 of 22 December 2003 entitled “Human rights in the administration of justice”, called for increased attention to be devoted to the issue of women in prison, including the children of women in prison, with a view to identifying the key problems and ways in which they could be addressed.

9. In its resolution 61/143 of 19 December 2006 entitled “Intensification of efforts to eliminate all forms of violence against women”, the General Assembly stressed that “violence against women” meant any act of gender-based violence resulting in, or likely to result in, physical, sexual or psychological harm or suffering to women, including arbitrary deprivation of liberty, whether occurring in public or in private life, and urged States to review and, where appropriate, revise, amend or abolish all laws, regulations, policies, practices and customs discriminating against women or having a discriminatory impact on women, and ensure that provisions of multiple legal systems, where they existed, complied with international human rights obligations, commitments and principles, including the principle of non-discrimination; to take positive measures to address structural causes of violence against women and to strengthen prevention efforts addressing discriminatory practices and social norms, including with regard to women in need of special attention, such as women in institutions or in detention; and to provide training and capacity-building on gender equality and women’s rights for law enforcement personnel and the judiciary. The resolution is an acknowledgement of the fact that violence against women has specific implications for women’s contact with the criminal justice system, as well as their right to be free of victimization while imprisoned. Physical and psychological safety is critical to ensuring human rights and improving outcomes for women offenders, of which the present rules take account.

10. Finally, in the Bangkok Declaration on Synergies and Responses: Strategic Alliances in Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice, adopted by the Eleventh United Nations Congress on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice on 25 April 2005, Member States declared that they were committed to the development and maintenance of fair and efficient criminal justice institutions, including the humane treatment of all those in pretrial and correctional facilities, in accordance with applicable international standards (para. 8); and they recommended that the Commission on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice should give consideration to reviewing the adequacy of standards and norms in relation to prison management and prisoners (para. 30).

11. As with the Standard Minimum Rules for the Treatment of Prisoners, in view of the great variety of legal, social, economic and geographical conditions worldwide, it is evident that not all of the following rules can be equally applied in all places and at all times. They should, however, serve to stimulate a constant endeavour to overcome practical difficulties in how they are applied, in the knowledge that they represent, as a whole, the global aspirations considered by the United Nations as leading to the common goal of improving outcomes for women prisoners, their children and their communities.

12. Some of these rules address issues applicable to both men and women prisoners, including those relating to parental responsibilities, some medical services, searching procedures and the like, although the rules are mainly concerned with the needs of women and their children.

However, as the focus includes the children of imprisoned mothers, there is a need to recognize the central role of both parents in the lives of children. Accordingly, some of these rules would apply equally to male prisoners and offenders who are fathers.

Introduction

13. The following rules do not in any way replace the Standard Minimum Rules for the Treatment of Prisoners and the Tokyo Rules. Therefore, all provisions contained in those two sets of rules continue to apply to all prisoners and offenders without discrimination.

14. Section I of the present rules, covering the general management of institutions, is applicable to all categories of women deprived of their liberty, including criminal or civil, untried or convicted women prisoners, as well as women subject to “security measures” or corrective measures ordered by a judge.

15. Section II contains rules applicable only to the special categories dealt with in each subsection. Nevertheless, the rules under subsection A, applicable to prisoners under sentence, shall be equally applicable to the category of prisoners dealt with in subsection B, provided they do not conflict with the rules governing that category of women and are for their benefit.

16. Subsections A and B both provide additional rules for the treatment of juvenile female prisoners. It is important to note, however, that separate strategies and policies in accordance with international standards, in particular the United Nations Standard Minimum Rules for the Administration of Juvenile Justice (the Beijing Rules), the United Nations Guidelines for the Prevention of Juvenile Delinquency (the Riyadh Guidelines), the United Nations Rules for the Protection of Juveniles Deprived of Their Liberty and the Guidelines for Action on Children in the Criminal Justice System, need to be designed for the treatment and rehabilitation of this category of prisoners, while institutionalization shall be avoided to the maximum possible extent.

17. Section III contains rules covering the application of non-custodial sanctions and measures for women and juvenile female offenders, including on arrest and at the pretrial, sentencing and post-sentencing stages of the criminal justice process.

18. Section IV contains rules on research, planning, evaluation, public awareness-raising and sharing of information, and is applicable to all categories of female offenders covered in these rules.

I. RULES OF GENERAL APPLICATION

1. Basic principle

[Supplements rule 6 of the Standard Minimum Rules for the Treatment of Prisoners]

Rule 1

In order for the principle of non-discrimination embodied in rule 6 of the Standard Minimum Rules for the Treatment of Prisoners to be put into practice, account shall be taken of the distinctive needs of women prisoners in the application of the Rules. Providing for such needs in order to accomplish substantial gender equality shall not be regarded as discriminatory.

2. Admission

1. Adequate attention shall be paid to the admission procedures for women and children, due to their particular vulnerability at this time. Newly arrived women prisoners shall be provided with facilities to contact their relatives; access to legal advice; information about prison rules and regulations, the prison regime and where to seek help when in need in a language that they understand; and, in the case of foreign nationals, access to consular representatives as well.

2. Prior to or on admission, women with caretaking responsibilities for children shall be permitted to make arrangements for those children, including the possibility of a reasonable suspension of detention, taking into account the best interests of the children.

3. Register

Rule 3

1. The number and personal details of the children of a woman being admitted to prison shall be recorded at the time of admission. The records shall include, without prejudicing the rights of the mother, at least the names of the children, their ages and, if not accompanying the mother, their location and custody or guardianship status.

2. All information relating to the children's identity shall be kept confidential, and the use of such information shall always comply with the requirement to take into account the best interests of the children.

4. Allocation

Rule 4

Women prisoners shall be allocated, to the extent possible, to prisons close to their home or place of social rehabilitation, taking account of their caretaking responsibilities, as well as the individual woman's preference and the availability of appropriate programmes and services.

5. Personal hygiene

[Supplements rules 15 and 16 of the Standard Minimum Rules for the Treatment of Prisoners]

Rule 5

The accommodation of women prisoners shall have facilities and materials required to meet women's specific hygiene needs, including sanitary towels provided free of charge and a regular supply of water to be made available for the personal care of children and women, in particular women involved in cooking and those who are pregnant, breastfeeding or menstruating.

6. Health-care services

[Supplements rules 22 to 26 of the Standard Minimum Rules for the Treatment of Prisoners]

(a) Medical screening on entry

Rule 6

The health screening of women prisoners shall include comprehensive screening to determine primary health-care needs, and also shall determine:

(a) The presence of sexually transmitted diseases or blood-borne diseases; and, depending on risk factors, women prisoners may also be offered testing for HIV, with pre- and post-test counselling;

(b) Mental health-care needs, including post-traumatic stress disorder and risk of suicide and self-harm;

(c) The reproductive health history of the woman prisoner, including current or recent pregnancies, childbirth and any related reproductive health issues;

(d) The existence of drug dependency;

(e) Sexual abuse and other forms of violence that may have been suffered prior to admission.

Rule 7

1. If the existence of sexual abuse or other forms of violence before or during detention is diagnosed, the woman prisoner shall be informed of her right to seek recourse from judicial authorities. The woman prisoner should be fully informed of the procedures and steps involved. If the woman prisoner agrees to take legal action, appropriate staff shall be informed and immediately refer the case to the competent authority for investigation. Prison authorities shall help such women to access legal assistance.

2. Whether or not the woman chooses to take legal action, prison authorities shall endeavour to ensure that she has immediate access to specialized psychological support or counselling.

3. Specific measures shall be developed to avoid any form of retaliation against those making such reports or taking legal action.

Rule 8

The right of women prisoners to medical confidentiality, including specifically the right not to share information and not to undergo screening in relation to their reproductive health history, shall be respected at all times.

Rule 9

If the woman prisoner is accompanied by a child, that child shall also undergo health screening, preferably by a child health specialist, to determine any treatment and medical needs. Suitable health care, at least equivalent to that in the community, shall be provided.

(b) Gender-specific health care

1. Gender-specific health-care services at least equivalent to those available in the community shall be provided to women prisoners.

2. If a woman prisoner requests that she be examined or treated by a woman physician or nurse, a woman physician or nurse shall be made available, to the extent possible, except for situations requiring urgent medical intervention. If a male medical practitioner undertakes the examination contrary to the wishes of the woman prisoner, a woman staff member shall be present during the examination.

1. Only medical staff shall be present during medical examinations unless the doctor is of the view that exceptional circumstances exist or the doctor requests a member of the prison staff to be present for security reasons or the woman prisoner specifically requests the presence of a member of staff as indicated in rule 10, paragraph 2, above.

2. If it is necessary for non-medical prison staff to be present during medical examinations, such staff should be women and examinations shall be carried out in a manner that safeguards privacy, dignity and confidentiality.

(c) Mental health and careRule 12

Individualized, gender-sensitive, trauma-informed and comprehensive mental health care and rehabilitation programmes shall be made available for women prisoners with mental health-care needs in prison or in non-custodial settings.

Rule 13

Prison staff shall be made aware of times when women may feel particular distress, so as to be sensitive to their situation and ensure that the women are provided appropriate support.

(d) HIV prevention, treatment, care and supportRule 14

In developing responses to HIV/AIDS in penal institutions, programmes and services shall be responsive to the specific needs of women, including prevention of mother-to-child transmission. In this context, prison authorities shall encourage and support the development of initiatives on HIV prevention, treatment and care, such as peer-based education.

(e) Substance abuse treatment programmesRule 15

Prison health services shall provide or facilitate specialized treatment programmes designed for women substance abusers, taking into account prior victimization, the special needs of pregnant women and women with children, as well as their diverse cultural backgrounds.

(f) Suicide and self-harm preventionRule 16

Developing and implementing strategies, in consultation with mental health-care and social welfare services, to prevent suicide and self-harm among women prisoners and providing appropriate, gender-specific and specialized support to those at risk shall be part of a comprehensive policy of mental health care in women's prisons.

(g) Preventive health-care servicesRule 17

Women prisoners shall receive education and information about preventive health-care measures, including on HIV, sexually transmitted diseases and other blood-borne diseases, as well as gender-specific health conditions.

Rule 18

Preventive health-care measures of particular relevance to women, such as Papanicolaou tests and screening for breast and gynaecological cancer, shall be offered to women prisoners on an equal basis with women of the same age in the community.

7. Safety and security

(a) SearchesRule 19

Effective measures shall be taken to ensure that women prisoners' dignity and respect are protected during personal searches, which shall only be carried out by women staff who have been properly trained in appropriate searching methods and in accordance with established procedures.

Rule 20

Alternative screening methods, such as scans, shall be developed to replace strip searches and invasive body searches, in order to avoid the harmful psychological and possible physical impact of invasive body searches.

Rule 21

Prison staff shall demonstrate competence, professionalism and sensitivity and shall preserve respect and dignity when searching both children in prison with their mother and children visiting prisoners.

(b) Discipline and punishment

[Supplements rules 27 to 32 of the Standard Minimum Rules for the Treatment of Prisoners]

Rule 22

Punishment by close confinement or disciplinary segregation shall not be applied to pregnant women, women with infants and breastfeeding mothers in prison.

Rule 23

Disciplinary sanctions for women prisoners shall not include a prohibition of family contact, especially with children.

(c) Instruments of restraint

[Supplements rules 33 and 34 of the Standard Minimum Rules for the Treatment of Prisoners]

Rule 24

Instruments of restraint shall never be used on women during labour, during birth and immediately after birth.

(d) Information to and complaints by prisoners; inspections

[Supplements rules 35 and 36 and, with regard to inspection, rule 55 of the Standard Minimum Rules for the Treatment of Prisoners]

Rule 25

1. Women prisoners who report abuse shall be provided immediate protection, support and counselling, and their claims shall be investigated by competent and independent authorities, with full respect for the principle of confidentiality. Protection measures shall take into account specifically the risks of retaliation.

2. Women prisoners who have been subjected to sexual abuse, and especially those who have become pregnant as a result, shall receive appropriate medical advice and counseling and shall be provided with the requisite physical and mental health care, support and legal aid.

3. In order to monitor the conditions of detention and treatment of women prisoners, inspectorates, visiting or monitoring boards or supervisory bodies shall include women members.

8. Contact with the outside world

Rule 26

Women prisoners' contact with their families, including their children, and their children's guardians and legal representatives shall be encouraged and facilitated by all reasonable means. Where possible, measures shall be taken to counterbalance disadvantages faced by women detained in institutions located far from their homes.

Rule 27

Where conjugal visits are allowed, women prisoners shall be able to exercise this right on an equal basis with men.

Rule 28

Visits involving children shall take place in an environment that is conducive to a positive visiting experience, including with regard to staff attitudes, and shall allow open contact between mother and child. Visits involving extended contact with children should be encouraged, where possible.

9. Institutional personnel and training

Rule 29

Capacity-building for staff employed in women's prisons shall enable them to address the special social reintegration requirements of women prisoners and manage safe and rehabilitative facilities. Capacity-building measures for women staff shall also include access to senior positions with key responsibility for the development of policies and strategies relating to the treatment and care of women prisoners.

Rule 30

There shall be a clear and sustained commitment at the managerial level in prison administrations to prevent and address gender-based discrimination against women staff.

Rule 31

Clear policies and regulations on the conduct of prison staff aimed at providing maximum protection for women prisoners from any gender-based physical or verbal violence, abuse and sexual harassment shall be developed and implemented.

Rule 32

Women prison staff shall receive equal access to training as male staff, and all staff involved in the management of women's prisons shall receive training on gender sensitivity and prohibition of discrimination and sexual harassment.

Rule 33

1. All staff assigned to work with women prisoners shall receive training relating to the gender-specific needs and human rights of women prisoners.

2. Basic training shall be provided for prison staff working in women's prisons on the main issues relating to women's health, in addition to first aid and basic medicine.

3. Where children are allowed to stay with their mothers in prison, awareness-raising on child development and basic training on the health care of children shall also be provided to prison staff, in order for them to respond appropriately in times of need and emergencies.

Rule 34

Capacity-building programmes on HIV shall be included as part of the regular training curricula of prison staff. In addition to HIV/AIDS prevention, treatment, care and support, issues such as gender and human rights, with a particular focus on their link to HIV, stigma and discrimination, shall also be part of the curriculum.

Rule 35

Prison staff shall be trained to detect mental health-care needs and risk of self-harm and suicide among women prisoners and to offer assistance by providing support and referring such cases to specialists.

10. Juvenile female prisoners

Rule 36

Prison authorities shall put in place measures to meet the protection needs of juvenile female prisoners.

Rule 37

Juvenile female prisoners shall have equal access to education and vocational training that are available to juvenile male prisoners.

Rule 38

Juvenile female prisoners shall have access to age- and gender-specific programmes and services, such as counseling for sexual abuse or violence. They shall receive education on women's health care and have regular access to gynaecologists, similar to adult female prisoners.

Rule 39

Pregnant juvenile female prisoners shall receive support and medical care equivalent to that provided for adult female prisoners. Their health shall be monitored by a medical specialist, taking account of the fact that they may be at greater risk of health complications during pregnancy due to their age.

II. RULES APPLICABLE TO SPECIAL CATEGORIES

A. Prisoners under sentence

1. Classification and individualization

Rule 40

Prison administrators shall develop and implement classification methods addressing the gender-specific needs and circumstances of women prisoners to ensure appropriate and individualized planning and implementation towards those prisoners' early rehabilitation, treatment and reintegration into society.

The gender-sensitive risk assessment and classification of prisoners shall:

(a) Take into account the generally lower risk posed by women prisoners to others, as well as the particularly harmful effects that high-security measures and increased levels of isolation can have on women prisoners;

(b) Enable essential information about women's backgrounds, such as violence they may have experienced, history of mental disability and substance abuse, as well as parental and other caretaking responsibilities, to be taken into account in the allocation and sentence planning process;

(c) Ensure that women's sentence plans include rehabilitative programmes and services that match their gender-specific needs;

(d) Ensure that those with mental health-care needs are housed in accommodation which is not restrictive, and at the lowest possible security level, and receive appropriate treatment, rather than being placed in higher security level facilities solely due to their mental health problems.

2. Prison regime

[Supplements rules 65, 66 and 70 to 81 of the Standard Minimum Rules for the Treatment of Prisoners]

Rule 42

1. Women prisoners shall have access to a balanced and comprehensive programme of activities which take account of gender-appropriate needs.

2. The regime of the prison shall be flexible enough to respond to the needs of pregnant women, nursing mothers and women with children. Childcare facilities or arrangements shall be provided in prisons in order to enable women prisoners to participate in prison activities.

3. Particular efforts shall be made to provide appropriate programmes for pregnant women, nursing mothers and women with children in prison.

4. Particular efforts shall be made to provide appropriate services for women prisoners who have psychosocial support needs, especially those who have been subjected to physical, mental or sexual abuse.

Social relations and aftercare

Rule 43

Prison authorities shall encourage and, where possible, also facilitate visits to women prisoners as an important prerequisite to ensuring their mental well-being and social reintegration.

Rule 44

In view of women prisoners' disproportionate experience of domestic violence, they shall be properly consulted as to who, including which family members, is allowed to visit them.

Rule 45

Prison authorities shall utilize options such as home leave, open prisons, halfway houses and community-based programmes and services to the maximum possible extent for women prisoners, to ease their transition from prison to liberty, to reduce stigma and to re-establish their contact with their families at the earliest possible stage.

Rule 46

Prison authorities, in cooperation with probation and/or social welfare services, local community groups and non-governmental organizations, shall design and implement comprehensive pre- and post-release reintegration programmes which take into account the gender-specific needs of women.

Rule 47

Additional support following release shall be provided to released women prisoners who need psychological, medical, legal and practical help to ensure their successful social reintegration, in cooperation with services in the community.

3. Pregnant women, breastfeeding mothers and mothers with children in prison

1. Pregnant or breastfeeding women prisoners shall receive advice on their health and diet under a programme to be drawn up and monitored by a qualified health practitioner. Adequate and timely food, a healthy environment and regular exercise opportunities shall be provided free of charge for pregnant women, babies, children and breastfeeding mothers.

2. Women prisoners shall not be discouraged from breastfeeding their children, unless there are specific health reasons to do so.

3. The medical and nutritional needs of women prisoners who have recently given birth, but whose babies are not with them in prison, shall be included in treatment programmes.

Rule 49

Decisions to allow children to stay with their mothers in prison shall be based on the best interests of the children. Children in prison with their mothers shall never be treated as prisoners.

Rule 50

Women prisoners whose children are in prison with them shall be provided with the maximum possible opportunities to spend time with their children.

Rule 51

1. Children living with their mothers in prison shall be provided with ongoing health-care services and their development shall be monitored by specialists, in collaboration with community health services.

2. The environment provided for such children's upbringing shall be as close as possible to that of a child outside prison.

1. Decisions as to when a child is to be separated from its mother shall be based on individual assessments and the best interests of the child within the scope of relevant national laws.

2. The removal of the child from prison shall be undertaken with sensitivity, only when alternative care arrangements for the child have been identified and, in the case of foreign-national prisoners, in consultation with consular officials.

3. After children are separated from their mothers and placed with family or relatives or in other alternative care, women prisoners shall be given the maximum possible opportunity and facilities to meet with their children, when it is in the best interests of the children and when public safety is not compromised.

4. Foreign nationals

1. Where relevant bilateral or multilateral agreements are in place, the transfer of non-resident foreign-national women prisoners to their home country, especially if they have children in their home country, shall be considered as early as possible during their imprisonment, following the application or informed consent of the woman concerned.

2. Where a child living with a non-resident foreign-national woman prisoner is to be removed from prison, consideration should be given to relocation of the child to its home country, taking into account the best interests of the child and in consultation with the mother.

5. Minorities and indigenous peoplesRule 54

Prison authorities shall recognize that women prisoners from different religious and cultural backgrounds have distinctive needs and may face multiple forms of discrimination in their access to gender- and culture-relevant programmes and services. Accordingly, prison authorities shall provide comprehensive programmes and services that address these needs, in consultation with women prisoners themselves and the relevant groups.

Pre- and post-release services shall be reviewed to ensure that they are appropriate and accessible to indigenous women prisoners and to women prisoners from ethnic and racial groups, in consultation with the relevant groups.

B. Prisoners under arrest or awaiting trial

Rule 56

The particular risk of abuse that women face in pretrial detention shall be recognized by relevant authorities, which shall adopt appropriate measures in policies and practice to guarantee such women's safety at this time. (See also rule 58 below, with regard to alternatives to pretrial detention.)

III. NON-CUSTODIAL MEASURESRule 57

The provisions of the Tokyo Rules shall guide the development and implementation of appropriate responses to women offenders. Gender-specific options for diversionary measures and pretrial and sentencing alternatives shall be developed within Member States' legal systems, taking account of the history of victimization of many women offenders and their caretaking responsibilities.

Rule 58

Taking into account the provisions of rule 2.3 of the Tokyo Rules, women offenders shall not be separated from their families and communities without due consideration being given to their backgrounds and family ties. Alternative ways of managing women who commit offences, such as diversionary measures and pretrial and sentencing alternatives, shall be implemented wherever appropriate and possible.

Generally, non-custodial means of protection, for example in shelters managed by independent bodies, non-governmental organizations or other community services, shall be used to protect women who need such protection. Temporary measures involving custody to protect a woman shall only be applied when necessary and expressly requested by the woman concerned and shall in all cases be supervised by judicial or other competent authorities. Such protective measures shall not be continued against the will of the woman concerned.

Rule 60

Appropriate resources shall be made available to devise suitable alternatives for women offenders in order to combine non-custodial measures with interventions to address the most common problems leading to women's contact with the criminal justice system. These may include therapeutic courses and counselling for victims of domestic violence and sexual abuse; suitable treatment for those with mental disability; and educational and training programmes to improve employment prospects. Such programmes shall take account of the need to provide care for children and women-only services.

Rule 61

When sentencing women offenders, courts shall have the power to consider mitigating factors such as lack of criminal history and relative non-severity and nature of the criminal conduct, in the light of women's caretaking responsibilities and typical backgrounds.

Rule 62

The provision of gender-sensitive, trauma-informed, women-only substance abuse treatment programmes in the community and women's access to such treatment shall be improved, for crime prevention as well as for diversion and alternative sentencing purposes.

1. Post-sentencing dispositionsRule 63

Decisions regarding early conditional release (parole) shall favourably take into account women prisoners' caretaking responsibilities, as well as their specific social reintegration needs.

2. Pregnant women and women with dependent children

Rule 64

Non-custodial sentences for pregnant women and women with dependent children shall be preferred where possible and appropriate, with custodial sentences being considered when the offence is serious or violent or the woman represents a continuing danger, and after taking into account the best interests of the child or children, while ensuring that appropriate provision has been made for the care of such children.

3. Juvenile female offenders

Rule 65

Institutionalization of children in conflict with the law shall be avoided to the maximum extent possible. The gender-based vulnerability of juvenile female offenders shall be taken into account in decision-making.

4. Foreign nationals

Rule 66

Maximum effort shall be made to ratify the United Nations Convention against Transnational Organized Crime and the Protocol to Prevent, Suppress and Punish Trafficking in Persons, Especially Women and Children, supplementing the United Nations Convention against Transnational Organized Crime to fully implement their provisions so as to provide maximum protection to victims of trafficking in order to avoid secondary victimization of many foreign-national women.

IV. RESEARCH, PLANNING, EVALUATION AND PUBLIC AWARENESS-RAISING

1. Research, planning and evaluation

Rule 67

Efforts shall be made to organize and promote comprehensive, result-oriented research on the offences committed by women, the reasons that trigger women's confrontation with the criminal justice system, the impact of secondary criminalization and imprisonment on women, the characteristics of women offenders, as well as programmes designed to reduce reoffending by women, as a basis for effective planning, programme development and policy formulation to respond to the social reintegration needs of women offenders.

Rule 68

Efforts shall be made to organize and promote research on the number of children affected by their mothers' confrontation with the criminal justice system, and imprisonment in particular, and the impact of this on the children, in order to contribute to policy formulation and programme development, taking into account the best interests of the children.

Efforts shall be made to review, evaluate and make public periodically the trends, problems and factors associated with offending behaviour in women and the effectiveness in responding to the social reintegration needs of women offenders, as well as their children, in order to reduce the stigmatization and negative impact of those women's confrontation with the criminal justice system on them.

2. Raising public awareness, sharing information and training

1. The media and the public shall be informed about the reasons that lead to women's entrapment in the criminal justice system and the most effective ways to respond to it, in order to enable women's social reintegration, taking into account the best interests of their children.

2. Publication and dissemination of research and good practice examples shall form comprehensive elements of policies that aim to improve the outcomes and the fairness to women and their children of criminal justice responses to women offenders.

3. The media, the public and those with professional responsibility in matters concerning women prisoners and offenders shall be provided regularly with factual information about the matters covered in these rules and about their implementation.

4. Training programmes on the present rules and the results of research shall be developed and implemented for relevant criminal justice officials to raise their awareness and sensitize them to their provisions contained therein.

Violence against women

At its May session [E/2010/30], the Commission on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice recommended to the Economic and Social Council a draft resolution for adoption by the General Assembly on strengthening crime prevention and criminal justice responses to violence against women. On 21 December, the Assembly adopted, on the recommendation of the Council in resolution 2010/15 (see p. 1150), resolution 65/228 (ibid.) on that topic. In its resolution, the Assembly requested UNODC to intensify its efforts to ensure the widest possible use and dissemination of the updated Model Strategies and Practical Measures on the Elimination of Violence against Women in the Field of Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice, annexed to the resolution.

Human resources development

UN research and training institutes

UNITAR financing

On 29 March, by resolution 64/260 (see p. 1437), the General Assembly took note of the report of the Secretary-General on the financing of the core diplomatic training activities of the United Nations Institute for Training and Research (UNITAR) [YUN 2008, p. 1246] and the related report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions [YUN 2009, p. 1109]. It welcomed the Institute's 2010–2012 strategic plan, the priority assigned to mobilizing self-generated income through the implementation of the Institute's new business model, and its initiative to create a fellowship fund with the purpose of ensuring that core diplomatic training remained a service for all Member States by defraying the costs of such training to diplomats from developing countries and least developed countries. The Assembly also appealed to Member States, private institutions and other entities to give financial support to the fellowship fund.

Education for All

UN Literacy Decade

In response to General Assembly resolution 63/154 [YUN 2008, p. 1247], the Secretary-General transmitted to the Assembly a July report [A/65/172] by the UNESCO Director-General on the implementation of the International Plan of Action for the United Nations Literacy Decade (2003–2012), proclaimed by the Assembly in resolution 56/116 [YUN 2001, p. 1052]. The report analysed global and regional literacy trends and presented an assessment of progress in the three priority areas identified through the mid-Decade review of 2008 [YUN 2008, p. 1247]: mobilizing stronger commitment to literacy; reinforcing effective literacy programme delivery; and harnessing new resources for literacy. The report also presented the situations and perspectives of Member States with regard to the implementation of the Decade's objectives and documented the impact of the Decade on generating stronger political will, policies and partnerships in favour of literacy, before outlining strategic priorities for the next phase of the Decade and beyond.

The key achievements of the Decade during the period 2008–2010 related to the goal of generating stronger political will and greater collective action to promote literacy, particularly through activities such as the Literacy Initiative for Empowerment, co-ordinated by UNESCO; the Education for All Global Action Week in 2009 on the theme of literacy; the Sixth International Conference on Adult Education (Belém, Brazil, December 2009); and the Eighth E-9 Ministerial Review Meeting on Education for All (Abuja, Nigeria, 21–24 June) on the theme "Literacy for Development", attended by the nine high-population countries of the global South. The report noted that the global literacy rate of 84 per cent was estimated to be almost unchanged since the last report to the General Assembly [YUN 2008, p. 1247], which recorded a rate of 83.6 per cent, indicating that literacy efforts were hardly keeping pace with population growth. There was progress in closing the gender gap; in terms of the proportion of the total number of non-literate adults worldwide, however, there was no progress, with women accounting for 64 per cent for the period 2000–2007 (compared to 63 per cent in 1985–1994). Nevertheless, some countries had shown growth in female literacy rates, such as Nepal, where the rate increased from 17 per cent (1985–1994) to 44 per cent (2000–2007). Based on projections in the 2010 Education for All Global Monitoring Report, the global adult literacy rate would reach about 87 per cent in 2015, corresponding to only a small increase from the 2000–2007 rate. The report noted that, given that the UN Literacy Decade had just over two years left to run, it was urgent to further scale up efforts and to consider the post-2012 strategy for addressing youth and adult literacy challenges. To guide current work and inform future priorities, it was essential that sustained political commitment, a focus on literacy for development, strong international partnerships, a scaling-up of funding, and a focus on literacy for achieving the Millennium Development Goals (MDGs) be ensured.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 21 December [meeting 71], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Third Committee [A/65/448], adopted resolution 65/183 without vote [agenda item 27 (d)].

United Nations Literacy Decade: education for all

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 56/116 of 19 December 2001, by which it proclaimed the ten-year period beginning on 1 January 2003 the United Nations Literacy Decade, its resolution 57/166 of 18 December 2002, in which it welcomed the International Plan of Action for the United Nations Literacy Decade, and its resolutions 59/149 of 20 December 2004, 61/140 of 19 December 2006 and 63/154 of 18 December 2008,

Recalling also the United Nations Millennium Declaration, in which Member States resolved to ensure that, by 2015, children everywhere, boys and girls alike, will be able to complete a full course of primary schooling and that girls and boys will have equal access to all levels of education, which requires a renewed commitment to promote literacy for all,

Reaffirming the Education for All goals, in particular goal 3, on ensuring that the learning needs of all young people and adults are met through equitable access to appropriate learning and life-skills programmes, and goal 4, on achieving a 50 per cent improvement in levels of adult literacy by 2015, especially for women, and equitable access to basic and continuing education for all adults,

Reaffirming also the emphasis placed by the 2005 World Summit on the critical role of both formal and non-formal education in the achievement of poverty eradication and other development goals as envisaged in the Millennium Declaration, in particular basic education and training for achieving universal literacy, and the need to strive for expanded secondary and higher education as well as vocational education and technical training, especially for girls and women, the creation of human resources and infrastructure capabilities and the empowerment of those living in poverty,

Reaffirming further that quality basic education is crucial to nation-building, that literacy for all is at the heart of basic education for all and that creating literate environments and societies is essential for achieving the goals of eradicating poverty, reducing child mortality, addressing population growth, achieving gender equality and the empowerment of women, ensuring sustainable development, peace and democracy, and promoting and protecting human rights and fundamental freedoms,

Convinced that literacy is crucial to the acquisition by every child, young person and adult of the essential life skills that will enable them to address the challenges that they may face in life and represents an essential condition of lifelong learning, which is an indispensable means for effective participation in the knowledge societies and economies of the twenty-first century,

Affirming that the realization of the right to education, especially for girls, contributes to the promotion of human rights, gender equality and the eradication of poverty,

Recognizing the necessity of improving all aspects of the quality of education so that recognized and measurable learning outcomes are achieved by all, especially in the areas of literacy, numeracy, essential life skills and human rights education, thereby enabling all persons to excel,

Welcoming the considerable efforts that have been made so far by Member States and the international community to address the objectives of the Decade and to implement the International Plan of Action, in particular in the three priority areas for the remaining years of the Decade identified through the mid-Decade review, namely, mobilizing stronger commitment to literacy, reinforcing effective literacy programme delivery and harnessing new resources for literacy,

Recognizing the importance of removing barriers, outside and within education systems, so as to provide equitable educational and learning opportunities for all children,

Reaffirming the right of indigenous peoples to have non-discriminatory access to all levels and forms of education provided by States, and recognizing the importance of effective measures to promote access for indigenous individuals, in particular children, to education in their own language, when possible, as addressed in the United Nations Declaration on the Rights of Indigenous Peoples,

Noting with deep concern that, according to the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization, 796 million adults do not have basic literacy skills and 69 million children of primary school age remain out of school, that millions more young people leave school without a level of literacy adequate for productive and active participation in their societies, that the issue of literacy may not be sufficiently high on national agendas to generate the kind of political and economic support required to address global literacy challenges and that the world is unlikely to meet those challenges if the present trends continue,

Deeply concerned about the persistence of the gender gap in education, which is reflected by the fact that, according to the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization, nearly two thirds of the world's non-literate adults are women,

Concerned about the challenges that the financial and economic crisis poses to education budgets and international funding for education, with a possible negative effect on spending for literacy programmes,

Recalling its resolution 64/290 of 9 July 2010 on the right to education in emergency situations,

Concerned that, according to United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization estimates, one third of the children not attending school are children with disabilities and that the literacy rate among adults with disabilities is as low as 3 per cent in some countries,

1. Takes note with appreciation of the report of the Director-General of the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization on the implementation of the International Plan of Action for the United Nations Literacy Decade, including the strategic priorities outlined therein for the next phase of the Decade and beyond;

2. Takes note of the 2008 publication The Global Literacy Challenge: A profile of youth and adult literacy at the mid-point of the United Nations Literacy Decade 2003–2012, the Education for All Global Monitoring Report 2010: Reaching the marginalized, the first Global Report on Adult Learning and Education, prepared for the Sixth International Conference on Adult Education, held in Belém, Brazil, from 1 to 4 December 2009, the 2009 review of the Literacy Initiative for Empowerment, the synthesis report of the Eighth E-9 Ministerial Review Meeting on Education for All, held in Abuja from 21 to 24 June 2010, and United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization programme reports;

3. Also takes note of the outcome documents of the five regional preparatory conferences, held in 2008 and 2009 in preparation for the 2009 Sixth International Conference on Adult Education, as well as the summary outcomes of the Regional Conferences in Support of Global Literacy, held in Azerbaijan, China, India, Mali, Mexico and Qatar in 2007 and 2008, which indicate that in the second half of the Decade appropriate networks should be developed for greater regional collaboration;

4. Recognizes that a renewed collective commitment and stronger international partnerships in support of literacy efforts at the national level will be needed if the objectives of the Decade are to be met;

5. Calls upon Member States, their development partners, the international donor community, the private sector and civil society, in accordance with national law, to further scale up quality literacy efforts and consider the post-2012 strategy for addressing youth and adult literacy challenges, bearing in mind that just over two years remain of the Decade and that the target date of 2015 for the achievement of the Education for All goals and the Millennium Development Goals is approaching;

6. Recognizes the importance of continuing to implement national programmes and measures to eliminate illiteracy worldwide as part of the commitments made in the Dakar Framework for Action on Education for All, adopted on 28 April 2000 at the World Education Forum, and in the Millennium Development Goals, and in this regard also recognizes the important contribution of South-South and triangular cooperation through, inter alia, innovative pedagogical methods in literacy;

7. Calls upon Member States to further reinforce political will, giving literacy higher priority within their educational planning and budgeting;

8. Appeals to all Governments to develop reliable literacy data and information and more inclusive policy-making environments and to devise innovative strategies for reaching the groups disproportionately affected by illiteracy, in particular the poor and those living in the most vulnerable situations, including persons with disabilities, and for seeking alternative formal and non-formal approaches to learning with a view to achieving the goals of the Decade;

9. Appeals to Governments to take full account of the use of languages in different contexts by promoting multi-lingual approaches to literacy, through which learners may acquire initial literacy in the language they know best and in additional languages as needed;

10. Urges all Governments to take the lead in coordinating the activities of the Decade at the national level, bringing all relevant national actors together in a sustained dialogue and collaborative action on policy formulation, implementation and evaluation of literacy efforts;

11. Appeals to all Governments to strengthen national and subnational professional institutions in their countries and to foster greater collaboration among all literacy partners with a view to developing greater capacity to design and deliver high-quality literacy programmes for youth and adults;

12. Appeals to all Governments and to economic and financial organizations and institutions, both national and international, to lend greater financial and material support to the efforts to increase literacy and achieve the goals of Education for All and those of the Decade;

13. Requests the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization to reinforce its coordinating and catalysing role in the fight against illiteracy;

14. Invites Member States, the specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system, as well as relevant intergovernmental and non-governmental organizations, to support the implementation of the above priorities within the framework of the internationally agreed development goals, including those contained in the United Nations Millennium Declaration;

15. Calls upon Member States, in the implementation of the International Plan of Action in the final phase of the Decade, to give adequate attention to the cultural diversity of minorities and indigenous peoples;

16. Requests all relevant entities of the United Nations system, in particular the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization, in cooperation with national Governments, to take immediate, concrete steps to address the needs of countries with high illiteracy rates and/or with large populations of illiterate adults, with particular regard to women and persons with disabilities, including through programmes that promote low-cost and effective literacy provisions;

17. Notes the contribution made by the Sixth International Conference on Adult Education to the implementation of the Decade, and welcomes the Belém Framework for Action adopted at the Conference;

18. Requests the Secretary-General, in cooperation with the Director-General of the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization, to seek the views of Member States on the progress achieved in implementing their national programmes and plans of action for the Decade, undertake a final evaluation of the implementation of the Decade by Member States and other stakeholders and submit to the General Assembly in 2013 a final report on the implementation of the International Plan of Action with specific recommendations for the post-Decade period;

19. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its sixty-eighth session, under the item entitled "Social development", the sub-item entitled "United Nations Literacy Decade: education for all".

By resolution 65/1 of 22 September (see p. 815), the Assembly adopted the outcome document of the High-level Plenary Meeting of the General Assembly on the MDGs (New York, 20–22 September) entitled "Keeping the promise: united to achieve the MDGs". With regard to MDG 2 to achieve universal primary education, Heads of State and Government committed to accelerating progress towards achieving that goal.

Economic and Social Council action. On 10 November, by decision 2010/262, the Economic and Social Council decided that the theme for the discussion of the high-level segment of the substantive session of 2011 would be "Current global and national trends and challenges and their impact on education".

Women

The year 2010 marked the fifteenth anniversary of the Fourth (1995) World Conference on Women, and the United Nations observed the milestone with a number of activities that served to gauge its efforts to advance the status of women worldwide. The Commission on the Status of Women carried out a global review of progress in the implementation of the Beijing Declaration and Platform for Action, adopted at the Fourth World Conference, and the outcomes of the General Assembly's twenty-third (2000) special session (Beijing+5). The Commission held a series of high-level round table and panel discussions, the summaries of which were submitted to the Economic and Social Council as input for its 2010 annual ministerial review on implementing the internationally agreed goals and commitments in regard to gender equality and the empowerment of women. It also adopted a declaration on the occasion of the fifteenth anniversary and transmitted it, through the Council, to the Assembly, which endorsed it in December.

In July, the Assembly established the United Nations Entity for Gender Equality and the Empowerment of Women (UN-Women), to be operational by 1 January 2011. Combining the mandates and assets of the four existing entities dealing with women's issues—the Office of the Special Adviser on Gender Issues and Advancement of Women, the Division for the Advancement of Women, the United Nations Development Fund for Women, and the International Research and Training Institute for the Advancement of Women—UN-Women would be the centre of the UN system gender architecture. In October, the Council decided on procedures for the election of the UN-Women Executive Board and the Assembly made key financing decisions, including by approving the use of a grant modality to administer UN-Women regular budget resources, and determining the amount and sources of funding to be transferred to UN-Women in the 2010–2011 UN regular budget.

The Commission on the Status of Women, in March, brought to the Council's attention resolutions on: women, the girl child and HIV and AIDS; the release of women and children taken hostage, including those subsequently imprisoned, in armed conflicts; women's economic empowerment; ending female genital mutilation; and eliminating maternal mortality. It also recommended to the Council the adoption of a draft resolution on the situation of and assistance to Palestinian women, on which the Council took action in July, along with a resolution on mainstreaming a gender perspective into all policies and programmes in the UN system.

Issues central to women's lives on which the Assembly adopted resolutions included: eliminating violence against women; supporting efforts to end obstetric fistula; the establishment of International Widows' Day; trafficking in women and girls; strengthening criminal justice responses to violence against women; follow-up to the Fourth World Conference on Women and full implementation of the Beijing Declaration and Platform for Action and the outcome of the twenty-third special session; and strengthening crime prevention and criminal justice responses to violence against women. The last resolution contained the updated Model Strategies and Practical Measures on the Elimination of Violence against Women in the Field of Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice.

Two Security Council presidential statements in April and October on women and armed conflict welcomed the appointment of Margot Wallström as the Secretary-General's Special Representative on Sexual Violence in Conflict and supported the development of a set of proposed indicators for use at the global level to track implementation of resolution 1325(2000) on women's full participation in the prevention and resolution of conflicts. In a December resolution, the Council requested the Secretary-General to list in his annual reports on the implementation of resolutions 1820(2008) and 1888(2009) on sexual violence and armed conflict the parties suspected of committing rape and other sexual violence in conflict situations on the Council's agenda.

Follow-up to the Fourth World Conference on Women and Beijing+5

During 2010, the Commission on the Status of Women, the Economic and Social Council and the General Assembly considered follow-up to the 1995 Fourth World Conference on Women, particularly the implementation of the Beijing Declaration and Platform for Action [YUN 1995, p. 1170] and the political declaration and further actions and initiatives to implement both instruments adopted at the twenty-third (2000) special session of the Assembly (Beijing+5) by resolution S/23-2 [YUN 2000, p. 1084].

The Declaration had reaffirmed the commitment of Governments to the goals and objectives of the Fourth World Conference and to the implementation of the 12 critical areas of concern outlined in the Platform for Action: women and poverty; education and training of women; women and health; violence against women; women and armed conflict; women and the economy; women in power and decision-making; institutional mechanisms for the advancement of women; the human rights of women; women and the media; women and the environment; and the girl child. The issue of mainstreaming a gender perspective into UN policies and programmes continued to be addressed (see p. 1168).

Report of Secretary-General. In response to General Assembly resolution 64/141 [YUN 2009, p. 1116], the Secretary-General, in an August report [A/65/204], reviewed the follow-up to and implementation of the Beijing Declaration and Platform for Action and the outcomes of Assembly's twenty-third special session. He described steps taken by intergovernmental bodies to incorporate gender equality perspectives into their work, including advances made during the sixty-fourth (2009) session of the Assembly and the 2009 substantive session of the Economic and Social Council and in the work of their subsidiary bodies, notably at the fifty-third (2009) and fifty-fourth (2010) sessions of the Commission on the Status of Women. Since 2010 marked the fifteenth anniversary of the Fourth World Conference, the report outlined some of the activities taking place to observe the milestone. Notably, the Commission on the Status of Women carried out a global review of progress in the implementation of the Beijing Declaration and Platform for Action and the outcomes of the Assembly's twenty-third special session (see below), while the Assembly held a commemorative event on 2 March (see p. 1135).

The Assembly and the Council considered gender equality and the empowerment of women within and across a variety of agenda items, including women's human rights, violence against women, women in development and the need for improved data collection and analysis. Although gender equality and women's empowerment were addressed at a number of high-level events and discussions and in the work of the Assembly's subsidiary bodies, such as the Peacebuilding Commission and the Human Rights Council (see p. 633), gender equality considerations appeared in only a limited number of resolutions of intergovernmental bodies and in only about half of the reports of the Secretary-General. Gender mainstreaming was disproportionately concentrated in development-related agendas and not uniformly addressed in the work of the Assembly and Council. There was, therefore, a need to improve its inclusion into all the documentation and work of intergovernmental bodies and to accelerate the implementation of commitments on gender equality, women's human rights and women's empowerment. The report noted that lack of adequate data impeded progress towards gender equality and women's empowerment and limited the ability of Member States to improve institutional mechanisms, design better policies and tailor relevant and more effective strategies to address the needs and vulnerabilities of their populations. Increased investment in data collection and analysis at the global, regional and national levels was required.

The Secretary-General suggested that the Assembly might consider: strengthening its efforts to enhance accountability with respect to the implementation of gender-equality commitments, including by improved monitoring and reporting on progress in relation to policies, strategies, resource allocations and programmes; encourage Member States, UN entities, international and regional organizations and other actors to prioritize the strengthening of data collection and monitoring capacities; request that reports submitted to the Assembly, the Council and their subsidiary bodies facilitate gender-sensitive policy development through qualitative gender analysis, sex-disaggregated data and concrete recommendations for action; ensure that gender perspectives were mainstreamed in the preparation, implementation and follow-up of all UN conferences, summits and high-level meetings; and encourage the committees of the Assembly and commissions of the Council to hold periodic thematic discussions on progress made in mainstreaming gender perspectives into their work.

Review of Fourth World Conference and Beijing+5 (2010)

In response to Economic and Social Council resolutions 2006/9 [YUN 2006, p. 1356] and 2009/15 [YUN 2009, p. 1155], the Secretary-General, in a February report [E/2010/4-E/CN.6/2010/2], reviewed progress in the implementation of the Beijing Declaration and Platform for Action and the outcomes of the twenty-third special session of the Assembly, and the contribution of the implementation to shaping a gender perspective towards the realization of the Millennium Development Goals (MDGs). The report was based on information provided in response to a questionnaire distributed by the UN regional commissions to Member States and observer States at the end of 2008. By November 2009, 139 Member States and one observer State had responded.

For each of the 12 critical areas of concern in the Platform for Action, the report reviewed major global policy developments, trends in national-level implementation, and remaining gaps and challenges. Cross-cutting issues included: the need to combat gender stereotypes; violence against women; the importance of increasing the participation of women in decision-making; the critical role of men and boys in achieving gender equality and the empowerment of women and girls; and the unequal distribution of unpaid work between women and men. Legal frameworks that provided specific legislation on gender equality and ensured attention to gender equality perspectives in all other legislation were recognized as a critical foundation for implementation, as was the adoption of national policies and action plans on gender equality. The improvement of statistics, disaggregated by sex and age, was considered crucial for ensuring the development of strategies and actions, monitoring trends and progress, assessing the impact of measures, and allowing policymakers to undertake legislative and policy reforms. Strengthening political will and leadership was considered a priority, as was increasing resource allocations for promoting gender equality in general, and implementing the gender mainstreaming strategy in particular.

With regard to linkages between the Platform for Action and the gender equality dimensions of each MDG, the report stated that gender equality perspectives were poorly reflected in the formulation of many MDGs and were not explicitly outlined in strategies and plans for implementation of the Goals. The lack of progress for women suggested that the global policy framework on gender equality and women's empowerment, particularly the Platform for Action, was insufficiently used as a basis for policymaking and programming aimed at MDG achievement. The Secretary-General recommended that participatory processes and strategic partnerships be expanded, particularly by having national gender equality mechanisms participate in national MDG processes, including monitoring and reporting. Consultative processes involving women's groups and networks, and other civil society actors, would also contribute to greater collaboration across sectors. As the need for improved tracking and monitoring of gender equality expenditures had been recognized, the Secretary-General recommended that financing for gender equality and women's empowerment be strengthened through the use of gender-responsive budgeting and the integration of gender equality perspectives in economic decision-making.

Commission action. The Commission on the Status of Women, at its fifty-fourth session (New York, 1–12 March) [E/2010/27], reviewed progress in implementing the Beijing Declaration and Platform for Action [YUN 1995, p. 1170] and the outcomes of the twenty-third special session of the General Assembly, entitled “Women 2000: gender equality, development and peace for the twenty-first century” [YUN 2000, p. 1082]. In preparation for the review, the five UN regional commissions submitted reports to the Commission. On 1 March, the Commission held a high-level round table on the theme “Implementation of the Beijing Declaration and Platform for Action and the outcomes of the twenty-third special session and its contribution to shaping a gender perspective in the realization of the Millennium Development Goals”. On 2 March [E/2010/27 (res. 54/1)], the Commission adopted a resolution containing the declaration on the occasion of the fifteenth anniversary of the Fourth World Conference on Women and transmitted it through the Economic and Social Council to the General Assembly for its endorsement. During its March session, the Commission held expert panel discussions on the following topics: linkages between the implementation of the Beijing Platform for Action and the achievement of the MDGs; implementing the internationally agreed goals and commitments in regard to gender equality and empowerment of women; regional perspectives in progress achieved and remaining gaps and challenges in the implementation of the Beijing Platform for Action; commemorating 30 years of the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women; women's economic empowerment in the context of the global economic and financial crises; unity towards ending violence against women; and the evolving status and role of national mechanisms for gender equality. On 12 March, the Commission adopted a decision [ibid. (dec. 54/101)] on implementing the internationally agreed goals and commitments in regard to gender equality and the empowerment of women, by which it transmitted summaries of the discussions held at the high-level round table and panels convened during its session to the Economic and Social Council as input for its 2010 annual ministerial review (see below).

Commemoration of fifteenth anniversary. On 2 March [A/64/PV.73], the General Assembly held a commemorative meeting to mark the fifteenth anniversary of the Fourth (1995) World Conference on Women [YUN 1995, p. 1168].

Economic and Social Council ministerial review. On 28 and 30 June and 1 July, during the high-level segment of its 2010 substantive session [A/65/3/Rev.1], the Economic and Social Council held its annual ministerial review on the theme “Implementing the internationally agreed goals and commitments in regard to gender equality and empowerment of women”. The Council had before it voluntary national presentations on the subject from Australia [E/2010/63], Brazil [E/2010/65], Congo [E/2010/78], France [E/2010/81], Guatemala [E/2010/60], Moldova [E/2010/67], Mongolia [E/2010/80], Namibia [E/2010/61], the Netherlands [E/2010/62], Norway [E/2010/66], Portugal [E/2010/59], the Republic of Korea [E/2010/71] and the United States [E/2010/58]. It also had before it a letter from Senegal transmitting the report of the African regional preparatory meeting on women and health (Dakar, Senegal, 12–13 January) [E/2010/75]. On 2 July, the Council adopted the Ministerial Declaration, which reaffirmed that gender equality, the empowerment of women and women's full enjoyment of human rights were central to economic and social development and the achievement of the MDGs. It acknowledged the vital role of women as agents of development and called attention to the need to intensify efforts to prevent and eliminate all forms of violence against women and girls, as well as for the implementation of measures to promote women's access to full and productive employment through decent work and equal pay. It called on the High-level Plenary Meeting of the sixty-fifth (2010) session of the General Assembly (20–22 September) on accelerating progress towards the achievement of all the MDGs by 2015 (see p. 813) to take into account the recommendations contained in the declaration and to ensure that gender perspectives were integrated into the Meeting's outcome.

In a 19 July letter [A/64/874], the Council President transmitted the Ministerial Declaration to the Assembly as a contribution to preparations for the High-level Plenary Meeting.

Declaration on fifteenth anniversary. On 20 July, the Council took note of the declaration adopted by the Commission on the Status of Women on the occasion of the fifteenth anniversary of the Fourth World Conference on Women (see above) and transmitted it to the Assembly for endorsement (decision 2010/232).

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 21 December [meeting 71], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Third (Social, Humanitarian and Cultural) Committee [A/65/449], adopted resolution 65/191 without vote [agenda item 28 (b)].

Follow-up to the Fourth World Conference on Women and full implementation of the Beijing Declaration and Platform for Action and the outcome of the twenty-third special session of the General Assembly

The General Assembly,

Recalling its previous resolutions on the question, including resolution 64/141 of 18 December 2009,

Deeply convinced that the Beijing Declaration and Platform for Action and the outcome of the twenty-third special session of the General Assembly entitled "Women 2000: gender equality, development and peace for the twenty-first century" are important contributions to the achievement of gender equality and the empowerment of women and must be translated into effective action by all States, the United Nations system and other organizations concerned,

Reaffirming the commitments to gender equality and the advancement of women made at the Millennium Summit, the 2005 World Summit, the High-level Plenary Meeting of the General Assembly on the Millennium Development Goals and other major United Nations summits, conferences and special sessions, and reaffirming also that their full, effective and accelerated implementation is integral to achieving the internationally agreed development goals, including the Millennium Development Goals,

Welcoming progress made towards achieving gender equality, but stressing that challenges and obstacles remain in the implementation of the Beijing Declaration and Platform for Action and the outcome of the twenty-third special session,

Recognizing that the responsibility for the implementation of the Beijing Declaration and Platform for Action and the outcome of the twenty-third special session rests primarily at the national level and that strengthened efforts are necessary in this respect, and reiterating that enhanced international cooperation is essential for full, effective and accelerated implementation,

Taking note of the declaration adopted by the Commission on the Status of Women on the occasion of the fifteenth anniversary of the Fourth World Conference on Women,

Welcoming the work of the Commission on the Status of Women in reviewing the implementation of the Beijing Declaration and Platform for Action, and taking note with appreciation of all its agreed conclusions,

Welcoming also the adoption of General Assembly resolution 64/289 of 2 July 2010 on system-wide coherence, in particular the establishment of the United Nations Entity for Gender Equality and the Empowerment of Women (UN-Women),

Welcoming further the appointment of Ms. Michelle Bachelet, former President of Chile, as Under-Secretary-General and head of UN-Women,

Looking forward to the timely, effective and efficient operationalization of UN-Women, noting the importance of the early elaboration of the forthcoming strategic plan and budget for its operationalization, and stressing the need to meet the initial funding requirement to this end,

Reaffirming that gender mainstreaming is a globally accepted strategy for promoting the empowerment of women and achieving gender equality by transforming structures of inequality, and reaffirming also the commitment to actively promote the mainstreaming of a gender perspective into the design, implementation, monitoring and evaluation of policies and programmes in all political, economic and social spheres, as well as the commitment to strengthen the capabilities of the United Nations system in the area of gender equality,

Taking note with appreciation of the report of the Secretary-General on mainstreaming a gender perspective into all policies and programmes in the United Nations system, and stressing the importance of the continued integration of a gender perspective in the work and activities of the Human Rights Council,

Reaffirming the commitments in regard to gender equality and the empowerment of women in the Doha Declaration on Financing for Development: outcome document of the Follow-up International Conference on Financing for Development to Review the Implementation of the Monterrey Consensus,

Bearing in mind the challenges and obstacles to changing discriminatory attitudes and gender stereotypes, which perpetuate discrimination against women and stereotypical roles of men and women, and stressing that challenges and obstacles remain in the implementation of international standards and norms to address the inequality between men and women,

Reaffirming the Declaration of Commitment on HIV/AIDS and the Political Declaration on HIV/AIDS adopted at the High-level Meeting on HIV/AIDS, held on 2 June 2006, which, inter alia, acknowledged the feminization of the pandemic,

Expressing serious concern that the urgent goal of 50/50 gender balance in the United Nations system, especially at senior and policymaking levels, with full respect for the principle of equitable geographical distribution, in conformity with Article 101, paragraph 3, of the Charter of the United Nations, remains unmet, and that the representation of women in the United Nations system has remained almost static, with negligible improvement in some parts of the system, as reflected in the report of the Secretary-General on the improvement of the status of women in the United Nations system,

Reaffirming the important role of women in the prevention and resolution of conflicts and in peacebuilding,

Recalling Security Council resolutions 1325(2000) of 31 October 2000, 1820(2008) of 19 June 2008, 1888(2009) of 30 September 2009 and 1889(2009) of 5 October 2009 on women and peace and security and resolution 1882(2009) of 4 August 2009 on children and armed conflict,

1. Takes note with appreciation of the report of the Secretary-General on the measures taken and progress achieved in follow-up to the implementation of the Beijing Declaration and Platform for Action and the outcome of the twenty-third special session of the General Assembly;

2. Reaffirms the Beijing Declaration and Platform for Action adopted at the Fourth World Conference on Women and the outcome of the twenty-third special session of the General Assembly, as well as the declaration adopted on the occasion of the ten-year review and appraisal of the implementation of the Beijing Declaration and Platform for Action at the forty-ninth session of the Commission on the Status of Women, and also reaffirms its commitment to their full, effective and accelerated implementation;

3. Also reaffirms the primary and essential role of the General Assembly and the Economic and Social Council, as well as the catalytic role of the Commission on the Status of Women, in promoting gender equality and the empowerment of women based on the full implementation of the Beijing Declaration and Platform for Action and the outcome of the twenty-third special session and in promoting and monitoring gender mainstreaming within the United Nations system;

4. Recognizes that the implementation of the Beijing Declaration and Platform for Action and the fulfilment of the obligations of States parties under the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women are mutually reinforcing in respect of achieving gender equality and the empowerment of women, and in this regard welcomes the contributions of the Committee on the Elimination of Discrimination against Women to promoting the implementation of the Platform for Action and the outcome of the twenty-third special session, and invites States parties to the Convention to include information on measures taken to enhance implementation at the national level in their reports to the Committee under article 18 of the Convention;

5. Calls upon States parties to comply fully with their obligations under the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women and the Optional Protocol thereto and to take into consideration the concluding observations as well as the general recommendations of the Committee, urges States parties to consider limiting the extent of any reservations that they lodge to the Convention, to formulate any reservations as precisely and narrowly as possible and to regularly review such reservations with a view to withdrawing them so as to ensure that no reservation is incompatible with the object and purpose of the Convention, also urges all Member States that have not yet ratified or acceded to the Convention to consider doing so, and calls upon those Member States that have not yet done so to consider signing and ratifying or acceding to the Optional Protocol;

6. Welcomes the establishment of UN-Women, which consolidates the mandates and functions of the Office of the Special Adviser on Gender Issues and Advancement of Women, the Division for the Advancement of Women, the United Nations Development Fund for Women and the International Research and Training Institute for the Advancement of Women, with the additional role of leading, coordinating and promoting the accountability of the United Nations system in its work on gender equality and the empowerment of women, as established under General Assembly resolution 64/289;

7. Recognizes the role of the General Assembly, the Economic and Social Council and the Commission on the Status of Women as the multitiered intergovernmental governance structure for the normative support functions that shall provide normative policy guidance for UN-Women;

8. Also recognizes the role of the General Assembly, the Economic and Social Council and the Executive Board of UN-Women as the multitiered intergovernmental governance structure for the operational activities that shall provide operational policy guidance for UN-Women;

9. Urges Member States to ensure adequate funding for the budget of UN-Women by providing, when legislative and budgetary provisions allow, core, multi-year, predictable, stable and sustainable voluntary contributions to enable UN-Women to promptly and effectively plan and carry out its mandate;

10. Welcomes the ministerial declaration adopted by the Economic and Social Council in 2010 on the theme "Implementing the internationally agreed goals and commitments in regard to gender equality and empowerment of women";

11. Endorses the declaration adopted by the Commission on the Status of Women at its fifty-fourth session on the occasion of the fifteenth anniversary of the Fourth World Conference on Women;

12. Encourages all actors, inter alia, Governments, the United Nations system, other international organizations and civil society, to continue to support the work of the Commission on the Status of Women in fulfilling its central role in the follow-up to and review of the implementation of the Beijing Declaration and Platform for Action and the outcome of the twenty-third special session, and, as applicable, to carry out its recommendations, and welcomes in this regard the revised programme and methods of work of the Commission adopted at its fifty-third session, which continue to focus attention on the sharing of experiences, lessons learned and good practices in overcoming challenges to full implementation at the national and international levels as well as to the evaluation of progress in the implementation of priority themes;

13. Calls upon Governments and the organs and relevant funds, programmes and specialized agencies of the United Nations system, within their respective mandates, and other international and regional organizations, including financial institutions, and all relevant actors of civil society, including non-governmental organizations, to intensify action to achieve the full and effective implementation of the Beijing Declaration and Platform for Action and the outcome of the twenty-third special session;

14. Reaffirms that States have an obligation to exercise due diligence to prevent violence against women and girls, provide protection to the victims and investigate, prosecute and punish the perpetrators of violence against women and girls and that failure to do so violates and impairs or nullifies the enjoyment of their human rights and fundamental freedoms, calls upon Governments to elaborate and implement laws and strategies to eliminate violence against women and girls, encourages and supports men and boys in taking an active part in the prevention and elimination of all forms of violence, encourages increased understanding among men and boys of how violence harms girls, boys, women and men and undermines gender equality, encourages all actors to speak out against any violence against women, and in this regard encourages Member States to continue to support the Secretary-General's ongoing campaign "UNITE to End Violence against Women" and the UN-Women social mobilization and advocacy platform "Say NO to violence against women";

15. Reiterates its call to the United Nations system, including the main organs, their main committees and subsidiary bodies, functions such as the annual ministerial review and the Development Cooperation Forum of the Economic and Social Council, and the funds, programmes and specialized agencies, to increase efforts to fully mainstream a gender perspective into all issues under their consideration and within their mandates, as well as in all United Nations summits, conferences and special sessions and in their follow-up processes, including the Fourth United Nations Conference on the Least Developed Countries in 2011, the United Nations Conference on Sustainable Development in 2012 and the review and appraisal of the Madrid International Plan of Action on Ageing, 2002, at the fifty-first session of the Commission for Social Development, in 2013;

16. Requests that the entities of the United Nations system systematically incorporate the outcomes of the Commission on the Status of Women into their work within their mandates, inter alia, to ensure effective support for the efforts of Member States towards the achievement of gender equality and the empowerment of women;

17. Strongly encourages Governments to continue to support the role and contribution of civil society, in particular non-governmental organizations and women's organizations, in the implementation of the Beijing Declaration and Platform for Action and the outcome of the twenty-third special session;

18. Requests that reports of the Secretary-General submitted to the General Assembly and the Economic and Social Council and their subsidiary bodies systematically address gender perspectives through qualitative gender analysis, sex- and age-disaggregated data and, where available, quantitative data, in particular through concrete conclusions and recommendations for further action on gender equality and the empowerment of women, in order to facilitate gender-sensitive policy development;

19. Encourages Member States, with the support of, as appropriate, United Nations entities, including UN-Women, international and regional organizations and other relevant actors, to prioritize the strengthening of national data collection and monitoring capacities, with regard to statistics disaggregated by sex and age, as well as national tracking indicators for gender equality and the empowerment of women through multisectoral efforts and partnerships;

20. Calls upon all parts of the United Nations system to continue to play an active role in ensuring the full, effective and accelerated implementation of the Beijing Declaration and Platform for Action and the outcome of the twenty-third special session, through, inter alia, the maintenance of gender specialists in all entities of the United Nations system, as well as by ensuring that all personnel, especially in the field, receive training and appropriate follow-up, including tools, guidance and support, for accelerated gender mainstreaming, and reaffirms the need to strengthen the capabilities of the United Nations system in the area of gender;

21. Requests the Secretary-General to review and redouble his efforts to make progress towards achieving the goal of 50/50 gender balance at all levels throughout the United Nations system, with full respect for the principle of equitable geographical distribution, in conformity with Article 101, paragraph 3, of the Charter of the United Nations, considering, in particular, women from developing and least developed countries, from countries with economies in transition and from unrepresented or largely underrepresented Member States, and to ensure managerial and departmental accountability with respect to gender balance targets, and strongly encourages Member States to identify and regularly submit more women candidates for appointment to positions in the United Nations system, especially at more senior and policymaking levels, including in peacekeeping operations;

22. Calls upon the United Nations system to continue its efforts towards achieving the goal of gender balance, including with the active support of gender focal points, and requests the Secretary-General to provide an oral report to the Commission on the Status of Women at its fifty-fifth session and to report to the General Assembly at its sixty-seventh session on the improvement of the status of women in the United Nations system, under the item entitled "Advancement of women", and on progress made and obstacles encountered in achieving gender balance, recommendations for accelerating progress, and up-to-date statistics, including the number and percentage of women and their functions and nationalities throughout the United Nations system, and information on the responsibility and accountability of the offices of human resources management and the secretariat of the United Nations System Chief Executives Board for Coordination for promoting gender balance;

23. Encourages increased efforts by Governments and the United Nations system to enhance accountability for the implementation of commitments to gender equality and the empowerment of women at the international, regional and national levels, including by improved monitoring and reporting on progress in relation to policies, strategies, resource allocations and programmes and by achieving gender balance;

24. Reaffirms that Governments bear the primary responsibility for the achievement of gender equality and the empowerment of women and that international cooperation has an essential role in assisting developing countries in progressing towards the full implementation of the Beijing Declaration and Platform for Action;

25. Requests the Secretary-General to continue to report annually to the General Assembly under the item entitled “Advancement of women”, as well as to the Commission on the Status of Women and the Economic and Social Council, on the follow-up to and progress made in the implementation of the Beijing Declaration and Platform for Action and the outcome of the twenty-third special session, with an assessment of progress in gender mainstreaming, including information on key achievements, lessons learned and good practices, and recommendations on further measures to enhance implementation.

Critical areas of concern

Women and poverty

Women in development

At the High-level Plenary Meeting on the MDGs (see p. 813), the General Assembly, on 22 September, by resolution 65/1, adopted the outcome document, entitled “Keeping the promise: united to achieve the Millennium Development Goals”. The Assembly recognized that achieving gender equality and women’s empowerment was both a key development goal and an important means for realizing all of the MDGs. It welcomed the establishment of UN-Women (see p. 1178) and pledged full support for its operationalization. The Assembly noted that with increased political commitment, successful approaches in MDG implementation could be replicated and scaled up for further progress, including by advancing the economic, legal and political empowerment of women, and investing in the health of women and children to reduce the number of women and children who died of preventable causes.

2010 ECOSOC thematic dialogue

On 28 April, the Economic and Social Council decided that “Gender equality and empowerment of women in the implementation of the Millennium Development Goals: regional perspectives” would be the theme for the item on regional cooperation of its 2010 substantive session (decision 2010/207). On 2 July, the Council held a dialogue with the Executive Secretaries of the regional commissions on the chosen theme.

International Widows’ Day

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 21 December [meeting 71], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Third Committee [A/65/449], adopted resolution 65/189 without vote [agenda item 28 (a)].

International Widows’ Day

The General Assembly,

Recalling all its relevant resolutions, including the United Nations Millennium Declaration, as well as the Universal Declaration of Human Rights, the Convention on the Rights of the Child, the outcomes of the major United Nations conferences and summits in the economic and social fields, and, in particular, the agreed conclusions endorsing the eradication of poverty through the empowerment of women throughout their life cycle adopted by the Commission on the Status of Women at its forty-sixth session, and the Beijing Declaration and Platform for Action adopted at the Fourth World Conference on Women on 15 September 1995,

Recalling also the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women, in particular article 3, according to which parties shall take in all fields, in particular in the political, social, economic and cultural fields, all appropriate measures, including legislation, to ensure the full development and advancement of women,

Affirming that ensuring and promoting the full realization of all human rights and fundamental freedoms for all women is critical to achieving all internationally agreed development goals, including the Millennium Development Goals,

Emphasizing that the economic empowerment of women, including widows, is a critical factor in the eradication of poverty,

Recognizing that all aspects of the lives of widowed women and their children are, in many parts of the world, negatively affected by various economic, social and cultural factors, including lack of access to inheritance, land tenure, employment and/or livelihood, social safety nets, health care and education,

Recognizing also the link existing between the situation of widows and that of their children,

Deeply concerned that millions of widows’ children face hunger, malnutrition, child labour, difficult access to health care, water and sanitation, loss of schooling, illiteracy and human trafficking,

Reaffirming that women, including widowed women, should be an integral part of the society in the State where they reside, and recalling the importance of positive steps on the part of Member States to that end,

Emphasizing the need to give special attention to the situation of widows and their children, including those living in rural areas,

1. Decides, with effect from 2011, to observe International Widows’ Day on 23 June each year;

2. Calls upon Member States, the United Nations system and other international and regional organizations, within their respective mandates, to give special attention to the situation of widows and their children;

3. Invites all Member States, relevant organizations of the United Nations system and other international organizations, as well as civil society, to observe International Widows' Day and to raise awareness of the situation of widows and their children around the world;

4. Requests the Secretary-General to take the measures necessary, within existing resources, for the observance by the United Nations of International Widows' Day.

Women's health

Women, the girl child and HIV/AIDS

In a March resolution [E/2010/27 (res. 54/2)], the Commission on the Status of Women requested Governments to provide equal access for all persons to social services related to health care, especially women and girls living with or affected by HIV and AIDS, including treatment for opportunistic infections and other HIV-related diseases. Governments were called on to integrate HIV prevention and voluntary counselling and testing into other health services, and to intensify efforts to eliminate discrimination against women and girls in relation to HIV and AIDS. The Commission stressed that women and girls should be empowered to protect themselves against violence and have the right to decide on matters related to their sexuality. Governments and the international donor community were called on to integrate a gender perspective in all matters of international assistance and take measures to ensure that resources concomitant with the impact of HIV and AIDS on women and girls were made available. The Commission requested the Secretariat and co-sponsors of the Joint United Nations Programme on HIV/AIDS and other UN agencies addressing the pandemic, as well as the Global Fund to Fight AIDS, Tuberculosis and Malaria, to mainstream a gender and human rights perspective throughout their HIV- and AIDS-related operations. The Commission recommended that gender-equality perspectives be included throughout the MDG review process, and that gender analysis, harmonization of data, and the development and refinement of indicators be used to update the core indicators on HIV and AIDS for the reporting system of the 2001 special session of the Assembly on HIV/AIDS [YUN 2001, p. 1125].

Elimination of obstetric fistula

In response to General Assembly resolution 63/158 [YUN 2008, p. 1256], the Secretary-General submitted an August report on supporting efforts to end obstetric fistula [A/65/268], a devastating childbirth injury leaving women incontinent and therefore often stigmatized and isolated within their communities. It described actions taken at the international, regional and national levels, including within the UN system, to end obstetric fistula. Prolonged obstructed labour without medical or surgical care was the main cause of obstetric fistula and, in almost 90 per cent of such cases, the baby was stillborn or died within the first week of life. Noting that precise figures were lacking, the report stated that at least 2 million, and possibly 3.5 million, women suffered from the condition. Attention was drawn to the need to address obstetric fistula in the context of the achievement of MDG 5 on improving maternal health and achieving universal access to reproductive health by 2015. A preventable and treatable condition that afflicted the most impoverished women and girls in the developing world, obstetric fistula was a stark example of continued global health inequity.

The United Nations Population Fund (UNFPA) continued its global Campaign to End Fistula [YUN 2002, p. 1078], aiming to end obstetric fistula by 2015 by offering preventative and treatment measures. In 2010, UNFPA conducted about 5,000 surgical treatments and was active in more than 49 countries in Africa, the Arab States and Asia (see PART THREE, Chapter VIII).

Noting that educating and empowering girls and women was crucial for the prevention of obstetric fistula, the Secretary-General recommended greater investment in health-care systems, especially in priority countries in sub-Saharan Africa and South Asia. He also proposed investments to support national health-care plans and address health-care coverage inequalities among socio-economic and age groups, particularly in rural areas and in poor urban areas. Equitable geographic access required the distribution of health-care facilities and personnel, collaboration with the transport sector on affordable transport options, and the promotion of community-based solutions, while financial access required innovative mechanisms to ensure the availability of free or subsidized delivery care and obstetric fistula treatment. He called for strengthened and expanded interventions to keep adolescent girls in school, stop child marriages and promote health-seeking behaviours. Achieving MDG 5 and the eradication of obstetric fistula would require substantial financial resources, including sustained and predictable funding for preventing and treating existing and new cases until 2015.

Global Strategy for Women's and Children's Health. On 22 September, the Secretary-General launched the Global Strategy for Women's and Children's Health (Every Woman Every Child), which aimed to save 16 million lives by 2015 through accelerating collective progress towards the achievement of MDG 4 (a two-thirds reduction in under-five mortality) and 5 (a three-quarters reduction in maternal mortality and universal access to reproductive health). In resolution 65/197 of 21 December, the General Assembly took note of the launch (see p. 647).

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 21 December [meeting 71], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Third Committee [A/65/449], adopted resolution 65/188 without vote [agenda item 28 (a)].

Supporting efforts to end obstetric fistula

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 62/138 of 18 December 2007 and 63/158 of 18 December 2008 on supporting efforts to end obstetric fistula,

Reaffirming the Beijing Declaration and Platform for Action, the outcome of the twenty-third special session of the General Assembly entitled “Women 2000: gender equality, development and peace for the twenty-first century” and the declaration adopted at the forty-ninth session of the Commission on the Status of Women,

Reaffirming also the international commitments in the field of social development and to gender equality and the advancement of women made at the World Conference on Human Rights, the International Conference on Population and Development, the World Summit for Social Development and the World Conference against Racism, Racial Discrimination, Xenophobia and Related Intolerance, as well as those made in the United Nations Millennium Declaration and at the 2005 World Summit,

Reaffirming further the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women and the Convention on the Rights of the Child, and urging States that have not done so to consider, as a matter of priority, signing, ratifying or acceding to those Conventions and the Optional Protocols thereto,

Taking note with appreciation of the report of the Secretary-General on supporting efforts to end obstetric fistula, and welcoming the conclusions and recommendations contained therein,

Stressing the interlinkages between poverty, malnutrition, lack of or inadequate or inaccessible health services, early childbearing, early marriage of the girl child, violence against young women and girls and gender discrimination as root causes of obstetric fistula, and that poverty remains the main social risk factor,

Recognizing that the difficult socio-economic conditions that exist in many developing countries, in particular the least developed countries, have resulted in the acceleration of the feminization of poverty,

Recognizing also that early pregnancy and early childbearing entail complications during pregnancy and delivery and a much higher risk of maternal mortality and morbidity, and deeply concerned that early childbearing and limited access to the highest attainable standard of health, including sexual and reproductive health, including in the area of emergency obstetric care, cause high levels of obstetric fistula and other maternal morbidities, as well as maternal mortality,

Recognizing further the serious immediate and long-term implications for health, including sexual and reproductive health, as well as increased vulnerability to HIV/AIDS, and the negative impact on psychological, social and economic development that violence against the girl child and adolescent girls represents for individuals, families, communities and States,

Deeply concerned about discrimination against the girl child and the violation of the rights of the girl child, which often result in less access by girls to education and nutrition, reduced physical and mental health and enjoyment by girls of fewer of the rights, opportunities and benefits of childhood and adolescence compared with boys, and in their often being subjected to various forms of cultural, social, sexual and economic exploitation and to violence and harmful practices,

Welcoming the contribution by Member States, the international community and civil society to the global Campaign to End Fistula, bearing in mind that a people-centred approach to social and economic development is fundamental for protecting and empowering individuals and communities,

Welcoming also the outcome document of the High-level Plenary Meeting of the General Assembly on the Millennium Development Goals, entitled “Keeping the promise: united to achieve the Millennium Development Goals”, in particular the references to Goal 5,

Welcoming further the Secretary-General’s Global Strategy for Women’s and Children’s Health, undertaken by a broad coalition of partners, in support of national plans and strategies aimed at significantly reducing the number of maternal, newborn and under-five child deaths as a matter of immediate concern by scaling up a priority package of high-impact interventions and integrating efforts in sectors such as health, education, gender equality, water and sanitation, poverty reduction and nutrition,

Welcoming the various national, regional and international initiatives on all the Millennium Development Goals, including those undertaken bilaterally and through South-South cooperation, in support of national plans and strategies in sectors such as health, education, gender equality, energy, water and sanitation, poverty reduction and nutrition as a way to reduce the number of maternal, newborn and under-five child deaths,

Welcoming also ongoing partnerships between stakeholders at all levels to address the multifaceted determinants of maternal, newborn and child health in close coordination with Member States based on their needs and priorities and the commitments announced during the High-level Plenary Meeting of the General Assembly on the Millennium Development Goals to accelerate progress on the health-related Goals,

Reaffirming the renewed and reinforced commitments made by Member States for achieving Millennium Development Goal 5,

1. Recognizes the interlinkages between poverty, malnutrition, lack of or inadequate or inaccessible health services, early childbearing, early marriage of the girl child and gender discrimination as root causes of obstetric fistula, that poverty remains the main social risk factor, that the eradication of poverty is critical to meeting the needs and protecting and promoting the rights of women and girls and that continued urgent national and international action is required to eliminate it;

2. Stresses the need to address the social issues that contribute to the problem of obstetric fistula, such as early marriage of the girl child, early pregnancy, lack of access to sexual and reproductive health, lack of or inadequate education of women and girls, poverty and the low status of women and girls;

3. Also stresses that States have the obligation to promote and protect all human rights and fundamental freedoms of women and girls, that they must exercise due diligence in order to prevent, investigate and punish the perpetrators of violence against women and girls and to provide protection to the victims, and that failure to do so violates and impairs or nullifies the enjoyment of their human rights and fundamental freedoms;

4. Calls upon States to take all measures necessary to ensure the right of women and girls to the enjoyment of the highest attainable standard of health, including sexual and reproductive health, and to develop sustainable health systems and social services, with a view to ensuring access to such systems and services without discrimination, while paying special attention to adequate food and nutrition, water and sanitation, family planning information, increasing knowledge and awareness and securing appropriate prenatal and post-natal care for the prevention of obstetric fistula;

5. Also calls upon States to ensure the right to education for women and girls, of good quality, on an equal basis with men and boys, and to ensure that they complete a full course of primary education, and to renew their efforts to improve and expand girls' and women's education at all levels, including at the secondary and higher levels, as well as vocational education and technical training, in order, inter alia, to achieve gender equality, the empowerment of women and poverty eradication;

6. Urges States to enact and strictly enforce laws to ensure that marriage is entered into only with the free and full consent of the intending spouses and, in addition, to enact and strictly enforce laws concerning the minimum legal age of consent and the minimum age for marriage, and to raise the minimum age for marriage where necessary;

7. Calls upon the international community to support the activities of the United Nations Population Fund and other partners in the global Campaign to End Fistula, including the World Health Organization, in establishing and financing regional fistula treatment and training centres, and where necessary national centres, by identifying and supporting health facilities that have the potential to serve as centres for treatment, training and convalescent care;

8. Calls upon States to accelerate progress in order to achieve Millennium Development Goal 5 and its two targets by addressing reproductive, maternal, newborn and child health in a comprehensive manner, inter alia, through the provision of family planning, prenatal care, skilled attendance at birth, emergency obstetric and newborn care and methods of prevention and treatment of sexually transmitted diseases and infections, such as HIV, within strengthened health systems that provide accessible and affordable integrated health-care services and include community-based preventive and clinical care, as also reflected in the outcome document of the High-level Plenary Meeting of the General Assembly on the Millennium Development Goals, entitled "Keeping the promise: united to achieve the Millennium Development Goals", and the Global Strategy for Women's and Children's Health;

9. Calls upon States and/or the relevant funds and programmes, organs and specialized agencies of the United Nations system, within their respective mandates, and invites the international financial institutions and all relevant actors of civil society, including non-governmental organizations, and the private sector:

(a) To redouble their efforts to meet the internationally agreed goal of improving maternal health by making maternal health services and obstetric fistula treatment geographically and financially accessible, including by increasing access to skilled attendance at birth, emergency obstetric care and appropriate prenatal and post-natal care;

(b) To develop, implement and support national and international prevention, care and treatment and socio-economic reintegration and support strategies, as appropriate, to address effectively the condition of obstetric fistula and to develop further a multisectoral, multidisciplinary, comprehensive and integrated approach in order to bring about lasting solutions and put an end to obstetric fistula, maternal mortality and related morbidities, including through ensuring access to affordable, comprehensive, quality maternal health-care services, including skilled birth attendance and emergency obstetric care;

(c) To strengthen the capacity of health systems, in particular public health systems, to provide the essential services needed to prevent obstetric fistula and to treat those cases that do occur by providing the continuum of services, including family planning, prenatal care, skilled birth attendance, emergency obstetric care and post-partum care, to young women and girls, including those living in poverty and in underserved rural areas where obstetric fistula is most common;

(d) To strengthen research, monitoring and evaluation systems, including community-based notification of obstetric fistula cases and maternal and newborn deaths, to guide the implementation of maternal health programmes;

(e) To provide essential health services, equipment and supplies and skills training and income-generating projects to women and girls so that they can break out of the cycle of poverty;

(f) To mobilize funding to provide free or subsidized fistula repairs, including through encouraging more networking among providers and the sharing of new treatment techniques and protocols;

(g) To improve data collection, pre- and post-surgery, to measure progress in addressing the needs for surgical treatment and the quality of surgery, rehabilitation and socio-economic reintegration services, including post-surgery prospects for successful subsequent pregnancies, live births and severe health-related complications so as to address the challenges for improving maternal health;

(h) To provide health education, rehabilitation and socio-economic reintegration counselling, including medical counselling, as key components of post-operative care to all women after fistula treatment, including to those with irreparable cases;

(i) To bring obstetric fistula to the attention of policymakers and communities, thereby reducing the stigma and discrimination associated with it and helping women and girls suffering from obstetric fistula so that they can overcome abandonment and social exclusion together with the psychosocial implications thereof, inter alia, through the support of social reintegration projects;

(j) To educate individual women and men, girls and boys, communities, policymakers and health professionals about how obstetric fistula can be prevented and treated, and increase awareness of the needs of pregnant women and girls, as well as of those who have undergone surgical fistula repair, including their right to the highest attainable standard of health, by working with community and religious leaders, traditional birth attendants, women and girls who have suffered from fistula, the media, radio stations, influential public figures and policymakers, support the training of doctors, midwives, nurses and other health workers in lifesaving obstetric care, and include training on fistula repair, treatment and care as a standard element of the training curricula of health professionals;

(k) To develop means of transportation and financing that enable women and girls to access obstetric care and treatment, and provide incentives and other means to secure the presence in rural areas of qualified health professionals who are able to perform interventions to prevent obstetric fistula;

10. Encourages communication and networking among existing fistula centres to facilitate training, research, advocacy and fund-raising and the development and application of relevant standards, including Obstetric Fistula: Guiding Principles for Clinical Management and Programme Development, which provides background information and principles for developing fistula prevention and treatment strategies and programmes;

11. Urges the international community to address the shortages of doctors, midwives, nurses and other health workers trained in lifesaving obstetric care, and of space and supplies, that limit the capacity of most fistula centres;

12. Urges multilateral donors, and invites international financial institutions, within their respective mandates, and regional development banks to review and implement policies to support national efforts to ensure that a higher proportion of resources reaches young women and girls, in particular in rural and remote areas;

13. Invites Member States to contribute to efforts to end obstetric fistula, including, in particular, the United Nations Population Fund global Campaign to End Fistula, with the goal of eliminating obstetric fistula by 2015, in line with the targets of the Millennium Development Goal of improving maternal health;

14. Requests the Secretary-General to submit a report to the General Assembly at its sixty-seventh session on the implementation of the present resolution under the item entitled "Advancement of women".

Eliminating maternal mortality

In a March resolution [E/2010/27 (res. 54/5)], the Commission on the Status of Women called on Member States and the international community to commit to eliminating the unacceptably high global rate of maternal mortality and morbidity and to implement the Beijing Platform for Action, the Programme of Action of the International Conference on Population and Development [YUN 1994, p. 956], and the outcomes of their review conferences, including commitments related to sexual and reproductive health. States were called on to address gender inequalities, violations of the enjoyment of human rights by women and girls, discrimination against women and girls, and harmful traditional practices that contributed to the global rate of maternal mortality and morbidity; guarantee access to the highest attainable standard of health for all women; and ensure women's full participation in decision-making regarding health care. The Commission recognized the interlinkages among poverty, malnutrition, lack of or inadequate or inaccessible health services, early childbearing and gender discrimination as root causes of maternal mortality and morbidity; that the eradication of poverty contributed to meeting the needs of women and girls; and that continued national and international action was required to eliminate it. It decided to hold, at its 2011 session, an expert panel discussion on the elimination of preventable maternal mortality and morbidity and the empowerment of women.

Tobacco use and maternal and child health

On 22 July, the Economic and Social Council, in resolution 2010/8 (see p. 1227) on tobacco use and maternal and child health, called on Member States to include tobacco control in their efforts to improve maternal and child health, and to reduce child mortality through the protection of children and pregnant women from tobacco use and exposure to tobacco smoke.

Traditional practices affecting the health of women and girls

Female genital mutilation

In response to Commission resolution 52/2 [YUN 2008, p. 1258], the Secretary-General submitted a report [E/CN.6/2010/6] on ending female genital mutilation (FGM), which provided information on measures taken by Member States and activities within the UN system to address the practice, as well as recommendations for future action. Responses to the Secretary-General's request for information were received from 27 Member States, 10 UN system entities and the International Organization for Migration.

Measures taken by Member States included: strengthening legal and policy frameworks; reinforcing preventive action and support to victims and women at risk; and enhancing data collection and collaboration among different stakeholders. States emphasized the importance of working with communities practising FGM, including migrant communities, and developing partnerships with UN entities, non-governmental organizations (NGOs), the private sector, community and faith-based organizations, media and other actors. Awareness-raising and information campaigns and programmes on the prohibition of FGM, the detrimental effects of the practice on health and well-being, and the human rights of women and girls were carried out through a range of media. Information on the benefits of abandoning the practice were included in school curricula. Training programmes towards FGM prevention or prohibition had been put in place for health-care providers and government officials.

UN entities collaborated with national authorities to support the adoption, improvement and implementation of laws, action plans and policies on the elimination of FGM. Approaches to working with communities were strengthened; those efforts included counselling for women and girls who had undergone the practice and advocating for alternative rites of passage for at-risk girls. UN entities supported training initiatives, focused on ensuring that victims and at-risk women and girls had access to services and support, and increased the availability of data and knowledge on FGM by providing information resources on prevalence, health consequences and elimination strategies.

The Secretary-General recommended that Member States ratify and implement international instruments and establish legal frameworks to prohibit and prevent FGM; protect and support victims and at-risk women and girls; put in place sanctions to discourage health professionals from performing the practice; and ensure that all professionals, including those in schools and health and social services, were duty-bound to report cases of FGM and cases in which they believed girls or women were at risk. Training programmes should be strengthened for religious and traditional leaders, health professionals and public officials, and States should support the re-training of traditional practitioners of FGM in alternative income-generating activities. Prevention efforts should continue, the role of communities in the abandonment of FGM should be recognized and community-based abandonment initiatives supported.

Commission action. In a March resolution [E/2010/27 (res. 54/7)], the Commission called on States to develop and implement integrated strategies for the prevention of FGM, including by training social workers, medical personnel, religious and community leaders and other professionals; ensure that they provided care and support services to at-risk women and girls and to women and girls who had undergone FGM; and compel them to report cases in which they believed girls or women were at risk. It called on the international community, UN entities, civil society and international financial institutions to support, through the allocation of increased financial resources, targeted, innovative programmes, and to disseminate best practices that addressed the needs and priorities of girls in vulnerable situations, such as that of FGM. The Commission requested the Secretary-General to ensure that all UN system entities took into account the protection and promotion of the rights of women and girls against FGM in their country programmes, in accordance with national priorities.

In response to General Assembly resolution 63/155 [YUN 2008, p. 1260], the Secretary-General submitted an August report [A/65/208] on the intensification of efforts to eliminate all forms of violence against women. Based on inputs received from 54 Member States, the report provided information on measures taken to address such violence, including the strengthening of legal frameworks, adoption of dedicated policies, reinforcement of preventive action, collection and analysis of data, and efforts to prosecute perpetrators and protect and support victims.

Many States had strengthened their national legislation to prevent and address violence against women, but the lack of enforcement of such laws remained a challenge. Penal codes had been amended to allow for expanded definitions of violence against women. The definition of rape had also been broadened in several countries to include a greater range of constitutive acts, focusing on consent rather than physical force and providing for an increase in applicable penalties. A growing number of States were criminalizing marital rape, and sentences and fines for domestic violence had been increased. To enhance the capacity of law enforcement officials, training programmes were carried out for police, prosecutors, judges, lawyers and security forces. Training materials were developed, and protocols and guidelines issued on investigation, prosecution, legal proceedings and cooperation between authorities.

National mechanisms were established, including expert groups, specialized units within ministries, and multisectoral task forces and commissions. Campaigns to sensitize community and religious leaders were carried out in several States, and a range of media were used in awareness-raising and information programmes. Helplines and legal clinics informed survivors and at-risk women of their rights and encouraged victims to seek assistance. A promising trend was the establishment of centres providing integrated services for victims in one location. Shelters and safe houses were more widely available for different groups, such as domestic workers, women migrants, women with disabilities, and children victims/witnesses of violence. Projects to build capacity and raise awareness among staff dealing with violence against women, including health staff, were organized in numerous States.

The Secretary-General recommended that States ensure that law enforcement officials dealing with violence against women received systematic training, and that criminal justice procedures were gender-sensitive and protected survivors' rights. Barriers to accessing justice faced by victims should be removed, including by ensuring legal aid, interpretation and court support. He recognized improvements in the collection of data on violence against women, including through the creation of national databases and the growing number of population-based surveys, but as the availability of more and better quality information and data was crucial, States should reinforce their efforts. Data should be disaggregated by sex, race, age, ethnicity and other characteristics, and States should intensify efforts to build the capacity of statisticians to collect data in a gender-sensitive manner. State-run information and awareness-raising campaigns, educational programmes and other initiatives should be reinforced to ensure that they were sustained and extensive in coverage, and that they targeted particular groups, such as immigrants, rural and indigenous women, women from ethnic minorities, and women with disabilities. Educational curricula should promote gender equality and women's human rights and condemn violence against women. Prevention activities should be extended to school programmes and sports and youth organizations and include efforts aimed at building skills in the development of respectful relations.

The Special Rapporteur on violence against women, its causes and consequences submitted to the Human Rights Council her first thematic report, which was on the topic of reparations to women subjected to violence in contexts of both peaceful and post-conflict settings [A/HRC/14/22] (see p. 751).

UNIFEM activities. In response to General Assembly resolution 50/166 [YUN 1995, p. 1188], the Secretary-General transmitted to the Human Rights Council and the Commission on the Status of Women a December report [A/HRC/16/34-E/CN.6/2011/9] of the United Nations Development Fund for Women (UNIFEM), by then part of UN-Women (see p. 1178), on its 2010 programming to eliminate violence against women in some 90 countries. In March, UNIFEM launched an online resource for service providers, programmers, policymakers and advocates that provided information on “what works best” to address gender-based violence: the Virtual Knowledge Centre to End Violence against Women and Girls. In November, it introduced the Global Programme on Safe Cities Free of Violence against Women and Girls—the first cross-regional initiative dedicated to developing a model for making cities safer by reducing sexual harassment and violence in public spaces.

Reviewing the activities of the UNIFEM-managed United Nations Trust Fund in Support of Actions to Eliminate Violence against Women, which was guided by a new strategic plan for 2010–2015 entitled “Vision 2015”, the report said that the Fund focused on three priorities: turning policy pledges into reality for women and girls; generating knowledge on “what works” to end the pandemic of violence against women and girls; and building new partnerships, ownership and expanded commitment to the Fund throughout the UN system and beyond. Initiatives engaging multiple sectors and encouraging partnerships among key stakeholders were prioritized; emphasis was placed on projects to meet the needs of marginalized or neglected groups, including youth, women living in conflict, and indigenous women. The Fund supported projects in standardized data collection, political advocacy and developing capacities of government officials and other stakeholders charged with implementing or enforcing laws.

The Fund had a portfolio of 83 active grants across 72 countries and territories with a total value of nearly $47 million. Africa had the largest portfolio (29 per cent), followed by Asia and the Pacific (26 per cent). Latin America and the Caribbean accounted for 20 per cent of grants. Central and Eastern Europe and the Commonwealth of Independent States comprised 14 per cent, followed by Arab States and cross-regional programmes with grant portfolios of 6 and 5 per cent, respectively. In 2010, over $10 million was awarded to 13 initiatives in 18 countries and territories for programmes expected to reach 280,000 beneficiaries.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 21 December [meeting 71], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Third Committee [A/65/449], adopted resolution 65/187 without vote [agenda item 28 (a)].

Intensification of efforts to eliminate all forms of violence against women

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 61/143 of 19 December 2006, 62/133 of 18 December 2007, 63/155 of 18 December 2008 and 64/137 of 18 December 2009 and all its previous resolutions on the elimination of violence against women,

Reaffirming the obligation of all States to promote and protect all human rights and fundamental freedoms, and reaffirming also that discrimination on the basis of sex is contrary to the Charter of the United Nations, the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women, the Convention on the Rights of the Child and other international human rights instruments, and that its elimination is an integral part of efforts towards the elimination of all forms of violence against women,

Reaffirming also the Declaration on the Elimination of Violence against Women, the Beijing Declaration and Platform for Action, the outcome of the twenty-third special session of the General Assembly entitled “Women 2000: gender equality, development and peace for the twenty-first century”, the ministerial declaration of the high-level segment of the substantive session of 2010 of the Economic and Social Council and the declarations adopted at the forty-ninth and fifty-fourth sessions of the Commission on the Status of Women,

Reaffirming further the international commitments in the field of social development and to gender equality and the advancement of women made at the World Conference on Human Rights, the International Conference on Population and Development, the World Summit for Social Development and the World Conference against Racism, Racial Discrimination, Xenophobia and Related Intolerance, as well as those made in the United Nations Millennium Declaration, at the 2005 World Summit and at the High-level Plenary Meeting of the General Assembly on the Millennium Development Goals, and noting the attention paid to the elimination of all forms of violence against indigenous women in the United Nations Declaration on the Rights of Indigenous Peoples adopted by the Assembly in its resolution 61/295 of 13 September 2007,

Recalling the inclusion of gender-related crimes and crimes of sexual violence in the Rome Statute of the International Criminal Court, as well as the recognition by the ad hoc international criminal tribunals that rape and other forms of sexual violence can constitute a war crime, a crime against humanity or a constitutive act with respect to genocide or torture,

Recalling also the tenth anniversary of the adoption of Security Council resolution 1325(2000) of 31 October 2000 on women and peace and security and the need for its full implementation, Council resolutions 1820(2008) of 19 June 2008, 1888(2009) of 30 September 2009 and 1889(2009) of 5 October 2009 on women and peace and security and Council resolution 1882(2009) of 4 August 2009 on children and armed conflict,

Recalling further Human Rights Council resolution 14/12 of 18 June 2010, in which the Council requested the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights to prepare a compilation of good practices in efforts aimed at preventing violence against women, in consultation with relevant stakeholders, and Council resolution 15/23 of 1 October 2010 on the elimination of discrimination against women,

Welcoming the establishment of the United Nations Entity for Gender Equality and the Empowerment of Women (UN-Women) and the appointment of Ms. Michelle Bachelet as Under-Secretary-General and head of UN-Women, and recognizing the importance of the cooperation and coordination of UN-Women with all relevant United Nations entities, including the Special Representative of the Secretary-General on Sexual Violence in Conflict and the Special Rapporteur of the Human Rights Council on violence against women, its causes and consequences,

Expressing its appreciation for the efforts and the high number of activities undertaken by the United Nations bodies, entities, funds and programmes and the specialized agencies, including by the Special Rapporteur on violence against women, its causes and consequences and the Special Representative of the Secretary-General on Violence against Children, to eliminate all forms of violence against women,

Deeply concerned about the pervasiveness of violence against women and girls in all its different forms and manifestations worldwide, and reiterating the need to intensify efforts to prevent and eliminate all forms of violence against women and girls throughout the world,

Recognizing that violence against women and girls is rooted in historical and structural inequality in power relations between men and women and that all forms of violence against women seriously violate and impair or nullify the enjoyment by women and girls of all human rights and fundamental freedoms and constitute a major impediment to the ability of women to make use of their capabilities,

Recognizing also that women's poverty and lack of empowerment, as well as their marginalization resulting from their exclusion from social policies and from the benefits of education and sustainable development, can place them at increased risk of violence, and that violence against women impedes the social and economic development of communities and States, as well as the achievement of the internationally agreed development goals, including the Millennium Development Goals,

Recognizing further that the empowerment of women, by, inter alia, ensuring their full representation and full and equal participation at all levels of decision-making and their full economic autonomy, including by promoting their equal access to the labour market, is fundamental for eliminating violence against women and girls, especially in the current time of economic crisis,

Acknowledging the need to address violence against women and girls holistically, including through the recognition of linkages between violence against women and girls and other issues, such as HIV/AIDS, poverty eradication, food security, peace and security, humanitarian assistance, human trafficking, education, health and crime prevention,

Welcoming the adoption of the United Nations Global Plan of Action to Combat Trafficking in Persons, and stressing its contribution to combating violence against women and the need for its full and effective implementation,

Expressing its appreciation for the efforts and the high number of activities undertaken by States to eliminate all forms of violence against women that have resulted in the strengthening of legislation and the criminal justice system, such as adopting national action plans, strategies and national coordination mechanisms, implementing prevention measures, including awareness-raising and capacity-building, reinforcing protection, support and services for victims and survivors, and improving data collection and analysis,

Emphasizing that the lack of full and effective enforcement of national legal frameworks to prevent and address violence against women remains a continuing challenge, as noted by the Secretary-General in his report,

Recognizing the important role of the family in preventing and combating violence against women and girls and the need to support its capacity to prevent and eliminate all forms of violence against women and girls,

Recognizing also the important role of the community, in particular men and boys, as well as civil society, in particular women's organizations, in the efforts to eliminate all forms of violence against women,

1. Stresses that "violence against women" means any act of gender-based violence that results in, or is likely to result in, physical, sexual or psychological harm or suffering to women, including threats of such acts, coercion or arbitrary deprivation of liberty, whether occurring in public or in private life;

2. Recognizes that violence against women and girls persists in every country in the world as a pervasive violation of the enjoyment of human rights and a major impediment to achieving gender equality, development, peace and the internationally agreed development goals, in particular the Millennium Development Goals;

3. Welcomes the report of the Secretary-General;

4. Also welcomes the fact that a high number of Member States have responded to the request of the Secretary-General for information relating to the implementation of General Assembly resolution 63/155, and expresses the hope that Member States will continue to respond to subsequent requests of the Secretary-General;

5. Further welcomes the efforts and important contributions at the local, national, regional and international levels to eliminate all forms of violence against women, including by the Committee on the Elimination of Discrimination against Women and the Special Rapporteur of the Human Rights Council on violence against women, its causes and consequences;

6. Expresses its appreciation for the progress achieved in the Secretary-General's 2008–2015 campaign "UNITE to End Violence against Women", through the launch of the Secretary-General's Network of Men Leaders and the development of a framework for action outlining the five key outcomes to be achieved by 2015, supported, inter alia, by the United Nations Development Fund for Women (part of UN-Women) social mobilization and advocacy platform "Say NO to violence against women", the United Nations inter-agency initiative "Stop Rape Now: United Nations Action against Sexual Violence in Conflict" and the regional components of the campaign, stresses the need to accelerate the implementation of concrete follow-up activities by the United Nations system to end all forms of violence against women, requests the Secretary-General to report on the results of his campaign, and encourages Member States to join forces in addressing the global pandemic of all forms of violence against women;

7. Strongly condemns all acts of violence against women and girls, whether those acts are perpetrated by the State, by private persons or by non-State actors, and calls for the elimination of all forms of gender-based violence in the family, within the general community and where perpetrated or condoned by the State;

8. Stresses that it is important that States strongly condemn all forms of violence against women and refrain from invoking any custom, tradition or religious consideration to avoid their obligations with respect to its elimination as set out in the Declaration on the Elimination of Violence against Women;

9. Also stresses that States have the obligation, at all levels, to promote and protect all human rights and fundamental freedoms for all, including women and girls, and must exercise due diligence to prevent, investigate, prosecute and punish the perpetrators of violence against women and girls, to eliminate impunity and to provide protection to the victims, and that failure to do so violates and impairs or nullifies the enjoyment of their human rights and fundamental freedoms;

10. Reaffirms that the persistence of armed conflicts in various parts of the world is a major impediment to the elimination of all forms of violence against women, and, bearing in mind that armed and other types of conflicts and terrorism and hostage-taking still persist in many parts of the world and that aggression, foreign occupation and ethnic and other types of conflicts are an ongoing reality, affecting women and men in nearly every region, calls upon all States and the international community to place particular focus on the plight, and give priority attention and increased assistance to relieving the suffering of, women and girls living in such situations and to ensure that, where violence is committed against them, all perpetrators of such violence are duly investigated and, as appropriate, prosecuted and punished in order to end impunity, while stressing the need to respect international humanitarian law and human rights law;

11. Stresses the need for the exclusion of the killing and maiming of women and girls, as prohibited under international law, and crimes of sexual violence from amnesty provisions in the context of conflict resolution processes;

12. Also stresses that, despite important steps taken by many countries around the world, States should continue to focus on the prevention of violence against women and its causes and consequences, in order to complement more effectively the improved legal and policy frameworks, and should therefore monitor and rigorously evaluate the implementation of available programmes, policies and laws and improve, where possible, their impact and effectiveness;

13. Further stresses that States should take measures to ensure that all officials responsible for implementing policies and programmes aimed at preventing violence against women and girls, protecting and assisting the victims and investigating and punishing violence against women and girls receive proper training to sensitize them to the different and specific needs of women and girls, in particular those who have been subjected to violence, so that women and girls are not revictimized when seeking justice and redress;

14. Stresses that States should take all possible measures to empower women, inform them of their rights in seeking redress through mechanisms of justice and inform everyone of women's rights and of the existing penalties for violating those rights;

15. Calls upon States, with the support of United Nations entities, to fully engage men and boys, as well as families and communities, as agents of change in preventing and condemning violence against women;

16. Urges States to continue to develop their national strategy, translating it into concrete programmes and actions, and a more systematic, comprehensive, multisectoral and sustained approach, aimed at eliminating all forms of violence against women, including by achieving gender equality and the empowerment of women, and by increasing the focus on prevention in laws, policies and programmes and their implementation, monitoring and evaluation, so as to ensure the optimal use of available instruments, by, for example:

(a) Establishing, in partnership with all relevant stakeholders and at all relevant levels, a comprehensive integrated national plan dedicated to combating violence against women and girls in all its aspects, which includes data collection and analysis, prevention and protection measures, as well as national information campaigns, using resources to eliminate in the media gender stereotypes that lead to violence against women and girls;

(b) Reviewing and, where appropriate, revising, amending or abolishing all laws, regulations, policies, practices and customs that discriminate against women or have a discriminatory impact on women, and ensuring that the provisions of multiple legal systems, where they exist, comply with international human rights obligations, commitments and principles, including the principle of non-discrimination;

(c) Evaluating and assessing the impact of current legislation, rules and procedures regarding violence against women and the reasons for low reporting, reinforcing, where necessary, criminal law and procedure relating to all forms of violence against women and, where necessary, incorporating into law measures aimed at preventing violence against women;

(d) Promoting awareness among all stakeholders of the need to combat violence against women, and promoting gender equality and the empowerment of women, inter alia, through regular and repeated use and funding of awareness-raising campaigns and other ways to promote prevention, such as international, regional and national conferences, seminars, training, publications, brochures, websites, audiovisual material, social media, television and radio spots, and debates, as appropriate;

(e) Ensuring that there is sufficient knowledge, including expertise in effective legal approaches to eliminating violence against women and girls, awareness and coordination in the legal system and, to that end, where appropriate, appointing a focal point in the legal system for cases of violence against women and girls;

(f) Ensuring the systematic collection and analysis of data to monitor all forms of violence against women, including on the effectiveness of measures to prevent and address such violence, with the involvement of national statistical offices and, where appropriate, in partnership with other actors, in order to review and implement effectively laws, policies, strategies and preventive measures, while ensuring and maintaining the privacy and confidentiality of the victims;

(g) Establishing appropriate national mechanisms for monitoring and evaluating the implementation of national measures, including national action plans, taken to eliminate violence against women, including through the use of national indicators;

(h) Providing adequate financial support for the implementation of national action plans to end violence against women and other relevant activities;

(i) Allocating adequate resources to promote the empowerment of women and gender equality and to prevent and redress all forms and manifestations of violence against women;

(j) Adopting all appropriate measures, especially in the field of education, from the entry levels of the education system, to modify the social and cultural patterns of conduct of men and women of all ages, in order to promote the development of respectful relations and to eliminate prejudices, customary practices and all other practices based on the idea of the inferiority or superiority of either of the sexes and on stereotyped roles for men and women, and by raising awareness of the unacceptability of violence against women and girls at all levels, including through schools, teachers, parents, youth organizations and teaching materials sensitized on gender equality and human rights;

(k) Empowering women, in particular women living in poverty, by, inter alia, strengthening their economic autonomy and by ensuring their full participation in society and in decision-making processes, through, inter alia, social and economic policies that guarantee them full and equal access to all levels of quality education and training and to affordable and adequate public and social services, as well as equal access to financial resources and employment, and full and equal rights to own and have access to land and other property, and taking further appropriate measures to address the increasing rate of homelessness of and inadequate housing for women in order to reduce their vulnerability to violence;

(l) Treating all forms of violence against women and girls as a criminal offence, punishable by law, contributing, inter alia, to the prevention of such crimes, and ensuring penalties commensurate with the severity of the crimes and sanctions in domestic legislation to punish, and redress, as appropriate, the wrongs caused to women and girls who are subjected to violence;

(m) Taking effective measures to prevent the victim's consent from becoming an impediment to bringing perpetrators of violence against women and girls to justice, while ensuring that appropriate safeguards to protect the victim and adequate and comprehensive measures for the rehabilitation and reintegration of victims of violence into society are in place;

(n) Encouraging the removal of all barriers to women's access to justice and ensuring that effective legal assistance is provided to all female victims of violence so that they can make informed decisions regarding, inter alia, legal proceedings and issues relating to family law, and also ensuring that victims have access to just and effective remedies for the harm that they have suffered, including through the adoption of national legislation where necessary;

(o) Ensuring effective cooperation and coordination among all stakeholders, including all relevant public officials and civil society, in the prevention, investigation, prosecution and punishment of all forms of violence against women and girls;

(p) Developing or improving and disseminating specialized training programmes, including practical tools and good practice guidelines on how to identify, prevent and deal with cases of violence against women and girls and on how to assist victims, for all stakeholders responsible for dealing with violence against women and girls, its causes and consequences, including police officers, the judiciary, health workers, law enforcement personnel and civil society, and engaging statisticians and the media;

(q) Strengthening national health and social infrastructure to reinforce measures to promote women's equal access to public health care and address the health consequences of all forms of violence against women and girls, including by providing support to victims;

(r) Establishing or supporting integrated centres through which shelter, legal, health, psychological, counselling and other services are provided to victims of all forms of violence against women and, where such centres are not yet feasible, promoting collaboration and coordination among agencies, in order to make remedies more accessible and to facilitate the physical, psychological and social recovery of victims, and ensuring that victims have access to such services;

(s) Ensuring that the prison system and probation services provide appropriate rehabilitation programmes for perpetrators, as a preventive tool to avoid recidivism;

(t) Supporting and engaging in partnerships with non-governmental organizations, in particular women's organizations, and other relevant actors and the private sector to end violence against women and girls;

17. Calls upon the international community, including the United Nations system and, as appropriate, regional and subregional organizations, to support national efforts to promote the empowerment of women and gender equality in order to enhance national efforts to eliminate violence against women and girls, including, upon request, in the development and implementation of national action plans on the elimination of violence against women and girls, through, inter alia, official development assistance and other appropriate assistance, such as facilitating the sharing of guidelines, methodologies and best practices, taking into account national priorities;

18. Stresses the contribution of the ad hoc international criminal tribunals and the International Criminal Court to ending impunity, by ensuring accountability and punishing perpetrators of violence against women, and urges States to consider ratifying or acceding as a matter of priority to the Rome Statute of the International Criminal Court, which entered into force on 1 July 2002;

19. Calls upon the inter-agency Programme Appraisal Committee of the United Nations Trust Fund in Support of Actions to Eliminate Violence against Women, in consultation with the Inter-Agency Network on Women and Gender Equality, to continue to provide guidance on the implementation of the 2010–2015 strategy for the Trust Fund and to further enhance its effectiveness as a system-wide funding mechanism for preventing and redressing all forms of violence against women and girls and to give due consideration, inter alia, to the findings and recommendations of the external evaluation of the Trust Fund;

20. Notes with concern the growing gap between available funding in the United Nations Trust Fund in Support of Actions to Eliminate Violence against Women and the funds required to meet the increasing demand, and urges States and other stakeholders, where possible, to significantly increase their voluntary contributions to the Trust Fund in order to meet the annual target of 100 million United States dollars by 2015 as set by the Secretary-General's campaign "UNITE to End Violence against Women", while expressing its appreciation for the contributions to the Trust Fund already made by States, the private sector and other donors;

21. Stresses that, within the United Nations system, adequate resources should be assigned to UN-Women and other bodies, specialized agencies, funds and programmes responsible for the promotion of gender equality and women's rights and to efforts throughout the United Nations system to prevent and eliminate violence against women and girls, and calls upon the United Nations system to make the necessary support and resources available;

22. Welcomes the establishment of the Secretary-General's database on violence against women, expresses its appreciation to all the States that have provided the database with information regarding, inter alia, their national policies and legal frameworks aimed at eliminating violence against women and supporting victims of such violence, strongly encourages all States to regularly provide updated information for the database, and calls upon all relevant entities of the United Nations system to continue to support States, at their request, in the compilation and regular updating of pertinent information and to raise awareness of the database among all relevant stakeholders, including civil society;

23. Also welcomes the adoption of an interim set of indicators to measure violence against women by the Statistical Commission at its fortieth session, and looks forward to the results of the ongoing work of the Commission on this topic;

24. Calls upon all United Nations bodies, entities, funds and programmes and the specialized agencies and invites the Bretton Woods institutions to intensify their efforts at all levels to eliminate all forms of violence against women and girls and to better coordinate their work, inter alia, through the Task Force on Violence against Women of the Inter-Agency Network on Women and Gender Equality, and looks forward to the results of the ongoing work of the Task Force on composing a manual on joint programming, with a view to increasing effective support for national efforts to eliminate all forms of violence against women;

25. Requests the Special Rapporteur on violence against women, its causes and consequences to present an annual report to the General Assembly at its sixty-sixth and sixty-seventh sessions;

26. Requests the Secretary-General to submit to the General Assembly at its sixty-seventh session a report containing:

(a) Information provided by the United Nations bodies, funds and programmes and the specialized agencies on their follow-up activities to implement resolution 64/137 and the present resolution, including on their assistance to States in their efforts to eliminate all forms of violence against women;

(b) Information provided by States on their follow-up activities to implement the present resolution;

27. Also requests the Secretary-General to present an oral report to the Commission on the Status of Women at its fifty-fifth and fifty-sixth sessions including information provided by the United Nations bodies, funds and programmes and the specialized agencies on recent follow-up activities to implement resolutions 63/155 and 64/137 and the present resolution, including on the progress made in enhancing the effectiveness of the United Nations Trust Fund in Support of Actions to Eliminate Violence against Women as a system-wide United Nations mechanism and on the progress of the Secretary-General's campaign to end violence against women, and urges United Nations bodies, entities, funds and programmes and the specialized agencies to contribute promptly to that report;

28. Decides to continue the consideration of the question at its sixty-seventh session under the item entitled "Advancement of women".

Crime prevention and criminal justice responses to violence against women

The Commission on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice, at its nineteenth session (Vienna, 17–21 May) [E/2010/30], had before it a draft resolution on strengthening crime prevention and criminal justice responses to violence against women. As recommended by the 2009 meeting of the intergovernmental expert group to review and update the Model Strategies and Practical Measures on the Elimination of Violence against Women in the Field of Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice [YUN 2009, p. 1133], the Commission submitted the draft to the Economic and Social Council for approval and for adoption by the General Assembly. Annexed to the draft resolution were the updated Model Strategies and Practical Measures.

ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL ACTION

On 22 July [meeting 45], the Economic and Social Council, on the recommendation of the Commission on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice [E/2010/30], adopted resolution 2010/15 without vote [agenda item 14 (c)].

Strengthening crime prevention and criminal justice responses to violence against women

The Economic and Social Council

Recommends to the General Assembly the adoption of the following draft resolution:

[For text, see General Assembly resolution 65/228 below.]

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 21 December [meeting 71], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Third Committee [A/65/457], adopted resolution 65/228 without vote [agenda item 105].

Strengthening crime prevention and criminal justice responses to violence against women

The General Assembly,

Reaffirming the Declaration on the Elimination of Violence against Women and the Beijing Declaration and Platform for Action adopted by the Fourth World Conference on Women, and, in particular, the determination of Governments to prevent and eliminate all forms of violence against women,

Reaffirming also the Programme of Action of the International Conference on Population and Development, as well as the outcome of the twenty-third special session of the General Assembly entitled “Women 2000: gender equality, development and peace for the twenty-first century” and the declarations adopted at the forty-ninth and fifty-fourth sessions of the Commission on the Status of Women,

Recognizing that the term “women”, except where otherwise specified, encompasses “girl children”,

Reaffirming the obligation of all States to promote and protect all human rights and fundamental freedoms, and reaffirming that discrimination on the basis of sex is contrary to the Charter of the United Nations, the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women and other international human rights instruments and that its elimination is an integral part of efforts towards the elimination of all forms of violence against women,

Stressing that States have the obligation to promote and protect all human rights and fundamental freedoms for all, including women and girls, and must exercise due diligence to prevent and investigate acts of violence against women and girls and punish the perpetrators, eliminate impunity and provide protection to the victims, and that failure to do so violates and impairs or nullifies the enjoyment of their human rights and fundamental freedoms,

Emphasizing the importance of preventing violence against migrant women through the implementation, inter alia, of measures aimed at combating racism, xenophobia and related forms of intolerance,

Deeply concerned that all forms of discrimination, including racism, racial discrimination, xenophobia and related intolerance and multiple or aggravated forms of discrimination and disadvantage, can lead to the targeting or particular vulnerability to violence of girls and some groups of women, such as women belonging to minority groups, indigenous women, refugee and internally displaced women, migrant women, women living in rural or remote communities, destitute women, women in institutions or in detention, women with disabilities, elderly women, widows, women in situations of armed conflict, women who are otherwise discriminated against, including on the basis of HIV status, and women victims of commercial sexual exploitation,

Greatly concerned that some groups of women, such as migrant women, refugees and women in detention, in situations of armed conflict or in territories under occupation, might be more vulnerable to violence,

Recognizing that women’s poverty and lack of empowerment, as well as their marginalization resulting from their exclusion from social policies and from the benefits of sustained development, can place them at increased risk of violence and that violence against women impedes the social and economic development of communities and States, as well as the achievement of the internationally agreed development goals, including the Millennium Development Goals,

Reaffirming its resolution 52/86 of 12 December 1997, in which it adopted the Model Strategies and Practical Measures on the Elimination of Violence against Women in the Field of Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice,

Recalling its resolutions 61/143 of 19 December 2006, 62/133 of 18 December 2007, 63/155 of 18 December 2008 and 64/137 of 18 December 2009 on the intensification of efforts to eliminate all forms of violence against women,

Recalling also the Bangkok Declaration on Synergies and Responses: Strategic Alliances in Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice, adopted at the Eleventh United Nations Congress on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice, in which Governments recognized that comprehensive crime prevention strategies could significantly reduce crime and victimization and urged that such strategies be developed at the local, national and international levels and that they, inter alia, take into account the Guidelines for the Prevention of Crime, and emphasized the importance of promoting the interests of victims of crime, including taking account of their gender, Taking note of Human Rights Council resolution 11/2 of 17 June 2009 on accelerating efforts to eliminate all forms of violence against women,

Recalling the inclusion of gender-related crimes and crimes of sexual violence in the Rome Statute of the International Criminal Court, as well as the recognition by the ad hoc international criminal tribunals that rape can constitute a war crime, a crime against humanity or a constitutive act with respect to genocide or torture,

Expressing deep concern about the pervasiveness of violence against women in all its forms and manifestations worldwide, and reiterating the need to intensify efforts to address that challenge,

Recognizing that effective and integrated criminal justice responses to violence against women require close cooperation among all key stakeholders, including law enforcement officials, prosecutors, judges, victim advocates, health professionals and forensic scientists,

Stressing the importance of a comprehensive, well-coordinated, effective and adequately resourced response by the United Nations system to all forms of violence against women,

Recalling the joint dialogue of the Commission on the Status of Women and the Commission on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice on addressing violence against women through legal reform, held in New York on 4 March 2009 within the framework of the fifty-third session of the Commission on the Status of Women,

Recalling also Commission on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice decision 17/1 of 18 April 2008, in which the Commission requested the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime to convene an intergovernmental group of experts with equitable geographical representation, in cooperation with the institutes of the United Nations crime prevention and criminal justice programme network, the Commission on the Status of Women and the Special Rapporteur on violence against women, its causes and consequences, to review and update, as appropriate, the Model Strategies and Practical Measures on the Elimination of Violence against Women in the Field of Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice,

1. Strongly condemns all acts of violence against women, whether those acts are perpetrated by the State, by private persons or by non-State actors, and calls for the elimination of all forms of gender-based violence in the family, within the general community and where perpetrated or condoned by the State;

2. Stresses that “violence against women” means any act of gender-based violence that results in, or is likely to result in, physical, sexual or psychological harm or suffering to women, including threats of such acts, coercion or arbitrary deprivation of liberty, whether occurring in public or in private life;

3. Takes note with appreciation of the work done at the meeting of the intergovernmental expert group to review and update the Model Strategies and Practical Measures on the Elimination of Violence against Women in the Field of Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice, held in Bangkok from 23 to 25 March 2009;

4. Adopts the guidelines in the updated Model Strategies and Practical Measures on the Elimination of Violence against Women in the Field of Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice, annexed to the present resolution;

5. Urges Member States to end impunity for violence against women by investigating, prosecuting with due process and punishing all perpetrators, by ensuring that women have equal protection under the law and equal access to justice and by holding up to public scrutiny and countering those attitudes that foster, justify or tolerate any form of violence against women;

6. Also urges Member States to enhance their mechanisms and procedures for protecting victims of violence against women in the criminal justice system, taking into account, inter alia, the Declaration of Basic Principles of Justice for Victims of Crime and Abuse of Power, and to provide to that end specialized counselling and assistance;

7. Calls upon Member States to advance effective crime prevention and criminal justice strategies that address violence against women, including strategies aimed at preventing revictimization by, inter alia, removing barriers that prevent victims from seeking safety, including barriers related to custody of children, access to shelter and availability of legal assistance;

8. Also calls upon Member States to develop and implement crime prevention policies and programmes to promote the safety of women in the home and in society at large in a manner that reflects the realities of women’s lives and addresses their distinct needs, taking into account, inter alia, the Guidelines for the Prevention of Crime and the important contribution that educational and public awareness-raising initiatives provide to the promotion of the safety of women;

9. Urges Member States to evaluate and review their legislation and legal principles, procedures, policies, programmes and practices relating to crime prevention and criminal justice matters, in a manner consistent with their legal systems and drawing upon the updated Model Strategies and Practical Measures, to determine if they are adequate to prevent and eliminate violence against women or if they have a negative impact on women and, if they do, to modify them in order to ensure that women enjoy fair and equal treatment;

10. Also urges Member States to take into account the special needs and vulnerabilities of women within the criminal justice system, especially women in detention, pregnant inmates and women with children born in detention, including through the development of policies and programmes to address such needs, taking into account relevant international standards and norms;

11. Further urges Member States to recognize the needs and special vulnerabilities of women and children in situations of armed conflict and in post-conflict situations, migrant women, refugee women and women subject to forms of violence because of their nationality, ethnicity, religion or language;

12. Urges Member States to provide appropriate assistance to women victims of violence, including by ensuring that those women have access to adequate legal representation where appropriate, in particular so that they can make informed decisions regarding, inter alia, legal proceedings and issues relating to family law;

13. Invites Member States to establish a multidisciplinary, coordinated response to sexual assault that includes specially trained police, prosecutors, judges, forensic examiners and victim support services to contribute to the well-being of the victim and increase the likelihood of the successful apprehension, prosecution and conviction of the offender and to prevent revictimization;

14. Encourages Member States to design and support programmes to empower women, both politically and economically, in order to assist in preventing violence against women, in particular through their participation in decision-making processes;

15. Calls upon Member States to set up and strengthen mechanisms for the systematic collection of data on violence against women with a view to assessing the scope and prevalence of such violence and to guiding the design, implementation and funding of effective crime prevention and criminal justice responses;

16. Urges Member States and the United Nations system to give attention to, and encourages greater international cooperation in, systematic research and the collection, analysis and dissemination of data, including data disaggregated by sex, age and other relevant information, on the extent, nature and consequences of violence against women and on the impact and effectiveness of policies and programmes for combating violence, welcomes in that context the establishment of the Secretary-General's co-ordinated database on violence against women, and urges Member States and the United Nations system to regularly provide information for inclusion in the database;

17. Calls upon the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime to support national efforts to promote the empowerment of women and gender equality in order to enhance national efforts to eliminate violence against women, including by strengthening throughout its programme of work its crime prevention and criminal justice efforts in response to violence against women;

18. Urges the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime and Member States and invites the institutes of the United Nations crime prevention and criminal justice programme network to continue to offer training and capacity-building opportunities, in particular for practitioners working in the area of crime prevention and criminal justice and providers of support services to victims of violence against women, and to make available and disseminate information on successful intervention models, preventive programmes and other practices;

19. Requests the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime to intensify its efforts to ensure the widest possible use and dissemination of the updated Model Strategies and Practical Measures, including through the development or revision of relevant tools, such as handbooks, training manuals, programmes and modules, including online capacity-building modules for each section of the updated Model Strategies and Practical Measures, as an efficient and practical way to disseminate the relevant content, and invites Member States and other donors to provide extrabudgetary contributions for that purpose, in accordance with the rules and procedures of the United Nations;

20. Invites the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime to strengthen coordination in its activities in the area of violence against women with other relevant entities of the United Nations system, particularly the United Nations Development Fund for Women, the Division for the Advancement of Women of the Secretariat, the United Nations Children's Fund, the United Nations Population Fund and the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights, and the Special Rapporteur on violence against women, its causes and consequences, as well as other relevant intergovernmental and non-governmental organizations, so as to make efficient use of the financial, technical, material and human resources in the application of the updated Model Strategies and Practical Measures;

21. Also invites the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime to cooperate with the Department of Peacekeeping Operations of the Secretariat in the development of training material based on the updated Model Strategies and Practical Measures for military, police and civilian personnel of peacekeeping and peacebuilding operations;

22. Requests the Secretary-General to report to the Commission on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice at its twenty-first session on the implementation of the present resolution.

ANNEX

Updated Model Strategies and Practical Measures on the Elimination of Violence against Women in the Field of Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice

Preamble

1. The multifaceted nature of violence against women necessitates different strategies to respond to the diverse manifestations of violence and the various settings in which it occurs, both in private and in public life, whether committed in the home, the workplace, educational and training institutions, the community or society, in custody or in situations of armed conflict or natural disaster. In the updated Model Strategies and Practical Measures on the Elimination of Violence against Women in the Field of Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice, the importance of adopting a systematic, comprehensive, coordinated, multi-sectoral and sustained approach to fighting violence against women is recognized. The practical measures, strategies and activities described below can be introduced in the field of crime prevention and criminal justice to address violence against women. Except where otherwise specified, the term "women" encompasses "girl children".

2. Violence against women exists in every country in the world as a pervasive violation of human rights and a major impediment to achieving gender equality, development and peace. Violence against women is rooted in historically unequal power relations between men and women. All forms of violence against women seriously violate and impair or nullify the enjoyment by women of all human rights and fundamental freedoms and have serious immediate and long-term implications for health, including sexual and reproductive health, for example through increased vulnerability to HIV/AIDS, and public safety, and have a negative impact on the psychological, social and economic development of individuals, families, communities and States.

3. Violence against women is often embedded in and supported by social values, cultural patterns and practices. The criminal justice system and legislators are not immune to such values and thus have not always regarded violence against women with the same seriousness as other types of violence. Therefore, it is important that States strongly condemn all forms of violence against women and refrain from invoking any custom, tradition or religious consideration to avoid their obligation with respect to its elimination and that the criminal justice system recognize violence against women as a gender-related problem and as an expression of power and inequality.

4. Violence against women is defined in the Declaration on the Elimination of Violence against Women and reiterated in the Platform for Action adopted by the Fourth World Conference on Women to mean any act of gender-based violence that results in, or is likely to result in, physical, sexual or psychological harm or suffering to women, including threats of such acts, coercion or arbitrary deprivation of liberty, whether occurring in public or in private life. The updated Model Strategies and Practical Measures build on the measures adopted by Governments in the Platform for Action, which was adopted in 1995 and subsequently reaffirmed in 2000 and 2005, the Model Strategies and Practical Measures on the Elimination of Violence against Women in the Field of Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice adopted in 1997, and relevant General Assembly resolutions, including resolutions 61/143 and 63/155, bearing in mind that some groups of women are especially exposed and vulnerable to violence.

5. The updated Model Strategies and Practical Measures specifically acknowledge the need for an active policy of mainstreaming a gender perspective in all policies, programmes and practices to ensure gender equality and equal and fair access to justice, as well as establishing the goal of gender balance in all areas of decision-making, including those related to the elimination of violence against women. The updated Model Strategies and Practical Measures should be applied as guidelines in a manner consistent with relevant international instruments, including the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women, the Convention on the Rights of the Child, the Optional Protocol to the Convention on the Rights of the Child on the sale of children, child prostitution and child pornography, the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights, the Protocol to Prevent, Suppress and Punish Trafficking in Persons, Especially Women and Children, supplementing the United Nations Convention against Transnational Organized Crime, the Rome Statute of the International Criminal Court and the Guidelines for the Prevention of Crime, with a view to furthering their fair and effective implementation. The updated Model Strategies and Practical Measures reaffirm the commitment of States to promote gender equality and empower women with a view to meeting Goal 3 of the Millennium Development Goals.

6. The updated Model Strategies and Practical Measures should be endorsed by national legislation and implemented by Member States and other entities in a manner consistent with the right to equality before the law, while also recognizing that gender equality may sometimes require the adoption of different approaches that acknowledge the different ways in which violence affects women as compared to men. Member States should ensure that women have equal protection under the law and equal access to justice in order to facilitate efforts by Governments to prevent and sanction acts of violence against women through comprehensive and coordinated policies and strategies, and to deal with all forms of violence against women within the criminal justice system.

7. The updated Model Strategies and Practical Measures recognize that crime prevention and criminal justice responses to violence against women must be focused on the needs of victims and empower individual women who are victims of violence. They aim to ensure that prevention and intervention efforts are made to not only stop and appropriately sanction violence against women, but also restore a sense of dignity and control to the victims of such violence.

8. The updated Model Strategies and Practical Measures aim to contribute to de jure and de facto equality between women and men. They do not give preferential treatment to women but aim to ensure that any inequalities or forms of discrimination that women face in accessing justice, particularly in respect of acts of violence, are redressed.

9. The updated Model Strategies and Practical Measures recognize that sexual violence is an issue of international peace and security, as outlined in Security Council resolutions 1325(2000) of 31 October 2000 and 1820(2008) of 19 June 2008 on women and peace and security, particularly the need for parties to armed conflict to adopt prevention and protection measures in order to end sexual violence.

10. The updated Model Strategies and Practical Measures recognize that some special groups of women are particularly vulnerable to violence, either because of their nationality, ethnicity, religion or language or because they belong to an indigenous group, are migrants, are stateless, are refugees, live in underdeveloped, rural or remote communities, are homeless, are in institutions or in detention, have disabilities, are elderly, are widowed or live in conflict, post-conflict or disaster situations and, as such, require special attention, intervention and protection in the development of crime prevention and criminal justice responses to violence against women.

11. The updated Model Strategies and Practical Measures recognize advances in crime prevention and criminal justice responses to violence against women and the importance of investing in the prevention of violence against women.

12. The updated Model Strategies and Practical Measures recognize that States have the obligation to promote and protect the human rights and fundamental freedoms of all people, including women, and that they must exercise due diligence and take relevant measures to prevent, investigate and punish the perpetrators of violence against women, to eliminate impunity and to provide protection to the victims, and that failure to do so violates and impairs or nullifies the enjoyment of women's human rights and fundamental freedoms.

I. Guiding principles

13. Member States are urged:

(a) To be guided by the overall principle that effective crime prevention and criminal justice responses to violence against women are human rights-based, manage risk and promote victim safety and empowerment while ensuring offender accountability;

(b) To develop mechanisms to ensure a comprehensive, coordinated, systematic and sustained approach for the implementation of the updated Model Strategies and Practical Measures at the national, regional and international levels;

(c) To promote the involvement and participation of all relevant sectors of government and civil society and other stakeholders in the implementation process;

(d) To commit adequate and sustained resources and develop monitoring mechanisms to ensure their effective implementation and oversight;

(e) To take into account in the implementation of the updated Model Strategies and Practical Measures the varying needs of women subjected to violence.

II. Criminal law

14. Member States are urged:

(a) To review, evaluate and update their national laws, policies, codes, procedures, programmes and practices, especially their criminal laws, on an ongoing basis to ensure and guarantee their value, comprehensiveness and effectiveness in eliminating all forms of violence against women and to remove provisions that allow for or condone violence against women or that increase the vulnerability or revictimization of women who have been subject to violence;

(b) To review, evaluate and update their criminal and civil laws in order to ensure that all forms of violence against women are criminalized and prohibited and, if not, to adopt measures to do so, including measures aimed at preventing violence against women, protecting, empowering and supporting survivors, adequately punishing perpetrators and ensuring available remedies for victims;

(c) To review, evaluate and update their criminal laws in order to ensure that:

(i) Persons who are brought before the courts on judicial matters in respect of violent crimes or who are convicted of such crimes can be restricted in their possession and use of firearms and other regulated weapons, within the framework of their national legal systems;

(ii) Individuals can be prohibited or restrained, within the framework of their national legal systems, from harassing, intimidating or threatening women;

(iii) The laws on sexual violence adequately protect all persons against sexual acts that are not based on the consent of both parties;

(iv) The law protects all children against sexual violence, sexual abuse, commercial sexual exploitation and sexual harassment, including crimes committed through the use of new information technologies, including the Internet;

(v) Harmful traditional practices, including female genital mutilation, in all their forms, are criminalized as serious offences under the law;

(vi) Trafficking in persons, especially women and girls, is criminalized;

(vii) Individuals who are serving in the armed forces or in United Nations peacekeeping operations are investigated and punished for committing acts of violence against women;

(d) To continually review, evaluate and update their national laws, policies, practices and procedures, taking into account all relevant international legal instruments, in order to effectively respond to violence against women, including to ensure that such measures complement and are consistent with the criminal justice system's response to such violence and that civil law decisions reached in marital dissolutions, child custody decisions and other family law proceedings for cases involving domestic violence or child abuse adequately safeguard victims and the best interests of children;

(e) To review and, where appropriate, revise, amend or abolish any laws, regulations, policies, practices and customs that discriminate against women or have a discriminatory impact on women, and to ensure that provisions of multiple legal systems, where they exist, comply with international human rights obligations, commitments and principles, in particular the principle of non-discrimination.

III. Criminal procedure

15. Member States are urged to review, evaluate and update their criminal procedures, as appropriate and taking into account all relevant international legal instruments, in order to ensure that:

(a) The police and other law enforcement agencies have, with judicial authorization where required by national law, adequate powers to enter premises and conduct arrests in cases of violence against women and to take immediate measures to ensure the safety of victims;

(b) The primary responsibility for initiating investigations and prosecutions lies with the police and prosecution authorities and does not rest with women subjected to violence, regardless of the level or form of violence;

(c) Women subjected to violence are enabled to testify in criminal proceedings through adequate measures that facilitate such testimony by protecting the privacy, identity and dignity of the women; ensure safety during legal proceedings; and avoid "secondary victimization". In jurisdictions where the safety of the victim cannot be guaranteed, refusing to testify should not constitute a criminal or other offence;

(d) Evidentiary rules are non-discriminatory; all relevant evidence can be brought before the court; rules and principles of defence do not discriminate against women; and "honour" or "provocation" cannot be invoked by perpetrators of violence against women to escape criminal responsibility;

(e) The credibility of a complainant in a sexual violence case is understood to be the same as that of a complainant in any other criminal proceeding; the introduction of the complainant's sexual history in both civil and criminal proceedings is prohibited when it is unrelated to the case; and no adverse inference is drawn solely from a delay of any length between the alleged commission of a sexual offence and the reporting thereof;

(f) People who perpetrate acts of violence against women while voluntarily under the influence of alcohol, drugs or other substances are not exempted from criminal responsibility;

(g) Evidence of prior acts of violence, abuse, stalking and exploitation by the perpetrator is considered during court proceedings, in accordance with the principles of national criminal law;

(h) Police and courts have the authority to issue and enforce protection and restraining or barring orders in cases of violence against women, including removal of the perpetrator from the domicile, prohibiting further contact with the victim and other affected parties, inside and outside the domicile; to issue and enforce child support and custody orders; and to impose penalties for breaches of those orders. If such powers cannot be granted to the police, measures must be taken to ensure timely access to court decisions in order to ensure swift action by the court. Such protective measures should not be dependent on the initiation of a criminal case;

(i) Comprehensive services are provided and protection measures are taken when necessary to ensure the safety, privacy and dignity of victims and their families at all stages of the criminal justice process, without prejudice to the victim's ability or willingness to participate in an investigation or prosecution, and to protect them from intimidation and retaliation, including by establishing comprehensive witness and victim protection programmes;

(j) Safety risks, including the vulnerability of victims, are taken into account in decisions concerning non-custodial or quasi-custodial sentences, the granting of bail, conditional release, parole or probation, especially when dealing with repeat and dangerous offenders;

(k) Claims of self-defence by women who have been victims of violence, particularly in cases of battered woman syndrome, are taken into account in investigations, prosecutions and sentences against them;

(l) All procedures and complaint mechanisms are accessible to women who are victims of violence without fear of reprisal or discrimination.

IV. Police, prosecutors and other criminal justice officials

16. Member States are urged, within the framework of their national legal systems, as appropriate and taking into account all relevant international legal instruments:

(a) To ensure that the applicable provisions of laws, policies, procedures, programmes and practices related to violence against women are consistently and effectively implemented by the criminal justice system and supported by relevant regulations as appropriate;

(b) To develop mechanisms to ensure a comprehensive, multidisciplinary, coordinated, systematic and sustained response to violence against women in order to increase the likelihood of successful apprehension, prosecution and conviction of the offender, contribute to the well-being and safety of the victim and prevent secondary victimization;

(c) To promote the use of specialized expertise in the police, among prosecution authorities and in other criminal justice agencies, including through the establishment, where possible, of specialized units or personnel and specialized courts or dedicated court time, and to ensure that all police officers, prosecutors and other criminal justice officials receive regular and institutionalized training to sensitize them to gender and child-related issues and to build their capacity with regard to violence against women;

(d) To promote the development and implementation of appropriate policies among different criminal justice agencies to ensure coordinated, consistent and effective responses to violence perpetrated against women by personnel within such agencies and to ensure that attitudes of criminal justice officials that foster, justify or tolerate violence against women are held up to public scrutiny and sanction;

(e) To develop and implement policies and appropriate responses regarding the investigation and collection of evidence that take into account the unique needs and perspectives of victims of violence, respect their dignity and integrity and minimize intrusion into their lives while abiding by standards for the collection of evidence;

(f) To ensure that criminal justice officials and victims' advocates conduct risk assessments that indicate the level or extent of harm that victims may be subjected to based on their vulnerability, the threats to which they are exposed, the presence of weapons and other determining factors;

(g) To ensure that laws, policies, procedures and practices pertaining to decisions on the arrest, detention and terms of any form of release of the perpetrator take into account the need for the safety of the victim and others related through family, socially or otherwise and that such procedures also prevent further acts of violence;

(h) To establish a registration system for judicial protection, restraining or barring orders, where such orders are permitted by national law, so that police or criminal justice officials can quickly determine whether such an order is in force;

(i) To empower and equip police, prosecutors and other criminal justice officials to respond promptly to incidents of violence against women, including by drawing on a rapid court order, where appropriate, and by taking measures to ensure the fast and efficient management of cases;

(j) To ensure that the exercise of powers by police, prosecutors and other criminal justice officials is undertaken according to the rule of law and codes of conduct and that such officials are held accountable for any infringement thereof through appropriate oversight and accountability mechanisms;

(k) To ensure gender-equitable representation in the police force and other agencies of the justice system, particularly at the decision-making and managerial levels;

(l) To provide victims of violence, where possible, with the right to speak to a female officer, whether it be the police or any other criminal justice official;

(m) To develop new or improve existing model procedures and resource material and disseminate such procedures and material, to help criminal justice officials to identify, prevent and deal with violence against women, including by assisting and supporting women subjected to violence in a manner that is sensitive and responsive to their needs;

(n) To provide adequate psychological support to police, prosecutors and other criminal justice officials to prevent their vicarious victimization.

V. Sentencing and corrections

17. Recognizing the serious nature of violence against women and the need for crime prevention and criminal justice responses that are commensurate with that severity, Member States are urged, as appropriate:

(a) To review, evaluate and update sentencing policies and procedures in order to ensure that they:

(i) Hold offenders accountable for their acts related to violence against women;

(ii) Denounce and deter violence against women;

(iii) Stop violent behaviour;

(iv) Promote victim and community safety, including by separating the offender from the victim and, if necessary, from society;

(v) Take into account the impact on victims and their family members of sentences imposed on perpetrators;

(vi) Provide sanctions that ensure that the perpetrators of violence against women are sentenced in a manner commensurate with the severity of the offence;

(vii) Provide reparations for harm caused as a result of the violence;

(viii) Promote the rehabilitation of the perpetrator, including by promoting a sense of responsibility in offenders and, where appropriate, reintegrating perpetrators into the community;

(b) To ensure that their national laws take into account specific circumstances as aggravating factors for sentencing purposes, including, for example, repeated violent acts, abuse of a position of trust or authority, perpetration of violence against a spouse or a person in a close relationship with the perpetrator and perpetration of violence against a person under 18 years of age;

(c) To ensure the right of a victim of violence to be notified of the offender's release from detention or imprisonment;

(d) To take into account, in the sentencing process, the severity of the physical and psychological harm and the impact of victimization, including through victim impact statements;

(e) To make available to the courts, through legislation, a full range of sentencing dispositions to protect the victim, other affected persons and society from further violence, and to rehabilitate the perpetrator, as appropriate;

(f) To develop and evaluate treatment and reintegration/rehabilitation programmes for perpetrators of different types of violence against women that prioritize the safety of the victims;

(g) To ensure that judicial and correctional authorities, as appropriate, monitor perpetrators' compliance with any treatment ordered;

(h) To ensure that there are appropriate measures in place to eliminate violence against women who are detained for any reason;

(i) To provide adequate protection to victims and witnesses of acts of violence before, during and after criminal proceedings.

VI. Victim support and assistance

18. Member States are urged, as appropriate and taking into account all relevant international legal instruments, in particular the Declaration of Basic Principles of Justice for Victims of Crime and Abuse of Power:

(a) To make available to women who have been subjected to violence relevant information on rights, remedies and victim support services and on how to obtain them, in addition to information about their role and opportunities for participating in criminal proceedings and the scheduling, progress and ultimate disposition of the proceedings, as well as any orders against the offender;

(b) To encourage and assist women subjected to violence in lodging and following through on formal complaints by providing protection to the victims and advising them that the responsibility for pursuing charges and prosecuting offenders rests with the police and the prosecution;

(c) To take appropriate measures to prevent hardship during the detection, investigation and prosecution process in order to ensure that victims are treated with dignity and respect, whether they participate in the criminal proceedings or not;

(d) To ensure that women subjected to violence have access to prompt and fair redress for the harm that they have suffered as a result of violence, including the right to seek restitution from the offender or compensation from the State;

(e) To provide court mechanisms and procedures that are accessible and sensitive to the needs of women subjected to violence and that ensure the fair and timely processing of cases;

(f) To provide efficient and easily accessible procedures for issuing restraining or barring orders to protect women and other victims of violence and for ensuring that victims are not held accountable for breaches of such orders;

(g) To recognize that children who have witnessed violence against their parent or another person with whom they have a close relationship are victims of violence and need protection, care and support;

(h) To ensure that women subjected to violence have full access to the civil and criminal justice systems, including access to free legal aid, where appropriate, court support and interpretation services;

(i) To ensure that women subjected to violence have access to qualified personnel who can provide victim advocacy and support services throughout the entire criminal justice process, as well as access to any other independent support persons;

(j) To ensure that all services and legal remedies available to victims of violence against women are also available to immigrant women, trafficked women, refugee women, stateless women and all other women in need of such assistance, and that specialized services for such women are established, where appropriate;

(k) To refrain from penalizing victims who have been trafficked for having entered the country illegally or for having been involved in unlawful activities that they were forced or compelled to carry out.

VII. Health and social services

19. Member States, in cooperation with the private sector, relevant non-governmental organizations and professional associations, are urged, as appropriate:

(a) To establish, fund and coordinate a sustainable network of accessible facilities and services for emergency and temporary residential accommodation, health services, including counselling and psychological care, legal assistance and other basic needs for women and their children who are victims of violence or who are at risk of becoming victims of violence;

(b) To establish, fund and coordinate services such as toll-free information lines, professional multidisciplinary counselling and crisis intervention services and support groups in order to benefit women who are victims of violence and their children;

(c) To establish better linkages between health and social services, both public and private, particularly in emergency situations, and criminal justice agencies for the purposes of reporting, recording and responding appropriately to acts of violence against women, while protecting the privacy of women subjected to violence;

(d) To design and sponsor sustainable programmes to prevent and treat alcohol and other substance abuse, given the frequent presence of substance abuse in incidents of violence against women;

(e) To ensure that violent acts and sexual crimes against children are reported to the police and other law enforcement agencies when suspected by the health and social services;

(f) To promote collaboration and coordination among relevant agencies and services, including through the establishment, where possible, of specialized units specifically trained to deal with the complexities and sensitivities of victims involved in cases of violence against women where victims can receive comprehensive assistance, protection and intervention services, including health and social services, legal advice and police assistance;

(g) To ensure that adequate medical, legal and social services sensitive to the needs of victims are in place to enhance the criminal justice management of cases involving violence against women and to encourage the development of specialized health services, including comprehensive, free and confidential forensic examinations by trained health providers and appropriate treatment, including HIV-specific treatment.

VIII. Training

20. Member States, in cooperation with relevant non-governmental organizations and professional associations, are urged, as appropriate:

(a) To provide for or to encourage mandatory cross-cultural gender and child-sensitivity training modules for police, criminal justice officials and professionals involved in the criminal justice system on the unacceptability of all forms of violence against women and on their harmful impact and consequences on all those who experience such violence;

(b) To ensure that police, criminal justice officials and other professionals involved in the criminal justice system receive adequate training and continued education on all relevant national laws, policies and programmes, as well as international legal instruments;

(c) To ensure that police, criminal justice officials and other relevant authorities are adequately trained to identify and respond appropriately to the specific needs of women victims of violence, including victims of trafficking; to receive and treat all victims respectfully with a view to avoiding secondary victimization; to handle complaints confidentially; to conduct safety assessments and risk management; and to use and enforce protection orders;

(d) To encourage relevant professional associations to develop enforceable standards of practice and behaviour and codes of conduct that promote justice and gender equality.

IX. Research and evaluation

21. Member States, the institutes of the United Nations crime prevention and criminal justice programme network, relevant entities of the United Nations system, other relevant international organizations, research institutes, non-governmental organizations and professional associations are urged, as appropriate:

(a) To set up and strengthen mechanisms for systematic and coordinated data collection on violence against women;

(b) To develop both modules and dedicated population-based surveys, including crime surveys, for assessing the nature and extent of violence against women;

(c) To collect, analyse and publish data and information, including data and information disaggregated by gender, for use in carrying out needs assessments, taking decisions and developing policy in the field of crime prevention and criminal justice, in particular concerning:

- (i) The different forms of violence against women; the causes, risk factors and levels of severity of such violence; and the consequences and impacts of such violence, including on different population subgroups;
 - (ii) The extent to which economic deprivation and exploitation are linked to violence against women;
 - (iii) The patterns, trends and indicators of violence against women, women's feelings of insecurity in the public and private spheres and factors that can reduce such feelings of insecurity;
 - (iv) The relationship between the victim and the offender;
 - (v) The effect of various types of interventions on the individual offender and on the reduction and elimination of violence against women as a whole;
 - (vi) The use of weapons and of drugs, alcohol and other substances in cases of violence against women;
 - (vii) The relationship between victimization or exposure to violence and subsequent violent activity;
 - (viii) The relationship between the violence experienced by women and women's vulnerability to other types of abuse;
 - (ix) The consequences of violence on those who witness it, particularly within the family;
- (d) To monitor, and publish annual reports on, the number of cases of violence against women reported to the police as well as other criminal justice agencies, including arrest and clearance rates, prosecution and case disposition of the offenders and the prevalence of violence against women; in doing so, use should be made of data derived from population-based surveys. Such reports should disaggregate data by type of violence and include, for example, information on the sex of the perpetrator and his or her relationship to the victim;
- (e) To evaluate the efficiency and effectiveness of the criminal justice system in meeting the needs of women subjected to violence, including with regard to the way in which the criminal justice system treats victims and witnesses of acts of violence, the use it makes of different intervention models and the degree to which it cooperates with providers of services to victims and witnesses, as well as to evaluate and assess the impact of current legislation, rules and procedures relating to violence against women;
- (f) To evaluate the efficiency and effectiveness of offender treatment, rehabilitation and reintegration programmes, in consultation with relevant stakeholders, including victims and victim service providers;
- (g) To be guided by existing ongoing efforts at the international level to develop a set of indicators to measure violence against women and to ensure a multisectoral, coordinated approach to the development, implementation, monitoring and evaluation of data-collection initiatives;
- (h) To ensure that data on violence against women are collected in a way that respects the confidentiality and human rights of women and does not jeopardize their safety;
- (i) To encourage and provide sufficient financial support for research on violence against women.

X. Crime prevention measures

22. Member States and the private sector, relevant non-governmental organizations and professional associations are urged, as appropriate:

(a) To develop and implement relevant and effective public awareness and public education initiatives, as well as school programmes and curricula, that prevent violence against women by promoting respect for human rights, equality, cooperation, mutual respect and shared responsibilities between women and men;

(b) To develop codes of conduct for personnel in public and private entities that prohibit violence against women, including sexual harassment, and include safe complaint and referral procedures;

(c) To develop multidisciplinary and gender-sensitive approaches within public and private entities that seek to prevent violence against women, especially through partnerships between law enforcement officials and services specialized in the protection of women victims of violence;

(d) To develop programmes to assess perceptions of public safety and to develop safety planning, environmental design and management of public space in order to reduce the risk of violence against women;

(e) To set up outreach programmes and provide relevant information to women about gender roles, women's human rights and the social, health, legal and economic aspects of violence against women in order to empower women to protect themselves and their children against all forms of violence;

(f) To set up outreach programmes for offenders or persons identified as potential offenders in order to promote non-violent behaviour and attitudes and respect for equality and the rights of women;

(g) To develop and disseminate, in a manner appropriate to the audience concerned, including in educational institutions at all levels, information and awareness-raising materials on the different forms of violence that are perpetrated against women and the availability of relevant programmes that include information on the relevant provisions of criminal law, the functions of the criminal justice system, the victim support mechanisms that are available and the existing programmes concerning non-violent behaviour and the peaceful resolution of conflicts;

(h) To support all initiatives, including those of non-governmental organizations and other relevant organizations seeking women's equality, to raise public awareness of the issue of violence against women and to contribute to the elimination of such violence;

(i) To facilitate the work at lower levels of government, including among city and local community authorities, to promote an integrated approach that makes use of the range of local services provided by institutions and civil society for the development of preventive strategies and programmes.

23. Member States and the media, media associations, media self-regulatory bodies, schools and other relevant partners, while respecting the freedom of the media, are urged, as appropriate, to develop public awareness campaigns and appropriate measures and mechanisms, such as codes of ethics and self-regulatory measures on media violence, aimed at enhancing respect for the rights and dignity of women, while discouraging both discrimination and gender stereotyping.

24. Member States and the private sector, relevant non-governmental organizations and professional associations are urged to develop and improve, where appropriate, crime prevention and criminal justice responses to the production, possession and dissemination of games, images and all other materials that depict or glorify acts of violence against women and children, and their impact on the general public's attitude towards women and children, as well as the mental and emotional development of children, particularly through new information technologies, including the Internet.

XI. International cooperation

25. Member States, in cooperation with United Nations bodies and institutes and other relevant organizations, are urged, as appropriate:

(a) To continue exchanging information concerning successful intervention models and preventive programmes on eliminating all forms of violence against women and to update the resource manual and the compendium on the Model Strategies and Practical Measures, as well as to provide information for inclusion in the Secretary-General's database on violence against women;

(b) To cooperate and collaborate at the bilateral, regional and international levels with relevant entities to prevent violence against women; to provide safety, assistance and protection for the victims and witnesses of violence and their family members, as appropriate; and to promote measures to effectively bring perpetrators to justice, through strengthened mechanisms of international cooperation and mutual legal assistance;

(c) To develop provisions providing for the safe and, to the extent possible, voluntary repatriation and reintegration of women victims of violence who have been trafficked or kidnapped across borders;

(d) To contribute and provide support to the United Nations system in its efforts to eliminate all forms of violence against women;

(e) To take appropriate preventive action and to ensure full accountability in cases of sexual exploitation and abuse involving troops and police in United Nations peacekeeping operations.

26. Member States are also urged:

(a) To condemn all acts of violence against women in situations of armed conflict, to recognize them as violations of international human rights, humanitarian law and international criminal law, to call for a particularly effective response to such violations, in particular when they involve murder, systematic rape, sexual slavery and forced pregnancy, and to implement Security Council resolutions 1325(2000) and 1820(2008) on women and peace and security;

(b) To work actively towards universal ratification of or accession to all relevant treaties and to promote their full implementation, including the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women and the Optional Protocol thereto, the Rome Statute of the International Criminal Court, the Convention on the Rights of the Child and the Optional Protocol thereto on the sale of children, child prostitution and child pornography, and the Protocol to Prevent, Suppress and Punish Trafficking in Persons, Especially Women and Children, supplementing the United Nations Convention against Transnational Organized Crime;

(c) To formulate any reservations to the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women in a manner that is as precise and as narrow as possible and to ensure that any such reservations are not incompatible with the object and purpose of that Convention;

(d) To work actively towards the ratification of or accession to existing regional instruments and agreements aimed at combating violence against women, and to promote their implementation;

(e) To include in periodic reports to the Committee on the Elimination of Discrimination against Women information on efforts made to implement the updated Model Strategies and Practical Measures;

(f) To cooperate with the International Criminal Court, ad hoc international criminal tribunals and other international criminal tribunals in the investigation and prosecution of the perpetrators of genocide, crimes against humanity and war crimes, particularly of those crimes involving gender-based violence, and to enable women who have been subjected to violence to give testimony and participate in all stages of the proceedings while protecting the safety, interests, identity and privacy of those women;

(g) To cooperate with and assist the Special Rapporteur on violence against women, its causes and consequences and the Special Rapporteur on trafficking in persons, especially in women and children, in performing their mandated tasks and duties by supplying all information requested and responding to the Special Rapporteurs' visits and communications.

XII. Follow-up activities

27. Member States, United Nations bodies, the institutes of the United Nations crime prevention and criminal justice programme network, other relevant international and regional organizations, research institutes, non-governmental organizations and professional organizations, including organizations seeking women's equality, are urged, as appropriate:

(a) To encourage the translation of the updated Model Strategies and Practical Measures into local languages and to ensure their wide dissemination and use in training and education programmes;

(b) To draw, as appropriate, on the updated Model Strategies and Practical Measures in the development of legislation, procedures, policies and practices in responding to violence against women;

(c) To assist States, upon request, in developing strategies and programmes to prevent violence against women and in reviewing and evaluating their criminal justice systems, including their criminal legislation, on the basis of the updated Model Strategies and Practical Measures;

(d) To support the technical cooperation activities of the institutes of the United Nations crime prevention and criminal justice programme network aimed at eliminating all forms of violence against women;

(e) To develop coordinated national, subregional and regional plans and programmes to implement the updated Model Strategies and Practical Measures;

(f) To design standard training programmes and manuals for police and criminal justice officials based on the updated Model Strategies and Practical Measures;

(g) To periodically monitor and review progress made at the national and international levels in terms of plans, programmes and initiatives to eliminate all forms of violence against women;

(h) To periodically review and update, if necessary, the updated Model Strategies and Practical Measures.

UN rules for treatment of women prisoners

On 22 July, the Economic and Social Council recommended to the Assembly the adoption of a draft resolution on UN rules for the treatment of women prisoners and non-custodial measures for women offenders (resolution 2010/16), which were annexed to the resolution and would henceforth be known as the Bangkok Rules. On 21 December, in resolution 65/229, the Assembly took that action (see p. 1120).

Women and armed conflict

Women and children taken hostage

In response to a 2008 Commission on the Status of Women resolution [YUN 2008, p. 1267], the Secretary-General submitted a report [E/CN.6/2010/5] on the release of women and children taken hostage, including those subsequently imprisoned, in armed conflicts. Six Member States provided information for the report. Of the 14 entities of the UN system that responded to the request for information, three described activities related to women and children taken hostage or imprisoned in armed conflict. The information from States demonstrated that Governments continued to develop policies and legislation in support of women and children taken hostage, as well as provide humanitarian assistance. Information provided by the United Nations focused on programmes in support of women and children demobilized from situations of forced recruitment into armed forces. The Secretary-General suggested that the Commission might wish to invite the Special Representative of the Secretary-General for Children and Armed Conflict to take into account the release of children taken hostage, including those subsequently imprisoned, in armed conflicts, and provide sex-disaggregated data, where available, when preparing the reports requested by the General Assembly.

Commission action. In a March resolution [E/2010/27 (res. 54/3)], the Commission requested the Secretary-General to facilitate the immediate release of civilian women and children who had been taken hostage, to ensure the widest possible dissemination of relevant material, in particular material related to Security Council resolution 1325(2000) [YUN 2000, p. 1113], and to submit to the Commission in 2012 a report on the implementation of its resolution.

On 12 March [dec. 54/102], the Commission took note of the Secretary-General's report.

Women, peace and security

Report of Secretary-General. In response to Security Council resolution 1889(2009) [YUN 2009, p. 1141], the Secretary-General submitted an April report [S/2010/173] containing a set of proposed indicators for use at the global level to track implementation of resolution 1325(2000) concerning the obstacles to women's full involvement in the prevention and resolution of conflicts and their participation in post-conflict public life. The provision of indicators, to be used as a common basis for reporting by Member States, UN entities and international and regional organizations, was considered a major step towards fostering more effective and coordinated action. The report described the process by which the indicators were developed, including the establishment of the 15-entity Technical Working Group on Global Indicators for resolution 1325(2000), for which UNIFEM served as the technical lead. Organized in line with the pillars of the 2008–2009 United Nations System-wide Action Plan [YUN 2007, p. 1166] on implementing resolution 1325(2000), the indicators were grouped in four thematic areas: prevention; participation; protection; and relief and recovery. The Action Plan's fifth thematic area, normative, was cross-cutting, and therefore incorporated within the four areas selected. For the prevention pillar, indicators would measure progress towards preventing conflict and violations of women's and girls' human rights, including sexual and gender-based violence. They would also respond to a need to develop specific guidelines and protocols for justice and security actors and to establish systems for reporting abuses and ensuring the accountability of both peacekeepers and national security forces. Indicators for the participation pillar would allow for the monitoring of progress in ensuring the inclusion of women and women's interests in decision-making processes related to the prevention, management and resolution of conflicts. Indicators for the protection pillar would measure progress towards protecting and promoting the human rights of women and girls and ensuring their physical safety, health and economic security, while those for the relief and recovery pillar would assess the extent to which the specific needs of women and girls were addressed during the relief and recovery phase following conflict.

The Secretary-General concluded that development of the indicators was timely as, 10 years after its adoption, the implementation of resolution 1325(2000) remained slow, and the assessment of progress was constrained by an absence of baseline data and specific, measurable, relevant and time-bound indicators. To make the indicators operational, a pilot phase entailing technical and baseline development and data collection would be needed, for which the involvement of UN country teams would be critical.

The pilot period would vary from two to five years. The Secretary-General recommended that the Council urge the UN system to engage organizations and parties that had technical expertise in data collection and analysis to populate the indicators in the shortest possible time, so that the data would be available for use. He urged Member States, in parallel with UN efforts, to volunteer to pilot the indicators to ensure that they were relevant to country situations and to establish best practices in data collection and analysis. He recommended the inclusion of information generated through the indicators in the Secretary-General's country reports to the Council, and that the Council strengthen its accountability and monitoring through the establishment of a mechanism that would use the indicators.

Appointment of Special Representative. On 29 January [S/2010/62], the Secretary-General informed the President of the Security Council of his intention, in accordance with resolution 1888(2009) [YUN 2009, p. 1137], to appoint Margot Wallström (Sweden) as his Special Representative on Sexual Violence in Conflict, with immediate effect. On 2 February [S/2010/63], the Council took note of the Secretary-General's appointment.

SECURITY COUNCIL ACTION

On 27 April [meeting 6302], following consultations among Security Council members, the President made statement S/PRST/2010/8 on behalf of the Council:

The Security Council welcomes the appointment of Ms. Margot Wallström as Special Representative of the Secretary-General on Sexual Violence in Conflict and reiterates its support of her mandate as outlined in resolution 1888(2009).

The Council welcomes the timely submission of the report of the Secretary-General requested in resolution 1889(2009) and takes note of both the indicators and the recommendations contained in the report.

The Council notes that indicators contained in the report would need technical and conceptual development before they could become operational.

The Council requests the Secretary-General to continue to consult with the Council, taking into account views expressed by other relevant stakeholders, including the broader United Nations membership, taking into account the need to further develop indicators contained in his report and the parallel ongoing work regarding resolution 1888(2009), in order to include a comprehensive set of indicators in his next report on the implementation of resolution 1325(2000), to be submitted to the Council in October 2010, as well as a programme of work containing roles and responsibilities vis-à-vis the indicators within the United Nations system and a time frame to render the indicators operational.

The Council requests the Secretary-General to continue to ensure that all country reports to the Council provide information on the impact of situations of armed conflict on women and girls, their particular needs in post-conflict situations and obstacles to meeting those needs.

The Council expresses its intention to take action on a comprehensive set of indicators on the occasion of the tenth anniversary of resolution 1325(2000) in October 2010, for use at the global level to track implementation of resolution 1325(2000).

The Council reiterates its desire to commemorate the tenth anniversary of resolution 1325(2000).

Report of Secretary-General. In response to a Security Council request contained in presidential statement S/PRST/2007/40 [YUN 2007, p. 1167], the Secretary-General submitted a September report [S/2010/498] that reviewed progress in implementing resolution 1325(2000). The report assessed the processes by which the Council received, analysed and took action on information pertinent to that resolution, and it included information on measures taken to improve the capacity of Member States to implement the resolution, including on best practices. It also reviewed the 2008–2009 System-wide Action Plan for implementing resolution 1325(2000) and, in response to a request contained in presidential statement S/PRST/2010/8 (see above), presented the results of the further development of the indicators proposed in the Secretary-General's April report (see p. 1160). The latter section included the outline of a programme of work detailing roles and responsibilities within the UN system vis-à-vis the indicators and a time frame to render the indicators operational.

In June and July, the UN Department of Political Affairs (DPA), the UN Department of Peacekeeping Operations (DPKO), the United Nations Development Programme (UNDP) and UNIFEM, through the Global Open Day for Women and Peace, supported over 20 dialogues on gender issues in peacebuilding between women's peace groups and senior UN leaders in conflict-affected countries and territories. The Global Open Day aimed to further national dialogues on women and peace and security and thereby improve the implementation of resolution 1325(2000); it enabled women to share their concerns with the international community and provided a model for more regular dialogue between civil society and Special Representatives of the Secretary-General and Resident Coordinators. In January, DPA and UNIFEM, in response to Council resolution 1889(2009), initiated a Joint Strategy on Gender and Mediation, with the task of identifying and preparing qualified female mediators; increasing the availability of gender expertise in mediation processes; and enhancing women's participation in peace processes. The High-Level Steering Committee to guide the commemoration of the tenth anniversary of resolution 1325(2000), established in 2010 and chaired by the Deputy Secretary-General, sought to produce a more intensified second decade of resolution implementation. One of the priorities of the Special Representative of the Secretary-General on Sexual Violence in Conflict, who was appointed in March (see p. 1160), was to increase the participation of female police officers to 20 per cent by 2014. In 2010, women comprised 3.2 per cent of total military personnel deployed to peacekeeping.

Between May and July, consultations were held with Council experts, regional groups and Member States to receive their inputs to guide the development of the 26 indicators to track implementation of resolution 1325(2000). The technical review and development of the indicators was carried out by the Technical Working Group on Global Indicators and the effort was coordinated by the Office of the Special Adviser on Gender Issues and Advancement of Women (OSAGI) and UNIFEM. Member States' concerns related to the applicability of the indicators for non-conflict contexts; the responsibility of Member States for populating the indicators; the need to address qualitative as well as quantitative indicators; and the need to ensure that all aspects were addressed. Annexed to the report was the final set of indicators.

The report noted that the UN system, Member States, civil society and other actors had made notable efforts to implement resolution 1325(2000) in a range of areas, but progress had been inconsistent. There was need for an overarching framework to set strategic system-wide priorities and ensure coherence. It was suggested that the Council might wish to request the Secretary-General to provide, in his next annual report to the Council, a single comprehensive framework with an agreed set of goals, targets and indicators to guide resolution implementation in the next decade. The Council could endorse the set of indicators for use in preparing the framework. The Council and Member States might adopt and begin to use the indicators as a basis for their reviews, analyses, interventions and reporting. It was further proposed that a working group be established, which would review progress in implementing resolution 1325(2000), on the basis of the Secretary-General's annual reports, and recommend to the Council how to address gaps and challenges.

With the Secretary-General's report before it, the Council held a ministerial open debate on women and peace and security on 26 October [S/PV.6411].

On 26 October [meeting 6411], following consultations among Security Council members, the President made statement S/PRST/2010/22 on behalf of the Council:

The Security Council, meeting on the tenth anniversary of the adoption of its resolution 1325(2000), reaffirms its commitment to the continuing and full implementation, in a mutually reinforcing manner, of resolutions 1325(2000), 1612(2005), 1674(2006), 1820(2008), 1882(2009), 1888(2009), 1889(2009) and 1894(2009) and all relevant statements by its President.

The Council welcomes the report of the Secretary-General on women and peace and security and the analysis it contains on progress in implementing resolution 1325(2000).

The Council welcomes General Assembly resolution 64/289 establishing the United Nations Entity for Gender Equality and the Empowerment of Women (UN-Women) that will be fully operational in January 2011. The Council invites UN-Women to regularly contribute to its work on women and peace and security and notes the valuable role that it will play in supporting women's roles in peacebuilding and the prevention of sexual violence in conflict, including through coordination and coherence in policy and programming for women and girls. It welcomes the appointment of Ms. Michelle Bachelet as the head of UN-Women.

The Council reiterates its strong condemnation of all violations of applicable international law committed against women and girls in situations of armed conflict and in post-conflict situations, including rape, other forms of sexual and gender-based violence and killing and maiming that contravene international law. The Council urges the complete cessation by all parties of such acts with immediate effect and also urges Member States to bring to justice those responsible for crimes of this nature. Their efforts to combat impunity must be matched with assistance and redress to victims. In this regard, it reiterates its support for the mandates of the Special Representative of the Secretary-General on Sexual Violence in Conflict and the Special Representative of the Secretary-General for Children and Armed Conflict and encourages them to continue to ensure full transparency, cooperation and coordination of their efforts.

The Council notes that the fight against impunity for the most serious crimes of international concern committed against women and girls has been strengthened through the work of the International Criminal Court, ad hoc and mixed tribunals, as well as specialized chambers in national tribunals and takes note of the stocktaking of international criminal justice undertaken at the first Review Conference of the Rome Statute of the International Criminal Court, held in Kampala from 31 May to 11 June 2010. The Council intends to enhance its efforts to fight impunity and uphold accountability for serious crimes against women and girls with appropriate means and draws attention to the full range of justice and reconciliation mechanisms to be considered, including national, international and mixed criminal courts and tribunals, truth and reconciliation commissions, as well as national reparation programmes for victims, institutional reforms and traditional dispute resolution mechanisms.

The Council recognizes the continuing challenges and welcomes the many efforts to implement resolution 1325(2000) detailed in the report of the Secretary-General, in particular positive examples of efforts to engage with women's civil society groups in conflict resolution and peacebuilding, and to protect women and girls from sexual and gender-based violence.

The Council notes with grave concern that women and girls are disproportionately affected by conflict, and that women's participation at all stages of peace processes and in the implementation of peace accords remains too low, despite the vital role of women in the prevention and resolution of conflicts and in rebuilding their societies. The Council recognizes the need to facilitate the full and effective participation of women in these areas and stresses that the full and effective participation of women is very important for the sustainability of peace processes.

The Council welcomes the efforts of Member States to implement resolution 1325(2000) at the national level, including the increase in the number of States that have formulated or revised national action plans and strategies, and encourages Member States to continue to pursue such implementation.

The Council welcomes the concrete commitments made by a number of Member States at the present ministerial open debate on 26 October 2010 to increase their efforts to implement resolution 1325(2000) and invites those Member States and any other Member States that wish to do so to regularly review implementation of this resolution and to report to the Council on progress made, as appropriate.

The Council supports taking forward, including by relevant United Nations entities, the set of indicators contained in the annex to the report of the Secretary-General for use as an initial framework to track implementation of resolution 1325(2000) in situations of armed conflict and in post-conflict and other situations relevant to the implementation of resolution 1325(2000), as appropriate, and taking into account the specificity of each country.

The Council recognizes the need for consistent implementation of resolution 1325(2000) in its own work and for monitoring progress in implementation. In this regard the Council underlines the need for timely and systematic reporting on women and peace and security issues and urges the Secretary-General to ensure that reports and briefings on country-specific and relevant thematic issues provide information on women and peace and security issues and on the implementation of resolution 1325(2000) using this set of indicators, as appropriate.

The Council encourages Member States to take into account the set of indicators contained in the annex to the report of the Secretary-General, as appropriate, in implementing resolution 1325(2000) and subsequent resolutions on women and peace and security.

The Council reiterates its demand to all parties to armed conflict to immediately and completely cease all forms of violence against women and girls, including acts of sexual violence.

The Council encourages Member States to deploy greater numbers of female military and police personnel to United Nations peacekeeping operations, and to provide all military and police personnel with adequate training to carry out their responsibilities. The Council requests the Secretary-General to continue and strengthen efforts to implement the policy of zero tolerance of sexual exploitation and abuse by United Nations peacekeeping and humanitarian personnel. The Council requests the Secretary-General to continue to provide and deploy guidance on addressing sexual violence for predeployment and induction training of military and police personnel, to assist missions in developing situation-specific procedures to address sexual violence at the field level and to ensure that technical support is provided to troop- and police-contributing countries in order to include guidance for military and police personnel on addressing sexual violence in predeployment and induction training. The Council welcomes the work of gender and women's protection advisers appointed to peacekeeping missions. The Council looks forward to considering the annual report of the Secretary-General on the implementation of its resolution 1820(2008).

The Council requests the Secretary-General to continue to submit an annual report to it on the implementation of resolution 1325(2000). The Council further requests the Secretary-General to propose in his next annual report a strategic framework to guide the implementation by the United Nations of the resolution in the next decade, which includes targets and indicators and takes account of relevant processes within the Secretariat. In this context, the Council requests the Secretary-General to include recommendations for policy and institutional reforms in the United Nations that will facilitate improved response by the Organization to women and peace and security issues.

The Council reiterates its request to Member States and international, regional and subregional organizations to take measures to increase the participation of women in conflict prevention, conflict resolution and peacebuilding, including in decision-making roles in post-conflict governance institutions, appointed and elected. The Council urges the Secretary-General to appoint more women as mediators and special representatives and envoys to pursue good offices on his behalf.

The Council expresses its intention to convene a high-level review in five years to assess progress at the global, regional and national levels in implementing resolution 1325(2000), renew commitments and address obstacles and constraints that have emerged in the implementation of resolution 1325(2000).

Sexual violence and armed conflict

Situation in Democratic Republic of the Congo. In presidential statement S/PRST/2010/17 of 17 September (see p. 128) on the situation concerning the Democratic Republic of the Congo (DRC), the Security Council condemned the mass rapes that had occurred in late July and August and urged the DRC Government to ensure swift prosecution of the perpetrators and to inform the Council on measures taken to that end.

Report of Secretary-General. In response to Council resolution 1888(2009), the Secretary-General submitted a November report [A/65/592-S/2010/604] on the implementation of that resolution and of resolution 1820(2008) [YUN 2008, p. 1265]. The report provided an analysis of conflict-related sexual violence to inform practice; updates on situations on the Council's agenda, including information about parties suspected of engaging in patterns of sexual violence; progress made by the UN system in implementing the resolutions, including measures to improve the collection of information; and recommendations for enhancing response. Input from stakeholders at both Headquarters and the country level, including Member States, NGOs and experts, contributed to the report. Information was provided on contemporary conflicts in which sexual violence was a factor, including in Afghanistan, Angola, the Central African Republic, Chad, Côte d'Ivoire, the DRC, Haiti, Iraq, Liberia, Nepal, Somalia and South Sudan. Three common themes emerged from the country-level contributions: there was a need to change social attitudes in tandem with legal and policy reforms to reduce stigmatization; reporting should be standardized, employing an ethical and methodologically sound system that could be used by all stakeholders; and the UN system and donor countries should provide coherent and sustained support to national authorities. The Secretary-General drew attention to the appointment of his first Special Representative on Sexual Violence in Conflict, who had established her office in April. Progress had been made in carrying out her five-point agenda, which was to address impunity, including by supporting national institutions to identify and prosecute perpetrators; empower women to seek redress and claim their rights; mobilize political leadership; increase recognition of rape as a tactic and consequence of conflict; and ensure a more coherent response by the UN system. The Special Representative's priorities included facilitating a rapid response to emerging situations of sexual violence by developing an early warning matrix of risk factors; recognizing and promoting exemplary action; sustaining media attention through political and public advocacy regarding situations in which sexual violence was not sufficiently recognized and the response was under-resourced; paving the way for the deployment of a team of experts on the rule of law in support of national institutions; and fostering Government engagement in developing and implementing comprehensive strategies to combat sexual violence.

The Secretary-General affirmed his commitment to accelerating implementation of resolutions 1820(2008) and 1888(2009) and to according the highest level of attention to the issue of sexual violence and armed conflict. He noted that progress at the policy level had been overshadowed by the surge of sexual violence in the eastern DRC and its continuing prevalence elsewhere. Additional measures were needed to deliver tangible protection outcomes. He urged the Council to increase pressure on perpetrators through the adoption of sanctions against individuals and entities and the exchange of information between relevant sanctions committees and his Special Representative. As a possible basis for the application of targeted measures, he proposed that the Council mandate the listing, in his annual reports, of parties who had engaged in patterns of sexual violence.

The Council should systematically consider sexual violence in authorizing and renewing the mandates of peacekeeping and political missions to ensure that the language contained in thematic resolutions would be reflected in country-level action.

On 16 December [meeting 6453], the Security Council unanimously adopted resolution 1960(2010). The draft [S/2010/641] was submitted by 68 Member States.

The Security Council,

Reaffirming its commitment to the continuing and full implementation, in a mutually reinforcing manner, of resolutions 1325(2000) of 31 October 2000, 1612(2005) of 26 July 2005, 1674(2006) of 28 April 2006, 1820(2008) of 19 June 2008, 1882(2009) of 4 August 2009, 1888(2009) of 30 September 2009, 1889(2009) of 5 October 2009 and 1894(2009) of 11 November 2009, and all relevant statements by its President,

Welcoming the report of the Secretary-General of 24 November 2010, but remaining deeply concerned over the slow progress on the issue of sexual violence in situations of armed conflict, in particular against women and children, and noting, as documented in the report of the Secretary-General, that sexual violence occurs in armed conflicts throughout the world,

Reiterating its deep concern that, despite its repeated condemnation of violence against women and children in situations of armed conflict, including sexual violence in situations of armed conflict, and despite its calls addressed to all parties to armed conflict for the cessation of such acts with immediate effect, such acts continue to occur, and in some situations have become systematic and widespread, reaching appalling levels of brutality,

Reiterating the necessity for all States and non-State parties to conflicts to comply fully with their obligations under applicable international law, including the prohibition on all forms of sexual violence,

Reiterating also the need for civilian and military leaders, consistent with the principle of command responsibility, to demonstrate commitment and political will to prevent sexual violence and to combat impunity and enforce accountability, and that inaction can send a message that the incidence of sexual violence in conflicts is tolerated,

Recalling the responsibilities of States to end impunity and to prosecute those responsible for genocide, crimes against humanity, war crimes and other egregious crimes perpetrated against civilians, and in this regard noting with concern that only limited numbers of perpetrators of sexual violence have been brought to justice, while recognizing that in conflict and in post-conflict situations national justice systems may be significantly weakened,

Welcoming the progress made in rendering operational the team of experts to assist national authorities to strengthen the rule of law in accordance with resolution 1888(2009), reaffirming the importance of deploying it rapidly to situations of particular concern with respect to sexual violence in armed conflict, working through the United Nations presence on the ground and with the consent of the host Government, and in this regard appreciating the voluntary contributions to support its work,

Recognizing that States bear the primary responsibility to respect and ensure the human rights of all persons within their territory and subject to their jurisdiction as provided for by international law,

Reaffirming that parties to armed conflict bear the primary responsibility to take all feasible steps to ensure the protection of civilians,

Recalling that international humanitarian law affords general protection to women and children as part of the civilian population during armed conflicts and special protection due to the fact that they can be placed particularly at risk,

Reaffirming that ending impunity is essential if a society in conflict or recovering from conflict is to come to terms with past abuses committed against civilians affected by armed conflict and to prevent such abuses in the future, drawing attention to the full range of justice and reconciliation mechanisms to be considered, including national, international and "mixed" criminal courts and tribunals and truth and reconciliation commissions, and noting that such mechanisms can promote not only individual responsibility for serious crimes but also peace, truth, reconciliation and the rights of the victims,

Recalling the inclusion of a range of sexual violence offences in the Rome Statute of the International Criminal Court and the statutes of the ad hoc international criminal tribunals,

Reaffirming the importance for States, with the support of the international community, to increase access to health care, psychosocial support, legal assistance and socio-economic reintegration services for victims of sexual violence, in particular in rural areas, and taking into account the specific needs of persons with disabilities,

Welcoming the proposals, conclusions and recommendations included in the report of the Special Committee on Peacekeeping Operations on the need for adequate capabilities and clear and appropriate guidelines to enable peacekeeping missions to carry out all their mandated tasks, including prevention of and response to sexual violence; stressing the importance of ensuring engagement by senior mission leadership on protection of civilians, including the prevention of and response to instances of sexual violence in armed conflict, with a view to ensuring that all mission components and all levels of the chain of command are properly informed of and involved in the mandate of the mission and their relevant responsibilities; welcoming progress made by the Secretary-General in developing operational tools for the implementation of protection of civilians mandates; and encouraging troop- and police-contributing countries to make full use of and provide feedback on these important materials,

Recognizing the efforts of the Secretary-General to address the underrepresentation of women in formal peace processes, the lack of mediators and ceasefire monitors with proper training in dealing with sexual violence, and the lack of women as chief or lead peace mediators in United Nations-sponsored peace talks, and encouraging further such efforts,

Welcoming the inclusion of women in peacekeeping missions in civil, military and police functions, recognizing that their presence may encourage women from local communities to report acts of sexual violence,

Having considered the report of the Secretary-General of 24 November 2010, and stressing that the present resolution does not seek to make any legal determination as to whether situations that are referred to in the report of the Secretary-General are or are not armed conflicts in the context of the Geneva Conventions of 1949 and the Additional Protocols thereto, of 1977, nor does it prejudice the legal status of non-State parties involved in those situations,

1. Reaffirms that sexual violence, when used or commissioned as a tactic of war or as a part of a widespread or systematic attack against civilian populations, can significantly exacerbate and prolong situations of armed conflict and may impede the restoration of international peace and security, affirms in this regard that effective steps to prevent and respond to such acts of sexual violence can significantly contribute to the maintenance of international peace and security, and expresses its readiness, when considering situations on the agenda of the Security Council, to take, where necessary, appropriate steps to address widespread or systematic sexual violence in situations of armed conflict;

2. Reiterates its demand for the complete cessation with immediate effect by all parties to armed conflict of all acts of sexual violence;

3. Encourages the Secretary-General to include in his annual reports submitted pursuant to resolutions 1820(2008) and 1888(2009) detailed information on parties to armed conflict that are credibly suspected of committing or being responsible for acts of rape or other forms of sexual violence, and to list in an annex to these annual reports the parties that are credibly suspected of committing or being responsible for patterns of rape and other forms of sexual violence in situations of armed conflict on the Council agenda; and expresses its intention to use this list as a basis for more focused United Nations engagement with those parties, including, as appropriate, measures in accordance with the procedures of the relevant sanctions committees;

4. Requests the Secretary-General, in accordance with the present resolution and taking into account its specificity, to apply the listing and de-listing criteria for parties listed in his annual report on sexual violence in armed conflict consistent with paragraphs 175, 176, 178 and 180 of his report of 13 April 2010;

5. Calls upon parties to armed conflict to make and implement specific and time-bound commitments to combat sexual violence, which should include, inter alia, the issuance of clear orders through chains of command prohibiting sexual violence and the prohibition of sexual violence in codes of conduct, military field manuals, or equivalent; and further calls upon those parties to make and implement specific commitments on timely investigation of alleged abuses in order to hold perpetrators accountable;

6. Requests the Secretary-General to track and monitor implementation of these commitments by parties to armed conflict on the Council agenda that engage in patterns of rape and other sexual violence, and to regularly update the Council in relevant reports and briefings;

7. Reiterates its intention, when adopting or renewing targeted sanctions in situations of armed conflict, to consider including, where appropriate, designation criteria pertaining to acts of rape and other forms of sexual violence; and calls upon all peacekeeping and other relevant United Nations missions and United Nations entities, in particular the Security Council Working Group on Children and Armed Conflict, the Special Representative of the Secretary-General for Children and Armed Conflict and the Special Representative of the Secretary-General on Sexual Violence in Conflict, to share with relevant Security Council sanctions committees, including through relevant sanctions committee monitoring groups and groups of experts, all pertinent information about sexual violence;

8. Requests the Secretary-General to establish monitoring, analysis and reporting arrangements on conflict-related sexual violence, including rape in situations of armed conflict and in post-conflict and other situations relevant to the implementation of resolution 1888(2009), as appropriate, and taking into account the specificity of each country, that ensure a coherent and coordinated approach at the field level, and encourages the Secretary-General to engage with United Nations actors, national institutions, civil society organizations, health-care service providers and women's groups to enhance data collection and analysis of incidents, trends and patterns of rape and other forms of sexual violence to assist the consideration by the Council of appropriate actions, including targeted and graduated measures, while respecting fully the integrity and specificity of the monitoring and reporting mechanism implemented under Council resolutions 1612(2005) and 1882(2009) on children and armed conflict;

9. Also requests the Secretary-General to continue to ensure full transparency, cooperation and coordination of efforts between the Special Representative of the Secretary-General for Children and Armed Conflict and the Special Representative of the Secretary-General on Sexual Violence in Conflict;

10. Welcomes the work of gender advisers, looks forward to the appointment of more women's protection advisers to peacekeeping missions, in accordance with resolution 1888(2009), and notes their potential contribution within the framework of the monitoring, analysis and reporting arrangements to be established pursuant to paragraph 8 of the present resolution;

11. Also welcomes the elaboration by the Secretary-General of scenario-based training materials on combating sexual violence for peacekeepers, and encourages Member States to use them as a reference for the preparation and deployment of United Nations peacekeeping operations;

12. Underlines that, in order to carry out their mandate, missions must communicate effectively with local communities, and encourages the Secretary-General to improve their capacity to do so;

13. Expresses its intention to give due consideration to sexual violence in mandate authorizations and renewals and to request the Secretary-General to include, as appropriate, gender expertise in technical assessment missions;

14. Encourages the entities comprising United Nations Action Against Sexual Violence in Conflict, as well as other relevant parts of the United Nations system, to continue to support the work of the aforementioned Special Representative of the Secretary-General on Sexual Violence in Conflict and to enhance cooperation and information-sharing among all relevant stakeholders in order to reinforce coordination and avoid overlap at the Headquarters and country levels and to improve system-wide response;

15. Encourages Member States to deploy greater numbers of female military and police personnel to United Nations peacekeeping operations and to provide all military and police personnel with adequate training on sexual and gender-based violence, inter alia, to carry out their responsibilities;

16. Requests the Secretary-General to continue and strengthen efforts to implement the policy of zero tolerance of sexual exploitation and abuse by United Nations peace-keeping and humanitarian personnel, and further requests the Secretary-General to continue to provide and deploy guidance on addressing sexual violence for predeployment and induction training of military and police personnel, to assist missions in developing situation-specific procedures to address sexual violence at the field level and to ensure that technical support is provided to troop- and police-contributing countries in order to include guidance for military and police personnel on addressing sexual violence in predeployment and induction training;

17. Invites the Special Representative of the Secretary-General on Sexual Violence in Conflict to continue to provide briefings on sexual violence, in accordance with resolution 1888(2009);

18. Requests the Secretary-General to continue to submit annual reports to the Council on the implementation of resolutions 1820(2008) and 1888(2009) and to submit by December 2011 his next report on the implementation of resolutions 1820(2008) and 1888(2009) and the present resolution, to include, inter alia:

(a) A detailed coordination and strategy plan on the timely and ethical collection of information;

(b) Information on progress made in the implementation of the monitoring, analysis and reporting arrangements mentioned in paragraph 8 above;

(c) Detailed information on parties to armed conflict that are credibly suspected of committing or being responsible for acts of rape or other forms of sexual violence, and an annex with a list of parties that are credibly suspected of committing or being responsible for patterns of rape and other forms of sexual violence in situations of armed conflict on the Council agenda;

(d) Updates on efforts by United Nations mission focal points on sexual violence to work closely with the Resident Coordinator/Humanitarian Coordinator, the United Nations country team, and, where appropriate, the Special Representative of the Secretary-General for Children and Armed Conflict and the Special Representative of the Secretary-General on Sexual Violence in Conflict and/or the team of experts, to address sexual violence;

19. Decides to remain actively seized of the matter.

Women's participation in peacebuilding

In response to Security Council resolution 1889(2009) [YUN 2009, p. 1141], the Secretary-General submitted a September report [A/65/354-S/2010/466] on women's participation in peacebuilding, which analysed the needs of women and girls in post-conflict situations; identified the challenges to women's participation in preventing, resolving and recovering from conflict; and specified national and international measures aimed at ensuring that women's priorities were addressed, their right to participation was realized, a gender perspective was applied to peacebuilding, and public actions were consistent with States' international human rights obligations. Among the factors preventing women in post-conflict situations from partaking in peacebuilding were elevated levels of violence and sexual violence; discriminatory legal codes, laws and customs excluding them from gaining a voice in political forums; the restoration of basic services without taking gender dimensions into account; and the re-establishment of public administration and finance systems without taking steps to counteract gender biases. With regard to economic revitalization, the needs and capacities of rural women had to be addressed.

The report comprised an action plan aimed at changing practices among national and international actors and improving outcomes on the ground. The plan's seven commitments were to ensure that women were fully engaged in, and timely gender expertise was provided to, all peace talks; women played substantive roles in post-conflict planning processes, including donor conferences, with comprehensive attention paid to gender equality; adequate financing was provided to address women's specific needs, advance gender equality and promote women's empowerment; deployed civilians possessed the necessary skills, including expertise in rebuilding State institutions to make them more accessible to women; women participated in post-conflict governance as civic actors, elected representatives or decision makers in public institutions, including through temporary special measures such as quotas; rule-of-law initiatives encouraged women's participation in seeking redress for injustices committed against them and in improving the capacity of security actors to prevent and respond to violations of women's rights; and economic recovery prioritized women's involvement in employment-creation schemes, community-development programmes and the delivery of front-line services. Each commitment corresponded to a set of specific measures and supporting activities. The Secretary-General noted that senior UN leaders would need to translate the commitments into outcomes. He urged coordinated action by Member States, regional organizations and, most importantly, the Governments and peoples of countries emerging from conflict.

The Secretary-General concluded that the action plan was a strong basis for fulfilling the pledges of Council resolutions on women and peace and security, but the implementation challenges were considerable. Revising procedures and designing programmes required careful deliberation and additional resources; he urged Member States to make substantial, long-term investments in women's security and productive potential. Member States should ensure that their support for women's engagement in peacebuilding was consistent. Positions on crucial issues should not vary across institutional contexts, both within and beyond the United Nations. Enhancing women's capacity to engage in peacebuilding had to be prioritized in, among other areas, supporting peace processes through independent diplomatic initiatives, providing bilateral assistance to post-conflict countries and participation within UN intergovernmental bodies. As to the UN system, the Peacebuilding Commission, whose founding resolutions included a mandate to address gender issues, had an important role to play, including through its country-specific configurations. Tracking progress in fulfilling the provisions of the action plan's seven commitments would be crucial. Monitoring would be facilitated by the global indicators on the implementation of resolution 1325(2000), prepared at the Council's request. Reporting and monitoring on action plan implementation would be part of the Secretary-General's overall agenda for action to improve UN peacebuilding efforts.

In presidential statement S/PRST/2010/20 of 13 October (see p. 53) the Secretary-General was requested to brief the Council and the Assembly by 13 October 2011 and submit a report by 13 October 2012 on progress made in implementing his agenda for action, with emphasis on the impact it had made on the ground, including progress towards increasing women's participation in peacebuilding, taking into consideration the views of the Peacebuilding Commission.

Women and the economy

On 12 March, the Commission on the Status of Women (see p. 1177) adopted a resolution [E/2010/27 (res. 54/4)] on women's economic empowerment. Noting the increasing recognition that women's economic empowerment was a key factor that contributed to sustainable economic development and women's human rights, the Commission recognized that the full integration of women into the formal economy, in particular into economic decision-making, meant changing the current gender-based division of labour into new economic structures where women and men enjoyed equal treatment, pay and power, including sharing of paid and unpaid work. It called on States to incorporate gender perspectives into social and economic policies, including development and poverty eradication strategies and related actions promoting women's economic rights and independence. States were requested to adopt and apply a systematic approach in order to accelerate women's participation in economic decision-making; undertake legislative and administrative reforms in order to give women full and equal access to economic resources; and provide adequate safety nets and strengthen State-based and community-based support systems in order to enable women living in poverty to withstand adverse economic environments. The Secretary-General was requested to submit to the Commission in 2011 a report on implementation of the resolution.

Women in power and decision-making

In response to Economic and Social Council decision 2009/210 [YUN 2009, p. 1143], by which the Council identified "Current global and national trends and challenges and their impact on gender equality and empowerment of women" as the topic for the thematic discussion of its 2010 substantive session, the Secretary-General submitted an April report [E/2010/49] on current global and national trends and challenges and their impact on gender equality and empowerment of women. The report discussed imbalances and weaknesses in the global economy, food insecurity, climate change, humanitarian crises, armed conflict and international development cooperation, and their impact on gender equality and the empowerment of women. Noting that the global crises could undermine progress made on gender equality, the report stated that they could also provide the potential for positive transformations of gender roles and women's empowerment, and offered ideas and proposals on how such global trends and challenges might be turned into opportunities for advancing equality.

Compared to other segments of the population, women and girls suffered disproportionately in times of crisis or hardship, and in that context the Secretary-General analysed the disadvantages they faced under those conditions, including limited access to food, health care, land for agricultural development, employment, education, economic resources and financial services. To empower women, it was necessary to ensure their full and equal participation in economic and political decision-making and to enhance their economic capacity. Policies should be formulated through continuous dialogue with those affected and with gender-sensitive indicators supported by sex-disaggregated data. Noting that particular attention needed to be given to the specific obstacles faced by poor women in accessing finance, the Secretary-General called for sustained and increased social expenditure and economic policies that included both short-term gender-sensitive measures to mitigate the adverse effects of the crises, and long-term measures to address implicit gender biases in policies and gender inequalities in the economy. Spending for women's health should be sustained to achieve the gender- and health-related MDGs by 2015; women's political, social and economic empowerment in post-conflict settings had to be given greater priority; and stable and predictable foreign aid was required to ensure the effective implementation of gender equality goals and commitments. The Secretary-General recommended that Governments, international organizations and UN system entities implement international commitments on gender equality and strengthen their capacity for gender mainstreaming and the advancement of women's rights. He referred to the recommendations of the Committee for Development Policy, which considered in 2010 the gender dimensions of the global economic crisis and the crisis of food security in the context of climate change (see p. 840).

Women and disarmament

On 8 December, the General Assembly, in resolution 65/69 (see p. 513), encouraged Member States, regional and subregional organizations, the United Nations and specialized agencies to promote the equitable representation of women in decision-making processes related to disarmament, non-proliferation and arms control. The Assembly invited States to strengthen women's participation in disarmament organizations.

Institutional mechanisms for the advancement of women

Inter-Agency Network. The United Nations Inter-Agency Network on Women and Gender Equality (IANWGE), at its ninth annual session (New York, 23–25 February) [IANWGE/2010/Report], discussed: the mainstreaming of gender perspectives throughout preparations for the High-level Plenary Meeting of the sixty-fifth (2010) session of the General Assembly (20–22 September) on progress towards the MDGs (see p. 813); preparations for the tenth anniversary of Security Council resolution 1325(2000) [YUN 2000, p. 1113]; follow-up activities towards implementation of resolutions 1820(2008) [YUN 2008, p. 1265] and 1888(2009) [YUN 2009, p. 1137] (see p. 1163); matters related to the 2010 session of the Commission on the Status of Women, particularly its 15-year review of the implementation of the Beijing Declaration and Platform for Action (1995) and the outcomes of the twenty-third special session of the Assembly (2000) (see p. 1134); the system-wide implementation of Economic and Social Council agreed conclusions 1997/2 [YUN 1997, p. 1186] on mainstreaming a gender perspective into all policies and programmes in the UN system; the status of the Secretary-General's UNiTE to End Violence against Women campaign; and progress in the creation of UN-Women (see p. 1178). Oral briefings on those topics were heard from representatives of UN entities and presentations were made on new and emerging issues, such as the International Labour Organization (ILO) Global Jobs Pact, adopted in 2009 [YUN 2009, p. 1062], and accountability for women's right to health.

With regard to the establishment of a set of global indicators to track implementation of resolution 1325(2000), IANWGE suggested two indicators: women's right to land and different forms of property; and tracking the economic activity and respective resources to support women in conflict situations. The Inter-

Agency Network expressed concern regarding the lack of a comprehensive resource mobilization strategy for the UNiTE campaign and urged its working group on UNiTE to focus on addressing the gap by mapping resource availability, identifying mechanisms to channel contributions, defining terms of reference for funding initiatives, generating a project pipeline, and establishing mechanisms to reach a broad range of stakeholders. Session participants reaffirmed their interest in a system-wide capacity development programme on gender mainstreaming [YUN 2009, p. 1144], to be developed by OSAGI and the United Nations System staff college. The Network endorsed a proposal to hold an expert group meeting (Turin, Italy, 7–9 June) on the development of a mandatory online training module in gender mainstreaming for all UN staff, the initial version of which would be developed in 2010, followed by the design of different versions tailored to various staff functions in the Organization, including an executive version for senior managers.

Report of Secretary-General. In response to Council resolution 2009/12 [YUN 2009, p. 1144], the Secretary-General submitted a May report [E/2010/57] on mainstreaming a gender perspective into all UN system policies and programmes, which was based on the responses of 28 UN entities to an OSAGI-formulated questionnaire.

The Secretary-General said that, since 2000, UN entities had adopted policies, strategies and action plans on mainstreaming a gender perspective into policy and capacity development, monitoring and reporting, and institutional arrangements of the UN system. In March, DPA reviewed its gender action plan and adopted a department-wide gender results framework, while the United Nations Economic and Social Commission for Western Asia updated its gender mainstreaming strategy to ensure the availability of human and financial resources. DPA and UNIFEM had signed a three-year joint strategy on gender and mediation, and by April a gender expert was added to the standby team of mediation experts to mainstream a gender perspective into peace negotiations. The Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations (FAO) developed its strategic framework 2010–2019, in which gender equality was identified as one of the organization's 11 strategic objectives, and the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees developed an age, gender and diversity action plan 2010–2015. Drpko updated the UN gender guidelines for mine action programmes to assist policymakers and programme personnel in incorporating gender considerations into mine action operations and developed a gender training strategy for peacekeeping. The United Nations Environment Programme integrated gender into its 2010–2013 work programme. Different types of training courses, whether continuous, on-demand or mandatory, were reported by UN entities, as were joint efforts with regard to capacity development in the framework of country programmes. Two e-learning courses were launched in 2010: “Gender equality, United Nations coherence and you”; and “Different needs—equal opportunities: increasing effectiveness of humanitarian action for women, girls, boys and men”. The collection of data disaggregated by sex expanded steadily throughout the UN system. UNICEF, UNFPA, DAW, UNIFEM, ILO, the World Bank and the Statistics Division of the Department of Economic and Social Affairs produced “Gender Info 2010”, a global database of gender statistics and indicators on population, families, health, education, work and political participation that contained more than 360,000 data values from regional, national and subnational levels.

Despite progress achieved, the Secretary-General determined that UN entities were moving on an individual basis to implement the gender mainstreaming strategy, and, aside from IANWGE, there was no single driver of gender mainstreaming in the UN system. As efforts were not always coherent, the IANWGE system-wide gender mainstreaming capacity development programme (see above) was a welcome initiative. Suggested recommendations for action by UN entities included: ensuring that managers provided the leadership required to advance gender mainstreaming within the UN system; strengthening gender mainstreaming accountability frameworks using results-based management, including by establishing measurable common system indicators and protocols; increasing financial resources for gender mainstreaming; enhancing attention to gender perspectives in medium-term plans and programme budget and multi-year funding frameworks; using training institutions to assist entities in applying training modules and tools on gender mainstreaming; and increasing field-level capacity to support Member States in collecting and analysing gender-sensitive information, sex- and age-disaggregated data, and the use of gender-responsive budgeting.

ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL ACTION

On 23 July [meeting 46], the Economic and Social Council adopted resolution 2010/29 [draft: E/2010/L.35] without vote [agenda item 7 (e)].

Mainstreaming a gender perspective into all policies and programmes in the United Nations system

The Economic and Social Council,

Welcoming the ministerial declaration of the high-level segment of its substantive session of 2010 on implementing the internationally agreed goals and commitments in regard to gender equality and empowerment of women,

Reaffirming its agreed conclusions 1997/2 of 18 July 1997 on mainstreaming a gender perspective into all policies and programmes in the United Nations system, and recalling its resolutions 2001/41 of 26 July 2001, 2002/23 of 24 July 2002, 2003/49 of 24 July 2003, 2004/4 of 7 July 2004, 2005/31 of 26 July 2005, 2006/36 of 27 July 2006, 2007/33 of 27 July 2007, 2008/34 of 25 July 2008 and 2009/12 of 28 July 2009,

Reaffirming also the commitment made at the 2005 World Summit to actively promote the mainstreaming of a gender perspective in the design, implementation, monitoring and evaluation of policies and programmes in all political, economic and social spheres and to strengthen the capabilities of the United Nations system in the area of gender,

Welcoming the establishment of the United Nations Entity for Gender Equality and the Empowerment of Women, to be known as UN-Women, through the adoption by the General Assembly of resolution 64/289 of 2 July 2010 on system-wide coherence,

Underlining, in this regard, that the establishment of the Entity and the conduct of its work will lead to more effective coordination, coherence and gender mainstreaming across the United Nations system, and emphasizing that support of gender mainstreaming across the United Nations system will be an integral part of the work of the Entity,

Reaffirming that gender mainstreaming is a globally accepted strategy for achieving gender equality and the empowerment of women and constitutes a critical strategy in the full, effective and accelerated implementation of the Beijing Declaration and Platform for Action and the outcomes of the twenty-third special session of the General Assembly, and reaffirming also the commitment to actively promote the mainstreaming of a gender perspective in the design, implementation, monitoring and evaluation of policies and programmes in all political, economic and social spheres, as well as the commitment to strengthen the capabilities of the United Nations system in the area of gender equality,

1. Takes note with appreciation of the report of the Secretary-General and the recommendations contained therein, and calls for further and continued efforts to mainstream a gender perspective into all policies and programmes of the United Nations in accordance with all relevant resolutions of the Economic and Social Council;

2. Looks forward to UN-Women becoming fully operational, welcomes the decision of the General Assembly in its resolution 64/289 that the Entity shall assume the additional role of leading, coordinating and promoting the accountability of the United Nations system in its work on gender equality and the empowerment of women in accordance with its mandate, and in this regard requests the Secretary-General to ensure a smooth transition;

3. Requests the United Nations system, including its agencies, funds and programmes, within their respective mandates, to continue mainstreaming the issue of gender in accordance with previous Council resolutions, in particular resolution 2008/34, and General Assembly resolution 64/289, including mainstreaming a gender perspective into all operational mechanisms, inter alia, the United Nations Development Assistance Framework and other development frameworks, ensuring that managers provide leadership and support, within the United Nations system, to advance gender mainstreaming, strengthening monitoring, reporting and evaluation so as to allow system-wide assessment of progress in gender-mainstreaming, and using existing training resources, including institutions and infrastructure, to assist in the development and application of unified training modules and tools on gender mainstreaming and to promote the collection, analysis and use of data disaggregated by sex and age during programme development and evaluation of gender mainstreaming in order to assess progress towards achieving gender equality and the empowerment of women;

4. Also requests the United Nations system to continue to support Member States, upon their request, in the implementation of national policies for the achievement of gender equality and the empowerment of women;

5. Requests the Secretary-General to submit to the Council at its substantive session of 2011 a detailed report on the efforts and progress made by United Nations entities, and on gaps and challenges that they still face in mainstreaming a gender perspective in the design, implementation, monitoring and evaluation of all policies and programmes and in capacity development, and to include in the report a section on how UN-Women will carry out its work, including by strengthening coordination, identifying areas for improvement and elevating the level of attention given to this cross-cutting issue.

OIOS report. In August [A/65/266], the Office of Internal Oversight Services (OIOS) reported on the results of a thematic evaluation of gender mainstreaming in the United Nations that had assessed 20 programmes within the Secretariat. The objective was to review the implementation and outcomes of the gender mainstreaming policy nearly 15 years after it was introduced in Assembly resolution 50/203 [YUN 1995, p. 1173].

OIOS found that every programme had responded to the gender mainstreaming mandates, but further steps were needed before the Assembly's vision of "an active and visible policy of mainstreaming a gender perspective" could be achieved. The evaluation revealed a range of structures and processes for gender mainstreaming across the Secretariat; gaps in the understanding of the meaning, purpose and implications of gender mainstreaming; weaknesses in leadership and accountability; lack of visibility of the gender perspective in public documents; and lack of comprehensive and systematic evidence of results. It determined that the Secretariat's priority appeared to have been to ensure that appropriate structures and processes were in place rather than focusing on what they were delivering. As the link between the structures and processes and their results was weak or missing, OIOS was unable to draw firm conclusions about the outcomes of gender mainstreaming or its effectiveness in advancing gender equality.

OIOS concluded that the lack of alignment between policy and practice posed a risk to the reputation of the United Nations, which had committed to and promoted gender mainstreaming as a strategy for achieving gender equality. The formation of UN-Women

(see p. 1178) was an opportunity for reinvigorating the Secretariat's approach, and OIOS encouraged the architects of the new gender entity to take the evaluation's findings into account when developing the UN-Women mandate and structure. It urged the UN-Women governing body to seek a further evaluation of Secretariat gender mainstreaming within three years of its launch, building on the baselines established in the current report. OIOS recommended that OSAGI strengthen the central guidance available to Secretariat programmes and ensure greater coordination of their efforts by seeking a recommitment to gender mainstreaming at the highest level; developing a Secretariat-wide approach to the development of staff capabilities to implement gender mainstreaming; providing a central hub of expertise to enable gender experts to work together with Secretariat programmes; and developing guidelines to ensure that gender mainstreaming was integrated into common Secretariat tasks. OIOS also recommended that each Secretariat programme strengthen its results-based focus by ensuring it had developed and disseminated a programme-level gender mainstreaming action plan; establishing clear expectations for managers and all staff and developing the resources and staff capabilities to deliver on those expectations; ensuring that, if retained, focal points who were not specialized in gender mainstreaming had terms of reference and were well supported; and building an evidence base by collecting and analysing outcomes, best practices and lessons learned in gender mainstreaming.

Status of women in the United Nations

In response to General Assembly resolution 64/141 [YUN 2009, p. 1116], the Secretary-General submitted a September report [A/65/334] on the improvement of the status of women in the UN system between 1 January 2008 and 31 December 2009. Representation of women in the Professional and higher categories increased marginally from 38.4 to 39.9 per cent.

The Assembly, in resolution 65/191 (see p. 1136), requested the Secretary-General to review and redouble his efforts to make progress towards the goal of achieving a 50/50 gender balance throughout the UN system.

In resolution 65/247 (see p. 1480), the Assembly expressed concern that progress towards the goal of 50/50 gender balance in the UN system, especially at senior and policymaking levels, had been slow. It requested the Secretary-General to increase his efforts to attain and monitor the goal of gender parity in the Secretariat, particularly at senior levels, and in that context to ensure that women, especially those from developing countries and countries with economies in transition, were appropriately represented in the Secretariat.

Women and human rights

Division for the Advancement of Women and OHCHR activities

During 2010, cooperation continued between the Division for the Advancement of Women (DAW), which became part of the newly established UN-Women before the end of the year (see p. 1178), and the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights (OHCHR) with the goal of achieving equality between women and men and promoting and protecting women's human rights. In a November report [A/HRC/16/33-E/CN.6/2011/8], the Secretary-General reviewed implementation of the 2010 joint workplan of DAW and OHCHR and discussed plans for future cooperation, taking into account the establishment of UN-Women. OHCHR and UN-Women would continue and strengthen their cooperation under a mutually agreed strategic framework, the details of which would be reported to the Commission on the Status of Women in 2012 in the joint workplan for 2011–2012.

Palestinian women

In accordance with Economic and Social Council resolution 2009/14 [YUN 2009, p. 474], the Secretary-General submitted to the Commission on the Status of Women a report [E/CN.6/2010/4] in which he reviewed the situation of and assistance to Palestinian women from October 2008 to September 2009 (see p. 481).

In a 23 February letter to the Secretary-General [E/CN.6/2010/10], Palestine expressed its concerns about the language used in the report, and the overall context in which the report examined the situation and developments in the Occupied Palestinian Territory.

On 12 March, the Commission adopted a resolution on the subject and recommended the text to the Council for adoption.

On 20 July, the Council took action on the situation of and assistance to Palestinian women in resolution 2010/6 (see p. 482).

Trafficking in women and girls

United Nations Global Plan of Action. On 30 July, the General Assembly, in resolution 64/293 (see p. 1111), adopted the United Nations Global Plan of Action to Combat Trafficking in Persons, which was annexed to the resolution. It established the United Nations Voluntary Trust Fund for Victims of Trafficking in Persons, Especially Women and Children, and requested the Secretary-General to take all necessary measures for its operation.

Report of Secretary-General. In response to Assembly resolution 63/156 [YUN 2008, p. 1273], the Secretary-General submitted an August report

[A/65/209] on trafficking in women and girls, which provided information on measures taken by 59 Member States and 11 UN system entities to combat the practice. The report described initiatives by States with regard to ratification of international instruments, strengthened legal and policy frameworks, enhanced coordination with stakeholders, reinforced prevention measures, and efforts to prosecute perpetrators and support victims. In many States, penal codes included explicit criminal offences related to human trafficking, and numerous States strengthened their penalties for traffickers to make them commensurate with those prescribed for other grave crimes. An increasing number of countries were combining comprehensive laws with a range of other measures, such as protection and support services for victims, compensation for damages to victims, and the establishment of national coordination bodies on trafficking. Most reporting States supported bilateral or multilateral programmes to combat trafficking in persons, including development projects in and with countries of origin. Educational programmes and awareness-raising campaigns to improve knowledge of human trafficking and anti-trafficking measures were implemented by most reporting States; many activities were carried out in multiple languages and in cooperation with partners, including NGOs, international and regional organizations, human rights institutions, the media and the business sector. An increasing number of countries offered and supported specialized services for victims of trafficking, including psychological, medical, legal and social/financial assistance, as well as shelters, often run in cooperation with NGOs and other partners. Many countries established helplines for trafficking victims, or to report trafficking cases, and there was a growing trend towards the establishment of national referral mechanisms/procedures and national or multilateral networks to ensure the delivery of support for and protection of victims. Trafficking in women and girls remained under-documented, and although some States provided data on victims, investigations, prosecutions and convictions for human trafficking, the number of cases brought to the attention of the police, courts or service providers was small, data collection methodologies differed, and estimates of the number of victims varied. States therefore intensified efforts to enhance data collection and analysis on trafficking through research programmes, training and studies.

In the UN system, activities focused on global legal and policy development; coordination efforts; studies and reports; data collection; capacity-building; prevention activities; services for victims; and supporting partnerships with the private sector. The Human Rights Council working group on the Universal Periodic Review, between December 2008 and May 2010, continued to make recommendations related to trafficking, especially in women and children, in 75 of the 96 countries it considered. In May, OHCHR organized a seminar aimed at identifying opportunities and challenges in the development of rights-based responses to trafficking in persons. In March, April, May and June, the Assembly held informal consultations to consider the development of a UN global plan of action to combat trafficking in persons (see p. 1110). The United Nations Global Initiative to Fight Human Trafficking carried out activities in the areas of advocacy; public-private partnerships; and knowledge-building to feed into global, regional and national policymaking. The Inter-Agency Cooperation Group against Trafficking in Persons continued its work to improve coordination between UN entities and other international organizations.

The Secretary-General recommended that future action should focus on ensuring a cohesive and gender-sensitive approach among all stakeholders. Comprehensive anti-trafficking acts covering offences and a range of other measures, including protection and support for victims, prevention measures and the establishment of national coordination bodies, were good practices that should be replicated. Training should be conducted for law enforcement officials, the judiciary and other personnel working on combating the practice. Efforts should be strengthened to ensure the prosecution and sentencing of perpetrators. Prevention efforts had to address the root causes and factors that put women and girls at risk, including social and economic marginalization, and violence and discrimination against women. Measures needed to be put in place to discourage employer and consumer demand that led to trafficking in women and girls. Countries should reinforce efforts to provide trafficking victims with support services; shelters; vocational training and alternative employment programmes; and residence permits or extended stays in third countries. States should continue strengthening their efforts to improve data collection on trafficking in women and girls.

The Special Rapporteur on trafficking in persons, especially women and children, submitted to the Human Rights Council her second report, which contained recommendations for combating the practice [A/HRC/14/32 & Add.1–5] (see p. 752).

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 21 December [meeting 71], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Third Committee [A/65/449], adopted resolution 65/190 without vote [agenda item 28 (a)].

Trafficking in women and girls

The General Assembly,

Reiterating its strong condemnation of trafficking in persons, especially women and children, which constitutes a serious threat to human dignity, human rights and development,

Recalling all international conventions that deal specifically with and address issues relevant to the problem of trafficking in women and girls, such as the United Nations Convention against Transnational Organized Crime and the Protocols thereto, in particular the Protocol to Prevent, Suppress and Punish Trafficking in Persons, Especially Women and Children, supplementing the United Nations Convention against Transnational Organized Crime and the Protocol against the Smuggling of Migrants by Land, Sea and Air, supplementing the United Nations Convention against Transnational Organized Crime, the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women and the Optional Protocol thereto, the Convention on the Rights of the Child and the Optional Protocol thereto on the sale of children, child prostitution and child pornography, and the Convention for the Suppression of the Traffic in Persons and of the Exploitation of the Prostitution of Others, as well as previous resolutions of the General Assembly and its subsidiary body the Human Rights Council, and the Economic and Social Council and its functional commissions on the issue,

Reaffirming the provisions pertaining to trafficking in women and girls contained in the outcome documents of relevant international conferences and summits, in particular the strategic objective on the issue of trafficking contained in the Beijing Declaration and Platform for Action adopted by the Fourth World Conference on Women,

Reaffirming also the commitment made by world leaders at the Millennium Summit, the 2005 World Summit and the High-level Plenary Meeting of the General Assembly on the Millennium Development Goals to devise, enforce and strengthen effective measures to combat and eliminate all forms of trafficking in persons to counter the demand for trafficked victims and to protect the victims,

Welcoming the adoption of the United Nations Global Plan of Action to Combat Trafficking in Persons by the General Assembly on 30 July 2010,

Welcoming also the resolutions on trafficking in persons, especially women and children, adopted by the Human Rights Council, in particular resolution 11/3 of 17 June 2009 on trafficking in persons, especially women and children, and resolution 14/2 of 17 June 2010 entitled “Trafficking in persons, especially women and children: regional and subregional cooperation in promoting a human rights-based approach to combating trafficking in persons”,

Noting with appreciation the steps taken, including the reports of human rights treaty bodies and the Special Rapporteur of the Human Rights Council on trafficking in persons, especially women and children, the Special Rapporteur of the Council on violence against women, its causes and consequences, the Special Representative of the Secretary-General on Violence against Children, the Special Rapporteur of the Council on the sale of children, child prostitution and child pornography and the Special Rapporteur of the Council on contemporary forms of slavery, including its causes and consequences, and United Nations agencies and other concerned intergovernmental and governmental organizations, within their existing mandates, as well as civil society, to address the serious crime of trafficking in persons, and encourages them to continue doing so and to share their knowledge and best practices as widely as possible,

Recalling the Global Report on Trafficking in Persons published by the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime in February 2009 and the attention paid in it to the situation of trafficked women and girls, as well as other relevant reports of the Office on trafficking in persons,

Taking note of the Vienna Forum to Fight Human Trafficking, held from 13 to 15 February 2008, within the framework of the United Nations Global Initiative to Fight Human Trafficking, and of the thematic debates on the issue of trafficking in persons, held on 3 June 2008 and 13 May 2009 within the framework of the General Assembly,

Taking note also of the mandate of the Special Rapporteur on trafficking in persons, especially women and children, and of the fact that part of her task is to integrate a gender- and age-specific perspective throughout the work of her mandate, inter alia, through the identification of gender- and age-specific vulnerabilities in relation to the issue of trafficking in persons,

Acknowledging the inclusion of gender-related crimes in the Rome Statute of the International Criminal Court, which entered into force on 1 July 2002,

Bearing in mind that all States have an obligation to exercise due diligence to prevent, investigate and punish perpetrators of trafficking in persons, and to rescue victims as well as provide for their protection, and that not doing so violates and impairs or nullifies the enjoyment of the human rights and fundamental freedoms of the victims,

Seriously concerned that an increasing number of women and girls are being trafficked, including to developed countries, as well as within and between regions and States, and that men and boys are also victims of trafficking, including for sexual exploitation,

Recognizing that certain efforts against trafficking in persons lack the gender and age sensitivity needed to address effectively the situation of women and girls, who are particularly vulnerable to trafficking for the purposes of sexual exploitation, forced labour, services and other forms of exploitation, thus highlighting the need to incorporate a gender- and age-sensitive approach in all anti-trafficking efforts,

Recognizing also the need to address the impact of globalization on the particular problem of trafficking in women and children, in particular girls,

Recognizing further that, despite the progress made, challenges to combating trafficking in women and girls remain and that further efforts should be made to adopt adequate legislation and to implement existing legislation and to continue improving the collection of reliable sex-disaggregated data and statistics that would allow proper analysis of the nature and extent of trafficking in women and girls,

Concerned about the use of new information technologies, including the Internet, for purposes of exploitation of the prostitution of others, for trafficking in women as brides, for sex tourism exploiting women and children and for child pornography, paedophilia and any other forms of sexual exploitation of children,

Concerned also about the increasing activities of transnational criminal organizations and others that profit from international trafficking in persons, especially women and children, without regard to dangerous and inhuman conditions and in flagrant violation of domestic laws and international standards,

Recognizing that victims of trafficking are particularly exposed to racism, racial discrimination, xenophobia and related intolerance and that women and girl victims are often subject to multiple forms of discrimination and violence, including on the grounds of their gender, age, ethnicity, culture and religion, as well as their origins, and that those forms of discrimination themselves may fuel trafficking in persons,

Noting that some of the demand for prostitution and forced labour is met by trafficking in persons in some parts of the world,

Acknowledging that women and girl victims of trafficking, on account of their gender, are further disadvantaged and marginalized by a general lack of information on or awareness and recognition of their human rights and by the stigmatization often associated with trafficking, as well as by the obstacles they meet in gaining access to information and recourse mechanisms in cases of violation of their rights, and that special measures are required for their protection and to increase their awareness,

Reaffirming the importance of bilateral, subregional, regional and international cooperation mechanisms and initiatives, including information exchanges on best practices, of Governments and intergovernmental and non-governmental organizations to address the problem of trafficking in persons, especially women and children,

Reaffirming also that global efforts, including international cooperation and technical assistance programmes, to eradicate trafficking in persons, especially women and children, demand the strong political commitment, shared responsibility and active cooperation of all Governments of countries of origin, transit and destination,

Recognizing that policies and programmes for prevention, rehabilitation, repatriation and reintegration should be developed through a gender- and age-sensitive, comprehensive and multidisciplinary approach, with concern for the security of the victims and respect for the full enjoyment of their human rights and with the involvement of all actors in countries of origin, transit and destination,

Convinced of the need to protect and assist all victims of trafficking, with full respect for the human rights of the victims,

1. Takes note with appreciation of the report of the Secretary-General, which outlines concrete measures, addressing them to States and other stakeholders, to prevent and eliminate trafficking in persons, especially women and children;

2. Urges Member States that have not yet done so to consider ratifying or acceding to, as a matter of priority, the United Nations Convention against Transnational Organized Crime and the Protocol to Prevent, Suppress and Punish Trafficking in Persons, Especially Women and Children, supplementing the United Nations Convention against Transnational Organized Crime, taking into consideration the central role of those instruments in the fight against trafficking in persons, and urges States parties to those instruments to implement them fully and effectively;

3. Urges Member States, the United Nations and other international, regional and subregional organizations, as well as civil society, including non-governmental organizations, the private sector and the media, to fully and effectively implement the relevant provisions of the United Nations Global Plan of Action to Combat Trafficking in Persons and the activities outlined therein;

4. Urges Governments to consider signing and ratifying and States parties to implement the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women and the Optional Protocol thereto, and the Convention on the Rights of the Child and the Optional Protocol thereto on the sale of children, child prostitution and child pornography, as well as the Forced Labour Convention, 1930 (No. 29), the Discrimination (Employment and Occupation) Convention, 1958 (No. 111), and the Worst Forms of Child Labour Convention, 1999 (No. 182), of the International Labour Organization;

5. Welcomes the efforts of Governments, United Nations bodies and agencies and intergovernmental and non-governmental organizations to address the particular problem of trafficking in women and girls, and encourages them to further enhance their efforts and cooperation, including by sharing their knowledge, technical expertise and best practices as widely as possible;

6. Encourages the United Nations system to mainstream, as appropriate, the issue of trafficking in persons, especially women and girls, into its broader policies and programmes aimed at addressing economic and social development, human rights, the rule of law, good governance, education, health and natural disaster and post-conflict reconstruction;

7. Calls upon Governments to address, with a view to eliminating, the demand that fosters the trafficking of women and girls for all forms of exploitation and in this regard to enhance preventive measures, including legislative measures, to deter exploiters of trafficked persons, as well as ensure their accountability;

8. Also calls upon Governments to take appropriate measures to address the factors that increase vulnerability to being trafficked, including poverty and gender inequality, as well as other factors that encourage the particular problem of trafficking in women and girls for prostitution and other forms of commercialized sex, forced marriage, forced labour and organ removal, in order to prevent and eliminate such trafficking, including by strengthening existing legislation with a view to providing better protection of the rights of women and girls and to punishing perpetrators, including public officials engaging in or facilitating human trafficking, through, as appropriate, criminal and/or civil measures;

9. Calls upon Governments, the international community and all other organizations and entities that deal with conflict, post-conflict, disaster and other emergency situations to address the heightened vulnerability of women and girls to trafficking and exploitation and associated gender-based violence;

10. Urges Governments to devise, enforce and strengthen effective gender- and age-sensitive measures to combat and eliminate all forms of trafficking in women and girls, including for sexual and economic exploitation, as part of a comprehensive anti-trafficking strategy that integrates a human rights perspective, and to draw up, as appropriate, national action plans in this regard;

11. Also urges Governments, in cooperation with intergovernmental and non-governmental organizations, to support and allocate resources to strengthen preventive action, in particular education for women and men, as well as for girls and boys, on gender equality, self-respect and mutual respect, and campaigns, carried out in collaboration with civil society, to increase public awareness of the issue at the national and grass-roots levels;

12. Reiterates the importance of continued coordination among, inter alia, the Special Rapporteur of the Human Rights Council on trafficking in persons, especially women and children, the Special Rapporteur of the Council on the sale of children, child prostitution and child pornography and the Special Rapporteur of the Council on contemporary forms of slavery, including its causes and consequences, in order to avoid unnecessary duplication in their activities in fulfilment of their mandates;

13. Encourages Governments to take appropriate measures to eliminate sex tourism demand, especially for children, through all possible preventive actions;

14. Urges Governments to develop educational and training programmes and policies and to consider, as appropriate, enacting legislation aimed at preventing sex tourism and trafficking, giving special emphasis to the protection of young women and children;

15. Encourages Member States to strengthen national programmes and to engage in bilateral, subregional, regional and international cooperation, including by forging regional initiatives or plans of action, to address the problem of trafficking in persons through, inter alia, the enhancement of information-sharing, gender- and age-specific data collection and other technical capacities, and mutual legal assistance, as well as the combating of corruption and laundering of proceeds derived from trafficking, including for purposes of commercial sexual exploitation, and to ensure, as appropriate, that such agreements and initiatives are particularly responsive to the problem of trafficking as it affects women and girls;

16. Calls upon all Governments to criminalize all forms of trafficking in persons, recognizing its increasing occurrence for purposes of sexual exploitation, commercial sexual exploitation and abuse, sex tourism and forced labour, and to bring to justice and punish the offenders and intermediaries involved, including public officials involved with trafficking in persons, whether local or foreign, through the competent national authorities, either in the country of origin of the offender or in the country in which the abuse occurs, in accordance with due process of law, as well as to penalize persons in authority found guilty of sexually assaulting victims of trafficking in their custody;

17. Urges Governments to take all appropriate measures to ensure that victims of trafficking are not penalized or prosecuted for acts committed as a direct result of being trafficked and that they do not suffer from revictimization as a result of actions taken by Government authorities, and encourages Governments to prevent, within their legal framework and in accordance with national policies, victims of trafficking in persons from being prosecuted for their illegal entry or residence;

18. Invites Governments to consider setting up or strengthening a national coordinating mechanism, for example, a national rapporteur or an inter-agency body, with the participation of civil society, as appropriate, including non-governmental organizations, to encourage the exchange of information and to report on data, root causes, factors and trends in trafficking in persons, especially women and girls, and to include data on victims of trafficking disaggregated by sex and age;

19. Encourages Governments and relevant United Nations bodies, within existing resources, to take appropriate measures to raise public awareness of the issue of trafficking in persons, particularly women and girls, including the factors that make women and girls vulnerable to trafficking; to discourage, with a view to eliminating, the demand that fosters all forms of exploitation, including sexual exploitation and forced labour; to publicize the laws, regulations and penalties relating to this issue; and to emphasize that trafficking is a serious crime;

20. Calls upon concerned Governments to allocate resources, as appropriate, to provide access to appropriate programmes for the physical, psychological and social recovery of victims of trafficking, including through job training, legal assistance in a language that they can understand and health care, including for HIV/AIDS, and by taking measures to cooperate with intergovernmental and non-governmental organizations to provide for the social, medical and psychological care of the victims;

21. Encourages Governments, in cooperation with intergovernmental and non-governmental organizations, to undertake or strengthen campaigns aimed at clarifying opportunities, limitations and rights in the event of migration, as well as information on the risks of irregular migration and the ways and means used by traffickers, so as to enable women to make informed decisions and to prevent them from becoming victims of trafficking;

22. Also encourages Governments to intensify collaboration with non-governmental organizations to develop and implement gender- and age-sensitive programmes for effective counselling, training and reintegration into society of victims of trafficking and programmes that provide shelter and helplines to victims or potential victims;

23. Urges Governments to provide or strengthen training for, and to raise awareness among, law enforcement, judicial, immigration and other relevant officials on the prevention and combating of trafficking in persons, including the sexual exploitation of women and girls, and in this regard calls upon Governments to ensure that the treatment of victims of trafficking, especially by law enforcement officials, immigration officers, consular officials, social workers and other first response officials, is conducted with full respect for the human rights of those victims and with gender and age sensitivity and observes the principles of non-discrimination, including the prohibition of racial discrimination;

24. Invites Governments to take steps to ensure that criminal justice procedures and witness protection programmes are sensitive to the particular situation of trafficked women and girls and that they are supported and assisted, as appropriate, in making complaints to the police or other authorities without fear and being available when required by the criminal justice system, and to ensure that during this time they have access to gender- and age-sensitive protection and, as appropriate, social, medical, financial and legal assistance, including the possibility of obtaining compensation for damages suffered;

25. Also invites Governments to encourage media providers, including Internet service providers, to adopt or strengthen self-regulatory measures to promote the responsible use of media, particularly the Internet, with a view to eliminating the exploitation of women and children, in particular girls, which could foster trafficking;

26. Invites the business sector, in particular the tourism, travel and telecommunications industries, including mass media organizations, to cooperate with Governments in eliminating trafficking in women and children, in particular girls, including through the dissemination by the media of information regarding the dangers of trafficking, the means used by traffickers, the rights of trafficked persons and the services available to victims of trafficking;

27. Stresses the need for the systematic collection of sex- and age-disaggregated data and comprehensive studies at both the national and the international levels and the development of common methodologies and internationally defined indicators to make it possible to develop relevant and comparable figures, and encourages Governments to enhance information-sharing and data-collection capacity as a way of promoting cooperation to combat the trafficking problem;

28. Invites Governments, United Nations bodies, agencies and special mechanisms, intergovernmental and non-governmental organizations and the private sector to undertake collaborative and joint research and studies on trafficking in women and girls that can serve as a basis for policy formulation or change;

29. Invites Governments, with the support of the United Nations, when necessary, and other intergovernmental organizations, taking into account best practices, to formulate training manuals and other informational materials and provide training for law enforcement, judicial and other relevant officers, and medical and support personnel, with a view to sensitizing them to the special needs of women and girl victims;

30. Encourages Governments, relevant intergovernmental bodies and international organizations to ensure that military, peacekeeping and humanitarian personnel deployed in conflict, post-conflict and other emergency situations are provided with training on conduct that does not promote, facilitate or exploit trafficking in women and girls, including for sexual exploitation, and to raise the awareness of such personnel of the potential risks to victims of conflict and other emergency situations, including natural disasters, of being trafficked;

31. Invites States parties to the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women, the Convention on the Rights of the Child and the International Covenants on Human Rights to include information and statistics on trafficking in women and girls as part of their national reports to their respective committees and to work towards developing a common methodology and statistics to obtain comparable data;

32. Invites States to continue to contribute to the United Nations Voluntary Trust Fund on Contemporary Forms of Slavery and to the United Nations Voluntary Trust Fund for Victims of Trafficking in Persons, Especially Women and Children;

33. Requests the Secretary-General to submit to the General Assembly at its sixty-seventh session a report that compiles successful interventions and strategies, as well as the gaps, in addressing the gender dimensions of the problem of trafficking in persons and provides recommendations on the strengthening of human rights-based, gender- and age-sensitive approaches within comprehensive and balanced efforts to address trafficking in persons.

UN machinery

Convention on the elimination of discrimination against women

As at 31 December, 186 States were parties to the 1979 Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women, adopted by the General Assembly in resolution 34/180 [YUN 1979, p. 895]. At year's end, 60 States had also accepted the amendment to article 20, paragraph 1, of the Convention in respect of the meeting time of the Committee on the Elimination of Discrimination against Women, which was adopted by the States parties in 1995 [YUN 1995, p. 1178]. The amendment would enter into force when accepted by a two-thirds majority of States parties.

The Optional Protocol to the Convention, adopted by the Assembly in resolution 54/4 [YUN 1999, p. 1100] and which entered into force in 2000 [YUN 2000, p. 1123], had 100 States parties as at 31 December. Cambodia acceded on 13 October.

CEDAW

In 2010, the Committee on the Elimination of Discrimination against Women (CEDAW), established in 1982 [YUN 1982, p. 1149] to monitor compliance with the 1979 Convention, held three regular sessions [A/65/38 & A/66/38].

At its forty-fifth session (Geneva, 18 January–5 February) [A/65/38], CEDAW reviewed the initial or periodic reports of Botswana, Egypt, Malawi, the Netherlands, Panama, Ukraine, the United Arab Emirates and Uzbekistan on measures taken to implement the Convention. CEDAW considered a Secretariat report on ways and means of expediting its work [CEDAW/C/2010/45/4]; a Secretary-General's report on the status of submission of reports by States parties under article 18 of the Convention [CEDAW/C/2010/45/2]; a note by the Secretary-General on the reports of specialized agencies [CEDAW/C/2010/45/3]; and a report by ILO on the implementation of the Convention in areas falling within the scope of its activities [CEDAW/C/2010/45/3/Add.4]. The Committee adopted its methodology to assess reports of States parties received under its follow-up procedure [A/65/38 (dec. 45/II)], as well as the report of the follow-up rapporteur [YUN 2009, p. 1152]. It decided that States parties whose reports were to be submitted within two years should be invited to follow the harmonized guidelines on reporting under the international human rights treaties, including the guidelines on a common core document and treaty-specific documents [dec. 45/I] approved at the fifth Inter-Committee meeting of the human rights treaty bodies in 2006 [YUN 2006, p. 769]. The Committee adopted statements on the situation in Haiti [dec. 45/III]; the inclusion of Afghan women in the process of peacebuilding, security and reconstruction in Afghanistan [dec. 45/IV]; the 15-year review of the implementation of the Beijing Declaration and Platform for Action [dec. 45/V]; its relationship with NGOs [dec. 45/VI]; and its relationship with parliamentarians [dec. 45/VII].

At its forty-sixth session (New York, 12–30 July) [A/66/38], CEDAW reviewed the initial or periodic reports of Albania, Argentina, Australia, Fiji, Papua New Guinea, the Russian Federation and Turkey. The Committee considered a report on the status of submission of reports by States parties under article 18 of the Convention [CEDAW/C/2010/46/2 & Corr.1]. It also had before it a note by the Secretary-General on the reports of specialized agencies [CEDAW/C/2010/46/3] and the reports of specialized agencies on the implementation of the Convention in areas falling within the scope of their activities [CEDAW/C/2010/46/3/Add.2,4]. CEDAW adopted a statement [A/66/38 (dec. 46/III)] on the tenth anniversary of Security Council resolution 1325(2000) [YUN 2000, p. 1113]. It decided that its Working Group on Communications under the Optional Protocol to the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women, which convened three times a year for 10 working days, would meet immediately prior to the scheduled sessions of the Committee, except when the election of new experts to the Committee resulted in the expiration of the mandate of Working Group members. In that case, the Working Group would hold its meetings after the session of the Committee at which the members of the Working Group were appointed [A/66/38 (dec. 46/I)]. It extended the mandate of the follow-up rapporteur and her alternate [YUN 2009, p. 1152] until 31 December, and decided that their mandates would be extended for an additional two-year term, ending on 31 December 2012. Thereafter, the duration of the mandate of the rapporteur and his or her alternate would be two years [dec. 46/IV]. The Committee postponed examination of the exceptional report of India until its forty-seventh session [dec. 46/II].

At its forty-seventh session (Geneva, 4–22 October) [A/66/38], CEDAW reviewed the initial or periodic reports of Burkina Faso, the Czech Republic, Malta, Tunisia and Uganda, as well as the exceptional report of India. The Committee considered a report on the status of submission of reports by States parties under article 18 of the Convention [CEDAW/C/2010/47/2]. It also had before it a note by the Secretary-General on the reports of specialized agencies [CEDAW/C/2010/47/3] and the report of specialized agencies on the implementation of the Convention in areas falling within the scope of their activities [CEDAW/C/2010/47/3/Add.1–4]. The Committee decided to include “Follow-up procedures to concluding observations” as a regular item in its agenda [A/66/38 (dec. 47/IV)]; request an exceptional report from the Democratic Republic of the Congo [dec. 47/VIII]; and elaborate a general recommendation on women in armed conflict and post-conflict situations and establish a working group in that regard at its forty-eighth (2011) session [dec. 47/I]. It adopted general recommendations on older women and the protection of their human rights [dec. 47/VI], and on the core obligations of States parties under article 2 of the Convention [dec. 47/V], which identified the general legal obligations of States parties under the Convention and provided ways for them to implement its substantive provisions domestically. The Committee adopted a statement on the establishment of UN-Women [dec. 47/VII] and decided to send congratulatory letters to Michelle Bachelet, Executive Director of UN-Women, and Margot Wallström, Special Representative of the Secretary-General on Sexual Violence in Conflict, on their recent appointments [dec. 47/II].

The Committee endorsed the reports of the Working Group on Communications under the Optional Protocol to the Convention on its sixteenth, seventeenth and eighteenth sessions (annexed to the reports). In respect of issues arising from article 2 of the Optional Protocol, the Committee took action on communication No. 18/2008; decided on the admissibility of communication No. 19/2008 [dec. 47/III]; and decided to register a new case as communication No. 25/2010.

On 21 December, by decision 65/533, the Assembly took note of the report of CEDAW on its forty-fifth session [A/65/38].

Commission on the Status of Women

The Commission on the Status of Women, at its fifty-fourth session (New York, 1–12 March) [E/2010/27], recommended to the Economic and Social Council the adoption of a draft resolution on the situation of and assistance to Palestinian women (see p. 1171), a draft decision containing the declaration on the occasion of the fifteenth anniversary of the Fourth World Conference on Women (see p. 1136), and a draft decision on the report of the Commission's fifty-fourth session and the provisional agenda and documentation for its fifty-fifth (2011) session. As part of its priority theme for the session, the Commission conducted a review of the Beijing Declaration and Platform for Action [YUN 1995, p. 1170] and the outcomes of the twenty-third special session of the General Assembly (Beijing+5) [YUN 2000, p. 1084] and adopted a resolution submitting the declaration on the occasion of the fifteenth anniversary of the Fourth World Conference on Women to the Council for transmission to the General Assembly for endorsement [E/2010/27 (res. 54/1)]. It also transmitted to the Council, as input for its 2010 annual ministerial review, the summaries of the high-level round table and panel discussions convened during its session in the context of its priority theme [dec. 54/101] (see p. 1135). The Commission brought to the Council's attention a decision by which it took note of the UNIFEM report on its activities to eliminate violence against women [A/HRC/13/71-E/CN.6/2010/8] and the Secretary-General's report on the joint workplan of DAW and OHCHR [A/HRC/13/70-E/CN.6/2010/7], as well as resolutions it had adopted on women, the girl child and HIV and AIDS [E/2010/27 (res. 54/2)] (see p. 1140); the release of women and children taken hostage, including those subsequently imprisoned, in armed conflicts [res. 54/3] (see p. 1159); women's economic empowerment [res. 54/4] (see p. 1167); eliminating maternal mortality and morbidity through the empowerment of women [res. 54/5] (see p. 1143); ending female genital mutilation [res. 54/7] (see p. 1144); and strengthening the institutional arrangements of the United Nations for support of gender equality and the empowerment of women by consolidating the four existing offices into a composite entity [res. 54/6] (see p. 1179).

By decision 2010/233 of 20 July, the Council took note of the Commission's report on its fifty-fourth session and approved the provisional agenda for its fifty-fifth (2011) session.

Communication. In an 8 November letter [E/CN.6/2011/10] to the Commission Chairperson, the Economic and Social Council President summarized the outcome of the Council's 2010 substantive session and annual ministerial review (see p. 1135) and attached a list of resolutions adopted by the Council calling for action by its functional commissions.

Other reports. Documents issued in 2010, to be addressed during the Commission's 2011 session, included reports of the Secretary-General on women, the girl child and HIV and AIDS [E/CN.6/2011/7]; progress in mainstreaming a gender perspective in the development, implementation and evaluation of national policies and programmes [E/CN.6/2011/5]; the situation of and assistance to Palestinian women [E/CN.6/2011/6]; access and participation of women and girls in education, training, science and technology, including for the promotion of women's equal access to full employment and decent work [E/CN.6/2011/3]; and a note by the Secretariat on implementing the internationally agreed goals and commitments in regard to education [E/CN.6/2011/11].

Communications on the status of women

At a closed meeting on 10 March [E/2010/27], the Commission considered the report of the Working Group on Communications on the Status of Women

[E/CN.6/2010/CRP.4]. The Group had considered 45 confidential communications received by DAW, of which 21 had been replied to by Governments. No non-confidential communications were received. The Group observed that the communications most frequently concerned sexual violence, including rape, gang rape, forced prostitution, and incitement to sexual violence through gender stereotyping and the promotion of rape in new media, and failure by States to prevent such violations, provide protection and support for victims, and punish the perpetrators; other forms of violence, including domestic violence (especially domestic violence committed with firearms), trafficking, forced and early marriage and harmful traditional practices, with a lack of due diligence by States to investigate, prosecute and punish perpetrators; abuse of power by military and law enforcement personnel, humiliation and lack of due process; physical and psychological threats and pressure on victims of violence, their families and witnesses by private individuals and law enforcement officials to prevent them from filing complaints, or to force retraction of complaints; inhumane treatment in detention and inadequate conditions of imprisonment for women, and failure by States to address such situations; serious and systematic violations of the human rights of women and girls, including rape, torture, killings and so-called “honour” crimes, as well as failure by States to prevent such violations, prosecute and punish perpetrators, and provide protection and support for victims and their families; harassment and death threats against female human rights defenders, and disproportionate penalties and restrictions on the rights to freedom of expression of female human rights defenders and of the press when reporting on women’s rights violations, by State and non-State actors as a means of pressuring them to stop their work, as well as failure by States to prevent such violations, provide protection to victims, and prosecute and punish the perpetrators; violations of the right to health, including sexual and reproductive health, of women, especially indigenous, low-income and marginalized women; and legislation and practices that discriminated against women in the areas of civil and political rights, especially the right to privacy, freedom of expression, freedom of movement, and participation in decision-making processes and in public life on an equal basis with men.

During its consideration of communications, the Working Group expressed concern about violence against women and girls and mistreatment of woman human rights defenders; forced and early marriage and harmful traditional practices; the climate of impunity and abuse of power, including where violence against women was perpetrated or condoned by law enforcement personnel; the failure of States to exercise due diligence; and violations of the right of women to health, including sexual and reproductive health.

The Working Group was encouraged that some Governments had investigated the allegations and taken steps in response, including by enacting new legislation, introducing policies to better protect and assist women and victims of violence, developing national plans of action, introducing training modules to sensitize government officials to women’s issues, and improving public awareness to promote gender equality and the advancement of women.

UN-Women

In July, the General Assembly established the United Nations Entity for Gender Equality and the Empowerment of Women (to be known as UN-Women) (resolution 64/289) (see p. 1396). The new entity, to become fully operational on 1 January 2011, would combine the mandates and assets of the four existing gender equality entities—OSAGI, DAW, UNIFEM and the International Research and Training Institute for the Advancement of Women (INSTRAW). On 14 September, the Secretary General appointed Michelle Bachelet (Chile) as the head of UN-Women.

Report of Secretary-General. In response to resolution 63/311 [YUN 2009, p. 1368], the Secretary-General submitted a January report [A/64/588] in which he presented a comprehensive proposal for a composite entity for gender equality and the empowerment of women. Included in the report was the mission statement for the new entity, an organizational chart, and provisions related to the funding and establishment of an Executive Board to oversee operations. The report proposed that the composite entity be a subsidiary organ of the General Assembly, to which it would report through the Economic and Social Council. The Commission on the Status of Women would play a crucial role in guiding the entity’s work. Combining the mandates and assets of the four existing gender equality entities—namely, OSAGI, DAW, UNIFEM, and INSTRAW—the composite entity would be the centre of the gender equality architecture of the UN system. To ensure clarity of roles and responsibilities and support for a more coherent, scaled-up response, work would be conducted through the United Nations System Chief Executives Board for Coordination at the global level, the regional directors’ teams and the Regional Coordination Mechanism at the regional level, and the resident coordinator system at the country level.

The composite entity would have eight functions: provide support to UN bodies (the Commission on the Status of Women, the Economic and Social Council, the General Assembly and the Security Council) in which commitments, norms and policy recommendations on gender equality and gender mainstreaming were discussed and agreed upon; support national efforts to promote and enhance gender equality and women's empowerment through country-driven programming, working with UN country teams, including on gender mainstreaming, capacity development and the provision of targeted technical cooperation in line with national priorities; undertake global, regional and national advocacy efforts on issues critical to gender equality and women's empowerment to ensure that under-recognized and under-resourced issues receive national, regional and global attention; support Member States in implementing and monitoring the 12 critical areas of the Beijing Platform for Action, the outcomes of the twenty-third special session of the Assembly, Security Council resolutions 1325(2000) and 1820(2008) and other resolutions, as well as the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women; undertake research and analytical work to support overall objectives, and act as a hub/centre of knowledge and experience on gender equality and women's empowerment from throughout the UN system; lead and coordinate UN system strategies, policies and actions on gender equality and women's empowerment to promote system-wide gender mainstreaming; strengthen UN accountability, including through oversight, monitoring and reporting on system-wide performance on gender equality; and monitor and report on system-wide compliance with intergovernmental mandates on gender balance.

With regard to the funding implications of the new entity, from assessed and voluntary contributions, the Secretary-General suggested that approximately $125 million per annum was needed for a basic staff complement, related operating costs and "start-up" capacity at the country, regional and Headquarters levels, as well as an additional $375 million per annum in the initial phase to respond to country-level requests for UN support.

The report presented two options for establishing the entity's Executive Board. One was to establish an autonomous segment of the UNDP/UNFPA Executive Board, while the other would be to establish a new Executive Board, including a Board secretariat. It was recommended that the Assembly consider deciding on an option to establish the entity's Executive Board; abolishing and liquidating UNIFEM; requesting the Economic and Social Council to abolish INSTRAW; requesting the Council to find ways to establish co-ordination and the regular exchange of information between the Executive Board of the new entity and the Commission to enhance policy coherence; approving the creation of the post of Under-Secretary-General (USG) to head the entity; authorizing the head of the entity to prepare the necessary financial regulations and rules for consideration by the new Executive Board; deciding that costs for the entity's functions should continue to be borne by the regular UN budget; deciding that the costs for the entity's operations should be financed by voluntary contributions; and encouraging Member States in a position to do so to make voluntary contributions towards funding the entity.

Commission action. In a March resolution [E/2010/27 (res. 54/6)], the Commission welcomed resolution 63/311 [YUN 2009, p. 1368] and its provisions on strengthening institutional arrangements for the support of gender equality and the empowerment of women by consolidating the four existing UN offices into a composite entity.

Gender architecture reform. On 2 July, the General Assembly, in resolution 64/289 (see p. 1396) on system-wide coherence, decided to establish the United Nations Entity for Gender Equality and the Empowerment of Women, to be known as UN-Women, to be operational on 1 January 2011. It also decided to establish an Executive Board as the governing body of the Entity. The Assembly, the Economic and Social Council and the Commission would provide policy guidance to the Entity, while the Assembly, the Council and the Executive Board would provide operational policy guidance. The Entity Executive Board would comprise 41 members and would carry out the functions outlined in annex I to resolution 48/162 [YUN 1993, p. 1118]. The Entity would be headed by a USG, to be appointed by the Secretary-General, in consultation with Member States, for a term of four years. The resources required for the Entity's normative intergovernmental processes would be funded from the UN regular budget and approved by the Assembly, while the resources required for the operational intergovernmental processes and activities would be funded from voluntary contributions and approved by the Executive Board. The Assembly decided to dissolve UNIFEM as of 2 July and requested the Council to dissolve INSTRAW as of the date of adoption of the pertinent resolution (see below).

ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL ACTION

On 20 July [meeting 42], the Economic and Social Council adopted resolution 2010/7 [draft: E/2010/L.21] without vote [agenda item 14 (a)].

Strengthening the institutional arrangements for support of gender equality and the empowerment of women

The Economic and Social Council,

Recalling its resolution 1998(LX) of 12 May 1976 establishing the International Research and Training Institute for the Advancement of Women,

Recalling also General Assembly resolution 64/289 of 2 July 2010, in particular the section entitled "Strengthening the institutional arrangements for support of gender equality and the empowerment of women", and the establishment, as a composite entity, of the United Nations

Entity for Gender Equality and the Empowerment of Women, to be known as UN-Women,

Noting the transitional arrangements set out in paragraphs 81 to 88 of resolution 64/289, in particular paragraphs 82, 83, 84, 87 and 88,

Expressing its deep gratitude for the support offered by the host country during all the years of operation of the Institute, Decides to dissolve the International Research and Training Institute for the Advancement of Women as of the date of the adoption of the present resolution.

Election of UN-Women Executive Board. On 9 September, the Council decided that the election of the 41 members of the UN-Women Executive Board would be held as soon as possible and by early November 2010. It also decided to discuss further the issue of the staggering of terms, so as to reach an agreement on the modalities prior to the elections (decision 2010/261).

ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL ACTION

On 25 October [meeting 49], the Economic and Social Council adopted resolution 2010/35 [draft: E/2010/L.40] without vote [agenda item 1].

Procedures for the election of the members of the Executive Board of the United Nations Entity for Gender Equality and the Empowerment of Women (UN-Women)

The Economic and Social Council,

Recalling General Assembly resolution 64/289 of 2 July 2010 and Economic and Social Council decision 2010/261 of 9 September 2010,

Noting that the Executive Board of the United Nations Entity for Gender Equality and the Empowerment of Women (UN-Women) shall consist of forty-one members, as follows:

- (a) Ten from African States,
- (b) Ten from Asian States,
- (c) Four from Eastern European States,
- (d) Six from Latin American and Caribbean States,
- (e) Five from Western European and other States,
- (f) Six from contributing countries,

1. Decides that the term of membership of the thirty-five members of the Executive Board of UN-Women elected from the five regional groups, pursuant to paragraphs 60 (a) to (e) of General Assembly resolution 64/289, shall be staggered and that such a decision shall be taken for the first election by the drawing of lots, for members to serve two-year and three-year terms, as follows:

Regional groups	Number of seats for
	Two years	Three years	Total
African States	5	5	10
Asian States	5	5	10
Eastern European States	2	2	4
Latin American and Caribbean States	3	3	6
Western European and other States	2	3	5
TOTAL seats	17	18	35

2. Also decides that the six contributing countries serving as members of the Executive Board, pursuant to paragraph 60 (f) of General Assembly resolution 64/289, shall be elected for a three-year term;

3. Further decides that the term of office of the forty-one members of the Executive Board elected at the first election shall begin on the date of the election and run until 31 December of the year in which their term ends;

4. Decides that in subsequent elections members shall be elected for a term of office of three years, beginning on 1 January of the year following their election and running until 31 December of the year in which their term ends.

UN-Women financing. In response to Assembly resolution 64/289 (see p. 1396), the Secretary-General submitted an October report [A/65/531] containing a revised proposal for the use of regular UN budget resources approved for the biennium 2010–2011 for the normative support functions of UN-Women, including options for administrative arrangements; an organizational chart; and a new appropriation under section 37 of the 2010–2011 budget, entitled UN-Women, with a proposed modality of budget implementation. Recalling the Secretary-General's previous estimate of $500 million in funding requirements for the UN-Women start-up phase, the report provided information on the expected levels of total resources required for 2011, estimated at $500,939,900. The report included information on current and estimated future voluntary contributions to UN-Women. A proposal for the use of voluntary resources for the support budget for the biennium 2010–2011, together with a revised draft strategic plan and organizational chart, would be submitted in a separate report to the UN-Women Executive Board.

UN-Women would be financed from two sources, namely, the regular UN budget for its normative intergovernmental processes and voluntary contributions for its operational activities. It would have financial regulations and rules similar to those of other UN funds and programmes and consistent with the UN Financial Regulations and Rules. The head of UN-Women would present a proposal for financial regulations for consideration and adoption by the Executive Board, and would appoint and administer the Entity's staff. Two possible administrative arrangements for UN-Women were proposed. Option 1 would be a unified system allowing for the integrated administration of all regular budget resources based on the use of a grant modality. Under that option, the normal budget review and approval processes, as well as the normal reporting processes, would be maintained, thereby ensuring the Assembly's control of posts and non-post resources funded from the regular budget. After approval of the biennial budget by the Assembly, the regular budget resources would be provided to UN-Women in the form of a grant, which would be administered and disbursed by the Entity in accordance with its own financial regulations and rules and using its own enterprise resource planning system. Option 2 would be the use of two separate administrative systems, one for the regular budget and one for voluntary contributions. The Secretary-General requested that the Assembly approve the grant modality of budget implementation (option 1) under the new regular budget section 37, UN-Women.

To create a new regular budget section to finance the normative and analytical activities of UN-Women, the Secretary-General proposed a reduction of the initial 2010–2011 appropriation approved in Assembly resolution 64/244 A [YUN 2009, p. 1403] for section 9, economic and social affairs. Noting that the initial appropriation was in the amount of $166,217,100, he proposed a reduction of $6,615,700, representing the appropriation for the 2011 meetings of the Commission of the Status of Women ($115,800); the 2011 resources for subprogramme 2 of section 9, Gender issues and advancement of women ($6,346,900); and the proportional share of resources under programme support related to backstopping activities of subprogramme 2 of section 9 of the programme budget for the biennium 2010–2011 ($153,000). As a result, the revised 2010–2011 appropriation would amount to $159,601,400. The amount of $6,615,700 would be transferred to the new budget section 37, UN-Women, and the additional appropriation of $367,800, representing the 2011 costs of the establishment of three new posts (1 USG, 1 D-2 and 1 General Service) would also be required, bringing the total proposed 2011 appropriation to $6,983,500. Recalling that a contingency fund had been established for each biennium to accommodate additional expenditure derived from legislative mandates not provided for in the programme budget, the Secretary-General proposed that the additional appropriation of $367,800 for the three new posts represented a charge against the contingency fund. Further, an amount of $62,300 under section 36, Staff assessment, would be offset by an equivalent amount under section 1, Income from staff assessment. The report elaborated on the proposed new section of the programme budget by providing tables and analysis on UN-Women's main areas of work and subprogrammes; capacity gaps at the regional and country levels; post requirements and staffing considerations; and provisions and resource requirements related to its policymaking organs, executive direction and management, programme support activities, and non-post contractual and general operations. The Secretary-General requested that the Assembly approve the transfers and appropriations detailed above, as well as the establishment of the new posts and the proposed programme of work and resource requirements under section 37, UN-Women.

In November [A/65/593], the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions (ACABQ), having considered the Secretary-General's report, concurred with his recommendations.

On 24 December, the Assembly, in resolution 65/259 (see p. 1429) on questions relating to the programme budget for the biennium 2010–2011, requested the Secretary-General to elaborate, in the proposed programme budget for the biennium 2012–2013, the normative intergovernmental processes undertaken by UN-Women, in order to specify whether the Entity's activities would support or be considered normative intergovernmental processes, operational intergovernmental processes and operational activities, or a combination thereof. In that regard, the Secretary-General was requested to reflect, in the proposed programme budget for the biennium 2012–2013, on the necessary budget allocation resulting from such information to ensure an appropriate funding source for the required resources. The Assembly approved the use of a grant arrangement for the UN-Women regular budget portion and decided that posts financed by the regular budget grant would be requested on a post-by-post basis in future budget proposals. It decided to establish three new posts (1 USG, 1 D-2 and 1 General Service) under section 37, UN-Women, of the programme budget for the biennium 2010–2011; approve an additional amount of $430,100 under the programme budget for the biennium 2010–2011, comprising $367,800 under section 37, and $62,300 under section 36, Staff assessment, to be offset by a corresponding amount under income section 1, Income from staff assessment; and that the additional amount of $430,100 would represent a charge against the biennium 2010–2011 contingency fund.

Report of Executive Director. In response to resolution 64/289 (see above), the UN-Women Executive Director submitted to the Commission on the Status of Women her first annual report [E/CN.6/2011/2] on the normative aspects of UN-Women's work and its implementation of policy guidance provided by the Commission. The report discussed the Executive Director's vision and strategic direction for UN-Women, and the administrative and institutional changes needed to consolidate the previous four gender equality offices into a structure integrating the role of leading, coordinating and promoting UN accountability on gender equality and the empowerment of women. UN-Women's strategy would focus on expanding support to Member States at the national level in line with national priorities; strengthening coherence between the normative support provided to global intergovernmental processes and the technical and thematic advice provided to national partners at the country level; and providing support for gender mainstreaming across the UN system.

The change-management process was under way, and the Executive Director expected significant progress by the end of 2010 in terms of transitioning staff into UN-Women and establishing new work units. The UN-Women Executive Board had been elected by the Economic and Social Council on 10 November, and its organizational session was scheduled for 15 December. She had initiated a field assessment exercise to provide a basis for determining the specific capacities required in different country/regional typologies to ensure the effective implementation of UN-Women's mandate. Noting that the Commission had been requested by the Assembly to work with the UN-Women Executive Board to provide guidance and direction, she concluded that, for the benefit of women and girls everywhere, such interaction should aim to close the gaps between intergovernmental goals and commitments and their effective implementation.

Executive Board meeting. The Executive Board of UN-Women, at its organizational session (New York, 15 and 22 December) [UNW/2011/1], elected the five members of its Bureau for 2011, agreed to hold its first regular session in January 2011 and approved the tentative workplan for that session.

UN Development Fund for Women

The Secretary-General, in August, transmitted to the General Assembly a report on UNIFEM activities in 2009 [YUN 2009, p. 1157]. It was the last report submitted in fulfilment of the mandate contained in resolution 39/125 [YUN 1984, p. 893], as UNIFEM was dissolved and integrated into UN-Women in accordance with Assembly resolution 64/289 (see p. 1396).

On 21 December, the Assembly took note of the note by the Secretary-General transmitting the report on the 2009 activities of UNIFEM (decision 65/533).

UNDP/UNFPA Board action. On 22 January, the UNDP/UNFPA Executive Board [E/2010/35 (dec. 2010/6)] took note of the functions, management results, indicators and resource requirements of the UNIFEM budget estimates for the biennium 2010–2011 [DP/2010/7]. It approved gross resources in the amount of $39.8 million, representing the total biennial support budget for 2010–2011 funded from regular resources and noted that the estimated $7.1 million income from support costs would be used to offset the gross regular resources appropriation, resulting in an estimated “net” regular resources appropriation of $32.7 million. It approved the amount of $1.6 million from regular resources to cover United Nations-mandated security costs, and $0.6 million for costs related to the adoption of the International Public Sector Accounting Standards [YUN 2006, p. 1583] and enhancement of the Atlas system [YUN 2004, p. 1082], as described in the budget estimates. The Board decided that the appropriated amount would be used to achieve the results specified in the functions identified in the budget estimates, and requested UNIFEM to monitor the levels of income from all sources, particularly other resources, and to use prudence in planning staffing increases. It requested the Executive Director to improve the UNIFEM biennial support budget, 2012–2013, as a step towards a single, integrated budget for UNIFEM, by improving the linkages between resources and results; providing summary explanations of any proposed budgetary changes and their attribution to volume and to nominal and statutory changes; and providing information on cost recovery by describing how projected cost recoveries from extrabudgetary resources were calculated, including updated information on UNIFEM variable and fixed indirect costs to allow for appropriate analysis of the cost-recovery rate. On the same date [E/2010/35 (dec. 2010/12)], the Board took note of the ACABQ report on the UNDP and UNIFEM estimates for the biennial support budget, 2010–2011 [DP/2010/4], which contained observations on progress made by UNIFEM in improving the results-based format of the biennial support budget.

On 30 June [E/2010/35 (dec. 2010/20)], the Board took note of the annual report of the UNIFEM Executive Director [DP/2010/29 & Corr.1] and its results-based focus and requested UNIFEM to include in future reports more elements related to the analysis of results achieved, lessons learned and remaining challenges. It also noted the ongoing discussions regarding the creation of a new gender entity and requested UNIFEM to take all necessary actions to ensure that the modalities regarding transitional arrangements were completed within the deadline agreed upon by the Assembly.

Children, youth and ageing persons

The United Nations Children's Fund (UNICEF) in 2010 continued to work to give children the best start in life and to overcome poverty, violence, disease and discrimination. In its activities, UNICEF cooperated with 150 countries, areas and territories and focused on five main areas: young child survival and development; basic education and gender equality; HIV/AIDS and children; child protection from violence, exploitation and abuse; and policy advocacy and partnerships for children's rights. Emergency response services were provided in 98 countries, with the greatest efforts addressing the aftermath of natural disasters in Haiti and Pakistan. On 1 May, the new Executive Director, Anthony Lake, started his work with UNICEF, visiting 22 countries in which the Fund worked during his first year in office.

The International Year of Youth: Dialogue and Mutual Understanding (12 August 2010–11 August 2011) was celebrated worldwide through a variety of events, conferences and initiatives. Its aim was to promote communication across generations, cultures, religions and civilizations, championing the ideals of peace, respect for human rights and solidarity. The UN system collaborated on youth-related activities at all levels in order to implement the World Programme of Action for Youth. Seventeen UN entities working for youth development made efforts to strengthen the implementation of HIV programmes, support policies improving job creation and seek protection for disadvantaged adolescent girls.

The Secretary-General submitted two reports on the follow-up to the 2002 Second World Assembly on Ageing, one focusing on national efforts and the other reviewing the status of the social situation, well-being, participation in development and rights of older persons worldwide. The United Nations continued to implement the 2002 Madrid International Plan of Action on Ageing, and the Secretary-General reported on the implementation of the Plan, mechanisms to improve it and modalities for its review. In July, the Economic and Social Council made recommendations to Member States, the international community and UN system organizations on further implementation of the Plan. In December, the General Assembly established an open-ended working group to strengthen the protection of the human rights of older persons.

Children

Follow-up to 2002 General Assembly special session on children

In response to General Assembly resolution 59/261 [YUN 2004, p. 779], the Secretary-General in August submitted his eighth report [A/65/226] on the follow-up to the Assembly's twenty-seventh special session on children [YUN 2002, p. 1168], in which he assessed the steps taken in 2009 to achieve the commitments set out in the document "A world fit for children", adopted at the special session by resolution S-27/2 [ibid., p. 1169]. The report highlighted the gaps and the strategic shift necessary to meet unmet goals. Failure to achieve the goals would undermine efforts to attain by 2015 the Millennium Development Goals (MDGs), most of which related to children. The Secretary-General outlined progress and room for growth in the document's four major areas: promoting healthy lives; providing quality education; protecting against abuse, exploitation and violence; and combating HIV/AIDS.

In the area of health, deaths in children under the age of five declined, but neonatal mortality reduction had been far less successful. Progress was achieved in reducing child mortality, attributable to increased scale-up of specific interventions including measles immunization, insecticide-treated mosquito nets and vitamin A supplementation. There had been mixed progress on MDG 5 to reduce maternal mortality by three quarters by 2015. The food and financial crisis had provided an opportunity to highlight nutrition in the global discourse. While greater access to safe drinking water had been provided, huge urban/rural disparities remained.

Regarding education, gender disparities declined; however, inequalities and multiple forms of exclusion related to poverty, conflict, natural disaster, urban/rural disparities, disability, HIV/AIDS, ethnicity, religion and caste were persistent and often hidden in many countries. While significant progress was made in achieving education in emergencies and post-crisis situations, the impact of the global economic crisis on education was of major concern.

With respect to the protection of children against abuse, exploitation and violence, positive trends were evident as countries began to map and assess their child protection systems, comprehensively support families and provide alternative care of children. The approval of the United Nations Guidelines for the Alternative Care of Children without Parental Care [YUN 2009, p. 1161] had given extra impetus to develop standards of care and provide technical recommendations to improve care in a number of countries. In 2009, the first Special Representative of the Secretary-General on violence against children was appointed [YUN 2009, p. 735]. That same year, several UN entities and their partners launched a major global initiative on preventing sexual violence against girls.

Although the number of newly HIV-infected persons had decreased since 1996, HIV/AIDS remained globally the leading cause of death for women of reproductive age. Some 70 per cent of people in need of antiretroviral treatment did not have access to it, and only 30 per cent of young males and 19 per cent of young females in developing countries had accurate knowledge of HIV. In sub-Saharan Africa, the area of major concern, an estimated 14.1 million minors had lost one or both parents to AIDS by 2008.

The Secretary-General recommended the adoption of strategies, policies and programmes that would accelerate progress, with a focus on the most vulnerable, underserved children and the poorest communities; and pointed out that equity-focused strategies, such as community-based treatment of the main childhood illnesses and cash transfers for children affected by HIV/AIDS, had proven effective.

On 21 December, the General Assembly took note of the report by resolution 65/197 on "Rights of the child" (see p. 647).

By Assembly resolution 65/1 of 22 September (see p. 815), Heads of State and Government affirmed their engagement to achieve the MDGs, including Goal 2 on achieving universal primary education, Goal 4 on reducing child mortality, and Goal 5 on improving maternal health.

The Moscow Framework for Action and Cooperation—adopted at the World Conference on Early Childhood Care and Education, convened by the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization (UNESCO) (Moscow, 27–29 September)—called on Governments to mobilize stronger commitment to early childhood care and education; reinforce effective programme delivery; and encourage mutual cooperation and exchange.

United Nations Children's Fund

In 2010, the United Nations Children's Fund (UNICEF) remained committed to achieving the MDGs [YUN 2000, p. 51] and the goals contained in the document "A world fit for children", adopted by the General Assembly in resolution S-27/2 [YUN 2002, p. 1169]. It performed essential functions as the only multilateral institution entrusted solely with advancing children's rights, and strove to make progress in reducing inequities as the gap between rich and poor children widened, even in countries that showed overall progress towards meeting the MDGs. In line with its 2006–2009 medium-term strategic plan (MTSP) [YUN 2005, p. 1284], extended by two years by the Executive Board in 2009 [YUN 2009, p. 1173], UNICEF focused its work on five priority areas: young child survival and development; basic education and gender equality; HIV/AIDS and children; child protection; preventing and responding to violence, exploitation and abuse; and policy advocacy and partnerships for children's rights.

The annual UNICEF flagship publication, The State of the World's Children 2010 [Sales No. E.10.XX.1], focused on child rights to mark the twentieth anniversary of the Convention on the Rights of the Child, adopted by the General Assembly in resolution 44/25 [YUN 1989, p. 560]. The report examined the Convention's evolution, progress achieved on child rights, remaining challenges, and actions to be taken to ensure that its promise became a reality for all children. The Convention was the most widely ratified international human rights treaty in history. The era of the Convention had seen marked advances in child survival and development, expanded efforts to protect children, and a growing recognition of the importance of empowering children to participate in their own development and protection. Challenges for the advancement of child rights included climate change, the financial crisis and population shifts. The report called for the strengthening and enforcement of laws in favour of child rights.

In 2010, UNICEF cooperated with 150 countries, areas and territories: 44 in sub-Saharan Africa, 35 in Latin America and the Caribbean, 35 in Asia, 16 in the Middle East and North Africa, and 20 in Central and Eastern Europe and the Commonwealth of Independent States. The bulk of UNICEF's programme assistance expenditures went to sub-Saharan Africa and to initiatives for child survival and development.

UNICEF operations in 2010 were described in the UNICEF Annual Report 2010, the UNICEF annual report to the Economic and Social Council [E/2011/6] and the annual report of the Executive Director on progress and achievements against the Fund's extended 2006–2013 MTSP [E/ICEF/2011/9].

The UNICEF Executive Board held its first regular session of 2010 (12–14 January), its annual session (1–4 June) and its second regular session (7–9 September), all in New York [E/2010/34/Rev.1], during which it adopted 21 decisions.

By decision 2010/251 of 23 July, the Economic and Social Council took note of the report of the UNICEF Executive Board on its first regular session [E/2010/34 (Part I)] and the addendum to the report on the joint meeting of the Executive Boards of UNICEF, the United Nations Development Programme

(UNDP)/United Nations Population Fund (UNFPA) and the World Food Programme (WFP) [E/2010/34 (Part I)/Add.1]; the extract from the Board's report on its annual session of 2010 [E/2010/L.7]; and the annual report of UNICEF to the Economic and Social Council covering the year 2009 [E/2010/6-E/ICEF/2010/3], which the Fund's Executive Board had taken note of on 14 January [E/2010/34/Rev.1 (dec. 2010/1)].

On 9 September [dec. 2010/11], the Executive Board adopted the programme of work for its 2011 sessions [E/ICEF/2010/16].

New Executive Director. Following consultations with the UNICEF Executive Board, the Secretary-General on 16 March announced the appointment of Anthony Lake (United States) as the agency's new Executive Director, and expressed his gratitude to Ann Veneman (United States) for her commitment in leading UNICEF for five years [SG/A/1226].

Programme policies

In his annual report to the Economic and Social Council, covering 2010 [E/2011/6-E/ICEF/2011/3], the UNICEF Executive Director provided an analysis of achievements against the MTSP for 2006–2013 to promote sustained and equitable results for children and women. The report focused on the issues emphasized in General Assembly resolution 62/208 [YUN 2007, p. 877], including capacity development, South-South cooperation and gender mainstreaming. It also reviewed funding for operational activities for development; strategic partnerships; contributions to national capacity development and development effectiveness; coherence, effectiveness and relevance of operational activities; evaluation of operational activities; and follow-up to international conferences.

Medium-term strategic plan (2006–2013)

The Executive Director, in his annual report on progress and achievements against the MTSP (2006–2013) [E/ICEF/2011/9], took stock of changes in the global context affecting children; reviewed progress made towards achieving the MDGs; elaborated on strategic shifts in the MTSP; and presented results in each focus area of the plan—young child survival and development; basic education and gender equality; HIV/AIDS and children; child protection from violence, exploitation and abuse; and policy advocacy and partnerships for children's rights. The report also covered humanitarian action, supporting and cross-cutting strategies, and the Fund's organizational performance in 2010.

The report stated that, with the deadline to achieve the MDGs only five years away, there were widening disparities in achievement of developmental goals among regions and among groups within countries. Children and families who were poor and living in rural and in some cases low-income urban areas faced disadvantages affecting their survival, nutrition and access to education and basic services. That led UNICEF and many partners to refocus on the inclusion of the poorest families and most vulnerable communities in meeting the MDGs by 2015. In 2010, UNICEF entered into partnership with the United Nations Global Compact and Save the Children to develop child rights and business principles. The year saw the start of a push to increase the attention paid by UNICEF to the rights of children with disabilities as part of its refocus on equity and a more systematic reflection of the principles of the Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities [YUN 2006, p. 785] across all MTSP focus areas. The Fund sought to become more strategic and coherent in its approach to developing and maintaining partnerships at all levels, including with non-governmental organizations (NGOs) and its more than 600 corporate partners and donors.

Updated annexes to the MTSP were published in March [E/ICEF/2010/10]. Those included the revised results framework, the integrated monitoring and evaluation framework and key performance indicators for the MTSP.

On 4 June [E/2010/34/Rev.1 (dec. 2010/6)], the Board endorsed the general conclusion of the in-depth review of the MTSP, including the adjustments envisaged for the remaining period, and requested UNICEF to include in its annual report concrete steps to build on lessons learned and recommendations for future directions.

Medium-term financial plan (2010–2013)

At its second regular session, the Executive Board considered the MTSP planned financial estimates for the period 2010–2013 [E/ICEF/2010/AB/L.7]. Income decreases of 1 per cent for 2010 and 7 per cent for 2011 were expected. Growth was expected to resume in the following years. UNICEF recommended that the Board approve the framework of planned financial estimates for 2010–2013. It also recommended approval of the preparation of programme expenditure submissions to the Board of up to $1,190 million from regular resources in 2011, subject to the availability of resources and the continued validity of those planned financial estimates. UNICEF recommended the suspension of the annual transfer of $30 million to the after-service health insurance reserve for 2010 and 2011 due to the reduction in projected income from the global recession.

The Board authorized those actions on 9 September [dec. 2010/19], and requested UNICEF to continue making annual transfers to the after-service health insurance reserve if end-of-year unexpended balances for regular resources so permitted.

Programme matters

In June, the United Republic of Tanzania submitted to the Executive Board's annual session a draft resolution [E/ICEF/2010/CRP.17] by which it requested to present a draft common country programme document to the Executive Boards of UNDP/UNFPA, UNICEF and WFP. On 4 June [dec. 2010/9], the Executive Board decided to consider the document on an exceptional basis.

The UNICEF secretariat, at the annual session in June, informed the Board [E/ICEF/2010/P/L.15] of the one-year extensions of country programmes approved by the Executive Director for Albania, Bangladesh, Cape Verde, Chad, Ghana, Guyana, Kyrgyzstan, Mauritania, Oman, Peru, the Russian Federation, South Africa, Ukraine and Viet Nam. It also presented the reasons for the proposed two-year extensions of the country programmes for Nepal, Namibia, Pakistan and Sierra Leone as well as the second one-year extensions for Chile and Iran, and requested the Board to approve them. On 4 June [dec. 2010/10], the Board took note of the one-year extensions of the country programmes approved by the Executive Director, and approved the two-year extensions as well as the second one-year extensions for those States.

The Executive Board on 9 September [dec. 2010/14], on the recommendation of the Executive Director, approved a five-year extension of the cooperation with the PolioPlus programme of Rotary International for the period 2011 to 2015, urging all parties involved to increase coordination and efforts towards polio eradication. On the same day, the Vaccine Independence Initiative was extended [dec. 2010/15] for the period 2011 to 2015 for an amount of up to $10 million, subject to availability of specific-purpose contributions.

Joint programming

The joint meeting of the Executive Boards of UNICEF, UNDP/UNFPA and WFP (New York, 15 and 18 January) discussed the strengthening of country-level response to gender-based violence; climate change and development; food security and safety nets in the context of the recovery from the economic and financial crisis; and stocktaking on the MDGs.

Regarding the country programme document for Tanzania (see above), the Boards were told that a single business plan—a United Nations Development Assistance Plan—would be developed for 2011–2015, capturing the entire range of UN activities in the country, resulting in a more coherent strategy. A common country programme document would be presented to the Executive Boards in 2011.

UNDP, UNFPA and UNICEF presented a road map [E/ICEF/2010/AB/L.10] to an integrated budget from 2014 onwards, in response to requests from their Executive Boards in 2009. Taking note of the joint report on 9 September [dec. 2010/20], the Executive Board endorsed the proposed cost definitions and classifications of activities and associated costs for application effective in the 2012–2013 biennium, with amendments. UNICEF, UNDP and UNFPA were requested to reflect the new classifications in their financial statements and annual financial reviews presented in 2013 and onwards, and to work towards presenting a single integrated budget for each organization starting in 2014.

Programmes by region

In 2010 [E/ICEF/2011/9], UNICEF programme assistance expenditure totalled $3,355 million, of which $1,760 million (52.5 per cent) went to sub-Saharan Africa, $890 million (26.5 per cent) to Asia, $313 million (9.3 per cent) to the Americas and the Caribbean, $141 million (4.2 per cent) to the Middle East and North Africa, $99 million (3.0 per cent) to Central and Eastern Europe and the Commonwealth of Independent States, and $152 million (4.2 per cent) to interregional programmes. Approximately 51 per cent was spent in least developed countries and 61 per cent in countries with high or very high child mortality rates.

In September [E/2010/34/Rev.1], the Executive Board had before it the summaries of the midterm reviews of country programmes in Eastern and Southern Africa [E/ICEF/2010/P/L.16 & Corr.1], West and Central Africa [E/ICEF/2010/P/L.17], Latin America and the Caribbean [E/ICEF/2010/P/L.18], East Asia and the Pacific [E/ICEF/2010/P/L.19], South Asia [E/ICEF/2010/P/L.20], Central and Eastern Europe and the Commonwealth of Independent States [E/ICEF/2010/P/L.21], and the Middle East and North Africa [E/ICEF/2010/P/L.26]. The reports reviewed progress made, resources used, constraints faced, and adjustments made in country programmes.

Field visits

In a joint field visit to Rwanda (20–30 March) [DP-FPA/2010/CRP.1-E/ICEF/2010/CRP.12], a delegation of Executive Board members met with Government officials and development partners, noting that remarkable progress had been made since the 1994 genocide, especially concerning the MDGs. However, it found many challenges due to the country's complex past and its status as a least developed country. The delegation observed operations and programmes, gaining insight into issues including inter-agency collaboration and coordination, donor coordination and partnerships with civil society and the private sector. It noted that the target on gender equality in primary and secondary education had been achieved and that a gender-based violence desk, created with support from UNDP, UNFPA, UNICEF and the United Nations Development Fund for Women, provided a legal framework and tools to protect girls and women.

Executive Board Bureau members visited China (5–11 April) [E/ICEF/2010/CRP.11] to gain a first-hand understanding of UNICEF work at the country level and demonstrate concrete examples of UNICEF co-operation with the Government and other partners, including the UN country team. They held meetings in Beijing with the UNICEF country office, senior-level government counterparts, members of the UN country team and key donors, and conducted a field trip to the Ningxia Hui Autonomous Region, visiting UNICEF projects. The delegation took note of the key issues facing children and women in the country. While China's achievements in child health and education were notable, the income disparities and the achievements of the MDGs were uneven. Participants noted the positive impact of the maternal and child health-care model developed with UNICEF support, as well as the pilot projects for the care of women and children affected by AIDS and the UNICEF-supported "Campaign on Children, Young People and AIDS". China had achieved MDG Goal 2 on universal primary education for both boys and girls, and basic education was free. The delegation noted the strategic role UNICEF had played in developing norms and standards, and appreciated its focus on the most vulnerable groups and most disadvantaged geographical areas. It also appreciated the cooperation between UNICEF and the Government in achieving the MDGs and observed that the Government was open to ideas and willing to commit resources for programmes and projects that would have a positive impact on children's lives.

Executive Board members visited Tajikistan (18–26 April) [E/ICEF/2010/CRP.13] to better understand the challenges faced by children and women in the country. They conducted meetings in Dushanbe and the Rasht Valley and Khuroson district, where UNICEF-supported projects had been established in response to natural disasters. Children under 18 made up 43.4 per cent of Tajikistan's population of 7.7 million, more than half of whom lived below the poverty line of $40 per month. Challenges included high infant and under-five mortality rates, a rise in the maternal mortality ratio and child malnutrition. UNICEF focused on the promotion of infant and young child survival, feeding and care practices and the prevention of micronutrient deficiencies. The delegation noted that only 21 per cent of Tajiks had access to improved sanitation facilities. The girls' enrolment rate had decreased and dropout rates were high due to a lack of interest in school, lack of money for school clothes and children's work at home or in the fields. Early marriage was another challenge. The UNICEF-supported education programme sought to address gender disparity and other inequities and to promote early learning models. UNICEF Tajikistan's high degree of preparedness was noted when it reacted promptly to a wild polio outbreak during the Board's visit.

Programmes by sector

In 2010, UNICEF programme assistance expenditure, which was linked to the five focus areas established in 2005 under the 2006–2009 MTSP [YUN 2005, p. 1284], totalled $3,355 million, a 14 per cent increase over 2009. The largest share of expenditure, $1,705 million (50.8 per cent), went to young child survival and development, followed by basic education and gender equality ($696 million, or 20.7 per cent), policy advocacy and partnerships for children's rights ($367 million, or 10.9 per cent), child protection from violence, exploitation and abuse ($325 million, or 9.7 per cent) and HIV/AIDS and children ($188 million, or 5.6 per cent). Some $74 million (2.2 per cent) was expended in other areas. Programme support, management and administration and other costs amounted to an additional $276 million.

Young child survival and development

In 2010, maternal, newborn and child health continued to rise in the global agenda. The Secretary-General's Global Strategy for Women's and Children's Health, launched in September, received significant commitments. While progress in achieving MDG Goal 4 on reducing child mortality had been made, it was not yet sufficient to meet the Goal in sub-Saharan Africa, South Asia and the Pacific. The Fund procured more than 2.3 billion doses of vaccines in 2010 and continued to fight undernutrition, for example, by providing therapeutic foods for about one million malnourished children and by leading the Inter-Agency Standing Committee Global Nutrition Cluster. UNICEF supplied an estimated 293 million children with vitamin A capsules, and procured 41 million treatments for malaria and 7.3 million malaria rapid diagnostic tests.

To improve maternal health and achieve MDG Goal 5, UNICEF collaborated with the World Health Organization, UNFPA and the World Bank to develop and update estimates of maternal mortality using statistical modelling for countries where no reliable data existed. Regarding Goal 7 on environmental sustainability, sanitation and water for all, a global partnership of developing countries, donors, multilateral agencies and civil society was launched. An additional 3.8 million households gained access to improved sources of drinking water in 2010, and sanitation facilities were improved in 2.4 million households. Following the earthquake in Haiti (see p. 320), a mass immunization campaign targeted measles, diphtheria, pertussis and tetanus, as well as the re-establishment of maternal and child health-care services. In response to the floods in Pakistan (see p. 933), a major immunization campaign against measles and polio was conducted along with vitamin A supplementation.

Basic education and gender equality

In 2010, access to pre-primary education remained at low levels, especially in sub-Saharan Africa where it reached around 19 per cent compared to a global rate of 44 per cent. MDG 2, on achieving universal primary education, might not be reached by 2015; there had been progress at national levels, however, deep-rooted inequalities were a major barrier to universal primary education. In poor communities, UNICEF distributed learning and teaching materials that were based on active learning, focused on equity and incorporated new curricula. With support from UNICEF, 80 programme countries had adopted quality standards for primary education based on “child-friendly schools” or similar models by 2010, compared with 43 in 2005. UNICEF supported training on quality standards for such schools in 20 countries.

Sixty-three countries participated in the UNICEF-led Early Learning and Development Standards approach, which provided quality standards to monitor the school and developmental readiness of young children. UNICEF’s “Getting Ready for School: A Child-to-Child Approach” pilot programme [YUN 2008, p. 1292] increased age-appropriate entry into schools and improved school readiness among participating children. In 2010, UNICEF and the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization (UNESCO) launched a Global Initiative on Out-of-School Children that aimed to introduce a more systematic approach to the challenge of out-of-school children and to guide education sector reforms. The Fund also promoted the establishment of a protective learning environment for children, especially girls, as an integral part of quality education.

AIDS remained a main cause of under-five mortality in countries with high HIV prevalence, and correct knowledge about HIV among young men and women was still low, at 34 per cent globally. The global Unite for Children, Unite against AIDS campaign [YUN 2005, p. 1290] highlighted the needs and rights of children affected by HIV. UNICEF and the Joint United Nations Programme on HIV/AIDS (UNAIDS) had established as a joint priority the elimination of mother-to-child transmission (MTCT), and a new global initiative to eliminate MTCT by 2015 was launched during the year. Along with the Global Fund to Fight AIDS, Tuberculosis and Malaria, UNICEF and other UN entities focused efforts on 20 highly affected countries, mobilizing about $70 million in funds. UNICEF’s procurement of HIV commodities in 2010 totalled $101 million, providing antiretroviral drugs, rapid tests for HIV and sexually transmitted infections and HIV diagnostics. Slightly more infants were receiving antiretroviral drugs to prevent the acquisition of HIV from their mothers, but early infant diagnosis was still limited. UNICEF helped countries to devise appropriate HIV testing policies for pregnant women, which led to the testing of an estimated 26 per cent of pregnant women in low- and middle-income countries.

In November, UNICEF published Children and AIDS: Fifth Stocktaking Report [Sales No. E.10.XX.9], which examined data, trends and progress, pointed out disparities in access, coverage and outcomes, and called for actions to benefit the millions of affected children, women and families.

UNAIDS programme coordination

At its second regular session in September [E/2010/34/Rev.1], the Executive Board considered an oral report on the UNICEF follow-up to the UNAIDS Programme Coordinating Board meetings. Delegates focused on UNICEF collaboration with UNAIDS to eliminate MTCT, the empowering of women in combating HIV/AIDS, and greater coherence in fighting the epidemic.

Child protection from violence, exploitation and abuse

Strengthening of child protection systems was a major focus across all regions. With UNICEF support, social welfare and justice systems were strengthened in an estimated 131 programme countries. Progress was made in aligning national policies with international standards for alternative care, and more countries conducted analyses of key child protection issues.

A global framework to measure and monitor armed violence, which included child-specific indicators, was developed, and UNICEF, together with Save the Children, established the inter-organizational Child Protection Monitoring and Evaluation Reference Group to improve data collection methodologies and coordination. The protection of children affected by armed conflict was emphasized, with reintegration support provided to 28,000 children affected by armed conflict and 11,400 boys and girls associated with armed forces and armed groups.

The role of child labour in undermining progress on the MDGs was recognized for the first time in the outcome document of the General Assembly High-level Plenary Meeting on the MDGs (see resolution 65/1, p. 815). The Road Map towards the Elimination of the Worst Forms of Child Labour by 2016 identified 10 countries where UNICEF and the International Labour Organization (ILO) would strengthen collaboration.

Policy advocacy and partnerships for children's rights

In 2010, UNICEF supported countries in collecting and analysing household-level data for monitoring the situation of children and women and the MDGs. Global databases on children and women were updated throughout the year to provide a stronger understanding of inequalities. Sector-specific reports were published on mortality, children and AIDS, and water and sanitation. UNICEF worked to harmonize data among partners, and the UNICEF-supported DevInfo—a database for monitoring human development—had over 120 adaptations available.

In-depth research was carried out to analyse the situation of children's and women's rights in 81 countries. The UNICEF Innocenti Research Centre continued to analyse global trends affecting children; in 2010, its flagship report focused on children left behind in wealthy countries.

The Child Poverty Network grew to become the second-largest UNICEF knowledge network, with over 1,000 members from 150 countries. Six countries joined the Global Initiative on Child Poverty and Disparities, bringing the number of participating countries to 52. Thirteen national reports were completed.

In over 80 countries, UNICEF supported national partners in their development and review of poverty reduction and national development strategies, with a focus on identifying policies and programmes to address systemic bottlenecks and social barriers facing the most disadvantaged. A policy advocacy toolkit was published and an e-learning course, "Social policy for child rights with equity", was updated.

Due to the limited capacity of UNICEF, Governments and other partners, only a few countries had developed policies, laws, strategies and frameworks that promoted child and adolescent participation. It was, however, being institutionalized through the "child-friendly cities" in Eastern Europe; middle-income countries were encouraging participation in secondary schools; and the least developed countries were focusing on traditional avenues of child participation such as the media and child parliaments.

Humanitarian action

In 2010, UNICEF responded to 290 humanitarian situations in 98 countries. In the aftermath of the earthquake in Haiti and the floods in Pakistan, the organization mounted its two largest and most complex humanitarian responses since the 2004 Indian Ocean tsunami. The value of the goods procured doubled in 2010 compared to the years 2008 and 2009 combined. Local and international emergency procurement stood at $195 million, of which more than half went to the responses in Haiti and Pakistan.

In April, UNICEF revised its Core Commitments for Children in Humanitarian Action [YUN 2003, p. 1205]. To strengthen accountability and learning from major 2010 humanitarian experiences, the Fund contributed to inter-agency real-time evaluations of the Haiti and Pakistan responses, commissioned an independent review and led an internal learning exercise regarding its Haiti response.

Organizational matters*Evaluation system*

In accordance with UNICEF evaluation policy [YUN 2008, p. 1287] and relevant Executive Board decisions, UNICEF in July submitted an annual report [E/ICEF/2010/18] on the evaluation function and major evaluations in UNICEF. The report reviewed global developments in evaluation and the state of the evaluation function in UNICEF at country, regional and global levels, outlining progress in strengthening the decentralized evaluation function, which reflected the decentralized nature of the organization. The report summarized major evaluations conducted. Country offices carried out about 250 evaluations per year. As requested by the Board, UNICEF increased its efforts to strengthen national evaluation capacities and, in cooperation with development partners, provided support to Governments in enhancing national evaluation systems.

Taking note of the report on 9 September [dec. 2010/16], the Board encouraged the Fund to improve the integration of cross-cutting areas in evaluation methodologies and urged it to strengthen the capacity of the evaluation function at all levels.

Gender policy

In response to an Executive Board decision [YUN 2009, p. 1175], UNICEF reported to the Board [E/ICEF/2010/11] on progress in implementing the management response to the gender policy evaluation. The report described how UNICEF had used the conclusions and lessons learned from the evaluation to strengthen organizational performance and effectiveness. UNICEF had enacted strategic shifts in promoting gender equality as a foundation strategy of the MTSP 2006–2013. A Global Consultation held in early 2010 led to the development of a three-year strategic priority action plan to guide those efforts and tackle remaining challenges. A matrix highlighting progress [E/ICEF/2010/12] was also presented to the Board.

Taking note of the report on 4 June [dec. 2010/7], the Executive Board welcomed the efforts made to improve training and disseminate practical operational guidance to staff in all focus areas. It requested UNICEF to improve the identification, definition and achievement of gender equality results at the country level, and to report on progress in 2011.

Human resources

In follow-up to a Board decision [YUN 2007, p. 1219], UNICEF reported [E/ICEF/2010/AB/L.9] on progress made in human resource management since 2007. The report detailed staffing profiles, structures and recent trends; described the strategic workforce planning taking place to ensure a consistent supply of talent as well as appropriate human resource frameworks and processes; and described actions to address those and other challenges.

Taking note of the report on 9 September [dec. 2010/21], the Executive Board urged UNICEF management to accelerate progress in addressing human resources gaps while reflecting diversity and gender equality; requested UNICEF to address the challenges of staff recruitment, immediate deployment and retention; and urged the Fund to stimulate a more active rotation within the organization and mobility among UN entities. The Executive Director was requested to report in 2011 on progress made.

Ethics Office

Following the establishment of the Ethics Office in 2007, UNICEF in July submitted the first report on its activities [E/ICEF/2010/17], covering the period from 15 August 2008 to 31 December 2009. The report reviewed matters brought to the attention of the Office as well as systematic ethics issues found within the organization. In total, 1,240 requests were received, asking for support on financial disclosure, ethics advice, protection against retaliation and training.

Taking note of the report on 9 September [dec. 2010/18], the Executive Board requested the Fund to keep it informed of progress in achieving the Ethics Office action plan. The Office was encouraged to enhance its briefings, training and counselling services, and to report annually to the Board.

JIU reports

In January, the Executive Board had before it a UNICEF report [E/ICEF/2010/4] on recommendations of the Joint Inspection Unit (JIU). The report summarized JIU reports and notes prepared from September 2008 through August 2009, comments on pertinent recommendations, and the implementation status of JIU recommendations. During that period, JIU issued five reports and five notes of interest to UNICEF.

In December [E/ICEF/2011/4], UNICEF presented its response to seven JIU reports issued between September 2009 and August 2010 for consideration at the Board's first regular session in 2011.

Organizational review

In follow-up to a Board decision [YUN 2007, p. 1220], UNICEF submitted an update [E/ICEF/2010/13] on progress on the implementation and impact of measures taken in response to the organizational review of the Fund [YUN 2006, p. 1378].

Finances

In 2010, UNICEF income totalled $3,682 million, a 13 per cent increase compared to 2009, mainly due to the emergency responses for Haiti and Pakistan. Although the task of raising resources proved challenging because of the global economic downturn, total income exceeded the financial plan for 2010 by $457 million. UNICEF derived its income mainly from Governments, which contributed $2,083 million (56.6 per cent), and from the private sector and NGOs, which contributed $1,188 million (32.2 per cent). The balance came from inter-organizational arrangements, with contributions of $356 million (9.7 per cent), and other sources, with contributions of $55 million (1.5 per cent). Total expenditure increased by 11 per cent compared with 2009 and amounted to $3,653 million—$243 million (7 per cent) more than planned. Expenditure on programme assistance amounted to $3,355 million, while combined expenditure on programme support ($176 million), management and administration ($77 million) and centrally shared security costs ($23 million) amounted to $276 million.

Budget appropriations

At the Board's first regular session [E/ICEF/2010/P/L.1 & Corr.1], the Fund recommended approving additional regular resources for 10 approved country programmes extended by a 2009 decision [YUN 2009, p. 1183]. The Board approved the requested amount of $57,137,000 on 14 January [dec. 2010/2].

Following up on its 2009 decision [YUN 2009, p. 1181] on the biennial support budget for 2010–2011, the Board on 14 January [dec. 2010/5] welcomed the joint UNDP/UNFPA/UNICEF information note on the road map to an integrated budget; urged UNICEF to adhere to the proposed time frames and inform the Board of progress; and decided to include the update of the results matrix of the biennial support budget for 2010–2011 [E/ICEF/2010/CRP.3] in the biennial support budget.

In June, the Executive Board had before it 13 draft country programme documents for approval. On 4 June [dec. 2010/8], it approved the aggregate indicative budgets for those programmes, amounting to the following totals of regular and other resources, respectively, by region: Central and Eastern Europe and the Commonwealth of Independent States: $20,015,000 and $130,500,000; East Asia and the Pacific: $179,785,000 and $400,842,000; Eastern and Southern Africa: $3,755,000 and $31,750,000;

Middle East and North Africa: $19,936,000 and $226,085,000.

In July [E/ICEF/2010/P/L.29], UNICEF requested additional regular resources in the amount of $340,230,086 for 47 approved country programmes which—as a result of the modified system for the allocation of regular resources and global regular resources available for programmes—required resources beyond the levels originally approved. The Board approved that request on 9 September [dec. 2010/13].

Also on 9 September [dec. 2010/12], the Board approved the aggregate indicative budget for six country programmes for the period 2011–2015. The authorized budget amounted to the following totals for regular and other resources, respectively, by region: Eastern and Southern Africa: $85,120,000 and $364,765,000; West and Central Africa: $75,745,000 and $87,800,000; the Americas and the Caribbean: $3,750,000 and $6,250,000; East Asia and the Pacific: $27,700,000 and $127,500,000; South Asia: $3,750,000 and $3,480,000.

Resource mobilization

In 2010, UNICEF continued to collaborate with Governments and the private sector to mobilize regular and other resources. Although the number of contributing Governments decreased to 82, compared with 102 in 2009, public sector contributions increased to $2,440 million. Private sector contributions, comprising income from UNICEF National Committees, individual donors, foundations and NGOs, increased from $916 million in 2009 to $1,187 million.

Regular resources amounted to $965 million, which was less than planned due to the global economic downturn. The Japan Committee for UNICEF was the largest donor to regular resources, contributing $148.2 million.

Thematic funding, which supported the achievement of the five MTSP focus areas by allowing long-term planning, sustainability and savings in transaction costs for both UNICEF and donors, increased by 5 per cent over 2009 to $241 million. Young child survival and development funding increased to $32.6 million.

Income for humanitarian assistance rose by 54 per cent, attributed to donor response to two high-profile natural disasters, amounting to $1,023 million. The Fund requested funding for 61 emergency situations and sought $1.8 billion for its humanitarian interventions.

Private Fundraising and Partnerships

In January, the Executive Board had before it a report on the 2010 Private Fundraising and Partnerships (PFP) workplan and proposed budget [E/ICEF/2010/AB/L.1], according to which PFP in 2010 would generate a projected sum of $761.4 million in net consolidated income, of which $360.6 million would be for regular resources and $400.8 million for other resources. That would be achieved with expenditures of $125.3 million.

On 14 January [dec. 2010/3], the Executive Board approved budgeted expenditures of $125.3 million for the 2010 PFP work plan. It authorized UNICEF to increase expenditures up to $130.2 million, should the proceeds from fundraising or card and gift sales increase, and to reduce expenditures to the extent necessary, should net proceeds decrease. The Board authorized UNICEF to redeploy resources among the various budget lines up to a maximum of 10 per cent of the approved amounts, and, when necessary, to spend an additional amount between Board sessions up to the amount caused by currency fluctuations, to implement the 2010 approved workplan. The Board also renewed investment funds, with $25.6 million established for 2010. It authorized UNICEF to incur expenditures in the 2010 fiscal period related to the cost of goods delivered (production and purchase of raw materials, cards and other products) for the 2011 fiscal year up to $27.7 million, as indicated in the PFP medium-term plan. It approved an interim one-month allocation for January 2011 in the amount of $12.6 million, to be absorbed in the annual PFP budget for 2011, as well as the PFP medium-term plan for 2011–2014.

According to a report on private fundraising issued in July [E/ICEF/2010/AB/L.4], PFP's net income in 2009 amounted to $775.2 million, a decrease of $38 million (4.7 per cent) compared with 2008. That included private fundraising and sales of UNICEF cards and gifts.

Audits

In the annual report to the Executive Board on internal audit activities in 2009 [E/ICEF/2010/AB/L.5 & Corr.1], the Office of Internal Audit (OIA) stated that it had revised the methodology used to audit country offices to focus on high-level risks within three main functional areas: governance and risk management, management of programmes, and operations management. The report noted that 27 country office audits, 7 headquarters, systems audits and summary reports and 2 joint UN audits were completed in 2009. Forty-one per cent of country offices audited in 2009 were rated overall satisfactory and 41 per cent partially satisfactory. OIA issued 403 audit observations to country offices in 2009; 220 of those cases remained open as at 31 March. High-risk observations remained at 13 per cent of the total number of risks.

Taking note of the report and the UNICEF management response to it [E/ICEF/2010/AB/L.6], the Executive Board on 9 September [dec. 2010/17] welcomed the increase in completed audits. The Board requested that UNICEF management address the follow-up and implementation of internal audit observations and recommendations, especially in high-risk areas. It called on UNICEF to address systemic weaknesses and requested it to develop clear guidelines, targets and indicators to promote greater efficiency in country offices and to report back to the Board on any efficiency savings made.

Recovery policy

At its first regular session, the Executive Board considered a report [E/ICEF/2010/AB/L.3] on the implementation of the UNICEF cost recovery policy, submitted in response to a 2006 decision [YUN 2006, p. 1376]. The report covered the 2006–2007 biennium, during which cost recovery amounted to $225 million. The cost recovery rates endorsed by the Board in 2006 had furthered progress towards simplification, harmonization and fiscal prudence.

Taking note of the report on 14 January [dec. 2010/4], the Board recommended including cost recovery in the road map to an integrated UNDP, UNFPA and UNICEF budget.

International Public Sector Accounting Standards

In response to a Board decision [YUN 2009, p. 1174], the Fund submitted two reports to the Board's first and second regular sessions [E/ICEF/2010/AB/L.2, E/ICEF/2010/AB/L.8], respectively, on progress made in implementing the International Public Sector Accounting Standards. As an annual financial statement would replace interim and biennial ones by 2012, UNICEF had increased financial reporting requirements to develop a better understanding of data collection requirements and to build capacity across the organization. The Fund acknowledged the important role of senior management in leading the change, the critical partnership with external auditors and advisors, the requirement to use resources efficiently, and the need to communicate the changes and their impact to internal and external stakeholders.

Youth

International Year of Youth

The General Assembly, by resolution 64/134 [YUN 2009, p. 1187] declared 2010 the International Year of Youth: Dialogue and Mutual Understanding, to commence on 12 August, International Youth Day [YUN 1999, p. 1123]. The Assembly welcomed the holding of a World Youth Conference in León, Mexico (25–27 August).

Report of Secretary-General. In response to General Assembly resolution 64/134 [YUN 2009, p. 1187], the Secretary-General reported [A/66/129] on key activities and initiatives undertaken by Member States, civil society organizations, UN entities, individuals and communities in support of the International Year of Youth: Dialogue and Mutual Understanding. The Year promoted communication across generations, cultures, religions and civilizations. Supporters aimed to utilize it as a catalyst for the full implementation of the World Programme of Action for Youth [YUN 1995, p. 1210], to increase young people's participation in society and to broaden their access to opportunities. The Year's launch on 12 August was celebrated in all regions, with Member States, civil society groups and UN entities organizing more than 350 events, including conferences, forums, competitions, concerts and youth summits. Member State initiatives included the national Youth Month in Jamaica and "The Youth are the Law" programme in Serbia. The Year spurred Governments to focus on youth-related programmes targeting broader national development priorities, such as youth unemployment, climate change and discrimination. At the regional level, the African Union made youth issues a priority. Events at the international level included the fifth World Youth Congress (Istanbul, Turkey, 31 July–13 August), the World Youth Conference (see below) and the Youth Olympic Games (Singapore, 14–26 August).

The report noted the important role civil society played in the success of the Year, as it provided input through initiatives such as the European Youth Forum (Berlin, Germany, 9–15 August) and the eleventh edition of the University on Youth and Development (Molina, Spain, 12–19 September). Activities and initiatives organized by UN entities included the United Nations Inter-Agency Network on Youth Development, which developed the United Nations Framework Approach for the Year (see p. 1193). On behalf of the Network, the focal point on youth within the UN Division for Social Policy and Development coordinated all activities related to the Year, including its launch, social media coverage and the distribution of publications. The UN Department of Public Information carried out publicity activities, while the regional commissions supported the Year by launching activities, adopting declarations and holding events. Among the UN specialized agencies, the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations, ILO, UNESCO and UNICEF undertook advocacy initiatives focused on youth participation at the global level, trained and equipped environmental youth corps at the country level and launched various events and projects.

The Secretary-General recommended strengthening partnerships with and among young people, youth organizations, academia, civil society organizations, the private sector, the media and the UN system; promoting a culture of dialogue and mutual understanding among and with youth; and developing a youth-centred global development agenda in partnership with relevant stakeholders.

World Youth Conference. On 10 December [A/65/690-E/2011/11], Mexico transmitted the Guanajuato Declaration adopted at the World Youth Conference held in León, Mexico, from 25 to 27 August. The Conference was supported by various UN agencies, funds and programmes and attended by more than 3,000 young people from 135 countries. The Declaration covered a broad range of issues, including public policies and investment, poverty and hunger, education, employment, sustainable development and participation.

World Programme of Action for Youth

In 2010, UN policies and programmes on youth continued to focus on efforts to implement the World Programme of Action for Youth to the Year 2000 and Beyond, adopted by the General Assembly in resolution 50/81 [YUN 1995, p. 1211] and covering 10 priority issues for youth: education, employment, hunger and poverty, health, environment, drug abuse, juvenile delinquency, leisure-time activities, girls and young women, and participation in society and decision-making. In resolution 60/2 [YUN 2005, p. 1296], the Assembly added five additional priority areas: the mixed impact of globalization on young women and men; the use of and access to information and communication technologies; the increase in the incidence of HIV infection among young people and the impact of the epidemic on their lives; the involvement of young people in armed conflict, both as victims and as perpetrators; and the importance of addressing intergenerational issues in an ageing society.

Report of Secretary-General. In accordance with a request by the Commission for Social Development [YUN 2009, p. 1185], the Secretary-General in November submitted a report [A/66/61-E/2011/3] on the mechanisms for coordination and collaboration of UN entities in their work related to youth. The Secretary-General provided examples of effective UN system collaboration on youth at the global, regional and country levels and discussed steps to strengthen and increase coordination. The United Nations Inter-Agency Network on Youth Development, established in 2010, was the main mechanism of cooperation on matters related to youth development within the UN system, bringing together 17 entities working in the field of youth. In early 2010, it developed the United Nations Framework Approach for the International Year of Youth to guide collective efforts during the year. The focus was on increasing commitment and investment in youth, increasing youth participation and partnerships, and increasing intercultural understanding among youth. The Inter-Agency Network organized the Year's global launch on 12 August at UN Headquarters, which was supported by joint events of several entities and UN information centres worldwide. Also in 2010, the Executive Committee on Economic and Social Affairs established a working group of its social development cluster to work on joint research initiatives on youth development. Other examples of institutionalized inter-agency collaboration included UNAIDS and the Youth Employment Network [YUN 2001, p. 1100], a partnership of the United Nations, ILO and the World Bank. At the global level, the United Nations Adolescent Girls Task Force pledged to intensify efforts to fulfil the human rights of adolescent girls in the areas of education, health, prevention of violence and leadership development. The report also provided examples of youth-related inter-agency cooperation on climate change and sustainable development, education in emergencies and the protection of children in the tourism sector.

The Secretary-General recommended a further increase of coordination and collaboration within the UN system, the adoption and implementation of regional inter-agency action plans in order to support Member States' efforts to develop youth policies, and the development of mechanisms for youth participation in UN inter-agency initiatives on youth development.

Communication. On 23 September [A/65/393], Uzbekistan transmitted to the General Assembly a survey on the attitude towards life, morality and social values of youth in Uzbekistan.

Ageing persons

Follow-up to Second World Assembly on Ageing (2002)

Reports of Secretary-General. In response to General Assembly resolution 64/132 [YUN 2009, p. 1189], the Secretary-General in July submitted to the General Assembly a report [A/65/158] providing an assessment of national implementation of the Madrid International Plan of Action on Ageing, 2002 [YUN 2002, p. 1194], adopted at the Second World Assembly on Ageing [ibid., p. 1193]. He reviewed national efforts to establish ageing-specific policies and programmes and to integrate ageing concerns into national development plans, as well as activities of the UN system in support of ageing-related policies. Although countries had established national plans and policies on ageing and integrated ageing into their national development plans, the extent to which that had been done varied considerably. National ageing policies were recently adopted in Mauritius, Morocco, Slovakia and Turkey. Antigua and Barbuda, Australia, China, France, Mauritius, Morocco, Nepal, Serbia and Tunisia reported initiatives to improve access to affordable housing and promote "ageing in place". Afghanistan, China, Ecuador, Indonesia, Mauritius, Nepal, the Philippines and Viet Nam instituted social allowance initiatives for older persons. There was a need to provide training to health-care professionals, caregivers, community service providers and budget and finance specialists, all of whom must be equipped to focus on the needs of the older population. Building human resource capacity also involved nurturing the potential of older persons themselves, whose experience, skills and wisdom could be enhanced through volunteer opportunities. Encouraging older and young persons to volunteer together could be a way of building intergenerational solidarity. Member States had taken initiatives to promote positive and realistic images of older persons, including activities recognizing their value, worth and achievements. Regarding partnership-building, a number of Governments coordinated their efforts with NGOs working on behalf of ageing people and provided financial assistance for their work. To incorporate the human rights concerns of older persons, countries implemented policies, amended constitutions, adopted legislation, developed programmes and established national policies.

A topic that was slowly gaining attention among policymakers was elder abuse and neglect. Such abuse cut across all social, economic and national borders, with most victims being women and most perpetrators being family members. Heeding the call from civil society organizations, NGOs and UN entities, Governments had strengthened legislation to protect older persons against abuse.

Most developed countries had implemented policies providing for respite care for caregivers, informational seminars on caregiving, home health aids and, in some cases, a monthly stipend. Institutionalized care was available in most Member States. To supplement care for the elderly, countries had created community care centres and nutrition and feeding programmes. Regarding international cooperation to advance the implementation of the Madrid Plan, the UN Secretariat and UN bodies worked with Member States to build capacity, enact policies and legislation, raise awareness, provide training, and strengthen research and data collection. Activities included conferences on the human rights of older persons, data collection improvement and specific country programmes.

The Secretary-General recommended that Member States identify key priority areas for the remainder of the first decade of implementation; make the Plan an integral part of the development agenda; forge partnerships with organizations of older persons, academia, research foundations, community-based organizations and the private sector; and invest greater efforts in research and analysis to better inform policies on ageing.

Also in response to General Assembly resolution 64/132 [YUN 2009, p. 1189], the Secretary-General in July provided an overview [A/65/157] of the status of the social situation, well-being, participation in development and rights of older persons worldwide. More than 760 million people were aged 60 years and over, and their number was growing. The proportion of older persons living alone had also risen. Women accounted for the majority of older persons, especially those aged 80 and above. Ageing persons accounted for more than 31 million international migrants by mid-2010. There had been an increase in the average pensionable age during the last decade, and a significant increase in life expectancy in most countries. The contribution of older persons reached beyond their economic activities and extended into their roles in families and the community. Nonetheless, older persons were faced with negative perceptions and stereotypes which could hinder their integration and participation in society. Since the Second World Assembly on Ageing [YUN 2002, p. 1193], several government initiatives had emerged in order to create forums for participation of older persons. A growing awareness of the significance of active ageing was noted, yet the literacy and educational attainments of older populations were far below those of the general population, contributing to their exclusion from full participation in society and development. Although two human rights instruments explicitly referred to age: the International Convention on the Protection of the Rights of All Migrant Workers and Members of Their Families [YUN 1990, p. 594] and the Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities [YUN 2006, p. 785], NGOs and other stakeholders maintained that a new international instrument to protect the rights of older persons was required.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 21 December [meeting 71], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Third (Social, Humanitarian and Cultural) Committee [A/65/448], adopted resolution 65/182 without vote [agenda item 27 (d)].

Follow-up to the Second World Assembly on Ageing

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 57/167 of 18 December 2002, in which it endorsed the Political Declaration and the Madrid International Plan of Action on Ageing, 2002, its resolution 58/134 of 22 December 2003, in which it took note, inter alia, of the road map for the implementation of the Madrid Plan of Action, and its resolutions 60/135 of 16 December 2005, 61/142 of 19 December 2006, 62/130 of 18 December 2007, 63/151 of 18 December 2008 and 64/132 of 18 December 2009,

Recognizing that, in many parts of the world, awareness of the Madrid Plan of Action remains limited or non-existent, which limits the scope of implementation efforts,

Taking note of the reports of the Secretary-General on the follow-up to the Second World Assembly on Ageing as well as the current status of the social situation, well-being, participation in development and rights of older persons,

1. Reaffirms the Political Declaration and the Madrid International Plan of Action on Ageing, 2002;
2. Encourages Governments to pay greater attention to building capacity to eradicate poverty among older persons, in particular older women, by mainstreaming ageing issues into poverty eradication strategies and national development plans, and to include both ageing-specific policies and ageing-mainstreaming efforts in their national strategies;
3. Encourages Member States to strengthen their efforts to develop national capacity to address their national implementation priorities identified during the review and appraisal of the Madrid Plan of Action, and invites Member States that have not done so to consider a step-by-step approach to developing capacity that includes the setting of national priorities, the strengthening of institutional mechanisms, research, data collection and analysis and the training of necessary personnel in the field of ageing;
4. Also encourages Member States to overcome obstacles to the implementation of the Madrid Plan of Action by devising strategies that take into account the entirety of the human life-course and foster intergenerational solidarity in order to increase the likelihood of greater success in the years ahead;
5. Further encourages Member States to place particular emphasis on choosing national priorities that are realistic, sustainable and feasible and have the greatest likelihood of being achieved in the years ahead and to develop targets and indicators to measure progress in the implementation process;
6. Encourages all Member States to further implement the Madrid Plan of Action as an integral part of their national development plans and poverty eradication strategies;
7. Invites Member States to identify key priority areas for the remainder of the first decade of implementation of the Madrid Plan of Action, including empowering older persons and promoting their rights, raising awareness of ageing issues and building national capacity on ageing;
8. Recommends that Member States increase awareness-raising of the Madrid Plan of Action, including by strengthening networks of national focal points on ageing, working with the regional commissions and enlisting the help of the Department of Public Information of the Secretariat to seek increased attention for ageing issues;
9. Encourages Governments that have not done so to designate focal points for handling follow-up of national plans of action on ageing;
10. Invites Governments to conduct their ageing-related policies through inclusive and participatory consultations with relevant stakeholders and social development partners, in the interest of developing effective policies creating national policy ownership and consensus-building;
11. Calls upon Governments to ensure, as appropriate, conditions that enable families and communities to provide care and protection to persons as they age, and to evaluate improvement in the health status of older persons, including on a gender-specific basis, and to reduce disability and mortality;
12. Encourages Governments to continue their efforts to implement the Madrid Plan of Action and to mainstream the concerns of older persons into their policy agendas, bearing in mind the crucial importance of family intergenerational interdependence, solidarity and reciprocity for social development and the realization of all human rights for older persons, and to prevent age discrimination and provide social integration;

13. Recognizes the importance of strengthening inter-generational partnerships and solidarity among generations, and in this regard calls upon Member States to promote opportunities for voluntary, constructive and regular interaction between young people and older generations in the family, the workplace and society at large;

14. Invites Member States to ensure that older persons have access to information about their rights so as to enable them to participate fully and justly in their societies and to claim full enjoyment of all human rights;

15. Calls upon Member States to develop their national capacity for monitoring and enforcing the rights of older persons, in consultation with all sectors of society, including organizations of older persons through, inter alia, national institutions for the promotion and protection of human rights where applicable;

16. Also calls upon Member States to strengthen and incorporate a gender perspective into all policy actions on ageing, as well as to eliminate and address discrimination on the basis of age and gender, and recommends that Member States engage with all sectors of society, including women's groups and organizations of older persons, in changing negative stereotypes about older persons, in particular older women, and promote positive images of older persons;

17. Further calls upon Member States to address the well-being and adequate health care of older persons, as well as any cases of neglect, abuse and violence against older persons, by designing more effective prevention strategies and stronger laws and policies to address these problems and their underlying factors;

18. Calls upon Member States to take concrete measures to further protect and assist older persons in emergency situations, in accordance with the Madrid Plan of Action;

19. Stresses that, in order to complement national development efforts, enhanced international cooperation is essential to support developing countries in implementing the Madrid Plan of Action, while recognizing the importance of assistance and the provision of financial assistance;

20. Encourages the international community to enhance international cooperation to support national efforts to eradicate poverty, in keeping with internationally agreed goals, in order to achieve sustainable social and economic support for older persons;

21. Also encourages the international community to support national efforts to forge stronger partnerships with civil society, including organizations of older persons, academia, research foundations, community-based organizations, including caregivers, and the private sector, in an effort to help to build capacity on ageing issues;

22. Encourages the international community and the relevant agencies of the United Nations system, within their respective mandates, to support national efforts to provide funding for research and data-collection initiatives on ageing in order to better understand the challenges and opportunities presented by population ageing and to provide policymakers with more accurate and more specific information on gender and ageing;

23. Recognizes the important role of various international and regional organizations that deal with training, capacity-building, policy design and monitoring at the national and regional levels in promoting and facilitating the implementation of the Madrid Plan of Action, and acknowledges the work that is undertaken in various parts of the world, as well as regional initiatives, and institutes such as the International Institute on Ageing in Malta and the European Centre for Social Welfare Policy and Research in Vienna;

24. Recommends that Member States reaffirm the role of United Nations focal points on ageing, increase technical co-operation efforts, expand the role of the regional commissions on ageing issues and provide added resources for those efforts, facilitate the coordination of national and international non-governmental organizations on ageing and enhance cooperation with academia on a research agenda on ageing;

25. Reiterates the need for additional capacity-building at the national level in order to promote and facilitate further implementation of the Madrid Plan of Action, as well as the results of its first review and appraisal cycle, and in that connection encourages Governments to support the United Nations Trust Fund for Ageing to enable the Department of Economic and Social Affairs of the Secretariat to provide expanded assistance to countries, upon their request;

26. Requests the United Nations system to strengthen its capacity to support, in an efficient and coordinated manner, national implementation of the Madrid Plan of Action, where appropriate;

27. Recommends that ongoing efforts to achieve the internationally agreed development goals, including those contained in the United Nations Millennium Declaration, take into account the situation of older persons;

28. Decides to establish an open-ended working group, open to all States Members of the United Nations, for the purpose of strengthening the protection of the human rights of older persons by considering the existing international framework of the human rights of older persons and identifying possible gaps and how best to address them, including by considering, as appropriate, the feasibility of further instruments and measures, and requests the Secretary-General to provide all necessary support within existing resources for the duration of its mandate;

29. Also decides that the open-ended working group shall:

(a) Meet at United Nations Headquarters in New York;

(b) Decide on its calendar and programme of work by consensus at an organizational meeting early in 2011;

30. Invites States and relevant bodies and organizations of the United Nations system, including relevant human rights mandate holders and treaty bodies and the regional commissions, as well as intergovernmental and relevant non-governmental organizations with an interest in the matter, to make contributions to the work entrusted to the open-ended working group, as appropriate;

31. Requests the Secretary-General to submit to the General Assembly at its sixty-sixth session a report on the implementation of the present resolution, including the situation of the rights of older persons in all regions of the world.

Implementation of Madrid Plan of Action

Report of Secretary-General. In response to a request of the Commission for Social Development [YUN 2009, p. 1188], the Secretary-General submitted a report [E/CN.5/2010/4] to the Commission's forty-eighth session (3–12 February) that presented the priorities of Member States for the coming years, set out their views on mechanisms for improving the implementation of the Madrid Plan of Action [YUN 2002, p. 1194] and outlined options for future modalities for the review and appraisal process. Common priorities in all regions included establishing sustainable systems of social protection, encouraging the participation of older persons in the labour market, meeting the demand for quality and accessible health care, and guaranteeing the rights and participation of older persons in society. Member States and Permanent Observers had submitted 55 replies on how to improve the implementation of the Plan of Action. Those indicated continued support for the 11 central themes and the framework contained in the Plan of Action, including the importance of intergenerational interdependence and solidarity, and the full realization of all human rights and fundamental freedoms of older persons. The Secretary-General pointed out that the second cycle of review and appraisal would need to start soon, and proposed that the Commission for Social Development, at its forty-eighth (2010) session, decide the timing, modalities and theme for the second review, which would likely conclude with a global review exercise at the Commission's fiftieth (2012) session. He proposed a calendar, as well as the theme "Empowerment, protection and promotion of human rights for older persons", for consideration by Member States.

Commission for Social Development action.

At its forty-eighth regular session (New York, 3–12 February) [E/2010/26], the Commission adopted a draft resolution entitled "Future implementation of the Madrid International Plan of Action on Ageing, 2002" and recommended it to the Economic and Social Council for adoption.

ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL ACTION

On 22 July [meeting 45], the Economic and Social Council, on the recommendation of the Commission for Social Development [E/2010/26], adopted resolution 2010/14 without vote [agenda item 14 (b)].

Future implementation of the Madrid International Plan of Action on Ageing, 2002

The Economic and Social Council,

Recalling that, in the Madrid International Plan of Action on Ageing, 2002, adopted by the Second World Assembly on Ageing, held in Madrid from 8 to 12 April 2002, the systematic review of its implementation by Member States was requested as being essential for its success in improving the quality of life of older persons,

Recalling also that the Economic and Social Council, in its resolution 2003/14 of 21 July 2003, invited Governments, the United Nations system and civil society to participate in a "bottom-up" approach to the review and appraisal of the Madrid Plan of Action,

Bearing in mind that, in its resolution 42/1 of 13 February 2004, the Commission for Social Development decided to undertake the review and appraisal of the Madrid Plan of Action every five years,

Recognizing the need to incorporate a gender perspective in all measures concerning older persons,

Taking note with appreciation of the report of the Secretary-General, which was based on the results of the first review and appraisal of the Madrid Plan of Action,

1. Calls upon Member States to continue to participate effectively in the implementation of the Madrid International Plan of Action on Ageing, 2002, inter alia, through national strategies and policies and by improving data collection and sharing ideas, information and good practices, bearing in mind the report of the Secretary-General containing the strategic framework for future implementation of the Madrid Plan of Action;

2. Encourages Member States to continue their efforts to mainstream ageing into their policy agendas, bearing in mind the crucial importance of family, intergenerational interdependence, solidarity and reciprocity for social development and the realization of all human rights for older persons, and to prevent age discrimination and provide social integration;

3. Urges Member States to consider including in their national strategies, inter alia, policy implementation approaches, such as empowerment and participation, gender equality, awareness-raising and capacity development, and essential policy implementation tools such as evidence-based policymaking, mainstreaming, participatory approaches and indicators;

4. Calls upon Member States to adopt appropriate measures, including, if necessary, legislative measures to promote and protect the rights of older persons and measures aimed at providing economic and social security and health care, while mainstreaming a gender perspective, full participation of older persons in the decision-making processes affecting their lives and ageing with dignity;

5. Also calls upon Member States to take concrete measures to further protect and assist older persons in emergency situations, in accordance with the Madrid Plan of Action;

6. Encourages Member States to promote the development of regional and subregional networks of experts and practitioners from Governments, non-governmental organizations, academia and the private sector in order to increase the potential for policy action on ageing;

7. Invites Member States to continue reviewing their national capacity for policy development concerning older persons and demographic ageing, with a view to implementing appropriate measures to enhance their national capacity in this area of policy development, as necessary;

8. Recommends that Member States strengthen their networks of national focal points on ageing, work with the regional commissions to exchange information on best practices and undertake a range of awareness-raising activities, including enlisting the assistance of the Department of Public Information of the Secretariat to expand media coverage on ageing issues;

9. Invites Member States and all other major national and international stakeholders to continue their cooperation with the Department of Economic and Social Affairs of the Secretariat, as the United Nations global focal point on ageing, in further implementing the Madrid Plan of Action;

10. Encourages Member States to consider how best the international framework of norms and standards can ensure the full enjoyment of the rights of older persons, including, as appropriate, the possibility of instituting new policies, instruments or measures to further improve the situation of older persons;

11. Recognizes the important role of various international and regional organizations that deal with training, capacity-building, policy design and monitoring at the national and regional levels in promoting and facilitating the implementation of the Madrid Plan of Action;

12. Acknowledges the essential contributions of the United Nations regional commissions to the implementation, review and appraisal of the Madrid Plan of Action, including the organization of regional review and appraisal meetings and the preparation of their outcome documents, and calls upon the Secretary-General to strengthen the work of the regional commissions, including their focal points on ageing, to enable them to continue their regional implementation activities;

13. Encourages the international community, including international and bilateral donors, to enhance international cooperation, in keeping with internationally agreed goals, to support national efforts to eradicate poverty in order to ensure sustainable social and economic support for older persons, including by strengthening their national capacity in the area of policy development and implementation with regard to older persons, while bearing in mind that countries have the primary responsibility for their own economic and social development;

14. Encourages the international community and the relevant organizations of the United Nations system, within their respective mandates, to support national and regional efforts, to provide funding for research and data-collection initiatives on ageing in order to better understand the challenges and opportunities presented by population ageing and to provide policymakers with more accurate and specific information on ageing and gender, for example, for policy planning, monitoring and evaluation;

15. Decides that the procedure for the second review and appraisal of the Madrid Plan of Action shall follow the set procedure of the first review and appraisal exercise and shall include preparatory activities at the national and regional levels, including those conducted by the regional commissions, to conclude in 2012;

16. Decides also to conduct the second global review and appraisal of the Madrid Plan of Action in 2013 at the fifty-first session of the Commission for Social Development;

17. Endorses the theme "Full implementation of the Madrid International Plan of Action on Ageing: social situation, well-being and dignity, development and the full realization of all human rights for older persons" for the second review and appraisal exercise, and encourages Member States to work on awareness-raising on this theme;

18. Requests the Secretary-General to submit to the Commission at its forty-ninth session a report on the implementation of the present resolution.

Refugees and displaced persons

In 2010, the number of people of concern to the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees (UNHCR) decreased to 33.9 million, from 36.5 million in 2009, including 10.6 million refugees, of which 7.2 million were living in a protracted situation. The number of stateless persons stood at 3.5 million, compared with 6.6 million in 2009. The reduction was a result of methodological changes for counting stateless persons, with the actual number of stateless persons estimated to be closer to 12 million. The number of internally displaced persons (IDPs) reached an estimated 27.5 million, with some 14.7 million receiving UNHCR protection and assistance. The estimated number of returned refugees was 197,600, the lowest in 20 years. In contrast, the number of returned IDPs was 2.9 million, the highest in almost 15 years.

Sub-Saharan Africa hosted 10 million people of concern, and efforts to keep them safe from violence, rape and exploitation were critical in all operations. In central and south Somalia, continued political turmoil, violence and a severe drought displaced tens of thousands of people within the country and across its borders. Positive developments included the return of some 42,000 refugees and nearly 1 million IDPs, mostly in the Central Africa and Great Lakes region. Some 9,250 Congolese repatriated from Zambia during the year, bringing organized returns from that country to a close. Some 162,000 Burundian refugees were naturalized in the United Republic of Tanzania. The General Assembly in December took action on assistance to refugees, returnees and displaced persons in Africa.

In the Americas, which hosted 4.6 million people of concern, UNHCR focused on reinforcing protection mechanisms, finding comprehensive solutions and enhancing partnerships.

The Asia-Pacific region hosted 10.8 million people of concern, with UNHCR activities centring on safeguarding protection and asylum space, finding solutions for protracted refugee situations, ensuring protection and durable solutions for IDPs, and protecting stateless persons.

The Middle East and North Africa hosted and produced large numbers of refugees and IDPs, as well as a large stateless population of approximately 4.5 million people. The protection space remained weak, and the absence of national asylum systems hampered the Office's ability to carry out its mandate.

Some 274,000 people applied for asylum in Europe, which hosted 4 million people of concern. UNHCR priorities were to ensure respect for the principles of international protection, strengthen assistance and durable solutions, and mobilize support for UNHCR global efforts to protect and assist people of concern.

In pursuit of durable solutions for refugees, UNHCR efforts focused on voluntary repatriation, local integration and resettlement. A number of voluntary repatriation operations took place, with 197,600 refugees returning home, primarily to Afghanistan, the Democratic Republic of the Congo and Iraq. The Office assisted many refugees in different countries to prepare for local integration, including through education and self-reliance projects and by providing legal assistance. The number of countries with regular resettlement programmes expanded to 25, with Bulgaria, Hungary, Paraguay and Spain establishing new programmes, and Japan and Romania starting pilot programmes.

The Executive Committee in October adopted a conclusion on refugees with disabilities and other persons with disabilities protected and assisted by UNHCR. In December, UNHCR marked its sixtieth anniversary.

Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees

Programme policy

Executive Committee

At its sixty-first session (Geneva, 4–8 October) [A/65/12/Add.1], the Executive Committee of the UNHCR Programme met to review and approve the Office's programmes and budget, advise on international protection and discuss other issues with UNHCR and its intergovernmental and non-governmental partners. The Committee adopted a conclusion on refugees with disabilities and other persons with disabilities protected and assisted by UNHCR, in which it called upon States, UNHCR and relevant partners to protect and assist refugees, and other persons with disabilities against all forms of discrimination, provide support in addressing their needs and raise awareness on disability issues. It requested UNHCR to include disability awareness in its policy guidelines and training programmes, and to provide Member States with periodic updates on the follow-up to the conclusion.

In other actions, the Committee adopted decisions on the programme of work of the Standing Committee in 2011, observer participation in the Standing Committee's 2010–2011 meetings, administrative, financial and programme matters and the provisional agenda of its sixty-second (2011) session. On 15 February, the Committee held an extraordinary meeting [A/AC.96/1082] of its sixty-first session, at which it elected a new chairperson.

In his opening statement to the Committee [A/AC.96/SR.639], the High Commissioner discussed the main challenges and global trends affecting the work of UNHCR, as well as the Office's internal reform measures. The year 2009 had been the worst in two decades for voluntary repatriation of refugees with approximately 250,000 returning home, representing about one quarter of the annual average for the previous 10 years. Changes were occurring in the peacekeeping environment, with UN and regional peacekeeping missions often deployed amid ongoing violence and internal conflicts. Civilians and humanitarian workers were being targeted, as distinctions between the military and non-military spheres had become blurred. UNHCR insisted on the need to preserve the autonomy of humanitarian space; respect for the principles of independence, impartiality and neutrality was the best guarantor of the security of humanitarian staff. At the same time, a number of States had signalled a growing discomfort with peacekeeping operations in their territories, and concerns about sovereignty were increasingly translated into the rejection of international presence. Against such a backdrop, clarity and consistency were essential for the future of peacekeeping and peacebuilding.

Protracted conflicts were creating a number of quasi-permanent, global refugee populations. Host countries such as Pakistan and Iran, where most Afghan refugees resided, continued to demonstrate extraordinary generosity, identifying protection needs and providing education and sustainable livelihoods for refugees. Elsewhere, Afghan refugees were to be found across 69 countries. Somali refugees were also found in many parts of the world, notably in Ethiopia, Djibouti, Kenya and Yemen. Some had even been deported to Mogadishu, where they had been subjected to security crackdowns and racist attacks and risked being targeted for recruitment by parties to the conflict. The High Commissioner called on countries to provide refugees with protection in line with relevant eligibility guidelines, and urged States to refrain from enforcing returns to Mogadishu. He also stated that the burden for hosting refugees in protracted situations was borne disproportionately by the developing world. That burden, combined with the impact of the global financial and economic crisis, had put the resources of host countries and host communities under serious strain.

Even after repatriation, refugee-affected areas often required rehabilitation. The Office's efforts with its partners to rehabilitate affected land needed to be expanded, and increased international solidarity and burden-sharing was needed. Resettlement was a tangible example of effective burden-sharing, with 12 new countries establishing resettlement programmes since 2008. Transit facilities had been established in the Philippines, Romania and Slovakia. Nevertheless, a huge gap remained between resettlement needs and capacity. Given the critical importance of resettlement as a protection tool and a strategic instrument to combat long-term refugee situations, the High Commissioner appealed to countries to establish or expand resettlement programmes.

With regard to internal reform, the High Commissioner stated that UNHCR had increased its operations by over 60 per cent since 2005, using approximately the same number of staff worldwide. Savings in staff costs meant that critical gaps in the areas of sexual and gender-based violence, malaria, malnutrition, reproductive health and water and sanitation could be addressed. Most of the initiatives on human resources policy had been implemented, and the Office was establishing a fully independent advisory and audit committee to replace the Oversight Committee.

In 2010 and beyond, priorities in the development of UNHCR capacity would focus on protection, emergency preparedness and response. With more refugees living in cities than camps, efforts to reach those populations were also increasing. Regarding the needs of displaced populations, the fundamental objective was to mobilize emergency personnel and dispatch the first relief items within 72 hours. The quick succession of crises in Kyrgyzstan and Pakistan in 2010, together with contingency stockpiling for situations in the East and the Horn of Africa, had underlined the importance of being able to respond to more than one emergency simultaneously.

The High Commissioner noted the forthcoming anniversaries in 2011 of the 1951 Convention relating to the Status of Refugees [YUN 1951, p. 520] and the 1961 Convention on the Reduction of Statelessness [YUN 1961, p. 533]. He hoped that States would take the opportunity to pledge concrete actions to reinforce international protection, provide durable solutions, resolve refugee situations and define approaches to new challenges. The commemorations would also provide a platform for increasing public understanding of and support for forcibly displaced and stateless people.

Appointment. On 22 April, the General Assembly, by decision 64/419, re-elected António Manuel de Oliveira Guterres as United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees for a five-year period beginning on 15 June.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 21 December [meeting 71], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Third (Social, Humanitarian and Cultural) Committee [A/65/450], adopted resolution 65/194 without vote [agenda item 61].

Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees

The General Assembly,

Having considered the report of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees on the activities of his Office and the report of the Executive Committee of the Programme of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees on the work of its sixty-first session and the conclusions and decisions contained therein,

Recalling its previous annual resolutions on the work of the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees since its establishment by the General Assembly,

Expressing its appreciation, in the year which marks the sixtieth anniversary of the Office of the High Commissioner, for the leadership shown by the High Commissioner, commending the staff and implementing partners of the Office for the competent, courageous and dedicated manner in which they discharge their responsibilities, and underlining its strong condemnation of all forms of violence to which humanitarian personnel and United Nations and associated personnel are increasingly exposed,

1. Endorses the report of the Executive Committee of the Programme of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees on the work of its sixty-first session;

2. Welcomes the important work undertaken by the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees and its Executive Committee in the course of the year, which is aimed at strengthening the international protection regime and at assisting Governments in meeting their protection responsibilities;

3. Also welcomes the adoption by the Executive Committee of the conclusion on protracted refugee situations and the conclusion on refugees with disabilities and other persons with disabilities protected and assisted by the Office of the High Commissioner;

4. Reaffirms the 1951 Convention relating to the Status of Refugees and the 1967 Protocol thereto as the foundation of the international refugee protection regime, recognizes the importance of their full and effective application by States parties and the values they embody, notes with satisfaction that one hundred and forty-seven States are now parties to one instrument or to both, encourages States not parties to consider acceding to those instruments, underlines, in particular, the importance of full respect for the principle of non-refoulement, and recognizes that a number of States not parties to the international refugee instruments have shown a generous approach to hosting refugees;

5. Notes that sixty-five States are now parties to the 1954 Convention relating to the Status of Stateless Persons and that thirty-seven States are parties to the 1961 Convention on the Reduction of Statelessness, encourages States that have not done so to give consideration to acceding to those instruments, notes the work of the High Commissioner in regard to identifying stateless persons, preventing and reducing statelessness and protecting stateless persons, and urges the Office of the High Commissioner to continue to work in this area in accordance with relevant General Assembly resolutions and Executive Committee conclusions;

6. Welcomes the initiative of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees to facilitate, in consultation with States, the convening of an intergovernmental event at the ministerial level on the occasion of the sixtieth anniversary of the 1951 Convention and the fiftieth anniversary of the 1961 Convention;

7. Re-emphasizes that the protection of refugees is primarily the responsibility of States, whose full and effective cooperation, action and political resolve are required to enable the Office of the High Commissioner to fulfil its mandated functions, and strongly emphasizes, in this context, the importance of active international solidarity and burden- and responsibility-sharing;

8. Also re-emphasizes that prevention and reduction of statelessness are primarily the responsibility of States, in appropriate cooperation with the international community;

9. Further re-emphasizes that protection of and assistance to internally displaced persons are primarily the responsibility of States, in appropriate cooperation with the international community;

10. Encourages the Office of the High Commissioner to pursue its efforts to strengthen its capacity to respond adequately to emergencies and thereby ensure a more predictable response to inter-agency commitments in case of emergency;

11. Takes note of the current activities of the Office of the High Commissioner related to protection of and assistance to internally displaced persons, including in the context of inter-agency arrangements in this field, emphasizes that such activities should be consistent with relevant General Assembly resolutions and should not undermine the refugee mandate of the Office and the institution of asylum, and encourages the High Commissioner to continue his dialogue with States on the role of his Office in this regard;

12. Encourages the Office of the High Commissioner to work in partnership and in full cooperation with relevant national authorities, United Nations offices and agencies, international and intergovernmental organizations, regional organizations and non-governmental organizations to contribute to the continued development of humanitarian response capacities at all levels, and recalls the role of the Office as the cluster lead for protection, camp coordination and management, and emergency shelter in complex emergencies;

13. Also encourages the Office of the High Commissioner, among other relevant United Nations and other relevant intergovernmental organizations and humanitarian and development actors, to continue to work with the Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs of the Secretariat to enhance the coordination, effectiveness and efficiency of humanitarian assistance and to contribute, in consultation with States, as appropriate, to making further progress towards common humanitarian needs assessments, as stated, among other important issues, in General Assembly resolution 64/76 of 7 December 2009 on the strengthening of the coordination of emergency humanitarian assistance of the United Nations;

14. Further encourages the Office of the High Commissioner to engage in and implement in full the objectives of the Delivering as One initiative;

15. Notes with appreciation the progress made in the implementation of the process of structural and management change, including the global needs assessment initiative, undertaken by the Office of the High Commissioner, and encourages the Office to consolidate the various aspects of the reform process, including the results-based management and accountability framework and strategy, and to focus on continuous improvement in order to enable a more efficient response to the needs of beneficiaries and to ensure the effective and transparent use of its resources;

16. Strongly condemns attacks on refugees, asylum-seekers and internally displaced persons as well as acts that pose a threat to their personal security and well-being, and calls upon all States concerned and, where applicable, parties involved in an armed conflict to take all measures necessary to ensure respect for human rights and international humanitarian law;

17. Expresses deep concern about the increasing number of attacks against humanitarian aid workers and convoys and, in particular, the loss of life of humanitarian personnel working in the most difficult and challenging conditions in order to assist those in need;

18. Emphasizes the need for States to ensure that perpetrators of attacks committed on their territory against humanitarian personnel and United Nations and associated personnel do not operate with impunity and that the perpetrators of such acts are promptly brought to justice as provided for by national laws and obligations under international law;

19. Deplores the refoulement and unlawful expulsion of refugees and asylum-seekers, and calls upon all States concerned to ensure respect for the relevant principles of refugee protection and human rights;

20. Emphasizes that international protection of refugees is a dynamic and action-oriented function that is at the core of the mandate of the Office of the High Commissioner and that it includes, in cooperation with States and other partners, the promotion and facilitation of, inter alia, the admission, reception and treatment of refugees in accordance with internationally agreed standards and the ensuring of durable, protection-oriented solutions, bearing in mind the particular needs of vulnerable groups and paying special attention to those with specific needs, and notes in this context that the delivery of international protection is a staff-intensive service that requires adequate staff with the appropriate expertise, especially at the field level;

21. Affirms the importance of age, gender and diversity mainstreaming in analysing protection needs and in ensuring the participation of refugees and other persons of concern to the Office of the High Commissioner, as appropriate, in the planning and implementation of programmes of the Office and State policies, and also affirms the importance of according priority to addressing discrimination, gender inequality and the problem of sexual and gender-based violence, recognizing the importance of addressing the protection needs of women and children in particular;

22. Strongly reaffirms the fundamental importance and the purely humanitarian and non-political character of the function of the Office of the High Commissioner of providing international protection to refugees and seeking permanent solutions to refugee problems, and recalls that those solutions include voluntary repatriation and, where appropriate and feasible, local integration and resettlement in a third country, while reaffirming that voluntary repatriation, supported, as necessary, by rehabilitation and development assistance to facilitate sustainable reintegration, remains the preferred solution;

23. Expresses concern about the particular difficulties faced by the millions of refugees in protracted situations, and emphasizes the need to redouble international efforts and cooperation to find practical and comprehensive approaches to resolving their plight and to realize durable solutions for them, consistent with international law and relevant General Assembly resolutions;

24. Recognizes the importance of achieving durable solutions to refugee problems and, in particular, the need to address in this process the root causes of refugee movements in order to avert new flows of refugees;

25. Welcomes the initiative of the High Commissioner to convene, in Geneva on 8 and 9 December 2010, the fourth Dialogue on Protection Challenges, on the theme "Protection gaps and responses";

26. Recalls the important role of effective partnerships and coordination in meeting the needs of refugees and in finding durable solutions to their situations, welcomes the efforts under way, in cooperation with countries hosting refugees and countries of origin, including their respective local communities, relevant United Nations agencies, international and intergovernmental organizations, regional organizations, as appropriate, non-governmental organizations and development actors, to promote a framework for durable solutions, particularly in protracted refugee situations, which includes an approach to sustainable and timely return that encompasses repatriation, reintegration, rehabilitation and reconstruction activities, and encourages States, in cooperation with relevant United Nations agencies, international and intergovernmental organizations, regional organizations, non-governmental organizations and development actors, to support, inter alia, through the allocation of funds, the implementation of such a framework to facilitate an effective transition from relief to development;

27. Recognizes that no solution to displacement can be durable unless it is sustainable, and therefore encourages the Office of the High Commissioner to support the sustainability of return and reintegration;

28. Welcomes the progress that has been achieved in increasing the number of refugees resettled and the number of States offering opportunities for resettlement, as well as the contribution that those States make to durable solutions for refugees, and invites interested States, the Office of the High Commissioner and other relevant partners to make use of the Multilateral Framework of Understandings on Resettlement, where appropriate and feasible;

29. Notes with appreciation the activities undertaken by States to strengthen the regional initiatives that facilitate cooperative policies and approaches on refugees, and encourages States to continue their efforts to address, in a comprehensive manner, the needs of the people who require international protection in their respective regions, including the support provided for host communities that receive large numbers of persons who require international protection;

30. Notes the importance of States and the Office of the High Commissioner discussing and clarifying the role of the Office in mixed migratory flows, in order to better address protection needs in the context of mixed migratory flows, including by safeguarding access to asylum for those in need of international protection, and notes the readiness of the High Commissioner, consistent with his mandate, to assist States in fulfilling their protection responsibilities in this regard;

31. Emphasizes the obligation of all States to accept the return of their nationals, calls upon States to facilitate the return of their nationals who have been determined not to be in need of international protection, and affirms the need for the return of persons to be undertaken in a safe and humane manner and with full respect for their human rights and dignity, irrespective of the status of the persons concerned;

32. Expresses deep concern about the challenges posed by climate change and environmental degradation to the protection activities of the Office of the High Commissioner and the assistance it provides to vulnerable populations of concern across the globe, particularly in the least developed countries, and urges the Office to continue to address such challenges in its work, within its mandate, and in consultation with national authorities and in cooperation with competent agencies in its operations;

33. Notes the positive efforts undertaken by the Government of Iraq to ensure the return and reintegration of Iraqi citizens displaced in and from Iraq, as well as the measures taken by host countries in the region in support of the displaced from Iraq, recognizes the serious impact of the displacement on the social and economic situation in the countries of the region, and in that context calls upon the international community to act in a targeted and coordinated manner to provide protection and increased assistance to the persons displaced in order to enable the countries in the region to strengthen their capacity to respond to the needs in partnership with the Office of the High Commissioner, other United Nations agencies, the International Red Cross and Red Crescent Movement and non-governmental organizations;

34. Urges all States and relevant non-governmental and other organizations, in conjunction with the Office of the High Commissioner, in a spirit of international solidarity and burden- and responsibility-sharing, to cooperate and to mobilize resources with a view to enhancing the capacity of and reducing the heavy burden borne by host countries, in particular those that have received large numbers of refugees and asylum-seekers, and calls upon the Office to continue to play its catalytic role in mobilizing assistance from the international community to address the root causes as well as the economic, environmental and social impact of large-scale refugee populations in developing countries, in particular the least developed countries, and countries with economies in transition;

35. Expresses deep concern about the existing and potential challenges posed by the world financial and economic crisis to the activities of the Office of the High Commissioner;

36. Calls upon the Office of the High Commissioner to further explore ways and means to broaden its donor base, so as to achieve greater burden-sharing by reinforcing cooperation with governmental donors, non-governmental donors and the private sector;

37. Recognizes that adequate and timely resources are essential for the Office of the High Commissioner to continue to fulfil the mandate conferred upon it through its statute and by subsequent General Assembly resolutions on refugees and other persons of concern, recalls its resolutions 58/153 of 22 December 2003, 58/270 of 23 December 2003, 59/170 of 20 December 2004, 60/129 of 16 December 2005, 61/137 of 19 December 2006, 62/124 of 18 December 2007, 63/148 of 18 December 2008 and 64/127 of 18 December 2009 concerning, inter alia, the implementation of paragraph 20 of the statute of the Office, and urges Governments and other donors to respond promptly to annual and supplementary appeals issued by the Office for requirements under its programmes;

38. Requests the High Commissioner to report on his activities to the General Assembly at its sixty-sixth session.

Enlargement of Executive Committee

On 22 July, the Economic and Social Council, by decision 2010/246, noted the requests of Bulgaria [E/2010/86], Cameroon [E/2010/94], Croatia [E/2010/87], Togo [E/2010/95] and Turkmenistan [E/2010/96] to enlarge the membership of the Executive Committee, and recommended that the Assembly decide on enlarging the membership from 79 to 84 States. On 10 November, by decision 2010/263, the Council noted a request by the Congo [E/2010/103], and recommended that the General Assembly decide on enlarging the membership to 85 States.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 21 December [meeting 71], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Third Committee [A/65/450], adopted resolution 65/192 without vote [agenda item 61].

Enlargement of the Executive Committee of the Programme of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees

The General Assembly,

Taking note of Economic and Social Council decisions 2010/246 of 22 July 2010 and 2010/263 of 10 November 2010 concerning the enlargement of the Executive Committee of the Programme of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees,

Taking note also of the request regarding the enlargement of the Executive Committee contained in the note verbale dated 9 September 2009 from the Permanent Mission of Cameroon to the United Nations addressed to the Secretary-General, the note verbale dated 23 October 2009 from the Permanent Mission of Togo to the United Nations addressed to the Secretariat, the note verbale dated 27 October 2009 from the Permanent Mission of Bulgaria to the United Nations addressed to the Secretary-General, the letter dated 9 February 2010 from the Permanent Representative of Turkmenistan to the United Nations addressed to the Secretary-General, the letter dated 19 May 2010 from the Permanent Representative of Croatia to the United Nations addressed to the Secretary-General and the note verbale dated 12 July 2010 from the Permanent Mission of the Congo to the United Nations addressed to the Secretary-General,

1. Decides to increase the number of members of the Executive Committee of the Programme of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees from seventy-nine to eighty-five States;

2. Requests the Economic and Social Council to elect the additional members at its resumed organizational session for 2011.

Standing Committee

The Standing Committee held three meetings in 2010 (2–4 March [A/AC.96/1084]; 22–24 June [A/AC.96/1092]; and 21 September [A/AC.96/1093]), during which it considered issues relating to UNHCR programme budgets and funding; international protection; regional activities and global programmes; programme/protection policy; coordination; management, financial control, administrative oversight and human resources; governance; and consultations. The Committee adopted decisions regarding programme budgets and funding in 2010 and the UNHCR Programme in the United Nations proposed strategic framework for the period 2012–2013. The Committee's work was summarized in an October Secretariat note [A/AC.96/1094].

In October [A/65/12/Add.1], the Executive Committee requested the Standing Committee to report on its work to the sixty-second (2011) session of the Executive Committee. It also approved applications by States and intergovernmental and international organizations to participate as observers in Standing Committee meetings in 2010 and 2011.

Refugee protection and assistance

In his annual report covering 2010 [A/66/12], the High Commissioner stated that 43.7 million people were forcibly displaced by conflict and persecution worldwide, the highest number in 15 years. The report reviewed the major challenges faced by States and UNHCR in protecting and assisting persons of concern, including sexual and gender-based violence; the rise in global irregular migration; the failure to respect the universal principle of non-refoulement; and the dramatic rise in deaths of asylum seekers and migrants at sea.

Global trends, such as demographic pressure and food, water and energy insecurity were affecting displacement and migration patterns. International and national security agendas and the rise of terrorist attacks had led to restrictive measures and policies against asylum seekers and refugees. As a result, the denial of access to territory remained a challenge. During the year, UNHCR focused on implementing the 10-Point Plan of Action on Refugee Protection and Mixed Migration [YUN 2006, p. 1394]; developing measures to protect asylum seekers at sea; contributing to international efforts to prevent and combat trafficking in people; promoting the development of protection-sensitive migration policies; responding to the international protection needs of unaccompanied minors in mixed movements; and exploring opportunities to increase protection space for refugees and asylum seekers, such as regional free movement arrangements and labour migration schemes.

With regard to statelessness, despite increased momentum in efforts to prevent and reduce statelessness, progress had been slow, with up to 12 million people remaining stateless. The number of statelessness situations in which UNHCR undertook an operational response increased. The Office's new four-pillar budget structure, which included a separate budget for statelessness, allowed field offices to establish distinct programmes to ensure that responding to statelessness was given priority in relevant operations. Furthermore, a growing number of UNHCR operations had set objectives relating to statelessness.

The report also reviewed UNHCR activities on the safety and security of staff and populations of concern; emergency preparedness and response; and assuring basic needs and essential services for people of concern, including health services, targeted interventions to protect women and girls, education, and livelihood opportunities based on sound environmental management.

In a June note on international protection [A/AC.96/1085], the High Commissioner reviewed the major trends affecting refugee protection, including the shrinking of humanitarian space; challenges to the protection space; increasing urbanization; and ensuring protection in mixed migration flows. He noted that addressing contemporary forms of displacement and statelessness was becoming more complex. Insecurity and instability, often compounded by dire social conditions, poor governance, and food, water and economic crises, had complicated protection responses and solutions to displacement. Delivering protection required ensuring the basic rights and freedoms of persons of concern; combating racism and various forms of violence against individuals; protecting privacy and human dignity; securing fundamental needs; and ensuring early identification of those in need of protection. Also required were sufficient humanitarian space, strong and effective partnerships, and sustained commitment to the development and implementation of protection responses and solutions.

The High Commissioner noted that while the realities of conflict, violence and persecution continued to cause displacement, new forms and causes of displacement were emerging, such as natural disasters. Weather-related occurrences, ecological damage, climate change and declining resources would increasingly affect patterns of displacement. Mobility could not be obstructed, as people would move internally and across borders to seek safety, stability and prosperity. The challenge was not to prevent movement, but to better manage the many sensitive issues at stake. He noted that greater solidarity with forcibly displaced persons was most likely when underpinned by solidarity among States, and it was timely to re-engage in discussion on burden-sharing and responsibility-sharing. Forced displacement, statelessness and complex migratory movements would remain prominent global issues requiring decisive protection responses.

Dialogue on protection challenges. The fourth High Commissioner's Dialogue on Protection Challenges (Geneva, 8–9 December), on the theme "Protection Gaps and Responses", focused on international cooperation, burden-sharing and regional approaches; implementation and normative gaps; and issues relating to statelessness. Participants highlighted the need for fair asylum procedures and protection-sensitive migration policies and border management systems. The High Commissioner noted that, in follow-up to the Dialogue, UNHCR was developing a common framework on international cooperation and burden-sharing.

Standing Committee reports. In May, the UNHCR Standing Committee issued reports on protection capacity and delivery [EC/61/SC/CRP.12] and implementation of the Agenda for Protection [YUN 2002, p. 1205] [EC/61/SC/INF/1].

According to the High Commissioner's annual report [A/66/12], the global population of concern at the end of 2010 was 33.9 million, a decrease from 36.5 million in 2009. Of that figure, some 10.6 million were refugees, which represented an increase from the 10.4 million refugees in 2009, mostly as a result of the deterioration of the situation in Somalia (see p. 276). The number of people displaced within their own country as a result of conflict reached an estimated 27.5 million, with some 14.7 million of them benefiting from UNHCR protection and assistance. The latter constituted a decrease of almost 1 million compared with 2009, mainly due to the return of internally displaced persons (IDPs) in Pakistan and the Democratic Republic of the Congo (DRC) during 2010. The number of stateless persons identified by UNHCR stood at 3.5 million, compared with 6.6 million in 2009. The reduction was a result of methodological changes for counting stateless persons, with the actual number of stateless persons estimated to be closer to 12 million.

The High Commissioner noted that the prevailing political situation in a number of countries had uprooted millions and prevented the return of refugees and IDPs. The estimated number of returned refugees was 197,600, the lowest in 20 years. In contrast, the number of returned IDPs was 2.9 million, the highest in almost 15 years.

During 2010, at least 845,800 individual claims for asylum or refugee status were submitted to Governments or UNHCR in 166 countries or territories, representing an 11 per cent decrease compared with 2009 (948,400). Zimbabweans accounted for the majority of claims submitted in 2010; most of the remaining applications came from asylum seekers originating in Afghanistan, Colombia, the DRC, Myanmar, Serbia (and Kosovo) and Somalia.

Protection issues

Age, gender and diversity

In June, the Standing Committee [A/AC.96/1092] considered a document [EC/61/SC/CRP.14] on the implementation of the UNHCR age, gender and diversity mainstreaming (AGDM) strategy [YUN 2004, p. 1205]. The document reviewed the measures taken to implement the strategy, including conducting regular participatory assessments with persons of concern; identifying where targeted actions were required to address inequalities and support the empowerment and protection of discriminated groups; mainstreaming age, gender and diversity analysis into UNHCR activities and programmes; and holding senior managers accountable for mainstreaming and targeted action through an AGDM accountability framework. UNHCR remained committed to AGDM and was developing the final phase of its strategy to enhance that initiative. The High Commissioner in April had called for a time-bound, corporate plan of action to fully realize AGDM, with a focus on strengthening accountability; expanding the capacity of staff and partners; strengthening monitoring and evaluation; prioritizing AGDM in resource allocation; enhancing and developing policies and guidelines; renewing energy, commitment and leadership at every level of management; and enhancing and expanding partnerships.

At the Standing Committee meeting, delegates supported the focus on AGDM, calling for institutionalization of the approach in all aspects of the Office's work. They called for a timeline with concrete plans, as well as a policy paper to ensure that AGDM was a long-term priority. UNHCR was encouraged to allocate sufficient resources to those efforts, and to provide updates on progress to the Executive Committee.

Children

In June, the Standing Committee [A/AC.96/1092] considered a report [EC/61/SC/CRP.13] on the international protection of children of concern, which reviewed protection risks and challenges; UNHCR strategic directions; and progress made in protecting and assisting children of concern. Almost half of the 34.4 million people of concern to UNHCR were children. When forcibly displaced from their homes, children were at greater risk of being exposed to violence, exploitation, abuse and neglect. Poor socio-economic conditions, limited opportunities for post-primary education and livelihoods, and the disruption of family roles increased the risks of child labour, abuse, trafficking, gender-based violence and recruitment by armed groups. The movement of unaccompanied and separated children as part of mixed migration flows was a growing challenge. Gaps persisted in the area of individual documentation, with less than 50 per cent of newborn refugees in camps and urban areas being issued with birth certificates. UNHCR efforts built upon the 2007 Executive Committee conclusion on children at risk [YUN 2007, p. 1234], which called on States to establish and implement child protection systems. The Office focused on integrating child protection concerns into its policies and programmes; moving towards a "systems approach" that comprehensively addressed the protection needs of children; enhancing child protection through quality education and a safe learning environment; and strengthening cooperation with UN system entities, national authorities and NGOs.

At the Standing Committee meeting, delegations noted the need for safe access to education, increased prevention and response for sexual and gender-based violence, better systems for monitoring trafficking, and birth registration as a key component of child protection and durable solution strategies. Delegations encouraged UNHCR to develop partnerships, build an in-house capacity for child protection and share best practices with Governments.

Resettlement

In June [A/AC.96/1092], the Standing Committee had before it a progress report [EC/61/SC/CRP.11] on resettlement. The report reviewed UNHCR resettlement activities and measures implemented by the Office to strengthen and expand the use of resettlement as a protection tool and durable solution. It noted the challenge of addressing the gap between resettlement places and existing needs, with an estimated 747,000 persons in need of resettlement. In response, the Office was encouraging more countries to establish resettlement programmes or to consider UNHCR submissions; working with established resettlement countries to increase their intake of UNHCR-identified refugees; and prioritizing responses to resettlement needs and submissions, in light of the limited places available. With regard to the strategic use of resettlement, UNHCR sought to ensure that 10 per cent of its overall resettlement submissions were for women and girls at risk, in support of the Executive Committee conclusion [YUN 2006, p. 1397]. UNHCR continued to draw the attention of resettlement countries to the needs in priority protracted refugee situations, in line with the Executive Committee conclusion [YUN 2009, p. 1193]. With regard to the effective management of resettlement, UNHCR would continue to support resettlement countries in their efforts to accelerate procedures for emergency resettlement. The Office integrated anti-fraud mechanisms into various operations; strengthened its identification methods and prioritization of the most vulnerable refugees in need of resettlement; and strengthened partnerships with NGOs.

The Standing Committee echoed UNHCR concern regarding the gap between resettlement needs and availability. Delegations stressed that resettlement should remain an integral part of a comprehensive solutions strategy, and encouraged the Office to ensure that the refugees submitted for resettlement were those most in need. As for the refolement of refugees who had already been accepted by resettlement countries, delegations called for improved dialogue between UNHCR and concerned States, as well as increased flexibility on the part of host Governments to permit resettlement countries to carry out their programmes.

Protracted situations and durable solutions

According to the High Commissioner's annual report [A/66/12], the number of refugees considered by UNHCR to be in a protracted situation stood at 7.2 million at the end of 2010. Strategic solutions pursued in various countries included voluntary repatriation and local integration for Angolan, Liberian and Rwandan refugees; livelihood strategies, voluntary repatriation and resettlement for urban-based refugees in Baku, Azerbaijan; and efforts to implement the Government of Pakistan's Management and Repatriation Strategy for Afghan refugees.

Durable solutions remained focused on voluntary repatriation, local integration and resettlement. Major voluntary repatriation operations took place in 2010, with 197,600 refugees returning home, primarily to Afghanistan, Iraq and the DRC. Local integration was often the preferred option for refugees who had developed social or economic ties with their host communities, with naturalization in the country of asylum offering the most secure legal status. Throughout the year, UNHCR assisted many refugees in different countries to prepare for local integration, including through education and self-reliance projects and by providing legal assistance. The Office sought to regularize the presence of Liberian and Sierra Leonean refugees who had stayed in their respective countries of asylum for more than 15 years. Discussions on local integration continued in Latin America through the Cities of Solidarity forum, as well as in Europe with assistance from the European Commission.

In 2010, the number of countries with regular resettlement programmes expanded to 25. Bulgaria, Hungary, Paraguay and Spain established new programmes, and Japan and Romania started pilot programmes. The Office submitted some 108,000 refugees for resettlement, the main beneficiaries being refugees from Iraq (26,700), Myanmar (24,400) and Bhutan (20,600). Nine per cent of submissions were for women and girls at risk—the highest percentage achieved in the past five years. The largest numbers of refugees were resettled to the United States (54,077), Canada (6,706), Australia (5,636), Sweden (1,789) and Norway (1,088).

Despite those positive developments, the number of resettlement places offered left a large gap in meeting resettlement needs. With regard to emergency response, the three emergency transit facilities in the Philippines, Romania and Slovakia continued to play a key role in evacuating refugees in emergency situations. In addition, UNHCR launched the Global Resettlement Solidarity Initiative to gather support for additional resettlement places for non-Libyan refugees fleeing the Libyan Arab Jamahiriya to Tunisia and Egypt.

International instruments

In 2010, the number of parties to the 1951 Convention relating to the Status of Refugees [YUN 1951, p. 520] remained at 144, while the number of parties to its 1967 Protocol [YUN 1967, p. 477] rose to 145 with the accession of Monaco. The number of States parties to the 1954 Convention relating to the Status of Stateless Persons [YUN 1954, p. 416] remained at 65, and the number of States parties to the 1961 Convention on the Reduction of Statelessness [YUN 1961, p. 533] remained at 37.

Regional activities

Africa

In 2010, the total population of concern to UNHCR in Africa, excluding North Africa, decreased from 10.2 million in 2009 to 9.9 million. The total comprised some 2.2 million refugees, 42,100 returned refugees, 311,000 asylum seekers, 6.2 million IDPs who were protected or assisted by UNHCR, and 21,000 stateless persons, as well as 164,000 persons of concern.

According to the UNHCR Global Report 2010, the Office's operations in Africa sought to promote a favourable protection environment; ensure fair, efficient and non-discriminatory treatment; create safe and secure environments for all people of concern; address basic needs and provide essential services; and redouble the search for durable solutions. UNHCR recognized the extraordinary contribution made to its programmes by the Governments and people of refugee-hosting countries. Efforts to keep people of concern safe from violence, rape and exploitation were critical in all operations.

Report of Secretary-General. Pursuant to General Assembly resolution 64/129 [YUN 2009, p. 1207], the Secretary-General in August submitted a report [A/65/324] on UN assistance to refugees, returnees and displaced persons in Africa, covering 2009 and the first half of 2010.

In East Africa and the Horn of Africa, insecurity and the political situation in Somalia and the Sudan dominated humanitarian work. The Sudan remained at the centre of the largest humanitarian operation in Africa, as well as the third-largest refugee-producing country on the continent. The protracted refugee situation in eastern Sudan, which began some 40 years earlier, was the oldest in Africa. In an effort to bring closure to that situation, UNHCR increased self-reliance activities, including access to land for refugees. In Somalia, Africa's largest refugee-producing country, security and humanitarian conditions in the southern and central areas steadily deteriorated, aggravated by severe drought, poverty, food insecurity and periodic heavy flooding.

The Central Africa and Great Lakes region suffered economic hardship and conflict, creating new displacement within countries and across borders. Nearly 21,000 IDPs returned to their places of origin in Chad, despite the precarious security situation and a lack of basic services. In the Central African Republic, clashes between Government and rebel forces continued, while in the DRC, military operations and human rights violations by armed groups led to a high level of internal displacement.

South Africa remained the main destination for asylum seekers worldwide, most of them coming from Zimbabwe. The Government, UN organizations, NGOs and civil society worked together to prevent intolerance of foreigners, including through awareness-raising. In West Africa, many refugees had been in exile for a protracted period, with a majority living in urban areas.

The Secretary-General recommended that the authorities and national and international organizations create an environment capable of sustaining return or local integration through access to basic public services, legal and personal documentation, and livelihood or income-generating opportunities. He called upon all African Union (AU) member States to sign and ratify the AU Convention for the Protection and Assistance of Internally Displaced Persons in Africa [YUN 2009, p. 1207]. States should consider acceding to the conventions on statelessness, and parties to conflict should facilitate access by humanitarian organizations to affected civilian populations and ensure the security of humanitarian workers.

By subregion, UNHCR spent $279.6 million in Central Africa and the Great Lakes, where there were more than 3.9 million people of concern. In East Africa and the Horn of Africa, $298.9 million was spent on more than 4.9 million people of concern, while in West Africa $52.1 million was spent on 717,640 people of concern. In Southern Africa, where 340,520 people were of concern, UNHCR expended $44.7 million.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 21 December [meeting 71], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Third Committee [A/65/450], adopted resolution 65/193 without vote [agenda item 61].

Assistance to refugees, returnees and displaced persons in Africa

The General Assembly,

Recalling the Organization of African Unity Convention governing the specific aspects of refugee problems in Africa of 1969 and the African Charter on Human and Peoples' Rights,

Reaffirming that the 1951 Convention relating to the Status of Refugees, together with the 1967 Protocol thereto, as complemented by the Organization of African Unity Convention of 1969, remains the foundation of the international refugee protection regime in Africa,

Recognizing the particular vulnerability of women and children among refugees and other persons of concern, including exposure to discrimination and sexual and physical abuse, and in this regard acknowledging the importance of preventing and responding to sexual and gender-based violence,

Acknowledging the efforts of Member States, the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees and other stakeholders in improving the situation of refugees, and expressing grave concern about the deteriorating living conditions in many refugee camps in Africa,

Recognizing that refugees, internally displaced persons and, in particular, women and children are at an increased risk of exposure to HIV/AIDS, malaria and other infectious diseases,

Welcoming the adoption and the ongoing ratification process of the African Union Convention for the Protection and Assistance of Internally Displaced Persons in Africa, which marks a significant step towards strengthening the national and regional normative framework for the protection of and assistance to internally displaced persons,

Noting with appreciation the Pact on Security, Stability and Development in the Great Lakes Region, adopted by the International Conference on the Great Lakes Region in 2006, and its instruments, in particular two of the protocols to the Pact which are relevant to the protection of displaced persons, namely, the Protocol on the Protection of and Assistance to Internally Displaced Persons and the Protocol on the Property Rights of Returning Persons,

Recognizing that host States have the primary responsibility for the protection of and assistance to refugees on their territory, and the need to redouble efforts to develop and implement comprehensive durable solution strategies, in appropriate cooperation with the international community, and burden- and responsibility-sharing,

Emphasizing that States have the primary responsibility to provide protection and assistance to internally displaced persons within their jurisdiction, as well as to address the root causes of the displacement problem in appropriate cooperation with the international community,

1. Takes note of the reports of the Secretary-General and the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees;

2. Calls upon African Member States that have not yet signed or ratified the African Union Convention for the Protection and Assistance of Internally Displaced Persons in Africa to consider doing so as early as possible in order to ensure its early entry into force and implementation;

3. Notes the need for African Member States to address resolutely the root causes of all forms of forced displacement in Africa and to foster peace, stability and prosperity throughout the African continent so as to forestall flows of refugees;

4. Notes with great concern that, despite all of the efforts made so far by the United Nations, the African Union and others, the situation of refugees and displaced persons in Africa remains precarious, and calls upon States and other parties to armed conflict to observe scrupulously the letter and spirit of international humanitarian law, bearing in mind that armed conflict is one of the principal causes of forced displacement in Africa;

5. Welcomes decision EX.CL/Dec.558(XVII) on the situation of refugees, returnees and internally displaced persons in Africa, adopted by the Executive Council of the African Union at its seventeenth ordinary session, held in Kampala from 19 to 23 July 2010;

6. Expresses its appreciation, in the year which marks the sixtieth anniversary of the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees, for the leadership shown by the Office, and commends the Office for its ongoing efforts, with the support of the international community, to assist African countries of asylum, including by providing support to vulnerable local host communities, and to respond to the protection and assistance needs of refugees, returnees and displaced persons in Africa;

7. Notes with appreciation the initiatives taken by the African Union, the Subcommittee on Refugees, Returnees and Internally Displaced Persons of its Permanent Representatives Committee, and the African Commission on Human and Peoples' Rights, in particular the role of its Special Rapporteur on Refugees, Asylum-Seekers, Migrants and Internally Displaced Persons in Africa, to ensure the protection of and assistance to refugees, returnees and displaced persons in Africa;

8. Welcomes the adoption by the Executive Committee of the Programme of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees of the conclusion on protracted refugee situations, at the extraordinary meeting of 8 December 2009 of its sixty-first session, and the conclusion on refugees with disabilities and other persons with disabilities protected and assisted by the Office of the High Commissioner, at its sixty-first session, held from 4 to 8 October 2010;

9. Acknowledges the important contribution of the age, gender and diversity mainstreaming strategy in identifying, through a participatory approach, the protection risks faced by the different members of the refugee community, in particular the non-discriminatory treatment and protection of refugee women and refugee children and minority groups of refugees;

10. Affirms that children, because of their age, social status and physical and mental development, are often more vulnerable than adults in situations of forced displacement, recognizes that forced displacement, return to post-conflict situations, integration in new societies, protracted situations of displacement and statelessness can increase child protection risks, taking into account the particular vulnerability of refugee children to forcible exposure to the risks of physical and psychological injury, exploitation and death in connection with armed conflict, and acknowledges that wider environmental factors and individual risk factors, particularly when combined, may generate different protection needs;

11. Recognizes that no solution to displacement can be durable unless it is sustainable, and therefore encourages the Office of the High Commissioner to support the sustainability of return and reintegration;

12. Also recognizes the importance of early registration and effective registration systems and censuses as a tool of protection and as a means to the quantification and assessment of needs for the provision and distribution of humanitarian assistance and to implement appropriate durable solutions;

13. Recalls the conclusion on registration of refugees and asylum-seekers adopted by the Executive Committee of the Programme of the High Commissioner at its fifty-second session, notes the many forms of harassment faced by refugees and asylum-seekers who remain without any form of documentation attesting to their status, recalls the responsibility of States to register refugees on their territories and, as appropriate, the responsibility of the Office of the High Commissioner or mandated international bodies to do so, reiterates in this context the central role that early and effective registration and documentation can play, guided by protection considerations, in enhancing protection and supporting efforts to find durable solutions, and calls upon the Office, as appropriate, to help States to conduct this procedure should they be unable to register refugees on their territory;

14. Calls upon the international community, including States and the Office of the High Commissioner and other relevant United Nations organizations, within their respective mandates, to take concrete action to meet the protection and assistance needs of refugees, returnees and displaced persons and to contribute generously to projects and programmes aimed at alleviating their plight, facilitating durable solutions for refugees and displaced persons and supporting vulnerable local host communities;

15. Reaffirms the importance of timely and adequate assistance and protection for refugees, returnees and displaced persons, also reaffirms that assistance and protection are mutually reinforcing and that inadequate material assistance and food shortages undermine protection, notes the importance of a rights- and community-based approach in engaging constructively with individual refugees, returnees and displaced persons and their communities so as to achieve fair and equitable access to food and other forms of material assistance, and expresses concern in regard to situations in which minimum standards of assistance are not met, including those in which adequate needs assessments have yet to be undertaken;

16. Also reaffirms that respect by States for their protection responsibilities towards refugees is strengthened by international solidarity involving all members of the international community and that the refugee protection regime is enhanced through committed international cooperation in a spirit of solidarity and burden- and responsibility-sharing among all States;

17. Further reaffirms that host States have the primary responsibility to ensure the civilian and humanitarian character of asylum, calls upon States, in cooperation with international organizations, within their mandates, to take all measures necessary to ensure respect for the principles of refugee protection and, in particular, to ensure that the civilian and humanitarian nature of refugee camps is not compromised by the presence or the activities of armed elements or used for purposes that are incompatible with their civilian character, and encourages the High Commissioner to continue efforts, in consultation with States and other relevant actors, to ensure the civilian and humanitarian character of camps;

18. Condemns all acts that pose a threat to the personal security and well-being of refugees and asylum-seekers, such as refoulement, unlawful expulsion and physical attacks, calls upon States of refuge, in cooperation with international organizations, where appropriate, to take all measures necessary to ensure respect for the principles of refugee protection, including the humane treatment of asylum-seekers, notes with interest that the High Commissioner has continued to take steps to encourage the development of measures to better ensure the civilian and humanitarian character of asylum, and encourages the High Commissioner to continue those efforts, in consultation with States and other relevant actors;

19. Deplores the continuing violence and insecurity which constitute an ongoing threat to the safety and security of staff members of the Office of the High Commissioner and other humanitarian organizations and an obstacle to the effective fulfilment of the mandate of the Office and the ability of its implementing partners and other humanitarian personnel to discharge their respective humanitarian functions, urges States, parties to conflict and all other relevant actors to take all measures necessary to protect activities related to humanitarian assistance, prevent attacks on and kidnapping of national and international humanitarian workers and ensure the safety and security of the personnel and property of the Office and that of all humanitarian organizations discharging functions mandated by the Office, and calls upon States to investigate fully any crime committed against humanitarian personnel and bring to justice the persons responsible for such crimes;

20. Calls upon the Office of the High Commissioner, the African Union, subregional organizations and all African States, in conjunction with agencies of the United Nations system, intergovernmental and non-governmental organizations and the international community, to strengthen and revitalize existing partnerships and forge new ones in support of the protection system for refugees, asylum-seekers and internally displaced persons;

21. Calls upon the Office of the High Commissioner, the international community and other entities concerned to intensify their support to African Governments through appropriate capacity-building activities, including training of relevant officers, disseminating information about refugee instruments and principles, providing financial, technical and advisory services to accelerate the enactment or amendment and implementation of legislation relating to refugees, strengthening emergency response and enhancing capacities for the coordination of humanitarian activities, in particular those Governments that have received large numbers of refugees and asylum-seekers;

22. Reaffirms the right of return and the principle of voluntary repatriation, appeals to countries of origin and countries of asylum to create conditions that are conducive to voluntary repatriation, and recognizes that, while voluntary repatriation remains the pre-eminent solution, local integration and third-country resettlement, where appropriate and feasible, are also viable options for dealing with the situation of African refugees who, owing to prevailing circumstances in their respective countries of origin, are unable to return home;

23. Also reaffirms that voluntary repatriation should not necessarily be conditioned on the accomplishment of political solutions in the country of origin in order not to impede the exercise of the refugees' right to return, recognizes that the voluntary repatriation and reintegration process is normally guided by the conditions in the country of origin, in particular that voluntary repatriation can be accomplished in conditions of safety and dignity, and urges the High Commissioner to promote sustainable return through the development of durable and lasting solutions, particularly in protracted refugee situations;

24. Calls upon the international donor community to provide financial and material assistance that allows for the implementation of community-based development programmes that benefit both refugees and host communities, as appropriate, in agreement with host countries and consistent with humanitarian objectives;

25. Appeals to the international community to respond positively, in the spirit of solidarity and burden-and responsibility-sharing, to the third-country resettlement needs of African refugees, notes in this regard the importance of using resettlement strategically, as part of situation-specific comprehensive responses to refugee situations, and to this end encourages States, the Office of the High Commissioner and other relevant partners to make full use of the Multilateral Framework of Understandings on Resettlement, where appropriate;

26. Calls upon the international donor community to provide material and financial assistance for the implementation of programmes intended for the rehabilitation of the environment and infrastructure affected by refugees in countries of asylum as well as internally displaced persons, where appropriate;

27. Urges the international community, in the spirit of international solidarity and burden-sharing, to continue to fund generously the refugee programmes of the Office of the High Commissioner and, taking into account the substantially increased needs of programmes in Africa, inter alia, as a result of repatriation possibilities, to ensure that Africa receives a fair and equitable share of the resources designated for refugees;

28. Encourages the Office of the High Commissioner and interested States to identify protracted refugee situations which might lend themselves to resolution through the development of specific, multilateral, comprehensive and practical approaches to resolving such refugee situations, including the improvement of international burden- and responsibility-sharing and the realization of durable solutions, within a multilateral context;

29. Expresses grave concern about the plight of internally displaced persons in Africa, notes the efforts of African States in strengthening the regional mechanisms for the protection of and assistance to internally displaced persons, calls upon States to take concrete action to pre-empt internal displacement and to meet the protection and assistance needs of internally displaced persons, recalls in that regard the Guiding Principles on Internal Displacement, takes note of the current activities of the Office of the High Commissioner related to the protection of and assistance to internally displaced persons, including in the context of inter-agency arrangements in this field, emphasizes that such activities should be consistent with relevant General Assembly resolutions and should not undermine the refugee mandate of the Office and the institution of asylum, and encourages the High Commissioner to continue his dialogue with States on the role of his Office in this regard;

30. Invites the Representative of the Secretary-General on the human rights of internally displaced persons to continue his ongoing dialogue with Member States and the intergovernmental and non-governmental organizations concerned, in accordance with his mandate, and to include information thereon in his reports to the Human Rights Council and the General Assembly;

31. Requests the Secretary-General to submit a comprehensive report on assistance to refugees, returnees and displaced persons in Africa to the General Assembly at its sixty-sixth session, taking fully into account the efforts expended by countries of asylum, under the item entitled "Report of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees, questions relating to refugees, returnees and displaced persons and humanitarian questions".

The Americas

UNHCR activities in the Americas focused on reinforcing protection mechanisms, finding comprehensive solutions and enhancing partnerships. Cross-border initiatives and border monitoring activities were implemented throughout the region, despite protection staff being challenged by threats to security and generalized violence.

In North America, UNHCR welcomed the introduction in Canada of the Balanced Refugee Reform Act, which established a Refugee Appeal Division to provide for appeals by claimants; and reform of detention practices and the application of new parole guidelines in the United States. In Central America, gang-related violence continued to generate forced internal and external displacement, especially in El Salvador, Guatemala and Honduras, and there were serious incidents of violence against migrants in Mexico. In the Caribbean, the earthquake in Haiti (see p. 320) highlighted the need for protection in the context of natural disasters. With its newly established office in Santo Domingo, Dominican Republic, UNHCR initiated an immediate response to the earthquake, deploying two emergency teams to provide protection assistance. UNHCR supported the protection cluster led by the Office of the High Commissioner for Human Rights and implemented quick-impact projects along the border with the Dominican Republic.

In Latin America, displacement from Colombia towards Ecuador and Venezuela continued, making protection in border areas a priority. UNHCR continued to help Colombia strengthen its protection response to its protracted IDP situation, and worked with Governments in neighbouring countries to ensure access by people of concern to protection and comprehensive solutions. At an international meeting in November, 18 Latin American States adopted the landmark Brasilia Declaration on the Protection of Refugees and Stateless Persons in the Americas. The Declaration called for the protection of refugees and victims of trafficking and promoted accession to the international instruments on statelessness.

The year saw the incorporation of refugee protection into the legal systems of all countries in Latin America. Mexico's new Refugee Act and Chile's Law for the Protection of Refugees incorporated refugee definitions as provided in the 1984 Cartagena Declaration on Refugees. Argentina introduced a humanitarian visa for victims of natural disasters as part of the National Migration Law, and the right to asylum was enshrined in the Constitution of the Dominican Republic. Despite the region's strong refugee legislation, implementation of effective refugee protection remained a challenge.

On the finding of comprehensive solutions, the UNHCR Global Report 2010 noted that more than two thirds of the refugee population in Latin America resided in urban areas, where competition for employment, housing and basic services was high. Under the framework of the Mexico Plan of Action [YUN 2004, p. 1210], participatory assessments and the establishment of legal and social assistance centres in the region proved valuable in linking refugees and asylum seekers to national social services. Resettlement programmes in Argentina, Brazil, Canada, Chile, Paraguay, the United States and Uruguay remained indispensable in protecting people of concern. In 2010, some 66,000 refugees were resettled in the Americas, mostly in the United States and Canada. In order to combat xenophobia and racism directed at asylum seekers and refugees in Latin America, UNHCR developed a sensitization campaign to increase empathy with those populations.

In 2010, total UNHCR expenditure in the Americas was $63.0 million for a population of concern of 4.6 million.

Asia and the Pacific

According to the UNHCR Global Report 2010, the Asia/Pacific region hosted more than 3.7 million refugees. UNHCR activities during the year centred on safeguarding protection and asylum space, including in mixed-migration contexts and urban settings; finding solutions for protracted refugee situations; ensuring protection and durable solutions for IDPs; reducing and preventing statelessness; and protecting stateless persons.

In Central Asia, inter-communal violence in the southern part of Kyrgyzstan forcibly displaced more than 375,000 people. UNHCR mobilized an emergency response operation, building 1,780 emergency transitional shelters for more than 13,400 returnees. In Turkmenistan, the Government endorsed a landmark action plan and national strategy to address statelessness.

In South-West Asia, Pakistan and Iran hosted 2.9 million registered Afghan refugees, including some who had been displaced for more than 30 years. In 2010, some 113,000 Afghan refugees in Pakistan and Iran returned voluntarily to Afghanistan with UNHCR assistance, representing the largest voluntary repatriation movement worldwide in that year. In Pakistan, the Office assisted the Government to develop the Management and Repatriation Strategy for Afghan Refugees, a major step in addressing the needs of Afghan refugees in the country. The floods in Pakistan, the worst in the country's history, had a devastating impact on over 20 million people, including refugees, IDPs who had already been displaced by previous hostilities, and local communities. UNHCR led the protection cluster and collaborated with partners to offer almost 2 million people emergency shelter and non-food items. In Iran, UNHCR advocated for an environment conducive to the continued stay of refugees in the country, while pursuing durable solutions for more than 1 million Afghan refugees. The Office noted the Government's efforts to regularize the stay of Afghan refugees, including regular registration, the issuance of temporary work permits and access to subsidized health insurance.

In Southern Asia, more than 200,000 IDPs uprooted during the last phase of Sri Lanka's civil war returned home by the end of 2010. While humanitarian needs remained, the country was steadily moving towards the early recovery and development phase. The Office's protection monitoring and interventions continued to promote the safety and basic rights of returnees. UNHCR continued to seek durable solutions for refugees from Bhutan in Nepal, while some 14,800 of them left Nepal for a third country in 2010 as part of a large-scale resettlement operation that began in 2007. In December, Nepal endorsed the UNHCR proposal on camp consolidation, as well as the introduction of a community-based development programme in refugee-affected and hosting areas in the country's eastern districts. In India, UNHCR improved outreach and protection for urban refugees and asylum seekers through various channels, including a women's protection centre, participatory assessments and community focal point meetings.

In South-East Asia, UNHCR strove to improve the protection space for people of concern. The Office sought to engage States in a regional approach to asylum management, including ensuring access to asylum and the principle of non-refoulement, harmonizing procedures and addressing onward movements. UNHCR and the Philippines co-hosted a workshop on refugee protection within the context of mixed migration, which concluded with an agreement to cooperate on a regional approach to refugees and irregular movements. In the Philippines, UNHCR initiated its engagement with the protracted IDP situation at the invitation of the Government, establishing a presence in Mindanao to address the protection needs of populations displaced by conflict. The Office continued to lead the protection cluster for IDPs affected by typhoons in 2009 [YUN 2009, p. 1212], and implemented more than 30 quick-impact projects aimed at helping returnees restart their livelihoods. In Viet Nam, significant advances were made towards reducing statelessness through the naturalization of former Cambodian refugees, many of whom had been residing in the country since the 1970s without legal status. The Office worked with the Thailand National Human Rights Commission to hold a regional expert round table on statelessness and the protection of stateless people in South-East Asia, contributing to interest among members of the Association of South-east Asian Nations Intergovernmental Human Rights Commission in addressing statelessness. A notable development was the resettlement of a first group of refugees in Thailand in two newly established resettlement countries, the Czech Republic and Japan.

In 2010, total UNHCR expenditure in Asia and the Pacific was $379.9 million for a population of concern of 10.8 million.

Middle East and North Africa

According to the UNHCR Global Report 2010, most refugees, IDPs and stateless people in the Middle East resided in urban areas, where they were forced to compete with local populations for resources, adding to the socio-economic burdens of host countries. Despite those complex circumstances, most host States were generous in their treatment of refugees and asylum seekers. The region continued to be affected by the displacement of millions of Iraqis, including some 1.3 million IDPs inside Iraq and nearly 200,000 registered refugees in neighbouring countries. The presence of large numbers of Iraqi refugees in the Syrian Arab Republic and Jordan continued to strain the economies and social structures of those countries. While the number of Iraqi refugees registered with UNHCR had decreased, tremendous needs still existed, particularly for the most vulnerable. In Iraq, UNHCR made considerable progress in monitoring protection and intervening to resolve protection issues, and worked with non-government partners, the authorities and other agencies on joint activities. Through its network of Protection and Assistance Centres (PACs) and mobile teams, UNHCR and its partners in Iraq monitored protection, provided legal assistance, and made interventions and referrals on behalf of people of concern. The PACs assisted more than 16,000 cases involving IDPs, refugees and returnees. Resettlement remained an important response to the Iraqi refugee situation, and by the end of the year, 100,000 Iraqi refugees had been submitted for resettlement and another 60,000 had departed for resettlement countries.

In Yemen, some 90 per cent of IDPs were registered by the end of 2010, a sharp rise from 26 per cent at the beginning of the year. The situation in the north remained fragile, despite a ceasefire signed in February between the Government and the al-Houthi rebels; nearly 300,000 Yemeni civilians remained internally displaced, uprooted by sectarian conflict and often living in dire circumstances. Furthermore, some 53,000 Somalis fleeing violence in their country, and others seeking better economic opportunities, arrived on Yemen's shores in 2010.

In Egypt, some 39,700 refugees and asylum seekers, the majority from the Sudan, were registered with UNHCR. The Office carried out registration, provision of documentation and refugee status determination, and provided assistance to people of concern.

With Cairo selected as one of five pilot cities for the UNHCR new urban refugee policy, the Office reviewed its health-care, education and livelihood strategies as part of policy implementation.

In North Africa, large mixed-migration flows moving through the region, particularly from sub-Saharan countries, had a significant impact on the protection climate. The lack of national asylum systems, coupled with the absence of durable solutions and limited livelihood opportunities, compounded the problems faced by refugees and asylum seekers. UNHCR provided protection and assistance to people of concern, continued its efforts to enlarge the protection space and to pursue durable solutions, and took a more active stance on the return of rejected asylum cases.

In April, Libya suspended UNHCR operations in the country. Under the umbrella of the United Nations Resident Coordinator's Office, limited activities were carried out for refugees and asylum seekers already registered with UNHCR. While high-level discussions allowed the Office to resume some activities by June, a cooperation agreement formalizing the UNHCR presence in the country had not been concluded at year's end.

In a positive development, Algeria expressed interest in working with UNHCR to put in place a national asylum law, establishing an inter-ministerial drafting committee. The situation of Sahrawi refugees in the Tindouf camps in Algeria remained unresolved in the absence of a political solution to the long-standing conflict over the status of Western Sahara. Owing to a disagreement between the parties, UNHCR from March was unable to conduct family visits for Sahrawi refugees and their families in Western Sahara, and the Office continued to work with the parties to resolve the issue. During the year, the Office reoriented its assistance programme for the refugees to focus on their long-term welfare, particularly regarding health, nutrition and education. In consultation with the Sahrawi refugee leaders, UNHCR developed a strategy to address protection needs in the camps. Progress was achieved in the voluntary repatriation of Mauritanian refugees from Senegal, with 20,400 refugees repatriated since the operation began in 2008.

Total UNHCR expenditure in North Africa and the Middle East in 2010 was $318.4 million, for a population of concern of 4.5 million.

Europe

In 2010, UNHCR was confronted by diverse situations in the nearly 50 European countries where it worked, including mature and developing asylum systems; protracted situations involving refugees and IDPs; return and reintegration operations; and challenges related to statelessness. During the year, some 274,000 people applied for asylum in Europe, with the top five countries of origin of applicants being Afghanistan, Iraq, the Russian Federation, Serbia (including Kosovo) and Somalia. While the institutions of asylum continued to benefit from strong support, protection space was under pressure due to growing anti-foreigner sentiment in some countries, the economic crisis and security concerns.

In Eastern Europe, countries continued to host several hundred thousand displaced persons, mostly in the southern Caucasus. Over 4,000 people sought asylum in Eastern Europe in 2010; however, the refugee recognition rate remained low, with only 1,500 asylum seekers recognized by the authorities. While many countries had introduced new asylum legislation, or were in the process of doing so, there were cases where practices and procedures did not meet international standards. As a result, the Office increasingly intervened on behalf of individuals or groups to ensure access to territory, procedures and appeal processes, with the aim to support individuals and help policymakers and Governments improve systems. UNHCR profiled and consulted nearly 5,000 refugees to strengthen their local-integration prospects. Belarus, Moldova and Ukraine strengthened their efforts to integrate refugees locally through initiatives that included language classes, vocational training, business grants and housing support. In Ukraine, where a prolonged Government transition limited the effectiveness of the asylum authority, UNHCR provided legal and material assistance to people of concern, and solutions to people in need of international protection. Azerbaijan allowed the development of small livelihood initiatives for refugees, helping them to become more self-reliant. Statelessness remained a concern, with UNHCR estimating that some 120,000 people were stateless in Eastern Europe. The Office assisted countries to identify stateless people and those at risk of statelessness, and encouraged them to introduce a centralized, fair and efficient procedure for determining statelessness.

In South-Eastern Europe, UNHCR focused on sustainable durable solutions for the remaining refugees and IDPs, the development of asylum systems in line with international and European Union (EU) standards, and a reduction in statelessness. The year was one of the most successful for UNHCR in its efforts to find durable solutions for refugees, returnees and IDPs. The political momentum created by Croatia's EU accession process brought new opportunities for addressing issues of concern. In March, Serbia, with the co-sponsorship of Bosnia and Herzegovina, Croatia and Montenegro, organized the International Conference on Durable Solutions for Refugees and Displaced Persons in Belgrade. The conference addressed outstanding issues hindering the achievement of du-able solutions for those displaced during the conflicts of the 1990s. Following the conference, UNHCR played an important role in the exchange of data on refugees between Croatia and Serbia, resulting in the deregistration of some 12,500 refugees. After years of UNHCR advocacy, the Parliament of Bosnia and Herzegovina adopted the Revised Strategy for the Implementation of Annex VII (the Agreement on Refugees and Displaced Persons) of the Dayton Peace Agreement [YUN 1995, p. 544], opening prospects for durable solutions for IDPs in the country. With UNHCR support, more than 3,000 people in South-Eastern Europe found housing and improved their self-reliance, while 6,700 people received training and help to engage in small-scale income-generating activities. Some 2,500 people were assisted to repatriate voluntarily, mainly to Kosovo, and about 30,000 received legal assistance and support in obtaining the necessary documents to ensure access to basic rights.

In Central Europe, the Office worked to improve the quality of national asylum procedures through the Further Developing Asylum Quality project in Bulgaria, Hungary, Poland, Slovakia and Romania. The Central European countries expanded cooperation with UNHCR in implementing new and existing border-monitoring agreements, allowing the Office to help build the capacity of border guards to administer asylum procedures. More than 750 people, representing a variety of government counterparts and NGO partners, participated in UNHCR-led training in the subregion, with topics including protection at borders, the interviewing of children, and responses to sexual and gender-based violence.

Northern, Western and Southern Europe continued to receive most of the asylum applications in the industrialized world, with nearly 248,000 claims in 2010. There was a marked increase in applications in France, Germany and Sweden, and the number of unaccompanied and separated children, particularly from Afghanistan, remained significant. The management of mixed migration at both land and sea borders, together with restrictive asylum legislation and practices, continued to be of concern. The border between Greece and Turkey, the main entry point for migrants and asylum seekers into the EU, received much attention. UNHCR supported Greece in its asylum reform efforts by helping to draft legislation and supporting the establishment of a new independent asylum service. The Office set up a dedicated team in Athens to provide support for the initiative. UNHCR engaged with Governments and the EU border agency FRONTEX to address mixed migration movements, and for the first time was invited to participate in a FRONTEX operation to prevent the trafficking of unaccompanied children at airports.

In 2010, UNHCR expenditure in Europe was $124.8 million for a population of concern of 4.1 million.

Policy development and cooperation

Partnerships and coordination

According to the High Commissioner's annual report [A/66/12], UNHCR in 2010 worked with a wide spectrum of partners to protect and assist populations under its care in a more effective and comprehensive way. NGOs made up the largest group among UNHCR partners, with the Office channelling 28 per cent of its total expenditures during the year through 687 NGOs (153 international and 534 national). The Office worked to strengthen national NGOs by providing capacity-building opportunities, and continued to count on standby arrangements with international NGOs and the UN Volunteers programme for the deployment of staff in emergencies. Maintaining strong bilateral relations with key UN agencies remained a priority, particularly in the context of the Inter-Agency Standing Committee. UNHCR sought new ways to work within the humanitarian system to strengthen coordination and improve operations as part of the inter-agency cluster approach [YUN 2006, p. 1057], including through the development of a training module for staff working in the clusters led or co-led by the Office. During the year, UNHCR and the World Food Programme revised their memorandum of understanding to reflect new methods of providing food assistance and improved nutrition interventions, and agreed to strengthen cooperation in a number of areas including joint assessment missions and food security in urban areas.

The Office continued to bolster partnerships with regional organizations in support of various issues, including protection in the context of mixed migration movements; the protection of refugees, IDPs and stateless people; the impact of the global financial crisis on refugees and migrants; countering smuggling and trafficking in persons; and advancing humanitarian objectives. UNHCR reinforced its corporate partnerships with more than 60 companies, focusing on increasing awareness and providing support for displaced populations through employee giving schemes, marketing campaigns, special projects, in-kind donations and cash grants. The Office's Goodwill Ambassadors played an essential role in increasing public awareness and support for people of concern.

In September [A/AC.96/1093], the Standing Committee had before it a conference paper [EC/61/SC/CRP.26] on coordination and strategic partnerships. The document reviewed key areas where the Office was working to strengthen common strategies and joint efforts with other humanitarian actors, particularly in support of humanitarian reform and coordination, national-level partnerships, accountability towards populations affected by forced displacement and improved management and operations practices.

Delegations encouraged UNHCR to pursue its engagement in bilateral and multilateral partnerships by building long-term strategies and solid relationships with other actors, notably host Governments and national NGOs.

Evaluation activities

In October, the Executive Committee had before it a July report [A/AC.96/1090] that reviewed the activities of the UNHCR Policy Development and Evaluation Service (PDES) from mid-2009 to mid-2010. The Service pursued an integrated programme of policy development, evaluation, research and publications, focusing its work on urban areas; protracted refugee situations; return and reintegration; humanitarian space; mixed migration; age, gender and diversity; natural disasters; and protection issues.

The Service undertook evaluations of the implementation of the High Commissioner's Special Initiative on Protracted Refugee Situations, as well as a review of the use of microfinance programmes in protracted refugee situations. PDES undertook various projects on the theme of humanitarian space, including a global review of UNHCR experience in safeguarding humanitarian space, an analysis of the Office's engagement with integrated UN missions, and a case study of humanitarian space challenges in Somalia. On mixed migration, PDES completed reviews of the Office's role in Morocco and southern Africa, continuing a series of reviews that began in 2009 [YUN 2009, p. 1197]. The Service completed a major independent evaluation of the implementation of the Office's Age, Gender and Diversity Mainstreaming strategy, and published a paper on the issue of sexual orientation and asylum. PDES commissioned an independent evaluation of the UNHCR role in natural disasters, and published a paper presenting initial empirical evidence on the links between climate change, natural disasters and displacement in Africa. A number of PDES projects had a protection dimension, including an analysis of the relationship between the protection of refugees and IDPs and the "Responsibility to protect" concept; an examination of the relationship between the UNHCR mandate and the "Protection of civilians" initiative; and a review of the Office's response to State border closures in situations of mass refugee influx.

The report concluded that PDES had grown in capacity and output since its establishment in 2006, and the challenge was now to strengthen the utilization and impact of its work. Particular attention should be given to staff rotation, the limited number of UNHCR personnel with evaluation expertise, and growing demand for PDES to participate in inter-agency evaluation initiatives.

Inspections

The High Commissioner noted [A/66/12] that the Inspector General's Office (IGO) continued to focus on its core functions of inspecting the quality management of UNHCR operations; investigating allegations of misconduct by UNHCR personnel; and conducting ad hoc inquiries into attacks on UNHCR personnel and operations, as well as other incidents. The Office had nearly completed implementation of all recommendations of the European Anti-Fraud Office's independent panel review of IGO in 2008 [YUN 2008, p. 1309], and continued to implement the road map established in 2009 to strengthen its capacity to implement those recommendations [YUN 2009, p. 1197]. As recommended in the review, IGO was examining methods for working with implementing partners to investigate allegations of wrongdoing by third parties. IGO had recommended that until sufficient capacity was built up, its investigations be limited to allegations involving major financial loss, criminal misconduct, and those that could undermine UNHCR reputation, including sexual exploitation and abuse. Joint missions conducted with relevant implementing partners would serve to build capacity, as well as improve communication and information-sharing with those partners.

In October, the Executive Committee had before it a July report [A/AC.96/1089] covering IGO activities between July 2009 and June 2010. Since its report to the Committee's sixtieth session [YUN 2009, p. 1198], IGO had conducted 11 standard inspections of headquarters units and field locations. In January, the Office began implementing a revised inspection strategy to improve the delivery of the inspection function, which focused on using a risk-based approach, narrowing the scope of inspections, refining inspection tools, and increasing training. During the reporting period, IGO registered 814 complaints, including 504 from refugees and other persons protected and assisted by UNHCR. By June 2010, there were 114 ongoing investigations. A later report [A/AC.96/1102], outlining IGO activities undertaken in the second half of 2010, stated that IGO in September submitted to the High Commissioner a report on an ad hoc inquiry into possible financial mismanagement in a UNHCR Country Representation.

OIOS activities. The United Nations Office of Internal Oversight Services (OIOS) provided the internal audit function for UNHCR. In July, OIOS submitted to the Executive Committee a report [A/AC.96/1088] on its internal audit of UNHCR for the period from 1 July 2009 to 30 June 2010, which reviewed its audits in the areas of planning and reporting, organization and staffing, cooperation and coordination, and advisory services. OIOS issued 30 audit reports during the reporting period, generating 323 recomrecommendations regarding strategic management and governance; programme and project management; supply chain management; financial management; human resources management; information technology management; safety and security; and conference and documents management. The report noted that 58 recommendations issued prior to 1 July 2008 had not been implemented. A later OIOS report [A/AC.96/1101 & Corr.1] submitted to the Executive Committee reviewed its internal audit of UNHCR from 1 July 2010 to 30 June 2011.

Financial and administrative questions

In 2010 [A/66/12], UNHCR for the first time planned and implemented programmes under a new budget structure [YUN 2009, p. 1199] based on comprehensive needs assessment and within the results-based management framework. The budget amounted to $3,288.7 million, including an initial approved budget of $3,007.3 million and $281.4 million for nine supplementary budgets created during the course of 2010. Those budgets were created in response to unforeseen refugee and IDP situations requiring emergency interventions in the Central African Republic, the Congo, Haiti, Kenya, Kyrgyzstan, Pakistan, Somalia and Yemen.

With ongoing support from traditional donors, including the private sector, the Office received $1.86 billion in voluntary contributions, an increase of almost $150 million from 2009. Nevertheless, those contributions covered only 57 per cent of requirements, leaving many needs unmet. Refugees were also sustained by the resources and support of host communities and countries. At the beginning of 2010, developing countries hosted some 8.3 million refugees, equivalent to 80 per cent of the global refugee population. Just under a quarter of that number was found in the 50 least developed countries. Pakistan remained the number one refugee-hosting country, followed by Iran.

Revised Biennial Programme Budget 2010–2011. In August [A/AC.96/1087], the High Commissioner presented the revised budgetary requirements for the 2010–2011 biennium for consideration and adoption by the Executive Committee. Compared with the approved 2010 and 2011 budgets of $3,007.3 million and $2,780.0 million respectively [YUN 2009, p. 1199], revised needs for these two years stood at $3,150.6 million and $3,320.8 million, respectively. The report reviewed general budgetary issues and the Office's progress in results-based budgeting and the related Focus software [ibid., p. 1200], as well as in global needs assessment (GNA) (see p. 1216). The revised budget included an amount of $3.1 million related to the introduction of the International Public Sector Accounting Standards (IPSAS) [YUN 2006, p. 1583], following the decision to delay that introduction until 2012. In October [A/AC.96/1087/Add.2], the High Commissioner submitted revised 2011 requirements for the Pakistan operation.

In an October decision [A/65/12/Add.1], the Executive Committee approved the 2010 supplementary budgets amounting to $281.4 million, bringing total revised requirements for 2010 to $3,288.7 million. It also approved the revised 2011 programme budget, which amounted to $3,288.8 million, including the UN regular budget contribution and an operational reserve of $219.3 million. Those provisions, together with $12.0 million for Junior Professional Officers and $20.0 million for the "New or additional activities—mandate-related" reserve, brought total requirements for 2011 to $3,320.8 million. The Committee also requested the High Commissioner to respond flexibly and efficiently to the needs indicated under the revised 2010–2011 biennial programme budget, and authorized him to create supplementary budgets and issue special appeals in the case of new emergency needs that could not be fully met from the operational reserve.

The Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions (ACABQ) in September [A/AC.96/1087/Add.1 & Corr.1] responded to the report on the revised biennial programme budget as well as to the documents relating to UNHCR accounts for the year ended 31 December 2009 (see below). The Committee noted that the revised 2010–2011 biennial budget document was based on the findings of the comprehensive needs assessment and plans formulated to respond to those needs. It noted that the proposed increase for the 2011 annual budget was considerably higher compared with the initial budget. The level of requirements for 2011 had increased in many operations, as funding received in early 2010 had not permitted field offices to address all the needs in their respective plans. The Committee recognized that the system of budgeting based on the GNA was new and still in development, observing that the estimated contributions for 2010 indicated a shortfall of $1,235.4 million as compared with the budgeted levels. It would be necessary to monitor whether the functioning of the new budgeting system met UNHCR operational requirements. With regard to results-based management, ACABQ requested additional information on the status of integration of the UNHCR enterprise resource planning software and the results-based management software. Since UNHCR was one of the first UN entities to implement results-based management, the Committee encouraged the Office to share its experiences with other UN system entities in the context of the Chief Executives Board for Coordination.

The audited financial statements of voluntary funds administered by UNHCR for the year ending 31 December 2009 [A/65/5/Add.5] showed a total expenditure of $1,796 million and total income of $1,803 million, with a negative reserve balance of $159.9 million.

The Board of Auditors made several recommendations based on the findings of its audit. The Board continued to review UNHCR efforts to prepare for the transition to IPSAS, recommending that the Office intensify the efforts of the relevant working groups in order to comply with the target of full implementation in 2012. It also recommended that the Office adopt its revised financial rules [YUN 2009, p. 1193] in conjunction with the entry into force of IPSAS. The Board noted that as at 31 December 2009, end-of-service liabilities, including after-service health insurance, had reached $446.9 million. While the Standing Committee in June had studied three alternatives for funding the liabilities, the Board expressed concern that no decision had been made at the time of the audit, and recommended that UNHCR set up specific funding for those liabilities. With respect to the outposting of administrative and support functions to the Global Service Centre in Budapest [YUN 2007, p. 1242], UNHCR had not acquired the means for measuring changes in the quality of service provided. The Board recommended that, before each structural reform, the Office establish detailed objectives, indicators and expected impact on management. The Board also expressed concern at the risk of unreported instalments disbursed to implementing partners, which totalled $265.3 million in 2009. It recommended that UNHCR improve the rate of timely justification of advances granted to implementing partners.

In September [A/AC.96/1086/Add.1], the High Commissioner described measures taken or proposed in response to the Board's recommendations.

In October [A/65/498], ACABQ noted that its report [A/AC.96/1087/Add.1] to the UNHCR Executive Committee (see p. 1198) contained a number of comments relating to the Board's report. ACABQ intended to revisit the Board's recommendations during its review of the biennial budgets of other UN entities for the next fiscal period.

Management and administrative change

At the June meeting [A/AC.96/1092] of the Standing Committee, the Deputy High Commissioner introduced an update [EC/61/SC/CRP.17] on the Office's structural and management change process launched in 2006 [YUN 2006, p. 1392]. The process had moved to its implementation phase, with the gradual integration of new planning, budgeting and management tools and structures into UNHCR operations. Following the roll-out of the planning and management software Focus [YUN 2006, p. 1393], all UNHCR offices had planned their operations using the new application. That process was underpinned by the introduction of a new budget structure based on a global needs assessment, which outlined the full range of the Office's budgetary requirements (see below). Noting that human resources management was crucial to results-based management, the High Commissioner was introducing a revised policy for assignments, postings and promotions of international staff. On operational support, UNHCR conducted its first emergency training workshop for senior managers and reorganized its supply management functions to improve delivery of relief items and supply chain solutions. The strengthening of the Division of Information Services and Technology was under way to provide a high-performing service corresponding to UNHCR needs. Efforts to strengthen the organization's managerial framework included the completion in May of the Global Management Accountability Framework and the restructuring of the Inspector General's Office as part of a drive towards results-based management.

Global needs assessment

In March [A/AC.96/1084], the Standing Committee discussed the global needs assessment (GNA) introduced in 2009 [YUN 2009, p. 1201]. A February document [EC/61/SC/CRP.4] on the theme outlined the challenges of prioritizing objectives and implementing a phased approach to activities, highlighted the utility of the Global Strategic Priorities (GSPs) and described operational priorities set by UNHCR field offices. Following the Office's 2009 commitment to present the full range of its budgetary needs as determined in the GNA, the UNHCR 2010 financial requirements were based on the comprehensive needs of people of concern. UNHCR field offices had been instructed to prioritize interventions that delivered life-saving assistance; ensured key protection activities; improved access to education and livelihoods in protracted displacement situations; strengthened protection capacity in situations of mixed migration; improved response to urban refugee situations; ensured emergency preparedness and response; and facilitated durable solutions. While UNHCR regional bureaux played a key role in setting strategic direction at the regional level, the prioritization process was largely field-based, reflecting the UNHCR move to increase decision-making and authority at the point of delivery.

The introduction of the GSps represented the Office's endeavour to present a consolidated view of the most pressing global challenges on which the Office would focus during the 2010–2011 biennium. Priority objectives for field operations included a favourable protection environment; fair protection processes and documentation; security from violence and exploitation; basic needs and essential services; community participation and self-management; and durable solutions. Regarding 2010 plans and initial targets, each regional office and country operation had prepared a detailed plan of activities to be implemented as of January 2010.

At the meeting, the Director of the Office's Division of Programme Support and Management stated that the introduction of GNA had increased the significance of making careful choices and prioritizing activities. Delegations noted the importance for UNHCR to clearly explain global needs, how prioritization was done, and what needs would not be met.

Staff security

At the June meeting of the Standing Committee [A/AC.96/1092], the Director of the Division of Emergency, Security and Supply presented an overview on staff safety and security issues, including refugee security [EC/61/SC/CRP.16], which reviewed the UNHCR security management plan of action and strategy for implementation. Following the review of security preparedness in 2009 [YUN 2009, p. 1202], UNHCR was undertaking measures to enhance security management, particularly regarding field support, staffing, information gathering and analysis, training, and oversight and headquarters processes.

The support provided by field safety advisors (FSAs) to staff and managers included direct assistance to operations at the point of programme delivery; security risk assessments; technical advice, inter-agency and liaison work; training; and capacity-building. Identifying and hiring qualified FSAs remained a critical and labour-intensive task, with the Office redoubling its recruitment efforts and instituting a more complete vetting process. On information gathering and analysis, the document noted the need to better comprehend the complex environments in which staff operated and the emerging threats, as well as the importance of obtaining more comprehensive security-related information. UNHCR worked to provide adapted training for staff in high-risk operations; update and multiply opportunities for staff to undergo UNHCR security training; enrol a greater number of representatives and heads of office in the security management learning programme; and provide expert training for FSAs. UNHCR was also working to increase the role of the Field Safety Section in reviewing and evaluating security management efforts, particularly through conducting regular reviews of high-risk operations through the Security Steering Committee [YUN 2009, p. 1202] and other processes; achieving full compliance with minimum operating security standards (MOSS); and ensuring that security budgeting reflected needs and practice.

At the meeting, delegations expressed support for the comprehensive approach and concrete measures taken on security management. Several delegations requested further information on the Office's strategy to achieve full MOSS compliance worldwide, and stressed the importance of sharing information with other humanitarian actors.

Health, food and nutrition

In 2010, the United Nations continued its determined efforts to eradicate hunger and to achieve health and proper nutrition for all.

The General Assembly reaffirmed its commitment to fight the HIV/AIDS pandemic, which was a major cause of childhood illness and death and the leading cause of death among women between the ages of 15 and 49. The Assembly decided to convene a high-level meeting in 2011 to review the global response to HIV/AIDS, which, according to the Joint United Nations Programme on HIV/AIDS, began to cause fewer deaths or new infections. At the end of 2010, an estimated 34 million people were living with HIV worldwide, and about $15 billion was available for the AIDS response.

The Assembly also decided to convene a high-level meeting in 2011 on the prevention and control of non-communicable diseases, including cardiovascular diseases, cancers, chronic respiratory diseases and diabetes, which caused more than 60 per cent of deaths worldwide. The Assembly considered the lack of access to basic sanitation services that affected 2.6 billion people and called upon Member States to promote the mobilization of financial, technological, and human resources to improve the delivery of those services. The Assembly also considered road traffic deaths and injuries and proclaimed 2011–2020 as the Decade of Action for Road Safety. Recognizing the role of agriculture in eradicating poverty, which in its extreme form affected more than 1 billion people, the Assembly called for a coordinated follow-up to the 2009 World Summit on Food Security.

The World Food Programme provided 5.7 million metric tons of food to 109.2 million people in 75 countries. The UN System Standing Committee on Nutrition began administrative reforms to facilitate closer relationships with the Economic and Social Council and the Committee on World Food Security. The United Nations University carried out several activities to address hunger and malnutrition.

The Economic and Social Council discussed the harm wrought by tobacco consumption, which caused more than 5 million deaths each year, and called upon Member States to include tobacco control in their efforts to improve maternal and child health.

The World Health Organization (WHO) advocated for the implementation of the Framework Convention on Tobacco Control, whose membership increased to 171 States plus the European Union. WHO also followed up on efforts to fight malaria, which caused 800,000 deaths each year. In May, more than 2,800 delegates convened at the World Health Assembly to discuss global public health issues.

Implementation of the Declaration of Commitment on HIV/AIDS

Report of Secretary-General. In April, the Secretary-General submitted a report [A/64/735] on progress made in implementing the 2001 Declaration of Commitment on HIV/AIDS [YUN 2001, p. 1126] and the 2006 Political Declaration on HIV/AIDS [YUN 2006, p. 1411]. The report described the extent of the epidemic, identified weaknesses and shortcomings in the context of efforts to combat the disease, and urged action to reverse the epidemic. The report noted the achievements of the global effort to make prevention, treatment, care and support accessible to all: new infections decreased by 17 per cent from 2001 to 2008, and antiretroviral medications to prevent mother-to-child transmission were given to 45 per cent of pregnant women in 2008, compared with 10 per cent in 2004, resulting in an estimated 60,000 at-risk babies being born HIV-free. However, many countries were not on track to meet their global commitments. The epidemic continued to outpace the response: for every two people starting antiretroviral therapy, five were newly infected. HIV remained the leading cause of death among women between the ages of 15 and 49 worldwide. In areas of high prevalence, HIV was a major cause of childhood illness and death. Men who had sex with men, injecting drug users and sex workers continued to face stigmatization and discrimination. Highlighting the complementarity of the AIDS response and the Millennium Development Goals (MDGs) [YUN 2000, p. 51], the report stated that only a dramatic acceleration of international efforts would make the MDG on halting and reversing the HIV epidemic by 2015 attainable, and called for renewed commitments to achieve universal access to prevention, treatment, care and support. The report called for national consultations to review progress in reaching country targets for universal access; collaborative research to build the evidence base for maximizing synergies between HIV programmes and other health efforts; intensified efforts to prevent new infections; adequate planning for increased demand for anti-retroviral therapies; and the discussion, at the September 2010 high-level meeting of the General Assembly, of the interlinkages between the Declaration of Commitment, the Political Declaration and the MDGs.

Taking note of the Secretary-General's report on 9 June (decision 64/557), the General Assembly decided to undertake consultations to determine the modalities and organizational arrangements for the 2011 comprehensive HIV/AIDS review no later than December 2010. It decided to include the item "Implementation of the Declaration of Commitment on HIV/AIDS and the Political Declaration on HIV/AIDS" in the provisional agenda of its sixty-fifth (2010) session.

On 21 December, the Assembly adopted resolution 65/197 (see p. 647) on the rights of the child, by which it called upon States to prevent mother-to-child transmission of HIV and to address the impact of HIV/AIDS on children.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 20 December [meeting 69], the Assembly adopted resolution 65/180 [draft: A/65/L.49] without vote [agenda item 10].

Organization of the 2011 comprehensive review of the progress achieved in realizing the Declaration of Commitment on HIV/AIDS and the Political Declaration on HIV/AIDS

The General Assembly,

Reaffirming its commitment to the Declaration of Commitment on HIV/AIDS, in which it decided, inter alia, to devote sufficient time and at least one full day of the annual session of the General Assembly to reviewing and debating a report of the Secretary-General,

Reaffirming also its commitment to the Political Declaration on HIV/AIDS, in which it decided, inter alia, to undertake comprehensive reviews in 2008 and 2011, within the annual reviews of the General Assembly, of the progress achieved in realizing the Declaration of Commitment and the Political Declaration,

Recalling the HIV/AIDS-related goals and commitments contained in the United Nations Millennium Declaration, in the 2005 World Summit Outcome and in the outcome document of the High-level Plenary Meeting of the General Assembly on the Millennium Development Goals,

Emphasizing the significance of the comprehensive review in 2011 which will mark three decades of the HIV/AIDS pandemic, the ten-year review of the Declaration of Commitment on HIV/AIDS and its time-bound measurable goals and targets, and the five-year review of the Political Declaration on HIV/AIDS with the goal of achieving universal access to comprehensive HIV prevention, treatment, care and support by 2010, while bearing in mind the fact that these goals and targets will expire at the end of 2010 and the urgent need to renew the political will for, and to continue fulfilling our commitments to, the global response to HIV/AIDS,

1. Decides to convene a high-level meeting from 8 to 10 June 2011, which will undertake a comprehensive review of the progress achieved in realizing the Declaration of Commitment on HIV/AIDS and the Political Declaration on HIV/AIDS, including successes, best practices, lessons learned, obstacles and gaps, challenges and opportunities, and recommendations to guide and monitor the HIV/AIDS response beyond 2010, including concrete strategies for action, as well as promote the continued commitment and engagement of leaders in a comprehensive global response to HIV/AIDS;

2. Also decides that the organizational arrangements for the high-level meeting should be as follows:

(a) The high-level meeting shall comprise plenary meetings and up to five thematic panel discussions;

(b) The opening plenary meeting shall feature statements by the President of the General Assembly, the Secretary-General, the Executive Director of the Joint United Nations Programme on HIV/AIDS, a person openly living with HIV and an eminent person actively engaged in the response to HIV/AIDS;

(c) The Chairs of the panel discussions shall present summaries of the discussions to the closing plenary meeting;

3. Invites Member States and observers to be represented at the highest level at the high-level meeting;

4. Encourages Member States to include in their national delegations to the high-level meeting parliamentarians, representatives of civil society, including non-governmental organizations and organizations and networks representing people living with HIV, women, young persons, orphans, community organizations, faith-based organizations and the private sector;

5. Decides that the Holy See, in its capacity as Observer State, and Palestine, in its capacity as observer, shall participate in the high-level meeting;

6. Invites the United Nations system, including programmes, funds, specialized agencies and regional commissions, the Special Envoys of the Secretary-General for HIV/AIDS and the Special Envoy of the Secretary-General to Stop Tuberculosis, as well as the Global Fund to Fight AIDS, Tuberculosis and Malaria, to participate in the high-level meeting, as appropriate, and urges them to consider initiatives in support of the preparatory process and the meeting;

7. Encourages other stakeholders, including the International Drug Purchase Facility, UNITAID, and the Partnership for Maternal, Newborn and Child Health, to contribute, as appropriate, to the high-level meeting;

8. Invites the Inter-Parliamentary Union to contribute to the high-level meeting;

9. Requests the President of the General Assembly to organize, no later than in April 2011, an informal interactive civil society hearing with the active participation of people living with HIV and broader civil society, and attended by representatives of Member States, the Observer State and observers, non-governmental organizations in consultative status with the Economic and Social Council, invited civil society organizations and the private sector, as part of the preparatory process for the high-level meeting;

10. Decides that the President of the General Assembly shall preside over the informal interactive hearing with representatives of non-governmental organizations, civil society organizations and the private sector, and requests the President to prepare a summary of the hearing, issued as a document of the Assembly prior to the high-level meeting;

11. Encourages Member States to actively participate in the hearing at the ambassadorial level to facilitate interaction between Member States and representatives of non-governmental organizations, civil society organizations and the private sector;

12. Invites intergovernmental organizations and entities that have observer status with the General Assembly, non-governmental organizations in consultative status with the Economic and Social Council, and non-governmental members of the Programme Coordinating Board of the Joint Programme to participate in the high-level meeting, as appropriate;

13. Decides that representatives of non-governmental organizations in consultative status with the Economic and Social Council, civil society organizations and the private sector, one from each grouping, selected during the informal interactive hearing, may also be included in the list of speakers for the plenary meetings of the high-level meeting, in consultation with the President of the General Assembly;

14. Requests the President of the General Assembly, following appropriate consultations with Member States, to draw up, no later than 31 March 2011, a list of other relevant civil society representatives, in particular associations of people living with HIV, non-governmental organizations, including organizations of women and young people, girls and boys and men, faith-based organizations and the private sector, especially pharmaceutical companies and representatives of labour, including on the basis of the recommendations of the Joint Programme and taking into account the principle of equitable geographical representation, and to submit the list to Member States for consideration on a no-objection basis for a final decision by the Assembly on participation in the high-level meeting, including panel discussions;

15. Decides that the arrangements outlined in paragraph 14 above shall not be considered a precedent for other similar events;

16. Requests the President of the General Assembly, with support from the Joint Programme and in consultation with Member States, to finalize the organizational arrangements for the high-level meeting, including the identification of a person openly living with HIV and an eminent person actively engaged in the response to HIV/AIDS to speak at the opening plenary meeting, the identification of themes and finalization of the panel discussions, and the arrangements for the informal interactive hearing with civil society;

17. Requests the Joint Programme to continue facilitating, to the extent possible, inclusive consultations at the country and regional levels, with the participation of relevant stakeholders, including Governments, non-governmental organizations, civil society and the private sector, to review progress made towards universal access to HIV prevention, treatment, care and support, as well as opportunities to address gaps, obstacles and challenges;

18. Requests the Secretary-General to submit a comprehensive and analytical report, at least six weeks prior to its consideration by the General Assembly, on progress achieved and challenges remaining in realizing the commitments set out in the Declaration of Commitment and the Political Declaration, as well as recommendations for sustainable ways to overcome those challenges, taking into consideration the outcomes and findings of the aforementioned universal access review consultations;

19. Requests the President of the General Assembly to hold timely, open, transparent and inclusive consultations with all Member States, with a view to adopting a concise and action-oriented declaration, as an outcome of the high-level meeting to be agreed by Member States, that reaffirms and builds on the Declaration of Commitment and the Political Declaration to guide and monitor the HIV/AIDS response beyond 2010, giving due consideration to the report of the Secretary-General and other inputs to the preparatory process for the high-level meeting.

On 24 December, the General Assembly decided that the agenda item on the implementation of the Declaration of Commitment on HIV/AIDS and the Political Declaration on HIV/AIDS would remain for consideration during its resumed sixty-fifth (2011) session (decision 65/544).

Joint UN Programme on HIV/AIDS

The Joint United Nations Programme on HIV/AIDS (UNAIDS) continued to advocate global action to fight HIV/AIDS. In 2010, UNAIDS had ten cosponsors: the International Labour Organization; the United Nations Development Programme; the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization; the United Nations Children's Fund (UNICEF); the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees; the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime; the World Health Organization (WHO); the World Food Programme (WFP); the United Nations Population Fund (UNFPA); and the World Bank.

Report on the global AIDS epidemic

On 23 November, UNAIDS published the 2010 edition of its Report on the Global AIDS Epidemic. The report, based on data from 182 countries, showed that progress was being made toward achieving universal access to HIV prevention, treatment, care and support. It stated that the spread of HIV had been halted and reversed, in line with MDG 6. Since the 1990s, the number of new infections had been decreasing, but remained high. The report estimated that 2.6 million new infections occurred in 2009. There were 1.8 million AIDS-related deaths, lower than the 2.1 million deaths in 2004, due to the significant scale-up of antiretroviral therapy. As a result, the number of people living with HIV increased from 32.8 million in 2008 to 33.3 million in 2009. The report cited promising results from the use of a tenofovir-based microbicide gel, which had been found to reduce HIV infections by 39 per cent, as well as herpes simplex virus-2 infections by 51 per cent, in women between the ages of 18 and 40. The report noted that the growth in investment for the AIDS response had flattened in 2009 for the first time: $15.9 billion was available for the AIDS response in 2009, $10 billion short of what was needed in 2010.

UNAIDS activities

In 2010, UNAIDS provided technical support to more than 60 countries to scale up HIV treatment programmes, including the development and adaptation of national treatment guidelines, the implementation of strategies to monitor and address adverse events, and strategic approaches to improve clinical management.

Research breakthroughs occurred in 2010, with clinical trials demonstrating the partial efficacy of a vaginal microbicide and pre-exposure antiretroviral prophylaxis, expanding the toolkit of interventions to prevent new infections. Two studies in sub-Saharan Africa suggested that conditional cash transfers reduced young people's risk of HIV infection by alleviating economic vulnerability. Enhanced understanding of HIV interventions led to the revision of international guidelines for antiretroviral therapy for HIV infection in adults and adolescents, and antiretroviral drugs for treating pregnant women and preventing infection in infants. More than 15 countries benefited from UNAIDS-supported studies on modes of transmission, which provided critical information to enable more accurate and timely use of scarce resources. In 2010, 182 countries reported data on progress in their HIV response, summarized in the UNAIDS Report on the Global AIDS Epidemic 2010. For the first time, UNAIDS produced AIDS scorecards on key indicators of national progress, enabling countries to compare results.

Efforts to increase the number of circumcised adult males in 13 high-priority countries with high prevalence of HIV and low prevalence of male circumcision led to an estimated 400,000 men circumcised in nine priority countries in 2010. The percentage of countries reporting the existence of laws and regulations protecting people living with HIV from discrimination increased from 56 per cent in 2006 to 71 per cent in 2010.

UNAIDS provided advocacy and technical support in more than 40 countries to promote gender equality in the context of HIV. It generated a framework for integrating gender in national monitoring and evaluation systems, and provided guidance on creating gender indicators for national responses. It also provided technical support for HIV policies and programmes affecting young people in more than 60 countries. With the leadership of the International Labour Organization, at least 32 countries received UNAIDS support to strengthen workplace HIV prevention, treatment, care and support.

In partnership with the Ecumenical Advocacy Alliance, Cordaid and the International Network of Religious Leaders Living with and Affected by HIV, UNAIDS hosted a summit of religious leaders on the response to HIV (Den Dolder, Netherlands, 22–23 March). At the meeting, some 40 religious leaders explored opportunities to promote universal access to HIV prevention, treatment, care and support in their communities and speak out against stigma and discrimination.

At the High-level Plenary Meeting of the General Assembly on the MDGs in September, UNAIDS organized a high-profile session with China, Ethiopia, Nigeria and South Africa to galvanize the attention of world leaders to the UNAIDS initiative “AIDS plus MDGs”.

UNAIDS remained an important source of technical support. In 2010, technical support facilities in five regions provided 14,700 days of technical assistance in 67 countries. UN partners completed an additional five national technical support plans.

A new international labour standard on HIV and AIDS was adopted at the annual International Labour Conference on 17 June. The HIV and AIDS Recommendation, 2010 (No. 200) called for the development, adoption and implementation of national workplace policies on HIV and AIDS and the world of work, including universal access to prevention, treatment, care and support measures.

Programme Coordinating Board. The UNAIDS Programme Coordinating Board (PCB) at its twenty-fifth meeting (Geneva, 8–10 December 2009) [UNAIDS/PCB(25)/09.29] discussed the report, conclusions and recommendations of the Second Independent Evaluation (SIE) of UNAIDS. The evaluation assessed UNAIDS for the period from 2002 to 2008 [UNAIDS/PCB(25)/09.18]. It concluded that UNAIDS remained highly relevant; that UNAIDS was successful in working towards global leadership and political and social mobilization; that it was mostly successful in advocating greater political commitment at the country and global levels; and that it was partly successful in promoting and achieving global consensus in policy and programmes and in strengthening country capacities. It further concluded that UNAIDS needed a leaner secretariat, better governance and a clearer direction in the light of the evolving epidemic and changing aid architecture. According to SIE, the UNAIDS cosponsors saw the following benefits from their membership in UNAIDS: the availability of funds through the unified budget and workplan; the role of the UNAIDS secretariat and the UNAIDS Executive Director in maintaining HIV as a high-profile issue; greater awareness of global issues and trends; and a visible role and access to a wide range of expertise and networks. PCB agreed with 21 recommendations of SIE and created a follow-up task force on governance. PCB subsequently made additional recommendations based on the report of the task force [UNAIDS/PCB(26)/10.8]. PCB also discussed the impact of the global financial and economic crisis on the AIDS response; a survey-based assessment anticipated a deterioration in funding, severely affecting HIV prevention.

At its twenty-sixth meeting (22–24 June 2010) [UNAIDS/PCB(26)/10.15], PCB endorsed a new vision for UNAIDS that called for efforts to achieve “zero new infections, zero AIDS-related deaths and zero discrimination”, as well as a comprehensive strategy for 2011–2015 that outlined policy and programmatic approaches to advance progress in each of the three pillars of the UNAIDS vision. PCB discussed the importance of linking sexual reproductive health services and HIV/AIDS interventions; financial and implementation reports for 2008–2009 and an update on the 2010–2011 unified budget and workplan; reducing HIV transmission among men having sex with men and transgender individuals; and the gender-sensitivity of AIDS responses. Regarding SIE, PCB considered a progress report on its implementation and the report of the follow-up task force on governance.

At its twenty-seventh meeting (6–8 December) [UNAIDS/PCB(27)/10.27], PCB adopted the UNAIDS 2011–2015 Strategy: Getting to Zero, an agenda for the global AIDS response to revolutionize HIV prevention, catalyse the next phase of treatment, care and support, and advance human rights and gender equality. The Strategy sought to improve efficiency to reduce new infections; expand access to treatment; reduce stigma and discrimination; facilitate strategic partnerships; support country ownership; engage emerging economies; facilitate South-South cooperation; and usher in a new approach to financing the response. The meeting also discussed SIE implementation; the report of the follow-up task force; gender-sensitivity of AIDS responses; AIDS, security and humanitarian responses; and universal access.

Non-communicable diseases

The General Assembly considered a draft resolution calling for the convening of a high-level meeting of the Assembly in 2011 on the prevention and control of non-communicable diseases.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 13 May [meeting 86], the General Assembly adopted resolution 64/265 [draft: A/64/L.52 & Add.1] without vote [agenda item 114].

Prevention and control of non-communicable diseases

The General Assembly,

Recalling the United Nations Millennium Declaration and the 2005 World Summit Outcome, as well as the outcomes of the major United Nations conferences and summits in the economic, social and related fields, in particular the health-related development goals set out therein,

Recalling also all its resolutions related to global public health, including those related to global health and foreign policy,

Recalling further its resolution 61/225 of 20 December 2006 in which it decided to designate and observe 14 November as World Diabetes Day,

Reaffirming the ministerial declaration of the 2009 high-level segment of the Economic and Social Council, on the theme “Implementing the internationally agreed goals and commitments in regard to global public health”,

Noting with appreciation all relevant resolutions and decisions adopted by the World Health Assembly on the prevention and control of non-communicable diseases, and underlining the importance for Member States to continue addressing key risk factors for non-communicable diseases through the implementation of the 2008–2013 Action Plan for the Global Strategy for the Prevention and Control of Non-communicable Diseases, the World Health Organization Framework Convention on Tobacco Control, the Global Strategy on Diet, Physical Activity and Health, and the evidence-based strategies and interventions to reduce the public health problems caused by the harmful use of alcohol,

Noting that the conditions in which people live and their lifestyles influence their health and quality of life and that the most prominent non-communicable diseases are linked to common risk factors, namely, tobacco use, alcohol abuse, an unhealthy diet, physical inactivity and environmental carcinogens, being aware that these risk factors have economic, social, gender, political, behavioural and environmental determinants, and in this regard stressing the need for a multisectoral response to combat non-communicable diseases,

Underscoring the need for concerted action and a coordinated response at the national, regional and global levels in order to adequately address the developmental and other challenges posed by non-communicable diseases, in particular the four most prominent non-communicable diseases, namely, cardiovascular diseases, cancers, chronic respiratory diseases and diabetes,

Taking note with appreciation of the declaration of the Heads of State and Government of the Caribbean Community, entitled “Uniting to stop the epidemic of chronic non-communicable diseases”, adopted in September 2007,

Taking note with appreciation also of the statement of the Commonwealth Heads of Government on action to combat non-communicable diseases, adopted in November 2009,

Taking note of all the regional initiatives undertaken on the prevention and control of non-communicable diseases,

Taking note with appreciation of the initiative of the Government of the Russian Federation to organize an international ministerial conference on non-communicable diseases in Moscow in June 2011,

Noting with concern that for millions of people throughout the world, the right of everyone to the enjoyment of the highest attainable standard of physical and mental health, including access to medicines, still remains a distant goal and that, in many cases, especially for those living in poverty, this goal is becoming increasingly remote,

Underscoring the fact that global health is also a long-term developmental objective which is local, national, regional and international in scope and requires sustained attention, commitment and closer international cooperation, and in this regard reaffirming the need to further strengthen international cooperation in the area of public health, inter alia, through the exchange of best practices aimed at building the capacity of public health systems, providing financial assistance, the production of and increased access to affordable, safe, effective and high-quality medicines, the training, recruitment and retention of public health personnel, the development of infrastructure and the transfer of technology,

Reaffirming the commitment to strengthening national health systems that deliver equitable health outcomes as the basis of a comprehensive approach, with appropriate attention to, inter alia, health financing, including appropriate budgetary allocations, the health workforce, the procurement and distribution of medicines and vaccines, infrastructure, information systems, which include monitoring of non-communicable diseases and their determinants, service delivery and political will in leadership and governance,

Emphasizing that the United Nations system has an important responsibility to assist Governments in the follow-up to and full implementation of agreements and commitments reached at the major United Nations conferences and summits, especially those focusing on health-related issues,

Recognizing the leading role of the World Health Organization as the primary specialized agency for health, including its roles and functions with regard to health policy in accordance with its mandate, and welcoming its efforts, in cooperation with Member States, the United Nations system, the Bretton Woods institutions, the private sector and civil society, and the mass media, in the promotion of public health at all levels,

Recognizing also the enormous human suffering caused by non-communicable diseases, such as cardiovascular diseases, cancers, chronic respiratory diseases and diabetes, and the threat they pose to the economies of many Member States, leading to increasing inequalities between countries and populations, thereby threatening the achievement of the internationally agreed development goals, including the Millennium Development Goals,

Noting the call to consider integrating indicators to monitor the magnitude, the trend and the socio-economic impact of non-communicable diseases into the Millennium Development Goals monitoring system,

Recognizing the lack of sufficient statistical data on non-communicable diseases, particularly in developing countries, and the need for the development and wide utilization of a set of standardized indicators for data collection and information on trends in respect of non-communicable diseases and their risk factors at the global, regional and national levels,

Convinced of the urgent need to undertake multilateral efforts at the highest political level to address the rising prevalence, morbidity and mortality of non-communicable diseases worldwide and to raise the priority accorded to non-communicable diseases in development cooperation by enhancing such cooperation in this regard,

1. Decides to convene a high-level meeting of the General Assembly in September 2011, with the participation of Heads of State and Government, on the prevention and control of non-communicable diseases;

2. Also decides to hold consultations on the scope, modalities, format and organization of the high-level meeting of the General Assembly on the prevention and control of non-communicable diseases, with a view to concluding consultations, preferably before the end of 2010;

3. Encourages Member States to include in their discussions at the high-level plenary meeting of the sixty-fifth session of the General Assembly on the review of the Millennium Development Goals, to be held in September 2010, the rising incidence and the socio-economic impact of the high prevalence of non-communicable diseases worldwide;

4. Requests the Secretary-General to submit a report to the General Assembly at its sixty-fifth session, in collaboration with Member States, the World Health Organization and the relevant funds, programmes and specialized agencies of the United Nations system, on the global status of non-communicable diseases, with a particular focus on the developmental challenges faced by developing countries.

WHO report. In September, the Secretary-General transmitted a report of the WHO Director General on the global status of non-communicable diseases [A/65/362]. The report stated that non-communicable diseases—principally cardiovascular diseases, diabetes, cancer and chronic respiratory disease—caused 35 million deaths in 2005, representing more than 60 per cent of all deaths globally; 80 per cent of those deaths from non-communicable diseases occurred in low- and middle-income countries. The report projected a 17 per cent increase in deaths due to those diseases over the next 10 years, 24 per cent of which would occur in Africa. It identified population ageing, unplanned urbanization, globalization of trade and marketing, and the prevalence of unhealthy lifestyle patterns as the drivers of the diseases. Because of their links to poverty and their effects on productivity and health-care costs, those diseases were seen as a global macroeconomic and developmental challenge, and their prevention and health-care interventions as excellent economic investments. Affordable solutions to prevent and control the diseases included reducing exposure to common risk factors such as tobacco use, unhealthy diets, physical inactivity and the harmful use of alcohol, as well as better access to health care. The report recommended that WHO member States map and monitor the diseases and analyse their social, economic and political determinants to provide guidance for policy, legislative and financial measures; reduce the exposure of individuals and populations to the risks associated with those diseases; provide choices for and encourage healthful lifestyles; and strengthen health care for people with the diseases.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 24 December [meeting 73], the General Assembly adopted resolution 65/238 [draft: A/65/L.50] without vote [agenda item 115].

Scope, modalities, format and organization of the High-level Meeting of the General Assembly on the Prevention and Control of Non-communicable Diseases

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 64/265 of 13 May 2010, in which it decided to convene a high-level meeting of the General Assembly in September 2011, with the participation of Heads of State and Government, on the prevention and control of non-communicable diseases,

Recalling also the outcome document of the High-level Plenary Meeting of the General Assembly on the Millennium Development Goals, and the commitment contained therein to undertake concerted action and a coordinated response at the national, regional and global levels in order to adequately address the developmental and other challenges posed by non-communicable diseases, namely cardiovascular diseases, cancers, chronic respiratory diseases and diabetes, and to work towards a successful high-level meeting of the General Assembly in 2011,

Recognizing the primary role and responsibility of Governments in responding to the challenge of non-communicable diseases and the essential need for the efforts and engagement of all sectors of society to generate an effective response,

Recognizing also the important role of the international community and international cooperation in assisting Member States, particularly developing countries, and in complementing national efforts to generate an effective response to non-communicable diseases,

Recalling its resolution 65/95 of 9 December 2010 on global health and foreign policy,

1. Decides that the High-level Meeting of the General Assembly on the Prevention and Control of Non-communicable Diseases shall be held on 19 and 20 September 2011 in New York;

2. Also decides that the High-level Meeting shall address the prevention and control of non-communicable diseases worldwide, with a particular focus on developmental and other challenges and social and economic impacts, particularly for developing countries;

3. Reiterates its decision to hold the High-level Meeting with the participation of Heads of State and Government, and encourages all Member States to be represented at that level;

4. Decides that the organizational arrangements of the High-level Meeting and the round tables shall be as follows:

(a) Formal plenary meetings, to be held on 19 September 2011, chaired by the President of the General Assembly and featuring opening statements by the President of the Assembly, the Secretary-General, the Director-General of the World Health Organization and a representative of civil society who will be chosen from non-governmental organizations with consultative status with the Economic and Social Council and in consultation with Member States; and a closing plenary meeting to be held on 20 September 2011, comprising the presentation of summaries of the round tables and the adoption of a concise action-oriented outcome document;

(b) Three round tables, with round tables 1 and 2 taking place concurrently with the plenary meetings on 19 September 2011, and round table 3 taking place on 20 September 2011;

(c) Thematic round tables which will address the following themes:

- Round table 1: The rising incidence, developmental and other challenges and the social and economic impact of non-communicable diseases and their risk factors;
- Round table 2: Strengthening national capacities, as well as appropriate policies, to address prevention and control of non-communicable diseases;
- Round table 3: Fostering international cooperation, as well as coordination, to address non-communicable diseases;

(d) In order to promote interactive and substantive discussions, participation in each round table will include Member States, observers, and representatives of entities of the United Nations system, civil society and the private sector; a list of speakers will not be maintained in this regard;

5. Requests the President of the General Assembly, in consultation with Member States, to finalize the organizational arrangements of the meetings, including the list of speakers of the plenary meetings to be held on 19 September 2011, taking account of the length of the meetings, the identification of the civil society representative to speak at the opening plenary meeting, the assignment of Member States and participants to round tables, and the identification of Chairs for the round tables, taking into account the level of representation as well as equitable geographical representation and the format of the informal interactive hearing;

6. Encourages Member States to consider, as appropriate and where relevant, including in their national delegations to the High-level Meeting parliamentarians, representatives of civil society, including non-governmental organizations, academia and networks working on the control and prevention of non-communicable diseases;

7. Decides that the High-level Meeting shall result in a concise action-oriented outcome document, and requests the President of the General Assembly to produce a draft text in consultation with Member States based on their inputs, as well as inputs from the preparatory process and evidence-based inputs, where relevant, and convene informal consultations at an appropriate date in order to enable sufficient consideration and agreement by Member States prior to the High-level Meeting;

8. Also decides that the report of the Secretary-General, in collaboration with Member States, the World Health Organization and the relevant funds, programmes and specialized agencies of the United Nations system, on the global status of non-communicable diseases, with a particular focus on the developmental challenges faced by developing countries, requested by the General Assembly in resolution 64/265, shall be submitted no later than May 2011 and shall serve as an input to the preparatory process for the High-level Meeting;

9. Invites the World Health Organization, with the support and active participation of regional commissions and other relevant agencies and entities, to continue to hold regional multisectoral consultations, as appropriate, which will serve to provide inputs to the preparations for the High-level Meeting, as well as to the Meeting itself;

10. Requests the President of the General Assembly to organize, no later than June 2011 and in consultation with representatives of non-governmental organizations in consultative status with the Economic and Social Council, civil society organizations, the private sector and academia, an informal interactive hearing with non-governmental organizations, civil society organizations, the private sector and academia to provide an input to the preparatory process for the High-level Meeting;

11. Decides that the President of the General Assembly shall preside over the above-mentioned informal interactive hearing, and requests the President to prepare a summary of the hearing, to be issued as a document of the Assembly prior to the High-level Meeting;

12. Invites the Inter-Parliamentary Union to contribute to the High-level Meeting;

13. Invites the Holy See, in its capacity as observer State, and Palestine, in its capacity as observer, to participate in the preparatory activities and in the High-level Meeting;

14. Invites United Nations funds and programmes, the specialized agencies, in particular the World Health Organization, regional commissions, the Bretton Woods institutions, the World Trade Organization, the regional development banks, the United Nations Conference on Trade and Development and intergovernmental organizations and entities having observer status in the General Assembly to participate in the preparatory activities and in the High-level Meeting, in accordance with the rules of procedure as established by the Assembly;

15. Decides that the President of the General Assembly shall consult with representatives of non-governmental organizations in consultative status with the Economic and Social Council, civil society organizations, the private sector and academia, and with Member States, as appropriate, on the list of representatives of non-governmental organizations, civil society organizations, the private sector and academia, taking into account, to the extent possible, the principle of equitable geographical representation, and submit the list to Member States for consideration and for a final decision by the Assembly on participation in the High-level Meeting, including the round tables.

Water and sanitation

On 28 July, the General Assembly adopted resolution 64/292 (see p. 743), which recognized the right to safe and clean drinking water and sanitation as a human right and called upon States and international organizations to provide financial resources, capacity-building and technology transfer.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 20 December [meeting 69], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Second (Economic and Financial) Committee [A/65/436/Add.1], adopted resolution 65/153 [agenda item 20 (a)].

Follow-up to the International Year of Sanitation, 2008

The General Assembly,

Reaffirming the commitment to implement Agenda 21, the Programme for the Further Implementation of Agenda 21, the Plan of Implementation of the World Summit on

Sustainable Development (“Johannesburg Plan of Implementation”), including the time-bound goals and targets, and the other internationally agreed development goals, including the Millennium Development Goals,

Recalling the 2005 World Summit Outcome,

Recalling also its resolution 61/192 of 20 December 2006 on the International Year of Sanitation, 2008,

Recalling further the outcome document of the High-level Plenary Meeting of the General Assembly on the Millennium Development Goals and the commitments made therein,

Recalling Human Rights Council resolutions 7/22 of 28 March 2008, 12/8 of 1 October 2009 and 15/9 of 30 September 2010 on human rights and access to safe drinking water and sanitation,

Reaffirming the need to continue to increase sustainable access to safe drinking water and basic sanitation by prioritizing integrated water and sanitation strategies, which include the restoration, upgrading and maintenance of infrastructure, including water pipelines and sewage networks, as well as promoting integrated water management in national planning and exploring innovative ways of improving the tracking and monitoring of water quality,

Reaffirming also the necessity to take into account sanitation in complementarity with water, in conjunction with the International Decade for Action, “Water for Life”, 2005–2015,

Taking note of the report of the Secretary-General on the International Year of Sanitation, 2008,

Appreciating the ongoing work in the United Nations system and the work of other intergovernmental organizations on sanitation,

Noting the holding of the fifth World Water Forum in Istanbul, Turkey, from 16 to 22 March 2009, and noting also that the sixth World Water Forum will be held in Marseille, France, in March 2012,

Noting with appreciation the contribution made by the Advisory Board on Water and Sanitation, and noting its recent work on the Hashimoto Action Plan II,

Deeply concerned by the slow and insufficient progress in providing access to basic sanitation services, as evidenced by the 2010 report of the World Health Organization and the United Nations Children’s Fund, in which it was noted that 2.6 billion people continue to lack basic sanitation, and conscious of the impact of the lack of sanitation on people’s health, poverty reduction, economic and social development and the environment, in particular water resources,

Convinced that progress through action at the national and local levels in developing countries can be achieved through the active commitment of all Member States, with the support of the international community,

Noting the efforts of the Sanitation and Water for All partnership, and acknowledging the successes achieved through the community-led total sanitation approach, particularly in the context of hygiene promotion, behavioural change and sanitation progress,

Noting also regional efforts in the field of sanitation, such as the African Ministers’ Council on Water and those within the framework of the New Partnership for Africa’s Development,

1. Calls upon all Member States to support the global effort to realize “Sustainable sanitation: the five-year drive to 2015” by redoubling efforts to close the sanitation gap through scaled-up ground-level action, supported by strong political will, increased community participation and improved hygiene, in accordance with national development strategies, by promoting the mobilization and provision of adequate financial and technological resources, technical know-how and capacity-building for developing countries and by developing appropriate human resources in order to improve hygiene and to increase the coverage of basic sanitation, especially for the poor;

2. Encourages all States, as well as the United Nations system and all other relevant stakeholders, to take advantage of "Sustainable sanitation: the five-year drive to 2015" as a platform on which to build political will and promote action at all levels, while increasing awareness of the urgent need to reach the goal set out in the Johannesburg Plan of Implementation to halve by 2015 the proportion of people without access to basic sanitation;

3. Invites all Member States to increase political prioritization, to promote evidence-based decision-making and to support strong national planning processes in order to better target funding for basic sanitation and drinking water to achieve the internationally agreed targets set out in the United Nations Millennium Declaration and the Johannesburg Plan of Implementation, including halving by 2015 the proportion of people who are unable to reach or afford safe drinking water and who do not have access to basic sanitation;

4. Notes the efforts of countries that are participating in all relevant voluntary initiatives related to water and sanitation, including the Sanitation and Water for All partnership, to share their experience with interested Member States;

5. Urges all Member States, the United Nations system and all other relevant stakeholders to encourage behavioural change together with policies for increasing access to sanitation among the poor, complemented by a call to end open defecation as an extremely harmful practice for public health, and encourages Member States to further strengthen investments in sanitation and hygiene education;

6. Encourages all Member States, as well as the United Nations system and international organizations and other stakeholders, to approach the sanitation issue in a much broader context and to encompass all its aspects, including hygiene promotion, provision of basic sanitation services, sewerage, and wastewater treatment and reuse in the context of integrated water management.

Tobacco

At the end of 2010, 171 States and the European Union were parties to the WHO Framework Convention on Tobacco Control, which was adopted by the World Health Assembly in 2003 [YUN 2003, p. 1251] and entered into force in 2005.

The Conference of the Parties to the Convention, at its fourth session (Punta del Este, Uruguay, 15–20 November) [FCTC/COP/4/REC/1], issued a declaration urging the United Nations Ad Hoc Interagency Task Force on Tobacco Control to support coordination for strengthening implementation of the Convention within the UN system, also stressing the need to discuss tobacco control during the United Nations 2011 summit on non-communicable diseases. The Conference adopted implementation guidelines for articles 9 (regulation of the contents of tobacco products), 10 (regulation of tobacco product disclosures), 12 (education, communication, training and public awareness) and 14 (demand reduction measures concerning tobacco dependence and cessation). It requested the working group on economically sustainable alternatives to tobacco growing to continue its work and to report to the fifth session of the Conference. It also requested the Convention secretariat to report on electronic cigarettes and other smokeless tobacco products and nicotine delivery systems. The Conference extended the mandate of the Intergovernmental Negotiating Body on a Protocol on Illicit Trade in Tobacco Products and requested it to submit the text of the draft protocol to the Conference's fifth session. It also established an expert group on cross-border advertising, promotion and sponsorship of tobacco products, as well as a working group for elaborating guidelines for implementation of article 6 (price and tax measures to reduce the demand for tobacco).

Intergovernmental Negotiating Body on a Protocol on Illicit Trade in Tobacco Products. The Chairperson of the Intergovernmental Negotiating Body on a Protocol on Illicit Trade in Tobacco Products submitted a report [FCTC/COP/4/4] to the fourth session of the Conference of the Parties. The Negotiating Body held its fourth session (Geneva, 14–21 March), attended by 141 States parties, 10 States non-parties, three intergovernmental organizations, and eight non-governmental organizations (NGOs) accredited as observers. Participants recommended that the draft protocol [FCTC/COP/INB-IT/4/7] be considered by the Conference of the Parties at its fourth session.

Ad Hoc Inter-Agency Task Force

In May, the Secretary-General submitted to the Economic and Social Council a report on progress made by the Ad Hoc Inter-Agency Task Force on Tobacco Control [E/2010/55 & Corr.1], which met on 18 and 19 February in New York, in implementing multisectoral collaboration on tobacco or health. The report described tobacco consumption and progress made in the implementation of measures for reducing demand. According to the report, tobacco use killed more than 5 million people worldwide each year; the number was expected to increase to more than 8 million by 2030, almost 80 per cent of which would occur in developing countries. Only Panama had instituted a new advertising ban since 2008, while progress in tobacco taxation was slow, with nearly 94 per cent of the world's population living in countries where taxes amounted to less than 75 per cent of the price of a pack of cigarettes. Progress was made in implementing the demand reduction measures set out in the WHO Framework Convention on Tobacco Control; however, less than 10 per cent of the world population was covered by any one of the measures, and more needed to be done in terms of tobacco control.

The report reviewed the implementation of the Convention and examined areas for inter-agency collaboration. It highlighted the problems related to the disposal of 5 trillion non-biodegradable cigarette filters, containing carcinogenic and radioactive chemicals, into the environment every year. Regarding the implementation of General Assembly resolution 63/8 [YUN 2008, p. 1334], which prohibited smoking inside the United Nations, positive feedback and support was provided by Member States and UN staff members. The report recommended strengthening inter-agency support for the integration of tobacco control, as well as the preparation of a technical document on the environmental impact of discarded cigarette filters.

ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL ACTION

On 22 July [meeting 45], the Economic and Social Council adopted resolution 2010/8 [draft: E/2010/L.26 & E/2010/SR.45] without vote [agenda item 7 (g)].

Tobacco use and maternal and child health

The Economic and Social Council,

Taking note of the report of the Secretary-General on the Ad Hoc Inter-Agency Task Force on Tobacco Control, in which the need for a multisectoral and inter-agency response to the tobacco epidemic at the country and international levels is emphasized,

Recognizing the adverse impact of tobacco use on public health, as well as its social, economic and environmental consequences, including for efforts towards poverty eradication,

Considering the serious consequences of tobacco use for maternal and child health,

Recalling the preamble to the World Health Organization Framework Convention on Tobacco Control, and recognizing the increase in tobacco use among women and young girls as well as the devastating impact of exposure to tobacco smoke,

Acknowledging the effectiveness of tobacco control measures for the improvement of health,

Emphasizing the importance of protecting the well-being of women and their children,

1. Urges Member States to consider the importance of tobacco control in improving maternal and child health as part of their public health policies and in their development cooperation programmes;

2. Recognizes the importance of promoting tobacco control policies that include children, young people and the family;

3. Calls upon Member States to include tobacco control in their efforts to improve public health, including maternal and child health, and reduce child mortality, through the protection of children and pregnant women from tobacco use and exposure to tobacco smoke;

4. Calls upon all relevant United Nations funds, programmes and specialized agencies to work together to promote the reduction of tobacco use among women, in particular women of reproductive age, and those around them;

5. Requests the Secretary-General, in consultation with and with the support of the World Health Organization, to convene a meeting of the Ad Hoc Inter-Agency Task Force on Tobacco Control, in accordance with paragraph 50 (b) of the report of the Secretary-General, to discuss further strengthening of the multisectoral and inter-agency response to the global tobacco epidemic and to report thereon to the Economic and Social Council;

6. Also requests the Secretary-General to submit to the Council at its substantive session of 2012 a report on the work of the Task Force.

Malaria

Roll Back Malaria initiative

The Secretary-General in August transmitted to the General Assembly the WHO report entitled “2001–2010: Decade to Roll Back Malaria in Developing Countries, Particularly in Africa” [A/65/210], which highlighted progress made in achieving goals for the control of malaria set by resolution 62/180 [YUN 2007, p. 1268]. The report stated that malaria control efforts had attracted political attention and financial support. Annual funding commitments increased from less than $0.2 billion in 2000 to $1.6 billion in 2009 as a result of the establishment of the Global Fund to Fight AIDS, Tuberculosis and Malaria in 2002 [YUN 2002, p. 1217] and commitments by the United States, the World Bank and other agencies. Disbursements to malaria-endemic countries rose from $35 million in 2000 to nearly $1.5 billion in 2009. The increased funding allowed measurable reductions in the incidence of malaria. An increased percentage of African households (31 per cent) were estimated to own at least one insecticide-treated net in 2008, compared to 17 per cent in 2006. More than half of households in 13 high-burden African countries had insecticide-treated nets. The number of such nets delivered to sub-Saharan African countries rose from 5.6 million in 2004 to 88.5 million in 2009; a further 70 million nets were delivered in the first half of 2010. An analysis of malaria control scale-up in 35 African countries found that it had saved more than 560,000 lives between 2000 and 2009, and that more than one third of the affected countries had documented reductions of over 50 per cent. In high-burden African countries that had achieved high coverage with bed nets and treatment programmes, recorded cases of and deaths due to malaria had fallen by 50 per cent. That suggested that the MDG targets on reversing the incidence of malaria [YUN 2000, p. 51] could be met with adequate coverage and key interventions.

The use of artemisinin combination therapies increased compared with 2006, but remained low in most African countries. Parasite resistance to anti-malarial medicines and mosquito resistance to insecticides posed major threats to the achievement of global malaria control.

On 24 December, the General Assembly decided that the agenda item “2001–2010: Decade to Roll Back Malaria in Developing Countries, Particularly in Africa” would remain for consideration during its resumed sixty-fifth (2011) session (decision 65/544).

Global public health

The sixty-third session of the World Health Assembly (Geneva, 17–21 May) [WHA63/2010/REC/1], attended by more than 2,800 delegates, adopted resolutions on issues such as viral hepatitis; international recruitment of health personnel; food safety; availability, safety and quality of blood products; human organ and tissue transplantation; and a strategy to reduce the harmful use of alcohol. It also discussed non-communicable disease control, public health, innovation and intellectual property, global eradication of measles, treatment and prevention of pneumonia, and counterfeit medical products.

Coordination segment of the Economic and Social Council

The coordination segment of the substantive session of the Economic and Social Council (New York, 6–8 and 23 July) [A/65/3/Rev.1] discussed the role of the UN system in promoting the implementation of the ministerial declaration adopted by the Council in 2009 [YUN 2009, p. 1227], entitled “Implementing the internationally agreed goals and commitments in regard to global public health”. The Council held panel discussions on the themes “Towards a United Nations comprehensive policy response to global health challenges” and “Coordinating efforts for achieving the health-related Millennium Development Goals”.

The Council considered the report of the Secretary-General on the implementation of internationally agreed development goals and commitments in regard to global public health [E/2010/85], which assessed the efforts of the UN system to implement the ministerial declaration in a coordinated manner, analysed UN country-level experiences to promote health, and recommended steps to promote the coordinated implementation of the ministerial declaration.

On 23 July [meeting 46], the Economic and Social Council adopted resolution 2010/24 [draft: E/2010/L.13] without vote [agenda item 4].

The role of the United Nations system in implementing the ministerial declaration on the internationally agreed goals and commitments in regard to global public health adopted at the high-level segment of the substantive session of 2009 of the Economic and Social Council

The Economic and Social Council,

Recalling the United Nations Millennium Declaration and the 2005 World Summit Outcome,

Recalling also the ministerial declaration of the high-level segment of its substantive session of 2009,

Recalling further its resolutions 2009/28 and 2009/29 of 31 July 2009, adopted at the coordination segment of its substantive session of 2009, as well as other relevant resolutions,

Recognizing the leading role of the World Health Organization as the primary specialized agency for health, including its roles and functions with regard to health policy in accordance with its mandate, and recalling the relevant resolutions adopted by the World Health Assembly,

Recognizing also that everyone has the right to the enjoyment of the highest attainable standard of physical and mental health,

Recognizing further that global public health, including effective and sustainable health systems, is central to achieving all of the Millennium Development Goals and requires a combination of public health policies and other intersectoral actions, including in the areas of gender equality, education, nutrition, safe drinking water, hygiene, sanitation, sustainable urbanization and rural development,

Recognizing that the internationally agreed development goals, including the Millennium Development Goals, are interlinked, expressing its concern that progress in achieving some of them is lagging, and reiterating its commitment to continuing to reinvigorate and strengthen the global partnership for development as a vital element for achieving these goals, in particular the health-related goals,

1. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General entitled “Theme of the coordination segment: implementing the internationally agreed development goals and commitments in regard to global public health”;

2. Welcomes the increasing focus on advancing maternal and child health, in particular newborn health, and recognizes that coordination of strategies between different health services and programmes across the continuum of care, based on the values and principles of primary health care, in particular equity, solidarity, social justice, universal access to services, multisectoral actions, transparency, accountability, community participation and empowerment, enhances maternal and child health, in particular newborn health, and strengthens the overall robustness of health systems;

3. Stresses the importance of strengthening health systems and improving coordinated health-care service delivery as they relate to the Millennium Development Goals, in particular Goals 4, 5 and 6, and invites the General Assembly to take this into consideration in the context of the High-level Plenary Meeting of the Assembly on the Millennium Development Goals, to be held from 20 to 22 September 2010, building on the ministerial declaration of 2009;

4. Takes note of the Social Protection Floor Initiative of the United Nations System Chief Executives Board for Coordination, led by the International Labour Organization and the World Health Organization;

5. Welcomes the adoption by the Sixty-third World Health Assembly of the World Health Organization Global Code of Practice on the International Recruitment of Health Personnel, and also welcomes its contributions to national, bilateral, regional and international responses to the challenges of the migration of health personnel and the strengthening of health systems and to the achievement of the Millennium Development Goals;

6. Urges the World Health Organization and other relevant entities of the United Nations system to continue to assist countries in adopting multisectoral approaches in relation to health issues, as appropriate, and to support country-led efforts to integrate health into national sectoral policies in such areas as agriculture, the environment, transport, trade, taxation, education, gender equality, social planning and development, urban planning, mass media and food and pharmaceutical production;

7. Requests relevant entities of the United Nations system to support efforts by Member States to strengthen health systems in order to deliver equitable health outcomes, including through the promotion of:

(a) Additional and/or sustained investments to strengthen health infrastructure, training and retention policies for a skilled workforce, the procurement and distribution of medicines, vaccines, medical products and technologies, service delivery and information systems, especially at the level of primary health care;

(b) An enabling environment for the achievement of universal access to health and health-care services based on equitable and sustainable systems of financing, and extended social protection, in particular for the poor and people in vulnerable situations, with adequate attention paid to preventive health and health-care services;

(c) Improved governance and high-quality leadership, including at the local and community levels;

(d) Fiscal and administrative devolution, as appropriate, in order to improve governance, performance and accountability in the health sector;

(e) Decent work, including decent working conditions for health workers, essential for improving the quality of and access to health services;

(f) Appropriate incentive policies for the training, recruitment and retention of health workers in order to increase universal access to health services, including in remote and rural areas, and avert a global shortage and an imbalance in the distribution of health workers, in particular a shortage of such workers in Africa, stressing the challenges facing developing countries in this regard;

(g) Strengthened epidemiological surveillance and health information management systems and coordinated communication in order to increase health emergency preparedness;

(h) A strengthened role for civil society and the private sector in national processes and integrated delivery systems, where appropriate, in order to further escalate efforts;

(i) The strengthened sharing of experience, best practices and lessons learned among Member States, at the regional, intraregional and subregional levels, on policy options, strategies and initiatives in support of public health;

(j) Improved coordination of international cooperation efforts at the country level with national Governments, through such initiatives as the International Health Partnership, designed to provide a framework within which development partners can mobilize more effectively behind robust, more cost-effective and inclusive national health plans, and more flexible and predictable resources;

8. Invites the United Nations system to place gender equality at the centre of the response to global health goals with a view to increasing the impact of health policies and maximizing the quality of services, in particular for the poor and people living in vulnerable situations;

9. Reaffirms that gender equality and the empowerment of women cannot be achieved without promoting and protecting the right of women to enjoy the highest attainable standard of physical and mental health, including sexual and reproductive health, and encourages the United Nations system to assist Member States in meeting their commitments in this regard, including the commitments relating to sexual and reproductive health, and in promoting and protecting all human rights in this context, and to promote universal access to reproductive health, including by integrating family planning, sexual health and health-care services in national strategies and programmes;

10. Invites the World Health Organization, the United Nations Population Fund, the United Nations Children's Fund and the Joint United Nations Programme on HIV/AIDS to make special efforts to invest in family planning and maternal and child health, in particular newborn health, building on ongoing efforts of the relevant United Nations funds and programmes and the specialized agencies, including the Global Consensus on Maternal, Newborn and Child Health of 2009 and the Global Strategy for Infant and Young Child Feeding of the World Health Organization and the United Nations Children's Fund;

11. Requests the United Nations system to continue coordinated action to respond to communicable diseases, in particular HIV/AIDS, malaria and tuberculosis, as prioritized by the Millennium Development Goals, including through the secretariat and co-sponsors of the Joint United Nations Programme on HIV/AIDS, as well as to increase action to respond to those diseases, which contribute significantly to child mortality;

12. Encourages all relevant United Nations funds and programmes and the specialized agencies to join in the fight against non-communicable diseases, which threaten socioeconomic development and present overwhelming challenges to national health systems, including through the World Health Organization Global Non-communicable Disease Network, and to promote coordinated United Nations system-wide support for low- and middle-income countries in combating those diseases;

13. Calls upon the United Nations system to support strategies to address the impact that working conditions can have on health status, health equity and general well-being and to improve employment and working conditions at the global, national and local levels, in particular to reduce exposure to work-related physical and psychosocial hazards, in order to help to reduce the negative health effects of the environment in which people work;

14. Invites the United Nations system to support and participate in, as appropriate, the activities being envisaged for the implementation of the Decade of Action for Road Safety 2011–2020, proclaimed by the General Assembly in its resolution 64/255 of 2 March 2010;

15. Encourages United Nations funds and programmes and the specialized agencies, as appropriate within their respective mandates, to further develop and draw maximum benefit from partnerships with a wide range of relevant actors, including the private sector and civil society, and to continue to foster relations with global health partnerships, such as the Global Fund to Fight AIDS, Tuberculosis and Malaria, the GAVI Alliance and the International Drug Purchase Facility, UNITAID, in order to gain from the capacity of those partnerships to mobilize different players;

16. Calls upon United Nations funds and programmes and the specialized agencies, as appropriate, to intensify their efforts to eliminate hunger and to secure food for all, and reaffirms their need for assured and sustained funding and increased investments to expand and enhance their efforts dedicated to fighting hunger and malnutrition;

17. Calls upon the Joint United Nations Programme on HIV/AIDS to continue to support middle- and low-income countries affected by specific challenges in their fight against HIV/AIDS and to continue the review and optimization of the division of labour among agencies regarding technical cooperation at the country level in order to prevent overlap and thereby promote a more effective response to HIV/AIDS;

18. Calls upon the United Nations system to support efforts to fulfil existing official development assistance commitments, including with regard to the health sector, and highlights the need for Member States to ensure that sufficient and increasing equitable domestic resources are programmed for the health sector to achieve better health outcomes;

19. Welcomes the various initiatives taken by the international community in support of efforts regarding global public health, and calls upon the United Nations to build on those efforts to promote global public health;

20. Notes the efforts of the Secretary-General to improve the health of women and children, including with regard to a joint action plan;

21. Welcomes the ongoing efforts to develop a health systems funding platform by the Global Fund to Fight AIDS, Tuberculosis and Malaria, the GAVI Alliance and the World Bank, facilitated by the World Health Organization, and encourages partnerships with Member States, the private sector, civil society and other relevant stakeholders in the utilization of the platform;

22. Encourages the efforts of the World Health Organization, the World Intellectual Property Organization and the World Trade Organization to implement the Global Strategy and Plan of Action on Public Health, Innovation and Intellectual Property, endorsed by the Sixty-second World Health Assembly;

23. Urges the United Nations system, in particular the World Intellectual Property Organization, the United Nations Industrial Development Organization, the United Nations Development Programme, the United Nations Conference on Trade and Development and the World Health Organization, to support the efforts of Member States to build national capacity to ensure compliance with their obligations and their right to utilize, to the full, the provisions contained in the World Trade Organization Agreement on Trade-Related Aspects of Intellectual Property Rights (TRIPS Agreement), the Doha Declaration on the TRIPS Agreement and Public Health and the decision of the General Council of the World Trade Organization of 30 August 2003 on the implementation of paragraph 6 of the Doha Declaration on the TRIPS Agreement and Public Health;

24. Stresses the need for international cooperation and assistance, in particular external funding, to be more sustainable and predictable, better aligned with national priorities and channelled to recipient countries in ways that strengthen national health systems, underlines the importance of improving the effectiveness of aid, and calls upon the United Nations system to provide support in this regard;

25. Encourages the United Nations system to explore new, voluntary and innovative financing models in the health sector as supplementary to, and not as a substitute for, traditional sources of finance, and takes into consideration the work and recommendations of the Leading Group on Innovative Financing for Development, as well as the findings of the High-level Task Force on Innovative International Financing for Health Systems.

General Assembly High-level Meeting on the MDGs. By resolution 65/1 of 22 September (see p. 815), Heads of State and Government committed themselves to promoting global public health for all to achieve the MDGs.

Global health and foreign policy

Pursuant to General Assembly resolution 64/108 [YUN 2009, p. 1227], the Secretary-General in October transmitted to the Assembly a report on global health and foreign policy [A/65/399] prepared in collaboration with the WHO Director General and after consultations with Member States. The report highlighted the foreign policy importance of global health issues, emphasized the need for a more rigorous understanding of their relationship, and stressed the need for more coherence between foreign and health policies within Member States.

Communication. On 14 October [A/65/538], Brazil and Norway transmitted to the Assembly the Ministerial Declaration adopted on 22 September by the Ministers for Foreign Affairs of Brazil, Norway, Thailand, Senegal and Indonesia, the Minister of Health of South Africa and the Director for Global Public Goods at the Directorate-General for Globalization, Development and Partnerships of France, who met on the margins of the High-level Plenary Meeting of the General Assembly on the MDGs to take stock of the achievements of the Foreign Policy and Global Health Initiative and to look at the way ahead.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 9 December [meeting 61], the General Assembly adopted resolution 65/95 [draft: A/65/L.27 & Add.1] without vote [agenda item 124].

Global health and foreign policy

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 63/33 of 26 November 2008 and 64/108 of 10 December 2009,

Recalling also the outcomes of the major United Nations conferences and summits in the economic, social and related fields, especially those related to global health,

Welcoming the outcome document of the High-level Plenary Meeting of the General Assembly on the Millennium Development Goals, including the section entitled "Promoting global public health for all to achieve the Millennium Development Goals",

Welcoming also the launching of the Secretary-General's Global Strategy for Women's and Children's Health, which aims at supporting national plans and strategies in health matters, including for the reduction of maternal and child mortality,

Welcoming further the establishment of the United Nations Entity for Gender Equality and the Empowerment of Women (UN-Women),

Recalling its resolution 64/265 of 13 May 2010 on the prevention and control of non-communicable diseases, and welcoming the decision to convene a high-level meeting of the General Assembly in September 2011, with the participation of Heads of State and Government, on the prevention and control of non-communicable diseases,

Welcoming the plans to hold in 2011 the Second Global Forum on Human Resources for Health, in Bangkok from 25 to 29 January, during the Prince Mahidol Award Conference, the World Health Organization World Conference on Social Determinants of Health, in Rio de Janeiro, Brazil, from 19 to 21 October, and the first Global Ministerial Conference on Healthy Lifestyles and Non-communicable Diseases, in Moscow on 28 and 29 April, and for the General Assembly, also in 2011, to undertake a comprehensive HIV/AIDS review,

Acknowledging the emergence of a growing worldwide movement in support of universal access to health care as a means to promote and protect the right of every human being to the enjoyment of the highest attainable standard of physical and mental health,

Reaffirming the commitment to fully and effectively implement the Beijing Platform for Action, the Programme of Action of the International Conference on Population and Development and the outcomes of their review conferences, including the commitments relating to sexual and reproductive health and the promotion and protection of all human rights in this context,

Acknowledging that inequities in access to health care can increase during times of crisis and that special efforts should be made to maintain public health and primary health-care functions during these periods,

Stressing the importance of aid targeted to the health sector as a complement to domestic financing, as well as of innovative sources of financing and North-South cooperation in support of national plans and strategies aimed at strengthening national health systems,

Calling for the fulfilment of all existing official development assistance-related commitments,

Acknowledging the various national, regional and sub-regional initiatives to enhance South-South cooperation, particularly in the field of health, and that South-South cooperation is not a substitute for, but rather a complement to North-South cooperation,

Reiterating the willingness of Member States to cooperate in health issues and in promoting universal access to medicines that are safe, affordable, effective and of good quality, and to continue efforts to increase global vaccine production capacity in order to increase availability of and achieve equity in the access to vaccines in situations of pandemics,

Reaffirming the right to use, to the fullest extent, the provisions contained in the World Trade Organization Agreement on Trade-related Aspects of Intellectual Property Rights (TRIPS Agreement), the Doha Declaration on the TRIPS Agreement and Public Health, the decision of the General Council of the World Trade Organization of 30 August 2003 on the implementation of paragraph 6 of the Doha Declaration and, when formal acceptance procedures are completed, the amendments to article 31 of the TRIPS Agreement, as proposed by the General Council of the World Trade Organization in its decision of 6 December 2005, which provide flexibilities for the protection of public health, and in particular to promote access to medicines for all, encouraging the provision of assistance to developing countries in this regard, and calling for a broad and timely acceptance of the amendments to article 31 of the TRIPS Agreement,

Acknowledging the need to improve research and development in neglected tropical diseases, and welcoming in this regard the first World Health Organization report on neglected tropical diseases,

Welcoming the adoption by the sixty-third World Health Assembly of the World Health Organization Global Code of Practice on the International Recruitment of Health Personnel as a guide to respond to the concerns over the lack of and imbalanced distribution of health workers within countries and throughout the world, in particular the shortage in Africa, and the retention of health personnel, in a manner that strengthens the health systems of developing countries, countries with economies in transition and small island developing States,

Noting with appreciation the adoption by the World Health Assembly on 21 May 2010 of its resolution 63.15 on the monitoring of the achievement of the health-related Millennium Development Goals, as well as its resolution 63.19, in which it requests the preparation of a World Health Organization HIV/AIDS strategy for 2011–2015, to be submitted to the sixty-fourth World Health Assembly,

Recognizing that mental health problems are of major importance to all societies and are significant contributors to the burden of disease and the loss of quality of life, and have huge economic and social costs, and welcoming the 2010 report of the World Health Organization on mental health and development,

Noting the role of the Foreign Policy and Global Health Initiative in promoting synergy between foreign policy and global health, as well as the contribution of the Oslo Ministerial Declaration, which was reaffirmed, with renewed actions and commitments, by the ministerial declaration of 22 September 2010,

1. Notes with appreciation the report of the Secretary-General and the recommendations contained therein;

2. Calls for more attention to health as an important policy issue on the international agenda;

3. Encourages Member States to consider the close relationship between foreign policy and global health and to recognize that global health challenges require concerted and sustained efforts in order to further promote a global policy environment supportive of global health;

4. Recognizes that, despite some progress made, challenges in global health, including major inequities and vulnerabilities within and among countries and regions, still remain and demand persistent attention;

5. Acknowledges that progress in global health is dependent primarily on national policies and actions and on international cooperation and partnerships, which could help to respond to major global challenges and crises;

6. Underscores the urgency of strengthening health systems by improving basic infrastructures, human and technical resources and the provision of health facilities, and of ensuring the accessibility, affordability and quality of health-care services as well as sustainable access to safe drinking water and basic sanitation;

7. Stresses the importance of achieving the health-related Millennium Development Goals, especially with the objective of eradicating poverty and ensuring socioeconomic development;

8. Underlines the importance of realizing the right of everyone to education as an integral part of a healthy society, and in this context reaffirms that access to primary education for all constitutes one of the most effective means to promote public health and basic sanitation and to prevent diseases;

9. Acknowledges that gender equality, the empowerment of women, the full enjoyment by women of all human rights and the eradication of poverty are essential to economic and social development;

10. Underlines the central role of the global partnership for development and the importance of Goal 8 in achieving the Millennium Development Goals, and recognizes that without substantial international support, several of the Goals are likely to be missed in many developing countries by 2015;

11. Reiterates that each country has primary responsibility for its own economic and social development and that the role of national policies, domestic resources and development strategies cannot be overemphasized;

12. Stresses the need to strengthen health systems so that they deliver equitable health outcomes as a basis for a comprehensive approach to achieving Millennium Development Goals 4, 5 and 6, underlining the need to build sustainable national health systems and strengthen national capacities through attention to, inter alia, service delivery, health systems financing, including appropriate budgetary allocations, the health workforce, health information systems, the procurement and distribution of medicines, vaccines and technologies, sexual and reproductive health care and political will in leadership and governance;

13. Acknowledges the need to further address the issue of governance for global health as health is increasingly being challenged by new realities of an interdependent world;

14. Acknowledges also the need to make the global health architecture more effective, efficient and responsive, in order to, inter alia, bring more coherence to the delivery of health outcomes and enhance health equity;

15. Reaffirms the central role of the United Nations system in meeting the challenges of global health in a changing environment and the need to enhance the visibility of health issues in the different United Nations forums;

16. Recognizes the leading role of the World Health Organization as the primary specialized agency for health, including its roles and functions with regard to health policy in accordance with its mandate;

17. Stresses the continued need for coordination and coherence at national and international levels to enhance the effectiveness of health initiatives and partnerships;

18. Urges Member States to continue to consider health issues in the formulation of foreign policy;

19. Encourages Member States, the United Nations system, academic institutions and networks to further increase their capacity for the training of diplomats and health officials, in particular those from developing countries, on global health and foreign policy, by developing best practices and guidelines for training and open-source information, and educational and training resources for this purpose;

20. Requests the Secretary-General, in close collaboration with the Director-General of the World Health Organization and with other relevant multilateral institutions, as appropriate, to give high priority to generating and collecting comparable and reliable data on health-worker migration, distribution and coverage within the framework of the World Health Organization Global Code of Practice on the International Recruitment of Health Personnel;

21. Also requests the Secretary-General, in close collaboration with the Director-General of the World Health Organization, with the participation of relevant programmes, funds and specialized agencies of the United Nations system, and in consultation with Member States, to submit a report to the General Assembly at its sixty-sixth session, under the item entitled "Global health and foreign policy", which, inter alia:

(a) Reflects on ways to improve the coordination, coherence and effectiveness of governance for global health;

(b) Discusses the role of the State and other stakeholders in improving the coordination, coherence and effectiveness of governance for global health;

(c) Presents recommendations on enhancing the coordination of policies addressing the social determinants of health.

Women's health

Maternal health

As a contribution to the preparations for the high-level meeting of the General Assembly on the MDGs, the Netherlands, on 16 March, transmitted the "Addis Call to Urgent Action for Maternal Health" [A/64/725], adopted by the High-level Meeting on Maternal Health (Addis Ababa, Ethiopia, 26 October 2009). The meeting, organized by the Netherlands and UNFPA, called for access to modern contraception, investment in adolescent health, education and livelihoods, and the strengthening of health systems for women.

The General Assembly, on 21 December, adopted resolution 65/188 (see p. 1141) supporting efforts to end obstetric fistula, a fatal but preventable childbirth injury that affected impoverished women and girls in rural and remote areas of the developing world.

Road safety

The General Assembly considered a draft resolution on improving global road safety as well as a WHO report on the issue [YUN 2009, p. 1229], and proclaimed the Decade of Action for Road Safety, 2011–2020.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 2 March [meeting 74], the General Assembly adopted resolution 64/255 [draft: A/64/L.44/Rev.1 & Add.1] without vote [agenda item 46].

Improving global road safety

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 57/309 of 22 May 2003, 58/9 of 5 November 2003, 58/289 of 14 April 2004, 60/5 of 26 October 2005 and 62/244 of 31 March 2008 on improving global road safety,

Having considered the note by the Secretary-General transmitting the report on improving global road safety and the recommendations contained therein,

Recognizing the tremendous global burden of mortality resulting from road traffic crashes, as well as the twenty to fifty million people who incur each year non-fatal road traffic injuries, many of whom are left with lifelong disabilities,

Noting that this major public health problem has a broad range of social and economic consequences which, if unaddressed, may affect the sustainable development of countries and hinder progress towards the Millennium Development Goals,

Underlining the importance for Member States to continue using the World Report on Road Traffic Injury Prevention as a framework for road safety efforts and implementing its recommendations, as appropriate, by paying particular attention to the main risk factors identified, including the non-use of safety belts and child restraints, the non-use of helmets, driving under the influence of alcohol and drugs, inappropriate and excessive speed and the lack of appropriate infrastructure, by strengthening road safety management and by paying particular attention also to the needs of vulnerable road users, such as pedestrians, cyclists and motorcyclists, and users of unsafe public transport, as well as by improving post-crash care for victims of road crashes,

Commending the World Health Organization for its role in implementing the mandate conferred upon it by the General Assembly to work in close cooperation with the United Nations regional commissions to coordinate road safety issues within the United Nations system, and commending also the progress of the United Nations Road Safety Collaboration as a consultative mechanism whose members provide Governments and civil society with good practice guidelines to support action to tackle the major road safety risk factors and support their implementation,

Recognizing the work of the United Nations regional commissions and their subsidiary bodies in increasing their road safety activities and advocating increased political commitment to road safety, and in this context welcoming the conclusions and recommendations of the project “Improving global road safety: setting regional and national road traffic casualty reduction targets”, implemented by the United Nations regional commissions to assist low- and middle-income countries in setting and achieving road traffic casualty reduction targets,

Acknowledging the Ministerial Declaration on Violence and Injury Prevention in the Americas signed by the Ministers of Health of the Americas during the Ministerial Meeting on Violence and Injury Prevention in the Americas, held in Mérida, Mexico, on 14 March 2008, the Doha Declaration and other outcomes of the workshop on building the Arab Mashreq road safety partnership organized by the Economic and Social Commission for Western Asia in Doha on 21 and 22 October 2008, the conclusions and recommendations of the Economic Commission for Europe conference on the theme “Improving Road Traffic Safety in South-Eastern Europe: Setting Regional and National Road Traffic Casualty Reduction Targets”, held in Halkida, Greece, on 25 and 26 June 2009, the workshop on setting regional and national road traffic casualty reduction targets in the Economic and Social Commission for Western Asia region organized by the Commission, in collaboration with the United Arab Emirates National Authority for Transportation, in Abu Dhabi on 16 and 17 June 2009, the conference on the theme “Make Roads Safe Africa” organized by the Economic Commission for Africa in Dar es Salaam, United Republic of Tanzania, on 8 July 2009, the Ministerial Declaration on Improving Road Safety in Asia and the Pacific, adopted at the Ministerial Conference on Transport organized by the Economic and Social Commission for Asia and the Pacific in Busan, Republic of Korea, from 6 to 11 November 2006, and the recommendations of the Expert Group Meeting on Improving Road Safety organized by the Economic and Social Commission for Asia and the Pacific in Bangkok from 2 to 4 September 2009, noting, in particular, the usefulness of compiling guidelines outlining best practices in road safety improvement in the region, as well as the outcomes of expert group meetings on improving road safety organized by the Economic and Social Commission for Asia and the Pacific in 2008 and 2009,

Acknowledging also a number of other important international efforts on road safety, including the report of the International Transport Forum of the Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development entitled Towards Zero: Ambitious Road Safety Targets and the Safe System Approach, the International Conference on Road Safety at Work, held in Washington, D.C., from 16 to 18 February 2009, and the conference on the theme “Road Safety at Work”, held in Dublin on 15 June 2009, which highlighted the importance of fleet safety and the important role of the private sector in addressing driving behaviour concerns among their workers,

Noting all national and regional initiatives to raise awareness of road safety issues,

Noting also the important role of the World Bank Global Road Safety Facility as a funding mechanism to support capacity-building and provide technical support for road safety and as a means to increase the resources needed to address road safety in low- and middle-income countries, acknowledging the increase in funding to support national, regional and global road safety work, and welcoming, in particular, the financial assistance given to the World Health Organization and the Global Road Safety Facility by all donors, including the Governments of Australia, the Netherlands and Sweden, and by Bloomberg Philanthropies and the FIA Foundation for the Automobile and Society,

Noting further the work of the International Organization for Standardization to develop standards for road traffic safety management systems,

Taking note of the report of the Commission for Global Road Safety entitled Make Roads Safe: A Decade of Action for Road Safety, which links road safety with sustainable development and calls for a decade of action on road safety, and taking note also of the “Make Roads Safe” campaign as a global tool for increasing awareness and advocating increased funding for road safety,

Recognizing the World Health Organization publication entitled Global Status Report on Road Safety: Time for Action, which provides the first assessment of the road safety situation at the global level and highlights the fact that half of all road traffic deaths are among vulnerable road users, as well as the relatively low proportion of the countries in the world that have comprehensive legislation on key road safety risk factors,

Welcoming the joint statement by the World Bank and the six leading multilateral development banks, namely, the African Development Bank, the Asian Development Bank, the European Bank for Reconstruction and Development, the European Investment Bank, the Inter-American Development Bank and the Islamic Development Bank, in which they undertook to cooperate on increasing the road safety component of their infrastructure programmes through better coordination of their investments and through the application of safety audits and assessments of road infrastructure projects,

Expressing its concern at the continued increase in road traffic fatalities and injuries worldwide, in particular in low- and middle-income countries, bearing in mind that the fatality rate within the road system is considerably higher than the fatality rate within other transport systems, even in high-income countries,

Recognizing the efforts made by some low- and middle-income countries to implement best practices, to set ambitious targets and to monitor road traffic fatalities,

Reaffirming the need to further strengthen international cooperation and knowledge-sharing in road safety, taking into account the needs of low- and middle-income countries,

Recognizing that a solution to the global road safety crisis can be achieved only through multisectoral collaboration and partnerships among all concerned in both the public and the private sectors, with the involvement of civil society,

Recognizing also the role of research in informing policy-based decisions on road safety and in monitoring and evaluating the effect of interventions, as well as the need for more research to address the emerging issue of distractions in traffic as a risk factor for road traffic crashes,

Acknowledging the leading role of Oman in drawing the attention of the international community to the global road safety crisis,

Commending the Government of the Russian Federation for hosting the first Global Ministerial Conference on Road Safety, held in Moscow on 19 and 20 November 2009, which brought together delegations of ministers and representatives dealing with transport, health, education, safety and related traffic law enforcement issues and which culminated in a declaration inviting the General Assembly to declare a decade of action for road safety,

1. Welcomes the declaration adopted at the first Global Ministerial Conference on Road Safety, held in Moscow on 19 and 20 November 2009;

2. Proclaims the period 2011–2020 as the Decade of Action for Road Safety, with a goal to stabilize and then reduce the forecast level of road traffic fatalities around the world by increasing activities conducted at the national, regional and global levels;

3. Requests the World Health Organization and the United Nations regional commissions, in cooperation with other partners in the United Nations Road Safety Collaboration and other stakeholders, to prepare a plan of action of the Decade as a guiding document to support the implementation of its objectives;

4. Reaffirms the importance of addressing global road safety issues and the need to further strengthen international cooperation, taking into account the needs of low- and middle-income countries, including those of the least developed countries and African countries, by building capacity in the field of road safety and by providing financial and technical support for their efforts;

5. Acknowledges that multilateral technical and financial assistance in support of capacity-building for enhancing road safety should be provided in a predictable and timely manner without unwarranted conditionalities, considering that there is no one-size-fits-all formula and considering also the specific situation of each country based on its needs and priorities;

6. Calls upon Member States to implement road safety activities, particularly in the areas of road safety management, road infrastructure, vehicle safety, road user behaviour, including distractions in traffic, road safety education and post-crash care, including rehabilitation for people with disabilities, based on the plan of action;

7. Invites all Member States to set their own national road traffic casualty reduction targets to be achieved by the end of the Decade, in line with the plan of action;

8. Calls for the inclusion within the plan of action of activities that pay attention to the needs of all road users, in particular pedestrians, cyclists and other vulnerable road users in low- and middle-income countries, through support for appropriate legislation and policy and infrastructure and by increasing sustainable means of transport, and in this regard invites international financial institutions and regional development banks to assist developing countries in building sustainable mass transportation systems with a view to reducing road traffic accidents;

9. Also calls for joint multisectoral action to increase the proportion of countries with comprehensive legislation on key risk factors for road traffic injuries, including the non-use of seat belts and child restraints and helmets, drink-driving and speed, from the 15 per cent identified in the Global Status Report on Road Safety: Time for Action to over 50 per cent by the end of the Decade, and encourages

Member States to strengthen their enforcement of existing road safety legislation on these risk factors;

10. Encourages Governments, public and private corporations, non-governmental organizations and multilateral organizations to take action, as appropriate, to discourage distractions in traffic, including texting while driving, which lead to increased morbidity and mortality owing to road crashes;

11. Invites Governments to take a leading role in implementing the activities of the Decade, while fostering a multisectoral collaboration of efforts that includes academia, the private sector, professional associations, non-governmental organizations and civil society, including national Red Cross and Red Crescent Societies, victims' organizations and youth organizations, and the media;

12. Invites Member States, international organizations, development banks and funding agencies, foundations, professional associations and private sector companies to consider providing adequate and additional funding to activities relating to the Decade;

13. Requests the United Nations Road Safety Collaboration to continue its role of informal consultative mechanism, including for the implementation of activities relating to the Decade;

14. Invites the World Health Organization and the United Nations regional commissions, in cooperation with other partners in the United Nations Road Safety Collaboration, to organize the second United Nations Global Road Safety Week to launch the Decade;

15. Encourages Member States to continue to strengthen their commitment to road safety, including by observing the World Day of Remembrance for Road Traffic Victims on the third Sunday of November every year;

16. Also encourages Member States to become contracting parties to and to implement the United Nations road safety-related legal instruments, as well as to adhere to the Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities;

17. Invites the World Health Organization and the United Nations regional commissions to coordinate regular monitoring, within the framework of the United Nations Road Safety Collaboration, of global progress towards meeting the targets identified in the plan of action and to develop global status reports on road safety and other appropriate monitoring tools;

18. Invites Member States and the international community to integrate road safety into other international agendas, such as those on development, environment and urbanization;

19. Acknowledges the importance of midterm and final reviews of the progress achieved over the Decade, and invites interested Member States, in consultation with the United Nations Road Safety Collaboration, to organize international, regional and national meetings to assess the implementation of the Decade;

20. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its sixty-sixth session the item entitled "Global road safety crisis", and requests the Secretary-General to report to the General Assembly at that session on the progress made in the attainment of the objectives of the Decade.

Food aid

World Food Programme

The Executive Board of the World Food Programme (WFP) held its first (8–11 February), annual (7–11 June) and second (8–11 November) sessions in Rome, during which it decided on organizational and programme matters and approved a number of projects. On 10 November, the Board approved its 2011–2012 biennial programme of work [WFP/EB.2/2010/11].

The Economic and Social Council, by decision 2010/251 of 23 July, took note of the report of the Executive Board [E/2010/36] on its first and second regular sessions and annual session of 2009. The Council also took note of the 2009 WFP annual report transmitted by the Secretary-General in March [E/2010/14].

WFP activities

According to the WFP annual performance report for 2010 [WFP/EB.A/2011/4], WFP assisted 109.2 million people in 75 countries with food and with livelihood and nutrition support. It provided 5.7 million metric tons of food, or 66 per cent of global food aid. Women and children accounted for 82 per cent of beneficiaries. WFP assisted 8.5 million children to protect them from irreversible mental and physical damage caused by malnutrition. Response to natural disasters—373 were recorded by the United Nations International Strategy for Disaster Reduction—consumed 20 per cent of WFP aid. WFP led several UN clusters and mobilized additional experienced staff to help manage operations to assist people affected by the earthquake in Haiti, the drought in Niger and the floods in Pakistan. WFP also gave assistance to people in several countries in transition, such as the Sudan, the Democratic Republic of the Congo, Chad and Nepal. WFP devised a new security management structure in response to abductions, hostage-taking, intimidation and harassment of its staff. In line with the 2008–2013 strategic plan [YUN 2008, p. 1342], WFP moved from food aid to food assistance. It used cash and voucher transfers to distribute aid, as well as new means such as scratch cards, electronic vouchers, smart cards and mobile telephones. WFP procured $1.25 billion worth of food aid from developing countries using cash contributions. WFP implemented the Purchase for Progress initiative [YUN 2009, p. 1230], which allowed local procurement of food aid and realized savings of $22.6 million in import costs since 2009; the Renewed Efforts Against Child Hunger initiative, which provided a platform for government-led work on reducing chronic malnutrition; and the Scaling-Up Nutrition framework, a country-led global effort to advance health and development through improved nutrition.

Administrative and financial matters

WFP improved administrative practices and implemented information technology initiatives, more robust risk-management processes and performance-based plans. Outstanding internal audit recommendations were reduced by 45 per cent, as more than 400 recommendations were implemented. WFP allocated 94 per cent of multilateral resources for development to the poorest countries. WFP advance financing mechanisms for loan programmes, which amounted to $586.2 million, assisted 59 country offices, supported corporate services, and enabled country offices and regional bureaux to request funds in anticipation of confirmation of forecast income to ensure timely delivery of food and avoid pipeline breaks. Despite increased food and fuel costs, WFP managed to reduce the average annual cost per beneficiary by 3 per cent to $33.70, or $2.80 per month. One-third (32 per cent) of WFP projects were part of joint UN programmes.

Resources and financing

Despite the difficult economic environment, confirmed contribution revenue totalled $4.129 billion. A significant portion—$143 million—came from the private sector. In-kind contributions were estimated at $115 million.

Food security

Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations

In 2010, the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations (FAO) continued to address the world food crisis. FAO and WFP issued the report The State of Food Insecurity in the World: Addressing Food Insecurity in Protracted Crises, which found that the number of hungry people remained unacceptably high despite recent gains that pushed the figure below 1 billion. FAO organized the international technical conference on “Agricultural biotechnologies in developing countries” (Guadalajara, Mexico, 1–4 March), which took stock of the application of biotechnologies across the food and agricultural sectors in developing countries to face the challenges of food insecurity, climate change and natural resource degradation. FAO co-organized the Global Conference on Aquaculture (Phuket, Thailand, 22–25 September), which brought together over 650 delegates from 69 countries to assess the status of aquaculture development, consider opportunities and challenges, and build a consensus on advancing aquaculture as a sustainable and competitive food production sector.

Committee on World Food Security. By a note issued in April [A/65/73-E/2010/51], the Secretary-General transmitted to the General Assembly and the Economic and Social Council a report on the reform of the Committee on World Food Security. The report explained the key features of the reform: a composition that would seek to achieve a balance between inclusiveness and effectiveness, the addition of intersessional activities, the establishment of a high-level panel of experts on food security and nutrition, and improved linkages between the Committee and the regional and country levels. Progress made in implementing the reform included the establishment of new working methods, an extended Bureau and an advisory group.

The Economic and Social Council took note of the Secretary-General’s note on 23 July (decision 2010/255).

The Committee on World Food Security, at its thirty-sixth session (Rome, 11–14 and 16 October) [CL 140/5], called for action on key issues related to food security and nutrition, such as land tenure and international investment in agriculture, food price volatility and addressing food insecurity in protracted crises.

The FAO Council, at its one hundred and fortieth session (Rome, 29 November–3 December) [CL 140/REP], endorsed the report of the thirty-sixth session of the Committee on World Food Security as well as its 2010–2011 programme of work and budget [CFS:2010/5 Rev.1], and expressed support for a Bureau-led process to review and prepare the proposed programme of work and budget 2012–2013. The Council expressed support for the development of a results-based framework for the Committee in the form of a multi-year programme of work to help monitor progress and to align the Committee’s budget and activities with those of FAO, WFP and the International Fund for Agricultural Development.

Agriculture development and food security

Report of Secretary-General. Pursuant to General Assembly resolution 64/224 [YUN 2009, p. 1232], the Secretary-General in August issued a report on agriculture development and food security [A/65/253], which stated that food insecurity persisted in 29 countries and that more than 1 billion people—one sixth of the world population—remained hungry or undernourished. The difficult agriculture and food security situation was attributed to the price increases of basic staples that resulted from the 2008 food crisis. While the average food price index for 2009 was 17 per cent lower than that of 2008, prices remained 11 per cent higher than in 2007. Many countries experienced drops in trade and financial inflows, export earnings, foreign investment, receipts of development aid, remittances from their citizens living abroad, and income from taxes. Sub-Saharan Africa experienced double-digit price increases. In response to the crisis, the 22 UN bodies comprising the High-level Task Force on the Global Food Security Crisis committed more than $2 billion of their own funds and mobilized over $6 billion to alleviate the impact of soaring food prices in more than 90 countries. They improved donor coordination, aid alignment and harmonization; supported smallholder farmer food production, benefiting about 5 per cent of the world's 2 billion smallholder farming families; and provided guidance and financial resources to 15 Governments in their fiscal and tax policy responses to limit the impact of price rises on inflation. The L'Aquila Food Security Initiative pledged $20 billion towards efforts to partner with vulnerable countries to help them develop and implement their own food security strategies. The Global Agriculture and Food Security Programme, established at the World Bank in April, held $950 million in secure pledges to help countries ensure growth and sustainability of smallholder farms. The World Bank's Global Food Crisis Support Programme, a $2 billion initiative, and the European Union Food Security Facility, which pledged 1 billion euros to projects worldwide, helped to improve the mobilization of official development assistance.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 20 December [meeting 69], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Second Committee [A/65/442] adopted resolution 65/178 without vote [agenda item 26].

Agriculture development and food security

The General Assembly,

Recalling the Declaration of the World Summit on Food Security, particularly the Five Rome Principles for Sustainable Global Food Security,

Recalling also the Rio Declaration on Environment and Development, Agenda 21, the Programme for the Further Implementation of Agenda 21, the Johannesburg Declaration on Sustainable Development and the Plan of Implementation of the World Summit on Sustainable Development ("Johannesburg Plan of Implementation"), the Monterrey Consensus of the International Conference on Financing for Development, the 2005 World Summit Outcome, the Doha Declaration on Financing for Development: outcome document of the Follow-up International Conference on Financing for Development to Review the Implementation of the Monterrey Consensus and the outcome document of the High-level Plenary Meeting of the General Assembly on the Millennium Development Goals,

Recognizing the importance of the implementation of the United Nations Convention to Combat Desertification in Those Countries Experiencing Serious Drought and/or

Desertification, Particularly in Africa, and the ten-year strategic plan and framework to enhance the implementation of the Convention (2008–2018),

Recalling the Rome Declaration on World Food Security and Plan of Action of the World Food Summit, the Declaration of the World Food Summit: five years later, including the goal of achieving food security for all through an ongoing effort to eradicate hunger in all countries, with an immediate view to reducing by half the number of undernourished people by no later than 2015, as well as the commitment to achieving the Millennium Development Goals,

Reaffirming the goal set out in paragraph 19 of the United Nations Millennium Declaration to halve, by 2015, the proportion of the world's people whose income is less than one dollar a day and the proportion of people who suffer from hunger,

Welcoming the outcome of the seventeenth session of the Commission on Sustainable Development, on the thematic cluster of issues on agriculture, rural development, land, drought, desertification and Africa,

Noting with appreciation the work undertaken by relevant international bodies and organizations, including the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations, the International Fund for Agricultural Development and the World Food Programme, on agriculture development and on enhancing food security and nutrition,

Acknowledging the work undertaken by the High-level Task Force on the Global Food Security Crisis,

Welcoming the outcome of the thirty-sixth session of the Committee on World Food Security,

Noting the ongoing process of developing principles for responsible agricultural investment that respects rights, livelihoods and resources, as well as the inclusive process for the development of voluntary guidelines on the responsible governance of tenure of land and other natural resources,

Noting also the holding of the Global Conference on Agricultural Research for Development in Montpellier, France, from 28 to 31 March 2010,

Recognizing the importance of an enabling international and national environment to increase and sustain investment in the agriculture sector of developing countries and to create a more level playing field in agriculture through greater market access, a substantial reduction in trade-distorting domestic support and the parallel elimination of all forms of export subsidies and disciplines on all export measures with equivalent effect in accordance with the mandate from the Doha Work Programme of the World Trade Organization,

Recognizing also the important role played by indigenous peoples and local communities, and their knowledge and practices, in the preservation, conservation and sustainable use of traditional crops and biodiversity for present and future generations as an important contribution to food security,

Recognizing further the importance and positive role of smallholder farmers, including women, cooperatives and indigenous and local communities in developing countries in the implementation of development goals in such fields as employment policy, social integration, regional and rural development, agriculture and environmental protection,

Recognizing that agriculture plays a crucial role in addressing the needs of a growing global population and is inextricably linked to poverty eradication, especially in developing countries, and stressing that integrated and sustainable agriculture and rural development approaches are therefore essential to achieving enhanced food security in an environmentally sustainable way,

Reaffirming the right of everyone to have access to safe, sufficient and nutritious food, consistent with the right to adequate food and the fundamental right of everyone to be free from hunger, so as to be able to fully develop and maintain his or her physical and mental capacities,

Stressing the importance of the preservation of the natural resource base for food security,

Expressing concern that the number of people living in extreme poverty and hunger surpasses one billion, which is an unacceptable blight on the lives, livelihoods and dignity of many of the world's people, mostly in developing countries, and noting that the effects of long-standing underinvestment in food security, agriculture and rural development have recently been further exacerbated by the food, financial and economic crises, among other factors,

Reiterating that the multiple and complex causes of the global food crisis and its consequences require a comprehensive and coordinated response in the short, medium and long terms by national Governments and the international community, and remaining concerned that volatile food prices and the ongoing effects of the global food crisis pose a serious challenge to the fight against poverty and hunger and to the efforts of developing countries to attain food security and to achieve the objective of reducing by half the number of undernourished people by no later than 2015, as well as other internationally agreed development goals, including the Millennium Development Goals,

Remaining deeply concerned that domestic prices and price volatility remain high and that poorer people are particularly affected by fluctuations in the price of food as well as in the cost of inputs and transport,

1. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General;

2. Welcomes the note by the Chair of the Committee on World Food Security on the reform of the Committee and on progress made towards implementation of the reform, and urges Member States to strongly support the reform process and the aims and endeavours of the Committee;

3. Reiterates the need to adequately and urgently address agriculture development and food security in the context of national, regional and international development policies;

4. Also reiterates the importance of developing countries determining their own food security strategies, that food security is a national responsibility and that any plans for addressing food security challenges and the eradication of poverty in relation to food security must be nationally articulated, designed, owned and led and built on consultation with all key stakeholders at the national level, and urges Member States to make food security a high priority and to reflect this in their national programmes and budgets;

5. Reaffirms the importance of adopting forward-looking economic policies that lead to sustained, inclusive and equitable economic growth and sustainable development and which increase employment opportunities, promote agriculture development and reduce poverty;

6. Recognizes that a sense of urgency and a commitment to solving the global food crisis have served as catalysts for strengthening international coordination and governance for food security, through the Global Partnership for Agriculture, Food Security and Nutrition, of which the Committee on World Food Security is a central component, and reiterates that it is essential to enhance global governance, building on existing institutions and fostering effective partnerships;

7. Welcomes the strengthening of cooperation between the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations, the International Fund for Agricultural Development, the World Food Programme and all other relevant entities of the United Nations system and other intergovernmental organizations, the international financial institutions and international trade, financial and economic institutions, in accordance with their respective mandates, in order to increase their effectiveness, as well as the strengthening of cooperation with non-governmental organizations and the private sector in promoting and strengthening efforts towards agriculture development and food security;

8. Recognizes the need to support a comprehensive and coordinated response in order to address the multiple and complex causes of the global food crisis, including the adoption of political, economic, social, financial and technical solutions in the short, medium and long terms by national Governments and the international community, including for mitigating the impact on developing countries of the high volatility of food prices and other agriculture commodity prices, and also recognizes that the relevant United Nations organizations have an important role to play in this regard;

9. Underlines the importance of enhancing synergies between agriculture, biodiversity, food security and development policies and strategies at the national, regional and international levels, including by prioritizing and mainstreaming agriculture and food security into development policies;

10. Stresses the need to enhance agricultural production, productivity and sustainability, including through public and private investment, expanded access of smallholder farmers to markets, credit, inputs and land, improved land-use planning, crop diversification and commercialization, sound water management, including efficient irrigation, water harvesting and storage, the development of strong agriculture value chains and investment in rural infrastructure, in order to reach the poverty and hunger targets of the Millennium Development Goals;

11. Also stresses the need to promote at all levels a strong enabling environment for enhancing agricultural production, productivity and sustainability in developing countries, including through enhanced market access for developing countries, and supportive economic policies and institutions at the national and international levels;

12. Recognizes the role of indigenous communities and small farmers' traditional seed supply systems in developing countries in the conservation of biodiversity and food security, and urges Member States and international organizations to pursue complementary policies and strategies to strengthen farmer-based seed supply at the community level, as an important component of a competitive commercial seed industry;

13. Also recognizes the need for substantial additional investment and better policies in support of smallholder agriculture in order for many of the poorest countries to reach the poverty and hunger targets of the Millennium Development Goals;

14. Further recognizes the importance of agricultural investment, including foreign direct investment, through, inter alia, the private sector in enhancing agriculture development and food security as well as the need to promote responsible international investment in agriculture, and therefore calls for all investors to conduct agricultural practices in accordance with national legislation, taking into account national sovereignty over natural resources, environmental sustainability and the importance of promoting the well-being and improving the livelihood of local communities and indigenous peoples, as appropriate;

15. Promotes research for food and agriculture, including research to adapt to and mitigate climate change, and access to research results and technologies at the national, regional and international levels, including through the international research centres of the Consultative Group on International Agricultural Research, as well as other relevant international and regional research organizations;

16. Encourages expanded public investment and incentives for small-scale and marginalized producers, including women, in developing countries, in order to increase the production of a wide spectrum of traditional and other crops and livestock and to accelerate the transition to sustainable production;

17. Stresses the need to further promote the empowerment and participation of rural women as critical agents for enhancing agriculture and rural development and food security, ensuring their equal access to productive resources, land, financing, technologies, training and markets, and measures that ensure food security and nutrition for women;

18. Recognizes the consequences of the global food crisis on the achievement of the Millennium Development Goals in developing countries, especially in Africa, and calls for an integrated response by African countries and the international community, working in partnership to support integrated and sustainable agriculture and rural development approaches;

19. Also recognizes the need for Africa to embark on a green revolution to help to boost agricultural productivity, food production and regional food security, welcomes the strong leadership shown by African countries in undertaking initiatives to address the challenges of sustainable agriculture development and to achieve food security, such as the Comprehensive Africa Agriculture Development Programme of the New Partnership for Africa's Development, that can provide a framework through which support for agriculture and food security can be coordinated, and calls upon the international community to support Africa in the implementation of the various programmes under the New Partnership for Africa's Development;

20. Acknowledges, in this regard, national and regional efforts by developing countries to implement long-term policies and measures that contribute to agriculture development and food security;

21. Recognizes that North-South cooperation, South-South cooperation and triangular cooperation are useful instruments for increasing the capacities of developing countries, sharing experiences on the aforementioned agricultural activities and addressing related economic and social issues;

22. Encourages relevant United Nations funds, programmes and agencies and the Special Unit for South-South Cooperation, within their mandates, as well as regions and subregions, to support existing and new South-South cooperation initiatives that contribute to agriculture development and food security;

23. Stresses the need to make special efforts to meet the nutritional needs of women, children, older persons and persons with disabilities, as well as those living in vulnerable situations, through targeted and effective programming;

24. Encourages efforts at all levels to establish and strengthen social protection measures and programmes, including national social safety nets and protection programmes for the needy and vulnerable, such as food and cash for work, cash transfer and voucher programmes, school feeding programmes and mother-and-child nutrition programmes;

25. Notes the challenges faced by indigenous peoples in the context of food security, and in this regard calls upon States to take special actions to combat the root causes of the disproportionately high level of hunger and malnutrition among indigenous peoples;

26. Calls for international, regional and national efforts to increase the ability of the agricultural sector to predict, prevent and address the impacts of climate change and extreme weather events, especially floods and droughts, on agricultural production and food systems, as well as to enhance the ability of that sector to regain livelihoods and food production;

27. Urges Member States and international organizations to pursue policies and strategies that improve the functioning of domestic, regional and international markets and ensure equitable access for all, especially small-holder and women farmers in developing countries, notes the importance of non-trade-distorting special measures that are consistent with World Trade Organization rules aimed at creating incentives for smallholder farmers in developing countries to enable them to increase their productivity and to compete on a more equal footing on world food markets, and urges Member States to refrain from taking measures that are inconsistent with the rules of the World Trade Organization and that have adverse impacts on global, regional and national food security;

28. Stresses that a universal, rules-based, open, non-discriminatory and equitable multilateral trading system will promote agriculture and rural development in developing countries and contribute to world food security, and urges national, regional and international strategies to promote the participation of farmers, especially small-holder farmers, including women, in community, domestic, regional and international markets;

29. Calls upon Member States and the World Trade Organization to take measures to promote trade policies that would be capable of promoting further trade in agriculture products, identifying the obstacles to trade which have the most serious impact on the world's poor and contributing to supporting small-scale and marginalized producers in developing countries;

30. Recognizes the urgency of, and reaffirms its commitment to, reaching an early and successful conclusion of the Doha Round of World Trade Organization negotiations with a balanced, ambitious, comprehensive and development-oriented outcome as a key action to improve food security;

31. Welcomes the commitments made at the Group of Eight Summit held in L'Aquila, Italy, from 8 to 10 July 2009, to act with the scale and urgency needed to achieve sustainable global food security, and calls for the timely realization of the commitments made by the countries represented at L'Aquila towards the goal of mobilizing 20 billion United States dollars over three years through this coordinated, comprehensive strategy focused on sustainable agriculture development;

32. Calls for delivery on the commitments made to achieve global food security and the provision of adequate and predictable resources through bilateral and multilateral channels, including the financial and policy commitments set out in the Aquila Food Security Initiative;

33. Encourages international, regional and national efforts to strengthen the capacity of developing countries, in particular their small-scale producers, in order to enhance the productivity and nutritional quality of food crops and to promote sustainable practices in pre-harvest and post-harvest agricultural activities;

34. Underlines the importance of promoting the creation and development of small and medium-sized enterprises as a strategy for achieving agriculture development and food security, economic dynamism and poverty eradication, including through the mobilization of resources to enable small-scale producers and cooperatives to compete effectively in the market, on equal terms with other forms of enterprise, in order to strengthen their positive role and to increase their potential to act as vehicles for building or increasing the number of small and medium-sized enterprises;

35. Requests the Secretary-General to continue to ensure that a coordinated follow-up to the World Summit on Food Security is undertaken at the field level in the context of the resident coordinator system, taking into account the coordinated follow-up to major international conferences of the United Nations;

36. Invites the Chair of the Committee on World Food Security to report, as part of the Committee's report to the General Assembly at its sixty-sixth session, through the Economic and Social Council, on the implementation of the reform of, and on progress made towards achieving the vision of, the Committee;

37. Requests the Secretary-General to report to the General Assembly at its sixty-sixth session on developments related to issues highlighted in the present resolution and on progress in the implementation of the outcome of the World Summit on Food Security;

38. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its sixty-sixth session the item entitled "Agriculture development and food security", to be allocated to the Second Committee.

Nutrition

Standing Committee on Nutrition

The UN System Standing Committee on Nutrition convened representatives of all key nutrition stakeholders at FAO in Rome on 14 and 15 December to start the process of organizing the 2011 Nutrition Partners' Meeting and to provide updates on the reform of the Committee and the implementation of the Scaling-Up Nutrition framework. Participants agreed on the need for reforming the Committee, re-establishing the reporting line to the Economic and Social Council, improving linkages with the Committee on World Food Security, and granting observer status to NGOs, civil society organizations, research communities, international financial institutions and the business sector.

UNU activities

The United Nations University (UNU) Food and Nutrition Programme for Human and Social Development (UNU-FNP) (Ithaca, New York, United States) continued to generate and provide access to new information about food and nutrition to facilitate its grassroots application. According to the report of the UNU Council on the work of the University in 2010 [E/2011/129], UNU activities related to nutrition included the Saving Lives project, undertaken jointly by UNU-FNP, Cornell University, UNICEF and the International Food Policy Research Institute, which estimated the number of lives being saved by public health interventions. The project assessed how many more lives could be saved and the proportion of deaths that could be prevented by developing better health technology and by ensuring better delivery and use of available technologies. The study found that health and nutrition interventions saved 3.67 million lives, or 30 per cent of the children that would die in their absence. The UNICEF/UNU NutritionWorks carried out by Cornell NutritionWorks sought to design an electronic learning course for capacity-building focused on preventing undernutrition in infants and young children. Cornell University Press and UNU published The African Food System and its Interactions with Human Health and Nutrition as part of its Africa series. UNU-FNP continued its involvement with the quarterly Food and Nutrition Bulletin, which promoted multidisciplinary efforts to alleviate hunger and malnutrition in the developing world.

International drug control

In 2010, the United Nations, through the Commission on Narcotic Drugs, the International Narcotics Control Board (INCB) and the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime (UNODC), continued to strengthen international cooperation in countering the world drug problem. According to UNODC, about 230 million people, or 5 per cent of the world's adult population, were estimated to have used an illicit drug at least once in 2010. Problem drug users numbered about 27 million.

UNODC provided technical assistance, legal advice and research to the main UN policymaking bodies in drug control, and assisted Member States in developing domestic legislation on drugs and in implementing the international drug control conventions. During the year, activities were carried out in areas such as supply and demand reduction; sustainable livelihoods, with particular emphasis on illicit drug crop monitoring, cultivation and poverty eradication; data collection, research and trend analysis; scientific and forensic support to Member States, national laboratories and intergovernmental bodies; regional policy and programming initiatives; strengthening of partnerships within the UN system and with civil society; and follow-up to the 2009 Political Declaration and Plan of Action on International Cooperation towards an Integrated and Balanced Strategy to Counter the World Drug Problem.

The Commission on Narcotic Drugs—the main UN policymaking body dealing with drug control—held its fifty-third session in March, during which it recommended one resolution and two decisions for adoption by the Economic and Social Council and adopted 15 resolutions on topics such as regional and international cooperation, illicit drug use prevention, alternative development and emerging trends in drug abuse.

INCB reviewed the issue of drug-related corruption, which was undermining international efforts to eliminate problems related to controlled drugs. It discussed the challenges facing the international community in applying the three major international drug control conventions, how Governments were responding to them and what actions Governments should take. The Board continued to oversee the implementation of the conventions, analyse the drug situation worldwide and draw the attention of Governments to weaknesses in national control and treaty compliance, making recommendations for improvements at the national and international levels.

In February, the Security Council noted with concern the serious threats posed by drug trafficking and transnational organized crime to international security. It called upon Member States to increase international and regional cooperation, as well as their cooperation with UNODC and INCB, in order to counter the illicit production of, demand for and trafficking in drugs, and to identify emerging trends in drug trafficking.

In July, the Economic and Social Council welcomed the progress made by UNODC in developing an integrated programme approach comprising thematic and regional programmes. In December, the General Assembly called upon States to take the measures necessary to implement the actions and attain the goals and targets set out in the 2009 Political Declaration and Plan of Action. It reaffirmed that countering the world drug problem was a common and shared responsibility, and undertook to promote bilateral, regional and international cooperation aimed at countering the world drug problem more effectively.

UN action to combat drug abuse

UN Office on Drugs and Crime

The United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime (UNODC) addressed the interrelated issues of drug control, crime prevention and international terrorism in the context of sustainable development and human security (see also PART THREE, Chapter IX). The Organization's drug programme continued to be implemented in accordance with General Assembly resolution 45/179 [YUN 1990, p. 874]. The Office was responsible for coordinating all UN drug control activities and was the repository of technical expertise in international drug control for the UN Secretariat. It acted on behalf of the Secretary-General in fulfilling his responsibilities under the terms of international treaties and resolutions relating to drug control, and provided services to the General Assembly, the Economic and Social Council, and committees and conferences dealing with drug control matters.

The UNODC Executive Director described the Office's 2010 activities in a report to the Commission on Narcotic Drugs and to the Commission on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice [E/CN.7/2011/3-

E/CN.15/2011/3]. Activities were carried out in the areas of supply reduction; demand reduction, rehabilitation and health protection; sustainable livelihoods, with particular emphasis on illicit drug crop monitoring, cultivation and poverty eradication; follow-up to the Political Declaration and Plan of Action on International Cooperation towards an Integrated and Balanced Strategy to Counter the World Drug Problem [YUN 2009, p. 1237]; data collection, research and trend analysis; scientific and forensic support to Member States, national laboratories and intergovernmental bodies; regional policy and programming initiatives; and strengthening of partnerships within the UN system, as well as with civil society.

During the year, the Office published: World Drug Report 2010 [Sales No. E.10.XI.13]; Afghanistan Cannabis Survey 2009; Drug Use in Afghanistan: 2009 Survey; Afghanistan Opium Survey 2010: Summary Findings; Afghanistan Opium Winter Rapid Assessment 2010; Female Drug Use in Pakistan: Mapping Estimates, Ethnographic Results and Behavioural Assessment; Colombia: Coca cultivation survey 2009; South-East Asia Opium Survey 2010: Lao People's Democratic Republic, Myanmar; and Patterns and Trends of Amphetamine-Type Stimulants and Other Drugs: Asia and the Pacific.

New Executive Director. On 9 July [SG/A/1251], the Secretary-General announced the appointment of Yuri Fedotov (Russian Federation) as the new Executive Director of UNODC, succeeding Antonio Maria Costa, who had led the Office since 2002.

Administrative, budgetary and programmatic questions

In response to a request by the Commission on Narcotic Drugs [YUN 2009, p. 1252], a Secretariat note of 8 February [E/CN.7/2010/16-E/CN.15/2010/16] described the activities from December 2009 to February 2010 of the standing open-ended intergovernmental working group on improving the governance and financial situation of UNODC [ibid., p. 1253]. A further Secretariat note of 2 November [E/CN.7/2010/23-E/CN.15/2010/21] described the working group's activities from February to October 2010. The group's discussions centred on the development and implementation of thematic and regional programmes, measures to improve the governing role of the Commission on Narcotic Drugs and the Commission on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice, the evaluation function of UNODC and measures to improve funding for the Office.

ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL ACTION

On 22 July [meeting 45], the Economic and Social Council, on the recommendation of the Commission on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice [E/2010/30], adopted resolution 2010/20 without vote [agenda item 14 (c)].

Support for the development and implementation of an integrated approach to programme development at the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime

The Economic and Social Council,

Recalling General Assembly resolution 63/197 of 18 December 2008 entitled "International cooperation against the world drug problem" and resolution 64/179 of 18 December 2009 entitled "Strengthening the United Nations Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice Programme, in particular its technical cooperation capacity",

Recalling also the strategy for the period 2008–2011 for the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime, which provides a clear framework for the work of the Office,

Recalling further its resolution 2009/23 of 30 July 2009 entitled "Support for the development and implementation of the regional programmes of the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime",

1. Welcomes the report on regional programmes and the progress made in developing an integrated programme approach, comprising thematic and regional programmes for the delivery of the normative and technical assistance mandates of the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime;

2. Expresses its appreciation for the increased national ownership and participation that the regional programmes have garnered, and encourages Member States in other subregions to engage with the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime in the preparation of similar, subregional programmes;

3. Encourages Member States to support the regional and thematic programmes of the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime through unearmarked voluntary contributions, whenever possible, and thereby to support national ownership and regional prioritization;

4. Welcomes the advances in the implementation of the Santo Domingo Pact and Managua Mechanism inter-regional initiative;

5. Looks forward to the results of the implementation of the regional programmes for East Asia and the Pacific, South-Eastern Europe, Central America and the Caribbean, and East Africa;

6. Welcomes the holding in Cairo, from 27 to 29 April 2010, of the regional expert meeting on drug control, crime prevention and criminal justice reform in the Arab States organized by the League of Arab States in partnership with the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime and with the support of the Government of Egypt in order to prepare a regional programme for the period 2011–2015;

7. Requests the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime to continue with the development of regional programmes in 2010;

8. Notes the increased coherence of the regional and thematic programmes, with a view to achieving the simplification of implementation modalities;

9. Supports the work of the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime in leading the development of the integrated programme approach;

10. Encourages Member States, where appropriate, to draw on the technical assistance activities outlined in the regional programmes of the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime and to use the regional programmes as a vehicle to increase regional cooperation for thematic strategies;

11. Encourages bilateral and multilateral aid agencies and financial institutions to continue to support the implementation of regional programmes of the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime;

12. Requests the Executive Director of the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime to continue giving high priority and support to the implementation of the integrated programme approach through the promotion of the regional and thematic programmes, and to report on progress made in such implementation to the Commission on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice at its twentieth session, in the first half of 2011, and to share the report with the Commission on Narcotic Drugs at its fifty-fourth session.

Pursuant to Economic and Social Council resolutions 2010/17 (see p. 1102) and 2010/21 (see p. 1243) and General Assembly resolution 65/227 (see p. 1244), the UNODC Executive Director in December reported [E/CN.7/2011/6-E/CN.15/2011/6] on the implementation of the regional programmes of UNODC. In 2009 and 2010, UNODC developed programmes for East Asia and the Pacific, East Africa, Central America and the Caribbean, South-Eastern Europe, West Africa and the Arab States. The Executive Director noted that the regional programme approach aimed at ensuring full ownership by partner countries through alignment with regional and national policies and priorities; an integrated framework for transferring expertise; a move from a project-based approach to a programme approach; and close cooperation with other UN entities and multilateral partners. The first generation of UNODC regional programmes had represented a transitional period for the Office, and current challenges included the integration of a large number of countries into the new framework, funding mechanisms and donor reporting and administrative and financial system support.

Realignment of UNODC functions

In response to a request by the Commission on Narcotic Drugs [YUN 2009, p. 1253], the UNODC Executive Director in January reported [E/CN.7/2010/13-E/CN.15/2010/13] on the changes required to the strategic framework and their implications for UNODC and for the allocation of resources to the subprogrammes of the programme of work, and on the establishment of an independent evaluation unit and the sustainability of the UNODC Strategic Planning Unit. The report stated that, following consultations with Member States and staff, UNODC had undertaken a realignment of the Division for Operations and the Division for Treaty Affairs to enable the pooling of expertise under common thematic areas, and to better allocate the responsibilities of staff members. The realignment of functions was part of the operationalization of the thematic and regional programme approach, to be reflected in the proposed strategic framework for 2012–2013.

By resolution 2010/17 of 22 July (see p. 1102), the Economic and Social Council welcomed the measures taken to develop a thematic and regional programme approach to the programme of work of UNODC, and noted the efficiency gains anticipated as a result of the proposed realignment.

ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL ACTION

On 22 July [meeting 45], the Economic and Social Council, on the recommendation of the Commission on Narcotic Drugs [E/2010/28], adopted resolution 2010/21 without vote [agenda item 14 (d)].

Realignment of the functions of the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime and changes to the strategic framework

The Economic and Social Council

Recommends to the General Assembly the adoption of the following draft resolution:

“The General Assembly,

“Recalling section XVI, paragraph 2, of its resolution 46/185 C of 20 December 1991, in which it entrusted certain administrative and financial functions to the Commission on Narcotic Drugs, “Recalling also Commission on Narcotic Drugs resolution 52/14 of 2 December 2009,

“Recalling further the report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions on the consolidated budget for the biennium 2010–2011 for the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime,

“Having regard to the report of the Executive Director of the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime on the changes required to the strategic framework and their implications for the Office and for the allocation of resources to the subprogrammes of the programme of work, and on the establishment of an independent evaluation unit and the sustainability of the Strategic Planning Unit of the Office,

“Recalling its resolution 64/243 of 24 December 2009 entitled ‘Questions relating to the proposed programme budget for the biennium 2010–2011’, in paragraph 85 of which it expressed concern regarding the overall financial situation of the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime and requested the Secretary-General to submit proposals in his proposed programme budget for the biennium 2012–2013 to ensure that the Office has sufficient resources to carry out its mandate,

“1. Takes note of the report of the Executive Director of the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime on the changes required to the strategic framework and their implications for the Office and for the allocation of resources to the subprogrammes of the programme of work, and on the establishment of an independent evaluation unit and the sustainability of the Strategic Planning Unit of the Office, and welcomes the measures taken to develop a thematic and regional programme approach to the programme of work of the Office;

"2. Notes the anticipated efficiency gains resulting from the proposed realignment, which responds, in particular, to recommendations made by the Office of Internal Oversight Services of the Secretariat, and looks forward to seeing those efficiency gains reflected in the budget for the biennium 2012–2013 for the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime;

"3. Also notes that the realignment will not require any change to the strategic framework for the period 2010–2011 and that the thematic and regional programme approach will be reflected in the proposed strategic framework for the period 2012–2013;

"4. Further notes that the proposed realignment will contribute to the improvement of the technical assistance programmes and activities of the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime;

"5. Notes that the proposed realignment will not diminish the current status of any of the activities promoted by the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime;

"6. Recalls that, in Commission on Narcotic Drugs resolution 52/14, the Commission decided that the consolidated budget for the biennium 2010–2011 for the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime should contain adequate provisions for the establishment of a sustainable, effective and operationally independent evaluation unit, and urges the Secretariat to swiftly implement that decision and commence with the re-establishment of the independent evaluation unit with out further delay;

"7. Requests the Executive Director of the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime to ensure the sustainability of the Strategic Planning Unit, consistent with the importance of its functions;

"8. Notes that the reinstatement of the post of Chief of the Policy Analysis and Research Branch at the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime, at the D-1 level, should be considered only after sufficient funding has been made available for the independent evaluation unit and the Strategic Planning Unit;

"9. Also notes, in the preceding context, the realignment of the Division for Treaty Affairs and the Division for Operations of the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime, and encourages the realignment as an important step in the process of continuous improvement of the Office;

"10. Highlights the importance of providing legal assistance for drug control and crime prevention and the need to link the provision of such assistance to the work of the Integrated Programme and Oversight Branch of the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime;

"11. Notes with concern the financial situation of the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime;

"12. Urges the Executive Director of the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime to ensure that the Office submits to the Secretary-General a proposed programme budget for the biennium 2012–2013 that appropriately reflects the financial needs of the Office;

"13. Requests the Secretary-General, in his proposed programme budget for the biennium 2012–2013, to devote due attention to the resource requirements for meeting the mandates entrusted to the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime, taking into account the Political Declaration and Plan of Action on International Cooperation towards an Integrated and Balanced Strategy to Counter the World Drug Problem, with particular focus on under-resourced areas;

"14. Requests the Executive Director of the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime to report to the Commission on Narcotic Drugs at its fifty-fourth session on the implementation of the realignment of the Division for Treaty Affairs and the Division for Operations."

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 21 December [meeting 71], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Third (Social, Humanitarian and Cultural) Committee [A/65/457], adopted resolution 65/227 without vote [agenda items 105 & 106].

Realignment of the functions of the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime and changes to the strategic framework

The General Assembly,

Recalling section XI, paragraph 1, of its resolution 61/252 of 22 December 2006 and section XVI, paragraph 2, of its resolution 46/185 C of 20 December 1991, in which it entrusted certain administrative and financial functions to the Commission on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice and the Commission on Narcotic Drugs,

Recalling also Commission on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice resolution 18/6 of 3 December 2009 and Commission on Narcotic Drugs resolution 52/14 of 2 December 2009,

Recalling further the report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions on the consolidated budget for the biennium 2010–2011 for the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime,

Having regard to the report of the Executive Director of the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime on the changes required to the strategic framework and their implications for the Office and for the allocation of resources to the subprogrammes of the programme of work, and on the establishment of an independent evaluation unit and the sustainability of the Strategic Planning Unit of the Office,

Recalling its resolution 64/243 of 24 December 2009 entitled "Questions relating to the proposed programme budget for the biennium 2010–2011", in paragraph 85 of which it expressed concern regarding the overall financial situation of the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime and requested the Secretary-General to submit proposals in his proposed programme budget for the biennium 2012–2013 to ensure that the Office has sufficient resources to carry out its mandate,

1. Takes note of the report of the Executive Director of the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime on the changes required to the strategic framework and their implications for the Office and for the allocation of resources to the subprogrammes of the programme of work, and on the establishment of an independent evaluation unit and the sustainability of the Strategic Planning Unit of the Office, and welcomes the measures taken to develop a thematic and regional programme approach to the programme of work of the Office;

2. Notes the anticipated efficiency gains resulting from the proposed realignment, which responds, in particular, to recommendations made by the Office of Internal Oversight Services of the Secretariat, and looks forward to seeing those efficiency gains reflected in the budget for the biennium 2012–2013 for the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime;

3. Also notes that the realignment will not require any change to the strategic framework for the period 2010–2011 and that the thematic and regional programme approach will be reflected in the proposed strategic framework for the period 2012–2013;

4. Further notes that the proposed realignment will contribute to improving the technical assistance programmes and activities of the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime;

5. Notes that the proposed realignment will not diminish the current status of any of the activities promoted by the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime;

6. Recalls that, in Commission on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice resolution 18/6 and Commission on Narcotic Drugs resolution 52/14, the Commissions decided that the consolidated budget for the biennium 2010–2011 for the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime should contain adequate provisions for the establishment of a sustainable, effective and operationally independent evaluation unit, and urges the Secretariat to swiftly implement that decision and commence with the re-establishment of the independent evaluation unit without further delay;

7. Requests the Executive Director of the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime to ensure the sustainability of the Strategic Planning Unit, consistent with the importance of its functions;

8. Notes that the reinstatement of the post of Chief of the Policy Analysis and Research Branch at the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime, at the D-1 level, should be considered only after sufficient funding has been made available for the independent evaluation unit and the Strategic Planning Unit;

9. Also notes, in the preceding context, the realignment of the Division for Treaty Affairs and the Division for Operations of the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime, and encourages it as an important step in the process of continuous improvement of the Office;

10. Highlights the importance of providing legal assistance for drug control and crime prevention and the need to link the provision of such assistance to the work of the Integrated Programme and Oversight Branch of the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime;

11. Notes with concern the financial situation of the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime;

12. Urges the Executive Director of the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime to ensure that the Office submits to the Secretary-General a proposed programme budget for the biennium 2012–2013 that appropriately reflects the financial needs of the Office;

13. Requests the Secretary-General, in his proposed programme budget for the biennium 2012–2013, to devote due attention to the resource requirements for meeting the mandates entrusted to the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime, taking into account the relevant crime prevention and criminal justice mandates and the Political Declaration and Plan of Action on International Cooperation towards an Integrated and Balanced Strategy to Counter the World Drug Problem, with particular focus on under-resourced areas;

14. Requests the Executive Director of the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime to report to the Commission on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice at its twentieth session and the Commission on Narcotic Drugs at its fifty-fourth session on the implementation of the realignment of the Division for Treaty Affairs and the Division for Operations.

Commission on Narcotic Drugs

At its fifty-third session (Vienna, 8–12 March) [E/2010/28], the Commission on Narcotic Drugs recommended one resolution and two decisions for adoption by the Economic and Social Council. It also adopted 15 resolutions and two decisions, which it brought to the attention of the Council. At its reconvened fifty-third session (Vienna, 2 December) [E/2010/28/Add.1], the Commission adopted one resolution, which it brought to the attention of the Council, and recommended one decision for adoption by the Council.

Following the closure of its reconvened fifty-third session on 2 December, the Commission opened its fifty-fourth session to elect the new chairperson and other bureau members.

By decision 2010/244 of 22 July, the Economic and Social Council took note of the Commission's report on its fifty-third session and approved the provisional agenda and documentation for the fifty-fourth (2011) session.

By decision 2010/258 of 23 July, the Council took note of the Commission's report on its reconvened fifty-second session [E/2009/28/Add.1].

In a March note by the Secretary-General [E/CN.7/2010/17], the Commission was invited to review, as part of the Secretary-General's proposed strategic framework for the 2012–2013 biennium, the proposed biennial programme plan on international drug control, crime and terrorism prevention and criminal justice [A/65/6 (Prog.13)], to be submitted to the Committee for Programme and Coordination at its fiftieth (2010) session (see p. 1413).

Drug demand reduction and drug abuse

The Commission on Narcotic Drugs had before it a Secretariat report [E/CN.7/2010/2] that reviewed the world situation with regard to drug abuse and the global demand for illicit drugs. Globally, cannabis remained the most consumed illicit drug. While cannabis use, particularly among young people, stabilized or declined in more established markets such as Western Europe, North America and Oceania, consumption increased in many developing countries, particularly in Africa. Similarly, while the consumption of opioids, cocaine and amphetamine-type stimulants (ATS) was stabilizing or decreasing in high-income countries, the use of ATS was increasing in East and South-East Asia and in the Near and Middle East. The report noted that timely and objective information on drug use was not available in many countries, particularly in developing countries. The lack of sustainable drug information systems hindered the monitoring of emerging epidemics, the implementation of evidence-based responses and the ability to assess the effectiveness of those responses. The report concluded that reinvigorated international efforts were needed to support countries in submitting data on drug use, and that sustainable investments were needed to improve the collection and reporting of drug demand information.

Drug use prevention

On 12 March [E/2010/28 (res. 53/1)], the Commission urged Member States to continue their efforts to prevent drug use and to develop national policies, laws and practices that could be incorporated into national and community-based drug use prevention programmes. It also urged States to consider mobilizing relevant sectors of civil society, in conjunction with government entities, to work together in learning about, participating in and supporting effective drug use prevention programmes. States were urged to fund community-based drug use prevention efforts, and to develop, fund and implement media campaigns against drugs, as well as appropriate family-based drug use prevention programmes. The Commission requested UNODC to include community-based drug use prevention modules in its technical assistance and training programmes.

Also on 12 March [ibid. (res. 53/2)], the Commission urged States to develop an updated policy for the prevention of illicit drug use, and to increase public awareness of drug-related risks. States were urged to be aware that social exclusion contributed to drug abuse, and that it was important to attend to the basic well-being of individuals in order to effectively reduce illicit drug use. The Commission urged States to establish monitoring systems to identify emerging trends in drug use and to share information with other Member States and relevant stakeholders. It urged UNODC to gather national and international experiences on evidence-based prevention activities and instruments for the early identification of young people vulnerable to illicit drug use, and to facilitate the sharing among Member States of best practices in drug abuse prevention.

HIV/AIDS and other blood-borne viruses

The Commission had before it a report by the UNODC Executive Director [E/CN.7/2010/11], submitted in response to a Commission request [YUN

2006, p. 1456], which reviewed the global situation with regard to the prevalence of HIV/AIDS and other blood-borne diseases among drug users as well as the relevant activities implemented by UNODC in 2008 and 2009.

The report noted that an estimated 15.9 million people injected drugs worldwide, and that as many as 3 million drug users were infected with HIV. While it was difficult to estimate the extent to which drug users had access to key HIV prevention services, coverage was far from adequate in many countries with a high prevalence of injecting drug use. The HIV response in many countries was insufficiently grounded in evidence and failed to meet international legal obligations to promote, protect and respect human rights. The high degree of stigma attached to drug use further marginalized people with drug dependence problems, with female drug users especially vulnerable.

UNODC, a co-sponsor of the Joint United Nations Programme on HIV/AIDS (UNAIDS) and the lead agency for HIV and AIDS prevention and care among injecting drug users, including those in prison settings, focused on assisting States in developing HIV/AIDS policies and programmes; scaling up HIV prevention, treatment and care and the provision of support services; developing and disseminating tools, guidelines and best practices to address the needs of women and girls; carrying out legal and policy reviews; and building capacity among law enforcement officials.

UNODC continued to work closely with representatives of civil society, Governments and donors to address the coverage and quality of services among at-risk populations. Strategies for further action needed to ensure that States and civil society organizations could develop guidance and programme models to respond to the needs of drug users. Member States, civil society organizations and international agencies should pay more attention to certain groups of non-injecting drug users and their role in increasing the risk of contracting HIV, as well as to emerging epidemics of injecting drug use in many African countries.

The Commission also had before it a January note by the Secretariat [E/CN.7/2010/8], prepared pursuant to a Commission request [YUN 2008, p. 1372], on promoting coordination and alignment of decisions between the Commission on Narcotic Drugs and the Programme Coordinating Board of UNAIDS. The note outlined the outcomes of the twenty-fourth (Geneva, 22–24 June 2009) and twenty-fifth (Geneva, 8–10 December 2009) meetings of the Programme Coordinating Board. A further note by the Secretariat in December [E/CN.7/2011/10] outlined the outcomes of the Board's twenty-sixth (Geneva, 22–24 June 2010) and twenty-seventh (Geneva, 6–8 December 2010) meetings.

On 12 March [E/2010/28 (res. 53/9)], the Commission urged UNODC to work with relevant UN system entities, particularly the World Health Organization (WHO), to intensify their support for Governments. UNODC was requested to expand its work with civil society groups to address the gap in access to services for people living with or affected by HIV, tackle the issues of stigmatization and discrimination and support the provision of prevention programmes and support services. Member States were called on to ensure that a wide range of evidence-based HIV prevention programmes was available in all countries, and were urged to remove obstacles to achieving the goal of universal access to HIV prevention, treatment, care and related support services. Member States were invited to participate fully in the XVIII International AIDS Conference (Vienna, 18–23 July) in order to share best practices and learn more about AIDS.

Drug-facilitated sexual assault

On 12 March [E/2010/28 (res. 53/7)], the Commission urged States to combat the new phenomenon of drug-facilitated sexual assault by raising public awareness thereof, and encouraged States to forward relevant experiences, information and research findings to INCB and UNODC. It urged States to establish awareness and sensitivity training programmes for social, medical and law enforcement professionals who assisted victims. The Commission urged relevant international organizations, including INCB, UNODC and WHO, to gather information on and further analyse drug-facilitated sexual assault or other criminal acts, with a view to developing common definitions and standards. States were urged to make recommendations about formulations to the pharmaceutical industries concerned, with a view to preventing the covert administration of medicines. The Secretary-General was requested to report to the Commission at its fifty-fifth (2012) session.

Measures to protect children and young people

On 12 March [E/2010/28 (res. 53/10)], the Commission invited States to develop, implement and evaluate evidence-based plans and strategies aimed at reinforcing the prevention of drug abuse at all levels of school education. UNODC was encouraged to gather information on successful programmes for preventing and reducing illicit drug use among children and young people, and to provide States with assistance. The UNODC Executive Director was requested to report to the Commission at its fifty-fourth (2011) session.

Synthetic cannabinoid receptor agonists

On 12 March [E/2010/28 (res. 53/11)], the Commission called upon Member States to pay particular attention to the widespread distribution of products containing synthetic cannabinoid receptor agonists, and to consider adopting national legislation to control their use. The Commission requested INCB to continue to play a role in gathering from States information on synthetic cannabinoid receptor agonists, and in sharing that information with other States and WHO. UNODC was requested to share information on the issue with the WHO Expert Committee on Drug Dependence to increase its understanding and awareness.

Abuse of “poppers”

Noting that “poppers”—mixtures containing alkyl nitrites that were abused by inhaling—were not controlled under the international drug conventions, the Commission, on 12 March [E/2010/28 (res. 53/13)], invited States to share information on the abuse of such drugs with INCB and other interested parties, and to enhance public awareness of such abuse. It invited States to share information on best practices and lessons learned to counter the emerging trend.

Illicit cultivation, manufacture and trafficking

In response to Commission resolution 51/7 [YUN 2008, p. 1373], the UNODC Executive Director in January reported [E/CN.7/2010/14 & Corr.1] on assistance provided by Member States and UNODC to States affected by the transit of illicit drugs. The report covered international cooperation in the areas of border control, mutual legal assistance, law enforcement, information exchange and demand reduction.

UNODC provided support to States, especially developing countries and countries with economies in transition, through technical programmes delivered by its headquarters- and field office-based experts. Key developments included the inauguration of the Central Asia Regional Information and Coordination Centre [YUN 2009, p. 1249] in Almaty, Kazakhstan, on 9 December 2009; technical assistance provided to transit States through the partnership between UNODC and the World Customs Organization; the building of regional support networks; the upgrading of technical and professional skills in law enforcement and air border management; and the Mentor Programme offered by the UNODC Global Programme against Money-Laundering. The report included information provided by Member States on their implementation of Commission resolution 51/7, with responses received from Belarus, Bosnia and Herzegovina, Ecuador, Germany, Jordan, Lebanon, Malta, Morocco, Myanmar, the Russian Federation, Senegal, the Syrian Arab Republic, Togo and Tunisia.

The report recommended that Governments conclude bilateral cooperation agreements with neighbouring States and key trading partners; ensure that procedures for processing requests for legal assistance were fast and efficient; ensure that law enforcement agencies had a prepared set of standard operating procedures to support controlled deliveries related to drug trafficking; strengthen their response to attempts to launder illicit drug profits in transit States through international co-operation; and support law enforcement authorities in cooperating with freight forwarders, port operators, shipping companies and trade associations in counter-narcotics initiatives.

Trends in illicit drug trafficking

A Secretariat report [E/CN.7/2011/4] reviewed the latest trends in illicit drug trafficking and production worldwide, focusing on seizure statistics for 2008–2009, and on cultivation and production for 2009–2010.

Cannabis continued to be the most widely produced, trafficked and consumed plant-based drug worldwide. In 2009, the amount of cannabis resin seized in Morocco reached a record high level, whereas the amount seized in Spain was reported to be the lowest since 1999. Global seizures of cannabis herb sustained the increasing trend of recent years, with the Americas continuing to report the largest amount of seized cannabis herb.

Afghanistan continued to account for the world's largest share of illicit opium poppy cultivation and production, as well as a substantial portion of global heroin manufacture. While the total area under illicit opium poppy cultivation remained stable in 2009–2010, opium production in Afghanistan was expected to decrease by 48 per cent in 2010 due to severe crop disease. In Myanmar, the world's second largest opium producer, opium poppy cultivation rose by 11 per cent. Global opiate seizures appeared to have stabilized in 2010. In 2009, Afghanistan, Iran and Pakistan accounted for the largest amount of opium, morphine and heroin seized worldwide.

Illicit coca bush cultivation in 2009 remained concentrated in Bolivia, Colombia and Peru. The area under cultivation decreased in Colombia, which was attributable largely to the success of the authorities in reducing such cultivation. While global cocaine seizures remained stable, the amount seized in source countries increased. Mexico continued to be used as a key transit country for smuggling cocaine into the United States.

Seizures of ATS remained stable, with the exception of methylenedioxymethamphetamine, commonly known as ecstasy, of which the amount seized worldwide continued to decrease or remain at a low level in 2009. The illicit manufacture of ATS continued in regions where it was well established, particularly East and South-East Asia, Europe, North America and Oceania, but also showed signs of spreading to regions with little or no history of such manufacture, such as South America.

Measures against laundering of assets

On 12 March [E/2010/28 (res. 53/3)], the Commission invited Member States to review periodically their regulatory and institutional frameworks in order to optimize investigations into assets related to drug trafficking. States were invited to cooperate in identifying assets and property that might have been acquired through drug trafficking and to adopt such measures as might be necessary to enable confiscation. States were encouraged to undertake awareness-raising campaigns and training programmes aimed at law enforcement authorities and judicial officers, and invited to improve or institutionalize their mechanisms for the administration of property seized and confiscated in cases of drug trafficking and related offences.

Control of international trade in poppy seeds

On 12 March [E/2010/28 (res. 53/12)], the Commission requested INCB and UNODC to continue to assist Member States in ensuring the full implementation of article 22 of the 1961 Single Convention on Narcotic Drugs [YUN 1961, p. 382] on the prohibition of the illicit cultivation of the opium poppy. Member States were urged to inform INCB of suspicious transactions involving opium poppy seeds and seizures of poppy seeds derived from illicitly cultivated crops. States where opium poppy was illicitly cultivated were encouraged to cooperate with Governments of neighbouring countries to prevent the smuggling of poppy seeds.

Manufacture of narcotic drugs and psychotropic substances

On 12 March [E/2010/28 (res. 53/15)], the Commission invited Governments to continue contributing to the efforts of INCB so as to favour rapid identification of new patterns of diversion of substances used in the illicit manufacture of narcotic drugs and psychotropic substances. It called upon INCB to strengthen communication with Member States and to work with them in identifying opportunities for more effective control and monitoring of the trade in precursor chemicals, and urged States to continue to focus on the problem of the diversion of substances frequently used in the illicit manufacture of narcotic drugs and psychotropic substances.

Alternative development

In response to a Commission request [YUN 2009, p. 1255], the UNODC Executive Director in January submitted a report [E/CN.7/2010/7 & Corr.1] on promoting best practices and lessons learned for the sustainability and integrity of alternative development programmes.

In 2009, UNODC continued to advocate for increased alternative development assistance to affected States, and to implement related field activities in Afghanistan, Bolivia, Colombia, the Lao People's Democratic Republic, Myanmar and Peru. Following the recommendations of the Political Declaration and Plan of Action on International Cooperation Towards an Integrated and Balanced Strategy to Counter the World Drug Problem [YUN 2009, p. 1237], UNODC had incorporated in its projects elements to measure the impact of alternative development interventions through human development indicators, in addition to the traditional illicit crop estimates.

The report highlighted efforts undertaken by Member States to strengthen technical assistance and co-operation, to facilitate access for alternative development products to national and international markets, and to exchange best practices and lessons learned.

The report concluded that the impact of development-oriented drug control interventions should not be measured solely by illicit crop estimates, but rather in combination with human development indicators. States, UNODC and the international financial institutions should strive to increase human, political and economic resources to broaden the coverage of alternative development programmes; ensure that knowledge, experience and lessons learned over the past 25 years of alternative development programmes were shared and disseminated; and increase efforts to assist affected States in exploring innovative ways to work together in research, policy formulation and the sharing of best practices.

Taking note of the report on 12 March [E/2010/28 (res. 53/6)], the Commission acknowledged that alternative development was an important component of viable and sustainable economic alternatives to the illicit cultivation of drug crops. The Commission recognized the role played by developing countries in sharing best practices and promoting cooperation on alternative development, and welcomed the proposal by Peru and Thailand to jointly host an international workshop in Thailand in November on best practices and lessons learned, in conjunction with an international conference on alternative development to be organized in collaboration with UNODC. The Commission invited Member States and relevant parties to participate in the workshop and conference, and requested the Secretariat to report on the outcome of the meetings at the Commission's fifty-fourth (2011) session.

A Secretariat note of 22 December [E/CN.7/2011/12] informed the Commission that the international workshop and conference on alternative development in Thailand had been rescheduled to a date to be determined in 2011.

Evaluation of drug analysis laboratories

The Commission had before it a report by the UNODC Executive Director [E/CN.7/2010/9], prepared pursuant to a Commission request [YUN 2009, p. 1255], which summarized the work of UNODC in engaging with Member States on the provision of quality assurance support to forensic laboratories.

According to the report, UNODC had put in place mechanisms to extend the international collaborative exercises—a proficiency-testing scheme for drug-testing laboratories—to more such laboratories. The exercises provided the means for laboratories to monitor and assess their performance on a global basis, as well as for UNODC to tailor its technical support and assistance to laboratories. UNODC had developed a web-based portal for the collaborative exercises, providing participating laboratories from 34 Member States with confidential evaluation reports and a repository of information and resources. The Office continued to reinforce its quality assurance programme, and to provide participating laboratories with essential resources such as drug reference standards and recommended analysis methods. UNODC manuals and guidelines assisted laboratories in operating to internationally accepted standards, and contributed to the promotion and harmonization of quality standards throughout the world.

The report also reviewed UNODC's work with regard to reference standards for drug analysis; import and export authorization for substances under international control; and the sustainability and financial implications of the quality assurance programme.

Member States recognized the important role of laboratories as part of the national drug control system and the value of laboratory results and data to criminal justice systems, law enforcement agencies, health authorities and policymakers. The report recommended that States encourage forensic laboratories to participate in proficiency testing schemes, and requested States to provide the financial and material support to participate in such schemes.

Cooperation against the world drug problem

Commission on Narcotic Drugs. On 9 March [E/2010/28], the Commission on Narcotic Drugs, at its fifty-third session, held a thematic debate on measures to enhance awareness of the different aspects of the world drug problem, including improving understanding of how to tackle the problem. The themes for deliberation included raising awareness about the risks of abusing drugs; measures to improve the understanding of drug addiction as a chronic but treatable multifactorial health disorder; regional and inter-regional cooperation; and the importance of research and the collection, reporting and analysis of data for raising awareness about the world drug problem.

Follow-up to Political Declaration and Plan of Action. On 10 March [E/2010/28], the Commission on Narcotic Drugs considered the follow-up to the Political Declaration and Plan of Action on International Cooperation towards an Integrated and Balanced Strategy to Counter the World Drug Problem [YUN 2009, p. 1237], adopted by Heads of State, ministers and government representatives from 132 States at the high-level segment of the fifty-second (2009) session of the Commission. Speakers welcomed the adoption of and expressed support for the Political Declaration and Plan of Action, observing that it maintained an integrated and balanced approach to drug supply and demand reduction and reflected the principle of shared responsibility. The impact of the world drug problem on the social, economic, health, political and governance aspects of society continued to be significant, and Member States had an obligation to continue to invest in drug control. Some speakers underlined the nexus between illicit drugs and criminal activities such as trafficking in firearms and precursors, the manufacture of synthetic drugs, money-laundering, corruption and the financing of terrorism. Several speakers reported on national drug control legislation adopted by their Governments, national drug control strategies and action plans promoting a balanced, multidisciplinary approach. A number of speakers reported on achievements in combating drug trafficking and money-laundering. Along with reporting on seizures of illicit drugs, speakers emphasized the importance of international cooperation in combating drug trafficking. Various speakers expressed the appreciation of their Governments for the assistance provided by UNODC and welcomed the establishment of the working group on the governance and finance of the Office (see p. 1241).

On 12 March [E/2010/28 (res. 53/8)], the Commission reaffirmed that the world drug problem remained a common and shared responsibility that required effective and increased international cooperation. States were urged to take measures at the national, regional and international levels to coordinate their actions and intensify their cooperation against drug trafficking and related criminal offences. The Commission called for increased technical and financial assistance to be provided to States, particularly those most directly affected by the illicit production of and trafficking in drugs, and requested the UNODC Executive Director to report to the Commission's fifty-fifth (2012) session.

Data collection. On 10 March [E/2010/28], the Commission considered ways to improve the collection, reporting and analysis of data to monitor the implementation of the 2009 Political Declaration and Plan of Action. A Secretariat note [E/CN.7/2010/15 & Add.1 & Corr.1 & Add.2-4] provided information on the meeting of the intergovernmental expert group on data collection (Vienna, 12–15 January) [UNODC/CND/EG.1/2010/8], established pursuant to a Commission request [YUN 2009, p. 1237]. The expert group reviewed the data collection tools and processes and prepared a revised draft annual report questionnaire [E/CN.7/2010/19–22] for consideration and possible adoption by the Commission.

On 10 March [E/2010/28 (dec. 53/2)], the Commission decided to reconvene the expert group to finalize the data collection tool for adoption by the Commission at its reconvened fifty-third (2010) session. Pursuant to that decision, the expert group met in Vienna (11–13 October) [UNODC/CND/EG.1/2010/14], where it finalized and approved the draft annual report questionnaire for adoption by the Commission.

On 2 December [E/2010/28/Add.1 (res. 53/16)], the Commission adopted the annual report questionnaire as submitted by the expert group on data collection, and decided that the questionnaire should be periodically reviewed in order to have a flexible international instrument allowing the reporting of national and emerging drug situations. UNODC was requested to carry out such reviews and to assist States in developing their data collection and reporting capacities. The Commission requested that Member States return their completed questionnaire by 30 June each year, and that the UNODC Executive Director submit biennially a report on action taken by States to implement the Political Declaration and Plan of Action, the first of which should be examined by the Commission at its fifty-fifth (2012) session.

Security Council consideration. The Security Council met on 24 February [S/PV.6277] to consider the item "Threats to international peace and security" and to hear a briefing by the UNODC Executive Director. The Council had before it a concept paper [S/2010/94] prepared by France.

Observing that drug trafficking and organized crime had an impact on almost all UN activity, the Secretary-General called for a global and integrated response from the UN system and Member States. He pledged to work more closely with relevant components of the UN system to bring impending threats to the attention of the Council, and urged the Council to follow up on early warning with early action.

The UNODC Executive Director, Antonio Maria Costa, stated that globalization had created unprecedented opportunities for organized crime, particularly by powerful non-State criminal groups. States must respond to these transnational threats by strengthening national efforts and integrating them into a multilateral framework. That could be achieved through attention to development, security, rule of law, health, knowledge- and intelligence-sharing, and anti-corruption measures, as well as a UN system-wide response.

SECURITY COUNCIL ACTION

On 24 February [meeting 6277], following consultations among Security Council members, the President made statement S/PRST/2010/4 on behalf of the Council:

The Security Council reaffirms its primary responsibility for the maintenance of international peace and security, in accordance with the Charter of the United Nations.

The Council notes with concern the serious threats posed in some cases by drug trafficking and transnational organized crime to international security in different regions of the world. These transnational threats are a source of growing concern.

The Council, in this context, further notes with concern the increasing link, in some cases, between drug trafficking and the financing of terrorism, including through the use of proceeds derived from illicit cultivation of, production of and trafficking in narcotic drugs and their precursors, as well as illegal arms trafficking.

The Council notes that these transnational crimes may threaten the security of countries on its agenda, including post-conflict States, and expresses its intention to consider such threats, as appropriate.

The Council notes with concern that drug trafficking and transnational organized crime contribute to undermining the authority of States.

The Council notes that, in a globalized society, organized crime groups and networks, better equipped with new information and communications technologies, are becoming more diversified and connected in their illicit operations, which in some cases may aggravate threats to international security. In this context, the Council expresses concern at the increase in incidents of kidnapping and hostage-taking, in some areas of the world with a specific political context, with the aim of raising funds or gaining political concessions. The development of cybercrime is another source of particular concern.

The Council calls upon Member States to increase international and regional cooperation, on the basis of a common and shared responsibility, as well as their cooperation with the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime and the International Narcotics Control Board, in order to counter the illicit production of, demand for and trafficking in drugs, and to identify emerging trends in drug trafficking. It welcomes relevant initiatives, such as the Paris Pact. The Council also encourages Member States to undertake further action and to consider, on the basis of concrete proposals by the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime and the International Narcotics Control Board, through the Commission on Narcotic Drugs, possible new international initiatives aimed at strengthening the fight against illicit trafficking in chemical precursors.

The Council encourages the coordination of United Nations actions, including those of its agencies, funds and programmes, in order to enhance the effectiveness of appropriate international efforts.

The Council reaffirms and commends the important work of the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime, in collaboration with other relevant entities of the United Nations.

The Council encourages States to strengthen international, regional and subregional cooperation to counter drug trafficking, transnational organized crime, terrorism and corruption and to investigate and prosecute, as appropriate, persons and entities responsible for these crimes, consistent with international law. Through compliance with their obligations under international law, including the relevant resolutions of the Council, Member States can help to strengthen international peace and security. The Council notes relevant international conventions, such as the Single Convention on Narcotic Drugs of 1961 as amended by the 1972 Protocol, the Convention on Psychotropic Substances of 1971, the United Nations Convention against Illicit Traffic in Narcotic Drugs and Psychotropic Substances of 1988, the United Nations Convention against Transnational Organized Crime of 2000 and the Protocols thereto, the United Nations Convention against Corruption of 2003 and the relevant international conventions and protocols related to terrorism.

The Council expresses its concern about the number of victims of acts of terrorism in various regions of the world. The Council further reiterates that acts, methods and practices of terrorism, as well as knowingly financing, planning and inciting terrorist acts, are contrary to the purposes and principles of the United Nations. The Council calls upon States to continue to condemn in the strongest terms all terrorist acts, irrespective of their motivation, whenever and by whomsoever committed, as well as the incitement of terrorism.

The Council invites the Secretary-General to consider these threats as a factor in conflict prevention strategies, conflict analysis, and integrated missions assessment and planning and to consider including in his reports, as appropriate, an analysis of the role played by these threats in situations on its agenda.

The Council welcomes further briefings, as necessary, on a more regular basis, by the Executive Director of the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime.

Regional cooperation

A Secretariat report [E/CN.7/2011/5] described action taken by four of the regional subsidiary bodies of the Commission on Narcotic Drugs in 2010. Each body reviewed trends in drug trafficking and regional and subregional cooperation, addressed law enforcement issues and made recommendations.

The twentieth meeting of Heads of National Drug Law Enforcement Agencies (HONLEA), Africa (Nairobi, 13–17 September) [UNODC/HONLAF/20/6] made recommendations with regard to illicit drug trends in the region; developing effective responses to the investigation of drug trafficking and related crime offences; and drug trafficking and its corrupting influence on law enforcement. The body also recommended the adoption by the Commission of a resolution on measures to support African States. The twentieth meeting of HONLEA, Latin America and the Caribbean (Lima, Peru, 4–7 October) [UNODC/HONLAC/20/6] made recommendations on targeting of drug trafficking by air; drug trafficking and corruption; and trafficking in synthetic drugs and control of precursors. The forty-fifth session of the Subcommission on Illicit Drug Traffic and Related Matters in the Near and Middle East (Damascus, Syrian Arab Republic, 8–12 November) [UNODC/SUBCOM/45/6] made recommendations on the ongoing threat from illicit opium production and trafficking in Afghanistan; meeting the challenge of effective border management; controlling precursor chemicals; and addressing the growing challenge of unregulated alternatives and the trafficking in, and illicit manufacture and use of, ATS in the Near and Middle East. The thirty-fourth meeting of HONLEA, Asia and the Pacific (Bangkok, Thailand, 30 November–3 December) [UNODC/HONLAP/34/6] made recommendations with regard to challenges to effective drug law enforcement; taking effective measures against synthetic drugs; and developing effective regional responses to illicit drug trafficking.

In 2010, the subsidiary bodies had before them a Secretariat note [UNODC/HONLAF/20/5; UNODC/HONLAC/20/5; UNODC/HONLAP/34/5; UNODC/SUBCOM/45/5] submitted pursuant to Economic and Social Council resolution 1992/28 [YUN 1992, p. 909], which reviewed the functioning of the subsidiary bodies based on an assessment undertaken in 2009 and 2010. Feedback was sought from Member States with a view to enhancing their contributions to combating illicit drug trafficking and related crime, and to identifying ways to ensure that meetings met the needs and expectations of participating countries. The majority of responding States considered that important elements of the HONLEA meetings were the opportunity to meet law enforcement authorities of other States; exchange information and learn from the experiences of others; develop bilateral, multilateral and regional cooperation; and highlight areas of concern. Respondents also considered that the meetings translated into improved international cooperation.

International cooperation

Report of Secretary-General. In response to General Assembly resolution 64/182 [YUN 2009, p. 1237], the Secretary-General in June issued a report [A/65/93] on international cooperation against the world drug problem. The report reviewed the world drug situation and the implementation of mandates given by the Commission on Narcotic Drugs and UNODC, including on drug abuse prevention; measures to prevent drug trafficking; alternative development; access to drug treatment and health care; the supply dimension; research, monitoring and analysis of drug trends; and strengthening the drug programme of UNODC.

The Secretary-General stated that the world drug problem undermined sustainable development, political stability, democratic institutions and the health of individuals and communities. Drug abuse could be prevented, treated and controlled, and programmes for drug abuse prevention, treatment and rehabilitation should be based on scientific evidence and respect for human rights. The Secretary-General noted the threat posed by drug trafficking and organized crime to national security and even sovereignty, calling on Member States to give greater attention to security, justice, development assistance in vulnerable regions, information sharing and the rule of law. Member States should implement the UN drug control conventions and provide regular and adequate resources to UNODC.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 21 December [meeting 71], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Third Committee [A/65/458], adopted resolution 65/233 without vote [agenda item 106].

International cooperation against the world drug problem

The General Assembly,

Reaffirming the Political Declaration adopted by the General Assembly at its twentieth special session, the Declaration on the Guiding Principles of Drug Demand Reduction, the Action Plan on International Cooperation on the Eradication of Illicit Drug Crops and on Alternative Development, the Action Plan for the Implementation of the Declaration on the Guiding Principles of Drug Demand Reduction and the joint ministerial statement adopted at the ministerial segment of the forty-sixth session of the Commission on Narcotic Drugs,

Recalling the United Nations Millennium Declaration, the provisions of the 2005 World Summit Outcome addressing the world drug problem, the Political Declaration on HIV/AIDS and other relevant United Nations resolutions, including General Assembly resolution 64/182 of 18 December 2009 and those on regional and international cooperation to prevent the diversion and smuggling of precursors,

Recalling also that in its resolution 64/182 the General Assembly adopted the Political Declaration and Plan of Action on International Cooperation towards an Integrated and Balanced Strategy to Counter the World Drug Problem, as adopted by the Commission on Narcotic Drugs at the high-level segment of its fifty-second session, and called upon States to take the measures necessary to fully implement the actions set out therein, with a view to attaining, in a timely manner, their goals and targets,

Recalling further the adoption by the Economic and Social Council of its resolutions 2010/17 and 2010/21 of 22 July 2010 on the realignment of the functions of the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime and changes to the strategic framework,

Welcoming the measures taken by the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime to develop a thematic and regional programme approach to its activities,

Recalling all resolutions adopted by the Commission on Narcotic Drugs at its fifty-third session, especially on the strengthening of regional cooperation and including the resolution on achieving universal access to prevention, treatment, care and support for drug users and people living with or affected by HIV,

Welcoming the efforts made by Member States to comply with the provisions of the Single Convention on Narcotic Drugs of 1961 as amended by the 1972 Protocol, the Convention on Psychotropic Substances of 1971 and the United Nations Convention against Illicit Traffic in Narcotic Drugs and Psychotropic Substances of 1988,

Gravely concerned that, despite continuing increased efforts by States, relevant organizations, civil society and non-governmental organizations, the world drug problem continues to constitute a serious threat to public health and safety and the well-being of humanity, in particular children and young people and their families, and to the national security and sovereignty of States, and that it undermines socio-economic and political stability and sustainable development,

Deeply concerned about the need to take all appropriate measures, including legislative, administrative, social and educational measures, to protect children against the illicit use of narcotic drugs and psychotropic substances as defined in the relevant treaties, and to prevent the use of children in the illicit production of and trafficking in such substances, and urging Governments to implement Commission on Narcotic Drugs resolution 53/10 of 12 March 2010,

Noting with grave concern the global increased abuse of certain drugs and the proliferation of new substances, as well as the increasing sophistication of the transnational organized crime groups engaged in their manufacture and distribution,

Noting with grave concern also the global increased abuse and manufacture of amphetamine-type stimulants as well as the proliferation of chemical precursors used in the illicit manufacture of narcotic drugs and psychotropic substances, and the emergence of new methods of diversion used by organized criminal groups,

Recognizing that the use of substances that are not controlled under the international drug control treaties and that may pose potential public-health risks has emerged in recent years in several regions of the world, and noting the increasing number of reports about the production of substances, most commonly herbal mixtures, containing synthetic cannabinoid receptor agonists that have psychoactive effects similar to those produced by cannabis,

Recognizing also that international cooperation in demand reduction and supply reduction has shown that positive results can be achieved through sustained and collective efforts, and expressing its appreciation for the initiatives at the regional and international levels in this regard,

Reaffirming that the world drug problem remains a common and shared responsibility that requires effective and increased international cooperation and demands an integrated, multidisciplinary, mutually reinforcing and balanced approach to supply and demand reduction strategies,

Recognizing the principal role of the Commission on Narcotic Drugs and its subsidiary bodies, together with the International Narcotics Control Board, as the United Nations organs with prime responsibility for drug control matters, and recognizing also the need to promote and facilitate the effective implementation of and follow-up to the Political Declaration and Plan of Action on International Cooperation towards an Integrated and Balanced Strategy to Counter the World Drug Problem,

Reaffirming that countering the world drug problem in all its aspects requires a political commitment to reducing supply, as an integral component of a balanced and comprehensive drug control strategy, in accordance with the principles enshrined in the Political Declaration adopted by the General Assembly at its twentieth special session and the measures to enhance international cooperation to counter the world drug problem, including the Action Plan on International Cooperation on the Eradication of Illicit Drug Crops and on Alternative Development, also adopted at that session,

Reaffirming equally that reducing illicit drug use and its consequences requires a political commitment to efforts to reduce demand, which must be demonstrated by sustained widespread demand reduction initiatives that integrate a comprehensive public-health approach spanning the spectrum of prevention, education, early intervention, treatment, recovery support, rehabilitation and reintegration efforts, in accordance with the Declaration on the Guiding Principles of Drug Demand Reduction, adopted by the General Assembly at its twentieth special session,

Recalling the recommendations contained in its resolution 64/182 that the Economic and Social Council devote one of its high-level segments to a theme related to the world drug problem and that the General Assembly hold a special session to address the world drug problem,

Conscious of the need to raise public awareness of the risks and threats posed to all societies by the different aspects of the world drug problem,

1. Calls upon States to take, as appropriate, in a timely manner, the measures necessary to implement the actions and attain the goals and targets set out in the Political Declaration and Plan of Action on International Cooperation towards an Integrated and Balanced Strategy to Counter the World Drug Problem, adopted by the General Assembly at its sixty-fourth session;

2. Reaffirms that countering the world drug problem is a common and shared responsibility that must be addressed in a multilateral setting, requires an integrated and balanced approach and must be carried out in full conformity with the purposes and principles of the Charter of the United Nations and other provisions of international law, the Universal Declaration of Human Rights and the Vienna Declaration and Programme of Action on human rights, and, in particular, with full respect for the sovereignty and territorial integrity of States, for the principle of non-intervention in the internal affairs of States and for all human rights and fundamental freedoms, and on the basis of the principles of equal rights and mutual respect;

3. Undertakes to promote bilateral, regional and international cooperation, including through intelligence-sharing and cross-border cooperation, aimed at countering the world drug problem more effectively, in particular by encouraging and supporting such cooperation by those States most directly affected by illicit crop cultivation and the illicit production, manufacture, transit, trafficking, distribution and abuse of narcotic drugs and psychotropic substances;

4. Reiterates the commitment of Member States to promoting, developing, reviewing or strengthening effective, comprehensive, integrated drug demand reduction programmes, based on scientific evidence and covering a range of measures, including primary prevention, early intervention, treatment, care, rehabilitation, social reintegration and related support services, aimed at promoting health and social well-being among individuals, families and communities and reducing the adverse consequences of drug abuse for individuals and society as a whole, taking into account the particular challenges posed by high-risk drug users, in full compliance with the three international drug control conventions and in accordance with national legislation, and commits Member States to investing increased resources in ensuring access to those interventions on a non-discriminatory basis, including in detention facilities, bearing in mind that those interventions should also consider vulnerabilities that undermine human development, such as poverty and social marginalization;

5. Notes with great concern the adverse consequences of drug abuse for individuals and society as a whole, reaffirms the commitment of all Member States to tackling those problems in the context of comprehensive, complementary and multisectoral drug demand reduction strategies, in particular such strategies targeting young people, also notes with great concern the alarming rise in the incidence of HIV/AIDS and other blood-borne diseases among injecting drug users, reaffirms the commitment of all Member States to working towards the goal of universal access to comprehensive prevention programmes and treatment, care and related support services, in full compliance with the international drug control conventions and in accordance with national legislation, taking into account all relevant General Assembly resolutions and, when applicable, the WHO, UNODC, UNAIDS Technical Guide for Countries to Set Targets for Universal Access to HIV Prevention, Treatment and Care for Injecting Drug Users, and requests the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime to carry out its mandate in this area in close cooperation with relevant organizations and programmes of the United Nations system, such as the World Health Organization, the United Nations Development Programme and the Joint United Nations Programme on HIV/AIDS;

6. Encourages Member States to promote, in accordance with Commission on Narcotic Drugs resolution 53/4 of 12 March 2010, the adequate availability of internationally controlled licit drugs for medical and scientific purposes while preventing their diversion and abuse;

7. Acknowledges the continuing efforts made and the progress achieved in countering the world drug problem, notes with great concern the continuing illicit production of and trafficking in opium, the continuing illicit manufacture of and trafficking in cocaine, the increasing illicit production of and trafficking in cannabis, the ongoing global spread of the illicit manufacture of amphetamine-type stimulants and the increasing diversion of precursors, as well as the related distribution and use of illicit drugs, and stresses the need to strengthen and intensify joint efforts at the national, regional and international levels to tackle those global challenges in a more comprehensive manner, in accordance with the principle of common and shared responsibility, including by means of enhanced and better-coordinated technical and financial assistance;

8. Invites Member States to take appropriate measures so as to strengthen international cooperation and the exchange of information regarding the identification of new routes and modi operandi of criminal organizations dedicated to the diversion or smuggling of substances frequently used in the illicit manufacture of narcotic drugs and psychotropic substances, in particular with respect to their trafficking via the Internet, and to continue to notify the International Narcotics Control Board of such information;

9. Encourages Member States to promote, in accordance with Commission on Narcotic Drugs resolution 53/11 of 12 March 2010, the sharing of information on the potential abuse of and trafficking in synthetic cannabinoid receptor agonists;

10. Recognizes the need to collect relevant data and information regarding international cooperation for countering the world drug problem at the national, bilateral, subregional, regional and international levels, and urges all Member States to support dialogue through the Commission on Narcotic Drugs in order to address this issue;

11. Also recognizes that:

(a) Sustainable crop control strategies targeting the illicit cultivation of crops used for the production of narcotic drugs and psychotropic substances require international cooperation based on the principle of shared responsibility and an integrated and balanced approach, taking into account the rule of law and, where appropriate, security concerns, with full respect for the sovereignty and territorial integrity of States, the principle of non-intervention in the internal affairs of States and all human rights and fundamental freedoms;

(b) Such crop control strategies include, inter alia, alternative development and, where appropriate, preventive alternative development programmes, eradication and law enforcement measures;

(c) Such crop control strategies should be in full conformity with article 14 of the United Nations Convention against Illicit Traffic in Narcotic Drugs and Psychotropic Substances of 1988 and appropriately coordinated and phased in accordance with national policies in order to achieve the sustainable eradication of illicit crops, noting furthermore the need for Member States to undertake to increase long-term investment in such strategies, coordinated with other development measures, in order to contribute to the sustainability of social and economic development and poverty eradication in affected rural areas, taking due account of the traditional licit uses of crops where there is historical evidence of such use and giving due consideration to the protection of the environment;

12. Further recognizes the significant role played by developing countries with extensive expertise in alternative development in promoting best practices and lessons learned from such programmes, and invites them to continue sharing those best practices with States affected by illicit crop cultivation, including those emerging from conflict, with a view to using them, where appropriate, in accordance with the national specificities of each State;

13. Urges Member States to intensify their cooperation with and assistance to transit States affected by illicit drug trafficking, directly or through the competent regional and international organizations, in accordance with article 10 of the United Nations Convention against Illicit Traffic in Narcotic Drugs and Psychotropic Substances of 1988, and on the basis of the principle of shared responsibility and the need for all States to promote and implement measures to counter the drug problem in all its aspects with an integrated and balanced approach;

14. Reiterates the urgent need for Member States to strengthen international and regional cooperation in order to respond to the serious challenges posed by the increasing links between drug trafficking, money-laundering, corruption and other forms of organized crime, including trafficking in persons, smuggling of migrants, trafficking in firearms, cybercrime and, in some cases, terrorism and the financing of terrorism, and to the significant challenges faced by law enforcement and judicial authorities in responding to the ever-changing means used by transnational criminal organizations to avoid detection and prosecution;

15. Reaffirms the importance of the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime and its regional offices in building capacity at the local level in the fight against transnational organized crime and drug trafficking, and urges the Office to consider regional vulnerabilities, projects and impact in the fight against drug trafficking, in particular in developing countries, when deciding to close and allocate offices, with a view to maintaining an effective level of support for national and regional efforts in combating the world drug problem;

16. Urges the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime to increase collaboration with intergovernmental, international and relevant regional organizations involved in combating the world drug problem, as appropriate, in order to share best practices and scientific standards, and to maximize the benefits from their unique comparative advantage;

17. Requests the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime, upon request, to continue providing technical assistance to Member States so as to enhance capacity in countering the world drug problem, including by carrying out training programmes to develop indicators and instruments for the collection and analysis of accurate, reliable and comparable data on all relevant aspects of the world drug problem and, where appropriate, enhance or develop new national indicators and instruments;

18. Invites the Commission on Narcotic Drugs, as the central policymaking body of the United Nations system on drug-related matters, to strengthen the capacity of the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime to collect, analyse, use and disseminate accurate, reliable, objective and comparable data and to reflect such information in the World Drug Report;

19. Encourages the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime to continue its efforts in supporting States to establish, upon request, operational frameworks essential for communication across national borders and in facilitating the exchange of information on and analysis of drug trafficking trends, with a view to increasing knowledge about the world drug problem at the national, regional and international levels, and recognizes the importance of integrating laboratories and providing scientific support to drug control frameworks and of treating quality analytical data as a primary source of information worldwide;

20. Urges all Governments to provide the fullest possible financial and political support to the United Nations

Office on Drugs and Crime by widening its donor base and increasing voluntary contributions, in particular general-purpose contributions, so as to enable it to continue, expand, improve and strengthen its operational and technical cooperation activities, within its mandates, in particular with a view to the full implementation of the Political Declaration adopted by the General Assembly at its twentieth special session and the Political Declaration and Plan of Action on International Cooperation towards an Integrated and Balanced Strategy to Counter the World Drug Problem adopted by the Commission on Narcotic Drugs at the high-level segment of its fifty-second session, as well as, where appropriate, relevant resolutions adopted by the Commission at that session, and recommends that a sufficient share of the regular budget of the United Nations continue to be allocated to the Office to enable it to carry out its mandates in a consistent and stable manner;

21. Encourages the Commission on Narcotic Drugs, as the principal policymaking organ of the United Nations on matters of international drug control and as the governing body of the drug programme of the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime, and the International Narcotics Control Board to strengthen their useful work on the control of precursors and other chemicals used in the illicit manufacture of narcotic drugs and psychotropic substances;

22. Urges States that have not done so to consider ratifying or acceding to, and States parties to implement, as a matter of priority, all the provisions of the Single Convention on Narcotic Drugs of 1961 as amended by the 1972 Protocol, the Convention on Psychotropic Substances of 1971, the United Nations Convention against Illicit Traffic in Narcotic Drugs and Psychotropic Substances of 1988, the United Nations Convention against Transnational Organized Crime and the Protocols thereto and the United Nations Convention against Corruption;

23. Takes note of the resolutions adopted by the Commission on Narcotic Drugs at its fifty-third session, the World Drug Report 2010 of the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime and the most recent report of the International Narcotics Control Board, and calls upon States to strengthen international and regional cooperation to counter the threat to the international community caused by the illicit production of and trafficking in drugs, especially those in the opium group, as well as other aspects of the world drug problem, and to continue to take concerted measures, such as within the framework of the Paris Pact and other relevant international initiatives;

24. Notes that the International Narcotics Control Board needs sufficient resources to carry out all its mandates, reaffirms the importance of its work, encourages it to continue to carry out its work in accordance with its mandates, urges Member States to commit themselves in a common effort to assigning, where possible, adequate and sufficient budgetary resources to the Board, in accordance with Economic and Social Council resolution 1996/20 of 23 July 1996, emphasizes the need to maintain its capacity, inter alia, through the provision of appropriate means by the Secretary-General and adequate technical support from the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime, and calls for enhanced cooperation and understanding between Member States and the Board to enable it to implement all its mandates under the international drug control conventions;

25. Emphasizes the important role played by civil society, in particular non-governmental organizations, in addressing the world drug problem, notes with appreciation their important contribution to the review process, and also notes that representatives of affected populations and civil society entities, where appropriate, should be enabled to play a participatory role in the formulation and implementation of drug demand and supply reduction policy;

26. Encourages the meetings of Heads of National Drug Law Enforcement Agencies and of the Subcommittee on Illicit Drug Traffic and Related Matters in the Near and Middle East of the Commission on Narcotic Drugs to continue to contribute to the strengthening of regional and international cooperation, and in this regard acknowledges the discussions conducted at the twentieth meeting of Heads of National Drug Law Enforcement Agencies, Latin America and the Caribbean, held in Lima from 4 to 7 October 2010;

27. Welcomes the ongoing efforts to strengthen regional cooperation in combating illicit trafficking in drugs and the diversion of precursor chemicals undertaken by the members of the Commonwealth of Independent States, the Shanghai Cooperation Organization, the Economic Cooperation Organization, the Collective Security Treaty Organization, the Eurasian Group on Combating Money-Laundering and Financing of Terrorism and other relevant subregional and regional organizations and initiatives, including the plan of action on combating terrorism, illicit drug trafficking and organized crime adopted at the special conference held under the auspices of the Shanghai Cooperation Organization in Moscow on 27 March 2009, the relevant decisions of the Shanghai Cooperation Organization summit, held in Tashkent on 10 and 11 June 2010, and the efforts undertaken within the framework of the permanent counter-narcotics mechanism "Channel";

28. Acknowledges other ongoing regional efforts to combat illicit trafficking in drugs and address the demand for illicit drugs, such as those of the Inter-American Drug Abuse Control Commission of the Organization of American States and those of the Association of Southeast Asian Nations Senior Officials on Drug Matters to combat illicit drug production, trafficking and use (workplan 2009–2015) with the aim of achieving a drug-free South-East Asia by 2015;

29. Calls upon the relevant United Nations agencies and entities and other international organizations, and invites international financial institutions, including regional development banks, to mainstream drug control issues into their programmes, and calls upon the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime to maintain its leading role by providing relevant information and technical assistance;

30. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General, and requests the Secretary-General to submit to the General Assembly at its sixty-sixth session a report on the implementation of the present resolution.

Conventions

International efforts to control narcotic drugs were governed by three global conventions: the 1961 Single Convention on Narcotic Drugs [YUN 1961, p. 382], which, with some exceptions of detail, replaced earlier narcotics treaties and was amended by the 1972 Protocol [YUN 1972, p. 397] to strengthen the role of the International Narcotics Control Board (INCB); the 1971 Convention on Psychotropic Substances [YUN 1971, p. 380]; and the 1988 United Nations Convention against Illicit Traffic in Narcotic Drugs and Psychotropic Substances [YUN 1988, p. 690].

As at 31 December, 183 States were parties to the 1961 Convention, as amended by the 1972 Protocol. Afghanistan and Chad continued to be parties to the Convention in its unamended form only.

The number of parties to the 1971 Convention remained at 183 as at 31 December.

At year's end, 184 States and the European Union (EU) were parties to the 1988 Convention. During the year, the Marshall Islands acceded to the treaty.

Commission action. In March [E/2010/28], the Commission on Narcotic Drugs reviewed implementation of the international drug control treaties. It had before it the INCB report covering its 2009 activities [YUN 2009, p. 1242]; the reports of the UNODC Executive Director on the activities of UNODC [E/CN.7/2010/3-E/CN.15/2010/3] (see p. 1103) and on the proposal concerning quality evaluation of the performance of drug analysis laboratories [E/CN.7/2010/9] (see p. 1249); a Secretariat note on changes in the scope of control of substances [E/CN.7/2010/12] (see below); the 2009 INCB technical report on the implementation of article 12 of the 1988 Convention, dealing with precursors and chemicals frequently used in the illicit manufacture of narcotic drugs and psychotropic substances [E/INCB/2009/4]; the report of the Competent National Authorities under the Treaties [ST/NAR.3/2009/1]; and a note by the UNODC Executive Director on drug control, crime prevention and criminal justice: a human rights perspective [E/CN.7/2010/CRP.6-E/CN.15/2010/CRP.1].

As recommended by the Secretariat [E/CN.7/2010/12], the Commission, on 8 March [E/2010/28 (dec. 53/1)], decided to transfer phenylacetic acid from Table II to Table I of the 1988 Convention.

On 12 March [E/2010/28 (res. 53/4)], the Commission decided to include in its agenda for its fifty-fourth (2011) session an item on the adequate availability of narcotic drugs and psychotropic substances for medical and scientific purposes. It called upon States to fulfil their reporting obligations to INCB and the Secretary-General concerning the use of internationally controlled substances for medical and scientific purposes, as well as the diversion of, trafficking in and abuse of those substances. The Commission invited INCB to include in its annual report for 2010 information on the consumption of narcotic drugs and psychotropic substances used for medical and scientific purposes worldwide, including an analysis of impediments to their adequate availability and actions to be taken to overcome those impediments. UNODC was requested to continue its efforts to ensure the adequate availability of internationally controlled drugs for medical and scientific purposes, while continuing its activities to prevent their diversion and abuse.

INCB action. In its report covering 2010 [E/INCB/2010/1, Sales No. E.11.XI.1], INCB requested those States that were not parties to one or more of the international drug control treaties to accede to them without delay. With regard to treaty implementation and control measures, Governments were requested to furnish all statistical reports required under the conventions; encouraged to seek from the Board any information that would assist them in complying with their reporting obligations; and called upon to provide adequate resources to relevant authorities to ensure their compliance with all reporting obligations under the treaties. INCB called upon Governments to establish and provide annual estimates of national requirements for narcotic drugs and psychotropic substances for medical and scientific purposes. The Board requested Governments that were exempting certain preparations at the national level from some control measures foreseen in the 1971 Convention and had not yet notified the Secretary-General of those exemptions to do so without delay. Governments that had not yet done so were urged to introduce import and export authorizations for all psychotropic substances in Schedules III and IV of the 1971 Convention. INCB called upon Governments to report incidents involving the diversion or seizure of non-controlled substances used in the illicit manufacture of precursors, and to ensure timely submission of their annual requirements for certain precursors. Governments were requested to register for the online system for the exchange of pre-export notifications ("PEN Online") and to use the system regularly to enable timely communication regarding the legitimacy of shipments of precursors.

Pursuant to Commission resolution 53/4 (see above), INCB issued a supplement to its 2010 report on the availability of internationally controlled substances for medical and scientific requirements [E/INCB/2010/1/Supp.1, Sales No. E.11.XI.7], providing recommendations with regard to their availability and appropriate use, national control systems and prevention of diversion and abuse.

In 2010, the Board reviewed the drug control situation in Brazil, Mexico and Peru, as well as measures taken by those countries to implement the international drug control treaties. During the year, it sent missions to Armenia, Azerbaijan, Croatia, Gabon, Georgia, Guatemala, Israel, Lebanon, Morocco and Turkmenistan.

Proposed amendment to Convention

On 3 February [E/2010/7], pursuant to Economic and Social Council decision 2009/250 [YUN 2009, p. 1241], the Secretary-General transmitted to the Council a note of 28 January from Egypt, which stated that Egypt withdrew its objection to the proposal submitted by Bolivia to amend article 49 of the 1961 Single Convention on Narcotic Drugs. Bolivia had proposed to delete a provision on abolishing coca leaf chewing, an ancestral practice of the Andean indigenous peoples.

On 23 December [E/2011/7], the Secretary-General transmitted to the Council a note of 17 December from Colombia, which stated that Colombia rejected the proposed amendment.

International Narcotics Control Board

The 13-member International Narcotics Control Board (INCB) held its ninety-seventh (1–5 February), ninety-eighth (3–14 May) and ninety-ninth (27 October–12 November) sessions, all in Vienna.

In accordance with the tasks assigned to it under the international conventions, the Board monitored the implementation of the international drug control treaties and maintained a permanent dialogue with Governments. The information received from Governments was used to identify the enforcement of treaty provisions requiring them to limit to medical and scientific purposes the licit manufacture of, trade in and distribution and use of narcotic drugs and psychotropic substances. The Board, which was required by the treaties to report annually on the drug control situation worldwide, noted gaps and weaknesses in national control and treaty compliance and made recommendations for improvements at the national and international levels.

The Board's 2010 report [E/INCB/2010/1, Sales No. E.11.XI.1] focused on the issue of drug-related corruption, which was undermining international efforts to eliminate problems related to controlled drugs. Intimidation and corruption were the most effective tools used by organized criminal groups to counter the drug control efforts of law enforcement agencies, and the huge profits generated by the illicit drug trade enabled criminal groups to engage in corruption on a very large scale. The consequences of corruption could be pervasive and profound, threatening democracy and development and weakening the credibility of the criminal justice system and other social institutions. The most common type of corruption was bribery of public officials to influence the functions of government. Corruption also threatened police, customs and law enforcement agencies, military institutions, the judiciary and countries in post-conflict situations or with economies in transition.

The Board stated that several measures could be taken to prevent, detect and investigate drug-related corruption. The most important prevention measures were found in the United Nations Convention against Corruption [YUN 2003, p. 1126], which allowed for the establishment of independent bodies with legislative authority to promote good practices in preventing corruption. INCB recommended that Governments give greater attention to corruption prevention initiatives and to prioritizing strategies aimed at raising public awareness and preventing corruption and intimidation. Law enforcement, criminal justice and other agencies involved in drug control should adopt and enforce within their agencies a policy of absolute intolerance towards corruption and adopt measures to prevent drug-related corruption and misconduct within their ranks. There must be renewed national and international efforts to strengthen measures to counter money-laundering, and States should ratify and implement the United Nations Convention against Transnational Organized Crime [YUN 2000, p. 1048] and the Convention against Corruption.

The INCB report was supplemented by two technical reports: Narcotic Drugs: Estimated World Requirements for 2011 [E/INCB/2010/2], and Psychotropic Substances: Statistics for 2009 [E/INCB/2010/3]; one treaty-mandated report: Precursors and Chemicals Frequently Used in the Illicit Manufacture of Narcotic Drugs and Psychotropic Substances [E/INCB/2010/4]; and one special report: Availability of Internationally Controlled Drugs: Ensuring Adequate Access for Medical and Scientific Purposes [E/INCB/2010/1/Supp.1].

By decision 2010/245 of 22 July, the Economic and Social Council took note of the INCB report for 2009 [E/INCB/2009/1, Sales No. E.10.XI.1].

World drug situation and control efforts

In its 2010 report [E/INCB/2010/1], INCB presented a regional analysis of world drug abuse trends and control efforts to keep Governments aware of situations that might endanger the objectives of international drug control treaties. The report provided information on major developments; regional cooperation; national legislation, policy and action; cultivation, production, manufacture and trafficking; and abuse and treatment for each region.

Africa

The threats posed by drug trafficking through Africa remained high on the agenda of the international community. The large-scale smuggling of cocaine appeared to have resumed in 2010, and East Africa was a major conduit for smuggling heroin from South-West Asia into Europe and North America. The Board expressed concern over the increased abuse of almost all types of drugs in Africa, with cannabis being the main drug of abuse.

African Ministers and experts at the fourth session of the African Union Conference of Ministers for Drug Control and Crime Prevention (Addis Ababa, Ethiopia, 28 September–2 October) agreed to fight illicit cultivation and abuse of cannabis, address the control of precursor chemicals, and develop adequate monitoring and regulatory systems. African subregional economic communities played a key role in implementing the African Union Plan of Action on Drug Control and Crime Prevention, 2007–2012 [YUN 2007, p. 1286], while the League of Arab States adopted a five-year programme to improve drug and crime control in North Africa and the Middle East. Members of the Economic Community of West African States (ECOWAS) took action to implement the regional plan on drug trafficking, organized crime and drug abuse adopted in 2008 [YUN 2008, p. 1357].

West Africa

A report by the UNODC Executive Director [E/CN.7/2010/10], prepared pursuant to a Commission on Narcotic Drugs request [YUN 2008, p. 1358], reviewed the support provided by the international community to West African States and to ECOWAS in overcoming the challenges related to drug trafficking and organized crime. UNODC had been entrusted with translating the ECOWAS political declaration and regional action plan of 2008 into concrete programmes to be carried out by ECOWAS member States in partnership with the United Nations Office for West Africa, the Department of Peacekeeping Operations, the International Criminal Police Organization and the EU. Technical assistance to West Africa included regional initiatives on research and analysis; policymaking and partnerships; strategies to counter money-laundering and the financing of terrorism; post-conflict and peacebuilding assistance; law enforcement, counter-narcotics and forensics; transatlantic cooperation; and drug abuse and HIV/AIDS prevention. UNODC also implemented national integrated programmes against drug trafficking and organized crime in Cape Verde, Guinea-Bissau and Mali.

Americas

Central America and the Caribbean

The Central American and Caribbean region continued to be used as a transit area for the large-scale smuggling of illicit drugs, and the drug problem was exacerbated by endemic corruption, poverty, high unemployment and drug-related violence. The widespread destruction and loss of capacity of the Haitian

State following the earthquake in Haiti in January 2010 (see p. 320) gave rise to fears that the country might be increasingly used as a trans-shipment area for illicit drugs.

UNODC in March launched phase I of the Santo Domingo Pact and Managua Mechanism, an inter-regional programme aimed at promoting the establishment of information-gathering and policy-sharing initiatives and regional coordination of activities to combat drug trafficking and associated crime. Other regional initiatives included the adoption in May of the Hemispheric Drug Strategy by the Inter-American Drug Abuse Control Commission and the adoption in June of the Panama Declaration by member States of the Central American Integration System.

On 12 March [E/2010/28 (res. 53/14)], the Commission on Narcotic Drugs encouraged the implementation of the political declarations on drug trafficking, organized crime and terrorism adopted in 2009 in Santo Domingo, Dominican Republic [YUN 2009, p. 1244], and in Managua, Nicaragua [ibid., p. 1084]. It requested UNODC to assist the Central American and Caribbean States in obtaining the resources necessary to effectively implement the Santo Domingo Pact and Managua Mechanism, and to provide periodic updates on the implementation of the resolution.

North America

North America continued to play a major role in illicit drug supply and demand. The number of drug-related deaths increased sharply in the United States, and there was increasing abuse of cannabis and prescription drugs containing controlled substances among youth. Mexico remained a major transit and source country for illicit drugs. Drug trafficking organizations responded to law enforcement measures in 2009 and 2010 by unleashing unprecedented violence, murdering a large number of persons, including law enforcement officials. Canada remained one of the world's primary source countries for illicitly manufactured synthetic drugs.

The Merida Initiative [YUN 2008, p. 1361] continued to be the focal point of regional cooperation to counter drug trafficking and related forms of organized crime. Mexico and the United States reaffirmed the goals and commitments of the Initiative at the meeting of the Merida Initiative High-level Consultative Group on Bilateral Cooperation against Transnational Organized Crime (Mexico City, March). Cooperation between the United States and Canada included joint law enforcement operations, information-sharing and collaboration using the Cross-Border Crime Forum, which brought together senior law enforcement and justice officials.

South America

In South America, criminal organizations traditionally involved in drug trafficking at the international level started to engage in such activities at the national level. The growing influence of cartels in politics posed a threat to security and development. In 2009, the decrease in total area under illicit coca bush cultivation, due to a significant reduction in cultivation in Colombia, was partly offset by an increase in Bolivia and Peru.

The European Commission approved the Cooperation Programme between Latin America and the EU on Anti-Drugs Policies. At a high-level meeting of heads of drug law enforcement agencies in West Africa and Latin America and the Caribbean (Bogotá, Colombia, 25–27 January), 24 bilateral agreements on joint investigations were signed. The Twelfth United Nations Congress on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice (Salvador, Brazil, 12–19 April) (see p. 1094) adopted the Salvador Declaration on crime prevention and criminal justice systems.

The Economic and Social Council endorsed the Salvador Declaration by resolution 2010/18 of 22 July (see p. 1095). It invited Governments to take into consideration the Declaration and the recommendations adopted at the Twelfth Congress when formulating legislation and policy directives.

Asia

East and South-East Asia

In East and South-East Asia, an upswing in opium poppy cultivation during the 2009 growing season threatened progress in reducing opium production. The increased trafficking in, illicit manufacture of and abuse of synthetic drugs was of paramount concern. Amphetamine-type stimulants (ATS), opioids and cannabis continued to be widely abused, and the risk of an HIV epidemic among the drug-injecting population was high.

Regionally, numerous joint operations led to several seizures of drugs and precursors and to the dismantling of clandestine laboratories. Association of Southeast Asian Nations (ASEAN) events included the eighteenth ASEAN-EU ministerial meeting (Madrid, 26 May), which reaffirmed a commitment to promoting cooperation to combat drug trafficking, and the twenty-third ASEAN-Australia Forum (Singapore, 19 March) on cooperative mechanisms for combating transnational organized crime.

South Asia

South Asia had become one of the main regions used by drug traffickers to obtain ephedrine and pseudoephedrine for the illicit manufacture of methamphetamine. Diversion into illicit channels of pharmaceutical preparations containing substances under international control also continued to pose problems. In response to high rates of HIV infection reported among drug abusers, several countries introduced or expanded opioid substitution treatment programmes.

Several initiatives took place at the ministerial level in 2009 and 2010, including the twelfth ministerial meeting among States involved in the Bay of Bengal Initiative for Multi-Sectoral Technical and Economic Cooperation (Nay Pyi Taw, Myanmar, December 2009); the signing of an agreement between Bangladesh and India on combating international terrorism, organized crime and illicit drug trafficking (January 2010); and the third meeting of Ministers of the Interior of States members of the South Asian Association for Regional Cooperation (Islamabad, Pakistan, June) on possible measures to combat drug smuggling.

West Asia

In Afghanistan, illicit drug use increased across the country, with dramatic rises in the abuse of opium, heroin and other opiates. The southern Caucasus was increasingly being used as a transit area for consignments of opiates from Afghanistan, and INCB remained concerned about drug trafficking and abuse in Armenia, Azerbaijan and Georgia. The drug situation in the Middle East worsened, with HIV and hepatitis C infection rates increasing in the region.

Several regional initiatives with regard to Afghanistan took place in 2010, including the London Conference on Afghanistan (28 January), which welcomed the updating of the National Drug Control Strategy, the special conference on Afghanistan (Moscow, 27 March) and the international Kabul Conference (20 July). In Central Asia, Governments increased their cooperation in areas such as illicit drug supply and demand, precursor control, border management and countering the spread of HIV/AIDS. The Governments of 18 Arab countries worked with UNODC on a regional programme framework to address problems related to drugs and crime for the period 2011–2015, which was reviewed at a regional expert group meeting in April in Cairo, Egypt. The regional programme was endorsed on 8 December by the Council of the League of Arab States and launched by the UNODC Executive Director and the Secretary General of the League of Arab States.

In response to a request from the Commission on Narcotic Drugs [YUN 2009, p. 1249], the UNODC Executive Director submitted a report [E/CN.7/2010/6] on progress made by UNODC and Member States in 2009 on strengthening the law enforcement capacity of the main transit States neighbouring Afghanistan. The report reviewed progress made under the Paris Pact initiative [YUN 2003, p. 1263] and in line with the Rainbow Strategy [YUN 2008, p. 1365], which translated the recommendations contained in the Paris Pact into operations for implementation on the ground and guided the work of UNODC field offices in Afghanistan and neighbouring countries. Highlights included the evaluation of phase two of the Paris Pact initiative, the formulation of a third phase of that initiative and the finalization of the UNODC regional programme for Afghanistan and neighbouring countries, endorsed at the meeting of the Group of Eight (Trieste, Italy, 25–27 June 2009). The report also provided information on the drug situation in Afghanistan; cooperation among Afghanistan, Iran and Pakistan, including the Triangular Initiative [YUN 2007, p. 1294]; and cooperation with Central Asian States, including through the Central Asian Regional Information and Coordination Centre (CARICC), inaugurated on 9 December 2009.

On 12 March [E/2010/28 (res. 53/5)], the Commission urged Member States and UNODC to provide technical assistance to support the Triangular Initiative and CARICC in their efforts to combat drug trafficking, including within the framework of the Paris Pact initiative and the Rainbow Strategy. It called upon States to make contributions to activities aimed at reducing illicit opium poppy cultivation in Afghanistan, and requested the UNODC Executive Director to report to the Commission at its forty-fourth (2011) session.

Communication. By a letter of 13 September to the Secretary-General [A/65/371-S/2010/479], the Russian Federation transmitted a Joint Statement by the Presidents of Afghanistan, Pakistan, the Russian Federation and Tajikistan, adopted during their second quadrilateral meeting (Sochi, Russian Federation, 18 August). The meeting discussed the development of regional cooperation, including combating the drug threat in an integrated manner.

Europe

In Europe, the trafficking of cannabis herb remained at a significant level, and the illicit cultivation of cannabis increased, especially indoors and on a large scale. Cocaine abuse was spreading from Western Europe into other parts of Europe, with the combined cocaine consumption of Western and Central Europe accounting for a quarter of global consumption. The illicit market for opiates in Europe was the largest in the world. The region also saw an increase in the variety of drugs being abused, including a growing range of substances not under international control.

As regards regional cooperation, in 2009 the EU and China signed a new agreement to enhance precursor control and coordination. The Collective Security Treaty Organization and the Federal Drug Control Service of the Russian Federation conducted two phases of the operation Channel 2009, which sought to build a system of enhanced collective security to prevent drug trafficking from Afghanistan and the entry of precursor chemicals into Central Asia and Afghanistan. At the sixth summit between Latin America, the Caribbean and the EU (Madrid, May 2010), States committed to strengthening the European Union-Andean Community High-Level Specialized Dialogue on Drugs.

Oceania

In Australia, traffickers were increasingly using the Internet to obtain precursor chemicals and equipment for illicit drug manufacture. In New Zealand, the Government's national action plan to tackle illicit manufacture of methamphetamine [YUN 2009, p. 1251] led to the identification of new trafficking trends, the seizure of precursor chemicals and the dismantling of clandestine laboratories.

INCB noted that many States of the region were not yet parties to international drug control treaties. In July, the Board held bilateral consultations with the Government of Papua New Guinea, urging it to take the steps necessary to become a party to the 1988 Convention. The Board also urged States to accede to the international drug control treaties and to strengthen national legislation and border control.

Regional meetings continued to play an important role in bringing countries together to address drug control issues, including the twenty-eighth annual meeting of the Pacific Islands Law Officers' Network (Samoa, December 2009); the Regional Security Committee of the Pacific Islands Forum (Fiji, June 2010); and the fifth meeting of the Pacific Drug and Alcohol Research Network (Vanuatu, July 2010).

Statistics

The United Nations continued in 2010 its work on various aspects of statistics, mainly through the Statistical Commission and the United Nations Statistics Division. In February, the Commission endorsed the technical content and strategic directions of a global strategy to improve agricultural statistics; adopted a workplan for obtaining international merchandise trade statistics; adopted a manual on statistics of international trade in services; expanded the International Comparison Programme; made plans for dissemination of the System of National Accounts, 2008; and endorsed improvements and initiatives in producing data on and monitoring the Millennium Development Goals.

On 3 June, the General Assembly decided to designate 20 October 2010 as World Statistics Day with the theme “Celebrating the many achievements of official statistics”, premised on the core values of service, integrity and professionalism. The Division organized promotional activities at the national, regional and international levels, including the launch of a dedicated website.

Statistical Commission

The Statistical Commission held its forty-first session in New York from 23 to 26 February [E/2010/24], in accordance with Economic and Social Council decision 2009/237 [YUN 2009, p. 1258]. Following discussions, the Commission brought to the attention of the Council its reports and decisions on: national quality assurance frameworks; agricultural statistics; international merchandise trade statistics; statistics of international trade in services; the International Comparison Programme; national accounts; environment statistics; environmental accounting; World Statistics Day 2010; global geographic information management; an inventory on Global Statistical Standards; development indicators; regional statistical development in Latin America and the Caribbean; and programme questions of the United Nations Statistics Division. The Commission also took note of 18 reports it had considered at the session [E/2010/24 (dec. 41/115)]. (See below under relevant topics.)

By decision 2010/235 of 21 July, the Economic and Social Council took note of the Commission’s report on its forty-first session and approved the provisional agenda and documentation for its forty-second (2011) session.

Other reports. Other reports were issued in December 2010, to be addressed during the Commission’s 2011 session, covering the following subjects: World Statistics Day 2010 [E/CN.3/2011/2]; gender statistics [E/CN.3/2011/3 & E/CN.3/2011/4]; indicators on violence against women [E/CN.3/2011/5]; national accounts [E/CN.3/2011/6]; environmental-economic accounting [E/CN.3/2011/7]; energy statistics [E/CN.3/2011/8 & E/CN.3/2011/9]; integrated economic statistics [E/CN.3/2011/10]; short-term economic indicators [E/CN.3/2011/11]; the International Comparison Programme [E/CN.3/2011/12]; indicators for monitoring the Millennium Development Goals (MDGs) [E/CN.3/2011/13]; statistics of human development [E/CN.3/2011/14 & E/CN.3/2011/15]; concerns with regard to indicators released by UN agencies [E/CN.3/2011/16]; fundamental principles of official statistics [E/CN.3/2011/17]; statistical capacity-building [E/CN.3/2011/18 & E/CN.3/2011/19]; regional statistical development in Western Asia [E/CN.3/2011/20]; population and housing censuses [E/CN.3/2011/21]; health statistics [E/CN.3/2011/22]; education statistics [E/CN.3/2011/23]; agricultural statistics [E/CN.3/2011/24]; business registers [E/CN.3/2011/25]; tourism statistics [E/CN.3/2011/26]; price statistics [E/CN.3/2011/27]; environment statistics [E/CN.3/2011/28]; work of the Committee for Coordination of Statistical Activities [E/CN.3/2011/29]; global statistical standards [E/CN.3/2011/30]; standards on data and metadata exchange [E/CN.3/2011/31]; decisions of the General Assembly and the Economic and Social Council relevant to the Statistical Commission [E/CN.3/2011/32]; national quality assurance frameworks [E/CN.3/2011/33]; global geospatial information management [E/CN.3/2011/34]; measurement of economic performance and social progress [E/CN.3/2011/35]; and a draft multi-year programme of work for the Statistical Commission for 2011–2014 [E/CN.3/2011/36].

Economic statistics

National accounts

At its February session, the Statistical Commission considered the report of the Intersecretariat Working Group on National Accounts [E/CN.3/2010/8], which provided an update on the finalization of the System of National Accounts, 2008 (2008 SNA). The final English text was published online, and translation into Arabic, Chinese, French, Japanese, Korean, Portuguese, Russian and Spanish was arranged. The Working Group and advisory groups established by the regional commissions discussed implementation strategies at workshops, training courses and consultations. The Working Group pursued the development of standardized training material on the SNA and supporting classifications, statistical registers and basic economic statistics, and proposed the continuation of the Advisory Expert Group on National Accounts to support that work.

By a 26 February decision [E/2010/24 (dec. 41/106)], the Commission requested the Working Group to provide guidance on implementation of the 2008 SNA, taking into account the different national levels of statistical development. It welcomed the coordinated initiatives of the Statistics Division and the Statistical Offices of the European Communities (Eurostat) with Member States on the development of a data template of high-frequency and composite business cycle indicators and the initiatives of other international financial organizations, while taking into account the implementation of the 2008 SNA and existing dissemination frameworks. The Working Group was requested to assess whether those initiatives could be integrated into implementation of the 2008 SNA and to reassess the research agenda of the 2008 SNA in light of emerging issues. The Commission suggested that the Advisory Expert Group pay attention to the availability of basic and sectoral statistics, and adjustments based on national circumstances. It also suggested the formation of a Friends of the Chair group to study the impediments encountered in implementing the 1993 SNA.

International Comparison Programme

The Statistical Commission considered the Secretary-General's note [E/CN.3/2010/7] transmitting the World Bank report on preparations for the 2011 round of the International Comparison Programme (ICP), a statistical initiative to collect comparative price data and to estimate purchasing power parities (PPPs) of economies for converting currencies. The SNA was the reference framework for determining PPPs. According to the report, the ICP governance structure was put in place under the Global Manager, and the Global Office was established at the World Bank. The five main objectives of the 2011 ICP were to: broaden the Programme's scope, leveraging on the implementation of the 2005 round; address the specific needs of its users, both countries and regional and international organizations, as well as academia and the private sector; enhance its economic relevance by building on the 2005 round assets with methodological improvements and innovations; expand statistical capacity-building activities; and improve data quality, reliability and programme transparency. The report set out a plan to enhance the robustness of PPP estimates through greater adherence to the SNA and the improvement of price survey methodologies, and to encourage additional research activities. While 146 countries participated in the 2005 round, the Programme was due to expand to approximately 170 participating countries.

On 26 February [dec. 41/105], the Commission approved the objectives and expansion proposed for the 2011 round by the World Bank. It expressed appreciation for the World Bank's willingness to host the coordination of the programme and to commit resources for its implementation, and urged the Global Office to enhance statistical capacity-building mechanisms.

The Global Office hosted a conference in Washington, D.C., on 18 October, bringing together ICP data users and producers to discuss new or underutilized applications of ICP data and methodologies.

Other economic statistics

International trade in services

The Statistical Commission considered a report of the inter-agency Task Force on Statistics of International Trade in Services on the revision of the Manual on Statistics of International Trade in Services for 2010 [E/CN.3/2010/6]. The report described the revision process and presented the new features of the revised manual, its relation to and alignment with other relevant statistical frameworks, the worldwide consultation process, and the proposed implementation programme and future work. The new Manual served a wide spectrum of statistical needs but emphasized the needs of the General Agreement on Trade in Services. It classified in detail services delivered through conventional trade between residents and non-residents and included a treatment of local delivery of services through foreign commercial presence. The report noted the revised Manual's alignment with the sixth edition of the Balance of Payments Manual of the International Monetary Fund (IMF), the SNA, and the OECD Benchmark Definition of Foreign Direct Investment.

On 26 February [dec. 41/104], the Commission adopted the Manual and endorsed the programme for its implementation. It urged the Task Force to focus on foreign affiliates statistics, tourism statistics, valuation and pricing, and research and development.

The Commission on 25 February [E/2010/24] took note of the report of the Voorburg Group on Services Statistics [E/CN.3/2010/23], which set out its vision and workplan for the period 2005–2009, governance, achievements and priorities in developing services statistics.

Finance statistics

The Statistical Commission [E/2010/24] considered and took note of the IMF report on the Inter-Agency Task Force on Finance Statistics [E/CN.3/2010/24] describing its activities since 2007. The activities included preparation of the Public Sector Debt Guide, the update of the External Debt Guide on issues emerging from the Balance of Payments and International Investment Position Manual, consultations on the dissemination of external debt data, capacity-building training activities for producing external debt data, and the establishment of the Task Force website. The report also set out its work programme, and noted that the next meeting of the Task Force was scheduled for 4 and 5 March at the headquarters of the World Bank in Washington, D.C.

Price indices and statistics

The Statistical Commission took note [E/2010/24] of the report of the Ottawa Group on Price Indexes [E/CN.3/2010/25] on its recent activities and the discussions at its May 2009 meeting (Neuchâtel, Switzerland), during which the problems of micro-level price measurement remained a topic. The Group acknowledged the achievement of the Intersecretariat Working Group on Price Statistics in producing manuals on price indices, including the new Export and Import Price Index Manual, and the exploratory work on a handbook on house price indices. Also discussed was the finalization of a handbook on compiling consumer price indices. The next meeting of the group was set for April or May 2011 in Wellington, New Zealand.

Environment statistics

On 24 and 26 February, the Statistical Commission discussed environment statistics, having before it the Secretary-General's report [E/CN.3/2010/9] containing the conclusions, recommendations, modalities and timetables for the Expert Group Meeting on the Framework for the Development of Environment Statistics (New York, 10–12 November 2009). The work concerned revising the 1984 Framework for the Development of Environment Statistics [Sales No. E.84.XVII.12] to encompass the development of a conceptual framework, and the plan to establish a core set of environment statistics for guiding countries with limited resources in developing such statistics. The report set out guiding principles for revision and proposed the inclusion of an objective; a target audience; scope and boundaries; main concepts and definitions; the relationship with the System of Environmental-Economic Accounting (SEEA); links to other frameworks and statistics, multilateral environmental agreements, global initiatives and statistical tools; quality assurance and quality control standards; structure, dimensions, categories and components of the framework; spatial and temporal considerations; and reference to statistical standards and recommendations for detailed methodological and statistical guidance.

The Commission endorsed on 26 February [dec. 41/107] the Expert Group's programme of work for revising the 1984 Framework and the development of a core set of statistics. It asked the Statistics Division to develop a more realistic timetable, in consultation with countries and other stakeholders, and called for greater involvement by the Intersecretariat Working Group on Environment Statistics in developing the Framework. On 25 February [dec. 41/115], the Commission took note of the report of the Intersecretariat Working Group [E/CN.3/2010/10] on the possible revision of its mandate, its work in 2008–2009, and its 2010–2011 work programme.

Environmental-economic accounting

The Statistical Commission considered the report of the Committee of Experts on Environmental-Economic Accounting [E/CN.3/2010/11], which described the Committee's work on revising SEEA, drafting the International Recommendations for Water Statistics, implementation of the strategy for the SEEA for Water, and revising the Committee's mandate, governance structure, and terms of reference. The revised mandate would encompass environmental-economic statistics and supporting statistics, including those on energy. Climate change statistics would not be mentioned in its scope but would be presented as an example of where SEEA could be applied. The Committee described the progress it had made in the areas of physical flow accounting, monetary accounting, depletion of natural resources, and asset accounting.

In a February decision [dec. 41/108], the Commission agreed with the mandate and governance structure presented by the Committee of Experts; appreciated that priority was given to the timely revision of SEEA; adopted part I and endorsed part II of the International Recommendations for Water Statistics for implementation in countries; and requested the translation of the Recommendations into all official UN languages.

Industrial statistics

The Statistical Commission considered the report of the Secretary-General on industrial statistics [E/CN.3/2010/22]. The report described the revision of the International Recommendations for the Index of Industrial Production, last revised in 1950, which was presented to the Commission for approval. The revised manual encompassed an expanded scope, which in the 1950 original Index Numbers of Industrial Production manual was limited to mining and quarrying, manufacturing, and electricity and gas. It also contained new recommendations for calculation methods, index weighting practices and linking and rebasing of index number series. The report described the work of the Expert Group on Industrial Statistics in guiding the revision of the Recommendations, as well as its technical cooperation activities and the data collection programme organized by the Statistics Division and the United Nations Industrial Development Organization.

On 25 February [dec. 41/115], the Commission took note of the report, adopted part I (recommendations) and endorsed part II (containing guidance) of the International Recommendations for the Index of Industrial Production 2010. The Commission recommended that Member States adhere to the practices of the Recommendations.

International trade statistics

The Statistical Commission considered the report of the Secretary-General on international merchandise trade statistics [E/CN.3/2010/5], which requested the adoption of the draft International Merchandise Trade Statistics: Concepts and Definitions, 2010 (IMTS 2010). The report provided an overview of the draft recommendations proposed in IMTS 2010, which related to the scope of merchandise trade statistics; the use of the Standard International Trade Classification for analysis; valuation of specific categories of goods; recording of quantity data; recording a second partner country; the addition of mode of transport as a data dimension; the use of different data sources; the establishment of necessary institutional arrangements; data quality; metadata; data dissemination; and the linkage of trade and business statistics. The report summarized the Statistics Division's activities in revising the recommendations, including consultations with over 100 countries, the Expert Group on International Merchandise Trade Statistics, and the Inter-agency Task Force on International Merchandise Trade Statistics. The report also outlined an implementation programme, which included the update of the International Merchandise Trade Statistics Compilers Manual; the development of a knowledge base on international trade statistics; convening regional workshops for developing countries; enhancing the United Nations Commodity Trade Statistics Database (UN Comtrade); research in data compilation; and promoting cooperation in international forums.

The Commission [dec. 41/103] adopted IMTS 2010 and endorsed the programme for its implementation, including preparation of a revised International Merchandise Trade Statistics Compilers Manual and continuation of technical assistance activities. The Commission requested the Expert Group and the Task Force to continue their work and focus on IMTS 2010 implementation. It also asked that greater attention be given to strengthening institutional arrangements in countries to ensure that proper national coordination mechanisms existed for compiling high-quality international merchandise trade statistics, and that cooperation with compilers of statistics on international trade in services, the balance of payments and national accounts be ensured. The Commission requested the Statistics Division to enhance the features and metadata of UN Comtrade, and advised giving consideration to emerging trade policy needs and globalization issues.

Integrated economic statistics

On 25 February [E/2010/24], the Statistical Commission took note of the report of the Friends of the Chair group on integrated economic statistics [E/CN.3/2010/27], which provided an update on its work in drafting guidelines for integrating the data produced by both centralized and decentralized statistical systems. The group met in Washington, D.C., from 7 to 9 December 2009 and was on track to complete the guidelines for consideration by the Commission at its forty-second (2011) session. The draft guidelines focused on consistency and coherence in economic statistics, from short-term indicators to national and international macroeconomic indicators. Conceptual, production and institutional issues were addressed, as were human resource and information technology issues. The guidelines used the SNA (see p. 1262) and other international manuals as a coordinating framework.

Agricultural statistics

The Secretary-General transmitted to the Statistical Commission a report by the Friends of the Chair on Agricultural Statistics [E/CN.3/2010/3] that described progress made in developing the Global Strategy to Improve Agricultural and Rural Statistics. The Global Strategy included a conceptual framework that broadened the scope of agricultural statistics to include aspects of fisheries, forestry and rural households; a minimum set of core data to be provided by countries; the integration of agriculture into national statistical systems; sustaining agriculture statistics through good governance; and an implementation plan. Among its recommendations for implementing the Global Strategy, the group called for establishing governance at the national level, improving statistical capacity through national strategies for developing statistics, coordinating resources provided by donor organizations, and supporting national advocacy efforts to improve agricultural statistics. The Global Strategy was aimed at providing national and international agricultural statistical systems with guidance on ways to meet policy-making and decision-making needs, and was expected to improve the capacity, quality and quantity of agricultural and rural data for users.

On 26 February [dec. 41/102], the Commission endorsed the technical content and directions of the Global Strategy, and urged the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations (FAO) and the Friends of the Chair on Agricultural Statistics to expedite the development of an implementation plan that would include a technical assistance programme; an articulated training programme; a well-targeted research agenda; clear indications on funds management; and governance arrangements at the global, regional and national levels. The Commission requested the Friends of the Chair to report at its next (2011) session on progress in developing the implementation plan.

The Secretary-General also transmitted to the Commission the report of the Wye Group on Statistics on Rural Development and Agriculture Household Income [E/CN.3/2010/4 & Corr.1] on the outcome of its second annual meeting (Rome, 11–12 June 2009). The meeting convened 60 participants from 14 countries and 27 organizations. It discussed emerging issues, good practices and new statistical tools in rural statistics, and proposed updates and revisions for Rural Households' Livelihood and Well-being: Statistics on Rural Development and Agriculture Household Income [Sales No. E.07.II.E.14]. The Commission took note of the report at its February 2010 session [dec. 41/115].

Demographic and social statistics

Population and housing censuses

The Statistical Commission had before it the Secretary-General's report on population and housing censuses [E/CN.3/2010/17], which covered activities completed in the implementation of the 2010 World Programme on Population and Housing Censuses, including the monitoring of completed national censuses; the publication of international census guidelines, in particular the second revision of the Principles and Recommendations for Population and Housing Censuses; country-specific technical assistance; the development of CensusInfo, a census data dissemination software program; the hosting of training workshops; the publication of worldwide census-related activities on the Division's website; and the compilation and analysis of national census methodologies. By the end of 2009, some 78 countries or areas had undertaken a population and housing census for the 2010 round. Censuses were scheduled to be held in 63 countries in 2010 and 54 countries in 2011.

On 25 February [E/2010/24], the Commission took note of the report.

Development indicators

The Secretary-General transmitted to the Statistical Commission the report on development indicators issued by the Inter-Agency and Expert Group on the Millennium Development Goals Indicators [E/CN.3/2010/15]. The report assessed data availability to monitor progress towards the MDGs and the ability of countries to undertake their own national monitoring. The Group's work focused on improving data availability and quality for monitoring; capacity-building to strengthen national data production for monitoring; reconciling national and international data sets on MDGs; improving coordination of national MDG monitoring; training on MDG indicators and finalizing a manual on producing indicators at the national level; training on subnational data production and analysis for monitoring at the local level; and improving data coverage for MDG monitoring and reporting on data availability for their indicators.

To improve the coordination of MDG reporting and data exchange, the Group recommended the establishment of national MDG databases and agreed on the adoption of the Statistical Data and Metadata Exchange (SDMX) as the common data exchange platform. The Group also recommended establishing a central repository system on MDG indicators at the country level and making it available online; implementing SDMX in both national statistics offices and ministries; promoting national legislation to strengthen the coordination of statistical activities; establishing a focal point on MDGs at both the national and international levels; and monitoring progress at the local level.

On 26 February [dec. 41/112], the Commission endorsed the Group's initiatives to improve the coordination of data production and monitoring, as well as its work on resolving discrepancies between national and international sources. The Commission requested the Statistics Division to publish on its website an inventory of studies on such discrepancies. It expressed concern about the lack of full consultation, such as in expanding the Human Development Index, and regretted the lack of consultation with the Commission on revising the current Index. The Commission requested the Human Development Report Office to take note of the Commission's transparent procedures in developing statistical methodology on indices affecting countries, and requested the Commission's Bureau, with regional experts, to consult the Human Development Report Office on the methodologies and data used in the proposed revision of the Human Development Index and take appropriate decisions thereon. In view of the lack of consultation, the Commission would assess the methodology of the proposed Index, the appropriateness of the data used and the conclusions drawn, if so recommended by the Bureau. The Commission further requested the Bureau and the Human Development Report Office to report on that consultation and the resulting recommendations.

Labour statistics

The Secretary-General transmitted to the Statistical Commission the report of the International Labour Organization (ILO) [E/CN.3/2010/18], which described the reorganization of ILO statistical activities to assist countries in producing quality and timely statistics on work. The report also described recent ILO statistical activities with regard to the development of measures of labour underutilization; labour statistics frameworks; occupational classifications; the harmonization of wage statistics; and the measurement of decent work through new indicators in several pilot countries. The establishment in May 2009 of the ILO Department of Statistics, reporting directly to the ILO Director-General, reflected the increased importance ILO accorded to labour statistics and was part of its efforts to reorganize its statistical activities. ILO invited the Commission to encourage donor agencies to support the production of surveys that monitored the jobs crisis, in particular, the programme to strengthen labour force and household surveys in Africa. The Commission was also invited to take note of the reasons for the postponement by ILO of the nineteenth International Conference of Labour Statisticians beyond 2011.

On 25 February [E/2010/24], the Commission took note of the report.

Informal sector statistics

On 25 February [dec. 41/115], the Commission took note of the report of the Delhi Group (Expert Group) on Informal Sector Statistics [E/CN.3/2010/26], transmitted to the Commission by the Secretary-General. The report summarized discussion relating to the drafts of the manual on surveys of informal sector and informal employment held during the tenth meeting of the Group (Geneva, 8–10 October 2007).

Disability statistics

The Commission had before it the report of the Washington Group on Disability Statistics [E/CN.3/2010/20] on its recent activities and 2010 workplan. The Group, composed of representatives of 116 countries and numerous international organizations, met annually with the aim of guiding the development of disability measures suitable for use in censuses, sample-based national surveys or other statistical formats for informing policy on the equalization of opportunities. Among its recent activities, the Group collaborated with the Economic Commission for Europe and other organizations in developing sets of questions for population surveys; organized and participated in regional workshops; undertook cognitive and field testing of short and extended sets of questions for use in censuses; provided technical assistance to national statistics offices; fostered international cooperation; and endorsed census questions on disability.

On 25 February [E/2010/24], the Commission took note of the report.

Statistics on crime and drugs

The Statistical Commission had before it the report of the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime (UNODC) on its work on crime and drug statistics [E/CN.3/2010/19], which discussed the challenges faced in collecting, analysing and disseminating crime and drug statistics. For crime statistics, a lack of coordination between national statistical offices and data sources such as police offices, courts and prisons created difficulties, while for drug statistics, problems involving technical and financial resources and/or political will in many countries prevented full accounts of the extent of drug production and use. UNODC called for the Commission to re-engage in the debate on crime and drug statistics by advising UNODC on priority areas and regions where technical advice and assistance on crime and drug statistics were most needed; discussing the role of national statistical offices in coordinating crime and criminal justice statistics and implementing victimization surveys; guiding UNODC and relevant organizations in adopting standard indicators and methodology; and advising the Commission on Narcotic Drugs and the Commission on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice in finalizing data-collection tools.

On 25 February [E/2010/24], the Commission took note of the report.

Cultural statistics

The Secretary-General transmitted to the Statistical Commission the report of the Institute for Statistics of the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization (UNESCO) [E/CN.3/2010/21] on the status of the 2009 revision of the UNESCO Framework for Cultural Statistics. The new Framework established a model for defining culture for statistical purposes, and served as a tool for organizing and collecting comparable cultural data. As a classification instrument, it applied taxonomies of activities, goods and services from recognized international standard classifications to cultural statistics. The Framework defined culture through the identification and measurement of behaviours and practices resulting from the beliefs and values of a society. All current relevant international statistical classification systems and standards were included in the Framework in order to maximize data comparability and the potential for using existing surveys to measure culture. The Framework would be the basis for new methodologies, data collection and indicators developed by the Institute, as well as for UNESCO action in the field of culture.

On 25 February [E/2010/24], the Commission took note of the report.

Other statistical activities

International economic and social classifications

The Statistical Commission had before it the Secretary-General's report on UN system activities in the area of international economic and social classifications [E/CN.3/2010/31]. The report described the Statistics Division's technical assistance activities and its work on implementation tools for the revised International Standard Industrial Classification of All Economic Activities (ISIC) and Central Product Classification (CPC); online publication by ILO of the International Standard Classification of Occupations (ISCO-08); the UNESCO Institute for Statistics' establishment of a technical advisory panel to review the International Standard Classification of Education (ISCED); and the collaboration of FAO and the World Customs Organization in developing proposals for the Harmonized Commodity Description and Coding System. The report also summarized the outcome of the meeting of the Expert Group on International Economic and Social Classifications (1–4 September 2009), which discussed the implementation of ISIC, CPC, and ISCO-08; the revision of ISCED and the International Classification of Diseases; and the development of classifications of energy products, waste and time-use. The Expert Group also reviewed its mandate and work programme.

On 25 February [E/2010/24], the Commission took note of the report.

Information and communications technology statistics

The Statistical Commission had before it the report of the Partnership on Measuring Information and Communication Technologies (ICT) for Development [E/CN.3/2010/28] on its work in 2009. The Partnership refined its methodological work and assisted developing countries in strengthening their capacities to produce ICT data based on international standards; coordinated compilation and dissemination of indicators; and examined issues in measurement, such as measuring the impact of ICT and ICT in government. To improve data availability, the Partnership encouraged the inclusion of ICT statistics in national statistical plans, the use of the Partnership's capacity-building and training tools, and harmonizing methodologies based on standards developed by the Partnership to ensure international comparability of data.

Global geospatial information management

The Secretary-General transmitted to the Statistical Commission a report by the National Statistical and Geographical Institute of Brazil [E/CN.3/2010/13] on global geographic information management, which described ongoing initiatives to improve global coordination in the area of geographic information, and called for a global spatial data infrastructure and better integration of statistical and geographic information.

On 26 February [dec. 41/110], the Commission called on national statistical offices to participate in partnership with national authorities in developing national geographic information capacity in the context of spatial data infrastructures, focusing on improving statistical and geographic metadata compatibility. It requested the Secretary-General to submit to the Economic and Social Council a report outlining a global vision for geographic information management and exploring the possibility of creating a global forum. It also requested the Statistics Division to convene a meeting of an international expert group, consisting of statisticians and geographic information specialists, to address global geographic information management issues; and asked the Secretariat to report on the work of the expert group and the preparations for a possible global forum. (See also Economic and Social Council decision 2010/240, p. 1004.)

Statistics capacity-building

The Statistical Commission had before it a report of the Partnership in Statistics for Development in the Twenty-first Century (PARIS21) on statistical capacity-building [E/CN.3/2010/29]. The Partnership focused on assisting developing countries in developing statistics and indicators that would improve effectiveness in reducing poverty and achieving the MDGs. Annexed to the report was the Dakar Declaration on the Development of Statistics, which resulted from the PARIS21 Consortium meeting on the state of statistical development in developing countries (Dakar, Senegal, 16–18 November 2009). The Declaration called for actions by 2014 on strategy implementation, technical and financial resource mobilization, donor support coordination, meeting the needs of data users, and the development of statistical tools and methodologies. The report also reviewed the Partnership's 2009 activities in the areas of regional seminars and assistance; advocacy; donor collaboration; a methodology for national strategies; implementing national strategies; and the implementation, with other partners, of two satellite programmes—the International Household Survey Network and the Accelerated Data Programme.

On 25 February [E/2010/24], the Commission took note of the report.

Regional statistical development

Latin America and the Caribbean

The Statistical Commission considered the report of the Economic Commission for Latin America and the Caribbean (ECLAC) on the development of official statistics in Latin America and the Caribbean [E/CN.3/2010/16 & Corr.1]. The report based its findings on statistical information for 33 countries and eight specific areas. It described the institutional organization of the national statistical systems and the main challenges for official statistics in the region. The report also examined the strategies proposed by the ECLAC Statistical Conference of the Americas and its working groups in such areas as censuses, institution-building, gender statistics, migration and remittances, national accounts, ICT, poverty and environmental statistics.

On 26 February [dec. 41/113], the Commission welcomed the report, noted the progress in regional cooperation facilitated by the Conference, and encouraged the Statistics Division to facilitate such interregional exchanges. It also noted the consultation issues raised by some regional countries, in particular the concerns expressed regarding the report, and requested ECLAC to prepare an updated and more comprehensive version. ECLAC was also asked to enhance its efforts towards greater regional cooperation.

Quality assurance frameworks

The Statistical Commission had before it the report of Statistics Canada on quality assurance frameworks [E/CN.3/2010/2]. The report reviewed quality assurance concepts, frameworks and tools, and described basic elements of national quality assurance frameworks and advocated their use by national statistical offices. It also put forward three illustrative proposals for a generic template for such a framework, which it suggested be accompanied by guidelines to assist national statistical offices in formulating their own frameworks. The report outlined a process for developing the generic template, as well as guidelines for adoption by the Commission at its forty-second session.

Having considered the report, the Commission, on 26 February [dec. 41/101], expressed appreciation to Statistics Canada for its work and emphasized the importance of the topic. It supported the development of a quality assurance framework template that would focus on national statistical systems, using existing frameworks where possible, and that would be flexible enough to take national circumstances into consideration. It also supported the establishment of an expert group on quality assurance, and requested the Statistics Division to provide guidance and to upgrade its quality assurance website to include links to quality assurance tools and guidelines.

Follow-up to UN conferences and summits

The Statistical Commission had before it a note by the Secretary-General on decisions adopted in 2009 by the Economic and Social Council and the General Assembly that were relevant to the work of the Commission [E/CN.3/2010/32]. The note summarized actions taken and proposed by the Commission and the Statistics Division in response to the requests made by the Council.

The Commission took note of the report on 25 February [E/2010/24].

World Statistics Day

The Secretary-General issued to the Statistical Commission a report on World Statistics Day [E/CN.3/2010/12]. The Statistics Division proposed that the Day be celebrated on 20 October 2010 to raise awareness of the contributions of official statistics premised on the values of service, integrity and professionalism; and to highlight the cooperation of statisticians worldwide within the global statistical system.

On 26 February [dec. 41/109], the Commission endorsed the date for the first World Statistics Day and requested the cooperation of the Secretary-General in urging Governments to observe the occasion. The Commission also urged Member States to observe the occasion through various activities. It asked the Statistics Division to prepare a repository and resource kit on World Statistics Day activities and to make it available on a designated website, and to report to the Commission at its next (2011) session on experiences related to the Day.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 3 June [meeting 90], the General Assembly adopted resolution 64/267 [A/64/L.53 & Add.1] without vote [agenda item 48].

World Statistics Day

The General Assembly,

Recalling the report of the Secretary-General to the Statistical Commission at its forty-first session, as well as the Commission's decision 41/109, in which it endorsed the proposal to celebrate 20 October 2010 as World Statistics Day,

Recognizing the long history of official statistics and the facilitating role played by the United Nations since the creation in 1947 of the Statistical Commission, which was tasked with promoting the development of national statistics and improving their comparability, coordinating the statistical work of specialized agencies, developing central statistical services of the Secretariat, advising the organs of the United Nations on general questions relating to the collection, analysis and dissemination of statistical information and promoting the improvement of statistics and statistical methods generally,

Acknowledging the fundamental importance of sustainable national statistical capacity to produce reliable and timely statistics and indicators measuring a country's progress, which are an indispensable basis for informed policy decision-making and for monitoring the Millennium Development Goals at the national, regional and international levels,

Recalling Economic and Social Council resolution 2006/6 of 24 July 2006 entitled "Strengthening statistical capacity", in which the Council called upon Member States, the United Nations system, international agencies, donor countries and organizations to support national efforts in building and strengthening national statistical capacity, in particular of developing countries,

Recalling also the adoption of the Fundamental Principles of Official Statistics by the Statistical Commission at its special session in 1994 as a milestone in the codification and promotion of basic values in official statistics,

Noting that many Member States and some regions already celebrate official statistics through a variety of national and regional initiatives, such as designated months, weeks, days or events, and welcoming their support and willingness to coordinate such events under the auspices of the United Nations,

1. Decides to designate 20 October 2010 as World Statistics Day under the general theme "Celebrating the many achievements of official statistics" and the core values of service, integrity and professionalism;

2. Invites all Member States, organizations of the United Nations system and other international and regional organizations, as well as civil society, including non-governmental organizations, such as research institutions, media and all producers and users of official statistics, to observe World Statistics Day in an appropriate manner;

3. Requests the Secretary-General to take the necessary measures for the observance by the United Nations of World Statistics Day in 2010 and to bring the present resolution to the attention of all Member States and United Nations organizations;

4. Also requests the Secretary-General to report on the implementation of the present resolution and on the experiences of World Statistics Day to the Statistical Commission at its forty-second session.

Coordination and integration of statistical programmes

The Statistical Commission had before it the Secretary-General's report summarizing the work and conclusions of the Committee for the Coordination of Statistical Activities [E/CN.3/2010/30] at its thirteenth

(New York, 23 February 2009) and fourteenth (Bangkok, 9–11 September 2009) sessions. The Committee considered, among other issues, ways to improve the Partner Report on Support to Statistics—a reporting mechanism on statistical developments; future special events, such as a May conference on data quality for international organizations and a September special session on human capital; a possible network of statisticians in international organizations led by the Economic and Social Commission for Asia and the Pacific; governance of the global statistical system; modalities for data-sharing among international organizations; the use of non-official data in imputations or estimations by international organizations; the establishment of international standards for annual population statistics; quality assurance frameworks; the revised International Statistical Processes Assessment Checklist; SDMX standards and guidelines; a Web-based inventory of global statistical standards; and the integration of geographical information and statistical information. Annexed to the report was a description of modalities of data-sharing among international organizations adopted by the Committee.

Inventory of global statistical standards

The Commission considered the report of the National Institute of Statistics and Geography of Mexico [E/CN.3/2010/14], which offered the global statistical community the use of its inventory of international statistical standards. Mexico suggested that the database be translated and posted on the Statistics Division's website. It also suggested that a process of reviewing, validating and updating the database be established. In February [dec. 41/111], the Commission agreed with the proposal that the inventory database be posted on the Division's website for public access and use by countries and others for harmonization and as a reference tool for measuring compliance with international standards. It called on the Committee for the Coordination of Statistical Activities to propose a proper classification of the standards, facilitate its translation into other UN official languages, and report to the Commission on its progress in that regard.

Programme and institutional questions

The Commission, on 25 February [dec. 41/114], took note of the oral report by the Director of the Statistics Division concerning the Division's current activities, plans and priorities, in particular the proposed strategic framework for 2012–2013. The Commission considered its draft 2010–2013 multi-year programme of work [E/CN.3/2010/33], as orally revised, and approved the provisional agenda and documentation for its forty-second session, to be held in New York from 22 to 25 February 2011.

PART FOUR

Legal questions

International Court of Justice

In 2010, the International Court of Justice (ICJ) delivered three Judgments, made nine Orders, and had 17 contentious cases and one advisory procedure pending before it. In a 28 October address to the General Assembly, the ICJ President, Judge Hisashi Owada, noted that during the period from 1 August 2009 to 31 July 2010, the coverage of the cases that the Court was entrusted to deal with was broader in scope than ever before, with each case presenting distinct legal and factual elements. He added that the increased recourse by States to ICJ for the judicial settlement of their disputes testified to the growing consciousness among political leaders of those States of the importance of the rule of law in the international community.

Judicial work of the Court

During 2010, the Court delivered its Judgment on the merits in the cases concerning Ahmadou Sadio Diallo (Guinea v. Democratic Republic of the Congo), Pulp Mills on the River Uruguay (Argentina v. Uruguay) and on the request for an advisory opinion on the question of the Accordance with International Law of the Unilateral Declaration of Independence by the Provisional Institutions of Self-Government of Kosovo.

During the year, the Court was seized of three new cases: Whaling in the Antarctic (Australia v. Japan); Proceedings jointly instituted by Burkina Faso and the Republic of Niger also known as the Frontier Dispute (Burkina Faso/Niger); and Certain Activities carried out by Nicaragua in the Border Area (Costa Rica v. Nicaragua). It also received a request for an advisory opinion in the case Judgment No. 2867 of the Administrative Tribunal of the International Labour Organization upon a complaint filed against the International Fund for Agricultural Development.

The Court held public hearings in the cases concerning Ahmadou Sadio Diallo (Guinea v. Democratic Republic of the Congo), Territorial and Maritime Dispute (Nicaragua v. Colombia), and Application of the International Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Racial Discrimination (Georgia v. Russian Federation).

The Court or its President made Orders on the conduct of the proceedings in the cases concerning Application of the Convention on the Prevention and Punishment of the Crime of Genocide (Croatia v. Serbia), Maritime Dispute (Peru v. Chile), Application of the Interim Accord of 13 September 1995 (The former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia v. Greece), Jurisdictional Immunities of the State (Germany v. Italy), Jurisdiction and Enforcement of Judgments in Civil and Commercial Matters (Belgium v. Switzerland), Aerial Herbicide Spraying (Ecuador v. Colombia), Whaling in the Antarctic (Australia v. Japan), Proceedings jointly instituted by Burkina Faso and the Republic of Niger (Burkina Faso/Niger), and Certain Questions concerning Diplomatic Relations (Honduras v. Brazil).

In the cases concerning Application of the Convention on the Prevention and Punishment of the Crime of Genocide (Croatia v. Serbia), Territorial and Maritime Dispute (Nicaragua v. Colombia), Maritime Dispute (Peru v. Chile), Application of the Interim Accord of 13 September 1995 (The former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia v. Greece), Jurisdictional Immunities of the State (Germany v. Italy), Jurisdiction and Enforcement of Judgments in Civil and Commercial Matters (Belgium v. Switzerland) and Aerial Herbicide Spraying (Ecuador v. Colombia), pleadings were submitted within the fixed time limits. While there were no new developments in the cases concerning Gabcikovo-Nagymaros Project (Hungary/Slovakia) [YUN 1998, p. 1186] and Armed Activities on the Territory of the Congo (Democratic Republic of the Congo v. Uganda) [YUN 1999, p. 1209], in both cases the Parties kept the Court informed of progress made in their respective negotiations.

The Congo and France mutually agreed to discontinue the proceedings against each other in the case Certain Criminal Proceedings in France (Republic of the Congo v. France). In the case Certain Questions concerning Diplomatic Relations (Honduras v. Brazil), Honduras informed the Court that it was withdrawing its Application and was discontinuing its proceedings against Brazil.

ICJ activities in 2010 were covered in two reports to the General Assembly, for the periods 1 August 2009 to 31 July 2010 [A/65/4] and 1 August 2010 to 31 July 2011 [A/66/4]. On 28 October, the Assembly took note of the 2009–2010 report (decision 65/508).

Contentious proceedings

Ahmadou Sadio Diallo (Guinea v. Democratic Republic of the Congo)

In 1998 [YUN 1998, p. 1190], Guinea instituted proceedings against the Democratic Republic of the Congo (DRC) by an “Application with a view to diplomatic protection”, in which it requested the Court to condemn the DRC for the grave breaches of international law perpetrated upon the person of a Guinean national, Ahmadou Sadio Diallo.

According to Guinea, Mr. Diallo, a businessman who had been a resident of the DRC for 32 years, was “unlawfully imprisoned by the authorities of that State” for two and a half months, “divested from his important investments, companies, bank accounts, movable and immovable properties, then expelled”. The expulsion took place on 2 February 1996, as a result of his attempts to recover sums owed to him by the DRC (especially by Gécamines, a State enterprise and mining monopoly) and by oil companies operating in that country (Zaire Shell, Zaire Mobil and Zaire Fina), by virtue of contracts concluded with businesses owned by him, namely Africom-Zaire and Africontainers-Zaire.

As a basis of the Court’s jurisdiction, Guinea invoked its own declaration of acceptance of the compulsory jurisdiction of the Court of 11 November 1998 and a declaration of the DRC of 8 February 1989. Guinea filed its Memorial within the time limit as extended by the Court by an Order of 8 September 2000 [YUN 2000, p. 1213]. On 3 October 2002, within the time limit for the deposit of its Counter-Memorial, the DRC filed preliminary objections to the Court’s jurisdiction and the admissibility of Guinea’s Application; the proceedings on the merits were accordingly suspended [YUN 2002, p. 1266].

By an Order of 7 November 2002 [ibid.], the Court fixed 7 July 2003 as the time limit within which Guinea might present a written statement of its observations and submissions on the preliminary objections raised by the DRC; the written statement was filed within the time limit [YUN 2006, p. 1479].

Public hearings on the preliminary objections were held from 27 November to 1 December 2006 [ibid.], during which the Parties presented final submissions to the Court. The DRC requested the Court to adjudge and declare that the Application of Guinea was inadmissible on the grounds that Guinea had no status to exercise diplomatic protection in the proceedings, since its Application sought essentially to secure reparation for injury suffered on account of the violation of rights of companies which did not possess its nationality, and, in any event, neither the companies in question nor Mr. Diallo had exhausted the local remedies available in the DRC. Guinea requested the Court to reject the preliminary objections raised by the DRC; declare its Application admissible; and fix time limits for further proceedings.

On 24 May 2007 [YUN 2007, p. 1327], the Court rendered its Judgment on the preliminary objections. The Court unanimously rejected the preliminary objection to admissibility raised by the DRC for lack of standing by Guinea to exercise diplomatic protection in the case, insofar as it concerned protection of Mr. Diallo’s direct rights as associé in Africom-Zaire and Africontainers-Zaire. By 14 votes to 1, it upheld the objection insofar as it concerned protection of Mr. Diallo in respect of alleged violations of rights of Africom-Zaire and Africontainers-Zaire. On the preliminary objection to admissibility raised by the DRC on account of non-exhaustion by Mr. Diallo of local remedies, the Court unanimously rejected the objection insofar as it concerned protection of Mr. Diallo’s rights as an individual. By 14 votes to 1, the Court rejected the objection insofar as it concerned protection of Mr. Diallo’s direct rights as associé in Africom-Zaire and Africontainers-Zaire. Consequently, it unanimously declared the Application of Guinea to be admissible insofar as it concerned protection of Mr. Diallo’s rights as an individual. By two separate votes of 14 to 1, the Court declared the Application of Guinea to be admissible insofar as it concerned protection of Mr. Diallo’s direct rights as associé in Africom-Zaire and Africontainers-Zaire; and declared the Application of Guinea to be inadmissible insofar as it concerned protection of Mr. Diallo in respect of alleged violations of rights of Africom-Zaire and Africontainers-Zaire.

By an Order of 27 June 2007 [ibid., p. 1328], the Court fixed 27 March 2008 as the time limit for the filing of a Counter-Memorial by the DRC, which was filed within the time limit.

By an Order of 5 May 2008, the Court authorized the submission of a reply by Guinea and a rejoinder by the DRC. It fixed 19 November 2008 and 5 June 2009 as the respective time limits for the filing of those written pleadings. Guinea filed the reply on 19 November.

Public hearings were held from 19 to 29 April 2010. At the conclusion of their oral arguments, the Parties presented their final submissions to the Court. Guinea requested the Court to adjudge and declare that, in carrying out arbitrary arrests of its national, Mr. Diallo, and expelling him; in not, at that time, respecting his right to the benefit of the provisions of the 1963 Vienna Convention on Consular Relations; in submitting him to humiliating and degrading treatment; in depriving him of the exercise of his rights of ownership, oversight and management in respect of the companies which he founded in the DRC and in which he was the sole associé; in preventing him, in that capacity, from pursuing recovery of the numerous debts owed to those companies both by the DRC itself and by other contractual partners; and in expropriating de facto Mr. Diallo’s property, the DRC had committed internationally wrongful acts which engaged its responsibility to Guinea; the DRC was accordingly bound to make full reparation on account of the injury suffered by Mr. Diallo or by Guinea in the person of its national; such reparation should take the form of compensation covering the totality of the injuries caused by the internationally wrongful acts of the DRC, including loss of earnings, and should also include interest.

Guinea further requested the Court to authorize it to submit an assessment of the amount of the compensation due to it on that account from the DRC in a subsequent phase of the proceedings in the event that the two Parties should be unable to agree on the amount thereof within a period of six months following delivery of the Judgment.

The DRC, “[i]n the light of the arguments [which it made] and of the Court’s Judgment of 24 May 2007 on the preliminary objections, whereby the Court declared the Application of Guinea to be inadmissible insofar as it concerned protection of Mr. Diallo in respect of alleged violations of rights of Africom-Zaire and Africontainers-Zaire, ... respectfully request[ed] the Court to adjudge and declare that: [it] has not committed any internationally wrongful acts towards Guinea in respect of Mr. Diallo’s individual personal rights; [it] has not committed any internationally wrongful acts towards Guinea in respect of Mr. Diallo’s direct rights as associé in Africom-Zaire and Africontainers-Zaire; accordingly, the Application of the Republic of Guinea is unfounded in fact and in law and no reparation is due”.

The Court delivered its Judgment on 30 November 2010. By 8 votes to 6, it found that that the claim of Guinea concerning the arrest and detention of Mr. Diallo in 1988–1989 was inadmissible. The Court unanimously found that in respect of the circumstances in which Mr. Diallo was expelled from Congolese territory on 31 January 1996, the DRC violated article 13 of the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights and article 12, paragraph 4, of the African Charter on Human and Peoples’ Rights; that, in respect of the circumstances in which Mr. Diallo was arrested and detained in 1995–1996 with a view to his expulsion, the DRC violated article 9, paragraphs 1 and 2, of the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights and article 6 of the African Charter on Human and Peoples’ Rights. By 13 votes to 1, it found that, by not informing Mr. Diallo without delay, upon his detention in 1995–1996, of his rights under article 36, paragraph 1 (b), of the Vienna Convention on Consular Relations, the DRC violated the obligations incumbent upon it under that subparagraph. By 12 votes to 2, the Court rejected all other submissions by Guinea relating to the circumstances in which Mr. Diallo was arrested and detained with a view to his expulsion. By 9 votes to 5, it found that the DRC had not violated Mr. Diallo’s direct rights as associé in Africom-Zaire and Africontainers-Zaire. The Court unanimously found that that the DRC was under obligation to make appropriate reparation, in the form of compensation, to Guinea for the injurious consequences of the violations of international obligations referred to in the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights and in the African Charter. It further unanimously decided that, failing agreement between the Parties on the matter within six months from the date of the Judgment, the question of compensation due to Guinea would be settled by the Court, and reserved for that purpose the subsequent procedure in the case.

Appended to the Judgment was a joint declaration by Judges Al-Khasawneh, Simma, Bennouna, Cançado Trindade and Yusuf, and another by Judges Keith and Greenwood; separate opinions by Judge Cançado Trindade and Judge ad hoc Mampuya; and dissenting opinions by Judges Al-Khasawneh, Yusuf, and Bennouna and Judge ad hoc Mahiou.

Application of the Convention on the Prevention and Punishment of the Crime of Genocide (Croatia v. Serbia)

On 2 July 1999 [YUN 1999, p. 1210], Croatia instituted proceedings before the Court against Serbia, then known as the Federal Republic of Yugoslavia (FRY), for alleged violations of the 1948 Convention on the Prevention and Punishment of the Crime of Genocide [YUN 1948–49, p. 959] committed between 1991 and 1995. In its Application, Croatia contended that by “directly controlling the activity of its armed forces, intelligence agents, and various paramilitary detachments, on the territory of...Croatia, in the Knin region, eastern and western Slovenia, and Dalmatia”, Serbia was liable for “ethnic cleansing” of Croatian citizens. It requested the Court to adjudge and declare that Serbia had “breached its legal obligations” to Croatia under the Genocide Convention and that it had “an obligation to pay to...Croatia, in its own right and as parens patriae for its citizens, reparations for damages to persons and property, as well as to the Croatian economy and environment caused by the foregoing violations of international law in a sum to be determined by the Court”.

By an Order of 14 September 1999, the Court fixed 14 March and 14 September 2000 as the respective time limits for the filing of a Memorial by Croatia and a Counter-Memorial by Serbia. Those limits were twice extended by orders made during 2000 [YUN 2000, p. 1219]. Croatia filed its Memorial within the time limit and on 11 September 2002 [YUN 2002, p. 1268], within the extended time limit for filing its Counter-Memorial, Serbia filed certain preliminary objections on jurisdiction and admissibility. The proceedings on the merits were suspended, in accordance with Article 79 of the Rules of the Court.

On 25 April 2003, within the time limit fixed by an Order of the Court of 14 November 2002 [ibid.], Croatia filed a written statement of its observations and submissions on Serbia's preliminary objections [YUN 2003, p. 1304].

At the conclusion of public hearings on the preliminary objections on jurisdiction and admissibility held from 26 to 30 May 2008, the Parties presented final submissions to the Court [YUN 2008, p. 1395]. In its Judgment rendered on 18 November 2008 [ibid.], the Court found that, subject to its statement concerning the second preliminary objection raised by Serbia, it had jurisdiction, on the basis of the Genocide Convention, to entertain Croatia's application, adding that Serbia's second preliminary objection did not possess an exclusively preliminary character. It also rejected the first and third preliminary objections submitted by Serbia.

By an Order of 20 January 2009, the President of the Court fixed 22 March 2010 as the time limit for the filing of the Counter-Memorial of Serbia. That pleading, containing counterclaims, was filed within the prescribed time limit.

By an Order of 4 February 2010, the Court directed the submission of a reply by Croatia and a rejoinder by Serbia concerning the claims presented by the Parties. It fixed 20 December 2010 and 4 November 2011, respectively, as the time limits for the filing of those written pleadings. The reply of Croatia was filed within the time limit.

Territorial and Maritime Dispute (Nicaragua v. Colombia)

In 2001 [YUN 2001, p. 1195], Nicaragua instituted proceedings against Colombia in respect of a dispute concerning "a group of related legal issues subsisting" between the two States "concerning title to territory and maritime delimitation". In its Application, Nicaragua requested the Court to adjudge and declare, first, that Nicaragua had sovereignty over the islands of Providencia, San Andrés and Santa Catalina and all the appurtenant islands and keys, and also over the Roncador, Serrana, Serranilla and Quitasueño keys (insofar as they were capable of appropriation); and, second, in the light of the determinations concerning the title requested above, asked the Court to determine the course of the single maritime boundary between the areas of the continental shelf and the exclusive economic zone appertaining respectively to Nicaragua and Colombia, in accordance with equitable principles and relevant circumstances recognized by general international law as applicable to such a delimitation of a single maritime boundary. Nicaragua reserved the right to claim compensation for elements of unjust enrichment consequent upon Colombian possession of the islands of San Andrés and Providencia, as well as the keys and maritime spaces up to the 82nd meridian, in the absence of lawful title. It also reserved the right to claim compensation for interference with fishing vessels of Nicaraguan nationality or vessels licensed by Nicaragua.

By an Order of 26 February 2002 [YUN 2002, p. 1271], the Court fixed 28 April 2003 and 28 June 2004, respectively, as the time limits for the filing of a Memorial by Nicaragua and of a Counter-Memorial by Colombia. The Memorial of Nicaragua was filed within the time limit [YUN 2003, p. 1305].

On 21 July 2003 [ibid.], Colombia filed preliminary objections to the jurisdiction of the Court; under Article 79 of the Rules of Court, proceedings on the merits were suspended accordingly. Nicaragua filed a written statement of its observations and submissions on the preliminary objections raised by Colombia within the time limit of 26 January 2004 [YUN 2004, p. 1268], fixed by the Court by an Order of 24 September 2003.

Public hearings were held on the preliminary objections from 4 to 8 June 2007 [YUN 2007, p. 1329]. At the conclusion of those hearings, the Parties presented their final submissions to the Court. Colombia requested the Court to adjudge and declare that under the 1948 American Treaty on Pacific Settlement (Pact of Bogotá), and in particular in pursuance of articles VI and XXXIV, the Court was without jurisdiction to hear the controversy submitted to it by Nicaragua under article XXXI, and to declare the controversy ended; that under Article 36, paragraph 2, of the Statute of the Court, the Court had no jurisdiction to entertain Nicaragua's Application; and that its Application was dismissed. Nicaragua asked the Court to adjudge and declare that the preliminary objections submitted by Colombia were invalid both in respect of the jurisdiction based upon the Pact of Bogotá, and upon Article 36, paragraph 2, of the Statute of the Court. In the alternative, Nicaragua asked the Court to adjudge and declare, in accordance with the provisions of Article 79, paragraph 7, of the Rules of Court, that the objections submitted by Colombia did not have an exclusively preliminary character, and to reject the request of Colombia to declare the controversy submitted to it by Nicaragua under article XXXI of the Pact of Bogotá "ended", in accordance with articles VI and XXXIV of the same instrument.

On 13 December 2007 [ibid., p. 1330], the Court rendered its Judgment on the preliminary objections. By 13 votes to 4, the Court upheld the objection to its jurisdiction raised by Colombia on the basis of articles VI and XXXIV of the Pact of Bogotá, insofar as it concerned sovereignty over the islands of San Andrés, Providencia and Santa Catalina. It unanimously rejected the objection to its jurisdiction insofar as it concerned sovereignty over the other maritime features in dispute and the maritime delimitation between the Parties. By 14 votes to 3, the Court upheld the second preliminary objection to jurisdiction raised by Colombia relating to the declarations made by the Parties recognizing the compulsory jurisdiction of the Court insofar as it concerned sovereignty over the islands of San Andrés, Providencia and Santa Catalina. By 16 votes to 1, it found that it was not necessary to examine the objection to its jurisdiction insofar as it concerned sovereignty over the other maritime features in dispute and the maritime delimitation between the Parties. With regard to its own jurisdiction, the Court unanimously found that it had jurisdiction, on the basis of article XXXI of the Pact of Bogotá, to adjudicate upon the dispute concerning sovereignty over the maritime features claimed by the Parties other than the islands of San Andrés, Providencia and Santa Catalina, and upon the dispute concerning the maritime delimitation between the Parties.

Appended to the Judgment were declarations by Judges Parra-Aranguren, Simma, Keith and Tomka and Judge ad hoc Gaja; separate opinions by Judges Ranjeva and Abraham; and dissenting opinions by Vice-President Al-Khasawneh and Judge Bennouna.

By an Order of 11 February 2008, the President of the Court fixed 11 November 2008 as the time limit for the filing of the Counter-Memorial of Colombia, which was filed within that limit.

By an Order of 18 December 2008, the Court directed Nicaragua to submit a reply and Colombia to submit a rejoinder, and fixed 18 September 2009 and 18 June 2010 as the respective time limits for the filing of those written pleadings.

On 25 February 2010, Costa Rica filed an application for permission to intervene in the case. In its Application, Costa Rica stated among other things that “[b]oth Nicaragua and Colombia, in their boundary claims against each other, claim maritime area to which Costa Rica is entitled”. It made clear that it was seeking to intervene in the proceedings as a non-party State. The Application of Costa Rica was immediately communicated to Nicaragua and Colombia, and the Court fixed 26 May as the time limit for the filing of written observations by those States, which were filed within the time limit.

On 10 June, Honduras also filed an Application for permission to intervene in the case. It asserted in the Application that Nicaragua, in its dispute with Colombia, was putting forward maritime claims that lay in an area of the Caribbean Sea in which Honduras had rights and interests. Honduras also stated that it was seeking primarily to intervene in the proceedings as a party. The Application of Honduras was immediately communicated to Nicaragua and Colombia. The President of the Court fixed 2 September as the time limit for those two States to furnish written observations. The written observations were filed within the time limit.

Public hearings on the admission of the Application of Costa Rica for permission to intervene were held from 11 to 15 October. At the close of the hearings, Costa Rica and the parties presented their respective submissions to the Court. Costa Rica sought the Application of the provisions of Article 85 of the Rules of Court, namely, paragraph 1: the intervening State shall be supplied with copies of the pleadings and documents annexed and shall be entitled to submit a written statement within a time limit to be fixed by the Court; and paragraph 3: [t]he intervening State shall be entitled, in the course of the oral proceedings, to submit its observations with respect to the subject matter of the intervention. Nicaragua stated that, in accordance with Article 60 of the Rules of Court and having regard to the Application for permission to intervene filed by Costa Rica and oral pleadings, the Application filed by Costa Rica failed to comply with the requirements established by the Statute and the Rules of Court, namely, Article 62, and paragraph 2 (a) and (b) of Article 81, respectively. In light of the considerations stated during the proceedings, Colombia reiterated what it stated in the written observations it submitted to the Court, to the effect that, in Colombia's view, Costa Rica had satisfied the requirements of Article 62 of the Statute and, consequently, that Colombia did not object to Costa Rica's request for permission to intervene in the present case as a non-party.

Certain Criminal Proceedings in France (Republic of the Congo v. France)

On 9 December 2002 [YUN 2002, p. 1263], the Republic of the Congo filed an Application instituting proceedings against France seeking the annulment of the investigation and prosecution measures taken by the French judicial authorities further to a complaint for crimes against humanity and torture filed by various associations against the President of the Republic of the Congo, Denis Sassou Nguesso; the Congolese Minister of the Interior, Pierre Oba; and other individuals including General Norbert Dabira, Inspector-General of the Congolese Armed Forces. The Application further stated that, in connection with the proceedings, an investigating judge of the Meaux (France) Tribunal de grande instance had issued a warrant for the President of the Congo to be examined as witness.

The Congo contended that, by “attributing to itself universal jurisdiction in criminal matters and by arrogating to itself the power to prosecute and try the Minister of the Interior of a foreign State for crimes allegedly committed by him in connection with the exercise of his powers for the maintenance of public order in his country”, France violated “the principle that a State may not, in breach of the principle of sovereign equality among all Members of the United Nations...exercise its authority on the territory of another State”. It further submitted that, in issuing a warrant instructing police officers to examine the President of the Congo as witness in the case, France violated “the criminal immunity of a foreign Head of State, an international customary rule recognized by the jurisprudence of the Court”.

In its Application, the Congo indicated that it sought to found the jurisdiction of the Court, pursuant to Article 38, paragraph 5, of the Rules of Court, “on the consent of the French Republic, which w[ould] certainly be given”. In accordance with that provision, the Application by the Congo was transmitted to the French Government and no further action was taken in the proceedings at that stage.

By a letter of 8 April 2003 [YUN 2003, p. 1308], France stated that it “consent[ed] to the jurisdiction of the Court to entertain the Application pursuant to Article 38, paragraph 5”, which made it possible to enter the case in the Court’s List and to open the proceedings. France added that its consent to the Court’s jurisdiction applied strictly within the limits “of the claims formulated by the Republic of the Congo” and that “Article 2 of the Treaty of Co-operation signed on 1 January 1974 by the French Republic and the People’s Republic of the Congo, to which the latter refers in its Application, d[id] not constitute a basis of jurisdiction for the Court in the present case”.

The Application of the Congo was accompanied by a request for the indication of a provisional measure “seek[ing] an order for the immediate suspension of the proceedings being conducted by the investigating judge of the Meaux Tribunal de grande instance”.

Public hearings were held from 28 to 29 April 2003 on the request for the indication of a provisional measure. In its Order of 17 June 2003 [ibid.], the Court declared that the circumstances, as they then presented themselves to it, were not such as to require the exercise of its power under Article 41 of the Statute to indicate provisional measures. The Memorial of the Congo and the Counter-Memorial of France were filed within the time limits fixed by the Order of 11 July 2003.

By an Order of 17 June 2004 [YUN 2004, p. 1270], the Court, taking account of the agreement of the Parties and of the particular circumstances of the case, authorized the submission of a reply by the Congo and a rejoinder by France, and fixed the time limits for the filing of those pleadings. Following four successive requests for extensions to the time limit for filing the reply [YUN 2005, p. 1384], the President of the Court fixed the time limits for the filing of the reply by the Congo and the rejoinder by France as 11 July 2006 and 11 August 2008, respectively. Those pleadings were filed within the time limits extended.

By an Order of 16 November 2009, the Court, citing Article 101 of the Rules of Court and taking account of the agreement of the Parties and the exceptional circumstances of the case, authorized the submission of an additional pleading by the Congo, followed by an additional pleading by France. It fixed 16 February and 17 May 2010 as the respective time limits for the filing of those pleadings.

By a letter of 5 November, the Congo, referring to Article 89 of the Rules of Court, informed the Court that it withdrew its application instituting proceedings and requested the Court “to make an order officially recording the discontinuance of the proceedings and directing the removal of the case from the List”. A copy of the letter was immediately communicated to France, which was simultaneously informed that the time limit provided for in Article 89, paragraph 2, of the Rules of Court, within which France might state whether it opposed the discontinuance of the proceedings, had been fixed as 12 November.

By a letter dated 8 November, France informed the Court that it had “no objection to the discontinuance of the proceedings by the Republic of the Congo”. On 16 November, the Court, placing on record the discontinuance by the Congo of the proceedings, ordered that the case be removed from the List.

Pulp Mills on the River Uruguay (Argentina v. Uruguay)

On 4 May 2006 [YUN 2006, p. 1481] Argentina filed an Application instituting proceedings against Uruguay for alleged breaches by Uruguay of obligations incumbent upon it under the Statute of the River Uruguay, a treaty signed between the two States on 26 February 1975 for the purpose of establishing the joint machinery necessary for the optimum and rational utilization of that part of the river which constituted their joint boundary. In its Application, Argentina charged Uruguay with having unilaterally authorized the construction of two pulp mills on the River Uruguay without complying with the obligatory prior notification consultation procedures under the Statute. Argentina claimed that the mills posed a threat to the river, and were likely to impair the quality of the river’s waters and cause significant trans-boundary damage to Argentina.

Following public hearings in June and December [YUN 2006, p. 1482] on requests for the indication of provisional measures, Argentina and Uruguay filed their pleadings within the time limits fixed by orders of 13 July 2006 [ibid.] and 14 September 2007 [YUN 2007, p. 1333].

By letters dated 16 and 17 June 2009, respectively, Uruguay and Argentina notified the Court that they had come to an agreement for the purpose of producing new documents pursuant to article 56 of the Rules of the Court, which were filed, following authorization from the Court on 23 June, within the agreed time limit. On 15 July, each of the Parties submitted comments on the new documents provided by the other Party and documents in support of its comments. Public hearings were held between 14 September and 2 October.

In its Judgment of 20 April 2010, the Court, by 13 votes to 1, found that Uruguay had breached its procedural obligations under Articles 7 to 12 of the 1975 Statute of the River Uruguay and that the declaration by the Court of the breach constituted appropriate satisfaction. By 11 votes to 3, the Court found that Uruguay had not breached its substantive obligations under Articles 35, 36 and 41 of the 1975 Statute of the River Uruguay. The court unanimously rejected all other submissions by the Parties.

Appended to the Judgment was a declaration by Judges Skotnikov and Yusuf; separate opinions by Judges Keith, Cançado Trindade, Greenwood, and Judge ad hoc Torres Bernárdez; a joint dissenting opinion by Judges Al-Khasawneh and Simma; and a dissenting opinion by Judge ad hoc Vinuesa.

Maritime Dispute (Peru v. Chile)

On 16 January 2008, Peru filed an Application instituting proceedings against Chile concerning a dispute in relation to “the delimitation of the boundary between the maritime zones of the two States in the Pacific Ocean, beginning at a point on the coast called Concordia, ... the terminal point of the land boundary established pursuant to the Treaty ... of 3 June 1929”, and also to recognition in favour of Peru of a “maritime zone lying within 200 nautical miles of the coast of Peru, and thus appertaining to Peru, but which Chile considered to be part of the high seas”.

In its Application, Peru claimed that the “maritime zones between Chile and Peru have never been delimited by agreement or otherwise” and that, accordingly, “the delimitation is to be determined by the Court in accordance with customary international law”. Peru stated that, since the 1980s, it had consistently endeavoured to negotiate the various issues in dispute, but had “constantly met a refusal from Chile to enter into negotiations”. It asserted that a note of 10 September 2004 from the Minister for Foreign Affairs of Chile to the Minister for Foreign Affairs of Peru made further attempts at negotiation impossible.

Peru consequently requested the Court to determine the course of the boundary between the maritime zones of the two States in accordance with international law, and to adjudge and declare that Peru possessed exclusive sovereign rights in the maritime area situated within the limit of 200 nautical miles from its coast, but outside Chile’s exclusive economic zone or continental shelf.

As basis for the Court’s jurisdiction, Peru invoked article XXXI of the Pact of Bogotá of 30 April 1948, to which both States were parties.

By an Order of 31 March 2008, the Court fixed 20 March 2009 and 9 March 2010 as the respective time limits for the filing of a Memorial by Peru and a Counter-Memorial by Chile.

Bolivia, Colombia and Ecuador, relying on article 53, paragraph 1, of the Rules of Court, requested copies of the pleadings and annexed documents produced in the case. In accordance with that provision, the Court, after ascertaining the views of the Parties, acceded to those requests.

By an Order of 27 April 2010, the Court authorized the submission of a reply by Peru and a rejoinder by Chile. It fixed 9 November 2010 and 11 July 2011 as the respective time limits for the filing of those pleadings. The reply and rejoinder were filed within the time limits fixed.

Aerial Herbicide Spraying (Ecuador v. Colombia)

On 31 March 2008, Ecuador filed an Application instituting proceedings against Colombia with respect of a dispute concerning the alleged “aerial spraying by Colombia of toxic herbicides at locations near, at and across its border with Ecuador”. Ecuador maintained that the spraying had already caused serious damage to people, crops, animals and the natural environment on the Ecuadorian side of the frontier, and posed a grave risk of further damage over time. It further contended that it had made “repeated and sustained efforts to negotiate an end to the fumigations”, but that “those negotiations had proved unsuccessful”.

Ecuador requested the Court to adjudge and declare that Colombia had violated its obligations under international law by causing or allowing the deposit of toxic herbicides on the territory of Ecuador that had caused damage to human health, property and the environment; and that Colombia should indemnify Ecuador for any loss or damage caused by its internationally unlawful acts, namely the use of herbicides, including by aerial dispersion, and in particular the death or injury to the health of any person or persons arising from the use of such herbicides, any loss of or damage to the property or livelihood or human rights of such persons, environmental damage or the depletion of natural resources, the costs of monitoring to identify and assess future risks to public health, human rights and the environment resulting from Colombia's use of herbicides, and any other loss or damage. It further requested the Court to adjudge and declare that Colombia should respect the sovereignty and territorial integrity of Ecuador; and forthwith take all steps necessary to prevent, on any part of its territory, the use of any toxic herbicides in such a way that they could be deposited onto the territory of Ecuador, and to prohibit the use, by means of aerial dispersion, of such herbicides in Ecuador, or on or near any part of its border with Ecuador.

As basis for the Court's jurisdiction, Ecuador invoked article XXXI of the 1948 Pact of Bogotá, to which both States were parties. Ecuador also relied on article 32 of the United Nations Convention against Illicit Traffic in Narcotic Drugs and Psychotropic Substances [YUN 1988, p. 688], to which both countries were parties.

In its Application, Ecuador reaffirmed its opposition to the export and consumption of illegal narcotics, but stressed that the issues it presented to the Court related exclusively to the methods and locations of Colombian operations to eradicate illicit coca and poppy plantations—and the harmful effects in Ecuador of such operations.

By an Order of 30 May 2008, the Court fixed 29 April 2009 and 29 March 2010 as the respective time limits for the filing of a Memorial by Ecuador and a Counter-Memorial by Colombia.

By an Order of 25 June 2010, the Court directed the submission of a reply by Ecuador and a rejoinder by Colombia. It fixed 31 January 2011 and 1 December 2011, respectively, as the time limits for the filing of those pleadings. In making that decision, the Court took account of the agreement of the Parties and the circumstances of the case. The reply of Ecuador was filed within the time limit.

Application of the International Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Racial Discrimination (Georgia v. Russian Federation)

On 12 August 2008 [YUN 2008, p. 1401], Georgia instituted proceedings against the Russian Federation on the grounds of Russia's "actions on and around the territory of Georgia" in breach of the International Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Racial Discrimination [YUN 1965, p. 433]. In its Application, Georgia also sought to ensure that the individual rights under the Convention of all persons on the territory of Georgia were fully respected and protected.

Georgia claimed that the "Russian Federation, through its State organs, State agents, and other persons and entities exercising governmental authority, and through the South Ossetian and Abkhaz separatist forces and other agents acting on the instructions of, and under the direction and control of the Russian Federation, is responsible for serious violations of its fundamental obligations under the Convention, including articles 2, 3, 4, 5 and 6" and that the Russian Federation had "violated its obligations under [the Convention] during three distinct phases of its interventions in South Ossetia and Abkhazia", in the period from 1990 to August 2008. Georgia requested the Court to order the Russian Federation to take all steps necessary to comply with its obligations under the Convention.

On 15 August, having considered the gravity of the situation, the President of the Court called upon the Parties "to act in such a way as will enable any order the Court may take on the request for provisional measures to have its appropriate effects."

Public hearings were held from 8 to 10 October, and on 15 October, the Court handed down its Order. The Court, reminding the Parties of their duty to comply with their obligations under the Convention, indicated provisional measures adopted by 8 votes to 7. Both Parties, within South Ossetia and Abkhazia and adjacent areas in Georgia, should: refrain from any act of racial discrimination against persons, groups of persons or institutions; abstain from sponsoring, defending or supporting racial discrimination by any persons or organizations; do all in their power to ensure, without distinction as to national or ethnic origin: security of persons, the right of persons to freedom of movement and residence within the border of the State, and the protection of the property of displaced persons and of refugees; and do all in their power to ensure that public authorities and public institutions under their control or influence did not engage in acts of racial discrimination against persons, groups of persons or institutions. It further indicated that both Parties should facilitate and refrain from placing any impediment to humanitarian assistance in support of the rights to which the local population were entitled under the Convention; refrain from any action which might prejudice the rights of the other Party in respect of whatever judgment the Court may render, or which might aggravate or extend the dispute before the Court or make it more difficult to resolve; and inform the Court as to their compliance with the provisional measures.

By an Order of 2 December 2008 [YUN 2008, p. 1402], the President fixed 2 September 2009 as the time limit for the filing of a Memorial by Georgia and 2 July 2010 as the time limit for the filing of a Counter-Memorial by the Russian Federation. The Memorial of Georgia was filed within that time limit.

On 1 December 2009, within the time limit set in Article 79, paragraph 1, of the Rules of Court, the Russian Federation filed preliminary objections in respect of jurisdiction. Pursuant to Article 79, paragraph 5, of the Rules of Court, the proceedings on the merits were then suspended. By an Order of 11 December 2009, the Court fixed 1 April 2010 as the time limit for the filing by Georgia of a written statement containing its observations and submissions on the preliminary objections in respect of jurisdiction raised by the Russian Federation.

Public hearings on the preliminary objections were held from 13 to 17 September 2010. At the end of the hearings, the Russian Federation requested the Court to adjudge and declare that it lacked jurisdiction over the claims brought against the Russian Federation by Georgia. Georgia requested the Court to dismiss the preliminary objections presented by the Russian Federation and to hold that the Court had jurisdiction to hear the claims presented by Georgia and that those claims were admissible.

Application of the Interim Accord of 13 September 1995 (the former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia v. Greece)

On 17 November 2008 [YUN 2008, p. 1402], the former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia (FYROM) instituted proceedings against Greece for what it described as “a flagrant violation of [Greece’s] obligations under article 11” of the Interim Accord signed by the Parties on 13 September 1995. In its Application, FYROM requested the Court to protect its rights under the Interim Accord and to ensure that it was allowed to exercise its rights as an independent State acting in accordance with international law, including the right to pursue membership of relevant international organizations. It contended that Greece violated its rights under the Accord by objecting, in April 2008, to the application of FYROM to join the North Atlantic Treaty Organization (NATO). FYROM contended, in particular, that Greece vetoed the application because Greece desired “to resolve the difference between the Parties concerning the constitutional name of the Applicant as an essential precondition” for such membership.

By an Order of 20 January 2009, the Court fixed 20 July 2009 as the time limit for the filing of a Memorial by FYROM and 20 January 2010 for the filing of a Counter-Memorial by Greece. The Memorial of FYROM was filed within the prescribed time limit.

On 9 March 2010, FYROM indicated that it wished to be able to respond to the Counter-Memorial of Greece, including the objections to jurisdiction and admissibility contained therein, by means of a reply, and to have available for that purpose a time limit of approximately four and one half months as from the filing of the Counter-Memorial. Greece stated that it had no objection to the granting of the request, provided that it could in turn submit a rejoinder and have an identical time limit for that purpose.

By an Order of 12 March 2010, the Court authorized the submission of a reply by FYROM and a rejoinder by Greece. It fixed 9 June and 27 October 2010 as the respective time limits for the filing of those pleadings. The reply of FYROM and the rejoinder of Greece were filed within the prescribed time limits.

Jurisdictional Immunities of the State (Germany v. Italy)

On 23 December 2008 [YUN 2008, p. 1402], Germany instituted proceedings against Italy, alleging that “through its judicial practice...Italy has infringed and continues to infringe its obligations towards Germany under international law”.

In its Application, Germany contended that in recent years Italian judicial bodies had repeatedly disregarded the jurisdictional immunity of Germany as a sovereign State. After the judgment of the Corte di Cassazione of 11 March 2004 in the Ferrini case had been rendered, “where that court declared that Italy held jurisdiction with regard to a claim...brought by a person who during World War II had been deported to Germany to perform forced labour in the armaments industry”, numerous other proceedings were instituted against Germany before Italian courts by persons who had also suffered injury as a consequence of the armed conflict. Germany was concerned “that hundreds of additional cases may be brought against it”.

Germany concluded its Application by requesting the Court to judge and declare, among others, that Italy: failed to respect Germany’s jurisdictional immunity as a sovereign State, by allowing civil claims to be brought against Germany based on violations of international humanitarian law by the German Reich during the Second World War; violated its jurisdictional immunity by taking measures of constraint against Villa Vigoni, a German State property in northern Italy used for government non-commercial purposes. Germany had to take any and all steps to ensure that all decisions of Italian courts and other judicial authorities infringing Germany’s immunity became unenforceable, and that, in the future, Italian courts would not entertain legal actions against Germany founded on the occurrences described in its first request (see above).

By an Order of 29 April 2009, the Court fixed 23 June 2009 and 23 December 2009 as the time limits, respectively for the filing of a Memorial by Germany and a Counter-Memorial by Italy. Those pleadings were filed within the fixed time limits.

In its Counter-Memorial, Italy made a counter-claim, and in accordance with Article 80 of the Rules of the Court, asked the Court to adjudge and declare that, considering the existence under international law of an obligation of reparation owed to the victims of war crimes and crimes against humanity perpetrated by the Third Reich: Germany had violated that obligation with regard to Italian victims of such crimes by denying them effective reparation; Germany's international responsibility was engaged for that conduct; and Germany must cease its wrongful conduct and offer appropriate and effective reparation to those victims, by means of its choosing, as well as through the conclusion of agreements with Italy.

On 27 January 2010, at a meeting held by the President of the Court with both Parties, Germany indicated that it did not consider the counterclaim submitted by Italy to be in accordance with article 80, paragraph 1, of the Rules of Court and that it intended to raise objections to the Italian counterclaim.

Accordingly, the Court decided that Germany should specify in writing, by 26 March at the latest, the legal grounds on which it relied in maintaining that the respondent's counterclaim did not fall within the provisions of article 80, paragraph 1, of the Rules of Court, and that Italy would in turn be invited to present its views in writing on the question by 26 May at the latest. By letters dated 5 February, the Registrar informed the Parties of that decision.

On 24 March, Germany submitted its written observations entitled "Preliminary objections of the Federal Republic of Germany regarding Italy's counterclaim", in which it set out the legal grounds on which it argued that the counterclaim did not meet the requirements of article 80, paragraph 1, of the Rules of Court. A copy of those observations was transmitted to Italy on the same day.

By a communication dated 25 May, Italy submitted to the Court its written observations entitled "Observations of Italy on the preliminary objections of the Federal Republic of Germany regarding Italy's counterclaim". By a letter dated the same day, the Registrar communicated a copy of those observations to Germany.

Having received full and detailed written observations from each Party, the Court judged that it was sufficiently well informed of the positions they held as to whether it could entertain the claim presented as a counterclaim by Italy in its Counter-Memorial. Accordingly, the Court did not consider it necessary to hear the Parties further on the subject and on 6 July, it made an Order on the admissibility of Italy's counterclaim.

The Court examined whether it had jurisdiction ratione temporis under the European Convention for the Peaceful Settlement of Disputes. It could only have jurisdiction if the dispute that Italy sought to submit by way of its counterclaim related to facts or situations occurring after the entry into force of the European Convention as between the parties on 18 April 1961. The Court found that that was not the case and that the dispute which Italy sought to submit was therefore excluded from the temporal scope of the Convention. By that Order, the Court, by 13 votes to 1, found "that the counterclaim presented by Italy ... is inadmissible as such and does not form part of the current proceedings".

The Court then unanimously authorized the submission of a reply by Germany and a rejoinder by Italy, relating to the claims brought by Germany, and fixed 14 October 2010 and 14 January 2011 as the respective time limits for the filing of those pleadings. The reply of Germany and the rejoinder of Italy were filed within the prescribed time limits.

Certain Questions concerning Diplomatic Relations (Honduras v. Brazil)

On 28 October 2009, Honduras instituted proceedings against Brazil in relation to a "dispute between [the two States] relating to legal questions concerning diplomatic relations and associated with the principle of non-intervention in matters which were essentially within the domestic jurisdiction of any State, a principle incorporated in the Charter of the United Nations". It was alleged therein that Brazil had "breached its obligations under Article 2 (7) of the Charter and those under the 1961 Vienna Convention on Diplomatic Relations" [YUN 1961, p. 512].

At the end of the Application the Court was requested "to adjudge and declare that Brazil does not have the right to allow the premises of its Mission in Tegucigalpa to be used to promote manifestly illegal activities by Honduran citizens who have been staying within it for some time now and that it shall cease to do so".

An original copy of the Application was sent to the Brazilian Government on 28 October and the Secretary-General was also informed about the filing of the Application.

By a letter dated 28 October, Patricia Isabel Rodas Baca, Minister for External Relations in the Government headed by José Manuel Zelaya Rosales, informed the Court that the Ambassador of Honduras to the Netherlands was not the legitimate representative of Honduras before the Court and that "Ambassador Eduardo Enrique Reina was being appointed as the sole legitimate representative of the Government of Honduras to the ICJ". A copy of the communication was sent on 3 November to Brazil, as well as to the Secretary-General.

The Court decided that, given the circumstances, no other action would be taken in the case until further notice.

By a letter dated 30 April 2010, Mario Miguel Canahuati, Minister for External Relations of Honduras, informed the Court that the Government was “not going on with the proceedings initiated by the application” and that it “accordingly withdraws this application from the Registry”.

Consequently, the President of the Court made an Order on 12 May in which, after noting that Brazil had not taken any step in the proceedings in the case, he recorded the discontinuance by Honduras of the proceedings and ordered that the case be removed from the List.

Jurisdiction and Enforcement of Judgments in Civil and Commercial Matters (Belgium v. Switzerland)

On 21 December 2009, Belgium initiated proceedings against Switzerland in respect of a dispute concerning “the interpretation and application of the Lugano Convention of 16 September 1988 on jurisdiction and the enforcement of judgments in civil and commercial matters ... and the application of the rules of general international law that govern the exercise of State authority, in particular in the judicial domain, [and relating to] the decision by Swiss courts not to recognize a decision by Belgian courts and not to stay proceedings later initiated in Switzerland on the subject of the same dispute”.

In its Application, Belgium stated that the dispute in question “has arisen out of the pursuit of parallel judicial proceedings in Belgium and Switzerland” in respect of the civil and commercial dispute between the “main shareholders in Sabena, the former Belgian airline now in bankruptcy”. The Swiss shareholders in question were SAirGroup (formerly Swissair) and its subsidiary SAirLines and the Belgian shareholders were the Belgian State and three companies in which it held the shares.

The applicant affirmed that “in connection with the Swiss companies’ acquisition of equity in Sabena in 1995 and with their partnership with the Belgian shareholders, contracts were entered into between 1995 and 2001 for, among other things, the financing and joint management of Sabena”. That set of contracts “provided for exclusive jurisdiction on the part of the Brussels courts in the event of dispute and for the application of Belgian law”.

Belgium also stated that, “on 3 July 2001, taking the position that the Swiss shareholders had breached their contractual commitments and non-contractual duties, causing [the Belgian shareholders] injury”, the Belgian shareholders sued the Swiss shareholders in the commercial court of Brussels, seeking damages to compensate for the lost investments and for the expenses incurred “as a result of the defaults by the Swiss shareholders”.

After finding jurisdiction in the matter, that court “found various instances of wrongdoing on the part of the Swiss shareholders, but rejected the claims for damages brought by the Belgian shareholders”. Both Parties appealed against that decision to the Court of Appeal of Brussels, which in 2005 by partial judgment upheld the Belgian courts’ jurisdiction over the dispute on the basis of the Lugano Convention. The proceedings on the merits were pending before that court.

Belgium stated that in various proceedings concerning the application for a debt-restructuring moratorium submitted by the Swiss companies to the Zurich courts, the Belgian shareholders had sought to declare their debt claims against them. It was asserted that the Swiss courts had, however, refused to recognize the future Belgian decisions on the civil liability of the Swiss shareholders or to stay their proceedings pending the outcome of the Belgian proceedings. According to Belgium, those refusals violated provisions of the Lugano Convention and “the rules of general international law that govern the exercise of State authority, in particular in the judicial domain”.

Concluding its Application, Belgium requested the Court to adjudge and declare that: it had jurisdiction to entertain the dispute between Belgium and Switzerland concerning the interpretation and application of the Lugano Convention on jurisdiction and the enforcement of judgments in civil and commercial matters, and of the rules of general international law governing the exercise by States of their authority, in particular in the judicial domain; Belgium’s claim was admissible; Switzerland, by virtue of the decision of its courts to hold that the future decision in Belgium on the contractual and non-contractual liability of SAirGroup and SAirLines to the Belgian State and Zephyr-Fin, Société fédérale de participations (SFP) and Société fédérale d’investissement (SFI) (since merged, having become SFPI) would not be recognized in Switzerland in the SAirGroup and SAirLines debt-scheduling proceedings, was breaching the Lugano Convention; Switzerland, by refusing to stay the proceedings pursuant to its municipal law in the disputes between, on the one hand, the Belgian State and SFPI, and on the other, the estates of SAirGroup and SAirLines, companies in debt-restructuring liquidation, specifically on the ground that the future decision in Belgium on the contractual and non-contractual liability of SAirGroup and SAirLines to the Belgian State and SFPI would not be recognized in Switzerland in the SAirGroup and SAirLines debt-scheduling proceedings, was breaching the rule of general international law that all State authority, especially in the judicial domain, must be exercised reasonably; Switzerland, by virtue of the refusal by its judicial authorities to stay those proceedings in the aforementioned disputes, pending the conclusion of the proceedings taking place in the Belgian courts concerning the contractual and non-contractual liability of SAirGroup and SAirLines to the first cited parties, was violating the Lugano Convention; Switzerland's international responsibility had been engaged; Switzerland must take all appropriate steps to enable the decision by the Belgian courts on the contractual and non-contractual liability of SAirGroup and SAirLines to the Belgian State and SFPI to be recognized in Switzerland in accordance with the Lugano Convention for purposes of the debt-scheduling proceedings for SAirLines and SAirGroup; and Switzerland must take all appropriate steps to ensure that the Swiss courts stay their proceedings in the disputes between, on the one hand, the Belgian State and SFPI and, on the other, the estates of SAirGroup and SAirLines, pending the conclusion of the proceedings that were taking place in the Belgian courts concerning the contractual and non-contractual liability of SAirGroup and SAirLines to the first cited parties.

By an Order of 4 February 2010, the Court fixed 23 August 2010 as the time limit for the filing of a Memorial by Belgium and 25 April 2011 as the time limit for the filing of a Counter-Memorial by Switzerland.

By an Order of 10 August 2010, the President of the Court, at the request of Belgium and after having ascertained the views of Switzerland, extended the time limits for the filing of the Memorial of Belgium and the Counter-Memorial of Switzerland to 23 November 2010 and 24 October 2011, respectively. The Memorial of Belgium was filed within the prescribed time limit.

Whaling in the Antarctic (Australia v. Japan)

On 31 May 2010, Australia instituted proceedings against Japan, alleging that "Japan's continued pursuit of a large-scale program of whaling under the Second Phase of its Japanese Whale Research Program under Special Permit in the Antarctic ('JARPA II') [is] in breach of obligations assumed by Japan under the International Convention for the Regulation of Whaling ('ICRW'), as well as its other international obligations for the preservation of marine mammals and the marine environment".

Australia requested the Court to adjudge and declare that Japan was in breach of its international obligations in implementing the JARPA II programme in the Southern Ocean, and to order that Japan: cease implementation of JARPA II; revoke any authorizations, permits or licences allowing the activities which were the subject of the application to be undertaken; and provide assurances and guarantees that it would not take any further action under the JARPA II or any similar initiative until such programme had been brought into conformity with its obligations under international law.

As the basis for the jurisdiction of the Court, Australia invoked the provisions of Article 36, paragraph 2, of the Court's Statute, referring to the declarations recognizing the Court's jurisdiction as compulsory made by Australia on 22 March 2002 and by Japan on 9 July 2007.

By an Order of 13 July 2010, the Court fixed 9 May 2011 as the time limit for the filing of a Memorial by Australia and 9 March 2012 as the time limit for the filing of a Counter-Memorial by Japan. The Memorial of Australia was filed within the time limit.

Frontier Dispute (Burkina Faso/Niger)

On 20 July 2010, Burkina Faso and the Niger jointly submitted a frontier dispute between them to the Court. By a joint letter dated 12 May and filed in the Registry on 20 July, the two States notified to the Court a special agreement signed in Niamey on 24 February 2009, which entered into force on 20 November 2009. Under the terms of article 1 of the special agreement, the Parties had agreed to submit their frontier dispute to the Court, and that each of them would choose an ad hoc judge. Article 2 of the special agreement indicated the subject of the dispute.

The Court was requested to determine the course of the boundary between the two countries in the sector from the astronomic marker of Tong-Tong (latitude 14° 25' 04" N; longitude 00° 12' 47" E) to the beginning of the Botou bend (latitude 12° 36' 18" N; longitude 01° 52' 07" E). The Court was further requested to place on record the Parties' agreement on the results of the work of the Joint Technical Commission on demarcation of the Burkina Faso-Niger boundary with regard to the following sectors: the sector from the heights of N'Gouma to the astronomic marker of Tong-Tong, and the sector from the beginning of the Botou bend to the River Mekrou. In article 3, paragraph 1, the Parties requested the Court to authorize the following written proceedings: a Memorial filed by each Party not later than nine months after the seizing of the Court; a Counter-Memorial filed by each Party not later than nine months after exchange of the Memorials; any other pleading whose filing, at the request of either of the Parties, should have been authorized or directed by the Court. Article 7 of the special agreement, entitled "Judgment of the Court", read as follows: the Parties accept the Judgment of the Court given pursuant to the Special Agreement as final and binding upon them. From the day on which the Judgment was rendered, the Parties shall have eighteen months in which to commence the work of demarcating the boundary. In case of difficulty in the implementation of the Judgment, either Party may seize the Court pursuant to Article 60 of its Statute. The Parties requested the Court to nominate, in its Judgment, three experts to assist them in the demarcation. Lastly, article 10 contained the following “Special undertaking”: pending the Judgment of the Court, the Parties would undertake to maintain peace, security and tranquillity among the populations of the two States in the frontier region, refraining from any act of incursion into the disputed areas and organizing regular meetings of administrative officials and the security services. With regard to the creation of socio-economic infrastructure, the Parties would undertake to hold preliminary consultations prior to implementation. The special agreement was accompanied by an exchange of notes dated 29 October and 2 November 2009 embodying the agreement between the two States on the delimited sectors of the frontier.

By an Order of 14 September 2010, the Court fixed 20 April 2011 and 20 January 2012 as the respective time limits for the filing of a Memorial and a Counter-Memorial by each of the Parties. The Memorials were filed within the time limits.

Certain Activities carried out by Nicaragua in the Border Area (Costa Rica v. Nicaragua)

On 18 November 2010, Costa Rica instituted proceedings against Nicaragua in respect of an alleged “incursion into, occupation of and use by Nicaragua’s Army of Costa Rican territory as well as [alleged] breaches of Nicaragua’s obligations towards Costa Rica” under a number of international treaties and conventions. In its Application, Costa Rica claimed that “[b]y sending contingents of its armed forces to Costa Rican territory and establishing military camps therein, Nicaragua is not only acting in outright breach of the established boundary regime between the two States, but also of the core founding principles of the United Nations, namely the principle of territorial integrity and the prohibition of the threat or use of force against any State ...”.

Costa Rica charged Nicaragua with having occupied, in two separate incidents, the territory of Costa Rica in connection with the construction of a canal across Costa Rican territory from the San Juan River to Laguna los Portillos (also known as Harbor Head Lagoon), and with having carried out related works of dredging on the San Juan River. Costa Rica stated that the “ongoing and planned dredging and the construction of the canal would seriously affect the flow of water to the Colorado River of Costa Rica, and would cause further damage to Costa Rican territory, including the wetlands and national wildlife protected areas located in the region”. Costa Rica claimed that Nicaragua rejected all calls for withdrawal of its armed forces from the occupied territory and all means of negotiation. It further stated that Nicaragua did not intend to comply with the resolution of 12 November 2010 of the Permanent Council of the Organization of American States calling, in particular, for the withdrawal of Nicaraguan armed forces from the border region, and requesting the avoidance of the presence of military or security forces in the area in order to create a favourable climate for dialogue between the two nations.

Costa Rica requested the Court to adjudge and declare that Nicaragua was in breach of its international obligations regarding the incursion into and occupation of Costa Rican territory, the serious damage inflicted to its protected rainforests and wetlands, and the damage intended to the Colorado River, wetlands and protected ecosystems, as well as the dredging and canalization activities being carried out by Nicaragua on the San Juan River. In particular, the Court was requested to adjudge and declare that, by its conduct, Nicaragua had breached: the territory of Costa Rica, as agreed and delimited by the 1858 Treaty of Limits, the 1888 Cleveland Award and the first and second Alexander Awards; the fundamental principles of territorial integrity and the prohibition of use of force under the Charter of the United Nations and the Charter of the Organization of American States; the obligation imposed upon Nicaragua by Article IX of the 1858 Treaty of Limits not to use the San Juan River to carry out hostile acts; the obligation not to damage Costa Rican territory; the obligation not to artificially channel the San Juan River away from its natural watercourse without the consent of Costa Rica; the obligation not to prohibit the navigation on the San Juan River by Costa Rican nationals; the obligation not to dredge the San Juan River if that caused damage to Costa Rican territory (including the Colorado River), in accordance with the Cleveland Award; the obligations under the Ramsar Convention on Wetlands; the obligation not to aggravate and extend the dispute by adopting measures against Costa Rica, including the expansion of the invaded and occupied Costa Rican territory or by adopting any further measure or carrying out any further actions that would infringe Costa Rica’s territorial integrity under international law. The Court was also requested in the Application to determine the reparation to be made by Nicaragua, in particular in relation to any measures of the kind referred to in the paragraph above.

As the basis for the jurisdiction of the Court, Costa Rica invoked Article 36, paragraph 1, of the Statute of the Court by virtue of the operation of article XXXI of the Pact of Bogotá, as well as the declarations of acceptance made by Costa Rica on 20 February 1973 and by Nicaragua on 24 September 1929 (modified on 23 October 2001), pursuant to Article 36, paragraph 2, of the Statute of the Court.

On 18 November 2010, Costa Rica also filed a request for the indication of provisional measures, in which it stated that “Costa Rica’s rights which are subject of the dispute and of this request for provisional measures are its right to sovereignty, to territorial integrity and to non-interference with its rights over the San Juan River, its lands, its environmentally protected areas, as well as the integrity and flow of the Colorado River”. Costa Rica indicated that the protection of its rights was of real urgency and pointed out that “[t] here is a real risk that without a grant of provisional measures, action prejudicial to the rights of Costa Rica will continue and may significantly alter the factual situation on the ground before the Court has the opportunity to render its final decision”.

Costa Rica requested the Court as a matter of urgency to order the following provisional measures so as to rectify the ongoing breach of its territorial integrity and to prevent further irreparable harm to its territory, pending its determination of the case on the merits: the immediate and unconditional withdrawal of all Nicaraguan troops from the unlawfully invaded and occupied Costa Rican territories; the immediate cessation of the construction of a canal across Costa Rican territory; the immediate cessation of the felling of trees, removal of vegetation and soil from Costa Rican territory, including its wetlands and forests; the immediate cessation of the dumping of sediment in Costa Rican territory; the suspension of Nicaragua’s dredging programme, aimed at the occupation, flooding and damage of Costa Rican territory, as well as at the serious damage to and impairment of the navigation of the Colorado River, giving full effect to the Cleveland Award and pending the determination of the merits of the dispute; and that Nicaragua shall refrain from any other action which might prejudice the rights of Costa Rica, or which may aggravate or extend the dispute before the Court.

Communication. On 16 November [A/65/579], Nicaragua transmitted to the Secretary-General a copy of a declaration by its branches of Government (executive, legislative, judicial and electoral) concerning the supposed border dispute with Costa Rica.

Advisory proceedings

Accordance with International Law of the Unilateral Declaration of Independence by the Provisional Institutions of Self-Government of Kosovo

In response to General Assembly resolution 63/3 of 8 October 2008 [YUN 2008, p. 1404], which referred to Article 65 of the ICJ Statute and requested the Court to render an advisory opinion on the question of whether the unilateral declaration of independence by the Provisional Institutions of Self-Government of Kosovo of 17 February 2008 [ibid., p. 437] was in accordance with international law, the Court, by an Order of 17 October 2008 [ibid., p. 1403], decided that the United Nations and its Member States, as well as the authors of the unilateral declaration of independence, were considered likely to be able to furnish information on the question submitted to the Court for an advisory opinion. The Court fixed 17 April 2009 as the time limit within which written statements on the question could be presented to it and 17 July 2009 as the time limit within which States and organizations having presented written statements could submit written comments on the other statements.

Written statements were filed within the time limit fixed by the Court for that purpose by: Albania, Argentina, Austria, Azerbaijan, Bolivia, Brazil, China, Cyprus, the Czech Republic, Denmark, Egypt, Estonia, Finland, France, Germany, Iran, Ireland, Japan, Latvia, the Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Luxembourg, Maldives, the Netherlands, Norway, Poland, Romania, the Russian Federation, Serbia, Sierra Leone, Slovakia, Slovenia, Spain, Switzerland, the United Kingdom and the United States. Venezuela filed a written statement on 24 April 2009; the Court agreed to the filing of that written statement after the expiry of the time limit. The authors of the unilateral declaration of independence also filed a written contribution within the time limit fixed by the Court. Written comments on the other written statements were filed within the time limit by 14 Member States; the authors of the unilateral declaration of independence filed a written contribution within the same time limit.

Public hearings were held from 1 to 11 December 2009. Twenty-eight States, as well as the authors of the unilateral declaration of independence, participated in the oral proceedings before the Court. At the end of the hearings, the Court began its deliberations.

The General Assembly on 14 September 2009 decided to include the item entitled “Request for an advisory opinion of ICJ on whether the unilateral declaration of independence of Kosovo is in accordance with international law” in the draft agenda of its sixty-fourth (2009) session [YUN 2009, p. 1277].

On 22 July 2010, the Court gave its advisory opinion, which was divided into five parts: jurisdiction and discretion; scope and meaning of the question; factual background; the question whether the declaration of independence was in accordance with international law; and general conclusion. The Court unanimously found that it had jurisdiction to give the advisory opinion requested. By 9 votes to 5, it decided to comply with the request for an advisory opinion. By 10 votes to 4, the Court was of the opinion that the declaration of independence of Kosovo adopted on 17 February 2008 did not violate international law.

Appended to the advisory opinion was a declaration by Vice-President Tomka and Judge Simma; separate opinions by Judges Keith, Sepúlveda-Amor, Cançado Trindade and Yusuf; and dissenting opinions by Judges Koroma, Bennouna and Skotnikov.

On 26 July [A/64/881], the Secretary-General transmitted the advisory opinion to the Assembly.

Communication. In a 27 July letter [A/64/876] to the Secretary-General regarding the advisory opinion, Serbia stated that the main issues arising from Kosovo's unilateral declaration of independence remained unanswered.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 9 September [meeting 120], the General Assembly adopted resolution 64/298 [draft: A/64/L.65/Rev.1] without vote [agenda item 77].

Request for an advisory opinion of the International Court of Justice on whether the unilateral declaration of independence of Kosovo is in accordance with international law

The General Assembly,

Mindful of the purposes and principles of the United Nations,

Bearing in mind its functions and powers under the Charter of the United Nations,

Recalling its resolution 63/3 of 8 October 2008, in which it requested the International Court of Justice to render an advisory opinion on the following question:

"Is the unilateral declaration of independence by the Provisional Institutions of Self-Government of Kosovo in accordance with international law?",

Having received with respect the advisory opinion of the International Court of Justice of 22 July 2010 on the Accordance with International Law of the Unilateral Declaration of Independence in respect of Kosovo, and having studied with great care the advisory opinion, including the issues on which it was rendered,

1. Acknowledges the content of the advisory opinion of the International Court of Justice on the Accordance with International Law of the Unilateral Declaration of Independence in respect of Kosovo, rendered in response to the request of the General Assembly;

2. Welcomes the readiness of the European Union to facilitate a process of dialogue between the parties; the process of dialogue in itself would be a factor for peace, security and stability in the region, and that dialogue would be to promote cooperation, achieve progress on the path to the European Union and improve the lives of the people.

Judgment No. 2867 of the Administrative Tribunal of the International Labour Organization upon a complaint filed against the International Fund for Agricultural Development

On 26 April 2010, the Court received a request for an advisory opinion from the International Fund for Agricultural Development (IFAD), aimed at obtaining the reversal of a judgment rendered by an administrative court, the Administrative Tribunal of the International Labour Organization (hereinafter "the Tribunal" or "ILOAT").

In its judgment No. 2867 (S-G. v. IFAD), delivered on 3 February 2010, the Tribunal found that it had jurisdiction under the terms of article II of its statute to rule on the merits of a complaint against IFAD introduced by Ms. S-G., a former staff member of the Global Mechanism of the United Nations Convention to Combat Desertification in those Countries Experiencing Serious Drought and/or Desertification, Particularly in Africa. Ms. S-G. held a fixed-term contract of employment which was due to expire on 15 March 2006. When her contract was not renewed, Ms. S-G. made approaches to various organs of IFAD, which housed the Global Mechanism. In particular, she filed an appeal with the Joint Appeals Board, which recommended in December 2007 that she be reinstated within the Global Mechanism for a period of two years and paid an amount equivalent to all the salaries, allowances and entitlements she had lost since March 2006. The President of IFAD rejected that decision in April 2008. In view of the failure of that approach, Ms. S-G. filed a complaint against IFAD with the Tribunal on 8 July 2008. In her complaint, Ms. S-G. asked the Tribunal to order IFAD to reinstate her, for a minimum of two years, in her previous post or an equivalent post with retroactive effect from 15 March 2006, and to grant her monetary compensation equivalent to the losses suffered as a result of the non-renewal of her contract. In its judgment, the Tribunal decided that the decision of the President of IFAD rejecting the recommendation of the Joint Appeals Board should be set aside. It ordered IFAD to pay the complainant damages equivalent to the salary and other allowances she would have received if her contract had been extended for two years from 16 March 2006, together with moral damages in the sum of €10,000 and costs in the amount of €5,000.

The Executive Board of IFAD, by a resolution adopted at its ninety-ninth session on 22 April 2010, acting within the framework of article XII of the annex of the statute of the Tribunal, decided to challenge the above-mentioned judgment of the Tribunal and to refer the question of the validity of that judgment to the International Court of Justice for an advisory opinion. Article XII reads as follows: "1. In any case in which the Executive Board of an international organization ... challenges a decision of the Tribunal confirming its jurisdiction, or considers that a decision of the Tribunal is vitiated by a fundamental fault in the procedure followed, the question of the validity of the decision given by the Tribunal shall be submitted by the Executive Board concerned, for an advisory opinion, to the International Court of Justice. 2. The opinion given by the Court shall be binding.”

The request for an advisory opinion was transmitted to the Court by a letter from the President of the Executive Board of IFAD dated 23 April 2010. It contained the following nine questions: was ILOAT competent, under article II of its statute, to hear the complaint introduced against the Fund on 8 July 2008 by Ms. S-G., an individual who was a member of the staff of the Global Mechanism of the United Nations Convention to Combat Desertification in those Countries Experiencing Serious Drought and/or Desertification, Particularly in Africa for which the Fund acted merely as housing organization?; given that the record showed that the parties to the dispute underlying ILOAT judgment No. 2867 were in agreement that the Fund and the Global Mechanism were separate legal entities and that the complainant was a member of the staff of the Global Mechanism, and was the ILOAT statement, made in support of its decision confirming its jurisdiction, that “the Global Mechanism is to be assimilated to the various administrative units of the Fund for all administrative purposes” and that the “effect of this is that administrative decisions taken by the Managing Director in relation to staff in the Global Mechanism are, in law, decisions of the Fund” outside its jurisdiction and/or did it constitute a fundamental fault in the procedure followed by ILOAT?; was the ILOAT general statement, made in support of its decision confirming its jurisdiction, that “the personnel of the Global Mechanism are staff members of the Fund” outside its jurisdiction and/or did it constitute a fundamental fault in the procedure followed by ILOAT?; was the ILOAT decision confirming its jurisdiction to entertain the complainant’s plea alleging an abuse of authority by the Global Mechanism’s Managing Director outside its jurisdiction and/or did it constitute a fundamental fault in the procedure followed by ILOAT?; was the ILOAT decision confirming its jurisdiction to entertain the complainant’s plea that the Managing Director’s decision not to renew the complainant’s contract constituted an error of law outside its jurisdiction and/or did it constitute a fundamental fault in the procedure followed by ILOAT?; was the ILOAT decision confirming its jurisdiction to interpret the memorandum of understanding between the Conference of the Parties to the United Nations Convention to Combat Desertification in Those Countries Experiencing Serious Drought and/or Desertification, Particularly in Africa and IFAD (hereby the MOU), the Convention, and the Agreement Establishing IFAD beyond its jurisdiction and/or did it constitute a fundamental fault in the procedure followed by ILOAT?; was the ILOAT decision confirming its jurisdiction to determine that by discharging an intermediary and supporting role under the MOU, the President was acting on behalf of IFAD outside its jurisdiction and/or did it constitute a fundamental fault in the procedure followed by ILOAT?; was the ILOAT decision confirming its jurisdiction to substitute the discretionary decision of the Managing Director of the Global Mechanism with its own outside its jurisdiction and/or did it constitute a fundamental fault in the procedure followed by ILOAT?; and what was the validity of the decision given by ILOAT in its Judgment No. 2867?

By letters dated 26 April 2010, the Registrar of the Court gave notice, pursuant to Article 66, paragraph 1, of the Statute, of the request for an advisory opinion to all States entitled to appear before the Court.

By an Order of 29 April 2010, the Court: decided that IFAD and its member States entitled to appear before the Court, the States parties to the United Nations Convention to Combat Desertification entitled to appear before the Court and those specialized agencies of the United Nations which had made a declaration recognizing the jurisdiction of ILOAT pursuant to article II, paragraph 5, of the statute of the Tribunal were considered likely to be able to furnish information on the questions submitted to the Court for an advisory opinion; fixed 29 October 2010 as the time limit within which written statements on those questions could be presented to the Court, in accordance with Article 66, paragraph 2, of the Statute; fixed 31 January 2011 as the time limit within which States and organizations having presented written statements could submit written comments on the other written statements, in accordance with Article 66, paragraph 4, of the Statute; decided that the President of IFAD should transmit to the Court any statement setting forth the views of the complainant in the proceedings against the Fund before ILOAT, which the said complainant might wish to bring to the attention of the Court; and fixed 29 October 2010 as the time limit within which any possible statement by the complainant who was the subject of the judgment could be presented to the Court, and 31 January 2011 as the time limit within which any possible comments by the complainant could be presented to the Court. The subsequent procedure had been reserved for further decision.

On 26 October 2010, the General Counsel of IFAD submitted its written statement and a statement setting forth the views of the complainant. On 28 October, the Ambassador of Bolivia to the Netherlands submitted a written statement of the Bolivian Government.

Other questions

Functioning and organization of the Court

Conditions of service and compensation

In a 21 October report [A/65/533] on the conditions of service and compensation for officials other than Secretariat officials, the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions (ACABQ), with regard to the salaries of the members of ICJ, recommended that no change be effected in the remuneration system. It also recommended that the General Assembly increase the special allowance of the ICJ Presidents and Vice-Presidents acting as President to $25,000 and $156 per day, respectively. ACABQ also recommended that no changes be made in the standards of travel and subsistence regulations of ICJ. Regarding retirement benefits, it recommended that the review of the pension schemes for the members of the Court be postponed until the Assembly's sixty-sixth session and that no change be effected in the arrangements for the retirement benefits of the Court's ad hoc judges.

On 24 December, the General Assembly, by resolution 65/258 (see p. 1472) endorsed ACABQ's conclusions and recommendations.

Composition of the Court

Election of judges

In a 8 June memorandum [A/64/808-S/2010/298], the Secretary-General notified the General Assembly and the Security Council of the resignation of the former ICJ President, Judge Shi Jiuyong (China), effective 28 May. In a 8 June note [A/64/809-S/2010/299], he provided information on the candidate nominated by national groups. On 29 June, Ms. Xue Hanquin was elected as his replacement until 5 February 2012, the remainder of his term.

In a 23 August memorandum [A/64/899-S/2010/442], the Secretary-General notified the General Assembly and the Security Council of the resignation of Judge Thomas Buergenthal (United States) effective 6 September. In a 23 August note [A/64/900-S/2010/443], he provided information on the candidate nominated by national groups. On 9 September, Ms. Joan E. Donoghue was elected as his replacement until 5 February 2015, the remainder of his term.

SECURITY COUNCIL ACTION

On 18 March [meeting 6285], the Security Council unanimously adopted resolution 1914(2010). The draft [S/2010/141] was prepared in consultations among Council members.

The Security Council,

Noting with regret the resignation of Judge Shi Jiuyong, taking effect on 28 May 2010,

Noting that a vacancy in the International Court of Justice for the remainder of the term of office of Judge Shi will thus occur and must be filled in accordance with the terms of the Statute of the Court,

Noting also that, in accordance with Article 14 of the Statute, the date of the election to fill the vacancy shall be fixed by the Security Council,

Decides that the election to fill the vacancy shall take place on 29 June 2010 at a meeting of the Security Council and at a meeting of the General Assembly at its sixty-fourth session.

SECURITY COUNCIL ACTION

On 2 June [meeting 6327], the Security Council unanimously adopted resolution 1926(2010). The draft [S/2010/271] was prepared in consultations among Council members.

The Security Council,

Noting with regret the resignation of Judge Thomas Buergenthal, taking effect on 6 September 2010,

Noting that a vacancy in the International Court of Justice for the remainder of the term of office of Judge Buergenthal will thus occur and must be filled in accordance with the terms of the Statute of the Court,

Noting also that, in accordance with Article 14 of the Statute, the date of the election to fill the vacancy shall be fixed by the Security Council,

Decides that the election to fill the vacancy shall take place on 9 September 2010 at a meeting of the Security Council and at a meeting of the General Assembly at its sixty-fourth session.

Trust Fund to Assist States in the Settlement of Disputes

In August [A/65/309], the Secretary-General reported on the activities and status of the Trust Fund to Assist States in the Settlement of Disputes through ICJ since the submission of his 2009 report [YUN 2009, p. 1278]. The Fund, established in 1989 [YUN 1989, p. 818], provided financial assistance to States for expenses incurred in connection with a dispute submitted to ICJ by way of a special agreement or by an application of its Statute, or the execution of a Judgment of the Court.

During the period under review (1 July 2009–30 June 2010), the Fund did not receive any applications for financial assistance from States. Three States contributed to the Fund, which as at 30 June had a balance of some $2.8 million. Noting that the Fund had a decreasing level of resources since its inception, and that the number of contributions remained low, the Secretary-General urged States and other entities to consider making substantial contributions to the Fund and to contribute on a regular basis.

International tribunals and court

In 2010, the international tribunals for the former Yugoslavia and for Rwanda worked towards the completion of their mandates.

The International Tribunal for the Prosecution of Persons Responsible for Serious Violations of International Humanitarian Law Committed in the Territory of the Former Yugoslavia since 1991 continued to expedite its proceedings, in keeping with its completion strategy. During the year, the Tribunal rendered one Trial Chamber judgement and two Appeals Chamber judgements. As at 6 December, four of the ten remaining trials were expected to be completed in 2011, five in 2012, one in 2013, and all appeals by the end of 2014.

The International Criminal Tribunal for the Prosecution of Persons Responsible for Genocide and Other Serious Violations of International Humanitarian Law Committed in the Territory of Rwanda and Rwandan Citizens Responsible for Genocide and Other Such Violations Committed in the Territory of Neighbouring States between 1 January and 31 December 1994 continued to work towards its completion strategy. In 2010, it rendered six Trial Chamber judgements and five Appeals Chamber judgements bringing the number of remaining judgements to be delivered at the trial level down to 10. One fugitive was arrested, yet 10 remained at large.

The International Criminal Court continued its proceedings with respect to situations of concern in five countries. A second warrant of arrest was delivered against Omar Hassan Ahmad Al-Bashir, the President of the Sudan, with respect to three counts of genocide. Nine warrants of arrest were outstanding at year's end. In May and June, the UN Secretary-General convened the Review Conference of the Rome Statute, where States parties adopted the Kampala Declaration, reaffirming their commitment to the Rome Statute and its full implementation, as well as its universality and integrity.

International Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia

In 2010, the International Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia (ICTY), established by Security Council resolution 827(1993) [YUN 1993, p. 440] and based in The Hague, continued efforts to implement its completion strategy [YUN 2002, p. 1275], which was endorsed by Council resolution 1503(2003) [YUN 2003, p. 1330]. The Tribunal focused on expediting its proceedings and the completion of all trials and appeals. During the year, ICTY adopted the recommendations of the Working Group on Speeding Up Trials, including reforms to the Tribunals procedures, and decided to integrate them into the ongoing proceedings. The Office of the Prosecutor continued to seek the cooperation of the States of the former Yugoslavia and other States to fulfil its mandate and strengthen relations with its regional counterparts. Meanwhile, the Registry continued to play a crucial role in the provision of administrative and judicial support.

During the year, the Security Council adopted three resolutions—1915(2010), 1931(2010) and 1954(2010)—addressing the extension of the terms of office of judges, their redeployment between Tribunals, and/or the maximum number of judges serving at the Tribunal (see pp. 1293 and 1295).

The ICTY President, Judge Patrick Robinson (Jamaica), informed the Council on 6 December [S/PV.6434] that the Tribunal had conducted proceedings in 10 trials concurrently by doubling up judges and staff so that they were working on more than one case at a time, and had continued to take measures to expedite its trials, without sacrificing due process. Of the 161 persons indicted by the Tribunal, proceedings had been concluded against 125 of them, 18 persons were on trial and 13 persons were in appeal proceedings. Two accused, Ratko Mladić and Goran Hadžić, remained at large. Four of the ten cases were expected to be completed in 2011; five by the end of 2012; one, that of Radovan Karadžić, at the end of 2013; and all appeals in 2014. The ICTY President also expressed concern that judges had reported feeling extreme pressure to expedite the Tribunal's work.

The activities of ICTY were covered in two reports to the Security Council and the General Assembly, for the periods 1 August 2009 to 31 July 2010 [A/65/205-S/2010/413] and 1 August 2010 to 31 July 2011 [A/66/210-S/2010/473]. On 8 October, the Assembly took note of the 2009/2010 report (decision 65/507).

The Chambers

During the year, the Tribunal conducted 10 trials simultaneously and rendered one judgement involving seven accused, while the Appeals Chamber rendered two judgements on the merits involving four accused. Judicial activities included first instance and appeals proceedings against judgements, interlocutory decisions, State requests for review, and contempt cases. As at 31 July, ICTY had 27 judges from 26 countries, including 14 permanent judges; 2 permanent judges of the International Criminal Tribunal for Rwanda serving in the Appeals Chamber; and 11 ad litem (short-term) judges.

New arrests and indictments

In 2010, no new arrests or indictments were issued by the Prosecutor, except one for contempt of the Tribunal and one updated indictment. Following the severance of the Ratko Mladić indictment from the Radovan Karadžić indictment in 2009 [YUN 2009, p. 1285], an updated indictment was presented to the confirming judge on 10 May 2010, which would allow the case against Mr. Mladić to proceed more efficiently when he would be arrested and tried. On 9 July, Jelena Rašić was charged with contempt of court (see below). Meanwhile, Mr. Mladić and another fugitive, Goran Hadžić, remained at large. The Serbian agencies in charge of locating and arresting them regularly apprised the Prosecutor's Office of their work, including the scope and nature of measures taken, investigative avenues pursued and operations conducted. Few tangible results, however, had been achieved by the efforts of the operational services. After carefully examining the operational activities conducted, the Office recommended an in-depth review of the strategies employed and asked Serbian authorities to expand search efforts by broadening their investigations, intensifying search operations, and increasing their operational capacity.

Ongoing cases, trials and appeals

The trial of Vojislav Šešelj, which started on 27 November 2006 in his absence [YUN 2006, p. 1490], began anew on 7 November 2007 [YUN 2007, p. 1337], was adjourned on 11 February 2009 [YUN 2009, p. 1280] and, granted a motion for a review of the adjournment on 24 November 2009, resumed on 12 January 2010 in Trial Chamber III. Mr. Šešelj was charged with crimes against humanity and violations of the laws or customs of war allegedly committed in Bosnia and Herzegovina, Croatia and Serbia between August 1991 and September 1993 [YUN 2003, p. 1311; YUN 2004, p. 1277]. On 3 February, Trial Chamber II issued an order in lieu of an indictment, charging Mr. Šešelj with contempt for having disclosed in a book information that could identify 11 protected witnesses in violation of orders of a Chamber. On 6 May, a plea of not guilty was entered on behalf of the accused. The case was being readied for trial.

Momčilo Perišić was charged in 2007 with crimes against humanity and violations of the laws or customs of war allegedly committed in Bosnia and Herzegovina and Croatia between October 1992 and December 1995 [YUN 2007, p. 1337] and his trial commenced on 2 October 2008 [YUN 2008, p. 1409]. The prosecution concluded its case on 25 January 2010 and the defence started its case on 22 February.

Zdravko Tolimir, a high-ranking Bosnian Serb army officer, reporting directly to the Commander of the Main Staff, General Ratko Mladić, was charged in 2007 with genocide, conspiracy to commit genocide, crimes against humanity, and a violation of the laws or customs of war allegedly committed in Bosnia and Herzegovina in 1995 [YUN 2007, p. 1335]. He was arrested on 31 May 2007 in Bosnia and Herzegovina and transferred to The Hague on 1 June [ibid.]; his trial commenced on 26 February 2010. As at 31 July, the case was hearing the prosecution's case-in-chief.

On 15 March, a contempt judgement was rendered in the case of Zuhdija Tabaković, who was sentenced to three months of imprisonment. Mr. Tabaković was charged with contempt of the Tribunal in November 2009 for allegedly providing a false statement in exchange for payment [YUN 2009, p. 1281] with regard to the case of Milan and Sredoje Lukić. Messrs. Lukić and Lukić were charged with murdering some 70 Bosnian Muslim women, children and elderly persons in a house in Višegrad, and with beating Bosnian Muslim men at a detention camp [YUN 2007, p. 1337]. On 20 July 2009, Milan Lukić and Sredoje Lukić were sentenced to life imprisonment and 30 years of imprisonment, respectively [YUN 2009, p. 1281]. The prosecution and defence for Sredoje Lukić filed their appeal briefs in November [ibid.]. On 17 March 2010, the defence for Milan Lukić filed its appeal brief. On 9 July, Jelena Rašić, a former member of the Milan Lukić defence team was charged with contempt of the Tribunal for allegedly procuring false statements in exchange for money from three persons to be called as witnesses for the defence. On 22 September, Ms. Rašić pleaded not guilty on all counts of the indictment.

On 16 April, Rasim Delić died while the appeals filed by both parties were being decided. Mr. Delić was charged on the basis of his command responsibility with violations of the laws or customs of war allegedly committed in Bosnia and Herzegovina between July 1993 and December 1995 [YUN 2005, p. 1388]. Judgement was rendered on 15 September 2008, sentencing him to three years of imprisonment [YUN 2008, p. 1408]. Following the filing of appeal briefs in May 2009, Mr. Delić was granted provisional release pending the hearing of his appeal [YUN 2009, p. 1281]. On 29 June 2010, the Appeals Chamber denied a defence motion for continuing the appeal proceedings and terminated the proceedings.

On 19 May, in the case against Ljube Boškoski and Johan Tarčulovski, charged with violations of the laws or customs of war allegedly committed against ethnic Albanians in the former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia (FYROM) in August 2001 [YUN 2005, p. 1388], the Appeals Chamber dismissed all seven grounds of Mr. Tarčulovski's 2009 appeal [YUN 2009, p. 1282] and affirmed the 12-year sentence of imprisonment handed down at trial on 10 July 2008 [YUN 2008, p. 1408]. The prosecution's appeal regarding the acquittal of Mr. Boškoski was also dismissed. Mr. Boškoski was the FYROM Minister of Interior between May 2001 and November 2002, and Mr. Tarčulovski was a police officer acting as an escort inspector to the President's security unit in 2001 [YUN 2007, p. 1336].

On 20 May, the defence case was completed in the trial of Vlastimir Đorđević, a former senior Serbian police official who was charged with deportation, inhumane acts (forcible transfer), murder and persecutions in Kosovo [YUN 2003, p. 1312], and arrested on 17 June 2007 [YUN 2007, p. 1337]. His trial began on 27 January 2009 [YUN 2009, p. 1280]. Final trial briefs were filed on 30 June 2010, and closing arguments were heard on 13 and 14 July.

The defence case in the trial of Jadranko Prlić, Bruno Stojić, Slobodan Praljak, Milivoj Petković, Valentin Ćorić and Berislav Pušić was completed in May. As at 31 July, the Trial Chamber was seized of a prosecution motion to reopen its case-in-chief. Prlić et al. were charged with grave breaches of the 1949 Geneva Conventions, crimes against humanity, and violations of the laws or customs of war allegedly committed against Serbs and Muslims in the Croatian-held part of Bosnia and Herzegovina between November 1991 and April 1994 [YUN 2006, p. 1487].

With regard to the Vujadin Popović et al. case [YUN 2005, p. 1390], the Chamber issued its judgement on 10 June. Each of the seven accused was found guilty on some of the charges. Vujadin Popović and Ljubiša Beara were each sentenced to life imprisonment; Drago Nikolić was sentenced to 35 years' imprisonment; Radivoje Milić to 19 years' imprisonment; Ljubomir Borovčanin to 17 years' imprisonment; Vinko Pandurević to 13 years' imprisonment; and Milan Gvero to 5 years' imprisonment. Messrs. Popović, Beara, Nikolić, Borovčanin and Pandurević were charged with genocide, conspiracy to commit genocide, crimes against humanity, and a violation of the laws or customs of war. Mr. Milić and Mr. Gvero were charged with crimes against humanity and a violation of the laws or customs of war. All the charges were related to the mass murder and ethnic cleansing of Bosnian Muslims in Srebrenica after the fall of the former UN safe haven to Bosnian Serb forces in July 1995 [YUN 2007, p. 1336].

On 21 June, in the case of Gojko Janković, charged with crimes against humanity and violations of the laws or customs of war [YUN 1999, p. 1215], the Referral Bench denied his request to revoke the previous rule 11 bis referral decision and return his case to the Tribunal. On 22 July 2005, the Referral Bench granted the transfer of the case, which took place on 8 December 2005, to Bosnia and Herzegovina [YUN 2005, p. 1388]. The initial indictment in 1996 of Mr. Janković, a military police commander for Serb Forces, was amended on 7 October 1999 and 20 April 2001. He surrendered on 13 March 2005 [ibid.] and pleaded not guilty to all counts. He was sentenced by the Court of Bosnia and Herzegovina to 34 years' imprisonment on 16 February 2007; the sentence was upheld on 19 November 2007 by the Appellate Panel of the Court.

On 16 July, final briefs were submitted in the case against Ante Gotovina, Ivan Čermak, and Mladen Markač. The accused were charged with crimes against humanity and violations of the laws or customs of war allegedly committed in Croatia in 1995 [YUN 1995, p. 580], and the trial commenced on 10 March 2008 [YUN 2008, p. 1407]. The indictment against Mr. Gotovina, a former high-ranking Croatian military official, was unsealed in 2001 [YUN 2001, p. 1199]. After evading arrest for almost four years, he was arrested in 2005 in the Canary Islands and transferred to The Hague [YUN 2005, p. 1388]. On 14 July 2006 [YUN 2006, p. 1489], the Trial Chamber decided to join two cases involving Mr. Gotovina and Messrs. Čermak and Markač [YUN 2004, p. 1276] in one indictment and accepted proposed amendments to the indictment. The three were charged with persecutions, deportation, inhumane acts, plunder of public or private property, wanton destruction of cities, towns or villages, murder, and cruel treatment—all allegedly committed against Serbs in 1995 during, and in the aftermath of, a Croatian military offensive. At that time, Messrs. Gotovina and Čermak were senior military commanders on the ground, while Mr. Markač was the commander of the Croatian Special Police. All three pleaded not guilty [YUN 2007, p. 1335].

On 21 July, the Appeals Chamber granted the prosecution's request for a reversal of the Trial Chamber's 2008 decision to acquit Ramush Haradinaj, Idriz Balaj and Lahi Brahima [YUN 2009, p. 1282] on certain counts in the indictment and ordered a partial retrial of the case. Messrs. Haradinaj, Balaj and Brahima were charged with crimes against humanity and violations of the laws or customs of war allegedly committed in Kosovo in 1998. In the judgement delivered on 3 April 2008 [YUN 2008, p. 1407], Mr. Brahima was sentenced to six years of imprisonment, while Messrs. Haradinaj and Balaj were acquitted. The retrial indictment charged the accused with six counts of war crimes committed in Kosovo in 1998.

Judges of the Court

Ad litem judges

By identical letters of 15 March to the Security Council [S/2010/133] and General Assembly [A/64/710] Presidents, the Secretary-General transmitted a 1 March letter from the ICTY President, requesting the extension of the terms of office of two ad litem judges, Kimberly Prost (Canada) and Ole Bjørn Støle (Norway), until the end of May to enable them to complete the judgment in the case of the Prosecutor v. Popović et al. [YUN 2008, p. 1408]. Due to unforeseen factors related to the scale and complexity of the case, the delivery of judgement would not be rendered by the end of March as noted in Council resolution 1900(2009) [YUN 2009, p. 1284] and was delayed until the end of May 2010.

SECURITY COUNCIL ACTION

On 18 March [meeting 6286], the Security Council unanimously adopted resolution 1915(2010). The draft [S/2010/138] was submitted by Austria.

The Security Council,

Taking note of the letter dated 15 March 2010 from the Secretary-General to the President of the Security Council, attaching the letter dated 1 March 2010 from the President of the International Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia (“the International Tribunal”),

Recalling its resolutions 827(1993) of 25 May 1993, 1581(2005) of 18 January 2005, 1597(2005) of 20 April 2005, 1613(2005) of 26 July 2005, 1629(2005) of 30 September 2005, 1660(2006) of 28 February 2006, 1668(2006) of 10 April 2006, 1800(2008) of 20 February 2008, 1837(2008) of 29 September 2008, 1849(2008) of 12 December 2008, 1877(2009) of 7 July 2009 and 1900(2009) of 16 December 2009,

Recalling also that, in resolution 1900(2009), the Council decided that, notwithstanding the expiry of their terms of office on 31 December 2009, Judges Kimberly Prost (Canada) and Ole Bjørn Støle (Norway) should complete the Popović case, and that the total number of ad litem judges serving at the International Tribunal might temporarily exceed the maximum of twelve provided for in article 12, paragraph 1, of the statute of the International Tribunal, to a maximum of thirteen at any one time, returning to a maximum of twelve by 31 March 2010,

Taking note of the fact that, owing to unforeseen circumstances, the delivery of the judgment in the Popović case is delayed and will not be rendered by the end of March 2010,

Convinced of the advisability of allowing the total number of ad litem judges serving at the International Tribunal to temporarily exceed the maximum of twelve provided for in article 12, paragraph 1, of the statute of the International Tribunal,

Urging the International Tribunal to take all possible measures to complete its work expeditiously,

Acting under Chapter VII of the Charter of the United Nations,

1. Decides that the total number of ad litem judges serving at the International Tribunal may temporarily exceed the maximum of twelve provided for in article 12, paragraph 1, of the statute of the International Tribunal, to a maximum of thirteen at any one time, returning to a maximum of twelve by 30 June 2010, or upon completion of the Popović case, if sooner;

2. Decides also to remain seized of the matter.

On 19 March [A/64/727], the Council President transmitted the Council’s resolution to the General Assembly. On 29 March, the Assembly endorsed the actions taken by the Council in operative paragraph 1 of that resolution (decision 64/416 B).

Extension of terms of office

In a May assessment report [S/2010/270] to the Security Council, the ICTY President indicated that the Tribunal would not be in a position to complete all its work in 2010, with two cases anticipated to be completed in 2011 and five in 2012. He noted that the extension of the terms of office of the Tribunal’s permanent and ad litem judges until 31 December 2010, by Council resolutions 1837(2008) [YUN 2008, p. 1411] and 1877(2009) [YUN 2009, p. 1282], was not sufficient. He urged the Council to take up the matter as soon as possible and to grant extensions to the judges consistent with the anticipated trial and appeal schedules.

On 18 June [A/64/841-S/2010/330], the Secretary-General transmitted to the Council and General Assembly Presidents letters from the ICTY President relating to the ability of the Tribunal to implement its completion strategies. In his letter dated 31 May (Annex I), the ICTY President requested that the Council extend the terms of office of ICTY judges.

SECURITY COUNCIL ACTION

On 29 June [meeting 6348], the Security Council unanimously adopted resolution 1931(2010). The draft [S/2010/347] was submitted by Austria.

The Security Council,

Taking note of the letter dated 18 June 2010 from the Secretary-General to the President of the Security Council, attaching the letter dated 31 May 2010 from the President of the International Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia (“the International Tribunal”),

Recalling its resolutions 827(1993) of 25 May 1993, 1581(2005) of 18 January 2005, 1597(2005) of 20 April 2005, 1613(2005) of 26 July 2005, 1629(2005) of 30 September 2005, 1660(2006) of 28 February 2006, 1668(2006) of 10 April 2006, 1800(2008) of 20 February 2008, 1837(2008) of 29 September 2008, 1849(2008) of 12 December 2008, 1877(2009) of 7 July 2009, 1900(2009) of 16 December 2009 and 1915(2010) of 18 March 2010,

Recalling in particular its resolutions 1503(2003) of 28 August 2003 and 1534(2004) of 26 March 2004, in which the Council called upon the International Tribunal to take all possible measures to complete investigations by the end of 2004, to complete all trial activities at first instance by the end of 2008 and to complete all work in 2010,

Taking note of the assessments of the International Tribunal in its completion strategy report that the International Tribunal will not be in a position to complete all its work in 2010 and of the obstacles faced by the International Tribunal, and expressing its concern in this regard,

Noting the concerns expressed by the President of the International Tribunal about the loss of experienced staff, and affirming that staff retention is essential for the timely completion of the work of the International Tribunal,

Recalling that, in resolution 1900(2009), the Council underlined its intention to extend, by 30 June 2010, the terms of office of all trial judges at the International Tribunal based on the International Tribunal's projected trial schedule and the terms of office of all appeals judges until 31 December 2012, or until the completion of the cases to which they are assigned, if sooner, and requested the President of the International Tribunal to submit to the Council an updated trial and appeals schedule, including information on the judges for whom extension of the terms of office or redeployment to the Appeals Chamber would be sought,

Recalling also that, pursuant to article 14, paragraph 3, of the statute of the International Tribunal, as amended by resolution 1877(2009), the term of office of each judge redeployed to the Appeals Chamber shall be the same as the term of office of the judges serving in the Appeals Chamber,

Convinced of the advisability of permitting nine ad litem judges to serve at the International Tribunal beyond the cumulative period of three years provided for in article 13 ter, paragraph 2, of the statute of the International Tribunal,

Noting that one permanent judge and three of the ad litem judges currently serving at the International Tribunal will leave before the end of 2010 upon the completion of their respective cases,

Taking note of the updated trial and appeals schedule submitted by the President of the International Tribunal,

Acting under Chapter VII of the Charter of the United Nations,

1. Reaffirms the necessity of trial of persons indicted by the International Tribunal, and reiterates its call upon all States, especially the States of the former Yugoslavia, to intensify cooperation with and render all necessary assistance to the International Tribunal, and, in particular, calls for the arrest of Mr. Ratko Mladić and Mr. Goran Hadžić, as well as other indictees of the International Tribunal;

2. Notes the importance of the International Tribunal being adequately staffed to complete its work expeditiously, calls upon the Secretariat and other relevant United Nations bodies to continue to work with the Registrar of the International Tribunal in order to find practicable solutions to address this issue as the International Tribunal approaches the completion of its work, and at the same time calls upon the International Tribunal to renew its efforts to focus on its core functions;

3. Decides to extend the term of office of the following permanent judges at the International Tribunal, who are members of the Appeals Chamber, until 31 December 2012 or until the completion of the cases to which they are assigned or until the completion of their term as members of the Appeals Chamber, if sooner:

—Mr. Carmel A. Agius (Malta)

—Mr. Liu Daqun (China)

—Mr. Theodor Meron (United States)

—Mr. Fausto Pocar (Italy)

—Mr. Patrick Lipton Robinson (Jamaica)

4. Decides also to extend the term of office of the following permanent judges at the International Tribunal, who are members of the Trial Chamber, until 31 December 2011 or until the completion of the cases to which they are assigned, if sooner:

—Mr. Jean-Claude Antonetti (France)

—Mr. Guy Delvoie (Belgium)

—Mr. Christoph Flügge (Germany)

—Mr. Burton Hall (Bahamas)

—Mr. O-gon Kwon (Republic of Korea)

—Mr. Bakone Melema Moloto (South Africa)

—Mr. Howard Morrison (United Kingdom)

—Mr. Alphonsus Martinus Maria Orie (Netherlands)

5. Decides further to extend the term of office of the following ad litem judges at the International Tribunal, who are members of the Trial Chamber, until 31 December 2011 or until the completion of the cases to which they are assigned, if sooner:

—Mr. Melville Baird (Trinidad and Tobago)

—Mr. Pedro David (Argentina)

—Ms. Elizabeth Gwaunza (Zimbabwe)

—Mr. Frederik Harhoff (Denmark)

—Ms. Flavia Lattanzi (Italy)

—Mr. Antoine Kesia-Mbe Mindua (Democratic Republic of the Congo)

—Ms. Prisca Matimba Nyambe (Zambia)

—Ms. Michèle Picard (France)

—Mr. Árpád Prandler (Hungary)

—Mr. Stefan Trechsel (Switzerland)

6. Underlines its intention to extend, by 30 June 2011, the terms of office of the trial judges at the International Tribunal based on the International Tribunal's projected trial schedule, and requests the President of the International Tribunal to submit to the Security Council an updated trial and appeals schedule no later than 15 May 2011;

7. Decides to allow ad litem Judges Baird, David, Gwaunza, Harhoff, Lattanzi, Mindua, Picard, Prandler and Trechsel to serve at the International Tribunal beyond the cumulative period of service provided for under article 13 ter, paragraph 2, of the statute of the International Tribunal;

8. Urges the International Tribunal to complete its work expeditiously;

9. Decides to remain seized of the matter.

On 29 June [A/64/861], the Council President transmitted the Council's resolution to the General Assembly. On 16 July, the Assembly endorsed the actions taken by the Council in operative paragraphs 1 through 7 of that resolution (decision 64/416 C).

In a November assessment report [S/2010/588] to the Security Council, the ICTY President indicated that three cases were set to conclude in 2011, five in 2012 and one in 2013. He also stated that the Council would be requested to extend the mandate of permanent Judge Kevin Parker (Australia) and ad litem Judge Uldis Ķinis (Latvia) in order for them to complete their respective cases.

In identical letters of 23 November [A/65/588-S/2010/599] to the Council and Assembly Presidents, the Secretary-General transmitted a 9 November letter from the ICTY President requesting that the Council extend the terms of office of Judges Parker and Ķinis, and that Judge Ķinis be permitted to serve at the Tribunal beyond the cumulative period of three years, as stipulated in article 13 of the Tribunal's statute.

SECURITY COUNCIL ACTION

On 14 December [meeting 6446], the Security Council unanimously adopted resolution 1954(2010). The draft [S/2010/629] was submitted by Austria.

The Security Council,

Taking note of the letter dated 23 November 2010 from the Secretary-General to the President of the Security Council, attaching the letter dated 9 November 2010 from the President of the International Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia ("the International Tribunal"),

Recalling its resolutions 827(1993) of 25 May 1993, 1581(2005) of 18 January 2005, 1597(2005) of 20 April 2005, 1613(2005) of 26 July 2005, 1629(2005) of 30 September 2005, 1660(2006) of 28 February 2006, 1668(2006) of 10 April 2006, 1800(2008) of 20 February 2008, 1837(2008) of 29 September 2008, 1849(2008) of 12 December 2008, 1877(2009) of 7 July 2009, 1900(2009) of 16 December 2009 and 1931(2010) of 29 June 2010,

Recalling in particular its resolutions 1503(2003) of 28 August 2003 and 1534(2004) of 26 March 2004, in which the Council called upon the International Tribunal to take all possible measures to complete investigations by the end of 2004, to complete all trial activities at first instance by the end of 2008 and to complete all work in 2010,

Taking note of the assessment of the International Tribunal in its completion strategy report that the International Tribunal will not be in a position to complete all its work in 2010,

Urging the International Tribunal to take all possible measures to complete its work expeditiously,

Noting the concerns expressed by the President of the International Tribunal about the loss of experienced staff, and reaffirming that staff retention is essential for the timely completion of the work of the International Tribunal,

Acting under Chapter VII of the Charter of the United Nations,

1. Decides that, notwithstanding the expiry of his term of office on 31 December 2010, Judge Kevin Parker is authorized to complete the Dordević case, which he began before the expiry of his term of office, and takes note of the intention of the International Tribunal to complete the case by the end of February 2011;

2. Decides also that, notwithstanding the expiry of his term of office on 31 December 2010, Judge Uldis Ķinis is authorized to complete the Gotovina et al. case, which he began before the expiry of his term of office, and takes note of the intention of the International Tribunal to complete the case by the end of March 2011;

3. Decides further to allow Judge Ķinis to serve at the International Tribunal beyond the cumulative period of service provided for under article 13 ter, paragraph 2, of the statute of the International Tribunal;

4. Reiterates the importance of the International Tribunal being adequately staffed to complete its work expeditiously, calls upon the Secretariat and other relevant United Nations bodies to continue to work with the Registrar of the International Tribunal in order to find practicable solutions to address this issue as the International Tribunal approaches the completion of its work, and at the same time calls upon the International Tribunal to renew its efforts to focus on its core functions;

5. Decides to remain seized of the matter.

On 20 December [A/65/662], the Council President transmitted the Council's resolution to the General Assembly.

On 24 December, the Assembly decided that the agenda item entitled "International Tribunal for the Prosecution of Persons Responsible for Serious Violations of International Humanitarian Law Committed in the Territory of the Former Yugoslavia since 1991" would remain for consideration during its resumed sixty-fifth (2011) session (decision 65/544).

Office of the Prosecutor

In 2010, the Office of the Prosecutor made significant progress towards the completion of the trial programme. It also continued to seek the full cooperation of the States of the former Yugoslavia and other States to fulfil its mandate. Two fugitives—Ratko Mladić and Goran Hadžić—remained at large. Following the severance of Mr. Mladić's indictment from that of Radovan Karadžić in 2009 [YUN 2009, p. 1285], on 10 May 2010, the Office of the Prosecutor presented to the confirming judge an updated indictment, which would allow the case against Mr. Mladić to proceed more efficiently when he was arrested and tried. With regard to the transfer of all investigative dossiers to regional authorities in late 2009 [ibid.], the Office provided comprehensive follow-up assistance, and facilitated access to evidence available in The Hague. Serge Brammertz continued his duties as Prosecutor [YUN 2008, p. 1412].

As at 31 July, the Office was prosecuting nine trials with no cases in pretrial, marking an important milestone for the Tribunal. The Office was working at full capacity to prosecute trials and appeals efficiently and expeditiously. Emphasis was given to presenting evidence through witness statements and documents instead of viva voce testimony (oral testimony). Nonetheless, delays in several trials could not be avoided owing to, among other issues, difficulties with witness availability, the unpredictable length of defence cases and resource constraints. Several cases were adjourned to allow prosecution and defence teams time to translate and analyse a large volume of new and important evidence from Serbia.

On international cooperation, Serbia's responses to the Office's requests had been timely and adequate, and Serbian authorities continued to facilitate the appearance of witnesses before the Tribunal, including serving summonses on individuals. On 23 February, Serbian authorities conducted a search of the apartment of Ratko Mladić's wife and seized 18 notebooks containing Mladić's handwritten wartime notes and associated tapes. The Serbian Government provided scanned images of the notebooks to the prosecution in March, and delivered the original notebooks and tapes in May. Meanwhile, Serbian agencies in charge of locating and arresting the two fugitives regularly apprised the Office of their work. Their briefings covered the scope and nature of measures taken, investigative avenues pursued, and operations conducted. Nevertheless, few tangible results had been achieved, and after carefully examining the operational activities conducted, the Office recommended an in-depth review of the strategies employed. The Office also asked Serbian authorities to broaden their investigations, intensify search operations, and increase their operational capacity.

Although Croatia had been generally responsive to the Office's needs, the prosecution's long-standing request for military documents relating to Operation Storm in 1995 and the Gotovina et al. case [YUN 2008, p. 1407] remained outstanding. Since Croatia's creation of an inter-agency task force in 2009 [YUN 2009, p. 1285] to examine concerns communicated by the Office, seven reports had been submitted. The Office noted a general improvement in the quality of Croatia's administrative investigation, in terms of the manner in which interviews were conducted, yet the investigation failed to provide a full account of the whereabouts of the requested documents and none of the missing documents had been provided.

The authorities of Bosnia and Herzegovina continued to respond adequately to requests for assistance regarding documents and access to government archives, and to facilitate the appearance of witnesses before the Tribunal. The Office remained concerned that Radovan Stanković, indicted by the Tribunal for crimes against humanity and war crimes, remained at large. In May 2005, the Tribunal transferred Mr. Stanković to Bosnia and Herzegovina, where he escaped from prison while serving a 20-year sentence in Foča. The Office encouraged the authorities of Bosnia and Herzegovina, as well as neighbouring States, to take all necessary measures to apprehend him. The Office also continued to support the ongoing prosecution of war crimes cases in Bosnia and Herzegovina and, in particular, the work of the State Prosecutor and the Special Department for War Crimes.

The Registry

The Registry continued to provide operational support to the Chambers and the Office of the Prosecutor and to manage the administration of the Tribunal. It also managed the UN Detention Unit, the Victims and Witness Section, the Office for Legal Aid and Detention Matters and the interpretation and translation service. Following the adoption of Security Council resolution 1966(2010) (see p. 1306), which established the International Residual Mechanism for both Tribunals, the Immediate Office of the Registrar had been heavily involved in the practical arrangements necessary for the commencement of the Mechanism's operations. John Hocking continued to serve as the Registrar.

Between August 2009 and July 2010, the Court Management and Support Services Section supported 10 first instance trials, 6 appeals and 5 contempt cases. The Victims and Witnesses Section facilitated 594 witnesses travelling to The Hague to give evidence, while its Protection Unit coordinated professional responses to an increased number of threats to witnesses. The Office for Legal Aid and Detention Matters serviced over 480 defence team members in cases in pretrial, trial and appellate proceedings. It also expanded and improved the quality of information technology facilities available to defence teams. The UN Detention Unit continued to operate at a high level of activity, serving the judicial process on a daily basis for accused in the trial phase and providing secure custodial care for all detained persons. The Communications Service carried out a diverse range of activities with a view to increasing the profile of the Tribunal and bringing its judgements to the relevant communities.

Financing

Board of Auditors report. On 30 June [A/65/5/Add.12], the Chairman transmitted the Board of Auditors report on ICTY financial statements for the 2008–2009 biennium to the General Assembly President.

2010–2011 biennium

Reports of Secretary-General. In a July report [A/65/183], the Secretary-General submitted revised estimates for the 2010–2011 biennium reflecting additional resource requirements in the amount of $42,549,600, net of staff assessment, over the initial appropriation for 2010–2011 as approved by the General Assembly in resolution 64/240 [YUN 2009, p. 1286]. The increased resources were due to the revision of the trial schedule for the biennium to reflect changes in the completion dates of a number of first-instance trials.

The first performance report of ICTY for the 2010–2011 biennium [A/65/581], submitted in November in response to resolution 64/240, reflected a reduction in requirements of $18.2 million, net of staff assessment, from the initial appropriation for that biennium due to changes with respect to exchange rates, inflation and standard salary costs. The Assembly was requested to approve a revised appropriation in the amount of $274,924,600 gross ($249,833,400 net), which reflected a decrease of $15,360,900 gross ($18,154,400 net).

ACABQ report. In December [A/65/616 & Corr.1], ACABQ recommended that the Assembly approve a reduction of $15,360,900 gross ($18,154,400 net) and an additional appropriation of $45,587,200 gross for the 2010–2011 biennium.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 24 December [meeting 73], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth (Administrative and Budgetary) Committee [A/65/652], adopted resolution 65/253 without vote [agenda item 142].

Financing of the International Tribunal for the Prosecution of Persons Responsible for Serious Violations of International Humanitarian Law Committed in the Territory of the Former Yugoslavia since 1991

The General Assembly,

Having considered the report of the Secretary-General on the revised estimates under the budget, for the biennium 2010–2011, of the International Tribunal for the Prosecution of Persons Responsible for Serious Violations of International Humanitarian Law Committed in the Territory of the Former Yugoslavia since 1991 and his first performance report on the International Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia for the biennium 2010–2011,

Having also considered the report of the Board of Auditors on the Tribunal and the recommendations contained therein,

Having further considered the related report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions,

Recalling its resolution 47/235 of 14 September 1993 on the financing of the Tribunal and its subsequent resolutions thereon, the latest of which was resolution 64/240 of 24 December 2009,

1. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General on the revised estimates under the budget, for the biennium 2010–2011, of the International Tribunal for the Prosecution of Persons Responsible for Serious Violations of International Humanitarian Law Committed in the Territory of the Former Yugoslavia since 1991 and his first performance report on the International Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia for the biennium 2010–2011;

2. Endorses the conclusions and recommendations contained in the report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions;

3. Decides on a revised appropriation to the Special Account for the International Tribunal for the Prosecution of Persons Responsible for Serious Violations of International Humanitarian Law Committed in the Territory of the Former Yugoslavia since 1991 of a total amount of 320,511,800 United States dollars gross (290,087,500 dollars net) for the biennium 2010–2011, as detailed in the annex to the present resolution;

4. Also decides, for the year 2011, to apportion among Member States, in accordance with the scale of assessments applicable to the regular budget of the United Nations for the year, the amount of 87,615,150 dollars gross (77,908,050 dollars net), including 15,113,150 dollars gross (10,911,100 dollars net), being the increase in assessments;

5. Further decides, for the year 2011, to apportion among Member States, in accordance with the rates of assessment applicable to peacekeeping operations for the year, the amount of 87,615,150 dollars gross (77,908,050 dollars net), including 15,113,150 dollars gross (10,911,100 dollars net), being the increase in assessments;

6. Decides that, in accordance with the provisions of its resolution 973(X) of 15 December 1955, there shall be set off against the apportionment among Member States, as provided for in paragraphs 4 and 5 above, their respective share in the Tax Equalization Fund in the amount of 19,414,200 dollars, including 8,404,100 dollars, being the increase in the estimated staff assessment income approved for the Tribunal for the biennium 2010–2011;

7. Recognizes the critical importance of retaining highly skilled and experienced staff members with relevant institutional memory in order to successfully complete the trials and meet the targets set out in the completion strategy of the Tribunal;

8. Reaffirms paragraph 5 of its resolution 63/256 of 24 December 2008 and paragraph 6 of section II of its resolution 64/239 of 24 December 2009, and requests the Secretary-General to utilize his existing authority under the existing contractual framework to offer contracts to staff, taking into account the needs of the Tribunal;

9. Also reaffirms paragraph 7 of section II of its resolution 64/239 and reiterates its request to the Secretary-General to explore the possibility of employing at the United Nations, should their services be required, staff who remain with the Tribunal until the completion of its mandate or until their services are no longer needed;

10. Welcomes the efforts of the Secretary-General to facilitate the selection of staff of the Tribunal who are subject to downsizing;

11. Reiterates the importance of carrying out an effective outreach programme within the overall mandate of the Tribunal and its completion strategy, and requests the Tribunal, in accordance with its mandate and in consultation with the Department of Public Information of the Secretariat, to continue to develop and implement outreach activities that are proactive, utilizing available resources optimally, and that contribute to the reconciliation process by effectively developing an increased understanding of its work;

12. Encourages the Secretary-General to continue to explore measures to raise adequate voluntary resources to fund the outreach programme.

International Tribunal for Rwanda

In 2010, the International Criminal Tribunal for Rwanda (ICTR), established by Security Council resolution 955(1994) [YUN 1994, p. 299] and based in Arusha, United Republic of Tanzania, delivered six Trial Chamber judgements and five Appeals Chamber judgements. The Office of the Prosecutor succeeded in ensuring the arrest of one fugitive, who was transferred to the Tribunal in July, bringing the number of fugitives down to 10. Meanwhile, the Registry maintained high-level diplomatic contacts with Member States, international organizations and NGOs, and secured their cooperation to support the Tribunal's operations.

During the year, the Security Council adopted two resolutions—1932(2010) and 1955(2010)—addressing the extension of the terms of office of judges, their redeployment between Chambers, and/or the maximum number of judges serving at the Tribunal (see pp. 1300 and 1302).

The ICTR President, Judge Dennis Byron (Saint Kitts and Nevis), informed the Council on 6 December [S/PV.6434] that since his June report, the Tribunal had rendered five trial and two appeals judgements, bringing the number of remaining judgements to be delivered at the trial level down to 10. Judgements were expected in four trials in the first half of 2011 and in six trials before the end of 2011. With regard to the target date of the end of 2011 for the appeals, he said that the Tribunal maintained the goal of completion by the end of 2013. On the 10 fugitives at large, he indicated that the Tribunal depended on the cooperation of Member States for tracking, arresting and transferring them.

The 2010 activities of ICTR were covered in two reports to the Council and the General Assembly, for the periods of 1 July 2009 to 30 June 2010 [A/65/188-S/2010/408] and 1 July 2010 to 30 June 2011 [A/66/209-S/2011/472]. On 8 October, the Assembly took note of the 2009/2010 report (decision 65/506).

The Chambers

The ICTR Chambers were composed of 13 permanent judges and 11 ad litem judges at the end of June. Six permanent judges sat in the three Trial Chambers, while seven permanent judges sat in the Appeals Chamber. Two permanent judges left the Tribunal after the completion of their final case in February 2010. Trial Chamber I completed its work with the delivery of judgement on 30 June in the Munyakazi case (see below) and would be discontinued. The Appeals Chamber was composed of the same seven judges as the International Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia.

New arrests

On 30 June, Jean-Bosco Uwinkindi was apprehended in Uganda and transferred to the Tribunal on 2 July. Mr. Uwinkindi, who was pastor of the Pentecostal Church in Kanzenze, Kigali-Rural prefecture during 1994, was indicted in 2001 and charged with genocide, conspiracy to commit genocide and extermination as a crime against humanity. On 4 November 2010, the Prosecutor filed a request for the referral of the case against Mr. Uwinkindi to Rwandan authorities.

Ongoing cases, trials and appeals

On 28 January, closing arguments were heard in the trial against Yussuf Munyakazi, a businessman and former leader of a militia group in Cyan-gugu prefecture [YUN 2004, p. 1286]. On 30 June, the Trial Chamber delivered its judgement, convicting Mr. Munyakazi of genocide and extermination as a crime against humanity and sentencing him to 25 years' imprisonment. The trial opened on 22 April 2009 and the parties filed their written closing briefs in December [YUN 2009, p. 1290].

In the case of Ildephonse Hategekimana, a former commander of Ngoma Military Camp whose trial had closed on 6 October 2009 [YUN 2009, p. 1288], the parties filed their closing briefs on 1 February 2010 and delivered their closing arguments on 26 April. In its judgement, delivered on 6 December, the Chamber convicted Mr. Hategekimana of genocide as well as murder and rape as crimes against humanity, and he was sentenced to life imprisonment. The accused was found not guilty of complicity in genocide.

On 11 February, the Chamber rendered its judgement in the retrial of Tharcisse Muvunyi, a former lieutenant-colonel stationed at École des sous-officiers in Butare [YUN 2008, p. 1418], for an alleged speech he gave in May 1994. Mr. Muvunyi was convicted of direct and public incitement to commit genocide and was sentenced to 15 years' imprisonment. The Appeals Chamber heard the parties' appeals on 21 October 2010.

In the trial against Gaspard Kanyarukiga that commenced on 31 August 2009 [YUN 2009, p. 1290] and closed on 11 February 2010 after 28 trial days, the Trial Chamber heard 34 witnesses. It also conducted a site visit to Rwanda between 19 and 21 April. The parties filed their closing briefs on 11 May and closing arguments were heard on 24 May. On 1 November, the Chamber delivered its judgement. Mr. Kanyarukiga was convicted of genocide and extermination as a crime against humanity and was sentenced to 30 years' imprisonment. He was acquitted of complicity in genocide. Mr. Kanyarukiga, a businessman, was arrested and transferred to the Tribunal on charges of genocide, complicity in genocide, conspiracy to commit genocide and extermination as a crime against humanity in 2004 [YUN 2004, p. 1286].

On 25 February, the Chamber rendered the judgement in the case of Ephrem Setako, a lieutenant-colonel and former Director of the Judicial Affairs Division of the Ministry of Defence [ibid.]. Mr. Setako was convicted of genocide, extermination as a crime against humanity and war crimes and sentenced to 25 years' imprisonment. The trial opened on 25 August 2008 [YUN 2008, p. 1416] and closing arguments were heard on 5 November 2009 [YUN 2009, p. 1290].

In the trial against Dominique Ntawukulilyayo, former sub-prefect in the Butare prefecture [YUN 2008, p. 1416], the evidence phase of the case closed on 17 December 2009 [YUN 2009, p. 1290] and the prosecution and defence closing briefs were filed on 25 February 2010 and 25 March, respectively. A site visit in Rwanda was conducted between 25 and 29 April and the Chamber heard the closing arguments on 14 June. On 3 August, the Chamber convicted Mr. Ntawukulilyayo of genocide and sentenced him to 25 years' imprisonment, yet acquitted him of direct and public incitement to commit genocide.

In the trial of Jean-Baptiste Gatete, a businessman and former Mayor of Murambi commune (Byumba prefecture) [YUN 2002, p. 1285], following the conclusion of the prosecution case on 16 November 2009 [YUN 2009, p. 1290], the defence case began on 2 March 2010 and closed on 29 March with 27 witnesses called. Closing arguments were heard on 8 November.

In the case of Ildephonse Nizeyimana, former second-in-command in charge of intelligence and military operations at the École des sous-officiers during 1994, the Chamber issued 11 decisions and held 2 status conferences with the parties on 5 March 2010 and 10 June. As at 30 June, the Chamber was handling pretrial matters in the case. Mr. Nizeyimana was arrested on 5 October 2009 in Uganda and made his initial appearance on 14 October [ibid., p. 1288], when he pleaded not guilty to all counts in the indictment.

On 15 March, the Appeals Chamber dismissed the appeal of Léonidas Nshogoza, a former defence investigator in the Kamuhanda trial who was convicted for contempt of the Tribunal on 2 July 2009 [ibid.]. In affirming the conviction, the Appeals Chamber also affirmed the sentence of 10 months' imprisonment.

On 18 March, the Appeals Chamber affirmed the conviction and sentence of Simon Bikindi, a singer and composer of popular music [YUN 2002, p. 1285] who was convicted for direct and public incitement to commit genocide and sentenced to 15 years' imprisonment in 2008 [YUN 2008, p. 1417]. The hearing of the appeal took place on 30 September 2009 in Arusha [YUN 2009, p. 1290].

In the trial of Siméon Nchamihigo, a former Deputy Prosecutor in Cyangugu prefecture, the Chamber convicted him in September 2008 [YUN 2008, p. 1416] and he was sentenced to life imprisonment. The Appeals Chamber heard the parties in September 2009 [YUN 2009, p. 1290] and on 18 March 2010, it partially allowed Mr. Nchamihigo's appeal, vacating his convictions for certain crimes while affirming his convictions for genocide and murder, extermination, and other inhumane acts as crimes against humanity. The Appeals Chamber also set aside the sentence imposed by the Trial Chamber and sentenced Mr. Nchamihigo to 40 years' imprisonment.

In the case of Callixte Nzabonimana, former Minister of Youth in the Interim Government [YUN 2008, p. 1416], the trial opened in November 2009 [YUN 2009, p. 1289] and the prosecution, which called 19 witnesses, closed its case on 13 April 2010. The defence commenced its case the following day. The Trial Chamber heard 20 witnesses during the first session of the defence case, which closed on 4 June.

In the case against Grégoire Ndahimana, a former bourgmestre who was arrested in August 2009 in the Democratic Republic of the Congo [ibid., p. 1288], the Chamber began pretrial proceedings, including a pretrial conference on 26 April 2010. On 6 September, the Chamber began hearing evidence in the case.

In the case of Callixte Kalimanzira, the former chef de cabinet of the Ministry of the Interior [YUN 2005, p. 1397], the Appeals Chamber heard the parties' appeals on 14 June. On 20 October, although it affirmed Mr. Kalimanzira's conviction for aiding and abetting genocide, the Appeals Chamber reversed his remaining convictions and reduced his sentence from 30 to 25 years' imprisonment. Mr. Kalimanzira was convicted of genocide and direct and public incitement to commit genocide by the Trial Chamber in June 2009 [YUN 2009, p. 1290].

On 15 June, the Appeals Chamber heard the parties' appeals in the case of Emmanuel Rukundo, a former military chaplain [YUN 2001, p. 1207] who was convicted in February 2009 and sentenced to 25 years of imprisonment [YUN 2009, p. 1289]. On 20 October, the Appeals Chamber affirmed Mr. Rukundo's convictions for genocide and for murder and extermination as crimes against humanity, but did so on the basis of his responsibility for aiding and abetting those crimes rather than committing them, as the Trial Chamber had found. The Appeals Chamber also reversed Mr. Rukundo's conviction for genocide in relation to causing serious mental harm and reduced his sentence to 23 years' imprisonment.

On 16 June, the Appeals Chamber heard the appeal for Colonel Tharcisse Renzaho, former prefect of Kigali-ville, who was convicted and sentenced to life imprisonment for genocide, crimes against humanity and war crimes in July 2009 [ibid.]. The trial of Mr. Renzaho, charged with six counts of genocide, complicity in genocide, crimes against humanity (murder, rape) and violations of the Geneva Conventions and Additional Protocol II, began on 8 January 2007 [YUN 2007, p. 1343] and closing arguments were heard on 14 and 15 February 2008 [YUN 2008, p. 1416].

The trial of Augustin Ndirabatware, former Minister of Planning, opened on 23 September 2009 [YUN 2009, p. 1289]. Over the course of 46 trial days, the Chamber heard the evidence of 17 prosecution witnesses. As at 30 June 2010, the Chamber was considering a prosecution motion to add five alibi rebuttal witnesses in August and September 2010. Mr. Ndirabatware made his initial appearance before the Court on 10 October 2008 [YUN 2008, p. 1416].

As for the trial of Karemera et al.—against Édouard Karemera, former Minister of the Interior; Matthieu Ndirumpatse, former President of the Mouvement républicain national pour le développement et la démocratie (MRND); and Joseph Nzirorera, former MRND National Secretary—Mr. Nzirorera died on 1 July following a long illness, and the proceedings against him were terminated. The Chamber had started to hear

Mr. Nzirorera's defence in October 2009 [YUN 2009, p. 1289]. The Chamber continued hearing evidence involving Mssrs. Karemera and Ndirumpatse, including the presentation of the latter's case, which began on 23 August 2010.

Judges of the Court

Extension of terms of office and ad litem judges

In a 28 May assessment report [S/2010/259] to the Security Council, the ICTR President, Judge Dennis Bryon, indicated that the Tribunal would not be in a position to complete all its work in 2010, with judgments expected to be delivered in six trials during the course of 2011. He also reported on challenges faced by the Tribunal, including those pertaining to the Tribunal's judges.

The ICTR President, in identical letters transmitted by the Secretary-General to the Council and General Assembly Presidents on 2 June [A/64/814-S/2010/289], sought the extension of the terms of office of seven permanent judges and nine ad litem judges (whose terms were to expire on 31 December 2010) to 31 December 2012, or until the completion of the cases to which they were assigned, if sooner. He also sought to redeploy judges from the Trial Chambers to the Appeals Chamber upon the completion of the evidence phase of the trials to which they were assigned and to address the Tribunal's lack of a roster of ad litem judges.

SECURITY COUNCIL ACTION

On 29 June [meeting 6349], the Security Council unanimously adopted resolution 1932(2010). The draft [S/2010/333] was submitted by Austria.

The Security Council,

Taking note of the letter dated 2 June 2010 from the Secretary-General to the President of the Security Council, attaching a letter dated 25 May 2010 from the President of the International Criminal Tribunal for Rwanda ("the International Tribunal"),

Recalling its resolutions 955(1994) of 8 November 1994, 1165(1998) of 30 April 1998, 1329(2000) of 30 November 2000, 1411(2002) of 17 May 2002, 1431(2002) of 14 August 2002, 1717(2006) of 13 October 2006, 1824(2008) of 18 July 2008, 1855(2008) of 19 December 2008, 1878(2009) of 7 July 2009 and 1901(2009) of 16 December 2009,

Recalling in particular its resolutions 1503(2003) of 28 August 2003 and 1534(2004) of 26 March 2004, in which the Council called upon the International Tribunal to take all possible measures to complete investigations by the end of 2004, to complete all trial activities at first instance by the end of 2008 and to complete all work in 2010,

Taking note of the assessments by the International Tribunal in its completion strategy report that the International Tribunal will not be in a position to complete all its work in 2010, and of the obstacles faced by the International Tribunal, and expressing its concern in this regard,

Noting the concerns expressed by the President of the International Tribunal about the loss of experienced staff, and affirming that staff retention is essential for the timely completion of the work of the International Tribunal,

Recalling that, in resolution 1901(2009), the Council underlined its intention to extend, by 30 June 2010, the terms of office of all trial judges at the International Tribunal based on the International Tribunal's projected trial schedule and the terms of office of all appeals judges until 31 December 2012, or until the completion of the cases to which they are assigned, if sooner, and requested the President of the International Tribunal to submit to the Council an updated trial and appeals schedule, including information on the judges for whom extension of the terms of office or redeployment to the Appeals Chamber would be sought,

Recalling also that, pursuant to article 13, paragraph 3, of the statute of the International Tribunal, as amended by resolution 1878(2009), the term of office of each judge redeployed to the Appeals Chamber shall be the same as the term of office of the judges serving in the Appeals Chamber,

Noting that one permanent judge and two of the ad litem judges currently serving at the International Tribunal will leave before the end of 2010 upon the completion of their respective cases,

Taking note of the updated trial and appeals schedule submitted by the President of the International Tribunal,

Taking note also of the submission by the President of the International Tribunal of a report of the Prosecutor on the lack of cooperation of Kenya in the case of Mr. Félicien Kabuga, as well as the statement and pledge to cooperate made by Kenya at a meeting of the Council on 18 June 2010,

Acting under Chapter VII of the Charter of the United Nations,

1. Reaffirms the necessity of trial of persons indicted by the International Tribunal, and reiterates its call upon all States, especially the States of the Great Lakes region, to intensify cooperation with and render all necessary assistance to the International Tribunal, and, in particular, calls upon relevant States to increase their efforts to bring Mr. Félicien Kabuga, Mr. Augustin Bizimana, Mr. Protais Mpiranya and other indictees of the International Tribunal to justice;

2. Notes the importance of the International Tribunal being adequately staffed to complete its work expeditiously, calls upon the Secretariat and other relevant United Nations bodies to continue to work with the Registrar of the International Tribunal in order to find practicable solutions to address this issue as the International Tribunal approaches the completion of its work, and at the same time calls upon the International Tribunal to renew its efforts to focus on its core functions;

3. Decides to extend the term of office of the following permanent judges at the International Tribunal, who are members of the Appeals Chamber, until 31 December 2012 or until the completion of the cases to which they are assigned, if sooner:

- Mr. Mehmet Güney (Turkey)
- Ms. Andrésia Vaz (Senegal)

4. Decides also to extend the term of office of the following permanent judges at the International Tribunal, who are members of the Trial Chamber, until 31 December 2011 or until the completion of the cases to which they are assigned, if sooner:

- Sir Charles Michael Dennis Byron (Saint Kitts and Nevis)
- Ms. Khalida Rachid Khan (Pakistan)
- Ms. Arlette Ramaroson (Madagascar)
- Mr. William H. Sekule (United Republic of Tanzania)
- Mr. Bakhtiyar Tuzmukhamedov (Russian Federation)

5. Decides further to extend the term of office of the following ad litem judges at the International Tribunal, who are members of the Trial Chamber, until 31 December 2011 or until the completion of the cases to which they are assigned, if sooner:

- Mr. Aydin Sefa Akay (Turkey)
- Ms. Florence Rita Arrey (Cameroon)
- Ms. Solomy Balungi Bossa (Uganda)
- Mr. Vagn Joensen (Denmark)
- Mr. Gberdao Gustave Kam (Burkina Faso)
- Mr. Lee Gacuiga Muthoga (Kenya)
- Mr. Seon Ki Park (Republic of Korea)
- Mr. Mparany Mamy Richard Rajohnson (Madagascar)
- Mr. Emile Francis Short (Ghana)

6. Decides to amend article 12 ter of the statute of the International Tribunal as set out in the annex to the present resolution;

7. Urges the International Tribunal to complete its work expeditiously;

8. Decides to remain seized of the matter.

ANNEX

Article 12 ter: Election and appointment of ad litem judges

3. If there are no ad litem judges remaining on the roster or if no ad litem judge on the roster is available for appointment, and if it is not possible to assign a judge currently serving at the International Tribunal, and all practical alternatives having been explored, the Secretary-General may, at the request of the President of the International Tribunal, appoint a former permanent or ad litem judge of the International Tribunal or of the International Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia to serve as an ad litem judge in the Trial Chambers for one or more trials.

On 29 June [A/64/862], the Council President transmitted the Council's resolution to the General Assembly. On 16 July, the Assembly endorsed the actions taken by the Council in operative paragraphs 1 through 6 of that resolution (decision 64/415 B).

Communications. In identical letters of 13 October [A/65/529-S/2010/513] and 23 November [A/65/587-S/2010/598] to the Security Council and General Assembly Presidents, the Secretary-General transmitted letters from the ICTY President requesting: the extension of the terms of office of permanent Judge Joseph Asoka de Silva (Sri Lanka) and ad litem Judge Taghrid Hikmet (Jordan) beyond the 31 December 2010 expiry date to complete the Ndindiliyimana et al. case; that the Tribunal be allowed to exceed temporarily the maximum number of nine ad litem judges; and the extension of the terms of office of ad litem Judge Joseph Masanche (Tanzania) beyond the 31 December 2010 expiry date to complete the Hategekimana case.

In a 5 November assessment report [S/2010/574] to the Council, the ICTR President said that judgements were expected to be delivered in nine cases in 2011.

SECURITY COUNCIL ACTION

On 14 December [meeting 6447], the Security Council unanimously adopted resolution 1955(2010). The draft [S/2010/628] was submitted by Austria.

The Security Council,

Taking note of the letters dated 13 October and 23 November 2010 from the Secretary-General to the President of the Security Council attaching letters dated 20 and 23 September and 12 November 2010, respectively, from the President of the International Criminal Tribunal for Rwanda (“the International Tribunal”),

Recalling its resolutions 955(1994) of 8 November 1994, 1165(1998) of 30 April 1998, 1329(2000) of 30 November 2000, 1411(2002) of 17 May 2002, 1431(2002) of 14 August 2002, 1717(2006) of 13 October 2006, 1824(2008) of 18 July 2008, 1855(2008) of 19 December 2008, 1878(2009) of 7 July 2009, 1901(2009) of 16 December 2009 and 1932(2010) of 29 June 2010,

Recalling in particular its resolutions 1503(2003) of 28 August 2003 and 1534(2004) of 26 March 2004, in which the Council called upon the International Tribunal to take all possible measures to complete investigations by the end of 2004, to complete all trial activities at first instance by the end of 2008 and to complete all work in 2010,

Taking note of the assessment by the International Tribunal in its completion strategy report that the International Tribunal will not be in a position to complete all its work in 2010,

Noting that four permanent judges will be redeployed to the Appeals Chamber and that one permanent judge will leave the International Tribunal upon the completion of the cases to which they are assigned,

Convinced of the advisability of extending the authorization granted to the Secretary-General in resolution 1901(2009) to appoint ad litem judges additional to the nine ad litem judges authorized by the statute of the International Tribunal, as a temporary measure to enable the International Tribunal to complete trials and conduct additional trials as soon as possible in order to meet the goals of the completion strategy,

Urging the International Tribunal to take all possible measures to complete its work expeditiously,

Noting the concerns expressed by the President of the International Tribunal about the loss of experienced staff, and reaffirming that staff retention is essential for the timely completion of the work of the International Tribunal,

Acting under Chapter VII of the Charter of the United Nations,

1. Decides that, notwithstanding the expiry of their term of office on 31 December 2010, Judge Joseph Asoka de Silva and Judge Taghreed Hikmat are authorized to complete the Ndindiliyimana et al. case, which they began before the expiry of their term of office, and takes note of the intention of the International Tribunal to complete the case in March 2011;

2. Decides also that, notwithstanding the expiry of his term of office on 31 December 2010, Judge Joseph Masanche is authorized to complete the Hategekimana case, which he began before the expiry of his term of office, and takes note of the intention of the International Tribunal to complete the case in January 2011;

3. Decides further that, in order for the International Tribunal to complete existing trials or conduct additional trials, the total number of ad litem judges serving at the International Tribunal may from time to time temporarily exceed the maximum of nine provided for in article 11, paragraph 1, of the statute of the International Tribunal, to a maximum of twelve at any one time, returning to a maximum of nine by 31 December 2011;

4. Reiterates the importance of the International Tribunal being adequately staffed to complete its work expeditiously, and calls upon the Secretariat and other relevant United Nations bodies to continue to work with the Registrar of the International Tribunal in order to find practicable solutions to address this issue as the International Tribunal approaches the completion of its work, and at the same time calls upon the International Tribunal to renew its efforts to focus on its core functions;

5. Decides to remain seized of the matter.

On 20 December [A/65/661], the Council President transmitted the Council’s resolution to the General Assembly.

On 24 December, the Assembly decided that the agenda item entitled “International Criminal Tribunal for the Prosecution of Persons Responsible for Genocide and Other Serious Violations of International Humanitarian Law Committed in the Territory of Rwanda and Rwandan Citizens Responsible for Genocide and Other Such Violations Committed in the Territory of Neighbouring States between 1 January and 31 December 1994” would remain for consideration during its resumed sixty-fifth (2011) session (decision 65/544).

Office of the Prosecutor

The Office of the Prosecutor continued efforts to ensure the arrest of the remaining 10 fugitives, especially the three earmarked for trial in Arusha—Augustin Bizimana, Félicien Kabuga and Protais Mpiranya. The other seven would be referred to national jurisdictions. The Prosecutor visited and held high-level discussions with officials of several Member States on cooperation with his Office, but cooperation with Kenya remained a challenge. In May, in view of Kenya’s continued non-compliance with Tribunal requests, the ICTR President notified the Security Council of that country’s failure to cooperate with the Tribunal in relation to Mr. Kabuga.

The Prosecutor continued to engage with Rwanda in its efforts to address impediments to ICTR referral of cases to Rwanda. In the meantime, the Prosecutor handed over to Rwanda the case files of 25 other suspects who had been investigated but not indicted by the Tribunal. Much effort had also been invested in the three applications filed in November seeking the referral to Rwanda of the cases of the arrestee Mr. Uwinkindi (see p. 1298) and the fugitives Charles Sikubwabo and Fulgence Kayishema. In other developments, the work of the joint ICTR-Kenya Police Task Force was reactivated in November. The Office reported that several Member States had enhanced their efforts at investigating and indicting, for trial within national jurisdictions, Rwandan suspects who appeared on the INTERPOL wanted list. For the effective prosecution of those suspects, national prosecuting authorities continued to seek mutual legal assistance and information from the Tribunal. As a result, requests to the Prosecutor for information from the Office's extensive database had increased substantially.

The Registry

The Registry continued to support the judicial process by servicing the Tribunal's other organs and the defence, as well as by seeking support from States, international organizations and other stakeholders in the conduct of proceedings. It maintained high-level diplomatic contacts with Member States, international organizations and non-governmental organizations. The External Relations and Strategic Planning Section raised voluntary contributions to the ICTR Trust Fund, enabling the Tribunal to carry on its capacity-building and outreach activities. Ten additional provincial information centres opened in Rwanda facilitated the Tribunal's awareness-raising workshops, highlighted ICTR achievements and challenges, improved communication and facilitated access to the Tribunal's jurisprudence and other legal material. One of the flagship outreach projects, related to youth sensitization and genocide prevention education in the Great Lakes Region, was launched by the Tribunal in five East African capitals and ICTR headquarters in Arusha. The Court Management Section continued its work on the redaction and digitization of the collection of audio-visual recordings of ICTR proceedings in preparation for the Tribunal's transition to the residual mechanism. The Defence Counsel and Detention Management Section provided high-quality administrative support to the various defence teams and detainees in Arusha.

Between July 2009 and June 2010, the Witness and Victims Support Section ensured the timely availability of 200 witnesses, who were brought from 21 countries in support of the trials of 10 accused persons.

Financing

Board of Auditors report. On 30 June [A/65/5/Add.11], the Chairman transmitted the Board of Auditors report on ICTR financial statements for the 2008–2009 biennium to the General Assembly President.

2010–2011 biennium

Reports of Secretary-General. In a July report [A/65/178], the Secretary-General submitted additional requirements of $34,223,000 gross ($31,056,000 net) over the initial appropriation for ICTR for the 2010–2011, as approved by the General Assembly in resolution 64/239 [YUN 2009, p. 1294]. The increased resources were due to the revision of the trial schedule for the biennium as a result of the apprehension of some high-level accused, as well changes in the completion dates of a number of first-instance trials.

The first performance report of ICTR for the 2010–2011 biennium [A/65/578], submitted in November in response to resolution 64/239, reflected a reduction in requirements of $19.9 million, net of staff assessment, from the initial appropriation for that biennium due to changes with respect to exchange rates, inflation and standard salary costs. The Assembly was requested to approve a revised appropriation in the amount of $226,535,600 gross ($207,354,100 net), which reflected a decrease of $18,760,200 gross ($19,892,400 net).

ACABQ report. In December [A/65/616 & Corr.1], ACABQ recommended that the Assembly approve a reduction of $18,760,200 gross ($19,892,400 net) and an additional appropriation of $29,180,500 gross to the ICTR Special Account for the 2010–2011 biennium.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 24 December [meeting 73], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee [A/65/651], adopted resolution 65/252 without vote [agenda item 141].

Financing of the International Criminal Tribunal for the Prosecution of Persons Responsible for Genocide and Other Serious Violations of International Humanitarian Law Committed in the Territory of Rwanda and Rwandan Citizens Responsible for Genocide and Other Such Violations Committed in the Territory of Neighbouring States between 1 January and 31 December 1994

The General Assembly,

Having considered the report of the Secretary-General on the revised estimates under the budget, for the biennium 2010–2011, of the International Criminal Tribunal for the Prosecution of Persons Responsible for Genocide and Other Serious Violations of International Humanitarian Law Committed in the Territory of Rwanda and Rwandan Citizens Responsible for Genocide and Other Such Violations Committed in the Territory of Neighbouring States between 1 January and 31 December 1994 and his first performance report on the International Criminal Tribunal for Rwanda for the biennium 2010–2011,

Having also considered the report of the Board of Auditors on the Tribunal and the recommendations contained therein,

Having further considered the related report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions,

Recalling its resolution 49/251 of 20 July 1995 on the financing of the Tribunal and its subsequent resolutions thereon, the latest of which was resolution 64/239 of 24 December 2009,

1. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General on the revised estimates under the budget, for the biennium 2010–2011, of the International Criminal Tribunal for the Prosecution of Persons Responsible for Genocide and Other Serious Violations of International Humanitarian Law Committed in the Territory of Rwanda and Rwandan Citizens Responsible for Genocide and Other Such Violations Committed in the Territory of Neighbouring States between 1 January and 31 December 1994 and his first performance report on the International Criminal Tribunal for Rwanda for the biennium 2010–2011;

2. Endorses the conclusions and recommendations contained in the report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions, subject to the provisions of the present resolution;

3. Decides on a revised appropriation to the Special Account for the International Criminal Tribunal for the Prosecution of Persons Responsible for Genocide and Other Serious Violations of International Humanitarian Law Committed in the Territory of Rwanda and Rwandan Citizens Responsible for Genocide and Other Such Violations Committed in the Territory of Neighbouring States between 1 January and 31 December 1994, of a total amount of 257,804,100 United States dollars gross (235,327,400 dollars net) for the biennium 2010–2011, as detailed in the annex to the present resolution;

4. Also decides, for the year 2011, to apportion among Member States, in accordance with the scale of assessments applicable to the regular budget of the United Nations for the year, the amount of 67,578,100 dollars gross (60,852,075 dollars net), including 6,254,150 dollars gross (4,040,450 dollars net), being the increase in assessments;

5. Further decides, for the year 2011, to apportion among Member States, in accordance with the rates of assessment applicable to peacekeeping operations for the year, the amount of 67,578,100 dollars gross (60,852,075 dollars net), including 6,254,150 dollars gross (4,040,450 dollars net), being the increase in assessments;

6. Decides that, in accordance with the provisions of its resolution 973(X) of 15 December 1955, there shall be set off against the apportionment among Member States, as provided for in paragraphs 4 and 5 above, their respective share in the Tax Equalization Fund in the amount of 13,452,050 dollars, including 4,427,400 dollars, being the increase of the estimated staff assessment income approved for the Tribunal for the biennium 2010–2011;

7. Recognizes the critical importance of retaining highly skilled and experienced staff members with relevant institutional memory in order to successfully complete the trials and meet the targets set out in the completion strategy of the Tribunal;

8. Reaffirms paragraph 5 of its resolution 63/256 of 24 December 2008 and paragraph 6 of section II of its resolution 64/239 of 24 December 2009, and requests the Secretary-General to utilize his existing authority under the existing contractual framework to offer contracts to staff, taking into account the needs of the Tribunal;

9. Also reaffirms paragraph 7 of section II of its resolution 64/239, and reiterates its request to the Secretary-General to explore the possibility of employing at the United Nations, should their services be required, staff who remain with the Tribunal until the completion of its mandate or their services are no longer needed;

10. Welcomes the efforts of the Secretary-General to facilitate the selection of staff of the Tribunal who are subject to downsizing;

11. Reiterates the importance of carrying out an effective outreach programme within the overall mandate of the Tribunal and its completion strategy, and requests the Tribunal, in accordance with its mandate and in consultation with the Department of Public Information of the Secretariat, to continue to develop and implement outreach activities that are proactive, utilizing available resources optimally, and that contribute to the reconciliation process by effectively developing an increased understanding of its work;

12. Encourages the Secretary-General to continue to explore measures to raise adequate voluntary resources to fund the outreach programme.

On 24 December, the Assembly decided that the agenda item on ICTR financing would remain for consideration during its resumed sixty-fifth (2011) session (decision 65/544).

Functioning of the Tribunals

Implementation of completion strategies

ICTY

In response to Security Council resolution 1534(2004) [YUN 2004, p. 1292], the ICTY President reported in May [S/2010/270] and November [S/2010/588] on progress made in implementing the ICTY completion strategy. The Working Group on Speeding up Trials, which was reconstituted by the ICTY President in 2008 [YUN 2008, p. 1423], conducted a third review of the Tribunal's practices to assess whether further improvements could be implemented into the Chambers' work. In May, the Working Group submitted its report and recommended a number of reforms to the Tribunal's procedures. It also expressed the "greatest concern" over the effect that staff turnover had on the speed of trials and recommended that management do all that it could to retain the Tribunal's experienced staff.

The ICTY President underscored that the estimation of the length of trial proceedings was more an art than a science, and that assessments made prior to the trial's commencement were by their nature an approximation. Although the Tribunal had continued to take all measures possible to expedite its trials without sacrificing due process, the estimates for the completion of some trials from the last reporting period had to be amended. As at 15 November, out of the 161 accused indicted by the Tribunal, one case was returned to the pretrial stage, 18 persons were being tried and another 13 had appeals pending. Two accused, Ratko Mladić and Goran Hadžić were still at large. Judgement was anticipated to be delivered in one case by the end of the year, with another three trials concluding in 2011, five in 2012, and the remaining case, that of Radovan Karadžić, concluding by the end of 2013. Appeals from three trial judgements were pending before the Appeals Chamber and all appeals were still scheduled to be completed by the end of 2014.

The issue of highly qualified and essential staff leaving the Tribunal at alarming rates for more secure employment remained a concern. Moreover, the Tribunal was in a downsizing phase at a time when it was at its highest level of productivity, with no coordinate increase in its staffing levels since the 2006–2007 biennium. Staff attrition had contributed significantly to slippage in practically all cases at the Tribunal and the high rate of attrition had resulted in either inexperienced or insufficient staff. The ICTY President advised that if the problem were not addressed, the situation would worsen and slippage would continue to thwart the implementation of the completion strategy.

ICTR

In response to Security Council resolution 1534(2004), the ICTR President submitted reports in May [S/2010/259] and November [S/2010/574] on progress made in implementing the ICTR completion strategy. That strategy called for completing investigations by the end of 2004, all trial activities at first instance by the end of 2008, and all of its work in 2010.

Between May and November, three judgements in single-accused cases were delivered; judgements remained to be delivered in nine ongoing cases and in one trial, which would commence in early 2011. One of those 10 judgements was expected for December and the rest during the course of 2011. The major challenge in the coming months was the completion of the multi-accused cases that were in the judgement drafting phase. All three cases had lost or were in the process of losing their judgement coordinators and were facing high turnover in the drafting teams. Despite those difficulties, the measures taken by the Tribunal to improve pretrial and trial management practices had yielded significant results over the previous years in the single-accused cases and reduced delays without compromising the rights of the accused; they would continue to assist the Tribunal to complete its mandate in the near future. Meanwhile, four trials were ongoing and appellate proceedings had been concluded in respect of 33 persons.

The judicial calendar remained an essential element in the Tribunal's efforts to comply with its completion strategy. Over the previous four years, the time taken between the transfer of the accused and trial judgement had been reduced markedly. Several Chambers had established management teams at the beginning of a trial and held frequent meetings in order to work together to coordinate and facilitate the smooth running of cases and to anticipate and prevent problems. ICTR had also implemented measures to shorten the length of time between the arrest of an accused person and the commencement of his or her trial.

The Office of the Prosecutor continued with the ongoing trials of five accused in four cases, as well as the preparation for trial in the cases of Messrs. Nizeyimana and Uwinkindi and of the depositions for the preservation of evidence in respect of three fugitive indictees. The caseload of the Appeals and Legal Advisory Division included nine cases involving 16 separate appeals. The Investigation Unit continued to support trial and appeal activities, while its tracking section concentrated on the fugitive indictees. One fugitive was arrested and the Prosecutor had submitted a request for referral of his case to Rwanda. Efforts at tracking the remaining fugitives in the Democratic Republic of the Congo, the southern African region and neighbouring countries continued. The lack of co-operation by Kenya in respect of the fugitive indictee

Félicien Kabuga remained a concern. Despite Kenya's statement and pledge to cooperate at an 18 June [S/PV.6342] Security Council meeting, the Prosecutor's 8 July request for a meeting with Kenyan Government authorities and a 30 September reminder remained unaddressed. In addition, Kenya had not provided relevant and credible information on Mr. Kabuga's alleged departure from Kenya and his approximate destination.

Establishment of ad hoc mechanism

During 2010, the Security Council Informal Working Group on the International Tribunals, established on an informal basis in 2000 to consider matters relating to the United Nations and UN-assisted tribunals—particularly the ICTY and the ICTR—achieved important progress in its consideration of the draft Council resolution on the establishment of an international residual mechanism for criminal tribunals. Between February and July, the Working Group considered three revised drafts, including an annex containing the draft statute prepared by the Office of Legal Affairs (OLA). In July, the Working Group also discussed the OLA internal reports on the declassification of documents and review of witness protection orders by the Tribunals, and on possible locations for the residual mechanism. The final reading of the draft texts was completed on 3 December and the Chair presented a final compromise package at the Working Group's 17 December meeting.

On 22 December, the Council adopted resolution 1966(2010) (see below), establishing the International Residual Mechanism for Criminal Tribunals with two branches: one for ICTR and one for ICTY, which would commence functioning on 1 July 2012 and 1 July 2013, respectively. The Tribunal's archives would be co-located with the respective branches of the Residual Mechanism.

SECURITY COUNCIL ACTION

On 22 December [meeting 6463], the Security Council adopted resolution 1966(2010) by vote (14-0-1). The draft [S/2010/651] was submitted by Austria.

The Security Council,

Recalling its resolution 827(1993) of 25 May 1993, by which it established the International Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia, and its resolution 955(1994) of 8 November 1994, by which it established the International Criminal Tribunal for Rwanda, and all subsequent relevant resolutions,

Recalling in particular its resolutions 1503(2003) of 28 August 2003 and 1534(2004) of 26 March 2004, in which it called upon the Tribunals to take all possible measures to complete investigations by the end of 2004, to complete all trial activities at first instance by the end of 2008 and to complete all work in 2010 ("completion strategy"), and noting that those envisaged dates have not been met,

Acknowledging the considerable contribution that the Tribunals have made to international criminal justice and accountability for serious international crimes and the re-establishment of the rule of law in the countries of the former Yugoslavia and in Rwanda,

Recalling that the Tribunals were established in the particular circumstances of the former Yugoslavia and Rwanda as ad hoc measures contributing to the restoration and maintenance of peace,

Reaffirming its determination to combat impunity for those responsible for serious violations of international humanitarian law and the necessity that all persons indicted by the International Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia and the International Criminal Tribunal for Rwanda are brought to justice,

Recalling the statement by the President of the Security Council of 19 December 2008, and reaffirming the need to establish an ad hoc mechanism to carry out a number of essential functions of the Tribunals, including the trial of fugitives who are among the most senior leaders suspected of being most responsible for crimes, after the closure of the Tribunals,

Emphasizing that, in view of the substantially reduced nature of the residual functions, the international residual mechanism should be a small, temporary and efficient structure, whose functions and size will diminish over time, with a small number of staff commensurate with its reduced functions,

Welcoming the report of the Secretary-General on the administrative and budgetary aspects of the options for possible locations for the archives of the International Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia and the International Criminal Tribunal for Rwanda and the seat of the residual mechanism(s) for the Tribunals,

Acting under Chapter VII of the Charter of the United Nations,

1. Decides to establish the International Residual Mechanism for Criminal Tribunals ("the Mechanism") with two branches, which shall commence functioning on 1 July 2012 (branch for the International Criminal Tribunal for Rwanda) and on 1 July 2013 (branch for the International Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia), respectively ("commencement dates"), and to this end decides to adopt the statute of the Mechanism set out in annex 1 to the present resolution;

2. Decides also that the provisions of the present resolution and the statutes of the Mechanism and of the International Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia and the International Criminal Tribunal for Rwanda shall be subject to the transitional arrangements set out in annex 2 to the present resolution;

3. Requests the International Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia and the International Criminal Tribunal for Rwanda to take all possible measures to expeditiously complete all their remaining work as provided in the present resolution no later than 31 December 2014, to prepare their closure and to ensure a smooth transition to the Mechanism, including through advance teams in each of the Tribunals;

4. Decides that, as of the commencement date of each branch referred to in paragraph 1 above, the Mechanism shall continue the jurisdiction, rights and obligations and essential functions of the International Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia and the International Criminal Tribunal for Rwanda, respectively, subject to the provisions of the present resolution and the statute of the Mechanism, and all contracts and international agreements concluded by the United Nations in relation to the International Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia and the International Criminal Tribunal for Rwanda and still in force as of the relevant commencement date shall continue in force, mutatis mutandis, in relation to the Mechanism;

5. Requests the Secretary-General to submit at the earliest possible date, but no later than 30 June 2011, draft Rules of Procedure and Evidence of the Mechanism, which shall be based on the Rules of Procedure and Evidence of the Tribunals subject to the provisions of the present resolution and the statute of the Mechanism, for consideration and adoption by the judges of the Mechanism;

6. Decides that the Rules of Procedure and Evidence of the Mechanism and any amendments thereto shall take effect upon adoption by the judges of the Mechanism unless the Security Council decides otherwise;

7. Decides also that the determination of the seats of the branches of the Mechanism is subject to the conclusion of appropriate arrangements between the United Nations and the host countries of the branches of the Mechanism acceptable to the Council;

8. Recalls the obligation of States to cooperate with the Tribunals and, in particular, to comply without undue delay with requests for assistance in the location, arrest, detention, surrender and transfer of accused persons;

9. Decides that all States shall cooperate fully with the Mechanism in accordance with the present resolution and the statute of the Mechanism and that, consequently, all States shall take any measures necessary under their domestic law to implement the provisions of the present resolution and the statute of the Mechanism, including the obligation of States to comply with requests for assistance or orders issued by the Mechanism pursuant to its statute;

10. Urges all States, especially States where fugitives are suspected to be at large, to further intensify cooperation with and render all necessary assistance to the Tribunals and the Mechanism, as appropriate, in particular to achieve the arrest and surrender of all remaining fugitives as soon as possible;

11. Urges the Tribunals and the Mechanism to actively undertake every effort to refer those cases which do not involve the most senior leaders suspected of being most responsible for crimes to competent national jurisdictions in accordance with their respective statutes and Rules of Procedure and Evidence;

12. Calls upon all States to cooperate to the maximum extent possible in order to receive referred cases from the Tribunals and the Mechanism;

13. Requests the Secretary-General to implement the present resolution and to make practical arrangements for the effective functioning of the Mechanism from the first commencement date referred to in paragraph 1 above, in particular to initiate no later than 30 June 2011 the procedures for the selection of the roster of judges of the Mechanism, as provided in its statute;

14. Also requests the Secretary-General to prepare, in consultation with the Council, an information security and access regime for the archives of the Tribunals and the Mechanism prior to the first commencement date referred to in paragraph 1 above;

15. Requests the Tribunals and the Mechanism to cooperate with the countries of the former Yugoslavia and with Rwanda, as well as with interested entities, to facilitate the establishment of information and documentation centres by providing access to copies of public records of the archives of the Tribunals and the Mechanism, including through their websites;

16. Requests the President of the Mechanism to submit an annual report to the Council and to the General Assembly, and the President and the Prosecutor of the Mechanism to submit six-monthly reports to the Council on the progress of the work of the Mechanism;

17. Decides that the Mechanism shall operate for an initial period of four years from the first commencement date referred to in paragraph 1 above, also decides to review the progress of the work of the Mechanism, including in completing its functions, before the end of this initial period and every two years thereafter, and further decides that the Mechanism shall continue to operate for subsequent periods of two years following each such review, unless the Council decides otherwise;

18. Underlines its intention to decide on the modalities for the exercise of any remaining residual functions of the Mechanism upon the completion of its operation;

19. Decides to remain seized of the matter.

VOTE ON RESOLUTION 1966(2010):

In favour: Austria, Bosnia and Herzegovina, Brazil, China, France, Gabon, Japan, Lebanon, Mexico, Nigeria, Turkey, Uganda, United Kingdom, United States.

Against: None.

Abstaining: Russian Federation.

ANNEX 1

Statute of the International Residual Mechanism for Criminal Tribunals

Preamble

Having been established by the Security Council acting under Chapter VII of the Charter of the United Nations to carry out residual functions of the International Tribunal for the Prosecution of Persons Responsible for Serious Violations of International Humanitarian Law Committed in the Territory of the Former Yugoslavia since 1991 (hereinafter "ICTY") and the International Criminal Tribunal for the Prosecution of Persons Responsible for Genocide and Other Serious Violations of International Humanitarian Law Committed in the Territory of Rwanda and Rwandan Citizens Responsible for Genocide and Other Such Violations Committed in the Territory of Neighbouring States between 1 January 1994 and 31 December 1994 (hereinafter "ICTR"), the International Residual Mechanism for Criminal Tribunals (hereinafter "the Mechanism") shall function in accordance with the provisions of the present Statute.

Article 1

Competence of the Mechanism

1. The Mechanism shall continue the material, territorial, temporal and personal jurisdiction of the ICTY and the ICTR as set out in articles 1 to 8 of the ICTY Statute and articles 1 to 7 of the ICTR Statute, as well as the rights and obligations of the ICTY and the ICTR, subject to the provisions of the present Statute.

2. The Mechanism shall have the power to prosecute, in accordance with the provisions of the present Statute, the persons indicted by the ICTY or the ICTR who are among the most senior leaders suspected of being most responsible for the crimes covered by paragraph 1 of this article, considering the gravity of the crimes charged and the level of responsibility of the accused.

3. The Mechanism shall have the power to prosecute, in accordance with the provisions of the present Statute, the persons indicted by the ICTY or the ICTR who are not among the most senior leaders covered by paragraph 2 of this article, provided that the Mechanism may only, in accordance with the provisions of the present Statute, proceed to try such persons itself after it has exhausted all reasonable efforts to refer the case as provided in article 6 of the present Statute.

4. The Mechanism shall have the power to prosecute, in accordance with the provisions of the present Statute:

(a) Any person who knowingly and wilfully interferes or has interfered with the administration of justice by the Mechanism or the Tribunals, and to hold such person in contempt;

or

(b) A witness who knowingly and wilfully gives or has given false testimony before the Mechanism or the Tribunals.

Before proceeding to try such persons, the Mechanism shall consider referring the case to the authorities of a State in accordance with article 6 of the present Statute, taking into account the interests of justice and expediency.

5. The Mechanism shall not have the power to issue any new indictments against persons other than those covered by this article.

Article 2

Functions of the Mechanism

The Mechanism shall continue the functions of the ICTY and of the ICTR, as set out in the present Statute ("residual functions"), during the period of its operation.

Article 3

Structure and seats of the Mechanism

The Mechanism shall have two branches, one branch for the ICTY and one branch for the ICTR, respectively. The branch for the ICTY shall have its seat in The Hague. The branch for the ICTR shall have its seat in Arusha.

Article 4

Organization of the Mechanism

The Mechanism shall consist of the following organs:

(a) The Chambers, comprising a Trial Chamber for each branch of the Mechanism and an Appeals Chamber common to both branches of the Mechanism;

(b) The Prosecutor, common to both branches of the Mechanism;

(c) The Registry, common to both branches of the Mechanism, to provide administrative services for the Mechanism, including the Chambers and the Prosecutor.

Article 5

Concurrent jurisdiction

1. The Mechanism and national courts shall have concurrent jurisdiction to prosecute persons covered by article 1 of this Statute.

2. The Mechanism shall have primacy over national courts in accordance with the present Statute. At any stage of the procedure involving a person covered by article 1, paragraph 2, of this Statute, the Mechanism may formally request national courts to defer to its competence in accordance with the present Statute and the Rules of Procedure and Evidence of the Mechanism.

Referral of cases to national jurisdictions

1. The Mechanism shall have the power, and shall undertake every effort, to refer cases involving persons covered by paragraph 3 of article 1 of this Statute to the authorities of a State in accordance with paragraphs 2 and 3 of this article. The Mechanism shall have the power also to refer cases involving persons covered by paragraph 4 of article 1 of this Statute.

2. After an indictment has been confirmed and prior to the commencement of trial, irrespective of whether or not the accused is in the custody of the Mechanism, the President may designate a Trial Chamber which shall determine whether the case should be referred to the authorities of a State:

- (i) In whose territory the crime was committed; or
- (ii) In which the accused was arrested; or
- (iii) Having jurisdiction and being willing and adequately prepared to accept such a case, so that those authorities should forthwith refer the case to the appropriate court for trial within that State.

3. In determining whether to refer a case involving a person covered by paragraph 3 of article 1 of this Statute in accordance with paragraph 2 above, the Trial Chamber shall, consistent with Security Council resolution 1534(2004), consider the gravity of the crimes charged and the level of responsibility of the accused.

4. The Trial Chamber may order such referral proprio motu or at the request of the Prosecutor, after having given to the Prosecutor and, where applicable, the accused, the opportunity to be heard and after being satisfied that the accused will receive a fair trial and that the death penalty will not be imposed or carried out.

5. The Mechanism shall monitor cases referred to national courts by the ICTY, the ICTR and those referred in accordance with this article, with the assistance of international and regional organizations and bodies.

6. After an order referring a case has been issued by the ICTY, the ICTR or the Mechanism and before the accused is found guilty or acquitted by a national court, where it is clear that the conditions for referral of the case are no longer met and it is in the interests of justice, the Trial Chamber may, at the request of the Prosecutor or proprio motu and upon having given to the State authorities concerned the opportunity to be heard, revoke the order and make a formal request for deferral.

Article 7 Non bis in idem

1. No person shall be tried before a national court for acts constituting serious violations of international humanitarian law under the present Statute, for which he or she has already been tried by the ICTY, the ICTR or the Mechanism.

2. A person covered by article 1 of this Statute who has been tried before a national court for acts constituting serious violations of international humanitarian law may be subsequently tried by the Mechanism only if:

(a) The act for which he or she was tried was characterized as an ordinary crime; or

(b) The national court proceedings were not impartial or independent, were designed to shield the accused from international criminal responsibility, or the case was not diligently prosecuted.

3. In considering the penalty to be imposed on a person convicted of a crime under the present Statute, the Mechanism shall take into account the extent to which any penalty imposed by a national court on the same person for the same act has already been served.

Article 8 Roster of judges

1. The Mechanism shall have a roster of 25 independent judges ("judges of the Mechanism"), not more than two of whom may be nationals of the same State.

2. A person who for the purposes of membership of the roster could be regarded as a national of more than one State shall be deemed to be a national of the State in which that person ordinarily exercises civil and political rights.

3. The judges of the Mechanism shall only be present at the seats of the branches of the Mechanism as necessary at the request of the President to exercise the functions requiring their presence. In so far as possible, and as decided by the President, the functions may be exercised remotely, away from the seats of the branches of the Mechanism.

4. The judges of the Mechanism shall not receive any remuneration or other benefits for being on the roster. The terms and conditions of service of the judges for each day on which they exercise their functions for the Mechanism shall be those of the judges ad hoc of the International Court of Justice. The terms and conditions of service of the President of the Mechanism shall be those of the judges of the International Court of Justice.

Article 9 Qualification of judges

1. The judges shall be persons of high moral character, impartiality and integrity who possess the qualifications required in their respective countries for appointment to the highest judicial offices. Particular account shall be taken of experience as judges of the ICTY or the ICTR.

2. In the composition of the Trial and Appeals Chambers, due account shall be taken of the experience of the judges in criminal law, and international law, including international humanitarian law and human rights law.

Article 10 Election of judges

1. The judges of the Mechanism shall be elected by the General Assembly from a list submitted by the Security Council, in the following manner:

(a) The Secretary-General shall invite nominations for judges, preferably from among persons with experience as judges of the ICTY or the ICTR, from States Members of the United Nations and non-Member States maintaining permanent observer missions at United Nations Headquarters;

(b) Within sixty days of the date of the invitation of the Secretary-General, each State may nominate up to two candidates meeting the qualifications set out in article 9, paragraph 1, of the Statute;

(c) The Secretary-General shall forward the nominations received to the Security Council. From the nominations received the Security Council shall establish a list of not less than 30 candidates, taking due account of the qualifications set out in article 9, paragraph 1, and adequate representation of the principal legal systems of the world;

(d) The President of the Security Council shall transmit the list of candidates to the President of the General Assembly. From that list the General Assembly shall elect 25 judges of the Mechanism. The candidates who receive an absolute majority of the votes of the States Members of the United Nations and of the non-Member States maintaining permanent observer missions at United Nations Headquarters shall be declared elected. Should more than two candidates of the same nationality obtain the required majority vote, the two who received the highest number of votes shall be considered elected.

2. In the event of a vacancy in the roster, after consultation with the Presidents of the Security Council and of the General Assembly, the Secretary-General shall appoint a person meeting the qualifications of article 9, paragraph 1, of the Statute, for the remainder of the term of office concerned.

3. The judges of the Mechanism shall be elected for a term of four years and shall be eligible for reappointment by the Secretary-General after consultation with the Presidents of the Security Council and of the General Assembly.

4. If there are no judges remaining on the roster or if no judge on the roster is available for appointment, and if it is not possible to assign a judge currently serving at the Mechanism, and all practical alternatives having been explored, the Secretary-General may, at the request of the President of the Mechanism and after consultation with the Presidents of the Security Council and of the General Assembly, appoint a person meeting the qualifications of article 9, paragraph 1, of the Statute to serve as a judge of the Mechanism.

Article 11 The President

1. After consultation with the President of the Security Council and the judges of the Mechanism, the Secretary-General shall appoint a full-time President from among the judges of the Mechanism.

2. The President shall be present at either seat of the branches of the Mechanism as necessary to exercise his or her functions.

Article 12

Assignment of judges and composition of the Chambers

1. In the event of a trial of a case pursuant to paragraphs 2 and 3 of article 1 of this Statute, or to consider the referral of such a case to a national jurisdiction, the President shall appoint three judges from the roster to compose a Trial Chamber and the Presiding Judge from amongst their number to oversee the work of that Trial Chamber. In all other circumstances, including trials pursuant to paragraph 4 of article 1 of this Statute, the President shall appoint a Single Judge from the roster to deal with the matter.

2. The President may designate a duty judge from the roster for each branch of the Mechanism, who will be available at short notice, to serve as a Single Judge and to whom indictments, warrants and other matters not assigned to a Trial Chamber may be transmitted for decision.

3. The President of the Mechanism shall be a member of the Appeals Chamber, appoint the other members and preside over its proceedings. In the event of an appeal against a decision by a Single Judge, the Appeals Chamber shall be composed of three judges. In the event of an appeal against a decision by a Trial Chamber, the Appeals Chamber shall be composed of five judges.

4. In the event of an application for review in accordance with article 24 of this Statute of a judgement rendered by a Single Judge or by a Trial Chamber, the President shall appoint three judges to compose a Trial Chamber on review. In the event of an application for review of a judgement rendered by the Appeals Chamber, the Appeals Chamber on review shall be composed of five judges.

5. The President may appoint, from among the judges of the Mechanism, a reserve judge to be present at each stage of a trial and to replace a judge if that judge is unable to continue sitting.

Article 13

Rules of Procedure and Evidence

1. The judges of the Mechanism shall adopt Rules of Procedure and Evidence for the conduct of the pretrial phase of the proceedings, trials and appeals, the admission of evidence, the protection of victims and witnesses and other appropriate matters.

2. Amendments of the Rules of Procedure and Evidence may be decided remotely by the judges of the Mechanism by written procedure.

3. The Rules of Procedure and Evidence and any amendments thereto shall take effect upon adoption by the judges of the Mechanism unless the Security Council decides otherwise.

4. The Rules of Procedure and Evidence and amendments thereto shall be consistent with this Statute.

Article 14

The Prosecutor

1. The Prosecutor shall be responsible for the investigation and prosecution of persons covered by article 1 of this Statute.

2. The Prosecutor shall act independently as a separate organ of the Mechanism. He or she shall not seek or receive instructions from any Government or from any other source.

3. The Office of the Prosecutor shall be composed of a Prosecutor, an officer-in-charge at the seat of each branch of the Mechanism designated by the Prosecutor and such other qualified staff as may be required, in accordance with paragraph 5 of this article. The Prosecutor shall be present at either seat of the branches of the Mechanism as necessary to exercise his or her functions.

4. The Prosecutor shall be appointed by the Security Council on nomination by the Secretary-General. He or she shall be of high moral character and possess the highest level of competence and experience in the conduct of investigations and prosecutions of criminal cases. The Prosecutor shall serve for a four-year term and be eligible for reappointment. The terms and conditions of service of the Prosecutor shall be those of an Under-Secretary-General of the United Nations.

5. The Office of the Prosecutor shall retain a small number of staff commensurate with the reduced functions of the Mechanism, who shall serve at the seats of the branches of the Mechanism. The Office shall maintain a roster of qualified potential staff, preferably from among persons with experience at the ICTY or the ICTR, to enable it to recruit additional staff rapidly as may be required to perform its functions. The staff of the Office of the Prosecutor shall be appointed by the Secretary-General on the recommendation of the Prosecutor.

The Registry

1. The Registry shall be responsible for the administration and servicing of the branches of the Mechanism.

2. The Registry shall consist of a Registrar, an officer-in-charge at the seat of each branch of the Mechanism designated by the Registrar and such other qualified staff as may be required in accordance with paragraph 4 of this article. The Registrar shall be present at either seat of the branches of the Mechanism as necessary to exercise his or her functions.

3. The Registrar shall be appointed by the Secretary-General for a four-year term and be eligible for reappointment. The terms and conditions of service of the Registrar shall be those of an Assistant Secretary-General of the United Nations.

4. The Registry shall retain a small number of staff commensurate with the reduced functions of the Mechanism, who shall serve at the seats of the respective branches of the Mechanism. The Registry shall maintain a roster of qualified potential staff, preferably from among persons with experience at the ICTY or the ICTR, to enable it to recruit additional staff rapidly as may be required to perform its functions. The staff of the Registry shall be appointed by the Secretary-General on the recommendation of the Registrar.

Investigation and preparation of indictment

1. The Prosecutor shall have the power to conduct investigations against persons covered by article 1 of this Statute. The Prosecutor shall not have the power to prepare new indictments against persons other than those covered by article 1 of this Statute.

2. The Prosecutor shall have the power to question suspects, victims and witnesses, to collect evidence and to conduct on-site investigations. In carrying out these tasks, the Prosecutor may, as appropriate, seek the assistance of the State authorities concerned.

3. If questioned, the suspect shall be entitled to be assisted by counsel of his or her own choice, including the right to have legal assistance assigned to the suspect without payment by him or her in any such case if he or she does not have sufficient means to pay for it, as well as necessary translation into and from a language he or she speaks and understands.

4. Upon a determination that a prima facie case exists, the Prosecutor shall prepare an indictment containing a concise statement of the facts and the crime or crimes with which the accused is charged under the Statute. The indictment shall be transmitted to the duty judge or a Single Judge designated by the President.

Review of the indictment

1. The indictment shall be reviewed by the duty judge or a Single Judge designated by the President. If satisfied that a prima facie case has been established by the Prosecutor, he or she shall confirm the indictment. If not so satisfied, the indictment shall be dismissed.

2. Upon confirmation of an indictment, the judge may, at the request of the Prosecutor, issue such orders and warrants for the arrest, detention, surrender or transfer of persons and any other orders as may be required for the conduct of the trial.

Article 18

Commencement and conduct of trial proceedings

1. The Single Judge or Trial Chamber conducting a trial shall ensure that the trial is fair and expeditious and that proceedings are conducted in accordance with the Rules of Procedure and Evidence, with full respect for the rights of the accused and due regard for the protection of victims and witnesses.

2. A person against whom an indictment has been confirmed shall, pursuant to an order or an arrest warrant of the Mechanism, be taken into custody, immediately informed of the charges against him or her and transferred to the Mechanism.

3. The Single Judge or judge of the Trial Chamber designated by the President shall read the indictment, ensure that the rights of the accused are respected, confirm that the accused understands the indictment and instruct the accused to enter a plea. The Single Judge or Trial Chamber shall then set the date for trial.

4. The hearings shall be public unless the Single Judge or Trial Chamber decides to close the proceedings in accordance with the Rules of Procedure and Evidence.

Article 19

Rights of the accused

1. All persons shall be equal before the Mechanism.

2. In the determination of charges against him or her, the accused shall be entitled to a fair and public hearing, subject to article 20 of the Statute.

3. The accused shall be presumed innocent until proved guilty according to the provisions of the present Statute.

4. In the determination of any charge against the accused pursuant to the present Statute, the accused shall be entitled to the following minimum guarantees, in full equality:

(a) To be informed promptly and in detail in a language which he or she understands of the nature and cause of the charge against him or her;

(b) To have adequate time and facilities for the preparation of his or her defence and to communicate with counsel of his or her own choosing;

(c) To be tried without undue delay;

(d) To be tried in his or her presence, and to defend himself or herself in person or through legal assistance of his or her own choosing; to be informed, if he or she does not have legal assistance, of this right; and to have legal assistance assigned to him or her, in any case where the interests of justice so require, and without payment by him or her in any such case if he or she does not have sufficient means to pay for it;

(e) To examine, or have examined, the witnesses against him or her and to obtain the attendance and examination of witnesses on his or her behalf under the same conditions as witnesses against him or her;

(f) To have the free assistance of an interpreter if he or she cannot understand or speak the language used in the Mechanism;

(g) Not to be compelled to testify against himself or herself or to confess guilt.

Article 20

Protection of victims and witnesses

The Mechanism shall provide in its Rules of Procedure and Evidence for the protection of victims and witnesses in relation to the ICTY, the ICTR and the Mechanism. Such protection measures shall include, but shall not be limited to, the conduct of in camera proceedings and the protection of the victim's identity.

Article 21

Judgements

1. The Single Judge or Trial Chamber shall pronounce judgements and impose sentences and penalties on persons covered by article 1 of this Statute who are convicted by the Mechanism.

2. All judgements shall be delivered in public and shall be accompanied by a reasoned opinion in writing. Judgements by a Chamber shall be rendered by a majority of the judges, to which separate or dissenting opinions may be appended.

Article 22

Penalties

1. The penalty imposed on persons covered by paragraphs 2 and 3 of article 1 of this Statute shall be limited to imprisonment. The penalty imposed on persons covered by paragraph 4 of article 1 of this Statute shall be a term of imprisonment not exceeding seven years, or a fine of an amount to be determined in the Rules of Procedure and Evidence, or both.

2. In determining the terms of imprisonment, the Single Judge or Trial Chamber shall have recourse to the general practice regarding prison sentences in the courts of the former Yugoslavia and in those of Rwanda, respectively.

3. In imposing the sentences, the Single Judge or Trial Chamber should take into account such factors as the gravity of the offence and the individual circumstances of the convicted person.

4. In addition to imprisonment, the Single Judge or Trial Chamber may order the return of any property and proceeds acquired by criminal conduct, including by means of duress, to their rightful owners.

Article 23

Appellate proceedings

1. The Appeals Chamber shall hear appeals from convicted persons or from the Prosecutor on the following grounds:

- (a) An error on a question of law invalidating the decision; or
- (b) An error of fact which has occasioned a miscarriage of justice.

2. The Appeals Chamber may affirm, reverse or revise the decisions taken by the Single Judge or Trial Chamber.

Article 24

Review proceedings

Where a new fact has been discovered which was not known at the time of the proceedings before the Single Judge, Trial Chamber or the Appeals Chamber of the ICTY, the ICTR or the Mechanism and which could have been a decisive factor in reaching the decision, the convicted person may submit to the Mechanism an application for review of the judgement. The Prosecutor may submit such an application within one year from the day that the final judgement was pronounced. The Chamber shall only review the judgement if after a preliminary examination a majority of judges of the Chamber agree that the new fact, if proved, could have been a decisive factor in reaching a decision.

Article 25

Enforcement of sentences

1. Imprisonment shall be served in a State designated by the Mechanism from a list of States with which the United Nations has agreements for this purpose. Such imprisonment shall be in accordance with the applicable law of the State concerned, subject to the supervision of the Mechanism.

2. The Mechanism shall have the power to supervise the enforcement of sentences pronounced by the ICTY, the ICTR or the Mechanism, including the implementation of sentence enforcement agreements entered into by the United Nations with Member States and other agreements with international and regional organizations and other appropriate organizations and bodies.

Article 26

Pardon or commutation of sentences

If, pursuant to the applicable law of the State in which the person convicted by the ICTY, the ICTR or the Mechanism is imprisoned, he or she is eligible for pardon or commutation of sentence, the State concerned shall notify the Mechanism accordingly. There shall only be pardon or commutation of sentence if the President of the Mechanism so decides on the basis of the interests of justice and the general principles of law.

Article 27

Management of the archives

1. Without prejudice to any prior conditions stipulated by, or arrangements with, the providers of information and documents, the archives of the ICTY, the ICTR and the Mechanism shall remain the property of the United Nations. These archives shall be inviolable wherever located pursuant to section 4 of the Convention on the Privileges and Immunities of the United Nations of 13 February 1946.

2. The Mechanism shall be responsible for the management, including preservation and access, of these archives. The archives of the ICTY and the ICTR shall be co-located with the respective branches of the Mechanism.

3. In managing access to these archives, the Mechanism shall ensure the continued protection of confidential information, including information concerning protected witnesses, and information provided on a confidential basis. For this purpose, the Mechanism shall implement an information security and access regime, including for the classification and declassification, as appropriate, of the archives.

Article 28

Cooperation and judicial assistance

1. States shall cooperate with the Mechanism in the investigation and prosecution of persons covered by article 1 of this Statute.

2. States shall comply without undue delay with any request for assistance or an order issued by a Single Judge or Trial Chamber in relation to cases involving persons covered by article 1 of this Statute, including, but not limited to:

- (a) The identification and location of persons;
- (b) The taking of testimony and the production of evidence;
- (c) The service of documents;
- (d) The arrest or detention of persons;
- (e) The surrender or the transfer of the accused to the Mechanism.

3. The Mechanism shall respond to requests for assistance from national authorities in relation to investigation, prosecution and trial of those responsible for serious violations of international humanitarian law in the countries of the former Yugoslavia and Rwanda, including, where appropriate, providing assistance in tracking fugitives whose cases have been referred to national authorities by the ICTY, the ICTR or the Mechanism.

Article 29

The status, privileges and immunities of the Mechanism

1. The Convention on the Privileges and Immunities of the United Nations of 13 February 1946 shall apply to the Mechanism, the archives of the ICTY, the ICTR and the Mechanism, the judges, the Prosecutor and his or her staff, and the Registrar and his or her staff.

2. The President, the Prosecutor and the Registrar shall enjoy the privileges and immunities, exemptions and facilities accorded to diplomatic envoys, in accordance with international law. The judges of the Mechanism shall enjoy the same privileges and immunities, exemptions and facilities when engaged on the business of the Mechanism.

3. The staff of the Prosecutor and of the Registrar shall enjoy the privileges and immunities accorded to officials of the United Nations under articles V and VII of the Convention referred to in paragraph 1 of this article.

4. Defence counsel, when holding a certificate that he or she has been admitted as counsel by the Mechanism and when performing their official functions, and after prior notification by the Mechanism to the receiving State of their mission, arrival and final departure, shall enjoy the same privileges and immunities as are accorded to experts on mission for the United Nations under article VI, section 22, paragraphs (a) to (c), and section 23, of the Convention referred to in paragraph 1 of this article. Without prejudice to their privileges and immunities, it is the duty of defence counsel enjoying such privileges and immunities to respect the laws and regulations of the receiving State.

5. Other persons, including the accused, required at the seats of the Mechanism shall be accorded such treatment as is necessary for the proper functioning of the Mechanism.

Article 30

Expenses of the Mechanism

The expenses of the Mechanism shall be expenses of the Organization in accordance with Article 17 of the Charter of the United Nations.

Article 31

Working languages

The working languages of the Mechanism shall be English and French.

Article 32

Reports

1. The President of the Mechanism shall submit an annual report of the Mechanism to the Security Council and to the General Assembly.

2. The President and Prosecutor shall submit six-monthly reports to the Security Council on the progress of the work of the Mechanism.

ANNEX 2

Transitional arrangements

Article 1

Trial proceedings

1. The ICTY and ICTR shall have competence to complete all trial or referral proceedings which are pending with them as of the commencement date of the respective branch of the Mechanism.

2. If a fugitive indicted by the ICTY or ICTR is arrested more than 12 months, or if a retrial is ordered by the Appeals Chamber more than 6 months prior to the commencement date of the respective branch of the Mechanism, the ICTY or ICTR, respectively, shall have competence over such person in accordance with their respective Statutes and Rules of Procedure and Evidence to conduct, and complete, the trial of such person, or to refer the case to the authorities of a State, as appropriate.

3. If a fugitive indicted by the ICTY or ICTR is arrested 12 months or less, or if a retrial is ordered 6 months or less prior to the commencement date of the respective branch of the Mechanism, the ICTY or ICTR, respectively, shall only have competence over such person in accordance with their respective Statutes and Rules of Procedure and Evidence to prepare the trial of such person, or to refer the case to the authorities of a State, as appropriate. As of the commencement date of the respective branch of the Mechanism, the Mechanism shall have competence over such person in accordance with article 1 of its Statute, including trial of such person or referral of the case, as appropriate.

4. If a fugitive indicted by the ICTY or ICTR is arrested or if a retrial is ordered on or after the commencement date of the respective branch of the Mechanism, the Mechanism shall have competence over such person in accordance with article 1 of its Statute.

Article 2

Appeals proceedings

1. The ICTY and ICTR shall have competence to conduct, and complete, all appellate proceedings for which the notice of appeal against the judgement or sentence is filed prior to the commencement date of the respective branch of the Mechanism.

2. The Mechanism shall have competence to conduct, and complete, all appellate proceedings for which the notice of appeal against the judgement or sentence is filed on or after the commencement date of the respective branch of the Mechanism.

Article 3

Review proceedings

1. The ICTY and ICTR shall have competence to conduct, and complete, all review proceedings for which the application for review of the judgement is filed prior to the commencement date of the respective branch of the Mechanism.

2. The Mechanism shall have competence to conduct, and complete, all review proceedings for which the application for review of the judgement is filed on or after the commencement date of the respective branch of the Mechanism.

Article 4

Contempt of court and false testimony

1. The ICTY and ICTR shall have competence to conduct, and complete, all proceedings for contempt of court and false testimony for which the indictment is confirmed prior to the commencement date of the respective branch of the Mechanism.

2. The Mechanism shall have competence to conduct, and complete, all proceedings for contempt of court and false testimony for which the indictment is confirmed on or after the commencement date of the respective branch of the Mechanism.

Article 5

Protection of victims and witnesses

1. The ICTY and ICTR shall provide for the protection of victims and witnesses, and carry out all related judicial or prosecutorial functions, in relation to all cases for which the ICTY or ICTR, respectively, has competence pursuant to articles 1 to 4 of the present annex.

2. The Mechanism shall provide for the protection of victims and witnesses, and carry out all related judicial or prosecutorial functions, in relation to all cases for which the Mechanism has competence pursuant to articles 1 to 4 of the present annex.

3. The Mechanism shall provide for the protection of victims and witnesses, and carry out all related judicial or prosecutorial functions, where a person is a victim or witness in relation to two or more cases for which the Mechanism and the ICTY or ICTR, respectively, have competence pursuant to articles 1 to 4 of the present annex.

4. The ICTY and ICTR, respectively, shall make the necessary arrangements to ensure, as soon as possible, a coordinated transition of the victims and witness protection function to the Mechanism in relation to all completed cases of the Tribunals. As of the commencement date of the respective branch of the Mechanism, the Mechanism shall carry out all related judicial or prosecutorial functions in relation to these cases.

Article 6

Coordinated transition of other functions

The ICTY and ICTR, respectively, shall make the necessary arrangements to ensure, as soon as possible, a coordinated transition of the other functions of the Tribunals to the Mechanism, including the supervision of enforcement of sentences, assistance requests by national authorities and the management of records and archives. As of the commencement date of the respective branch of the Mechanism, the Mechanism shall carry out all related judicial or prosecutorial functions.

Article 7

Transitional arrangements for the President, Judges, Prosecutor, Registrar and staff

Notwithstanding the provisions of the Statutes of the Mechanism, the ICTY and ICTR,

(a) The President, Judges, Prosecutor and Registrar of the Mechanism may also hold the office of President, Judge, Prosecutor and Registrar, respectively, of the ICTY or ICTR;

(b) The staff members of the Mechanism may also be staff members of the ICTY or ICTR.

Working Group report. On 30 December [S/2010/684], the Chairman of the Informal Working Group on International Tribunals submitted a summary of its activities for the period 1 January to 31 December 2010, which focused primarily on efforts leading to the adoption of resolution 1966(2010) and the establishment of the residual mechanism to carry out certain essential functions of the Tribunals.

In other activities, the Working Group considered requests by the ICTR and ICTY Presidents, including the extension of the terms of office of judges and the appointment of additional ad litem judges in order to facilitate the completion strategies. The Group's recommendations led to the adoption of Security Council resolutions addressing those issues.

Feasibility study on ICTY information centres

Pursuant to a recommendation in the Secretary-General's 2009 [YUN 2009, p. 1297] report on options for possible locations for the ICTY and ICTR archives and the seat of the Tribunal's residual mechanism(s), ICTY prepared a feasibility study on the creation of ICTY information centres in the affected countries to give access to copies of the public records or the most important parts. The Secretary-General transmitted the study to the Security Council on 15 March [S/2010/154]. The study summarized the conduct of the mission, the services to be offered by information centres and potential users, and the expected impact of information centres. It also discussed possible locations/institutions to become depositories of ICTY public records and/or host an information centre or become partners to it; the respective roles of Government, NGOs and UN-ICTY; and the conditions and possible obstacles. In general, the response to the idea of establishing information centres in the various locations visited was positive. Annexed to the study was a summary of views expressed by each interlocutor: Bosnia and Herzegovina, Croatia, Kosovo, the former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia, Montenegro and Serbia. Among other recommendations, the study found that it was feasible and desirable to establish information centres at least in Bosnia and Herzegovina, Croatia and Serbia.

In other developments, the ICTY President established the Informal Consultative Working Group on the Establishment of Information Centres in the Region of the former Yugoslavia, made up of national officials from the region [S/2010/588].

International Criminal Court

In 2010, the International Criminal Court (ICC), established by the Rome Statute [YUN 1998, p. 1209] as a permanent institution with jurisdiction over persons accused of the most serious crimes of international concern (genocide, crimes against humanity, war crimes and the crime of aggression), carried out investigations in the Central African Republic, the Democratic Republic of the Congo (DRC), Darfur (Sudan), Kenya, and Uganda. Reports covering ICC activities during the year were submitted to the General Assembly [A/65/313; A/66/309]. As at 31 December, 114 countries had ratified the Rome Statute.

In July, a second arrest warrant was issued against Omar Hassan Ahmad Al-Bashir, President of the Sudan, for crimes against humanity and war crimes. At the end of July, there were nine arrest warrants outstanding, including that for Mr. Al-Bashir. Seven had been outstanding for three years and five had been outstanding for four or more years. The Office of the Prosecutor received and analysed 559 communications related to purported crimes between 1 August 2009 and 30 June 2010. The Office continued its preliminary examinations in Afghanistan, Colombia, Côte d'Ivoire, Georgia, Guinea and Palestine.

The first Review Conference of the Rome Statute of ICC (Kampala, Uganda, 31 May–11 June), convened by the UN Secretary-General, adopted the Kampala Declaration, in which States parties reaffirmed their commitment to the Rome Statute and its full implementation. States parties also decided to celebrate 17 July as the Day of International Criminal Justice.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 23 November [meeting 52], the General Assembly adopted resolution 65/12 [draft: A/65/L.13 & Add.1], without vote [agenda item 73].

Report of the International Criminal Court

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 64/9 of 2 November 2009 and all its previous relevant resolutions,

Recalling also that the Rome Statute of the International Criminal Court reaffirms the purposes and principles of the Charter of the United Nations,

Reiterating the historic significance of the adoption of the Rome Statute,

Emphasizing that justice, especially transitional justice in conflict and post-conflict societies, is a fundamental building block of sustainable peace,

Convinced that ending impunity is essential if a society in conflict or recovering from conflict is to come to terms with past abuses committed against civilians affected by armed conflict and to prevent such abuses in the future,

Noting with satisfaction the fact that the International Criminal Court has achieved considerable progress in its analyses, investigations and judicial proceedings in various situations and cases which were referred to it by States parties to the Rome Statute and by the Security Council, in accordance with the Rome Statute,

Recalling that effective and comprehensive cooperation and assistance in all aspects of its mandate by States, the United Nations and other international and regional organizations remains essential for the International Criminal Court to carry out its activities,

Expressing its appreciation to the Secretary-General for providing effective and efficient assistance to the International Criminal Court in accordance with the Relationship Agreement between the United Nations and the International Criminal Court ("Relationship Agreement"),

Acknowledging the Relationship Agreement as approved by the General Assembly in its resolution 58/318 of 13 September 2004, including paragraph 3 of the resolution with respect to the payment in full of expenses accruing to the United Nations as a result of the implementation of the Relationship Agreement, which provides a framework for continued cooperation between the International Criminal Court and the United Nations, which could include the facilitation by the United Nations of the Court's field activities, and encouraging the conclusion of supplementary arrangements and agreements, as necessary,

Welcoming the continuous support given by civil society to the International Criminal Court,

Recognizing the role of the International Criminal Court in a multilateral system that aims to end impunity, establish the rule of law, promote and encourage respect for human rights and achieve sustainable peace, in accordance with international law and the purposes and principles of the Charter,

Expressing its appreciation to the International Criminal Court for providing assistance to the Special Court for Sierra Leone,

1. Welcomes the report of the International Criminal Court for 2009/10;

2. Welcomes the States that have become parties to the Rome Statute of the International Criminal Court in the past year, and calls upon all States in all regions of the world that are not yet parties to the Rome Statute to consider ratifying or acceding to it without delay;

3. Welcomes the States parties as well as States not parties to the Rome Statute that have become parties to the Agreement on the Privileges and Immunities of the International Criminal Court, and calls upon all States that have not yet done so to consider becoming parties to that Agreement;

4. Calls upon States parties to the Rome Statute that have not yet done so to adopt national legislation to implement obligations emanating from the Rome Statute and to cooperate with the International Criminal Court in the exercise of its functions, and recalls the provision of technical assistance by States parties in this respect;

5. Welcomes the cooperation and assistance provided thus far to the International Criminal Court by States parties as well as States not parties, the United Nations and other international and regional organizations, and calls upon those States that are under an obligation to cooperate to provide such cooperation and assistance in the future, in particular with regard to arrest and surrender, the provision of evidence, the protection and relocation of victims and witnesses and the enforcement of sentences;

6. Emphasizes the importance of cooperation with States that are not parties to the Rome Statute;

7. Invites regional organizations to consider concluding cooperation agreements with the International Criminal Court;

8. Recalls that, by virtue of article 12, paragraph 3, of the Rome Statute, if the acceptance of a State which is not a party to the Rome Statute is required under article 12, paragraph 2, of the Rome Statute, that State may, by declaration lodged with the Registrar of the International Criminal Court, accept the exercise of jurisdiction by the Court with respect to the crime in question;

9. Encourages all States parties to take the interests, needs for assistance and mandate of the International Criminal Court into account when relevant matters are being discussed in the United Nations;

10. Emphasizes the importance of the full implementation of the Relationship Agreement, which forms a framework for close cooperation between the two organizations and for consultation on matters of mutual interest pursuant to the provisions of that Agreement and in conformity with the respective provisions of the Charter of the United Nations and the Rome Statute, as well as the need for the Secretary-General to inform the General Assembly at its sixty-sixth session of the expenses incurred and reimbursements received by the United Nations in connection with assistance provided to the International Criminal Court;

11. Expresses its appreciation for the work undertaken by the International Criminal Court liaison office to United Nations Headquarters, and encourages the Secretary-General to continue to work closely with that office;

12. Encourages States to contribute to the Trust Fund established for the benefit of victims of crimes within the jurisdiction of the International Criminal Court and the families of such victims, and acknowledges with appreciation contributions made to that Trust Fund thus far;

13. Notes the Review Conference of the Rome Statute of the International Criminal Court, convened and opened by the Secretary-General and held in Kampala from 31 May to 11 June 2010, at which States parties reaffirmed their commitment to the Rome Statute and its full implementation, as well as its universality and integrity, and which undertook a stocktaking exercise of international criminal justice, considering the impact of the Rome Statute on victims and affected communities, peace and justice, complementarity and cooperation, called for the strengthening of the enforcement of sentences, adopted amendments to the Rome Statute to expand the jurisdiction of the Court to three additional war crimes when committed in armed conflicts not of an international character, adopted amendments to the Rome Statute to define the crime of aggression and to establish conditions under which the Court could exercise jurisdiction with respect to that crime, and decided to retain article 124 of the Rome Statute;

14. Also notes the report of the Secretary-General on the work of the Organization, in which the Secretary-General expresses the view that the link between peace, development and justice was strengthened through the outcome of the first Review Conference of the Rome Statute, and that the Kampala Declaration and the amendments to the Rome Statute, including on the crime of aggression, will provide the international community with additional tools for fighting impunity;

15. Takes note of the decision of the Assembly of States Parties to the Rome Statute at its seventh session, while recalling that according to article 112, paragraph 6, of the Rome Statute, the Assembly of States Parties shall meet at the seat of the International Criminal Court or at United Nations Headquarters, to hold its ninth session in New York, looks forward to the ninth session, which is to be held from 6 to 10 December 2010, and requests the Secretary-General to provide the necessary services and facilities in accordance with the Relationship Agreement and resolution 58/318;

16. Encourages the widest possible participation of States in the Assembly of States Parties, invites States to contribute to the Trust Fund for the participation of least developed countries, and acknowledges with appreciation contributions made to that Trust Fund thus far;

17. Invites the International Criminal Court to submit, in accordance with article 6 of the Relationship Agreement, a report on its activities for 2010/11, for consideration by the General Assembly at its sixty-sixth session.

Assembly of States Parties

The Assembly of States Parties to the Rome Statute of the International Criminal Court adopted two resolutions at its resumed eighth session (New York, 22–25 March) [ICC-ASP/8/20/Add.1] and five resolutions and two decisions at its ninth session (New York, 6–10 December) [ICC-ASP/9/20].

On 25 March, the Assembly adopted resolutions on one-time payments for the permanent premises [ICC-ASP/8/Res.8] and on the Review Conference of States Parties to the Rome Statute [ICC-ASP/8/Res.9].

On 10 December, the Assembly noted that the end of the construction phase of the Court's permanent premises was foreseen for mid-2015 and that the rent-free period of the interim premises would end in June 2012 [ICC-ASP/9/Res.1]. On the same date, the Assembly requested the Bureau of the Assembly to establish a study group on governance for a period of one year [ICC-ASP/9/Res.2] and to report on its findings at the Assembly's tenth (2011) regular session.

On strengthening ICC and the Assembly [ICC-ASP/9/Res.3], the Assembly decided to keep the status of ratifications to the Rome Statute under review, and to monitor implementing legislation, with a view to facilitating the provision of technical assistance that States parties or those wishing to become States parties to the Statute might wish to request from other States parties or institutions. It also noted that the African Union (AU) had rejected for the time being the opening of a liaison office for the Court at the AU Headquarters in Addis Ababa, Ethiopia.

In a resolution on the Independent Oversight Mechanism [ICC-ASP/9/Res.5], the Assembly decided that pending a decision on the operationalization of the inspection and evaluation functions of the mechanism, the Independent Oversight Mechanism would perform only its investigative function in accordance with the provisions annexed to the resolution. It also decided that the Bureau would prepare a report on the operationalization of the Independent Oversight Mechanism's investigative functions and the operation of the inspection and evaluation functions within the oversight mechanism, with a view to a decision on its adoption at the Assembly's next session. The Independent Oversight Mechanism was established by the Assembly in 2009 [YUN 2009, p. 1299].

As to financing, the Assembly approved the Court's 2011 programme budget [ICC-ASP/9/Res.4], with appropriations covering €103,607,900. It resolved that the Working Capital Fund for 2011 would be established in the amount of €7,405,983, and authorized the Registrar to make advances from the Fund.

Review Conference. At the Review Conference of the Rome Statute of ICC (Kampala, Uganda, 31 May–11 June) [RC/11], States parties reviewed and amended the Rome Statute, conducted a stocktaking of international criminal justice and made significant pledges on a wide range of issues. The Review Conference adopted six resolutions and two declarations. On 8 June, the Conference adopted resolutions on complementarity [RC/Res.1]; the impact of the Rome Statute system on victims and affected communities [RC/Res.2] and strengthening the enforcement of sentences [RC/Res.3]. On 10 June, resolutions on article 124 [RC/Res.4] and amendments to article 8 of the Rome Statute [RC/Res.5] were adopted. A resolution on the crime of aggression was adopted on 11 June [RC/Res.6].

It also adopted the Kampala Declaration [RC/Decl.1] (see below) and a Declaration on cooperation [RC/Decl.2].

The Security Council, in presidential statement S/PRST/2010/11 of 29 June (see p. 42), took note of the stocktaking of international criminal justice undertaken by the first Review Conference.

Kampala Declaration. On 22 November [A/65/591], Liechtenstein transmitted to the Secretary-General a copy of the text of the Kampala Declaration, adopted by the representatives of the States parties to the Rome Statute of the ICC on 8 June. By that Declaration, it was also decided to celebrate 17 July, the day of the adoption of the Rome Statute in 1998 [YUN 1998, p. 1209], as the Day of International Criminal Justice.

The Chambers

The judicial activities of the Court were conducted by the Chambers, which consisted of 18 judges, organized in three divisions: the Appeals Division, the Trial Division and the Pre-Trial Division. In March, Pre-Trial Chamber II authorized the Prosecutor to initiate an investigation concerning Kenya. Pre-Trial Chamber I issued a decision in May to inform the Security Council about the lack of cooperation by the Sudan in the execution of arrest warrants against Mr. Ahmad Harun and Mr. Ali Kushayb. Pre-Trial Chamber I also issued a second warrant of arrest against Omar Hassan Ahmad Al-Bashir, the President of the Sudan, and two decisions on Mr. Al-Bashir's visits to Chad and Kenya (see below).

New arrests, warrants and summonses

During the year, there was one new arrest and two arrest warrants issued by the Court. Nine arrest warrants were outstanding at year's end: one in the situation in the DRC, four in the situation in Darfur (Sudan) and four in the situation in Uganda. Seven had been outstanding for three years and five had been outstanding for four or more years. The Court also unsealed two summonses, both in the situation in Darfur.

On 11 October, Callixte Mbarushimana, the alleged Executive Secretary of the Forces démocratiques de libération du Rwanda (FDLR) was arrested by French authorities, and the warrant of arrest was unsealed. The prosecution had filed the document containing the charges and list of evidence on 15 July, and Pre-Trial Chamber I had issued a warrant of arrest on 28 September, after finding reasonable grounds to believe that he personally and intentionally contributed to a common plan of the FDLR leadership to launch an offensive targeting the civilian population of the Kivus in order to obtain political concessions.

On 3 February, in the case against President Al-Bashir, the Appeals Chamber decided that Pre-Trial Chamber I had applied an erroneous standard of proof in deciding not to issue an arrest warrant and on 12 July, Pre-Trial Chamber I issued a second warrant of arrest with respect to three counts of genocide. The latter warrant of arrest did not replace or revoke the previous one issued on 4 March 2009 [YUN 2009, p. 1300] for five counts of crimes against humanity and two counts of war crimes. On 27 August [S/2010/456], Pre-Trial Chamber I issued two decisions informing the Security Council and the Assembly of States Parties to the Rome Statute of Mr. Al-Bashir's visits to Chad and Kenya, in order for them to take any action they might deem appropriate. Mr. Al-Bashir remained at large.

On 15 June, in the case against Abdallah Banda Abakaer Nourain, former Commander-in-Chief of the Justice and Equality Movement and Saleh Mohammed Jerbo Jamus, former Chief-of-Staff of the Sudan Liberation Army-Unity, summonses to appear were unsealed. Mssrs. Banda and Jerbo both appeared voluntarily before Pre-Trial Chamber I for an initial appearance on 17 June. The prosecution alleged that both men participated as co-perpetrators or indirect co-perpetrators to an attack on the Haskanita military group site on 29 September 2007. The confirmation of charges hearing was held on 8 December.

On 9 December [S/PV.6440], during the presentation of his twelfth report to the Security Council on the status of the investigation into the situation in Darfur, the Prosecutor highlighted the lack of cooperation by the Government of the Sudan, the continuation of the alleged crimes on the ground and the need to execute the outstanding arrest warrants.

Communications. On 31 August [S/2010/458], in reference to the decisions issued by Pre-Trial Chamber I on 27 August, the Sudan transmitted to the Council President a 29 August press communiqué issued by the AU condemning the action taken by the ICC.

Ongoing cases, trials and appeals

On 7 January, the defence started the presentation of its evidence in the trial against Thomas Lubanga Dyilo [YUN 2009, p. 1301]. Mr. Lubanga, alleged to be the leader of the Union des patriotes congolais and Commander-in-Chief of its military wing, the Forces patriotiques pour la libération du Congo, was charged with having committed war crimes in the DRC, specifically enlisting, conscripting and using children under the age of 15 years to participate actively in hostilities. From January to July, the defence tendered 133 items of evidence and called 19 witnesses to testify over a total of 68 trial days. On 8 July, Trial Chamber I ordered a stay of the proceedings as a consequence of the prosecution's material non-compliance with the Chamber's orders and, on 15 July, ordered the unrestricted and unconditional release of Mr. Lubanga, subject to the prosecution's appeal and an order of suspensive effect by the Appeals Chamber. On 23 July, the Appeals Chamber granted suspensive effect and the prosecution appealed the decision on release. On 8 October, the Appeals Chamber reversed the decisions of Trial Chamber I to stay the proceedings and to release the accused, finding that before ordering a stay of proceedings, the Trial Chamber should have first imposed sanctions under article 71 of the Rome Statute to bring about compliance.

On 8 February, in the case against Bahr Idriss Abu Garda, the Chairman and General Coordinator of Military Operations of the United Resistant Force who was charged with three counts of war crimes in connection with a September 2007 attack against the AU peacekeeping mission in Haskanita, Darfur [YUN 2009, p. 1300], Pre-Trial Chamber I declined to confirm the charges against Mr. Abu Garda on the grounds that the prosecution's allegation that he participated in the attack was not supported by sufficient evidence. Mr. Abu Garda had appeared voluntarily on the basis of a summons to appear in May 2009, and the hearing took place from 19 to 30 October [ibid.]. On 23 April 2010, Pre-Trial Chamber I rejected the prosecution's application for leave to appeal the decision rejecting the confirmation of charges. The prosecution stated that it would submit additional evidence.

On 25 February, the defence submitted a challenge to the admissibility of the case against Jean-Pierre Bemba Gombo on the grounds of respecting complementarity between the work of the Court and judicial proceedings in the Central African Republic, an alleged lack of the requisite level of gravity of the case and an alleged abuse of process. The charges against Mr. Bemba of three counts of war crimes (murder, rape and pillage) and two counts of crimes against humanity (murder and rape), in his capacity as a military commander, were confirmed in June 2009 and the case was referred to Trial Chamber III in September [YUN 2009, p. 1300]. On 24 June 2010, Trial Chamber III rejected the defence motion in totality, which was immediately appealed by the defence. On 7 July, Trial Chamber III postponed sine die the commencement of the trial until the resolution of the challenge by the Appeals Chamber. On 19 October, the Appeals Chamber delivered its judgement, confirming the 24 June decision of Trial Chamber III, finding that when a Trial Chamber was presented with the question of whether the outcome of domestic judicial proceedings was equivalent to a decision not to prosecute in terms of article 17, paragraph (1) (b), of the Statute, the Trial Chamber should accept prima facie the validity and effect of the decisions of domestic courts, unless presented with compelling evidence indicating otherwise. Mr. Bemba's trial started on 22 November before Trial Chamber III.

The trial of Germain Katanga and Mathieu Ngudjolo Chui, two former leaders of armed groups active in the Ituri region of the DRC, started on 24 November 2009 [YUN 2009, p. 1301] before Trial Chamber II, and the prosecution concluded its presentation of live evidence in the case on 8 December. The prosecution presented 270 pieces of evidence and called 24 witnesses, including two expert witnesses, to testify during its case. Messrs. Katanga and Ngudjolo were both charged in September 2008 [YUN 2008, p. 1428] with seven counts of war crimes and three charges of crimes against humanity, allegedly committed in an attack on the Bogoro village on 24 February 2003.

Office of the Prosecutor

Investigations

In 2010, the Office of the Prosecutor continued to investigate the situations in the Central African Republic, the DRC, Darfur (Sudan) and Uganda. In March, the Prosecutor was authorized to initiate an investigation into a fifth situation, in Kenya. During the period 1 August 2009 to 30 June 2010, the Office conducted 22 missions to four countries in relation to the situation in the Central African Republic, including for the purpose of assessing witnesses for trial. It continued to closely monitor allegations of crimes committed since the end of 2005, and whether any investigation and prosecution had been, or was being, conducted with respect to crimes potentially falling under the Court's jurisdiction.

The Office conducted a total of 22 missions to six countries mainly for the support of trials pertaining to the situation in the DRC, as well as 42 missions to 11 countries for its third investigation in the country, focusing on the Kivu provinces. The Office was working on all the groups active in the region, including the Forces démocratiques de libération du Rwanda, the Congrès national pour la défense du peuple, the regular forces, and local defence forces such as the Mai-Mai.

On 31 March, following the Prosecutor's request for authorization to open an investigation into the situation in Kenya [YUN 2009, p. 1302], Pre-Trial Chamber II authorized an investigation covering alleged crimes against humanity committed in the country between 1 June 2005 and 26 November 2009. The Office conducted 27 missions to 11 countries, including the Prosecutor's visit to Kenya in May. On 15 December, the Prosecutor submitted two applications for summonses to appear regarding six individuals.

On the situation in Darfur, the prosecution filed a request on 19 April with Pre-Trial Chamber I to make a finding under article 87 of the Statute that the Government of the Sudan had failed to cooperate with ICC according to Security Council resolution 1593(2005) [YUN 2005, p. 324] in the execution of arrest warrants against Mr. Ahmed Harun and Mr. Ali Kushayb [YUN 2007, p. 1354]. On 25 May, the Pre-Trial Chamber issued a decision to inform Council members about the lack of cooperation by the Sudan, and by a letter dated 28 May [S/2010/265], the Secretary-General transmitted the decision to the Council President. In his 11 June [S/PV.6336] briefing, the Prosecutor urged Council members to ensure that the arrest of Messrs. Harun and Kushayb was a consistent request of the Organization. Between 1 August 2009 and 30 June 2010, the Office conducted 25 missions to 11 countries for the cases against Messrs. Al-Bashir, Harun and Kushayb. In his 9 December [S/PV. 6440] briefing, the Prosecutor updated the Council on the decision of Pre-Trial Chamber I to issue a second arrest warrant against President Al-Bashir on three charges of genocide (see p. 1317), and confirmed that the Government of the Sudan was neither cooperating with the Court nor conducting national proceedings against those responsible for the crimes committed.

The Office conducted investigative activities on the situation in Uganda, including five missions to four countries. It collected a range of information on crimes allegedly being committed by the Lord's Resistance Army (LRA), led by Joseph Kony, across a wide area in the Central African Republic, the DRC and the Sudan. Incidence of LRA crimes continued at a high rate throughout the year with a substantial numbers of killings and abductions. In the period December 2009 to April 2010, LRA was reported to have killed over 500 civilians and abducted over 400 in Niangara territory, Haut Uélé District of Orientale Province in the DRC. The Office also continued to gather and analyse information in relation to alleged crimes committed by the Uganda People's Defence Forces and related national proceedings.

Preliminary examinations. The Office of the Prosecutor continued to proactively monitor information on crimes potentially falling within the jurisdiction of the Court, analysing communications received from various sources. Between 1 August 2009 and 30 June 2010, the Office had received 559 communications relating to article 15 of the Rome Statute. The Office was also conducting preliminary examinations, including in Afghanistan, Colombia, Côte d'Ivoire, Georgia, Guinea and Palestine.

On 18 November, the Office announced that the situation in Honduras was under preliminary examination and made its examination of the situation in Nigeria public. On 6 December, the Office announced the receipt of communications alleging that forces of the Democratic People's Republic of Korea had committed war crimes in the territory of the Republic of Korea. The preliminary examination focused on two incidents: the 26 March 2010 sinking of a Republic of Korea naval ship (see p. 387) and the 23 November shelling of Yeonpyeong-Do (see p. 388).

The Registry

The ICC Registry provided judicial and administrative support to all organs of the Court and carried out its specific responsibilities concerning victims, witnesses, defence and outreach. The Registry sought to develop understanding and awareness of ICC and its activities by strengthening the Court's public information capacity for outreach services in countries where the Court was active. It provided security, administrative and logistical support to the Court's investigations.

At its eighth (2009) session, the Assembly of States Parties established an Independent Oversight Mechanism [YUN 2009, p. 1299] and requested the Registrar of the Court to enter into a memorandum of understanding (MOU) with the Office of Internal Oversight Services (OIOS) of the UN Secretariat to provide support services on a cost-recovery basis for the operationalization of the oversight mechanism. The MOU was signed in July 2010 (see below).

International cooperation

The Rome Statute obliged its States parties to cooperate fully with the Court in its investigations and prosecutions and provided the basis for the cooperation of States, international organizations and civil society with the Court. UN cooperation remained essential to the Court institutionally and in the different situations and cases. The organization and running of the Review Conference (see p. 1316) was an instance of Court cooperation through the UN Office at Nairobi. It also provided facilities and services for the resumption of the eighth session of the Assembly of States Parties to the Rome Statute in March (see p. 1316). On 16 July, the Court and the United Nations signed an MOU to facilitate the secondment of an expert from OIOS to act as the temporary head of the ICC Independent Oversight Mechanism until 18 July 2011. On 9 December, the ICC President and the UN Secretary-General discussed the potential UN role in the strengthening of national justice systems.

The Court made numerous requests to States, other international organizations and civil society for cooperation or assistance. It also continued to develop its structural arrangements for cooperation with States, especially with respect to analysis and investigative activities, asset tracking and freezing, victim and witness protection, arrest operations, the enforcement of sentences and the provisional release of accused persons pending trial. Three further agreements on the enforcement of sentences were concluded during the reporting period with Belgium, Denmark and Finland. Efforts continued to finalize an MOU between the AU and the Court. With regard to the Assembly of States Parties' decision in 2009 [YUN 2009, p. 1300] to establish an ICC liaison office at AU headquarters in Addis Ababa, Ethiopia, on 29 July, the AU Assembly decided to reject for the time being the request by the Court to open the liaison office. The Court met regularly with representatives of States, international organizations and civil society to update them on its work and discuss items of mutual interest.

Report of Secretary-General. Pursuant to General Assembly resolution 64/9 [YUN 2009, p. 1298], the Secretary-General submitted an August [A/65/315] report on expenses incurred and reimbursement received by the United Nations for assistance provided to ICC. During the period 1 August 2009 to 30 June 2010, the United Nations provided facilities and services to ICC in the amount of $534,913. In addition, the United Nations Organization Mission in the Democratic Republic of the Congo provided transportation and other services to ICC amounting to $48,407. The Court regularly reimbursed the United Nations.

International legal questions

In 2010, the International Law Commission continued to examine topics relating to the progressive development and codification of international law. It provisionally adopted 59 draft guidelines on reservations to treaties, including 11 draft guidelines dealing with the freedom to formulate objections and with matters relating to the permissibility of reactions to reservations and of interpretative declarations and reactions thereto. The Commission thus completed the provisional adoption of the set of draft guidelines. It also referred to the Drafting Committee 14 draft articles on the expulsion of aliens and 17 draft articles on the effects of armed conflicts on treaties. The Commission further adopted five draft articles on the protection of persons in the event of disasters. It reconstituted its working groups on shared natural resources, on the obligation to extradite or prosecute (aut dedere aut judicare) and on the long-term programme of work, as well as its study groups on the most-favoured-nation clause and treaties over time. The Commission also established a planning group to consider the programme, procedures and working methods on settlement of disputes clauses.

The Ad Hoc Committee established by the General Assembly continued to elaborate a draft comprehensive convention on international terrorism. In July, the Secretary-General reported on measures taken by States, UN system entities and international organizations to implement the 1994 General Assembly Declaration on Measures to Eliminate International Terrorism. The Assembly's Sixth (Legal) Committee in October established a working group with a view to finalizing the draft comprehensive convention. In December, the Assembly condemned all acts, methods and practices of terrorism as criminal and unjustifiable, and called on States to implement the United Nations Global Counter-Terrorism Strategy at the international, regional, subregional and national levels.

The United Nations Commission on International Trade Law (UNCITRAL) adopted the UNCITRAL Arbitration Rules as revised in 2010, the UNCITRAL Legislative Guide on Secured Transactions: Supplement on Security Rights in Intellectual Property, and part three of the UNCITRAL Legislative Guide on Insolvency Law on the treatment of enterprise groups in insolvency. It continued work on procurement, arbitration and conciliation, insolvency law and security interests, and considered possible future work in the areas of electronic commerce, online dispute resolution, insolvency law and security interests. On the issue of microfinance, it agreed to convene a colloquium to explore the legal and regulatory issues surrounding microfinance that fell within its mandate.

The Special Committee on the Charter of the United Nations and on the Strengthening of the Role of the Organization continued to consider, among other items, proposals relating to the maintenance of international peace and security, with a view to strengthening the Organization, and the implementation of Charter provisions on assistance to third States affected by the application of sanctions under Chapter VII.

The Committee on Relations with the Host Country addressed issues raised by permanent missions to the United Nations, including acceleration of immigration and customs procedures, entry visas issued by the host country, and the question of security of missions and safety of personnel.

Legal aspects of international political relations

International Law Commission

The 34-member International Law Commission (ILC) held its sixty-second session in Geneva in two parts (3 May–4 June; 5 July–6 August) [A/65/10]. During the second part, the International Law Seminar held its forty-sixth session, which was attended by 26 participants from all regions of the world. They observed ILC meetings, attended specially arranged lectures and participated in working groups on specific topics.

ILC carried out its work with the assistance of various working groups and a Drafting Committee. On the topic of reservations to treaties, ILC considered the fifteenth and sixteenth reports of the Special Rapporteur, and in particular, acceptances of and objections to reservations, legal effects of reservations and of interpretative declarations and reactions thereto, as well as interpretative declarations in relation to the succession of States. ILC referred 57 draft guidelines to the Drafting Committee. It also provisionally adopted 59 draft guidelines, together with commentaries, including 11 draft guidelines that had been provisionally adopted by the Drafting Committee at its sixty-first session (2009) [YUN 2009, p. 1312], which dealt with the freedom to formulate objections and with matters relating to the permissibility of reactions to reservations and of interpretative declarations and reactions thereto. ILC thus completed the provisional adoption of the set of draft guidelines with commentaries.

On the expulsion of aliens, ILC considered the Special Rapporteur's sixth report, which addressed collective expulsion, disguised expulsion, extradition disguised as expulsion, the grounds for expulsion, detention pending expulsion and expulsion proceedings. The Commission also considered comments and information received from Governments and referred 14 draft articles to the Drafting Committee. On the effects of armed conflicts on treaties, the Commission considered the Special Rapporteur's first report, which contained his proposals for the reformulation of the draft articles as adopted on first reading, taking into account the comments and observations of Governments. The Commission referred 17 articles to the Drafting Committee.

On the protection of persons in the event of disasters, the Commission had before it the third report of the Special Rapporteur, which focused on the humanitarian principles of neutrality, impartiality and humanity, as well as the underlying concept of respect for human dignity. The report also considered the question of the primary responsibility of the affected State to protect persons affected by a disaster on its territory, and undertook an initial consideration of the requirement that external assistance be provided on the basis of the consent of the affected State. ILC referred three draft articles to its Drafting Committee and adopted five draft articles.

On the obligation to extradite or prosecute (aut dedere aut judicare), the Commission had before it a survey of multilateral conventions that could be of relevance for its work on the topic, as well as a working paper prepared by its Special Rapporteur, which contained observations and suggestions based on the general framework proposed in 2009 [YUN 2009, p. 1307]. The Commission reconstituted the Working Group, established in 2009 [ibid.], which continued its discussions with the aim of specifying the issues to be addressed to facilitate the work of the Special Rapporteur.

On shared natural resources, the Commission's Working Group on the topic continued its assessment on the feasibility of future work on oil and gas on the basis of a working paper. The Working Group also had before it comments and observations received from Governments. The Commission endorsed the recommendation of the Working Group that it should not take up the consideration of the oil and gas aspects with regard to shared natural resources.

The Commission reconstituted the study group on the most-favoured-nation clause, which considered the various papers prepared on the basis of the framework agreed upon in 2009 [YUN 2009, p. 1307]. It also reconstituted the study group on treaties over time.

The Commission had before it a note on settlement of disputes clauses, prepared by the Secretariat, and decided to continue the debate on the issue at its next session. It was agreed that a member of the Commission would prepare a working paper for that purpose. The Commission established a planning group to consider its programme, procedures and working methods. The Working Group on the Long-term programme of work was reconstituted. The Commission decided that its sixty-third session would be held in Geneva from 26 April to 3 June and 4 July to 12 August 2011.

Topical summary report. Pursuant to General Assembly resolution 64/114 [YUN 2009, p. 1304], the Secretariat prepared a topical summary [A/CN.4/620 & Add.1] of the debate held on the report of the Commission at the Assembly's sixty-fourth (2009) session.

Assistance to special rapporteurs. Pursuant to Assembly resolution 64/114, the Secretary-General in July submitted a report [A/65/186] on assistance provided to ILC special rapporteurs, which also contained information on the challenges encountered in their work.

Commission vacancies. Following the election of ILC member Xue Hanqin (China) to the International Court of Justice and her subsequent resignation from ILC, the Secretariat in June issued a note [A/CN.4/632 & Add.1] on filling the vacant seat according to the ILC Statute.

Following the death of ILC member Paula Escarameia (Portugal), the Secretariat in December issued a note [A/CN.4/635] on filling the vacant seat according to the ILC Statute.

Reservations to treaties

ILC considered [A/65/10] addendum 2 to the fourteenth report [A/CN.4/614/Add.2] and the fifteenth [A/CN.4/624 & Add.1,2] and sixteenth [A/CN.4/626 & Add.1] reports of Special Rapporteur Alain Pellet (France). Addendum 2 to the fourteenth report and the fifteenth report considered the legal effects of reservations, acceptances of reservations and objections to reservations, as well as the legal effects of interpretative declarations and reactions thereto. Following a debate in plenary on those reports, the Commission referred 37 draft guidelines to the Drafting Committee. The sixteenth report considered the issue of reservations, objections to reservations, acceptances of reservations and interpretative declarations in relation to the succession of States. Following a debate in plenary, the Commission referred 20 draft guidelines to the Drafting Committee. The Commission also had before it a memorandum by the Secretariat on reservations to treaties in the context of succession of States, which had been submitted in 2009 [YUN 2009, p. 1312].

On 26 May, the Commission provisionally adopted the following draft guidelines: 2.6.3 (Freedom to formulate objections), 2.6.4 (Freedom to oppose the entry into force of the treaty vis-à-vis the author of the reservation), 3.4.1 (Permissibility of the acceptance of a reservation), 3.4.2 (Permissibility of an objection to a reservation), 3.5 (Permissibility of an interpretative declaration), 3.5.1 (Permissibility of an interpretative declaration which is in fact a reservation), 3.5.2 (Conditions for the permissibility of a conditional interpretative declaration), 3.5.3 (Competence to assess the permissibility of a conditional interpretative declaration), 3.6 (Permissibility of reactions to interpretative declarations), 3.6.1 (Permissibility of approvals of interpretative declarations) and 3.6.2 (Permissibility of oppositions to interpretative declarations). The Commission also adopted the title of section 3.4 of the Guide to Practice (Permissibility of reactions to reservations).

On 5 July, the Commission provisionally adopted the following draft guidelines: 4.1 (Establishment of a reservation with regard to another State or organization), 4.1.1 (Establishment of a reservation expressly authorized by a treaty), 4.1.2 (Establishment of a reservation to a treaty which has to be applied in its entirety), 4.1.3 (Establishment of a reservation to a constituent instrument of an international organization), 4.2.1 (Status of the author of an established reservation), 4.2.2 (Effect of the establishment of a reservation on the entry into force of a treaty), 4.2.3 (Effect of the establishment of a reservation on the status of the author as a party to the treaty), 4.2.4 (Effect of an established reservation on treaty relations), 4.2.5 (Non-reciprocal application of obligations to which a reservation relates), 4.3 (Effect of an objection to a valid reservation), 4.3.1 (Effect of an objection on the entry into force of the treaty as between the author of the objection and the author of a reservation), 4.3.2 (Entry into force of the treaty between the author of a reservation and the author of an objection), 4.3.3 (Non-entry into force of the treaty for the author of a reservation when unanimous acceptance is required), 4.3.4 (Non-entry into force of the treaty as between the author of a reservation and the author of an objection with maximum effect), 4.3.5 (Effect of an objection on treaty relations), 4.3.6 (Effect of an objection on provisions other than those to which the reservation relates), 4.3.7 (Right of the author of a valid reservation not to be compelled to comply with the treaty without the benefit of its reservation), 4.4.1 (Absence of effect on rights and obligations under another treaty), 4.4.2 (Absence of effect on rights and obligations under customary international law) and 4.4.3 (Absence of effect on a peremptory norm of general international law (jus cogens)). The Commission also adopted the titles of section 4 (Legal effects of reservations and interpretative declarations), section 4.2 (Effects of an established reservation) and section 4.4 (Effect of a reservation on rights and obligations outside of the treaty) of the Guide to Practice.

On 8 July, the Commission provisionally adopted the following draft guidelines: 5.1.1 (Newly independent States), 5.1.2 (Uniting or separation of States), 5.1.3 (Irrelevance of certain reservations in cases involving a uniting of States), 5.1.4 (Establishment of new reservations formulated by a successor State), 5.1.5 (Maintenance of the territorial scope of reservations formulated by the predecessor State), 5.1.6 (Territorial scope of reservations in cases involving a uniting of States), 5.1.7 (Territorial scope of reservations of the successor State in cases of succession involving part of a territory), 5.1.8 (Timing of the effects of non-maintenance by a successor State of a reservation formulated by the predecessor State), 5.1.9 (Late reservations formulated by a successor State), 5.2.1 (Maintenance by the successor State of objections formulated by the predecessor State), 5.2.2 (Irrelevance of certain objections in cases involving a uniting of States), 5.2.3 (Maintenance of objections to reservations of the predecessor State), 5.2.4 (Reservations of the predecessor State to which no objections have been made), 5.2.5 (Capacity of a successor State to formulate objections to reservations), 5.2.6 (Objections by a successor State other than a newly independent State in respect of which a treaty continues in force), 5.3.1 (Maintenance by a newly independent State of express acceptances formulated by the predecessor State), 5.3.2 (Maintenance by a successor State other than a newly independent State of express acceptances formulated by the predecessor State), 5.3.3 (Timing of the effects of non-maintenance by a successor State of an express acceptance formulated by the predecessor State) and 5.4.1 (Interpretative declarations formulated by the predecessor State). The Commission also adopted the titles of sections 5 (Reservations, acceptances of and objections to reservations, and interpretative declarations in the case of succession of States), 5.1 (Reservations and succession of States), 5.2 (Objections to reservations and succession of States), 5.3 (Acceptances of reservations and succession of States) and 5.4 (Interpretative declarations and succession of States) of the Guide to Practice.

On 27 July, the Commission provisionally adopted the following guidelines: 3.3.2 (Effect of individual acceptance of an impermissible reservation), 3.3.3 (Effect of collective acceptance of an impermissible reservation), 4.5.1 (Nullity of an invalid reservation), 4.5.2 (Status of the author of an invalid reservation in relation to the treaty), 4.5.3 (Reactions to an invalid reservation), 4.6 (Absence of effect of a reservation on the relations between the other parties to the treaty), 4.7.1 (Clarification of the terms of the treaty by an interpretative declaration), 4.7.2 (Effect of the modification or the withdrawal of an interpretative declaration in respect of its author) and 4.7.3 (Effect of an interpretative declaration approved by all the contracting States and contracting organizations). At the same meeting the Commission also adopted the titles of sections 4.5 (Consequences of an invalid reservation) and 4.7 (Effect of an interpretative declaration) of the Guide to Practice.

The Commission also adopted the commentaries to the draft guidelines.

Having provisionally adopted the entire set of draft guidelines of the Guide to Practice on Reservations to Treaties, the Commission noted that it intended to adopt the final version of the Guide during its sixty-third (2011) session. In doing so, the Commission would take into consideration the observations of States and international organizations, as well as the organs with which the Commission cooperated, together with further observations received by its Secretariat before 31 January 2011. On 5 August, the Commission expressed its appreciation for the outstanding contribution Special Rapporteur Pellet had made to the treatment of the topic through his scholarly research and vast experience, thus enabling the Commission to provisionally adopt the complete Guide.

Expulsion of aliens

ILC had before it [A/65/10] the sixth report on the expulsion of aliens [A/CN.4/625 & Add.1] by Special Rapporteur Maurice Kamto (Cameroon), and the comments and information received from Governments [A/CN.4/628]. The Commission considered the report, which studied collective expulsion, disguised expulsion, extradition disguised as expulsion, the grounds for expulsion, detention pending expulsion and expulsion proceedings. On 7 May, the Commission referred to the Drafting Committee draft articles 8 to 15 on protection of the human rights of persons who had been or were being expelled. On 16 July, the Commission referred to the Drafting Committee draft articles A and 9, and draft articles B1 and C1, as well as draft articles B and A1, as revised by the Special Rapporteur during the session.

During its discussions with regard to methodology, it was suggested that the draft articles could be reorganized in five parts: a first part could determine the scope of the draft articles and define “expulsion”; a second part could set forth the conditions that had to be met if expulsion were to be internationally lawful; a third part could cover procedural matters; a fourth part could contain provisions concerning the property of the expelled person; and a fifth part could be devoted to the legal obligations of the States of transit and destination. It was stated that the report could have paid more attention to the practice of States in certain regions of the world and to the views they expressed in international forums. It was noted that the lack of definitive findings that could be drawn from the sources consulted showed that the subject might not be ripe for codification. It was therefore more a matter of identifying and recommending standards adopted in reasonably unequivocal practice. Commission members also reiterated the view that the subject lent itself more to political negotiation than to an exercise in codification and progressive development.

Several Commission members endorsed the Rapporteur’s opinion that disguised expulsion was by its nature contrary to international law because it violated all procedural guarantees and prevented the rights of the expelled person from being protected. It was further suggested that it should be made clear that the prohibition of disguised expulsion also applied to States of transit and destination. With regard to the grounds for expulsion, a number of members stressed the importance of the distinction between aliens lawfully and those unlawfully present in the territory of a State, a distinction frequently borne out by State practice. It was pointed out that the unlawful nature of an alien’s presence in the territory of a State was a sufficient ground for expulsion under the legislation of many States, as long as the procedural guarantees envisaged under international and domestic law were observed.

It was suggested that more specifics should be provided, either in the text or in the commentary, on the grounds for expulsion that were contrary to international law. In particular, some speakers underlined the fact that “cultural” grounds for expulsion, which served to limit the number of foreign workers in a country, were prohibited by international law, as they violated the principle of non-discrimination. Mention was also made of the unlawful nature of expulsion for purposes of reprisal, and it was suggested that expulsion on grounds of morality should be excluded. With regard to the procedural rules relevant to expulsion, some members agreed with the Rapporteur that a distinction should be made between aliens legally (or lawfully) in a State’s territory and aliens illegally (or unlawfully) in that territory. Some members pointed out that the distinction was grounded in various international instruments, international jurisprudence and national legislation and jurisprudence.

Effects of armed conflict on treaties

The Commission [A/65/10] had before it the first report of Special Rapporteur Lucius Caflisch (Switzerland) [A/CN.4/627 & Add.1], which contained his proposals for reformulating the draft articles as adopted on first reading, and a compilation of comments and observations received from Governments [A/CN.4/622 & Add.1]. It commenced the second reading of the draft articles on the effects of armed conflicts on treaties, which had been adopted on first reading in 2008 [YUN 2008, p. 1438]. Following a debate in plenary on the report of the Rapporteur, the Commission referred all the draft articles and the annex to the Drafting Committee.

General support was expressed for the methodology adopted in preparing the first report. It was suggested that increased emphasis be given to State practice. Other members noted that State practice was scarce and, at times, contradictory.

Protection of persons in the event of disasters

The Commission considered [A/65/10] the third report on the protection of persons in the event of disasters [A/CN.4/629] by Special Rapporteur Eduardo Valencia-Ospina (Colombia), dealing with the humanitarian principles of neutrality, impartiality and humanity, as well as the underlying concept of respect for human dignity. The report also considered the question of the primary responsibility of the affected State to protect persons affected by a disaster on its territory, and undertook an initial consideration of the requirement that external assistance be provided on the basis of the consent of the affected State. Following a debate in plenary, the Commission on 4 June referred draft articles 6 to 8, as proposed by the Special Rapporteur, to the Drafting Committee. The Commission also adopted draft articles 1 to 5. On 20 July, the Commission took note of draft articles 6 to 9, as provisionally adopted by the Drafting Committee [A/CN.4/L.776], relating to the humanitarian principles in disaster response, the inherent human dignity of the human person, the obligation to respect the human rights of affected persons, and the role of the affected State.

The Special Rapporteur recalled that it had been recommended that he focus on two issues: the principles, in addition to that of consent, directly relevant to the protection of persons, including the humanitarian principles of humanity, neutrality and impartiality; and the question of the primary responsibility of the affected State for protecting persons under its territorial jurisdiction, which also raised issues concerning the fundamental principles of sovereignty and non-intervention. He noted that the principle of humanity in its contemporary meaning was the cornerstone for the protection of persons in international law and served as a meeting point between international humanitarian law and international human rights law. Accordingly, it provided the necessary inspiration for instruments on the protection of persons in the event of disasters, and was an expression of general values that provided guidance to the international system as a whole, both in times of war and in times of peace. He had chosen to include the principle in the draft articles since it was equally applicable in times of crisis arising out of the onset of a disaster.

Extradition

The Commission [A/65/10] had before it a survey of multilateral conventions [A/CN.4/630], prepared by the Secretariat, which could be relevant for the work of the Commission on the obligation to extradite or prosecute (aut dedere aut judicare), as well as a working paper prepared by Special Rapporteur Zdzisław Galicki (Poland) [A/CN.4/L.774], which contained observations and suggestions based on the general framework proposed in 2009 [YUN 2009, p. 1307] and drew upon the survey by the Secretariat.

ILC reconstituted the Working Group, which continued its discussions with the aim of specifying the issues to be addressed to facilitate the work of the Rapporteur and affirmed the continuing relevance of the general work agreed upon in 2009. Taking into account the practice of the Commission, the Working Group reaffirmed that the general orientation of future reports of the Rapporteur should be towards presenting draft articles for consideration by the Commission, based on the general framework agreed upon in 2009. On 30 July, the Commission took note of the oral report presented by the temporary Chairman of the Working Group.

Immunity of State officials

The Commission had before it the second report on immunity of State officials from foreign criminal jurisdiction [A/CN.4/631] by Special Rapporteur Roman Anatolevich Kolodkin (Russia Federation). The Commission was not in a position to consider that report during the session.

Treaties over time

The Commission [A/65/10] reconstituted the study group on treaties over time [YUN 2009, p. 1308], which began its work on the aspects of the topic relating to subsequent agreements and practice, on the basis of an introductory report prepared by its Chairman, Georg Nolte (Germany), on the relevant jurisprudence of the International Court of Justice and of arbitral tribunals of ad hoc jurisdiction.

The discussion touched upon issues relating to the significance and role of subsequent agreements and practice in the interpretation of treaties, and possibly also in their modification. Issues discussed included: whether different judicial or quasi-judicial bodies had a different understanding of, or had a tendency to give a different weight to, subsequent agreements and practice in the interpretation of treaties; and whether the relevance and significance of subsequent agreements and practice could vary depending on factors relating to the treaty concerned, such as its age, its subject matter or its past- or future-oriented nature. It was generally felt, however, that no definitive conclusions could be drawn on those issues at that stage.

The Commission on 30 July took note of the oral report of the Chairman of the study group and approved the recommendation that a request for information be included in Chapter III of the Commission's report and brought to the attention of States by the Secretariat.

Most-favoured-nation clause

The Commission [A/65/10] reconstituted the study group on the most-favoured-nation (MFN) clause, which considered papers prepared on the basis of the framework agreed upon in 2009 [YUN 2009, p. 1307], including a catalogue of MFN provisions and papers on the 1978 draft articles [YUN 1978, p. 945]; the practice of the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade (GATT) and the World Trade Organization (WTO); the work of the Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development (OECD) and the United Nations Conference on Trade and Development (UNCTAD) on MFN; and the Maffezini issue. The papers, prepared by members of the study group, highlighted the challenges of the MFN clause in contemporary times by looking at the typology of MFN provisions; the areas of relevance of the 1978 draft articles; how MFN had developed and was developing in the context of GATT and WTO; the substantial work accomplished in the context of OECD and UNCTAD; and an analysis of some of the contemporary issues concerning the scope of application of the clause.

The study group held wide-ranging discussions on the basis of the papers before it, as well as developments elsewhere, including within the context of the Southern Common Market (MERCOSUR). Its focus was on the issue of how MFN clauses were being interpreted, particularly in the context of investment relations, and whether some common underlying guidelines could be formulated to serve as interpretative tools or in order to assure some certainty and stability in the field of investment law. The general sense of the study group was that it was premature to consider the option of preparing draft articles or a revision of the 1978 draft articles.

On 30 July, the Commission took note of the oral report of the Co-Chairmen of the study group, Donald M. McRae (Canada) and A. Rohan Perera (Sri Lanka).

Shared natural resources

The Commission [A/65/10] reconvened the Working Group on shared natural resources, chaired by Enrique Candioti (Argentina). The Group had before it a working paper on oil and gas [A/CN.4/621] prepared by Shinya Murase (Japan) and continued its assessment on the feasibility of future work on oil and gas on the basis of the paper. The Group also had before it comments and observations received from Governments [A/CN.4/633]. The Commission endorsed the recommendation of the Working Group that it should not take up the consideration of the oil and gas aspects with regard to shared natural resources.

The working paper noted that a majority of States was of the view that transboundary oil and gas issues were essentially bilateral in nature, as well as highly political and technical, involving diverse situations. Doubts were expressed as to the need for the Commission to proceed with any codification exercise on the issue, including the development of universal rules. It was feared that an attempt at generalization would inadvertently lead to additional complexity in an area that could be adequately addressed through bilateral efforts. Given that oil and gas reserves were often located on the continental shelf, there was also a concern that the subject had a bearing on maritime delimitation issues. Furthermore, it was considered that the option of collecting and analysing information about State practice concerning transboundary oil and gas or elaborating a model agreement on the subject would not lead to a fruitful exercise for the Commission, precisely because of the specificities of each case involving oil and gas. The sensitive nature of certain cases could be expected to hamper any attempt at a comprehensive and useful analysis of the issues involved.

Other matters

The Commission [A/65/10] also had before it a note on settlement of disputes clauses prepared by the Secretariat [A/CN.4/623]. It decided to continue debate on the issue under "Other matters" at its 2011 session and agreed that a member of the Commission would prepare a working paper for that purpose. The Commission established a planning group to consider its programme, procedures and working methods. At its first meeting (4 May), the planning group decided to reconstitute the Working Group on the Long-term programme of work.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 6 December [meeting 57], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Sixth (Legal) Committee [A/65/467], adopted resolution 65/26 without vote [agenda item 79].

Report of the International Law Commission on the work of its sixty-second session

The General Assembly,

Having considered the report of the International Law Commission on the work of its sixty-second session,

Emphasizing the importance of furthering the progressive development and codification of international law as a means of implementing the purposes and principles set forth in the Charter of the United Nations and in the Declaration on Principles of International Law concerning Friendly Relations and Cooperation among States in accordance with the Charter of the United Nations,

Recognizing the desirability of referring legal and drafting questions to the Sixth Committee, including topics that might be submitted to the International Law Commission for closer examination, and of enabling the Sixth Committee and the Commission to enhance further their contribution to the progressive development and codification of international law,

Recalling the need to keep under review those topics of international law which, given their new or renewed interest for the international community, may be suitable for the progressive development and codification of international law and therefore may be included in the future programme of work of the International Law Commission,

Reaffirming the importance for the successful work of the International Law Commission of the information provided by Member States concerning their views and practice,

Recognizing the importance of the work of the special rapporteurs of the International Law Commission,

Recalling the role of Member States in submitting proposals for the consideration of the International Law Commission,

Welcoming the holding of the International Law Seminar, and noting with appreciation the voluntary contributions made to the United Nations Trust Fund for the International Law Seminar,

Acknowledging the importance of facilitating the timely publication of the Yearbook of the International Law Commission and of eliminating the backlog,

Stressing the usefulness of focusing and structuring the debate on the report of the International Law Commission in the Sixth Committee in such a manner that conditions are provided for concentrated attention to each of the main topics dealt with in the report and for discussions on specific topics,

Wishing to enhance further, in the context of the revitalization of the debate on the report of the International Law Commission, the interaction between the Sixth Committee as a body of governmental representatives and the Commission as a body of independent legal experts, with a view to improving the dialogue between the two bodies,

Welcoming initiatives to hold interactive debates, panel discussions and question time in the Sixth Committee, as envisaged in resolution 58/316 of 1 July 2004 on further measures for the revitalization of the work of the General Assembly,

1. Takes note of the report of the International Law Commission on the work of its sixty-second session, and recommends that the Commission continue its work on the topics in its current programme, taking into account the comments and observations of Governments, whether submitted in writing or expressed orally in debates in the Sixth Committee;

2. Expresses its appreciation to the International Law Commission for the work accomplished at its sixty-second session;

3. Draws the attention of Governments to the importance for the International Law Commission of having their views on the various aspects of the topics on the agenda of the Commission, in particular on all the specific issues identified in chapter III of its report, regarding:

- (a) Reservations to treaties;
- (b) Treaties over time;

4. Invites Governments to submit to the secretariat of the Commission, by 31 January 2011, any further observations on the entire set of draft guidelines constituting the Guide to Practice on Reservations to Treaties, provisionally adopted by the Commission at its sixty-second session, with a view to finalizing the Guide at the sixty-third session;

5. Draws once again the attention of Governments to the importance for the International Law Commission of having their comments and observations by 1 January 2011 on the draft articles and commentaries on the topic "Responsibility of international organizations" adopted on first reading by the Commission at its sixty-first session;

6. Invites the International Law Commission to give priority to its consideration of the topics "Immunity of State officials from foreign criminal jurisdiction" and "The obligation to extradite or prosecute (aut dedere aut judicare)";

7. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General on assistance to special rapporteurs of the International Law Commission and of paragraphs 396 to 398 of the report of the International Law Commission, and requests the Secretary-General to continue his efforts to identify concrete options for support for the work of special rapporteurs, additional to those provided under General Assembly resolution 56/272 of 27 March 2002;

8. Invites the International Law Commission to continue taking measures to enhance its efficiency and productivity and to consider making proposals to that end;

9. Encourages the International Law Commission to continue taking cost-saving measures at its future sessions, without prejudice to the efficiency and effectiveness of its work;

10. Takes note of paragraph 405 of the report of the International Law Commission, and decides that the next session of the Commission shall be held at the United Nations Office at Geneva from 26 April to 3 June and from 4 July to 12 August 2011;

11. Welcomes the enhanced dialogue between the International Law Commission and the Sixth Committee at the sixty-fifth session of the General Assembly, stresses the desirability of further enhancing the dialogue between the two bodies, and in this context encourages, inter alia, the continued practice of informal consultations in the form of discussions between the members of the Sixth Committee and the members of the Commission attending the sixty-sixth session of the Assembly;

12. Encourages delegations, during the debate on the report of the International Law Commission, to adhere as far as possible to the structured work programme agreed to by the Sixth Committee and to consider presenting concise and focused statements;

13. Encourages Member States to consider being represented at the level of legal adviser during the first week in which the report of the International Law Commission is discussed in the Sixth Committee (International Law Week) to enable high-level discussions on issues of international law;

14. Requests the International Law Commission to continue to pay special attention to indicating in its annual report, for each topic, any specific issues on which expressions of views by Governments, either in the Sixth Committee or in written form, would be of particular interest in providing effective guidance for the Commission in its further work;

15. Takes note of paragraphs 404 and 406 to 410 of the report of the International Law Commission with regard to cooperation and interaction with other bodies, and encourages the Commission to continue the implementation of article 16, paragraph (e), article 25 and article 26 of its statute in order to further strengthen cooperation between the Commission and other bodies concerned with international law, having in mind the usefulness of such cooperation;

16. Notes that consulting with national organizations and individual experts concerned with international law may assist Governments in considering whether to make comments and observations on drafts submitted by the International Law Commission and in formulating their comments and observations;

17. Reaffirms its previous decisions concerning the indispensable role of the Codification Division of the Office of Legal Affairs of the Secretariat in providing assistance to the International Law Commission, including in the preparation of memorandums and studies on topics on the agenda of the Commission;

18. Approves the conclusions reached by the International Law Commission in paragraph 399 of its report, and reaffirms its previous decisions concerning the documentation and summary records of the Commission;

19. Takes note of paragraph 400 of the report of the International Law Commission, and stresses the need to expedite the preparation of the summary records of the Commission;

20. Also takes note of paragraph 401 of the report of the International Law Commission, expresses its appreciation to Governments that have made voluntary contributions to the trust fund on the backlog relating to the Year-book of the International Law Commission, and encourages further contributions to the fund;

21. Welcomes the continuous efforts of the Codification Division to maintain and improve the website relating to the work of the International Law Commission;

22. Expresses the hope that the International Law Seminar will continue to be held in connection with the sessions of the International Law Commission and that an increasing number of participants, in particular from developing countries, will be given the opportunity to attend the Seminar, and appeals to States to continue to make urgently needed voluntary contributions to the United Nations Trust Fund for the International Law Seminar;

23. Requests the Secretary-General to provide the International Law Seminar with adequate services, including interpretation, as required, and encourages him to continue considering ways to improve the structure and content of the Seminar;

24. Also requests the Secretary-General to forward to the International Law Commission, for its attention, the records of the debate on the report of the Commission at the sixty-fifth session of the General Assembly, together with such written statements as delegations may circulate in conjunction with their oral statements, and to prepare and distribute a topical summary of the debate, following established practice;

25. Requests the Secretariat to circulate to States, as soon as possible after the conclusion of the session of the International Law Commission, chapter II of its report containing a summary of the work of that session, chapter III containing the specific issues on which the views of Governments would be of particular interest to the Commission and the draft articles adopted on either first or second reading by the Commission;

26. Encourages the International Law Commission to continue considering ways in which specific issues on which the views of Governments would be of particular interest to the Commission could be framed so as to help Governments to have a better appreciation of the issues on which responses are required;

27. Recommends that the debate on the report of the International Law Commission at the sixty-sixth session of the General Assembly commence on 24 October 2011.

International State relations and international law

State responsibility

Responsibility of States for internationally wrongful acts

In 2001, the International Law Commission adopted articles on responsibility of States for internationally wrongful acts [YUN 2001, p. 1218]. The General Assembly took note of them by resolution 56/83 [ibid.].

Pursuant to Assembly resolution 62/61 [YUN 2007, p. 1364], the Secretary-General in April submitted a compilation of decisions of international courts, tribunals and other bodies concerning the responsibility of States for internationally wrongful acts [A/65/76]. Pursuant to the same resolution, the Secretary-General in May issued a report with a later addendum [A/65/96 & Add.1] containing comments and information on the topic received from 13 Governments.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 6 December [meeting 57], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Sixth Committee [A/65/463], adopted resolution 65/19 without vote [agenda item 75].

Responsibility of States for internationally wrongful acts

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 56/83 of 12 December 2001, the annex to which contains the text of the articles on responsibility of States for internationally wrongful acts, and its resolutions 59/35 of 2 December 2004 and 62/61 of 6 December 2007 commending the articles to the attention of Governments,

Emphasizing the continuing importance of the codification and progressive development of international law, as referred to in Article 13, paragraph 1 (a), of the Charter of the United Nations,

Noting that the subject of responsibility of States for internationally wrongful acts is of major importance in relations between States,

Taking into account the comments and observations of Governments and the discussions held in the Sixth Committee, at the fifty-sixth, fifty-ninth, sixty-second and sixty-fifth sessions of the General Assembly, on responsibility of States for internationally wrongful acts,

Noting with appreciation the compilation of decisions of international courts, tribunals and other bodies referring to the articles, prepared by the Secretary-General,

1. Acknowledges the importance of the articles on responsibility of States for internationally wrongful acts, and commends them once again to the attention of Governments, without prejudice to the question of their future adoption or other appropriate action;

2. Requests the Secretary-General to invite Governments to submit further written comments on any future action regarding the articles;

3. Also requests the Secretary-General to update the compilation of decisions of international courts, tribunals and other bodies referring to the articles and to invite Governments to submit information on their practice in this regard, and further requests the Secretary-General to submit this material well in advance of its sixty-eighth session;

4. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its sixty-eighth session the item entitled "Responsibility of States for internationally wrongful acts" and to further examine, within the framework of a working group of the Sixth Committee and with a view to taking a decision, the question of a convention on responsibility of States for internationally wrongful acts or other appropriate action on the basis of the articles.

International liability

In accordance with General Assembly resolution 62/68 [YUN 2007, p. 1359], the Secretary-General in July submitted a report with a later addendum [A/65/184 & Add.1] on the consideration of prevention of transboundary harm from hazardous activities [YUN 2007, p. 1359] and allocation of loss in the case of such harm [YUN 2006, p. 1511], which provided comments and observations from nine Governments.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 6 December [meeting 57], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Sixth Committee [A/65/469], adopted resolution 65/28 without vote [agenda item 81].

Consideration of prevention of transboundary harm from hazardous activities and allocation of loss in the case of such harm

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 56/82 of 12 December 2001, 61/36 of 4 December 2006, the annex to which contains the text of the principles on the allocation of loss in the case of transboundary harm arising out of hazardous activities, and 62/68 of 6 December 2007, the annex to which contains the text of the articles on prevention of transboundary harm from hazardous activities,

Emphasizing the continuing importance of the codification and progressive development of international law, as referred to in Article 13, paragraph 1 (a), of the Charter of the United Nations,

Noting that the questions of prevention of transboundary harm from hazardous activities and allocation of loss in the case of such harm are of major importance in relations between States,

Taking into account the views and comments expressed in the Sixth Committee at previous sessions and at the current session of the General Assembly,

1. Commends once again the articles on prevention of transboundary harm from hazardous activities, the text of which is annexed to General Assembly resolution 62/68, to the attention of Governments, without prejudice to any future action, as recommended by the International Law Commission regarding the articles;

2. Also commends once again the principles on the allocation of loss in the case of transboundary harm arising out of hazardous activities, the text of which is annexed to General Assembly resolution 61/36, to the attention of Governments, without prejudice to any future action, as recommended by the Commission regarding the principles;

3. Invites Governments to submit further comments on any future action, in particular on the form of the respective articles and principles, bearing in mind the recommendations made by the Commission in that regard, including in relation to the elaboration of a convention on the basis of the draft articles, as well as on any practice in relation to the application of the articles and principles;

4. Requests the Secretary-General to submit a compilation of decisions of international courts, tribunals and other bodies referring to the articles and the principles;

5. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its sixty-eighth session the item entitled “Consideration of prevention of transboundary harm from hazardous activities and allocation of loss in the case of such harm”.

Universal jurisdiction

Pursuant to resolution 64/117 [YUN 2009, p. 1312], the Secretary-General in July issued a report [A/65/181] on the scope and application of the principle of universal jurisdiction, on the basis of comments and observations received from 44 Member States.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 6 December [meeting 57], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Sixth Committee [A/65/474], adopted resolution 65/33 without vote [agenda item 86].

The scope and application of the principle of universal jurisdiction

The General Assembly,

Reaffirming its commitment to the purposes and principles of the Charter of the United Nations, to international law and to an international order based on the rule of law, which is essential for peaceful coexistence and cooperation among States,

Recalling its resolution 64/117 of 16 December 2009,

Recognizing the diversity of views expressed by States and the need for further consideration towards a better understanding of the scope and application of universal jurisdiction,

Reiterating its commitment to fighting impunity, and noting the views expressed by States that the legitimacy and credibility of the use of universal jurisdiction are best ensured by its responsible and judicious application consistent with international law,

1. Takes note with appreciation of the report of the Secretary-General prepared on the basis of comments and observations of Governments;

2. Decides that the Sixth Committee shall continue its consideration of the scope and application of universal jurisdiction, without prejudice to the consideration of this topic and related issues in other forums of the United Nations, and for this purpose decides to establish, at its sixty-sixth session, a working group of the Sixth Committee to undertake a thorough discussion of the scope and application of universal jurisdiction;

3. Invites Member States and relevant observers, as appropriate, to submit, before 30 April 2011, information and observations on the scope and application of universal jurisdiction, including, where appropriate, information on the relevant applicable international treaties, their domestic legal rules and judicial practice, and requests the Secretary-General to prepare and submit to the General Assembly, at its sixty-sixth session, a report based on such information and observations;

4. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its sixty-sixth session the item entitled “The scope and application of the principle of universal jurisdiction”.

Special missions

The General Assembly in 1969, by resolution 2530(XXIV) [YUN 1969, p. 750], adopted the Convention on Special Missions and its Optional Protocol on the compulsory settlement of disputes. The Convention, which entered into force in 1985, had 38 States parties as at 31 December. The Optional Protocol, which also entered into force in 1985, had 17 States parties.

Treaties involving international organizations

The 1975 Vienna Convention on the Representation of States in their Relations with International Organizations of a Universal Character [YUN 1975, p. 879], which would enter into force when ratified by 35 parties, had 34 States parties as at 31 December.

The 1986 Vienna Convention on the Law of Treaties between States and International Organizations or between International Organizations [YUN 1986, p. 1006] had 41 parties, including 12 international organizations. It would enter into force when ratified by 35 states.

Succession of states

The 1978 Vienna Convention on Succession of States in Respect of Treaties [YUN 1978, p. 951], which entered into force in 1996, had 22 States parties as at 31 December.

The 1983 Vienna Convention on Succession of States in Respect of State Property, Archives and Debts [YUN 1983, p. 1119], which would enter into force when ratified by 15 parties, had 7 States parties.

Jurisdictional immunities of States and their properties

The General Assembly, by resolution 59/38 [YUN 2004, p. 1304], adopted the Convention on Jurisdictional Immunities of States and Their Property. As at 31 December, the Convention had 11 States parties. Japan, Kazakhstan, Saudi Arabia and Switzerland became parties during the year. The Convention would enter into force when ratified by 30 parties.

International terrorism

Convention on international terrorism

Ad Hoc Committee. In accordance with General Assembly resolution 64/118 [YUN 2009, p. 1309], the Ad Hoc Committee established by Assembly resolution 51/210 [YUN 1996, p. 1208] held its fourteenth session (New York, 12–16 April) [A/65/37] to continue, within the framework of a working group of the Sixth Committee, the elaboration of a draft comprehensive convention on international terrorism.

The Ad Hoc Committee held informal consultations and contacts on the draft comprehensive convention, and on the question of convening a high-level conference under UN auspices to formulate a joint organized response of the international community to terrorism in all its forms and manifestations. Delegations reiterated the importance of an early conclusion to the draft convention. Discussions focused on the scope of application of the convention, the need for the convention to include a clear legal definition of terrorism, and the need to address activities undertaken by the armed forces of a State that were not covered by international humanitarian law. It was further suggested that the draft convention should address the root causes of terrorism.

On the proposed convening of a high-level conference to consider the question of terrorism in all its aspects, Egypt, as sponsor delegation, recalled the importance of holding such a conference, which had been endorsed by the Movement of Non-Aligned Countries, the Organization of the Islamic Conference, the African Union and the League of Arab States. The Conference could consider the question of terrorism in all its aspects, including reaching a definition of terrorism that differentiated between legal rules to combat terrorism and international humanitarian law, as well as address the root causes of terrorism. It could also focus on the importance of education, communication, human rights and the rule of law in countering terrorism. Egypt re-emphasized the importance of not linking the issue of an international conference with the completion of the convention.

At the conclusion of its session, on 16 April, the Ad Hoc Committee recommended that the Sixth Committee, at the General Assembly's sixty-fifth (2010) session, establish a working group with a view to finalizing the draft convention and continue to discuss the agenda item on the question of convening a high-level conference under UN auspices.

Working group. Pursuant to General Assembly resolution 64/118 [YUN 2009, p. 1309] and as recommended by the Ad Hoc Committee (see above), the Sixth Committee on 4 October established a working group to finalize the draft convention and to discuss the item on convening a high-level conference. The working group held two meetings as well as informal consultations. In November it submitted a report to the Assembly [A/C.6/65/L.10] containing the texts of the preamble and articles 1, 2 and 4 to 27 of the draft convention; proposals in relation to the outstanding issues surrounding the draft convention; and informal summaries by the chair of the working group concerning the draft convention and the high-level conference.

Measures to eliminate international terrorism

In accordance with General Assembly resolution 50/53 [YUN 1995, p. 1330], the Secretary-General in July issued his annual report [A/65/175] on measures taken by 24 States, 10 international organizations and the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime (UNODC) to implement the 1994 Declaration on Measures to Eliminate International Terrorism, approved by Assembly resolution 49/60 [YUN 1994, p. 1293] and Security Council resolution 1269(1999) [YUN 1999, p. 1240]. The report listed 30 international instruments pertaining to terrorism, indicating the status of State participation in each, and provided information on workshops and training courses on combating terrorism organized by four UN system bodies and two international organizations. Two September addendums [A/65/175/Add.1,2] summarized information submitted by two additional States.

In other action, during the nineteenth session (17–21 May) of the Commission on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice [E/2010/30], the Chief of the Terrorism Prevention Branch briefed participants on the counter-terrorism technical assistance work of UNODC. She noted that while progress had been made, much work remained to be done in order to reach universal ratification and full implementation of the international legal instruments relating to terrorism. The Commission had before it a report of the Secretary-General on assistance in implementing the international conventions and protocols related to terrorism [E/CN.15/2010/9].

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 6 December [meeting 57], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Sixth Committee [A/65/475], adopted resolution 65/34 without vote [agenda item 107].

Measures to eliminate international terrorism

The General Assembly,

Guided by the purposes and principles of the Charter of the United Nations,

Reaffirming, in all its aspects, the United Nations Global Counter-Terrorism Strategy adopted on 8 September 2006, enhancing the overall framework for the efforts of the international community to effectively counter the scourge of terrorism in all its forms and manifestations, and recalling the first and second biennial review of the Strategy, on 4 and 5 September 2008 and on 8 September 2010, respectively, and the debates that were held on those occasions,

Recalling the Declaration on the Occasion of the Fiftieth Anniversary of the United Nations,

Recalling also the United Nations Millennium Declaration,

Recalling further the 2005 World Summit Outcome, and reaffirming in particular the section on terrorism,

Recalling the Declaration on Measures to Eliminate International Terrorism, contained in the annex to General Assembly resolution 49/60 of 9 December 1994, and the Declaration to Supplement the 1994 Declaration on Measures to Eliminate International Terrorism, contained in the annex to Assembly resolution 51/210 of 17 December 1996,

Recalling also all General Assembly resolutions on measures to eliminate international terrorism and Security Council resolutions on threats to international peace and security caused by terrorist acts,

Convinced of the importance of the consideration of measures to eliminate international terrorism by the General Assembly as the universal organ having competence to do so,

Deeply disturbed by the persistence of terrorist acts, which have been carried out worldwide,

Reaffirming its strong condemnation of the heinous acts of terrorism that have caused enormous loss of human life, destruction and damage, including those which prompted the adoption of General Assembly resolution 56/1 of 12 September 2001, as well as Security Council resolutions 1368(2001) of 12 September 2001, 1373(2001) of 28 September 2001 and 1377(2001) of 12 November 2001, and those that have occurred since,

Recalling the strong condemnation of the atrocious and deliberate attack against the headquarters of the United Nations Assistance Mission for Iraq in Baghdad on 19 August 2003 in General Assembly resolution 57/338 of 15 September 2003 and Security Council resolution 1502(2003) of 26 August 2003,

Affirming that States must ensure that any measure taken to combat terrorism complies with all their obligations under international law and must adopt such measures in accordance with international law, in particular international human rights, refugee and humanitarian law,

Stressing the need to strengthen further international cooperation among States and among international organizations and agencies, regional organizations and arrangements and the United Nations in order to prevent, combat and eliminate terrorism in all its forms and manifestations, wherever and by whomsoever committed, in accordance with the principles of the Charter, international law and the relevant international conventions,

Noting the role of the Security Council Committee established pursuant to resolution 1373(2001) concerning counter-terrorism in monitoring the implementation of that resolution, including the taking of the necessary financial, legal and technical measures by States and the ratification or acceptance of the relevant international conventions and protocols,

Mindful of the need to enhance the role of the United Nations and the relevant specialized agencies in combating international terrorism and of the proposals of the Secretary-General to enhance the role of the Organization in this respect,

Mindful also of the essential need to strengthen international, regional and subregional cooperation aimed at enhancing the national capacity of States to prevent and effectively suppress international terrorism in all its forms and manifestations,

Reiterating its call upon States to review urgently the scope of the existing international legal provisions on the prevention, repression and elimination of terrorism in all its forms and manifestations, with the aim of ensuring that there is a comprehensive legal framework covering all aspects of the matter,

Emphasizing that tolerance and dialogue among civilizations and the enhancement of interfaith and intercultural understanding are among the most important elements in promoting cooperation and success in combating terrorism, and welcoming the various initiatives to this end,

Reaffirming that no terrorist act can be justified in any circumstances,

Recalling Security Council resolution 1624(2005) of 14 September 2005, and bearing in mind that States must ensure that any measure taken to combat terrorism complies with their obligations under international law, in particular international human rights, refugee and humanitarian law,

Taking note of recent developments and initiatives at the international, regional and subregional levels to prevent and suppress international terrorism, including those of the African Union, the ASEAN Regional Forum, the Asia-Pacific Economic Cooperation, the Association of South-east Asian Nations, the Bali Counter-Terrorism Process, the Central American Integration System, the Collective Security Treaty Organization, the Common Market for Eastern and Southern Africa, the Cooperation Council for the Arab States of the Gulf, the Council of Europe, the East African Community, the Economic Community of West African States, the Euro Mediterranean Partnership, the European Free Trade Association, the European Union, the Group of Eight, the Intergovernmental Authority on Development, the International Civil Aviation Organization, the International Maritime Organization, the League of Arab States, the Movement of Non-Aligned Countries, the North Atlantic Treaty Organization, the Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development, the Organization for Security and Cooperation in Europe, the Organization of American States, the Organization of the Islamic Conference, the Pacific Islands Forum, the Shanghai Cooperation Organization, the Southern African Development Community and the World Customs Organization,

Noting regional efforts to prevent, combat and eliminate terrorism in all its forms and manifestations, wherever and by whomsoever committed, including through the elaboration of, and adherence to, regional conventions,

Recalling its decision in resolutions 54/110 of 9 December 1999, 55/158 of 12 December 2000, 56/88 of 12 December 2001, 57/27 of 19 November 2002, 58/81 of 9 December 2003, 59/46 of 2 December 2004, 60/43 of 8 December 2005, 61/40 of 4 December 2006, 62/71 of 6 December 2007, 63/129 of 11 December 2008 and 64/118 of 16 December 2009 that the Ad Hoc Committee established by General Assembly resolution 51/210 should address, and keep on its agenda, the question of convening a high-level conference under the auspices of the United Nations to formulate a joint organized response of the international community to terrorism in all its forms and manifestations,

Recalling also the Final Document of the Fifteenth Summit Conference of Heads of State and Government of the Movement of Non-Aligned Countries, adopted in Sharm el-Sheikh, Egypt, on 16 July 2009, which reiterated the collective position of the Non-Aligned Movement on terrorism and reaffirmed its previous initiative calling for an international summit conference under the auspices of the United Nations to formulate a joint organized response of the international community to terrorism in all its forms and manifestations, as well as other relevant initiatives,

Aware of its resolutions 57/219 of 18 December 2002, 58/187 of 22 December 2003, 59/191 of 20 December 2004, 60/158 of 16 December 2005, 61/171 of 19 December 2006, 62/159 of 18 December 2007, 63/185 of 18 December 2008 and 64/168 of 18 December 2009,

Having examined the report of the Secretary-General, the report of the Ad Hoc Committee established by General Assembly resolution 51/210 and the report of the Working Group established by the Sixth Committee at the sixty-fifth session of the Assembly,

1. Strongly condemns all acts, methods and practices of terrorism in all its forms and manifestations as criminal and unjustifiable, wherever and by whomsoever committed;

2. Calls upon all Member States, the United Nations and other appropriate international, regional and sub-regional organizations to implement the United Nations Global Counter-Terrorism Strategy, as well as the resolutions relating to the first and second biennial review of the Strategy, in all its aspects at the international, regional, subregional and national levels without delay, including by mobilizing resources and expertise;

3. Recalls the pivotal role of the General Assembly in following up the implementation and the updating of the Strategy, and in this regard also recalls its invitation to the Secretary-General to contribute to the future deliberations of the Assembly, and requests the Secretary-General when doing so to provide information on relevant activities within the Secretariat to ensure overall coordination and coherence in the counter-terrorism efforts of the United Nations system;

4. Reiterates that criminal acts intended or calculated to provoke a state of terror in the general public, a group of persons or particular persons for political purposes are in any circumstances unjustifiable, whatever the considerations of a political, philosophical, ideological, racial, ethnic, religious or other nature that may be invoked to justify them;

5. Reiterates its call upon all States to adopt further measures in accordance with the Charter of the United Nations and the relevant provisions of international law, including international standards of human rights, to prevent terrorism and to strengthen international cooperation in combating terrorism and, to that end, to consider in particular the implementation of the measures set out in paragraphs 3 (a) to (f) of General Assembly resolution 51/210;

6. Also reiterates its call upon all States, with the aim of enhancing the efficient implementation of relevant legal instruments, to intensify, as and where appropriate, the exchange of information on facts related to terrorism and, in so doing, to avoid the dissemination of inaccurate or unverified information;

7. Reiterates its call upon States to refrain from financing, encouraging, providing training for or otherwise supporting terrorist activities;

8. Expresses concern at the increase in incidents of kidnapping and hostage-taking with demands for ransom and/or political concessions by terrorist groups, and expresses the need to address this issue;

9. Urges States to ensure that their nationals or other persons and entities within their territory that wilfully provide or collect funds for the benefit of persons or entities who commit, or attempt to commit, facilitate or participate in the commission of terrorist acts are punished by penalties consistent with the grave nature of such acts;

10. Reminds States of their obligations under relevant international conventions and protocols and Security Council resolutions, including Council resolution 1373(2001), to ensure that perpetrators of terrorist acts are brought to justice;

11. Reaffirms that international cooperation as well as actions by States to combat terrorism should be conducted in conformity with the principles of the Charter, international law and relevant international conventions;

12. Recalls the adoption of the International Convention for the Suppression of Acts of Nuclear Terrorism, the Amendment to the Convention on the Physical Protection of Nuclear Material, the Protocol of 2005 to the Convention for the Suppression of Unlawful Acts against the Safety of Maritime Navigation and the Protocol of 2005 to the Protocol for the Suppression of Unlawful Acts against the Safety of Fixed Platforms Located on the Continental Shelf, and urges all States to consider, as a matter of priority, becoming parties to these instruments;

13. Urges all States that have not yet done so to consider, as a matter of priority and in accordance with Security Council resolution 1373(2001) and Council resolution 1566(2004) of 8 October 2004, becoming parties to the relevant conventions and protocols as referred to in paragraph 6 of General Assembly resolution 51/210, as well as the International Convention for the Suppression of Terrorist Bombings, the International Convention for the Suppression of the Financing of Terrorism, the International Convention for the Suppression of Acts of Nuclear Terrorism and the Amendment to the Convention on the Physical Protection of Nuclear Material, and calls upon all States to enact, as appropriate, the domestic legislation necessary to implement the provisions of those conventions and protocols, to ensure that the jurisdiction of their courts enables them to bring to trial the perpetrators of terrorist acts and to cooperate with and provide support and assistance to other States and relevant international and regional organizations to that end;

14. Urges States to cooperate with the Secretary-General and with one another, as well as with interested intergovernmental organizations, with a view to ensuring, where appropriate within existing mandates, that technical and other expert advice is provided to those States requiring and requesting assistance in becoming parties to and implementing the conventions and protocols referred to in paragraph 13 above;

15. Notes with appreciation and satisfaction that, consistent with the call contained in paragraphs 11 and 12 of General Assembly resolution 64/118, a number of States became parties to the relevant conventions and protocols referred to therein, thereby realizing the objective of wider acceptance and implementation of those conventions;

16. Reaffirms the Declaration on Measures to Eliminate International Terrorism and the Declaration to Supplement the 1994 Declaration on Measures to Eliminate International Terrorism, and calls upon all States to implement them;

17. Calls upon all States to cooperate to prevent and suppress terrorist acts;

18. Urges all States and the Secretary-General, in their efforts to prevent international terrorism, to make the best use of the existing institutions of the United Nations;

19. Requests the Terrorism Prevention Branch of the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime in Vienna to continue its efforts to enhance, through its mandate, the capabilities of the United Nations in the prevention of terrorism, and recognizes, in the context of the United Nations Global Counter-Terrorism Strategy and Security Council resolution 1373(2001), its role in assisting States in becoming parties to and implementing the relevant international conventions and protocols relating to terrorism, including the most recent among them, and in strengthening international cooperation mechanisms in criminal matters related to terrorism, including through national capacity-building;

20. Welcomes the current efforts by the Secretariat to prepare the third edition of the publication International Instruments related to the Prevention and Suppression of International Terrorism in all official languages;

21. Invites regional intergovernmental organizations to submit to the Secretary-General information on the measures they have adopted at the regional level to eliminate international terrorism, as well as on intergovernmental meetings held by those organizations;

22. Notes the progress made in the elaboration of the draft comprehensive convention on international terrorism during the meetings of the Ad Hoc Committee established by General Assembly resolution 51/210 and of the Working Group established by the Sixth Committee during the sixty-fifth session of the Assembly, and welcomes continuing efforts to that end;

23. Decides that the Ad Hoc Committee shall, on an expedited basis, continue to elaborate the draft comprehensive convention on international terrorism and shall continue to discuss the item included in its agenda by General Assembly resolution 54/110 concerning the question of convening a high-level conference under the auspices of the United Nations;

24. Also decides that the Ad Hoc Committee shall meet from 11 to 15 April 2011 in order to fulfil the mandate referred to in paragraph 23 above;

25. Requests the Secretary-General to continue to provide the Ad Hoc Committee with the facilities necessary for the performance of its work;

26. Requests the Ad Hoc Committee to report to the General Assembly at its sixty-fifth session in the event of the completion of the draft comprehensive convention on international terrorism;

27. Also requests the Ad Hoc Committee to report to the General Assembly at its sixty-sixth session on progress made in the implementation of its mandate;

28. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its sixty-sixth session the item entitled "Measures to eliminate international terrorism".

On 24 December, by decision 65/544, the General Assembly decided that the agenda item on measures to eliminate international terrorism would remain for consideration during its resumed sixty-fifth (2011) session.

Protocols Additional to the 1949 Geneva Conventions

Pursuant to resolution 63/125 [YUN 2008, p. 1444], the Secretary-General in July reported [A/65/138] on the status of the two 1977 Protocols Additional to the Geneva Conventions of 1949 relating to the protection of victims of armed conflicts [YUN 1977, p. 706]. The report included information submitted by 17 Member States and the International Committee of the Red Cross (ICRC) on measures taken to strengthen the dissemination and implementation of humanitarian law. Annexed to the report was a list of 171 States parties to one or both Protocols as at 2 June 2010. An addendum [A/65/138/Add.1] provided information submitted by 20 other States and ICRC, as well as a list of 52 States parties to Additional Protocol III of 8 December 2005 as at 7 July 2010.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 6 December [meeting 57], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Sixth Committee [A/65/470], adopted resolution 65/29 without vote [agenda item 82].

Status of the Protocols Additional to the Geneva Conventions of 1949 and relating to the protection of victims of armed conflicts

The General Assembly,

Recalling its biennial resolutions on the status of the Protocols Additional to the Geneva Conventions of 1949 and relating to the protection of victims of armed conflicts, including its resolution 63/125 of 11 December 2008,

Having considered the report of the Secretary-General,

Reaffirming the continuing value of established humanitarian rules relating to armed conflicts and the need to respect and ensure respect for those rules in all circumstances within the scope of the relevant international instruments, pending the earliest possible termination of such conflicts,

Stressing the need to consolidate the existing body of international humanitarian law through its universal acceptance and the need for wide dissemination and full implementation of such law at the national level, and expressing concern about all violations of the Geneva Conventions of 1949 and the Additional Protocols,

Calling upon Member States to disseminate knowledge of international humanitarian law as widely as possible, and calling upon all parties to armed conflict to apply international humanitarian law,

Noting with satisfaction the increasing number of national commissions and other bodies involved in advising authorities at the national level on the implementation, dissemination and development of international humanitarian law,

Noting with appreciation the meetings of representatives of those bodies organized by the International Committee of the Red Cross to facilitate the sharing of concrete experience and the exchange of views on their roles and on the challenges they face,

Stressing the possibility of making use of the International Humanitarian Fact-Finding Commission in relation to an armed conflict, pursuant to article 90 of Protocol I to the Geneva Conventions,

Stressing also the possibility for the International Humanitarian Fact-Finding Commission to facilitate, through its good offices, the restoration of an attitude of respect for the Geneva Conventions and Protocol I,

Taking note of the fact that, in paragraphs 8 and 9 of its resolution 1894(2009) of 11 November 2009, the Security Council noted the range of existing methods used, on a case-by-case basis, for gathering information on alleged violations of applicable international law relating to the protection of civilians, underlined the importance in that regard of receiving information that is timely, objective, accurate and reliable, and considered the possibility, to that end, of using the International Humanitarian Fact-Finding Commission established by article 90 of Protocol I,

Mindful of the role of the International Committee of the Red Cross in offering protection to the victims of armed conflicts,

Noting with appreciation the continuing efforts of the International Committee of the Red Cross to promote and disseminate knowledge of international humanitarian law, in particular the Geneva Conventions and the Additional Protocols,

Noting the special responsibilities of national Red Cross and Red Crescent societies, as auxiliaries to the public authorities of their respective States in the humanitarian field, to cooperate with and assist their Governments in the promotion, dissemination and implementation of international humanitarian law,

Noting also that the year 2009 marked the sixtieth anniversary of the adoption of the Geneva Conventions, and welcoming the various high-level meetings and seminars organized to celebrate that event, which gave new momentum to efforts to strengthen and improve implementation of international humanitarian law,

Calling upon Member States to actively participate in the Thirty-first International Conference of the Red Cross and Red Crescent, to be held in Geneva in November 2011,

Noting the serious concern expressed by States regarding the humanitarian impact caused by cluster munitions, and taking note of the entry into force of the Convention on Cluster Munitions on 1 August 2010 and the ongoing negotiation of a proposal on this subject within the context of the Convention on Prohibitions or Restrictions on the Use of Certain Conventional Weapons Which May Be Deemed to Be Excessively Injurious or to Have Indiscriminate Effects,

Welcoming the significant debate generated by the publication in 2005 of the study by the International Committee of the Red Cross on customary international humanitarian law and recent initiatives by the Committee, including the online launch of the updated study, as well as the growing number of translations into other languages of parts of the study, and looking forward to further constructive discussion on the subject,

Acknowledging the fact that the Rome Statute of the International Criminal Court covers the most serious crimes of international concern under international humanitarian law and that the Statute, while recalling that it is the duty of every State to exercise its criminal jurisdiction over those responsible for such crimes, shows the determination of the international community to put an end to impunity for the perpetrators of such crimes and thus to contribute to their prevention,

Noting the amendments to article 8 of the Rome Statute of the International Criminal Court, relating to war crimes under the Statute, adopted at the Review Conference of the Rome Statute, held in Kampala, on 10 June 2010,

Acknowledging the usefulness of discussing in the General Assembly the status of instruments of international humanitarian law relevant to the protection of victims of armed conflicts,

1. Welcomes the universal acceptance of the Geneva Conventions of 1949, and notes the trend towards a similarly wide acceptance of the two Additional Protocols of 1977;

2. Calls upon all States parties to the Geneva Conventions that have not yet done so to consider becoming parties to the Additional Protocols at the earliest possible date;

3. Calls upon all States that are already parties to Protocol I, or those States not parties, on becoming parties to Protocol I, to make the declaration provided for under article 90 of that Protocol and to consider making use, where appropriate, of the services of the International Humanitarian Fact-Finding Commission in accordance with the provisions of article 90 of Protocol I;

4. Calls upon all States that have not yet done so to consider becoming parties to the Convention for the Protection of Cultural Property in the Event of Armed Conflict and the two Protocols thereto and to other relevant treaties on international humanitarian law relating to the protection of victims of armed conflict;

5. Calls upon States to consider becoming parties to the Optional Protocol to the Convention on the Rights of the Child on the involvement of children in armed conflict;

6. Calls upon all States parties to the Protocols Additional to the Geneva Conventions to ensure their wide dissemination and full implementation;

7. Affirms the necessity of making the implementation of international humanitarian law more effective, and supports its further strengthening and development;

8. Notes with appreciation the adoption at the Thirtieth International Conference of the Red Cross and Red Crescent, held in Geneva from 26 to 30 November 2007, of resolution 3 entitled "Reaffirmation and implementation of international humanitarian law: preserving human life and dignity in armed conflict", which, inter alia, reiterates the obligation of States to take national measures to implement international humanitarian law, including training the armed forces and making this law known among the general public, as well as adopting legislation to punish war crimes in accordance with their international obligations;

9. Welcomes the activities of the Advisory Service on International Humanitarian Law of the International Committee of the Red Cross in supporting efforts made by Member States to take legislative and administrative action to implement international humanitarian law and in promoting the exchange of information on those efforts between Governments, and notes in particular the new manual on domestic implementation of international humanitarian law;

10. Also welcomes the increasing number of national commissions or committees for the implementation of international humanitarian law and for promoting the incorporation of treaties on international humanitarian law into national law and disseminating the rules of international humanitarian law;

11. Requests the Secretary-General to submit to the General Assembly at its sixty-seventh session a report on the status of the Additional Protocols relating to the protection of victims of armed conflicts, as well as on measures taken to strengthen the existing body of international humanitarian law, inter alia, with respect to its dissemination and full implementation at the national level, based on information received from Member States and the International Committee of the Red Cross;

12. Encourages Member States and the International Committee of the Red Cross, in transmitting information to the Secretary-General, to focus on new developments and activities during the reporting period;

13. Encourages Member States to explore ways of facilitating the submission of information for future reports of the Secretary-General and, in this context, to consider the convenience of drawing up guidelines or a questionnaire by Member States, where necessary with the assistance of the International Committee of the Red Cross, at the request of Member States and, as appropriate, in consultation with the Secretariat;

14. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its sixty-seventh session the item entitled "Status of the Protocols Additional to the Geneva Conventions of 1949 and relating to the protection of victims of armed conflicts".

Diplomatic relations

Protection of diplomatic and consular missions and representatives

As at 31 December, the States parties to the following conventions relating to the protection of diplomatic and consular relations numbered: 187 States parties to the 1961 Vienna Convention on Diplomatic Relations [YUN 1961, p. 512], 51 parties to the Optional Protocol concerning the acquisition of nationality [ibid., p. 516] and 66 parties to the Optional Protocol concerning the compulsory settlement of disputes [ibid.].

The 1963 Vienna Convention on Consular Relations [YUN 1963, p. 510] had 173 parties, the Optional Protocol concerning acquisition of nationality [ibid., p. 512] had 39, and the Optional Protocol concerning the compulsory settlement of disputes [ibid.] had 48.

Parties to the 1973 Convention on the Prevention and Punishment of Crimes against Internationally Protected Persons, including Diplomatic Agents [YUN 1973, p. 775] numbered 173.

Report of Secretary-General. In a July report [A/65/112] and later addendum [A/65/112/Add.1], the Secretary-General summarized information received from 29 States, pursuant to Assembly resolution 63/126 [YUN 2008, p. 1446], on serious violations of the protection and security of diplomatic and consular missions and representatives.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 6 December [meeting 57], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Sixth Committee [A/65/471], adopted resolution 65/30 without vote [agenda item 83].

Consideration of effective measures to enhance the protection, security and safety of diplomatic and consular missions and representatives

The General Assembly,

Having considered the report of the Secretary-General,

Conscious of the need to develop and strengthen friendly relations and cooperation among States,

Convinced that respect for the principles and rules of international law governing diplomatic and consular relations is a basic prerequisite for the normal conduct of relations among States and for the fulfilment of the purposes and principles of the Charter of the United Nations,

Alarmed by the new and recurring acts of violence against diplomatic and consular representatives, as well as against representatives of international intergovernmental organizations and officials of such organizations, which endanger or take innocent lives and seriously impede the normal work of such representatives and officials,

Expressing sympathy for the victims of such illegal acts,

Concerned at the failure to respect the inviolability of diplomatic and consular missions and representatives,

Recalling that, without prejudice to their privileges and immunities, it is the duty of all persons enjoying such privileges and immunities to respect the laws and regulations of the receiving State,

Recalling also that diplomatic and consular premises must not be used in any manner incompatible with the functions of diplomatic and consular missions,

Emphasizing the duty of States to take all appropriate measures required by international law in a timely manner, including measures of a preventive nature, and to bring offenders to justice,

Welcoming measures already taken by States to this end in conformity with their international obligations,

Convinced that the role of the United Nations, which includes the reporting procedures established pursuant to General Assembly resolution 35/168 of 15 December 1980 and further elaborated in subsequent Assembly resolutions, is important in promoting efforts to enhance the protection, security and safety of diplomatic and consular missions and representatives,

1. Welcomes the report of the Secretary-General;

2. Strongly condemns acts of violence against diplomatic and consular missions and representatives, as well as against missions and representatives of international intergovernmental organizations and officials of such organizations, and emphasizes that such acts can never be justified;

3. Urges States to strictly observe, implement and enforce the applicable principles and rules of international law governing diplomatic and consular relations, including during a period of armed conflict, and, in particular, to ensure, in conformity with their international obligations, the protection, security and safety of the missions, representatives and officials mentioned in paragraph 2 above officially present in territories under their jurisdiction, including practical measures to prevent and prohibit in their territories illegal activities of persons, groups and organizations that encourage, instigate, organize or engage in the perpetration of acts against the security and safety of such missions, representatives and officials;

4. Also urges States to take all appropriate measures at the national and international levels to prevent any acts of violence against the missions, representatives and officials mentioned in paragraph 2 above, including during a period of armed conflict, and to ensure, with the participation of the United Nations where appropriate, that such acts are fully investigated with a view to bringing offenders to justice;

5. Recommends that States cooperate closely through, inter alia, contacts between the diplomatic and consular missions and the receiving State with regard to practical measures designed to enhance the protection, security and safety of diplomatic and consular missions and representatives, including measures of a preventive nature, and with regard to the timely exchange of information on the circumstances of all serious violations thereof;

6. Urges States to take all appropriate measures, in accordance with international law, at the national and international levels, to prevent any abuse of diplomatic or consular privileges and immunities, in particular serious abuses, including those involving acts of violence;

7. Recommends that States cooperate closely with the State in whose territory abuses of diplomatic and consular privileges and immunities may have occurred, including by exchanging information and providing assistance to its juridical authorities in order to bring offenders to justice;

8. Calls upon States that have not yet done so to consider becoming parties to the instruments relevant to the protection, security and safety of diplomatic and consular missions and representatives;

9. Calls upon States, in cases where a dispute arises in connection with a violation of their international obligations concerning the protection of the missions or the security of the representatives and officials mentioned in paragraph 2 above, to make use of the means available for peaceful settlement of disputes, including the good offices of the Secretary-General, and requests the Secretary-General, when he deems it appropriate, to offer his good offices to the States directly concerned;

10. Urges:

(a) All States to report to the Secretary-General, in a concise and expeditious manner and in accordance with the guidelines prepared by the Secretary-General, serious violations of the protection, security and safety of diplomatic and consular missions and representatives as well as missions and representatives with diplomatic status to international intergovernmental organizations;

(b) The State in which the violation took place—and, to the extent possible, the State where the alleged offender is present—to report to the Secretary-General, in a concise and expeditious manner and in accordance with the guidelines prepared by the Secretary-General, on measures taken to bring the offender to justice and eventually to communicate, in accordance with its laws, the final outcome of the proceedings against the offender, and to report on measures adopted with a view to preventing a repetition of such violations;

11. Requests the Secretary-General:

(a) To send, without delay, a circular note to all States reminding them of the request contained in paragraph 10 above;

(b) To circulate to all States, upon receipt, the reports received by him pursuant to paragraph 10 above, unless the reporting State requests otherwise;

(c) To draw the attention, when appropriate, of the States directly concerned to the reporting procedures provided for in paragraph 10 above, when a serious violation has been reported pursuant to paragraph 10 (a) above;

(d) To address reminders to States where such violations have occurred if reports pursuant to paragraph 10 (a) above or follow-up reports pursuant to paragraph 10 (b) above have not been made within a reasonable period of time;

12. Also requests the Secretary-General to invite States, in the circular note referred to in paragraph 11 (a) above, to inform him of their views with respect to any measures needed or already taken to enhance the protection, security and safety of diplomatic and consular missions and representatives as well as missions and representatives with diplomatic status to international intergovernmental organizations;

13. Further requests the Secretary-General to submit to the General Assembly at its sixty-seventh session a report containing:

(a) Information on the state of ratification of and accessions to the instruments referred to in paragraph 8 above;

(b) A summary of the reports received and views expressed pursuant to paragraphs 10 and 12 above;

14. Invites the Secretary-General to include in his report to the General Assembly any views he may wish to express on the matters referred to in paragraph 13 above;

15. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its sixty-seventh session the item entitled “Consideration of effective measures to enhance the protection, security and safety of diplomatic and consular missions and representatives”.

Diplomatic protection

In 2006, the International Law Commission adopted the draft articles on diplomatic protection [YUN 2006, p. 1522]. The General Assembly took note of them by resolution 61/35 [ibid.] and invited Governments to submit comments concerning the Commission’s recommendation to elaborate a convention on the basis of the articles.

In a July report [A/65/182] and later addendum [A/65/182/Add.1], the Secretary-General summarized comments and observations received from nine States, pursuant to General Assembly resolution 62/67 [YUN 2007, p. 1369], on any future action regarding the articles on diplomatic protection, and from five States on the articles on diplomatic protection themselves.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 6 December [meeting 57], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Sixth Committee [A/65/468], adopted resolution 65/27 without vote [agenda item 80].

Diplomatic protection

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 62/67 of 6 December 2007, the annex to which contains the text of the articles on diplomatic protection, commending the articles to the attention of Governments,

Recalling also that the International Law Commission decided to recommend to the General Assembly the elaboration of a convention on the basis of the articles on diplomatic protection,

Emphasizing the continuing importance of the codification and progressive development of international law, as referred to in Article 13, paragraph 1 (a), of the Charter of the United Nations,

Noting that the subject of diplomatic protection is of major importance in relations between States,

Taking into account the comments and observations of Governments and the discussions held in the Sixth Committee, at the sixty-second and sixty-fifth sessions of the General Assembly, on diplomatic protection,

1. Commends once again the articles on diplomatic protection to the attention of Governments, and invites them to submit in writing to the Secretary-General any further comments, including comments concerning the recommendation by the Commission to elaborate a convention on the basis of the articles;

2. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its sixty-eighth session the item entitled "Diplomatic protection" and, within the framework of a working group of the Sixth Committee, in the light of the written comments of Governments, as well as views expressed in the debates held at the sixty-second and sixty-fifth sessions of the General Assembly, to further examine the question of a convention on diplomatic protection, or any other appropriate action, on the basis of the above-mentioned articles and to also identify any difference of opinion on the articles.

Treaties and agreements

UN registration and publication of treaties

During 2010, the United Nations received 1,399 treaties and 1,118 actions for registration. In accordance with article 102 of the UN Charter and the relevant General Assembly regulations, 1,295 treaties and 962 subsequent actions were registered with the Secretariat. Those included treaties and actions that were submitted prior to 2010, but not registered at the time of submission due to defects in the submission. Twelve issues of the Monthly Statement of Treaties and International Agreements were published.

In addition, 90 volumes of the United Nations Treaty Series were published, incorporating the texts of treaties registered or filed and recorded and related subsequent actions in the original languages, with translations into English and French, as appropriate.

On 1 April, to reduce costs, the Treaty Section of the UN Office of Legal Affairs discontinued the printing and distribution of the Monthly Statement of Treaties and International Agreements to permanent missions and depositary libraries; the publication was made available electronically on the United Nations Treaty Collection (UNTC) website. The Monthly Statement of Treaties and International Agreements was still printed for sale by United Nations Publications.

The UNTC website, which contained published United Nations Treaty Series volumes, the League of Nations Treaty Series, the Treaty Handbook, Multilateral Treaties Deposited with the Secretary-General, the Summary of Practice of the Secretary-General as Depositary of Multilateral Treaties, the Final Clauses of Multilateral Treaties Handbook, the Treaty Event publications, information on capacity-building training and a range of materials on treaty law and practice generated over 3,000,000 page views.

The 2010 Treaty Event: Towards Universal Participation and Implementation (New York, 21–23 and 27–28 September) highlighted the theme of biodiversity. It featured more than 40 multilateral treaties, including treaties on human rights, the environment and climate change, disarmament, terrorism and penal matters, as well as privileges and immunities and the safety of UN and associated personnel. During the Treaty Event, 26 States undertook 44 treaty actions relating to 24 treaties deposited with the Secretary-General.

Multilateral treaties

The United Nations Treaty Series and the regularly updated status of multilateral treaties deposited with the Secretary-General were available on the Internet at the UN Treaty Collection website.

New multilateral treaties concluded under UN auspices

The following new treaties, concluded under UN auspices, were deposited with the Secretary-General during 2010:

Amendment to article 8 of the Rome Statute of the International Criminal Court, adopted in Kampala, Uganda, on 10 June

Amendments on the crime of aggression to the Rome Statute of the International Criminal Court, adopted in Kampala on 11 June

International Cocoa Agreement, 2010, adopted in Geneva on 25 June

Central African Convention for the Control of Small Arms and Light Weapons, their Ammunition and all Parts and Components that can be used for their Manufacture, Repair and Assembly, adopted in Kinshasa, Democratic Republic of the Congo, on 30 April

Nagoya Protocol on Access to Genetic Resources and the Fair and Equitable Sharing of Benefits Arising from their Utilization to the Convention on Biological Diversity, adopted in Nagoya, Japan, on 29 October

Nagoya-Kuala Lumpur Supplementary Protocol on Liability and Redress to the Cartagena Protocol on Biosafety, adopted in Nagoya on 15 October

Multilateral Agreement for the Establishment of an International Think Tank for Landlocked Developing Countries, adopted in New York on 24 September

Multilateral treaties deposited with the Secretary-General

At the end of 2010, the Secretary-General performed depositary functions in respect of 615 multilateral treaties. That number included treaties previously deposited with the Secretary-General of the League of Nations in respect of which the Secretary-General had assumed depositary functions, as well as those deposited with the Secretary-General that were terminated. Some 876 treaty actions (signatures, ratifications, acceptances, approvals, accessions, declarations, reservations, objections, notifications, etc.) were received for deposit with the Secretary-General, resulting in the issuance of 1,726 depositary notifications.

The following multilateral treaties deposited with the Secretary-General came into force in 2010:

Protocol on Strategic Environmental Assessment to the Convention on Environmental Impact Assessment in a Transboundary Context, adopted in Kiev, Ukraine, on 21 May 2003 and which came into force on 11 July

International Convention for the Protection of All Persons from Enforced Disappearance, adopted in New York on 20 December 2006 and which came into force on 23 December

Convention on Cluster Munitions, adopted in Dublin, Ireland, on 30 May 2008 and which came into force on 1 August

Optional Protocol to the Convention on the Safety of United Nations and Associated Personnel, adopted in New York on 8 December 2005 and which came into force on 19 August

Advice and capacity-building in treaty law and practice

Activities to provide advice and assistance on treaty law and practice increased significantly in 2010. Advice and assistance on treaty law and practice were provided to Member States, the specialized agencies, the regional commissions, other UN offices, treaty bodies and other entities. For each of the seven treat-ties deposited with the Secretary-General in 2010 (see above), the Treaty Section provided extensive legal advice during the negotiation process on the final clauses, prepared the originals of such treaties and their certified true copies.

Two seminars on treaty law and practice (New York, 13–14 April and 1–2 December) were conducted for legal advisors from Member States and other officials. One regional capacity-building workshop on treaty law and practice and the implementation of treaty obligations (Jakarta, Indonesia, 13–15 October) was attended by 44 participants.

International economic law

Commission on International Trade Law

At its forty-third session (New York, 21 June–9 July [A/65/17], the United Nations Commission on International Trade Law (UNCITRAL) adopted the UNCITRAL Arbitration Rules as revised in 2010 and recommended their use in the settlement of disputes arising in the context of international commercial relations. It adopted the UNCITRAL Legislative Guide on Secured Transactions: Supplement on Security Rights in Intellectual Property, and recommended that States utilize the Supplement to assess the economic efficiency of their secured transactions regimes as well as their intellectual property regimes, and consider the Supplement when revising or adopting related legislation. It also adopted part three of the UNCITRAL Legislative Guide on Insolvency Law, recommending that States utilize the Guide to assess the economic efficiency of their insolvency law regime and consider the Guide when revising or adopting related legislation.

The Commission considered the status of the conventions and model laws emanating from its work and the status of the 1958 New York Convention on the Recognition and Enforcement of Foreign Arbitral Awards (the New York Convention) [YUN 1958, p. 391], on the basis of a Secretariat note [A/CN.9/694]. The Commission also had before it a bibliography of writings relating to its work [A/CN.9/693]. UNCITRAL continued its work on procurement, arbitration and conciliation, online dispute resolution, insolvency law, security interests, and electronic commerce. It also reviewed the implementation of the 1958 New York Convention, the work on the collection and dissemination of case law on UNCITRAL texts (CLOUT), and technical cooperation and assistance activities.

The report of the session described actions taken on those topics (see pp. 1340–1347).

Revised UNCITRAL arbitration rules

The Commission had before it the reports of Working Group II (Arbitration and Conciliation) on the work of its fifty-first (Vienna, 14–18 September 2009) [A/CN.9/684] and fifty-second (New York, 1–5 February 2010) [A/CN.9/688] sessions, and the text of the draft revised UNCITRAL Arbitration Rules, as it resulted from the third reading by the Working Group at its fifty-second session and as contained in document [A/CN.9/703 & Add.1]. It also had before it comments on the draft revised Rules submitted by Governments and international organizations [A/CN.9/704 & Add.1–10], as well as a Secretariat note [A/CN.9/705] on possible recommendations to arbitral institutions and other interested bodies with respect to the revised Rules. The Committee of the Whole, established by the Commission, proceeded with the consideration of the text of the draft revised Rules.

On 25 June, the Commission adopted the UNCITRAL Arbitration Rules as revised in 2010.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 6 December [meeting 57], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Sixth Committee [A/65/465], adopted resolution 65/22 without vote [agenda item 77].

UNCITRAL Arbitration Rules as revised in 2010

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 2205(XXI) of 17 December 1966, which established the United Nations Commission on International Trade Law with the purpose of furthering the progressive harmonization and unification of the law of international trade in the interests of all peoples, in particular those of developing countries,

Recalling also its resolution 31/98 of 15 December 1976 recommending the use of the Arbitration Rules of the United Nations Commission on International Trade Law,

Recognizing the value of arbitration as a method of settling disputes that may arise in the context of international commercial relations,

Noting that the Arbitration Rules are recognized as a very successful text and are used in a wide variety of circumstances covering a broad range of disputes, including disputes between private commercial parties, investor-State disputes, State-to-State disputes and commercial disputes administered by arbitral institutions, in all parts of the world,

Recognizing the need for revising the Arbitration Rules to conform to current practices in international trade and to meet changes that have taken place over the last thirty years in arbitral practice,

Believing that the Arbitration Rules as revised in 2010 to reflect current practices will significantly enhance the efficiency of arbitration under the Rules,

Convinced that the revision of the Arbitration Rules in a manner that is acceptable to countries with different legal, social and economic systems can significantly contribute to the development of harmonious international economic relations and to the continuous strengthening of the rule of law,

Noting that the preparation of the Arbitration Rules as revised in 2010 was the subject of due deliberation and extensive consultations with Governments and interested circles and that the revised text can be expected to contribute significantly to the establishment of a harmonized legal framework for the fair and efficient settlement of international commercial disputes,

Noting also that the Arbitration Rules as revised in 2010 were adopted by the United Nations Commission on International Trade Law at its forty-third session after due deliberation,

1. Expresses its appreciation to the United Nations Commission on International Trade Law for having formulated and adopted the revised provisions of the Arbitration Rules, the text of which is contained in an annex to the report of the United Nations Commission on International Trade Law on the work of its forty-third session;

2. Recommends the use of the Arbitration Rules as revised in 2010 in the settlement of disputes arising in the context of international commercial relations;

3. Requests the Secretary-General to make all efforts to ensure that the Arbitration Rules as revised in 2010 become generally known and available.

Supplement to Legislative Guide on Secured Transactions

The Commission had before it the draft supplement to the UNCITRAL Legislative Guide on Secured Transactions dealing with security rights in intellectual property [A/CN.9/700 & Add.1–7]; a Secretariat note transmitting comments of international organizations on the draft supplement [A/CN.9/701]; the reports of the sixteenth (Vienna, 2–6 November 2009) [A/CN.9/685] and seventeenth (New York, 8–12 February 2010) [A/CN.9/689] sessions of Working Group VI (Security Interests); and chapter V of the report of Working Group V (Insolvency Law) on the work of its thirty-eighth session (New York, 19–23 April 2010) [A/CN.9/691], addressing the impact of insolvency of a licensor or licensee on a security right in that party's rights under a licence agreement.

On 29 June, the Committee adopted the UNCITRAL Legislative Guide on Secured Transactions: Supplement on Security Rights in Intellectual Property.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 6 December [meeting 57], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Sixth Committee [A/65/465], adopted resolution 65/23 without vote [agenda item 77].

UNCITRAL Legislative Guide on Secured Transactions: Supplement on Security Rights in Intellectual Property

The General Assembly,

Recognizing the importance to all States of efficient secured transactions regimes in promoting access to secured credit,

Recognizing also the need to make secured credit more available and at lower cost to intellectual property owners and other intellectual property right holders, and thus the need to enhance the value of intellectual property rights as security for credit,

Noting that the UNCITRAL Legislative Guide on Secured Transactions generally applies to security rights in intellectual property, without inadvertently interfering with the basic rules and objectives of law relating to intellectual property,

Taking into account the need to address the interaction between secured transactions law and law relating to intellectual property at both the national and the international levels,

Recognizing that States would need guidance as to how the recommendations contained in the UNCITRAL Legislative Guide on Secured Transactions would apply in an intellectual property context and as to the adjustments that need to be made to their laws to avoid inconsistencies between secured transactions law and law relating to intellectual property,

Noting the importance of balancing the interests of all stakeholders, including grantors, whether they are owners, licensors or licensees of intellectual property, and secured creditors,

Expressing its appreciation to intergovernmental and international non-governmental organizations active in the fields of secured financing and intellectual property, in particular the World Intellectual Property Organization and the Hague Conference on Private International Law, for their participation in and support for the development of the UNCITRAL Legislative Guide on Secured Transactions: Supplement on Security Rights in Intellectual Property,

1. Expresses its appreciation to the United Nations Commission on International Trade Law for the completion and adoption of the UNCITRAL Legislative Guide on Secured Transactions: Supplement on Security Rights in Intellectual Property;

2. Requests the Secretary-General to disseminate broadly, including through electronic means, the text of the Supplement and to transmit it to Governments and other interested bodies;

3. Recommends that all States utilize the Supplement to assess the economic efficiency of their intellectual property financing and give favourable consideration to the Supplement when revising or adopting their relevant legislation, and invites States that have done so to advise the Commission accordingly;

4. Also recommends that all States continue to consider becoming parties to the United Nations Convention on the Assignment of Receivables in International Trade and implementing the recommendations contained in the UNCITRAL Legislative Guide on Secured Transactions.

Legislative Guide on Insolvency Law

The Commission had before it the revised draft [A/CN.9/WG.V/WP.92 & Add.1] of part three of the UNCITRAL Legislative Guide on Insolvency Law, on the treatment of enterprise groups in insolvency, which the Working Group had approved at its thirty-eighth session (New York, 19–23 April); the comments by Governments and international organizations on draft part three [A/CN.9/699 & Add.1–4]; the reports of the thirty-seventh [A/CN.9/686] and thirty-eighth [A/CN.9/691] sessions of the Working Group; and a Secretariat note on the revision of draft part three as agreed by the Working Group at its thirty-eighth session [A/CN.9/708].

On 1 July, the Commission adopted part three of the UNCITRAL Legislative Guide on Insolvency Law.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 6 December [meeting 57], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Sixth Committee [A/65/465], adopted resolution 65/24 without vote [agenda item 77].

Part three of the UNCITRAL Legislative Guide on Insolvency Law

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 2205(XXI) of 17 December 1966, by which it established the United Nations Commission on International Trade Law with the purpose of furthering the progressive harmonization and unification of the law of international trade in the interests of all peoples, in particular those of developing countries,

Recalling also its resolution 59/40 of 2 December 2004 recommending the use of the UNCITRAL Legislative Guide on Insolvency Law,

Recognizing that effective insolvency regimes are increasingly seen as a means of encouraging economic development and investment, as well as fostering entrepreneurial activity and preserving employment,

Noting that because the business of corporations is increasingly conducted, both domestically and internationally, through enterprise groups, the formation of enterprise groups is a feature of the increasingly globalized world economy and thus significant to international trade and commerce,

Recognizing that where the business of an enterprise group fails, it is important not only to know how the group will be treated in insolvency proceedings, but also to ensure that that treatment facilitates, rather than hinders, the fast and efficient conduct of the insolvency proceedings,

Being aware that very few States recognize an enterprise group as a legal entity, except in limited ways for specific purposes, and that very few, if any, have a comprehensive regime for the treatment of enterprise groups in insolvency,

Noting that the UNCITRAL Legislative Guide on Insolvency Law, while providing a sound basis for the unification of insolvency law and forming key elements of a modern commercial law framework, does not address the insolvency of enterprise groups,

Appreciating the support for and the participation of international intergovernmental and non-governmental organizations active in the field of insolvency law reform in the development of an additional part of the UNCITRAL Legislative Guide on Insolvency Law addressing the treatment of enterprise groups in insolvency,

1. Expresses its appreciation to the United Nations Commission on International Trade Law for developing and adopting part three of the UNCITRAL Legislative Guide on Insolvency Law on the treatment of enterprise groups in insolvency;

2. Requests the Secretary-General to transmit the text of part three of the UNCITRAL Legislative Guide on Insolvency Law to Governments and other interested bodies;

3. Recommends that all States utilize the UNCITRAL Legislative Guide on Insolvency Law to assess the economic efficiency of their insolvency law regimes and give favourable consideration to the Guide when revising or adopting legislation relevant to insolvency, and invites States that have used the Guide to advise the Commission accordingly;

4. Also recommends that all States continue to consider implementation of the UNCITRAL Model Law on Cross-Border Insolvency;

5. Further recommends that the UNCITRAL Practice Guide on Cross-Border Insolvency Cooperation continue to be given due consideration by judges, insolvency practitioners and other stakeholders involved in cross-border insolvency proceedings.

Procurement

UNCITRAL took note of the reports of Working Group I (Procurement) on its seventeenth (Vienna, 7–11 December 2009) [A/CN.9/687] and eighteenth (New York, 12–16 April 2010) [A/CN.9/690] sessions relating to the revision of the UNCITRAL Model Law on Procurement of Goods, Construction and Services, in response to the Commission's 2004 request [YUN 2004, p. 1356]. At those sessions, the Working Group completed a second reading of all chapters of the draft revised model law and began a third reading of the text. The Working Group also settled many of the substantive issues and requested the Secretariat to re-draft certain provisions to reflect its deliberations at the sessions. The Commission further noted that the Working Group, at its eighteenth session, agreed to address the remaining outstanding issues with a view to finalizing the text at its nineteenth session. UNCITRAL requested the Working Group to complete its work on the revision of the 1994 Model Procurement Law during its next two sessions and present a draft revised model law for finalization and adoption by the Commission at its forty-fourth (2011) session.

The Working Group completed its work at its nineteenth session (Vienna, 1–5 November) [A/CN.9/713].

International commercial arbitration

The Commission entrusted its Working Group II (Arbitration and Conciliation) with the task of preparing a legal standard on transparency in treaty-based investor-State arbitration. The Working Group addressed the topic at its fifty-third session (Vienna, 4–8 October) [A/CN.9/712].

Implementation of the 1958 New York Convention

Under the ongoing project, approved by UNCITRAL in 1995 [YUN 1995, p. 1364], aimed at monitoring the legislative implementation of the New York Convention on the Recognition and Enforcement of Foreign Arbitral Awards [YUN 1958, p. 391], UNCITRAL, at its forty-third session, noted that pursuant to its request, the information collected during the implementation of the project had been published on the UNCITRAL website. In order to keep the compilation of information up-to-date and to enable the study based on that compilation to be as effective as possible, the Commission urged States to continue to provide the Secretariat with information regarding their implementation of the Convention. It also requested the Secretariat to pursue its efforts towards the preparation of the guide to enactment of the Convention. It was agreed that a more substantive presentation on progress made in preparing the guide would be made at a future session of the Commission.

Insolvency law

UNCITRAL noted the progress of Working Group V (Insolvency Law) in setting forth proposals for future work, which were discussed at the thirty-eighth session of the Working Group (New York, 19–23 April) [A/CN.9/691]. A document submitted by Switzerland [A/CN.9/709] set forth additional material. The Commission endorsed the Working Group's recommendation that activity be initiated on two important insolvency topics where a greater harmonization of national approaches would be beneficial in delivering certainty and predictability. Those topics were: to provide guidance on the interpretation and application of selected concepts of the UNCITRAL Model Insolvency Law relating to centre of main interests and possibly to develop a model law or provisions on insolvency law addressing selected international issues, including jurisdiction, access and recognition, in a manner that would not preclude the development of a convention; and the responsibility and liability of directors and officers of an enterprise in insolvency and pre-insolvency cases.

With respect to the proposal by Switzerland, the Commission agreed that the study on the feasibility and scope of an international instrument regarding the cross-border resolution of large and complex financial institutions should be undertaken by the Secretariat as resources permitted. Coordination would be sought between the Secretariat and interested international organizations.

The Commission heard a proposal by the Secretariat, which reported that the International Association of Restructuring, Insolvency and Bankruptcy Professionals (INSOL) and the World Bank had indicated a desire for information and guidance for judges on cross-border-related issues and in particular on the UNCITRAL Model Insolvency Law. To that end, the Commission was informed that the Secretariat was working on the preparation of a draft text that provided a judicial perspective on the use and interpretation of the UNCITRAL Model Insolvency Law. The Commission agreed that the Secretariat should be mandated to develop the text in the same flexible manner as was achieved with respect to the UNCITRAL Practice Guide on Cross-Border Insolvency Cooperation. That would involve consultation with judges and insolvency practitioners and professionals; consideration by the Working Group; and finalization and adoption by the Commission.

Electronic commerce

UNCITRAL considered future work in the area of electronic commerce. It had before it a note by the Secretariat [A/CN.9/692] that provided an update on the work of the World Customs Organization-UNCITRAL Joint Legal Task Force on Coordinated Border Management incorporating the International Single Window on the implementation and operation of a single window facility. It also provided information relating to electronic transferable records and an update on developments in the field of electronic commerce, in particular on identity management and electronic commerce conducted with mobile devices, including payments. The Commission requested the Secretariat to continue its participation in the work on single windows carried out by the Joint Legal Task Force and by other organizations, with a view to exchanging views and formulating recommendations on possible legislative work in that domain. It also requested the Secretariat to convene a colloquium to discuss electronic single window facilities, electronic transferable records, identity management and use of mobile devices in electronic commerce and to report to the Commission at its next session.

The Commission had before it a Secretariat note on the issue of online dispute resolution in cross-border electronic commerce transactions [A/CN.9/706] and a note transmitting information provided by the Institute of International Commercial Law in support of possible future work by UNCITRAL in the field of online dispute resolution [A/CN.9/710]. The Commission agreed that a working group should be established to undertake work in that field relating to cross-border e-commerce transactions, including business-to-business and business-to-consumer transactions.

Security interests

The Commission had before it a Secretariat note on possible future work in the area of security interests [A/CN.9/702 & Add.1]. The Commission noted that at the seventeenth session (New York, 8–12 February) [A/CN.9/689] of Working Group VI (Security Interests), support was expressed for work on registration of security rights and a model law on secured transactions based on the recommendations of the UNCITRAL Legislative Guide on Secured Transactions.

The Commission agreed that four issues related to secured transactions law should be retained on its work agenda: non-intermediated securities; registration of security rights; a model law; and a contractual guide on secured transactions. There was general agreement that priority should be given to work on registration of security rights in movable assets. Such a text would serve as a useful supplement the Commission's work on secured transactions and provide needed guidance to States with respect to the establishment and operation of security rights registries. It was stated that secured transactions law reform could not be effectively implemented without the establishment of an efficient, publicly accessible security rights registry. It was also emphasized that the Guide did not sufficiently address the various legal, administrative infrastructural and operational questions that needed to be resolved to ensure the successful implementation of a registry.

The Commission decided that Working Group VI should be entrusted with the preparation of a text on registration of security rights in movable assets. Other topics, such as security rights in non-intermediated securities, a model law based on the recommendations of the Guide, and a text dealing with the rights and obligations of the parties, should be retained in the programme of the Working Group.

The Commission also considered the topic of intellectual property licensing, a topic at the intersection of intellectual property and contract law. It requested the Secretariat to prepare a study that would identify specific topics and discuss the desirability and feasibility of the Commission preparing a legal text with a view to removing obstacles to international trade in the context of intellectual property licensing practices.

Microfinance

The Commission had before it a Secretariat note [A/CN.9/698] containing a study on microfinance in the context of international economic development, which reviewed issues relating to the regulatory and legal framework of microfinance. The Commission agreed that the Secretariat should convene a colloquium to explore the legal and regulatory issues surrounding microfinance that fell within the mandate of UNCITRAL. The colloquium should result in a report to the Commission at its 2011 session.

Case law on UNCITRAL texts

The Commission had before it a Secretariat note [A/CN.9/696] that set out the status of the system for collecting and disseminating case law on UNCITRAL texts (the CLOUT system). As at 14 April, 92 issues of compiled case law abstracts from the CLOUT system had been published, dealing with 925 cases relating mainly to the United Nations Convention on Contracts for the International Sale of Goods and the Model Law on Arbitration. The Commission noted the increase in the abstracts of case law on the UNCITRAL Model Insolvency Law, as well as the publication of abstracts on the New York Convention. It was widely agreed that the CLOUT system was an important aspect of the UNCITRAL technical cooperation and assistance activities, that its dissemination in all six official UN languages promoted the uniform interpretation and application of UNCITRAL texts, and that CLOUT and digests were important assets for promoting awareness, harmonization and uniform interpretation of the law relating to UNCITRAL texts.

Technical cooperation and assistance

The Commission had before it a Secretariat note [A/CN.9/695 & Add.1] describing technical cooperation and assistance activities undertaken since its 2009 note on that topic [YUN 2009, p. 1320], which emphasized the importance of such activities to the adoption and use of UNCITRAL texts. The Commission expressed its appreciation for the activities undertaken by the Secretariat [A/CN.9/695/Add.1] to promote adoption of the United Nations Convention on Contracts for the International Carriage of Goods Wholly or Partly by Sea (known as the “Rotterdam Rules”) [YUN 2008, p. 1454]. It was emphasized that legislative technical assistance, in particular to developing countries, was an activity that was not less important than the formulation of uniform rules itself. The Secretariat was encouraged to continue to provide such assistance and to improve its outreach to developing countries. The Commission welcomed the suggestion of the Secretariat on preparing an annual report on promotional activities relating to each of the newly adopted legislative texts.

The Commission noted that the continuing ability to respond to requests from States and regional organizations for technical cooperation and assistance was dependent upon the availability of funds to meet associated UNCITRAL costs. Nevertheless, despite efforts by the Secretariat to solicit new donations, funds available in the UNCITRAL Trust Fund for Symposia were very limited. Accordingly, requests for technical cooperation and assistance activities had to be carefully considered and the number of such activities limited. The Commission requested the Secretariat to continue exploring alternative sources of extrabudgetary funding and the availability of other resources to provide technical assistance.

Future work

UNCITRAL considered the working methods of the Commission and had before it a Secretariat note [A/CN.9/697] containing a proposed summary of conclusions on UNCITRAL rules of procedure and methods of work, as well as a note [A/CN.9/697/Add.1] reproducing comments from Burundi regarding UNCITRAL working methods.

The Commission adopted the summary of conclusions on UNCITRAL rules of procedure and methods of work. With respect to the implementation of that text, it was emphasized that all chairpersons should adhere to the principles expressed in the summary of conclusions. With regard to non-governmental organizations, whose contribution was recognized as welcome and essential to the work of the Commission and its Working Groups, it was emphasized that only those organizations that were expected to contribute to the advancement of a project should be invited to participate in a session.

UNCITRAL approved the holding of its forty-fourth session in Vienna (27 June–15 July 2011) and the schedule of meetings for its working groups up to and after its forty-fourth (2011) session.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 6 December [meeting 57], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Sixth Committee [A/65/465], adopted resolution 65/21 without vote [agenda item 77].

Report of the United Nations Commission on International Trade Law on the work of its forty-third session

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 2205(XXI) of 17 December 1966, by which it established the United Nations Commission on International Trade Law with a mandate to further the progressive harmonization and unification of the law of international trade and in that respect to bear in mind the interests of all peoples, in particular those of developing countries, in the extensive development of international trade,

Reaffirming its belief that the progressive modernization and harmonization of international trade law, in reducing or removing legal obstacles to the flow of international trade, especially those affecting developing countries, would contribute significantly to universal economic co-operation among all States on a basis of equality, equity, common interest and respect for the rule of law, to the elimination of discrimination in international trade and, thereby, to peace, stability and the well-being of all peoples,

Having considered the report of the Commission on the work of its forty-third session,

Reiterating its concern that activities undertaken by other bodies in the field of international trade law without adequate coordination with the Commission might lead to undesirable duplication of efforts and would not be in keeping with the aim of promoting efficiency, consistency and coherence in the unification and harmonization of international trade law,

Reaffirming the mandate of the Commission, as the core legal body within the United Nations system in the field of international trade law, to coordinate legal activities in this field, in particular to avoid duplication of efforts, including among organizations formulating rules of international trade, and to promote efficiency, consistency and coherence in the modernization and harmonization of international trade law, and to continue, through its secretariat, to maintain close cooperation with other international organs and organizations, including regional organizations, active in the field of international trade law,

1. Takes note with appreciation of the report of the United Nations Commission on International Trade Law on the work of its forty-third session;

2. Commends the Commission for the finalization and adoption of three new international commercial law standards as follows: the UNCITRAL Arbitration Rules as revised in 2010; the UNCITRAL Legislative Guide on Secured Transactions: Supplement on Security Rights in Intellectual Property; and part three of the UNCITRAL Legislative Guide on Insolvency Law on the treatment of enterprise groups in insolvency;

3. Encourages the Commission to finalize its work on a revision of the UNCITRAL Model Law on Procurement of Goods, Construction and Services at its forty-fourth session, in 2011;

4. Welcomes the decision of the Commission to take up new topics in the areas of settlement of commercial disputes, security interests and insolvency law and undertake work in the area of online dispute resolution;

5. Also welcomes the decision of the Commission to hold international colloquiums in order to facilitate identification of a road map for future work by the Commission in the area of electronic commerce and in order to explore the legal and regulatory issues surrounding microfinance that fell within the mandate of the Commission;

6. Further welcomes the progress made in the ongoing project of the Commission on monitoring the implementation of the Convention on the Recognition and Enforcement of Foreign Arbitral Awards, done at New York on 10 June 1958, and requests the Secretariat to pursue its efforts towards the preparation of a draft guide on the enactment of the Convention to promote a uniform interpretation and application of the Convention;

7. Endorses the efforts and initiatives of the Commission, as the core legal body within the United Nations system in the field of international trade law, aimed at increasing coordination of, and cooperation on, legal activities of international and regional organizations active in the field of international trade law and at promoting the rule of law at the national and international levels in this field, and in this regard appeals to relevant international and regional organizations to coordinate their legal activities with those of the Commission, to avoid duplication of efforts and to promote efficiency, consistency and coherence in the modernization and harmonization of international trade law;

8. Reaffirms the importance, in particular for developing countries, of the work of the Commission concerned with technical cooperation and assistance in the field of international trade law reform and development, and in this connection:

(a) Welcomes the initiatives of the Commission towards expanding, through its secretariat, its technical cooperation and assistance programme, and in that respect encourages the Secretary-General to seek partnerships with State and non-State actors to increase awareness about the work of the Commission and facilitate the effective implementation of legal standards resulting from its work;

(b) Expresses its appreciation to the Commission for carrying out technical cooperation and assistance activities, including at the country, subregional and regional levels, and for providing assistance with legislative drafting in the field of international trade law, and draws the attention of the Secretary-General to the limited resources that are made available in this field;

(c) Expresses its appreciation to the Governments whose contributions enabled the technical cooperation and assistance activities, and appeals to Governments, the relevant bodies of the United Nations system, organizations, institutions and individuals to make voluntary contributions to the United Nations Commission on International Trade Law Trust Fund for Symposia and, where appropriate, for the financing of special projects, and otherwise to assist the secretariat of the Commission in carrying out technical cooperation and assistance activities, in particular in developing countries;

(d) Reiterates its appeal to the United Nations Development Programme and other bodies responsible for development assistance, such as the World Bank and regional development banks, as well as to Governments in their bilateral aid programmes, to support the technical cooperation and assistance programme of the Commission and to cooperate and coordinate their activities with those of the Commission, in the light of the relevance and importance of the work and programmes of the Commission for the promotion of the rule of law at the national and international levels and for the implementation of the United Nations development agenda, including the achievement of the Millennium Development Goals;

(e) Welcomes the Commission's request that the Secretariat consider ways of better integrating its technical cooperation and assistance activities in activities conducted on the ground by the United Nations, in particular through the United Nations Development Programme or other country offices of the United Nations;

9. Appeals to Governments, the relevant bodies of the United Nations system, organizations, institutions and individuals to make voluntary contributions to the trust fund established to provide travel assistance to developing countries that are members of the Commission, at their request and in consultation with the Secretary-General, in order to enable renewal of the provision of that assistance and to increase expert representation from developing countries at sessions of the Commission and its working groups, necessary to build local expertise and capacities in the field of international trade law in those countries in order to facilitate the development of international trade and the promotion of foreign investment;

10. Decides, in order to ensure full participation by all Member States in the sessions of the Commission and its working groups, to continue, in the competent Main Committee during the sixty-fifth session of the General Assembly, its consideration of the granting of travel assistance to the least developed countries that are members of the Commission, at their request and in consultation with the Secretary-General;

11. Welcomes the adoption by the Commission of a summary of conclusions on the topic of the Commission's rules of procedure and methods of work, after the comprehensive review of its working methods undertaken by the Commission from its fortieth to forty-second sessions, in the light of the recent increase in membership of the Commission and the number of topics being dealt with by the Commission, and calls upon Member States, non-member States, observer organizations and the Secretariat to apply the rules of procedure and methods of work, with a view to ensuring the high quality of the work of the Commission and international acceptability of its instruments, and in this regard recalls its previous resolutions related to this matter;

12. Endorses the conviction of the Commission that the implementation and effective use of modern private law standards on international trade are essential for advancing good governance, sustained economic development and the eradication of poverty and hunger and that the promotion of the rule of law in commercial relations should be an integral part of the broader agenda of the United Nations to promote the rule of law at the national and international levels, including through the Rule of Law Coordination and Resource Group, supported by the Rule of Law Unit in the Executive Office of the Secretary-General;

13. Welcomes the panel discussion on the rule of law in trade and commerce, held during the forty-third session of the Commission, and takes note with appreciation of the opening remarks delivered by the Deputy Secretary-General and statements made by representatives of States and multilateral development banks and by the Director of the United Nations Rule of Law Unit, reiterating the role of the Commission in promoting the rule of law at the national and international levels and the impact of the work of the Commission on economic and social development, including the achievement of the Millennium Development Goals, on the promotion of coordination and coherence of technical assistance and capacity-building in the field of international commercial law and in the context of post-conflict reconstruction;

14. Takes note of the decisions taken by the Commission at the end of the panel discussion, and in particular welcomes those improving the integration of the work of the Commission into the United Nations joint rule of law programmes, in particular by raising awareness about the work of the Commission across the United Nations and by promoting regular dialogue between the Commission and the Rule of Law Coordination and Resource Group;

15. Welcomes the review by the Commission of the proposed biennial programme plan for subprogramme 5 (Progressive harmonization, modernization and unification of the law of international trade) of programme 6 (Legal affairs) in the context of its consideration of the proposed strategic framework for the period 2012–2013, takes note that the Commission also expressed concern that the resources allotted to the Secretariat under subprogramme 5 were insufficient for it to meet the increased demand from developing countries and countries with economies in transition for technical assistance with law reform in the field of commercial law, and also takes note that the Commission urged the Secretary-General to take steps to ensure that the comparatively small amount of additional resources necessary to meet a demand so crucial to development are made available promptly;

16. Takes note of the concern expressed by the Commission over the lack of sufficient resources in its secretariat for responding to the growing need for uniform interpretation of Commission texts, which is considered indispensable for their effective implementation, and that the Commission encouraged the Secretariat to explore various means to address this concern, inter alia, by building partnerships with interested institutions and establishing within the Commission's secretariat a pillar concentrating on the promotion of ways and means of uniform interpretation of Commission texts, in particular by sustaining and expanding the system for the collection and dissemination of case law on Commission texts (the CLOUT system);

17. Recalls its resolutions on partnerships between the United Nations and non-State actors, in particular the private sector, and its resolutions in which it encouraged the Commission to further explore different approaches to the use of partnerships with non-State actors in the implementation of its mandate, in particular in the area of technical assistance, in accordance with the applicable principles and guidelines and in cooperation and coordination with other relevant offices of the Secretariat, including the Global Compact Office;

18. Reiterates its request to the Secretary-General, in conformity with its resolutions on documentation-related matters, which, in particular, emphasize that any reduction in the length of documents should not adversely affect either the quality of the presentation or the substance of the documents, to bear in mind the particular characteristics of the mandate and work of the Commission in implementing page limits with respect to the documentation of the Commission;

19. Requests the Secretary-General to continue providing summary records of the meetings of the Commission, including meetings of committees of the whole established by the Commission for the duration of its annual session, relating to the formulation of normative texts;

20. Recalls its resolution in which it approved the establishment of the Yearbook of the United Nations Com- mission on International Trade Law, with the aim of making the work of the Commission more widely known and readily available, expresses its concern regarding the timeliness of the publication of the Yearbook, and requests the Secretary-General to explore options to facilitate the timely publication of the Yearbook;

21. Stresses the importance of bringing into effect the conventions emanating from the work of the Commission for the global unification and harmonization of international trade law, and to this end urges States that have not yet done so to consider signing, ratifying or acceding to those conventions;

22. Welcomes the preparation of digests of case law relating to the texts of the Commission, such as a digest of case law relating to the United Nations Convention on Contracts for the International Sale of Goods and a digest of case law relating to the Model Law on International Commercial Arbitration of the United Nations Commission on International Trade Law, with the aim of assisting in the dissemination of information on those texts and promoting their use, enactment and uniform interpretation.

Other questions

Rule of law at the national and international levels

In August, pursuant to General Assembly resolution 64/116 [YUN 2009, p. 1314], the Secretary-General submitted his second annual report [A/65/318] on strengthening and coordinating UN rule-of-law activities, which illustrated UN support to Member States over the preceding year, as well as gaps and challenges. The report reviewed emerging mechanisms and practices that promoted the effective implementation of international law by Member States, identified areas in need of concerted action and highlighted implementation of the recommendations made in the Secretary-General's 2008 [YUN 2008, p. 1449] and 2009 [YUN 2009, p. 1314] reports. Efforts to ensure the quality, coordination and coherence of UN engagement by the Rule of Law Coordination and Resource Group, supported by the Rule of Law Unit and chaired by the Deputy Secretary-General, continued to drive the Organization towards more strategic and effective rule-of-law assistance.

UN rule-of-law activities were undertaken in more than 125 States. In at least 60 countries, a minimum of three UN entities were engaged in such support. The second annual system-wide meeting on the rule of law (New York, 1 July) was attended by 25 UN system entities.

The Secretary-General observed that in the past year, judicial and non-judicial mechanisms ensuring accountability had proved to be an important tool in the international response to impunity. He recalled that since 2008, he had commented on the critical interface between international and national rule of law, recommending that the United Nations focus on finding better ways to support Member States and their populations in the domestic implementation of international norms and standards; working to achieve compliance with international obligations; and strengthening the institutions, policies, processes and conditions ensuring effective enforcement and enjoyment of a just national and international order.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 6 December [meeting 57], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Sixth Committee [A/65/473], adopted resolution 65/32 without vote [agenda item 85].

The rule of law at the national and international levels

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 64/116 of 16 December 2009,

Reaffirming its commitment to the purposes and principles of the Charter of the United Nations and international law, which are indispensable foundations of a more peaceful, prosperous and just world, and reiterating its determination to foster strict respect for them and to establish a just and lasting peace all over the world,

Reaffirming that human rights, the rule of law and democracy are interlinked and mutually reinforcing and that they belong to the universal and indivisible core values and principles of the United Nations,

Reaffirming also the need for universal adherence to and implementation of the rule of law at both the national and international levels and its solemn commitment to an international order based on the rule of law and international law, which, together with the principles of justice, is essential for peaceful coexistence and cooperation among States,

Convinced that the advancement of the rule of law at the national and international levels is essential for the realization of sustained economic growth, sustainable development, the eradication of poverty and hunger and the protection of all human rights and fundamental freedoms, and acknowledging that collective security depends on effective cooperation, in accordance with the Charter and international law, against transnational threats,

Reaffirming the duty of all States to refrain in their international relations from the threat or use of force in any manner inconsistent with the purposes and principles of the United Nations and to settle their international disputes by peaceful means in such a manner that international peace and security, and justice, are not endangered, in accordance with Chapter VI of the Charter, and calling upon States that have not yet done so to consider accepting the jurisdiction of the International Court of Justice in accordance with its Statute,

Convinced that the promotion of and respect for the rule of law at the national and international levels, as well as justice and good governance, should guide the activities of the United Nations and of its Member States,

Recalling paragraph 134 (e) of the 2005 World Summit Outcome,

1. Takes note of the annual report of the Secretary-General on strengthening and coordinating United Nations rule of law activities;

2. Reaffirms the role of the General Assembly in encouraging the progressive development of international law and its codification, and reaffirms further that States shall abide by all their obligations under international law;

3. Stresses the importance of adherence to the rule of law at the national level and the need to strengthen support to Member States, upon their request, in the domestic implementation of their respective international obligations through enhanced technical assistance and capacity-building, based on greater coordination and coherence within the United Nations system and among donors, and reiterates its call for greater evaluation of the effectiveness of such activities;

4. Calls, in this context, for dialogue to be enhanced among all stakeholders with a view to placing national perspectives at the centre of rule of law assistance in order to strengthen national ownership;

5. Calls upon the United Nations system to systematically address, as appropriate, aspects of the rule of law in relevant activities, recognizing the importance of the rule of law to virtually all areas of United Nations engagement;

6. Expresses full support for the overall coordination and coherence role of the Rule of Law Coordination and Resource Group within the United Nations system within existing mandates, supported by the Rule of Law Unit in the Executive Office of the Secretary-General, under the leadership of the Deputy Secretary-General;

7. Requests the Secretary-General to submit, in a timely manner, his next annual report on United Nations rule of law activities, in accordance with paragraph 5 of its resolution 63/128 of 11 December 2008;

8. Welcomes the dialogue initiated by the Rule of Law Coordination and Resource Group and the Rule of Law Unit with Member States on the topic “Promoting the rule of law at the international level”, and calls for the continuation of this dialogue with a view to fostering the rule of law at the international level;

9. Encourages the Secretary-General and the United Nations system to accord high priority to rule of law activities;

10. Invites the International Court of Justice, the United Nations Commission on International Trade Law and the International Law Commission to continue to comment, in their respective reports to the General Assembly, on their current roles in promoting the rule of law;

11. Invites the Rule of Law Coordination and Resource Group and the Rule of Law Unit to continue to interact with Member States on a regular basis, in particular in informal briefings;

12. Stresses the need to provide the Rule of Law Unit with the necessary funding and staff in order to enable it to carry out its tasks in an effective and sustainable manner, and urges the Secretary-General and Member States to continue to support the functioning of the Unit;

13. Decides to convene a high-level meeting of the General Assembly on the rule of law at the national and international levels during the high-level segment of its sixty-seventh session, the modalities of which will be finalized during its sixty-sixth session;

14. Also decides to include in the provisional agenda of its sixty-sixth session the item entitled “The rule of law at the national and international levels”, invites Member States to focus their comments in the upcoming Sixth Committee debate on the sub-topic “Rule of law and transitional justice in conflict and post-conflict situations”, without prejudice to the consideration of the item as a whole, and invites the Secretary-General, after seeking the views of Member States, to provide information on this sub-topic in his report.

Strengthening the role of the United Nations

Special Committee on United Nations Charter

In accordance with General Assembly resolution 64/115 [YUN 2009, p. 1322], the Special Committee on the Charter of the United Nations and on the Strengthening of the Role of the Organization, at its sixty-fifth session (New York, 1–9 March) [A/65/33], continued to consider proposals relating to the maintenance of international peace and security; the peaceful settlement of disputes between States; the improvement of the Committee’s working methods; and the status of the publications Repertory of Practice of United Nations Organs and Repertoire of the Practice of the Security Council.

Regarding the maintenance of international peace and security, the Committee discussed a revised working paper submitted by the Libyan Arab Jamahiriya on the strengthening of certain principles concerning the application of sanctions [YUN 2002, p. 1329].

The Committee also discussed the further revised working paper entitled “Strengthening of the role of the Organization and enhancing its effectiveness” [YUN 2009, p. 1321], introduced by Cuba in 2009. The sponsor noted that it had not received any proposals for amendments, requested that the working paper be kept on the agenda of the Committee, and called on delegations to further study the document.

The Libyan delegation also indicated that, with regard to the revised proposal it had submitted on strengthening the role of the United Nations in the maintenance of international peace and security [YUN 1998, p. 1233], it had not received any proposals for amendments, and called on delegations to further study the document.

On the revised working paper submitted by Belarus and the Russian Federation in 2005 [YUN 2005, p. 1446], which recommended, among other things, that an advisory opinion be requested from the International Court of Justice (ICJ) as to the legal consequences of the resort to the use of force by States without prior authorization by the Security Council, except in the exercise of the right to self-defence, the Special Committee heard a statement by the Russian Federation, which emphasized the topicality of the subject and spoke in favour of starting a comprehensive discussion that could lead to a general agreement. The Russian Federation pointed out that an ICJ advisory opinion would strengthen the implementation of the jus cogens principle of the non-use of force or the threat of force, addressing lacunae in the Charter, which did not contain detailed provisions regarding the use of force. It would also re-emphasize that the resort to the use of force by States should require prior authorization by the Security Council and specify the legal consequences of not fulfilling that requirement. Belarus reiterated that an ICJ advisory opinion would contribute to the uniform interpretation and application of the principles and norms of the Charter regarding the use of force. Belarus further pointed out that any violations of the relevant Charter provisions should result in the responsibility of the offenders under international law. It noted that the proposal was favourably viewed by most countries and that some of its aspects were reflected in the draft articles elaborated by the International Law Commission on "Responsibility of States for internationally wrongful acts". Belarus invited delegations to present their suggestions, which could help to achieve consensus on the issue. Some delegations reiterated their support for the proposal, which in their view would contribute to the strengthening of the principle of the non-use of force or the threat of force set out in the Charter and to the strengthening of the rule of law in international relations. Concern was expressed over attempts to justify the unilateral use of force without authorization by the Security Council. It was pointed out that an ICJ advisory opinion would be instrumental in preventing subjective interpretations of the Charter provisions. The Special Committee decided to keep the proposal on its agenda.

During the exchange of views on the peaceful settlement of disputes, some delegations stressed that according to the mandate of the Special Committee, the question of the peaceful settlement of disputes should remain on its agenda. Some delegations emphasized the important role of the judicial mechanisms, including ICJ, regarding the issue. Delegations also urged States to make the most effective use of the existing procedures and methods for the prevention and peaceful settlement of their disputes.

Delegations commended ongoing Secretariat efforts to update the Repertory of Practice of United Nations Organs and the Repertoire of the Practice of the Security Council and reduce the backlog in the preparation of those publications, including the enhanced cooperation with academic institutions and progress made towards making both publications available on the Internet. The Repertory website continued to be updated regularly and the fourteenth supplement to the Repertoire had been completed; an advance version was accessible on the Repertoire website. Significant progress had also been made on the fifteenth supplement; the Secretariat had begun the drafting of the sixteenth supplement, covering a shorter, two-year period (2008–2009), and undertaken the groundwork for preparing the seventeenth supplement. The Committee recommended that the General Assembly commend the Secretary-General for progress made on both publications; call on him to continue efforts to update the two publications and make them available in all language versions; and reiterate its call for voluntary contributions to the trust funds for updating the Repertoire and eliminating the backlog of the Repertory.

On the identification of new subjects, the Special Committee noted that the two new proposals by Ghana and Venezuela, entitled, respectively, "Principles and practical measures/mechanism for strengthening and ensuring more effective cooperation between the United Nations and regional organizations on the maintenance of international peace and security in areas of conflict prevention and resolution and post-conflict peacebuilding and peacekeeping, consistent with Chapter VIII of the Charter of the United Nations" and "Special mechanism for the study on the functional relationship of the General Assembly, the Economic and Social Council, with the Security Council", should be further discussed at the next session of the Special Committee.

Report of Secretary-General. In response to General Assembly resolution 64/115 [YUN 2009, p. 1322], the Secretary-General in August reported [A/65/214] on the progress made by the Secretariat in updating the Repertory of Practice of United Nations Organs and Repertoire of the Practice of the Security Council.

With respect to the Repertory, the Secretary-General concluded that the Assembly might wish to note the progress made in the preparation of Repertory studies and their posting on the Internet in English, French and Spanish; consider the recommendations of the Special Committee—including the increased use of the UN internship programme and expanded cooperation with academic institutions for the preparation of the studies and the sponsoring, on a voluntary basis, and with no cost to the United Nations, of associate experts to assist in updating the publication; express appreciation for the contribution received to the trust fund for the elimination of the backlog of the Repertory; note the progress made towards the elimination of the backlog through use of the trust fund; and encourage States to make additional contributions to it.

With regard to the Repertoire, the Secretary-General concluded that the Assembly might wish to note the progress made towards its updating and its posting in electronic form in all language versions on the UN website; call for voluntary contributions to the trust fund for updating the Repertoire; and note the support of Germany and Norway in sponsoring associate experts, and encourage other States to consider providing such assistance.

Charter provisions relating to sanctions

The Special Committee continued its consideration of implementation of the Charter provisions relating to assistance to third States affected by sanctions [A/65/33]. Several delegations reaffirmed that sanctions, applied in accordance with the Charter, were an important tool in maintaining and restoring international peace and security, and that they should be designed to minimize any adverse impact on civilian populations and third States. It was stated that the Security Council had effectively addressed the question of the effects of sanctions, and that the more precise methods adopted by the Council and its committees to target and calibrate sanctions were increasingly successful in avoiding unintended effects.

Several delegations emphasized that sanctions should be introduced and applied in conformity with the provisions of the Charter and international law, should be clearly defined, and should be introduced only after all means of peaceful settlement had been exhausted and their effects had been thoroughly considered. They should not be applied “preventively” in instances of mere violation of international law and should be imposed only when there existed a threat to international peace and security or an act of aggression. It was reiterated that targeted sanctions constituted a better option for minimizing negative effects on civilian populations. Sanctions should have a specified time frame, be subject to periodic review and be lifted as soon as their objectives were achieved. It was reiterated that the International Law Commission should consider the issue of the legal consequences of the imposition of unlawful or illegitimate sanctions by the Security Council under the topic “Responsibility of international organizations”. Concern was expressed over the imposition of unilateral sanctions in violation of international law and the right to development.

Some delegations maintained that, since none of the sanctions committees had been approached by Member States since 2003 about economic problems arising from the implementation of sanctions, the Committee should acknowledge that positive development, avoid duplication of work and conclude its consideration of the topic. Other delegations stated that the issue should be given priority consideration; even targeted sanctions could have a significant impact on third States. Some delegations referred to the issue of compensation to third States affected by the application of sanctions. Certain delegations argued for establishing an assessment mechanism and adopting practical measures to assist third States; others expressed support for a case-by-case approach in assessing the possible unintended effects of sanctions.

Report of Secretary-General. In response to General Assembly resolution 64/115 [YUN 2009, p. 1322], the Secretary-General in August submitted a report [A/65/217] highlighting operational changes due to the shift in focus in the Security Council and its sanctions committees towards targeted sanctions; Secretariat arrangements related to assistance to third States affected by the application of sanctions; and recent developments concerning the activities of the Assembly and the Economic and Social Council in the area of assistance to such States.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 6 December [meeting 57], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Sixth Committee [A/65/472], adopted resolution 65/31 without vote [agenda item 84].

Report of the Special Committee on the Charter of the United Nations and on the Strengthening of the Role of the Organization

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 3499(XXX) of 15 December 1975, by which it established the Special Committee on the Charter of the United Nations and on the Strengthening of the Role of the Organization, and its relevant resolutions adopted at subsequent sessions,

Recalling also its resolution 47/233 of 17 August 1993 on the revitalization of the work of the General Assembly,

Recalling further its resolution 47/62 of 11 December 1992 on the question of equitable representation on and increase in the membership of the Security Council,

Taking note of the report of the Open-ended Working Group on the Question of Equitable Representation on and Increase in the Membership of the Security Council and Other Matters related to the Security Council,

Recalling the elements relevant to the work of the Special Committee contained in its resolution 47/120 B of 20 September 1993,

Recalling also its resolution 51/241 of 31 July 1997 on the strengthening of the United Nations system and its resolution 51/242 of 15 September 1997, entitled “Supplement to an Agenda for Peace”, by which it adopted the texts on coordination and the question of sanctions imposed by the United Nations, which are annexed to that resolution,

Concerned about the special economic problems confronting certain States arising from the carrying out of preventive or enforcement measures taken by the Security Council against other States, and taking into account the obligation of Members of the United Nations under Article 49 of the Charter of the United Nations to join in affording mutual assistance in carrying out the measures decided upon by the Council,

Recalling the right of third States confronted with special economic problems of that nature to consult the Security Council with regard to a solution of those problems, in accordance with Article 50 of the Charter,

Recalling also that the International Court of Justice is the principal judicial organ of the United Nations, and reaffirming its authority and independence,

Mindful of the adoption of the revised working papers on the working methods of the Special Committee,

Taking note of the report of the Secretary-General entitled "Repertory of Practice of United Nations Organs and Repertoire of the Practice of the Security Council",

Taking note also of paragraphs 106 to 110, 176 and 177 of the 2005 World Summit Outcome,

Mindful of the decision of the Special Committee in which it expressed its readiness to engage, as appropriate, in the implementation of any decisions that might be taken at the high-level plenary meeting of the sixtieth session of the General Assembly in September 2005 that concerned the Charter and any amendments thereto,

Recalling the provisions of its resolutions 50/51 of 11 December 1995, 51/208 of 17 December 1996, 52/162 of 15 December 1997, 53/107 of 8 December 1998, 54/107 of 9 December 1999, 55/157 of 12 December 2000, 56/87 of 12 December 2001, 57/25 of 19 November 2002, 58/80 of 9 December 2003 and 59/45 of 2 December 2004,

Recalling also its resolution 64/115 of 16 December 2009 and the document entitled "Introduction and implementation of sanctions imposed by the United Nations" annexed thereto,

Having considered the report of the Special Committee on the work of its session held in 2010,

Noting with appreciation the work done by the Special Committee to encourage States to focus on the need to prevent and to settle peacefully their disputes which are likely to endanger the maintenance of international peace and security,

1. Takes note of the report of the Special Committee on the Charter of the United Nations and on the Strengthening of the Role of the Organization;

2. Decides that the Special Committee shall hold its next session from 28 February to 4 March and on 7 and 9 March 2011;

3. Requests the Special Committee, at its session in 2011, in accordance with paragraph 5 of General Assembly resolution 50/52 of 11 December 1995:

(a) To continue its consideration of all proposals concerning the question of the maintenance of international peace and security in all its aspects in order to strengthen the role of the United Nations and, in this context, to consider other proposals relating to the maintenance of international peace and security already submitted or which may be submitted to the Special Committee at its session in 2011;

(b) To continue to consider, on a priority basis and in an appropriate substantive manner and framework, the question of the implementation of the provisions of the Charter of the United Nations related to assistance to third States affected by the application of sanctions under Chapter VII of the Charter based on all of the related reports of the Secretary-General and the proposals submitted on the question;

(c) To keep on its agenda the question of the peaceful settlement of disputes between States;

(d) To consider, as appropriate, any proposal referred to it by the General Assembly in the implementation of the decisions of the high-level plenary meeting of the sixtieth session of the Assembly in September 2005 that concern the Charter and any amendments thereto;

(e) To continue to consider, on a priority basis, ways and means of improving its working methods and enhancing its efficiency with a view to identifying widely acceptable measures for future implementation;

4. Invites the Special Committee, at its session in 2011, to continue to identify new subjects for consideration in its future work with a view to contributing to the revitalization of the work of the United Nations;

5. Takes note of the new subjects proposed at the session of the Special Committee which was held from 1 to 9 March 2010;

6. Notes the readiness of the Special Committee to provide, within its mandate, such assistance as may be sought at the request of other subsidiary bodies of the General Assembly in relation to any issues before them;

7. Requests the Special Committee to submit a report on its work to the General Assembly at its sixty-sixth session;

8. Recognizes the important role of the International Court of Justice, the principal judicial organ of the United Nations, in adjudicating disputes among States and the value of its work, as well as the importance of having recourse to the Court in the peaceful settlement of disputes, takes note, consistent with Article 96 of the Charter, of the Court's advisory jurisdiction that may be requested by the General Assembly, the Security Council or other authorized organs of the United Nations and the specialized agencies, and requests the Secretary-General to distribute, in due course, the advisory opinions requested by the principal organs of the United Nations as official documents of the United Nations;

9. Commends the Secretary-General for the progress made in the preparation of studies of the Repertory of Practice of United Nations Organs, including the increased use of the internship programme of the United Nations and further expanded cooperation with academic institutions for this purpose, as well as the progress made towards updating the Repertoire of the Practice of the Security Council;

10. Notes with appreciation the contributions made by Member States to the trust fund for the updating of the Repertoire, as well as the trust fund for the elimination of the backlog in the Repertory;

11. Reiterates its call for voluntary contributions to the trust fund for the updating of the Repertoire, voluntary contributions to the trust fund for the elimination of the backlog in the Repertory so as to further support the Secretariat in carrying out the effective elimination of that backlog, as well as the sponsoring, on a voluntary basis, and with no cost to the United Nations, of associate experts to assist in the updating of the two publications;

12. Calls upon the Secretary-General to continue his efforts towards updating the two publications and making them available electronically in all their respective language versions and to address, in particular, the backlog in the preparation of volume III of the Repertory;

13. Reiterates the responsibility of the Secretary-General for the quality of the Repertory and the Repertoire, and, with regard to the Repertoire, calls upon the Secretary-General to continue to follow the modalities outlined in paragraphs 102 to 106 of the report of the Secretary-General of 18 September 1952;

14. Requests the Secretary-General to submit to the General Assembly, at its sixty-sixth session, a report on both the Repertory and the Repertoire;

15. Also requests the Secretary-General to brief the Special Committee at its next session on the information referred to in paragraph 11 of his report on the implementation of the provisions of the Charter related to assistance to third States affected by the application of sanctions;

16. Further requests the Secretary-General to submit to the General Assembly, at its sixty-sixth session, under the item entitled "Report of the Special Committee on the Charter of the United Nations and on the Strengthening of the Role of the Organization", a report on the implementation of the provisions of the Charter related to assistance to third States affected by the application of sanctions;

17. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its sixty-sixth session the item entitled "Report of the Special Committee on the Charter of the United Nations and on the Strengthening of the Role of the Organization".

UN Programme for the teaching and study of international law

In response to General Assembly resolution 64/113 [YUN 2009, p. 1326], the Secretary-General in October reported [A/65/514] on the United Nations Programme of Assistance in the Teaching, Study, Dissemination and Wider Appreciation of International Law, which covered implementation of the Programme in 2010.

Activities included the holding of the forty-sixth session of the International Law Seminar (Geneva, 5–23 July) and the convening of the International Law Fellowship Programme (The Hague, 5 July–13 August), attended by 19 fellows (10 men and 9 women) as well as two self-funded participants (women). In addition, lectures, seminars and study visits were organized by the UN Office of Legal Affairs (OLA). A review by the Codification Division of OLA indicated that significant cost savings could be achieved by no longer requesting the assistance of the United Nations Institute for Training and Research (UNITAR) in the administration of the fellowship programme. Accordingly, the Codification Division in 2010 conducted the fellowship programme without the assistance of UNITAR as a necessary cost-saving measure to increase the number of fellowships. To achieve further cost savings, the Division invited universities, institutions and organizations, as well as individuals, to make voluntary contributions and otherwise assist in the implementation of the programme.

The Codification Division also organized regional courses in international law and was responsible for the United Nations Audiovisual Library of International Law, created in response to the increasing demand for international law training. The Division also maintained 21 websites relating to the codification and progressive development of international law, the Programme of Assistance and various legal publications. The Division contributed published UN legal opinions to the Global Legal Information Network—a database of laws, regulations, judicial decisions and other legal sources contributed by governmental agencies and international organizations—which aimed to address the need of governmental organs, during the law-making process, to have knowledge of the laws and regulations of other jurisdictions. The Office's Treaty Section continued its technical assistance and training programme on participation in multilateral treaties, registration of treaties, depositary practices and final clauses. Another OLA programme, the annual Hamilton Shirley Amerasinghe Memorial Fellowship on the Law of the Sea (see p. 1391), provided successful fellows with facilities for postgraduate study and research.

The report also described the legal publications issued during the year, provided guidelines and recommendations for the execution of the 2011 Programme of Assistance and outlined the administrative and financial implications of UN participation in the Programme for the 2010–2011 biennium.

The Advisory Committee on the Programme held its forty-fifth session on 14 October.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 6 December [meeting 57], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Sixth Committee [A/65/466], adopted resolution 65/25 without vote [agenda item 78].

United Nations Programme of Assistance in the Teaching, Study, Dissemination and Wider Appreciation of International Law

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 2099(XX) of 20 December 1965, in which it established the United Nations Programme of Assistance in the Teaching, Study, Dissemination and Wider Appreciation of International Law to contribute towards a better knowledge of international law as a means of strengthening international peace and security and promoting friendly relations and cooperation among States,

Reaffirming that the Programme of Assistance is a core activity of the United Nations and that it has provided the foundation for the efforts of the United Nations to promote a better knowledge of international law for nearly half a century,

Reaffirming also that the increasing demand for international law training and dissemination activities creates new challenges for the Programme of Assistance,

Taking note with appreciation of the report of the Secretary-General on the implementation of the Programme of Assistance and the views of the Advisory Committee on the Programme of Assistance, which are contained in that report,

Noting with concern the reduction in the programme budget for the biennium 2010–2011 for fellowships for the benefit of developing countries indicated in the report of the Secretary-General, notwithstanding its resolution 64/113 of 16 December 2009,

Considering that international law should occupy an appropriate place in the teaching of legal disciplines at all universities,

Convinced that States, international and regional organizations, universities and institutions should be encouraged to give further support to the Programme of Assistance and to increase their activities to promote the teaching, study, dissemination and wider appreciation of international law, in particular those activities which are of special benefit to persons from developing countries,

Reaffirming that in the conduct of the Programme of Assistance it would be desirable to use as far as possible the resources and facilities made available by Member States, international and regional organizations, universities, institutions and others,

Reaffirming also the hope that, in appointing lecturers for the seminars to be held within the framework of the fellowship programmes in international law, account would be taken of the need to secure the representation of major legal systems and balance among various geographical regions,

1. Reiterates its authorization for the Secretary-General to carry out, in 2011, the activities specified in the report he submitted to the General Assembly at its sixty-fourth session, in accordance with the guidelines and recommendations contained therein, including the provision of:

(a) A number of fellowships, to be determined in the light of the overall resources for the United Nations Programme of Assistance in the Teaching, Study, Dissemination and Wider Appreciation of International Law and to be awarded to qualified candidates from developing countries, to attend the International Law Fellowship Programme in The Hague in 2011;

(b) A number of fellowships, to be determined in the light of the overall resources for the Programme of Assistance and to be awarded to qualified candidates from developing countries, to attend regional courses in international law in 2011; and to finance the above activities from provisions in the regular budget, when appropriate, as well as from voluntary financial contributions for these fellowships, which would be received as a result of the requests set out in paragraphs 18 to 20 below;

2. Authorizes the Secretary-General to award a minimum of one scholarship in 2011 under the Hamilton Shirley Amerasinghe Memorial Fellowship on the Law of the Sea, subject to the availability of voluntary contributions made for this fellowship, and in this regard calls upon States, intergovernmental organizations, international financial institutions, donor agencies, non-governmental organizations and natural and juridical persons to make voluntary contributions to its trust fund;

3. Expresses its appreciation to the Secretary-General for the efforts to strengthen, expand and enhance the international law training and dissemination activities within the framework of the Programme of Assistance in 2010;

4. Requests the Secretary-General to consider admitting, for participation in the various components of the Programme of Assistance, candidates from countries willing to bear the entire cost of such participation;

5. Also requests the Secretary-General to continue to provide to the programme budget the necessary resources for the Programme of Assistance to ensure the continued effectiveness of the Programme in 2011, in accordance with resolution 64/113;

6. Further requests the Secretary-General to continue to provide to the programme budget for the next and future bienniums the necessary resources for the Programme of Assistance to ensure the continued effectiveness and further development of the Programme, in particular the organization of regional courses in international law on a regular basis and the viability of the United Nations Audiovisual Library of International Law;

7. Recognizes the importance of the United Nations legal publications prepared by the Office of Legal Affairs of the Secretariat, and strongly encourages their continued publication;

8. Welcomes the efforts undertaken by the Office of Legal Affairs to bring up to date the United Nations legal publications, and, in particular, commends the Codification Division of the Office of Legal Affairs for its desktop publishing initiative, which has greatly enhanced the timely issuance of its legal publications;

9. Encourages the Office of Legal Affairs to continue to maintain and expand its websites listed in annex I to the report of the Secretary-General as an invaluable tool for the dissemination of international law materials as well as for advanced legal research;

10. Recognizes the importance of the United Nations Audiovisual Library of International Law as a major contribution to the teaching and dissemination of international law around the world, and urges States to make voluntary contributions to enable the Codification Division to continue and further develop the Library;

11. Encourages the use of interns and research assistants for the preparation of materials for the United Nations Audiovisual Library of International Law;

12. Welcomes the training and technical assistance activities in international law undertaken by the Office of Legal Affairs within the framework of the Programme of Assistance, as described in the report of the Secretary-General, and encourages the continuation of such activities within available resources;

13. Commends the Codification Division for the cost-saving measures undertaken with regard to the International Law Fellowship Programme to maintain the number of fellowships available for this comprehensive international law training programme;

14. Expresses its appreciation to The Hague Academy of International Law for the valuable contribution it continues to make to the Programme of Assistance, which has enabled candidates under the International Law Fellowship Programme to attend and participate in the Fellowship Programme in conjunction with the Academy courses;

15. Notes with appreciation the contributions of The Hague Academy to the teaching, study, dissemination and wider appreciation of international law, and calls upon Member States and interested organizations to give favourable consideration to the appeal of the Academy for a continuation of support and a possible increase in their financial contributions, to enable the Academy to carry out its activities, particularly those relating to the summer courses, regional courses and programmes of the Centre for Studies and Research in International Law and International Relations;

16. Welcomes the efforts of the Codification Division to revitalize and conduct regional courses in international law as an important training activity;

17. Expresses its appreciation to the Republic of Korea and Ethiopia for hosting regional courses in international law in Seoul in 2010 and in Addis Ababa in 2011;

18. Requests the Secretary-General to continue to publicize the Programme of Assistance and periodically to invite Member States, universities, philanthropic foundations and other interested national and international institutions and organizations, as well as individuals, to make voluntary contributions towards the financing of the Programme or otherwise to assist in its implementation and possible expansion;

19. Reiterates its request to Member States and interested organizations, institutions and individuals to make voluntary contributions, inter alia, for the International Law Fellowship Programme and the United Nations Audiovisual Library of International Law, and expresses its appreciation to those Member States, institutions and individuals that have made voluntary contributions for this purpose;

20. Urges, in particular, all Governments to make voluntary contributions for the regional courses in international law organized by the Codification Division as an important complement to the International Law Fellowship Programme, thus alleviating the burden on prospective host countries and making it possible to conduct the regional courses on a regular basis;

21. Requests the Secretary-General to report to the General Assembly, at its sixty-sixth session, on the implementation of the Programme of Assistance during 2011 and to include in his report information on the request contained in paragraph 5 above;

22. Also requests the Secretary-General, following consultations with the Advisory Committee on the Programme of Assistance, to submit recommendations regarding the execution of the Programme of Assistance in subsequent years;

23. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its sixty-sixth session the item entitled "United Nations Programme of Assistance in the Teaching, Study, Dissemination and Wider Appreciation of International Law".

Host country relations

At five meetings held in New York (17 February, 20 May, 1 September, 29 September, 28 October), the Committee on Relations with the Host Country considered the following aspects of relations between the UN diplomatic community and the United States, the host country: acceleration of immigration and customs procedures; entry visas issued by the host country; and the question of security of missions and safety of personnel.

The recommendations and conclusions on those items, approved by the Committee at its 28 October meeting, were incorporated in its report [A/65/26]. The Committee expressed appreciation for the host country's efforts to maintain appropriate conditions for delegations and missions accredited to the United Nations and anticipated that all issues raised at its meetings would be duly settled in a spirit of cooperation and in accordance with international law.

Noting the importance of the observance of privileges and immunities, the Committee emphasized the need to solve, through negotiations, problems that might arise in that regard for the normal functioning of accredited delegations and missions. It urged the host country to continue to take appropriate action, such as the training of police, security, customs and border control officers, with a view to maintaining respect for diplomatic privileges and immunities. In case of violations, the Committee urged the host country to ensure that such cases were properly investigated and remedied, in accordance with applicable law. Considering that the security of missions and the safety of their personnel were indispensable for their effective functioning, the Committee appreciated the host country's efforts to that end and anticipated that the host country would continue to take all measures necessary to prevent any interference with the missions' functioning.

Noting the problems experienced by some missions in connection with the implementation of the Parking Programme for Diplomatic Vehicles, in force since 2002 [YUN 2002, p. 1338], the Committee decided to remain seized of the matter, with a view to ensuring its implementation in a manner that was fair, non-discriminatory and effective, and therefore consistent with international law. It also requested that the host country continue to bring to the attention of New York City officials reports about other problems experienced by permanent missions or their staff, in order to improve the conditions for their functioning and to promote compliance with international norms concerning diplomatic privileges and immunities.

The Committee anticipated that the host country would enhance its efforts to ensure the issuance, in a timely manner, of entry visas to representatives of Member States to travel to New York on official UN business, and noted that a number of delegations had requested shortening the time frame applied by the host country for issuance of entry visas, since the existing time frame posed difficulties for the full-fledged participation of Member States in UN meetings. On host country travel regulations for personnel of certain missions and staff members of the Secretariat of certain nationalities, the Committee urged the host country to remove the remaining restrictions. It also stressed the importance of permanent missions, their personnel and Secretariat personnel meeting their financial obligations.

The Committee reiterated its appreciation to the representative of the United States Mission in charge of host country affairs, to the Host Country Affairs Section of the United States Mission to the United Nations and the Office of Foreign Missions, as well as to those local entities, in particular the New York City Commission for the United Nations, Consular Corps and Protocol, that contributed to its efforts to help accommodate the needs, interests and requirements of the diplomatic community and to promote mutual understanding between the diplomatic community and the people of the City of New York.

Communications. The Committee had before it letters from Cuba to the Chairman of the Committee on Relations with the Host Country regarding demonstrations at its Mission and the security of its Mission in New York City [A/AC.154/389, A/AC.154/391, A/AC.154/392, A/AC.154/399], as well as the responses from the United States as host country [A/AC.154/390, A/AC.154/394, A/AC.154/400].

The Committee also had before it letters from Iran to the Chairman of the Committee on Relations with the Host Country regarding the processing of visa applications by the host country for Iranian senior officials [A/AC.154/393, A/AC.154/396, A/AC.154/401], as well as the responses from the United States as host country [A/AC.154/395, A/AC.154/402].

Also before the Committee was a letter from Nicaragua to the Chairman of the Committee regarding the detention of its permanent representative at two airports [A/AC.154/397], as well as the response from the United States as host country [A/AC.154/398].

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 6 December [meeting 57], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Sixth Committee [A/65/479], adopted resolution 65/35 without vote [agenda item 161].

Report of the Committee on Relations with the Host Country

The General Assembly,

Having considered the report of the Committee on Relations with the Host Country,

Recalling Article 105 of the Charter of the United Nations, the Convention on the Privileges and Immunities of the United Nations, the Agreement between the United Nations and the United States of America regarding the Headquarters of the United Nations and the responsibilities of the host country,

Recalling also that, in accordance with paragraph 7 of General Assembly resolution 2819(XXVI) of 15 December 1971, the Committee should consider, and advise the host country on, issues arising in connection with the implementation of the Agreement between the United Nations and the United States of America regarding the Headquarters of the United Nations,

Recognizing that effective measures should continue to be taken by the competent authorities of the host country, in particular to prevent any acts violating the security of missions and the safety of their personnel,

1. Endorses the recommendations and conclusions of the Committee on Relations with the Host Country contained in paragraph 21 of its report;

2. Considers that the maintenance of appropriate conditions for the normal work of the delegations and the missions accredited to the United Nations and the observance of their privileges and immunities, which is an issue of great importance, are in the interest of the United Nations and all Member States, and requests the host country to continue to solve, through negotiations, problems that might arise and to take all measures necessary to prevent any interference with the functioning of missions; and urges the host country to continue to take appropriate action, such as training of police, security, customs and border control officers, with a view to maintaining respect for diplomatic privileges and immunities and if violations occur to ensure that such cases are properly investigated and remedied, in accordance with applicable law;

3. Notes the problems experienced by some permanent missions in connection with the implementation of the Parking Programme for Diplomatic Vehicles, and notes that the Committee shall remain seized of the matter, with a view to continuing to maintain the proper implementation of the Parking Programme in a manner that is fair, non-discriminatory, effective and therefore consistent with international law;

4. Requests the host country to consider removing the remaining travel restrictions imposed by it on staff of certain missions and staff members of the Secretariat of certain nationalities, and in this regard notes the long-standing positions of affected States, of the Secretary-General and of the host country;

5. Notes the concerns expressed by some delegations concerning the denial and delay of entry visas to representatives of Member States;

6. Also notes that the Committee anticipates that the host country will enhance its efforts to ensure the issuance of entry visas, in a timely manner, to representatives of Member States, pursuant to article IV, section 11, of the Agreement between the United Nations and the United States of America regarding the Headquarters of the United Nations to travel to New York on United Nations business; and notes that the Committee anticipates that the host country will enhance efforts, including visa issuance, to facilitate the participation of representatives of Member States in other United Nations meetings as appropriate;

7. Further notes that a number of delegations have requested shortening the time frame applied by the host country for issuance of entry visas to representatives of Member States, since this time frame poses difficulties for the full-fledged participation of Member States in United Nations meetings;

8. Expresses its appreciation for the efforts made by the host country, and hopes that the issues raised at the meetings of the Committee will continue to be resolved in a spirit of cooperation and in accordance with international law;

9. Affirms the importance of the Committee being in a position to fulfil its mandate and meet on short notice to deal with urgent and important matters concerning the relations between the United Nations and the host country, and in that connection requests the Secretariat and the Committee on Conferences to accord priority to requests from the Committee on Relations with the Host Country for conference-servicing facilities for meetings of that Committee that must be held while the General Assembly and its Main Committees are meeting, without prejudice to the requirements of those bodies and on an "as available" basis;

10. Requests the Secretary-General to remain actively engaged in all aspects of the relations of the United Nations with the host country;

11. Requests the Committee to continue its work in conformity with General Assembly resolution 2819(XXVI);

12. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its sixty-sixth session the item entitled "Report of the Committee on Relations with the Host Country".

Law of the sea

In 2010, the United Nations continued to promote universal acceptance of the 1982 United Nations Convention on the Law of the Sea and its two implementing Agreements, one on the implementation of Part XI of the Convention and the other on the conservation and management of straddling fish stocks and highly migratory fish stocks.

The three institutions created by the Convention—the International Seabed Authority, the International Tribunal for the Law of the Sea and the Commission on the Limits of the Continental Shelf—held sessions during the year.

In May, the resumed Review Conference on the implementation of the Fish Stocks Agreement sought to assess the effectiveness of the Agreement in securing the conservation and management of straddling fish stocks and highly migratory fish stocks.

UN Convention on the Law of the Sea

Signatures and ratifications

In 2010, Malawi ratified the United Nations Convention on the Law of the Sea, bringing the number of parties to 161. The Convention, which was adopted by the Third United Nations Conference on the Law of the Sea in 1982 [YUN 1982, p. 178], entered into force on 16 November 1994 [YUN 1994, p. 1301].

Meeting of States Parties

The twentieth Meeting of States Parties to the Convention (New York, 14–18 June) [SPLOS/218] discussed the 2009 activities of the International Tribunal for the Law of the Sea [YUN 2009, p. 1345] and took action on a number of Tribunal-related financial and administrative issues, including the surrender and deduction of €784,136 of the cash surplus for the 2007–2008 financial period from the assessed contributions of the States parties for 2010, and a decision on adjustment of the remuneration of members of the Tribunal [SPLOS/215]. Also discussed were the activities of the International Seabed Authority (see p. 1370) and the Commission on the Limits of the Continental Shelf (see p. 1371) during the previous 12 months, as well as the Secretary-General's report under article 319 of the Convention

(see p. 1372). The meeting adopted decisions on the workload of the Commission on the Limits of the Continental Shelf [SPLOS/216]; the budget of the Tribunal for 2011–2012 [SPLOS/217]; and the Tribunal's staff pension committee [SPLOS/206]. It took note of the Tribunal's report on budgetary matters for the financial periods 2007–2008 and 2009–2010 [SPLOS/205] and approved the report of the Credentials Committee [SPLOS/213], which included 13 new credentials of representatives from States parties, as well as the European Union (EU).

Agreement relating to the Implementation of Part XI of the Convention

During 2010, the number of parties to the 1994 Agreement relating to the Implementation of Part XI of the Convention (governing exploitation of seabed resources beyond national jurisdiction), adopted by the General Assembly in resolution 48/263 [YUN 1994, p. 1301], reached 140, with Angola and Malawi becoming parties. The Agreement, which entered into force on 28 July 1996 [YUN 1996, p. 1215], sought to address certain difficulties with the seabed mining provisions contained in Part XI of the Convention, which had been raised primarily by the industrialized countries. The Agreement was to be interpreted and applied together with the Convention as a single instrument, and in the event of any inconsistency between the Agreement and Part XI of the Convention, the provisions of the Agreement would prevail. Any ratification of or accession to the Convention after 28 July 1994 represented consent to be bound by the Agreement also. Parties to the Convention prior to the Agreement's adoption had to deposit a separate instrument of ratification of or accession to the Agreement.

Agreement relating to Conservation and Management of Straddling Fish Stocks and Highly Migratory Fish Stocks

As at 31 December, the number of parties to the 1995 Agreement for the Implementation of the Provisions of the United Nations Convention on the Law of the Sea of 10 December 1982 relating to the Conservation and Management of Straddling Fish Stocks and Highly Migratory Fish Stocks [YUN 1995, p. 1334] reached 78, with Saint Vincent and the Grenadines becoming a party during the year. Referred to as the Fish Stocks Agreement, it entered into force on 11 December 2001 [YUN 2001, p. 1232].

Review Conference. The resumed Review Conference on the Agreement for the Implementation of the Provisions of the United Nations Convention on the Law of the Sea of 10 December 1982 relating to the Conservation and Management of Straddling Fish Stocks and Highly Migratory Fish Stocks (New York, 24–28 May) [A/CONF.210/2010/7] sought to assess the effectiveness of the Agreement in securing the conservation and management of such fish stocks. The Review Conference, convened pursuant to article 36 of the Agreement, was resumed pursuant to General Assembly resolutions 63/112 [YUN 2008, p. 1483] and 64/72 [YUN 2009, p. 1331]. The 2006 Review Conference [YUN 2006, p. 1540] had addressed ways to give full effect to the Agreement, both through a substantive review and assessment of the Agreement and by adopting recommendations for strengthening the implementation of its provisions. It had decided to keep the Agreement under review by resuming the Review Conference not later than 2011.

The Conference had before it a report [A/CONF.210/2010/1] of the Secretary-General, submitted in response to General Assembly resolution 63/112 [YUN 2008, p. 1483], to assist it in discharging its mandate. The report was prepared in cooperation with the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations (FAO) and was based on information provided by States and regional fisheries management organizations and arrangements and other regional fisheries bodies, as well as FAO. The report reviewed the status and trends of straddling fish stocks and highly migratory fish stocks, discrete high seas stocks and non-target, associated and dependent species; reviewed the extent to which the recommendations adopted by the 2006 Review Conference had been implemented by States and regional fisheries management organizations and arrangements; assessed the capacity-building needs of developing States in relation to implementation of the Agreement; and examined the performance reviews of regional fisheries management organizations, including the recommendations of such reviews.

Pursuant to General Assembly resolution 64/72, a ninth round of informal consultations was held in March and served as a preparatory meeting for the resumed Review Conference. At the ninth round, States parties to the Agreement reviewed the Secretary-General's report, considered the provisional agenda and the organization of work for the Conference, discussed vacancies in the Bureau and exchanged preliminary views on the possible outputs of the Conference.

The outcome of the resumed Review Conference [A/CONF.210/2010/7, annex] reaffirmed the recommendations adopted in 2006 and urged that their implementation continue and be strengthened. The Conference emphasized that full implementation of and compliance with conservation and management measures, adopted in accordance with international law, applying the precautionary approach and based on the best available scientific evidence, were essential to ensure recovery and long-term conservation and sustainable use of straddling fish stocks and highly migratory fish stocks.

The Conference recommended that States and regional economic integration organizations, individually and collectively through regional fisheries management organizations and arrangements, commit themselves to improving, through conservation and management measures, the status of straddling fish stocks and highly migratory fish stocks that were overexploited or depleted; strengthen efforts to improve cooperation between flag States whose vessels fish on the high seas and coastal States so as to ensure compatibility of measures for the high seas and for areas under national jurisdiction with respect to those fish stocks; submit timely, complete and accurate fisheries data; and reaffirm the commitment to reduce the capacity of the world's fishing fleets to levels commensurate with the sustainability of fish stocks, by establishing target levels and plans or other mechanisms for capacity assessment. Other recommendations dealt with mechanisms for international cooperation and non-members; monitoring, control and surveillance and compliance and enforcement; developing States and non-parties; and further reviews.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 7 December [meeting 59], the General Assembly adopted resolution 65/38 [draft: A/65/L.21 & Add.1] without vote [agenda item 74 (b)].

Sustainable fisheries, including through the 1995 Agreement for the Implementation of the Provisions of the United Nations Convention on the Law of the Sea of 10 December 1982 relating to the Conservation and Management of Straddling Fish Stocks and Highly Migratory Fish Stocks, and related instruments

The General Assembly,

Reaffirming its annual resolutions on sustainable fisheries, including resolution 64/72 of 4 December 2009, and other relevant resolutions,

Recalling the relevant provisions of the United Nations Convention on the Law of the Sea ("the Convention"), and bearing in mind the relationship between the Convention and the 1995 Agreement for the Implementation of the Provisions of the United Nations Convention on the Law of the Sea of 10 December 1982 relating to the Conservation and Management of Straddling Fish Stocks and Highly Migratory Fish Stocks ("the Agreement"),

Welcoming the recent ratifications of and accessions to the Agreement and the fact that a growing number of States, and entities referred to in the Convention and in article 1, paragraph 2 (b), of the Agreement, as well as subregional and regional fisheries management organizations and arrangements, have taken measures, as appropriate, towards the implementation of the provisions of the Agreement,

Welcoming also the work of the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations and its Committee on Fisheries and the 2005 Rome Declaration on Illegal, Unreported and Unregulated Fishing, adopted on 12 March 2005, and recognizing that the Code of Conduct for Responsible Fisheries of the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations ("the Code") and its associated international plans of action set out principles and global standards of behaviour for responsible practices for conservation of fisheries resources and the management and development of fisheries,

Acknowledging that 2010 was declared the International Year of Biodiversity,

Noting with concern that effective management of marine capture fisheries has been made difficult in some areas by unreliable information and data caused by, inter alia, unreported and misreported fish catch and fishing effort and that this lack of accurate data contributes to overfishing in some areas,

Recognizing the significant contribution of sustainable fisheries to food security, income, wealth and poverty alleviation for present and future generations,

Welcoming the Declaration of the World Summit on Food Security, held in Rome from 16 to 18 November 2009,

Recognizing the urgent need for action at all levels to ensure the long-term sustainable use and management of fisheries resources through the wide application of the precautionary approach and ecosystem approaches,

Expressing concern over the current and projected adverse effects of climate change on food security and the sustainability of fisheries, and noting in that regard the work of the Intergovernmental Panel on Climate Change, the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations and the United Nations Environment Programme,

Deploing the fact that fish stocks, including straddling fish stocks and highly migratory fish stocks, in many parts of the world are overfished or subject to sparsely regulated and heavy fishing efforts, as a result of, inter alia, illegal, unreported and unregulated fishing, inadequate flag State control and enforcement, including monitoring, control and surveillance measures, inadequate regulatory measures, harmful fisheries subsidies and overcapacity, as well as inadequate port State control, as highlighted in the report of the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations, The State of World Fisheries and Aquaculture 2008,

Concerned that a limited number of States have taken measures to implement, individually and through regional fisheries management organizations and arrangements, the International Plan of Action for the Management of Fishing Capacity adopted by the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations,

Recalling the International Plan of Action to Prevent, Deter and Eliminate Illegal, Unreported and Unregulated Fishing, adopted by the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations,

Particularly concerned that illegal, unreported and unregulated fishing constitutes a serious threat to fish stocks and marine habitats and ecosystems, to the detriment of sustainable fisheries as well as the food security and the economies of many States, particularly developing States,

Concerned that some operators increasingly take advantage of the globalization of fishery markets to trade fishery products stemming from illegal, unreported and unregulated fishing and make economic profits from those operations, which constitutes an incentive for them to pursue their activities,

Recognizing that effective deterrence and combating of illegal, unreported and unregulated fishing has significant financial and other resource implications,

Recognizing also the duty provided in the Convention, the Agreement to Promote Compliance with International Conservation and Management Measures by Fishing Vessels on the High Seas ("the Compliance Agreement"), the Agreement and the Code for flag States to exercise effective control over fishing vessels flying their flag, and vessels flying their flag which provide support to fishing vessels, to ensure that the activities of such fishing and support vessels do not undermine the effectiveness of conservation and management measures taken in accordance with international law and adopted at the national, subregional, regional or global levels,

Recalling paragraph 49 of resolution 64/72, and noting with satisfaction in this regard the convening by the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations of the Technical Consultation on Flag State Performance, in Rome from 2 to 6 May 2011,

Recalling also paragraph 66 of resolution 64/72, and welcoming in this regard the convening by the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations of the Technical Consultation to Identify a Structure and Strategy for the Development and Implementation of the Global Record of Fishing Vessels, Refrigerated Transport Vessels and Supply Vessels, in Rome from 8 to 12 November 2010,

Noting the obligation of all States, in accordance with international law, as reflected in the relevant provisions of the Convention, to cooperate in the conservation and management of living marine resources, and recognizing the importance of coordination and cooperation at the global, regional, subregional as well as national levels in the areas, inter alia, of marine scientific research, data collection, information-sharing, capacity-building and training for the conservation, management and sustainable development of marine living resources,

Acknowledging the report of the resumed Review Conference on the Agreement ("the resumed Review Conference"), held in New York from 24 to 28 May 2010, which reaffirmed the recommendations adopted by the Review Conference in 2006 and proposed additional means of strengthening the substance and methods of implementation of the provisions of the Agreement in order better to address any continuing problems in the conservation and management of straddling fish stocks and highly migratory fish stocks,

Noting with interest that the resumed Review Conference agreed to continue the informal consultations of States parties to the Agreement and keep the Agreement under review through the resumption of the Review Conference at a date no earlier than 2015, to be agreed at a future round of informal consultations, and recognizing that the resumed Review Conference will be mandated to assess the effectiveness of the Agreement in securing the conservation and management of straddling fish stocks and highly migratory fish stocks by reviewing and assessing the adequacy of its provisions and, if necessary, proposing means of strengthening the substance and methods of implementation of those provisions in order better to address any continuing problems in the conservation and management of those stocks, as provided for in article 36 of the Agreement,

Acknowledging the importance of ocean data buoy systems moored in areas beyond national jurisdiction to sustainable development, promoting safety at sea and limiting human vulnerability to natural disasters, due to their use in weather and marine forecasts, fisheries management, tsunami forecasts and climate prediction, and expressing concern that most damage to ocean data buoys, such as moored buoys and tsunameters, frequently results from actions taken by some fishing operations which render the buoys inoperable,

Recognizing the need for States, individually and through regional fisheries management organizations and arrangements, to continue to develop and implement, consistent with international law, effective port State measures to combat overfishing and illegal, unreported and unregulated fishing, the critical need for cooperation with developing States to build their capacity, and the importance of cooperation between the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations and the International Maritime Organization in this regard,

Welcoming, in this regard, the approval by the Conference of the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations of the Agreement on Port State Measures to Prevent, Deter and Eliminate Illegal, Unreported and Unregulated Fishing and its opening for signature on 22 November 2009,

Concerned that marine pollution from all sources constitutes a serious threat to human health and safety, endangers fish stocks, marine biodiversity and marine and coastal habitats and has significant costs to local and national economies,

Recognizing that marine debris is a global trans-boundary pollution problem and that, due to the many different types and sources of marine debris, different approaches to their prevention and removal are necessary,

Noting that the contribution of sustainable aquaculture to global fish supplies continues to respond to opportunities in developing countries to enhance local food security and poverty alleviation and, together with the efforts of other aquaculture producing countries, will make a significant contribution to meeting future demands in fish consumption, bearing in mind article 9 of the Code,

Calling attention to the circumstances affecting fisheries in many developing States, in particular African States and small island developing States, and recognizing the urgent need for capacity-building, including the transfer of marine technology and in particular fisheries-related technology, to enhance the ability of such States to meet their obligations and exercise their rights under international instruments, in order to realize the benefits from fisheries resources,

Recognizing the need for appropriate measures to minimize by-catch, waste, discards, including high-grading, loss of fishing gear and other factors which adversely affect fish stocks and may also have undesirable effects on the economies and food security of small island developing States, other developing coastal States, and subsistence fishing communities,

Recalling paragraph 81 of resolution 64/72, and welcoming in this regard the convening by the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations of the Technical Consultation to Develop International Guidelines on By-catch Management and Reduction of Discards, in Rome from 6 to 10 December 2010,

Recognizing the need to further integrate ecosystem approaches into fisheries conservation and management and, more generally, the importance of applying ecosystem approaches to the management of human activities in the ocean, and noting in this regard the Reykjavik Declaration on Responsible Fisheries in the Marine Ecosystem, the work of the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations related to guidelines for the implementation of the ecosystem approach to fisheries management and the importance of this approach to relevant provisions of the Agreement and the Code, as well as decision VII/11 and other relevant decisions of the Conference of the Parties to the Convention on Biological Diversity,

Recognizing also the economic and cultural importance of sharks in many countries, the biological importance of sharks in the marine ecosystem as key predatory species, the vulnerability of certain shark species to overexploitation, the fact that some are threatened with extinction, the need for measures to promote the long-term conservation, management and sustainable use of shark populations and fisheries, and the relevance of the International Plan of Action for the Conservation and Management of Sharks, adopted by the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations in 1999, in providing guidance on the development of such measures,

Reaffirming its support for the initiative of the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations and relevant subregional and regional fisheries management organizations and arrangements on the conservation and management of sharks, and noting with concern that basic data on shark stocks and harvests continue to be lacking, that only a small number of countries have implemented the International Plan of Action for the Conservation and Management of Sharks, and that not all regional fisheries management organizations and arrangements have adopted conservation and management measures for directed shark fisheries and for the regulation of by-catch of sharks from other fisheries,

Recognizing the importance of marine species occupying low trophic levels in the ecosystem and for food security, and the need to ensure their long-term sustainability,

Expressing concern over reports of continued losses of seabirds, particularly albatrosses and petrels, as well as other marine species, including sharks, fin-fish species and marine turtles, as a result of incidental mortality in fishing operations, particularly longline fishing, and other activities, while recognizing considerable efforts by States and through various regional fisheries management organizations and arrangements to reduce by-catch in longline fishing,

I

Achieving sustainable fisheries

1. Reaffirms the importance it attaches to the long-term conservation, management and sustainable use of the marine living resources of the world's oceans and seas and the obligations of States to cooperate to this end, in accordance with international law, as reflected in the relevant provisions of the Convention, in particular the provisions on cooperation set out in Part V and Part VII, section 2, of the Convention, and where applicable, the Agreement;

2. Encourages States to give due priority to the implementation of the Plan of Implementation of the World Summit on Sustainable Development ("Johannesburg Plan of Implementation") in relation to achieving sustainable fisheries, especially restoring depleted stocks to levels that can produce maximum sustainable yield on an urgent basis and, where possible, not later than 2015;

3. Urges States, either directly or through appropriate subregional, regional or global organizations or arrangements, to intensify efforts to assess and address, as appropriate, the impacts of global climate change on the sustainability of fish stocks and the habitats that support them, in particular the most affected ones;

4. Emphasizes the obligations of flag States to discharge their responsibilities, in accordance with the Convention and the Agreement, to ensure compliance by vessels flying their flag with the conservation and management measures adopted and in force with respect to fisheries resources on the high seas;

5. Calls upon all States that have not done so, in order to achieve the goal of universal participation, to become parties to the Convention, which sets out the legal framework within which all activities in the oceans and seas must be carried out, taking into account the relationship between the Convention and the Agreement;

6. Calls upon all States, directly or through regional fisheries management organizations and arrangements, to apply widely, in accordance with international law and the Code, the precautionary approach and ecosystem approaches to the conservation, management and exploitation of fish stocks, and also calls upon States parties to the Agreement to implement fully the provisions of article 6 of the Agreement as a matter of priority;

7. Encourages States to increase their reliance on scientific advice in developing, adopting and implementing conservation and management measures, and to increase their efforts to promote science for conservation and management measures, including through international cooperation, that apply, in accordance with international law, the precautionary approach and ecosystem approaches to fisheries management, enhancing understanding of ecosystem approaches, in order to ensure the long-term conservation and sustainable use of marine living resources, and in this regard encourages the implementation of the Strategy for Improving Information on Status and Trends of Capture Fisheries of the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations as a framework for the improvement and understanding of fishery status and trends;

8. Calls upon all States, directly or through regional fisheries management organizations and arrangements, to apply stock-specific precautionary reference points, as described in Annex II to the Agreement and in the Code, to ensure that populations of harvested stocks, and, where necessary, associated or dependent species, are maintained at, or restored to, sustainable levels, and to use these reference points for triggering conservation and management action;

9. Encourages States to apply the precautionary approach and ecosystem approaches in adopting and implementing conservation and management measures addressing, inter alia, by-catch, pollution and overfishing, and protecting habitats of specific concern, taking into account existing guidelines developed by the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations;

10. Also encourages States to enhance or develop observer programmes individually or through regional fisheries management organizations or arrangements in order to improve data collection on, inter alia, target and by-catch species, which could also assist monitoring, control and surveillance tools, and to take into account standards, forms of cooperation and other existing structures for such programmes as described in article 25 of the Agreement and article 5 of the Code;

11. Calls upon States and regional fisheries management organizations and arrangements to collect and, where appropriate, report to the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations required catch and effort data, and fishery-related information, in a complete, accurate and timely way, including for straddling fish stocks and highly migratory fish stocks within and beyond areas under national jurisdiction, discrete high seas fish stocks, and by-catch and discards; and, where they do not exist, to establish processes to strengthen data collection and reporting by members of regional fisheries management organizations and arrangements, including through regular reviews of member compliance with such obligations, and, when such obligations are not met, require the member concerned to rectify the problem, including through the preparation of plans of action with timelines;

12. Invites States and regional fisheries management organizations and arrangements to cooperate with the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations in the implementation and further development of the Fisheries Resources Monitoring System initiative;

13. Reaffirms paragraph 10 of resolution 61/105 of 8 December 2006, and calls upon States, including through regional fisheries management organizations or arrangements, to urgently adopt measures to fully implement the International Plan of Action for the Conservation and Management of Sharks for directed and non-directed shark fisheries, based on the best available scientific information, through, inter alia, limits on catch or fishing effort, by requiring that vessels flying their flag collect and regularly report data on shark catches, including species-specific data, discards and landings, undertaking, including through international cooperation, comprehensive stock assessments of sharks, reducing shark by-catch and by-catch mortality, and, where scientific information is uncertain or inadequate, not increasing fishing effort in directed shark fisheries until measures have been established to ensure the long-term conservation, management and sustainable use of shark stocks and to prevent further declines of vulnerable or threatened shark stocks;

14. Calls upon States to take immediate and concerted action to improve the implementation of and compliance with existing regional fisheries management organization or arrangement and national measures that regulate shark fisheries and incidental catch of sharks, in particular those measures which prohibit or restrict fisheries conducted solely for the purpose of harvesting shark fins, and, where necessary, to consider taking other measures, as appropriate, such as requiring that all sharks be landed with each fin naturally attached;

15. Calls upon regional fisheries management organizations with the competence to regulate highly migratory species to strengthen or establish precautionary, science-based conservation and management measures, as appropriate, for sharks taken in fisheries within their convention areas consistent with the International Plan of Action for the Conservation and Management of Sharks, taking into account the Course of Actions adopted at the second joint meeting of tuna regional fisheries management organizations and arrangements, held in San Sebastian, Spain, from 29 June to 3 July 2009;

16. Reiterates its request to the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations to prepare a report containing a comprehensive analysis of the implementation of the International Plan of Action for the Conservation and Management of Sharks, as well as progress in implementing paragraph 11 of General Assembly resolution 62/177 of 18 December 2007;

17. Urges States to eliminate barriers to trade in fish and fisheries products which are not consistent with their rights and obligations under the World Trade Organization agreements, taking into account the importance of the trade in fish and fisheries products, particularly for developing countries;

18. Urges States and relevant international and national organizations to provide for the participation of small-scale fishery stakeholders in related policy development and fisheries management strategies in order to achieve long-term sustainability for such fisheries, consistent with the duty to ensure the proper conservation and management of fisheries resources;

19. Encourages States, either directly or through competent and appropriate subregional, regional or global organizations and arrangements, to analyse, as appropriate, the impact of fishing for marine species occupying low trophic levels;

II

Implementation of the 1995 Agreement for the Implementation of the Provisions of the United Nations Convention on the Law of the Sea of 10 December 1982 relating to the Conservation and Management of Straddling Fish Stocks and Highly Migratory Fish Stocks

20. Calls upon all States, and entities referred to in the Convention and in article 1, paragraph 2 (b), of the Agreement, that have not done so to ratify or accede to the Agreement and in the interim to consider applying it provisionally;

21. Calls upon States parties to the Agreement to effectively implement, as a matter of priority, the provisions of the Agreement through their domestic legislation and through regional fisheries management organizations and arrangements in which they participate;

22. Emphasizes the importance of those provisions of the Agreement relating to bilateral, subregional and regional cooperation in enforcement, and urges continued efforts in this regard;

23. Urges States parties to the Agreement, in accordance with article 21, paragraph 4, thereof to inform, either directly or through the relevant subregional or regional fisheries management organization or arrangement, all States whose vessels fish on the high seas in the same subregion or region of the form of identification issued by those States parties to officials duly authorized to carry out boarding and inspection functions in accordance with articles 21 and 22 of the Agreement;

24. Also urges States parties to the Agreement, in accordance with article 21, paragraph 4, thereof, to designate an appropriate authority to receive notifications pursuant to article 21 and to give due publicity to such designation through the relevant subregional or regional fisheries management organization or arrangement;

25. Invites regional fisheries management organizations and arrangements which have not yet done so to adopt procedures for high seas boarding and inspection that are consistent with articles 21 and 22 of the Agreement;

26. Calls upon States, individually and, as appropriate, through subregional and regional fisheries management organizations and arrangements with competence over discrete high seas fish stocks, to adopt the necessary measures to ensure the long-term conservation, management and sustainable use of such stocks in accordance with the Convention and consistent with the Code and the general principles set forth in the Agreement;

27. Invites States to assist developing States in enhancing their participation in regional fisheries management organizations or arrangements, including by facilitating access to fisheries for straddling fish stocks and highly migratory fish stocks, in accordance with article 25, paragraph 1 (b), of the Agreement, taking into account the need to ensure that such access benefits the developing States concerned and their nationals;

28. Invites States and international financial institutions and organizations of the United Nations system to provide assistance according to Part VII of the Agreement, including, if appropriate, the development of special financial mechanisms or instruments to assist developing States, in particular the least developed among them and small island developing States, to enable them to develop their national capacity to exploit fishery resources, including developing their domestically flagged fishing fleet, value-added processing and the expansion of their economic base in the fishing industry, consistent with the duty to ensure the proper conservation and management of fisheries resources;

29. Notes with appreciation the contributions made by States to the Assistance Fund established under Part VII of the Agreement, and encourages States, intergovernmental organizations, international financial institutions, national institutions and non-governmental organizations, as well as natural and juridical persons, to make further voluntary financial contributions to the Fund;

30. Notes with satisfaction that the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations and the Division for Ocean Affairs and the Law of the Sea of the Office of Legal Affairs of the Secretariat ("the Division") have taken measures to publicize the availability of assistance through the Assistance Fund, and encourages the Organization and the Division to continue their efforts in this regard;

31. Encourages accelerated progress by States, individually and, as appropriate, through subregional and regional fisheries management organizations and arrangements, regarding the recommendations of the Review Conference on the Agreement, held in New York from 22 to 26 May 2006, and the identification of emerging priorities;

32. Encourages States, individually and, as appropriate, through subregional and regional fisheries management organizations and arrangements, to consider implementing, as appropriate, the recommendations of the resumed Review Conference;

33. Reaffirms its request that the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations initiate arrangements with States for the collection and dissemination of data on fishing in the high seas by vessels flying their flag at the subregional and regional levels where no such arrangements exist;

34. Also reaffirms its request that the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations revise its global fisheries statistics database to provide information on straddling fish stocks, highly migratory fish stocks and discrete high seas fish stocks on the basis of where the catch is taken;

III

Related fisheries instruments

35. Emphasizes the importance of the effective implementation of the provisions of the Compliance Agreement, and urges continued efforts in this regard;

36. Calls upon all States and other entities referred to in Article X, paragraph 1, of the Compliance Agreement that have not yet become parties to that Agreement to do so as a matter of priority and, in the interim, to consider applying it provisionally;

37. Urges States and subregional and regional fisheries management organizations and arrangements to implement and promote the application of the Code within their areas of competence;

38. Urges States to develop and implement, as a matter of priority, national and, as appropriate, regional plans of action to put into effect the international plans of action of the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations;

39. Encourages the development of best practice guidelines for safety at sea in connection with marine fisheries by the competent international organizations;

IV

Illegal, unreported and unregulated fishing

40. Emphasizes once again its serious concern that illegal, unreported and unregulated fishing remains one of the greatest threats to marine ecosystems and continues to have serious and major implications for the conservation and management of ocean resources, as well as the food security and the economies of many States, particularly developing States, and renews its call upon States to comply fully with all existing obligations and to combat such fishing and urgently to take all necessary steps to implement the

International Plan of Action to Prevent, Deter and Eliminate Illegal, Unreported and Unregulated Fishing of the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations;

41. Urges States to exercise effective control over their nationals, including beneficial owners, and vessels flying their flag, in order to prevent and deter them from engaging in illegal, unreported and unregulated fishing activities or supporting vessels engaging in illegal, unreported and unregulated fishing activities, including those vessels listed by regional fisheries management organizations or arrangements as engaged in those activities, and to facilitate mutual assistance to ensure that such actions can be investigated and proper sanctions imposed;

42. Also urges States to take effective measures, at the national, subregional, regional and global levels, to deter the activities, including illegal, unreported and unregulated fishing, of any vessel which undermines conservation and management measures that have been adopted by subregional and regional fisheries management organizations and arrangements in accordance with international law;

43. Calls upon States not to permit vessels flying their flag to engage in fishing on the high seas or in areas under the national jurisdiction of other States, unless duly authorized by the authorities of the States concerned and in accordance with the conditions set out in the authorization, and to take specific measures, including deterring the reflagging of vessels by their nationals, in accordance with the relevant provisions of the Convention, the Agreement and the Compliance Agreement, to control fishing operations by vessels flying their flag;

44. Urges States, individually and collectively through regional fisheries management organizations and arrangements, to develop appropriate processes to assess the performance of States with respect to implementing the obligations regarding fishing vessels flying their flag set out in relevant international instruments;

45. Reaffirms the need to strengthen, where necessary, the international legal framework for intergovernmental cooperation, in particular at the subregional and regional levels, in the management of fish stocks and in combating illegal, unreported and unregulated fishing, in a manner consistent with international law, and for States and entities referred to in the Convention and in article 1, paragraph 2 (b), of the Agreement to collaborate in efforts to address these types of fishing activities;

46. Urges regional fisheries management organizations and arrangements to further coordinate measures for combating illegal, unreported and unregulated fishing activities, such as through the development of a common list of vessels identified as engaged in illegal, unreported and unregulated fishing or the mutual recognition of the illegal, unreported and unregulated vessel lists established by each organization or arrangement;

47. Reaffirms its call upon States to take all necessary measures consistent with international law, without prejudice to a State's sovereignty over ports in its territory and to reasons of force majeure or distress, including the prohibition of vessels from accessing their ports followed by a report to the flag State concerned, when there is clear evidence that they are or have been engaged in or have supported illegal, unreported and unregulated fishing, or when they refuse to give information either on the origin of the catch or on the authorization under which the catch has been made;

48. Reaffirms paragraph 53 of resolution 64/72 with regard to eliminating illegal, unreported and unregulated fishing by vessels flying “flags of convenience” and requiring that a “genuine link” be established between States and fishing vessels flying their flags, and urges States operating open registry to effectively control all fishing vessels flying their flag, as required by international law, or otherwise stop open registry for fishing vessels;

49. Recognizes the need for enhanced port State measures to combat illegal, unreported and unregulated fishing, and urges States to cooperate, in particular at the regional level and through subregional and regional fisheries management organizations and arrangements, to adopt all necessary port measures, consistent with international law taking into account article 23 of the Agreement, and to further promote the development and application of standards at the regional level;

50. Encourages, in this regard, States and regional economic integration organizations to consider ratifying, accepting, approving or acceding to the Agreement on Port State Measures to Prevent, Deter and Eliminate Illegal, Unreported and Unregulated Fishing of the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations with a view to its early entry into force;

51. Encourages strengthened collaboration between the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations and the International Maritime Organization, taking into account the respective competencies, mandates and experience of the two organizations, to combat illegal, unreported and unregulated fishing, particularly in improving the implementation of flag State responsibilities and port State measures;

52. Encourages States, with respect to vessels flying their flag, and port States, to make every effort to share data on landings and catch quotas, and in this regard encourages regional fisheries management organizations or arrangements to consider developing open databases containing such data for the purpose of enhancing the effectiveness of fisheries management;

53. Calls upon States to take all necessary measures to ensure that vessels flying their flag do not engage in transshipment of fish caught by fishing vessels engaged in illegal, unreported and unregulated fishing;

54. Urges States, individually and through regional fisheries management organizations and arrangements, to adopt and implement internationally agreed market-related measures in accordance with international law, including principles, rights and obligations established in World Trade Organization agreements, as called for in the International Plan of Action to Prevent, Deter and Eliminate Illegal, Unreported and Unregulated Fishing;

55. Encourages information-sharing regarding emerging market- and trade-related measures by States and other relevant actors with appropriate international forums, given the potential implications of these measures for all States, consistent with the established plan of work of the Committee on Fisheries of the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations, and taking into account the Technical Guidelines for Responsible Fish Trade of the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations;

56. Notes the concerns about possible connections between international organized crime and illegal fishing in certain regions of the world, and encourages States, including through the appropriate international forums and organizations, to study the causes and methods of and contributing factors to illegal fishing to increase knowledge and understanding of those possible connections, and to make the findings publicly available, bearing in mind the distinct legal regimes and remedies under international law applicable to illegal fishing and international organized crime;

V

Monitoring, control and surveillance and compliance and enforcement

57. Calls upon States, in accordance with international law, to strengthen implementation of or, where they do not exist, adopt comprehensive monitoring, control and surveillance measures and compliance and enforcement schemes individually and within those regional fisheries management organizations or arrangements in which they participate, in order to provide an appropriate framework for promoting compliance with agreed conservation and management measures, and further urges enhanced coordination among all relevant States and regional fisheries management organizations and arrangements in these efforts;

58. Encourages further work by competent international organizations, including the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations and subregional and regional fisheries management organizations and arrangements, to develop guidelines on flag State control of fishing vessels;

59. Urges States, individually and through relevant regional fisheries management organizations and arrangements, to establish mandatory vessel monitoring, control and surveillance systems, in particular to require that vessel monitoring systems be carried by all vessels fishing on the high seas as soon as practicable, recalling that paragraph 62 of resolution 63/112 of 5 December 2008 urged that large-scale fishing vessels be required to carry vessel monitoring systems no later than December 2008, and to share information on fisheries enforcement matters;

60. Calls upon States, individually and through regional fisheries management organizations or arrangements, to strengthen or establish, consistent with national and international law, positive or negative lists of vessels fishing within the areas covered by relevant regional fisheries management organizations and arrangements in order to promote compliance with conservation and management measures and to identify products from illegal, unreported and unregulated catches, and encourages improved coordination among all States and regional fisheries management organizations and arrangements in sharing and using this information, taking into account the forms of cooperation with developing States as set out in article 25 of the Agreement;

61. Encourages the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations, in cooperation with States, regional economic integration organizations, the International Maritime Organization and, as appropriate, regional fisheries management organizations and arrangements, to expedite efforts to develop and manage a comprehensive global record, including with a unique vessel identifier system, and in this regard encourages the Committee on Fisheries at its twenty-ninth session, from 31 January to 4 February 2011, to consider the recommendations of the Technical Consultation to Identify a Structure and Strategy for the Development and Implementation of the Global Record of Fishing Vessels, Refrigerated Transport Vessels and Supply Vessels;

62. Requests States and relevant international bodies to develop, in accordance with international law, more effective measures to trace fish and fishery products to enable importing States to identify fish or fishery products caught in a manner that undermines international conservation and management measures agreed in accordance with international law, taking into account the special requirements of developing States and the forms of cooperation with developing States as set out in article 25 of the Agreement, and at the same time to recognize the importance of market access, in accordance with provisions 11.2.4, 11.2.5 and 11.2.6 of the Code, for fish and fishery products caught in a manner that is in conformity with such international measures;

63. Requests States to take the necessary measures, consistent with international law, to help to prevent fish and fishery products caught in a manner that undermines applicable conservation and management measures adopted in accordance with international law from entering international trade;

64. Invites the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations to report on the state of progress in the development of best practice guidelines for catch documentation schemes and traceability, for inclusion in the report of the Secretary-General on fisheries to the General Assembly at its sixty-seventh session;

65. Encourages States to establish and undertake cooperative surveillance and enforcement activities in accordance with international law to strengthen and enhance efforts to ensure compliance with conservation and management measures, and prevent and deter illegal, unreported and unregulated fishing;

66. Urges States, directly and through regional fisheries management organizations or arrangements, to develop and adopt effective monitoring, control and surveillance measures for trans-shipment, as appropriate, in particular at-sea trans-shipment, in order to, inter alia, monitor compliance, collect and verify fisheries data, and to prevent and suppress illegal, unreported and unregulated fishing activities, in accordance with international law, and, in parallel, to encourage and support the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations in studying the current practices of trans-shipment and produce a set of guidelines for this purpose;

67. Expresses its appreciation for financial contributions from States to improve the capacity of the existing voluntary International Monitoring, Control and Surveillance Network for Fisheries-Related Activities, and encourages States to join and actively participate in the Network and to consider supporting, when appropriate, its transformation in accordance with international law into an international unit with dedicated resources to further assist Network members, taking into account the forms of cooperation with developing States as set out in article 25 of the Agreement;

68. Encourages participation in the third Global Fisheries Enforcement Training Workshop, for the African region, to be held in Maputo from 28 February to 4 March 2011, supported by the International Monitoring, Control and Surveillance Network, the Secretariat of the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations, the Partnership for African Fisheries of the New Partnership for Africa's Development and the Government of Mozambique, in order to share information, experiences and technologies, foster coordination and improve skills among enforcement officials;

VI

Fishing overcapacity

69. Calls upon States to commit themselves to urgently reducing the capacity of the world's fishing fleets to levels commensurate with the sustainability of fish stocks, through the establishment of target levels and plans or other appropriate mechanisms for ongoing capacity assessment, while avoiding the transfer of fishing capacity to other fisheries or areas in a manner that undermines the sustainable management of fish stocks, including those areas where fish stocks are overexploited or in a depleted condition, and recognizing in this context the legitimate rights of developing States to develop their fisheries for straddling fish stocks and highly migratory fish stocks consistent with article 25 of the Agreement, article 5 of the Code, and paragraph 10 of the International Plan of Action for the Management of Fishing Capacity;

70. Reiterates its call upon States, individually and through regional fisheries management organizations and arrangements, to ensure that the urgent actions required in the International Plan of Action for the Management of Fishing Capacity are undertaken expeditiously and that its implementation is facilitated without delay;

71. Invites the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations to report on the state of progress in the implementation of the International Plan of Action for the Management of Fishing Capacity, as provided for in paragraph 48 of the Plan of Action;

72. Calls upon States individually and, as appropriate, through subregional and regional fisheries management organizations and arrangements with competence to regulate highly migratory species, urgently to address global fishing capacity for tunas, inter alia, in a way that recognizes the legitimate rights of developing States, in particular small island developing States, to participate in and benefit from such fisheries, taking into account the recommendations of the Joint Tuna Regional Fisheries Management Organizations International Workshop on RFMO Management of Tuna Fisheries, held in Brisbane, Australia, from 29 June to 1 July 2010;

73. Encourages those States which are cooperating to establish subregional and regional fisheries management organizations and arrangements, taking into account the best scientific information available as well as the precautionary approach, to exercise voluntary restraint of fishing effort levels in those areas that will come under the regulation of the future organizations and arrangements until adequate regional conservation and management measures are adopted and implemented, taking into account the need to ensure the long-term conservation, management and sustainable use of the relevant fish stocks and to prevent significant adverse impacts on vulnerable marine ecosystems;

74. Urges States to eliminate subsidies that contribute to overfishing and overcapacity and to illegal, unreported and unregulated fishing, including by accelerating work to complete World Trade Organization negotiations on fisheries subsidies in accordance with the 2001 Doha Ministerial Declaration to clarify and improve and the 2005 Hong Kong Ministerial Declaration to strengthen disciplines on fisheries subsidies, taking into account the importance of the fisheries sector, including small-scale and artisanal fisheries, to developing countries;

VII

Large-scale pelagic drift-net fishing

75. Expresses concern that, despite the adoption of General Assembly resolution 46/215 of 20 December 1991, the practice of large-scale pelagic drift-net fishing still exists and remains a threat to marine living resources;

76. Urges States, individually and through regional fisheries management organizations and arrangements, to adopt effective measures, or strengthen existing measures, to implement and enforce the provisions of resolution 46/215 and subsequent resolutions on large-scale pelagic drift-net fishing in order to eliminate the use of large-scale pelagic drift nets in all seas and oceans, which means that efforts to implement resolution 46/215 should not result in the transfer to other parts of the world of drift nets that contravene the resolution;

77. Also urges States, individually and through regional fisheries management organizations and arrangements, to adopt effective measures, or strengthen existing measures, to implement and enforce the present global moratorium on the use of large-scale pelagic drift nets on the high seas, and calls upon States to ensure that vessels flying their flag that are duly authorized to use large-scale drift nets in waters under their national jurisdiction do not use such gear for fishing while on the high seas;

78. Reaffirms the request in paragraph 6 of resolution 46/215 for the submission of information to the Secretary-General and requests the Secretary-General to include this information in his report to the General Assembly at its sixty-seventh session;

VIII

Fisheries by-catch and discards

79. Urges States, subregional and regional fisheries management organizations and arrangements and other relevant international organizations that have not done so to take action, including with consideration of the interests of developing coastal States and, as appropriate, subsistence fishing communities, to reduce or eliminate by-catch, catch by lost or abandoned gear, fish discards and post-harvest losses, including juvenile fish, consistent with international law and relevant international instruments, including the Code, and in particular to consider measures including, as appropriate, technical measures related to fish size, mesh size or gear, discards, closed seasons and areas and zones reserved for selected fisheries, particularly artisanal fisheries, the establishment of mechanisms for communicating information on areas of high concentration of juvenile fish, taking into account the importance of ensuring the confidentiality of such information, and support for studies and research that will reduce or eliminate by-catch of juvenile fish, and to ensure that these measures are implemented so as to optimize their effectiveness;

80. Urgently calls upon States, subregional and regional fisheries management organizations and arrangements and, where appropriate, other relevant international organizations to develop and implement effective management measures to reduce the incidence of catch of non-target species;

81. Calls upon States, subregional and regional fisheries management organizations and arrangements to adopt or improve measures to assess the impact of their fisheries on species caught as by-catch and to improve the comprehensiveness and accuracy of information and reporting on incidental catch of species caught as by-catch, including through adequate observer coverage and the use of modern technologies, and to provide assistance to developing States to meet data collection and reporting obligations;

82. Encourages States and entities referred to in the Convention and in article 1, paragraph 2 (b), of the Agreement to give due consideration to participation, as appropriate, in subregional and regional instruments and organizations with mandates to conserve non-target species taken incidentally in fishing operations;

83. Encourages States to strengthen, if necessary, the capacity of those subregional and regional fisheries management organizations and arrangements in which they participate to ensure the adequate conservation of non-target species taken incidentally in fishing operations, taking into consideration best practices for non-target species management, and to expedite their ongoing efforts in this regard;

84. Requests States and regional fisheries management organizations and arrangements urgently to implement, as appropriate, the measures recommended in the 2004 Guidelines to Reduce Sea Turtle Mortality in Fishing Operations and the International Plan of Action for Reducing Incidental Catch of Seabirds in Longline Fisheries of the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations in order to prevent the decline of sea turtles and seabird populations by minimizing by-catch and increasing post-release survival in their fisheries, including through research and development of gear and bait alternatives, promoting the use of available by-catch mitigation technology, and establishing and strengthening data-collection programmes to obtain standardized information to develop reliable estimates of the by-catch of these species;

85. Recalls paragraph 85 of resolution 64/72, and notes with satisfaction that the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations has published the best practices technical guidelines for the implementation of the International Plan of Action for Reducing Incidental Catch of Seabirds in Longline Fisheries on its website;

86. Requests States and regional fisheries management organizations and arrangements to take urgent action to reduce the by-catch of seabirds, including albatrosses and petrels, in fisheries by adopting and implementing conservation measures that are consistent with recognized international guidelines;

IX

Subregional and regional cooperation

87. Urges coastal States and States fishing on the high seas, in accordance with the Convention, the Agreement and other relevant instruments, to pursue cooperation in relation to straddling fish stocks and highly migratory fish stocks, either directly or through appropriate subregional or regional fisheries management organizations or arrangements, to ensure the effective conservation and management of such stocks;

88. Urges States fishing for straddling fish stocks and highly migratory fish stocks on the high seas, and relevant coastal States, where a subregional or regional fisheries management organization or arrangement has the competence to establish conservation and management measures for such stocks, to give effect to their duty to cooperate by becoming members of such an organization or participants in such an arrangement, or by agreeing to apply the conservation and management measures established by such an organization or arrangement, or to otherwise ensure that no vessel flying their flag is authorized to access the fisheries resources to which regional fisheries management organizations and arrangements or conservation and management measures established by such organizations or arrangements apply;

89. Invites, in this regard, subregional and regional fisheries management organizations and arrangements to ensure that all States having a real interest in the fisheries concerned may become members of such organizations or participants in such arrangements, in accordance with the Convention, the Agreement and the Code;

90. Encourages relevant coastal States and States fishing on the high seas for a straddling fish stock or a highly migratory fish stock, where there is no subregional or regional fisheries management organization or arrangement to establish conservation and management measures for such stocks, to cooperate to establish such an organization or enter into another appropriate arrangement to ensure the conservation and management of such stocks, and to participate in the work of the organization or arrangement;

91. Urges all signatory States and other States whose vessels fish within the area of the Convention on the Conservation and Management of Fishery Resources in the South-East Atlantic Ocean for fishery resources covered by that Convention to become parties to that Convention as a matter of priority and, in the interim, to ensure that vessels flying their flags fully comply with the measures adopted;

92. Encourages signatory States and States having a real interest to become parties to the South Indian Ocean Fisheries Agreement, and urges those States to agree on and implement interim measures, including measures in accordance with paragraphs 80 and 83 to 87 of resolution 61/105 and paragraphs 117, 119, 120, 122 and 123 of resolution 64/72, to ensure the conservation and management of the fisheries resources and their marine ecosystems and habitats in the area to which that Agreement applies until such time as that Agreement enters into force;

93. Takes note of recent efforts at the regional level to promote responsible fishing practices, including combating illegal, unreported and unregulated fishing;

94. Welcomes the recent signatures and ratification of the Convention on the Conservation and Management of High Seas Fishery Resources in the South Pacific Ocean, and encourages further signatures and ratifications of that Convention with a view to its early entry into force;

95. Encourages States, regional economic integration organizations and the entities referred to in article 1, paragraph 2 (b), of the Convention on the Conservation and Management of High Seas Fishery Resources in the South Pacific Ocean that participated in the negotiation of that Convention, to fully implement the voluntary interim measures that have been adopted to give effect to paragraphs 80 and 83 to 87 of resolution 61/105 and to voluntarily restrain fishing effort and catches to avoid overexploitation of certain pelagic fisheries resources in the area to which that Convention will apply, until it has entered into force and conservation and management measures have been adopted, and to take into account the scientific advice given by the Science Working Group in the adoption of future interim measures that should apply to certain pelagic fisheries resources before the entry into force of that Convention;

96. Notes with satisfaction the progress of negotiations to establish a subregional and regional fisheries management organization in the North Pacific, urges States having a real interest to participate in and expedite such negotiations, and to apply provisions of the Convention and the Agreement to their work, and encourages those participants to implement fully interim measures adopted in accordance with paragraphs 80 and 83 to 87 of resolution 61/105 and paragraphs 117, 119, 120, 122 and 123 of resolution 64/72;

97. Takes note of the ongoing efforts of the members of the Indian Ocean Tuna Commission to strengthen the functioning of the Commission so that it can more effectively discharge its mandate, and invites the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations to continue to provide members of the Commission with the necessary assistance to this end;

98. Welcomes with satisfaction the entry into force of the Convention for the Strengthening of the Inter-American Tropical Tuna Commission Established by the 1949 Convention between the United States of America and the Republic of Costa Rica, and invites all those that may consent to be bound by that Convention to consider doing so, in accordance with its terms;

99. Urges further efforts by regional fisheries management organizations and arrangements, as a matter of priority, in accordance with international law, to strengthen and modernize their mandates and the measures adopted by such organizations or arrangements, and to implement modern approaches to fisheries management, as reflected in the Agreement and other relevant international instruments, relying on the best scientific information available and application of the precautionary approach and incorporating an ecosystem approach to fisheries management and biodiversity considerations, including the conservation and management of ecologically related and dependent species and protection of their habitats, where these aspects are lacking, to ensure that they effectively contribute to long-term conservation and management and sustainable use of marine living resources, and welcomes those regional fisheries management organizations and arrangements that have taken steps in this direction;

100. Calls upon regional fisheries management organizations with the competence to conserve and manage highly migratory fish stocks that have not yet adopted effective conservation and management measures in line with the best scientific information available to conserve and manage stocks falling under their mandate to do so urgently;

101. Urges States to strengthen and enhance cooperation among existing and developing regional fisheries management organizations and arrangements in which they participate, including increased communication and further coordination of measures, such as through the holding of joint consultations, and to strengthen integration, coordination and cooperation by such regional fisheries management organizations and arrangements with other relevant fisheries organizations, regional seas arrangements and other relevant international organizations;

102. Urges the five regional fisheries management organizations with competence to manage highly migratory species to continue to take measures to implement the Course of Actions adopted at the second joint meeting of tuna regional fisheries management organizations and arrangements, encourages participation in the third joint meeting, to be held in La Jolla, United States of America, from 11 to 15 July 2011, and invites developing States parties to the Agreement to utilize the assistance available to them under the Agreement, as well as other available funding assistance, to facilitate their participation in that meeting;

103. Welcomes the outcomes of the joint tuna regional fisheries management organizations international workshops held in 2010 on improvement, harmonization and compatibility of monitoring, control and surveillance measures, management issues relating to by-catch, the provision of scientific advice and management of tuna fisheries, and encourages those organizations to actively consider the recommendations of the workshops;

104. Invites States and regional fisheries management organizations and arrangements with competence to manage straddling fish stocks to share experiences and good practices, for example by considering organizing joint meetings, where appropriate;

105. Urges regional fisheries management organizations and arrangements to improve transparency and to ensure that their decision-making processes are fair and transparent, rely on the best scientific information available, incorporate the precautionary approach and ecosystem approaches, address participatory rights, including through, inter alia, the development of transparent criteria for allocating fishing opportunities which reflects, where appropriate, the relevant provisions of the Agreement, taking due account, inter alia, of the status of the relevant stocks and the respective interests in the fishery;

106. Welcomes the fact that a number of regional fisheries management organizations and arrangements have completed performance reviews, and encourages the implementation, as appropriate, of the recommendations of their respective reviews as a matter of priority;

107. Urges States, through their participation in regional fisheries management organizations and arrangements that have not done so, to undertake, on an urgent basis, performance reviews of those regional fisheries management organizations and arrangements, initiated either by the organization or arrangement itself or with external partners, including in cooperation with the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations, using transparent criteria based on the provisions of the Agreement and other relevant instruments, and taking into account the best practices of regional fisheries management organizations or arrangements and, as appropriate, any set of criteria developed by States or other regional fisheries management organizations or arrangements, and encourages that such performance reviews include some element of independent evaluation and propose means for improving the functioning of the regional fisheries management organization or arrangement, as appropriate;

108. Encourages regional fisheries management organizations and arrangements to make the results of those performance reviews publicly available and to discuss the results jointly;

109. Urges States to cooperate, taking into account those performance reviews, to develop best practice guidelines for regional fisheries management organizations and arrangements and to apply, to the extent possible, those guidelines to organizations and arrangements in which they participate;

110. Encourages the development of regional guidelines for States to use in establishing sanctions for non-compliance by vessels flying their flag and by their nationals, to be applied in accordance with national law, that are adequate in severity for effectively securing compliance, deterring further violations and depriving offenders of the benefits deriving from their illegal activities, as well as in evaluating their systems of sanctions to ensure that they are effective in securing compliance and deterring violations;

X

Responsible fisheries in the marine ecosystem

111. Encourages States to apply by 2010 the ecosystem approach, in accordance with paragraph 30 (d) of the Johannesburg Plan of Implementation;

112. Urges States, individually or through regional fisheries management organizations and arrangements, to continue their efforts to apply an ecosystem approach to fisheries;

113. Encourages States, individually or through regional fisheries management organizations and arrangements and other relevant international organizations, to work to ensure that fisheries and other ecosystem data collection is performed in a coordinated and integrated manner, facilitating incorporation into global observation initiatives, where appropriate;

114. Calls upon States and regional fisheries management organizations or arrangements, working in cooperation with other relevant organizations, including the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations, the Intergovernmental Oceanographic Commission and the World Meteorological Organization, to adopt, as appropriate, measures to protect ocean data buoy systems moored in areas beyond national jurisdiction from actions that impair their operation;

115. Encourages States to increase scientific research in accordance with international law on the marine ecosystem;

116. Calls upon States, the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations and other specialized agencies, subregional and regional fisheries management organizations and arrangements, where appropriate, and other appropriate intergovernmental bodies, to cooperate in achieving sustainable aquaculture, including through information exchange, developing equivalent standards on such issues as aquatic animal health and human health and safety concerns, assessing the potential positive and negative impacts of aquaculture, including socio-economics, on the marine and coastal environment, including biodiversity, and adopting relevant methods and techniques to minimize and mitigate adverse effects, and in this regard encourages the implementation of the 2007 Strategy and Outline Plan for Improving Information on Status and Trends of Aquaculture of the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations, as a framework for the improvement and understanding of aquaculture status and trends;

117. Calls upon States to take action immediately, individually and through regional fisheries management organizations and arrangements, and consistent with the precautionary approach and ecosystem approaches, to implement the 2008 International Guidelines for the Management of Deep-sea Fisheries in the High Seas of the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations ("the Guidelines") in order to sustainably manage fish stocks and protect vulnerable marine ecosystems, including seamounts, hydrothermal vents and cold water corals, from destructive fishing practices, recognizing the immense importance and value of deep sea ecosystems and the biodiversity they contain;

118. Reaffirms paragraphs 113 to 130 of resolution 64/72 addressing the impacts of bottom fishing on vulnerable marine ecosystems and the long-term sustainability of deep sea fish stocks, and urges States and relevant regional fisheries management organizations and arrangements to fully implement the actions called for in those paragraphs;

119. Also reaffirms that nothing in the paragraphs of its resolutions 61/105 and 64/72 addressing the impacts of bottom fishing on vulnerable marine ecosystems prejudices the sovereign rights of coastal States over their continental shelf or the exercise of the jurisdiction of coastal States with respect to their continental shelf under international law as reflected in the Convention, in particular article 77 thereof;

120. Welcomes the substantial ongoing work of the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations related to the management of deep sea fisheries in the high seas and the protection of vulnerable marine ecosystems, and urges States and regional fisheries management organizations and arrangements to ensure that their actions in sustainably managing deep sea fisheries and implementing paragraphs 80 and 83 to 87 of resolution 61/105 and paragraphs 119 to 124 of resolution 64/72 are consistent with the Guidelines;

121. Takes note of the convening of a workshop on implementing the Guidelines in Busan, Republic of Korea, from 10 to 12 May 2010, and invites the secretariat of the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations to make the report of the workshop available;

122. Requests the Secretary-General, in cooperation with the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations, to report to the General Assembly at its sixty-sixth session on the actions taken by States and regional fisheries management organizations and arrangements in response to paragraphs 80 and 83 to 87 of resolution 61/105 and paragraphs 113 to 117 and 119 to 127 of resolution 64/72, in order to facilitate the further review of the actions taken referred to in paragraph 129 of resolution 64/72;

123. Encourages accelerated progress to establish criteria on the objectives and management of marine protected areas for fisheries purposes, and in this regard welcomes the proposed work of the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations to develop technical guidelines in accordance with the Convention and the Code on the design, implementation and testing of marine protected areas for such purposes, and urges coordination and cooperation among all relevant international organizations and bodies;

124. Urges all States to implement the 1995 Global Programme of Action for the Protection of the Marine Environment from Land-based Activities and to accelerate activity to safeguard the marine ecosystem, including fish stocks, against pollution and physical degradation;

125. Acknowledges the serious environmental impacts on the marine environment caused by abandoned, lost or otherwise discarded fishing gear, welcomes the 2009 report by the United Nations Environment Programme and the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations, and encourages States to take action to reduce such gear, noting the recommendations of the report;

126. Reaffirms the importance it attaches to paragraphs 77 to 81 of resolution 60/31 of 29 November 2005 concerning the issue of lost, abandoned or discarded fishing gear and related marine debris and the adverse impacts such debris and derelict fishing gear have on, inter alia, fish stocks, habitats and other marine species, and urges accelerated progress by States and regional fisheries management organizations and arrangements in implementing those paragraphs of the resolution;

127. Encourages further studies, including by the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations, on the impacts of underwater noise on fish stocks and fishing catch rates, as well as associated socio-economic effects;

128. Calls upon States, including through regional fisheries management organizations and arrangements, to play an active role in global efforts to conserve and sustainably use marine living resources, so as to contribute to marine biological diversity;

129. Encourages States, either individually or through regional fisheries management organizations and arrangements, as appropriate, to identify any spawning and nursery areas for fish stocks under their jurisdiction or competence and, where required, to adopt science-based measures to conserve such stocks during these critical life stages;

XI

Capacity-building

130. Reiterates the crucial importance of cooperation by States directly or, as appropriate, through the relevant subregional and regional organizations, and by other international organizations, including the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations through its FishCode programme, including through financial and/or technical assistance, in accordance with the Agreement, the Compliance Agreement, the Code and its associated international plans of action, to increase the capacity of developing States to achieve the goals and implement the actions called for in the present resolution;

131. Welcomes the work of the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations in developing guidance on the strategies and measures required for the creation of an enabling environment for small-scale fisheries, including the development of a code of conduct and guidelines for enhancing the contribution of small-scale fisheries to poverty alleviation and food security that include adequate provisions with regard to financial measures and capacity-building, including transfer of technology, and encourages studies for creating possible alternative livelihoods for coastal communities;

132. Encourages increased capacity-building and technical assistance by States, international financial institutions and relevant intergovernmental organizations and bodies for fishers, in particular small-scale fishers, in developing countries, and in particular small island developing States, consistent with environmental sustainability, in recognition of the fact that food security and livelihoods may depend on fisheries;

133. Encourages the international community to enhance the opportunities for sustainable development in developing countries, in particular the least developed countries, small island developing States and coastal African States, by encouraging greater participation of those States in authorized fisheries activities being undertaken within areas under their national jurisdiction, in accordance with the Convention, by distant-water fishing nations in order to achieve better economic returns for developing countries from their fisheries resources within areas under their national jurisdiction and an enhanced role in regional fisheries management, as well as by enhancing the ability of developing countries to develop their own fisheries, as well as to participate in high seas fisheries, including access to such fisheries, in conformity with international law, in particular the Convention and the Agreement, and taking into account article 5 of the Code;

134. Requests distant-water fishing nations, when negotiating access agreements and arrangements with developing coastal States, to do so on an equitable and sustainable basis, including by giving greater attention to fish processing and fish-processing facilities within the national jurisdiction of the developing coastal State to assist the realization of the benefits from the development of fisheries resources, and also the transfer of technology and assistance for monitoring, control and surveillance and compliance and enforcement within areas under the national jurisdiction of the developing coastal State providing fisheries access, taking into account the forms of cooperation set out in article 25 of the Agreement and article 5 of the Code;

135. Encourages States, individually and through regional fisheries management organizations and arrangements, to provide greater assistance and to promote coherence in such assistance for developing States in designing, establishing and implementing relevant agreements, instruments and tools for the conservation and sustainable management of fish stocks, including in designing and strengthening their domestic regulatory fisheries policies and those of regional fisheries management organizations or arrangements in their regions, and the enhancement of research and scientific capabilities through existing funds, such as the Assistance Fund under Part VII of the Agreement, bilateral assistance, regional fisheries management organizations and arrangements assistance funds, the FishCode programme, the World Bank's global programme on fisheries and the Global Environment Facility;

136. Encourages States to provide technical and financial support to developing countries to address their special requirements and challenges in implementing the Guidelines;

137. Calls upon States to promote, through continuing dialogue and the assistance and cooperation provided in accordance with articles 24 to 26 of the Agreement, further ratification of or accession to the Agreement by seeking to address, inter alia, the issue of lack of capacity and resources that might stand in the way of developing States becoming parties;

138. Notes with appreciation the compilation prepared by the Secretariat of the needs of developing States for capacity-building and assistance in the conservation and management of straddling fish stocks and highly migratory fish stocks and the sources of available assistance for developing States to address such needs;

139. Encourages States, regional fisheries management organizations and arrangements and other relevant bodies to assist developing States in the implementation of the actions called for in paragraphs 80 and 83 to 87 of resolution 61/105 and paragraphs 113, 117 and 119 to 124 of resolution 64/72;

140. Urges States and regional economic integration organizations, individually and through regional fisheries management organizations and arrangements, to mainstream efforts to assist developing States, in particular the least developed and small island developing States, with other relevant international development strategies with a view to enhancing international coordination to enable them to develop their national capacity to exploit fishery resources, consistent with the duty to ensure the conservation and management of those resources, and in this regard requests the Secretary-General to fully mobilize and coordinate the agencies, funds and programmes of the United Nations system, including at the level of the regional economic commissions, within their respective mandates;

141. Requests States and regional fisheries management organizations to develop strategies to further assist developing States, in particular the least developed and small island developing States, in fully realizing the benefits from the catch of straddling fish stocks and highly migratory fish stocks and in strengthening regional efforts to sustainably conserve and manage such stocks, and in this regard, to make available such information;

XII

Cooperation within the United Nations system

142. Requests the relevant parts of the United Nations system, international financial institutions and donor agencies to support increased enforcement and compliance capabilities for regional fisheries management organizations and their member States;

143. Invites the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations to continue its cooperative arrangements with United Nations agencies on the implementation of the international plans of action and to report to the Secretary-General, for inclusion in his annual report on sustainable fisheries, on priorities for cooperation and coordination in this work;

XIII

Sixty-sixth session of the General Assembly

144. Requests the Secretary-General to bring the present resolution to the attention of all States, relevant inter-governmental organizations, the organizations and bodies of the United Nations system, subregional and regional fisheries management organizations and relevant non-governmental organizations, and to invite States and regional economic integration organizations and regional fisheries management organizations and arrangements to submit detailed information to the Secretary-General in a timely manner on actions taken pursuant to paragraphs 80 and 83 to 87 of resolution 61/105 and paragraphs 113 to 117 and 119 to 127 of resolution 64/72 to facilitate a further review of such actions;

145. Also requests the Secretary-General to bring the present resolution to the attention of the Inter-agency Consultative Group on Small Island Developing States in the context of paragraph 140 of the present resolution;

146. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its sixty-sixth session, under the item entitled "Oceans and the law of the sea", the sub-item entitled "Sustainable fisheries, including through the 1995 Agreement for the Implementation of the Provisions of the United Nations Convention on the Law of the Sea of 10 December 1982 relating to the Conservation and Management of Straddling Fish Stocks and Highly Migratory Fish Stocks, and related instruments", and to consider the possibility of including this sub-item in future provisional agendas on a biennial basis.

Institutions created by the Convention

International Seabed Authority

Through the International Seabed Authority, established by the United Nations Convention on the Law of the Sea and the 1994 Implementation Agreement [YUN 1994, p. 1301], States organized and conducted exploration of the resources of the seabed and ocean floor and subsoil beyond the limits of national jurisdiction. In 2010, the Authority, which had 160 members as at 28 February, held its sixteenth session (Kingston, Jamaica, 26 April–7 May) [ISBA/16/A/1]. Its subsidiary bodies, namely, the Assembly, the Council, the Legal and Technical Commission and the Finance Committee, also met during the session.

The Assembly [ISBA/16/A/13] considered the annual report of the Authority's Secretary-General [ISBA/16/A/2], which reviewed the Authority's work since the fifteenth session, as well as the outcomes of the 2008–2010 programme of work. The report also outlined the main trends of the proposed programme of work for 2011–2013, covering such matters as supervision of contracts for exploration and award of new ones; progressive development of the regulatory regime for activities in the Area (the seabed and ocean floor and subsoil beyond the limits of national jurisdiction); promotion and encouragement of marine scientific research in the Area; and database development. According to the report, the ocean mining industry continued to suffer from the world economic downturn and its effect on mineral prices. There were limited signs, however, that the market for metals obtainable from seabed minerals, particularly nickel and cobalt, was recovering.

On 6 May, the Assembly considered the report of the Finance Committee [ISBA/16/A/5]. On the basis of the recommendations of the Council [ISBA/16/C/10], the Assembly adopted the budget for the financial period 2011–2012 in the amount of $13,014,700, and recommended that observers attending and participating in the meetings of the Authority make voluntary contributions, considering that they benefited from the facilities of the Authority.

On 7 May [ISBA/16/A/12/Rev.1], the Assembly approved the Regulations on prospecting and exploration for polymetallic sulphides in the Area [annex]. The Assembly also elected new Council members and adopted revisions of the Staff Regulations.

The Council [ISBA/16/C/14] on 5 May considered the draft regulations on prospecting and exploration for cobalt-rich ferromanganese crusts in the Area [ISBA/16/C/WP.2], and decided to take the matter up at its next (2011) session. The Council decided to seek an advisory opinion from the Seabed Disputes Chamber of the International Tribunal for the Law of the Sea on matters relating to the responsibility and liability of sponsoring States [ISBA/16/C/13].

The Legal and Technical Commission [ISBA/16/C/7] considered and evaluated the annual reports submitted by contractors [ISBA/16/LTC/6]. It recommended that the contractors prospecting and exploring for polymetallic nodules in the Area under contract with the Authority should be requested to provide with their next annual report a revised historical breakdown of reported expenditure. It expressed concern that the contractors were not providing raw data despite numerous requests from both the Commission and the Secretary-General. Most of the eight contractors would soon be completing the second five-year period of the 15-year exploration contracts granted by the Authority.

The Finance Committee [ISBA/16/A/5] took action on the proposed budget of the Authority for the financial period 2011–2012, the Working Capital Fund, the scale of assessment for 2011–2012, and the audit of the accounts of the Authority for 2009. It took note of the balance as at March 2010 of the Authority's Endowment Fund for Marine Scientific Research, in the amount of $3,338,409, and of the balance of the Authority's Voluntary Trust Fund, in the amount of $40,435. The Endowment Fund promoted collaborative marine scientific research in the international seabed area by supporting the participation of scientists and technical personnel from developing countries in research programmes and activities. The Trust Fund facilitated the participation of members of the Legal and Technical Commission and the Finance Committee from developing countries in the meetings of those bodies.

As at 31 December, the 1998 Protocol on the Privileges and Immunities of the International Seabed Authority [YUN 1998, p. 1226], which entered into force in 2003 [YUN 2003, p. 1353], had 28 signatories and 31 parties.

International Tribunal for the Law of the Sea

The International Tribunal for the Law of the Sea held its twenty-ninth (8–19 March) and thirtieth (20 September–1 October) sessions in Hamburg, Germany [SPLOS/222].

In the Dispute concerning Delimitation of the Maritime Boundary between Bangladesh and Myanmar in the Bay of Bengal (Bangladesh/Myanmar) [YUN 2009, p. 1345], the President of the Tribunal on 25 and 26 January held consultations with the representatives of the parties to ascertain their views with regard to questions of procedure. On 28 January, the President adopted an order fixing 1 July as the time limit for the filing of the memorial by Bangladesh and 1 December as the time limit for the filing of the counter-memorial by Myanmar. By an order of 17 March, the Tribunal fixed 15 March 2011 as the time limit for the filing of the reply by Bangladesh and 1 July 2011 as the time limit for the filing of the rejoinder by Myanmar. Both countries nominated judges ad hoc to sit in the case. The President chose three arbitrators, appointing one as president of the arbitral tribunal.

In the case Responsibilities and Obligations of States Sponsoring Persons and Entities with Respect to Activities in the Area (request for advisory opinion submitted to the Seabed Disputes Chamber), the Council of the International Seabed Authority on 6 May [ISBA/16/C/13] requested the Seabed Disputes Chamber of the Tribunal to render an advisory opinion on the responsibilities and obligations of States sponsoring persons and entities with respect to activities in the international seabed area. On 18 May, the President of the Seabed Disputes Chamber adopted an order fixing 9 August as the time limit for presenting written statements and 14 September as the date for the opening of the oral proceedings; the time limit was subsequently extended to 19 August. Twelve States parties to the Convention, the International Seabed Authority, the Interoceanmetal Joint Organization and the International Union for Conservation of Nature (IUCN) filed written statements within the time limit. The United Nations Environment Programme filed a statement after the time limit. The Chamber met for initial deliberations on 10, 13 and 14 September. During the hearing (14–16 September), nine States parties, the International Seabed Authority, the Intergovernmental Oceanographic Commission of the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization (UNESCO) and IUCN presented oral statements. The Chamber scheduled the delivery of the advisory opinion for 1 February 2011.

On 24 November, Saint Vincent and the Grenadines instituted proceedings before the Tribunal in relation to the M/V Louisa case (Saint Vincent and the Grenadines v. Spain). The dispute concerned the vessel M/V Louisa, flying the flag of Saint Vincent and the Grenadines, arrested on 1 February 2006 by the Spanish authorities and held since that date. Saint Vincent and the Grenadines requested provisional measures, including ordering Spain to release the M/V Louisa. On 8 December, Spain filed a statement in response, maintaining that the vessel had been arrested in the course of criminal proceedings for alleged violation of laws relating to the Spanish historical patrimony. By an order of 30 November, the President fixed 10 December as the date for the opening of the hearing. The Tribunal held initial deliberations on 9 December. Oral statements were presented on 10 and 11 December. On 23 December, the Tribunal delivered its order concerning the request for provisional measures and found that it had prima facie jurisdiction over the dispute. The Tribunal refrained, however, from prescribing provisional measures, holding that the circumstances were not such as to require the issuance of provisional measures, and that there was no real and imminent risk that irreparable prejudice might be caused to the rights of the parties. The decision was taken by 17 votes to 4. One judge appended a separate opinion and four judges appended dissenting opinions.

As at 31 December, the Agreement on the Privileges and Immunities of the International Tribunal for the Law of the Sea, which was adopted by the seventh Meeting of States Parties to the Convention in 1997 [YUN 1997, p. 1361] and entered into force in 2001 [YUN 2001, p. 1235], had 21 signatories and 38 parties.

Commission on the Limits of the Continental Shelf

In 2010, the Commission on the Limits of the Continental Shelf, established in 1997 [YUN 1997, p. 1362], held its twenty-fifth (15 March–23 April) [CLCS/66] and twenty-sixth (2 August–3 September) [CLCS/68 & Corr.1] sessions in New York. Among other things, it examined submissions by States regarding the establishment of the outer limits of the continental shelf beyond 200 nautical miles.

At its twenty-fifth session, the Commission adopted recommendations in regard to the submissions made by Barbados on 8 May 2008 [YUN 2008, p. 1496] and the United Kingdom in respect of Ascension Island on 9 May 2008 [ibid.]. The Commission also began consideration of the 2008 joint submission by Mauritius and Seychelles in respect of the Mascarene Plateau, and a submission by Suriname. It continued its consideration of the submissions by Indonesia in respect of North West of Sumatra Island and Japan. It decided that the submissions made by Cuba; France in respect of the French Antilles and the Kerguelen Islands; Norway in respect of Bouvetøya and Dronning Maud

Land; Micronesia, Papua New Guinea and Solomon Islands in respect of the Ontong Java Plateau; Portugal; Tonga; Spain in respect of the area of Galicia; Trinidad and Tobago; and Namibia would be addressed by way of a subcommission to be established at a future session. Regarding the submission made by the United Kingdom in respect of the Falkland Islands and of South Georgia and the South Sandwich Islands, the Commission decided that in accordance with its rules of procedure, it was not in a position to consider and qualify the submission.

At its twenty-sixth session, the Commission continued to consider the submissions made by Japan, Mauritius and Seychelles, and Suriname. It informed Barbados that although it was not in a position to reconsider its submission and the recommendations adopted at the previous session, it remained open to providing clarification on those recommendations. It also decided that the submissions made by South Africa in respect of its mainland, France and South Africa in respect of the Crozet Archipelago and the Prince Edward Islands, and India would be addressed by way of a subcommission to be established at a future session. Regarding the submission by Indonesia, it deferred consideration of the recommendations prepared by the subcommission to its next session in order to provide more time to examine them. It deferred further consideration of the submissions by Yemen in respect of south-east of Socotra Island, Palau and India. It also further deferred the establishment of a subcommission for the consideration of the submission made by Myanmar.

Other developments related to the Convention

Pursuant to General Assembly resolution 64/71 [YUN 2009, p. 1347], the Secretary-General in August submitted to the Assembly a comprehensive report [A/65/69/Add.2] on developments and issues relating to ocean affairs and the law of the sea. The report was also submitted to States parties to the United Nations Convention on the Law of the Sea, pursuant to article 319 of the Convention. The report provided an overview of the challenges faced by the international community in the sustainable development of the oceans and their resources, as human activities were taking a toll on the world's oceans and seas. Vulnerable marine ecosystems, such as corals, and important fisheries were being threatened by over-exploitation, illegal, unreported and unregulated fishing, destructive fishing practices, invasive alien species and marine pollution. Increased sea temperatures, sea level rise and ocean acidification caused by climate change posed further threats. Piracy and armed robbery at sea threatened the lives of seafarers and the safety of international shipping. Unresolved maritime boundaries delimitations presented further challenges for the users of the sea. At the core of ongoing efforts to address the pressures and challenges faced by the oceans lay the necessity to build the capacity of States to implement and enforce international instruments, foremost of which the Convention on the Law of the Sea.

A related April report [A/65/69/Add.1] summarized the submissions received from nine States, as well as the EU and its member States, pursuant to General Assembly resolution 64/71 [YUN 2009, p. 1347], on the fundamental building blocks identified in the report [ibid., p. 1360] on the results of the "assessment of assessments"—the regular process for global reporting and assessment of the state of the marine environment, including socio-economic aspects (see p. 1034).

The first part of the Secretary-General's comprehensive report on oceans and the law of the sea [A/65/69], issued in March, addressed the topic of the eleventh meeting of the United Nations Open-ended Informal Consultative Process on Oceans and the Law of the Sea (see p. 1373), namely capacity-building in ocean affairs and the law of the sea, including marine science. The report, submitted in response to General Assembly resolution 64/71 and pursuant to article 319 of the Convention, examined the relevance and scope of capacity-building, reviewed the capacity-building needs of States in marine science and other areas of ocean affairs and the law of the sea, and examined capacity-building activities and initiatives in those areas. It also addressed the challenges in implementing capacity-building activities and initiatives, and identified opportunities for ways to move forward.

Assessment of global marine environment

On 7 September, the Ad Hoc Working Group of the Whole on the regular process for global reporting and assessment of the state of the marine environment, including socio-economic aspects, submitted to the General Assembly a report on its work [A/65/358]. The recommendations of the Working Group, adopted at its meeting (New York, 30 August–3 September), were annexed to the report. The Assembly had established the Working Group by resolution 63/111 [YUN 2008, p. 1497] to recommend a course of action following the completion of the "assessment of assessments".

The Working Group's recommendations dealt with modalities for implementing the regular process, including key features, capacity-building and institutional arrangements; questions to be answered and primary target audiences; objective and scope of the first cycle (2010–2014) of the regular process; and financial and other support. The regular process would be an intergovernmental process and would prepare a global integrated assessment of the state of the marine environment, including socio-economic aspects. The regular process would be overseen and guided by an Ad Hoc Working Group of the Whole of the General Assembly. Intergovernmental and non-governmental organizations (NGOs) would be invited to participate in the meetings of the Working Group, and scientific institutions and major groups could request to participate in the meetings. A group of experts, including the members of the Group of Experts appointed pursuant to Assembly resolution 64/71, would be an integral part of the regular process. The first phase of the first cycle (2010–2012) would provide for the preparation of key questions to be answered by the first integrated assessment, in order to ensure an effective science-policy relationship and the participation of all stakeholders in defining the objectives and scope of the assessments. States would be the primary target audience of the regular process.

Marine biological resources

The Ad Hoc Open-ended Informal Working Group to study issues relating to the conservation and sustainable use of marine biological diversity beyond areas of national jurisdiction in March submitted to the General Assembly the outcome of its meeting (New York, 1–5 February), which consisted of recommendations to the Assembly [A/65/68]. The Working Group, established pursuant to Assembly resolution 59/24 [YUN 2004, p. 1333], made recommendations with regard to strengthening the information base; capacity-building and technology transfer; cooperation and coordination in implementation; cooperation and coordination for integrated ocean management and ecosystem approaches; environmental impact assessments; area-based management tools, in particular marine protected areas; marine genetic resources; and a way forward.

United Nations Open-ended Informal Consultative Process

Pursuant to General Assembly resolutions 64/71 [YUN 2009, p. 1347], the eleventh meeting of the United Nations Open-ended Informal Consultative Process on Oceans and the Law of the Sea (New York, 21–25 June) [A/65/164] focused its discussion on the topic “Capacity-building in ocean affairs and the law of the sea, including marine science”. The meeting was attended by representatives of 89 Member States, 27 intergovernmental organizations and other bodies and 11 NGOs. Topics included assessing the need for capacity-building; capacity-building activities and initiatives; challenges for achieving effective capacity-building; and new approaches, best practices and opportunities for improved capacity-building. Also discussed were inter-agency cooperation and coordination and issues that could benefit from attention in the work of the General Assembly on oceans and the law of the sea. The General Assembly established the Open-ended Informal Consultative Process by resolution 54/33 [YUN 1999, p. 994] to facilitate its annual review of developments in ocean affairs and the law of the sea by suggesting issues to be considered.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 7 December [meeting 59], the General Assembly adopted resolution 65/37 A [draft: A/65/L.20 & Add.1] by recorded vote (123-1-2) [agenda item 74 (a)].

Oceans and the law of the sea

The General Assembly,

Recalling its annual resolutions on the law of the sea and on oceans and the law of the sea, including resolution 64/71 of 4 December 2009, and other relevant resolutions concerning the United Nations Convention on the Law of the Sea (“the Convention”),

Having considered the report of the Secretary-General, the recommendations of the Ad Hoc Open-ended Informal Working Group to study issues relating to the conservation and sustainable use of marine biological diversity beyond areas of national jurisdiction (“the Ad Hoc Open-ended Informal Working Group”) and the reports on the work of the United Nations Open-ended Informal Consultative Process on Oceans and the Law of the Sea (“the Consultative Process”) at its eleventh meeting, on the twentieth Meeting of States Parties to the Convention, and on the work of the Ad Hoc Working Group of the Whole on the Regular Process for Global Reporting and Assessment of the State of the Marine Environment, including Socio-economic Aspects (“the Regular Process”),

Emphasizing the pre-eminent contribution provided by the Convention to the strengthening of peace, security, cooperation and friendly relations among all nations in conformity with the principles of justice and equal rights and to the promotion of the economic and social advancement of all peoples of the world, in accordance with the purposes and principles of the United Nations as set forth in the Charter of the United Nations, as well as to the sustainable development of the oceans and seas,

Emphasizing also the universal and unified character of the Convention, and reaffirming that the Convention sets out the legal framework within which all activities in the oceans and seas must be carried out and is of strategic importance as the basis for national, regional and global action and cooperation in the marine sector, and that its integrity needs to be maintained, as recognized also by the United Nations Conference on Environment and Development in chapter 17 of Agenda 21,

Recognizing the important contribution of sustainable development and management of the resources and uses of the oceans and seas to the achievement of international development goals, including those contained in the United Nations Millennium Declaration,

Conscious that the problems of ocean space are closely interrelated and need to be considered as a whole through an integrated, interdisciplinary and intersectoral approach, and reaffirming the need to improve cooperation and coordination at the national, regional and global levels, in accordance with the Convention, to support and supplement the efforts of each State in promoting the implementation and observance of the Convention, and the integrated management and sustainable development of the oceans and seas,

Reiterating the essential need for cooperation, including through capacity-building and transfer of marine technology, to ensure that all States, especially developing countries, in particular the least developed countries and small island developing States, as well as coastal African States, are able both to implement the Convention and to benefit from the sustainable development of the oceans and seas, as well as to participate fully in global and regional forums and processes dealing with oceans and law of the sea issues,

Emphasizing the need to strengthen the ability of competent international organizations to contribute, at the global, regional, subregional and bilateral levels, through cooperation programmes with Governments, to the development of national capacity in marine science and the sustainable management of the oceans and their resources,

Recalling that marine science is important for eradicating poverty, contributing to food security, conserving the world's marine environment and resources, helping to understand, predict and respond to natural events and promoting the sustainable development of the oceans and seas, by improving knowledge, through sustained research efforts and the evaluation of monitoring results, and applying such knowledge to management and decision-making,

Reiterating its deep concern at the serious adverse impacts on the marine environment and biodiversity, in particular on vulnerable marine ecosystems and their physical and biogenic structure, including coral reefs, cold water habitats, hydrothermal vents and seamounts, of certain human activities,

Emphasizing the need for the safe and environmentally sound recycling of ships,

Expressing deep concern at the adverse economic, social and environmental impacts of the physical alteration and destruction of marine habitats that may result from land-based and coastal development activities, in particular those land reclamation activities that are carried out in a manner that has a detrimental impact on the marine environment,

Noting the ministerial meeting of the Commission for the Protection of the Marine Environment of the North-East Atlantic, held in Bergen, Norway, from 20 to 24 September 2010,

Reiterating its serious concern at the current and projected adverse effects of climate change on the marine environment and marine biodiversity, and emphasizing the urgency of addressing this issue,

Expressing concern that climate change continues to increase the severity and incidence of coral bleaching throughout tropical seas and weakens the ability of reefs to withstand ocean acidification, which could have serious and irreversible negative effects on marine organisms, particularly corals, as well as to withstand other pressures, including overfishing and pollution,

Reiterating its deep concern at the vulnerability of the environment and the fragile ecosystems of the polar regions, including the Arctic Ocean and the Arctic ice cap, particularly affected by the projected adverse effects of climate change,

Recognizing the need for a more integrated and ecosystem-based approach to, further study of and the promotion of measures for enhanced cooperation, coordination and collaboration relating to, the conservation and sustainable use of marine biodiversity beyond areas of national jurisdiction,

Recognizing also that the realization of the benefits of the Convention could be enhanced by international cooperation, technical assistance and advanced scientific knowledge, as well as by funding and capacity-building,

Recognizing further that hydrographic surveys and nautical charting are critical to the safety of navigation and life at sea, environmental protection, including the protection of vulnerable marine ecosystems, and the economics of the global shipping industry, and encouraging further efforts towards electronic charting, which not only provides significantly increased benefits for safe navigation and management of ship movement, but also provides data and information that can be used for sustainable fisheries activities and other sectoral uses of the marine environment, the delimitation of maritime boundaries and environmental protection,

Emphasizing that underwater archaeological, cultural and historical heritage, including shipwrecks and watercrafts, holds essential information on the history of humankind and that such heritage is a resource that needs to be protected and preserved,

Noting with concern the continuing problem of transnational organized crime committed at sea, including illicit traffic in narcotic drugs and psychotropic substances, the smuggling of migrants and trafficking in persons, and threats to maritime safety and security, including piracy, armed robbery at sea, smuggling and terrorist acts against shipping, offshore installations and other maritime interests, and noting the deplorable loss of life and adverse impact on international trade, energy security and the global economy resulting from such activities,

Recognizing that fibre optic submarine cables transmit most of the world's data and communications and, hence, are vitally important to the global economy and the national security of all States, conscious that these cables are susceptible to intentional and accidental damage from shipping and other activities, noting that these matters have been brought to the attention of States at various workshops and seminars, and conscious of the need for States to adopt national laws and regulations to protect submarine cables and render their wilful damage or damage by culpable negligence punishable offences,

Noting the importance of the delineation of the outer limits of the continental shelf beyond 200 nautical miles and that it is in the broader interest of the international community that coastal States with a continental shelf beyond 200 nautical miles submit information on the outer limits of the continental shelf beyond 200 nautical miles to the Commission on the Limits of the Continental Shelf ("the Commission"), and welcoming the submissions to the Commission by a considerable number of States Parties on the outer limits of their continental shelf beyond 200 nautical miles, that the Commission has continued to fulfil its role, including of making recommendations to coastal States, and that the summaries of recommendations are being made publicly available,

Noting also that many coastal States Parties have submitted preliminary information indicative of the outer limits of the continental shelf beyond 200 nautical miles, as provided for in the decision of the eighteenth Meeting of States Parties to the Convention regarding the workload of the Commission and the ability of States, particularly developing States, to fulfil the requirements of article 4 of annex II to the Convention, as well as the decision contained in SPLOS/72, paragraph (a),

Noting further that some coastal States may continue to face particular challenges in relation to preparing and presenting submissions to the Commission,

Noting that financial and technical assistance may be sought by developing countries for activities in relation to preparing and presenting submissions to the Commission, including through the voluntary trust fund established by resolution 55/7 of 30 October 2000 for the purpose of facilitating the preparation of submissions to the Commission for developing States, in particular the least developed countries and small island developing States, and compliance with article 76 of the Convention, as well as other accessible international assistance,

Recognizing the importance of the trust funds established by resolution 55/7 in facilitating the participation of members of the Commission from developing States in the meetings of the Commission and in fulfilling the requirements of article 4 of annex II to the Convention, while noting with appreciation the recent contributions made to them,

Reaffirming the importance of the work of the Commission for coastal States and for the international community,

Recognizing the significant workload of the Commission in view of the large number of submissions already received and a number of submissions yet to be received, which places additional demands and challenges on its members and the secretariat as provided by the Secretary-General of the United Nations through the Division for Ocean Affairs and the Law of the Sea of the Office of Legal Affairs of the Secretariat ("the Division"), and taking note of the information contained in the note on issues related to the workload of the Commission prepared by the Secretariat at the request of the nineteenth Meeting of States Parties to the Convention, as well as of the decision of the twentieth Meeting of States Parties regarding the workload of the Commission,

Welcoming the ongoing consideration of the workload of the Commission by the Meeting of States Parties to the Convention,

Noting with concern the projected timetable of the work of the Commission on the submissions already received by it and those yet to be received and, in this regard, the consequences of the duration of the sessions of the Commission and the meetings of its subcommissions,

Recognizing significant inequities and difficulties for States arising out of the projected timetable, including with respect to retaining expertise, when there is a considerable delay between preparation of submissions and their consideration by the Commission,

Recognizing also the need to take action to ensure that the Commission can perform its functions under the Convention expeditiously, efficiently and effectively, and maintain its high level of quality and expertise,

Recalling its decision, in resolutions 57/141 of 12 December 2002 and 58/240 of 23 December 2003, to establish a regular process under the United Nations for global reporting and assessment of the state of the marine environment, including socio-economic aspects, both current and foreseeable, building on existing regional assessments, as recommended by the World Summit on Sustainable Development, and noting the need for cooperation among all States to this end,

Recalling also its decision, in resolution 60/30 of 29 November 2005, to launch the start-up phase, the "assessment of assessments", to be completed within two years, as a preparatory stage towards the establishment of the Regular Process,

Recognizing the importance and the contribution of the work of the Consultative Process established by resolution 54/33 of 24 November 1999 to facilitate the annual review of developments in ocean affairs by the General Assembly,

Noting the responsibilities of the Secretary-General under the Convention and related resolutions of the General Assembly, in particular resolutions 49/28 of 6 December 1994, 52/26 of 26 November 1997 and 54/33, and in this context the substantial increase in activities of the Division, in particular in view of the growing number of requests to the Division for additional outputs and servicing of meetings, its increasing capacity-building activities, the need for enhanced support and assistance to the Commission and the role of the Division in inter-agency coordination and cooperation, Reaffirming the importance of the work of the International Seabed Authority ("the Authority") in accordance with the Convention and the Agreement relating to the Implementation of Part XI of the United Nations Convention on the Law of the Sea of 10 December 1982 ("the Part XI Agreement"),

Reaffirming also the importance of the work of the International Tribunal for the Law of the Sea ("the Tribunal") in accordance with the Convention,

Recognizing, on the occasion of its fiftieth anniversary, the important role of the Intergovernmental Oceanographic Commission of the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization,

I

Implementation of the Convention and related agreements and instruments

1. Reaffirms its annual resolutions on the law of the sea and on oceans and the law of the sea, including resolution 64/71, and other relevant resolutions concerning the Convention;

2. Also reaffirms the unified character of the Convention and the vital importance of preserving its integrity;

3. Calls upon all States that have not done so, in order to achieve the goal of universal participation, to become parties to the Convention and the Part XI Agreement;

4. Calls upon States that have not done so, in order to achieve the goal of universal participation, to become parties to the Agreement for the Implementation of the Provisions of the United Nations Convention on the Law of the Sea of 10 December 1982 relating to the Conservation and Management of Straddling Fish Stocks and Highly Migratory Fish Stocks ("the Fish Stocks Agreement");

5. Calls upon States to harmonize their national legislation with the provisions of the Convention and, where applicable, relevant agreements and instruments, to ensure the consistent application of those provisions and to ensure also that any declarations or statements that they have made or make when signing, ratifying or acceding to the Convention do not purport to exclude or to modify the legal effect of the provisions of the Convention in their application to the State concerned and to withdraw any such declarations or statements;

6. Calls upon States Parties to the Convention that have not yet done so to deposit with the Secretary-General charts or lists of geographical coordinates, as provided for in the Convention;

7. Urges all States to cooperate, directly or through competent international bodies, in taking measures to protect and preserve objects of an archaeological and historical nature found at sea, in conformity with the Convention, and calls upon States to work together on such diverse challenges and opportunities as the appropriate relationship between salvage law and scientific management and conservation of underwater cultural heritage, increasing technological abilities to discover and reach underwater sites, looting and growing underwater tourism;

8. Notes the recent deposit of instruments of ratification and acceptance of the 2001 Convention on the Protection of the Underwater Cultural Heritage, and notes in particular the rules annexed thereto, which address the relationship between salvage law and scientific principles of management, conservation and protection of underwater cultural heritage among Parties, their nationals and vessels flying their flag;

II

Capacity-building

9. Emphasizes that capacity-building is essential to ensure that States, especially developing countries, in particular the least developed countries and small island developing States, as well as coastal African States, are able to fully implement the Convention, benefit from the sustainable development of the oceans and seas and participate fully in global and regional forums on ocean affairs and the law of the sea;

10. Emphasizes also the need for international cooperation for capacity-building, including cross-sectoral cooperation, at national, regional and global levels, to address, in particular, gaps in capacity-building in ocean affairs and the law of the sea, including marine science;

11. Calls for capacity-building initiatives to take into account the needs of developing countries, and calls upon States, international organizations and donor agencies to make efforts to ensure the sustainability of such initiatives;

12. Calls upon donor agencies and international financial institutions to keep their programmes systematically under review to ensure the availability in all States, particularly in developing States, of the economic, legal, navigational, scientific and technical skills necessary for the full implementation of the Convention and the objectives of the present resolution, as well as the sustainable development of the oceans and seas nationally, regionally and globally, and in so doing to bear in mind the interests and needs of landlocked developing States;

13. Encourages intensified efforts to build capacity for developing countries, in particular for the least developed countries and small island developing States, as well as coastal African States, to improve hydrographic services and the production of nautical charts, including electronic charts, as well as the mobilization of resources and building of capacity with support from international financial institutions and the donor community;

14. Calls upon States and international financial institutions, including through bilateral, regional and global cooperation programmes and technical partnerships, to continue to strengthen capacity-building activities, in particular in developing countries, in the field of marine scientific research by, inter alia, training personnel to develop and enhance relevant expertise, providing the necessary equipment, facilities and vessels and transferring environmentally sound technologies;

15. Also calls upon States and international financial institutions, including through bilateral, regional and global cooperation programmes and technical partnerships, to strengthen capacity-building activities in developing countries, in particular least developed countries and small island developing States, to develop their maritime administration and appropriate legal frameworks to establish or enhance the necessary infrastructure, legislative and enforcement capabilities to promote effective compliance with, and implementation and enforcement of, their responsibilities under international law;

16. Emphasizes the need to focus on strengthening South-South cooperation as an additional way to build capacity and as a cooperative mechanism to further enable countries to set their own priorities and needs;

17. Recognizes the importance of the work of the International Maritime Law Institute of the International Maritime Organization as a centre of education and training of Government legal advisers, mainly from developing States, confirms its effective capacity-building role in the field of international law, and urges States, intergovernmental organizations and financial institutions to make voluntary financial contributions to the budget of the Institute;

18. Also recognizes the importance of the World Maritime University of the International Maritime Organization as a centre for maritime education and research, confirms its effective capacity-building role in the field of maritime transportation, policy, administration, management, safety, security and environmental protection, as well as its role in the international exchange and transfer of knowledge, and urges States, intergovernmental organizations and other bodies to make voluntary financial contributions to the University;

19. Welcomes ongoing activities for capacity-building so as to address maritime security and safety needs and the protection of the marine environment of developing States, and encourages States and international financial institutions to provide additional funding for capacity-building programmes, including for transfer of technology, including through the International Maritime Organization and other competent international organizations;

20. Recognizes the considerable need to provide sustained capacity-building assistance, including on financial and technical aspects, by relevant international organizations and donors to developing States, with a view to further strengthening their capacity to take effective measures against the multiple facets of international criminal activities at sea, in line with the relevant international instruments, including the United Nations Convention against Transnational Organized Crime and the Protocols thereto;

21. Also recognizes the need to build the capacity of developing States to raise awareness of, and support the implementation of, improved waste management practices, noting the particular vulnerability of small island developing States to the impact of marine pollution from land-based sources and marine debris;

22. Further recognizes the importance of assisting developing States, in particular the least developed countries and small island developing States, as well as coastal African States, in implementing the Convention, and urges States, intergovernmental organizations and agencies, national institutions, non-governmental organizations and international financial institutions, as well as natural and juridical persons, to make voluntary financial or other contributions to the trust funds, as referred to in resolution 57/141, established for this purpose;

23. Acknowledges the importance of capacity-building for developing States, in particular the least developed countries and small island developing States, as well as coastal African States, for the protection of the marine environment and the conservation and sustainable use of marine resources;

24. Recognizes that promoting the voluntary transfer of technology is an essential aspect of building capacity in marine science;

25. Encourages States to use the Criteria and Guidelines on the Transfer of Marine Technology adopted by the Assembly of the Intergovernmental Oceanographic Commission of the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization, and recalls the important role of the secretariat of that Commission in the implementation and promotion of the Criteria and Guidelines;

26. Notes with satisfaction the efforts of the Division to compile information on capacity-building initiatives, requests the Secretary-General to regularly update such information provided by States, international organizations and donor agencies and include it in his annual report to the General Assembly, invites States, international organizations and donor agencies to submit such information to the Secretary-General for this purpose, and requests the Division to post the information on capacity-building initiatives from the annual report of the Secretary-General on the website of the Division in an easily accessible manner so as to facilitate the matching of capacity-building needs with opportunities;

27. Calls upon States to continue to assist developing States, and especially the least developed countries and small island developing States, as well as coastal African States, at the bilateral and, where appropriate, multilateral levels, in the preparation of submissions to the Commission regarding the establishment of the outer limits of the continental shelf beyond 200 nautical miles, including the assessment of the nature and extent of the continental shelf of a coastal State, and recalls that coastal States can make requests to the Commission for scientific and technical advice in the preparation of data for their submissions, in accordance with article 3 of annex II to the Convention;

28. Calls upon the Division to continue to disseminate information on relevant procedures related to the trust fund established for the purpose of facilitating the preparation of submissions to the Commission and to continue its dialogue with potential beneficiaries with a view to providing financial support to developing countries for activities to facilitate their submissions in accordance with the requirements of article 76 of the Convention and with the rules of procedure and the Scientific and Technical Guidelines of the Commission;

29. Requests the Secretary-General, in cooperation with States and relevant international organizations and institutions, to continue to support training and other activities to assist developing States in the preparation and presentation of their submissions to the Commission;

30. Notes with appreciation the regional workshop of the Tribunal, held in Nadi, Fiji, on 17 and 18 August 2010, on the role of the Tribunal in the settlement of disputes relating to the law of the sea;

31. Invites Member States and others in a position to do so to support the capacity-building activities of the Division, including, in particular, the training and other activities to assist developing States in the preparation of their submissions to the Commission, and invites Member States and others in a position to do so to contribute to the trust fund established by the Secretary-General for the Office of Legal Affairs to support the promotion of international law;

32. Recognizes with appreciation the important contribution of the Hamilton Shirley Amerasinghe Memorial Fellowship on the Law of the Sea to the capacity-building of developing countries and the promotion of the law of the sea, notes that the twenty-third award was only made possible in 2010 thanks to the generous contribution, on an exceptional basis, of the Legal Counsel from the voluntary Trust Fund for the Office of Legal Affairs to Support the Promotion of International Law, reiterates therefore its serious concern regarding the continued lack of resources, appeals urgently to Member States and others in a position to do so to contribute generously to the further development of the Fellowship to ensure that it is awarded every year, and takes due note of the inclusion by the Secretary-General of the Fellowship on the list of trust funds for the United Nations Pledging Conference for Development Activities;

33. Also recognizes with appreciation the important contribution that the United Nations-Nippon Foundation of Japan Fellowship Programme which, relying on its network of host institutions, has awarded 60 fellowships to individuals from 47 Member States since 2005, and held in May 2010 a second regional alumni meeting, has made to human resources development for developing Member States in the field of ocean affairs and the law of the sea and related disciplines and the promotion of holistic and cross-sectoral approaches, emphasizing the integration of physical and social sciences and promoting interlinkages among alumni and between their organizations;

34. Further recognizes with appreciation the funding recently set aside by the Global Environment Facility for projects relating to oceans and marine biodiversity;

III

Meeting of States Parties

35. Welcomes the report of the twentieth Meeting of States Parties to the Convention;

36. Requests the Secretary-General to convene the twenty-first Meeting of States Parties to the Convention, in New York from 13 to 17 June 2011, and to provide the services required;

IV

Peaceful settlement of disputes

37. Notes with satisfaction the continued and significant contribution of the Tribunal to the settlement of disputes by peaceful means in accordance with Part XV of the Convention, and underlines the important role and authority of the Tribunal concerning the interpretation or application of the Convention and the Part XI Agreement;

38. Pays tribute to the important and long-standing role of the International Court of Justice with regard to the peaceful settlement of disputes concerning the law of the sea;

39. Notes that States Parties to an international agreement related to the purposes of the Convention may submit to, inter alia, the Tribunal or the International Court of Justice any dispute concerning the interpretation or application of that agreement submitted in accordance with that agreement, and notes also the possibility, provided for in the statutes of the Tribunal and the Court, to submit disputes to a chamber;

40. Encourages States Parties to the Convention that have not yet done so to consider making a written declaration choosing from the means set out in article 287 of the Convention for the settlement of disputes concerning the interpretation or application of the Convention and the Part XI Agreement, bearing in mind the comprehensive character of the dispute settlement mechanism provided for in Part XV of the Convention;

41. Notes the recent referral to the Tribunal of a case concerning the delimitation of a maritime boundary;

V

The Area

42. Welcomes the adoption by the Authority at its sixteenth session of the Regulations for Prospecting and Exploration for Polymetallic Sulphides in the Area, encourages progress on the finalization of the regulations for prospecting and exploration for cobalt-rich ferromanganese crusts in the Area, and reiterates the importance of the ongoing elaboration by the Authority, pursuant to article 145 of the Convention, of rules, regulations and procedures to ensure the effective protection of the marine environment, for, inter alia, the protection and conservation of the natural resources of the Area, and for the prevention of damage to the flora and fauna of the marine environment from harmful effects that may arise from activities in the Area;

43. Acknowledges the decision of the Council of the Authority to request an advisory opinion pursuant to article 191 of the Convention on the responsibilities and obligations of States with respect to sponsorship of activities in the Area, and acknowledges the considerable participation in the written and oral proceedings before the Seabed

Disputes Chamber of the Tribunal regarding the advisory opinion;

44. Notes the importance of the responsibilities entrusted to the Authority by articles 143 and 145 of the Convention, which refer to marine scientific research and protection of the marine environment, respectively;

VI

Effective functioning of the Authority and the Tribunal

45. Appeals to all States Parties to the Convention to pay their assessed contributions to the Authority and to the Tribunal in full and on time, and also appeals to States Parties in arrears with their contributions to fulfil their obligations without delay;

46. Urges all States Parties to the Convention to attend the sessions of the Authority, and calls upon the Authority to continue to pursue all options, including making concrete recommendations on the issue of dates, in order to improve attendance in Kingston and to ensure global participation;

47. Calls upon States that have not done so to consider ratifying or acceding to the Agreement on the Privileges and Immunities of the Tribunal and to the Protocol on the Privileges and Immunities of the Authority;

48. Emphasizes the importance of the Tribunal's rules and staff regulations in promoting the recruitment of a geographically representative staff in the Professional and higher categories, and welcomes the actions taken by the Tribunal in observance of those rules and regulations;

VII

The continental shelf and the work of the Commission

49. Recalls that, in accordance with article 76, paragraph 8, of the Convention, information on the limits of the continental shelf beyond 200 nautical miles from the baselines from which the breadth of the territorial sea is measured shall be submitted by the coastal State to the Commission set up under annex II to the Convention on the basis of equitable geographical representation, that the Commission shall make recommendations to coastal States on matters related to the establishment of the outer limits of their continental shelf, and that the limits of the shelf established by a coastal State on the basis of these recommendations shall be final and binding;

50. Also recalls that, in accordance with article 77, paragraph 3, of the Convention, the rights of the coastal State over the continental shelf do not depend on occupation, effective or notional, or on any express proclamation;

51. Notes with satisfaction that a considerable number of States Parties to the Convention have submitted information to the Commission regarding the establishment of the outer limits of the continental shelf beyond 200 nautical miles, in conformity with article 76 of the Convention and article 4 of annex II to the Convention, taking into account the decision of the eleventh Meeting of States Parties to the Convention contained in SPLOS/72, paragraph (a);

52. Also notes with satisfaction that a considerable number of States Parties to the Convention have submitted to the Secretary-General, pursuant to the decision of the eighteenth Meeting of States Parties to the Convention, preliminary information indicative of the outer limits of the continental shelf beyond 200 nautical miles and a description of the status of preparation and intended date of submission in accordance with the requirements of article 76 of the Convention and with the rules of procedure and the Scientific and Technical Guidelines of the Commission;

53. Further notes with satisfaction the progress in the work of the Commission and that it is giving current consideration to a number of submissions that have been made regarding the establishment of the outer limits of the continental shelf beyond 200 nautical miles;

54. Notes with satisfaction that the Commission, taking into account the decision of the eighteenth Meeting of States Parties to the Convention, has compiled lists of websites of organizations, data/information portals and data holders where general information and publicly available scientific and technical data can be accessed that may be relevant to the preparation of submissions, and has made this information available on its website;

55. Takes note of the recommendations made by the Commission on the submissions of a number of coastal States, and welcomes the fact that summaries of recommendations are being made publicly available;

56. Notes that the consideration by the Commission of submissions by coastal States in accordance with article 76 of and annex II to the Convention is without prejudice to the application of other parts of the Convention by States Parties;

57. Notes with concern that the heavy workload of the Commission, owing to the considerable number of submissions, places additional demands on and challenges before its members and the secretariat as provided by the Division, and in that regard emphasizes the need to ensure that the Commission can perform its functions expeditiously, efficiently and effectively and maintain its high level of quality and expertise;

58. Takes note with satisfaction of the decision of the twentieth Meeting of States Parties to the Convention regarding the workload of the Commission, which requests the Commission to consider adopting measures as appropriate on an urgent and priority basis, as contained in paragraph 1 of the decision;

59. Welcomes the decision of the twentieth Meeting of States Parties to continue to consider the issue of the workload of the Commission, including through its Informal Working Group facilitated by the Bureau of the Meeting of States Parties, in particular to assess further measures that may be necessary, including the possibility of a full-time Commission, and for the Informal Working Group to make recommendations to the twenty-first Meeting of States Parties, in 2011;

60. Welcomes also the decision of the twentieth meeting of States Parties to make an assessment in 2011 of the progress achieved, with a view to considering what measures beyond 2012 may be required to help to reduce the projected timeline in the workload of the Commission;

61. Reiterates the duty of States under the Convention, whose experts are serving on the Commission, to defray the expenses of the experts they have nominated while in performance of Commission duties, and urges these States to do their utmost to ensure the full participation of those experts in the work of the Commission, including the meetings of subcommissions, in accordance with the Convention;

62. Requests the Secretary-General to continue to take appropriate measures, within overall existing resource levels, to further strengthen the capacity of the Division, serving as the secretariat of the Commission, in order to ensure enhanced support and assistance to the Commission and its subcommissions in their consideration of submissions, as required by paragraph 9 of annex III to the rules of procedure of the Commission, in particular its human resources, taking into account the need for simultaneous work on several submissions;

63. Urges the Secretary-General to continue to provide all necessary secretariat services to the Commission in accordance with article 2, paragraph 5, of annex II to the Convention;

64. Encourages States to participate actively in and contribute constructively to the ongoing work of the Informal Working Group considering the issues related to the workload of the Commission;

65. Requests the Secretary-General to provide, at the request of the coordinator of the Informal Working Group, information on the standard costs, as well as financial and other implications, of all options or proposals under consideration in the Informal Working Group;

66. Expresses its appreciation to States that have made contributions to the voluntary trust fund established by resolution 55/7 for the purpose of facilitating the preparation of submissions to the Commission and to the voluntary trust fund also established by that resolution for the purpose of defraying the cost of participation of the members of the Commission from developing States in the meetings of the Commission, and encourages States to make additional contributions to these funds;

67. Approves the convening by the Secretary-General of the twenty-seventh and twenty-eighth sessions of the Commission, in New York from 7 March to 21 April 2011 and from 1 August to 2 September 2011, respectively, with full conference services for the plenary parts of these sessions, and requests the Secretary-General to make every effort to meet these requirements within overall existing resources, on the understanding that the following periods will be used for the technical examinations of submissions at the Geographic Information System laboratories and other technical facilities of the Division: 7 to 25 March 2011; 11 to 21 April 2011; 1 to 12 August 2011; and 29 August to 2 September 2011;

68. Expresses its firm conviction about the importance of the work of the Commission, carried out in accordance with the Convention, including with respect to the participation of coastal States in relevant proceedings concerning their submissions, and recognizes the continued need for active interaction between coastal States and the Commission;

69. Expresses its appreciation to States that have exchanged views in order to increase understanding of issues, including expenditures involved, arising from the application of article 76 of the Convention, thus facilitating the preparation of submissions by States, in particular developing States, to the Commission, and encourages States to continue exchanging views;

70. Notes the number of submissions yet to be considered by the Commission, and in this regard stresses the urgent need for States Parties to the Convention to take appropriate and prompt steps that will allow the Commission to consider the increased number of submissions in a timely, efficient and effective manner;

71. Requests the Secretary-General, in cooperation with Member States, to continue supporting workshops or symposiums on scientific and technical aspects of the establishment of the outer limits of the continental shelf beyond 200 nautical miles, taking into account the need to strengthen capacity-building for developing countries in preparing their submissions;

VIII

Maritime safety and security and flag State implementation

72. Encourages States to ratify or accede to international agreements addressing the safety and security of navigation, as well as maritime labour, and to adopt the necessary measures consistent with the Convention and other relevant international instruments aimed at implementing and enforcing the rules contained in those agreements, and emphasizes the need for capacity-building for and assistance to developing States;

73. Recognizes that the legal regimes governing maritime safety and maritime security may have common and mutually reinforcing objectives that may be interrelated and could benefit from synergies, and encourages States to take this into account in their implementation;

74. Emphasizes the need for further efforts to promote a culture of safety and security in the shipping industry and to address the shortage of adequately trained personnel, and urges the establishment of more centres to provide the required education and training;

75. Emphasizes also that safety and security measures should be implemented with minimal negative effects on seafarers and fishers, especially in relation to their working conditions;

76. Notes that the Conference of Parties to the International Convention on Standards of Training, Certification and Watchkeeping for Seafarers, 1978, held in Manila from 21 to 25 June 2010, amended that Convention, and designated 25 June as the Day of the Seafarer;

77. Invites States that have not yet done so to ratify or accede to the Maritime Labour Convention, 2006, the Work in Fishing Convention, 2007 (No. 188) and the Seafarers' Identity Documents Convention (Revised), 2003 (No. 185) of the International Labour Organization and to effectively implement those Conventions, and emphasizes the need to provide to States, at their request, technical cooperation and assistance in that regard;

78. Welcomes ongoing cooperation between the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations, the International Maritime Organization and the International Labour Organization relating to the safety of fishers and fishing vessels, underlines the urgent need for continued work in that area, and takes note of the decision taken at the twenty-eighth session of the Committee on Fisheries of the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations to develop guidelines on best practices for safety at sea;

79. Encourages continued cooperation between the parties to the Basel Convention on the Control of Transboundary Movements of Hazardous Wastes and Their Disposal and the International Maritime Organization on regulations on the prevention of pollution from ships;

80. Notes the adoption by the International Conference on the Revision of the Hazardous and Noxious Substances Convention, held in London from 26 to 30 April 2010, of the Protocol to the 1996 International Convention on Liability and Compensation for Damage in Connection with the Carriage of Hazardous and Noxious Substances by Sea, and encourages States to consider becoming parties to the Protocol;

81. Recalls that all actions taken to combat threats to maritime security must be in accordance with international law, including the principles embodied in the Charter and the Convention;

82. Recognizes the crucial role of international cooperation at the global, regional, subregional and bilateral levels in combating, in accordance with international law, threats to maritime security, including piracy, armed robbery at sea, terrorist acts against shipping, offshore installations and other maritime interests, through bilateral and multilateral instruments and mechanisms aimed at monitoring, preventing and responding to such threats, the enhanced sharing of information among States relevant to the detection, prevention and suppression of such threats, and the prosecution of offenders with due regard to national legislation, and the need for sustained capacity-building to support such objectives;

83. Notes that piracy affects the entire range of vessels engaged in maritime activities;

84. Emphasizes the importance of promptly reporting incidents to enable accurate information on the scope of the problem of piracy and armed robbery against ships and, in the case of armed robbery against ships, by affected vessels to the coastal State, underlines the importance of effective information-sharing with States potentially affected by incidents of piracy and armed robbery against ships, and takes note of the important role of the International Maritime Organization;

85. Urges all States, in cooperation with the International Maritime Organization, to actively combat piracy and armed robbery at sea by adopting measures, including those relating to assistance with capacity-building through training of seafarers, port staff and enforcement personnel in the prevention, reporting and investigation of incidents, bringing the alleged perpetrators to justice, in accordance with international law, and by adopting national legislation, as well as providing enforcement vessels and equipment and guarding against fraudulent ship registration;

86. Encourages States to ensure effective implementation of international law applicable to combating piracy, as reflected in the Convention, and calls upon States to take appropriate steps under their national law to facilitate the apprehension and prosecution of those who are alleged to have committed acts of piracy, also taking into account other relevant instruments that are consistent with the Convention;

87. Invites all States, the International Maritime Organization and the International Labour Organization to consider possible solutions for the seafarers and fishers who are victims of pirates;

88. Takes note of the ongoing cooperation between the International Maritime Organization, the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime and the Division with respect to the compilation of national legislation on piracy, and notes that copies of national legislation received by the Secretariat have been placed on the website of the Division;

89. Encourages continued national, bilateral and trilateral initiatives as well as regional cooperative mechanisms to address piracy and armed robbery at sea in the Asian region, and calls upon other States to give immediate attention to adopting, concluding and implementing cooperation agreements at the regional level on combating piracy and armed robbery against ships;

90. Reiterates its serious concern regarding continued incidents of piracy and armed robbery at sea off the coast of Somalia, expresses alarm in particular at the hijacking of vessels, supports the recent efforts to address this problem at the global and regional levels, notes the adoption by the Security Council of resolutions 1816(2008) of 2 June 2008, 1838(2008) of 7 October 2008, 1846(2008) of 2 December 2008, 1851(2008) of 16 December 2008, 1897(2009) of 30 November 2009 and 1918(2010) of 27 April 2010, as well as the statement by the President of the Security Council of 25 August 2010, and also notes that the authorization in resolution 1816(2008) and the provisions in resolutions 1838(2008), 1846(2008), 1851(2008) and 1897(2009) apply only to the situation in Somalia and do not affect the rights, obligations or responsibilities of Member States under international law, including any rights or obligations under the Convention, with respect to any other situation, and underscores, in particular, the fact that they are not to be considered as establishing customary international law;

91. Notes with appreciation the report of the Secretary-General of 26 July 2010, prepared pursuant to the request of the Security Council in resolution 1918(2010);

92. Notes the continued efforts within the Contact Group on Piracy off the Coast of Somalia, following the adoption of Security Council resolution 1851(2008), and commends contributions of all States in the efforts to fight piracy off the coast of Somalia;

93. Recognizes the primary role of the Transitional Federal Government of Somalia in combating piracy and armed robbery against ships, acknowledges the importance of a comprehensive and sustainable settlement of the situation in Somalia, and emphasizes the need to address the root causes of piracy and to assist Somalia and States in the region in strengthening institutional capacity to fight piracy and armed robbery against ships off the coast of Somalia and to bring to justice those involved in such acts;

94. Notes the approval by the International Maritime Organization of revised recommendations to Governments for preventing and suppressing piracy and armed robbery against ships, revised guidance to shipowners and ship operators, shipmasters and crews on preventing and suppressing acts of piracy and armed robbery against ships and the Code of Practice for the Investigation of the Crimes of Piracy and Armed Robbery against Ships;

95. Invites the Assembly of the International Maritime Organization to consider adopting a resolution on commitments to best management practices to avoid, deter or delay acts of piracy;

96. Recalls the adoption on 29 January 2009 of the Code of Conduct concerning the Repression of Piracy and Armed Robbery against Ships in the Western Indian Ocean and the Gulf of Aden (Djibouti Code of Conduct) under the auspices of the International Maritime Organization, the establishment of the International Maritime Organization Djibouti Code Trust Fund, a multi-donor trust fund initiated by Japan, and the ongoing activities for the implementation of the Code of Conduct;

97. Urges States to ensure the full implementation of resolution A.1026(26) of the International Maritime Organization on acts of piracy and armed robbery against ships in waters off the coast of Somalia;

98. Calls upon States that have not yet done so to become parties to the Convention for the Suppression of Unlawful Acts against the Safety of Maritime Navigation and the Protocol for the Suppression of Unlawful Acts against the Safety of Fixed Platforms Located on the Continental Shelf, notes the entry into force on 28 July 2010 of the 2005 Protocol to the Convention for the Suppression of Unlawful Acts against the Safety of Maritime Navigation and of the 2005 Protocol to the 1988 Protocol for the Suppression of Unlawful Acts against the Safety of Fixed Platforms Located on the Continental Shelf, invites States to consider becoming parties to those Protocols, and urges States Parties to take appropriate measures to ensure the effective implementation of those instruments through the adoption of legislation, where appropriate;

99. Calls upon States to effectively implement the International Ship and Port Facility Security Code and the amendments to the International Convention for the Safety of Life at Sea, and to work with the International Maritime Organization to promote safe and secure shipping while ensuring freedom of navigation;

100. Urges all States, in cooperation with the International Maritime Organization, to improve the protection of offshore installations by adopting measures related to the prevention, reporting and investigation of acts of violence against installations, in accordance with international law, and by implementing such measures through national legislation to ensure proper and adequate enforcement;

101. Emphasizes the progress in regional cooperation, including the efforts of littoral States, on the enhancement of safety, security and environmental protection in the Straits of Malacca and Singapore, and the effective functioning of the Cooperative Mechanism on safety of navigation and environmental protection to promote dialogue and facilitate close cooperation between the littoral States, user States, shipping industry and other stakeholders in line with article 43 of the Convention, notes with appreciation the convening of the third Cooperation Forum and third Project Coordination Committee Meeting, in Indonesia, from 6 to 8 October 2010, and the fifth Aids to Navigation Fund Committee Meeting, in Malaysia on 11 and 12 October 2010, the three events being key pillars of the Cooperative Mechanism, notes with appreciation the important role of the Information Sharing Centre of the Regional Cooperation Agreement on Combating Piracy and Armed Robbery against Ships in Asia, based in Singapore, and calls upon States to give immediate attention to adopting, concluding and implementing cooperation agreements at the regional level;

102. Recognizes that some transnational organized criminal activities threaten legitimate uses of the oceans and endanger the lives of people at sea;

103. Notes that transnational organized criminal activities are diverse and may be interrelated in some cases and that criminal organizations are adaptive and take advantage of the vulnerabilities of States, in particular coastal and small island developing States in transit areas, and calls upon States and relevant intergovernmental organizations to increase cooperation and coordination at all levels to detect and suppress the smuggling of migrants and trafficking in persons, in accordance with international law;

104. Recognizes the importance of enhancing international cooperation at all levels to fight transnational organized criminal activities, including illicit traffic in narcotic drugs and psychotropic substances, within the scope of the United Nations instruments against illicit drug trafficking, as well as the smuggling of migrants and trafficking in persons and criminal activities at sea falling within the scope of the United Nations Convention against Transnational Organized Crime;

105. Calls upon States that have not yet done so to become parties to the Protocol against the Smuggling of Migrants by Land, Sea and Air, supplementing the United Nations Convention against Transnational Organized Crime, and the Protocol to Prevent, Suppress and Punish Trafficking in Persons, Especially Women and Children, supplementing the United Nations Convention against Transnational Organized Crime, and to take appropriate measures to ensure their effective implementation;

106. Calls upon States to ensure freedom of navigation, the safety of navigation and the rights of transit passage, archipelagic sea lanes passage and innocent passage in accordance with international law, in particular the Convention;

107. Welcomes the work of the International Maritime Organization relating to the protection of shipping lanes of strategic importance and significance, and in particular in enhancing safety, security and environmental protection in straits used for international navigation, and calls upon the International Maritime Organization, States bordering straits and user States to continue their cooperation to keep such straits safe, secure and environmentally protected and open to international navigation at all times, consistent with international law, in particular the Convention;

108. Calls upon user States and States bordering straits used for international navigation to continue to cooperate by agreement on matters relating to navigational safety, including safety aids for navigation, and the prevention, reduction and control of pollution from ships, and welcomes developments in this regard;

109. Calls upon States that have accepted the amendments to regulation XI-1/6 of the International Convention for the Safety of Life at Sea, 1974, to implement the Code of International Standards and Recommended Practices for a Safety Investigation into a Marine Casualty or Marine Incident, which took effect on 1 January 2010;

110. Calls upon States to consider becoming members of the International Hydrographic Organization, and urges all States to work with that Organization to increase the coverage of hydrographic information on a global basis to enhance capacity-building and technical assistance and to promote safe navigation, especially in areas used for international navigation, in ports and where there are vulnerable or protected marine areas;

111. Encourages States to continue their efforts in the implementation of all areas of the Action Plan for the Safety of Transport of Radioactive Material, approved by the Board of Governors of the International Atomic Energy Agency in March 2004;

112. Notes that cessation of the transport of radioactive materials through the regions of small island developing States is an ultimate desired goal of small island developing States and some other countries, and recognizes the right of freedom of navigation in accordance with international law; that States should maintain dialogue and consultation, in particular under the auspices of the International Atomic Energy Agency and the International Maritime Organization, with the aim of improved mutual understanding, confidence-building and enhanced communication in relation to the safe maritime transport of radioactive materials; that States involved in the transport of such materials are urged to continue to engage in dialogue with small island developing States and other States to address their concerns; and that these concerns include the further development and strengthening, within the appropriate forums, of international regulatory regimes to enhance safety, disclosure, liability, security and compensation in relation to such transport;

113. Acknowledges, in the context of paragraph 112 above, the potential environmental and economic impacts of maritime incidents and accidents on coastal States, in particular those related to the transport of radioactive materials, and emphasizes the importance of effective liability regimes in that regard;

114. Encourages States to draw up plans and to establish procedures to implement the Guidelines on Places of Refuge for Ships in Need of Assistance;

115. Invites States that have not yet done so to consider becoming parties to the Nairobi International Convention on the Removal of Wrecks, 2007;

116. Requests States to take appropriate measures with regard to ships flying their flag or of their registry to address hazards that may be caused by wrecks and drifting or sunken cargo to navigation or the marine environment;

117. Calls upon States to ensure that masters on ships flying their flag take the steps required by relevant instruments to provide assistance to persons in distress at sea, and urges States to cooperate and to take all necessary measures to ensure the effective implementation of the amendments to the International Convention on Maritime Search and Rescue and to the International Convention for the Safety of Life at Sea relating to the delivery of persons rescued at sea to a place of safety, as well as of the associated Guidelines on the Treatment of Persons Rescued at Sea;

118. Recognizes that all States must fulfil their search and rescue responsibilities and the ongoing need for the International Maritime Organization and other relevant organizations to assist, in particular, developing States both to increase their search and rescue capabilities, including through the establishment of additional rescue coordination centres and regional sub-centres, and to take effective action to address, to the extent feasible, the issue of unseaworthy ships and small craft within their national jurisdiction;

119. Welcomes the ongoing work of the International Maritime Organization in relation to disembarkation of persons rescued at sea, and notes in this regard the need to implement all relevant international instruments;

120. Calls upon States to continue to cooperate in developing comprehensive approaches to international migration and development, including through dialogue on all their aspects;

121. Also calls upon States to take measures to protect fibre optic submarine cables and to fully address issues relating to these cables, in accordance with international law, as reflected in the Convention; encourages greater dialogue and cooperation among States and the relevant regional and global organizations to promote the security of such critical communications infrastructure, and in this regard notes the attention given to this matter in the Okinawa Declaration of the eighth Asia-Pacific Economic Cooperation ministerial meeting on the telecommunications and information industry, held in Okinawa, Japan, on 30 and 31 October 2010;

122. Reaffirms that flag, port and coastal States all bear responsibility for ensuring the effective implementation and enforcement of international instruments relating to maritime security and safety, in accordance with international law, in particular the Convention, and that flag States have primary responsibility that requires further strengthening, including through increased transparency of ownership of vessels;

123. Urges flag States without an effective maritime administration and appropriate legal frameworks to establish or enhance the necessary infrastructure, legislative and enforcement capabilities to ensure effective compliance with, and implementation and enforcement of, their responsibilities under international law, in particular the Convention, and, until such action is taken, to consider declining the granting of the right to fly their flag to new vessels, suspending their registry or not opening a registry, and calls upon flag and port States to take all measures consistent with international law necessary to prevent the operation of substandard vessels;

124. Recognizes that international shipping rules and standards adopted by the International Maritime Organization in respect of maritime safety, efficiency of navigation and the prevention and control of marine pollution, complemented by best practices of the shipping industry, have led to a significant reduction in maritime accidents and pollution incidents, encourages all States to participate in the Voluntary International Maritime Organization Member State Audit Scheme, and notes the decision of the International Maritime Organization on a phased-in introduction of the Audit Scheme as an institutionalized process;

125. Notes the work of the International Maritime Organization to develop a mandatory code for ships operating in polar waters, and encourages States and competent international organizations and bodies to contribute to this work through participation in the relevant committees and processes of the International Maritime Organization;

126. Recognizes that maritime safety can also be improved through effective port State control, the strengthening of regional arrangements and increased coordination and cooperation among them, and increased information-sharing, including among safety and security sectors;

127. Encourages flag States to take appropriate measures sufficient to achieve or maintain recognition by inter-governmental arrangements that recognize satisfactory flag State performance, including, as appropriate, satisfactory port State control examination results on a sustained basis, with a view to improving quality shipping and furthering flag State implementation of relevant instruments under the International Maritime Organization as well as relevant goals and objectives of the present resolution;

IX

Marine environment and marine resources

128. Emphasizes once again the importance of the implementation of Part XII of the Convention in order to protect and preserve the marine environment and its living marine resources against pollution and physical degradation, and calls upon all States to cooperate and take measures consistent with the Convention, directly or through competent international organizations, for the protection and preservation of the marine environment;

129. Notes the work of the Intergovernmental Panel on Climate Change, including its findings on the acidification of oceans, and in this regard encourages States and competent international organizations and other relevant institutions, individually and in cooperation, to urgently pursue further research on ocean acidification, especially programmes of observation and measurement, noting in particular paragraph 4 of decision IX/20 adopted at the ninth meeting of the Conference of the Parties to the Convention on Biological Diversity, held in Bonn, Germany, from 19 to 30 May 2008, and the continued work of the Convention on Biological Diversity, and to increase national, regional and international efforts to address levels of ocean acidity and the negative impact of such acidity on vulnerable marine ecosystems, particularly coral reefs;

130. Encourages States, individually or in collaboration with relevant international organizations and bodies, to enhance their scientific activity to better understand the effects of climate change on the marine environment and marine biodiversity and develop ways and means of adaptation;

131. Encourages States that have not yet done so to become parties to international agreements addressing the protection and preservation of the marine environment and its living marine resources against the introduction of harmful aquatic organisms and pathogens and marine pollution from all sources, including the dumping of wastes and other matter, and other forms of physical degradation, as well as agreements that provide for preparedness for, response to and cooperation on pollution incidents and that include provisions on liability and compensation for damage resulting from marine pollution, and to adopt the necessary measures consistent with international law, including the Convention, aimed at implementing and enforcing the rules contained in those agreements;

132. Encourages States, directly or through competent international organizations, to consider the further development, as appropriate and consistent with international law, including the Convention, of environmental impact assessment processes covering planned activities under their jurisdiction or control that may cause substantial pollution of, or significant and harmful changes to, the marine environment;

133. Encourages States that have not done so to become parties to regional seas conventions addressing the protection and preservation of the marine environment;

134. Encourages States, in accordance with international law, including the Convention and other relevant instruments, either bilaterally or regionally, to jointly develop and promote contingency plans for responding to pollution incidents, as well as other incidents that are likely to have significant adverse effects on the marine environment and biodiversity;

135. Recognizes the importance of improving understanding of the impact of climate change on oceans and seas;

136. Welcomes the activities of the United Nations Environment Programme relating to marine debris carried out in cooperation with relevant United Nations bodies and organizations, and encourages States to further develop partnerships with industry and civil society to raise awareness of the extent of the impact of marine debris on the health and productivity of the marine environment and consequent economic loss;

137. Urges States to integrate the issue of marine debris into national strategies dealing with waste management in the coastal zone, ports and maritime industries, including recycling, reuse, reduction and disposal, and to encourage the development of appropriate economic incentives to address this issue, including the development of cost recovery systems that provide an incentive to use port reception facilities and discourage ships from discharging marine debris at sea, and support for measures to prevent, reduce and control pollution from any source, including land-based sources, such as community-based coastal and waterway clean-up and monitoring activities, and encourages States to cooperate regionally and subregionally to identify potential sources and coastal and oceanic locations where marine debris aggregates, and to develop and implement joint prevention and recovery programmes for marine debris;

138. Notes the work of the International Maritime Organization to prevent pollution by garbage from ships, including the current review by the Marine Environment Protection Committee of the provisions of annex V to the International Convention for the Prevention of Pollution from Ships, 1973, as modified by the Protocol of 1978 relating thereto, on the prevention of pollution by garbage from ships, and encourages States and relevant international organizations to contribute to this work through participation in the relevant processes of the Committee;

139. Takes note of the adoption of amendments regarding special requirements for the use or carriage of oils in the Antarctic area to annex I to the International Convention for the Prevention of Pollution from Ships, 1973, as modified by the Protocol of 1978 relating thereto, on the prevention of pollution by oil from ships, which prohibit the carriage in bulk as cargo or carriage and use as fuel of heavy grade oils in the Antarctic area;

140. Encourages States that have not done so to become parties to the Protocol of 1997 (Annex VI-Regulations for the Prevention of Air Pollution from Ships) to the International Convention for the Prevention of Pollution from Ships, 1973, as modified by the Protocol of 1978 relating thereto, and the 1996 Protocol to the Convention on the Prevention of Marine Pollution by Dumping of Wastes and Other Matter, 1972 ("the London Protocol"), and furthermore to ratify or accede to the International Convention for the Control and Management of Ships' Ballast Water and Sediments, 2004, thereby facilitating its early entry into force;

141. Welcomes the entry into force on 1 July 2010 of the amendments to the Protocol of 1997 to the International Convention for the Prevention of Pollution from Ships, 1973, as modified by the Protocol of 1978 relating thereto, to reduce harmful emissions from ships;

142. Notes the ongoing work of the International Maritime Organization in accordance with its resolution on International Maritime Organization policies and practices related to the reduction of greenhouse gas emissions from ships;

143. Urges States to cooperate in correcting the shortfall in port waste reception facilities in accordance with the action plan to address the inadequacy of port waste reception facilities developed by the International Maritime Organization;

144. Recognizes that most of the pollution load of the oceans emanates from land-based activities and affects the most productive areas of the marine environment, and calls upon States as a matter of priority to implement the Global Programme of Action for the Protection of the Marine Environment from Land-based Activities and to take all appropriate measures to fulfil the commitments of the international community embodied in the Beijing Declaration on Furthering the Implementation of the Global Programme of Action;

145. Expresses its concern regarding the spreading of hypoxic dead zones in oceans as a result of eutrophication fuelled by riverine run-off of fertilizers, sewage outfall and reactive nitrogen resulting from the burning of fossil fuels and resulting in serious consequences for ecosystem functioning, and calls upon States to enhance their efforts to reduce eutrophication and, to this effect, to continue to cooperate within the framework of relevant international organizations, in particular the Global Programme of Action;

146. Calls upon all States to ensure that urban and coastal development projects and related land-reclamation activities are carried out in a responsible manner that protects the marine habitat and environment and mitigates the negative consequences of such activities;

147. Notes the first session of the Intergovernmental Negotiating Committee to prepare a global legally binding instrument on mercury, held in Stockholm from 7 to 11 June 2010, pursuant to the agreement of the twenty-fifth session of the United Nations Environment Programme Governing Council/Global Ministerial Environment Forum;

148. Welcomes the continued work of States, the United Nations Environment Programme and regional organizations in the implementation of the Global Programme of Action, and encourages increased emphasis on the link between freshwater, the coastal zone and marine resources in the implementation of international development goals, including those contained in the United Nations Millennium Declaration, and of the time-bound targets in the Plan of Implementation of the World Summit on Sustainable Development ("Johannesburg Plan of Implementation"), in particular the target on sanitation, and the Monterrey Consensus of the International Conference on Financing for Development;

149. Recalls the resolution of the thirtieth Consultative Meeting of Contracting Parties to the Convention on the Prevention of Marine Pollution by Dumping of Wastes and Other Matter, 1972 ("the London Convention") and the third Meeting of Contracting Parties to the London Protocol, held from 27 to 31 October 2008, on the regulation of ocean fertilization, in which the Contracting Parties agreed, inter alia, that the scope of the London Convention and Protocol includes ocean fertilization activities and that, given the present state of knowledge, ocean fertilization activities other than for legitimate scientific research should not be allowed, and that scientific research proposals should be assessed on a case-by-case basis using an assessment framework to be developed by the scientific groups under the London Convention and Protocol, and also agreed that, to this end, such other activities should be considered as contrary to the aims of the London Convention and Protocol and should not currently qualify for any exemption from the definition of dumping in article III, paragraph 1 (b), of the London Convention and article 1, paragraph 4.2, of the London Protocol;

150. Notes the resolution of the thirty-second Consultative Meeting of Contracting Parties to the London Convention and the fifth Meeting of Contracting Parties to the London Protocol, held from 11 to 15 October 2010, on the Assessment Framework for Scientific Research Involving Ocean Fertilization;

151. Recalls decision IX/16 C adopted at the ninth meeting of the Conference of the Parties to the Convention on Biological Diversity, in which the Conference of the Parties, inter alia, bearing in mind the ongoing scientific and legal analysis occurring under the auspices of the London Convention and Protocol requested parties and urged other Governments, in accordance with the precautionary approach, to ensure that ocean fertilization activities were not carried out until there was an adequate scientific basis on which to justify such activities, including an assessment of associated risks, and that a global, transparent and effective control and regulatory mechanism was in place for those activities, with the exception of small-scale scientific research studies within coastal waters, and stated that such studies should be authorized only if justified by the need to gather specific scientific data, should be subject to a thorough prior assessment of the potential impacts of the research studies on the marine environment, should be strictly controlled and should not be used for generating and selling carbon offsets or for any other commercial purposes, and notes decision X/29, adopted at the tenth meeting of the Conference of the Parties to the Convention on Biological Diversity, held in Nagoya, Japan, from 18 to 29 October 2010, in which the Conference of the Parties requested parties to implement decision IX/16 C;

152. Takes note of the amendment to the London Protocol adopted by the fourth Meeting of Contracting Parties to the London Protocol, held from 26 to 30 October 2009, to allow the export of carbon dioxide streams for disposal into sub-seabed geological formations;

153. Reaffirms paragraph 119 of resolution 61/222 of 20 December 2006 regarding ecosystem approaches and oceans, including the proposed elements of an ecosystem approach, means to achieve implementation of an ecosystem approach and requirements for improved application of an ecosystem approach, and in this regard:

(a) Notes that continued environmental degradation in many parts of the world and increasing competing demands require an urgent response and the setting of priorities for management actions aimed at conserving ecosystem integrity;

(b) Notes that ecosystem approaches to ocean management should be focused on managing human activities in order to maintain and, where needed, restore ecosystem health to sustain goods and environmental services, provide social and economic benefits for food security, sustain livelihoods in support of international development goals, including those contained in the Millennium Declaration, and conserve marine biodiversity;

(c) Recalls that States should be guided in the application of ecosystem approaches by a number of existing instruments, in particular the Convention, which sets out the legal framework for all activities in the oceans and seas, and its implementing Agreements, as well as other commitments, such as those contained in the Convention on Biological Diversity and the World Summit on Sustainable Development call for the application of an ecosystem approach by 2010;

(d) Encourages States to cooperate and coordinate their efforts and take, individually or jointly, as appropriate, all measures, in conformity with international law, including the Convention and other applicable instruments, to address impacts on marine ecosystems within and beyond areas of national jurisdiction, taking into account the integrity of the ecosystems concerned;

154. Encourages competent organizations and bodies that have not yet done so to incorporate an ecosystem approach into their mandates, as appropriate, in order to address impacts on marine ecosystems;

155. Invites States, in particular those States with advanced technology and marine capabilities, to explore prospects for improving cooperation with, and assistance to, developing States, in particular least developed countries and small island developing States, as well as coastal African States, with a view to better integrating into national policies and programmes sustainable and effective development in the marine sector;

156. Encourages the competent international organizations, the United Nations Development Programme, the World Bank and other funding agencies to consider expanding their programmes within their respective fields of competence for assistance to developing countries and to coordinate their efforts, including in the allocation and application of Global Environment Facility funding;

157. Notes the information compiled by the Secretariat in relation to the assistance available to and measures that may be taken by developing States, in particular the least developed countries and small island developing States, as well as coastal African States, to realize the benefits of sustainable and effective development of marine resources and uses of the oceans, as provided by States and competent international organizations and global and regional funding agencies, and urges them to provide further information for the annual report of the Secretary-General and for incorporation on the website of the Division;

158. Encourages States to consider ratifying or acceding to the Hong Kong International Convention for the Safe and Environmentally Sound Recycling of Ships, 2009, to facilitate its early entry into force;

159. Takes note of the role of the Basel Convention in protecting the marine environment against the adverse effects which may result from such wastes;

160. Notes with concern the potential for serious environmental consequences resulting from oil spill incidents;

X

Marine biodiversity

161. Reaffirms its central role relating to the conservation and sustainable use of marine biological diversity beyond areas of national jurisdiction, notes the work of States and relevant intergovernmental organizations and bodies on those issues, and invites them to contribute to its consideration of these issues within the areas of their respective competence;

162. Welcomes the meeting of the Ad Hoc Open-ended Informal Working Group, convened in New York from 1 to 5 February 2010 in accordance with paragraph 146 of resolution 64/71, and endorses its recommendations;

163. Requests the Secretary-General to convene, in accordance with paragraph 73 of resolution 59/24 of 17 November 2004 and paragraphs 79 and 80 of resolution 60/30, with full conference services, a meeting of the Ad Hoc Open-ended Informal Working Group, to take place from 31 May to 3 June 2011, to provide recommendations to the General Assembly, and requests the Secretary-General to make every effort to meet the requirement for full conference services within existing resources;

164. Encourages the Ad Hoc Open-ended Informal Working Group to improve progress on all outstanding issues on its agenda;

165. Notes the discussion on the relevant legal regime on marine genetic resources in areas beyond national jurisdiction in accordance with the Convention, and calls upon States to further consider this issue in the context of the mandate of the Ad Hoc Open-ended Informal Working Group, taking into account the views of States on Parts VII and XI of the Convention, with a view to making further progress on this issue;

166. Invites States to further consider, at the upcoming meeting of the Ad Hoc Open-ended Informal Working Group, in the context of its mandate, issues of marine protected areas and environmental impact assessment processes;

167. Requests the Secretary-General to include, in the annual report on oceans and the law of the sea, information on environmental impact assessments undertaken with respect to planned activities in areas beyond national jurisdiction, including capacity-building needs, on the basis of information requested from States and competent international organizations;

168. Recognizes the abundance and diversity of marine genetic resources and their value in terms of the benefits, goods and services they can provide;

169. Also recognizes the importance of research on marine genetic resources for the purpose of enhancing the scientific understanding, potential use and application, and enhanced management of marine ecosystems;

170. Encourages States and international organizations, including through bilateral, regional and global cooperation programmes and partnerships, to continue in a sustainable and comprehensive way to support, promote and strengthen capacity-building activities, in particular in developing countries, in the field of marine scientific research, taking into account, in particular, the need to create greater taxonomic capabilities;

171. Welcomes the high-level meeting of the General Assembly on 22 September 2010 as a contribution to the International Year of Biodiversity;

172. Notes the work under the Jakarta Mandate on Marine and Coastal Biological Diversity and the Convention on Biological Diversity elaborated programme of work on marine and coastal biological diversity, and, while reiterating the central role of the General Assembly relating to the conservation and sustainable use of marine biological diversity beyond areas of national jurisdiction, notes the work done by the Conference of the Parties to the Convention on Biological Diversity at its tenth meeting;

173. Reaffirms the need for States, individually or through competent international organizations, to urgently consider ways to integrate and improve, based on the best available scientific information and the precautionary approach and in accordance with the Convention and related agreements and instruments, the management of risks to the marine biodiversity of seamounts, cold water corals, hydrothermal vents and certain other underwater features;

174. Calls upon States and international organizations to urgently take further action to address, in accordance with international law, destructive practices that have adverse impacts on marine biodiversity and ecosystems, including seamounts, hydrothermal vents and cold water corals;

175. Notes the work of the expert workshop of the Convention on Biological Diversity on scientific and technical aspects relevant to environmental impact assessment in marine areas beyond national jurisdiction, held in Manila from 18 to 20 November 2009;

176. Calls upon States to strengthen, in a manner consistent with international law, in particular the Convention, the conservation and management of marine biodiversity and ecosystems and national policies in relation to marine protected areas;

177. Reaffirms the need for States to continue and intensify their efforts, directly and through competent international organizations, to develop and facilitate the use of diverse approaches and tools for conserving and managing vulnerable marine ecosystems, including the possible establishment of marine protected areas, consistent with international law, as reflected in the Convention, and based on the best scientific information available, and the development of representative networks of any such marine protected areas by 2012;

178. Notes the work of States, relevant intergovernmental organizations and bodies, including the Convention on Biological Diversity, in the assessment of scientific information on, and compilation of ecological criteria for the identification of, marine areas that require protection, in light of the objective of the World Summit on Sustainable Development to develop and facilitate the use of diverse approaches and tools, such as ecosystem approaches and the establishment of marine protected areas consistent with international law, as reflected in the Convention, and based on scientific information, including representative networks, by 2012;

179. Encourages States to further progress towards the 2012 target for the establishment of marine protected areas, including representative networks, and calls upon States to further consider options to identify and protect ecologically or biologically significant areas, consistent with international law and on the basis of the best available scientific information;

180. Recalls that the Conference of the Parties to the Convention on Biological Diversity, at its ninth meeting, adopted scientific criteria for identifying ecologically or biologically significant marine areas in need of protection in open-ocean waters and deep-sea habitats and scientific guidance for selecting areas to establish a representative network of marine protected areas, including in open-ocean waters and deep-sea habitats, and further recalls that the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations has developed guidance for the identification of vulnerable marine ecosystems through the International Guidelines for the Management of Deep-sea Fisheries in the High Seas;

181. Acknowledges the Micronesia Challenge, the Eastern Tropical Pacific Seascape project, the Caribbean Challenge and the Coral Triangle Initiative, which in particular seek to create and link domestic marine protected areas to better facilitate ecosystem approaches, and reaffirms the need for further international cooperation, coordination and collaboration in support of such initiatives;

182. Reiterates its support for the International Coral Reef Initiative, takes note of the International Coral Reef Initiative General Meeting, held in Monaco from 12 to 15 January 2010, and supports the work under the Jakarta Mandate on Marine and Coastal Biological Diversity and the elaborated programme of work on marine and coastal biological diversity related to coral reefs;

183. Encourages States and relevant international institutions to improve efforts to address coral bleaching by, inter alia, improving monitoring to predict and identify bleaching events, supporting and strengthening action taken during such events and improving strategies to manage reefs to support their natural resilience and enhance their ability to withstand other pressures, including ocean acidification;

184. Encourages States to cooperate, directly or through competent international bodies, in exchanging information in the event of accidents involving vessels on coral reefs and in promoting the development of economic assessment techniques for both restoration and non-use values of coral reef systems;

185. Emphasizes the need to mainstream sustainable coral reef management and integrated watershed management into national development strategies, as well as into the activities of relevant United Nations agencies and programmes, international financial institutions and the donor community;

186. Notes that ocean noise is a potential threat to living marine resources, affirms the importance of sound scientific studies in addressing this matter, encourages further research, studies and consideration of the impacts of ocean noise on marine living resources, and requests the Division to continue to compile the peer-reviewed scientific studies

it receives from Member States and intergovernmental organizations pursuant to paragraph 107 of resolution 61/222 and, as appropriate, to make them, or references and links to them, available on its website;

XI

Marine science

187. Calls upon States, individually or in collaboration with each other or with relevant international organizations and bodies, to continue to strive to improve understanding and knowledge of the oceans and the deep sea, including, in particular, the extent and vulnerability of deep sea biodiversity and ecosystems, by increasing their marine scientific research activities in accordance with the Convention;

188. Invites all relevant organizations, funds, programmes and bodies within the United Nations system, in consultation with interested States, to coordinate relevant activities with regional and national marine scientific and technological centres in small island developing States, as appropriate, to ensure the more effective achievement of their objectives in accordance with relevant United Nations small island developing States development programmes and strategies;

189. Takes note with appreciation of the work of the Intergovernmental Oceanographic Commission, with the advice of the Advisory Body of Experts on the Law of the Sea, on the development of procedures for the implementation of Parts XIII and XIV of the Convention, and also takes note of the review of the Advisory Body of Experts to be conducted by an open-ended working group with representatives from member States;

190. Encourages the Advisory Body of Experts to continue its work, in cooperation with the Division, on the practice of member States related to marine scientific research and transfer of marine technology within the framework of the Convention, taking into account the outcome of the review;

191. Notes with appreciation the work carried out by the group of experts to assist the Division in the revision of the publication entitled Marine Scientific Research: A guide to the implementation of the relevant provisions of the United Nations Convention on the Law of the Sea, and requests the Secretariat to expedite publication of the revised version;

192. Notes the contribution of the Census of Marine Life to marine biodiversity research over the past ten years, and notes with appreciation the publication of the report entitled "First Census of Marine Life 2010: Highlights of a Decade of Discovery";

193. Stresses the importance of increasing the scientific understanding of the oceans-atmosphere interface, including through participation in ocean observing programmes and geographic information systems, such as the Global Ocean Observing System, sponsored by the Intergovernmental Oceanographic Commission, the United Nations Environment Programme, the World Meteorological Organization and the International Council for Science, particularly considering their role in monitoring and forecasting climate change and variability and in the establishment and operation of tsunami warning systems;

194. Takes note with appreciation of the progress made by the Intergovernmental Oceanographic Commission and Member States towards the establishment of regional and national tsunami warning and mitigation systems, welcomes the continued collaboration of the United Nations and other intergovernmental organizations in this effort, and encourages Member States to establish and sustain their national warning and mitigation systems, within a global, ocean-related multi-hazard approach, as necessary, to reduce loss of life and damage to national economies and strengthen the resilience of coastal communities to natural disasters;

195. Stresses the need for continued efforts in developing mitigation and preparedness measures for natural disasters, particularly following recent tsunami events caused by earthquakes in Chile, Haiti, Samoa and Tonga;

196. Expresses its concern at the intentional or unintentional damage to platforms used for ocean observation and marine scientific research, such as moored buoys and tsunameters, and urges States to take necessary action and to cooperate in relevant organizations, including the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations, the Intergovernmental Oceanographic Commission and the World Meteorological Organization, to address such damage;

XII

Regular Process for Global Reporting and Assessment of the State of the Marine Environment, including Socio-economic Aspects

197. Reiterates the need to strengthen the regular scientific assessment of the state of the marine environment in order to enhance the scientific basis for policymaking;

198. Takes note with appreciation of the responses and suggestions made by the Group of Experts established pursuant to paragraph 180 of resolution 64/71 to respond and make suggestions on the issues listed in paragraph 60 of the report on the results of the “assessment of assessments”;

199. Welcomes the meeting of the Ad Hoc Working Group of the Whole to recommend a course of action to the General Assembly at its sixty-fifth session, convened in New York from 30 August to 3 September 2010 in accordance with paragraph 178 of resolution 64/71;

200. Endorses the recommendations adopted by the Ad Hoc Working Group of the Whole that propose modalities for the implementation of the Regular Process, including the key features, institutional arrangements, capacity-building and financing;

201. Reaffirms the principles guiding the Regular Process and the objective and scope of its first cycle (2010–2014) as agreed upon at the first meeting of the Ad Hoc Working Group of the Whole in 2009;

202. Decides that the Regular Process, as established under the United Nations, is accountable to the General Assembly and shall be an intergovernmental process guided by international law, including the Convention and other applicable international instruments, and take into account relevant Assembly resolutions;

203. Decides also that the Regular Process shall be overseen and guided by an Ad Hoc Working Group of the Whole of the General Assembly, composed of Member States, and requests the Secretary-General to convene the first meeting of the Ad Hoc Working Group of the Whole from 14 to 18 February 2011;

204. Decides further that the meetings of the Ad Hoc Working Group of the Whole shall be open to Member States and observers of the United Nations, that, in accordance with past practice of the United Nations, relevant intergovernmental organizations and non-governmental organizations in consultative status with the Economic and Social Council shall be invited to participate in the meetings of the Ad Hoc Working Group of the Whole, and that relevant scientific institutions and major groups identified in Agenda 21 may request an invitation to participate in the meetings of the Ad Hoc Working Group of the Whole;

205. Emphasizes that the first cycle of the Regular Process has begun and that the deadline for the first integrated assessment is 2014;

206. Notes that the first phase of the first cycle of the Regular Process (2010–2012) will provide for the preparation of key questions to be answered by the first integrated assessment, at all regional levels, to ensure an effective science-policy relationship and the participation of all relevant stakeholders, in particular local experts, in defining specific objectives and scope of the assessments;

207. Decides that the meetings of the Ad Hoc Working Group of the Whole shall be coordinated by two co-chairs representing developing and developed countries, who will be appointed by the President of the General Assembly in consultation with regional groups;

208. Recommends that the Ad Hoc Working Group of the Whole establish, with agreement on terms of reference and other relevant elements, a management and review mechanism composed of States from among its members, on the basis of equitable geographic representation;

209. Decides to establish a group of experts to be an integral part of the Regular Process, requests the members of the Group of Experts, who have been appointed by Member States pursuant to paragraph 180 of resolution 64/71, to continue serving on the Group of Experts for the duration of the first phase of the first assessment cycle, and encourages regional groups that have not yet done so to appoint experts to the Group of Experts in accordance with paragraph 180 of resolution 64/71;

210. Requests the Secretary-General to designate the Division to provide secretariat support to the Regular Process, including its established institutions;

211. Also requests the Secretary-General to invite the Intergovernmental Oceanographic Commission, the United Nations Environment Programme, the International Maritime Organization and the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations, and other competent United Nations specialized agencies, as appropriate, to provide technical and scientific support to the Regular Process;

212. Requests the Group of Experts to work, with the assistance of the secretariat of the Regular Process, to develop a set of options necessary to achieve the deadline of 2014 recommended in the report on the work of the Ad Hoc Working Group of the Whole to recommend a course of action to the General Assembly on the Regular Process, for the completion of the first cycle of the Regular Process, to be presented by the Group of Experts for consideration and adoption, as appropriate, by the Ad Hoc Working Group of the Whole at its meeting in 2011;

213. Requests the secretariat of the Regular Process to convene a meeting of the Group of Experts, as appropriate and subject to the availability of resources, prior to the first meeting of the Ad Hoc Working Group of the Whole;

214. Notes with appreciation the support provided by the Division to the Regular Process, and notes also with appreciation the technical and logistical support of the United Nations Environment Programme and the Intergovernmental Oceanographic Commission;

215. Requests the Secretary-General to promptly take appropriate measures, by mobilizing all available extrabudgetary and existing resources, including through the redeployment of staff, to further strengthen the capacity of the Division, in particular its human resources, serving as the secretariat of the Regular Process, including in the context of the programme budget for the current biennium and the proposed programme budget for the biennium 2012–2013;

216. Welcomes the establishment by the Secretary-General of the voluntary trust fund for the purpose of supporting the operations of the first five-year cycle of the Regular Process, including for the provision of assistance to the experts referred to in paragraph 209 above from developing countries, in particular least developed countries, small island developing States and landlocked developing States, attending the meeting of the Ad Hoc Working Group of the Whole in 2011, and the scholarship fund to support training programmes for developing countries, notes with appreciation the contributions made to the funds, and urges Member States, international financial institutions, donor agencies, intergovernmental organizations, non-governmental organizations and natural and juridical persons to make financial contributions to those funds established pursuant to paragraph 183 of resolution 64/71 and to make other contributions to the Regular Process;

217. Decides that the scholarship fund is intended for individuals from developing countries, between 25 and 40 years of age, working in assessment and monitoring of the state of the marine environment or related disciplines, either in government or educational institutions and bodies, with at least five years of work-related experience, and decides further that the duration of a fellowship shall be a minimum of six months in a university or educational institution, followed by a practice period of at least three months in a relevant United Nations specialized agency, fund or programme or other relevant intergovernmental organization;

XIII

Regional cooperation

218. Notes that there have been a number of initiatives at the regional level, in various regions, to further the implementation of the Convention, takes note in that context of the Caribbean-focused Assistance Fund, which is intended to facilitate, mainly through technical assistance, the voluntary undertaking of maritime delimitation negotiations between Caribbean States, takes note once again of the Fund for Peace: Peaceful Settlement of Territorial Disputes, established by the General Assembly of the Organization of American States in 2000 as a primary mechanism, given its broader regional scope, for the prevention and resolution of pending territorial, land border and maritime boundary disputes, and calls upon States and others in a position to do so to contribute to these funds;

219. Notes with appreciation efforts at the regional level to further the implementation of the Convention and respond, including through capacity-building, to issues related to maritime safety and security, the conservation and sustainable use of living marine resources, the protection and preservation of the marine environment and the conservation and sustainable use of marine biodiversity;

220. Welcomes the publication of the results of the International Polar Year, 2007–2008, with particular emphasis on new knowledge about the linkages between environmental change in the polar regions and global climate systems, encourages States and scientific communities to strengthen their cooperation in this respect, and notes the International Polar Year “From Knowledge to Action” Conference to be held in Montreal, Canada, from 22 to 27 April 2012;

221. Welcomes regional cooperation, and in this regard notes the Pacific Oceanscape Framework as an initiative to enhance cooperation among coastal States in the Pacific island region to foster marine conservation and sustainable development;

XIV

Open-ended Informal Consultative Process on Oceans and the Law of the Sea

222. Welcomes the report on the work of the Consultative Process at its eleventh meeting, which focused on capacity-building in ocean affairs and the law of the sea, including marine science;

223. Recognizes the role of the Consultative Process as a unique forum for comprehensive discussions on issues related to oceans and the law of the sea, consistent with the framework provided by the Convention and chapter 17 of Agenda 21, and that the perspective of the three pillars of sustainable development should be further enhanced in the examination of the selected topics;

224. Welcomes the work of the Consultative Process and its contribution to improving coordination and cooperation between States and strengthening the annual debate of the General Assembly on oceans and the law of the sea by effectively drawing attention to key issues and current trends;

225. Also welcomes efforts to improve and focus the work of the Consultative Process, and in that respect recognizes the primary role of the Consultative Process in integrating knowledge, the exchange of opinions among multiple stakeholders and coordination among competent agencies, and enhancing awareness of topics, including emerging issues, while promoting the three pillars of sustainable development, and recommends that the Consultative Process devise a transparent, objective and inclusive process for the selection of topics and panellists so as to facilitate the work of the General Assembly during informal consultations concerning the annual resolution on oceans and the law of the sea;

226. Recalls the need to strengthen and improve the efficiency of the Consultative Process, and encourages States, intergovernmental organizations and programmes to provide guidance to the Co-Chairs to this effect, particularly before and during the preparatory meeting for the Consultative Process;

227. Decides to continue the Consultative Process for the next two years, in accordance with resolution 54/33, with a further review of its effectiveness and utility by the General Assembly at its sixty-seventh session;

228. Requests the Secretary-General to convene, in accordance with paragraphs 2 and 3 of resolution 54/33, the twelfth meeting of the Consultative Process, in New York from 20 to 24 June 2011, to provide it with the necessary facilities for the performance of its work and to arrange for support to be provided by the Division, in cooperation with other relevant parts of the Secretariat, as appropriate;

229. Expresses its serious concern regarding the lack of resources available in the voluntary trust fund established by resolution 55/7 for the purpose of assisting developing countries, in particular least developed countries, small island developing States and landlocked developing States, in attending the meetings of the Consultative Process, and urges States to make additional contributions to the trust fund;

230. Decides that those representatives from developing countries who are invited by the Co-Chairs, in consultation with Governments, to make presentations during the meetings of the Consultative Process shall receive priority consideration in the disbursement of funds from the voluntary trust fund established by resolution 55/7 in order to cover the costs of their travel, and shall also be eligible to receive daily subsistence allowance subject to the availability of funds after the travel costs of all other eligible representatives from those countries mentioned in paragraph 229 above have been covered;

231. Also decides that, in its deliberations on the report of the Secretary-General on oceans and the law of the sea, the Consultative Process will focus its discussions at its twelfth meeting on contributing to the assessment, in the context of the United Nations Conference on Sustainable Development, of progress to date and the remaining gaps in the implementation of the outcomes of the major summits on sustainable development and addressing new and emerging challenges, and at its thirteenth meeting on marine renewable energies;

XV

Coordination and cooperation

232. Encourages States to work closely with and through international organizations, funds and programmes, as well as the specialized agencies of the United Nations system and relevant international conventions, to identify emerging areas of focus for improved coordination and cooperation and how best to address these issues;

233. Encourages bodies established by the Convention to strengthen coordination and cooperation, as appropriate, in fulfilling their respective mandates;

234. Requests the Secretary-General to bring the present resolution to the attention of heads of intergovernmental organizations, the specialized agencies, funds and programmes of the United Nations engaged in activities relating to ocean affairs and the law of the sea, as well as funding institutions, and underlines the importance of their constructive and timely input for the report of the Secretary-General on oceans and the law of the sea and of their participation in relevant meetings and processes;

235. Welcomes the work done by the secretariats of relevant United Nations specialized agencies, programmes, funds and bodies and the secretariats of related organizations and conventions to enhance inter-agency coordination and cooperation on ocean issues, including through UN-Oceans, the inter-agency coordination mechanism on ocean and coastal issues within the United Nations system;

236. Encourages continued updates to Member States by UN-Oceans regarding its priorities and initiatives, in particular with respect to the proposed participation in UN-Oceans;

XVI

Activities of the Division for Ocean Affairs and the Law of the Sea

237. Expresses its appreciation to the Secretary-General for the annual comprehensive report on oceans and the law of the sea, prepared by the Division, as well as for the other activities of the Division, which reflect the high standard of assistance provided to Member States by the Division;

238. Notes with satisfaction the second observance by the United Nations of World Oceans Day on 8 June 2010, recognizes with appreciation the efforts deployed by the Division in organizing its celebration, and invites the Division to continue to promote and facilitate international cooperation on the law of the sea and ocean affairs in the context of the future observance of World Oceans Day, as well as through its participation in other events such as the World Expo to be held in Yeosu, Republic of Korea, in 2012;

239. Requests the Secretary-General to continue to carry out the responsibilities and functions entrusted to him in the Convention and by the related resolutions of the General Assembly, including resolutions 49/28 and 52/26, and to ensure the allocation of appropriate resources to the Division for the performance of its activities under the approved budget for the Organization;

XVII

Sixty-sixth session of the General Assembly

240. Requests the Secretary-General to prepare a comprehensive report, in its current extensive format and in accordance with established practice, for consideration by the General Assembly at its sixty-sixth session, on developments and issues relating to ocean affairs and the law of the sea, including the implementation of the present resolution, in accordance with resolutions 49/28, 52/26 and 54/33, and to make the section of the report related to the topic that is the focus of the twelfth meeting of the Consultative Process available at least six weeks in advance of the meeting of the Consultative Process;

241. Emphasizes the critical role of the annual comprehensive report of the Secretary-General, which integrates information on developments relating to the implementation of the Convention and the work of the Organization, its specialized agencies and other institutions in the field of ocean affairs and the law of the sea at the global and regional levels, and as a result constitutes the basis for the annual consideration and review of developments relating to ocean affairs and the law of the sea by the General Assembly as the global institution having the competence to undertake such a review;

242. Notes that the report referred to in paragraph 240 above will also be submitted to States Parties pursuant to article 319 of the Convention regarding issues of a general nature that have arisen with respect to the Convention;

243. Also notes the desire to further improve the efficiency of, and effective participation of delegations in, the informal consultations concerning the annual General Assembly resolution on oceans and the law of the sea and the resolution on sustainable fisheries, decides that the period of the informal consultations on both resolutions should not exceed a maximum of four weeks in total and that the consultations should be scheduled in such a way that the Division has sufficient time to produce the report referred to in paragraph 240 above, and invites States to submit text proposals for inclusion in the resolutions to the coordinators of the informal consultations at the earliest possible date;

244. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its sixty-sixth session the item entitled “Oceans and the law of the sea”.

Division for Ocean Affairs and the Law of the Sea

During 2010, the Division for Ocean Affairs and the Law of the Sea of the Office of Legal Affairs continued to fulfil its role as the substantive unit of the UN Secretariat responsible for reviewing and monitoring all developments related to the law of the sea and ocean affairs, as well as for the implementation of the United Nations Convention on the Law of the Sea and related General Assembly resolutions.

The Division carried out capacity-building activities aimed at assisting States, in particular developing States, in the uniform and consistent application of the Convention and the 1995 Fish Stocks Agreement. Those activities included fellowship programmes, the management of trust funds and the organization of briefings, workshops and training courses. The Train-Sea-Coast Global Programme of Action—an inter-agency collaboration between the UNESCO-IHE Institute for Water Education, the Division and the United Nations Development Programme—continued to deliver training courses on improving municipal wastewater management in coastal cities.

The twenty-third Hamilton Shirley Amerasinghe Fellowship on the Law of the Sea, established in 1981 [YUN 1981, pp. 130 & 139], was awarded to Killey Mwitasi of the United Republic of Tanzania.

The United Nations-Nippon Foundation of Japan Fellowship Programme, implemented in partnership with over 40 academic host institutions, provided capacity-building opportunities to developing States in ocean affairs and the law of the sea and related disciplines. The 2010–2011 Fellows were nationals of Bangladesh, Brazil, Colombia, the Congo, Indonesia, Malaysia, Papua New Guinea, Sierra Leone, the United Republic of Tanzania and Tonga.

PART FIVE

Institutional, administrative and budgetary questions

United Nations restructuring and institutional matters

In 2010, the General Assembly took concerted steps to strengthen UN coherence system-wide by streamlining institutional arrangements for gender equality and the empowerment of women, consolidating governance of operational activities for development, and improving the funding for those activities. In June, a High-level Tripartite Conference of the eight “Delivering as one” pilot countries reviewed lessons learned from the programme and made proposals for the way forward. In July, the General Assembly adopted a resolution on system-wide coherence, in which it established the United Nations Entity for Gender Equality and the Empowerment of Women, to be known as UN-Women, by consolidating and transferring to the Entity the mandates and functions of the Office of the Special Adviser on Gender Issues and Advancement of Women, the Division for the Advancement of Women, the United Nations Development Fund for Women, and the United Nations International Research and Training Institute for the Advancement of Women. The Assembly also welcomed the Assembly President’s proposal to designate as the special theme for the general debate of its sixty-fifth session “Reaffirming the central role of the United Nations in global governance” and his intention to organize in 2011 an informal thematic debate on global governance, and considered the Secretary-General’s proposal on a new accountability architecture for the Secretariat.

The Ad Hoc Working Group on the Revitalization of the General Assembly focused on the Assembly’s working methods, its role and relationship to the other principal UN organs, the selection and appointment of the Secretary-General and the strengthening of the institutional memory of the Office of the President of the General Assembly. The Assembly resumed its sixty-fourth session, and opened its sixty-fifth session on 14 September. It held its fourth High-level Dialogue on Financing for Development; a summit on the Millennium Development Goals; high-level meetings on the International Year of Biodiversity and on revitalizing the work of the Conference on Disarmament and taking forward multilateral disarmament negotiations; the five-year review of the Mauritius Strategy for the Further Implementation of the Programme of Action for the Sustainable Development of Small Island Developing States; and a commemorative meeting on the fiftieth anniversary of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples.

The Security Council held 187 formal meetings to deal with regional conflicts, peacekeeping operations and other issues related to the maintenance of international peace and security.

In addition to its organizational and substantive sessions, the Economic and Social Council held a special high-level meeting with the Bretton Woods institutions (the World Bank Group and the International Monetary Fund), the World Trade Organization and the United Nations Conference on Trade and Development.

In other coordination matters, the Committee for Programme and Coordination considered the annual overview report of the United Nations System Chief Executives Board for Coordination, while the Assembly considered a number of reports by the Secretary-General on cooperation activities between the United Nations and regional organizations.

Restructuring matters

Programme of reform

UN system-wide coherence

In 2010, the General Assembly continued consultations on system-wide coherence through informal consultations and interactive meetings, led by the co-facilitators of the system-wide coherence process (Estonia and Tunisia), including a plenary of informal consultations held on 4 February. Those consultations addressed strengthening institutional arrangements for gender equality and the empowerment of women; strengthening governance of operational activities for development of the UN system for enhanced system-wide coherence; improving the funding system of UN operational activities for development; the “Delivering as one” programme; and the harmonization of business practices. The consultations were supported by discussion documents prepared by the Secretary-General. The co-facilitators reported periodically on the results of those consultations.

Delivering as one. A High-level Tripartite Conference on the theme “Delivering as one: Lessons from Country-led Evaluations and Way Forward” was held in Hanoi, Viet Nam, from 14 to 16 June. The meeting was attended by representatives of the eight “Delivering as one” programme pilot countries (Albania, Cape Verde, Mozambique, Pakistan, Rwanda, United Republic of Tanzania, Uruguay, Viet Nam), those countries that had indicated voluntary adoption of the approach and those invited to learn of the experience, donor governments, the Asian Development Bank and the United Nations. In its Statement of Outcome and Way Forward, participants noted the findings, lessons and recommendations of the country-led evaluations carried out in Albania, Mozambique, Rwanda, United Republic of Tanzania, Uruguay and Viet Nam, as well as in Malawi, a voluntary adopter. The implementation of the “Delivering as one” approach had given renewed government leadership to UN programmes and led to better alignment to national priorities. Substantive progress at the country level had led to increased expectations that reform would be pursued with vigour at the regional and global levels, and that the role and contribution of the UN system would become more coherent, effective and relevant to better support Governments in achieving internationally agreed development goals, including the Millennium Development Goals (MDGs) [YUN 2000, p. 51]. The Conference reaffirmed the relevance of the “Delivering as one” approach in middle-income countries in addressing development challenges. Moving forward, the challenge was for all pilot countries, those voluntarily adopting the approach, the United Nations and donors to support it in a more enhanced and committed manner, and for the reporting of programme results to be further streamlined. To ensure the implementation of General Assembly resolution 62/208 [YUN 2007, p. 877], participants encouraged the Assembly to decide on modalities for approval of common country programmes, as called for in Assembly resolution 63/311 [YUN 2009, p. 1368]; called on Member States to promote the “Delivering as one” approach across country programmes; and called on donors to make the approach sustainable and attractive to Member States for UN development activities, and to provide multi-year, predictable and unearmarked funds to “One United Nations” funds. The Secretary-General should examine, with Member States, the modality for the set-up and sustainable operation of “One United Nations” funds in programme countries. Furthermore, Resident Coordinators should be given a level of authority to match their responsibilities and accountabilities. Incentives for the harmonization of business practices to reduce administrative costs should be established, and the UN system should implement critical changes in rules and procedures at Headquarters in areas such as finance and human resources. Participants requested the Secretary-General to develop, in consultation with programme pilot countries, guidelines, benchmarks and results to be achieved in implementing the “Delivering as one” approach.

Institutional arrangements for gender issues. In response to Assembly resolution 63/311 [YUN 2009,

p. 1368], the Secretary-General submitted a January report [A/64/588] presenting a comprehensive proposal for a composite entity for gender equality and the empowerment of women. The report set out the mission statement and organizational arrangements of the entity, including an organizational chart and provisions related to funding and an Executive Board to oversee operational activities. The proposed composite entity, which would be a subsidiary organ of the Assembly, would combine the mandates and assets of the four gender equality entities—the Office of the Special Adviser on Gender Issues and Advancement of Women, the Division for the Advancement of Women, the United Nations Development Fund for Women (UNIFEM) and the United Nations International Research and Training Institute for the Advancement of Women (INSTRAW). The entity would report to the Assembly through the Economic and Social Council and would be led by an Under-Secretary-General. The Commission on the Status of Women would play a crucial role in guiding its work and an Executive Board would oversee its operational activities. The Secretary-General also proposed a Headquarters structure to cover the new functions and to implement existing mandates.

Funding for the entity from assessed and voluntary contributions was estimated at some $125 million per annum, as well as an additional $375 million per annum in the initial phase to respond to country-level requests for UN programmatic support. The entity would sharpen the focus and impact of the gender equality activities of the entire UN system by ensuring clarity of roles and responsibilities and support for a more coherent and scaled-up response, and would play a key role in addressing gaps and challenges in the current response. To put the new arrangements in place, the Assembly would need to dissolve the Voluntary Fund for the United Nations Decade for Women, including its Consultative Committee, request the Economic and Social Council to abolish INSTRAW, and transfer to the new entity the responsibility for implementing the programmes, projects and activities of the Office of the Special Adviser on Gender Issues and Advancement of Women, the Division for the Advancement of Women, UNIFEM and INSTRAW.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 2 July [meeting 104], the General Assembly adopted resolution 64/289 [draft: A/64/L.56] without vote [agenda item 114].

System-wide coherence

The General Assembly,

Recalling the 2005 World Summit Outcome,

Recalling also its resolution 62/277 of 15 September 2008, setting out five areas for consideration by Member States with a view to enhancing United Nations system-wide coherence,

Recalling further its resolution 63/311 of 14 September 2009,

Reaffirming the Beijing Declaration and Platform for Action, the outcome of the twenty-third special session of the General Assembly, the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women and international law, in particular international human rights and humanitarian law,

Reaffirming also its resolution 62/208 of 19 December 2007 on the triennial comprehensive policy review of operational activities for development of the United Nations system,

Reaffirming further its resolution 2(I) of 1 February 1946,

Reaffirming that the fundamental characteristics of the operational activities for development of the United Nations system should be, inter alia, their universal, voluntary and grant nature, their neutrality and their multilateralism,

Reaffirming also the key importance of national ownership and national leadership, and underscoring the fact that there is no “one size fits all” approach to development and that development assistance by the United Nations development system should be able to respond to the varying demands of programme countries and should be in alignment with their national development plans and strategies in accordance with established mandates,

Taking note of the reports of the Secretary-General entitled “Comprehensive proposal for the composite entity for gender equality and the empowerment of women” and “Follow-up to General Assembly resolution 63/311 on system-wide coherence related to operational activities for development”,

Strengthening governance of operational activities for development of the United Nations system for enhanced system-wide coherence

1. Requests the Secretary-General, starting at the sixty-fifth session of the General Assembly, and as background material for the comprehensive policy review, to make available a compilation of all relevant legislation on the roles and responsibilities of the Assembly, the Economic and Social Council, including its subsidiary bodies, the executive boards of funds and programmes of the United Nations and the governing bodies of the specialized agencies in the governance of United Nations operational activities for development;

2. Also requests the Secretary-General to circulate information on the coherence of the calendars, agendas and programmes of work of the governing bodies responsible for United Nations operational activities for development, with a view to enabling them to consider measures to enhance coherence when setting their agendas and programmes of work;

3. Invites the President and the Bureau of the Economic and Social Council to convene informal coordination meetings with the bureaux of the governing bodies responsible for United Nations operational activities for development, in accordance with their mandates, in order to discuss ways and means to enhance the coherence of their work, and to provide a summary of such informal coordination meetings to Member States;

4. Reaffirms the need for enhancing the transparency of the activities of the United Nations System Chief Executives Board for Coordination, in particular to ensure its effective interaction with Member States, while respecting the mandates and working methods of the Chief Executives Board and its member organizations, and in this regard requests:

(a) The Secretary-General, in his capacity as Chair of the Chief Executives Board, to further enhance the quality and quantity of information on the Board’s website and to publish and make available to Member States the Board’s inter-agency agreements and decisions;

(b) The Secretary-General, in his capacity as the Chair of the Chief Executives Board, to ensure a transparent and balanced approach in its priority-setting, to implement and report on the decisions of relevant intergovernmental bodies and to include appropriate information on the work of the Board in its annual overview report to the Economic and Social Council, which is also studied by the Committee for Programme and Coordination, in order to promote more effective dialogue;

(c) The President of the Economic and Social Council to continue to convene periodic briefings for Member States with the Secretariat following the biannual sessions of the Chief Executives Board, taking into account the need to schedule the briefings within a time frame that permits the full utilization of such opportunities by Member States for an effective dialogue with the Board regarding its activities;

5. Requests the United Nations Institute for Training and Research, in consultation with the secretariats of the governing bodies responsible for United Nations operational activities for development, as appropriate and in accordance with its statute, and in line with paragraph 3 of section I of General Assembly resolution 64/260 of 29 March 2010, to prepare and carry out orientation and training courses for representatives of Member States, in particular the delegates of the permanent missions of Member States, on the functioning of United Nations operational activities for development, including on the roles and responsibilities of governing bodies;

6. Requests the Economic and Social Council and the executive boards of United Nations funds and programmes and the governing bodies of the specialized agencies to consider measures to facilitate the effective participation of national policymakers of developing countries in the operational activities segment of the substantive session of the Council and the regular sessions of the executive boards of the United Nations funds and programmes and the governing bodies of the specialized agencies, giving priority to national policymakers of programme countries, in particular the least developed countries. Such measures could include the establishment of new trust funds or the use of existing mechanisms, as appropriate, taking into account the financial situation and arrangements of each organization;

7. Invites the United Nations funds and programmes, as appropriate, based on their analysis of good practices, to improve the preparations for and discussions during meetings of their executive boards, taking into account the views expressed by Member States and, in that regard, to include their findings and adopted measures in their annual reports to the Economic and Social Council;

8. Takes note of the progress in the creation of a central repository of information on operational activities for development, and requests the Secretary-General to ensure that an update on the advances in the establishment of that mechanism is presented at the substantive session of the Economic and Social Council in 2011 in the context of the comprehensive policy review of operational activities for development;

9. Encourages the governing bodies of the funds, programmes and specialized agencies of the United Nations development system to include in their strategic plans, as appropriate, specific provisions for the full implementation of policy guidance provided in the comprehensive policy review of operational activities for development of the General Assembly, and requests the secretariats of the funds, programmes and specialized agencies of the United Nations development system to report on the implementation of those provisions in their regular reporting to the Assembly through the Economic and Social Council;

10. Requests the Secretary-General, under the auspices of the Economic and Social Council and in cooperation with United Nations resident coordinators, to prepare and put in place a periodic survey, directed to Governments, on the effectiveness, efficiency and relevance of the support of the United Nations system in order to provide feedback on the strengths and main challenges encountered in their interactions with the United Nations development system, with a view to enabling intergovernmental bodies to address them, and also requests that the results of such surveys be published and made available to Member States;

Independent system-wide evaluation mechanism

11. Recognizes that the current multi-tiered evaluation system of operational activities for development within the United Nations consists of a number of entities with distinct roles and responsibilities, including the United Nations Evaluation Group, the evaluation offices of individual United Nations organizations, the Office of Internal Oversight Services, the Department of Economic and Social Affairs and the Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs of the Secretariat and the Joint Inspection Unit;

12. Requests the Secretary-General, in consultation with the United Nations Evaluation Group and the Joint Inspection Unit, to commission a comprehensive review of the existing institutional framework for the system-wide evaluation of operational activities for development of the United Nations system, and to submit a report, with recommendations, to the General Assembly at its sixty-sixth session;

13. Affirms, in this regard, that the establishment of an independent system-wide evaluation mechanism within the United Nations system should be aimed at fully utilizing and strengthening the existing institutional framework and capacities;

Approval of common country programmes

14. Emphasizes the principle of national ownership and leadership, supports the initiative of some countries to use, on a voluntary basis, common country programme documents, and emphasizes its support for all countries that wish to continue using the existing frameworks and processes for country-level programming;

15. Recognizes that local consultative processes could strengthen the principle of national ownership and facilitate the effective participation of national policymakers in setting the priority areas of common country programmes;

16. Invites those countries presenting a common country programme document on a voluntary basis to prepare it consistent with the United Nations Development Assistance Framework, where it exists, and to present in the common country programme the critical actions that will be taken to achieve the agreed results with available or indicative resources, as well as actions to ensure coherence of the assistance provided by the United Nations system at the country level, attaching, as an annex, a brief description of the agreed results and indicative resources for each of the relevant United Nations agencies;

17. Invites the governing body of each fund, programme and specialized agency, where relevant, and in accordance with its mandate, to consider and approve its role and the resources it will require for the implementation of the common country programme on the basis of the agency-specific annex;

18. Notes that the approval of the contribution of each fund, programme and specialized agency, where relevant, will be based on an assessment of whether the elements in the agency-specific annex reflect the priorities of its strategic plan and overall mandate, as well as their alignment with national priorities and strategies;

19. Recognizes that informal discussions during the joint meeting of the Executive Boards of the United Nations Development Programme/United Nations Population Fund, the United Nations Children's Fund and the World Food Programme on cross-cutting issues, synergies, gaps and duplication, including those related to common country programmes, could provide a useful context for the work of the individual funds and programmes at the country level;

"Delivering as one"

20. Welcomes the intergovernmental meetings of programme country pilots held in Kigali, from 19 to 21 October 2009, and in Hanoi, from 14 to 16 June 2010, takes note with appreciation of the Kigali and Hanoi declarations, and in this regard also takes note of the progress made by "delivering as one" countries in their own country-led evaluations, with the participation of relevant stakeholders and with the technical support of the United Nations Evaluation Group, to be completed by 1 July 2010;

21. Encourages the Secretary-General to proceed with the modality for the independent evaluation of lessons learned from the "delivering as one" pilots, as outlined by the Secretariat, after consultation, covering all aspects of the initiative, and looks forward to receiving the outcome at the sixty-sixth session of the General Assembly;

Improving the funding system of operational activities for development of the United Nations system for enhanced system-wide coherence

General principles

22. Acknowledges efforts by developed countries to increase resources for development, including commitments by some developed countries to increase official development assistance, calls for the fulfilment of all official development assistance commitments, including the commitments by many developed countries to achieve the target of 0.7 per cent of gross national income for official development assistance by 2015 and to reach at least 0.5 per cent of gross national income for official development assistance by 2010, as well as the target of 0.15 per cent to 0.20 per cent for least developed countries, and urges those developed countries that have not yet done so to make concrete efforts in this regard in accordance with their commitments;

23. Welcomes the growing number of countries making financial contributions to the operational activities of the United Nations development system, as well as the diversification of funding sources and mechanisms within the system, and also welcomes, in this regard, the significant growth in funds contributed to United Nations development operations, from 13 billion United States dollars in 2003 to 22 billion dollars in 2008, the highest level ever;

24. Stresses that core resources, because of their untied nature, continue to be the bedrock of the operational activities for development of the United Nations system, notes with concern, in that regard, the long-term decline in the share of core contributions to the United Nations development system, which, since 2005, has levelled off at about 34 per cent, and recognizes the need for organizations to attain, on a continuous basis, an adequate balance between core and non-core resources, taking into account the unique mandate structure and programmes of individual entities, while noting that non-core resources represent an important supplement to the regular resource base of the United Nations development system to support operational activities for development;

25. Emphasizes that increasing the financial contributions to the United Nations development system is key to achieving the internationally agreed development goals, including the Millennium Development Goals, and in this regard recognizes the mutually reinforcing links between increased effectiveness, efficiency and coherence of the United Nations development system, achieving concrete results in assisting developing countries in eradicating poverty and achieving sustained economic growth and sustainable development through operational activities for development and the overall resourcing of the United Nations development system;

26. Stresses the need for adequate quantity and quality of funding for operational activities as well as the need to make funding more predictable, effective and efficient;

27. Affirms, in this context, the importance of accountability, transparency and improved results-based management and further harmonized results-based reporting on the work of the United Nations funds, programmes and specialized agencies for increased quantity and quality of funding for operational activities;

Ensuring adequate funding

28. Stresses that funding for operational activities should be aligned with the national priorities and plans of the programme countries as well as the strategic plans, mandates, resource frameworks and priorities of the United Nations funds, programmes and specialized agencies, and underscores, in that regard, the need to further strengthen the results-based frameworks of funds, programmes and agencies of the United Nations development system and for the agencies, funds and programmes to improve their reporting on outputs and nationally owned outcomes;

29. Emphasizes the importance of taking measures to broaden the donor base and increase the number of donor countries and other partners making financial contributions to the United Nations development system in order to reduce the reliance of the system on a limited number of donors;

30. Recognizes the potential positive impact of determining the level of “critical mass” of core funding for United Nations development agencies, and notes, in that regard, that the concept of critical mass may include the level of resources adequate to respond to the needs of the programme countries and to produce the results expected in strategic plans, including administrative, management and programme costs;

31. Invites the governing bodies of the United Nations funds and programmes to initiate further discussion with a view to exploring the most appropriate definition of, and a process towards arriving at, a critical mass of core funding for each fund and programme, according to their individual mandates;

32. Invites the governing bodies of the relevant specialized agencies, within the context of their 2012–2013 budgets, to consider exploring the most appropriate concept of and process for arriving at a critical mass of core funding, according to their individual mandates;

33. Requests the funds and programmes to report on their efforts and conclusions on critical mass in their annual or biennial reports to the Economic and Social Council, beginning in 2011, and in that regard encourages the specialized agencies, where relevant, to report on their efforts and conclusions on critical mass to the Council;

Improving the quality of funding

34. Urges Member States, when legislative and budgetary provisions allow, to make financial contributions to development-related activities of the United Nations system in the form of multi-year commitments in order to improve the predictability of resources;

35. Urges all Member States making non-core contributions to operational activities, as well as the United Nations funds, programmes and specialized agencies, to ensure that these resources are fully aligned with strategic plans and mandates and are in accordance with the priorities of the programme countries within the United Nations Development Assistance Framework;

36. Urges the executive boards of the United Nations funds and programmes and the governing bodies of the specialized agencies to take measures to improve their governance and oversight of programme and project-specific non-core funding by including in their annual reports an assessment of how such funding is aligned with the strategic plans of the respective organizations;

37. Requests the Secretary-General to include information on all existing multi-donor trust funds and thematic trust funds, including information on their mandates, performance and governance structures, in the annual report on financial statistics to the Economic and Social Council, with a view to further improving the participation of Member States in their governance;

38. Requests United Nations agencies administering multi-donor trust funds to report on the administration of those funds to their respective governing bodies on an annual basis in order to ensure better complementarity between funds provided through multi-donor trust funds and other funding sources;

39. Acknowledges the ongoing efforts being undertaken by the United Nations Development Group with a view to avoiding the subsidization of non-core resources by core resources, in that regard requests the United Nations funds and programmes, and urges the specialized agencies, to avoid using core/regular resources to cover costs related to the management of extrabudgetary funds and their programme activities, and urges Member States making non-core contributions to reduce transaction costs and streamline reporting requirements, where possible;

Improving information to monitor funding trends

40. Takes note of the improved reporting on funding for operational activities of the United Nations development system, and requests that further improvements be made in order to more accurately reflect the diversity in non-core funding streams, such as multi-donor trust funds, including funds pooled at the global, regional and country levels;

41. Requests, in this regard, that future reporting on funding for the United Nations development system more clearly distinguish between funding for development and funding for humanitarian activities, and better differentiate self-supporting contributions from other non-core funding flows;

42. Requests the Secretary-General to report on the predictability of funding for the United Nations development system, including the impact of rapid growth in non-core contributions compared to core funding, significant exchange rate fluctuations and the limited use of multi-year pledges, in the annual report to the Economic and Social Council on the results achieved and measures and processes implemented in follow-up to resolution 62/208, to be considered by Member States in the context of the comprehensive policy review of operational activities for development of the United Nations system;

Harmonization of business practices

43. Notes the submission of the information provided by the United Nations System Chief Executives Board for Coordination regarding the progress made in the area of simplification and harmonization of business practices within the United Nations development system;

44. Reiterates that the objective of the simplification and harmonization of business practices within the United Nations development system is to harmonize and simplify rules and procedures wherever this can lead to significant cost savings and/or a reduction in the administrative and procedural burden on the organizations of the United Nations development system and national partners, bearing in mind the special circumstances of programme countries, and to enhance the efficiency, accountability and transparency of the United Nations development system;

45. Encourages the United Nations funds and programmes to identify additional efficiency savings, including at their headquarters, through common strategies and common operations, for example in the fields of human resources management, information technology and administration, while ensuring that such common strategies and operations are consistent with relevant intergovernmentally agreed policies, including those related to the United Nations common system, and to take into account the ongoing reforms on administrative and budgetary matters, and recommends, in that regard, that they submit annual reports on progress to their respective governing bodies and, as appropriate, keep the General Assembly abreast of such progress through their respective processes for reporting to the Economic and Social Council;

46. Reiterates its call upon the United Nations funds, programmes and specialized agencies to ensure, to the extent possible, that savings resulting from reductions in transaction and overhead costs accrue to development programmes in the same countries;

47. Stresses that simplification and harmonization of business practices within the United Nations development system, including in the field of procurement, shall be in compliance with relevant intergovernmental mandates, including those established by the General Assembly;

48. Requests the Secretary-General, in consultation with the United Nations System Chief Executives Board for Coordination, to brief the Economic and Social Council regularly on progress made and challenges encountered in the simplification and harmonization of business practices and to refer any matter requiring an intergovernmental decision to the relevant intergovernmental bodies;

Strengthening the institutional arrangements for support of gender equality and the empowerment of women

Establishment of the Entity

49. Decides to establish, by the present resolution, as a composite entity, to be operational by 1 January 2011, the United Nations Entity for Gender Equality and the Empowerment of Women, to be known as UN-Women, by consolidating and transferring to the Entity the existing mandates and functions of the Office of the Special Adviser on Gender Issues and Advancement of Women and the Division for the Advancement of Women of the Secretariat, as well as those of the United Nations Development Fund for Women and the International Research and Training Institute for the Advancement of Women, to function as a secretariat and also to carry out operational activities at the country level;

50. Also decides to establish an Executive Board as the governing body of the Entity to provide intergovernmental support to and supervision of its operational activities;

General principles

51. Decides that:

(a) The Charter of the United Nations, the Beijing Declaration and Platform for Action, including its twelve critical areas of concern, the outcome of the twenty-third special session of the General Assembly and applicable United Nations instruments, standards and resolutions that support, address and contribute to gender equality and the empowerment and the advancement of women will provide a framework for the work of the Entity;

(b) Based on the principle of universality, the Entity shall provide, through its normative support functions and operational activities, guidance and technical support to all Member States, across all levels of development and in all regions, at their request, on gender equality, the empowerment and rights of women and gender mainstreaming;

(c) The Entity shall operate on the basis of principles agreed to through the process of the comprehensive policy review of its operational activities, in particular by responding to the needs of and priorities determined by Member States, upon their request;

(d) The Entity shall work in consultation with the respective national machineries for women and/or the focal points designated by the Member States;

(e) Data used by the Entity, including information provided by national official sources, must be verifiable, accurate, reliable and disaggregated by age and sex;

52. Also decides that the establishment of the Entity and the conduct of its work should lead to more effective coordination, coherence and gender mainstreaming across the United Nations system;

53. Further decides that the mandate and functions of the Entity shall consist of the consolidated mandates and functions of the Office of the Special Adviser on Gender Issues and Advancement of Women, the Division for the Advancement of Women, the United Nations Development Fund for Women and the International Research and Training Institute for the Advancement of Women, with the additional role of leading, coordinating and promoting the accountability of the United Nations system in its work on gender equality and the empowerment of women, and that any new mandates shall be subject to approval by intergovernmental process;

54. Recognizes that civil society organizations, in particular women's organizations, play a vital role in promoting women's rights, gender equality and the empowerment of women;

55. Requests the head of the Entity to continue the existing practice of effective consultation with civil society organizations, and encourages their meaningful contribution to the work of the Entity;

56. Notes that the Entity will operate as part of the resident coordinator system, within the United Nations country team, leading and coordinating the work of the country team on gender equality and the empowerment of women, under the overall leadership of the resident coordinator;

Governance of the Entity

57. Decides:

(a) That the General Assembly, the Economic and Social Council and the Commission on the Status of Women shall constitute the multi-tiered intergovernmental governance structure for the normative support functions and shall provide normative policy guidance to the Entity;

(b) That the General Assembly, the Economic and Social Council and the Executive Board of the Entity shall constitute the multi-tiered intergovernmental governance structure for the operational activities and shall provide operational policy guidance to the Entity;

58. Emphasizes that support of gender mainstreaming across the United Nations system will be an integral part of the work of the Entity;

59. Decides that the Executive Board shall carry out functions as outlined in annex I to General Assembly resolution 48/162 of 20 December 1993, taking into account the provisions of the present resolution;

60. Also decides that the Executive Board shall consist of forty-one members, as follows:

(a) Ten from the Group of African States;

(b) Ten from the Group of Asian States;

(c) Four from the Group of Eastern European States;

(d) Six from the Group of Latin American and Caribbean States;

(e) Five from the Group of Western European and Other States;

(f) Six from contributing countries;

61. Further decides that the six seats allocated to contributing countries shall be distributed as follows:

(a) Four seats to be allocated to four of the largest providers of voluntary core contributions to the Entity, to be selected by and from among the top ten such providers;

(b) Two seats to be allocated to two developing countries not members of the Development Assistance Committee of the Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development, which provide voluntary core contributions to the Entity, to be selected from among the top ten of such providers by the developing countries not members of the Development Assistance Committee, with due consideration to be given to geographical balance;

62. Decides that the above allocations should be in accordance with the list provided by the Secretary-General of the average annual voluntary contributions of Member States, in the previous three calendar years, to the core budget of the Entity or, for the interim period, to the United Nations Development Fund for Women, for which statistical data are available;

63. Also decides that a Member State can be selected from only one category at any one time;

64. Further decides that the Economic and Social Council shall elect members to the Executive Board for a term of three years, in accordance with established practice, and requests the Council to conduct the first elections not later than 31 December 2010;

65. Decides that the Executive Board shall report annually on its programme and activities to the General Assembly, through the Economic and Social Council at its substantive session;

66. Also decides to include the Executive Board of the Entity in the joint meeting of the Executive Boards of the United Nations Development Programme/United Nations Population Fund, the United Nations Children's Fund and the World Food Programme in order to promote effective coordination and coherence among operational activities on gender mainstreaming and the empowerment of women;

67. Emphasizes the need to establish concrete results-based reporting mechanisms, as well as the need for coherence, consistency and coordination between the normative and operational aspects of the work of the Entity and in that regard requests:

(a) The Commission on the Status of Women and the Executive Board of the Entity to work closely together to provide coherent guidance and direction in their respective areas;

(b) The Economic and Social Council at its substantive session of 2010 to establish appropriate and concrete linkages between the Commission and the Executive Board to ensure consistency between the overall policy guidance set by the Commission and the operational strategies and operational activities approved by the Executive Board;

(c) The head of the Entity to submit to the Commission an annual report on the normative aspects of the Entity's work and on its implementation of the policy guidance provided by the Commission;

(d) The head of the Entity to submit an annual report on operational activities for the consideration of the Executive Board, and to report on those activities to the Economic and Social Council during its operational activities segment;

(e) That the Economic and Social Council in turn submit its report to the General Assembly;

Administration and human resources

68. Decides that the Entity shall provide support to intergovernmental policy and normative processes and programmes of operational activities to support Member States, upon their request;

69. Also decides:

(a) That the Entity shall be headed by an Under-Secretary-General, to be appointed by the Secretary-General, in consultation with Member States, for a term of four years, with the possibility of renewal for one term, in accordance with the relevant provisions of Article 101 of the Charter, the position to be financed from the regular budget;

(b) That the Under-Secretary-General/head of the Entity shall report to the Secretary-General and shall be a full member of the United Nations System Chief Executives Board for Coordination;

70. Encourages the Secretary-General to appoint the Under-Secretary-General/head of the Entity to the Policy Committee, the Senior Management Group and other relevant internal United Nations decision-making mechanisms;

71. Decides that the Entity should be accountable to Member States in accordance with applicable rules and standards;

72. Also decides that the Under-Secretary-General/head of the Entity shall appoint and administer the staff of the Entity, including for its operational activities, in accordance with the Staff Regulations and Rules of the United Nations and that the Secretary-General shall delegate to the Under-Secretary-General/head of the Entity formal authority in personnel matters, while ensuring that the Entity shall be subject to the oversight bodies;

73. Further decides that the composition and selection of staff of the Entity shall be in accordance with the provisions of Article 101 of the Charter, with due regard to geographical representation and gender balance;

74. Requests the Under-Secretary-General/head of the Entity to establish appropriate mechanisms to assist and support the realization of all the strategic objectives and actions agreed upon in the Beijing Declaration and Platform for Action, as well as the national and international commitments stipulated in the outcome of the twenty-third special session of the General Assembly;

Financing

75. Decides that the resources required to service the normative intergovernmental processes shall be funded from the regular budget and approved by the General Assembly; the resources required to service the operational intergovernmental processes and operational activities at all levels shall be funded from voluntary contributions and approved by the Executive Board;

76. Requests the Secretary-General to submit to the General Assembly for its approval during the main part of its sixty-fifth session a report containing a revised proposal for the use of regular budget resources approved for the biennium 2010–2011 for the normative support functions of the new Entity, in accordance with all relevant United Nations rules and procedures, including a detailed organizational chart of the Entity and options for administrative arrangements for its regular budget;

77. Requests the Under-Secretary-General/head of the Entity to submit a report to the Executive Board, including the organizational chart referred to in paragraph 76 above, together with a revised draft strategic plan and proposal for the use of voluntary resources for the support budget for the biennium 2010–2011;

78. Decides that the structure of the Entity as set out in the organizational chart shall reflect the universal coverage of the Entity;

79. Also decides that the operational activities of the Entity shall have financial regulations and rules similar to those of other operational United Nations funds and programmes, and consistent with the Financial Regulations and Rules of the United Nations, and in that regard requests the Under-Secretary-General/head of the Entity to present a proposal for financial regulations, for consideration and adoption by the Executive Board, and to promulgate the financial rules;

80. Stresses the need to ensure adequate funding for the Entity, invites Member States, when legislative and budgetary provisions allow, to provide core, multi-year, predictable, stable and sustainable voluntary contributions to the Entity, and decides that reporting on funding should be transparent and easily accessible to Member States, including through the creation of an online registry that contains such financial information;

Transitional arrangements

81. Decides, with reference to paragraph 49 above, that a transitional period will start on the date of adoption of the present resolution and continue until 31 December 2010;

82. Also decides that all the activities, including training programmes and research, of the United Nations Development Fund for Women, the Office of the Special Adviser on Gender Issues and Advancement of Women, the Division for the Advancement of Women and the International Research and Training Institute for the Advancement of Women shall continue in accordance with the operational arrangements established before the date of adoption of the present resolution until replaced by new arrangements;

83. Further decides to transfer the existing mandates, functions, assets, including facilities and infrastructure, and liabilities, including contractual obligations, of the Office of the Special Adviser on Gender Issues and Advancement of Women, the Division for the Advancement of Women, the United Nations Development Fund for Women and the International Research and Training Institute for the Advancement of Women to the Entity upon the adoption of the present resolution, and requests the Secretary-General to address all staffing issues in accordance with the Staff Regulations and Rules of the United Nations;

84. Decides that the process of consolidation of the institutional and operational arrangements, partnerships and brands of the Office of the Special Adviser on Gender Issues and Advancement of Women, the Division for the Advancement of Women, the United Nations Development Fund for Women and the International Research and Training Institute for the Advancement of Women shall start from the date of adoption of the present resolution and continue under the leadership and authority of the Under-Secretary-General/head of the Entity, once appointed;

85. Requests the Secretary-General to appoint the Under-Secretary-General/head of the Entity by the beginning of the sixty-fifth session of the General Assembly in order to oversee the transitional arrangements of the Entity before its operationalization, and decides that the position of the Under-Secretary-General/head of the Entity shall be funded from existing temporary assistance funds pending the submission of the report on the revised regular budget required to be submitted to the Assembly at its sixty-fifth session;

86. Decides to dissolve the United Nations Development Fund for Women as of the date of adoption of the present resolution;

87. Requests the Economic and Social Council to dissolve the International Research and Training Institute for the Advancement of Women as of the date of adoption of the pertinent resolution;

88. Decides that any expansion of the capacity of the Entity should be orderly, based on a proposal by the Under-Secretary-General/head of the Entity to the Executive Board, building on the field presence and infrastructure of the United Nations Development Fund for Women and the International Research and Training Institute for the Advancement of Women;

Review of implementation

89. Requests the Secretary-General to submit a progress report to the General Assembly at its sixty-sixth and sixty-seventh sessions on the implementation of the part of the present resolution entitled "Strengthening the institutional arrangements for support of gender equality and the empowerment of women";

90. Decides to review the work of the United Nations Entity for Gender Equality and the Empowerment of Women at its sixty-eighth session, and requests the Secretary-General to present to the General Assembly at its sixty-eighth session a comprehensive report in that regard.

On 9 September, by decision 2010/261, the Economic and Social Council decided that the election of the 41 members of the Executive Board for the United Nations Entity for Gender Equality and the Empowerment of Women would be held by November, and to discuss further the staggering of terms, so as to reach agreement on the modalities prior to the elections.

On 20 July, the Council, by resolution 2010/7, dissolved INSTRAW.

Accountability architecture

Responding to General Assembly resolution 63/276 [YUN 2009, p. 1371], the Secretary-General submitted a January report [A/64/640] that outlined the weaknesses of accountability structures in the UN Secretariat and made suggestions for remedial action. Annexed to the report were an overview of the current accountability system in the UN Secretariat, a proposed plan and road map for implementation of the enterprise risk management and internal control framework, and an overview of Secretariat actions to strengthen accountability mechanisms in response to the weaknesses identified by the Independent Inquiry Committee in relation to internal monitoring, inspection and accountability regarding the management of the oil-for-food programme [YUN 1995, p. 475]. The report focused on defining accountability and roles and responsibilities; performance reporting; implementation of recommendations of oversight bodies; personal and institutional accountability; selection and appointment of senior managers; reform of the performance appraisal system; delegation of authority; implementation of the results-based management framework; introducing a results-based management information system; and implementation of enterprise risk management and an internal control framework. It also addressed how the current and proposed accountability mechanism would have addressed the flaws in the management of the oil-for-food programme. The Secretary-General proposed that accountability be defined as the obligation of the Organization and that its staff members be answerable for delivering specific results determined through a clear and transparent assignment of responsibility. That included achieving objectives and results in response to mandates, fair and accurate reporting on performance results, stewardship of funds, and all aspects of performance in accordance with regulations, rules and standards, including a clearly defined system of rewards and sanctions.

To enable more performance-informed decision-making by Member States regarding programme plans and budgets, the Secretary-General proposed supplementing the comprehensive biennial programme performance report with an interim report at the end of the first year of each biennium on progress made by the Secretariat in achieving expected results. He requested Member States to continue supporting implementation of the Umoja (enterprise resource planning) project [YUN 2008, p. 1591], which incorporated the development of interoperable information management tools for supporting results-based budgeting and management, linking resources to objectives and allowing assessment of programme performance relative to resources; the work of UN oversight bodies, which played an important role in promoting a culture of compliance and integrity and in deterring mismanagement; and that of the Management Committee in introducing the findings and recommendations of the oversight bodies into executive management processes, ensuring the timely follow-up and implementation of those recommendations and strengthening the dialogue with the oversight bodies.

The Secretary-General proposed the establishment of a Results Management Unit in the Department of Management to support the implementation of the results-based management methodology throughout the Secretariat; an enterprise risk management and internal control framework in the Secretariat with a view to integrating the framework into major managerial processes; and a dedicated enterprise risk management and control function, the Enterprise Risk Management and Control Section, in the Office of the Under-Secretary-General for Management.

The Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions (ACABQ), in its comments and recommendations on the Secretary-General's proposals [A/64/683 & Corr.1], noted that the report failed to explain why the current accountability components were not fully functional, stopped short of addressing gaps or specifying proposals for improvement, and did not address fully all the requests in Assembly resolution 63/276. ACABQ emphasized that an accountability framework could not in itself create a culture of accountability, which required a change in the mindset of staff. It recognized that while gaps existed in the report, some opportunities for a way forward were presented. Notwithstanding improvements being planned or implemented for some of the existing tools, a strong underlying framework was indispensable to ensure that all the components of an accountability system, as set out in the report, would successfully interact with each other. ACABQ was not in a position to recommend that the Assembly endorse the elements of accountability in the report, as they were not fully developed. Existing and anticipated mechanisms should be implemented and utilized prior to the next overall assessment of accountability in the Secretariat.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 29 March [meeting 81], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth (Administrative and Budgetary) Committee, adopted resolution 64/259 [A/64/596/Add.1] without vote [agenda item 130].

Towards an accountability system in the United Nations Secretariat

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 59/272 of 23 December 2004 and 60/254 of 8 May 2006, section I of its resolution 60/260 of 8 May 2006 and its resolutions 60/283 of 7 July 2006, 61/245 of 22 December 2006 and 63/276 of 7 April 2009,

Recalling also its resolutions 55/231 of 23 December 2000, 56/253 of 24 December 2001, 57/290 B of 18 June 2003 and 59/296 of 22 June 2005 and paragraph 2 of its resolution 60/257 of 8 May 2006,

Reaffirming its commitment to strengthening accountability in the United Nations Secretariat and the accountability of the Secretary-General for the performance of the Secretariat to all Member States,

Stressing that accountability is a central pillar of effective and efficient management that requires attention and strong commitment at the highest level of the Secretariat,

Aware of the significant flaws in terms of internal monitoring, inspection and accountability regarding, for example, the management of the United Nations oil-for-food programme,

Noting that since its sixtieth session, the General Assembly has included in its agenda the item entitled "Follow-up to the recommendations on administrative management and internal oversight of the Independent Inquiry Committee into the United Nations Oil-for-Food Programme",

Noting also that the absence of a comprehensive accountability system at the United Nations could lead to mismanagement, waste and risks in the Organization,

Recognizing and reaffirming the important role of the oversight bodies in the development of an accountability system that is relevant to the United Nations,

Having considered the report of the Secretary-General entitled "Towards an accountability system in the United Nations Secretariat", the related report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions and the report of the Office of Internal Oversight Services on the review of the practice of the Secretariat regarding the sharing of information contained in reports of consultants on management-related issues,

1. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General;
2. Endorses the conclusions and recommendations contained in the report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions, subject to the provisions of the present resolution;
3. Reaffirms its role with regard to the structure of the Secretariat, and stresses that proposals to amend the overall departmental structure, as well as the format of the programme budget and the biennial programme plan, are subject to its review and prior approval;
4. Requests the Joint Inspection Unit to submit to the General Assembly, for consideration at the main part of its sixty-seventh session, a comparative analysis report on various accountability frameworks in the United Nations system;
5. Reaffirms its commitment to strengthening accountability in the United Nations Secretariat and the accountability of the Secretary-General to Member States and the achievement of results, and urges the Secretary-General to further strengthen consultation with the oversight bodies with a view to ensuring accountability in the Secretariat;
6. Stresses the importance of promoting a culture of accountability, results-based management, enterprise risk management and internal controls at all levels in the Secretariat through the continued leadership and commitment of senior managers, and requests the Secretary-General to take appropriate measures to this end, including, inter alia, the training of relevant staff;
7. Also stresses, as one of the essential components of accountability, the importance of compliance with the Charter of the United Nations, its resolutions and the regulations and rules;

A. Definition of accountability and roles and responsibilities

8. Decides that accountability shall be defined as follows:

Accountability is the obligation of the Secretariat and its staff members to be answerable for all decisions made and actions taken by them, and to be responsible for honouring their commitments, without qualification or exception.

Accountability includes achieving objectives and high-quality results in a timely and cost-effective manner, in fully implementing and delivering on all mandates to the Secretariat approved by the United Nations intergovernmental bodies and other subsidiary organs established by them in compliance with all resolutions, regulations, rules and ethical standards; truthful, objective, accurate and timely reporting on performance results; responsible stewardship of funds and resources; all aspects of performance, including a clearly defined system of rewards and sanctions; and with due recognition to the important role of the oversight bodies and in full compliance with accepted recommendations.

9. Requests the Secretary-General to continue to draw on lessons learned, experience and expertise from the United Nations programmes and funds and other United Nations entities when developing the accountability system of the United Nations Secretariat;

B. Performance reporting

10. Recalls paragraph 9 (b) of its resolution 63/276 and section II.B of the report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions, and requests the Secretary-General, in future budget performance reports, to make efforts to provide a greater degree of analysis of data on the utilization of resources and to include subsequent trends over past budget periods in order to make the performance reports a more useful accountability and monitoring tool for Member States;

11. Also recalls paragraph 25 of the report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions, and requests the Secretary-General to identify appropriate methods and tools to portray the efficiency with which the Secretariat undertakes its work;

C. Implementation of the recommendations of oversight bodies

12. Emphasizes the importance of the full and timely implementation of the recommendations of oversight bodies, and stresses, in this regard, the role of the Management Committee for monitoring and ensuring that accepted recommendations are followed up and implemented in a timely manner, and the need for transparency in the work of the Committee;

D. Personal and institutional accountability

13. Emphasizes the importance of establishing and fully implementing real, effective and efficient mechanisms that foster institutional and personal accountability at all levels;

14. Recalls section I, paragraph 4, of its resolution 63/250 of 24 December 2008, and requests the Secretary-General to analyse the impact of his proposed human resources management reform measures on personal accountability;

15. Requests the Secretary-General to propose concrete and comprehensive measures to strengthen personal accountability at all levels within the Secretariat, based on the definition of accountability as outlined in paragraph 8 above; and its link with institutional accountability towards Member States on results achieved and resources used;

16. Also requests the Secretary-General to further improve the managers' evaluation system, and to clearly identify the critical linkages between institutional and personal accountability through the senior managers' compacts, and the performance appraisal system of all staff below the level of Assistant Secretary-General, and to establish proper accountability mechanisms for under-performance at all levels;

17. Further requests the Secretary-General to further develop and take appropriate measures to hold staff accountable for mismanagement and wrongful or improper decisions and to strengthen efforts to increase recovery actions by those convicted of fraud in the Organization;

18. Notes the measures taken by the Secretary-General to improve assessment of each senior manager's performance, and requests the Secretary-General to ensure that the weaknesses identified by the Management Performance Board are fully and appropriately addressed;

E. Selection and appointment of senior managers

19. Recalls the conclusion of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions in paragraph 28 of its report, and in this regard requests the Joint Inspection Unit to submit a report on possible measures to further enhance transparency in the selection and appointment process of senior managers at the main part of its sixty-sixth session, to be considered in conjunction with the report on the implementation of the present resolution referred to in paragraph 33 below;

F. Reform of the performance appraisal system

20. Notes with concern the delay in the implementation of Inspira and its impact on the ability of the Secretary-General to provide a comprehensive reform effort regarding performance management, emphasizes the need for its timely implementation, and further stresses that the value added by such systems is dependent on its effective utilization by staff to achieve the intended results;

G. Delegation of authority

21. Recalls paragraph 36 of the report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions, and requests the Secretary-General to urgently address the continued deficiencies in the current delegation of authority system through the promulgation of well-defined roles and responsibilities of individuals at all levels to whom authority is delegated, the systemic reporting mechanisms on monitoring and exercise of delegated authority and actions to be taken in cases of mismanagement or abuse of authority;

H. Implementation of the results-based management framework

22. Reaffirms paragraphs 7 to 9 of its resolution 55/231;

23. Requests the Secretary-General to take appropriate measures to accelerate the implementation of results-based management, taking into account paragraph 43 of the report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions;

24. Stresses that results-based management will require the Organization to create a sustained focus on results, and in this regard requests the Secretary-General to take concrete measures to achieve a cultural change throughout the Organization;

25. Notes that the effective implementation of results-based management requires the sustained and focused engagement by senior management, and in this regard encourages the Secretary-General to assign the responsibility for the successful implementation of results-based management methodology throughout the Secretariat to a relevant member of his senior management team, and to communicate this assigned responsibility to all stakeholders as a matter of priority;

26. Stresses the need to focus on attaining results within approved mandates, which is ultimately the responsibility of the Secretary-General;

27. Reaffirms its commitment to improving the effectiveness of the operational capacity of the Secretariat by the use of results-based management;

I. Results-based management information system

28. Requests the Secretary-General to include in his report referred to in paragraph 33 below the results of his consultations to be undertaken with other entities that have implemented the enterprise resource planning systems to derive lessons learned regarding the contribution made by such systems to strengthening accountability, and concrete measures to strengthen managerial commitment in this regard for the better utilization of the system;

29. Also requests the Secretary-General to include in his report referred to in paragraph 33 below concrete measures taken to ensure managerial commitment to utilize the full potential of the enterprise resource planning project in all aspects of the performance of the Organization, including strengthening individual and institutional accountability;

J. Enterprise risk management and internal control framework

30. Emphasizes that the risk management should be dynamic, that it is the inherent responsibility of staff at all levels in the Secretariat, and that each department is accountable for the risk assessment in the delivery of its respective mandate;

31. Regrets the absence of an effective and integrated internal control framework, which is a serious gap in the existing accountability system, and requests the Secretary-General to work on enhancing the current capabilities in the Secretariat responsible for risk assessment and mitigation and internal control, on the basis of the recommendations in paragraphs 49 and 50 of the report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions and annex II to the report of the Secretary-General;

K. How the current and proposed accountability mechanisms in the Secretariat would have addressed the flaws in the management of the United Nations oil-for-food programme

32. Requests the Secretary-General, building on lessons learned as outlined in section K of his report, to include in his report referred to in paragraph 33 below concrete measures to prevent potential conflict of interest in the current process governing procurement, and measures aimed at improving recovery actions;

Reporting

33. Requests the Secretary-General to report to the General Assembly at the main part of its sixty-sixth session on the implementation of the present resolution.

Strengthening of UN system

In 2010, the General Assembly continued its consideration of the agenda item on strengthening the United Nations system. It had before it the Secretary-General's progress report [A/64/866-S/2010/386] on peacebuilding in the immediate aftermath of conflict (see p. 53), and his note [A/65/71 & Add.1] transmitting the Joint Inspection Unit report on selection and conditions of service of executive heads in UN system organizations and his comments thereon.

On 24 December, by decision 65/544, the Assembly decided that the item on strengthening the United Nations system would remain for consideration during its resumed sixty-fifth (2011) session.

UN central role in global governance

On 14 September [A/65/PV.1], at the opening of the sixty-fifth session of the General Assembly, its President, in his opening statement, proposed that the session's special theme should be "reaffirming the central role of the United Nations in global governance".

Opening the general debate on 23 September [A/65/PV.11], the Assembly President said that the United Nations had unique legitimacy to play a central role in global governance. The Assembly was a near-universal body and reflected the diversity of the situations and interests at stake. As an operational entity, the United Nations had the expertise and the presence on the ground to play that central role, especially its peacekeeping missions, humanitarian operations and natural-disaster-response activities, as well as all the work carried out far from the media spotlight. There was a danger, however, of it being marginalized as other actors emerged on the international scene. The Organization had been criticized for not being effective or efficient enough. While determining action through a more restricted forum could seem easier and more expeditious, and the economic and financial crisis highlighted the importance of a rapid and coordinated response, there was pressing need to bridge the efforts of different actors. The Assembly President stated that the mechanisms for communication, consultation and cooperation between those entities and Member States had to be improved, and only the United Nations and its Assembly could do so. To comprehensively fulfil its global governance role, the Organization had to be strong, inclusive and open, and establish close connections with States, the private sector, civil society and regional actors. A decisive effort was needed to revitalize the Assembly, reform the Security Council, review the work of the Human Rights Council and the Peacebuilding Commission, and strengthen the economic organizations, enabling them fully to serve the purpose for which they were established. The Assembly President stated that it was up to Member States to make the United Nations a strong instrument that could take centre stage in confronting global challenges, and indicated his intention to convene informal meetings on the topic of inclusive global governance.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 8 December [meeting 60], the General Assembly adopted resolution 65/94 [draft: A/65/L.28 & Add.1, as orally revised] without vote [agenda item 120].

The United Nations in global governance

The General Assembly,

Reaffirming its respect for the purposes and principles of the Charter of the United Nations,

Acknowledging the vital importance of an inclusive, transparent and effective multilateral system in order better to address the urgent global challenges of today, recognizing the universality of the United Nations, and reaffirming its commitment to promote and strengthen the effectiveness and efficiency of the United Nations system,

Reaffirming the role and authority of the General Assembly on global matters of concern to the international community, as set out in the Charter,

Welcoming the proposal of the President of the General Assembly to designate “Reaffirming the central role of the United Nations in global governance” as the theme of the general debate at its sixty-fifth session, and welcoming also his intention to organize in 2011 an informal thematic debate on global governance,

1. Recognizes the need for inclusive, transparent and effective multilateral approaches to managing global challenges, and in this regard reaffirms the central role of the United Nations in ongoing efforts to find common solutions to such challenges;

2. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its sixty-sixth session, under the item entitled “Strengthening of the United Nations system”, a new sub-item entitled “Central role of the United Nations system in global governance”;

3. Requests the Secretary-General, in this regard, to submit to the General Assembly at its sixty-sixth session an analytical report focusing on global economic governance and development, to be prepared in consultation with Member States and relevant organizations of the United Nations system, taking into account such relevant inputs as the informal thematic debate on global governance to be organized by the President of the Assembly, without prejudice to the focus of possible future debates on this issue to be determined by the Assembly.

Intergovernmental machinery

Revitalization of the work of the General Assembly

In response to General Assembly resolution 58/316 [YUN 2004, p. 1374], the Secretary-General in July submitted a report [A/64/854] on the revitalization of the work of the Assembly, which outlined the draft programme of work of the plenary and five of the six Main Committees of the Assembly for its sixty-fifth (2010) session. An addendum to the report [A/64/854/Add.1] contained the status of documentation for that session as at 3 August 2010.

Ad Hoc Working Group report. Pursuant to Assembly resolution 63/309 [YUN 2009, p. 1373], the Ad Hoc Working Group on the Revitalization of the General Assembly submitted a September report [A/64/903] summarizing its activities and presenting recommendations for further progress. The Working Group held seven meetings, conducting its work programme through a general discussion and exchange of views, as well as thematic meetings focused on implementation of Assembly resolutions on revitalization and its working methods; its role and relationship to other principal organs; its role and responsibilities in the selection and appointment of the Secretary-General; and strengthening the institutional memory of the Office of the Assembly President. The Working Group recommended a draft resolution for adoption by the Assembly (see below).

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 13 September [meeting 121], the General Assembly adopted resolution 64/301 [draft: A/64/903] without vote [agenda item 118].

Revitalization of the work of the General Assembly

The General Assembly,

Reaffirming its previous resolutions relating to the revitalization of its work, including resolutions 46/77 of 12 December 1991, 47/233 of 17 August 1993, 48/264 of 29 July 1994, 51/241 of 31 July 1997, 52/163 of 15 December 1997, 55/14 of 3 November 2000, 55/285 of 7 September 2001, 56/509 of 8 July 2002, 57/300 of 20 December 2002, 57/301 of 13 March 2003, 58/126 of 19 December 2003, 58/316 of 1 July 2004, 59/313 of 12 September 2005, 60/286 of 8 September 2006, 61/292 of 2 August 2007, 62/276 of 15 September 2008 and 63/309 of 14 September 2009,

Stressing the importance of implementing resolutions on the revitalization of its work,

Recognizing the role of the General Assembly in addressing issues of peace and security, in accordance with the Charter of the United Nations;

Recognizing also the need to further enhance the role, authority, effectiveness and efficiency of the General Assembly,

Noting the important role and the activities of the Office of the President of the General Assembly,

1. Welcomes the report of the Ad Hoc Working Group on the Revitalization of the General Assembly;

2. Decides to establish, at its sixty-fifth session, an ad hoc working group on the revitalization of the General Assembly, open to all Member States:

(a) To identify further ways to enhance the role, authority, effectiveness and efficiency of the Assembly, inter alia, by building on previous resolutions and evaluating the status of their implementation;

(b) To submit a report thereon to the Assembly at its sixty-fifth session;

3. Also decides that the Ad Hoc Working Group, at the sixty-fifth session, shall undertake a comprehensive review of the inventory contained in the annex to the report of the Ad Hoc Working Group submitted at the sixty-third session, and requests the Secretary-General to submit an update of the provisions of the General Assembly resolutions on revitalization that have been addressed to the Secretariat for implementation that have not yet been implemented, with an indication of the constraints and reasons that are behind any lack of implementation, for further consideration by the Ad Hoc Working Group;

Role and authority of the General Assembly

4. Reaffirms the role and authority of the General Assembly, including on questions relating to international peace and security, as stipulated in Articles 10 to 14 and 35 of the Charter of the United Nations, where appropriate, using the procedures set forth in rules 7 to 10 of the rules of procedure of the Assembly which enable swift and urgent action by the Assembly, bearing in mind that the Security Council has primary responsibility for the maintenance of international peace and security in accordance with Article 24 of the Charter;

5. Welcomes the holding of thematic debates on current issues of critical importance to the international community, and invites the President of the General Assembly to continue with this practice in consultation with Member States;

6. Also welcomes the periodic informal briefings by the Secretary-General to the General Assembly on his priorities, travels and most recent activities, and encourages him to continue with this practice;

7. Stresses the importance of ensuring increased cooperation, coordination and exchange of information among the principal organs, and in this regard welcomes the holding of periodic meetings between the Presidents of the General Assembly, the Security Council and the Economic and Social Council;

8. Welcomes the practice of the President of the General Assembly of informing Member States about the outcome of these informal meetings through letters on a regular basis, and encourages future Presidents to continue with this practice;

9. Also welcomes the improvements that have been made in the quality of the annual reports of the Security Council to the General Assembly, encourages the Council to make further improvements as necessary, and takes note of the holding of informal meetings of the President of the Council with all Member States before the preparation of the report;

10. Requests the Secretary-General to submit proposals in the context of the proposed programme budget for the biennium 2012–2013, to review the budget allocation to the Office of the President of the General Assembly in accordance with existing procedures;

11. Also requests the Secretary-General to endeavour to ensure, within existing resources, that the President of the General Assembly is provided with proper protocol and security services and adequate office space, with a view to enabling the President to carry out his or her functions in a manner commensurate with the dignity and stature of the Office;

12. Welcomes the establishment of the Trust Fund in support of the Office of the President of the General Assembly, and invites Member States to contribute to the Fund;

13. Invites the Presidents of the General Assembly to periodically brief Member States on their recent activities, including official travels;

Selection and appointment of the Secretary-General

14. Reaffirms its commitment to continuing, in the Ad Hoc Working Group at the sixty-fifth session, in accordance with the provisions of Article 97 of the Charter, its consideration of the revitalization of the role of the General Assembly in the selection and appointment of the Secretary-General, and calls for the full implementation of all relevant resolutions, including, 11(I) of 24 January 1946, 51/241, and 60/286, in particular paragraphs 17 to 22 of the annex thereto, which read as follows:

“17. Recalls Article 97 of the Charter, as well as the provisions of General Assembly resolutions 11(I) of 24 January 1946 and 51/241, as relevant to the role of the Assembly in appointing the Secretary-General, upon the recommendation of the Security Council;

“18. Emphasizes, bearing in mind the provisions of Article 97 of the Charter, the need for the process of selection of the Secretary-General to be inclusive of all Member States and made more transparent and that, in the course of the identification and appointment of the best candidate for the post of Secretary-General, due regard should be given to regional rotation and gender equality, and invites the Security Council to regularly update the General Assembly on the steps it has taken in this regard;

“19. Encourages, without prejudice to the role of the principal organs as enshrined in Article 97 of the Charter, the President of the General Assembly to consult with Member States to identify potential candidates endorsed by a Member State and, upon informing all Member States of the results, to forward those results to the Security Council;

“20. Also encourages formal presentation of candidatures for the position of Secretary-General in a manner that allows sufficient time for interaction with Member States, and requests candidates to present their views to all States members of the General Assembly;

“21. Recalls paragraph 61 of its resolution 51/241, in which it is stated that, in order to ensure a smooth and efficient transition, the Secretary-General should be appointed as early as possible, preferably no later than one month before the date on which the term of the incumbent expires;

“22. Emphasizes the importance of candidates for the post of Secretary-General possessing and displaying, inter alia, commitment to the purposes and principles of the Charter of the United Nations, extensive leadership, and administrative and diplomatic experience;”

Strengthening the institutional memory of the Office of the President of the General Assembly

15. Welcomes the submission by the President of the General Assembly to the Ad Hoc Working Group of his views on the strengthening of the institutional memory of the Office of the President of the Assembly, in accordance with paragraph 5 of resolution 63/309;

16. Takes note of the recommendations contained in the annex to the report of the Ad Hoc Working Group;

17. Requests the outgoing Presidents of the General Assembly to brief their successors on the lessons learned and best practices;

Working methods

18. Requests that the General Assembly and its Main Committees, at the sixty-fifth session, in consultation with Member States, make proposals for the further biennialization, triennialization, clustering and elimination of items on the agenda of the Assembly, taking into account the relevant recommendations of the Ad Hoc Working Group, including through the introduction of the sunset clause, with the clear consent of the sponsoring State or States;

19. Takes note of the briefing on documentation provided to the Ad Hoc Working Group, and encourages Member States to make full use of the e-services provided by the Secretariat, taking into account the cost savings and the reduced environmental impact that may accrue from this exercise, in order to improve the quality and distribution of documents;

20. Stresses the importance of further enhancing public and media awareness of the work and decisions of the General Assembly, and requests continued consideration of this issue in the Special Political and Decolonization Committee (Fourth Committee) at the sixty-fifth session under the item entitled "Questions relating to information";

21. Decides that the Ad Hoc Working Group, during the sixty-fifth session of the General Assembly, shall consider options for more time-effective, efficient and secure balloting, reiterating the need to ascertain the credibility, reliability and confidentiality of the balloting process, and requests the Secretariat to submit an update on the latest developments.

On 24 December, by decision 65/544, the Assembly decided that the item on the revitalization of its work would remain for consideration during its resumed sixty-fifth (2011) session.

Review of Security Council membership and related matters

On 13 September, the General Assembly, by decision 64/568, decided to continue intergovernmental negotiations on Security Council reform in informal plenary of the Assembly's sixty-fifth (2010) session, building on the progress achieved during its sixty-fourth (2009) session, as well as the positions of and proposals made by Member States, while noting the initiatives and efforts of the Assembly President and the Working Group Chairperson, with a view to an early comprehensive reform of the Council. The Assembly also decided to convene the Open-ended Working Group on the Question of Equitable Representation on and Increase in the Membership of the Security Council and Other Matters related to the Security Council during its sixty-fifth session, if Member States so decided, and to include in the agenda of that session an item entitled "Question of equitable representation on and increase in the membership of the Security Council and other matters related to the Security Council".

On 24 December, by decision 65/544, the Assembly decided that the agenda item on the equitable representation on and increase in the membership of the Security Council and related matters would remain for consideration at its resumed sixty-fifth (2011) session.

Institutional machinery

General Assembly

The General Assembly met throughout 2010. It resumed and concluded its sixty-fourth session and held the major part of its sixty-fifth session. The sixty-fourth session resumed in plenary meetings on 22 January and closed on 14 September. The sixty-fifth session opened on 14 September and continued until its suspension on 14 December.

The Assembly held a High-level Interactive Dialogue on implementation of the International Decade for Action, "Water for Life", 2005–2015, and the realization of the internationally agreed water-related goals (22 March) (see p. 1002); its fourth High-level Dialogue on Financing for Development (23–24 March) (see p. 954); a special commemorative meeting on the occasion of the International Day of Remembrance of the Victims of Slavery and the Transatlantic Slave Trade (25 March) (see p. 749); a special meeting on the occasion of International Mother Earth Day (April 23) (see p. 1043); a special meeting in commemoration of all victims of the Second World War (6 May); a special high-level meeting on crime prevention and criminal justice (17 June); a High-level Plenary Meeting on the Millennium Development Goals (20–22 September) (see p. 813); a high-level meeting as a contribution to the International Year of Biodiversity (22 September) (see p. 1030); a high-level meeting on revitalizing the work of the Conference on Disarmament and taking forward multilateral disarmament negotiations (24 September) (see p. 508); the Mauritius Strategy +5 Review Meeting (Five-year Review of the Mauritius Strategy for the Further Implementation of the Barbados Programme of Action for the Sustainable Development of Small Island Developing States) (24–25 September) (see p. 850); and a commemorative meeting on the fiftieth anniversary of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples (14 December) (see p. 583). On 6 July, Her Majesty Queen Elizabeth II addressed the General Assembly at its 105th plenary meeting.

Organization of Assembly sessions

Resumed sixty-fourth (2010) session

On 23 February (decision 64/551), the General Assembly decided to hold its fourth High-level Dialogue on Financing for Development on 23 and 24 March, instead of 16 and 17 March, as previously decided [YUN 2009, p. 945].

On 25 March, the Assembly decided to convene on that day a special commemorative meeting on the occasion of the International Day of Remembrance of the Victims of Slavery and the Transatlantic Slave Trade (decision 64/552). On 15 April, it decided to convene on 22 April a special meeting on the occasion of International Mother Earth Day (decision 64/556).

On 13 September, the Assembly, on the proposal of its President, postponed the date of the closure of its sixty-fourth resumed (2010) session from Monday, 13 September, to Tuesday, 14 September (decision 64/502 B).

Sixty-fifth session

On 15 April, by decision 64/555, the General Assembly decided that the general debate of its sixty-fifth session would be held from 23 to 25 and from 27 to 30 September.

By decision 65/501 of 14 September, the Assembly authorized a number of subsidiary bodies to meet in New York during the main part of that session. On 17 September, by decision 65/502, the Assembly adopted a number of provisions concerning the organization of the sixty-fifth session [A/65/250 & Add.1,2].

In other decisions related to that session, also by decision 64/555 of 15 April, the Assembly decided to hold on 24 and 25 September a high-level meeting to assess progress made in addressing the vulnerabilities of small island developing States through the implementation of the Mauritius Strategy for the Further Implementation of the Programme of Action for the Sustainable Development of Small Island Developing States, and a high-level meeting, on 22 September, as a contribution to the International Year of Biodiversity.

On 20 September, by decision 65/504, the Assembly decided, without setting a precedent, to hear statements by five observers at the end of the high-level plenary meeting of its sixty-fifth session on the MDGs, after representatives of Member States had spoken.

Agenda

During the resumed sixty-fourth (2010) session, the General Assembly, by decision 64/503 B, decided to include additional items on the agenda of that session to be considered directly in plenary and to re-open consideration of a number of items and sub-items.

The Assembly decided to defer consideration of, and include in the agenda of its sixty-fifth session, the following items: the situation in the occupied territories of Azerbaijan (decision 64/562); prevention of armed conflict (decision 64/563); follow-up to the recommendations on administrative management and internal oversight of the Independent Inquiry Committee into the United Nations Oil-for-Food programme (decision 64/569); financing of the United Nations Mission in East Timor (decision 64/570); the report of the fifty-seventh session of the United Nations Scientific Committee on the Effects of Atomic Radiation, on the recommendation of the Fourth Committee (decision 64/559); and the Secretary-General's reports on the updated financial position of closed peacekeeping missions as at 30 June 2008 and 30 June 2009, and the reports thereon of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee (decision 64/548 B).

At its sixty-fifth session, on the recommendation of the General Committee [A/65/250 & Add.1,2], the Assembly, by decision 65/503 A, adopted the agenda [A/65/251 & Corr.1] and the allocation of agenda items [A/65/252 & Corr.1] for its sixty-fifth session. The Assembly included in the agenda of that session the item "Question of the Comorian island of Mayotte", on the understanding that there would be no consideration of the item by the Assembly until further notice; an additional item entitled "Follow-up to the high-level meeting held on 24 September 2010: revitalizing the work of the Conference on Disarmament and taking forward multilateral disarmament negotiations" and to consider it directly in plenary meeting. It also decided to consider the sub-item entitled "Cooperation between the United Nations and the African Union" at a later date. The Assembly, on 24 December, decided to retain 83 items for consideration during its resumed sixty-fifth (2011) session (decision 65/544).

On 8 December, the Assembly included in the provisional agenda of its sixty-sixth (2011) session the item entitled "Role of science and technology in the context of international security and disarmament" (decision 65/516), and the item entitled "Missiles" (decision 65/517). On the same date, the Assembly included in the provisional agenda of its sixty-seventh (2012) session the item entitled "Maintenance of international security—good-neighbourliness, stability and development in South-Eastern Europe" (decision 65/515).

Credentials

The Credentials Committee, at its meeting on 18 November [A/65/583 & Rev.1], had before it a memorandum by the Secretary-General indicating that 137 Member States had submitted the formal credentials of their representatives. Information concerning the representatives of 55 other Member States had also been communicated. On 22 December, the Secretary-General submitted the updated version of the credentials of the representative of Côte d'Ivoire. The Committee, noting the 9 December decision of the African Union to recognize the results proclaimed by the Independent Electoral Commission and Alassane Ouattara as President-elect of Côte d'Ivoire, accepted the updated credentials of the representative of that country.

The Committee adopted a resolution accepting the credentials received, and recommended a draft resolution to the Assembly for adoption. On 23 December, the Assembly, by resolution 65/237, approved the Committee's report.

First, Second, Third, Fourth and Sixth Committees

The General Assembly, on 8 December, approved the proposed programme of work and timetable of the First (Disarmament and International Security) Committee for 2011 (decision 65/518). It approved the proposed programme of work and timetable of the Fourth (Special Political and Decolonization) Committee on 10 December (decision 65/522), the Second (Economic and Financial) Committee on 20 December (decision 65/529), and the Third (Social, Humanitarian and Cultural) Committee on 21 December (decision 65/539) for the Assembly's sixty-sixth (2011) session, and noted the provisional programme of work adopted by the Sixth (Legal) Committee for that session (decision 65/511).

With regard to improving the working methods of the Second Committee, the General Assembly, on 20 December, decided, among other things, to explore possibilities for rationalizing debates on individual agenda items; and to continue efforts to improve its working methods, including the rationalization of its agenda, as requested in resolutions 60/286 [YUN 2006, p. 1586] and 64/301 (see p. 1407), within the framework of the existing item entitled "Revitalization of the work of the General Assembly" (decision 65/530).

Security Council

The Security Council held 210 formal meetings, adopted 59 resolutions and issued 30 presidential statements. It considered 46 questions (see APPENDIX IV). The President made 54 statements to the press on behalf of Council members. Monthly assessments of the Council's work in 2010 were issued by the successive Council Presidents [S/2010/107, S/2010/286, S/2010/399, S/2010/275, S/2010/396, S/2010/438, S/2010/439, S/2010/501, S/2010/546, S/2010/668, S/2010/691, S/2011/538]. The Council held an open debate on its working methods on 22 April [S/PV.6300]. In a 2 September note [A/65/300], the Secretary-General, in accordance with Article 12, paragraph 2 of the UN Charter and with the consent of the Council, notified the General Assembly of 83 matters relative to the maintenance of peace and security that were being dealt with by the Council since his previous annual notification [YUN 2009, p. 1379]. Items with which the Council had ceased to deal had been deleted and were recorded in a summary statement [S/2010/10/Add.9]. The Assembly took note of the Secretary-General's notification on 11 November (decision 65/509).

On 12 November, the Assembly took note of the Council's report for the period from 1 August 2009 to 31 July 2010 [A/65/2 & Corr.1] (decision 65/510). On 24 December, the Assembly decided that the item on the Council's report would remain for consideration during its resumed sixty-fifth (2011) session (decision 65/544).

Economic and Social Council

The Economic and Social Council held its organizational session for 2010 on 19 January and 9 and 12 February; a resumed organizational session on 28 April and 21 May; its special high-level meeting with the Bretton Woods institutions (the World Bank Group and the International Monetary Fund), the World Trade Organization (WTO) and the United Nations Conference on Trade and Development (UNCTAD) on 18 and 19 March; its substantive session from 28 June to 23 July; and its resumed substantive session on 9 September, 25 October, 10 November and 14 and 15 December, all in New York. The Council's work for 2010 was covered in its report to the General Assembly [A/65/3/Rev.1].

On 19 January, the Council elected its Bureau (a President and four Vice-Presidents) for 2010 (see APPENDIX III) and adopted the agenda of its organizational session [E/2010/2 & Add.1 & Corr.1].

On 9 February, the Council approved the provisional agenda and documentation of its 2010 substantive session (decision 2010/203), and decided on the working arrangements for that session (decision 2010/205). On 28 June, the Council adopted the agenda of its 2010 substantive session [E/2010/100], approved the programme of work and list of documents of that session [E/2010/L.5 & E/2010/L.6], and approved the requests for hearings from non-governmental organizations (NGOs) [E/2010/97] (decision 2010/210).

The General Assembly, by decision 65/544 of 24 December, decided that the report of the Economic and Social Council would remain for consideration during its resumed sixty-fifth (2011) session.

Sessions and segments

During 2010, the Economic and Social Council adopted 38 resolutions and 65 decisions [E/2010/99]. On 9 February, the Council decided that the operational activities segment of its substantive session should be devoted to the progress on and implementation of General Assembly resolutions 62/208 [YUN 2007, p. 877], 63/232 [YUN 2008, p. 962] and 64/220 [YUN 2009, p. 852] and Economic and Social Council resolution 2009/1 [ibid., p. 847] concerning operational activities for development of the UN system (decision 2010/206), and that the high-level meeting with the Bretton Woods institutions, WTO and UNCTAD would be held in New York on 18 and 19 March (decision 2010/202).

On 28 April, by decision 2010/208, the Council decided that the theme for the humanitarian affairs segment of its 2010 substantive session would be “Strengthening of the coordination of humanitarian assistance”; and that it would convene two panels on humanitarian assistance operations in highly hazardous or insecure and unsafe environments; and strengthening preparedness for humanitarian emergencies and the coordinated provision of humanitarian assistance, in particular addressing the humanitarian needs of the affected populations and the factors that increase susceptibility to humanitarian emergencies. On the same date, it decided that the theme for the item on regional cooperation of its substantive session would be “Gender equality and empowerment of women in the implementation of the Millennium Development Goals” (decision 2010/207). The Council also decided that the event to discuss transition from relief to development would be held on 13 July under the title “From relief to recovery, lessons learned from the experience of Haiti”; consist of one panel; and have no negotiated outcome (decision 2010/209).

On 10 November, the Council decided that the theme for the thematic discussion of the high-level segment of its 2011 substantive session would be “Current global and national trends and challenges and their impact on education” (decision 2010/262).

Work programme

On 9 February, the Economic and Social Council took note of the questions for inclusion in its programme of work for 2011 [E/2010/1], and the list of documents for each agenda item (decision 2010/204).

Coordination, monitoring and cooperation

Institutional mechanisms

CEB activities

In its annual overview report for 2010–2011 [E/2011/104], the United Nations System Chief Executives Board for Coordination (CEB) highlighted its activities to enhance system-wide coordination, particularly efforts to improve coherence and coordination in achieving the MDGs and internationally agreed development goals, and to further cooperation in advancing accountability and transparency in CEB activities.

During the reporting period, the Secretary-General and CEB members welcomed the outcome of the High-level Plenary Meeting on the MDGs (see p. 813). CEB had taken measures, through an integration implementation framework and through the MDGs acceleration framework, to enhance accountability and support country efforts in meeting the MDG targets. It also issued a statement of support to the fourth United Nations Conference on the Least Developed Countries (see p. 846) and indicated its commitment to an effective system-wide response to contribute to the full implementation, monitoring and follow-up of the outcome of the Conference at the national, regional and global levels. In response to a number of issues before it, such as meeting the challenge of climate change, preparing for the 2012 United Nations Conference on Sustainable Development and achieving gender equality and the empowerment of women, CEB sought to strengthen integrated efforts among its three pillars—the High-level Committee on Management, the United Nations Development Group and the High-level Committee on Programmes. With regard to UN development system activities, the report provided an update on the roll-out of the United Nations Development Assistance Frameworks in response to Assembly resolution 62/208 [YUN 2007, p. 877] and development of common country programme documents; the implementation of the management and accountability system; and the provision of technical assistance to the implementation of post-disaster and post-conflict needs assessments. Other CEB activities included giving paramount importance to the safety and security of UN personnel; supporting harmonized business practices in information and communications technology, procurement, human resources and financial management; strengthening support for the implementation of the triennial comprehensive policy review of operational activities for development of the UN system; and focusing system efforts towards initiatives for developing countries. CEB also welcomed UN-Women (see p. 1178) as its newest member.

CEB held two regular sessions in 2010: the first in Vienna (9 April) [CEB/2010/1] and the second in New York (5 November) [CEB/2010/2]. Its principal subsidiary bodies met as follows: the High-level Committee on Management, nineteenth (Turin, Italy, 22–23 February [CEB/2010/3] and twentieth (Washington, D.C., 27–28 September) [CEB/2010/5] sessions; and the High-level Committee on Programmes, nineteenth (Geneva, 3–4 March) [CEB/2010/4] and twentieth (Geneva, 30 September–1 October) [CEB/2010/6] sessions.

CEB report

CPC consideration. The Committee for Programme and Coordination (CPC) [A/65/16] considered the CEB annual overview report for 2009/10 [YUN 2009, p. 1380].

CPC recommended that the General Assembly bring to the Secretary-General's attention the need for CEB to continue enhancing system-wide coordination; and request that, in developing joint crisis initiatives, he should ensure that they were in line with intergovernmental mandates. The Secretary-General encouraged the Board to focus its initiatives on developing countries; ensure that the work of the High-level Advisory Group on Climate Change Financing and the High-level Panel under the Copenhagen Accord did not prejudice the negotiations on the sixteenth Conference of the Parties to the United Nations Framework Convention on Climate Change (see p. 1019); foster dialogue between CEB and Member States; publicize all inter-agency decisions and enhance the quantity and quality of information on the CEB website, in order to improve the Board's transparency and accountability to Member States; and take into account the recommendations of the Joint Inspection Unit (JIU) on the comprehensive review of the implementation of the management and accountability system to take place in 2010. CPC also stressed that the issue of enhanced capacity of resident coordinators in crisis and post-crisis countries had not been considered by the relevant intergovernmental bodies. It recommended that the Secretary-General, in developing measures relating to system-wide coherence and the concept of "One United Nations", should ensure that they were in line with intergovernmental mandates. The Secretary-General should take into consideration the ongoing intergovernmental negotiations relating to system-wide coherence when adopting decisions regarding the harmonization of business practices. CPC reiterated that any criteria and methodology for the comprehensive evaluation of the eight "Delivering as one" pilot projects should first be approved by the Assembly and that UN support to those projects should not prejudice the outcome of the Assembly's deliberations on system-wide coherence. It recommended that the Assembly bring to the Secretary-General's attention the need to better address the issue of increasing the participation of developing countries and countries with economies in transition in the Organization's procurement process. CPC encouraged CEB to strengthen cooperation with the International Civil Service Commission (ICSC) and JIU through the more frequent participation of those bodies in the meetings of the High-level Committees on Management and on Programmes and the United Nations Development Group.

The Economic and Social Council took note of the report on 16 July (decision 2010/211).

Programme coordination

The Committee for Programme and Coordination held its organizational meeting (29 April) and its fiftieth session (7 June–2 July) in New York [A/65/16].

CPC considered the programme performance of the United Nations for the 2008–2009 biennium (see p. 1447); the proposed strategic framework for the period 2012–2013 (see p. 1446); the triennial review of the implementation of recommendations made by the Committee at its forty-seventh session on the in-depth evaluation of political affairs (see p. 1447); coordination questions, including the CEB annual report for 2009/2010 (see above); the New Partnership for Africa's Development (see p. 908); and reports of the JIU.

The Economic and Social Council took note of the CPC report on its fiftieth session on 16 July (decision 2010/211).

Other matters

Follow-up to international conferences

In response to Economic and Social Council resolution 2009/29 [YUN 2009, p. 1382], the Secretary-General, in June [A/65/84-E/2010/90], updated his previous report [ibid.] on the Council's role in the integrated and coordinated implementation of the outcomes of and follow-up to major UN conferences and summits. The report illustrated developments in the integrated follow-up to conferences, including preparations for the Assembly's High-level Plenary Meeting on the MDGs (see p. 813) and follow-up at the country and intergovernmental levels. It also reviewed civil society and private sector participation in UN conferences and summits; efforts to streamline the Council's programme of work at its substantive session; and the scope and periodicity of future reporting of the Secretary-General.

The Secretary-General recommended that Member States designate the Council as the intergovernmental mechanism to review the implementation of the outcome of the 2010 High-level Plenary Meeting on the MDGs (see p. 814), particularly through the annual ministerial review and the Development Cooperation Forum, as well as assess the value of holding that Forum annually rather than biennially; decide that, in preparation for the annual ministerial review, meetings should be convened in all five regions to highlight issues of particular concern to them and to strengthen the link between country-level operations, regional activities and global-level discussions; and promote the Economic and Social Council's informal Special Event on Philanthropy and the Global Public Health Agenda to strengthen dialogue and partnership with the philanthropic and private communities for accelerating progress in achieving the MDGs.

The question of integrated conference follow-up should be included in the Secretary-General's report prepared for the annual ministerial review, or considered every five years to ensure that the Secretary-General's comprehensive report on the Council's role in integrated conference follow-up coincided with the five-year review cycle of the MDGs. The Council should also review the scope and periodicity of the report in connection with the review by the Assembly of resolution 61/16 [YUN 2006, p. 1589] on the strengthening of the Council. The Council's agenda and programme of work for the substantive session should be examined to avoid duplication and overlap between its coordination and general segments when reviewing the implementation of resolution 61/16 at the Assembly's sixty-fifth (2010) session.

On 23 July, by decision 2010/252, the Council took note of the report and decided that the scope and periodicity of future reports on the subject should be analysed in connection with the Assembly's review of the implementation of resolution 61/16.

On 24 December, by decision 65/544, the Assembly decided that the agenda item on the integrated and coordinated implementation of and follow-up to the outcomes of the major UN conferences and summits in the economic, social and related fields would remain for consideration during its resumed sixty-fifth (2011) session.

UN and other organizations

Cooperation with organizations

In response to General Assembly resolution 58/316 [YUN 2004, p. 1374], the Secretary-General submitted a September consolidated report [A/65/382-S/2010/490] on cooperation between the United Nations and regional and other organizations, including the African Union (see p. 111); the Asian-African Legal Consultative Organization; the Association of Southeast Asian Nations (see p. 982); the Black Sea Economic Cooperation Organization (see p. 986); the Caribbean Community (see p. 335); the Collective Security Treaty Organization (see p. 432); the Community of Portuguese-speaking Countries (see below); the Council of Europe (see p. 433); the Economic Community of Central African States (see p. 974); the Economic Cooperation Organization (see p. 979); the Eurasian Economic Community (see p. 985); the International Organization of la Francophonie; national parliaments and the Inter-Parliamentary Union (see p. 1417); the Latin American Economic System (see p. 993); the League of Arab States (see p. 1415); the Organization for the Prohibition of Chemical Weapons (see p. 553); the Organization for Security and Cooperation in Europe (see p. 436); the Organization of American States; the Organization of the Islamic Conference (see p. 1419); the Pacific Islands Forum (see p. 979); the Preparatory Commission for the Comprehensive Nuclear-Test-Ban Treaty Organization (see p. 529); the Shanghai Cooperation Organization (see p. 1421); and the Southern African Development Community (see p. 111).

On 24 December, by decision 65/544, the Assembly decided that the agenda item on cooperation between the United Nations and regional and other organizations would remain for consideration during its resumed sixty-fifth (2011) session.

Community of Portuguese-speaking countries

In his consolidated report on cooperation between the United Nations, regional and other organizations [A/65/382-S/2010/490], the Secretary-General reviewed cooperation activities between the United Nations and the Community of Portuguese-speaking countries, which was a member of the Guinea-Bissau Configuration of the United Nations Peacebuilding Commission (see p. 230). The Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations had increased its assistance to the Community through cooperation agreements, particularly in the field of land tenure and land management. The United Nations Institute for Training and Research and the Community signed a memorandum of understanding in 2009 on capacity development actions regarding human rights, environmental projects, and programmes to strengthen institutional capacity to reinforce public administration in Portuguese-speaking countries. In 2010, the Community and the Joint United Nations Programme on HIV/AIDS (UNAIDS) formalized their cooperation in response to AIDS in countries of the Community through a memorandum of understanding. Each year, the International Day of the Portuguese Language was celebrated at the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization headquarters.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 16 December [meeting 68], the General Assembly adopted resolution 65/139 [draft: A/65/L.23/Rev.2 & Add.1] without vote [agenda item 122 (g)].

Cooperation between the United Nations and the Community of Portuguese-speaking Countries

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 54/10 of 26 October 1999, by which it granted observer status to the Community of Portuguese-speaking Countries and considered it mutually advantageous to provide for cooperation between the United Nations and the Community, as well as its resolutions 59/21 of 8 November 2004, 61/223 of 20 December 2006 and 63/143 of 11 December 2008,

Recalling also the Articles of the Charter of the United Nations, in particular of Chapter VIII, that encourage activities through regional cooperation for the promotion of the purposes and principles of the United Nations, and Security Council resolution 1809(2008) of 16 April 2008 on peace and security in Africa,

Considering that the activities of the Community of Portuguese-speaking Countries complement and support the work of the United Nations,

Considering also the relevance of the Portuguese language in international affairs, unifying 240 million people in eight countries and four continents, and noting the political commitment of the Community of Portuguese-speaking Countries to promote the Portuguese language in international and regional organizations, including the United Nations and its specialized agencies, funds and programmes,

Welcoming the celebration by the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization, for the fifth consecutive year, of Portuguese Language Day, on 12 May 2010,

1. Notes with appreciation the outcome of the eighth Conference of Heads of State and Government of the Community of Portuguese-speaking Countries, held in Luanda on 23 July 2010, under the theme “Solidarity in the diversity of the lusophone space”, which emphasizes its cultural diversity and socio-economic development, the importance of solidarity in the political and diplomatic arenas, aid to development and the promotion and dissemination of the Portuguese language, which is a unifying factor among the eight States members of the Community and their 240 million inhabitants whose official language is Portuguese;

2. Stresses the importance of reinforcing synergies between the Community of Portuguese-speaking Countries and United Nations specialized agencies and other entities and programmes and regional and subregional organizations that have a direct impact on Portuguese-speaking countries;

3. Expresses satisfaction with the strengthening of cooperation between the Community of Portuguese-speaking Countries and United Nations specialized agencies and other entities and programmes, in particular the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights, the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization, the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations, the International Fund for Agricultural Development, the International Labour Organization, the World Intellectual Property Organization, the World Health Organization and the Joint United Nations Programme on HIV/AIDS;

4. Welcomes the signature, on 30 July 2009, of a co-operation agreement between the Executive Secretariat of the Community of Portuguese-speaking Countries and the United Nations Institute for Training and Research to jointly develop and implement capacity-building and training projects in the fields of human rights, the environment, public administration and leadership training for young people;

5. Also welcomes the signature of two memorandums of understanding related to the health sector between the Community of Portuguese-speaking Countries and the United Nations system, namely the World Health Organization, on 18 January 2010, to provide technical support for the implementation of the Community’s Strategic Health Cooperation Plan, and the Joint United Nations Programme on HIV/AIDS, on 17 March 2010, which outlines the terms and conditions for cooperation between the two organizations with the aim of ensuring universal access to HIV prevention, treatment and care, in accordance with the objectives of the Community’s Strategic Health Cooperation Plan 2009–2012 and the Joint United Nations Programme on HIV/AIDS Outcome Framework 2009–2011;

6. Notes with appreciation the signature of the memorandum of understanding between the Community of Portuguese-speaking Countries and the Alliance of Civilizations, on 6 April 2009 in Istanbul, Turkey, whereby the Community is to promote the objectives and activities of the Alliance;

7. Recognizes the importance of the decision of the Community of Portuguese-speaking Countries, taken in Luanda in May 2009, to create centres of excellence for the training of trainers in the area of peacekeeping operations, with a view to continuing and, where possible, further enhancing the contributions of States members of the Community to United Nations peacekeeping operations;

8. Notes with appreciation the approval of the Community of Portuguese-speaking Countries’ strategic workplan for the oceans, in March 2010, which will allow for a better interaction on sea matters with entities of the United Nations system, namely the Intergovernmental Oceanographic Commission of the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization;

9. Acknowledges the relevance of the inaugural meeting of the Parliamentary Assembly of the Community of Portuguese-speaking Countries, held in Sao Tome on 27 and 28 April 2009, and of the second meeting, held in Lisbon from 8 to 10 March 2010;

10. Welcomes the efforts made by the Community of Portuguese-speaking Countries and the international community to consolidate political stability in Guinea-Bissau, and recognizes the positive role played by the Peacebuilding Commission in this regard;

11. Requests the Secretary-General to submit to the General Assembly at its sixty-seventh session a report on the implementation of the present resolution;

12. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its sixty-seventh session the sub-item entitled “Cooperation between the United Nations and the Community of Portuguese-speaking Countries”.

League of Arab States

In his consolidated report on cooperation between the United Nations, regional and other organizations [A/65/382-S/2010/490], the Secretary-General reviewed cooperation activities between the United Nations and the League of Arab States (LAS). Consultations with the LAS Secretary-General focused on conflict prevention, peacekeeping, peacebuilding and the fight against terrorism. LAS impressed upon parties to the Comprehensive Peace Agreement in the Sudan [YUN 2005, p. 301] the need to expedite preparations for the forthcoming referendums, and hosted several meetings of the UN-chaired International Contact

Group on Somalia. The United Nations and LAS assisted Lebanon to affirm its sovereignty, territorial integrity and political independence, and the League's engagement on Iraq focused on the electoral process and promotion of political dialogue and national reconciliation. The Economic and Social Commission for Western Asia and LAS prepared a convention on multimodal transport and drafted a joint regional report on the attainment of the MDGs in the Arab region. The United Nations International Strategy for Disaster Reduction provided technical support, guidance and policy advice to LAS on establishing the Regional Centre for Disaster Risk Reduction–Training and Research. Collaboration between the United Nations Development Programme (UNDP) and LAS included sponsorship of editions of the Arab Human Development Report and support for the establishment of a “crisis centre” within LAS to coordinate crisis prevention and response measures. LAS, the Counter-Terrorism Implementation Task Force and the Executive Directorate of the Counter-Terrorism Committee worked together on initiatives to implement the United Nations Global Counter-Terrorism Strategy.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 13 December [meeting 64], the General Assembly adopted resolution 65/126 [draft: A/65/L.33] without vote [agenda item 122 (o)].

Cooperation between the United Nations and the League of Arab States

The General Assembly,

Recalling its previous resolutions on cooperation between the United Nations and the League of Arab States,

Having considered the report of the Secretary-General on cooperation between the United Nations and regional and other organizations,

Recalling article 3 of the Pact of the League of Arab States, which entrusts the Council of the League with the function of determining the means whereby the League will collaborate with the international organizations which may be created in the future to guarantee peace and security and organize economic and social relations,

Noting the desire of both organizations to consolidate, develop and enhance further the ties existing between them in the political, economic, social, humanitarian, cultural, technical and administrative fields, and to build the capacities of persons working in those fields,

Taking into consideration the report of the Secretary-General entitled “An Agenda for Peace” and, in particular, section VII concerning cooperation with regional arrangements and organizations, and the “Supplement to an Agenda for Peace”,

Convinced of the need for more efficient and coordinated utilization of available economic and financial resources in order to promote the common objectives of the two organizations,

Recognizing the need for the further strengthening of cooperation between the United Nations system and the League of Arab States and its specialized organizations for the realization of the common goals and objectives of the two organizations,

1. Takes note with satisfaction of the report of the Secretary-General;

2. Commends the continued efforts of the League of Arab States to promote multilateral cooperation among Arab States, and requests the United Nations system to continue to lend its support;

3. Expresses its appreciation to the Secretary-General for the follow-up action taken by him to implement the proposals adopted at the meetings between representatives of the Secretariat of the United Nations and other organizations of the United Nations system and the General Secretariat of the League of Arab States and its specialized organizations, including the general meeting on cooperation that was held in 2008 and the sectoral meeting in 2009 on the theme of climate change;

4. Requests the Secretariat of the United Nations and the General Secretariat of the League of Arab States, within their respective fields of competence, to intensify further their cooperation for the realization of the purposes and principles embodied in the Charter of the United Nations, the strengthening of international peace and security, economic and social development, disarmament, decolonization, self-determination and the eradication of all forms of racism and racial discrimination;

5. Requests the Secretary-General to continue his efforts to strengthen cooperation and coordination between the United Nations and other organizations and agencies of the United Nations system and the League of Arab States and its specialized organizations in order to enhance their capacity to serve the mutual interests and objectives of the two organizations in the political, economic, social, humanitarian, cultural, administrative and technical fields;

6. Calls upon the specialized agencies and other organizations and programmes of the United Nations system:

(a) To continue to cooperate with the Secretary-General and among themselves, as well as with the League of Arab States and its specialized organizations, in the follow-up of multilateral proposals aimed at strengthening and expanding cooperation in all fields between the United Nations system and the League of Arab States and its specialized organizations;

(b) To strengthen the capacity of the League of Arab States and of its institutions and specialized organizations to benefit from globalization and information technology and meet development challenges;

(c) To intensify cooperation and coordination with the specialized organizations of the League of Arab States in the organization of seminars and training courses and in the preparation of studies;

(d) To maintain and increase contacts and improve the mechanism of consultation with the counterpart programmes, organizations and agencies concerned regarding projects and programmes in order to facilitate their implementation;

(e) To participate whenever possible with organizations and institutions of the League of Arab States in the execution and implementation of development projects in the Arab region;

(f) To inform the Secretary-General of the progress made in their cooperation with the League of Arab States and its specialized organizations and, in particular, of the follow-up action taken on the multilateral and bilateral proposals adopted at the previous meetings between the two organizations;

7. Also calls upon the specialized agencies and other organizations and programmes of the United Nations system to increase their cooperation with the League of Arab States and its specialized organizations in the priority sectors of finance and banking, promotion of the role of the private sector, development of the agricultural sector, food security, housing, new and renewable energy, climate change, industrial development, trade, finance and investment, transport and communications, communications and information technology, statistical data and databases, achievement of the Millennium Development Goals by 2015, education and scientific research, health services, curbing unemployment, migration, youth, women, nuclear energy and civil society;

8. Requests the Secretary-General of the United Nations, in cooperation with the Secretary-General of the League of Arab States, to encourage periodic consultation between representatives of the Secretariat of the United Nations and of the General Secretariat of the League of Arab States in order to review and strengthen coordination mechanisms with a view to accelerating implementation of, and follow-up action on, the multilateral projects, proposals and recommendations adopted at the meetings between the two organizations;

9. Recommends that the United Nations and all organizations of the United Nations system make the greatest possible use of Arab institutions and technical expertise in projects undertaken in the Arab region;

10. Reaffirms that, in order to enhance cooperation and for the purpose of the review and appraisal of progress, a general meeting between representatives of the United Nations system and the League of Arab States should be held once every two years and that joint inter-agency sectoral meetings should also be convened on a biennial basis to address priority areas of major importance to the development of Arab States, on the basis of agreement between the United Nations system and the League of Arab States and its specialized organizations;

11. Also reaffirms the importance of holding the sectoral meeting between the United Nations and the League of Arab States and its specialized organizations during 2011 and also of holding the general meeting on cooperation between representatives of the secretariats of the organizations of the United Nations system and the General Secretariat of the League of Arab States and its specialized organizations during 2012;

12. Requests the Secretary-General to submit to the General Assembly at its sixty-seventh session a report on the implementation of the present resolution;

13. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its sixty-seventh session the sub-item entitled "Cooperation between the United Nations and the League of Arab States".

National parliaments and the Inter-Parliamentary Union

In his consolidated report on cooperation between the United Nations, regional and other organizations [A/65/382-S/2010/490], the Secretary-General reported on cooperation activities between the United Nations and national parliaments and the Inter-Parliamentary Union (IPU). The Third World Conference of Speakers of Parliament (Geneva, 21 July) adopted a Declaration on Securing Global Democratic Accountability for the Common Good, which reaffirmed the commitment of national parliaments and IPU to support the work of the United Nations and continue efforts to fill a "democracy gap" in international relations. At the time of the Speakers' conference, IPU released a global survey on how national parliaments worked with the United Nations. It showed that while parliamentary engagement with the United Nations had grown, the potential for interaction remained largely untapped, particularly at the country level. The IPU Committee on United Nations Affairs continued its work during the second IPU assemblies in 2008 and 2009. The Committee's Advisory Group closely followed the "One United Nations" reform process and undertook field missions to pilot countries to help facilitate parliamentary involvement in national development strategies. In 2010, IPU and UNDP signed a new memorandum of understanding expanding the scope of joint activities, and two annual Joint IPU-UN Parliamentary Hearings were held in 2008 and 2009. The report also reviewed cooperation between the UN and IPU with regard to major UN events, peace and security, economic, social and environmental development, democracy and human rights, and gender issues.

Communication. On 10 August [A/65/289], Namibia, on behalf of the IPU Presidency, transmitted the following texts adopted at the third World Conference of Speakers of Parliament: the Declaration adopted by the Conference; the report on how parliamentarians organized their work with the United Nations; the report on strengthening IPU and its relationship with the United Nations; and the report on building global standards for democratic parliaments.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 13 December [meeting 64], the General Assembly adopted resolution 65/123 [draft: A/65/L.11 & Add.1] without vote [agenda item 122 (m)].

Cooperation between the United Nations, national parliaments and the Inter-Parliamentary Union

The General Assembly,

Having considered the report of the Secretary-General of 20 September 2010, which attests to the broad and substantive cooperation between the United Nations and the Inter-Parliamentary Union over the past two years,

Taking note of the resolutions adopted by the Inter-Parliamentary Union and circulated in the General Assembly and the many activities undertaken by the organization in support of the United Nations,

Taking note also of the outcome of the Third World Conference of Speakers of Parliament, including the Declaration on Securing Global Democratic Accountability for the Common Good, which reaffirms the commitment of national parliaments and the Inter-Parliamentary Union to support the work of the United Nations and continue efforts to bridge the democracy gap in international relations,

Taking note further of the findings and recommendations of the report of the Inter-Parliamentary Union on how parliaments organize their work with the United Nations,

Welcoming the annual parliamentary hearings at the United Nations as joint United Nations-Inter-Parliamentary Union events during the sessions of the General Assembly, as well as other specialized parliamentary meetings organized by the Inter-Parliamentary Union in cooperation with the United Nations in the context of major United Nations conferences and events,

Taking into consideration the Cooperation Agreement between the United Nations and the Inter-Parliamentary Union of 1996, which laid the foundation for cooperation between the two organizations,

Recalling the United Nations Millennium Declaration, as well as the 2005 World Summit Outcome, in which Heads of State and Government resolved to strengthen further cooperation between the United Nations and national parliaments through their world organization, the Inter-Parliamentary Union, in all fields of the work of the United Nations, including the effective implementation of United Nations reform,

Recalling also its resolution 57/32 of 19 November 2002, in which the Inter-Parliamentary Union was invited to participate in the work of the General Assembly in the capacity of observer, as well as resolutions 57/47 of 21 November 2002, 59/19 of 8 November 2004, 61/6 of 20 October 2006 and 63/24 of 18 November 2008,

Welcoming the close cooperation between the Inter-Parliamentary Union and the Peacebuilding Commission in fostering political dialogue and building national capacities for good governance,

Welcoming also the contribution of the Inter-Parliamentary Union in shaping the agenda and work of the new Development Cooperation Forum held by the Economic and Social Council,

Recognizing the importance of the provision of continued parliamentary support to the work of the Human Rights Council,

Recognizing also the work of the Inter-Parliamentary Union in the areas of gender equality, the empowerment of women and combating violence against women, and the close and systematic cooperation between the Inter-Parliamentary Union and the relevant United Nations bodies, including the Commission on the Status of Women and the Committee on the Elimination of Discrimination against Women,

Acknowledging the role and responsibility of national parliaments in regard to national plans and strategies, as well as in ensuring greater transparency and accountability,

1. Welcomes the efforts made by the Inter-Parliamentary Union to provide for a greater parliamentary contribution and enhanced support to the United Nations;

2. Encourages the United Nations and the Inter-Parliamentary Union to continue to cooperate closely in various fields, in particular peace and security, economic and social development, international law, human rights and democracy and gender issues, bearing in mind the significant benefits of cooperation between the two organizations, to which the report of the Secretary-General attests;

3. Encourages the Inter-Parliamentary Union to strengthen further its contribution to the work of the General Assembly, including its revitalization, and in relation to the process of United Nations reform and system-wide coherence;

4. Invites the Peacebuilding Commission to continue to work closely with the Inter-Parliamentary Union in engaging national parliaments in the countries under consideration by the Commission in efforts to promote democratic governance, national dialogue and reconciliation;

5. Encourages the Inter-Parliamentary Union to continue to work closely with the Development Cooperation Forum and bring a robust parliamentary contribution to the Forum process and the broader development cooperation agenda, including in the context of the current Economic and Social Council reform process;

6. Also encourages the Inter-Parliamentary Union to continue its efforts in mobilizing parliamentary support and action towards the achievement of the Millennium Development Goals by the target date of 2015;

7. Further encourages the Inter-Parliamentary Union to strengthen its contribution to the United Nations human rights treaty body system and to the Human Rights Council, particularly as it relates to the universal periodic review of the fulfilment of human rights obligations and commitments by Member States;

8. Invites the new United Nations Entity for Gender Equality and the Empowerment of Women (UN-Women) to work closely with the Inter-Parliamentary Union in such areas as the empowerment of women, institutional gender mainstreaming, support to parliaments in promoting gender-sensitive legislation, combating violence against women and the implementation of relevant United Nations resolutions;

9. Encourages the Inter-Parliamentary Union to further assist in developing closer cooperation between the United Nations and parliaments at the national level, including in terms of strengthening parliamentary capacities, reinforcing the rule of law and helping to align national legislation with international commitments;

10. Welcomes the growing practice of including legislators as members of national delegations to major United Nations meetings and events, as appropriate, and invites Member States to continue this practice in a more regular and systematic manner;

11. Calls for the further development of the annual parliamentary hearings at the United Nations as a joint United Nations-Inter-Parliamentary Union event and for the circulation of the hearings summary report as a document of the General Assembly;

12. Decides more systematically to engage with the Inter-Parliamentary Union in organizing and integrating a parliamentary component of and contribution to major United Nations deliberative processes and the review of international commitments;

13. Welcomes the proposal for a regular annual exchange between the United Nations System Chief Executives Board for Coordination and the senior leadership of the Inter-Parliamentary Union, with a view to building greater coherence in the work of the two organizations, maximizing parliamentary support for the United Nations and helping to forge a strategic partnership between the two organizations;

14. Decides, in recognition of the unique role of national parliaments in support of the work of the United Nations, to include in the provisional agenda of its sixty-sixth session an item entitled "Interaction between the United Nations, national parliaments and the Inter-Parliamentary Union".

Organization of the Islamic Conference

In his consolidated report on cooperation between the United Nations, regional and other organizations [A/65/382-S/2010/490], the Secretary-General, reporting on UN cooperation activities with the Organization of the Islamic Conference (OIC), stated that his meetings with the OIC Secretary-General focused on conflict prevention, peacekeeping, peacebuilding, the fight against terrorism, and the activities of the Alliance of Civilizations. OIC officials participated in UN seminars and other training opportunities in conflict prevention, negotiations, mediation and elections. The 2010 general meeting on cooperation between the United Nations and OIC (Istanbul, Turkey, 29 June–1 July) reviewed joint activities undertaken since 2008; outlined follow-up mechanisms; and agreed to focus future collaboration on conflict prevention, capacity-building electoral assistance, counter-terrorism, fighting extremism and countering Islamophobia. The United Nations also worked with OIC to restore peace and security in Somalia. OIC hosted the International Contact Group meeting on Somalia in Jeddah in 2009 [YUN 2009, p. 271], at which it announced the opening of an office in Mogadishu to assist in Somalia's reconstruction. Links between OIC and the Alliance of Civilizations were reinforced by the signing of a memorandum of understanding in 2009, as well as the signing of a two-year action plan on cooperation and interaction (2010–2012) during the Rio de Janeiro Forum in 2010. OIC was active in the work of the Peacebuilding Commission in Sierra Leone, specifically in resource mobilization, and joint efforts by the Economic and Social Commission for Western Asia and OIC were conducted in the areas of sustainable development, financing for development, transport and trade.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 16 December [meeting 68], the General Assembly adopted resolution 65/140 [draft: A/65/L.43 & Add.1] without vote [agenda item 122 (s)].

Cooperation between the United Nations and the Organization of the Islamic Conference

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 37/4 of 22 October 1982, 38/4 of 28 October 1983, 39/7 of 8 November 1984, 40/4 of 25 October 1985, 41/3 of 16 October 1986, 42/4 of 15 October 1987, 43/2 of 17 October 1988, 44/8 of 18 October 1989, 45/9 of 25 October 1990, 46/13 of 28 October 1991, 47/18 of 23 November 1992, 48/24 of 24 November 1993, 49/15 of 15 November 1994, 50/17 of 20 November 1995, 51/18 of 14 November 1996, 52/4 of 22 October 1997, 53/16 of 29 October 1998, 54/7 of 25 October 1999, 55/9 of 30 October 2000, 56/47 of 7 December 2001, 57/42 of 21 November 2002, 59/8 of 22 October 2004, 61/49 of 4 December 2006 and 63/114 of 5 December 2008,

Recalling also its resolution 3369(XXX) of 10 October 1975, by which it decided to invite the Organization of the Islamic Conference to participate in the sessions and the work of the General Assembly and of its subsidiary organs in the capacity of observer,

Welcoming the efforts of the Organization of the Islamic Conference, which have been undertaken in coordination with the United Nations and in full respect of the Charter of the United Nations, in strengthening its role in conflict prevention, confidence-building, peacekeeping, conflict resolution and post-conflict rehabilitation, including conflict situations involving Muslim communities,

Noting the adoption by the Islamic Summit Conference at its third extraordinary session, held in Mecca, Saudi Arabia, on 7 and 8 December 2005, of the Ten-year Programme of Action to Meet the Challenges Facing the Muslim Ummah in the Twenty-first Century and the adoption on 14 March 2008 by the Islamic Summit Conference at its eleventh session, held in Dakar on 13 and 14 March 2008, of the amended Charter of the Organization of the Islamic Conference,

Having considered the report of the Secretary-General on cooperation between the United Nations and regional and other organizations,

Taking into account the desire of the two organizations to continue to cooperate closely in the political, economic, social, humanitarian, cultural and scientific fields and in their common search for solutions to global problems, such as questions relating to international peace and security, disarmament, self-determination, the promotion of a culture of peace through dialogue and cooperation, decolonization, fundamental human rights, economic and social development, and combating international terrorism,

Recalling the Articles of the Charter of the United Nations that encourage activities through regional cooperation for the promotion of the purposes and principles of the United Nations,

Noting that the Secretary-General, in his report, recognizes the strengthening of practical cooperation and the building of complementarity between the United Nations, its specialized agencies, funds and programmes and the Organization of the Islamic Conference, its subsidiary organs and its specialized and affiliated institutions,

Noting also the encouraging progress made in the ten priority areas of cooperation between the two organizations and their respective agencies and institutions, as well as in the identification of other areas of cooperation between them,

Noting further that the Secretaries-General of the two organizations have met regularly and consultations among senior officials of the two organizations have enhanced cooperation,

Convinced that the strengthening of cooperation between the United Nations and other organizations of the United Nations system and the Organization of the Islamic Conference and its organs and institutions contributes to the promotion of the purposes and principles of the United Nations,

Taking note of the results of the general meeting of the organizations and agencies of the United Nations system and the Organization of the Islamic Conference and its subsidiary organs and specialized and affiliated institutions, held in Istanbul, Turkey, from 29 June to 1 July 2010, to review and appraise the level of cooperation in the fields of international peace and security, science and technology, trade and development, implementation of the Millennium Development Goals, protection of and assistance to refugees, human rights, human resource development, food security and agriculture, environment, health and population, arts and crafts, and the promotion of heritage, and of the fact that these meetings are now being held every two years, with the next one scheduled for 2012,

Recalling that the Organization of the Islamic Conference remains an important partner of the United Nations in peace, security and the fostering of a culture of peace at the global level, and noting various decisions reached by the two sides, including the agreement to continue cooperation in conflict prevention and resolution, peacekeeping and peacebuilding, combating international terrorism, fighting extremism, countering religious intolerance, including Islamophobia, promoting and protecting all human rights and fundamental freedoms for all, humanitarian assistance and capacity-building in electoral assistance, and the agreement to improve the follow-up mechanism,

Taking note of the contribution of the Organization of the Islamic Conference in promoting intercultural dialogue and understanding within the framework of the United Nations Alliance of Civilizations and other initiatives in this regard,

Taking note with appreciation of the close and multifaceted cooperation between the specialized agencies of the United Nations and the specialized and affiliated institutions of the Organization of the Islamic Conference with a view to strengthening the capacities of the two organizations in addressing challenges to development and social progress, including ongoing discussions between the United Nations Children's Fund and the Organization of the Islamic Conference on formalizing their partnership through specific initiatives linked to the Millennium Development Goals, as part of the Organization of the Islamic Conference Ten-year Programme of Action to Meet the Challenges Facing the Muslim Ummah in the Twenty-first Century,

Welcoming the existing cooperation between the Organization of the Islamic Conference and the Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs of the Secretariat, including dialogue between the two entities on reaching out to non-governmental organizations and other humanitarian actors in States members of the Organization of the Islamic Conference as well as participation in joint activities and events and information-sharing, with a view to furthering proactive engagement and implementing concrete programmes in capacity-building, emergency assistance and strategic partnerships,

Noting the request of the Organization of the Islamic Conference for greater interaction between the secretariats of the United Nations and the Organization of the Islamic Conference extending beyond the current biennial arrangement so as to include periodic reviews of cooperation, in the light of the expanding areas of cooperation between the two organizations,

Noting with appreciation the determination of the two organizations to strengthen further the existing cooperation by developing specific proposals in the designated priority areas of cooperation, as well as in the political field,

1. Takes note with satisfaction of the report of the Secretary-General;

2. Urges the United Nations system to cooperate with the Organization of the Islamic Conference in areas of mutual interest, as appropriate;

3. Notes with satisfaction the active participation of the Organization of the Islamic Conference in the work of the United Nations towards the realization of the purposes and principles embodied in the Charter of the United Nations;

4. Affirms that the United Nations and the Organization of the Islamic Conference share a common goal of promoting and facilitating the Middle East peace process so that it can reach its objective of establishing a just and comprehensive peace in the Middle East;

5. Requests the United Nations and the Organization of the Islamic Conference to continue to cooperate in their common search for solutions to global problems, such as questions relating to international peace and security, disarmament, self-determination, promotion of a culture of peace through dialogue and cooperation, decolonization, human rights and fundamental freedoms, terrorism, capacity-building, health-related issues such as combating pandemic and endemic diseases, emergency relief and rehabilitation and technical cooperation;

6. Requests the secretariats of the two organizations to strengthen cooperation in addressing the social and economic issues that affect the efforts of Member States to eradicate poverty and achieve sustainable development and the internationally agreed development goals, including the Millennium Development Goals;

7. Welcomes the efforts of the United Nations and the Organization of the Islamic Conference to continue to strengthen cooperation between the two organizations in areas of common concern and to review and explore innovative ways and means of enhancing the mechanisms of such cooperation;

8. Also welcomes the cooperation between the Special Unit for South-South Cooperation hosted by the United Nations Development Programme and the Organization of the Islamic Conference and its specialized and affiliated institutions in promoting South-South cooperation in areas of common interest;

9. Encourages the United Nations and the Organization of the Islamic Conference, as well as their subsidiary, specialized and affiliated institutions, to intensify actions in creating bilateral frameworks for cooperation in the area of human and industrial capacity development, trade promotion, transportation and tourism;

10. Invites the United Nations system to cooperate with the Organization of the Islamic Conference and its member States in their efforts to implement the internationally agreed development goals, including the Millennium Development Goals;

11. Welcomes with appreciation the continuing cooperation between the United Nations and the Organization of the Islamic Conference in the fields of peacemaking, preventive diplomacy, peacekeeping and peacebuilding, and notes the close cooperation between the two organizations in reconstruction and development in Afghanistan, Bosnia and Herzegovina, Sierra Leone and Somalia;

12. Appreciates the hosting by the Organization of the Islamic Conference, at its General Secretariat in Jeddah, Saudi Arabia, on 17 December 2009, of the sixteenth meeting of the International Contact Group on Somalia, welcomes the recent opening of the Organization of the Islamic Conference Coordination Office in Mogadishu, announced at the seventeenth meeting of the Contact Group, and calls for closer cooperation in the field between the Organization of the Islamic Conference and the United Nations agencies;

13. Welcomes the efforts of the secretariats of the two organizations to strengthen information exchange, coordination and cooperation between them in areas of mutual interest in the political field and to develop practical modalities of such cooperation;

14. Also welcomes the signing of a memorandum of understanding between the Alliance of Civilizations and the Organization of the Islamic Conference on the sidelines of the second Alliance of Civilizations Forum, held on 6 and 7 April 2009 in Istanbul, and the subsequent signing, on the margins of the third Alliance of Civilizations Forum, held in Rio de Janeiro, Brazil, from 27 to 29 May 2010, of an action plan that aimed at setting out joint plans and programmes to be implemented by the Organization of the Islamic Conference and the Alliance of Civilizations over the period from 2010 to 2012;

15. Notes with satisfaction the increasing cooperation between the Organization of the Islamic Conference and the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization, which is marked by the forthcoming opening of the representation office of the former in the latter's headquarters in Paris;

16. Welcomes the periodic high-level meetings between the Secretary-General of the United Nations and the Secretary-General of the Organization of the Islamic Conference, as well as between senior secretariat officials of the two organizations, and encourages their participation in important meetings of the two organizations;

17. Encourages the specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system to continue to expand their cooperation with the subsidiary organs and specialized and affiliated institutions of the Organization of the Islamic Conference, particularly in the domains of science and technology, higher education, health and environment, by negotiating cooperation agreements, and through necessary contacts and meetings of the respective focal points for cooperation in priority areas of interest to the United Nations and the Organization of the Islamic Conference;

18. Urges the United Nations and other organizations of the United Nations system, especially the lead agencies, to provide increased technical and other forms of assistance to the Organization of the Islamic Conference and its subsidiary organs and specialized and affiliated institutions in order to strengthen their capacities for cooperation;

19. Expresses its appreciation to the Secretary-General for his continued efforts to strengthen cooperation and coordination between the United Nations and other organizations of the United Nations system and the Organization of the Islamic Conference and its subsidiary organs and specialized and affiliated institutions to serve the mutual interests of the two organizations in the political, economic, social, cultural, humanitarian and scientific fields;

20. Requests the Secretary-General to report to the General Assembly at its sixty-seventh session on the state of cooperation between the United Nations and the Organization of the Islamic Conference;

21. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its sixty-seventh session the sub-item entitled "Cooperation between the United Nations and the Organization of the Islamic Conference".

Shanghai Cooperation Organization

In his consolidated report on cooperation between the United Nations, regional and other organizations [A/65/382-S/2010/490], the Secretary-General reported on cooperation activities between the United Nations and the Shanghai Cooperation Organization (SCO). Contacts between the two organizations continued through inter-agency forums and formats, and the partnership was enhanced in 2010 with the signing in Tashkent, Uzbekistan, of a joint declaration detailing areas of potential cooperation between the two secretariats, including conflict prevention and resolution; the fight against terrorism; preventing the proliferation of weapons of mass destruction and their means of delivery; combating transnational crime; and addressing environmental degradation. The United Nations Regional Centre for Preventive Diplomacy for Central Asia and the SCO secretariat regularly exchanged information on mutual activities and developments in the region. The Economic and Social Commission for Asia and the Pacific continued to work closely with SCO in the implementation of the Busan Declaration and Regional Action Plan on Transport Development in Asia and the Pacific [YUN 2006, p. 1161], as well as the Bangkok Declaration on Transport Development in Asia [YUN 2009, p. 977].

Communication. In a 20 July letter [A/65/170], Kazakhstan transmitted to the Secretary-General the Declaration of the tenth meeting of the Council of the heads of States members of the Shanghai Cooperation Organization (Tashkent, Uzbekistan, 10–11 June), which, among other things, welcomed the signature on 5 April in Tashkent of the Joint Declaration on SCO/UN Secretariat Cooperation establishing the main principles and areas for cooperation between the two organizations.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 13 December [meeting 64], the General Assembly adopted resolution 65/124 [draft: A/65/L.29] without vote [agenda item 122 (v)].

Cooperation between the United Nations and the Shanghai Cooperation Organization

The General Assembly,

Recalling that one of the objectives of the United Nations is to achieve cooperation in maintaining international peace and security and solving international problems of an economic, social, cultural or humanitarian character,

Recalling also the Articles of the Charter of the United Nations that encourage activities on the basis of regional cooperation to promote the goals and objectives of the United Nations,

Recalling further its resolution 59/48 of 2 December 2004, by which it granted observer status to the Shanghai Cooperation Organization,

Taking into consideration the fact that countries with economies in transition are among the members of the Shanghai Cooperation Organization, and in this regard recalling its resolution 61/210 of 20 December 2006, in which it proposed that the United Nations system enhance dialogue with regional and subregional cooperation organizations whose membership includes countries with economies in transition and increase support provided to them,

Recalling its resolution 64/183 of 18 December 2009 on cooperation between the United Nations and the Shanghai Cooperation Organization,

Noting with satisfaction that the declaration on the establishment of the Shanghai Cooperation Organization confirms the commitment of its member States to the principles of the Charter,

Noting that the Shanghai Cooperation Organization has become an essential regional organization for addressing security in the region in all its dimensions,

Convinced that strengthening cooperation between the United Nations and other organizations of the United Nations system and the Shanghai Cooperation Organization helps to promote the goals and objectives of the United Nations,

1. Takes note of the activities of the Shanghai Cooperation Organization aimed at strengthening peace, security and stability in the region, countering terrorism, separatism and extremism, drug trafficking and other types of criminal activity of a transnational character and promoting regional cooperation in various areas such as trade and economic development, energy, transportation, agriculture and agro-industry, the regulation of migration, banking and finance, information and telecommunications, science and new technology, customs, education, public health, environmental protection and reducing the danger of natural disasters, as well as in other related areas;

2. Welcomes the Joint Declaration on Cooperation between the Secretariats of the United Nations and of the Shanghai Cooperation Organization, signed by the Secretary-General of the United Nations and the Secretary-General of the Shanghai Cooperation Organization on 5 April 2010 in Tashkent;

3. Emphasizes the importance of strengthening dialogue, cooperation and coordination between the United Nations system and the Shanghai Cooperation Organization, and proposes that the Secretary-General, for this purpose, continue to hold regular consultations with the Secretary-General of the Shanghai Cooperation Organization through the existing inter-agency forums and formats, including the annual consultations between the Secretary-General of the United Nations and the heads of regional organizations;

4. Proposes that the specialized agencies, organizations, programmes and funds of the United Nations system cooperate with the Shanghai Cooperation Organization with a view to jointly implementing programmes to achieve their goals, and in this regard recommends that the heads of such entities commence consultations with the Secretary-General of the United Nations;

5. Requests the Secretary-General to submit to the General Assembly at its sixty-seventh session a report on the implementation of the present resolution;

6. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its sixty-seventh session the sub-item entitled “Cooperation between the United Nations and the Shanghai Cooperation Organization”.

Cooperation in the maintenance of peace and security

On 13 January, the Security Council, in presidential statement S/PRST/2010/1 (see p. 47), welcomed the existing strong cooperation initiatives between the United Nations and regional organizations, and expressed its intention to consider further steps to promote closer and more operational cooperation with regional and subregional organizations in the fields of conflict early warning, prevention, peacemaking, peacekeeping and peacebuilding.

Participation in UN work

Non-governmental organizations

Committee on NGOs

The Committee on Non-Governmental Organizations held its regular 2010 session (25 January–3 February) [E/2010/32 (Part I)] and its resumed session (26 May–4 June and 18 June) [E/2010/32 (Part II)] in New York. At its regular session, the Committee considered 242 applications from non-governmental organizations (NGOs) for consultative status, including applications deferred from its 1999–2009 sessions. It recommended 76 applications for consultative status, deferred consideration of 149, took note of one NGO that had withdrawn its application, closed consideration without prejudice of 14 applications and closed consideration of two others. The Committee also had before it one request for reclassification of consultative status, which it recommended. It took note of 170 quadrennial reports and heard representatives from 21 NGOs attending the session.

The Committee also considered the strengthening of the NGO Branch of the Department of Economic and Social Affairs of the Secretariat; reviewed its methods of work relating to the implementation of Economic and Social Council resolution 1996/31 [YUN 1996, p. 1360], including the process of accreditation of NGO representatives, and Council decision 1995/304 [YUN 1995, p. 1445]; and considered special reports and complaints by Member States.

On 19 July, the Council granted consultative status to 76 organizations; reclassified one; and noted that the Committee had taken note of the request of one NGO to withdraw its application, taken note of 170 quadrennial reports, closed consideration of 14 applications after failures to respond to queries by members of the Committee, suspended consideration of one application, and closed consideration of two others (decision 2010/213).

On the same day, the Council withdrew the consultative status of one organization (decision 2010/214), and suspended the status of another (decision 2010/215). The Council also took note of the Committee's report on its 2010 regular session (decision 2010/216).

At its resumed session in May and June, the Committee considered 253 applications for consultative status, including applications deferred from previous sessions. It recommended granting consultative status to 55 NGOs, suspending consideration of one, deferring 182 for further consideration in 2011 and closing consideration of 15. The Committee noted the termination activities of seven NGOs and the name change of 12. Of the three requests before it, the Committee recommended one for reclassification, closed the request of another and deferred consideration of one. It also had before it 246 quadrennial reports from 241 organizations and took note of 222 such reports; heard representatives of 14 NGOs; and recommended nine draft decisions for action by the Council.

The Committee also considered the strengthening of the Non-Governmental Organizations Branch of the Department of Economic and Social Affairs of the Secretariat; reviewed its methods of work relating to the implementation of Economic and Social Council resolution 1996/31, including the process of accreditation of NGO representatives, and Council decision 1995/304; special reports and complaints by Member States, and implementation of Council resolution 2006/46 [YUN 2006, p. 1001] and decision 2008/217 [YUN 2008, p. 927].

On 19 July, the Council granted consultative status to 55 NGOs, reclassified one from special to general consultative status, and closed the consideration of the request for reclassification of another. It noted that the Committee had taken note of the name change of 12 NGOs; closed consideration of the applications of four NGOs as their activities and programmes did not meet the criteria set out in Council resolution 1996/31, as well as of 11 after failure to respond to queries by Committee members; and suspended one application. The Council withdrew the consultative status of six organizations that had terminated their activities or ceased to exist, and noted that the Committee had taken note of quadrennial reports of 222 organizations for the period 2005–2008 and earlier (decision 2010/217).

On the same date, the Council suspended for one year the consultative status of 77 NGOs with outstanding quadrennial reports and requested the Secretary-General to advise them of its decision (decision 2010/218); reinstated the consultative status of 16 NGOs that had submitted their outstanding quadrennial reports (decision 2010/219); withdrew consultative status of 78 NGOs with outstanding quadrennial reports and requested the Secretary-General to advise them accordingly (decision 2010/220); suspended consultative status of one NGO for two years, with the request that it submit to the Committee before the expiration of that period a letter confirming that it would conform at all times to the principles governing the establishment and nature of its consultative relations with the Council (decision 2010/221); approved the Committee's recommendation to withdraw agenda item 7 (Implementation of Economic and Social Council resolution 2006/46 and decision 2008/217) from the agenda of the Committee's 2011 session (decision 2010/222); and granted special consultative status to one NGO (decision 2010/225);

The Council took note of the Committee's report on its resumed 2010 session (decision 2010/224), decided that the Committee's 2011 regular session would be held from 24 January to 2 February and its resumed session from 16 to 24 May, and approved the provisional agenda for that session (decision 2010/223).

United Nations financing and programming

During 2010, the financial situation of the United Nations was generally mixed, with improvement in some areas. By year's end, aggregate assessments had increased to $12.5 billion, compared with $9 billion in 2009. Total unpaid assessments were higher, with $351 million for the regular budget and just under $2.5 billion for peacekeeping operations, up from $335 million and $1.85 billion, respectively, in 2009.

Cash balances were lower for all categories, except peacekeeping, with $412 million available for the regular budget, while debt owed to Member States for troops, formed police units and contingent-owned equipment was $539 million. The number of Member States paying their regular budget assessments in full and on time increased to 138.

In December, the General Assembly adopted revised budget appropriations for the 2010–2011 biennium of $5,367,234,700, representing an increase of $208,273,500 over the revised appropriation of $5,158,961,200 approved in March. It also invited the Secretary-General to prepare his proposed 2012–2013 programme budget on the basis of a preliminary estimate of $5,396,697,200.

The Committee on Contributions continued to review the methodology for preparing the scale of assessments of Member States' contributions to the budget and to encourage the payment of arrears through multi-year payment plans. The General Assembly continued to review the efficiency of the administrative and financial functioning of the Organization.

The Assembly also examined the proposed strategic framework for 2012–2013 and endorsed the biennial programme plan that had been proposed for that period.

Financial situation

The overall financial situation in 2010 was generally mixed, with improvement in some areas. In October [A/65/519], the Secretary-General reported that unpaid assessed contributions remained highly concentrated among a few Member States, particularly for the regular budget, the international tribunals and the capital master plan (CMP). As at 5 October, aggregate assessments stood at $12.3 billion (compared to $8.7 billion in 2009). That amount included assessments for the regular budget ($2,167 million), the two international tribunals ($256 million), peacekeeping ($9,510 million) and a fixed amount for the CMP ($341 million). Meanwhile, the cash flow situation of peacekeeping operations would be monitored constantly to maximize quarterly payments based on available cash.

As at 5 October, unpaid assessments for the regular budget, peacekeeping and the tribunals totalled $4 billion, which included $3.2 billion for peacekeeping (compared to $2.1 billion at 13 October 2009); $787 million for the regular budget ($43 million less than in 2009); and $50 million for the tribunals ($13 million less than in 2009). Member States that had paid their regular budget assessments in full as at 5 October 2010 numbered 119, which was one less than at 13 October 2009.

In his end-of-year review [A/65/519/Add.1] of the financial situation, the Secretary-General noted that the performance of the four main indicators of the Organization's financial health reflected improvement as compared to 31 December 2009: although aggregate assessments were higher at $12.5 billion (compared to $8.95 billion in 2009), due to a $3.9 billion increase for peacekeeping operations (from $5,765 million to $9,671 million), assessments for the regular budget and the international tribunals decreased.

Unpaid assessments increased slightly for all categories, with $351 million for the regular budget, up from $335 million in 2009, and just under $2.5 billion for peacekeeping operations, up from $1.85 billion in 2009.

Outstanding assessments for the two tribunals decreased from $37 million to $27 million. Cash balances were lower for the regular budget, the international tribunals and CMP, but were offset by the increase in the cash balance for peacekeeping operations, resulting in a net increase of $772 million at year's end. Cash available for the regular budget amounted to $412 million at year's end.

Debt owed to Member States for troops, formed police units and contingent-owned equipment was $539 million. The number of Member States paying their regular budget assessments in full was 138, two more than in 2009.

On 24 December, the General Assembly decided that the agenda item on improving the financial situation of the United Nations would remain for consideration at its resumed sixty-fifth (2011) session (decision 65/544).

Budget for 2010–2011

Revised appropriations

In the first performance report on the 2010–2011 programme budget [A/65/589], the Secretary-General identified adjustments to the level of appropriations as a result of variations in the rates of inflation and exchange, adjustments to standard costs, unforeseen and extraordinary items, as well as additional mandates approved by the General Assembly and the Security Council.

The adjustments yielded revised requirements of $5,148.6 million, a decrease of $10.3 million from the revised appropriation of $5,158.9 million approved by resolutions 64/244 A [YUN 2009, p. 1403], 64/260 (see p. 1437) and 64/288 (see p. 111), and an increase in income of $26.2 million, resulting in a revised income estimate of $580.6 million. Consequently, the revised net requirements for the 2010–2011 biennium amounted to $4,568.0 million, a decrease of $36.5 million.

In December [A/65/604], the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions (ACABQ) recommended that the Assembly approve the revised estimates submitted by the Secretary-General, subject to such adjustments resulting from the Committee's consideration of matters before the Assembly, including the consolidated statement of revised estimates and programme budget implications.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 24 December [meeting 73], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth (Administrative and Budgetary) Committee [A/65/646/Add.1], adopted resolution 65/260 A–C without vote [agenda item 129].

Programme budget for the biennium 2010–2011

CFINANCING OF THE APPROPRIATIONS
FOR THE YEAR 2011*The General Assembly*

Resolves that, for the year 2011:

1. Budget appropriations totalling 2,789,220,150 United States dollars and consisting of 2,578,014,550 dollars, being half of the appropriation initially approved for the biennium 2010–2011 in its resolution 64/244 A of 24 December 2009, 2,932,100 dollars, being the additional appropriation approved for the biennium in its resolutions 64/260 of 29 March 2010 and 64/288 of 24 June 2010 and 208,273,500 dollars, being the increase approved in resolution A above, shall be financed in accordance with regulations 3.1 and 3.2 of the Financial Regulations and Rules of the United Nations, as follows:

(a) 140,681,450 dollars, consisting of:

(i) 16,494,050 dollars, being half of the estimated income other than staff assessment income approved for the biennium in its resolution 64/244 B of 24 December 2009;

(ii) 4,942,700 dollars, being the increase in income other than staff assessment income approved for the biennium in resolution B above;

(iii) 119,244,700 dollars, being the balance in the surplus account as at 31 December 2009 of 121,824,000 dollars, offset by the amount of 2,579,300 dollars relating to staff assessment for the biennium 2008–2009 as approved in resolutions 63/268 of 7 April 2009 and 63/283 of 30 June 2009, which was not assessed in 2010;

(b) 2,648,538,700 dollars, being the assessment on Member States in accordance with its resolution 64/248 of 24 December 2009;

2. There shall be set off against the assessment on Member States, in accordance with the provisions of General Assembly resolution 973(X) of 15 December 1955, their respective share in the Tax Equalization Fund in the total amount of 299,848,350 dollars, consisting of:

(a) 260,591,850 dollars, being half of the estimated staff assessment income approved by the Assembly in its resolution 64/244 B;

(b) 263,700 dollars, being the estimated increase in income from staff assessment approved by the Assembly in its resolutions 64/260 and 64/288;

(c) 33,593,600 dollars, being the estimated increase in income from staff assessment approved by the Assembly in resolution B above;

(d) 5,399,200 dollars, being the increase in income from staff assessment for the biennium 2008–2009, compared with the revised estimates approved by the Assembly in its resolution 64/242 B of 24 December 2009.

Also on 24 December, the Assembly, by decision 65/544, decided that the agenda item on the programme budget for the 2010–2011 biennium would remain for consideration during its resumed sixty-fifth (2011) session.

Questions relating to the 2010–2011 programme budgetRevised estimates in respect of special political missions, good offices and other political initiatives*

In January [A/64/349/Add.6], the Secretary-General submitted proposed additional net requirements for 2010 in the amount of $1,044,000 for the United Nations Representative on the International Advisory and Monitoring Board of the Development Fund for Iraq (see p. 301), the Analytical Support and Sanctions Monitoring Team concerning Al-Qaida and the Taliban, and the Monitoring Group on Somalia.

In February [A/64/7/Add.21], ACABQ recommended that the General Assembly approve the additional requested resources, to be accommodated from the provision of $569,526,500 approved by the Assembly in resolution 64/245 [YUN 2009, p. 1406].

In October [A/65/328], the Secretary-General submitted proposed requirements for 2011 for 29 special political missions, which amounted to $685,008,400 net ($725,487,200 gross).

In December [A/65/602], ACABQ recommended that the Assembly approve the requested resources subject to the Committee's recommendations.

The General Assembly, in section XIII of resolution 65/259 of 24 December (see p. 1433), approved budgets totalling $643,094,800 for the 29 special political missions.

Strengthening of Department of Political Affairs

In July [A/65/161 & Corr.1], the Secretary-General reported on the implementation of the resolution 63/261 [YUN 2008, p. 49], which dealt with the strengthening of the Department of Political Affairs (DPA). The Assembly's decision to strengthen DPA, the Secretary-General said, had reinforced the Department's ongoing transformation into a more proactive and operational platform for conflict prevention, mediation and peacebuilding. The Department's ability to respond quickly and in a cost-effective manner to emerging crises had led to an increased demand for its services in prevention, mediation and capacity-building.

In December [A/65/602], ACABQ submitted its comments and observations on the report.

Revised estimates resulting from Economic and Social Council action

In August [A/65/319], the Secretary-General submitted additional requirements resulting from resolutions and decisions adopted by the Economic and Social Council at its 2010 substantive session, relating to the activities of the Ad Hoc Advisory Group on Haiti and realignment of the functions of the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime, and changes to the strategic framework.

In October [A/65/505], ACABQ stated that it had no objection to the Secretary-General's proposed expenditure requirements.

Revised estimates resulting from Human Rights Council action

In August [A/65/333 & Corr.1], the Secretary-General submitted revised estimated requirements totalling $4,708,500 for the 2010–2011 biennium, resulting from resolutions and decisions adopted by the Human Rights Council at its twelfth, thirteenth and fourteenth sessions held in 2009 and 2010. Additional requirements for the biennium amounted to an estimated 3,424,100. Provisions of $1,284,400 had already been included in the programme budget, and it was proposed to meet the amount of $2,940,300 from the resources already appropriated for the biennium. For the remaining balance, the Secretary-General requested the General Assembly to authorize him to enter into commitments in the amount of $483,800 under the 2010–2011 programme budget.

In October [A/65/548], ACABQ recommended that the additional requirements for $3,424,100 be accommodated within the resources appropriated under the programme budget for the 2010–2011 biennium.

In November [A/65/333/Add.1 & Corr.1], the Secretary-General submitted revised estimated requirements totalling $7,911,400 for the 2010–2011 biennium, resulting from resolutions and decisions adopted by the Council at its fifteenth session in 2010.

In November [A/65/548/Add.1], ACABQ recommended that the General Assembly approve the requested resources subject to its recommendations. It also recommended that the Secretary-General streamline and synchronize the resources requested in relation to the resolutions and decisions of the Council with the resources requested in relation to the biennial proposed programme budget.

Contingency Fund

The contingency fund, established by General Assembly resolution 41/213 [YUN 1986, p. 1024], accommodated additional expenditures relating to each biennium that derived from legislative mandates not provided for in the proposed programme budget or from revised estimates. Guidelines for its use were annexed to Assembly resolution 42/211 [YUN 1987, p. 1098].

In a December report [A/C.5/65/14] on the contingency fund, the Secretary-General submitted the consolidated statement of programme budget implications and revised estimates for the fund, which included potential new charges amounting to $5,991,700 and would result in a remaining fund balance of $22,408,100.

Other questions

The General Assembly considered a number of other questions related to the 2010–2011 programme budget, including revised estimates for the enterprise resource planning project (Umoja) (see p. 1462) and the International Public Sector Accounting Standards; revised estimates resulting from the increase in the membership of the Committee on the Protection of the Rights of All Migrant Workers and Members of Their Families, the Committee on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities and the Subcommittee on Prevention of Torture and Other Cruel, Inhuman or Degrading Treatment or Punishment (see p. 639); revised estimates related to the Office of the Special Representative of the Secretary-General on Sexual Violence in Conflict; the revised proposal for the use of regular budget resources for the normative support functions of the United Nations Entity for Gender Equality and the Empowerment of Women (see p. 1181); the revised security management framework and revised estimates related to a strengthened and unified security management system for the United Nations (see p. 1477); the first performance report on the 2010–2011 programme budget (see p. 1425); a request for a subvention to the Special Court for Sierra Leone (see p. 221); overseas property management and construction projects in progress, and revised estimates relating to the relocation of the subregional headquarters in Mexico of the Economic Commission for Latin America and the Caribbean (see p. 1465);

after-service health insurance: medical and dental reserve funds (see p. 1473); financial implications of the administration of justice at the United Nations (see p. 1494); administrative and financial implications of the decisions and recommendations contained in the report of the International Civil Service Commission for 2010 (see p. 1466); information and communications technology (see p. 1461); and administrative and financial implications arising from the report of the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Board (see p. 1487).

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 24 December [meeting 73], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee [A/65/646/Add.1], adopted resolution 65/259 by recorded vote (142-1-3) [agenda item 129].

Questions relating to the programme budget for the biennium 2010–2011

The General Assembly,

I

Administrative and financial implications arising from the report of the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Board

Having considered the report of the Secretary-General on the administrative and financial implications arising from the report of the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Board and the related report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions,

Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General;

II

Revised estimates under section 28A (Office of the Under-Secretary-General for Management) of the programme budget for the biennium 2010–2011 and under the support account for peacekeeping operations (enterprise resource planning project (Umoja)) and International Public Sector Accounting Standards

Recalling section II of its resolution 60/283 of 7 July 2006, sections II and V of its resolution 63/262 of 24 December 2008, and its resolution 64/243 of 24 December 2009,

Having considered the second progress report of the Secretary-General on the enterprise resource planning project and revised estimates under section 28A (Office of the Under-Secretary-General for Management) of the programme budget for the biennium 2010–2011 and under the support account for peacekeeping operations, and the third progress report of the Secretary-General on the adoption of the International Public Sector Accounting Standards by the United Nations, as well as the related reports of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions,

1. Takes note of the reports of the Secretary-General;
2. Endorses the conclusions and recommendations contained in the reports of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions, subject to the provisions of the present resolution;

A. Enterprise resource planning project

3. Recalls paragraph 113 of its resolution 64/243, and requests the Secretary-General to continue to make efforts to deploy the enterprise resource planning project (Umoja) on the basis of lower-cost options, while also looking for opportunities to reduce cost projections, without altering the approach approved by the General Assembly;

4. Urges the Secretary-General to make every effort to fill the vacancies in the enterprise resource planning project team as a matter of priority and to explore all possibilities for expediting the process, so as to minimize any adverse impact on project implementation;

5. Stresses that the temporary posts related to the implementation of Umoja are limited to the duration of that project;

6. Decides not to appropriate the amount of 12,416,300 United States dollars, in the light of the subsequent proposal of the Secretary-General contained in paragraph 18 of his first performance report on the programme budget for the biennium 2010–2011;

B. International Public Sector Accounting Standards

7. Notes the continued dependency between the timeline for the implementation of the International Public Sector Accounting Standards and the enterprise resource planning project (Umoja);

8. Requests the Secretary-General to ensure that the implementation of the International Public Sector Accounting Standards at the United Nations is completed no later than 2014;

III

Overseas property management and construction projects in progress, and revised estimates under section 20 (Economic and social development in Latin America and the Caribbean) of the programme budget for the biennium 2010–2011 relating to the relocation of the subregional headquarters in Mexico

Recalling its resolution 56/270 of 27 March 2002, section IV of its resolution 58/272 of 23 December 2003, sections IX and X of its resolution 62/238 of 22 December 2007, section I of its resolution 63/263 of 24 December 2008, and its resolution 64/243 of 24 December 2009,

Having considered the reports of the Secretary-General on overseas property management and construction projects in progress and on revised estimates under section 20 (Economic and social development in Latin America and the Caribbean) of the programme budget for the biennium 2010–2011 relating to the relocation of the subregional headquarters in Mexico, as well as the related report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions,

1. Takes note of the reports of the Secretary-General;
2. Endorses the conclusions and recommendations contained in the report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions, subject to the provisions of the present resolution;
3. Requests the Secretary-General to expeditiously assess the status of conference facilities at the Economic Commission for Africa, in particular Africa Hall and Conference Room 1, to ensure that they are in strict compliance with the highest international standards for conference facilities, and to report thereon in the context of his next annual progress report on the construction of additional conference facilities at the Commission;

4. Welcomes the recent efforts of the Secretary-General to utilize additional funding arrangements to ensure that the project for the construction of additional office facilities at the Commission proceeds as originally designed, and requests the Secretary-General to provide regular briefings to Member States on the implementation of the project;

5. Authorizes the Secretary-General to enter into commitments in an amount up to 1,758,800 dollars under section 20 (Economic and social development in Latin America and the Caribbean) of the programme budget for the biennium 2010–2011 and to report, in the context of his second performance report for the biennium 2010–2011, on the actual expenditure incurred;

IV

After-service health insurance: medical and dental reserve funds

Having considered the report of the Secretary-General entitled "After-service health insurance: medical and dental reserve funds" and the related report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions,

1. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General;

2. Endorses the conclusions and recommendations contained in the report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions;

3. Notes the significant variation in the levels of reserve balances maintained for the United Nations medical and dental reserve funds mentioned in the report of the Secretary-General, and therefore requests the Secretary-General to establish guidelines to ensure greater consistency in future in this regard;

4. Takes note of the information provided by the Secretariat that it will continue to use premium holidays to distribute surpluses in excess of six to seven months of costs in the CIGNA Dental, Aetna and Van Breda reserve funds and that, in relation to the Medical Insurance Plan reserve fund, this and/or other methods will be used to distribute surpluses, given the high number of surpluses available;

5. Requests the Secretary-General to include, in future performance reports on the budget, information regarding the medical and dental reserve funds, the number of months that premium holidays have been applied during the budgetary period, other surplus fund distribution methods used, and the financial impact on the budgets;

6. Recalls paragraph 3 of its resolution 64/241 of 24 December 2009, and requests the Secretary-General to include, in his report to the General Assembly at its sixty-seventh session, an analysis of options for the judicious use of reserves in excess of reasonable industry and United Nations standards, in the context of the forthcoming analysis of pay-as-you-go and long-term financing strategies for after-service health insurance liabilities;

V

Revised estimates under the programme budget for the biennium 2010–2011 relating to the Office of the Special Representative of the Secretary-General on Sexual Violence in Conflict

Having considered the report of the Secretary-General on revised estimates under the programme budget for the biennium 2010–2011 relating to the Office of the Special Representative of the Secretary-General on Sexual Violence in Conflict and the related report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions,

1. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General;

2. Reaffirms that the Fifth Committee is the Main Committee of the General Assembly entrusted with responsibility for administrative and budgetary matters, and reaffirms the role of the Committee in carrying out a thorough analysis of and approving human and financial resources and policies, with a view to ensuring the full, effective and efficient implementation of all mandated programmes and activities and the implementation of policies in this regard;

3. Also reaffirms its role with regard to the structure of the Secretariat, and stresses that proposals to amend the overall departmental structure, as well as the format of the programme budget and the biennial programme plan, are subject to its review and prior approval;

4. Endorses the conclusions and recommendations contained in the report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions, subject to the provisions of the present resolution;

5. Recalls paragraph 7 of the report of the Advisory Committee, and expresses concern about the apparent failure of the Secretary-General to follow the procedure for establishing posts funded through extrabudgetary resources, as set forth in General Assembly resolution 35/217 of 17 December 1980;

6. Recognizes the strategic role played by senior-level staff in the work of the Organization, and in this regard recalls paragraph 33 of its resolution 64/243 and requests the Secretary-General to continue to provide the General Assembly with comprehensive information on all decisions involving established and temporary high-level posts, including equivalent positions financed from the regular budget and from extrabudgetary resources;

7. Expresses concern over the lack of detailed analysis presented by the Secretary-General with regard to costing the establishment of a website for the Office of the Special Representative of the Secretary-General on Sexual Violence in Conflict;

8. Requests the Secretary-General to take all steps necessary to ensure the maximum level of cooperation, coordination and integration of efforts in order to avoid duplication and overlaps between the Office of the Special Representative of the Secretary-General on Sexual Violence in Conflict and other relevant entities, including the United Nations Entity for Gender Equality and the Empowerment of Women (UN-Women), the Special Representative of the Secretary-General for Children and Armed Conflict, and the Special Representative of the Secretary-General on Violence against Children, and also requests the Secretary-General to report to the General Assembly on his efforts in this regard in the context of the proposed programme budget for the biennium 2012–2013;

9. Also requests the Secretary-General to provide detailed information on the function of the team of experts and the specific types of funding of the posts and positions used, and to report thereon to the General Assembly in the context of the proposed programme budget for the biennium 2012–2013;

10. Further requests the Secretary-General to ensure that the most cost-effective, timely and secure services, as well as support-related issues, are considered in the creation of a website for the Office of the Special Representative of the Secretary-General on Sexual Violence in Conflict;

11. Recalls paragraph 13 of the report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions, and requests the Secretary-General to consider, as appropriate, through the relevant offices, including the Department of Public Information and the Office of Information and Communications Technology of the Secretariat, the cost-effective and timely provision of such services in-house;

12. Decides to establish nine posts (1 Under-Secretary-General, 1 D-1, 1 P-5, 1 P-4, 2 P-3 and 3 General Service (Other level)) for the Office of the Special Representative of the Secretary-General on Sexual Violence in Conflict, effective 1 January 2011, under the programme budget for the biennium 2010–2011;

13. Also decides to appropriate a total amount of 1,724,900 dollars, at 2010–2011 initial rates, under the programme budget for the biennium 2010–2011, comprising 1,127,000 dollars under section 1 (Overall policymaking, direction and coordination), 462,900 dollars under section 28 D (Office of Central Support Services), and 135,000 dollars under section 36 (Staff assessment), to be offset by a corresponding amount under income section 1 (Income from staff assessment);

VI

Revised proposal for the use of regular budget resources for the normative support functions of the United Nations Entity for Gender Equality and the Empowerment of Women

Recalling its resolution 64/289 of 2 July 2010,

Having considered the report of the Secretary-General on the revised proposal for the use of regular budget resources for the normative support functions of the United Nations Entity for Gender Equality and the Empowerment of Women (UN-Women), and the related report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions,

1. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General;

2. Endorses the conclusions and recommendations contained in the report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions, subject to the provisions of the present resolution;

3. Welcomes the establishment of UN-Women as an important ongoing effort by the Organization to strengthen its system-wide capacity to achieve gender equality and the empowerment of women and to lead, coordinate and promote the accountability of the United Nations system in its work;

4. Stresses the importance of the fundamental principles of universality and national ownership for the work of UN-Women;

5. Requests the Secretary-General to take all steps necessary to ensure the maximum level of cooperation, coordination and integration of efforts in order to avoid duplication and overlaps between UN-Women and other relevant entities, including the Office of the Special Representative of the Secretary-General on Sexual Violence in Conflict, the Special Representative of the Secretary-General for Children and Armed Conflict, and the Special Representative of the Secretary-General on Violence against Children, and also requests the Secretary-General to report to the General Assembly on his efforts in this regard in the context of the proposed programme budget for the biennium 2012–2013;

6. Recalls paragraph 13 of the report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions, and encourages UN-Women to make the best possible use of human and financial resources at its disposal, without undermining the implementation of mandated programmes and activities;

7. Notes that, for the biennium 2010–2011, 1.4 per cent of the total estimated budget for UN-Women is proposed to be financed from the regular budget, and that most of the senior management posts, at the Assistant Secretary-General and Director levels included in the organizational chart, were proposed to be funded through voluntary contributions;

8. Requests the Secretary-General to further elaborate, in the proposed programme budget for the biennium 2012–2013, the normative intergovernmental processes undertaken by UN-Women to implement its mandate, as referred to in paragraph 75 of its resolution 64/289, in order to specify whether the activities of UN-Women, including administrative, evaluation, coordination, research and analytical policy functions, would support or be considered normative intergovernmental processes; operational intergovernmental processes and operational activities; or a combination thereof;

9. Also requests the Secretary-General to reflect, in the proposed programme budget for the biennium 2012–2013, the necessary budget allocation resulting from the information requested in paragraph 8 above so as to ensure an appropriate source of funding of the financial resources required, including the funding of senior-level posts;

10. Recalls its resolution 58/269 of 23 December 2003, and requests the Secretary-General to submit a revised strategic framework for the bienniums 2010–2011 and 2012–2013 reflecting the revision of the programmatic aspects arising from the creation of UN-Women through the Committee for Programme and Coordination, to the General Assembly at its sixty-sixth session for consideration;

11. Emphasizes the importance of adequate and transparent financing for UN-Women for the effective discharge of its mandate;

12. Approves the use of a grant arrangement pertaining to the regular budget portion of UN-Women, as proposed in paragraphs 19 to 21 of the report of the Secretary-General, and decides that posts financed by the grant from the regular budget shall be requested on a post-by-post basis in future regular budget proposals;

13. Stresses that the use of the grant modality should not lessen in any way the requirement for detailed reporting to the General Assembly on the utilization of regular budget resources;

14. Reiterates its decision that the composition and selection of staff of UN-Women shall be in accordance with the provisions of Article 101 of the Charter of the United Nations, with due regard to geographical representation and gender balance;

15. Decides to establish three new posts (1 Under-Secretary-General, 1 D-2 and 1 General Service (Other level)) under section 37 (UN-Women) of the programme budget for the biennium 2010–2011;

16. Also decides to approve an additional amount of 430,100 dollars, at 2010–2011 initial rates, under the programme budget for the biennium 2010–2011, comprising 367,800 dollars under section 37 (UN-Women), and 62,300 dollars under section 36 (Staff assessment), to be offset by a corresponding amount under income section 1 (Income from staff assessment);

17. Further decides that the additional amount of 430,100 dollars would represent a charge against the contingency fund for the biennium 2010–2011;

VII

Revised estimates resulting from resolutions and decisions adopted by the Economic and Social Council at its substantive session of 2010

Having considered the report of the Secretary-General on revised estimates resulting from resolutions and decisions adopted by the Economic and Social Council at its substantive session of 2010 and the related report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions,

1. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General;
2. Endorses the conclusions and recommendations contained in the report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions;
3. Approves, under section 16 (International drug control, crime and terrorism prevention and criminal justice) of the programme budget, the redeployment of one P-5 post of Chief, Strategic Planning Unit, from subprogramme 2 (Policy and trend analysis) to executive direction and management, as Chief, Independent Evaluation Unit;

Having considered the report of the Secretary-General on revised estimates resulting from the increase in the membership of the Subcommittee on Prevention of Torture and Other Cruel, Inhuman or Degrading Treatment or Punishment pursuant to article 5 of the Optional Protocol and the related report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions,

1. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General;
2. Endorses the conclusions and recommendations contained in the report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions;
3. Decides to establish six temporary posts for the year 2011, within existing resources, as follows: (a) two P-5 and two P-4 posts, under section 2 (General Assembly and Economic and Social Council affairs and conference management) and (b) one P-3 and one General Service (Other level) posts, under section 23 (Human rights) and requests the Secretary-General to report on the expenditures incurred, in the context of his second performance report on the programme budget for the biennium 2010–2011;
4. Also decides to approve, as a charge against the contingency fund for the biennium 2010–2011, an amount of 791,800 dollars, at 2010–2011 initial rates, for non-post resources, comprising 36,600 dollars under section 28E (Administration, Geneva) and 755,200 dollars under section 23 (Human rights) of the programme budget for the biennium;

XII

Request for a subvention to the Special Court for Sierra Leone

Recalling its resolution 58/284 of 8 April 2004, section VII of its resolution 59/276 of 23 December 2004, and section II of its resolution 59/294 of 22 June 2005,

Having considered the report of the Secretary-General on the request for a subvention to the Special Court for Sierra Leone and the related report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions,

1. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General;
2. Endorses the conclusions and recommendations contained in the report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions, subject to the provisions of the present resolution;
3. Takes note of paragraphs 15 and 16 of the report of the Advisory Committee;
4. Notes, as an exceptional measure, the funding requirement for the Special Court for Sierra Leone of up to 12,239,344 dollars, covering the periods from 1 January to 31 December 2011 and from 1 January to 29 February 2012, to supplement the voluntary financial resources of the Court;
5. Authorizes the Secretary-General, as an exceptional measure, to enter into commitments in an amount not to exceed 9,882,594 dollars to supplement the voluntary financial resources of the Special Court, for the period from 1 January to 31 December 2011;

6. Decides that the amount referred to in paragraph 5 above is authorized on the understanding that:

(a) Any regular budget funds appropriated for the Special Court will be refunded to the United Nations at the time of the liquidation of the Court, should sufficient voluntary contributions be received;

(b) The United Nations Secretariat and the Management Committee, the Registrar and other senior officials of the Special Court will intensify their efforts to fund the activities of the Court through voluntary contributions;

7. Requests the Secretary-General to report to the General Assembly at its sixty-sixth session on the implementation of the present resolution;

XIII

Estimates in respect of special political missions, good offices and other political initiatives authorized by the General Assembly and/or the Security Council, and implementation of Assembly resolution 63/261 on the strengthening of the Department of Political Affairs

Recalling its resolutions 64/244 A and B of 24 December 2009, section VI of its resolution 64/245 of 24 December 2009 and section IV of its resolution 64/260 of 29 March 2010,

Recalling also its resolution 63/261 of 24 December 2008 on the strengthening of the Department of Political Affairs of the Secretariat,

Recalling further the Regulations and Rules Governing Programme Planning, the Programme Aspects of the Budget, the Monitoring of Implementation and the Methods of Evaluation, and the Financial Regulations and Rules of the United Nations,

Reaffirming the role of the General Assembly and its relevant intergovernmental and expert bodies, within their respective mandates, in planning, programming, budgeting, monitoring and evaluation,

Having considered the reports of the Secretary-General on estimates in respect of special political missions, good offices and other political initiatives authorized by the General Assembly and/or the Security Council and on the implementation of Assembly resolution 63/261 on the strengthening of the Department of Political Affairs, as well as the related report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions,

1. Takes note of the reports of the Secretary-General;
2. Endorses the conclusions and recommendations contained in the report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions subject to the provisions of the present resolution;
3. Welcomes the continuing efforts by the Department of Political Affairs to fulfil the requirements of resolution 63/261, and in this regard requests that further efforts be made to ensure the full implementation thereof;
4. Regrets the recurrent late introduction of the reports on the matter under consideration, which hinders their proper examination by the General Assembly, and requests the Secretary-General and the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions to submit their reports in a timely manner;

5. Reaffirms paragraphs 38 to 41 of resolution 64/243, and recalls paragraph 16 of the report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions, and in this regard requests the Secretary-General to provide the information referred to therein in future proposed budgets for special political missions;

6. Stresses that budget presentations for special political missions should consistently include information on actual and budgeted vacancy rates, and resource requirement changes, a clear description of the functions of new positions proposed, and organizational charts, including current and proposed posts and grade levels, and should indicate whether a position proposed reflects the resubmission of a previous request;

7. Recalls its resolutions 61/279 of 29 June 2007 and 62/250 of 20 June 2008 and section VI of its resolution 64/245 of 24 December 2009, as well as paragraph 12 of the report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions, and requests the Secretary-General to conduct a thorough review of the current funding and backstopping arrangements for the special political missions with a view to identifying possible alternatives, and to report thereon to the General Assembly at its sixty-sixth session;

8. Stresses the need for greater transparency in the presentation of resources for travel and consultancies under thematic cluster II so that the General Assembly may make well-informed decisions regarding the resource requirements for special political missions;

9. Takes note of paragraph 26 of the report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions, and requests the Secretary-General to submit proposals for more cost-effective support arrangements for all special political missions in the context of his next report on those missions;

10. Encourages increased cooperation between and among missions operating in the same geographical location with a view to achieving efficiency and cost-effectiveness;

11. Takes note of paragraph 43 of the report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions, and decides to approve the three positions for the Office of the Special Adviser to the Secretary-General on the Prevention of Genocide, as proposed by the Secretary-General;

12. Requests the Secretary-General to make additional efforts to ensure that support sought in the form of consultancies is not already available in-house or in situ;

13. Notes the intention of the Secretary-General to establish a support office in Kuwait for the United Nations Assistance Mission in Afghanistan, and requests the Secretary-General to explore possibilities for cost-sharing between the United Nations Assistance Mission in Afghanistan and the United Nations Assistance Mission for Iraq and to report to the General Assembly in the context of his proposed programme budget for the biennium 2012–2013;

14. Requests the Secretary-General to submit resource requirements for 2011 for the United Nations Integrated Office in Burundi or its successor for consideration by the General Assembly at the first part of its resumed sixty-fifth session;

15. Notes that the interim funding provided for the United Nations Integrated Office should not affect the contractual conditions of the staff;

16. Approves budgets totalling 643,094,800 dollars gross (631,162,600 dollars net) for the twenty-nine special political missions authorized by the General Assembly and/or the Security Council, as listed in table 1 of the report of the Secretary-General;

17. Decides to appropriate, under the procedure provided for in paragraph 11 of annex I to General Assembly resolution 41/213 of 19 December 1986, an amount of 200,689,200 dollars under section 3 (Political affairs) of the programme budget for the biennium 2010–2011;

18. Also decides to appropriate an amount of 11,932,100 dollars under section 36 (Staff assessment), to be offset by a corresponding amount under income section 1 (Income from staff assessment) of the programme budget for the biennium 2010–2011;

XIV

Revised security management framework and revised estimates under section 5 (Peacekeeping operations) of the programme budget for the biennium 2010–2011 relating to a strengthened and unified security management system for the United Nations

Recalling its resolutions 64/243, 64/244 A and B and 64/245,

Having considered the report of the Secretary-General on the revised security management framework and revised estimates under section 5 (Peacekeeping operations) of the programme budget for the biennium 2010–2011 relating to a strengthened and unified security management system for the United Nations, and the related report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions,

1. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General;

2. Endorses the conclusions and recommendations contained in the report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions, subject to the provisions of the present resolution;

3. Reaffirms that the Organization is based on the principle of the sovereign equality of all its Members, and notes with concern that, during the general debate of the General Assembly at its sixty-fifth session, the movement of some heads of delegation on the United Nations premises was restricted, and requests the Secretary-General to ensure that due protocol and equal treatment are uniformly accorded to all heads of delegation;

4. Requests the Secretary-General to ensure that access for heads of delegation and their respective vehicles to the United Nations premises is not unduly restricted, in particular during the general debate;

5. Takes note of the revised framework for accountability for the United Nations security management system;

6. Reaffirms the importance of ensuring the safety and security of United Nations staff, operations and premises;

7. Also reaffirms that the primary responsibility for ensuring the safety and security of the United Nations staff and premises rests with the host country, and emphasizes the role of the relevant host country agreements in defining this responsibility;

8. Stresses the importance of close coordination and consultation with host Governments in operationalizing the new security level system from 1 January 2011;

9. Requests the Secretary-General to submit to the General Assembly at its sixty-seventh session detailed information and analysis on the effectiveness of the new security level system within the context of the report on a comprehensive safety and security policy framework at the United Nations, which provides the basis for threat and risk assessment, cooperation with the host countries, cost-sharing arrangements and operations of the Department of Safety and Security of the Secretariat;

10. Recalls paragraph 16 of the report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions, notes that the Operational Working Group of the Steering Committee on Safety and Security of the High-level Committee on Management is examining the question of programme criticality with a view to establishing clear definitions and a clear framework for decision-making, and requests the Secretary-General to report the conclusions of the High-level Working Group on Programme Criticality to the General Assembly at its sixty-sixth session for consideration;

11. Decides not to approve one armoured truck for Srinagar;

12. Decides to approve the establishment, effective 1 January 2011, of one Chief Security Officer post at the P-4 level and one Security Information Assistant post at the Local level for the United Nations Military Observer Group in India and Pakistan under the programme budget for the biennium 2010–2011;

13. Also decides to appropriate a total amount of 3,041,100 dollars, at 2010–2011 initial rates, under the programme budget for the biennium 2010–2011, comprising increases of 3,018,700 dollars under section 5 (Peacekeeping operations) and 22,400 dollars under section 36 (Staff assessment), to be offset by a corresponding amount under income section 1 (Income from staff assessment);

XV

Financial implications of the administration of justice at the United Nations

Recalling its resolution 65/251 of 24 December 2010 on the administration of justice at the United Nations,

1. Decides to approve a total amount of 1,148,000 dollars, at 2010–2011 initial rates, under the programme budget for the biennium 2010–2011, reflecting an increase comprising 109,900 dollars under section 1 (Overall policymaking, direction and coordination), 1 million dollars under section 2 (General Assembly and Economic and Social Council affairs and conference management) and 38,100 dollars under section 28D (Office of Central Support Services);

2. Also decides that the additional amount of 1,148,000 dollars would represent a charge against the contingency fund for the biennium 2010–2011;

3. Further decides to establish one temporary P-3 position in Nairobi, effective 1 January 2011, to be funded from the budget of the support account for peacekeeping operations for the period from 1 July 2010 to 30 June 2011, and requests the Secretary-General to report to the General Assembly on the related costs in the context of the performance report on the support account for the period;

XVI

Administrative and financial implications of the decisions and recommendations contained in the report of the International Civil Service Commission for 2010

Recalling its resolution 65/248 of 24 December 2010, entitled “United Nations common system: report of the International Civil Service Commission”,

1. Takes note of the statement submitted by the Secretary-General in accordance with rule 153 of the rules of procedure of the General Assembly on the administrative and financial implications of the decisions and recommendations contained in the report of the International Civil Service Commission for 2010 and the related report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions;

2. Recalls paragraph 1 of section A.1 and the operative paragraphs of sections B.1 and B.3 of its resolution 65/248;

3. Requests the Secretary-General to report, in the context of the performance reports for the biennium 2010–2011, on any requirements arising from the implementation of paragraph 2 above;

XVII

Information and communications technology

Recalling section II of its resolution 60/283 of 7 July 2006, and its resolutions 62/250 of 20 June 2008, 63/262 of 24 December 2008, 63/269 of 7 April 2009 and 64/243 of 24 December 2009,

Having considered the report of the Secretary-General on the status of implementation of the information and communications technology strategy for the United Nations Secretariat and the related report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions,

1. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General;

2. Endorses the conclusions and recommendations contained in the report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions, subject to the provisions of the present resolution;

3. Underlines the importance of information and communications technology in meeting the growing demands of the Organization as it becomes increasingly reliant on its information and communications technology infrastructure;

4. Also underlines the importance of information and communications technology in strengthening oversight and accountability and in increasing the availability of accurate and timely information to support decision-making;

5. Re-emphasizes the importance of strong central leadership for the establishment and implementation of Organization-wide information and communications technology standards and activities in order to ensure the efficient utilization of resources, the modernization of information systems and improvement in the information and communications technology services available to the United Nations;

6. Recalls the mandate of the Office of Information and Communications Technology of the Secretariat, as approved in resolution 63/262;

7. Welcomes the comprehensive structural review and the presentation of an Organization-wide perspective on information and communications technology resources and the information and communications technology environment;

8. Requests the Secretary-General to review the proposals contained in his report and to submit new and/or revised proposals to the General Assembly in the context of the proposed programme budget for the biennium 2012–2013;

9. Also requests the Secretary-General to report on the progress made in the establishment of a secondary data centre as described in paragraph 71 of his report, including, as appropriate, financial resources proposed for its implementation, in the context of the proposed programme budget for the biennium 2012–2013;

10. Further requests the Secretary-General to submit to the General Assembly more than one option for locating any other future facilities related to the information and communications technology strategy;

11. Recalls paragraph 10 (c) of section I of its resolution 63/262, and regrets that the report of the Secretary-General did not contain an in-depth assessment of the organizational arrangement of the Office of Information and Communications Technology;

12. Requests the Secretary-General to submit, for consideration by the General Assembly at its sixty-eighth session, a comprehensive report on the most appropriate organizational arrangements for the Office of Information and Communications Technology, including the possibility of changing the placement of the Office within the structure of the Organization;

13. Decides not to approve any funding related to projects 1 or 2;

14. Authorizes the Secretary-General to proceed with the implementation of project 3 (rationalize information and communications technology organization), and decides that funding in the amount of 1.5 million dollars shall be provided from within the resources approved for the biennium 2010–2011 and that actual expenditure will be reported in the context of the second performance report on the programme budget for the biennium;

15. Recalls paragraph 101 (c) of the report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions, and decides to approve general temporary assistance equivalent to seven P-4 positions for 2011, of which five positions are to be met from within existing resources, and that actual expenditure will be reported in the context of the second performance report;

16. Decides to approve additional resources amounting to 254,166 dollars, to be appropriated as follows:

(a) Regular budget:

(i) An amount of 140,190 dollars, at 2010–2011 initial rates, for the biennium 2010–2011, comprising 63,390 dollars under section 29 (Office of Information and Communications Technology) and 76,800 dollars under section 28 D (Office of Central Support Services), which would represent a charge against the contingency fund;

(ii) An amount of 7,770 dollars under section 36 (Staff assessment), to be offset by an equivalent amount under income section 1 (Income from staff assessment);

(b) Support account for peacekeeping operations:

An amount of 106,206 dollars under the support account for the period from 1 July 2010 to 30 June 2011; and to finance an amount of 78,798 dollars from extrabudgetary resources;

XVIII

First performance report on the programme budget for the biennium 2010–2011

Having considered the first performance report of the Secretary-General on the programme budget for the biennium 2010–2011 and the related report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions,

Recalling its resolutions 64/244 A and B of 24 December 2009, 64/260 of 29 March 2010 and 64/288 of 24 June 2010,

1. Reaffirms the budgetary process as approved in its resolutions 41/213 of 19 December 1986 and 42/211 of 21 December 1987 and reaffirmed in subsequent resolutions;

2. Takes note of the first performance report of the Secretary-General;

3. Endorses the observations and recommendations contained in the report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions, subject to the provisions of the present resolution;

4. Recalls section III of its resolution 60/283 as well as section III of its resolution 64/260, and requests the Secretary-General to implement their provisions and to report thereon in the context of his second performance report for the biennium 2010–2011;

5. Requests the Secretary-General to continue to ensure that, whenever new proposals lead to requests for additional resources, including when activities are taken forward with commitment authority, sufficient efforts are made to meet the new requirements using existing resources without undermining the implementation of mandated programmes and activities;

6. Takes note of paragraph 21 of the report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions, and stresses that the United Nations is a non-profit organization;

7. Approves a net decrease of 15.3 million dollars in the appropriation approved for the biennium 2010–2011 and a net increase of 26.2 million dollars in the estimates of income for the biennium, to be apportioned among expenditure and income sections as indicated in the first performance report of the Secretary-General;

Special subjects relating to the programme budget for 2010–2011

In March, the General Assembly had before it the Secretary-General's report on the financing of the core diplomatic training activities of the United Nations Institute for Training and Research [YUN 2008, p. 1246] and the related ACABQ report [YUN 2009, p. 1109]; the Secretary-General's report on revised estimates of the programme budget for the 2010–2011 biennium relating to the Emergency Preparedness and Support Unit and the related ACABQ report (see p. 1478); the Secretary-General's report on limited budgetary discretion [YUN 2009, p. 1394] and the related ACABQ report [ibid.]; and the Secretary-General's January report on estimates in respect of special political missions, good offices and other political initiatives authorized by the Assembly and/or the Security Council: additional requirements for special political missions for 2010 and the related ACABQ report (see p. 1427).

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 29 March [meeting 81], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee [A/64/548/Add.2], adopted resolution 64/260 without vote [agenda item 132].

Special subjects relating to the programme budget for the biennium 2010–2011

The General Assembly,

I

Financing of the United Nations Institute for Training and Research

Recalling section X of its resolution 59/276 of 23 December 2004 and section XII of its resolution 60/248 of 23 December 2005,

Having considered the report of the Secretary-General on the financing of the core diplomatic training activities of the United Nations Institute for Training and Research and the related report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions,

1. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General and the related report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions;

2. Welcomes the Institute's 2010–2012 strategic plan and the priority assigned to mobilizing self-generated income through the implementation of the Institute's new business model;

3. Also welcomes in that context the Institute's initiative to create a fellowship fund which would be established with the purpose of ensuring that core diplomatic training remains a service for all Member States by defraying the costs of core diplomatic training to diplomats from developing countries and least-developed countries;

4. Appeals to Member States, private institutions and other entities to give financial support to the fellowship fund;

II

Revised estimates under sections 28 C (Office of Human Resources Management), 28D (Office of Central Support Services) and 36 (Staff assessment) of the programme budget for the biennium 2010–2011 relating to the Emergency Preparedness and Support Unit

Recalling its resolution 64/243 of 24 December 2009,

Recognizing the risk to United Nations personnel resulting from malicious acts, natural disasters and other emergency situations,

Stressing the duty of the Organization to care for United Nations personnel and their family members affected by such incidents,

Having considered the report of the Secretary-General on revised estimates under sections 28 C (Office of Human Resources Management), 28D (Office of Central Support Services) and 36 (Staff assessment) of the programme budget for the biennium 2010–2011 relating to the Emergency Preparedness and Support Unit, as well as the related report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions,

1. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General;

2. Endorses the conclusions and recommendations contained in the report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions, subject to the provisions of the present resolution;

3. Emphasizes the importance of emergency preparedness and support for victims and affected families;

4. Requests the Secretary-General to address, as a matter of priority, the needs of the families of United Nations personnel who are victims of malicious acts, natural disasters and other emergency incidents;

5. Also requests the Secretary-General to address, as a matter of priority, the needs specific to United Nations staff directly affected by malicious acts, natural disasters and other emergency situations in the immediate aftermath of such incidents;

6. Stresses the need for a comprehensive and coordinated approach to emergency management, including preparedness and support based on close cooperation and the sharing of best practices and lessons learned among relevant units, agencies, funds and programmes, and on a systematic analysis of existing capacities;

7. Takes note of paragraphs 13 and 15 to 20 of the report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions;

8. Decides to approve two P-5, one P-4, one P-2 and one General Service (Other level) positions for the emergency preparedness and support team, to be funded from general temporary assistance;

9. Also decides to approve an additional amount of 2,745,000 United States dollars for the biennium 2010–2011 under sections 28C (Office of Human Resources Management) (2,249,800 dollars), 28D (Office of Central Support Services) (261,900 dollars), and 36 (Staff assessment) (233,300 dollars), to be offset by a corresponding amount under income section 1 (Income from staff assessment) of the programme budget for the biennium 2010–2011;

10. Further decides that the additional amount of 2,745,000 dollars would represent a charge against the contingency fund;

11. Requests the Secretary-General to develop a comprehensive emergency management framework, including, inter alia, emergency preparedness and victim support components, which would draw upon international best practices, and to submit a proposal in the context of the proposed programme budget for the biennium 2012–2013;

III

Limited budgetary discretion

Recalling section III of its resolution 60/283 of 7 July 2006 and paragraph 142 of its resolution 64/243 of 24 December 2009,

Having considered the report of the Secretary-General on limited budgetary discretion and the related report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions,

1. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General;
2. Endorses the conclusions and recommendations contained in the report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions;

IV

Estimates in respect of special political missions, good offices and other political initiatives authorized by the General Assembly and/or the Security Council

Recalling its resolution 64/244 A of 24 December 2009 and section VI of its resolution 64/245 of 24 December 2009,

Having considered the report of the Secretary-General entitled “Estimates in respect of special political missions, good offices and other political initiatives authorized by the General Assembly and/or the Security Council: additional requirements for special political missions for the period from 1 January to 31 December 2010”, as well as the related report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions,

1. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General;
2. Endorses the conclusions and recommendations contained in the report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions;
3. Approves, for 2010, additional requirements totaling 1,021,900 dollars gross (1,020,800 dollars net) for the United Nations Representative on the International

Advisory and Monitoring Board of the Development Fund for Iraq, the Analytical Support and Sanctions Monitoring Team established pursuant to Security Council resolution 1526(2004) concerning Al-Qaida and the Taliban and associated individuals and entities and the Monitoring Group on Somalia;

4. Decides that the additional requirements shall be accommodated from the provision of 569,526,500 dollars approved for the biennium 2010–2011 by the General Assembly in its resolution 64/245.

Working capital fund

The General Assembly established the Working Capital Fund for the 2010–2011 biennium at $150 million in 2009 [YUN 2009, p. 1409]. As in the past, the Fund was to be used to finance appropriations, pending the receipt of assessed contributions, to pay for unforeseen and extraordinary expenses, as well as for miscellaneous self-liquidating purchases and advance insurance premiums, and to enable the Tax Equalization Fund to meet commitments pending the accumulation of credits.

In December, the Secretariat issued an assessment [ST/ADM/SER.B/828] of Member States’ advances to the Fund and contributions to the UN regular budget as at 31 December 2010.

Unforeseen and extraordinary expenses

Under the terms of General Assembly resolution 64/246 [YUN 2009, p. 1409], the Secretary-General was authorized, with the prior concurrence of ACABQ, to enter into commitments to meet unforeseen and extraordinary expenses arising during or subsequent to the 2010–2011 biennium, without reverting to the Assembly for approval.

In his first performance report [A/65/589] on the 2010–2011 programme budget, the Secretary-General informed the Assembly that he had entered into commitments in the amount of $6,911,200, of which $6,501,200 was for activities relating to the maintenance of peace and security and $410,000 was for commitments certified by the President of the International Court of Justice as relating to unforeseen expenses in respect of the Court.

Programme budget outline for 2012–2013

Report of Secretary-General. In November [A/65/560 & Corr.1], the Secretary-General presented the proposed programme budget outline for the 2012–2013 biennium, describing the preliminary estimates of resources, priorities, real growth compared with the previous budget, and the size of the contingency fund as a percentage of the overall level of resources. The preliminary estimate for the 2012–2013 biennium, expressed in 2010–2011 prices, amounted to $5,456.1 million.

The preliminary estimate ($4,215.9 million), before the inclusion of special political missions, represented an increase of $56.9 million, or 1.4 per cent, compared with the 2010–2011 biennium. Taking account of the full inclusion of provisions for those missions, the total preliminary estimate of $5,456.1 million represented an increase of $297.1 million, or 5.8 per cent, compared with the 2010–2011 biennium.

Noting that the size of the contingency fund was set at 0.75 per cent of the overall resource level, the Secretary-General recommended that the level again be set at the same rate, or $40.9 million, for the 2012–2013 biennium.

ACABQ report. With regard to the preliminary estimate of $5,456.1 million for the 2012–2013 budget outline, ACABQ, in December [A/65/611], agreed with the adjustments proposed by the Secretary-General to reflect the delayed impact in 2012–2013 of regular budget posts established during the current biennium and the non-requirement for resources provided in the 2010–2011 biennium for one-time costs. As for the estimated increase of $81.0 million proposed to account for programmatic changes during the 2012–2013 biennium, the Committee was of the view that, when presenting his budget proposals, the Secretary-General should demonstrate that he had exhausted all the opportunities offered by the review process. It was premature to conclude that additional resources would be required to accommodate those changes. Expressing its concern about the potential budgetary impact of extending positions funded under general temporary assistance that were originally approved for time-limited functions, the Committee recommended that the Secretary-General provide the Assembly with an indication of the number of positions funded under general temporary assistance during the 2010–2011 biennium and the functions associated with those positions. It also recommended that the level of the contingency fund remain at 0.75 per cent.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 24 December [meeting 73], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee [A/64/645], adopted resolution 65/262 without vote [agenda item 128].

Proposed programme budget outline for the biennium 2012–2013

The General Assembly,

Reaffirming its resolution 41/213 of 19 December 1986, in which it requested the Secretary-General to submit in off-budget years an outline of the proposed programme budget for the following biennium,

Reaffirming also section VI of its resolution 45/248 B of 21 December 1990,

Reaffirming further rule 153 of its rules of procedure,

Recalling its resolution 58/269 of 23 December 2003,

Having considered the report of the Secretary-General on the proposed programme budget outline for the biennium 2012–2013 and the recommendations contained in the related report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions,

1. Endorses the observations and recommendations contained in the report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions;

2. Reaffirms that the Fifth Committee is the appropriate Main Committee of the General Assembly entrusted with responsibilities for administrative and budgetary matters;

3. Emphasizes that the proposed programme budget outline should be submitted sufficiently early in order that it may serve as a practical tool in the budget preparation process and, in this regard, requests the Secretary-General to issue future budget outlines at least thirty days prior to their scheduled introduction, but no later than 15 November of the off-budget year;

4. Reaffirms that the budget outline should provide a greater level of predictability of resources required for the following biennium and promote greater involvement of Member States in the budgetary process, thereby facilitating the broadest possible agreement on the programme budget;

5. Also reaffirms that the proposed programme budget outline shall contain an indication of the following:

(a) A preliminary estimate of resources needed to accommodate the proposed programme of activities during the biennium;

(b) Priorities, reflecting general trends of a broad sectoral nature;

(c) Real growth, positive or negative, compared with the previous budget;

(d) Size of the contingency fund expressed as a percentage of the overall level of resources;

6. Notes that the budget proposal will reflect the benefit of further reviews of possible obsolete activities, additional cost-effective measures and simplified procedures and, in this regard, requests the Secretary-General to rigorously pursue this in accordance with regulation 5.6 of the Regulations and Rules Governing Programme Planning, the Programme Aspects of the Budget, the Monitoring of Implementation and the Methods of Evaluation, and established practices;

7. Reaffirms that the budget proposals of the Secretary-General should reflect resource levels commensurate with mandates for their full, efficient and effective implementation;

8. Stresses that the budget outline is a preliminary estimate of resources;

9. Invites the Secretary-General to prepare his proposed programme budget for the biennium 2012–2013 on the basis of a preliminary estimate of 5,396,697,200 United States dollars at revised 2010–2011 rates;

10. Decides that the proposed programme budget for the biennium 2012–2013 shall contain provisions for re-costing on the basis of the existing methodology;

11. Reiterates its request to the Secretary-General to include, in the proposed programme budget for the biennium nium 2012–2013, the total amount of resources that he should have at his disposal, from all sources of financing, in order to implement fully all mandated programmes and activities;

12. Notes that the preliminary estimates provided by the Secretary-General for the proposed programme budget for the biennium 2012–2013 do not include provisions for the implementation of those requirements that are under discussion by the General Assembly and that the requirements pertinent to the regular budget should be reflected in the programme budget for the biennium 2012–2013, subject to approval by the Assembly and in accordance with its resolutions 41/213 of 19 December 1986 and 42/211 of 21 December 1987;

13. Decides that the priorities for the biennium 2012–2013 shall be the following:

(a) Promotion of sustained economic growth and sustainable development, in accordance with the relevant resolutions of the General Assembly and recent United Nations conferences;

(b) Maintenance of international peace and security;

(c) Development of Africa;

(d) Promotion of human rights;

(e) Effective coordination of humanitarian assistance efforts;

(f) Promotion of justice and international law;

(g) Disarmament;

(h) Drug control, crime prevention and combating international terrorism in all its forms and manifestations;

14. Requests the Secretary-General to reflect the priorities outlined in paragraph 13 above when presenting the proposed programme budget for the biennium 2012–2013;

15. Reaffirms its request to the Secretary-General to propose, in future budget submissions, measures to offset budget increases, wherever possible, without undermining the implementation of mandated programmes and activities;

16. Decides that the contingency fund shall be set at the level of 0.75 per cent of the preliminary estimate, namely, at 40,475,200 dollars, that this amount shall be in addition to the overall level of the preliminary estimate, and that it shall be used in accordance with the procedures for the use and operation of the contingency fund.

Contributions

According to the Secretary-General's report [A/65/519/Add.1] on improving the financial situation of the United Nations, unpaid assessed contributions to the UN budget at the end of 2010 totalled $351 million (compared to $335 million in 2009); outstanding peacekeeping arrears were just under $2.5 billion (compared to $1.85 billion in 2009); and total unpaid assessments to the international tribunals decreased to $27 million (compared to $37 million in 2009).

The number of Member States paying their regular budget assessments in full increased slightly to 138 (compared to 136 at the end of 2009).

Assessments

The Committee on Contributions, at its seventieth session (New York, 7–25 June) [A/65/11], considered the review of the methodology for preparing the scale of assessments, multi-year payment plans, the application of Article 19 of the UN Charter and other matters. The outline of the methodology used for preparing the scale of assessments for the 2010–2012 period was annexed to the session report.

The General Assembly took action on the Committee's recommendations in October and December (see p. 1441).

Application of Article 19

Committee on Contributions. The Committee on Contributions [A/65/11] reviewed requests from six Member States for exemption under Article 19 of the UN Charter, whereby a Member would lose its vote in the General Assembly if the amount of its arrears should equal or exceed the amount of contributions due from it for the preceding two full years. The Committee noted the Members' written and oral presentations and evaluated them against their payment records and economic and political circumstances.

Having determined that the failure of the Central African Republic, the Comoros, Guinea-Bissau, Liberia, Sao Tome and Principe and Somalia to pay the full minimum amount of their arrears necessary to avoid the application of Article 19 was due to conditions beyond their control, and recalling the Article's provision that a Member might be permitted to vote due to such conditions, the Committee recommended that they be allowed to vote until the end of the sixty-fifth session of the Assembly. The Committee urged the Central African Republic, which had not made a contribution in over a decade, and Sao Tome and Principe, which had made no payment since 2002, to consider the multi-year payment plan system, and to at least pay amounts equivalent to their current annual assessments. It expressed appreciation for the efforts of Liberia to address its arrears by making an annual payment, more than three times its annual assessment, thereby contributing to reducing its arrears. It also urged the Comoros to submit a multi-year plan and to ensure that payments exceeded the level of its annual contributions.

Reports of Secretary-General. During the year, the Secretary-General reported to the Assembly on payments made by certain Member States to reduce their level of arrears below that specified in Article 19, so that they could vote in the Assembly. As at 20 January [A/64/631], 19 Member States were below the gross amount assessed for the preceding two full years (2008–2009). By a series of letters from February to May [A/64/631/Add.1–10] that number was reduced to six and remained at that number through 8 September [A/65/359].

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 8 October [meeting 27], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee [A/65/492], adopted resolution 65/3 without vote [agenda item 133].

Scale of assessments for the apportionment of the expenses of the United Nations: requests under Article 19 of the Charter

The General Assembly,

Having considered chapter V of the report of the Committee on Contributions on its seventieth session,

Reaffirming the obligation of Member States under Article 17 of the Charter of the United Nations to bear the expenses of the Organization as apportioned by the General Assembly,

1. Reaffirms its role in accordance with the provisions of Article 19 of the Charter of the United Nations and the advisory role of the Committee on Contributions in accordance with rule 160 of the rules of procedure of the General Assembly;

2. Also reaffirms its resolution 54/237 C of 23 December 1999;

3. Requests the Secretary-General to continue to bring to the attention of Member States the deadline specified in resolution 54/237 C, including through an early announcement in the Journal of the United Nations and through direct communication;

4. Urges all Member States requesting exemption under Article 19 of the Charter to submit as much information as possible in support of their requests and to consider submitting such information in advance of the deadline specified in resolution 54/237 C so as to enable the collation of any additional detailed information that may be necessary;

5. Agrees that the failure of the Central African Republic, the Comoros, Guinea-Bissau, Liberia, Sao Tome and Principe and Somalia to pay the full minimum amount necessary to avoid the application of Article 19 of the Charter was due to conditions beyond their control;

6. Decides that the Central African Republic, the Comoros, Guinea-Bissau, Liberia, Sao Tome and Principe and Somalia shall be permitted to vote in the General Assembly until the end of its sixty-fifth session.

Multi-year payment plans

Pursuant to General Assembly resolutions 57/4 B [YUN 2002, p. 1385] and 64/248 [YUN 2009, p. 1412], the Secretary-General submitted a March report [A/65/65] on multi-year payment plans, which provided information on the payment plans/schedules submitted by Liberia and Sao Tome and Principe, and on the status of their implementation as at 31 December 2009. Under the plans, each year a Member State would pay for the current year's assessments and a part of its arrears, so as to eliminate the arrears within six years. Liberia continued to make payments during 2010, while Sao Tome and Principe fell short of the amount foreseen in its plan. The Secretary-General recommended that the Assembly encourage Member States with significant arrears to consider submitting a multi-year payment plan.

The Committee on Contributions [A/65/11] concluded that the system of multi-year payment plans continued to serve as a viable means for Member States to reduce their unpaid assessed contributions and demonstrate their commitment to meeting their financial obligations to the United Nations. It also noted that no new multi-year payment plans had been submitted.

Other matters related to payment of assessed contributions

The General Assembly considered the recommendations of the Committee on Contributions on the methodology for future scales of assessments.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 24 December [meeting 73], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee [A/65/492/Add.1], adopted resolution 65/246 without vote [agenda item 133].

Scale of assessments for the apportionment of the expenses of the United Nations

The General Assembly,

Recalling its previous resolutions and decisions on the scale of assessments for the apportionment of the expenses of the United Nations, including its resolutions 55/5 B and C of 23 December 2000, 57/4 B of 20 December 2002, 58/1 B of 23 December 2003 and 64/248 of 24 December 2009,

Having considered the report of the Committee on Contributions on its seventieth session as well as the report of the Secretary-General on multi-year payment plans,

1. Takes note of the report of the Committee on Contributions on its seventieth session;

2. Also takes note of the report of the Secretary-General on multi-year payment plans.

On 24 December, the Assembly decided that the agenda item on the scale of assessments for the apportionment of UN expenses would remain for consideration during its resumed sixty-fifth (2011) session (decision 65/544).

Scale methodology

Pursuant to General Assembly resolution 58/1 B [YUN 2003, p. 1424], the Committee on Contributions [A/65/11] continued to review the methodology for preparing future scales of assessments, focusing on income measure, conversion rates, base period, debt-burden adjustment, low per capita income adjustment, minimum (floor) and maximum (ceiling) assessment rates, annual recalculation and large scale-to-scale increases in rates of assessments.

With regard to income measure, the Committee recommended that the scale of assessments be based on the most current, comprehensive and comparable gross national income (GNI) data. It encouraged Member States to submit the required statistical information under the 1993 System of National Accounts (SNA) [YUN 1993, p. 1112] and to take further steps to implement the 2008 SNA [YUN 2008, p. 1380] as recommended by the Statistical Commission. Following its discussions at previous sessions regarding the use of purchasing power parity rates instead of market exchange rates to convert GNI data to a common monetary unit, the Committee decided to further study that element of the methodology on the basis of additional information from the UN Statistics Division and in the light of the guidance of the Assembly. It also decided to further consider the debt-burden adjustment and the low per capita income adjustment at its next session; study the question of annual recalculation at future sessions; and consider the feasibility of applying a systematic measure of transitional relief for Member States facing large scale-to-scale increases in their assessment rates. It concluded that, once chosen, there were advantages in using the same base period for as long as possible.

Accounts and auditing

The General Assembly, at its resumed sixty-fourth (2010) session, considered the report of the Board of Auditors on UN peacekeeping operations for the period from 1 July 2008 to 30 June 2009 [A/64/5 (Vol. II)], together with the Secretary-General's report on the implementation of the Board's recommendations [A/64/702] and the related ACABQ comments and recommendations [A/64/708].

On 24 June, the Assembly, in resolution 64/268, endorsed the recommendations of the report (see p. 95).

Board of Auditors reports. The Chairman of the Board of Auditors transmitted to the Secretary-General the financial reports and audited financial statements for the biennium ended 31 December 2009 on the United Nations [A/65/5 (Vol. I)] and on the following 15 entities: the International Trade Centre UNCTAD/WTO [A/65/5 (Vol. III) & Corr.1]; the United Nations University [A/65/5 (Vol. IV)]; the Capital Master Plan [A/65/5 (Vol. V)]; the United Nations Development Programme [A/65/5/Add.1 & Corr.1]; the United Nations Children's Fund [A/65/5/Add.2]; the United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East [A/65/5/Add.3]; the United Nations Institute for Training and Research [A/65/5/Add.4]; the voluntary funds administered by the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees [A/65/5/Add.5]; the Fund of the United Nations Environment Programme [A/65/5/Add.6]; the United Nations Population Fund [A/65/5/Add.7]; the United Nations Human Settlements Programme [A/65/5/Add.8]; the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime [A/65/5/Add.9 & Corr.1]; the United Nations Office for Project Services [A/65/5/Add.10]; the International Criminal Tribunal for the Prosecution of Persons Responsible for Genocide and Other Serious Violations of International Humanitarian Law Committed in the Territory of Rwanda and Rwandan Citizens Responsible for Genocide and Other Such Violations Committed in the Territory of Neighbouring States between 1 January 1994 and 31 December 1994 [A/65/5/Add.11]; and the International Tribunal for the Prosecution of Persons Responsible for Serious Violations of International Humanitarian Law Committed in the Territory of the Former Yugoslavia Since 1991 [A/65/5/Add.12]. The Board submitted its report on the financial statements of the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Fund for the biennium ended 31 December 2009, which was incorporated into the report of the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Board [A/65/9]. The Board also submitted, through the Secretary-General, its report on the financial statements of the United Nations Compensation Commission for the biennium ended 31 December 2009 [S/2010/626].

Introducing the reports in the Fifth Committee on 15 October [A/C.5/65/SR.7], the Chair of the Board stated that nine of the reports on the financial statements reflected unmodified audit opinions, indicating that there were no material issues affecting the fair presentation of the financial statements. In the case of the United Nations Population Fund (UNFPA), however, the Board considered that a deficiency in the management of nationally executed expenditure constituted a significant risk, and it had therefore issued a qualified audit opinion on the financial statements. In the remaining six reports, and in the report on UNFPA, the Board drew attention to several issues that should be addressed urgently, including the funding of end-of-service and post-retirement liabilities, and losses on investments—both realized and unrealized—due to recent global market turmoil. The detailed reports also reflected several matters of general concern: the delay in implementing the International Public Sector Accounting Standards, which had been pushed ahead from 2012 to 2014 in the Secretariat, mainly because the new enterprise resource planning system was not in place; disclosure and funding of after-service health insurance and end-of-service liabilities, given that some organizations might not be able to discharge their liabilities as and when they fell due unless funding strategies were considered; the lack of uniformity with respect to nationally executed expenditure; and deficiencies in the management of expendable and non-expendable property, especially with regard to record-keeping, periodic physical verifications, reconciliations, investigation of discrepancies and taking prompt corrective action. In addition, the reports contained some 500 findings and recommendations on such matters as programme expenditure, procurement, and information and communications technology. With respect to follow-up on previous recommendations, the Board found that out of 518 recommendations made in the 2006–2007 biennium, 59 per cent had been fully implemented, 33 per cent had been partially implemented, 3 per cent had not been implemented and 5 per cent had been overtaken by events. There had been little change in the overall implementation rate.

In July [A/65/169], the Secretary-General transmitted to the General Assembly a concise summary of the principal findings and conclusions on the 16 audited organizations contained in the Board's reports.

In August, the Secretary-General submitted a report on the implementation of the Board's recommendations as contained in its reports on the United Nations for the biennium ended 31 December 2009 and on the capital master plan for the year ended 31 December 2009 [A/65/296]; and a report on the implementation of the Board's recommendations contained in its reports on 14 UN funds and programmes for the financial period ended 31 December 2009 [A/65/296/Add.1]. In October [A/65/498], ACABQ submitted its related comments and observations.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 24 December [meeting 73], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee [A/65/594], adopted resolution 65/243 A without vote [agenda item 127].

Financial reports and audited financial statements, and reports of the Board of Auditors

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 50/222 of 11 April 1996, 51/218 E of 17 June 1997, 52/212 B of 31 March 1998, 53/204 of 18 December 1998, 53/221, section VIII, of 7 April 1999, 54/13 B of 23 December 1999, 55/220 A, B and C of 23 December 2000 and 12 April and 14 June 2001, 57/278 A of 20 December 2002, 60/234 A and B of 23 December 2005 and 30 June 2006, 61/233 A and B of 22 December 2006 and 29 June 2007, 62/223 A and B of 22 December 2007 and 20 June 2008, 63/246 A and B of 24 December 2008 and 30 June 2009, 64/227 of 22 December 2009 and 64/268 of 24 June 2010,

Having considered, for the period ended 31 December 2009, the financial reports and audited financial statements and the reports and audit opinions of the Board of Auditors on the United Nations, the International Trade Centre UNCTAD/wto, the United Nations University, the United Nations Development Programme, the United Nations Children's Fund, the United Nations Relief and Works Agency for

Palestine Refugees in the Near East, the United Nations Institute for Training and Research, the voluntary funds administered by the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees, the Fund of the United Nations Environment Programme, the United Nations Population Fund, the United Nations Human Settlements Programme, the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime, the United Nations Office for Project Services, the International Criminal Tribunal for the Prosecution of Persons Responsible for Genocide and Other Serious Violations of International Humanitarian Law Committed in the Territory of Rwanda and Rwandan Citizens Responsible for Genocide and Other Such Violations Committed in the Territory of Neighbouring States between 1 January and 31 December 1994 and the International Tribunal for the Prosecution of Persons Responsible for Serious Violations of International Humanitarian Law Committed in the Territory of the Former Yugoslavia since 1991, the concise summary of principal findings and conclusions contained in the reports prepared by the Board of Auditors, the reports of the Secretary-General on the implementation of the recommendations of the Board of Auditors contained in its report on the United Nations for the biennium ended 31 December 2009, and on the implementation of the recommendations of the Board of Auditors contained in its reports on the United Nations funds and programmes for the financial period ended 31 December 2009, and the report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions,

1. Accepts the financial reports and audited financial statements and the reports and audit opinions of the Board of Auditors for the above-mentioned organizations;
2. Approves the recommendations and conclusions contained in the reports of the Board of Auditors;
3. Endorses the observations and recommendations contained in the report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions;
4. Notes with concern the delay in the implementation of the International Public Sector Accounting Standards by all entities, from January 2010 to January 2012, with the United Nations and its entities further delaying implementation to January 2014;
5. Decides to consider the report requested in paragraph 19 of the report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions in the context of the annual progress report of the Secretary-General on the International Public Sector Accounting Standards;
6. Emphasizes that the Board of Auditors shall be completely independent and solely responsible for the conduct of the audit;
7. Decides to consider further the reports of the Board of Auditors on the International Criminal Tribunal for Rwanda and the International Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia under the respective agenda items relating to the Tribunals;
8. Commends the Board of Auditors for the superior quality of its reports, in particular with respect to its comments on the management of resources and improving the presentation of financial statements;
9. Takes note of the reports of the Secretary-General on the implementation of the recommendations of the Board of Auditors on the accounts of the United Nations and on the capital master plan for the financial period ended

31 December 2009, and on the implementation of the recommendations of the Board on the financial statements of the United Nations funds and programmes for the financial period ended 31 December 2009;

10. Reaffirms its resolution 62/208 of 19 December 2007, in particular paragraphs 4, 10, 39, 40 and 86, and its resolution 64/289 of 2 July 2010, in particular the eighth preambular paragraph and paragraph 14;

11. Notes the concerns as contained in the qualified audit opinion of the Board of Auditors on the financial statements of the United Nations Population Fund for the biennium ended 31 December 2009, also notes the measures taken so far by the Fund in this regard, including strengthening internal control and increasing capacity in decentralized offices, and requests the Fund to further implement the recommendations of the Board;

12. Notes with deep concern the recurrence of system-wide problems previously identified by the Board of Auditors with regard to the improper management of non-expendable and expendable property;

13. Recognizes that the improper management of non-expendable and expendable property poses a financial and reputational risk to the Organization and, in this regard, calls upon the Secretary-General to take swift action to address the concerns identified by the Board of Auditors at all management levels, and to develop timelines, with benchmarks to monitor progress towards better recordkeeping;

14. Recognizes also the value of the observations and recommendations with regard to the efficiency of the administration and management of the United Nations and its funds and programmes, including the financial procedures, the accounting systems and the internal financial controls, without compromising the quality of the financial audit, and supports the continuation of these efforts;

15. Reiterates its request to the Secretary-General and the executive heads of the funds and programmes of the United Nations to ensure full implementation of the recommendations of the Board of Auditors and the related recommendations of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions in a prompt and timely manner and to continue to hold programme managers accountable for non-implementation of the recommendations;

16. Requests the Secretary-General to provide in his reports on the implementation of the recommendations of the Board of Auditors on the accounts of the United Nations, as well as on the financial statements of its funds and programmes, a full explanation for the delays in the implementation of the recommendations of the Board, in particular those recommendations not yet fully implemented that are two or more years old;

17. Also requests the Secretary-General to indicate in future reports an expected time frame for the implementation of the recommendations of the Board of Auditors, as well as the priorities for their implementation and the office holders to be held accountable.

Also on 24 December, the Assembly decided that the agenda item on financial reports and audited financial statements and reports of the Board of Auditors would remain for consideration during its resumed sixty-fifth (2011) session (decision 65/544).

Financial management practices

International Public Sector Accounting Standards

In compliance with resolution 60/283 [YUN 2006, p. 1580], the Secretary-General, in August, submitted the third progress report [A/65/308] on the adoption of the International Public Sector Accounting Standards (IPSAS) by the United Nations. The report reviewed progress made in implementing IPSAS from 1 August 2009 to 31 July 2010.

The High-Level Committee on Management (HLCM) of the United Nations System Chief Executives Board for Coordination (CEB) had approved a four-year (2006–2009) jointly funded system-wide project to support, facilitate and guide UN system organizations in the adoption and implementation of IPSAS in 2006 [YUN 2006, p. 1610]. Responsibilities of the system-wide project team included developing harmonized system-wide accounting policies and guidance, monitoring of organizations' implementation progress, sharing of information, providing input into the development of new standards issued by the IPSAS Board communicating IPSAS information, and developing IPSAS training material. During the reporting period, the system-wide team pursued the areas of work previously identified by HLCM, including: providing support to the Task Force and Steering Committee meetings; preparation and follow-up of progress reports on IPSAS implementation to HLCM and the General Assembly; drafting frameworks and working tools in support of a harmonized approach to IPSAS implementation; preparing and supporting the external review of the project; activation of thematic working groups on specific IPSAS implementation issues; follow-up and monitoring of IPSAS training activities and system-wide training materials; monitoring of the IPSAS Board activities and preparation of updates to the Task Force; and ad hoc support to UN system organizations on IPSAS policy and implementation issues. Estimated expenditures for implementing IPSAS under the 2010–2011 biennium amounted to $662,100 as at 31 July.

In November [A/65/577], ACABQ shared the Board's concerns with respect to the numerous cases of inconsistent application of policies for the treatment of similar transactions from entity to entity including inventory, funds advanced to implementing partners and contributions, as well as inconsistencies in the format and layout of financial statements, even though the entities in question operated under the common framework of the UN system accounting standards. ACABQ also considered it necessary that the external auditors of the different entities provide advice and guidance to the IPSAS implementation teams, particularly on complex issues and accounting policies.

It emphasized the need to resolve outstanding questions relating to accounting policies and other complex issues prior to the finalization of the design and specification of the enterprise resource planning solutions. It welcomed the steps taken to strengthen the governance model of the IPSAS project and to broaden representation of IPSAS stakeholders on the project's Steering Committee. ACABQ recommended that the Secretary-General be requested to pursue consultations with the funds and programmes and the Board of Auditors on the IPSAS requirement for consolidated statements and its applicability and/or application for the UN system. It also reiterated the need to determine, in advance of the planned transition to IPSAS in 2014, the impact of the adoption of IPSAS on the reporting requirements of Member States, as well as on the role and activities of the Board of Auditors and any associated resource implications, and noted that the Secretary-General should consult with the Audit Operations Committee on that matter.

Review of UN administrative and financial functioning

In 2010, the General Assembly continued its consideration of the efficiency of the administrative and financial functioning of the United Nations. To that end, the Secretary-General issued a report on the Independent Audit Advisory Committee (see below) and a report entitled "Towards an accountability system in the United Nations Secretariat" (see p. 1494).

Administrative and budgetary coordination

CEB report. In August, the Secretary-General transmitted to the General Assembly the United Nations System Chief Executives Board (CEB) for Coordination statistical report [A/65/187] on the budgetary and financial situation of UN system organizations, comprising 15 specialized agencies, 6 funds and programmes, and 9 other entities. The report included information on regular resources, extrabudgetary resources, total expenditure, assessed contributions and working capital funds. Approved regular budgets for the United Nations and 30 other UN system organizations amounted to $9,173,658,326 for 2010 and $9,215,230,566 for 2011. Projected receipts from extrabudgetary resources from all sources amounted to $12,114,639,586 in income and $23,740,000 in kind for 2010, and to $10,153,601,726 in income and $18,431,000 in kind for 2011. Extrabudgetary resources received from Member States amounted to $13,196,136,000 in 2009. Extrabudgetary contributions received from non-State donors, such as the European Commission, international organizations, non-governmental organizations, foundations and private companies, amounted to $5,041,313,000 in 2009. Total expenditure in 2009 amounted to $36,726,923,505—$13,863,911,616 from the regular budget, $17,566,637 from extrabudgetary resources and $159,991,934 in-kind. Assessed contributions amounted to $5,473,272,272 in 2010 and $5,172,867,923 in 2011.

The General Assembly took note of the report on 24 December (decision 65/541). On the same date, the Assembly decided that the agenda items on the administrative and budgetary coordination of the United Nations with the specialized agencies and the International Atomic Energy Agency, and on the review of the efficiency of the administrative and financial functioning of the United Nations, would remain for consideration during its resumed sixty-fifth (2011) session (decision 65/544).

Independent Audit Advisory Committee

Pursuant to General Assembly resolution 61/275 [YUN 2007, p. 1471], the Secretary-General in August submitted a report [A/65/329] on the activities of the Independent Audit Advisory Committee, established in 2007 to serve in an expert advisory capacity and to assist the Assembly in fulfilling its oversight responsibilities [YUN 2007, p. 1471]. The report covered the period from 1 August 2009 to 31 July 2010, in which the Committee held four sessions.

The Committee reiterated its recommendations on completion of comprehensive and residual risk-based analyses, and work planning with the Office of Internal Oversight Services (OIOS). After noting that OIOS had adjusted its risk assessment to consider the residual risk in its work planning process by taking into account internal controls that management had put in place to mitigate risks, the Committee stated that it looked forward to reviewing the progress made by OIOS during the Committee's review of future budget proposals for the Office. The Committee also recommended that in responding to the General Assembly's request in resolution 64/259 (see p. 1404), the Secretary-General should integrate enterprise risk management into the programme planning process as part of the logical framework analysis; such integration would present an appropriate method of ensuring that programme managers considered managing risks as an integral part of their planning process and ongoing responsibilities. Furthermore, the requirement to report on risks and how managers intended to manage risks might compel them to adopt a standardized risk management framework sooner. The Committee further recommended that the Management Committee continue the initiative of meeting with the oversight bodies, including the Independent Audit Advisory Committee, at least once per year; consideration should be given to inviting OIOS to attend meetings of the Management Committee as observers during meetings that addressed oversight matters. The Committee considered that OIOS could add value to its oversight work by conducting more audits of cross-cutting and systemic issues; it therefore recommended that in preparing its workplan, OIOS place greater emphasis on audits of cross-cutting issues (horizontal audits) in order to identify prevalent systemic issues that needed to be addressed by management as a priority. It also recommended that the system of accountability used in the Secretariat should not only be clearly defined, but should also be consistently applied, effectively implemented, evaluated periodically and continuously improved.

Taking note of the recommendations of the report in section II of resolution 65/250 of 24 December (see p. 1452), the General Assembly requested the Secretary-General to ensure their full implementation.

Programme planning

Strategic framework for 2012–2013

In April, the Secretary-General submitted the proposed strategic framework for 2012–2013 [A/65/6 (Part one)]. The framework comprised two parts: the plan outline reflecting the Organization's longer-term objectives (Part one) and the biennial programme plan (Part two), covering 27 programmes, usually carried out by a department. The framework constituted the principal policy directive of the United Nations and served as the basis for programme planning, budgeting, monitoring and evaluation.

The priorities for the 2012–2013 biennium, proposed for reaffirmation by the Assembly, were: promotion of sustained economic growth and sustainable development; maintenance of international peace and security; development of Africa; promotion of human rights; coordination of humanitarian assistance; promotion of justice and international law; disarmament; and drug control, crime prevention and combating international terrorism.

The Committee for Programme and Coordination (CPC) [A/65/16], having examined the Secretary-General's proposed 2012–2013 strategic framework, recommended that the Assembly approve the priorities for the 2012–2013 biennium contained in the plan outline in Part one and the programme narrative of the 27 programmes in Part two, subject to a number of modifications. It also recommended that the General Assembly request the Secretary-General to present concrete measures and actions taken to promote a culture of accountability within the Secretariat in future plan outlines and biennial programme plans of the strategic framework.

On 6, 8, 10, 20, and 21 December, the General Assembly took note, respectively, of the reports of the Sixth (Legal) Committee [A/65/477] (decision 65/512), First (Disarmament and International Security) Committee [A/65/419] (decision 65/519), Fourth (Special Political and Decolonization) Committee [A/65/432] (decision 65/523), Second (Economic and Financial) Committee [A/65/445] (decision 65/531) and Third (Social, Humanitarian and Cultural) Committee [A/65/460] (decision 65/540).

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 24 December [meeting 73], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee [A/65/544], adopted resolution 65/244 without vote [agenda item 130].

Programme planning

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 37/234 of 21 December 1982, 38/227 A of 20 December 1983, 41/213 of 19 December 1986, 55/234 of 23 December 2000, 56/253 of 24 December 2001, 57/282 of 20 December 2002, 58/268 and 58/269 of 23 December 2003, 59/275 of 23 December 2004, 60/257 of 8 May 2006, 61/235 of 22 December 2006, 62/224 of 22 December 2007, 63/247 of 24 December 2008 and 64/229 of 22 December 2009,

Recalling also the terms of reference of the Committee for Programme and Coordination, as outlined in the annex to Economic and Social Council resolution 2008(LX) of 14 May 1976,

Recalling further the Regulations and Rules Governing Programme Planning, the Programme Aspects of the Budget, the Monitoring of Implementation and the Methods of Evaluation, by which the relevant programmes and subprogrammes of the proposed strategic framework shall be reviewed by the relevant sectoral, functional and regional intergovernmental bodies, if possible during the regular cycle of their meetings,

Having considered the report of the Committee for Programme and Coordination on the work of its fiftieth session, the proposed strategic framework for the period 2012–2013: part one: plan outline and part two: biennial programme plan and the report of the Secretary-General on the programme performance of the United Nations for the biennium 2008–2009,

1. Reaffirms the role of the Committee for Programme and Coordination as the main subsidiary organ of the General Assembly and the Economic and Social Council for planning, programming and coordination;

2. Endorses the conclusions and recommendations of the Committee for Programme and Coordination on the proposed strategic framework for the period 2012–2013, contained in chapter II, section A, of its report on the work of its fiftieth session, and on the programme performance of the United Nations for the biennium 2008–2009, contained in chapter II, section B;

3. Decides that the priorities of the United Nations for the period 2012–2013 shall be the following:

(a) Promotion of sustained economic growth and sustainable development in accordance with the relevant resolutions of the General Assembly and recent United Nations conferences;

(b) Maintenance of international peace and security;

(c) Development of Africa;

(d) Promotion of human rights;

(e) Effective coordination of humanitarian assistance efforts;

(f) Promotion of justice and international law;

(g) Disarmament;

(h) Drug control, crime prevention and combating international terrorism in all its forms and manifestations;

4. Stresses that setting the priorities of the United Nations is the prerogative of the Member States, as reflected in legislative mandates;

5. Also stresses the need for Member States to participate fully in the budget preparation process, from its early stages and throughout the process;

6. Requests the Secretary-General to prepare the proposed programme budget for the biennium 2012–2013 on the basis of the above priorities and the strategic framework as adopted in the present resolution;

7. Endorses the conclusions and recommendations of the Committee for Programme and Coordination on the in-depth evaluation of political affairs, contained in chapter II, section C, of its report; on the annual overview report of the United Nations System Chief Executives Board for Coordination for 2009/10, contained in chapter III, section A; and on United Nations support for the New Partnership for Africa's Development, contained in chapter III, section B; and requests the Secretary-General to ensure the timely implementation of the above-mentioned recommendations.

On 24 December, the Assembly decided that the agenda item on programme planning would remain for consideration during its resumed sixty-fifth (2011) session (decision 65/544).

Programme performance

Reporting in April [A/65/70 & Corr.1] on the programme performance of the United Nations for the 2008–2009 biennium, the Secretary-General reviewed the key results achieved, delivery of outputs and resource utilization, and programme performance by section of the programme budget. The report examined the results achieved by the Organization in terms of expected accomplishments as well as the production of outputs. It included a detailed recounting of the results obtained by each individual budget section on 712 expected accomplishments implemented under the 34 sections of the programme budget. The analysis of programme performance in regard to the outputs indicated that the production of outputs was maintained at the same level of the previous biennium, when it reached 89 per cent. More than 32,100 outputs were implemented during the 2008–2009 biennium.

CPC consideration. CPC [A/65/16] stressed the need to include all activities and outputs mandated by Member States in budget preparation. The Committee recommended that the General Assembly encourage programme managers to further improve the qualitative aspects of indicators of achievements in order to enable better evaluation of results; and request the Secretary-General: to present future plan outlines of the proposed strategic frameworks taking fully into account the guidelines provided by the Assembly in resolutions 59/275 [YUN 2004, p. 1401], 61/235 [YUN 2006, p. 1636], 62/224 [YUN 2007, p. 1464] and 63/247 [YUN 2008, p. 1563], as well as subsequent resolutions, to ensure that they captured more accurately the Organization's longer-term objectives; to fully implement Assembly resolution 64/259 (see p. 1404) in order to achieve objectives and high-quality results in a timely and cost-effective manner; and to present concrete measures and actions taken to promote a culture of accountability within the Secretariat in future plan outlines and biennial programme plans of the strategic framework.

Evaluation

OIOS report to CPC. In March [E/AC.51/2010/2], OIOS transmitted to CPC its report on the triennial review of the implementation of recommendations made by CPC at its forty-seventh (2007) session on the in-depth evaluation of political affairs.

CPC comments and recommendations on that report were contained in the report on its 2010 session [A/65/16].

Administrative and staff matters

During 2010, the General Assembly and its subsidiary bodies continued to review the administrative functioning of the Organization, including internal and external oversight activities and matters related to United Nations staff.

The Committee on Conferences considered meetings management and utilization of conference services and facilities; the impact of the capital master plan (CMP), which covered the renovation of the United Nations Headquarters building, on meetings held in New York; progress in integrated global management; and matters related to documentation, translation and interpretation. The Assembly, in December, requested the Secretary-General to ensure continued maintenance of information technology facilities during the implementation of CMP.

With regard to the Organization's information and communications technology strategy, which comprised three programmes dealing with the management of knowledge, resources and infrastructure, the Assembly approved additional resources for the strategy's implementation.

Significant progress was achieved in implementing CMP, including the relocation of several thousand UN staff to off-site and on-site swing space, the inauguration of the North Lawn building and the commencement of construction in the Conference and Secretariat buildings. The Assembly, in December, authorized the rollover into 2011 of the unspent balance of the funding for associated costs approved in 2010.

During the year, the International Civil Service Commission reviewed the conditions of service of staff of the UN common system. The Commission's recommendations relating to various aspects of the conditions of service were adopted by the Assembly in December.

United Nations personnel continued to be subjected to violent attacks in 2010, with personnel suffering death and injury. In response, the Organization took measures to strengthen the unified security structure, developed a new security level system and adopted guidelines for acceptable risk. In December, the Assembly condemned all acts of violence against UN staff and urged States to take stronger action to investigate such attacks.

Regarding human resources management, the Assembly approved the granting of continuing contracts as at 1 January 2011, requested the Secretary-General to increase his efforts to achieve gender parity in the Secretariat, in particular at the senior levels, and took note of the new provisional Staff Rules promulgated by the Secretary-General. The new system of administration of justice for UN Secretariat staff, which became operational in 2009, comprised the United Nations Dispute Tribunal; the United Nations Appeals Tribunal; the Management Evaluation Unit; the Office of Staff Legal Assistance; and the Office of the Ombudsman and Mediation Services. The Assembly, in December, noted the achievements of the new system and took steps to enhance it.

Other action taken by the Assembly in 2010 related to procurement, the Office of Internal Oversight Services, the Joint Inspection Unit, conditions of service of ad litem judges of the international tribunals for Rwanda and the former Yugoslavia, conditions of service and compensation for officials other than Secretariat officials, and the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Fund. The Secretary-General also reported on the role of multilingualism in the Secretariat, and protection from sexual exploitation and abuse.

Administrative matters

Managerial reform and oversight

Procurement

In accordance with decision 64/548 A [YUN 2009, p. 1422], the General Assembly in 2010 had before it a number of reports on the subject of procurement: the report of the Secretary-General on UN procurement activities [ibid., p. 1419], with addenda on procurement governance arrangements within the United Nations [ibid., p. 1420] and on sustainable procurement [ibid.]; the related report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions (ACABQ) [ibid., p. 1421]; and the report of the Office of Internal Oversight Services (OIOS) on the audit of procurement management in the Secretariat [ibid.].

Reports of Joint Inspection Unit. In March, the Secretary-General transmitted to the Assembly the report of the Joint Inspection Unit (JIU) [A/65/63] on offshoring in UN system organizations: offshore service centres. JIU assessed offshoring (the relocation of business processes from one country to another) policies, practices and experiences in the UN system, and identified best practices and lessons learned. It recommended that UN system organizations, before offshoring services, develop an offshoring policy based on a cost-benefit analysis of all sourcing options for the delivery of services, in line with the organizations' corporate strategies. All inter-agency opportunities, including common/joint policy and project development, should be explored before preparing offshoring policies. In addition, UN organizations should maintain their international character in staffing offshore service centres and should exercise oversight on offshoring activities.

In July [A/65/63/Add.1], the Secretary-General transmitted to the Assembly his comments and those of the United Nations System Chief Executives Board for Coordination (CEB) on the JIU report. CEB member organizations agreed that implementing offshoring facilities could lead to economic advantages through economies of scale and lower-cost staffing. They generally agreed with the JIU recommendations, especially those that called for a complete analysis of the benefits and the drawbacks of an offshore facility, as well as the need for agencies to share experiences.

In September [A/65/346], the Secretary-General transmitted to the Assembly the JIU report entitled "Environmental profile of the United Nations system of organizations". JIU assessed the environmental policies and practices of UN system organizations on their sustainable use of resources, including energy consumption, in light of their mission to promote environmental conventions. It highlighted best practices and identified norms and benchmarks of the business policies and measures to be promoted throughout the UN system.

Recommendations included developing and implementing in-house sustainable policies, such as climate neutrality, energy savings and use of new sources of energy, sustainable procurement, and waste and other resources management; increasing the accountability of the organizations vis-à-vis Member States; and reporting regularly to the Assembly on the state of implementation of the climate-neutral UN initiative, in particular carbon offsetting.

The Secretary-General, in September, transmitted to the Assembly his comments and those of CEB on the JIU report [A/65/346/Add.1]. UN system entities supported the report's main recommendations, including the need for common guidelines for developing environmental management systems adapted to their needs, and the necessity to properly record expenses associated with reducing carbon emissions. Organizations also generally agreed with the recommendations regarding establishing common practices for sustainable procurement; however, those recommendations could not be implemented until Member States addressed that issue.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 24 December [meeting 73], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth (Administrative and Budgetary) Committee [A/65/645], adopted resolution 65/261 without vote [agenda item 128].

Procurement

The General Assembly,

Having considered the comprehensive report of the Secretary-General on United Nations procurement activities, and the addenda to the comprehensive report on procurement governance arrangements within the United Nations and on sustainable procurement, the related report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions and the report of the Office of Internal Oversight Services on the audit of procurement management in the Secretariat,

Having also considered the reports of the Joint Inspection Unit on offshoring in United Nations system organizations and on the environmental profile of the United Nations system of organizations, as well as the notes by the Secretary-General transmitting his comments and those of the United Nations System Chief Executives Board for Coordination thereon,

1. Requests the Secretary-General to submit an updated comprehensive report on United Nations procurement activities for consideration by the General Assembly at the first part of its resumed sixty-seventh session;
2. Decides to consider further the reports referenced in the present resolution at the first part of its resumed sixty-seventh session.

Oversight

Role of General Assembly

In March, the General Assembly reviewed the implementation of its resolutions 48/218 B [YUN 1994, p. 1362], 54/244 [YUN 1999, p. 1274] and 59/272 [YUN 2004, p. 1370]. The Assembly had before it the annex to the annual report of the Independent Audit Advisory Committee [YUN 2009, p. 1417], which contained the Committee's observations, comments and recommendations on the effectiveness, efficiency and impact of the audit activities and other oversight functions of the Office of Internal Oversight Services.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 29 March [meeting 81], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee [A/64/723], adopted resolution 64/263 without vote [agenda item 141].

Review of the implementation of General Assembly resolutions 48/218 B, 54/244 and 59/272

The General Assembly,

Reaffirming the relevant Articles of the Charter of the United Nations,

Recalling its resolutions 48/218 B of 29 July 1994, 54/244 of 23 December 1999 and 59/272 of 23 December 2004,

Recalling also its resolution 61/275 of 29 June 2007,

Reaffirming that the purpose of the Office of Internal Oversight Services of the Secretariat is to assist the Secretary-General in fulfilling his internal oversight responsibilities in respect of the resources and staff of the Organization,

Having considered the annex to the annual report of the Independent Audit Advisory Committee,

1. Reaffirms its resolutions 48/218 B, 54/244 and 59/272;

2. Also reaffirms its primary role in the consideration of and action on reports submitted to it;

3. Further reaffirms its oversight role and the role of the Fifth Committee in administrative and budgetary matters;

4. Reaffirms the independence and the separate and distinct roles of internal and external oversight mechanisms;

5. Endorses the observations, comments and recommendations on the effectiveness, efficiency and impact of the Office of Internal Oversight Services contained in the annex to the annual report of the Independent Audit Advisory Committee, requests the Secretary-General to ensure the full implementation of paragraphs 20 (a) to (c), 20 (e), 27, 29, 33, 35 and 39 of the annex, taking into account the provisions of the resolutions of the General Assembly relevant to the work of the Office, and further requests the Secretary-General to take no action on paragraphs 19, 20 (d), 21, 22, 24, 42 and 43 of the annex;

6. Decides to revert to the issues and recommendations contained in paragraphs 19, 20 (d), 21, 22, 24, 42 and 43 of the annex to the annual report of the Independent Audit Advisory Committee no later than at the main part of the sixty-sixth session of the General Assembly, and in this regard invites the Independent Audit Advisory Committee to provide further advice on relevant issues as it deems necessary;

7. Requests the Secretary-General to entrust the Office of Internal Oversight Services with comprehensively defining and compiling key oversight terms in close consultation with relevant departments and offices, including the Department of Management and the Office of Legal Affairs of the Secretariat, bearing in mind existing definitions used by the Board of Auditors and the Joint Inspection Unit, and taking into account the views of the Independent Audit Advisory Committee;

8. Also requests the Secretary-General to entrust the Office of Internal Oversight Services with submitting to the General Assembly, no later than at the main part of its sixty-sixth session, terms whose definitions require the guidance of the Assembly;

9. Recalls that the Office of Internal Oversight Services shall exercise operational independence under the authority of the Secretary-General relating to the performance of its internal oversight functions, in accordance with the relevant resolutions;

10. Reaffirms that the Office of Internal Oversight Services is an internal body under the authority of the Secretary-General, and that, as such, it shall comply with all relevant regulations, rules, policies and procedures of the United Nations;

11. Notes the role of the Management Committee in monitoring closely the implementation of the recommendations of oversight bodies, and stresses the importance of follow-up with programme managers to ensure the full implementation of those recommendations in a prompt and timely manner;

12. Recalls that reports referred to in paragraph 1 (c) of its resolution 59/272 are, upon request, available only to Member States;

13. Decides to evaluate and review at its sixty-ninth session the functions and reporting procedures of the Office of Internal Oversight Services and any other matter which it deems appropriate, and to that end to include in the provisional agenda of that session an item entitled "Review of the implementation of General Assembly resolutions 48/218 B, 54/244, 59/272 and 64/263".

Internal oversight

OIOS report. In August, the Office of Internal Oversight Services (OIOS) submitted to the General Assembly a report [A/65/271 (Part I) & Corr.1] on its activities from 1 July 2009 to 30 June 2010. Oversight of peacekeeping activities was covered in a separate report [A/65/271 (Part II)]. During the reporting period, OIOS issued 382 oversight reports, including 12 reports to the Assembly and 89 closure reports. Recommendations to improve internal controls, accountability mechanisms and organizational efficiency and effectiveness totalled 1,992. Of those recommendations, 669 were classified as critical to the Organization. The financial implications of OIOS recommendations issued during the period amounted to approximately $5 million. The recommendations were aimed at cost savings, recoveries of overpayment, efficiency gains and other improvements. The financial implications of similar recommendations that were satisfactorily implemented during the period totalled some $19 million. Assignments conducted during the reporting period underscored the need for the Organization to develop an accountability framework, including a formal internal control framework, to ensure that risks were managed consistently and systematically through focused control processes.

An addendum [A/65/271 (Part I)/Add.1] & Corr.1 provided an analysis of the status of implementation of the recommendations, a breakdown of recommendations with financial implications and an analysis of recommendations of particular concern. As at 30 June, programme managers had implemented 912 (52 per cent) of all recommendations issued between 1 July 2009 and 31 May 2010 and 272 (44 per cent) of critical recommendations issued during the same period.

Other reports submitted to the Assembly by OIOS in 2010 dealt with programme evaluation of the performance and the achievement of results by the United Nations Mission in Liberia [A/64/712] (see p. 211); triennial review of the implementation of recommendations made by the Committee for Programme and Coordination at its forty-seventh session on the in-depth evaluation of political affairs [E/AC.51/2010/2] (see p. 1447); and thematic evaluation of gender mainstreaming in the United Nations Secretariat [A/65/266] (see p. 1170).

Appointment. On 28 July, the General Assembly approved the appointment by the Secretary-General of Carman Lapointe as Under-Secretary-General for Internal Oversight Services for one fixed term of five years beginning on 13 September 2010 and ending on 12 September 2015 (decision 64/427).

Independent Audit Advisory Committee. In August [A/65/329], the five-member Independent Audit Advisory Committee—an expert advisory body established by the Assembly in resolution 60/248 [YUN 2005, p. 1496] to assist it in fulfilling its oversight responsibilities—reported on its activities between 1 August 2009 and 31 July 2010. The Committee held four sessions: the eighth (Geneva, 2–4 December 2009); ninth (New York, 17–19 February 2010); tenth (New York, 19–21 May); and eleventh (New York, 21–23 July). As at 30 June, the Committee had made 55 recommendations in its reports. Seven of the 55 recommendations made in the Committee’s previous annual report [YUN 2009, p. 1423] were before the Assembly. The remaining 48 recommendations included 12 that the Assembly had taken note of, 26 that had been implemented and 10 that were being implemented. Topics addressed by the Committee included the status of the recommendations of UN oversight bodies; risk management and internal control framework; strengthening investigations; financial reporting; coordination among UN oversight bodies; and cooperation and access. Annexes to the report contained the Committee’s observations, comments and recommendations on the effectiveness, efficiency and impact of audit activities and other oversight functions of OIOS; the terms of reference for the Committee; and the implementation of Assembly resolution 64/259 on an accountability system in the UN Secretariat (see p. 1404).

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 24 December [meeting 73], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee [A/65/649], adopted resolution 65/250 without vote [agenda items 128 & 139].

Report of the Office of Internal Oversight Services on its activities

The General Assembly,

I

Activities of the Office of Internal Oversight Services

Recalling its resolutions 48/218 B of 29 July 1994, 54/244 of 23 December 1999, 59/272 of 23 December 2004, 60/259 of 8 May 2006, 63/265 of 24 December 2008, 63/287 of 30 June 2009, 64/232 of 22 December 2009 and 64/263 of 29 March 2010,

Having considered the report of the Office of Internal Oversight Services on its activities for the period from 1 July 2009 to 30 June 2010,

1. Reaffirms its primary role in the consideration of and action taken on reports submitted to it;
2. Also reaffirms its oversight role and the role of the Fifth Committee in administrative and budgetary matters;
3. Further reaffirms the independence and the separate and distinct roles of the internal and external oversight mechanisms;
4. Recalls that the Office of Internal Oversight Services of the Secretariat shall exercise operational independence under the authority of the Secretary-General relating to the performance of its internal oversight functions, in accordance with the relevant resolutions;
5. Encourages the Office of Internal Oversight Services to enhance its analysis in future annual reports of general trends and strategic challenges regarding internal oversight in the United Nations;
6. Encourages United Nations internal and external oversight bodies to further enhance the level of cooperation with one another, such as through joint work planning sessions, without prejudice to the independence of each;
7. Takes note of the report of the Office of Internal Oversight Services on its activities for the period from 1 July 2009 to 30 June 2010;
8. Requests the Secretary-General to ensure that all relevant resolutions pertaining to the work of the Office of Internal Oversight Services are brought to the attention of the relevant managers;
9. Also requests the Secretary-General to ensure that all relevant resolutions, including resolutions of a cross-cutting nature, are brought to the attention of relevant managers, and that the Office of Internal Oversight Services also takes those resolutions into account in the conduct of its activities;
10. Encourages the Office of Internal Oversight Services to continue its efforts aimed at enhancing its audit, investigation, inspection and evaluation functions;
11. Notes with concern the status of implementation of recommendations contained in the report of the Office of Internal Oversight Services on its activities for the period from 1 July 2009 to 30 June 2010;
12. Requests the Secretary-General to implement outstanding and recurring accepted recommendations of the Office of Internal Oversight Services dealing with issues that are systemic in nature;
13. Also requests the Secretary-General to ensure the full implementation of the accepted recommendations of the Office of Internal Oversight Services, including those relating to cost avoidance, recovery of overpayments, efficiency gains and other improvements, in a prompt and timely manner and to provide detailed justifications in cases where recommendations of the Office are not accepted;
14. Expresses concern over the persistently high vacancy rates in the Office of Internal Oversight Services, in particular those at senior levels that could adversely affect the work of the Office;
15. Reiterates its requests to the Secretary-General to make every effort to fill vacancies in the Office of Internal Oversight Services as a matter of priority, in accordance with the relevant provisions governing recruitment in the United Nations;
16. Notes that two successive appointments of the Under-Secretary-General for Internal Oversight Services were made from the same regional group;

17. Requests the Secretary-General to ensure that future appointments of the Under-Secretary-General for Internal Oversight Services are made in full conformity with paragraph 5 (b) of resolution 48/218 B;

18. Notes the role of the Management Committee in monitoring closely the implementation of the recommendations of oversight bodies, and stresses the importance of follow-up with programme managers to ensure the full implementation of those recommendations in a prompt and timely manner;

19. Requests the Secretary-General to consider inviting the Office of Internal Oversight Services to participate as an observer during meetings of the Management Committee that address oversight matters;

II

Activities of the Independent Audit Advisory Committee

Recalling its resolution 61/275 of 29 June 2007,

Having considered the annual report of the Independent Audit Advisory Committee for the period from 1 August 2009 to 31 July 2010,

1. Notes with appreciation the work of the Independent Audit Advisory Committee;

2. Recalls paragraph 5 of its resolution 61/275, and in that regard emphasizes the role of the Independent Audit Advisory Committee in ensuring the operational independence of the Office of Internal Oversight Services;

3. Takes note of sections II and III and annex I to the annual report of the Independent Audit Advisory Committee, and requests the Secretary-General to ensure the full implementation of the recommendations contained therein, taking into account the provisions of its resolutions 48/218 B, 54/244, 59/272 and 64/263;

4. Reaffirms the terms of reference of the Independent Audit Advisory Committee, as contained in the annex to resolution 61/275;

5. Stresses that any modification of the terms of reference of the Independent Audit Advisory Committee remains solely the prerogative of the General Assembly;

6. Decides to review the terms of reference of the Independent Audit Advisory Committee at its seventieth session;

7. Encourages United Nations oversight bodies to continue sharing experience, knowledge, best practices and lessons learned with the Independent Audit Advisory Committee, in order for the Committee to better conduct its roles and responsibilities under its terms of reference, without prejudice to the respective mandates of United Nations oversight bodies;

8. Encourages the Independent Audit Advisory Committee to enhance its activities with respect to advising the General Assembly under its terms of reference;

9. Decides to revert to the issues and recommendations contained in annex III to the annual report of the Independent Audit Advisory Committee in the context of its consideration of the report requested in paragraph 33 of its resolution 64/259 of 29 March 2010, and in this regard invites the Committee to provide further advice on relevant issues under its terms of reference, as it deems necessary.

On 24 December, the Assembly decided that the item on the report on OIOS activities would remain for consideration during its resumed sixty-fifth (2011) session (decision 65/544).

External oversight

Joint Inspection Unit

At its resumed sixty-fourth session, the General Assembly had before it the annual report of the Joint Inspection Unit (JIU) for 2009 and its programme of work for 2010 [YUN 2009, p. 1426].

Note of General Assembly President. In January [A/64/667], in accordance with General Assembly resolution 61/238 [YUN 2006, p. 1653], the Assembly President reported on the effective application of the selection procedures outlined in the resolution on enhancing efficiency in implementing article 3, paragraph 2, of the JIU statute. The President stated that, beginning on 1 January 2008, when drawing up the list of countries that were requested to propose candidates, he had invited Member States to submit the names of the countries and their respective candidates simultaneously, on the understanding that the candidates submitted would be the candidates that the respective Member States intended to propose for appointment by the Assembly. Member States fully observed the provisions of resolution 61/238, and no further action was requested.

Note of Secretary-General. In a February note [A/64/642], submitted in response to Assembly resolution 63/272 [YUN 2009, p. 1425], the Secretary-General reported on the support provided to JIU by the member organizations of CEB. In his capacity as Chair of CEB, the Secretary-General provided extensive support to JIU, beginning with the circulation of its reports. The CEB secretariat circulated all reports of system-wide concern to UN system organizations and compiled the comments received. In 2009, the CEB secretariat prepared comments for seven JIU reports. In each case, organizations were requested to comment on the final version of the report, including the methodology used and the content of the recommendations. Those comments reflected the overall consensus of the UN system. In addition, the CEB secretariat worked closely with JIU on preparing the annual programme of work. Furthermore, the CEB secretariat maintained a constant dialogue with both the JIU inspectors and the JIU Executive Secretary to ensure the smooth preparation of reports and to identify methods for enhancing the value of the reports.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 29 March [meeting 81], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee [A/64/724], adopted resolution 64/262 without vote [agenda item 138].

Report of the Joint Inspection Unit for 2009 and programme of work for 2010

The General Assembly,

I

Reaffirming its previous resolutions on the Joint Inspection Unit, in particular resolutions 31/192 of 22 December 1976, 50/233 of 7 June 1996, 54/16 of 29 October 1999, 55/230 of 23 December 2000, 56/245 of 24 December 2001, 57/284 A and B of 20 December 2002, 58/286 of 8 April 2004, 59/267 of 23 December 2004, 60/258 of 8 May 2006, 61/238 of 22 December 2006, 61/260 of 4 April 2007, 62/226 of 22 December 2007, 62/246 of 3 April 2008 and 63/272 of 7 April 2009,

Reiterating that the impact of the work of the Unit on the cost-effectiveness of activities within the United Nations system is a shared responsibility of the Member States, the Unit and the secretariats of the participating organizations,

Reaffirming the commitment by the Unit, the legislative organs and the secretariats of the participating organizations to implement a system of follow-up to the recommendations of the Unit, as set out in resolution 54/16,

Reaffirming also the statute of the Unit and the unique role of the Unit as the only external and independent system-wide inspection, evaluation and investigation body,

Having considered the report of the Unit for 2009 and programme of work for 2010, and the note by the Secretary-General,

1. Recalls its resolutions 61/260, 62/246 and 63/272;
2. Takes note with appreciation of the report of the Joint Inspection Unit for 2009 and programme of work for 2010;
3. Takes note of the note by the Secretary-General;
4. Affirms that oversight is a shared responsibility of Member States, the organizations and the internal and external oversight bodies;
5. Welcomes the continued progress in the reform process of the Unit, particularly the results-based management approach, and its improved collaboration with participating organizations and other oversight bodies;
6. Notes the ongoing progress of the development of a web-based follow-up system;
7. Invites the Unit to report to the General Assembly on further progress made in the reform process, including the web-based follow-up system, and requests the Secretary-General to report to the Assembly in the context of the proposed programme budget for the biennium 2012–2013 on any related resource implications and funding options;
8. Reiterates its request to the Unit, in line with its mandate, to continue to focus its work and reports on system-wide issues of interest and relevance to the participating organizations and the States Members of the United Nations and to provide advice on ways to ensure the avoidance of duplication and overlap and more efficient and effective use of resources in implementing the mandates of the Organization;
9. Reiterates its request to the executive heads of the participating organizations to fully comply with the statutory procedures for consideration of the reports of the Unit and, in particular, to submit their comments and to distribute reports in time for their consideration by legislative organs;
10. Reiterates its request to the Secretary-General and the other executive heads of the participating organizations to fully assist the Unit with the timely provision of all information requested by it;

11. Reiterates its invitation to the legislative organs of the participating organizations to fully consider and take concrete action on the relevant recommendations issued by the Unit;

12. Requests the Secretary-General, in his capacity as Chairman of the United Nations System Chief Executives Board for Coordination, to expedite the implementation of the present resolution, including through the expected provision of support to the Unit by the secretariats of the participating organizations in the preparation of its reports, notes and confidential letters, and the consideration of and action on the recommendations of the Unit in the light of pertinent resolutions of the General Assembly, and to report to the Assembly on an annual basis on the results achieved;

13. Welcomes the coordination of the Unit with the Board of Auditors and the Office of Internal Oversight Services of the Secretariat, and encourages those bodies to continue sharing experiences, knowledge, best practices and lessons learned with other United Nations audit and oversight bodies, as well as with the Independent Audit Advisory Committee, with a view to avoiding overlap or duplication and achieving further synergy, cooperation, effectiveness and efficiency, without prejudice to the respective mandates of oversight bodies;

14. Stresses the need for the Unit to continuously update and improve its medium- and long-term strategy for 2010–2019, taking into account the dynamics and challenges of the environment in which it undertakes its activities;

15. Notes that the 2010 programme of work of the Unit was adjusted in line with existing resources, and requests the Secretary-General, in the light of the ongoing development of the medium- and long-term strategy approach, to reflect relevant resource requests in the context of future proposed programme budgets;

16. Recalls paragraph 8 of its resolution 63/311 of 14 September 2009, and in this regard requests the Secretary-General, in his capacity as Chairman of the United Nations System Chief Executives Board for Coordination, to ensure the appropriate involvement of the Unit in the ongoing relevant consultations, taking into account its role and mandate;

17. Notes with concern that some Member States did not abide by its resolutions on the issuance of visas for the official travel of some inspectors and staff of the Unit, and in this regard requests Member States to extend, without conditions, the requisite facilitation to enable the individual inspectors and the staff of the Unit to undertake their tasks;

18. Requests the Unit to keep the General Assembly informed, as necessary, about any difficulty or delay in obtaining visas for the official travel of the inspectors and members of its secretariat;

II

Having considered the note by the President of the General Assembly on the implementation of the procedures for the appointment of inspectors of the Unit,

Recalling section II of its resolution 61/238,

Takes note of the note by the President of the General Assembly on the implementation of the procedures for the appointment of inspectors of the Unit.

JIU activities. In its annual report to the General Assembly [A/65/34], JIU reviewed its activities in 2010, during which it issued 10 reports: environmental profile of the UN system organizations [JIU/REP/2010/1]; review of travel arrangements within the UN system [JIU/REP/2010/2]; ethics in the UN system [JIU/REP/2010/3]; review of enterprise risk management in the UN system [JIU/REP/2010/4]; review of the audit function of the UN system [JIU/REP/2010/5]; preparedness of the UN system organizations for international public sector accounting standards (IPSAS) [JIU/REP/2010/6]; policies and procedures for the administration of trust funds in UN system organizations [JIU/REP/2010/7]; staff mobility and work/life balance in UN system organizations [JIU/REP/2010/8]; corporate partnerships: the role of the Global Compact, best practices and lessons learned [JIU/REP/2010/9]; and review of management and administration in the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime [JIU/REP/2010/10]. JIU also issued a management letter on the United Nations Office at Geneva Security and Safety Section [JIU/ML/2010/1].

Eight of the topics addressed were in response to suggestions made in 2009 by participating organizations and oversight or coordinating bodies; many of them coincided with proposals made by the inspectors. The process of establishing the work programme closely involved the CEB secretariat, which, at the request of JIU, received, compiled and shared the system-wide suggestions. Consultations also took place with the Board of Auditors and OIOS.

The inspectors noted with concern that an increasing number of legislative organs did not fully table, consider and discuss JIU reports, and thus failed to act upon recommendations addressed to them. In particular, at the United Nations, including the Assembly and the Economic and Social Council, few reports had been acted upon and most of them were merely taken note of, which contradicted repeated calls for a follow-up system. The situation was not much better in some of the participating organizations.

JIU had requested participating organizations to provide information on all 389 recommendations issued between 2007 and 2009, and had received information from all but three organizations—the United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East (UNRWA), the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees (UNHCR) and the World Intellectual Property Organization (WIPO). An analysis of data concerning the 182 recommendations contained in single-organization reports and notes issued in 2007, 2008 and 2009 showed a lower acceptance rate compared to previous triennial reporting periods, with a 62 per cent rate. An analysis of available data on the 207 recommendations contained in system-wide and several organization reports and notes issued between 2007–2009 showed a low rate of acceptance reported for 2009, as many reports had yet to be discussed by governing bodies. The relatively low overall approval/acceptance rate of 50 per cent resulted from the fact that no information was provided for 42 per cent of the recommendations.

The data on approved or accepted recommendations normally showed lower rates of implementation for the most recent reports and recommendations. At the end of 2010, however, data available for single-organization reports and notes presented ascending rates in 2007, 2008 and 2009, with 57 per cent of recommendations implemented and 20 per cent in progress. No information on the status of implementation was received for 22 per cent of the accepted recommendations. The implementation of accepted or approved recommendations in system-wide and several organization reports and notes issued in 2007, 2008 and 2009 showed no positive variance, with 44 per cent of the recommendations implemented and 32 per cent in progress. The rate of recommendations for which implementation had not started remained stable at 5 per cent. No information on the status of implementation was received for 19 per cent of the accepted recommendations. JIU also presented its work programme for 2011.

On 24 December, the Assembly decided that the item on JIU would remain for consideration during its resumed sixty-fifth (2011) session (decision 65/544).

Oil-for-food programme

On 13 September (decision 64/569), the General Assembly deferred consideration of the item entitled “Follow-up to the recommendations on administrative management and internal oversight of the Independent Inquiry Committee into the United Nations Oil-for-Food Programme” [YUN 2005, p. 1475] and included it in the draft agenda of its sixty-fifth (2010) session.

On 24 December (decision 65/544), the Assembly decided that the item would remain for consideration during its resumed sixty-fifth (2011) session.

Other administrative matters

Conference management

Committee on Conferences

The Committee on Conferences held an organizational meeting on 30 March and its substantive session from 30 August to 3 September [A/65/32]. It had before it a Secretariat note containing the biennial calendar of UN conferences and meetings for 2010 and 2011 [A/AC.172/2010/2 & Add.1] and considered requests for changes to the approved 2010 calendar. The Committee discussed meetings management: utilization of conference services and facilities; the impact of the capital master plan (CMP) (renovation of UN Headquarters in New York) on meetings held at Headquarters; integrated global management; and matters related to documentation, publication, translation and interpretation. (The Committee's deliberations and recommendations on those matters are detailed in the sections below.)

The Committee also considered a Secretariat note [A/AC.51/2010/CRP.1] containing information from the proposed strategic framework for 2012–2013 [A/65/6(Prog.1)].

The Committee recommended that the General Assembly authorize seven bodies, listed in letters of 31 August [A/65/337] and 14 October [A/65/337/Add.1] from the Committee Chairman, to meet in New York during the main part of the Assembly's sixty-fifth (2010) session.

The Assembly, on 14 September and 20 October (decision 65/501) authorized those bodies to meet as recommended.

Report of Secretary-General. In response to Assembly resolutions 64/230 [YUN 2009, p. 1432] and 64/243 [ibid., p. 1395], the Secretary-General submitted a July report on the pattern of conferences [A/65/122] that provided input to the deliberations of the Committee. The report addressed issues relating to conference management, outlined progress made in implementing integrated global management, proposed means to address challenges, and put forward suggestions on steps that could contribute to the optimal functioning of the management of conferences and meetings. Topics covered included the evaluation by Member States of the quality of conference services; the impact of freelance recruitment on the quality of interpretation; financial and administrative implications of raising or waiving the mandatory age of separation for language staff, including interpreters, translators and editors; and specific challenges faced by the United Nations Office at Nairobi (UNON).

ACABQ report. In October [A/65/484 & Corr.1], the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions (ACABQ) submitted its comments on the Secretary-General's report. It emphasized the need to ensure, throughout the period of implementation of CMP, the full and uninterrupted provision of quality services; stated that raising or waiving the mandatory age of separation for language staff was a human resources policy question and, as such, should not be addressed in the context of the pattern of conferences; and emphasized that any savings or efficiencies arising from the increased use of contractual translation should not come at the expense of quality.

Use of conference services and facilities

The Committee on Conferences [A/65/32] noted that, in 2009, the overall utilization factor at the four main duty stations—New York, Geneva, Vienna and Nairobi—was 86 per cent (85 per cent in 2008). Meeting cancellations remained high in New York compared to other duty stations. Regarding provision of interpretation services to meetings of bodies entitled to meet “as required”, the Committee noted that a comparative analysis showed an increase in provision of services in New York to 95 per cent in 2009; for the period 1 January to 31 May 2010, 98 per cent of such requests had been met. In Geneva, which was reporting that category of meetings for the first time, 95 per cent of the requests for interpretation services had been met in 2009. Concerning the utilization of the conference facilities at UNON, the Committee noted that in 2009 all meetings of Nairobi-based bodies had been held in Nairobi, in conformity with the headquarters rule. The utilization rate of the conference centre at the Economic Commission for Africa (ECA) had remained at 76 per cent in 2009. Owing to increased competition in the local and regional markets, an improvement in the centre's utilization rate might not be realistically sustainable in the near future. ECA marketing activities of the centre included participation in high-profile international conventions and exhibitions. To ensure sustainability of the occupancy rate achieved in 2009, ECA had established partnerships with the Addis Ababa Tourism Commission, Ethiopian Airlines and others to promote Addis Ababa as a conference and tourism destination.

Impact of CMP on conference services

The Committee [A/65/32] noted that after the relocation of meetings to the North Lawn building during the renovation of the UN Headquarters building in New York, limitations continued in accommodating meetings with large numbers of participants owing to reduced capacity in the rooms. Accommodating ad hoc meeting requests in excess of core activities was challenging because of the reduced number of rooms. Since not all conference rooms had the same equipment, such as that for videoconferencing, it was often necessary to reassign rooms based on last-minute requests for such services. The relocation of all staff of the Department for General Assembly and Conference Management (DGACM) into eight swing spaces had posed challenges, and some difficulties persisted.

Answering queries from delegations, a Secretariat representative said that no core activities had been affected and no official meetings had been cancelled or requests refused because of a lack of space; however, there was limited space for side events and gallery space. With regard to availability of documentation, because of the limited storage space in the North Lawn building, DGACM had moved forward with electronic processing and printing on demand, which tied in with efforts to move towards full electronic processing of documents. Printed documents were still available but might take longer to be delivered because of lack of storage space.

Integrated global management

Regarding DGACM's integrated global management initiative, the Committee [A/65/32] noted that joint efforts of the four main duty stations had produced findings and recommendations covering all main conference management areas, including costing models. The data warehouse ("project 1"), an information technology project, was functional and yielding management information. "Project 2", a state-of-the-art meetings management system known as e-Meets 2.0, had been piloted in Vienna and was launched in New York on 16 August. The interpreters assignment programme (e-APG module) was fully functional across all duty stations. Progress on other fronts included the adoption of a single application to manage contractual translation and efforts to standardize workflows and work processes, such as global workload management and global management of contractual translation. Regarding "project 3", on documents management, work was under way on a cost-benefit analysis of information technology arrangements that would both reduce the resources spent and utilize existing applications to realize efficiencies and cost savings, as recommended by OROS [YUN 2009, p. 1428]. A global evaluation team in the four duty stations had reviewed document planning and processing systems and had sent a report to the Information Technology Governance Board.

The strategy of integrated global management had forged a single entity out of multiple parts operating in unison; however, progress in implementation had remained slow. The main reason was that integrated global management had been premised on a voluntary and collaborative approach. Exercising a more robust approach was rendered difficult by the fact that the conference management units at the various duty stations did not report to the Under-Secretary-General for General Assembly and Conference Management in New York, but to their Directors-General. The Under-Secretary-General, while accountable for the disbursement of resources under the programme budget, did not have corresponding authority in the management and disbursement of financial and human resources.

Documentation

Addressing matters related to documentation and publication and the internal printing of parliamentary documents, the Committee [A/65/32] noted that significant progress had been made in ensuring the timely submission and issuance of documents in New York, including for the Fifth Committee. A decision had been taken to implement proactive documents management, namely the slotting system, at all four main duty stations, on the basis of the positive results achieved at Headquarters. Late submission of documents and inputs by Member States, however, was impeding further improvements.

The Committee agreed to change the method used to determine the length of documents from page count to word count, as proposed by the Secretary-General. The Committee decided not to endorse the recommendation by which the desirable limit of 32 pages (approximately 17,000 words) for documents emanating from intergovernmental bodies would be replaced by a limit of 10,700 words (or 20 pages).

Translation and interpretation

The Committee [A/65/32] considered matters related to translation and interpretation, including succession planning; quality control of contractual translation; the impact of freelance recruitment on the quality of interpretation; the financial and administrative implications of raising or waiving the mandatory age of separation for language staff (interpreters, translators/précis-writers, editors, verbatim reporters and proof-readers/copy preparers); and specific challenges faced by UNON. In the light of the acute demographic transition in the language services expected to take place within five years, a succession planning programme had been implemented that focused on outreach to universities and streamlining of competitive examinations for language services. Fourteen universities had signed memorandums of understanding with the United Nations, with three more Arabic-language universities to follow suit before the end of 2010. DGACM had entered into an official relationship with universities covering all six official languages (Arabic, Chinese, English, French, Russian, Spanish). Despite an insufficient budget allocation for training, every effort had been made to maintain language-related services; however, a permanent and dedicated capacity was needed to carry out training and outreach activities.

While the quality of freelance interpreters had generally been adequate, there were challenges related to the availability of interpretation services at short notice, the fierce global competition for such skills, and the fact that the conditions of employment for interpreters at the United Nations were not as competitive as those offered by other institutions. All four main duty stations had made efforts to increase the share of translation done contractually without sacrificing quality. The United Nations Office at Vienna, which had historically lacked the capacity to monitor and control the quality of the large proportion of documentation processed externally, would soon benefit from the reclassification of posts to the senior reviser (P-5) level. Such was not the case at UNON, where the high percentage of outsourced translation called for more robust quality assurance. Other challenges faced at UNON related to the increase in the number of meetings held at the renovated conference facilities and the continued difficulty in attracting and retaining high-quality interpreters and translators. Thus, the upgrading of six interpreter and six senior reviser posts from the P-4 to the P-5 level was proposed.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 24 December [meeting 73], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee [A/65/595], adopted resolution 65/245 without vote [agenda item 132].

Pattern of conferences

The General Assembly,

Recalling its relevant resolutions, including resolutions 40/243 of 18 December 1985, 41/213 of 19 December 1986, 43/222 A to E of 21 December 1988, 51/211 A to E of 18 December 1996, 52/214 of 22 December 1997, 53/208 A to E of 18 December 1998, 54/248 of 23 December 1999, 55/222 of 23 December 2000, 56/242 of 24 December 2001, 56/254 D of 27 March 2002, 56/262 of 15 February 2002, 56/287 of 27 June 2002, 57/283 A of 20 December 2002, 57/283 B of 15 April 2003, 58/250 of 23 December 2003, 59/265 of 23 December 2004, 60/236 A of 23 December 2005, 60/236 B of 8 May 2006, 61/236 of 22 December 2006, 62/225 of 22 December 2007, 63/248 of 24 December 2008, 63/284 of 30 June 2009 and 64/230 of 22 December 2009,

Reaffirming its resolution 42/207 C of 11 December 1987, in which it requested the Secretary-General to ensure the equal treatment of the official languages of the United Nations,

Having considered the report of the Committee on Conferences for 2010 and the relevant report of the Secretary-General,

Having also considered the report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions,

Reaffirming the provisions relating to conference services in its resolutions on multilingualism, in particular resolution 63/306 of 9 September 2009,

I

Calendar of conferences and meetings

1. Welcomes the report of the Committee on Conferences for 2010;

2. Approves the draft revised calendar of conferences and meetings of the United Nations for 2011, as submitted by the Committee on Conferences, taking into account the observations of the Committee and subject to the provisions of the present resolution;

3. Authorizes the Committee on Conferences to make any adjustments to the calendar of conferences and meetings for 2011 that may become necessary as a result of actions and decisions taken by the General Assembly at its sixty-fifth session;

4. Notes with satisfaction that the Secretariat has taken into account the arrangements referred to in General Assembly resolutions 53/208 A, 54/248, 55/222, 56/242, 57/283 B, 58/250, 59/265, 60/236 A, 61/236, 62/225 and 63/248 concerning Orthodox Good Friday and the official holidays of Eid al-Fitr and Eid al-Adha, and requests all intergovernmental bodies to observe those decisions when planning their meetings;

5. Requests the Secretary-General to ensure that any modification to the calendar of conferences and meetings is implemented strictly in accordance with the mandate of the Committee on Conferences and other relevant resolutions of the General Assembly;

6. Notes that accurate, timely and consistent information provided to the Fifth Committee during its informal consultations facilitates the decision-making process in the Committee;

II

A. Utilization of conference-servicing resources

1. Reaffirms the practice that, in the use of conference rooms, priority must be given to the meetings of Member States;

2. Notes that the overall utilization factor at the four main duty stations in 2009 was 86 per cent, as compared with 85 per cent in 2008 and 83 per cent in 2007, which is above the established benchmark of 80 per cent;

3. Welcomes the steps taken by those bodies that have adjusted their programmes of work in order to achieve the optimum utilization of conference-servicing resources, and requests the Committee on Conferences to continue consultations with the secretariats and bureaux of bodies that underutilize their conference-servicing resources;

4. Recognizes that late starts and unplanned early endings seriously affect the bodies' utilization factor owing to the amount of time lost, and invites the secretariats and bureaux of bodies to pay adequate attention to avoiding late starts and unplanned early endings;

5. Notes that the percentage of meetings held by the bodies entitled to meet "as required" that were provided with interpretation services in New York in 2009 was 95 per cent, as compared with 90 per cent in 2008, and requests the Secretary-General to continue to report on the provision of conference services to these bodies through the Committee on Conferences;

6. Urges intergovernmental bodies to review their meeting entitlements and to plan and adjust their programmes of work on the basis of their actual utilization of conference-servicing resources in order to improve their efficient use of conference services;

7. Recognizes the importance of meetings of regional and other major groupings of Member States for the smooth functioning of the sessions of intergovernmental bodies, requests the Secretary-General to ensure that, as far as possible, all requests for conference services for the meetings of regional and other major groupings of Member States are met, and requests the Secretariat to inform the requesters as early as possible about the availability of conference services, including interpretation, as well as about any changes that might occur before the meeting;

8. Notes that the percentage of meetings held by regional and other major groupings of Member States that were provided with interpretation services at the four main duty stations was 79 per cent in 2009, as compared with 77 per cent in 2008, and requests the Secretary-General to continue to employ innovative means to address the difficulties experienced by Member States owing to the lack of conference services for some meetings of regional and other major groupings of Member States and to report thereon to the General Assembly through the Committee on Conferences;

9. Once again urges intergovernmental bodies to spare no effort at the planning stage to take into account the meetings of regional and other major groupings of Member States, to make provision for such meetings in their programmes of work and to notify conference services, well in advance, of any cancellations so that unutilized conference-servicing resources may, to the extent possible, be reassigned to meetings of regional and other major groupings of Member States;

10. Notes with satisfaction that, in accordance with several resolutions of the General Assembly, including resolution 64/230, section II.A, paragraph 9, in conformity with the headquarters rule, all meetings of Nairobi-based United Nations bodies were held in Nairobi in 2009, and requests the Secretary-General to report thereon to the Assembly at its sixty-sixth session through the Committee on Conferences;

11. Notes that ongoing promotional efforts and initiatives undertaken by the management of the conference centre of the Economic Commission for Africa led to a sustained increase in the utilization of the premises in 2009;

12. Requests the Secretary-General to continue to explore means to increase the utilization of the conference centre of the Economic Commission for Africa and to report thereon to the General Assembly at its sixty-sixth session;

13. Calls upon the Secretary-General and Member States to adhere to the guidelines and procedures contained in the administrative instruction for the authorization of the use of United Nations premises for meetings, conferences, special events and exhibits;

14. Emphasizes that such meetings, conferences, special events and exhibits must be consistent with the purposes and principles of the United Nations;

B. Impact of the capital master plan, strategy IV (phased approach), on meetings held at Headquarters during its implementation

1. Requests the Secretary-General to ensure that the implementation of the capital master plan, including the temporary relocation of conference-servicing staff to a swing space, will not compromise the quality of conference services provided to Member States in the six official languages and the equal treatment of the language services, which should be provided with equally favourable working conditions and resources, with a view to receiving the maximum quality of services;

2. Requests all meeting requesters and organizers to liaise closely with the Department for General Assembly and Conference Management of the Secretariat on all matters related to the scheduling of meetings to allow maximum predictability in coordinating activities at Headquarters during the construction period;

3. Requests the Committee on Conferences to keep the matter under constant review, and requests the Secretary-General to report regularly to the Committee on matters pertaining to the calendar of conferences and meetings of the United Nations during the construction period;

4. Requests the Secretary-General to continue to provide adequate information technology support for conference services, within the existing resources of the Department for General Assembly and Conference Management, in order to ensure their seamless operation throughout the implementation of the capital master plan;

5. Notes that, for the duration of the implementation of the capital master plan, a part of the conference-servicing staff and information technology resources of the Department for General Assembly and Conference Management has been temporarily relocated to a swing space, and requests the Secretary-General to continue to provide adequate support, within the existing resources of the Department, to ensure continued maintenance of the information technology facilities of the Department, implementation of the global information technology initiative and delivery of quality conference services;

6. Requests the Secretary-General to consult Member States on initiatives that affect the utilization of conference services and conference facilities;

III

Integrated global management

1. Notes the progress achieved in the implementation of the global information technology project, aimed at integrating, across duty stations, information technology into meetings management and documentation-processing systems, and the global approach to harmonizing standards and information technology and sharing good practices and technological achievements among conference services at the four main duty stations;

2. Notes with appreciation the efforts of the Secretary-General, using in-house capacity, to improve the utilization of conference services, in particular through the implementation of the project on the Electronic Meetings Planning and Resource Allocation System (e-Meets) and the interpreters assignment programme (e-APG module) ("project 2"), and requests the Secretary-General to report to the General Assembly at its sixty-sixth session on other efforts to that end;

3. Requests the Secretary-General to ensure the full implementation of the project on global documentation management ("project 3") and to report thereon to the General Assembly at its sixty-sixth session;

4. Notes the initiatives undertaken in the context of integrated global management aimed at streamlining procedures, achieving economies of scale and improving the quality of conference services, and in this regard stresses the importance of ensuring equal treatment of conference-servicing staff as well as the principle of equal grade for equal work at the four main duty stations;

5. Emphasizes that the major goals of the Department for General Assembly and Conference Management are to provide high-quality documents in a timely manner in all official languages in accordance with established regulations, as well as high-quality conference services to Member States at all duty stations, and to achieve those aims as efficiently and cost effectively as possible, in accordance with the relevant resolutions of the General Assembly;

6. Requests the Secretary-General to ensure that all language services are given equal treatment and are provided with equally favourable working conditions and resources, with a view to achieving the maximum quality of services, with full respect for the specificities of the six official languages and taking into account their respective workloads;

7. Reiterates the need for the Secretary-General to ensure the compatibility of technologies used in all duty stations and to ensure that they are user-friendly in all official languages;

8. Requests the Secretary-General to complete the task of uploading all important older United Nations documents onto the United Nations website in all six official languages on a priority basis so that these archives are also available to Member States through that medium;

9. Reiterates that the satisfaction of Member States is a key performance indicator in conference management and conference services;

10. Requests the Secretary-General to continue to ensure that measures taken by the Department for General Assembly and Conference Management to seek the evaluation by Member States of the quality of the conference services provided to them, as a key performance indicator of the Department, provide equal opportunities to Member States to present their evaluations in the six official languages of the United Nations and are in full compliance with relevant resolutions of the General Assembly, and requests the Secretary-General to report to the Assembly, through the Committee on Conferences, on progress made in this regard;

11. Also requests the Secretary-General to continue to explore best practices and techniques in client satisfaction evaluations and to report on a regular basis to the General Assembly on the results achieved;

12. Welcomes the efforts made by the Department for General Assembly and Conference Management to seek the evaluation by Member States of the quality of the conference services provided to them, and requests the Secretary-General to continue to explore innovative ways to systematically capture and analyse feedback from Member States and committee Chairs and Secretaries on the quality of conference services and to report thereon to the General Assembly through the Committee on Conferences;

13. Requests the Secretary-General to keep the General Assembly apprised of progress made in integrated global management;

14. Notes with concern that the Secretary-General did not include in his report on the pattern of conferences information about the financial savings achieved through the implementation of the integrated global management projects as requested in section III, paragraph 4, of its resolution 63/248, and in section III, paragraph 12, of its resolution 64/230, and reiterates its request that the Secretary-

General redouble his efforts to include this information in his next report on the pattern of conferences;

15. Requests the Secretary-General to assess the conference management efficiency and accountability mechanisms across the four main duty stations and to report thereon to the General Assembly at its sixty-sixth session;

IV

Documentation and publication-related matters

1. Emphasizes the paramount importance of the equality of the six official languages of the United Nations;

2. Reaffirms its decision in section IV of its resolution 64/230 that all reports adopted by the Working Group on the Universal Periodic Review of the Human Rights Council shall be issued as documents in all official languages of the United Nations in a timely manner before their consideration by the Council, in accordance with General Assembly resolutions 36/117 A of 10 December 1981, 51/211 A to E, 52/214, 53/208 A to E and 59/265, and requests the Secretary-General to ensure the support necessary to that effect;

3. Reiterates the importance of the timely issuance of documents for the Fifth Committee;

4. Reiterates with concern its request that the Secretary-General ensure that the rules concerning the simultaneous distribution of documents in all six official languages are strictly respected as regards both the distribution of printed copies and the posting of parliamentary documentation on the Official Document System and the United Nations website, in keeping with section III, paragraph 5, of its resolution 55/222;

5. Reaffirms that the Fifth Committee is the appropriate Main Committee of the General Assembly entrusted with responsibilities for administrative and budgetary matters;

6. Stresses that matters related to conference management, including documentation, fall within the purview of the Fifth Committee;

7. Reaffirms its decision in section III, paragraph 9, of its resolution 59/265 that the issuance of documents in all six official languages on planning, budgetary and administrative matters requiring urgent consideration by the General Assembly shall be accorded priority;

8. Reiterates its request that the Secretary-General direct all departments of the Secretariat to include the following elements in their reports:

(a) Summary of the report;

(b) Consolidated conclusions, recommendations and other proposed actions;

(c) Relevant background information;

9. Reiterates its request that all documents submitted to legislative organs by the Secretariat and intergovernmental and expert bodies for consideration and action have conclusions and recommendations in bold print;

10. Notes with satisfaction that all documents submitted on time and within the word limit were processed by the Department for General Assembly and Conference Management within four weeks, and encourages the Secretary-General to sustain that level of performance;

11. Acknowledges that a multipronged approach is required to find a solution to the perennial difficulties of the late issuance of documents for the Fifth Committee;

12. Recognizes the work done by the task force chaired by the Department for General Assembly and Conference Management in positively addressing the problem of issuance of documents for the Fifth Committee;

13. Encourages the Chairs of the Fifth Committee and the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions to continue to promote cooperation between the two bodies in the sphere of documentation;

14. Welcomes the continued efforts of the task force to shepherd the submission of documents by the author departments of the Secretariat;

15. Urges author departments to fully adhere to deadlines in meeting the goal of 90 per cent submission compliance, and requests the Secretary-General to ensure that documents submitted late do not adversely affect the issuance of documents submitted on time and in compliance with set guidelines;

16. Requests the Secretary-General to provide, in his next report on the pattern of conferences, further information on the waiver process for documents submitted over the word limit and/or not in compliance with the guidelines established by the General Assembly for the reports of the Secretariat, intergovernmental bodies and subsidiary organs, including the criteria for issuing waivers and their application during the previous three years;

Translation and interpretation-related matters

1. Requests the Secretary-General to redouble his efforts to ensure the highest quality of interpretation and translation services in all six official languages;

2. Also requests the Secretary-General to continue to seek evaluation by Member States of the quality of the conference services provided to them, including through the language-specific informational meetings held twice a year, and to ensure that such measures provide equal opportunities to Member States to present their evaluations in the six official languages of the United Nations and that they are in full compliance with the relevant resolutions of the General Assembly;

3. Reiterates its request that the Secretary-General ensure that the terminology used in the translation and interpretation services reflects the latest linguistic norms and terminology of the official languages in order to ensure the highest quality;

4. Reaffirms section V, paragraph 3, of its resolution 61/236, section V, paragraph 3, of its resolution 62/225, section V, paragraph 5, of its resolution 63/248, and section V, paragraph 4, of its resolution 64/230, and reiterates its request that the Secretary-General, when recruiting temporary assistance in the language services, ensure that all language services are given equal treatment and are provided with equally favourable working conditions and resources, with a view to achieving maximum quality of their services, with full respect for the specificities of each of the six official languages and taking into account their respective workloads;

5. Notes with appreciation the measures taken by the Secretariat to fill current vacancies in the language services at the United Nations Office at Nairobi, reiterates its request that the Secretary-General consider further measures aimed at decreasing the vacancy rates in Nairobi, and requests that the Secretary-General report thereon to the General Assembly at its sixty-sixth session;

6. Requests the Secretary-General to hold competitive examinations for the recruitment of language staff sufficiently in advance in order to fill current and future vacancies in the language services in a timely manner and to inform the General Assembly at its sixty-sixth session of efforts in this regard;

7. Also requests the Secretary-General to continue to improve the quality of translation of documents into the six official languages, giving particular significance to the accuracy of translation;

8. Further requests the Secretary-General to increase the proportion of translation done contractually, with a view to achieving, inter alia, further efficiencies where this mode of delivery yields a final product that is of comparable quality to in-house translation, and to report thereon to the General Assembly at its sixty-sixth session;

9. Reiterates its request that the Secretary-General provide, at all duty stations, adequate staff at the appropriate level, with a view to ensuring appropriate quality control for external translation, with due consideration of the principle of equal grade for equal work;

10. Recalls paragraphs 70 to 74 of the report of the Secretary-General, and requests the Secretary-General to provide for the reclassification proposed in paragraph 75 in the context of the proposed programme budget for the biennium 2012–2013;

11. Requests the Secretary-General to report to the General Assembly at its sixty-sixth session on the experience, lessons learned and best practices of the main duty stations in performing quality control of contractual translations, including on requirements relating to the number and appropriate level of the staff needed to carry out this function;

12. Encourages the Secretary-General to establish globally standardized performance indicators and costing models aimed at a more cost-effective strategy for the in-house processing of documents, and requests the Secretary-General to submit such information to the General Assembly at its sixty-sixth session;

13. Notes with appreciation the measures taken by the Secretary-General, in accordance with its resolutions, to address, inter alia, the issue of the replacement of retiring staff in the language services, and requests the Secretary-General to maintain and intensify those efforts, including the strengthening of cooperation with institutions that train language specialists, in order to meet the needs in the six official languages of the United Nations;

14. Notes, in this regard, that memorandums of understanding have not been signed with such language institutions in all geographical regions, particularly in Africa and Latin America, and requests the Secretary-General to increase his efforts to promote outreach programmes, including through internships, to language institutions in all regions and to introduce innovative methods to increase awareness of the programmes;

15. Requests the Department for General Assembly and Conference Management, in cooperation with the Office of Human Resources Management, to increase its efforts to raise awareness among all Member States about opportunities for employment and internships in language services in the four main duty stations;

16. Notes with appreciation the positive experience with traineeships at the United Nations Office at Vienna in training young professionals in and attracting them to the translation and interpretation services of the United Nations, and requests the Secretary-General to further develop the initiative and consider extending it to all duty stations, and to report thereon to the General Assembly at its sixty-sixth session;

17. Notes that the consolidated lists of individuals and entities subject to sanctions, according to the sanctions committees of the Security Council, have not been translated into all six official languages, and recommends that the Informal Working Group on Documentation and Other Procedural Questions of the Security Council look into the practices related to the issuance of these consolidated lists, including their translation.

On 24 December (decision 65/544), the Assembly decided that the item “Pattern of conferences” would remain for consideration during its resumed sixty-fifth (2011) session.

UN information systems

Information and communications technology

Report of Secretary-General. In response to General Assembly resolution 63/262 [YUN 2008, p. 1592], the Secretary-General, in an October report [A/65/491], provided an update on the status of his information and communications technology (ICT) strategy. The goal of the strategy, which comprised three strategic programmes (knowledge management, resource management, infrastructure management), was to overcome the difficulties stemming from a highly fragmented ICT environment and to leverage ICT in order to increase the Organization’s effectiveness and efficiency. The Secretariat had made significant progress since the endorsement of the strategy by the Assembly in resolution 63/262. Key ICT governance structures such as the ICT Executive Committee, the ICT Advisory Group and the Office of Information and Communications Technology (OICT) had been established and Organization-wide ICT management policies and standards had been implemented. The Secretariat made substantial progress in strategic initiatives that had been led or supported by OICT, including Umoja; Inspira; the Integrated Management Information System (IMIS) upgrade for the harmonization of contracts; support for the capital master plan (CMP); the Member States portal; the electronic fuel management system for field missions; and customer relationship management systems. The Secretariat had also made progress in developing a unified ICT disaster recovery plan and business continuity approach, which, once implemented, would contribute to improving the Organization’s capabilities to manage emergencies and reduce the associated costs. In addition, the Secretariat had contributed to system-wide ICT harmonization through inter-agency collaboration.

Parallel to those efforts, the Secretariat completed an Organization-wide review of how departments, offices and field missions were utilizing ICT resources. The initiative, called the ICT structural review, sought to take a comprehensive inventory of ICT capacities across the Organization and identify opportunities for improvement. The review found that major opportunities existed for improving the efficiency and effectiveness of global ICT operations. On the basis of the findings, the Secretary-General proposed undertaking four projects from 2011 to 2015 to realize the improvement opportunities identified: implement globalized service desks to improve quality of service and reduce costs; streamline data centres and improve server and storage management to increase quality of service and reduce costs; rationalize ICT organization to improve ICT personnel planning, effectiveness and productivity; and strengthen the functions of OICT to oversee strategic ICT activities, reduce fragmentation and promote ICT innovation across the Secretariat.

It was estimated that the first three projects could collectively deliver efficiency gains in the range of $71.3 million to $101.8 million per year. The full benefits would only be realized after completion of the projects. Those projected efficiencies would allow the Organization to meet increased ICT demand or to reassign staff resources to higher priority functions or other programme areas. Additionally, contractual labour could ultimately be reduced, as could spending on equipment and licensing costs for hardware and software. The cost of implementing the three proposed projects was estimated at $118.8 million, with the amount required for the biennium 2010–2011 estimated at $5 million. The fourth project sought to realign and strengthen the capacity of OICT to improve its operational effectiveness and efficiency by increasing ICT resources in high-priority areas. The cost of strengthening OICT was estimated at $21.9 million, with the amount required for the biennium 2010–2011 estimated at $3.5 million.

The report also included a unified ICT disaster recovery plan and business continuity approach.

ACABQ report. In November [A/65/576], ACABQ submitted its comments on the report.

General Assembly action. On 24 December, in section XVII of resolution 65/259 (see p. 1429), the General Assembly requested the Secretary-General to review the proposals contained in his report and to submit new or revised proposals in the context of the proposed programme budget for the biennium 2012–2013; to report on progress made in establishing a secondary data centre, including financial resources proposed for its implementation, in the context of the proposed programme budget for 2012–2013; to submit more than one option for locating any other facilities related to the ICT strategy; and to report to the Assembly's sixty-eighth (2013) session on the most appropriate organizational arrangements for OICT. The Assembly decided not to approve any funding related to projects 1 or 2, authorized the Secretary-General to proceed with the implementation of project 3 (rationalization of ICT organization) and decided that funding in the amount of $1.5 million should be provided from within the resources approved for the biennium 2010–2011. The Assembly approved additional resources amounting to $254,166.

Enterprise resource planning

Reports of Secretary-General. In response to General Assembly resolution 64/243 [YUN 2009, p. 1395], the Secretary-General, in September, submitted a second progress report [A/65/389] on the enterprise resource planning project. Umoja (Swahili for “unity”) was a continuous organizational transformation that would enable high-quality and cost-effective service delivery anywhere in the world in support of evolving UN mandates. The Secretary-General stated that since the submission of his 2009 report [YUN 2009, p. 1439], the Umoja team had made considerable progress: it had finished the detailed design of future business processes; produced an updated benefits case that verified qualitative and quantitative value opportunities; launched change management and communication programmes; analysed potential changes to the Organization's rules, regulations, policies and procedures to optimize business processes; and expanded its database of information systems. The final part of the design phase was under way.

Despite challenges, it was projected that Umoja would deliver within the time frame published in the first progress report [ibid.]. As requested by the Assembly in resolution 64/243, efforts were made to run Umoja at lower cost, while opportunities to reduce cost projections were also sought. Progress was incremental, and no dramatic cuts could be made without substantially altering the plan and approach approved by the Assembly. Therefore, the overall level of funding required remained unchanged. The Assembly was requested to approve 90 temporary posts for Umoja under the special account for recording income and expenditure of the project; appropriate an amount of $12,416,300, initially approved in resolution 64/243 as commitment authority; and approve the redeployment of resources from contractual services to fund 10 temporary posts, bringing the number of temporary posts for the project to 90.

In November, in his first performance report on the programme budget for the biennium 2010–2011 [A/65/589], the Secretary-General said that at the time of his September report on Umoja, it was anticipated that it would be necessary to seek an appropriation of $12,416,300 as a commitment authority; however, based on more up-to-date information on expenditure patterns, he proposed to monitor the progress of the project and report the requirements arising from the commitment authority in the context of the second performance report for the biennium.

ACABQ report. In November [A/65/576], ACABQ submitted its comments on the report.

General Assembly action. On 24 December, in section II of resolution 65/259 (see p. 1429), the General Assembly requested the Secretary-General to make efforts to deploy Umoja on the basis of lower-cost options, while also looking for opportunities to reduce cost projections; urged the Secretary-General to fill the vacancies in the project team; stressed that the temporary posts related to the implementation of Umoja were limited to the duration of the project; and decided not to appropriate the amount of $12,416,300, in the light of the subsequent proposal of the Secretary-General in his November report.

International cooperation in informatics

In accordance with Economic and Social Council resolution 2007/14 [YUN 2007, p. 1486], the Secretary-General submitted a March report [E/2010/48] on international cooperation in the field of informatics. The Ad Hoc Open-ended Working Group on Informatics had continued to act as a bridge with regard to information technology between the evolving needs of Member States and the actions of the Secretariat. The cooperation of the Working Group and the Secretariat had resulted in practical enhancements in the area of technology that facilitated the work of Member States and Observers, as well as that of the non-governmental organizations accredited to the United Nations. The Secretariat and the Working Group expanded their efforts with regard to website tools and shared responsibility for creating and maintaining web pages and document updates. With the guidance of the Working Group, the Secretariat expanded efforts to utilize more fully CandiWeb, the website built in support of elections for UN organs. The Secretariat maintained Wi-Fi connectivity and dedicated Internet access points for delegates throughout the public areas and conference rooms of UN Headquarters in New York. Information posted on iSeek, the Intranet of the Secretariat, was made available on the Member States portal, deLEGATE, which was updated daily by the Department of Public Information in both English and French, providing access to essential information resources and specific services and tools for delegates. Between April and December 2009, 66,323 visitors accessed the portal 208,667 times. The Secretariat provided website services and a standard web content management system for approximately 60 permanent missions. It also provided e-mail services to the permanent missions, while OICT supported 1,184 e-mail accounts on four dedicated servers. The United Nations Institute for Training and Research (UNITAR) offered a wide range of online courses, including: multilateral diplomacy; training for peacekeepers in pre-deployment stage; public finance and trade; and environmental law. In 2009 alone, 2,603 beneficiaries received online training.

On 19 July, the Council deferred consideration of international cooperation in the field of informatics until its resumed substantive session of 2010 (decision 2010/212).

ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL ACTION

On 15 December [meeting 52], the Economic and Social Council adopted resolution 2010/38 [draft: E/2010/L.44] without vote [agenda item 7 (d)].

The need to harmonize and improve United Nations informatics systems for optimal utilization and accessibility by all States

The Economic and Social Council,

Welcoming the report of the Secretary-General on international cooperation in the field of informatics and the initiatives of the Ad Hoc Open-ended Working Group on Informatics,

Recognizing the strategic importance of information and communications technology as a critical reform instrument for improving the efficiency and effectiveness of the United Nations Secretariat,

Recalling its previous resolutions on the need to harmonize and improve United Nations information systems for optimal utilization and access by all States, with due regard to all the official languages,

Welcoming the intensification of efforts by the Chief Information Technology Officer and the Office of Information and Communications Technology of the Secretariat to improve effective collaboration and information management solutions for the needs of the permanent and observer missions at the United Nations,

1. Reiterates once again the high priority that it attaches to easy, economical, uncomplicated and unhindered access for States Members of the United Nations and Observers, as well as non-governmental organizations accredited to the United Nations, to the computerized databases and information systems and services of the United Nations;

2. Requests the President of the Economic and Social Council to convene the Ad Hoc Open-ended Working Group on Informatics for one more year to enable it to carry out, from within existing resources, the due fulfilment of the provisions of the Council resolutions on this item, to facilitate the successful implementation of the initiatives being taken by the Secretary-General with regard to the use of information technology and to continue the implementation of measures required to achieve its objectives, and in that regard requests the Working Group to continue its efforts to act as a bridge between the evolving needs of Member States and the actions of the Secretariat, and to consider its future role, status and mandate and develop findings in that regard;

3. Expresses its appreciation to the Secretariat for the continuing cooperation that it extends to the Working Group in the endeavour to further improve the information technology services available to all permanent and observer missions at the United Nations and, in particular, for the implementation of a Member State web portal to consolidate and simplify secure access by authorized representatives of Member States to relevant information and for the continued upgrading and stabilizing of e-mail services for delegates, as well as for the continued assistance in the hosting of many mission websites, a cooperative effort of the Secretariat and the diplomatic community coordinated by the Working Group;

4. Also expresses its appreciation for the efforts of the Working Group and the Secretariat in providing training and support and raising awareness in the area of United Nations informatics systems for optimal utilization and accessibility by all States;

5. Requests the Secretary-General to extend full cooperation to the Working Group and to give priority to implementing its recommendations and guidance, particularly with regard to the upgrading of web-based services, including through the replacement of the CandiWeb elections and candidatures site;

6. Also requests the Secretary-General to report to the Economic and Social Council at its substantive session of 2011 on action taken in follow-up to the present resolution, including the findings of the Working Group and an assessment of its work and mandate.

UN premises and property

Capital master plan

Implementation of CMP

Reports of Secretary-General. In accordance with General Assembly resolution 57/292 [YUN 2002, p. 1375], the Secretary-General, in October, submitted the eighth annual progress report [A/65/511] on the implementation of the capital master plan (CMP) for the renovation of the UN Secretariat building in New York. Since his previous report [YUN 2009, p. 1446], significant progress had been made, including: the relocation of several thousand UN staff to off-site and on-site swing space; the completion and inauguration of the North Lawn building; and the closure and commencement of construction in the Conference and Secretariat buildings. Other milestones included: the temporary relocation of the Security Council; the construction of hoists on the Secretariat and Conference buildings; the completion of most of the work required in the basements; and the awarding of guaranteed maximum price contracts for additional aspects of the project. Two years into the five-year project, the Organization remained within reach of completing the project on schedule and within budget. Additional progress was made on design and construction documents, and occupancy plans were developed and approved with departments and offices concerning the reoccupancy of the Secretariat building upon the completion of its renovation. The Secretary-General established the CMP Advisory Board, which held its first meeting in May. The CMP Office continued to solicit donations for particular rooms or building components from Member States.

In an addendum submitted in October [A/65/511/Add.1], pursuant to section III of General Assembly resolution 64/228 [YUN 2009, p. 1450], the Secretary-General provided an update on the status of the activities under the associated costs to CMP, including historical expenditure, forecasts of resource requirements for 2010, and estimated resource requirements for 2011 and until the completion of the construction project, which was anticipated for 2013. The report also described enhancements made to the governance of associated costs to CMP via the establishment of a Steering Committee.

The total resource requirement for associated costs for 2011 was estimated at $110,977,900. Taking into account the estimated balance of $39,106,595 against the amounts approved for the biennium 2008–2009 and for 2010, the net additional requirement for 2011 amounted to $71,871,305.

Review of CMP

Report of Board of Auditors. In a July report on CMP for the year ended 31 December 2009 [A/65/5 (Vol. V)], the Board of Auditors said that according to statement IX of the financial statements of the United Nations for the biennium ended 31 December 2009 [A/65/5 (Vol. I)], the shortfall of income relating to CMP was $79.0 million, compared to an excess of income over expenditure of $397.0 million for the previous biennium. The shortfall was due to the 10-fold increase in expenditure, from $82.9 million as at 31 December 2007 to $813.4 million, which reflected the further advance of CMP into its operational phase, as well as the time lag between the recognition of income and the recognition of expenditure. The bulk of income was recognized prior to the bulk of expenditure, mainly as a result of the assessment scheme adopted by the General Assembly, which offered the option of a one-time assessment for the duration of the project, and the delay in the implementation of the project. Therefore, the shortfall of income did not suggest that the project was at risk financially.

The reserves and fund balances amounted to $1.1 billion as at 31 December 2009, compared to $532.5 million at the end of the previous biennium, or a 104 per cent increase. That was attributable mainly to the transfer of $702.0 million to construction in progress, representing the capitalized costs incurred during the biennium.

Total assets amounted to $1.8 billion as at 31 December 2009, compared to $730.8 million at the end of the previous biennium, an increase of 148 per cent. That was due to an increase in the cash balance from $365.3 million to $923.9 million, or 153 per cent, and in funds for construction in progress, which increased from $113.9 million to $763.1 million, or 570 per cent. Total liabilities increased from $198.2 million to $725.7 million, or 266 per cent, mainly as a result of higher unliquidated obligations.

The latest cost estimate for the project provided to the Board, which was carried out as at January 2010, was $2.0 billion, representing an overrun of almost $95.2 million above the $1.9 billion budget, or 5.1 per cent. That represented a slight increase compared with the estimate submitted to the Assembly in 2009 [YUN 2009, p. 1446]. With the exception of construction costs, which declined slightly, all the expense items contributed to the increase. To bring the total project cost back down to the level of the approved budget ($1.9 billion), the CMP Office continued to identify savings through the value engineering programme.

Of the 17 recommendations made in the Board's report for the year ended 31 December 2008 [YUN 2009, p. 1447], 9 (53 per cent) were fully implemented, 7 (41 per cent) were under implementation and 1 (6 per cent) was not implemented. The slight deterioration in the implementation rate was attributable mainly to delays in the set-up of the post-award review committee created in response to several recommendations of the Board regarding procurement management.

The Board recommended that the Secretariat include in its progress report on the implementation of CMP a detailed analysis of the trends in the total cost of the project and their causes; reassess the merits of the value engineering programme; reduce to a minimum requests for change orders; establish a typology of the principal cause of construction cost overruns; reassess the appropriateness of the scope and level of the provision for contingencies; define all the main measures relating to the refurbishment of workspaces; expedite the functioning of the post-award review committee; and improve the management of the files for the amendments by systematically including information on the negotiation process with the vendor, the results thereof, the exact nature of the work and its location.

Report of Secretary-General. In accordance with resolution 48/216 B [YUN 1993, p. 1207], the Secretary-General, in an August report [A/65/296], provided additional information in response to the recommendations of the Board of Auditors as contained in its report on the United Nations for the biennium ended 31 December 2009 [A/65/5 (Vol. I)] and its report on CMP for the year ended 31 December 2009 (see above). The report gave the status of implementation, the office responsible, the estimated completion date and the priority for each recommendation contained in the reports of the Board of Auditors. In addition, it provided updated information on the status of implementation of the Board's recommendations relating to prior periods that were reported by the Board as not having been fully implemented.

General Assembly action. By decision 65/543 of 24 December, the General Assembly authorized the rollover into 2011 of the unspent balance of the funding for associated costs approved in 2010 to allow the Secretary-General to continue the activities and projects in 2011 that had been deferred and to avoid interruption of or negative impact on the CMP project. It also decided to consider at the first part of its resumed sixty-fifth (2011) session the report of the Secretary-General [A/65/511/Add.1] on proposals for financing associated costs for 2011 from within the approved budget for CMP.

Additional office/conference facilities

Reports of Secretary-General. In accordance with section I of General Assembly resolution 63/263 [YUN 2008, p. 1546], the Secretary-General submitted a September report [A/65/351] on overseas property management and construction projects in progress. The report reviewed progress made in enhancing the role of Headquarters in coordinating and supporting overseas property management and construction projects and delineated the role assumed by the Overseas Property Management Unit, part of the Office of Central Support Services, Department of Management, at Headquarters, in providing support in that regard and in developing a 20-year strategic capital review of overseas facilities.

Regarding additional office facilities at ECA in Addis Ababa, construction started on 1 May and the ground-breaking ceremony was held on 21 June. Measures were taken during the contract negotiations to bring the project cost within budget. A reasonable construction contingency of approximately 10 per cent was retained, which would provide against cost overruns owing to external factors. The latest cost plans amounted to $14,333,100—the amount of the revised cost estimate endorsed by the Assembly in section IX of resolution 62/238 [YUN 2007, p. 1454].

Progress was made in the construction of additional office facilities at UNON. By the end of June, up to 75 per cent completion had been achieved, including delivery of the construction materials on site. Internal partitioning was expected to be started in September and be completed by early 2011, which would facilitate earlier occupancy of the building. The cost of the project remained at $25,252,200—the amount of the revised cost estimates approved by the Assembly in resolution 63/263 [YUN 2008, p. 1545].

In another September report [A/65/385], the Secretary-General submitted revised estimates relating to the programme budget for the biennium 2010–2011 regarding the relocation of the subregional headquarters of the Economic Commission for Latin America and the Caribbean (ECLAC) in Mexico. The increased risk posed to UN staff as a result of natural disasters and malicious acts had led to a study by the Security and Safety Section of ECLAC on the effects of seismic activity, as well as a security risk assessment conducted by the Department of Safety and Security on the security situation in Mexico. The study and the survey found that the location of the ECLAC subregional headquarters in Mexico placed UN staff at high risk in the event of a major earthquake and/or fire, and at medium risk in the event of a car bomb or an illegal occupation such as an office break-in or a hostage incident. The Secretary-General proposed relocating the subregional headquarters to a site that met the minimum operating security standards, at an estimated cost of $1,758,800. The Assembly was requested to authorize the Secretary-General to enter into commitments up to that amount under the programme budget for the biennium 2010–2011.

ACABQ report. In October [A/65/518], ACABQ recommended that the Assembly authorize the Secretary-General to enter into commitments in an amount up to $1,758,800.

General Assembly action. In section III of resolution 65/259 of 24 December (see p. 1429), the General Assembly requested the Secretary-General to assess the status of conference facilities at ECA, in particular Africa Hall and Conference Room 1, to ensure that they were in compliance with the highest international standards for conference facilities, and to report thereon in the context of his next annual progress report; welcomed his efforts to utilize additional funding arrangements to ensure that the project proceeded as originally designed; and requested him to regularly brief Member States. The Secretary-General was authorized to enter into commitments in an amount up to $1,758,800 under section 20 (Economic and social development in Latin America and the Caribbean) of the programme budget for the biennium 2010–2011 and to report, in the context of his second performance report for that biennium, on the actual expenditure incurred.

Staff matters

Conditions of service

International Civil Service Commission

The International Civil Service Commission (ICSC), a 15-member body established in 1974 by General Assembly resolution 3357(XXIX) [YUN 1974, p. 875] to regulate and coordinate the conditions of service and the salaries and allowances of the UN common system, held its seventieth (Santiago, Chile, 22 February–5 March) and seventy-first (New York, 26 July–6 August) sessions, at which it considered, in addition to organizational matters, the conditions of service applicable to Professional and General Service categories of staff, locally recruited staff, and staff in the field. The deliberations, recommendations and decisions of ICSC on those matters were detailed in its annual report to the Assembly [A/65/30] (see sections below on specific issues).

In a 6 October statement [A/65/493], the Secretary-General estimated the financial implications of ICSC 2010 decisions and recommendations for the programme budget for the bienniums 2010–2011, 2012–2013 and 2014–2015 onwards to be $10,111,500, $28,951,500 and $31,864,000, respectively, with regard to education grant, base/floor salary scale, children's and secondary dependant's allowances, and harmonization of the conditions of service for staff serving at non-family duty stations. Requirements for the biennium 2010–2011 would be considered in the context of the performance reports for that biennium, and requirements for the biennium 2012–2013 would be considered in the context of the proposed programme budget for that biennium. The financial implications arising from ICSC decisions and recommendations for the budgets of peacekeeping operations for the periods 2010/2011, 2011/2012 and 2012/2013 onwards were estimated at $203,600, $116,292,200 and $125,272,000, respectively, and the financial implications for the support account for peacekeeping operations for the periods 2010/2011 and 2011/2012 onwards were estimated at $32,500 and $65,000, respectively, with regard to education grant, base/floor salary scale, children's and secondary dependant's allowances, and harmonization of the conditions of service for staff serving at non-family duty stations. Requirements for peacekeeping budgets and the support account would be reflected in the performance reports relating to the budgets for the period 1 July 2010 to 30 June 2011 and in the context of the proposed budgets for the period 1 July 2011 to 30 June 2012.

In a 21 October report [A/65/532], ACABQ stated that it had no objection to the Secretary-General's approach.

The Assembly, in section XVI of resolution 65/259 of 24 December (see p. 1429), took note of the Secretary-General's statement and the related ACABQ report.

Education grant

ICSC [A/65/30] reviewed the following aspects of the methodology for determining the education grant: eligibility criteria for receiving the grant; tracking of tuition fee movement for the purposes of adjusting the grant and the list of representative schools; and additional boarding and education grant travel accorded to staff serving at designated duty stations.

In order to harmonize the education grant eligibility criteria, ICSC recommended that the General Assembly invite the organizations of the common system to adopt measures related to minimum age, maximum age and post-secondary education. It also recommended that the Assembly continue tracking representative school fees as the basis for adjusting fees; approve the revised list of representative schools for all country/currency zones listed in annex II to the report; approve suggested criteria for selecting representative schools; and use a cumulative approach to track the movement of fees since the most recent adjustment made for the zone, with all adjustments made on the basis of both movement of costs and fees.

ICSC recommended to the Assembly that for Austria, Denmark, France, Germany, Italy, the Netherlands, Spain, Switzerland, the United Kingdom, the United States and the United States dollar area outside the United States, the maximum admissible expenses and the maximum education grant be adjusted as shown in annex III to the report; that for Belgium, Ireland, Japan and Sweden, the maximum admissible expenses and maximum education grant remain at current levels; that for Austria, Belgium, Denmark, France, Germany, Italy, the Netherlands, Spain, Sweden, Switzerland, the United Kingdom, the United States and the United States dollar area outside the United States, the normal flat rates for boarding taken into account within the maximum admissible educational expenses and the additional amount for reimbursement of boarding costs over and above the maximum grant payable to staff members at designated duty stations be revised as shown in annex III to the report; that for Ireland and Japan the normal flat rates and the additional flat rates for boarding be maintained at current levels; that the special measures for China, Hungary, Indonesia, Romania and the Russian Federation, as well as for the eight specific schools in France, be maintained; that the special measures for Bulgaria be discontinued; and that those measures be applicable as from the school year in progress on 1 January 2011.

Separation payments

ICSC [A/65/30] considered the issue of the application of the termination indemnity in response to General Assembly resolution 64/231 [YUN 2009, p. 1455]. As both the Assembly, in resolution 63/271 [ibid., p. 1464], and the Commission had expressed support for the existing termination indemnity schedule, ICSC consideration focused on the practical application of the termination indemnity scheme. A review of staff separations was conducted to assist the Assembly in assessing the situation and addressing the concerns that some delegations had expressed about cases of possible abuse. The review was based on data collected by the ICSC secretariat from common system organizations, covering the three-year period from 2007 to 2009. Thirteen organizations employing approximately 70,000 staff provided data and were included in the analysis.

ICSC informed the Assembly that it had reviewed about 1,200 cases of termination indemnity paid by common system organizations from 2007 to 2009; the termination indemnity was used on a limited basis and covered approximately 1 per cent of the total General Service and Professional staff and about 14 per cent of all separations; and, while some fluctuations in termination indemnity numbers existed among organizations and contract types, the available data did not demonstrate that there was inappropriate application of the scheme, but that overall termination indemnity-based separation trends appeared to be driven by the operational needs of the organizations.

Remuneration issues

Base/floor salary scale

The concept of the base/floor salary scale was introduced by the General Assembly in resolution 44/198 [YUN 1989, p. 886] and took effect on 1 July 1990. The scale was set by reference to the General Schedule salary scale of the comparator civil service in Washington, D.C. Periodic adjustments were made on the basis of a comparison of net base salaries of UN officials at the midpoint of the scale with the corresponding salaries of their counterparts in the United States federal civil service. The Commission was informed that, as from 1 January 2010, the General Schedule of the comparator had increased by 1.5 per cent on a gross basis. Combined with tax changes recorded at the federal level in Washington, D.C., and in the states of Virginia and Maryland, that increase in gross comparator salaries translated into a net increase of 1.37 per cent as compared with 2009 levels.

ICSC [A/65/30] recommended to the Assembly that the base/floor salary scale for the Professional and higher categories be increased by 1.37 per cent through the standard consolidation procedure, that is, by increasing base salary while commensurately reducing post adjustment levels, with effect from 1 January 2011. The proposed base/floor salary scale was shown in annex VI to the report.

Evolution of UN/United States net remuneration margin

ICSC [A/65/30] continued to review the relationship between the net remuneration of UN staff in the Professional and higher categories in New York and that of the United States federal civil service employees in comparable positions in Washington, D.C. ICSC was informed that, for 2010, the total increase for federal employees in the Washington, D.C. area, taking into account the adjustment of both base pay and the locality rate, was 2.42 per cent effective 1 January 2010. The increases in the other related pay systems included in the margin calculations ranged from 1.5 to 2.5 per cent.

ICSC informed the Assembly that the margin forecast between the net remuneration of UN officials in the Professional and higher categories in New York and officials in comparable positions in the United States federal civil service in Washington, D.C., for 2010 was estimated at 113.3. It drew the Assembly's attention to the fact that the average margin level for the preceding five years (2006–2010) was estimated at 114.0, which remained below the desirable midpoint of 115.0. Details of the margin calculation were contained in annex VII to the report. The Commission decided that its secretariat should commence work on the review of the net remuneration margin methodology in 2011 and report on its findings at the seventy-fifth (2012) ICSC session.

Children's and secondary dependant's allowances

In the context of its biennial review of dependency allowances for the Professional and higher categories, ICSC [A/65/30] considered the levels of children's and secondary dependant's allowances. An updated amount of the global United States dollar flat-rate was calculated following the revisions in the tax provisions and social legislation payments since the previous review in 2008 [YUN 2008, p. 1608]. That global flat rate, amounting to $2,929, was established on the basis of the levels of child benefits recorded at the eight headquarters duty stations at the reference income level of P-4, step VI, weighted by the number of staff at those locations. The secondary dependant's allowance, set at 35 per cent of the children's allowance, amounted to $1,025. The flat-rate amounts would be converted to local currency using the official UN operational rate of exchange as at the month of promulgation and would remain unchanged until the next biennial review.

ICSC recommended to the General Assembly that, as at 1 January 2011, the children's allowance be set at $2,929 per annum and the disabled children's allowance at $5,858 per annum; the secondary dependant's allowance be set at $1,025 per annum; the United States dollar amount of the allowance be converted to local currency using the official UN exchange rate as of the date of implementation and remain unchanged until the next biennial review; as a transitional measure, if, at the time of implementation, the revised flat-rate allowance was lower than the one in effect, the allowances payable to eligible staff be equal to the higher rate reduced by 50 per cent of the difference between the two rates; and the dependency allowances be reduced by the amount of any direct payments received by staff from a Government in respect of dependants.

Conditions of service in the field

ICSC [A/65/30] recommended that the United Nations harmonize the designation of non-family duty stations on the basis of a security assessment, as currently applied by the rest of the common system. With respect to staff assigned to non-family duty stations, ICSC recommended that a change be made to the hardship allowance whereby staff assigned to non-family duty stations would receive an additional amount in recognition of the fact that such service represented an increased level of financial and psychological hardship in terms of involuntary separation from families and the additional costs related to such service; for staff paid at the dependency rate, the additional measure would be 100 per cent of the applicable dependency rate of the hardship allowance for category E (the most difficult duty stations) and that the hardship matrix would be amended to reflect that; for staff paid at the single rate, the additional measure would be equivalent to 50 per cent of the applicable single rate of the hardship allowance for category E and that the hardship matrix would be amended to reflect that; staff would continue to receive the normal hardship allowance at the level applicable to the duty station to which they were assigned; such a change would be implemented six calendar months after a decision by the General Assembly, in order that organizations might prepare for implementation; and for organizations using the special operations approach (SOA) or extended monthly security evacuation allowance (EMSEA), a number of transitional measures would apply.

Job evaluation standards for General Service and related categories

As requested by ICSC [YUN 2009, p. 1454], the ICSC secretariat submitted the final elements of the new job evaluation system for the General Service and related categories of staff. ICSC [A/65/30] promulgated the new General Service job evaluation standards with effect from 15 March 2010.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 24 December [meeting 73], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee [A/65/648], adopted resolution 65/248 without vote [agenda item 136].

United Nations common system: report of the International Civil Service Commission

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 44/198 of 21 December 1989, 51/216 of 18 December 1996, 52/216 of 22 December 1997, 53/209 of 18 December 1998, 55/223 of 23 December 2000, 56/244 of 24 December 2001, 57/285 of 20 December 2002, 58/251 of 23 December 2003, 59/268 of 23 December 2004, 60/248 of 23 December 2005, 61/239 of 22 December 2006, 62/227 of 22 December 2007, 63/251 of 24 December 2008 and 64/231 of 22 December 2009,

Having considered the report of the International Civil Service Commission for 2010,

Reaffirming its commitment to a single, unified United Nations common system as the cornerstone for the regulation and coordination of the conditions of service of the common system,

1. Takes note with appreciation of the work of the International Civil Service Commission;
2. Takes note of the report of the Commission for 2010;
3. Encourages the Commission to continue to coordinate and regulate the conditions of service of staff of the organizations of the United Nations common system, bearing in mind the limitations imposed by Member States on their national civil services;
4. Reaffirms the role of the General Assembly in approving conditions of service and entitlements for all staff serving in the organizations of the United Nations common system, bearing in mind articles 10 and 11 of the statute of the Commission;
5. Recalls articles 10 and 11 of the statute of the Commission, and reaffirms the central role of the Commission in regulating and coordinating conditions of service and entitlements for all staff serving in the organizations of the United Nations common system;

A. Conditions of service applicable to both categories of staff

1. Education grant

1. Approves, with effect from the school year in progress on 1 January 2011, the recommendations of the Commission in paragraph 83 of its report and annex III thereto;
2. Invites the organizations of the United Nations common system to harmonize the education grant eligibility criteria with respect to the minimum age, the maximum age and the coverage of post-secondary education, as specified in paragraph 62 (a) of the report of the Commission;

2. Separation payments

1. Endorses the conclusions of the Commission in paragraph 101 of its report, and invites the governing bodies of the organizations of the United Nations common system to harmonize their termination indemnity schedules with that of the United Nations, as approved in General Assembly resolution 63/271 of 7 April 2009;
2. Decides to revert, at its seventy-first session, to the issue of the introduction of end-of-service severance pay in the organizations of the United Nations common system for fixed-term staff involuntarily separating upon the expiration of their contract after ten or more years of continuous service;

3. Requests the Commission to promulgate guidelines for the Organization to follow when it terminates a staff member based on the agreement of both sides;

B. Conditions of service of staff in the Professional and higher categories

1. Base/floor salary scale

Recalling its resolution 44/198, by which it established a floor net salary level for staff in the Professional and higher categories by reference to the corresponding base net salary levels of officials in comparable positions serving at the base city of the comparator civil service (the United States federal civil service),

Approves, with effect from 1 January 2011, as recommended by the Commission in paragraph 120 of its report, the revised base/floor scale of gross and net salaries for staff in the Professional and higher categories as contained in annex VI to the report;

2. Evolution of the margin

Recalling section 1.B of its resolution 51/216 and the standing mandate from the General Assembly, in which the Commission is requested to continue its review of the relationship between the net remuneration of United Nations staff in the Professional and higher categories in New York and that of the comparator civil service (the United States federal civil service) employees in comparable positions in Washington, D.C. (referred to as "the margin"),

1. Reaffirms that the range of 110 to 120 for the margin between the net remuneration of officials in the Professional and higher categories of the United Nations in New York and officials in comparable positions in the comparator civil service should continue to apply, on the understanding that the margin would be maintained at a level around the desirable midpoint of 115 over a period of time;

2. Notes that the margin between net remuneration of the United Nations staff in grades P-1 to D-2 in New York and that of officials in comparable positions in the United States federal civil service in Washington, D.C., for the period from 1 January to 31 December 2010 is estimated at 113.3 and that the average margin level for the past five years (2006–2010) stands at 114.0;

3. Children's and secondary dependant's allowances

Approves, with effect from 1 January 2011, as recommended by the Commission in paragraph 162 of its report, the revised children's and secondary dependant's allowances and the transitional measures relating thereto;

C. Conditions of service in the field

Harmonization of the conditions of service of staff of the organizations of the United Nations common system serving in non-family duty stations

1. Stresses that the authority delegated by the Secretary-General to the executive heads of the United Nations funds and programmes should be exercised in full compliance with General Assembly resolutions, the statute of the Commission and the appropriate rules and regulations of the United Nations;

2. Requests the Secretary-General, subject to the provisions of the present resolution, to ensure cooperation and compliance by the executive heads of all organizations to which he has delegated authority on human resources matters, with the immediate implementation of the recommendations of the Commission concerning the harmonization of the conditions of service in non-family duty stations, as reflected in the report of the Commission, and to report thereon to the Commission;

3. Also requests the Secretary-General, subject to the provisions of the present resolution, to exert his leadership as Chair of the United Nations System Chief Executives Board for Coordination to ensure the system-wide implementation of the recommendations of the Commission concerning the harmonization of the conditions of service in non-family duty stations, as reflected in the report of the Commission;

4. Requests the organizations of the United Nations common system to report annually to the Commission on the implementation of contractual arrangements and conditions of service for all of their staff serving in family and non-family duty stations;

5. Requests the Secretary-General, in his capacity as Chair of the Chief Executives Board for Coordination, to invite the executive heads of the agencies, funds and programmes participating in the United Nations common system to report to their respective governing bodies on the compliance of the organizations with the decisions of the General Assembly on the harmonization of the conditions of service;

6. Approves the recommendations of the Commission on the harmonization of the conditions of service of staff of the organizations of the United Nations common system serving in non-family duty stations, as contained in its annual report for 2010, subject to the provisions of the present resolution;

7. Decides that, six months after the adoption of the present resolution, all new staff who are assigned to non-family duty stations shall be under the non-family hardship element;

8. Also decides that the organizations of the United Nations common system shall cover only the travel costs of the rest and recuperation framework, until a further decision of the General Assembly on this issue is taken at its sixty-seventh session;

9. Further decides that the additional costs related to the above arrangements for the harmonization of the conditions of service, as related to the United Nations Secretariat, shall be absorbed by the Organization within existing resources, without impacting on the operational costs and without undermining the implementation of mandated programmes and activities, and requests the Secretary-General to report thereon in the context of the relevant performance reports;

10. Requests the Commission to submit recommendations to the General Assembly at its sixty-seventh session concerning the United Nations common system harmonized subsistence allowance or lump sum during rest and recuperation;

11. Requests the Secretary-General to identify offsets that can be used to implement the Commission proposals on a harmonized subsistence allowance or lump sum during the rest and recuperation break in a cost-neutral manner without impacting on operational costs and without undermining the implementation of mandated programmes and activities;

12. Requests the Commission, in its annual report, to report to the General Assembly on the implementation of its decisions and recommendations by the organizations of the United Nations common system;

13. Recognizes the importance of mobility as a means of developing a more versatile, multi-skilled and experienced international civil service that is capable of fulfilling complex mandates;

14. Notes with concern the high vacancy rates in the field and the negative effect that this has on the ability of the organizations of the United Nations common system to carry out their mandates;

15. Requests the Secretary-General to report on the criteria and process followed for designating family and non-family duty stations to the General Assembly at its sixty-seventh session, in the context of human resources management;

16. Regrets that the special operations approach has led to significant variations in the compensation package of staff of the organizations of the United Nations common system in non-family duty stations;

17. Recalls paragraph 42 of the report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions on human resources management, and emphasizes the importance for the Secretary-General and the executive heads of the United Nations funds and programmes to work closely with the Commission in addressing and mitigating any unintended consequences of the harmonization proposal;

18. Requests the Commission, in the context of its annual report, to report to the General Assembly on the implementation of its decisions regarding the harmonization of the conditions of service in non-family duty stations during the transition period;

19. Decides that the rest and recuperation framework should be regulated by the Commission;

20. Requests the Secretary-General to ensure that rest and recuperation entitlements are used by staff in a timely and effective manner;

21. Requests the Commission to keep the issue of the United Nations common system conditions of service in the field under review;

D. Other matters

Notes that the following measures, among others, could improve the selection process and conditions of service for executive heads of the organizations of the United Nations common system:

(a) Conducting hearings and/or meetings with candidates running for the post of executive head, in order to enhance the transparency and credibility of the selection process and make the process more inclusive of all nationalities;

(b) Ensuring that the hearings and/or meetings with the shortlisted candidates are conducted by members of the executive boards, advisory committees and/or other legislative bodies of the United Nations funds and programmes and/or other subsidiary organs and entities;

(c) Adopting provisions comprehensively addressing conflicts of interest pertaining to, and/or wrongdoing or misconduct allegedly committed by, executive heads, if such provisions have not yet been adopted.

On 24 December, the Assembly decided that the item on the United Nations common system would remain for consideration during its resumed sixty-fifth (2011) session (decision 65/544).

Other remuneration issues

Conditions of service and compensation for non-Secretariat officials

Ad litem judges of international tribunals

Report of Secretary-General. In a January report [A/64/635 & Corr.1] on the conditions of service for the ad litem judges of the International Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia (ICTY) and the International Criminal Tribunal for Rwanda (ICTR), the Secretary-General said that the General Assembly might wish to decide to extend the pension scheme of the permanent judges of the international tribunals to the ad litem judges, given the fact that a number of them would have more than three years of continuous service as at 31 December and would be performing similar functions. Should the Assembly decide to take that action, the related budgetary implications were estimated at $421,300 for ICTR and $346,566 for ICTY annually, based on the current terms of service of the ad litem judges.

ACABQ report. In February [A/64/7/Add.20], ACABQ observed that, given the differences in conditions of service of the ad litem and the permanent judges of the Tribunals, the matter of pension benefits for the ad litem judges should be considered in the context of the review of the emoluments, pensions and other conditions of service for the members of the International Court of Justice (ICJ) and the judges of the Tribunals, to be conducted by the Assembly at its sixty-fifth session (see below).

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 29 March [meeting 81], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee [A/64/548/Add.2], adopted resolution 64/261 without vote [agenda item 132].

Conditions of service of the ad litem judges of the International Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia and the International Criminal Tribunal for Rwanda

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 63/259 of 24 December 2008 and section II, paragraph 10, of its resolution 64/239 of 24 December 2009,

Bearing in mind the completion strategies of the International Criminal Tribunal for Rwanda and the International Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia set out by the Security Council, requiring expeditious completion of cases,

Also bearing in mind that the permanent and ad litem judges of the International Criminal Tribunal for Rwanda and the International Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia shall be persons of high moral character, impartiality and integrity,

Affirming that the ad litem judges of the International Criminal Tribunal for Rwanda and the International Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia benefit from the same terms and conditions of service, mutatis mutandis, as those of the permanent judges of the Tribunals, pursuant to the statutes of the Tribunals,

Recognizing that, as at 17 March 2010, 17 ad litem judges of the Tribunals had served for an uninterrupted period of service of three years or more,

Also recognizing that the permanent judges of the Tribunals are entitled to pensions after serving for at least three years,

Further recognizing the decisions to extend the terms of office of the ad litem judges of the International Criminal Tribunal for Rwanda and the International Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia beyond a cumulative period of service of three years, in the greater interest of successful implementation of the completion strategies of the Tribunals,

Acknowledging that ad litem judges at the Tribunals have significantly contributed to the implementation of the completion strategies,

Also acknowledging that the workload of the ad litem judges and permanent judges of the Tribunals is identical and that their responsibilities are nearly identical, despite the prevailing differences in their terms and conditions of service,

Having considered the report of the Secretary-General on conditions of service of the ad litem judges of the International Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia and the International Criminal Tribunal for Rwanda and the related report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions,

1. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General;
2. Endorses the conclusions and recommendations contained in the report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions, subject to the provisions of the present resolution;
3. Emphasizes that the Fifth Committee is the appropriate Main Committee of the General Assembly for administrative and budgetary questions;
4. Welcomes the efforts and commitment of the judges to the successful implementation of the completion strategies of the respective Tribunals;
5. Decides that the matter of the difference in pension rights between ad litem judges and permanent judges of the International Criminal Tribunal for Rwanda and the International Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia shall be resolved as a priority of the General Assembly at the main part of its sixty-fifth session;
6. Also decides that, in future, when an extension of mandates for ad litem judges with budgetary implications is being sought, matters relating to the conditions of service should be brought to the attention of the Fifth Committee, as the appropriate Main Committee of the General Assembly with authority for determining the conditions of service;

7. Further decides that the decisions to be taken with respect to paragraph 5 of the present resolution shall apply to all ad litem judges of the International Criminal Tribunal for Rwanda and the International Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia who have served for an uninterrupted period of service of three years or more;

8. Requests the Secretary-General to include a comprehensive actuarial study of the cost of extending pensions to the ad litem judges of the International Criminal Tribunal for Rwanda and the International Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia in his report requested pursuant to section I, paragraph 8, of General Assembly resolution 63/259;

9. Decides to continue its consideration of the report of the Secretary-General and the related report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions at the main part of its sixty-fifth session.

Report of Secretary-General. In response to General Assembly resolution 63/259 [YUN 2008, p. 1606], the Secretary-General submitted a July report [A/65/134 & Corr.1] on conditions of service and compensation for officials other than Secretariat officials: members of ICJ and judges and ad litem judges of ICTY and ICTR. He proposed increasing the special allowance of the Presidents and of the Vice-Presidents, when acting as President of ICJ and the Tribunals, to $25,000 and $156 per day, respectively; extending the education allowance entitlement to ad litem judges of the Tribunals who had served for a continuous period of over three years; aligning the relocation allowance conditions applicable to judges of the Tribunals with those applicable to ICJ judges; extending the relocation allowance entitlement to the ad litem judges of the Tribunals; and extending pension rights to the ad litem judges of the Tribunals who had served for a continuous period of over three years. Should the Assembly approve those proposals, the programme budget implications for the biennium 2010–2011 were estimated at $16,200 for ICJ, $467,953 for ICTY and $1,210,700 for ICTR. Additional requirements that might arise would relate to inflationary adjustments and would be reported in the context of the performance reports for the biennium 2010–2011.

ACABQ report. In October [A/65/533], ACABQ recommended that the Assembly effect no changes in the conditions of service of the ad litem judges in respect of the education grant, relocation allowance and retirement benefits. ACABQ recognized, however, that without the contribution of the ad litem judges, the work of the Tribunals would have been subject to further delays and additional costs would have been incurred. Accordingly, the Assembly might wish to request the Secretary-General to present a proposal for a one-time ex gratia payment upon completion of service for those ad litem judges who had served for a continuous period of more than three years. ACABQ had no objections to the Secretary-General's other proposals.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 24 December [meeting 73], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee [A/65/646], adopted resolution 65/258 without vote [agenda item 129].

Conditions of service and compensation for officials other than Secretariat officials: members of the International Court of Justice and judges and ad litem judges of the International Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia and the International Criminal Tribunal for Rwanda

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 37/240 of 21 December 1982, 40/257 A and C of 18 December 1985 and 45/250 A to C of 21 December 1990, section VIII of its resolution 53/214 of 18 December 1998, its resolutions 55/249 of 12 April 2001, 56/285 of 27 June 2002 and 57/289 of 20 December 2002, section III of its resolution 59/282 of 13 April 2005, its resolutions 61/262 of 4 April 2007, 63/259 of 24 December 2008 and 64/261 of 29 March 2010 and its decision 62/547 of 3 April 2008,

Recalling also Article 32 of the Statute of the International Court of Justice, as well as relevant resolutions of the General Assembly that govern the conditions of service and compensation for the members of the International Court of Justice and the judges of the International Tribunal for the Prosecution of Persons Responsible for Serious Violations of International Humanitarian Law Committed in the Territory of the Former Yugoslavia since 1991 and the International Criminal Tribunal for the Prosecution of Persons Responsible for Genocide and Other Serious Violations of International Humanitarian Law Committed in the Territory of Rwanda and Rwandan Citizens Responsible for Genocide and Other Such Violations Committed in the Territory of Neighbouring States between 1 January and 31 December 1994,

Having considered the reports of the Secretary-General and the related reports of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions,

Noting that the workload of the President of the International Court of Justice and that of the Vice-President, when acting as President, have increased since 1987 and that the amounts of the special allowance of the President and of the Vice-President, when acting as President, have not increased since then,

Noting also that the workload of the Presidents of the International Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia and the International Criminal Tribunal for Rwanda and that of the Vice-Presidents, when acting as President, have increased since the inception of the Tribunals and that the amounts of the special allowance of the Presidents and of the Vice-Presidents, when acting as President, have not increased since then,

Reaffirming that ad litem judges of the International Criminal Tribunal for Rwanda and the International Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia benefit from the same terms and conditions of service, mutatis mutandis, as those of the permanent judges of the Tribunals, pursuant to the statutes of the Tribunals,

1. Takes note of the reports of the Secretary-General;

2. Reaffirms the principle that the conditions of service and compensation for non-Secretariat United Nations officials shall be separate and distinct from those for officials of the Secretariat;

3. Endorses the conclusions and recommendations contained in the report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions, subject to the provisions of the present resolution;

4. Takes note that the review of the pension benefits of the members of the International Court of Justice and the judges of the International Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia and the International Criminal Tribunal for Rwanda will take place at its sixty-sixth session, including options for defined benefit and defined contribution pension schemes;

5. Decides to review at its sixty-sixth session the pension schemes for the members of the International Court of Justice and the judges of the International Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia and the International Criminal Tribunal for Rwanda, and requests the Secretary-General to include in his report a proposal for a mechanism that he may use to determine retirement pension benefits, taking into account acquired pension benefit rights accrued prior to serving in the Court or the Tribunals;

6. Also decides to increase the special allowance of the Presidents and that of the Vice-Presidents, when acting as President of the Court or the Tribunals, to 25,000 United States dollars per year and 156 dollars per day, respectively;

7. Further decides that the relocation allowance benefit received by the judges of the International Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia and the International Criminal Tribunal for Rwanda shall be the same as that received by the members of the International Court of Justice;

8. Decides to grant a one-time ex gratia payment upon completion of service for ad litem judges who have served for a continuous period of more than three years, on the basis of the length of time served exceeding those three years, as per the schedule contained in annex to the present resolution;

9. Also decides that, owing to the unique and exceptional circumstances of the conditions of service of ad litem judges in the International Criminal Tribunal for Rwanda arising from the failure to establish a second pool of ad litem judges, the decision set out in paragraph 8 above shall under no circumstances constitute a precedent for eligibility for elements of conditions of service, as such eligibility does not exist under the current regulatory framework;

10. Further decides to re-establish a three-year cycle for the review of the conditions of service and compensation for the members of the International Court of Justice and the judges and ad litem judges of the two Tribunals, and to undertake the next comprehensive review at its sixty-eighth session.

ANNEX

Members of ICSC and Chair of ACABQ

Report of Secretary-General. In December, the Secretary-General submitted a report [A/65/676] in which he updated information provided in 2008 [YUN 2008, p. 1604] on conditions of service and compensation for officials, other than Secretariat officials, serving the General Assembly: full-time members of ICSC and the Chair of ACABQ. He proposed that the Assembly restore the relativity relating to the net compensation and post-retirement benefits of the Chair of ACABQ and the Chair and Vice-Chair of ICSC. Should the Assembly approve the proposal, an additional $28,900 would be required for the programme budget for the biennium 2010–2011. That would represent the full cost of provisions in respect of the Chair of ACABQ and the net cost to the United Nations of the provisions for the Chair and Vice-Chair of ICSC, which were financed jointly with the other organizations of the UN system.

After-service health insurance benefits

Report of Secretary-General. In response to section XI of General Assembly resolution 64/245 [YUN 2009, p. 1408], the Secretary-General, in a September report on after-service health insurance: medical and dental reserve funds [A/65/342], described the purpose, management and funding of health insurance reserve funds. Since the primary purpose of those funds was for premium stabilization, the reserves, by their very nature, were applied to existing plan contributors in accordance with current sources of funding. For that reason, the United Nations used a “premium holiday” to periodically distribute excess reserve amounts to all funding sources on the basis of current plan participant data. That was considered the most equitable means of returning excess health insurance reserve funds to all the funding sources. In his 2009 report [YUN 2009, p. 1456], the Secretary-General had recommended a one-time initial infusion of funds, of which $83.1 million was to be transferred from existing medical and dental reserves. Of that total, the share from contributions by the staff and retirees would be $24.1 million and the share from the Organization would be $59.0 million.

ACABQ report. In October [A/65/507], ACABQ, noting the significant variation in the levels of reserve balances maintained for the UN health insurance plans, called for efforts to establish guidelines to ensure greater consistency.

General Assembly action. The General Assembly, in section IV of resolution 65/259 of 24 December (see p. 1429), noted the significant variation in the levels of reserve balances maintained for the UN medical and dental reserve funds mentioned in the Secretary-General’s report, and requested him to establish guidelines to ensure greater consistency. It requested the Secretary-General to include, in future performance reports on the budget, information regarding the medical and dental reserve funds, the number of months that premium holidays had been applied during the budgetary period, other surplus fund distribution methods used, and the financial impact on the budgets. He was also asked to include, in his report to the Assembly at its sixty-seventh (2013) session, an analysis of options for the judicious use of reserves in excess of reasonable industry and UN standards, in the context of the forthcoming analysis of pay-as-you-go and long-term financing strategies for after-service health insurance liabilities.

Staff safety and security

Report of Secretary-General. In response to General Assembly resolution 64/77 [YUN 2009, p. 1459], the Secretary-General submitted a September report [A/65/344 & Corr.1] on the safety and security of UN and associated personnel, covering developments since his 2009 report [YUN 2009, p. 1458]. The UN security management system was responsible for over 150,000 civilian personnel of the organizations of the UN system in more than 170 countries. The report stated that, in 2009, 45 UN civilian personnel lost their lives owing to security incidents, 31 from violence and 14 from safety-related incidents; 190 civilian personnel were injured in security incidents, 110 from violence and 80 from safety-related incidents. The primary cause of death from violence of civilian personnel was terrorism. Of all UN civilian personnel affected by security incidents, 95 per cent were based in the field. Internationally recruited personnel were disproportionately more affected by security incidents than nationally recruited personnel. Female personnel were disproportionately more affected by robbery and crimes at residences.

Abductions of UN civilian personnel continued, with 22 civilian personnel abducted in 11 countries in 2009. Abductions included cases of criminally motivated kidnapping and economically and politically driven acts of hostage-taking. All abducted personnel were released, although in some cases their captivity lasted for several months. In 2009, 163 civilian personnel were detained or arrested, 88 per cent of whom were nationally recruited personnel. Of those, 24 per cent (39 cases) of detentions were considered job related, in that personnel were detained in the course of, or in connection with, the implementation of their official duties. Most cases were resolved and the detained personnel were released within hours, days or weeks. In two cases, the United Nations was denied access to a detainee and was given no reasons for the arrest.

The report described measures taken to implement a new strategic vision for the Department of Safety and Security (DSS) and to strengthen the unified security structure by means of well-designed security programmes and policies throughout a decentralized security management system. The new DSS strategic approach was exemplified in the philosophy of “how to stay” and deliver on mandates and programmes in increasingly dangerous environments. Significant developments included a new security level system, guidelines for acceptable risk and revision of the Framework of Accountability for the UN security management system.

The Secretary-General called on Member States to observe the internationally agreed principles on the protection of UN and associated personnel. Conducting critical humanitarian activities and operating in high-threat environments, including conflict situations, required security investments commensurate with programme needs.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 15 December [meeting 67], the General Assembly adopted resolution 65/132 [draft: A/65/L.31 & Add.1] without vote [agenda item 69].

Safety and security of humanitarian personnel and protection of United Nations personnel

The General Assembly,

Reaffirming its resolution 46/182 of 19 December 1991 on the strengthening of the coordination of humanitarian emergency assistance of the United Nations,

Recalling all relevant resolutions on safety and security of humanitarian personnel and protection of United Nations personnel, including its resolution 64/77 of 7 December 2009, as well as Security Council resolution 1502(2003) of 26 August 2003 and relevant statements by the President of the Council,

Recalling also all Security Council resolutions and presidential statements and reports of the Secretary-General to the Council on the protection of civilians in armed conflict,

Recalling further all relevant provisions of international law, including international humanitarian law and human rights law, as well as all relevant treaties,

Reaffirming the need to promote and ensure respect for the principles and rules of international law, including international humanitarian law,

Reaffirming also the principles of neutrality, humanity, impartiality and independence for the provision of humanitarian assistance,

Recalling that primary responsibility under international law for the security and protection of humanitarian personnel and United Nations and associated personnel lies with the Government hosting a United Nations operation conducted under the Charter of the United Nations or its agreements with relevant organizations,

Expressing its appreciation to those Governments which respect the internationally agreed principles on the protection of humanitarian and United Nations personnel, while expressing concern over the lack of respect for these principles in some areas,

Urging all parties involved in armed conflicts, in compliance with international humanitarian law, in particular their obligations under the Geneva Conventions of 12 August 1949 and the obligations applicable to them under the Additional Protocols thereto of 8 June 1977, to ensure the security and protection of all humanitarian personnel and United Nations and associated personnel,

Welcoming the fact that the number of States parties to the Convention on the Safety of United Nations and Associated Personnel, which entered into force on 15 January 1999, has continued to rise, the number now having reached eighty-nine, mindful of the need to promote the universality of the Convention, and welcoming the entry into force on 19 August 2010 of the Optional Protocol to the Convention on the Safety of United Nations and Associated Personnel, which expands the scope of legal protection under the Convention,

Deeply concerned by the dangers and security risks faced by humanitarian personnel and United Nations and associated personnel at the field level, as they operate in increasingly complex contexts, as well as the continuous erosion, in many cases, of respect for the principles and rules of international law, in particular international humanitarian law,

Stressing the importance of fully respecting the obligations relating to the use of vehicles and premises of humanitarian personnel and United Nations and associated personnel as defined by relevant international instruments, as well as the obligations relating to distinctive emblems recognized in the Geneva Conventions,

Commending the courage and commitment of those who take part in humanitarian operations, often at great personal risk, especially locally recruited staff,

Expressing profound regret at the deaths of and violent acts against international and national humanitarian personnel and United Nations and associated personnel involved in the provision of humanitarian assistance, and strongly deplored the rising toll of casualties among such personnel in complex humanitarian emergencies, in particular in armed conflicts and in post-conflict situations,

Expressing deep concern at the deep and long lasting impacts of attacks and threats against humanitarian personnel and United Nations and associated personnel,

Strongly condemning acts of murder and other forms of violence, rape and sexual assault and all forms of violence committed in particular against women and children, and intimidation, armed robbery, abduction, hostage-taking, kidnapping, harassment and illegal arrest and detention to which those participating in humanitarian operations are increasingly exposed, as well as attacks on humanitarian convoys and acts of destruction and looting of property,

Expressing deep concern that the occurrence of attacks and threats against humanitarian personnel and United Nations and associated personnel is a factor that increasingly restricts the provision of assistance and protection to populations in need,

Recalling the report entitled “Towards a Culture of Security and Accountability” of the Independent Panel on Safety and Security of United Nations Personnel and Premises Worldwide, and its recommendations, including on accountability,

Affirming the need for States to ensure that perpetrators of attacks committed on their territory against humanitarian personnel and United Nations and associated personnel do not operate with impunity, and that the perpetrators of such acts are brought to justice, as provided for by national laws and obligations under international law,

Recalling the inclusion of attacks intentionally directed against personnel involved in a humanitarian assistance or peacekeeping mission in accordance with the Charter as a war crime in the Rome Statute of the International Criminal Court, and noting the role that the Court can play in appropriate cases in bringing to justice those responsible for serious violations of international humanitarian law,

Reaffirming the need to ensure adequate levels of safety and security for United Nations personnel and associated humanitarian personnel, including locally recruited staff, which constitutes an underlying duty of the Organization, and mindful of the need to promote and enhance security consciousness within the organizational culture of the United Nations and a culture of accountability at all levels, as well as to continue to promote awareness of and sensitivity to national and local cultures and laws,

Gravely concerned at the high number of accidents and resulting casualties among United Nations and associated personnel, and conscious of the importance of road safety in ensuring the continuity of United Nations humanitarian operations and preventing casualties among civilians and United Nations and associated personnel,

Noting the importance of reinforcing close collaboration between the United Nations and the host country on contingency planning, information exchange and risk assessment in the context of good mutual cooperation on issues relating to the security of United Nations and associated personnel,

1. Welcomes the report of the Secretary-General;

2. Urges all States to make every effort to ensure the full and effective implementation of the relevant principles and rules of international law, including international humanitarian law, human rights law and refugee law related to the safety and security of humanitarian personnel and United Nations personnel;

3. Strongly urges all States to take the necessary measures to ensure the safety and security of humanitarian personnel and United Nations and associated personnel and to respect and ensure respect for the inviolability of United Nations premises, which are essential to the continuation and successful implementation of United Nations operations;

4. Calls upon all Governments and parties in complex humanitarian emergencies, in particular in armed con-

licts and in post-conflict situations, in countries in which humanitarian personnel are operating, in conformity with the relevant provisions of international law and national laws, to cooperate fully with the United Nations and other humanitarian agencies and organizations and to ensure the safe and unhindered access of humanitarian personnel and delivery of supplies and equipment, in order to allow those personnel to perform efficiently their task of assisting the affected civilian population, including refugees and internally displaced persons;

5. Calls upon all States to consider becoming parties to and to respect fully their obligations under the relevant international instruments;

6. Also calls upon all States to consider becoming parties to the Rome Statute of the International Criminal Court;

7. Further calls upon all States to consider becoming parties to the Optional Protocol to the Convention on the Safety of United Nations and Associated Personnel, and urges States parties to put in place appropriate national legislation, as necessary, to enable its effective implementation;

8. Calls upon all States, all parties involved in armed conflict and all humanitarian actors to respect the principles of neutrality, humanity, impartiality and independence for the provision of humanitarian assistance;

9. Expresses deep concern over the continuing and dramatic escalation of threats and deliberate targeting of, and the disturbing trend of politically or criminally motivated attacks against, the safety and security of humanitarian personnel and United Nations and associated personnel;

10. Welcomes the contribution of female United Nations and associated personnel in United Nations humanitarian operations, expresses concern that in some cases these personnel are relatively more exposed to certain forms of crime and acts of intimidation and harassment, and strongly urges the United Nations system and Member States to take appropriate action for their safety and security;

11. Strongly condemns all threats and acts of violence against humanitarian personnel and United Nations and associated personnel, reaffirms the need to hold accountable those responsible for such acts, strongly urges all States to take stronger action to ensure that any such acts committed on their territory are investigated fully and to ensure that the perpetrators of such acts are brought to justice in accordance with national laws and obligations under international law, and urges States to end impunity for such acts;

12. Calls upon all States to comply fully with their obligations under international humanitarian law, including as provided by the Geneva Convention relative to the Protection of Civilian Persons in Time of War of 12 August 1949, in order to respect and protect civilians, including humanitarian personnel, in territories subject to their jurisdiction;

13. Also calls upon all States to provide adequate and prompt information in the event of the arrest or detention of humanitarian personnel or United Nations and associated personnel, so as to afford them the necessary medical assistance and to allow independent medical teams to visit and examine the health of those detained, and urges them to take the necessary measures to ensure the speedy release of those who have been arrested or detained in violation of the relevant conventions referred to in the present resolution and applicable international humanitarian law;

14. Calls upon all other parties involved in armed conflict to refrain from abducting humanitarian personnel or United Nations and associated personnel or detaining them in violation of the relevant conventions referred to in the present resolution and applicable international humanitarian law, and speedily to release, without harm or requirement of concession, any abductee or detainee;

15. Requests the Secretary-General to take the necessary measures to promote full respect for the human rights, privileges and immunities of United Nations and other personnel carrying out activities in fulfilment of the mandate of a United Nations operation, and also requests the Secretary-General to seek the inclusion, in negotiations of headquarters and other mission agreements concerning United Nations and associated personnel, of the applicable conditions contained in the Convention on the Privileges and Immunities of the United Nations, the Convention on the Privileges and Immunities of the Specialized Agencies and the Convention on the Safety of United Nations and Associated Personnel;

16. Recommends that the Secretary-General continue to seek the inclusion of, and that host countries include, key provisions of the Convention on the Safety of United Nations and Associated Personnel, among others, those regarding the prevention of attacks against members of the operation, the establishment of such attacks as crimes punishable by law and the prosecution or extradition of offenders, in future as well as, if necessary, in existing status-of-forces, status-of-mission, host country and other related agreements negotiated between the United Nations and those countries, mindful of the importance of the timely conclusion of such agreements, and encourages further efforts in this regard;

17. Reaffirms the obligation of all humanitarian personnel and United Nations and associated personnel to respect and, where required, observe the national laws of the country in which they are operating, in accordance with international law and the Charter of the United Nations;

18. Stresses the importance of ensuring that humanitarian personnel and United Nations and associated personnel are aware of and sensitive to national and local customs and traditions in their countries of assignment and communicate clearly their purpose and objectives to local populations;

19. Requests the Secretary-General to continue to take the necessary measures to ensure that United Nations and other personnel carrying out activities in fulfilment of the mandate of a United Nations operation are properly informed about and operate in conformity with the minimum operating security standards and relevant codes of conduct and are properly informed about the conditions under which they are called upon to operate and the standards that they are required to meet, including those contained in relevant national laws and international law, and that adequate training in security, human rights law and international humanitarian law is provided so as to enhance their security and effectiveness in accomplishing their functions, and reaffirms the necessity for all other humanitarian organizations to provide their personnel with similar support;

20. Also requests the Secretary-General to continue, in coordination with Member States, to take the necessary measures to ensure that all United Nations premises and assets, including staff residences, are compliant with the United Nations minimum operating security standards and other relevant United Nations security standards;

21. Welcomes the ongoing efforts of the Secretary-General to ensure that all United Nations personnel receive adequate safety and security training, stresses the need to continue to improve training so as to enhance cultural awareness and knowledge of relevant law, including international humanitarian law, prior to their deployment to the field, and reaffirms the necessity for all other humanitarian organizations to provide their personnel with similar support;

22. Also welcomes the efforts of the Secretary-General to provide counselling and support services to United Nations personnel affected by safety and security incidents, and emphasizes the importance of making available stress management, mental health and related services for United Nations personnel throughout the system;

23. Requests the Secretary-General and the United Nations system to continue taking necessary measures to enhance road safety, including through improved training and initiatives to promote road safety so as to reduce incidents caused by road hazards, and also requests the Secretary-General to report on the steps taken to strengthen data collection on and analysis of road incidents, including civilian casualties resulting from road accidents;

24. Welcomes the progress made towards further enhancing the security management system of the United Nations, and supports the approach taken by the Secretary-General to focus the security management system on enabling the United Nations system to deliver its mandates, programmes and activities by effectively managing the risks to which personnel are exposed;

25. Requests the Secretary-General, inter alia through the Inter-Agency Security Management Network, to continue to promote increased cooperation and collaboration among United Nations departments, organizations, funds and programmes and affiliated international organizations, including between their headquarters and field offices, in the planning and implementation of measures aimed at improving staff security, training and awareness, and calls upon all relevant United Nations departments, organizations, funds and programmes and affiliated international organizations to support those efforts;

26. Calls upon all relevant actors to make every effort to support in their public statements a favourable environment for the safety and security of humanitarian personnel and United Nations and associated personnel;

27. Emphasizes the need to pay particular attention to the safety and security of locally recruited humanitarian personnel, who are particularly vulnerable to attacks and who account for the majority of casualties, including in cases of kidnapping, harassment, banditry and intimidation, requests the Secretary-General to keep under review the relevant United Nations safety and security policy, operational and administrative arrangements related to locally recruited personnel, and calls upon the United Nations and humanitarian organizations to ensure that their personnel are adequately informed about and trained in the relevant security measures, plans and initiatives of their respective organizations, which should be in line with applicable national laws and international law;

28. Notes with appreciation the progress reported in implementing the recommendations of the Independent Panel on Safety and Security of United Nations Personnel and Premises Worldwide, including on accountability, notes that action has been taken on the recommendations that fall within the remit of the United Nations security management system and that the recommendations have either been implemented or are in the process of being implemented, looks forward to a further progress report to be included in the report of the Secretary-General on safety and security to be submitted to the General Assembly at its sixty-sixth session, and notes that the Secretariat will examine innovative ways to further develop the security management system;

29. Requests the Department of Safety and Security of the Secretariat to further strengthen the analysis of threats and to continue to improve and implement an effective, modern and flexible information management capacity in support of analytical and operational requirements, including the ongoing system-wide analysis of best practices and information on the range and scope of safety and security incidents involving humanitarian personnel and United Nations and associated personnel, including attacks against them, in order to make objective and evidence-based decisions on how to reduce the risks arising in the context of United Nations related operations;

30. Welcomes the work of the Secretary-General in enhancing security collaboration with host Governments, including efforts to support United Nations designated officials with regard to collaboration with host Government authorities on staff safety and security;

31. Stresses that the effective functioning at the country level of security operations requires a unified capacity for policy, standards, coordination, communication, compliance and threat and risk assessment, and notes the benefits thereof to United Nations and associated personnel, including those achieved by the Department of Safety and Security since its establishment;

32. Recognizes the steps taken by the Secretary-General thus far, as well as the need for continued efforts to enhance coordination and cooperation, at both the headquarters and the field levels, between the United Nations and other humanitarian and non-governmental organizations on matters relating to the safety and security of humanitarian personnel and United Nations and associated personnel, with a view to addressing mutual security concerns in the field, taking into account relevant national and local initiatives in this regard, inter alia those derived from the "Saving Lives Together" framework, encourages collaborative initiatives to address security training needs, invites Member States to consider increasing support to those initiatives, and requests the Secretary-General to report on steps taken in this regard;

33. Underlines the urgent need to allocate adequate and predictable resources to the safety and security of United Nations personnel, through regular and extrabudgetary resources, including through the consolidated appeals process, and encourages all States to contribute to the Trust Fund for Security of Staff Members of the United Nations System, inter alia, with a view to reinforcing the efforts of the Department of Safety and Security to meet its mandate and responsibilities to enable the safe delivery of programmes;

34. Also underlines the need for better coordination between the United Nations and host Governments, in accordance with the relevant provisions of international law and national laws, on the use and deployment of essential equipment required to provide for the safety and security of United Nations personnel and associated personnel working in the delivery of humanitarian assistance by United Nations organizations;

35. Recalls the essential role of telecommunications resources in facilitating the safety of humanitarian personnel and United Nations and associated personnel, calls upon States to consider acceding to or ratifying the Tampere Convention on the Provision of Telecommunication Resources for Disaster Mitigation and Relief Operations of 18 June 1998, which entered into force on 8 January 2005, and urges them to facilitate and expedite, consistent with their national laws and international obligations applicable to them, the use of communications equipment in such operations, inter alia by limiting and, whenever possible, expeditiously lifting the restrictions placed on the use of communications equipment by United Nations and associated personnel;

36. Requests the Secretary-General to submit to the General Assembly at its sixty-sixth session a comprehensive and updated report on the safety and security of humanitarian personnel and protection of United Nations personnel and on the implementation of the present resolution.

Revised security management framework

Report of Secretary-General. In response to General Assembly resolutions 64/243 [YUN 2009, p. 1395] and 64/245 [ibid., p. 1406], the Secretary-General submitted an August report [A/65/320 & Corr.1] containing the revised framework for accountability of the UN security management system, including an update on the implementation of the new security level system that would replace the long-standing security phase system in January 2011, and a funding proposal for strengthening safety and security in high-risk locations. The Assembly was requested to appropriate an amount of $3,181,100 under the programme budget for the biennium 2010–2011.

ACABQ report. In November [A/65/575], ACABQ endorsed the Secretary-General's proposal.

General Assembly action. The Assembly, in section XIV of resolution 65/259 of 24 December (see p. 1429), stressed the importance of close coordination and consultation with host Governments in operationalizing the new security level system from 1 January 2011. It requested the Secretary-General to submit to the Assembly's sixty-seventh (2013) session detailed information on and analysis of the effectiveness of the new security level system within the context of the report on a comprehensive safety and security policy framework at the United Nations.

Emergency Preparedness and Support Unit

Report of Secretary-General. In a February report [A/64/662], the Secretary-General proposed the establishment of an Emergency Preparedness and Support Unit (EPSU), stating that the increased risk to UN staff resulting from malicious acts, natural disasters and other emergencies demanded a comprehensive and coordinated support system for the survivors of such incidents and for the families affected by the injury or death of a loved one in the service of the United Nations. Between 2003 and 2010, 86 staff members had been victims of natural disasters and 191 military and civilian personnel had been victims of malicious acts. On the basis of an internal review of the Organization's response capacity, as well as the lessons learned from major incidents, the Secretary-General proposed to establish EPSU within the Office of Human Resources Management (OHRM) as an initial step for providing and coordinating the provision of essential support. He requested the General Assembly to approve the establishment of the Unit and the related eight new posts, and to appropriate an amount of $3,145,100 for the biennium 2010–2011 for that purpose.

ACABQ report. In March [A/64/7/Add.22], ACABQ expressed its concern that the establishment of a separate structure would add another layer of bureaucracy, and recommended against the establishment of the Unit. It could, however, support a limited strengthening of certain functions within OHRM. ACABQ recommended the appropriation of an additional amount of $1,571,800 for the biennium 2010–2011.

General Assembly action. The General Assembly, in section II of resolution 64/260 of 29 March (see p. 1437), approved two P-5, one P-4, one P-2 and one General Service (Other level) positions for the emergency preparedness and support team, to be funded from general temporary assistance; approved an additional amount of $2,745,000 for the biennium 2010–2011; and requested the Secretary-General to develop a comprehensive emergency management framework, including emergency preparedness and victim support components, and to submit a proposal in the context of the proposed programme budget for the biennium 2012–2013.

Other staff matters

Human resources management

Human resources management reform

Reports of Secretary-General. In response to General Assembly resolution 63/250 [YUN 2008, p. 1616], the Secretary-General submitted a September report [A/65/305] on human resources management reform, which focused on reforms implemented or in the process of implementation since the sixty-third (2008) session of the Assembly. Those reforms addressed the priority areas of contractual arrangements and harmonization of conditions of service, talent management and revitalizing the entry of young professionals into the Organization.

An addendum on contractual arrangements and harmonization of conditions of service [A/65/305/Add.1] stated that considerable progress had been achieved in contractual reform. The report reviewed the implementation of continuing appointments, as requested by resolution 63/250, and updated information on the number of staff who were converted to a permanent appointment following the one-time review of those staff with rights to be considered for conversion to such appointment [YUN 2009, p. 1465]. To facilitate the review of the issue of continuing appointments by the Assembly and with a view to implementing continuing appointments by 1 January 2011, the report contained information on procedures for the granting and termination of such appointments, including eligibility criteria and the role of the performance appraisal system; financial and managerial implications of granting such appointments, including the possible establishment of a ceiling; and implications of the implementation of such appointments for the system of geographical ranges, for Junior Professional Officers and for successful candidates from competitive examinations. The report also contained information on the conditions of service in non-family duty stations. The Assembly was requested to consider endorsing ICSC's recommendations with regard to the harmonization of conditions of service in non-family duty stations, as reflected in its 2010 report [A/65/30]; requesting ICSC to keep the issue of conditions in the field under review; and approving the implementation of continuing appointments as of 1 January 2011 under the conditions specified in the report.

A second addendum [A/65/305/Add.2], which reviewed the system of desirable ranges for geographical distribution of the staff of the UN Secretariat, showed the impact on the system if changes were to be made to the weights of existing factors (membership, population and contribution) to determine the desirable ranges of representation for Member States, as well as to the base figure of number of posts included in the system of desirable ranges. The scenarios described in the report showed how changing the weights of the factors would result in changes in the representation status of Member States. The same was true when the base figure was expanded to include staff not having geographic status. The Secretary-General drew the Assembly's attention to his continued efforts to address the issues surrounding representation of Member States in the Secretariat, which included ensuring that selection decisions took into consideration, among other factors, the nationality of recommended candidates. The Organization would continue to engage in targeted outreach campaigns to foster an understanding of careers in the Secretariat and to encourage applications from nationals of unrepresented and underrepresented States. The Secretary-General recommended that the Assembly consider the scenarios presented in the report and provide further guidance.

A third addendum [A/65/305/Add.3] described the implementation of the new human resources management system, Inspira, which provided the technological foundation for staffing, performance management and learning management, and replaced current systems supporting those functions (Galaxy, Nucleus and e-PAS). Information was provided on the project's background, governance and timeline, Inspira modules and operational support arrangements.

In a fourth addendum on the young professionals programme [A/65/305/Add.4], the Secretary-General requested the Assembly to approve the change of the age limit for the national competitive recruitment examination from 32 years to 26; to approve the use of 15 per cent of vacant extrabudgetary and peacekeeping support account posts for the young professionals programme; and to approve the internal circulation of P-3-level positions for 15 days to give priority consideration to the young professionals programme candidates, followed by external circulation if no suitable candidate was identified.

ACABQ report. Commenting on the Secretary-General's reports in October [A/65/537], ACABQ disagreed with the proposed requirement for heads of department to justify selection of an external candidate in writing for approval by OHRM, and recommended deleting the special procedures for the selection of external candidates from the staff selection system, stating that all candidates should be assessed on the basis of the requirements of the post. It trusted that the new human resources scorecard—which provided a mechanism for the Secretary-General to monitor the performance of his senior managers in contributing to equitable geographical representation and gender parity in staffing—would set out the expectations the Organization had of its senior managers. ACABQ said there was a need for a unified, integrated, Organization-wide approach to training, targeted to address gaps in skills sets, linked to career path planning and management, and based on a needs assessment.

Staff regulations and rules

Reports of Secretary-General. In order to implement the new contractual arrangements approved by the General Assembly in resolution 63/250 [YUN 2008, p. 1616] and pursuant to staff regulation 12.3, the Secretary-General, in August [A/65/202], provided the Assembly with information on the new UN Staff Rules that he was provisionally promulgating [ST/SGB/2010/6]. The new Staff Rules would enter into effect on 1 January 2011, taking into account any possible modifications by the Assembly. The Assembly was invited to request the Secretary-General to amend staff rule 4.14 on the basis of its consideration of the report of the Secretary-General on continuing appointments [A/65/305/Add.1], and to reconsider the requirement that internationally recruited staff members renounce United States permanent resident status and, if it agreed to remove that requirement, to decide to delete staff rule 1.5 (c).

In accordance with Assembly resolution 62/269 [YUN 2008, p. 1568], the Secretary-General, in a July report [A/65/213], proposed a possible amendment to the Staff Regulations and Rules to address issues of potential conflict of interest. The proposed amendment to staff regulation 1.2 (m) reflected an all-encompassing definition of conflict of interest that was not limited to financial interests. The Assembly was requested to approve the text of the amendment, which was set out in the annex to the report.

ACABQ report. In October comments [A/65/537], ACABQ recommended that the Assembly reconsider the requirement for an international recruit to renounce permanent resident status and that it approve the amendment to staff regulation 1.2 (m).

Ethics in the UN system

JIU report. In September [A/65/345], the Secretary-General transmitted to the General Assembly the report of the Joint Inspection Unit (JIU) entitled "Ethics in the United Nations system" [JIU/REP/2010/3]. The review followed up on an earlier JIU report on oversight lacunae in UN system organizations [YUN 2006, p. 1652] in order to determine progress, lessons learned and best practices in establishing and implementing the ethics function throughout the UN system. The objective of the review was to provide recommendations leading to a fully operational ethics function in each of the organizations of the UN system, designed to ensure an understanding by all staff of minimum acceptable standards of behaviour. JIU recommended that smaller organizations provide the ethics function through either a joint ethics office established by a group of organizations or through insourcing to the ethics office of another organization; term limits be set to the appointment of the head of the ethics office, either for a non-renewable term of seven years, or no more than two consecutive appointments of four of five years; the head of the ethics office submit an annual report directly to the legislative body; the head of the ethics office enjoy informal access to the legislative bodies; executive heads file a financial disclosure statement; and an internal mechanism be established for the ethics office and/or the internal oversight service to investigate allegations brought against the executive head of the organization.

In September [A/65/345/Add.1], the Secretary-General submitted his comments and those of CEB on the JIU report. While generally accepting the recommendations, agencies expressed concern regarding several of them, including the concept of a shared ethics function among smaller agencies.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 24 December [meeting 73], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee [A/65/647], adopted resolution 65/247 without vote [agenda item 134].

Human resources management

The General Assembly,

Recalling Articles 8, 97, 100 and 101 of the Charter of the United Nations,

Recalling also its resolutions 49/222 A and B of 23 December 1994 and 20 July 1995, 51/226 of 3 April 1997, 52/219 of 22 December 1997, 52/252 of 8 September 1998, 53/221 of 7 April 1999, 55/258 of 14 June 2001, 57/305 of 15 April 2003, 58/296 of 18 June 2004, 59/266 of 23 December 2004, 60/1 of 16 September 2005, 60/260 of 8 May 2006, 61/244 of 22 December 2006, 61/276, section VIII, of 29 June 2007, 62/238, section XXI, of 22 December 2007, 62/248 of 3 April 2008, 63/250 of 24 December 2008 and 63/271 of 7 April 2009, and its decisions 64/546 of 22 December 2009 and 64/548 of 24 December 2009, as well as its other relevant resolutions and decisions,

Reaffirming that the staff of the United Nations is an invaluable asset of the Organization, and commending its contribution to furthering the purposes and principles of the United Nations,

Paying tribute to the memory of all staff members who have lost their lives in the service of the Organization,

Having considered the relevant reports of the Secretary-General on human resources management submitted to the General Assembly and the related reports of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions,

Having also considered the report of the Joint Inspection Unit on ethics in the United Nations system, as well as the note by the Secretary-General transmitting his comments and those of the United Nations System Chief Executives Board for Coordination thereon,

1. Endorses the conclusions and recommendations contained in the report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions, subject to the provisions of the present resolution and taking into account the provisions of General Assembly resolution 65/248 of 24 December 2010;

I

Human resources management reform

2. Emphasizes the fundamental importance of human resources management reform in the United Nations as a contribution to the strengthening of the international civil service, recalls, in this context, the reports of the International Civil Service Commission, and reaffirms its commitment to the implementation of these reforms;

3. Reaffirms its support for the integrity and independence of the international civil service;

4. Acknowledges that human resources management must play a central, strategic role in ensuring that the Organization works in an integrated manner;

5. Also acknowledges that human resources management must continuously work to develop an Organization that is responsive and supports a culture of empowerment and performance, allows equal access to career opportunities irrespective of programmes and sources of funding and provides staff members with the chance to learn and grow so that they can reach their greatest potential;

6. Notes the variety of human resources management initiatives that the Organization has undertaken since the adoption by the General Assembly of its resolution 63/250, and recognizes that the continued implementation of the reform initiatives will better equip the Organization to address a variable and demanding environment in which integration and harmonization will provide the basis for longer-term efficiencies in productivity and an improved work environment that will, in turn, better enable the Organization to meet its mandates;

7. Acknowledges the efforts made by the Secretary-General to address some of the issues raised in its resolution 63/250, and encourages him to further intensify his efforts in its implementation;

8. Urges the Secretary-General to ensure that the lessons learned from the implementation of previous reforms are taken into consideration in the formulation of new proposals;

9. Expresses concern over the fact that not all staff representatives have participated in the Staff-Management Coordination Committee, and reiterates its call upon the staff representatives from New York and management to intensify efforts to overcome differences and to engage in a consultative process;

10. Requests the Secretary-General to report regularly on progress in the implementation of ongoing human resources management reform, including on efficiencies and concrete improvements;

II

Recruitment and staffing

11. Reiterates that the Secretary-General has to ensure that the highest standards of efficiency, competence and integrity serve as the paramount consideration in the employment of staff, with due regard to the principle of equitable geographical distribution, in accordance with Article 101, paragraph 3, of the Charter of the United Nations;

12. Regrets that the Secretary-General is of the view that all-encompassing workforce planning for the Secretariat is of limited value and that he has not presented an Organization-wide strategic workforce plan;

13. Recognizes that workforce planning should be considered an ongoing process, that the staffing requirements of the Organization are contingent upon mandates and that there is scope for the Secretary-General in forecasting future staffing requirements for major occupational groups, including the number of staff needed and the skill sets required;

14. Requests the Secretary-General to report on progress achieved in this regard to the General Assembly at its sixty-seventh session in the context of his report on human resources management;

15. Also requests the Secretary-General to continue to ensure equal treatment of candidates with equivalent educational backgrounds during the recruitment process, taking fully into account the fact that Member States have different education systems and that no education system shall be considered the standard to be applied by the Organization;

16. Expresses deep concern at the persistently high vacancy rates in the Organization, in particular in field missions, and the high turnover of staff, especially in difficult duty stations, which has a detrimental effect on the implementation of the mandates of the Organization, and requests the Secretary-General to fill all vacancies in an expeditious manner;

17. Recognizes the paramount importance of speeding up the recruitment and staffing process, in accordance with Article 101, paragraph 3, of the Charter;

18. Takes note of paragraphs 11 and 12 of the report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions, decides that, for the time being, the period for the circulation of specific job openings will remain at 60 days, and requests the Secretary-General to conduct a comprehensive review of the entire recruitment process to improve the overall response time with a view to realizing the benchmark of 120 days for filling a post, and to report thereon to the General Assembly at its sixty-seventh session;

19. Recalls paragraph 13 of the report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions, and requests the Secretary-General to delete the special procedures for the selection of external candidates from the staff selection system;

20. Requests the Secretary-General to ensure that all administrative instructions and any other internal instructions on human resources as well as any information-technology-related applications are in full compliance with the relevant resolutions of the General Assembly;

21. Emphasizes the importance of the participation of staff representatives in the work of the central review bodies, and requests the Secretary-General and invites staff representatives to engage in a consultative process with a view to resuming the participation of staff representatives in the work of the central review bodies;

22. Welcomes the intention of the Secretary-General to expedite the selection process through virtual meetings of the central review bodies;

23. Requests the Secretary-General to ensure that all applicants are informed of the results of their applications;

24. Also requests the Secretary-General, in cooperation with Member States, to increase awareness of job opportunities in the Organization, including through more extensive outreach, with a view to identifying eligible and qualified candidates to fill vacancies, in particular those which have been vacant in excess of the 120-day benchmark;

25. Decides that associate experts shall continue to be considered as external candidates with no preferential treatment;

26. Reaffirms the need to respect the equality of each of the two working languages of the Secretariat, also reaffirms the use of additional working languages in specific duty stations as mandated, and in this regard requests the Secretary-General to ensure that vacancy announcements specify the need for either of the working languages of the Secretariat unless the functions of the post require a specific working language;

27. Recalls paragraph 27 of the report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions, and reiterates its request that the Secretary-General ensure that the Office of Human Resources Management continues to strengthen its monitoring of delegated authority for human resources management, including compliance with geographical and gender targets, while ensuring that the highest standards of efficiency, competency and integrity serve as the paramount consideration in the recruitment of staff;

28. Requests the Secretary-General to include in the human resources management scorecard an additional operational indicator on excess unutilized leave;

29. Notes the progress made in the implementation of Inspira, and welcomes all efforts made by the Secretary-General to review and remedy unintended consequences and to minimize inconveniences, especially before its application in the area of peacekeeping missions;

30. Urges the Secretary-General to ensure the timely realization of the wide range of benefits that the system is expected to bring;

31. Requests the Secretary-General, in this respect, to ensure the effective roll-out of Inspira with a view to filling positions in field missions without further delay;

32. Also requests the Secretary-General to ensure a seamless and well-functioning interface between Inspira and the enterprise resource planning system, Umoja;

33. Further requests the Secretary-General to include, in Inspira website tutorials, tips relating to personal history profiles and competency-based interviews and other materials helpful for external candidates in applying and being considered for vacancies, no later than the end of the sixty-fifth session of the General Assembly, and to report his achievements in that regard to the Assembly at its sixty-seventh session;

34. Regrets that the Secretary-General did not submit proposals on a mobility policy pursuant to section VII of General Assembly resolution 63/250, and in this regard requests that a comprehensive proposal be submitted to the Assembly at its sixty-seventh session;

III

Young professionals programme

35. Approves the young professionals programme, subject to the provisions of the present resolution;

36. Requests the Secretary-General, as a one-time exceptional measure until 31 December 2012, to make efforts to place in P-3 posts, subject to geographical distribution, successful national competitive recruitment examination candidates who were on the roster as at 31 December 2009 and who show an interest in and are qualified for such positions, decides that such candidates shall not be granted continuing appointments, and requests the Secretary-General to report thereon to the General Assembly at its sixty-seventh session;

37. Takes note of paragraph 72 of the report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions, and approves the use of 15 per cent of the positions at the P-1 and P-2 levels in field operations financed through the regular budget and voluntary contributions, on the understanding that all other such positions, as well as positions at the P-1 and P-2 levels financed through peace-keeping budgets, will be advertised;

38. Notes with appreciation the recent efforts made by the Secretary-General to expedite the placement of successful candidates from national competitive recruitment examinations, and requests him to ensure the expeditious placement of successful candidates;

39. Decides that the maximum age for eligibility for the young professionals programme is thirty-two;

40. Requests the Secretary-General to report to the General Assembly at its sixty-seventh session on the implementation of the young professionals programme, including progress made in reducing the time required to mark the examination and to place successful candidates;

IV

Performance management

41. Emphasizes that a credible, fair and fully functioning performance appraisal system is critical to effective human resources management, and requests the Secretary-General to ensure its rigorous implementation;

42. Recalls paragraph 2 of section VI of its resolution 63/250, and requests the Secretary-General to continue to develop and implement measures to strengthen the performance appraisal system, in particular by rewarding staff for excellent performance and imposing sanctions for under-performance, and to strengthen the link between performance and career progression, in particular for those staff members in managerial positions, and to report thereon to the General Assembly at its sixty-seventh session;

43. Requests the Secretary-General to report to the General Assembly at its sixty-seventh session on the implementation of the new talent management system;

V

Career development and staff well-being

44. Recalls paragraphs 17 and 18 of the report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions, and requests the Secretary-General to include in the training strategy a full picture of the total training resources, including extrabudgetary resources, as well as of the management of such resources, and to build the strategy on the basis of a needs assessment;

45. Notes that the proper take-up of leave and rest and recuperation entitlements is an essential element of staff and organizational health and well-being;

46. Emphasizes that it is the responsibility of managers to ensure the implementation of policies related to staff health and well-being, in particular in field locations;

47. Requests the Secretary-General to report to the General Assembly at its sixty-seventh session on efforts to enhance the understanding and implementation of the principles of work-life balance and a flexible workforce across the Secretariat;

VI

Contractual arrangements

48. Recalls paragraph 2 of section II of its resolution 63/250, and reaffirms that contractual arrangements comprise three types of appointments: temporary, fixed-term and continuing;

49. Approves the granting of continuing contracts as at 1 January 2011 to eligible staff members on the basis of the continuing needs of the Organization;

50. Recalls paragraph 23 of section II of its resolution 63/250, and decides that successful candidates from national competitive recruitment examinations and staff from language services after two years of probationary service will be granted continuing contracts, notwithstanding the provisions contained in paragraphs 51 to 61 of the present resolution;

51. Decides that the continuing needs of the Organization shall be determined on the basis of established and temporary posts of a duration of more than five years as well as general temporary assistance in special political missions, with the exception of those covered by the provisions of paragraphs 53 (b) and (c) of the present resolution, subject to two post envelopes, one for international staff in the Professional and higher categories and in the Field Service category and one for staff in the General Service and other locally recruited categories, to be reviewed regularly by the General Assembly and expanded or contracted on the basis of the activities of the Organization;

52. Also decides to set the initial level of the post envelopes at 75 per cent of the total number of posts identified in paragraph 51 of the present resolution, and to include permanent contracts within the post envelopes;

53. Further decides that staff members must satisfy the following criteria in order to be eligible for consideration for the granting of continuing contracts:

(a) They must have completed a minimum of five years of continuing service under the Staff Regulations and Rules of the United Nations;

(i) Staff members of the United Nations Secretariat who have accrued at least five years of continuous service on fixed-term appointments, including periods of service in an entity that applies the Staff Regulations and Rules of the United Nations;

(ii) Staff members who were previously appointed under the 100, 200 or 300 series of the Staff Rules and who have been appointed since 1 July 2009 on a fixed-term appointment under the provisional staff rules after a competitive process under staff rule 4.15 if they have served for five years continuously;

(b) They must not be national staff recruited for field missions;

(c) They must not be international or locally recruited staff recruited for service in the International Criminal Tribunal for Rwanda or the International Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia;

(d) They must have received a performance rating of at least "Meets expectations" or equivalent in the four most recent performance appraisal reports, and must not have been subject to any disciplinary measure during the five years prior to their consideration for the granting of a continuing contract;

(e) They must have at least seven years of service remaining before reaching the mandatory age of separation;

54. Decides that internationally recruited staff in the Professional and higher categories as well as staff in the Field Service category who satisfy the eligibility criteria for the granting of continuing contracts, as set out in paragraph 53 of the present resolution, shall be allocated points, as set out in the annex to the present resolution, for the following additional criteria:

(a) Performance ratings of above "Meets expectations" or equivalent in the four most recent performance appraisal reports;

(b) Service in duty stations with hardship classification of A, B, C, D or E of at least one year in each duty station;

(c) Service in non-family duty stations of at least one year in each duty station;

(d) Geographical mobility, defined as movement between two duty stations in different countries, with continuous periods of service of at least one year in each duty station;

(e) Functional mobility, defined as continuous periods of service of at least one year each in more than one job family;

(f) Proficiency in one official language of the United Nations other than one's mother tongue;

(g) Each additional year of service beyond five years;

55. Also decides that General Service and other locally recruited staff who satisfy the eligibility criteria for the granting of continuing contracts, as set out in paragraph 53 of the present resolution, shall be allocated points, as set out in the annex to the present resolution, for the criteria indicated in subparagraphs (a), (e), (f) and (g) of paragraph 54 of the present resolution;

56. Further decides that staff members identified in paragraph 51 of the present resolution who satisfy the eligibility criteria for continuing contracts will be granted continuing contracts, subject to the availability of contracts within the appropriate post envelope, on an annual basis, and based on ranking in the number of points received through the mechanism outlined in paragraph 54 of the present resolution;

57. Decides that staff members awarded the same number of points shall be ranked on the basis of length of service;

58. Urges the Secretary-General to consider granting five-year fixed-term contracts to staff members who are ranked according to the process outlined in paragraph 54 of the present resolution but who are not awarded continuing contracts;

59. Recalls its decision in paragraph 24 of section II of its resolution 63/250 that periods of service of associate experts (Junior Professional Officers) shall not be taken into account as part of the requisite period of service for a continuing appointment;

60. Requests the Secretary-General to report to the General Assembly on the implementation of the continuing appointments regime in the context of his report on human resources reform, including a review of the level of the post envelopes, as necessary, starting with its sixty-seventh session;

61. Also requests the Secretary-General to report to the General Assembly at its seventy-third session on the implementation of the provisions of the present resolution with the aim of reviewing the system of granting of continuing contracts;

62. Decides that staff members who are granted continuing contracts shall be subject to decisions of the General Assembly on mobility and the learning policy of the Secretary-General;

VII

Comprehensive assessment of the system of geographical distribution

63. Recalls paragraph 17 of section IX of its resolution 63/250, and requests the Secretary-General to report thereon to the General Assembly at the sixty-seventh session;

64. Reiterates its requests to the Secretary-General to present proposals to effectively increase the representation of developing countries in the Secretariat and to report thereon to the General Assembly at its sixty-seventh session;

65. Recalls paragraph 13 of section IX of resolution 63/250, and requests the Secretary-General to continue to ensure the proper representation of troop-contributing countries in the Department of Peacekeeping Operations and the Department of Field Support of the Secretariat, taking into account their contribution to United Nations peacekeeping;

66. Decides that staff members shall retain geographical status when serving against a geographical post, except those recruited under the young professionals programme;

67. Reaffirms that the system of geographical distribution is applicable solely to regular budget posts in the Professional and higher categories of staff;

VIII

Gender representation

68. Expresses serious concern that progress towards the goal of 50/50 gender balance in the United Nations system, especially at senior and policymaking levels, in conformity with Article 101, paragraph 3, of the Charter, has been slow;

69. Requests the Secretary-General to increase his efforts to attain and monitor the goal of gender parity in the Secretariat, in particular at senior levels, and in this context to ensure that women, especially those from developing countries and countries with economies in transition, are appropriately represented within the Secretariat, and to report thereon to the General Assembly at its sixty-seventh session;

IX

Consultants, individual contractors, gratis personnel and employment of retired staff

70. Expresses concern over the increase in the use of consultants, especially in the core activities of the Organization, stresses that the use of consultants should be governed by the relevant resolutions of the General Assembly, in particular resolution 53/221, section VIII, and that they should be drawn from the widest possible geographical basis, and requests the Secretary-General to make the greatest possible use of in-house capacity and to report to the General Assembly at its sixty-seventh session on the measures taken to that effect;

71. Reiterates that in areas where consultants are frequently hired for a period of more than one year, the Secretary-General should submit proposals, where necessary, for the establishment of posts and should report thereon to the General Assembly at its sixty-seventh session;

72. Requests the Secretary-General to report to the General Assembly at its sixty-seventh session on the use of retired former staff and to develop clear criteria for the employment of retirees;

X

Provisional Staff Rules and amendments to the Staff Regulations

73. Takes note of paragraphs 84 and 85 of the report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions on reconsidering the requirement to renounce permanent resident status;

74. Takes note also of the report of the Secretary-General on the provisional Staff Rules;

75. Decides, in this regard, to defer until its sixty-sixth session consideration of the proposal of the Secretary-General to amend the Staff Regulations;

XI

Other matters

76. Welcomes the improvement in the compliance rates of the financial disclosure programme, and requests the Secretary-General to further encourage full participation in, and compliance with, the programme;

77. Requests the Secretary-General to encourage wider participation by senior executives in the public disclosure programme;

78. Requests the International Civil Service Commission to consider standards of conduct in the context of its 2011 programme of work and report;

79. Requests the Secretary-General to provide to the General Assembly for its consideration at the main part of its sixty-sixth session a comprehensive report on conflict of interest, including a contemporary analysis of what constitutes personal conflict of interest, as well as legal, management and mitigation aspects;

80. Decides to consider at the same time the relevant recommendations of the International Civil Service Commission on standards of conduct, the outstanding draft code of ethics and any other relevant reports;

81. Requests the Secretary-General to intensify his outreach activities to attract external candidates;

82. Also requests the Secretary-General to analyse the reasons why staff members leave the Organization, on the basis of exit questionnaires for staff members leaving voluntarily, and to report his findings to the General Assembly at its sixty-seventh session;

83. Reiterates its request, contained in paragraph 91 of its resolution 64/243 of 24 December 2009, that the Secretary-General, in proposing posts for the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights, ensure that they conform to relevant legislative mandates, including those of the Human Rights Council.

On 24 December, the Assembly decided that the item on human resources management would remain for consideration during its resumed sixty-fifth (2011) session (decision 65/544).

Staff composition

Reports of Secretary-General. In accordance with a series of General Assembly resolutions, the most recent of which was resolution 63/250 [YUN 2008, p. 1616], the Secretary-General submitted a report on the composition of the Secretariat [A/65/350], covering the period from 1 July 2009 to 30 June 2010, which contained information on the demographic characteristics of the Secretariat and on the system of desirable ranges. The global staff of the Secretariat as at 30 June totalled 44,134; that number comprised all categories of staff holding permanent/probationary, fixed-term and temporary contracts recruited internationally and locally from 187 Member States. In 2010, the staff population included an additional 1,450 staff of the Secretariat who were administered by the United Nations Development Programme (UNDP), not recorded in the Integrated Management Information System (IMIS), and who were not previously included in reports. All Secretariat staff were employed in four entity groups—departments/offices, regional commissions, tribunals and field operations. Field operations, as opposed to field offices, referred to peacekeeping missions and certain special political missions. Non-field operations comprised 20,141 staff members (45.6 per cent) and field operations comprised 23,993 staff members (54.4 per cent). By category, the staff was distributed as follows: 27,537 General Service and related staff (62 per cent); 12,159 Professional and higher categories staff (28 per cent); and 4,438 Field Service staff (10 per cent). Under the contractual reform that took effect in 2009, all Secretariat staff were appointed under one of three appointment types: permanent/probationary (4,979 staff); fixed-term (36,718 staff); and temporary (2,437 staff). The overall percentage of female staff was 33 per cent (14,500 of 44,134). The average age for all staff was 42.3 years.

As at 30 June, 2,886 Secretariat staff members were subject to the system of desirable ranges. Under that system, 12 countries were unrepresented, 31 were underrepresented, 132 were within range and 17 overrepresented.

An addendum [A/65/350/Add.1] provided information on the engagements of gratis personnel (4,979), retirees (3,784) and consultants and individual contractors (35,231) who were employed between 1 January 2008 and 31 December 2009.

ACABQ report. In October [A/65/537], ACABQ, while recognizing that the use of retirees in some departments, such as language staff in DGACM, had advantages, noted that the increasing trend of hiring retirees in other departments continued unabated. It reiterated that the situation could be avoided through rigorous succession planning and urged the Secretary-General to give priority attention to that issue.

Ethics Office

Report of Secretary-General. In response to General Assembly resolution 60/254 [YUN2006, p. 1633], the Secretary-General, in September [A/65/343], reported on the activities of the Ethics Office between 1 August 2009 and 31 July 2010. During that period, the Office received 412 requests covering a broad range of issues: general ethics advice (74 per cent of requests); protection against retaliation (9 per cent); standard-setting and policy support (7 per cent); training (2 per cent); and other general information. Requests for services continued to come from diverse geographical and organizational sources, although the majority (52 per cent) came from offices and personnel based in New York. With regard to the mode of contact, most requests came via e-mail (75 per cent), followed by paper-based correspondence and requests through the Helpline (11 per cent each) and walk-ins (3 per cent).

The Office handled 308 requests for ethics advice and guidance: 95 (31 per cent) related to outside activities; 40 (13 per cent) to personal investments and assets; 42 (14 per cent) to other conflicts of interest; 58 (19 per cent) to gifts, hospitality and honours; and 3 (1 per cent) to post-employment restrictions. Enquiries under the employment-related category, totalling 70, represented 22 per cent of all requests for advice and involved staff seeking guidance on how to manage situations that related to their employment, such as allegations of misconduct, career-related concerns, and performance appraisal issues. The Office either referred the individual to the appropriate authority for assistance or advised on the proper course of action. The Office received 36 requests related to protection against retaliation, 18 of which were deemed to warrant preliminary review. The Office concluded its review of 8 cases: in 4 cases it was determined that there was no prima facie case of retaliation, while in 4 other instances the requests were either withdrawn or abandoned by the complainants. The preliminary review process was under way in relation to the remaining 10 cases. Of the remaining 18 requests, 2 were determined to fall outside the scope of the mandate, and 16 staff members were provided with advice and guidance regarding the scope and application of the policy and the necessary conditions for commencing a preliminary review, as well as the corrective measures available in the event that retaliation was established. Under the financial disclosure programme administered by the Office, 3,618 staff members were required to file, using the established online financial disclosure filing system. As at the programme closing date (31 December 2009), 99.61 per cent of staff (3,604 participants) had complied with filing obligations. The Office also carried out training, education and outreach, and standard-setting and policy support.

The report included information on the activities of the United Nations Ethics Committee, including a review of any complex ethics issues that it had dealt with.

Multilingualism

In response to General Assembly resolution 63/306 [YUN 2009, p. 1468], the Secretary-General submitted an October report [A/65/488] on the role of multilingualism in the Secretariat, particularly with regard to human resources management; conference management; peacekeeping, security, political, legal and inspection offices and departments; humanitarian, economic, and social offices and departments; internal communication; and public information and outreach. The report concluded that the United Nations had improved and sought creative ways to promote multilingualism in all areas of its work. The Secretariat was striving to make content available in all six official languages in a timely manner, while ensuring the quality of interpretation and translation. It had used formal and informal ways to reach out to the global public, the UN community and staff in the official languages through its outreach programmes and initiatives.

Protection from sexual exploitation and abuse

Report of Secretary-General. In compliance with General Assembly resolution 57/306 [YUN 2003, p. 1237], the Secretary-General submitted a February report [A/64/669] on special measures for protection from sexual exploitation and sexual abuse, in which he presented data on allegations of sexual exploitation and abuse in the UN system during 2009.

All of the 43 UN entities from which information had been sought provided information. The number of allegations reported totalled 154, compared with 111 in 2008. Eight entities reported having received allegations, whereas 35 reported none. Allegations were transmitted to OIOS for investigation. During 2009, most allegations (112 or 73 per cent) were related to peacekeeping personnel. A cause for concern was the increase in the number of allegations of incidents involving minors, including rape; they constituted 46 per cent of the allegations reported in 2009 (51 out of 112).

Investigations involving 39 peacekeeping personnel had been completed as at 31 December 2009. Investigations were conducted involving 13 military personnel, following which allegations against 5 were determined to be unsubstantiated and 8 were substantiated. DPKO and DFS communicated the results of substantiated investigations to the relevant troop-contributing countries, and six individuals were repatriated on disciplinary grounds and barred from future peacekeeping operations. On the basis of an allegation of sexual assault, a troop-contributing country carried out an investigation and, as a result, reduced the individual in rank and barred him from participating in peacekeeping operations. An OIOS contingent investigation report containing evidence of misconduct was transmitted to the relevant troop-contributing country, which increased training and education activities for personnel serving under UN mandates. Investigations involving 13 civilian UN personnel were conducted, following which allegations against 5 were determined to be unsubstantiated and the remainder were substantiated. The substantiated cases were referred to the relevant employers for further action. Investigations were conducted involving 13 police and corrections personnel, following which allegations against 8 were determined to be unsubstantiated, and the remainder were substantiated. Of those, three individuals were repatriated on disciplinary grounds and barred from participating in peacekeeping operations, and two were repatriated on administrative grounds pending the convening of a board of inquiry. Most allegations were related to transactional sex.

Of the 42 allegations involving personnel of entities other than DPKO and DFS, 15 investigations were unsubstantiated or closed, 17 were substantiated and 10 were ongoing. Five cases involving UNICEF staff and three cases involving UNDP staff were referred to the relevant office for follow-up action. Five United Nations Volunteers were subjected to disciplinary measures. Seven allegations regarding the United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East (UNRWA) were referred to the UNRWA investigative body, and five staff members were separated as a result of the investigation. One staff member was separated on the recommendation of the medical board review, and one case was being investigated.

The report described progress made in enforcing UN standards of conduct related to sexual exploitation and abuse. The Task Force on Protection from Sexual Exploitation and Abuse addressed ways of institutionalizing protection, produced guidance documents and delivered training. The Task Force also finalized its website. Conduct and Discipline Teams were operational in 16 peacekeeping and special political missions.

The United Nations continued its efforts and collaboration with governmental and non-governmental partners to address the issue and raise awareness, the Secretary-General said. The Organization was aware of the challenges related to reporting mechanisms, investigative procedures, community outreach and awareness-training, and the Secretary-General remained committed to his policy of zero tolerance of sexual exploitation and abuse and to his efforts to prevent the perpetration of such acts.

ACABQ report. Commenting in April [A/64/660], ACABQ stated that the report could benefit from a more in-depth analysis of data and trends. It requested that the next report include an assessment of the impact of recent reforms relating to welfare and recreation in that context.

UN Joint Staff Pension Fund

As at 31 December, the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Fund (UNJSPF) had 121,138 active participants as compared to 117,580 at the end of 2009 [YUN 2009, p. 1471]. The number of periodic payments in awards increased from 61,841 to 63,830; 22,294 full retirement benefits; 14,163 early retirement benefits; 7,085 deferred retirement benefits; 10,727 widows' and widowers' benefits; 1,209 disability benefits; 8,310 child benefits; and 42 secondary dependants' benefits. The payroll for benefits in payment for the year increased by 3.9 per cent over 2009 to $1.9 billion. The total expenditure for benefits, administration and investment costs of $2 billion exceeded contribution income by $1.8 million, which increased from $1.9 billion to $2 billion (approximately 5.2 per cent). The market value of the Fund's assets increased from $36.7 billion to $40.3 billion, representing an increase of about 9.7 per cent.

The Fund was administered by the 33-member United Nations Joint Staff Pension Board (UNJSPB). At its fifty-seventh session (London, 15–23 July) [A/65/9], the Board addressed actuarial matters; investments of the Fund; administrative matters; audit; governance; and benefit provisions of the Fund. The Board recommended to the Assembly the approval of an amendment to the Regulations of the Fund that would allow additional contributions to be made by part-time staff; the suspension of the special index provision under the Fund pension adjustment system for all separations as from 1 January 2011; and the approval of funding for the cost-sharing arrangement for the use of the new system of administration of justice of the United Nations.

Regarding the revised budget estimates for the biennium 2010–2011, the Board decided that the total appropriation would remain at $176,318,500.

An annex to the Board's report contained the report of the Board of Auditors on the financial statement of UNJSPF for the biennium ended 31 December 2009.

Reports of Secretary-General. In a September report [A/C.5/65/3], the Secretary-General informed the General Assembly that there were no financial implications for the regular budget should the Assembly adopt the recommendations submitted in the Board's report. The Assembly took note of the report in section I of resolution 65/259 of 24 December (see p. 1429).

Also in September [A/C.5/65/2], the Secretary-General reported on investments of UNJSPF and measures undertaken to increase diversification. He provided information on the management of the investments of the Fund during the period from 1 April 2008 to 31 March 2010 and on investment returns, diversification of investments and development-related investments of UNJSPF. The Fund had performed steadily, in excess of its benchmarks, during the unprecedented volatility of the preceding year. Several initiatives were undertaken to strengthen investment decisions and the supporting infrastructure.

ACABQ report. In November [A/65/567], ACABQ recommended approval of the Pension Board's proposals, subject to its observations and recommendations.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 24 December [meeting 73], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee [A/65/633], adopted resolution 65/249 without vote [agenda item 137].

United Nations pension system

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 61/240 of 22 December 2006, 62/241 of 22 December 2007, 63/252 of 24 December 2008 and section II of its resolution 64/245 of 24 December 2009,

Having considered the report of the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Board for 2010, including the financial statements of the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Fund for the biennium ended 31 December 2009, the audit opinion and report of the Board of Auditors thereon and the information provided on the internal audits of the Fund and the observations of the Board and of the Audit Committee, the reports of the Secretary-General on the investments of the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Fund and measures undertaken to increase diversification and on the administrative and financial implications arising from the report of the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Board, and the related report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions,

1. Takes note of the report of the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Board for 2010, in particular the actions taken by the Board as set out in chapter II.B of the report;

2. Notes with concern that the Board of Auditors issued a modified audit opinion on the financial statements of the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Fund for the biennium ended 31 December 2009 with one emphasis of matter on the management of investments, and requests the Secretary-General to implement the recommendations of the Board without further delay;

3. Expresses concern at the results of the actuarial valuation of the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Fund, which revealed a deficit of 0.38 per cent of pensionable remuneration as at 31 December 2009, which was the Fund's first deficit in seven consecutive actuarial valuations;

4. Endorses the recommendation of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions;

Administrative arrangements, revised budget and longer-term objectives of the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Fund

5. Takes note of the information set out in paragraphs 130 to 140 of the report of the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Board on the revised budget estimates for the biennium 2010–2011;

6. Approves the recommendation of the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Board that the total appropriation of 176,318,500 United States dollars remain unchanged and that the requirements of the Fund be met through redeployment, with revised administrative costs, investment costs, audit costs and Board expenses as set out in annex XIX to the report of the Board;

Investments of the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Fund

7. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General on the investments of the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Fund and measures undertaken to increase diversification and the observations of the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Board, as set out in its report;

8. Recalls its resolution 33/121 B of 19 December 1978;

9. Requests the Secretary-General, as fiduciary for the investment of the assets of the Fund, to continue to diversify its investments between developed, developing and emerging markets, wherever this serves the interests of the participants and the beneficiaries of the Fund, and also requests the Secretary-General to ensure that decisions concerning the investments of the Fund in any country are implemented prudently, taking fully into account the four main criteria for investment, namely, safety, profitability, liquidity and convertibility, under the current volatile market conditions;

10. Supports the recommendations of the Board that more detailed disclosures be provided in the future.

On 24 December, the Assembly decided that the item on the UN pension system would remain for consideration during its resumed sixty-fifth (2011) session (decision 65/544).

Travel-related matters

Report of Secretary-General. The Secretary-General, in September, submitted to the General Assembly his biennial report [A/65/348] on standards of accommodation for air travel, providing information for the two-year period ended 30 June 2010 and comparative statistics for the two-year period ended 30 June 2008. In accordance with Assembly resolution 42/214 [YUN 1987, p. 1165], payment of first-class accommodation by air was limited to the heads of delegations of the least developed countries to the sessions of the Assembly. During the reporting period, 28 first-class trips were approved at a cost of $309,380, compared with 33 trips at a cost of $334,105 for the period from 1 July 2006 to 30 June 2008. The Assembly President had incurred two trips at an additional cost of $2,759, compared with six trips at a cost of $21,466 in the period from 1 July 2006 to 30 June 2008. Exceptions had been authorized by the Secretary-General for his personal aides or staff providing security services to him, his wife or other authorized officials. In the two-year period ended 30 June 2010, the number of trips taken by such personnel had increased to 72, at an additional cost of $325,103, compared to 56 trips ($172,499) in the previous period. For the Deputy Secretary-General, 21 first-class trips were authorized for the two-year period ended 30 June 2010, at a cost of $139,936, compared with 17 trips ($61,683) for the previous period. A summary of exceptions listed 262 trips for the two-year period ended 30 June 2010, for an additional cost of $733,779; exceptions for other UN entities numbered 72, involving an additional cost of $108,141.

ACABQ report. In December [A/65/632], ACABQ noted that for the UN Secretariat and other UN entities combined, an additional cost of $537,654 was incurred for 243 authorized exceptions between 1 July 2006 and 30 June 2008, while an additional cost of $841,920 was incurred for 334 authorized exceptions between 1 July 2008 and 30 June 2010, representing higher costs of $304,266 (56 per cent) as a result of an increase of 91 authorized exceptions (37 per cent). ACABQ stated that the issue should be kept under review, and encouraged the United Nations and its entities to explore ways to reduce overall travel expenditures.

JIU report. The Secretary-General, in September [A/65/338], transmitted to the Assembly the JIU report entitled "Review of travel arrangements within the United Nations system" [JIU/REP/2010/2]. JIU stated that travel represented one of the largest parts of UN system organizations' budgets after staff costs. A conservative estimate of airline ticket expenditures of international organizations in 2008 amounted to $1.1 billion. Although CEB had established the Working Group on Standards of Accommodation for Air Travel in the United Nations system, the role of the Inter-Agency Travel Network (IATN) as an advisory body on travel issues needed more prominence. International organizations in Geneva took steps in 2001 to combine their travel volumes and negotiate with airlines for preferential airfares, achieving savings of around $18 million in 2008; those savings should be used to create two positions to improve service quality and efficiency. The CEB commitment to achieving climate neutrality would lead to sustainable travel strategies that would modify travel patterns; those improvements would necessitate the updating of travel manuals and policies. The financial crisis had resulted in some organizations making reductions in their travel budgets. Other measures to reduce costs included adherence to advance travel planning, expanding lump sum options, entering into joint airline negotiations, offering staff incentives and streamlining travel claims processing. JIU also recommended that the executive heads of UN system organizations provide reports on travel expenditures to their governing bodies, and that all staff members be informed of their rights and responsibilities.

Note by Secretary-General. In September [A/65/338/Add.1], the Secretary-General transmitted his comments and those of CEB on the JIU report. UN system entities generally accepted the JIU recommendations and expressed appreciation for the wide-ranging nature of the report, which covered areas as diverse as participation in the inter-agency travel networks, the expansion of the travel modules of the enterprise resource planning systems and recovery for fraudulent travel claims.

CEB report. In accordance with General Assembly resolutions 60/255 [YUN 2006, p. 1618], 62/238 [YUN 2007, p. 1451] and 63/268 [YUN 2009, p. 1391], the Secretary-General, in September, transmitted a CEB report [A/65/386] that examined the existing standards of travel for staff with a view to harmonizing them. The report noted that for bodies under the authority of the Secretary-General—the United Nations and funds and programmes—many of the key travel policies had already been harmonized, and suggested that further progress could be achieved through increased participation by agencies in the Inter-Agency Travel Network.

Administration of justice

Report of Secretary-General. In response to General Assembly resolutions 63/253 [YUN 2008, p. 1637] and 64/233 [YUN 2009, p. 1474], the Secretary-General submitted a September report [A/65/373 & Corr.1] on the administration of justice at the United Nations. He recalled that the Assembly, in resolution 61/261 [YUN 2007, p. 1525], had established a new system of administration of justice for Secretariat staff that had become operational on 1 July 2009.

The Secretary-General viewed the new system as a significant improvement over the old one. Substantial accomplishments had been achieved during the first year of operation. For example, whereas the old system was noted for the length of time—often years—required to adjudicate a case, the new United Nations Dispute Tribunal took an average of six months to dispose of a case. Through the consultative mechanism, staff had expressed confidence in the new system—a major change of view in a short time. During the preceding year, the Management Evaluation Unit had responded to more than 425 requests for review, the Office of Staff Legal Assistance had resolved over 50 per cent of the more than 900 cases received, the United Nations Dispute Tribunal had disposed of 220 of 510 cases and the United Nations Appeals Tribunal had disposed of 64 of 110 cases; those numbers included cases transferred from the old system. Those accomplishments were also the result of the increased productivity, often using strained resources, of both the units representing the Secretary-General as respondent in cases before the Tribunals and the units servicing the Tribunals.

A high percentage of cases coming before the Organization's "first responders" (the Office of the United Nations Ombudsman and Mediation Services, the Office of Staff Legal Assistance and the Management Evaluation Unit) were settled informally. Although the new system was better resourced and more professional, the experience of the first year had demonstrated that some elements required adjustment, strengthening or further consideration.

The Secretary-General requested additional resources amounting to $7,627,500 under the programme budget for the biennium 2010–2011 for the more urgent requirements of the new system.

ACABQ report. In November [A/65/557], ACABQ submitted its observations and recommendations on the report.

Report of Internal Justice Council. On 15 June [A/65/86], the Internal Justice Council submitted to the Secretary-General, for transmission to the General Assembly, the code of conduct for the judges of the United Nations Dispute Tribunal and the United Nations Appeals Tribunal. The Council had drafted the Code in consultation with the judges of the Tribunals.

In response to Assembly resolution 62/228 [YUN 2007, p. 1528], which decided to establish the Internal Justice Council to help to ensure independence, professionalism and accountability in the new system of administration of justice, the Council submitted an August report [A/65/304] containing its views on the implementation of the new system. The five-member Council was established in May 2008. The report reviewed the operations of the United Nations Dispute Tribunal and the United Nations Appeals Tribunal, including issues common to the Tribunals; the Office of Administration of Justice; and the Office of Staff Legal Assistance. It also discussed the relationship between the formal and informal systems. The report concluded that the new system was working as well as its resources allowed, and better than expected after only a year of operation. The Council attributed the system's success largely to the dedication of the judges, registrars and their staff, the staff of the Office of Administration of Justice and lawyers from both the Office of Staff Legal Assistance and management who appeared before the Tribunals. Aware of the financial constraints facing the Assembly, the Council regretted that many of its recommendations would require additional resources and presented only those it considered essential for the new system's effective functioning. Recommendations covered seven areas: advertising, interviewing and recommending of judges for appointment; Tribunals; the Office of Administration of Justice; the Office of Staff Legal Assistance; the Internal Justice Council; the relationship between the formal and informal systems; and disciplinary proceedings.

Letter from Chair of Sixth Committee. On 27 October [A/C.5/65/9], the President of the General Assembly transmitted to the Chair of the Fifth Committee a letter of 22 October from the Chair of the Sixth (Legal) Committee regarding the agenda item on administration of justice at the United Nations. The Sixth Committee Chair reported that, during the Committee's debate, delegations addressed the scope of the system of administration of justice with a view to ensuring that effective remedies were available to all categories of UN personnel, and reaffirmed that non-staff personnel should be afforded effective legal remedies. Delegations requested the Secretary-General to provide more information, particularly taking into account the different categories of non-staff personnel. Delegations considered that many of the issues described by the Secretary-General in his report raised important legal questions, including due process and the rule of law. Since many of those issues were still under consideration in the formal system of administration of justice, however, it was premature and inappropriate for the Assembly to express a view at that stage. Finally, delegations were of the view that the Sixth Committee should revert at a later stage to the outstanding legal issues raised by the reports of the Secretary-General and the Internal Justice Council, including the question of effective remedies for non-staff personnel and the code of conduct for the judges of the United Nations Dispute Tribunal and the United Nations Appeals Tribunal. They recalled the request contained in resolution 62/228 [YUN 2007, p. 1528] that the Secretary-General report on mechanisms for the removal of judges, the definition of the “grounds of misconduct or incapacity” and the means for establishing such grounds in a specific case. Delegations recommended that the Assembly take up the item again at its resumed (2011) sixty-sixth session.

General Assembly action. On 6 December (decision 65/513), the General Assembly decided that the consideration of the outstanding legal aspects of administration of justice at the United Nations, including the question of effective remedies for non-staff personnel and the code of conduct for the judges of the Tribunals, would be continued during its sixty-sixth (2011) session in the framework of a working group of the Sixth Committee, taking into account the results of the deliberations of the Fifth and Sixth Committees, previous decisions of the Assembly and any further decisions that the Assembly might take during its sixty-fifth session. The Assembly included the item in the provisional agenda of its sixty-sixth session.

Communication. On 5 November [A/65/568], the Secretary-General transmitted to the President of the General Assembly a letter from Judge Jean Courtial, President of the United Nations Appeals Tribunal, forwarding a note that set out the views of the judges of the Tribunal regarding their status and the situation of the Appeals Tribunal Registry.

Office of Ombudsman and Mediation Services

Reports of Secretary-General. The Secretary-General, in an August report [A/65/332], provided the General Assembly with responses to systemic issues identified in his 2009 report on the activities of the Office of the United Nations Ombudsman and Mediation Services [YUN 2009, p. 1473]. The issues addressed included career progression and development, and leadership and managerial effectiveness.

In response to Assembly resolutions 59/283 [YUN 2005, p. 1529] and 62/228 [YUN 2007, p. 1528], the Secretary-General submitted an August report [A/65/303] on the 2009 activities of the Office, which delivered informal conflict-resolution services to the staff of the Secretariat, UNDP, the United Nations Population Fund, the United Nations Children's Fund, the United Nations Office for Project Services and UNHCR. All regional ombudsmen and case officers had been appointed (Bangkok, Geneva, Khartoum, Kinshasa, Nairobi, Santiago and Vienna). The Mediation Service was fully staffed and operational, mediation guidelines had been developed and several complex cases resolved. Targeted efforts to reach out to staff, including those in remote locations, had been launched. The Deputy Secretary-General had issued a memorandum to all heads of departments to encourage the use of informal resolution. The first five months of 2010 gave an indication of the success of those efforts: there was a 69 per cent increase in its utilization by staff members of the Secretariat and a 33 per cent increase in its overall utilization. In about 80 per cent of cases received by the Office during two recent field missions, a satisfactory solution was found by the time the missions were completed.

In addition, in the second half of 2009, 79 per cent of the cases received did not proceed to the United Nations Dispute Tribunal.

Overall case volume continued to be high, due in part to the growing recognition of the importance of informal resolution. In 2009, 1,287 cases, comprising 1,869 issues, were opened. With appropriate capacity, the Office was well positioned to prevent festering issues from erupting and to help create durable solutions. The success of informal resolution also depended on a shift in organizational culture that recognized the importance of conflict prevention and conflict management for dealing with issues before they became public or adversarial. The Secretary-General made a number of recommendations to improve the operations of the Office.

In November [A/65/557], ACABQ submitted its observations and recommendations on the report.

Appointment of judges

Extension of terms of office. By an 8 February letter [A/64/664], the Secretary-General transmitted to the President of the General Assembly a request by the Chairperson of the Internal Justice Council to extend by 12 months the tenure of three ad litem judges of the United Nations Dispute Tribunal in order to take care of the backlog of cases transferred to the Tribunal upon the abolition of the old system of administration of justice.

On 4 March [A/C.5/64/16], the Assembly President transmitted the Secretary-General's letter to the Chair of the Fifth Committee. As the Assembly, by resolution 63/253 [YUN 2008, p. 1637], had decided that three ad litem judges would be appointed for a one-year period as from 1 July 2009, the President sought the views of the Committee to facilitate the appropriate action by the Assembly.

Speaking before the Fifth Committee on 10 March [A/C.5/64/SR.26], the ACABQ Chairperson said that ACABQ had no objection to extending the terms of service of those judges for the period deemed necessary, but not longer than one year.

On 29 March (decision 64/417 A and decision 64/553), the Assembly extended the terms of office of three ad litem judges by one year beginning on 1 July 2010.

Appointment of judge. On 18 June, following the resignation of a judge of the United Nations Dispute Tribunal [A/64/793], the Assembly, on the recommendation of the Internal Justice Council [A/64/791], transmitted by the Secretary-General [A/64/797], appointed an ad litem judge for a one-year term of office beginning on 1 July 2010 (decision 64/417 B).

Vacancy on Tribunal. In a 23 December letter [A/65/232], the Secretary-General informed the Assembly of a forthcoming vacancy on the United Nations Appeals Tribunal and requested it to appoint a judge for the remainder of the seven-year term of the judge who had resigned. On 29 December [A/65/671], the Internal Justice Council presented the names of three candidates for appointment as a judge of the Tribunal.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 24 December [meeting 73], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee [A/65/650], adopted resolution 65/251 without vote [agenda item 140].

Administration of justice at the United Nations

The General Assembly,

Recalling section XI of its resolution 55/258 of 14 June 2001, its resolutions 57/307 of 15 April 2003, 59/266 of 23 December 2004, 59/283 of 13 April 2005, 61/261 of 4 April 2007, 62/228 of 22 December 2007, 63/253 of 24 December 2008 and 64/233 of 22 December 2009 and its decision 63/531 of 11 December 2008,

Having considered the reports of the Secretary-General on administration of justice at the United Nations and on the activities of the Office of the United Nations Ombudsman and Mediation Services, the report of the Internal Justice Council on administration of justice at the United Nations, the letter dated 27 October 2010 from the President of the General Assembly to the Chair of the Fifth Committee, the letter dated 5 November 2010 from the Secretary-General to the President of the Assembly and the related report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions,

1. Takes note of the reports of the Secretary-General on administration of justice at the United Nations and on the activities of the Office of the United Nations Ombudsman and Mediation Services and the report of the Internal Justice Council on administration of justice at the United Nations;

2. Reaffirms its resolutions 61/261, 62/228, 63/253 and 64/233 on the establishment of the new system of administration of justice;

3. Endorses the conclusions and recommendations contained in the report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions, subject to the provisions of the present resolution;

I

System of administration of justice

4. Notes with appreciation the achievements produced since the inception of the new system of administration of justice in regard to both the disposal of the backlog and the addressing of new cases, despite the numerous difficulties faced during the implementation of the new system of administration of justice;

5. Commends the efforts of all who were involved in managing the transition from the previous internal justice system and those involved in the implementation and functioning of the new system of administration of justice;

6. Emphasizes the importance of the principle of judicial independence in the system of administration of justice;

7. Reaffirms its decision, contained in paragraph 4 of resolution 61/261, to establish a new, independent, transparent, professionalized, adequately resourced and decentralized system of administration of justice consistent with the relevant rules of international law and the principles of the rule of law and due process to ensure respect for the rights and obligations of staff members and the accountability of managers and staff members alike;

8. Acknowledges the evolving nature of the new system of administration of justice and the need to carefully monitor its implementation;

9. Stresses that all elements of the new system of administration of justice must work in accordance with the Charter of the United Nations and the legal and regulatory framework approved by the General Assembly;

10. Also stresses the importance of ensuring access for all staff members to the new system of administration of justice, regardless of their duty station;

II

Informal system

11. Recognizes that the informal system of administration of justice is an efficient and effective option for staff who seek redress of grievances;

12. Reaffirms that the informal resolution of conflict is a crucial element of the system of administration of justice, and emphasizes that all possible use should be made of the informal system in order to avert unnecessary litigation;

13. Notes the increase of approximately 70 per cent, in the period from 2009 to 2010, in the number of cases received from United Nations Secretariat staff, including staff in field operations;

14. Also notes that the delayed response of departmental heads to the grievances of and issues raised by staff has an impact in respect of increasing the number of cases before the formal system of administration of justice;

15. Requests the Secretary-General to ensure that management responds to requests from the Ombudsman and Mediation Services in a timely manner, taking into account paragraphs 129 and 130 of the report of the Secretary-General on the activities of the Office of the United Nations Ombudsman and Mediation Services, and to report thereon to the General Assembly at its sixty-sixth session;

16. Decides to fix the term of the United Nations Ombudsman at five years, with the possibility of renewal for one additional term, and requests the Secretary-General to expeditiously conclude inter-agency negotiations on the revised terms of reference and to report to the General Assembly at its sixty-sixth session, including on the question of the eligibility of the head of the Office of the United Nations Ombudsman and Mediation Services for other employment in the United Nations after the expiration of his or her term, taking into consideration, inter alia, the potential impact on recruitment;

17. Recalls its requests to the Secretary-General, contained in paragraph 67 (a) of resolution 62/228 and paragraph 21 of resolution 63/253, to report to it on the revised terms of reference for the Office of the United Nations Ombudsman and Mediation Services, and requests the Secretary-General to ensure that the terms of reference and guidelines for the Mediation Division are promulgated as soon as possible;

18. Recalls paragraph 12 of resolution 61/261 and paragraph 25 of resolution 62/228 regarding the establishment of a single integrated and decentralized Office of the Ombudsman for the United Nations Secretariat, funds, and programmes, and requests the Secretary-General to ensure that the structure of the Office of the United Nations Ombudsman and Mediation Services reflects the responsibility of the United Nations Ombudsman for the oversight of the entire Office;

19. Reaffirms paragraph 29 of resolution 62/228 regarding the process of nomination and appointment of the United Nations Ombudsman;

20. Concurs with the recommendations made in section V of the report of the Secretary-General on the activities of the Office of the United Nations Ombudsman and Mediation Services;

21. Recalls paragraphs 11 and 12 of resolution 64/233, and welcomes, in this regard, efforts taken by the Office of the United Nations Ombudsman and Mediation Services, including the launch of the key stakeholders forum, in order to promote greater harmony in the workplace;

22. Also recalls the recommendations contained in paragraphs 124 to 126 and 128 to 133 of the report of the Secretary-General on the activities of the Office of the United Nations Ombudsman and Mediation Services, and requests the Secretary-General to ensure the full implementation of those recommendations that are readily implementable and that do not require additional resources or amendments to the Staff Regulations and Rules, and to include all other recommendations in his proposed programme budget for the biennium 2012–2013;

23. Notes recommendation 4 in paragraph 129 of the Secretary-General's report and requests the Secretary-General, in consultation with relevant stakeholders, to submit a proposal in this regard to the General Assembly at its sixty-sixth session;

24. Emphasizes that it is important to ensure equal and continued access by all staff to the informal system of administration of justice, including to the rapid response teams;

25. Recognizes that the Office of the United Nations Ombudsman and Mediation Services has limited capacity to respond to crises and requests for in-person interventions of its current work in the field, and requests the Secretary-General to address this limitation in future budget proposals;

26. Requests the Secretary-General to take fully into account the balance between the workload of the regional ombudsmen and the resources allocated to them in his future proposed programme budgets;

27. Recalls paragraph 13 of resolution 64/233, and requests the Secretary-General to submit a report on the activities of the Office of the United Nations Ombudsman and Mediation Services for consideration by the General Assembly at its sixty-sixth session;

28. Decides to revert to the proposal for biennial submission of the report of the Secretary-General on the activities of the Office of the United Nations Ombudsman and Mediation Services at its sixty-sixth session;

29. Requests the Office of the United Nations Ombudsman and Mediation Services to provide an informal briefing to the General Assembly at its sixty-sixth session on the financial and administrative implications resulting from settlements reached through informal dispute resolution, bearing in mind the confidential nature of individual settlement agreements;

III

Formal system

30. Takes note of paragraph 24 of the report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions;

31. Requests the Secretary-General to continue current funding arrangements for the ad litem judges and the nine support staff until 31 December 2011, as adopted by the General Assembly in its decision 64/553 of 29 March 2010;

32. Notes with appreciation the important role of the Office of Administration of Justice in maintaining the independence of the formal system of justice and the progress made by its Executive Director during its first year;

33. Welcomes the launch of the website of the Office of Administration of Justice and requests the Secretary-General to continue improving its utility, effectiveness and user-friendly tools to enable an increased number of staff members to utilize the website, and to report to the General Assembly thereon at its sixty-sixth session;

34. Recalls paragraph 80 of the report of the Secretary-General and requests the Secretary-General to submit proposals on the appropriate post level for the Executive Director of the Office of Administration of Justice, and to report to the General Assembly at its sixty-sixth session in the context of the proposed programme budget for the biennium 2012–2013;

35. Stresses that professional legal assistance is critical for the effective and appropriate utilization of the available mechanisms within the system of administration of justice;

36. Notes the important role played by the Office of Staff Legal Assistance in providing legal assistance to staff members in an independent and impartial manner, and also notes that the Office currently represents staff members in cases before the United Nations Dispute Tribunal in New York, Geneva and Nairobi;

37. Reiterates its request to the Secretary-General to work with staff associations in developing incentives to enable and encourage staff to continue to participate in the work of the Office of Staff Legal Assistance, including by providing volunteer professional legal counsel;

38. Decides that the role of professional legal staff in the Office of Staff Legal Assistance shall continue to be that of assisting staff members and their volunteer representatives in processing claims through the formal system of administration of justice;

39. Welcomes the establishment of the Trust Fund for United Nations Staff Legal Assistance, commends staff and associations that made contributions to the Trust Fund and encourages those that have not done so to make contributions thereto;

40. Recalls paragraph 14 of resolution 63/253 and regrets that the Secretary-General did not include in his report on administration of justice at the United Nations proposals for a staff-funded scheme in the Organization under which legal assistance and support would be provided to staff, and requests the Secretary-General to submit such proposals to the General Assembly no later than at its sixty-sixth session, including proposals that are based on a mandatory contribution from staff and proposals based on mixed funding, taking into account the views of relevant stakeholders;

41. Requests the Secretary-General to consider in his proposals on mixed funding opt-in and opt-out mechanisms as well as a system of fees proportionate to salary levels;

42. Notes that the current terms of the ad litem judges are about to expire, while the backlog remains to be cleared;

43. Notes with appreciation that the two half-time judges already appointed have facilitated the constitution of three-judge panels that will conduct hearings on important matters;

44. Recalls paragraphs 48 and 49 of resolution 63/253, and requests the United Nations Dispute Tribunal to ensure that the best possible use is made of the three ad litem judges in order to reduce the existing backlog of cases before the United Nations Dispute Tribunal;

45. Requests the Secretary-General, in order to attract a pool of outstanding candidates reflecting appropriate language and geographical diversity, different legal systems and gender balance, to advertise Tribunal vacancies widely in appropriate journals in both English and French, and to disseminate information relating to the judicial vacancies to Chief Justices and to relevant associations, such as judges' professional associations, if possible, before those vacancies arise;

46. Decides to defer until its sixty-sixth session a review of the statutes of the Tribunals, in the light of experience gained, including on the efficiency of the overall functioning of the Tribunals, in particular regarding the number of judges and the panels of the United Nations Dispute Tribunal;

47. Requests the Secretary-General to report on the provisions needed for dedicated courtroom space in the three United Nations Dispute Tribunal locations;

48. Notes with regret that, with the current staffing of the United Nations Appeals Tribunal, the Registry faces difficulties in preparing the legal memorandums and summaries of issues according to the requisite standard and with the speed necessary for the judges to carry out their work effectively and efficiently;

49. Decides to approve one legal assistant position (General Service (Other level)) for one year, to service the United Nations Appeals Tribunal and to be funded through general temporary assistance;

50. Also decides to revert to the issue of travel privileges and the level of the daily subsistence allowance for the judges of the United Nations Appeals Tribunal in the context of the proposed programme budget for the biennium 2012–2013;

51. Endorses paragraph 45 of the report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions, and reiterates its request to the Secretary-General to submit to the General Assembly at its sixty-sixth session a report containing a detailed proposal regarding possible options for delegation of authority for disciplinary measures;

52. Stresses that the Internal Justice Council can help to ensure independence, professionalism and accountability in the system of administration of justice, and encourages the Council to continue to provide its views on the implementation of the system of administration of justice and, if it deems it necessary, on how to enhance its contribution to the system, and to report thereon to the General Assembly at its sixty-sixth session;

53. Requests the Secretary-General to include in his report to the General Assembly at its sixty-sixth session the following information, bearing in mind the principle of judicial independence:

(a) Clear statistics on the cases received and disposed of during the period by both Tribunals, including information, by category, on whether the judgements rendered found for the applicant or for the respondent and on the administrative issues involved;

(b) Analysis of trends over a number of reporting periods in order to identify systemic issues leading to usage of the system of justice and to monitor whether they are being effectively addressed over time;

(c) Detailed information on monetary compensation awarded, and indirect costs associated with an appeal, for example, in staff time, including identification of those aspects of staff administration that give rise to large numbers of appeals;

(d) Detailed information on payments of compensation to staff equal to six months of salary or more, with an indication of the offices or departments concerned, the location of these offices or departments and some details of the facts of the case;

54. Recognizes that the introduction of the new system of administration of justice should, inter alia, have a positive impact on staff-management relations and improve the performance of both staff and managers, and requests the Secretary-General to report thereon to the General Assembly at its sixty-sixth session;

55. Requests the Secretary-General, with regard to the scope of the system of the administration of justice, in particular remedies available to the different categories of non-staff personnel, to provide more concrete information for consideration by the General Assembly at its sixty-sixth session, taking into account the different categories of non-staff personnel concerned, as noted in the report of the Secretary-General on administration of justice at the United Nations, and paragraph 8 of its resolution 64/233, as well as the options referred to in paragraph 9 of that resolution;

56. Recalls paragraph 13 of resolution 63/253, and decides to revert at its sixty-sixth session to the mandate and functioning of the Office of Staff Legal Assistance, including the participation of current and former staff as volunteers;

IV

Financial implications and cost-sharing arrangements

57. Recalls paragraph 62 of resolution 62/228, and notes with concern the delay in finalizing an agreement with the funds and programmes on a cost-sharing arrangement, and in this regard urges the Secretary-General to expeditiously conclude the negotiations and to report thereon to the General Assembly during its sixty-sixth session;

58. Notes that many of the issues described by the Secretary-General in section IV of his report on administration of justice at the United Nations are still under consideration in the formal system of administration of justice;

V

Other issues

59. Reaffirms that the Fifth Committee is the appropriate Main Committee of the General Assembly entrusted with responsibilities for administrative and budgetary matters, and reaffirms the role of the Fifth Committee in carrying out a thorough analysis and approving human and financial resources and policies, with a view to ensuring full, effective and efficient implementation of all mandated programmes and activities and the implementation of policies in this regard;

60. Invites the Sixth Committee to consider the legal aspects of the reports to be submitted by the Secretary-General, without prejudice to the role of the Fifth Committee as the Main Committee entrusted with responsibilities for administrative and budgetary matters;

61. Recalls paragraph 9 of resolution 61/261, and requests the Secretary-General to report on the need for enhancing education and training of all judges, ombudsmen, legal representatives, registrars, mediators and court and office staff of the new system of administration of justice, as recommended by the Redesign Panel on the United Nations system of administration of justice in paragraphs 115 to 119 of its report;

62. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its sixty-sixth session the item entitled "Administration of justice at the United Nations".

Also on 24 December, in section XV of resolution 65/259 (see p. 1429), the Assembly took action on the financial implications of the administration of justice at the United Nations.

On the same day, the Assembly decided that the item on the administration of justice at the United Nations would remain for consideration during its resumed sixty-fifth (2011) session (decision 65/544).

Criminal behaviour and disciplinary action

Reports of Secretary-General. In January [A/64/640], the Secretary-General submitted a report entitled "Towards an accountability system in the United Nations Secretariat", which the General Assembly acted on in resolution 64/259 of 29 March (see p. 1404).

In July [A/65/185], the Secretary-General submitted a report on the criminal accountability of UN officials and experts on mission, which the Assembly acted on in resolution 65/20 of 6 December (see p. 102).

In response to Assembly resolution 59/287 [YUN 2005, p. 1474], the Secretary-General submitted a July report [A/65/180] on disciplinary matters and possible criminal behaviour, covering the period from 1 July 2009 to 30 June 2010, following the establishment of the new system of administration of justice. The report noted that the Secretariat had received 167 cases during the reporting period, with 66 cases concerning staff based at UN Headquarters and offices away from Headquarters, and 101 concerning field staff. Most cases (40) were related to the misuse of computer-related resources, followed by cases of financial disclosure (26), fraud or misrepresentation (24), theft or misappropriation (19) and assault (12). Cases were disposed of as follows: administrative measures (36); other disciplinary measures (16); and dismissals (13). No action was taken in 35 cases: in 21 cases after the analysis of the entire dossier; in 10 due to the separation of the staff member after the case was received; and in 4 due to the fact that an initial review indicated that a disciplinary process was not warranted or could not be sustained. Five cases involving UN officials were referred to Member States.

NOTES

¹ On 19 September 1991, the Byelorussian Soviet Socialist Republic informed the United Nations that it had changed its name to Belarus.

² The Socialist Federal Republic of Yugoslavia was an original Member of the United Nations, the Charter having been signed on its behalf on 26 June 1945 and ratified 19 October 1945, until its dissolution following the establishment and subsequent admission, as new Members, of Bosnia and Herzegovina, the Republic of Croatia, the Republic of Slovenia, the former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia, and the Federal Republic of Yugoslavia. The Republic of Bosnia and Herzegovina, the Republic of Croatia and the Republic of Slovenia were admitted as Members of the United Nations on 22 May 1992. On 8 April 1993, the General Assembly decided to admit as a Member of the United Nations the State provisionally referred to for all purposes within the United Nations as “the former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia”, pending settlement of the difference that had arisen over its name. The Federal Republic of Yugoslavia was admitted as a Member of the United Nations on 1 November 2000. On 12 February 2003, it informed the United Nations that it had changed its name to Serbia and Montenegro, effective 4 February 2003. In a letter dated 3 June 2006, the President of the Republic of Serbia informed the Secretary-General that the membership of Serbia and Montenegro was being continued by the Republic of Serbia following Montenegro’s declaration of independence from Serbia on 3 June 2006. On 28 June 2006, Montenegro was accepted as a United Nations Member State by the General Assembly.

⁵ Egypt and Syria, both of which became Members of the United Nations on 24 October 1945, joined together—following a plebiscite held in those countries on 21 February 1958—to form the United Arab Republic. On 13 October 1961, Syria, having resumed its status as an independent State, also resumed its separate membership in the United Nations; it changed its name to the Syrian Arab Republic on 14 September 1971. The United Arab Republic continued as a Member of the United Nations and reverted to the name Egypt on 2 September 1971.

⁷ On 20 January 1965, Indonesia informed the Secretary-General that it had decided to withdraw from the United Nations. On 19 September 1966, it notified the Secretary-General of its decision to resume participation in the activities of the United Nations. On 28 September 1966, the General Assembly took note of that decision, and the President invited the representatives of Indonesia to take their seats in the Assembly.

⁹ The Union of Soviet Socialist Republics was an original Member of the United Nations from 24 October 1945. On 24 December 1991, the President of the Russian Federation informed the Secretary-General that the membership of the USSR in all United Nations organs was being continued by the Russian Federation.

¹⁰ Tanganyika was admitted to the United Nations on 14 December 1961, Zanzibar on 16 December 1963. Following ratification, on 26 April 1964, of the Articles of Union between Tanganyika and Zanzibar, the two States became represented as a single Member: the United Republic of Tanganyika and Zanzibar; it changed its name to the United Republic of Tanzania on 1 November 1964.

¹¹ Yemen was admitted to the United Nations on 30 September 1947, Democratic Yemen on 14 December 1967. On 22 May 1990, the two countries merged and were thereafter represented as one Member of the United Nations under the designation Yemen.

Charter of the United Nations and Statute of the International Court of Justice

Charter of the United Nations

NOTE: The Charter of the United Nations was signed on 26 June 1945, in San Francisco, at the conclusion of the United Nations Conference on International Organization, and came into force on 24 October 1945. The Statute of the International Court of Justice is an integral part of the Charter.

Amendments to Articles 23, 27 and 61 of the Charter were adopted by the General Assembly on 17 December 1963 and came into force on 31 August 1965. A further amendment to Article 61 was adopted by the General Assembly on 20 December 1971 and came into force on 24 September 1973. An amendment to Article 109, adopted by the General Assembly on 20 December 1965, came into force on 12 June 1968.

The amendment to Article 23 enlarges the membership of the Security Council from 11 to 15. The amended Article 27 provides that decisions of the Security Council on procedural matters shall be made by an affirmative vote of nine members (formerly seven) and on all other matters by an affirmative vote of nine members (formerly seven), including the concurring votes of the five permanent members of the Security Council.

The amendment to Article 61, which entered into force on 31 August 1965, enlarges the membership of the Economic and Social Council from 18 to 27. The subsequent amendment to that Article, which entered into force on 24 September 1973, further increases the membership of the Council from 27 to 54.

The amendment to Article 109, which relates to the first paragraph of that Article, provides that a General Conference of Member States for the purpose of reviewing the Charter may be held at a date and place to be fixed by a two-thirds vote of the members of the General Assembly and by a vote of any nine members (formerly seven) of the Security Council. Paragraph 3 of Article 109, which deals with the consideration of a possible review conference during the tenth regular session of the General Assembly, has been retained in its original form in its reference to a "vote of any seven members of the Security Council", the paragraph having been acted upon in 1955 by the General Assembly, at its tenth regular session, and by the Security Council.

WE THE PEOPLES OF THE UNITED NATIONS DETERMINED

- to save succeeding generations from the scourge of war, which twice in our lifetime has brought untold sorrow to mankind, and
- to reaffirm faith in fundamental human rights, in the dignity and worth of the human person, in the equal rights of men and women and of nations large and small, and
- to establish conditions under which justice and respect for the obligations arising from treaties and other sources of international law can be maintained, and
- to promote social progress and better standards of life in larger freedom,

AND FOR THESE ENDS

- to practice tolerance and live together in peace with one another as good neighbours, and
- to unite our strength to maintain international peace and security, and
- to ensure, by the acceptance of principles and the institution of methods, that armed force shall not be used, save in the common interest, and
- to employ international machinery for the promotion of the economic and social advancement of all peoples,

HAVE RESOLVED TO COMBINE OUR EFFORTS TO ACCOMPLISH THESE AIMS

Accordingly, our respective Governments, through representatives assembled in the city of San Francisco, who have exhibited their full powers found to be in good and due form, have agreed to the present Charter of the United Nations and do hereby establish an international organization to be known as the United Nations.

Chapter I PURPOSES AND PRINCIPLES

Article 1

The Purposes of the United Nations are:

1. To maintain international peace and security, and to that end: to take effective collective measures for the prevention and removal of threats to the peace, and for the suppression of acts of aggression or other breaches of the peace, and to bring about by peaceful means, and in conformity with the principles of justice and international law, adjustment or settlement of international disputes or situations which might lead to a breach of the peace;
2. To develop friendly relations among nations based on respect for the principle of equal rights and self-determination of peoples, and to take other appropriate measures to strengthen universal peace;
3. To achieve international co-operation in solving international problems of an economic, social, cultural or humanitarian character, and in promoting and encouraging respect for human rights and for fundamental freedoms for all without distinction as to race, sex, language or religion; and
4. To be a centre for harmonizing the actions of nations in the attainment of these common ends.

Article 2

The Organization and its Members, in pursuit of the Purposes stated in Article 1, shall act in accordance with the following Principles:

1. The Organization is based on the principle of the sovereign equality of all its Members.
2. All Members, in order to ensure to all of them the rights and benefits resulting from membership, shall fulfil in good faith the obligations assumed by them in accordance with the present Charter.
3. All Members shall settle their international disputes by peaceful means in such a manner that international peace and security, and justice, are not endangered.
4. All Members shall refrain in their international relations from the threat or use of force against the territorial integrity or political independence of any state, or in any other manner inconsistent with the Purposes of the United Nations.
5. All Members shall give the United Nations every assistance in any action it takes in accordance with the present Charter, and shall refrain from giving assistance to any state against which the United Nations is taking preventive or enforcement action.
6. The Organization shall ensure that states which are not Members of the United Nations act in accordance with these Principles so far as may be necessary for the maintenance of international peace and security.
7. Nothing contained in the present Charter shall authorize the United Nations to intervene in matters which are essentially within the domestic jurisdiction of any state or shall require the Members to submit such matters to settlement under the present Charter; but this principle shall not prejudice the application of enforcement measures under Chapter VII.

Chapter II MEMBERSHIP

Article 3

The original Members of the United Nations shall be the states which, having participated in the United Nations Conference on International Organization at San Francisco or having previously signed the Declaration by United Nations of 1 January 1942, sign the present Charter and ratify it in accordance with Article 110.

Article 4

1. Membership in the United Nations is open to all other peace-loving states which accept the obligations contained in the present Charter and, in the judgment of the Organization, are able and willing to carry out these obligations.
2. The admission of any such state to membership in the United Nations will be effected by a decision of the General Assembly upon the recommendation of the Security Council.

Article 5

A Member of the United Nations against which preventive or enforcement action has been taken by the Security Council may be suspended from the exercise of the rights and privileges of membership by the General Assembly upon the recommendation of the Security Council. The exercise of these rights and privileges may be restored by the Security Council.

Article 6

A Member of the United Nations which has persistently violated the Principles contained in the present Charter may be expelled from the Organization by the General Assembly upon the recommendation of the Security Council.

Chapter III ORGANS

Article 7

1. There are established as the principal organs of the United Nations: a General Assembly, a Security Council, an Economic and Social Council, a Trusteeship Council, an International Court of Justice, and a Secretariat.
2. Such subsidiary organs as may be found necessary may be established in accordance with the present Charter.

Article 8

The United Nations shall place no restrictions on the eligibility of men and women to participate in any capacity and under conditions of equality in its principal and subsidiary organs.

Chapter IV THE GENERAL ASSEMBLY

Composition

Article 9

1. The General Assembly shall consist of all the Members of the United Nations.
2. Each Member shall have not more than five representatives in the General Assembly.

Functions and Powers

Article 10

The General Assembly may discuss any questions or any matters within the scope of the present Charter or relating to the powers and functions of any organs provided for in the present Charter, and, except as provided in Article 12, may make recommendations to the Members of the United Nations or to the Security Council or both on any such questions or matters.

Article 11

1. The General Assembly may consider the general principles of co-operation in the maintenance of international peace and security, including the principles governing disarmament and the regulation of armaments, and may make recommendations with regard to such principles to the Members or to the Security Council or to both.
2. The General Assembly may discuss any questions relating to the maintenance of international peace and security brought before it by any Member of the United Nations, or by the Security Council, or by a state which is not a Member of the United Nations in accordance with Article 35, paragraph 2, and, except as provided in Article 12, may make recommendations with regard to any such questions to the state or states concerned or to the Security Council or to both. Any such question on which action is necessary shall be referred to the Security Council by the General Assembly either before or after discussion.
3. The General Assembly may call the attention of the Security Council to situations which are likely to endanger international peace and security.
4. The powers of the General Assembly set forth in this Article shall not limit the general scope of Article 10.

Article 12

1. While the Security Council is exercising in respect of any dispute or situation the functions assigned to it in the present Charter, the General Assembly shall not make any recommendation with regard to that dispute or situation unless the Security Council so requests.

2. The Secretary-General, with the consent of the Security Council, shall notify the General Assembly at each session of any matters relative to the maintenance of international peace and security which are being dealt with by the Security Council and shall similarly notify the General Assembly, or the Members of the United Nations if the General Assembly is not in session, immediately the Security Council ceases to deal with such matters.

Article 13

1. The General Assembly shall initiate studies and make recommendations for the purpose of:

- a. promoting international co-operation in the political field and encouraging the progressive development of international law and its codification;
- b. promoting international co-operation in the economic, social, cultural, educational and health fields, and assisting in the realization of human rights and fundamental freedoms for all without distinction as to race, sex, language or religion.

2. The further responsibilities, functions and powers of the General Assembly with respect to matters mentioned in paragraph 1 (b) above are set forth in Chapters IX and X.

Article 14

Subject to the provisions of Article 12, the General Assembly may recommend measures for the peaceful adjustment of any situation, regardless of origin, which it deems likely to impair the general welfare or friendly relations among nations, including situations resulting from a violation of the provisions of the present Charter setting forth the Purposes and Principles of the United Nations.

Article 15

1. The General Assembly shall receive and consider annual and special reports from the Security Council; these reports shall include an account of the measures that the Security Council has decided upon or taken to maintain international peace and security.

2. The General Assembly shall receive and consider reports from the other organs of the United Nations.

Article 16

The General Assembly shall perform such functions with respect to the international trusteeship system as are assigned to it under Chapters XII and XIII, including the approval of the trusteeship agreements for areas not designated as strategic.

Article 17

1. The General Assembly shall consider and approve the budget of the Organization.

2. The expenses of the Organization shall be borne by the Members as apportioned by the General Assembly.

3. The General Assembly shall consider and approve any financial and budgetary arrangements with specialized agencies referred to in Article 57 and shall examine the administrative budgets of such specialized agencies with a view to making recommendations to the agencies concerned.

VotingArticle 18

1. Each member of the General Assembly shall have one vote.

2. Decisions of the General Assembly on important questions shall be made by a two-thirds majority of the members present and voting. These questions shall include: recommendations with respect to the maintenance of international peace and security, the election of the non-permanent members of the Security Council, the election of the members of the Economic and Social Council, the election of members of the Trusteeship Council in accordance with paragraph 1 (c) of Article 86, the admission of new Members to the United Nations, the suspension of the rights and privileges of membership, the expulsion of Members, questions relating to the operation of the trusteeship system, and budgetary questions.

3. Decisions on other questions, including the determination of additional categories of questions to be decided by a two thirds majority, shall be made by a majority of the members present and voting.

Article 19

A Member of the United Nations which is in arrears in the payment of its financial contributions to the Organization shall have no vote in the General Assembly if the amount of its arrears equals or exceeds the amount of the contributions due from it for the preceding two full years. The General Assembly may, nevertheless, permit such a Member to vote if it is satisfied that the failure to pay is due to conditions beyond the control of the Member.

ProcedureArticle 20

The General Assembly shall meet in regular annual sessions and in such special sessions as occasion may require. Special sessions shall be convoked by the Secretary-General at the request of the Security Council or of a majority of the Members of the United Nations.

Article 21

The General Assembly shall adopt its own rules of procedure. It shall elect its President for each session.

Article 22

The General Assembly may establish such subsidiary organs as it deems necessary for the performance of its functions.

Chapter V

CompositionArticle 23¹

1. The Security Council shall consist of fifteen Members of the United Nations. The Republic of China, France, the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland and the United States of America shall be permanent members of the Security Council. The General Assembly shall elect ten other Members of the United Nations to be non-permanent members of the Security Council, due regard being specially paid, in the first instance to the contribution of Members of the United Nations to the maintenance of international peace and security and to the other purposes of the Organization, and also to equitable geographical distribution.

2. The non-permanent members of the Security Council shall be elected for a term of two years. In the first election of the non-permanent members after the increase of the membership of the Security Council from eleven to fifteen, two of the four additional members shall be chosen for a term of one year. A retiring member shall not be eligible for immediate re-election.

3. Each member of the Security Council shall have one representative.

Functions and Powers

Article 24

1. In order to ensure prompt and effective action by the United Nations, its Members confer on the Security Council primary responsibility for the maintenance of international peace and security, and agree that in carrying out its duties under this responsibility the Security Council acts on their behalf.

2. In discharging these duties the Security Council shall act in accordance with the Purposes and Principles of the United Nations. The specific powers granted to the Security Council for the discharge of these duties are laid down in Chapters VI, VII, VIII and XII.

3. The Security Council shall submit annual and, when necessary, special reports to the General Assembly for its consideration.

Article 25

The Members of the United Nations agree to accept and carry out the decisions of the Security Council in accordance with the present Charter.

Article 26

In order to promote the establishment and maintenance of international peace and security with the least diversion for armaments of the world's human and economic resources, the Security Council shall be responsible for formulating, with the assistance of the Military Staff Committee referred to in Article 47, plans to be submitted to the Members of the United Nations for the establishment of a system for the regulation of armaments.

Voting

Article 27²

1. Each member of the Security Council shall have one vote.
2. Decisions of the Security Council on procedural matters shall be made by an affirmative vote of nine members.

3. Decisions of the Security Council on all other matters shall be made by an affirmative vote of nine members including the concurring votes of the permanent members; provided that, in decisions under Chapter VI, and under paragraph 3 of Article 52, a party to a dispute shall abstain from voting.

Procedure

Article 28

1. The Security Council shall be so organized as to be able to function continuously. Each member of the Security Council shall for this purpose be represented at all times at the seat of the Organization.

2. The Security Council shall hold periodic meetings at which each of its members may, if it so desires, be represented by a member of the government or by some other specially designated representative.

3. The Security Council may hold meetings at such places other than the seat of the Organization as in its judgment will best facilitate its work.

Article 29

The Security Council may establish such subsidiary organs as it deems necessary for the performance of its functions.

Article 30

The Security Council shall adopt its own rules of procedure, including the method of selecting its President.

Article 31

Any Member of the United Nations which is not a member of the Security Council may participate, without vote, in the discussion of any question brought before the Security Council whenever the latter considers that the interests of that Member are specially affected.

Article 32

Any Member of the United Nations which is not a member of the Security Council or any state which is not a Member of the United Nations, if it is a party to a dispute under consideration by the Security Council, shall be invited to participate, without vote, in the discussion relating to the dispute. The Security Council shall lay down such conditions as it deems just for the participation of a state which is not a Member of the United Nations.

Chapter VI

PACIFIC SETTLEMENT OF DISPUTES

Article 33

1. The parties to any dispute, the continuance of which is likely to endanger the maintenance of international peace and security, shall, first of all, seek a solution by negotiation, enquiry, mediation, conciliation, arbitration, judicial settlement, resort to regional agencies or arrangements, or other peaceful means of their own choice.

2. The Security Council shall, when it deems necessary, call upon the parties to settle their dispute by such means.

Article 34

The Security Council may investigate any dispute, or any situation which might lead to international friction or give rise to a dispute, in order to determine whether the continuance of the dispute or situation is likely to endanger the maintenance of international peace and security.

Article 35

1. Any Member of the United Nations may bring any dispute, or any situation of the nature referred to in Article 34, to the attention of the Security Council or of the General Assembly.

2. A state which is not a Member of the United Nations may bring to the attention of the Security Council or of the General Assembly any dispute to which it is a party if it accepts in advance, for the purposes of the dispute, the obligations of pacific settlement provided in the present Charter.

3. The proceedings of the General Assembly in respect of matters brought to its attention under this Article will be subject to the provisions of Articles 11 and 12.

Article 36

1. The Security Council may, at any stage of a dispute of the nature referred to in Article 33 or of a situation of like nature, recommend appropriate procedures or methods of adjustment.

2. The Security Council should take into consideration any procedures for the settlement of the dispute which have already been adopted by the parties.

3. In making recommendations under this Article the Security Council should also take into consideration that legal disputes should as a general rule be referred by the parties to the International Court of Justice in accordance with the provisions of the Statute of the Court.

Article 37

1. Should the parties to a dispute of the nature referred to in Article 33 fail to settle it by the means indicated in that Article, they shall refer it to the Security Council.

2. If the Security Council deems that the continuance of the dispute is in fact likely to endanger the maintenance of international peace and security, it shall decide whether to take action under Article 36 or to recommend such terms of settlement as it may consider appropriate.

Article 38

Without prejudice to the provisions of Articles 33 to 37, the Security Council may, if all the parties to any dispute so request, make recommendations to the parties with a view to a pacific settlement of the dispute.

Chapter VII

ACTION WITH RESPECT TO THREATS TO THE PEACE, BREACHES OF THE PEACE, AND ACTS OF AGGRESSION

Article 39

The Security Council shall determine the existence of any threat to the peace, breach of the peace, or act of aggression and shall make recommendations, or decide what measures shall be taken in accordance with Articles 41 and 42, to maintain or restore international peace and security.

Article 40

In order to prevent an aggravation of the situation, the Security Council may, before making the recommendations or deciding upon the measures provided for in Article 39, call upon the parties concerned to comply with such provisional measures as it deems necessary or desirable. Such provisional measures shall be without prejudice to the rights, claims or position of the parties concerned. The Security Council shall duly take account of failure to comply with such provisional measures.

Article 41

The Security Council may decide what measures not involving the use of armed force are to be employed to give effect to its decisions, and it may call upon the Members of the United Nations to apply such measures. These may include complete or partial interruption of economic relations and of rail, sea, air, postal, telegraphic, radio and other means of communication, and the severance of diplomatic relations.

Article 42

Should the Security Council consider that measures provided for in Article 41 would be inadequate or have proved to be inadequate, it may take such action by air, sea or land forces as may be necessary to maintain or restore international peace and security. Such action may include demonstrations, blockade, and other operations by air, sea, or land forces of Members of the United Nations.

Article 43

1. All Members of the United Nations, in order to contribute to the maintenance of international peace and security, undertake to make available to the Security Council, on its call and in accordance with a special agreement or agreements, armed forces, assistance and facilities, including rights of passage, necessary for the purpose of maintaining international peace and security.

2. Such agreement or agreements shall govern the numbers and types of forces, their degree of readiness and general location, and the nature of the facilities and assistance to be provided.

3. The agreement or agreements shall be negotiated as soon as possible on the initiative of the Security Council. They shall be concluded between the Security Council and Members or between the Security Council and groups of Members and shall be subject to ratification by the signatory states in accordance with their respective constitutional processes.

Article 44

When the Security Council has decided to use force it shall, before calling upon a Member not represented on it to provide armed forces in fulfilment of the obligations assumed under Article 43, invite that Member, if the Member so desires, to participate in the decisions of the Security Council concerning the employment of contingents of that Member's armed forces.

Article 45

In order to enable the United Nations to take urgent military measures, Members shall hold immediately available national air-force contingents for combined international enforcement action. The strength and degree of readiness of these contingents and plans for their combined action shall be determined, within the limits laid down in the special agreement or agreements referred to in Article 43, by the Security Council with the assistance of the Military Staff Committee.

Article 46

Plans for the application of armed force shall be made by the Security Council with the assistance of the Military Staff Committee.

Article 47

1. There shall be established a Military Staff Committee to advise and assist the Security Council on all questions relating to the Security Council's military requirements for the maintenance of international peace and security, the employment and command of forces placed at its disposal, the regulation of armaments, and possible disarmament.

2. The Military Staff Committee shall consist of the Chiefs of Staff of the permanent members of the Security Council or their representatives. Any Member of the United Nations not permanently represented on the Committee shall be invited by the Committee to be associated with it when the efficient discharge of the Committee's responsibilities requires the participation of that Member in its work.

3. The Military Staff Committee shall be responsible under the Security Council for the strategic direction of any armed forces placed at the disposal of the Security Council. Questions relating to the command of such forces shall be worked out subsequently.

4. The Military Staff Committee, with the authorization of the Security Council and after consultation with appropriate regional agencies, may establish regional sub-committees.

Article 48

1. The action required to carry out the decisions of the Security Council for the maintenance of international peace and security shall be taken by all the Members of the United Nations or by some of them, as the Security Council may determine.

2. Such decisions shall be carried out by the Members of the United Nations directly and through their action in the appropriate international agencies of which they are members.

Article 49

The Members of the United Nations shall join in affording mutual assistance in carrying out the measures decided upon by the Security Council.

Article 50

If preventive or enforcement measures against any state are taken by the Security Council, any other state, whether a Member of the United Nations or not, which finds itself confronted with special economic problems arising from the carrying out of those measures shall have the right to consult the Security Council with regard to a solution of those problems.

Article 51

Nothing in the present Charter shall impair the inherent right of individual or collective self-defence if an armed attack occurs against a Member of the United Nations, until the Security Council has taken measures necessary to maintain international peace and security. Measures taken by Members in the exercise of this right of self-defence shall be immediately reported to the Security Council and shall not in any way affect the authority and responsibility of the Security Council under the present Charter to take at any time such action as it deems necessary in order to maintain or restore international peace and security.

Chapter VIII

REGIONAL ARRANGEMENTS

Article 52

1. Nothing in the present Charter precludes the existence of regional arrangements or agencies for dealing with such matters relating to the maintenance of international peace and security as are appropriate for regional action, provided that such arrangements or agencies and their activities are consistent with the Purposes and Principles of the United Nations.

2. The Members of the United Nations entering into such arrangements or constituting such agencies shall make every effort to achieve pacific settlement of local disputes through such regional arrangements or by such regional agencies before referring them to the Security Council.

3. The Security Council shall encourage the development of pacific settlement of local disputes through such regional arrangements or by such regional agencies either on the initiative of the states concerned or by reference from the Security Council.

4. This Article in no way impairs the application of Articles 34 and 35.

Article 53

1. The Security Council shall, where appropriate, utilize such regional arrangements or agencies for enforcement action under its authority. But no enforcement action shall be taken under regional arrangements or by regional agencies without the authorization of the Security Council, with the exception of measures against any enemy state, as defined in paragraph 2 of this Article, provided for pursuant to Article 107 or in regional arrangements directed against renewal of aggressive policy on the part of any such state, until such time as the Organization may, on request of the Governments concerned, be charged with the responsibility for preventing further aggression by such a state.

2. The term enemy state as used in paragraph 1 of this Article applies to any state which during the Second World War has been an enemy of any signatory of the present Charter.

Article 54

The Security Council shall at all times be kept fully informed of activities undertaken or in contemplation under regional arrangements or by regional agencies for the maintenance of international peace and security.

Chapter IX

INTERNATIONAL ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL CO-OPERATION

Article 55

With a view to the creation of conditions of stability and well-being which are necessary for peaceful and friendly relations among nations based on respect for the principle of equal rights and self-determination of peoples, the United Nations shall promote:

- a. higher standards of living, full employment, and conditions of economic and social progress and development;
- b. solutions of international economic, social, health, and related problems; and international cultural and educational co-operation; and
- c. universal respect for, and observance of, human rights and fundamental freedoms for all without distinction as to race, sex, language, or religion.

Article 56

All Members pledge themselves to take joint and separate action in co-operation with the Organization for the achievement of the purposes set forth in Article 55.

Article 57

1. The various specialized agencies, established by intergovernmental agreement and having wide international responsibilities, as defined in their basic instruments, in economic, social, cultural, educational, health, and related fields, shall be brought into relationship with the United Nations in accordance with the provisions of Article 63.

2. Such agencies thus brought into relationship with the United Nations are hereinafter referred to as specialized agencies.

Article 58

The Organization shall make recommendations for the coordination of the policies and activities of the specialized agencies.

Article 59

The Organization shall, where appropriate, initiate negotiations among the states concerned for the creation of any new specialized agencies required for the accomplishment of the purposes set forth in Article 55.

Article 60

Responsibility for the discharge of the functions of the Organization set forth in this Chapter shall be vested in the General Assembly and, under the authority of the General Assembly, in the Economic and Social Council, which shall have for this purpose the powers set forth in Chapter X.

Chapter X
THE ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL

CompositionArticle 61³

1. The Economic and Social Council shall consist of fifty-four Members of the United Nations elected by the General Assembly.

2. Subject to the provisions of paragraph 3, eighteen members of the Economic and Social Council shall be elected each year for a term of three years. A retiring member shall be eligible for immediate re-election.

3. At the first election after the increase in the membership of the Economic and Social Council from twenty-seven to fifty-four members, in addition to the members elected in place of the nine members whose term of office expires at the end of that year, twenty-seven additional members shall be elected. Of these twenty-seven additional members, the term of office of nine members so elected shall expire at the end of one year, and of nine other members at the end of two years, in accordance with arrangements made by the General Assembly.

4. Each member of the Economic and Social Council shall have one representative.

Functions and PowersArticle 62

1. The Economic and Social Council may make or initiate studies and reports with respect to international economic, social, cultural, educational, health, and related matters and may make recommendations with respect to any such matters to the General Assembly, to the Members of the United Nations, and to the specialized agencies concerned.

2. It may make recommendations for the purpose of promoting respect for, and observance of, human rights and fundamental freedoms for all.

3. It may prepare draft conventions for submission to the General Assembly, with respect to matters falling within its competence.

4. It may call, in accordance with the rules prescribed by the United Nations, international conferences on matters falling within its competence.

Article 63

1. The Economic and Social Council may enter into agreements with any of the agencies referred to in Article 57, defining the terms on which the agency concerned shall be brought into relationship with the United Nations. Such agreements shall be subject to approval by the General Assembly.

2. It may co-ordinate the activities of the specialized agencies through consultation with and recommendations to such agencies and through recommendations to the General Assembly and to the Members of the United Nations.

Article 64

1. The Economic and Social Council may take appropriate steps to obtain regular reports from the specialized agencies. It may make arrangements with the Members of the United Nations and with the specialized agencies to obtain reports on the steps taken to give effect to its own recommendations and to recommendations on matters falling within its competence made by the General Assembly.

2. It may communicate its observations on these reports to the General Assembly.

Article 65

The Economic and Social Council may furnish information to the Security Council and shall assist the Security Council upon its request.

Article 66

1. The Economic and Social Council shall perform such functions as fall within its competence in connection with the carrying out of the recommendations of the General Assembly.

2. It may, with the approval of the General Assembly, perform services at the request of Members of the United Nations and at the request of specialized agencies.

3. It shall perform such other functions as are specified elsewhere in the present Charter or as may be assigned to it by the General Assembly.

VotingArticle 67

1. Each member of the Economic and Social Council shall have one vote.

2. Decisions of the Economic and Social Council shall be made by a majority of the members present and voting.

ProcedureArticle 68

The Economic and Social Council shall set up commissions in economic and social fields and for the promotion of human rights, and such other commissions as may be required for the performance of its functions.

Article 69

The Economic and Social Council shall invite any Member of the United Nations to participate, without vote, in its deliberations on any matter of particular concern to that Member.

Article 70

The Economic and Social Council may make arrangements for representatives of the specialized agencies to participate, without vote, in its deliberations and in those of the commissions established by it, and for its representatives to participate in the deliberations of the specialized agencies.

Article 71

The Economic and Social Council may make suitable arrangements for consultation with non-governmental organizations which are concerned with matters within its competence. Such arrangements may be made with international organizations and, where appropriate, with national organizations after consultation with the Member of the United Nations concerned.

Article 72

1. The Economic and Social Council shall adopt its own rules of procedure, including the method of selecting its President.
2. The Economic and Social Council shall meet as required in accordance with its rules, which shall include provision for the convening of meetings on the request of a majority of its members.

Chapter XI

DECLARATION REGARDING NON-SELF-GOVERNING TERRITORIES

Article 73

Members of the United Nations which have or assume responsibilities for the administration of territories whose peoples have not yet attained a full measure of self-government recognize the principle that the interests of the inhabitants of these territories are paramount, and accept as a sacred trust the obligation to promote to the utmost, within the system of international peace and security established by the present Charter, the well-being of the inhabitants of these territories and, to this end:

- a. to ensure, with due respect for the culture of the peoples concerned, their political, economic, social, and educational advancement, their just treatment, and their protection against abuses;
- b. to develop self-government, to take due account of the political aspirations of the peoples, and to assist them in the progressive development of their free political institutions, according to the particular circumstances of each territory and its peoples and their varying stages of advancement;
- c. to further international peace and security;
- d. to promote constructive measures of development, to encourage research, and to co-operate with one another and, when and where appropriate, with specialized international bodies with a view to the practical achievement of the social, economic, and scientific purposes set forth in this Article; and
- e. to transmit regularly to the Secretary-General for information purposes, subject to such limitation as security and constitutional considerations may require, statistical and other information of a technical nature relating to economic, social, and educational conditions in the territories for which they are respectively responsible other than those territories to which Chapters XII and XIII apply.

Article 74

Members of the United Nations also agree that their policy in respect of the territories to which this Chapter applies, no less than in respect of their metropolitan areas, must be based on the general principle of good-neighbourliness, due account being taken of the interests and well-being of the rest of the world, in social, economic, and commercial matters.

Chapter XII

INTERNATIONAL TRUSTEESHIP SYSTEM

Article 75

The United Nations shall establish under its authority an international trusteeship system for the administration and supervision of such territories as may be placed thereunder by subsequent individual agreements. These territories are hereinafter referred to as trust territories.

Article 76

The basic objectives of the trusteeship system, in accordance with the Purposes of the United Nations laid down in Article 1 of the present Charter, shall be:

- a. to further international peace and security;
- b. to promote the political, economic, social, and educational advancement of the inhabitants of the trust territories, and their progressive development towards self-government or independence as may be appropriate to the particular circumstances of each territory and its peoples and the freely expressed wishes of the peoples concerned, and as may be provided by the terms of each trusteeship agreement;
- c. to encourage respect for human rights and for fundamental freedoms for all without distinction as to race, sex, language, or religion, and to encourage recognition of the interdependence of the peoples of the world; and
- d. to ensure equal treatment in social, economic, and commercial matters for all Members of the United Nations and their nationals, and also equal treatment for the latter in the administration of justice, without prejudice to the attainment of the foregoing objectives and subject to the provisions of Article 80.

Article 77

1. The trusteeship system shall apply to such territories in the following categories as may be placed thereunder by means of trusteeship agreements:

- a. territories now held under mandate;
- b. territories which may be detached from enemy states as a result of the Second World War; and
- c. territories voluntarily placed under the system by states responsible for their administration.

2. It will be a matter for subsequent agreement as to which territories in the foregoing categories will be brought under the trusteeship system and upon what terms.

Article 78

The trusteeship system shall not apply to territories which have become Members of the United Nations, relationship among which shall be based on respect for the principle of sovereign equality.

Article 79

The terms of trusteeship for each territory to be placed under the trusteeship system, including any alteration or amendment, shall be agreed upon by the states directly concerned, including the mandatory power in the case of territories held under mandate by a Member of the United Nations, and shall be approved as provided for in Articles 83 and 85.

Article 80

1. Except as may be agreed upon in individual trusteeship agreements, made under Articles 77, 79 and 81, placing each territory under the trusteeship system, and until such agreements have been concluded, nothing in this Chapter shall be construed in or of itself to alter in any manner the rights whatsoever of any states or any peoples or the terms of existing international instruments to which Members of the United Nations may respectively be parties.

2. Paragraph 1 of this Article shall not be interpreted as giving grounds for delay or postponement of the negotiation and conclusion of agreements for placing mandated and other territories under the trusteeship system as provided for in Article 77.

Article 81

The trusteeship agreement shall in each case include the terms under which the trust territory will be administered and designate the authority which will exercise the administration of the trust territory. Such authority, hereinafter called the administering authority, may be one or more states or the Organization itself.

Article 82

There may be designated, in any trusteeship agreement, a strategic area or areas which may include part or all of the trust territory to which the agreement applies, without prejudice to any special agreement or agreements made under Article 43.

Article 83

1. All functions of the United Nations relating to strategic areas, including the approval of the terms of the trusteeship agreements and of their alteration or amendment, shall be exercised by the Security Council.

2. The basic objectives set forth in Article 76 shall be applicable to the people of each strategic area.

3. The Security Council shall, subject to the provisions of the trusteeship agreements and without prejudice to security considerations, avail itself of the assistance of the Trusteeship Council to perform those functions of the United Nations under the trusteeship system relating to political, economic, social, and educational matters in the strategic areas.

Article 84

It shall be the duty of the administering authority to ensure that the trust territory shall play its part in the maintenance of international peace and security. To this end the administering authority may make use of volunteer forces, facilities, and assistance from the trust territory in carrying out the obligations towards the Security Council undertaken in this regard by the administering authority, as well as for local defence and the maintenance of law and order within the trust territory.

Article 85

1. The functions of the United Nations with regard to trusteeship agreements for all areas not designated as strategic, including the approval of the terms of the trusteeship agreements and of their alteration or amendment, shall be exercised by the General Assembly.

2. The Trusteeship Council, operating under the authority of the General Assembly, shall assist the General Assembly in carrying out these functions.

Chapter XIII

THE TRUSTEESHIP COUNCIL

CompositionArticle 86

1. The Trusteeship Council shall consist of the following Members of the United Nations:

- a. those Members administering trust territories;
- b. such of those Members mentioned by name in Article 23 as are not administering trust territories; and
- c. as many other Members elected for three-year terms by the General Assembly as may be necessary to ensure that the total number of members of the Trusteeship Council is equally divided between those Members of the United Nations which administer trust territories and those which do not.

2. Each member of the Trusteeship Council shall designate one specially qualified person to represent it therein.

Functions and PowersArticle 87

The General Assembly and, under its authority, the Trusteeship Council, in carrying out their functions, may:

- a. consider reports submitted by the administering authority;
- b. accept petitions and examine them in consultation with the administering authority;
- c. provide for periodic visits to the respective trust territories at times agreed upon with the administering authority; and
- d. take these and other actions in conformity with the terms of the trusteeship agreements.

Article 88

The Trusteeship Council shall formulate a questionnaire on the political, economic, social, and educational advancement of the inhabitants of each trust territory, and the administering authority for each trust territory within the competence of the General Assembly shall make an annual report to the General Assembly upon the basis of such questionnaire.

VotingArticle 89

1. Each member of the Trusteeship Council shall have one vote.

2. Decisions of the Trusteeship Council shall be made by a majority of the members present and voting.

ProcedureArticle 90

1. The Trusteeship Council shall adopt its own rules of procedure, including the method of selecting its President.

2. The Trusteeship Council shall meet as required in accordance with its rules, which shall include provision for the convening of meetings on the request of a majority of its members.

Article 91

The Trusteeship Council shall, when appropriate, avail itself of the assistance of the Economic and Social Council and of the specialized agencies in regard to matters with which they are respectively concerned.

Chapter XIV

THE INTERNATIONAL COURT OF JUSTICE

Article 92

The International Court of Justice shall be the principal judicial organ of the United Nations. It shall function in accordance with the annexed Statute, which is based upon the Statute of the Permanent Court of International Justice and forms an integral part of the present Charter.

Article 93

1. All Members of the United Nations are ipso facto parties to the Statute of the International Court of Justice.

2. A state which is not a Member of the United Nations may become a party to the Statute of the International Court of Justice on conditions to be determined in each case by the General Assembly upon the recommendation of the Security Council.

Article 94

1. Each Member of the United Nations undertakes to comply with the decision of the International Court of Justice in any case to which it is a party.

2. If any party to a case fails to perform the obligations incumbent upon it under a judgment rendered by the Court, the other party may have recourse to the Security Council, which may, if it deems necessary, make recommendations or decide upon measures to be taken to give effect to the judgment.

Article 95

Nothing in the present Charter shall prevent Members of the United Nations from entrusting the solution of their differences to other tribunals by virtue of agreements already in existence or which may be concluded in the future.

Article 96

1. The General Assembly or the Security Council may request the International Court of Justice to give an advisory opinion on any legal question.

2. Other organs of the United Nations and specialized agencies, which may at any time be so authorized by the General Assembly, may also request advisory opinions of the Court on legal questions arising within the scope of their activities.

Chapter XV
THE SECRETARIAT

Article 97

The Secretariat shall comprise a Secretary-General and such staff as the Organization may require. The Secretary-General shall be appointed by the General Assembly upon the recommendation of the Security Council. He shall be the chief administrative officer of the Organization.

Article 98

The Secretary-General shall act in that capacity in all meetings of the General Assembly, of the Security Council, of the Economic and Social Council, and of the Trusteeship Council, and shall perform such other functions as are entrusted to him by these organs. The Secretary-General shall make an annual report to the General Assembly on the work of the Organization.

Article 99

The Secretary-General may bring to the attention of the Security Council any matter which in his opinion may threaten the maintenance of international peace and security.

Article 100

1. In the performance of their duties the Secretary-General and the staff shall not seek or receive instructions from any government or from any other authority external to the Organization. They shall refrain from any action which might reflect on their position as international officials responsible only to the Organization.

2. Each Member of the United Nations undertakes to respect the exclusively international character of the responsibilities of the Secretary-General and the staff and not to seek to influence them in the discharge of their responsibilities.

Article 101

1. The staff shall be appointed by the Secretary-General under regulations established by the General Assembly.

2. Appropriate staffs shall be permanently assigned to the Economic and Social Council, the Trusteeship Council, and, as required, to other organs of the United Nations. These staffs shall form a part of the Secretariat.

3. The paramount consideration in the employment of the staff and in the determination of the conditions of service shall be the necessity of securing the highest standards of efficiency, competence, and integrity. Due regard shall be paid to the importance of recruiting the staff on as wide a geographical basis as possible.

Chapter XVI

MISCELLANEOUS PROVISIONS

Article 102

1. Every treaty and every international agreement entered into by any Member of the United Nations after the present Charter comes into force shall as soon as possible be registered with the Secretariat and published by it.

2. No party to any such treaty or international agreement which has not been registered in accordance with the provisions of paragraph 1 of this Article may invoke that treaty or agreement before any organ of the United Nations.

Article 103

In the event of a conflict between the obligations of the Members of the United Nations under the present Charter and their obligations under any other international agreement, their obligations under the present Charter shall prevail.

Article 104

The Organization shall enjoy in the territory of each of its Members such legal capacity as may be necessary for the exercise of its functions and the fulfilment of its purposes.

Article 105

1. The Organization shall enjoy in the territory of each of its Members such privileges and immunities as are necessary for the fulfilment of its purposes.

2. Representatives of the Members of the United Nations and officials of the Organization shall similarly enjoy such privileges and immunities as are necessary for the independent exercise of their functions in connection with the Organization.

3. The General Assembly may make recommendations with a view to determining the details of the application of paragraphs 1 and 2 of this Article or may propose conventions to the Members of the United Nations for this purpose.

Chapter XVII

TRANSITIONAL SECURITY
ARRANGEMENTS

Article 106

Pending the coming into force of such special agreements referred to in Article 43 as in the opinion of the Security Council enable it to begin the exercise of its responsibilities under Article 42, the parties to the Four-Nation Declaration, signed at Moscow, 30 October 1943, and France, shall, in accordance with the provisions of paragraph 5 of that Declaration, consult with one another and as occasion requires with other Members of the United Nations with a view to such joint action on behalf of the Organization as may be necessary for the purpose of maintaining international peace and security.

Article 107

Nothing in the present Charter shall invalidate or preclude action, in relation to any state which during the Second World War has been an enemy of any signatory to the present Charter, taken or authorized as a result of that war by the Governments having responsibility for such action.

Chapter XVIII
AMENDMENTS

Article 108

Amendments to the present Charter shall come into force for all Members of the United Nations when they have been adopted by a vote of two thirds of the members of the General Assembly and ratified in accordance with their respective constitutional processes by two thirds of the Members of the United Nations, including all the permanent members of the Security Council.

Article 109⁴

1. A General Conference of the Members of the United Nations for the purpose of reviewing the present Charter may be held at a date and place to be fixed by a two-thirds vote of the members of the General Assembly and by a vote of any nine members of the Security Council. Each Member of the United Nations shall have one vote in the conference.

2. Any alteration of the present Charter recommended by a two-thirds vote of the conference shall take effect when ratified in accordance with their respective constitutional processes by two thirds of the Members of the United Nations including all the permanent members of the Security Council.

3. If such a conference has not been held before the tenth annual session of the General Assembly following the coming into force of the present Charter, the proposal to call such a conference shall be placed on the agenda of that session of the General Assembly, and the conference shall be held if so decided by a majority vote of the members of the General Assembly and by a vote of any seven members of the Security Council.

Chapter XIX

RATIFICATION AND SIGNATURE

Article 110

1. The present Charter shall be ratified by the signatory states in accordance with their respective constitutional processes.

2. The ratifications shall be deposited with the Government of the United States of America, which shall notify all the signatory states of each deposit as well as the Secretary-General of the Organization when he has been appointed.

3. The present Charter shall come into force upon the deposit of ratifications by the Republic of China, France, the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland and the United States of America, and by a majority of the other signatory states. A protocol of the ratifications deposited shall thereupon be drawn up by the Government of the United States of America which shall communicate copies thereof to all the signatory states.

4. The states signatory to the present Charter which ratify it after it has come into force will become original Members of the United Nations on the date of the deposit of their respective ratifications.

Article 111

The present Charter, of which the Chinese, French, Russian, English, and Spanish texts are equally authentic, shall remain deposited in the archives of the Government of the United States of America. Duly certified copies thereof shall be transmitted by that Government to the Governments of the other signatory states.

IN FAITH WHEREOF the representatives of the Governments of the United Nations have signed the present Charter.

DONE at the city of San Francisco the twenty-sixth day of June, one thousand nine hundred and forty-five.

NOTES

¹Amended text of Article 23, which came into force on 31 August 1965. The text of Article 23 before it was amended read as follows:

1. The Security Council shall consist of eleven Members of the United Nations. The Republic of China, France, the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland and the United States of America shall be permanent members of the Security Council. The General Assembly shall elect six other Members of the United Nations to be non-permanent members of the Security Council, due regard being specially paid in the first instance to the contributions of Members of the United Nations to the maintenance of international peace and security and to the other purposes of the Organization, and also to equitable geographical distribution.
2. The non-permanent members of the Security Council shall be elected for a term of two years. In the first election of the non-permanent members, however, three shall be chosen for a term of one year. A retiring member shall not be eligible for immediate re-election.
3. Each member of the Security Council shall have one representative.

²Amended text of Article 27, which came into force on 31 August 1965. The text of Article 27 before it was amended read as follows:

1. Each member of the Security Council shall have one vote.
2. Decisions of the Security Council on procedural matters shall be made by an affirmative vote of seven members.
3. Decisions of the Security Council on all other matters shall be made by an affirmative vote of seven members including the concurring votes of the permanent members; provided that, in decisions under Chapter VI, and under paragraph 3 of Article 52, a party to a dispute shall abstain from voting.

³ Amended text of Article 61, which came into force on 24 September 1973. The text of Article 61 as previously amended on 31 August 1965 read as follows:

1. The Economic and Social Council shall consist of twenty-seven Members of the United Nations elected by the General Assembly.
2. Subject to the provisions of paragraph 3, nine members of the Economic and Social Council shall be elected each year for a term of three years. A retiring member shall be eligible for immediate re-election.
3. At the first election after the increase in the membership of the Economic and Social Council from eighteen to twenty-seven members, in addition to the members elected in place of the six members whose term of office expires at the end of that year, nine additional members shall be elected. Of these nine additional members, the term of office of three members so elected shall expire at the end of one year, and of three other members at the end of two years, in accordance with arrangements made by the General Assembly.
4. Each member of the Economic and Social Council shall have one representative.

⁴ Amended text of Article 109, which came into force on 12 June 1968. The text of Article 109 before it was amended read as follows:

1. A General Conference of the Members of the United Nations for the purpose of reviewing the present Charter may be held at a date and place to be fixed by a two-thirds vote of the members of the General Assembly and by a vote of any seven members of the Security Council. Each Member of the United Nations shall have one vote in the conference.
2. Any alteration of the present Charter recommended by a two-thirds vote of the conference shall take effect when ratified in accordance with their respective constitutional processes by two thirds of the Members of the United Nations including all the permanent members of the Security Council.
3. If such a conference has not been held before the tenth annual session of the General Assembly following the coming into force of the present Charter, the proposal to call such a conference shall be placed on the agenda of that session of the General Assembly, and the conference shall be held if so decided by a majority vote of the members of the General Assembly and by a vote of any seven members of the Security Council.

Statute of the International Court of Justice

Article 1

The International Court of Justice established by the Charter of the United Nations as the principal judicial organ of the United Nations shall be constituted and shall function in accordance with the provisions of the present Statute.

Chapter I

ORGANIZATION OF THE COURT

Article 2

The Court shall be composed of a body of independent judges, elected regardless of their nationality from among persons of high moral character, who possess the qualifications required in their respective countries for appointment to the highest judicial offices, or are jurisconsults of recognized competence in international law.

Article 3

1. The Court shall consist of fifteen members, no two of whom may be nationals of the same state.
2. A person who for the purposes of membership in the Court could be regarded as a national of more than one state shall be deemed to be a national of the one in which he ordinarily exercises civil and political rights.

Article 4

1. The members of the Court shall be elected by the General Assembly and by the Security Council from a list of persons nominated by the national groups in the Permanent Court of Arbitration, in accordance with the following provisions.
2. In the case of Members of the United Nations not represented in the Permanent Court of Arbitration, candidates shall be nominated by national groups appointed for this purpose by their governments under the same conditions as those prescribed for members of the Permanent Court of Arbitration by Article 44 of the Convention of The Hague of 1907 for the pacific settlement of international disputes.
3. The conditions under which a state which is a party to the present Statute but is not a Member of the United Nations may participate in electing the members of the Court shall, in the absence of a special agreement, be laid down by the General Assembly upon recommendation of the Security Council.

Article 5

1. At least three months before the date of the election, the Secretary-General of the United Nations shall address a written request to the members of the Permanent Court of Arbitration belonging to the states which are parties to the present Statute, and to the members of the national groups appointed under Article 4, paragraph 2, inviting them to undertake, within a given time, by national groups, the nomination of persons in a position to accept the duties of a member of the Court.
2. No group may nominate more than four persons, not more than two of whom shall be of their own nationality. In no case may the number of candidates nominated by a group be more than double the number of seats to be filled.

Article 6

Before making these nominations, each national group is recommended to consult its highest court of justice, its legal faculties and schools of law, and its national academies and national sections of international academies devoted to the study of law.

Article 7

1. The Secretary-General shall prepare a list in alphabetical order of all the persons thus nominated. Save as provided in Article 12, paragraph 2, these shall be the only persons eligible.
2. The Secretary-General shall submit this list to the General Assembly and to the Security Council.

Article 8

The General Assembly and the Security Council shall proceed independently of one another to elect the members of the Court.

Article 9

At every election, the electors shall bear in mind not only that the persons to be elected should individually possess the qualifications required, but also that in the body as a whole the representation of the main forms of civilization and of the principal legal systems of the world should be assured.

Article 10

1. Those candidates who obtain an absolute majority of votes in the General Assembly and in the Security Council shall be considered as elected.
2. Any vote of the Security Council, whether for the election of judges or for the appointment of members of the conference envisaged in Article 12, shall be taken without any distinction between permanent and non-permanent members of the Security Council.
3. In the event of more than one national of the same state obtaining an absolute majority of the votes both of the General Assembly and of the Security Council, the eldest of these only shall be considered as elected.

Article 11

If, after the first meeting held for the purpose of the election, one or more seats remain to be filled, a second and, if necessary, a third meeting shall take place.

Article 12

1. If, after the third meeting, one or more seats still remain unfilled, a joint conference consisting of six members, three appointed by the General Assembly and three by the Security Council, may be formed at any time at the request of either the General Assembly or the Security Council, for the purpose of choosing by the vote of an absolute majority one name for each seat still vacant, to submit to the General Assembly and the Security Council for their respective acceptance.
2. If the joint conference is unanimously agreed upon any person who fulfils the required conditions, he may be included in its list, even though he was not included in the list of nominations referred to in Article 7.
3. If the joint conference is satisfied that it will not be successful in procuring an election, those members of the Court who have already been elected shall, within a period to be fixed by the Security Council, proceed to fill the vacant seats by selection from among those candidates who have obtained votes either in the General Assembly or in the Security Council.
4. In the event of an equality of votes among the judges, the eldest judge shall have a casting vote.

Article 13

1. The members of the Court shall be elected for nine years and may be re-elected; provided, however, that of the judges elected at the first election, the terms of five judges shall expire at the end of three years and the terms of five more judges shall expire at the end of six years.

2. The judges whose terms are to expire at the end of the above-mentioned initial periods of three and six years shall be chosen by lot to be drawn by the Secretary-General immediately after the first election has been completed.

3. The members of the Court shall continue to discharge their duties until their places have been filled. Though replaced, they shall finish any cases which they may have begun.

4. In the case of the resignation of a member of the Court, the resignation shall be addressed to the President of the Court for transmission to the Secretary-General. This last notification makes the place vacant.

Article 14

Vacancies shall be filled by the same method as that laid down for the first election, subject to the following provision: the Secretary-General shall, within one month of the occurrence of the vacancy, proceed to issue the invitations provided for in Article 5, and the date of the election shall be fixed by the Security Council.

Article 15

A member of the Court elected to replace a member whose term of office has not expired shall hold office for the remainder of his predecessor's term.

Article 16

1. No member of the Court may exercise any political or administrative function, or engage in any other occupation of a professional nature.

2. Any doubt on this point shall be settled by the decision of the Court.

Article 17

1. No member of the Court may act as agent, counsel, or advocate in any case.

2. No member may participate in the decision of any case in which he has previously taken part as agent, counsel, or advocate for one of the parties, or as a member of a national or international court, or of a commission of enquiry, or in any other capacity.

3. Any doubt on this point shall be settled by the decision of the Court.

Article 18

1. No member of the Court can be dismissed unless, in the unanimous opinion of the other members, he has ceased to fulfil the required conditions.

2. Formal notification thereof shall be made to the Secretary-General by the Registrar.

3. This notification makes the place vacant.

Article 19

The members of the Court, when engaged on the business of the Court, shall enjoy diplomatic privileges and immunities.

Article 20

Every member of the Court shall, before taking up his duties, make a solemn declaration in open court that he will exercise his powers impartially and conscientiously.

Article 21

1. The Court shall elect its President and Vice-President for three years; they may be re-elected.

2. The Court shall appoint its Registrar and may provide for the appointment of such other officers as may be necessary.

Article 22

1. The seat of the Court shall be established at The Hague. This, however, shall not prevent the Court from sitting and exercising its functions elsewhere whenever the Court considers it desirable.

2. The President and the Registrar shall reside at the seat of the Court.

Article 23

1. The Court shall remain permanently in session, except during the judicial vacations, the dates and duration of which shall be fixed by the Court.

2. Members of the Court are entitled to periodic leave, the dates and duration of which shall be fixed by the Court, having in mind the distance between The Hague and the home of each judge.

3. Members of the Court shall be bound, unless they are on leave or prevented from attending by illness or other serious reasons duly explained to the President, to hold themselves permanently at the disposal of the Court.

Article 24

1. If, for some special reason, a member of the Court considers that he should not take part in the decision of a particular case, he shall so inform the President.

2. If the President considers that for some special reason one of the members of the Court should not sit in a particular case, he shall give him notice accordingly.

3. If in any such case the member of the Court and the President disagree, the matter shall be settled by the decision of the Court.

Article 25

1. The full Court shall sit except when it is expressly provided otherwise in the present Statute.

2. Subject to the condition that the number of judges available to constitute the Court is not thereby reduced below eleven, the Rules of the Court may provide for allowing one or more judges, according to circumstances and in rotation, to be dispensed from sitting.

3. A quorum of nine judges shall suffice to constitute the Court.

Article 26

1. The Court may from time to time form one or more chambers, composed of three or more judges as the Court may determine, for dealing with particular categories of cases; for example, labour cases and cases relating to transit and communications.

2. The Court may at any time form a chamber for dealing with a particular case. The number of judges to constitute such a chamber shall be determined by the Court with the approval of the parties.

3. Cases shall be heard and determined by the chambers provided for in this Article if the parties so request.

Article 27

A judgment given by any of the chambers provided for in Articles 26 and 29 shall be considered as rendered by the Court.

Article 28

The chambers provided for in Articles 26 and 29 may, with the consent of the parties, sit and exercise their functions elsewhere than at The Hague.

Article 29

With a view to the speedy dispatch of business, the Court shall form annually a chamber composed of five judges which, at the request of the parties, may hear and determine cases by summary procedure. In addition, two judges shall be selected for the purpose of replacing judges who find it impossible to sit.

Article 30

1. The Court shall frame rules for carrying out its functions. In particular, it shall lay down rules of procedure.
2. The Rules of the Court may provide for assessors to sit with the Court or with any of its chambers, without the right to vote.

Article 31

1. Judges of the nationality of each of the parties shall retain their right to sit in the case before the Court.
2. If the Court includes upon the Bench a judge of the nationality of one of the parties, any other party may choose a person to sit as judge. Such person shall be chosen preferably from among those persons who have been nominated as candidates as provided in Articles 4 and 5.
3. If the Court includes upon the Bench no judge of the nationality of the parties, each of these parties may proceed to choose a judge as provided in paragraph 2 of this Article.
4. The provisions of this Article shall apply to the case of Articles 26 and 29. In such cases, the President shall request one or, if necessary, two of the members of the Court forming the chamber to give place to the members of the Court of the nationality of the parties concerned, and, failing such, or if they are unable to be present, to the judges specially chosen by the parties.
5. Should there be several parties in the same interest, they shall, for the purpose of the preceding provisions, be reckoned as one party only. Any doubt upon this point shall be settled by the decision of the Court.
6. Judges chosen as laid down in paragraphs 2, 3 and 4 of this Article shall fulfil the conditions required by Articles 2, 17 (paragraph 2), 20, and 24 of the present Statute. They shall take part in the decision on terms of complete equality with their colleagues.

Article 32

1. Each member of the Court shall receive an annual salary.
2. The President shall receive a special annual allowance.
3. The Vice-President shall receive a special allowance for every day on which he acts as President.
4. The judges chosen under Article 31, other than members of the Court, shall receive compensation for each day on which they exercise their functions.
5. These salaries, allowances, and compensation shall be fixed by the General Assembly. They may not be decreased during the term of office.
6. The salary of the Registrar shall be fixed by the General Assembly on the proposal of the Court.
7. Regulations made by the General Assembly shall fix the conditions under which retirement pensions may be given to members of the Court and to the Registrar, and the conditions under which members of the Court and the Registrar shall have their travelling expenses refunded.
8. The above salaries, allowances, and compensation shall be free of all taxation.

Article 33

The expenses of the Court shall be borne by the United Nations in such a manner as shall be decided by the General Assembly.

Chapter II

COMPETENCE OF THE COURT

Article 34

1. Only states may be parties in cases before the Court.
2. The Court, subject to and in conformity with its Rules, may request of public international organizations information relevant to cases before it, and shall receive such information presented by such organizations on their own initiative.
3. Whenever the construction of the constituent instrument of a public international organization or of an international convention adopted thereunder is in question in a case before the Court, the Registrar shall so notify the public international organization concerned and shall communicate to it copies of all the written proceedings.

Article 35

1. The Court shall be open to the states parties to the present Statute.
2. The conditions under which the Court shall be open to other states shall, subject to the special provisions contained in treaties in force, be laid down by the Security Council, but in no case shall such conditions place the parties in a position of inequality before the Court.
3. When a state which is not a Member of the United Nations is a party to a case, the Court shall fix the amount which that party is to contribute towards the expenses of the Court. This provision shall not apply if such state is bearing a share of the expenses of the Court.

Article 36

1. The jurisdiction of the Court comprises all cases which the parties refer to it and all matters specially provided for in the Charter of the United Nations or in treaties and conventions in force.
2. The states parties to the present Statute may at any time declare that they recognize as compulsory ipso facto and without special agreement, in relation to any other state accepting the same obligation, the jurisdiction of the Court in all legal disputes concerning:
 - a. the interpretation of a treaty;
 - b. any question of international law;
 - c. the existence of any fact which, if established, would constitute a breach of an international obligation;
 - d. the nature or extent of the reparation to be made for the breach of an international obligation.
3. The declarations referred to above may be made unconditionally or on condition of reciprocity on the part of several or certain states, or for a certain time.
4. Such declarations shall be deposited with the Secretary-General of the United Nations, who shall transmit copies thereof to the parties to the Statute and to the Registrar of the Court.
5. Declarations made under Article 36 of the Statute of the Permanent Court of International Justice and which are still in force shall be deemed, as between the parties to the present Statute, to be acceptances of the compulsory jurisdiction of the International Court of Justice for the period which they still have to run and in accordance with their terms.
6. In the event of a dispute as to whether the Court has jurisdiction, the matter shall be settled by the decision of the Court.

Article 37

Whenever a treaty or convention in force provides for reference of a matter to a tribunal to have been instituted by the League of Nations, or to the Permanent Court of International Justice, the matter shall, as between the parties to the present Statute, be referred to the International Court of Justice.

Article 38

1. The Court, whose function is to decide in accordance with international law such disputes as are submitted to it, shall apply:

- a. international conventions, whether general or particular, establishing rules expressly recognized by the contesting states;
- b. international custom, as evidence of a general practice accepted as law;
- c. the general principles of law recognized by civilized nations;
- d. subject to the provisions of Article 59, judicial decisions and the teachings of the most highly qualified publicists of the various nations, as subsidiary means for the determination of rules of law.

2. This provision shall not prejudice the power of the Court to decide a case ex aequo et bono, if the parties agree thereto.

Chapter III
PROCEDURE

1. The official languages of the Court shall be French and English. If the parties agree that the case shall be conducted in French, the judgment shall be delivered in French. If the parties agree that the case shall be conducted in English, the judgment shall be delivered in English.

2. In the absence of an agreement as to which language shall be employed, each party may, in the pleadings, use the language which it prefers; the decision of the Court shall be given in French and English. In this case the Court shall at the same time determine which of the two texts shall be considered as authoritative.

3. The Court shall, at the request of any party, authorize a language other than French or English to be used by that party.

Article 40

1. Cases are brought before the Court, as the case may be, either by the notification of the special agreement or by a written application addressed to the Registrar. In either case the subject of the dispute and the parties shall be indicated.

2. The Registrar shall forthwith communicate the application to all concerned.

3. He shall also notify the Members of the United Nations through the Secretary-General, and also any other states entitled to appear before the Court.

Article 41

1. The Court shall have the power to indicate, if it considers that circumstances so require, any provisional measures which ought to be taken to preserve the respective rights of either party.

2. Pending the final decision, notice of the measures suggested shall forthwith be given to the parties and to the Security Council.

Article 42

1. The parties shall be represented by agents.

2. They may have the assistance of counsel or advocates before the Court.

3. The agents, counsel, and advocates of parties before the Court shall enjoy the privileges and immunities necessary to the independent exercise of their duties.

Article 43

1. The procedure shall consist of two parts: written and oral.

2. The written proceedings shall consist of the communication to the Court and to the parties of memorials, counter-memorials and, if necessary, replies; also all papers and documents in support.

3. These communications shall be made through the Registrar, in the order and within the time fixed by the Court.

4. A certified copy of every document produced by one party shall be communicated to the other party.

5. The oral proceedings shall consist of the hearing by the Court of witnesses, experts, agents, counsel, and advocates.

Article 44

1. For the service of all notices upon persons other than the agents, counsel, and advocates, the Court shall apply direct to the government of the state upon whose territory the notice has to be served.

2. The same provision shall apply whenever steps are to be taken to procure evidence on the spot.

Article 45

The hearing shall be under the control of the President or, if he is unable to preside, of the Vice-President; if neither is able to preside, the senior judge present shall preside.

Article 46

The hearing in Court shall be public, unless the Court shall decide otherwise, or unless the parties demand that the public be not admitted.

Article 47

1. Minutes shall be made at each hearing and signed by the Registrar and the President.

2. These minutes alone shall be authentic.

Article 48

The Court shall make orders for the conduct of the case, shall decide the form and time in which each party must conclude its arguments, and make all arrangements connected with the taking of evidence.

Article 49

The Court may, even before the hearing begins, call upon the agents to produce any document or to supply any explanations. Formal note shall be taken of any refusal.

Article 50

The Court may, at any time, entrust any individual, body, bureau, commission, or other organization that it may select, with the task of carrying out an enquiry or giving an expert opinion.

Article 51

During the hearing any relevant questions are to be put to the witnesses and experts under the conditions laid down by the Court in the rules of procedure referred to in Article 30.

Article 52

After the Court has received the proofs and evidence within the time specified for the purpose, it may refuse to accept any further oral or written evidence that one party may desire to present unless the other side consents.

Article 53

1. Whenever one of the parties does not appear before the Court, or fails to defend its case, the other party may call upon the Court to decide in favour of its claim.

2. The Court must, before doing so, satisfy itself, not only that it has jurisdiction in accordance with Articles 36 and 37, but also that the claim is well founded in fact and law.

Article 54

1. When, subject to the control of the Court, the agents, counsel, and advocates have completed their presentation of the case, the President shall declare the hearing closed.

2. The Court shall withdraw to consider the judgment.

3. The deliberations of the Court shall take place in private and remain secret.

Article 55

1. All questions shall be decided by a majority of the judges present.

2. In the event of an equality of votes, the President or the judge who acts in his place shall have a casting vote.

Article 56

1. The judgment shall state the reasons on which it is based.

2. It shall contain the names of the judges who have taken part in the decision.

Article 57

If the judgment does not represent in whole or in part the unanimous opinion of the judges, any judge shall be entitled to deliver a separate opinion.

Article 58

The judgment shall be signed by the President and by the Registrar. It shall be read in open court, due notice having been given to the agents.

Article 59

The decision of the Court has no binding force except between the parties and in respect of that particular case.

Article 60

The judgment is final and without appeal. In the event of dispute as to the meaning or scope of the judgment, the Court shall construe it upon the request of any party.

Article 61

1. An application for revision of a judgment may be made only when it is based upon the discovery of some fact of such a nature as to be a decisive factor, which fact was, when the judgment was given, unknown to the Court and also the party claiming revision, always provided that such ignorance was not due to negligence.

2. The proceedings for revision shall be opened by a judgment of the Court expressly recording the existence of the new fact, recognizing that it has such a character as to lay the case open to revision, and declaring the application admissible on this ground.

3. The Court may require previous compliance with the terms of the judgment before it admits proceedings in revision.

4. The application for revision must be made at latest within six months of the discovery of the new fact.

5. No application for revision may be made after the lapse of ten years from the date of the judgment.

Article 62

1. Should a state consider that it has an interest of a legal nature which may be affected by the decision in the case, it may submit a request to the Court to be permitted to intervene.

2. It shall be for the Court to decide upon this request.

Article 63

1. Whenever the construction of a convention to which states other than those concerned in the case are parties is in question, the Registrar shall notify all such states forthwith.

2. Every state so notified has the right to intervene in the proceedings; but if it uses this right, the construction given by the judgment will be equally binding upon it.

Article 64

Unless otherwise decided by the Court, each party shall bear its own costs.

Chapter IV

ADVISORY OPINIONS

Article 65

1. The Court may give an advisory opinion on any legal question at the request of whatever body may be authorized by or in accordance with the Charter of the United Nations to make such a request.

2. Questions upon which the advisory opinion of the Court is asked shall be laid before the Court by means of a written request containing an exact statement of the question upon which an opinion is required, and accompanied by all documents likely to throw light upon the question.

Article 66

1. The Registrar shall forthwith give notice of the request for an advisory opinion to all states entitled to appear before the Court.

2. The Registrar shall also, by means of a special and direct communication, notify any state entitled to appear before the Court or international organization considered by the Court, or, should it not be sitting, by the President, as likely to be able to furnish information on the question, that the Court will be prepared to receive, within a time limit to be fixed by the President, written statements, or to hear, at a public sitting to be held for the purpose, oral statements relating to the question.

3. Should any such state entitled to appear before the Court have failed to receive the special communication referred to in paragraph 2 of this Article, such state may express a desire to submit a written statement or to be heard; and the Court will decide.

4. States and organizations having presented written or oral statements or both shall be permitted to comment on the statements made by other states or organizations in the form, to the extent, and within the time limits which the Court, or, should it not be sitting, the President, shall decide in each particular case. Accordingly, the Registrar shall in due time communicate any such written statements to states and organizations having submitted similar statements.

Article 67

The Court shall deliver its advisory opinions in open court, notice having been given to the Secretary-General and to the representatives of Members of the United Nations, of other states and of international organizations immediately concerned.

Article 68

In the exercise of its advisory functions the Court shall further be guided by the provisions of the present Statute which apply in contentious cases to the extent to which it recognizes them to be applicable.

Chapter V
AMENDMENT

Article 69

Amendments to the present Statute shall be effected by the same procedure as is provided by the Charter of the United Nations for amendments to that Charter, subject however to any provisions which the General Assembly upon recommendation of the Security Council may adopt concerning the participation of states which are parties to the present Statute but are not Members of the United Nations.

Article 70

The Court shall have power to propose such amendments to the present Statute as it may deem necessary, through written communications to the Secretary-General, for consideration in conformity with the provisions of Article 69.

Indices

Subject index

BOLD CAPITAL LETTERS are used for main subject entries (e.g. DEVELOPMENT) and chapter topics (e.g. DISARMAMENT), as well as country names (e.g. AFGHANISTAN), region names (e.g. AFRICA) and principal UN organs (e.g. GENERAL ASSEMBLY).

CAPITAL LETTERS are used to highlight major issues (e.g. POVERTY), as well as the names of territories (e.g. MONTserrat), subregions (e.g. CENTRAL AMERICA), specialized agencies (e.g. WORLD HEALTH ORGANIZATION) and regional commissions (e.g. ECONOMIC COMMISSION FOR AFRICA).

Regular text is used for single and cross-reference entries (e.g. arms embargo, mercenaries, terrorism).

An asterisk (*) preceding a page number or range of page numbers indicates the presence of a text, reproduced in full, of a General Assembly, Security Council or Economic and Social Council resolution or decision, or a Security Council presidential statement.

United Nations bodies are listed alphabetically and may also appear under related entries.
